6. My Government as well as the East Punjab Government is ready for further meetings as contemplated by paragraph 6 of the Agreement of May 4th. We suggest that such a meeting should take place in the last week of June, and that both parties should come fully prepared for discussing all aspects of the question involved. We suggest that, this meeting should take place in Delhi about the 25th June. Will you kindly let me know the exact date that will suit your Government and the West Punjab Government for this purpose?

Karachi, June 8, 1948.

No. 2165

From Zafrullah Khan to Jawaharlal Nehru.

2. Your telegram No.1306-PRIMIN, dated June 5th. Your information about Eastern Grey Canal appears to be incorrect. Bahawalpur Government definitely state that Eastern Grey Canal is PERENNIAL and irrigates 35,000 acres in RABI season. Khan Bahadur Abdul Aziz is not Chief Engineer to State which had no Representative at discussions preceding agreement of May 4th. West Punjab are not concerned with this canal which runs east of Sutlej. It is, therefore, not surprising that they were not interested.

3. I agree that this matter should be settled at earliest possible date and look forward to discussing it along with other irrigation problems regarding which I am addressing you separately. Meanwhile I trust you will arrange for immediate resumption of supplies through Eastern Grey Canal in order to alleviate serious distress that is being caused.

New Delhi, June 15, 1948.

From Jawaharlal Nehru for Zafrullah Khan.

No. PRIMIN 1342.

Your telegram No. 2165, dated June 8th. I had hoped to discuss this matter at our proposed meeting in Delhi to-day, but as this meeting has been postponed and the matter is urgent I am sending you this reply.

Further enquiries confirm that the Bahawalpur State distributary of the Eastern Grey Canal is non-perennial and only functions during summer and monsoon, that is, between first April and sixteenth October. In fact it functions chiefly during the monsoon season. The fact that the Bahawalpur Government raised the question of supply of water to their distributary only about the beginning of June this year also confirms that the distributary only functions during this period.
We have given serious consideration to your request for immediate resumption of supplies to the Bahawalpur distributary through the Eastern Grey Canal. But you will appreciate that it is difficult for us to enter into further commitments depending on Ferozepore Head-works in view of the serious threat to this Head-work by the digging of the new channel by the West Punjab Government. In spite of our repeated requests this digging apparently continues and endangers not only the future of the Ferozepore Head-works but of the canal water supply system in a large area. If this digging continues, the assurance that the embankment will not be breached is of little consequence as the breach can be made at short notice and there will be continuous apprehension about it. The East Punjab Government will have to take steps to provide against this development which is so full of danger to their people as well as to the people of Bahawalpur. The whole Eastern Grey Canal system will be seriously affected by it. Thus this question is intimately allied with the digging of the new channel by the West Punjab Government, and cannot be viewed separately. I would request you again therefore to take urgent steps to stop this digging so that this and other matters might be considered in a normal context.

Subject to what I have said above we are prepared to ask East Punjab Government to supply water immediately to the Bahawalpur State distributary. It should be clearly understood however that this supply will be in terms of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May, 1948, and subject also to the payment by the Bahawalpur State of interest, maintenance and seigniorage charges. Such seigniorage charges have been paid by various States in the past and stand on a different footing to that of West Punjab. Apart therefore from the question of West Punjab paying the seigniorage charges to East Punjab which has been reserved for future discussion, the case of their payment by Bahawalpur State is clear. The amount of actual payment and other details may be settled at a meeting between our respective representatives which should take place early, but the principle of payment of interest, maintenance and seigniorage charges should be accepted by the Bahawalpur Government.

This matter requires urgent consideration in the interests of both Dominions and their provinces and states. Postponement of it will be harmful to all concerned. There are many other matters also, including the implementation of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of Calcutta, which require early consideration. The Prime Ministers' meeting can hardly deal fully with all these matters though it may consider certain basic principles. I suggest therefore that an early date preferably in the last week of June be fixed for a meeting in Delhi between Dominion Ministers and secretarial and technical staff to consider all these matters.

Karachi, June 19, 1948.

No. 2312. Your telegram PRIMIN 1342, dated June 15th.

I am no less anxious than you to resolve at earliest possible date the difficulties with which we are both faced in this serious matter. I am confident we shall reach a just solution provided we leave no room for misunderstanding. The problem immediately before me is the restoration of confidence in all those in West Punjab who were shocked by a threat to lives and prosperity of millions by arbitrary stoppage of water supplies without warning at beginning of April. Quite apart from my letter dated March 22nd from administrative problem dealing with impending calamity they thought it essential to take all measures possible to prevent this complete loss of confidence developing into a serious threat to maintenance of peace between two Dominions. Fortunately the restoration of water supplies although delayed and on terms inconsistent with our rights removed immediate danger, it however in no way restored confidence.

The authorities concerned in West Punjab are well aware of catastrophic results which would occur if Ferozepore Head-works were in any way damaged and in excavating link channel have taken all possible precautions to protect them. Unless water is actually drawn through new channel (and there is no possibility of this so long as normal supplies continue) its construction designed to restore confidence and remove fear of insecurity is a matter of internal administration the exercise of which is not open to dispute.

These very real fears governed my reluctance to request cessation of work. I am assured that any such request will at once cause the return of suspicion and feelings of insecurity if not serious unrest.

It is evident however that situation is causing you concern which however for reasons above given can be no greater than mine. That being so and because goodwill must provide setting for forthcoming talks I propose to use my best endeavours with West Punjab Government to prepare way for partial or complete cessation of work on channel at earliest possible date without creating such local opposition as might neutralise all that Dominions are trying to achieve by negotiations. You will appreciate the necessity to move cautiously and must recognise that short-sighted policy followed by East Punjab Government has left behind it an unfortunate legacy of suspicion and distrust. Please rest assured however that I shall do my utmost to insure that pending final settlement West Punjab does nothing that may be detrimental to India or East Punjab.
The supply of water in Eastern Grey Canal to Bahawalpur is an entirely separate matter.

The invalidity of right of East Punjab to recover SEIGNIORAGE charges from West Punjab extends also to Bahawalpur whose contention is that their rights derive from capital participation in construction of system and are guaranteed by terms of their agreement. They are clearly entitled to 375 CUSECS at point of entry to State. However in deference to your view I am again consulting Bahawalpur Government. Meanwhile I greatly welcome your comment in the light of your offer to restore supplies to State pending settlement of respective rights and would, in view of approach I now make, request you to put it into immediate effect. I agree that a meeting should be held at the end of June to consider all these matters and shall suggest details in a few days.

New Delhi, June 20, 1948.

From Jawaharlal Nehru to Zafrullah Khan.

No. PRIMIN 1352.- Thank you for your telegram No. 2312, dated 19th, June regarding canal water supply in East and West Punjab and Bahawalpur.

I appreciate what you say, but I would point out that East Punjab Government did not stop water supply at the beginning of April without notice as stated by you. They made repeated efforts to confer with representatives of West Punjab Government but did not succeed. It was only after failure of these efforts that water was stopped.

I shall not repeat what I have already said about inevitable consequences of the digging of new channel by West Punjab. I agree that confidence must be restored on both sides, but the very digging of new channel is preventing this restoration of confidence because it is a constant threat to East Punjab and would even threaten supply to Bahawalpur. It was for this reason that I laid great emphasis on the cessation of work in digging this channel which would, to some extent, restore confidence and enable all of us to face problem dispassionately and in the interests of all concerned. I earnestly hope, therefore, that West Punjab Government will immediately stop this digging of the channel.
As regards seigniorage charges from Bahawalpur, the position is entirely the same as with some other States which do pay these charges and we do not see how any new question arises in regard to it.

I am communicating your telegram to the East Punjab Government.

Karachi, July 6, 1948.

No. 2520.- Your telegram No, 1352 PRIMIN of June 20th and 1392 PRIMIN of July 4th. I am glad to say that West Punjab have, not without reluctance but in order to contribute to goodwill which we are endeavouring to establish, agreed to cessation of work on portion of new channel where it was intended to take off from the river. I hope you will agree that this is a valuable gesture which should help to restore confidence between West Punjab and East Punjab. I regret it has not been possible to arrange proposed meeting at end of June. I suggest that it be held at Karachi about July 20th when West Punjab Representatives can also attend.

We are examining further Bahawalpur’s claim to water from Eastern Grey Canal but hope meanwhile that you have arranged for resumption of supplies.

2379. Statement handed over on behalf of India to Pakistan.

New Delhi, July 21, 1948.

East Punjab is prepared to come to a final agreement with West Punjab as regards the Upper Bari Doab Canal and the Dipalpur Canal on the lines of the Agreement of 4th May 1948, to the intent that such an agreement will take the place of all rights and liabilities which either side may have in law and both sides give up all legal contentions which they may have in respect of these two canals for rights other or further than those provided for in the agreement.

If West Punjab feels that it cannot come to final agreement, if the agreement is restricted to the Upper Bari Doab Canal and the Dipalpur Canal, East Punjab is prepared to discuss and if possible come to an agreement as regards the canals taking off from Suleimanki and Islam Head-works, either on the same lines as above or on such other lines as may be agreed upon between the parties. In the latter case it will be for Pakistan to put up concrete proposals as regards the terms on which they are prepared to come to an agreement as regards these other canals.

As regards Bahawalpur State Distributary taking off from the tail of the Eastern canal, East Punjab is prepared to restore the supply for a limited period on the same terms as it has restore the supply of the Upper Bari Doab Canal and the Dipalpur Canal.

2380. Statement handed over to India by Pakistan.

Our position is that the partition of the Punjab has made no difference to the rights of the two portions in which the Province has been divided and Bahawalpur, Khairpur and Sind to the use and enjoyment, both present and future, of the waters of the rivers affected by the partition. Areas within Pakistan which were entitled to the use and enjoyment of water from these rivers for irrigation and other purposes are entitled to continue to receive the benefit of such user and enjoyment on terms no more onerous in any respect than were applicable to such user and enjoyment before partition. Pakistan is also entitled to an extended user and enjoyment of the surplus waters of these rivers on an equitable basis. If this position is not accepted by the Dominion of India, Pakistan would be entitled to have recourse to such means and procedure as may be open to it by agreement between the two Dominions or without such agreement to obtain an adjudication of these rights which should be binding upon both Dominions.

2. The scope of Inter-dominion discussions for purposes of resolving this problem may be comprehensive or limited. If it is comprehensive, the aim should be to arrive at a permanent agreement regulating for all time the rights of user and enjoyment of the waters of these rivers on the basis of safeguarding the existing rights and making provision for the beneficent and equitable use of the waters surplus to present requirements in such areas of either Dominion where they can be used to the best advantage on the principles already adopted by the Punjab Government before partition. Such an agreement would also settle the claims of Bahawalpur, West Punjab and Sind to share in the cost and benefits of schemes of reservation and conservation of waters on the reaches of these rivers within the Indian Dominion and to demand consequent equitable adjustments.

3. The aim of any limited arrangement would be to arrive at an interim agreement with regard to the period within which alternative sources of supply of water for irrigation purposes for West Punjab areas irrigated from the U.B.D.C. and the Dipalpur Canal can be investigated and brought into operation so as to enable the East Punjab to utilise proportionate quantities of water within its own areas subject to the ultimate determination of the legal rights of the two Dominions with regard to the user and enjoyment of these waters by means of arbitration or otherwise.

During the currency of such an agreement, the quantum of the present rights of user and enjoyment of the waters by all areas within Pakistan must be maintained intact on the same basis on which it had existed before partition subject to any modification agreed upon as a consequence of the coming into operation of alternative sources of supply for U.B.D.C. and Dipalpur areas.

4. A settlement would also have to be reached with regard to the claim of Bahawalpur to receive without charge 375 cusecs of water at the State boundary through the Eastern Canal in lieu of 564 cusecs of water to which it was entitled from Suleimanki and in respect of which it made its contribution to the costs of the Suleimanki Head-works. This arrangement was arrived at in order to obviate the necessity of Bahawalpur becoming a third partner in Ferozepore Head-works. In effect the extra share of the costs of Suleimanki Head-works borne by Bahawalpur was a contribution towards the Ferozepore Head-works.

Present
1. Rai Bahadur Shri Gita Ram Garg, I.S.E., Chief Engineer, East Punjab.
2. Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sarup Singh, I.S.E., Chief Engineer, East Punjab.
4. Khan Bahadur Pir Mohammad Ibrahim, I.S.E., Chief Engineer, West Punjab.
5. Khan Bahadur K. A. Ghafoor, I.S.E., Chief Engineer, West Punjab.

In addition to the above officers, Superintending Engineers and Under Secretaries concerned from both sides were also present.

Item No. 1.— It was agreed that the charges for the supply of water to the Central Bari Doab Canal and the Depalpur Canal of the West Punjab for the period 15-8-1947 to the end of kharif 1948 will be in accordance with the calculation supplied to the West Punjab by the East Punjab on 1-9-1948, subject to the arithmetical check only.

2. East Punjab agrees that in the event of an agreement being arrived at for the continuation of the supply of water to the Central Bari Doab Canal and the Depalpur Canal, beyond kharif 1948, to levy charges calculated in accordance with the following principles. The West Punjab while agreeing to the method of calculation of the charges wants to add that the Delhi agreement provides the continuance of the supplies till the Dominions come to a new settlement. This is disputed by the East Punjab and the West Punjab suggested that the matter may be referred to the Dominions for clarification.

3. UPPER BARI DOAB CANAL

Apportionment of Capital Expenditure: The booked capital expenditure of the Madhopur Head-works will be borne in entirety by the East Punjab.

For the purposes of the apportionment of the booked capital expenditure on Main Canal and Branches and Distributaries, the average of the results of two methods, viz:—

(a) Mileage basis as already worked out by the East Punjab.

(b) Cusec-mile basis, i.e. summation of the discharge of a reach multiplied by its length.

In accordance with (b) above, the apportionment of booked capital to the West will be the summation of the products of the cusec and miles of the Main Branch Lower and the Lahore Branches by reaches, lying in its territory, divided by the summation of the products of cusec and miles of the whole system lying in the East and the West Punjab by reaches.

Interest and Maintenance Charges:

(i) Main Canal, Branches and Distributaries: These charges will be distributed in proportion to the summation of cusec-miles delivered to West Punjab with pro-rata addition on account of absorption losses, to the summation of cusec-miles of carrier channels, accounts for each such channel being kept separately.

(ii) Head-works: These charges will be distributed in proportion to the ratio of supply allocated to East and West Punjab, viz. 60: 40.

The capital expenditure arrived at above on which interest charges are to be levied for recovery from the West would be multiplied by an enhancement factor of four as in the previous accounts for the period 15-8-1947 to 30-9-1948.

The West Punjab, however, contends that this factor should be two instead of four as disputed under para 2 of the Inter-Dominion Agreement, dated May 4th, 1948.

East and West Punjabs agree that no factor will be applied to the Capital expenditure incurred in the common interest after kharif 1948.

Further the East Punjab demands the Seignorage charges to which the West does not agree.

East agrees to the West Punjab proposal that the suspense figures included in the capital cost should be the figures as they stand on the 31st of March of the financial year for which the charges are to be recovered.

4. DEPALPUR CANAL:

The method of calculating the charges for the water supplied to Depalpur Canal shall be the same as calculated by the East Punjab for kharif 1948, except for the following modifications:

(a) The booked capital cost of the Right Marginal Bund including its retired reach, of the Ferozepur Head-works lying in the West Punjab, would be subtracted from the booked capital cost of the Ferozepore Head-works for the purpose of apportionment of the capital expenditure between the East and the West, and for that purpose of levying of the interest charges.

(b) The East Punjab shall pay to the West Punjab the interest and the maintenance charges of the reach of the Right Marginal Bund referred to above in the same manner as the West will be paying to the East.

5. GENERAL

The East Punjab will prepare the schedule of charge both for the Central Bari Doab Canal and the Depalpur Canal and forward the same to the Chief Engineers of the West Punjab for their scrutiny and agreement.

On receipt of the schedule the West Punjab Engineers will put up the proposals to their Government for its concurrence and the East Punjab Engineers will then take up the case with the Government for ratification.

2382. Telegram, from the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Ministry of External Affairs.

Karachi, September 15, 1948.

No. 3516.

At conference held September 1st—September 3rd at WAGHA between East and West Punjab engineers it transpired that interpretation placed by East Punjab on Delhi Agreement of May 4th was that Agreement only modified Simla draft agreements in certain respects and therefore its life was same as that of Simla draft agreements that is up to 30th September. The argument when advanced by West Punjab at Inter-Dominion Conference held on July 21st in respect of proportion of supplies as laid in Simla agreements for supplies to Central BARI Doab Canal and Ferozepore Head-works, was refuted by East Punjab on ground that Delhi Agreement was not in continuation of Simla Agreements. East Punjab’s attitude is therefore quite inconsistent. We consider Delhi Agreement clearly provides for continual supplies to West Punjab till final Agreement is arrived at between two Dominions and at the same time accepts Simla Agreements excepting 2 disputed points. As it is essential that supply to West Punjab should continue it is requested that our interpretation be kindly confirmed without delay. It is also requested Prime Minister India may kindly fix amount to be deposited by West Punjab for quarter or half-year beginning October next.

While there was some delay in getting the response of the East Punjab Government to the points raised by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of External Affairs in its telegram dated September 27, 1948 assured Pakistan that “East Punjab Government have been instructed not to withhold water from West Punjab and you may be rest assured that supply of water will be continued to Dipalpur Canal from 1st October to 15 October, 1948 and to Central Bari Doab Canal from 1st October 1948 until the matter can be further discussed at an Inter-Dominion Conference.
2383. Letter from the Secretary, Government of Pakistan, Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Secretary, to the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs.

Karachi, September 27, 1948.

With reference to telegram from Foreign, Karachi, No.2520, dated the 6th July, 1948, I am directed to say that it has come to the notice of the Government of Pakistan that the East Punjab Government has under its consideration the following two proposals:—

(1) To take out a distributary from the Upper Bari Doab Canal from the Aliwal Head or from near Siri Gobindpore about 15 miles upwards from Aliwal; and

(2) To take out a canal from the rivers Sutlej and Beas near the Harike Ferry.

It is understood that the survey has been completed for both these projects but the East Punjab Government has not yet decided as to which proposal to accept. The Government of Pakistan consider that the East Punjab Government have no right to withdraw any more water from the rivers Sutlej, Beas and Ravi than was taken for irrigating their areas before the date of partition. The Government of Pakistan trust that the Government of India will ask the East Punjab Government to take no further steps in the matter till all the implications have been fully examined at dominion level.

New Delhi, October 18, 1948.

No. PRIMIN-1681 — Please refer to your telegram No. 3516, dated 15th September, 1948, regarding interpretation of Inter-Dominion Agreement dated 4th May 1948 on Canal Water Dispute.

2. We do not accept your interpretation of the Delhi Agreement of 4th May, 1948. We consider that Delhi Agreement imports by implication only some of the terms of the Simla Agreements in so far as they related to the supply of water to Dipalpur and Central Bari Doab Canals. We deny that the Delhi Agreement provides for continual supplies to West Punjab till a final agreement is arrived at between the two Dominions. We consider that if a party refuses to come to a final settlement of the dispute without any reservation or if there is an unreasonable delay on the part of a party in concluding such a final settlement, it is open to the other party to put an end to the agreement by giving reasonable notice. Further the Delhi Agreement is based on the recognition by the West Punjab Government of the right of the East Punjab Government to progressively diminish the supply of water to West Punjab in order to give reasonable time to enable the West Punjab Government to tap alternative sources. Further meetings between the representatives of the two Governments should be on the basis of this recognition by the West Punjab Government of the above-mentioned rights of the East Punjab Government.

3. Regarding the request contained in the last sentence of your telegram of the 15th September, 1948, a separate communication is being sent to you.

2385. Letter from the Additional Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs to the Secretary to the Government of Pakistan, Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

New Delhi, December 8, 1948.

No. F. 26 – 3/48 – Pak.I

December 8, 1948.

Subject:— Alleged proposals of the Government of East Punjab (1) to take out a distributary from the Upper Bari Doab Canal; and (2) to take out a canal from the River’s Sutlej and Beas near the Harike Ferry.

With reference to your letter No. D. 7083-I/48, dated 27th September, 1948, the Government of India, have already intimated that they consider that the proprietary rights in the waters of the rivers in the East Punjab vest wholly in the East Punjab Government and that the West Punjab Government cannot claim as of right any share of these waters. The Government of India and the East Punjab Government have, however, previously expressed their willingness to consider the supply of water to West Punjab, without prejudice to its legal rights in the matter, in a spirit of goodwill and friendship. I would refer you to the Inter-Dominion Agreement on this subject dated the 4th May 1948. In that Agreement the West Punjab Government recognised that, even apart from the question of law involved, it would be just and proper for the East Punjab Government progressively to diminish the supply of water to the canals mentioned in order to give reasonable time to enable the West Punjab Government to tap alternative sources.

2. Both the Government to India and the East Punjab Government are perfectly prepared to abide by the terms of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May 1948, provided the Pakistan Government and the West Punjab Government also carry out the provisions of this Agreement. This agreement was essentially based on a practical solution of the problem and with the desire that the matter should be settled in a spirit of accommodation to each other. It is obvious that the East Punjab Government has an obligation to discharge in regard to the development of areas where water is scarce in their province.

The West Punjab Government have recognised this obligation and duty of the East Punjab Government in the Agreement of the 4th May, 1948.

3. As a matter of strict law, the Government of India cannot accept the contention of the Government of Pakistan that the East Punjab Government have no right to withdraw any more water from the rivers Sutlej Beas and Ravi than was taken for irrigating their areas before the date of Partition. Even as a matter of equity and practical convenience this contention of the Government of Pakistan cannot be admitted, and indeed, as stated above, the West Punjab Government has already agreed to the necessity of the East Punjab Government progressively using more water from these canals for its own purposes. The Government of India cannot also admit the right of the Pakistan Government or West Punjab Government to interfere in any way with any action they may take or propose to take regarding the extension of irrigation or alteration in the existing system of irrigation in India.

4. The Government of India, however, are always willing to consider these matters with a practical and human point of view in terms of the Agreement of the 4th May, 1948. In the letter under reply there appears to be an attempt to ignore completely this agreement.

Your telegram No. 2573 dated 13 June 1949.

2. East Punjab Government restored supplies to Central Bari Doab and Dipalpur Canals for kharif, 1949, on the basis of Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May 1948, and telegram No. 1681 PRIMIN, Delhi, dated the 18th October 1948.

Regarding supplies beyond kharif, the matter is covered by paragraphs 3 and 4 of Inter-Dominion Agreement dated 4th May 1948 wherein the Dominion of Pakistan recognized the natural anxiety of the East Punjab Government to discharge its obligations to develop areas in East Punjab where water is scarce and which are underdeveloped in relation to parts of West Punjab and the right of the East Punjab Government to progressively diminish its supplies to the Central Bari Doab and the Dipalpur Canals in the West Punjab in order to give reasonable time to enable the West Punjab Government to tap alternative sources.

The matter is to be pursued in the next Inter-Dominion meetings under paragraph 6 of the Inter-Dominion Agreement referred to above.

As regards the five channels, in which you complain that the flow has not been restored, the Government of the East Punjab is being requested to set matters right, in case we have undertaken to supply water to these channels. Please instruct Chief Engineer, I.B., West Punjab, to contact Chief Engineer, I.B., East Punjab.

3. As regards the supply of water to the Bahawalpur State distributary, may I refer you to telegram No. Primin 1342 dated 15 June 1948 from Foreign New Delhi to Foreign Karachi. The supply desired is from the tail of the Eastern Canal owned by East Punjab. We do not accept the right of the Bahawalpur State to uninterrupted supply of water, and, as mentioned in the telegram referred to above, the supplies, if agreed upon, will be subject to payment by Bahawalpur State of the interest, maintenance and seigniorage charges and for the period to be mutually agreed upon.

4. As regards the supply of daily gauges and discharge data referred to in paragraph 4 of your telegram we have never objected to giving the information relating to the channels which we have contracted to supply with water. I presume you are not asking for data about rivers and canals about which there has been no agreement. Question of your engineers working in the Indian territory does not arise.

5. I am glad that you have deposited the necessary amount to cover up the charges for the quarter ending 30 June 1949. I trust that the deposit for the ensuing quarter is also being arranged early. As regards the disputed amount, please refer to paragraph 4 of express letter No.D.-I337 -I.B./48 dated 27 December 1948 from Foreign Karachi to Foreign New Delhi in which you agreed to the disputed amount being transferred in the name of the Prime Minister of India. We adhere to the agreed procedure. Therefore the question of a neutral escrow holder does not arise.

6. Our position has been consistent as regards the waters of rivers in our territory. In the Inter-Dominion Agreement dated 4th May 1948, Pakistan not only appreciated the anxiety of East Punjab Government to discharge its obligation to develop areas in East Punjab where water is scarce and which are underdeveloped in relation to parts of West Punjab, but agreed that apart from the question of law involved, the East Punjab could progressively diminish its supply to the Central Bari Doab and Dipalpur Canals in order to give reasonable time to the West Punjab Government to tap alternative sources. The provisions of paragraphs 3, 4 and 6 of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May 1948 are explicit. We, however, regret to notice that having conceded the right of the East Punjab Government to progressively diminish its supply to the Central Bari Doab and Dipalpur Canals in West Punjab, you have all along shown great hesitancy in complying with your solemn undertakings. We repudiate your suggestion that Pakistan's so-called equitable share includes not only water allocated to areas of Indus Basin in Pakistan at and prior to partition but any additional supply that may be made available by engineering works in our territory in future. We do not accept your contention that East Punjab is not entitled to undertake new engineering works except on the basis of agreement with Pakistan as to sharing of costs of works and apportionment of additional supply after ensuring protection of existing uses and fulfillment of existing allocations, etc.

Paragraph 6 of your telegram under reply goes back upon arrangements reached between West Punjab and East Punjab in various conferences and meetings after partition and the claim set out therein is opposed to the provisions of law contained in the Indian Independence Act and the various Orders made thereunder by Lord Mountbatten and Governor Jenkins.

We appreciate your efforts to tap alternative sources of water supply in West Punjab as agreed upon in paragraph No.6 of the Agreement dated 4th May and on our part assure you that we are as anxious as ever for a friendly solution the basis of the new situation created by the Indian Independence Act various orders made thereunder and the Agreement of 4th May 1948.

7. As provided in paragraph 6 of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May further meetings between the representatives of India and Pakistan had to take place after an examination by each party of the legal issues, of the method of estimating the cost of water to be supplied by East Punjab Government and of the technical survey of water sources and the means of using them for supply to the Central Bari Doab and Dipalpur Canals. You have not yet intimated to us whether the stage has reached as contemplated in paragraph 6 of the Agreement for further meetings.

As already mentioned we are anxious as ever to pursue the matter in further meetings and the want of insistence, if any, on our part to pursue the matter with all expeditiousness was merely to give ample time to enable your Government to tap alternative sources. As members of the United Nations, we are ever anxious to promote good neighbourly relations and reiterate that the solemn Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4 May 1948 defines the rights of the parties.

Indian Independence Act and the Orders made thereunder had created a new situation and on an appreciation of the altered situation of the parties entered into contracts on the point in question from time beginning with 22 December 1947. Your suggestion that even after partition the waters remain common as before is not accepted.

Karachi, 13 June, 1949.

2. We were glad to receive confirmation that Government of India had instructed East Punjab Government to continue supplies of Central BARI DOAB and DIPALPUR Canals for Kharif 1949 and assume that at due time instructions will be issued to East Punjab Government to continued supplies beyond Kharif. We are informed unfortunately your instructions appear NOT to have been fully complied with inasmuch as flow has NOT yet been restored in five of the channels and three sets of common water-courses of three branches of Central BARI system. We have NO doubt but that you will have this corrected promptly.

3. We regret you have NOT directed resumption of flow of water in Bahawalpur State distributary of Eastern Grey Canal. We repeat that Bahawalpur has a right to NOT less than pre-partition supplies from this canal. This right cannot be subject to payment or deposit by RIRARIAN State of Bahawalpur of so called SEIGNIORAGE charges. We shall appreciate immediate instructions by you to resume these supplies to Bahawalpur.

4. We shall also appreciate instructions by you to ensure that our engineers are given daily gauge discharge data of RAVI, Sutlej and Beas rivers, the heads of the canals taking off from these rivers and the channels of canals crossing international boundary at the points of crossing. In addition, PAKISTAN engineers should be allowed to check such data on the spot.

5. We have transferred to East Punjab Rs. 12,35,000 half of 24,70,000, subject to adjustments when proper undisputed charges have been ascertained, and as for balance of ad hoc sums specified in your letter of April 6th, these will be deposited in Reserve Bank of India in name of West Punjab, all without prejudice to PAKISTAN’S right as heretofore. Whether this or previous deposits of disputed amounts should be in the name of West Punjab or Prime Minister of India would seem unimportant since in either case the funds are in ESCROW pending resolution of disagreements mentioned in agreement of May 4th. If you object to deposits continuing in name of West Punjab, a better solution might he to agree upon a neutral ESCROW holder.

6. In various communications since April 1st 1948 you have asserted exclusive rights over our Common Waters and have advanced interpretations of interim arrangements reached on May 4th 1948, which, in our view, are unwarranted. We have avoided wherever possible repeating our disagreements. with these assertions in the hope of promoting an atmosphere in which there can be clarified friendly solution which both sides have undertaken to try to reach. Our silence in this matter should NOT, however, be understood as acquiescence in your assertions. We do NOT accept your interpretation of interim arrangement of May 4th, 1948 and do NOT concede that you are entitled under any circumstances to interfere with flow of water that represents PAKISTAN’s equitable share. This share includes of course NOT only water allocated to areas of Indus basin in PAKISTAN at and prior to partition, but as explained by our Foreign Minister at Lahore Inter-Dominion Conference on July 21st 1948, any additional supply that may be made available by engineering works in future. Accordingly NO such works should be undertaken in India prior to agreement with PAKISTAN as to sharing of costs of works (including any works made necessary in PAKISTAN), as to apportionment of additional supply after ensuring protection of existing uses and fulfillment of existing allocations and as to related matter necessary to protect and promote interests of irrigable areas of Indus basin on both sides of frontier.

7. We regret that despite undertaking at Delhi to seek a friendly solution to all differences regarding apportionment of our common waters NO such solution has been reached. Present modus vivendi is onerous and unsatisfactory to PAKISTAN and final solution should NO longer be postponed. In a separate note we are proposing procedure for resolving our differences in a manner that will safeguard our respective rights, comply with our respective duties as members of United Nations and fulfil our desire to promote good-neighbourly relations. Pending such a solution we urge that status quo at partition be respected and that neither side assume to itself right (to) be arbiter of differences that have arisen over our common waters.

No. IA, 14/2/49 June 16, 1949

SUBJECT: Procedure for resolving Indo-Pakistan differences over common waters between the East Punjab and the West Punjab.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations present their compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and with reference to telegram from Foreign, Karachi, to Foreign, New Delhi, No.2573, dated the 13th June 1949 have the honour to request that the following note may kindly be transmitted to the Government of India as early as possible.

"The failure thus far to secure by negotiation a solution to the dispute over the apportionment of the waters common to India and to Pakistan calls for renewed efforts to remove this source of international friction. The purpose of this note is to propose means by which a solution that is fair to India and Pakistan alike can be found covering all of these waters. Both Dominions have recognised that owing to the dependence of millions of their inhabitants upon the rivers and irrigation systems across which their political boundary has been drawn, the distribution of these common waters is a matter of vital concern. An interruption such as occurred over a year ago in the flow upon which essential food-growing areas of Pakistan depend or a diminution in that flow, or even a threat of interruption or diminution, creates a situation likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security and is inconsistent with the obligations of membership in the United Nations.

2. The dispute has arisen over the action of the East Punjab in cutting off (on 1st April, 1948 in the case of the Central Bari Doab and Dipalpur Canals, and on about 25th August 1947 in the case of the Bahawalpur State Distributary) the flow into Pakistan of the latter’s share of the waters of three canal systems that by the partition had become international. Previously there had been, as a joint expert committee on partition reported, “no question of varying the authorised shares of water to which the two zones and the various canals are entitled”.

3. A year of negotiation has failed to accomplish the restoration of the flow into Pakistan of one of these systems. In connection with the restoration on 5th May, 1948 of the flow of the other two, the Government of India asserted the right to exact certain onerous conditions. Pakistan reserved its rights, and the two Governments agreed that further meeting between their representatives should take place in “the hope that a friendly solution will be reached”.

4. Not only has such a solution not been reached respecting the dispute incident to those conditions, but the negotiation since, at a conference in Lahore orally and by exchange of notes, have failed to bring the view of the parties closer together. Instead, the Government of India have put forward contentions that strike at the very root of Pakistan’s right to its historic, legal and equitable share in the common waters.

5. A most disturbing telegram from the Government of India on this subject is dated 18th October, 1948. In it the Government of India rejected the Pakistan suggestion of another conference unless the Government of Pakistan first conceded India’s contention that it was entitled to diminish progressively Pakistan’s share. The note adds the suggestion that India considers itself entitled to interrupt the flow altogether if Pakistan “refuses to come to a final settlement of the dispute without any reservation or if there is an unreasonable delay on the part of a party in concluding such final settlement”.

6. The continued interference with the flow in one to the canal systems and the threat of a diminution or renewed total interruption in the flow of the other systems are so disquieting and pregnant with danger to the maintenance of peaceful conditions as to make it imperative that a solution be sought by negotiation or adjudication. To this end the Government of Pakistan have attempted to review the entire controversy thoroughly and objectively, in the hope that a lasting solution may be achieved which will promote friendly relations between the two countries and their common welfare.

7. It should be noted that other disputes over international waters have sometimes gone through a stage where one or both sides advanced extreme contentions. Eventually a solution has been found through practical agreement reached in a spirit of comity and good will. In order to achieve this, each side, while reserving the rights for which it contended, agreed to discuss the matter without insisting that the other waived its contentions.

8. The legal contentions of India and Pakistan may be such that they can be resolved only by adjudication; but it does not follow that a fair, practical solution cannot be found, leaving the legal contentions to one side. If it develops that legal differences stand in the way of a friendly and peaceful settlement between the two countries, it then becomes their duty as members of the United Nations to submit their dispute for adjudication.

9. With these considerations in mind, the Government of Pakistan propose, and invite the Government of India to agree to the following procedure:

(1) That a conference be initiated before July 16, 1949, between representatives of India and Pakistan for the purpose of making an equitable apportionment of the flow of all waters common to Pakistan and India and of resolving by agreement all disputes incidental to the use of these waters. Each Government, while reserving its rights, will seek to reach in a spirit of comity a practical solution that is fair and comprehensive.

(2) That, if the Government of India are not prepared to take part in the proposed conference at this time, or if, after the conference is agreed to, any event should occur which leads the Government of India or the Government of Pakistan to conclude that negotiation cannot accomplish such a practical solution, the International Court of Justice shall upon application of either party, have jurisdiction to resolve the dispute.

10. In view of the dangers inherent in a continuation of the present situation, the obligation of the parties as members of the United Nations to exhaust every peaceful means of seeking a solution and the expressed desire of both parties to find a friendly solution, the Government of Pakistan trust that these proposals will receive an early and favourable response. Representatives of Pakistan are ready to meet the representatives of India in the proposed conference at any time within the next thirty days and at any place in Pakistan or India that the Government of India may wish in its reply to designate.

The Ministry avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of their highest consideration.

2389. Telegram from the Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

New Delhi, July 2, 1949.

No. 29579—Please refer to your telegram No. 2573, dated the 13th June, 1949 and the subsequent Note No. IA/14/2/49, dated the 16th June, 1949, on the subject of canal water dispute between East and West Punjab.

2. These two communications raise much wider issues than have so far been under discussion. They also raise legal issues and suggest procedure which we CANNOT accept. We must reserve our reply to these points to a later stage. But there is one point which we would like to make at once. It is quite incorrect to suggest that we have been responsible in any way for the delay in coming to a settlement over this question. Paragraph 6 of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May, 1948, clearly stated that further meetings between the representatives of both the Governments should take place after an examination by each party of the legal issues, and the method of estimating the cost of water to be supplied by the East Punjab Government and of the technical survey of water resources and the means of using them for supply to these canals. The initiative for the very first meeting under this agreement was taken by the Prime Minister of India, in his telegram No. PRIMIN 1342 dated the 15th June, 1948, in which he suggested that “an early date preferably in the last week of June be fixed for a meeting in Delhi between Dominion Ministers and secretarial and technical staff to consider all these matters.” This meeting actually took place at Lahore on the 21st July 1948.

3. Some of the issues raised by Pakistan at the Lahore conference sought to repudiate the sense of the Delhi conference and particularly the agreement embodied in paragraph 4 of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May, 1948. Subsequently, we received your telegram No. 3516, dated 15th September 1948 containing an interpretation of the Agreement of the 4th May 1948 which we could NOT accept. Our telegram No. 1681 PRIMIN dated the 18th October 1948 gave our interpretation of that agreement which we still maintain is the correct one. We had NO reply to that telegram. In the circumstances the initiative for suggesting a further Conference naturally rested with your Government.

4. We are however anxious for a practical approach to the problem as envisaged in paragraph 4 of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May 1948 and we welcome your suggestion to hold another conference to explore the possibility of coming to a fair and practical solution, leaving the legal contentions aside for the present. In the spirit of this approach, we agree to further discussions with a view to explore the possibility of coming to an amicable settlement. The date suggested by you does NOT suit us as there are a number of important conferences in Delhi in the latter half of July. We therefore suggest that the conference might be held in Delhi on the 4th August 1949 at 10-00 A.M.

5. In view of what we have said above, the procedure suggested by you in para. 9 of your note dated 16th June 194D, does NOT arise.

On July 11 the Pakistan Government, while reserving their comments on the contents of the Indian telegram confirmed their participation in the proposed conference on August 4 in New Delhi. It was added that Pakistan Government “have never accepted and cannot accept (your) interpretation of paragraph No.4 of the Agreement of May 4, 1948.”
After discussion on the 4th and 5th August, 1949, the leaders of the two Delegations agreed to exchange notes. This was done on the afternoon of the 5th August. These notes are marked Appendices I and II.

2. On the afternoon of the 6th August, the leader of the Indian Delegation read out his reply, marked Appendix III, to the note received from the leader of the Pakistan Delegation, marked Appendix II. The leader of the Pakistan Delegation gave his verbal comments on the note marked Appendix I, and promised to send his reply in writing later. This was followed by a general discussion, after which it was agreed that the Delegations would refer the case to their respective Governments for orders.

APPENDIX - I

DRAFT

The representatives of the Governments of India and Pakistan, having met in conference in New Delhi on the 4th and 5th August 1949 to discuss the Inter-Dominion Canal Water dispute agree as follows:-

1. The two Governments recognizing

(i) that there is likely to be enough water in the Indus Basin to satisfy the irrigation needs of culturable areas situated in India and Pakistan, within the physical limits of command;

(ii) that at present a large proportion of those waters are untapped;

(iii) that a substantial part of the waters mentioned in (ii) above can be utilised for irrigation purposes by means of suitable engineering works;

Agree to set up a Technical Commission of two Engineers, one from either Dominion, to investigate and report for the entire Indus Basin on

(a) the optimum quantities of water required by developed and undeveloped tracts at different times of the year at both existing and possible points of utilisation,
(b) the quantities of water, utilised and unutilised, available at different times of the year at the points of utilisation mentioned in (a) above,

(c) the engineering works necessary to secure the quantities mentioned in (a) above and their financial implications, with the object that the entire waters of the Indus Basin are utilised equitably for the maximum benefit of culturable areas within physical limits of command in both India and Pakistan.

2. Both Governments agree to provide all necessary facilities to the Commission in the execution of its task. In particular, if the Commission requires any data for its enquiry, the two Governments undertake to carry out such surveyor investigations as may be necessary and supply the Commission with the required data.

3. The cost of the Commission and of the preliminary surveys and investigations will be shared equally by the two Governments.

4. The Commission shall complete its investigation and submit a report to the two Governments within a period of six months; provided that the period may be further extended by the two Governments from time to time up to a maximum of a further period of six months.

5. On receipt of the report, the two Governments will hold further meetings with a view to reach a settlement. Meanwhile, the arrangements under the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May 1948 will continue until ..........

6. This agreement is without prejudice to the rights and contentions of either Government.

Appendix - II

Copy of D.O. letter dated the 5th August 1949, from the Hon'ble Sir Mohd. Zafrullah Khan, Minister for Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, (Camp) New Delhi, to the Hon'ble Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar, Minister of Transport, Government of India, New Delhi.

In this morning’s discussions, I explained that your suggestion for an over-all examination of the water resources of the entire Indus basin constituted an entirely new proposal. Before submitting it to my Government, I desired clarification of its implications and bearings. I have now put these points in the form of a draft, which I enclose.

2. I should emphasise that this is not the draft of an agreement which the Pakistan delegation is proposing should be made, but a draft of the points on which clarification is asked for, so that when the proposal of the Government of India is submitted by me to the Government of Pakistan, they should be able fully to appreciate all the implications of the proposal.

DRAFT

Without prejudice to the legal rights of either side and to the claims resulting therefrom e.g., by India for seigniorage and by Pakistan for compensation for damage occasioned by closure of canals and short supply of waters, it is proposed that a joint over-all investigation of the water resources of the entire Indus basin should be undertaken to discover whether there are available water resources surplus to the following:

(i) Full satisfaction of pre-partition supplies in all channels of various kinds (e.g., perennial, non-perennial and inundation) in Western Pakistan.

(ii) Full supplies for the Thal and Upper and Lower Sind Barrage projects.

(iii) Making up of shortages existing in the Sutlej Valley canals up to their supplies “assumed” in the project.

2. If it is disclosed that there are surplus water resources over and above these requirements which can be made available for purposes of irrigation within the Indus Basin, India and Pakistan shall agree on the principles of equitable apportionment of these waters for purposes of irrigation within the Indus basin, and of the apportionment of the costs to be incurred in tapping these resources and making the surplus waters available for irrigation purpose, including the cost of subsidiary corrective works involved, provided that neither side shall be called upon to contribute towards the cost of providing water in substitution of the water to which it was entitled on August 15, 1947 whether such water was being then availed of for purposes of irrigation or was to be availed of in future.

3. Till this investigation is completed and, if this investigation should disclose the existence of surplus resources, then till an over-all agreement with regard to all matters in dispute is reached, the following interim arrangements shall come into operation:

(a) Full preparation supplies of water shall be continued in all Pakistan channels and restored in the Bahawalpur State Distributary of the Eastern Canal and in all Pakistan channels of the Upper Bari Doab Canal on payment of proportionate share of the costs of maintenance and interest on book value.

(b) The amounts deposited by West Punjab in respect of seigniorage and the disputed portion of the interest shall be permitted to be withdrawn by West Punjab.
(c) Pakistan shall be supplied with daily gauge-discharge data and periodical water accounts of the rivers and canals concerned and full facilities shall be afforded to Pakistan engineers to inspect and check gauge-discharge sites, equipment and data concerned.

(d) A joint committee shall be set up to supervise the effective working of these arrangements including the proper allocation of waters and the supply of data.

4. During the pendency of these interim arrangements neither side shall do anything or proceed with any works that may interfere with the proper working of these arrangements.

5. Every effort shall be made to conclude the joint investigation within a period of six months from the date on which the joint commission which is to carry out the investigation is set up.

6. If the joint investigation does not disclose the existence of surplus resources of water or results in disagreement between the representatives of India and Pakistan, or in case of the affirmation of the existence of surplus resources an agreement cannot be reached with regard to the apportionment of the waters or of the costs involved, the parties shall be relegated to their legal rights and claims without either being in any manner prejudiced by the terms of this agreement or by any work or project which the other party may meanwhile have undertaken or proceeded with, and the dispute shall be resolved in such manner as the parties may agree upon, and in the absence of an agreement on this point, the parties shall jointly submit the dispute to the International Court of Justice whose opinion shall be binding on the two Governments and shall be given full effect to by them.

APPENDIX - III

Copy of D. O. letter, dated the 6th August 1949, from the Hon'ble Shri N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar, Minister of Transport, Government of India, New Delhi, to the Hon'ble Sir Mohd. Zafrullah Khan, Minister for Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan (Camp) New Delhi.

I was glad to receive your letter of the 5th August, 1949, enclosing a draft of the points on which you required clarification before you obtain the orders of your Government on the proposal discussed yesterday and the day before for an overall examination of the water resources of the entire Indus Basin.

Most of the points raised in your draft note are already covered by my draft of which a copy was handed over by Gokhale to Creagh Coen, at the same time as he received a copy of your letter and note yesterday afternoon. I fully appreciate that, while my draft is that of an agreement which I suggest might be considered by both the Governments, your draft, although the form of an agreement, is only, draft of the points on which clarification is asked for. All the same, your draft will be of considerable value to me in putting up my suggestion for the consideration of the Government of India.

As we both have been insisting at our meetings on the 4th and 5th August 1949, our discussions have been limited to the severely practical approach without prejudice to the legal rights on either side and to the claims resulting therefrom. Both our drafts are based on this assumption. On the same assumption, I now enclose a copy of my reply to the points raised in your draft on which you have asked for clarification. I would request that you will also kindly favour me with your comments on my draft so that both of us will then be in complete possession of each other’s viewpoints before we submit our proposals to our respective Governments.

Both during the discussions and in your letter of the 5th August, you have stated that my suggestion for an overall examination of the water resources of the entire Indus basin constituted an entirely novel proposal. Personally, I see nothing novel about it. The need for a “technical survey of water resources and the means of using them for supply to Dipalpur and Central Bari Doab Canals” was specifically accepted in paragraph 6 of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May, 1948. Paragraph 4 of that Agreement recognised that, apart from the question of law involved, the two “Governments are anxious to approach the problem in a practical spirit on the basis of the East Punjab Government progressively diminishing its supply to these canals in order to give reasonable time to enable the West Punjab Government to tap alternative sources”. In paragraph 3, “the West Punjab Government on its part recognise the natural anxiety of the East Punjab Government to discharge the obligation to develop areas where water is scarce and which were under-developed in relation to parts of West Punjab”.

At the Lahore Conference on the 21st July, 1948, I enquired what progress had been made with the technical survey of water resources, but could not get any satisfactory reply.

More recently, the Government of Pakistan, in paragraph 6 of their telegram of the 13th June, 1949, referred to “related matters necessary to protect and promote interests of irrigable areas of the Indus basin on both side of frontier”. This was followed up by a communication, dated the 16th June, 1949, from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations in Pakistan, in paragraph 9(1) of which the Government of Pakistan proposed and invited the Government of India to agree to a conference “between representatives of India and Pakistan for the purpose of making an equitable apportionment of the flow of all waters common to Pakistan and India and of resolving by agreement all disputes incidental to the use of these waters”. It was further stated that “each Government while reserving its rights, will seek to reach in a spirit of comity a practical solution that is fair and comprehensive”.

You will recall that, in my opening speech at the conference on the 4th August, I myself referred to and welcomed these proposals of the Pakistan Government. I have always been anxious to welcome all friendly and constructive approach of this kind. It was entirely with an idea of being helpful to both sides that I accepted the suggestion made by the Government of Pakistan to treat the Indus basin as one unit for the purposes of an overall investigation.

The Technical Commission, which we may agree to set up, should first direct its efforts to finding alternative sources of supply to Dipalpur and Central Bari Doab Canals, as envisaged in the Agreement of the 4th May, 1948, and then proceed to complete an overall survey with the object that the entire waters of the Indus basin may be utilised equitably for the maximum benefit of culturable areas within physical limits of command in both India and Pakistan.

I must confess that I was somewhat disappointed to notice in the note attached to your letter a tendency to pre-judge legal issues. I also feel that, in trying to respond to your request for clarification, I should not be drawn into accepting modifications in the Agreement of the 4th May, 1948, which are implicit in your questions.

Needless to say, this letter is without prejudice to the legal rights of either side and the claims resulting therefrom.

Pakistan’s Draft and Clarification provided by India

Pakistan’s Draft

1. Without prejudice to the legal rights of either side and to the claims resulting therefrom, e.g., by India for seigniorage and by Pakistan for compensation for damage occasioned by closure of canals and short supply of waters, it is proposed that a joint overall investigation of the water resources of the entire Indus basin should be undertaken to discover whether there are available water resources surplus to the following:-

   (i) Full satisfaction of pre-partition supplies in all channels of various kinds (e.g. perennial, non-perennial and inundation) in Western Pakistan.
(ii) Full supplies for the Thal and Upper and Lower Sind Barrage Projects.

(iii) Making up of shortages existing in the Sutlej Valley canals up to their supplies “assumed” in the project.

Clarification

1. We agree that the proposed joint overall investigation of the water resources of the entire Indus basin should be without prejudice to the legal rights of either side and to the claims resulting therefrom.

   We do not however agree with the object of the investigation as stated in your note. The object of the joint survey should be as explained in our draft agreement, handed over by Mr. Gokhale to Mr. Creagh Coen on the 5th August 1949. The survey should be undertaken with the object that the entire waters of the Indus basin are utilized equitably for the maximum benefit of culturable areas within physical limits of command in both India and Pakistan, irrespective of utilization, actual or contemplated, as suggested by Pakistan.

2. If it is disclosed that there are surplus water resources over and above those requirements which can be made available for purposes of irrigation within the Indus basin, India and Pakistan shall agree on the principles of equitable apportionment of these waters for purposes of irrigation within the Indus basin, and of the apportionment of the costs to be incurred in tapping these resources and making the surplus water available for Irrigation purposes, including the cost of subsidiary corrective works involved provided that neither side shall be called upon to contribute towards the cost of providing water in substitution of the water to which it was entitled on August 15, 1947, whether such water was being then availed of for purposes of irrigation or was to be availed of in future.

Clarification

2. The first step should be to collect the factual data by an overall survey as proposed in para. 1 above. The question of agreement between the two Governments on the principles of equitable apportionment of waters for purposes of irrigation within the Indus basin and for the apportionment of cost to be incurred in tapping these resources should be considered after the survey is completed. These matters could be discussed at the further meetings envisaged in para 5 of our draft. We do not agree that the principle of equitable apportionment should apply only to surplus water resources. We also do not admit the principle which has been suggested in the latter portion of this para about the apportionment of costs.

3. Till this investigation is completed and, if this investigation should disclose the existence of surplus resources, then till an overall agreement with regard to all matters in dispute is reached, the following interim arrangements shall come into operation:-

(a) Full pre-partition supplies of water shall be continued in all Pakistan channels and restored in the Bahawalpur State Distributary of the Eastern Canal and in all Pakistan channels of the Upper Bari Doab Canal on payment of proportionate share of the costs of maintenance and interest on book value.

(b) The amounts deposited by West Punjab in respect of seigniorage and the disputed portion of the interest shall be permitted to be withdrawn by West Punjab.

(c) Pakistan shall be supplied with daily gauge-discharge data and periodical water accounts of the rivers and canals concerned and full facilities shall be afforded to Pakistan Engineers to inspect and to check gauge-discharge sites, equipment and data concerned.

(d) A joint committee shall be set up to supervise the effective working of these arrangements including the proper allocation of waters and the supply of data.

Clarification

3. Our suggestions for necessary interim arrangements are included in para 5 of our draft of the 5th August, 1949. We consider that as the Agreement of the 4th May 1948 continues in force, the new points which you have raised in items (a) to (d) do not really arise for consideration at this stage. We, however, give our comments on these items as follows:-

(a) & (b): We see no reason to revise the terms agreed upon between the two Governments in respect of Dipalpur and Central Bari Doab Canals in the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May 1948. In particular, we do not agree to any reduction in the payments already being made under the Agreement of the 4th May 1948. We cannot agree to permit West Punjab to withdraw the amounts in deposit. Further amounts under these heads should continue to be deposited as previously agreed by Pakistan on the 4th May 1948.

Regarding the Bahawalpur State Distributary of the Eastern Canal, we have offered to supply water on payment of maintenance and interest charges and on deposit of seigniorage on the lines agreed to in respect of the Upper Bari Doab and Dipalpur Canals on the 4th May 1948. Our offer still remains open.

There is no subsisting agreement as regards supply of water to other Pakistan Canals.

(c.) Pakistan is already being supplied with necessary gauge discharge data.
If any additional data is required, the matter can be discussed between the Chief Engineers of the East Punjab and West Punjab Governments, (d) A Joint Committee of this kind is unnecessary.

4. During the pendency of these interim arrangements neither side shall do anything or proceed with any works that may interfere with the proper working of these arrangements.

Clarification

4. This does not arise in view of the replies noted above.

5. Every effort shall be made to conclude the joint investigation within a period of six months from the date on which the joint commission which is to carry out the investigation, is set up.

Clarification

5. We agree that the investigation should be completed within a period of six months; provided that this period may be extended, if necessary, from time to time, up to a maximum of a further period of six months, by agreement between the two Governments.

6. If the joint investigation does not disclose the existence of surplus resources of water or results in disagreement between the representatives of India and Pakistan or in case of the affirmation of the existence of surplus resources an agreement cannot be reached with regard to the apportionment of the waters or of the costs involved, the parties shall be relegated to their legal rights and claims without either being in any manner prejudiced by the terms of this agreement or by any work or project which the other party may meanwhile have undertaken or proceeded with, and the dispute shall be resolved in such manner as the parties may agree upon, and in the absence of an agreement on this point, the parties shall jointly submit the dispute to the International Court of Justice whose opinion shall be binding on the two Governments and shall be given full effect to by them.

Clarification

6. We must enter upon this overall investigation with the faith that it will lead to a friendly and amicable settlement. In any case, it is premature to consider the question of any reference of the dispute to the International Court of Justice or any other method of resolving the dispute.

2391. Note from the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the High Commission for India in Pakistan.

Karachi, August 12, 1949.

No. 1A.14/2/49(II) August 12, 1949

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations present their compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and with reference to the letter from the leader of the Government of India’s delegation to the canal waters conference, dated the 6th August, 1949, handed to the leader of the Government of Pakistan’s delegation at New Delhi, have the honour to request that the following reply may kindly be transmitted to the Government of India:—

2. Sub-paragraph (i) of paragraph 1—The first part of this sub-paragraph proceeds on the assumption that both Governments are of the view that adequate surplus waters are available for irrigation for the culturable areas situated in India and Pakistan. Such investigations, however, as we have carried out in Pakistan indicate that it is unlikely that any such surplus quantities will be discovered. So far as we are concerned, waters will be surplus only when they are over and above our needs. Apart from non-irrigation requirements, such as navigation in the lower reaches of the Indus, our requirements include:—

(a) Full satisfaction of pre-partition supplies in all channels of various kinds (e.g., perennial, non-perennial and inundation) in Western Pakistan.

(b) Full supplies for the Thal and Upper and Lower Sind Barrage Projects.

(c) Making up of shortages existing in the Sutlej Valley canals up to their supplies “assumed” in the project.

3. The expression “within the physical limits of command” is vague and does not define any particular areas. It may be construed to extend the utilisation of the Indus basin waters to the irrigation needs of areas outside the basin. To this we cannot agree. If we are to investigate the water resources of a particular area, those resources must naturally be used within that area.

4. Sub-paragraph (ii)—This also assumes, without any previous investigations, that a large proportion of the waters mentioned in sub-paragraph (i) are untapped. There may be some quantities of water from the middle of July to the middle of September surplus to the present allocations in the Indus basin; but on account of lack of sufficient storage facilities and, in the case of the Indus, on account of navigation requirements, only a very small proportion can be made available for irrigation.
5. Sub-paragraph (iii)—Subject to our views expressed above, there is no objection to this sub-paragraph.

6. Clause (a) of paragraph 1—This clause purports to bring under investigation for distribution even present allocation of water, and is calculated to deprive the existing canals of their guaranteed supplies. We cannot agree to this. The meaning of the phrase “possible points of utilisation” is not clear.

Clause (b)- This clause too is vague and, for the reasons given against clause (a) above, is unacceptable.

Clause (c)- This clause would have to be subject to the provisions, all of which we regard as essential, set out in paragraph 2 of the draft included in Appendix II of the minutes of the Conference.

The concluding lines of this paragraph reiterate that the Indus basin waters are to be utilized “within physical limits of command both in India and Pakistan”. We have already given our views about this earlier

7. Paragraph 2—This paragraph is acceptable, provided that it is made clear that if either member considers inspection of sites or any other investigation, experimental or otherwise, to be necessary, full facilities will be accorded.

8. Paragraph 3—No objection.

9. Paragraph 4—We agree to this paragraph though, in view of the detailed investigation already made by the Wiley Committee we feel that six months should suffice.

10. Paragraph 5—If a unanimous report is submitted, we agree that the two Governments should hold further meetings with a view to reaching a settlement. If, however, this should unfortunately not be the case the Government of Pakistan feel very strongly that a speedy and peaceable settlement of this long-standing issue is imperative, and that it can best be achieved by both parties agreeing that, in that event, either party shall have the right to take the dispute for decision to the International Court of Justice, as generally set out in paragraph 6 of our draft referred to above. Meanwhile paragraph 3 of our draft appears to constitute the fairest and most equitable interim arrangement.

11. Paragraph 6—We agree.

The Ministry avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of their highest consideration.

High Commission of India in Pakistan

Karachi
2392. Note by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru on the Canal Water dispute with Pakistan.

New Delhi, September 28, 1949.

Pakistan says in its letter that if a settlement is not reached, a reference should be made by both parties agreeing to either party having the right to take the dispute for decision to the International Court of Justice.

Our reply to this, contained in paragraph 5, sub-paragraph (6), appears to me to be weak and incomplete. It gives one the impression that we are afraid of the proposal made and are trying to avoid any discussion of it. This is not a strong position. Personally I am quite clear and definite in my mind that we should be agreeable to arbitration in some suitable form. I do not understand this fear of arbitration, which some of us feel. In Mr. Gokhale’s (Secretary, Ministry of Works, Mines and Power) note, this fear is expressed clearly and it is argued that we should avoid arbitration at all costs. Surely this depends on the nature of the arbitration and the kind of arbitrators that might be appointed. I think there should be three and all of them foreign judges of international repute. The position that arose in connection with the Radcliffe Award, that is of the Indian and Pakistani representatives cancelling each other and Radcliffe having the final say, should not arise, when three independent foreign judges of repute are appointed.

Personally I have no strong objection to the International Court of justice, except that this is likely to be a long drawn out and expensive process. I do not myself see how the International Court can deal with an issue largely of fact and partly of law, unless it appoints a Commission to examine the position on the spot. The report of the Commission would go a long way to influence the Court. The Commission itself in effect would do much of the work that arbitrators would do on the spot, so far as facts were concerned.

I think we should be clear in our minds as to what we are prepared to do in this matter. Nothing is more harmful than shirking an issue, as this leaves the initiative always in the other party’s hands. We cannot ultimately avoid the International Court, unless we accept some form of arbitration. At the most we can choose between the two. A dispute about water resources and their use is eminently one for arbitration or judicial decision. It is ultimately a question of proportionate use of water and at the worst the proportion fixed might be slightly unfavourable to us. It cannot go much beyond this. To refuse both the International Court of justice and arbitration is to place oneself in an impossible position.

Quite apart from the reply that we have to send now, this question can be, and no doubt will be, raised on many occasions. For instance, I may have to deal... with it in America. I cannot quibble about it, nor is it dignified for our Government to do so at any time. The proposal for a joint technical commission that we have made is a sound one and is the obvious course. Even if, unfortunately, the Commission fails to achieve a settlement, this procedure has to be gone through, before anything else is thought of. The International Court of justice or arbitrators should themselves suggest this or something like it as a preliminary. Normally it should not be necessary at this stage for us to consider what should happen in the event of the joint technical commission not leading to a settlement. But since this question has been raised, we cannot ignore it and if we seek to ignore it, we do so to our disadvantage.

I think that we should be clear in our minds that The Hague Court or arbitration or either must be accepted, if need arises, and we should not be afraid of saying so. It is not necessary to say this in our letter under reply, but something more should be said in our paragraph 5, sub-paragraph (6) than what has been said. I suggest that this sub-paragraph should run as follow:

“As already stated in paragraph 4 above, the two Governments need not fetter their discretion in any way, until the report of the joint technical commission is available and every effort has been made to come to an amicable settlement.

Even if, unfortunately, such a settlement could not be reached, as a result of the labours of the joint technical commission, the Government of India are convinced that the dispute should be settled by peaceful methods and all such methods should be explored. The suggestion made by Pakistan that the dispute might be referred to the International Court of justice would involve long delay and would certainly not be a speedy method of arriving at a settlement. A court sitting far away from the scene of the dispute would not be able to deal easily with the facts and may well have to appoint technical commissions to investigate these facts. In view of these difficulties, any commitments at this stage about an uncertain future, which might possibly not arise, are not desirable.
But as stated above, the Government of India will always be anxious to explore all peaceful methods of settlement.

As stated in paragraph 3 above, until a fresh agreement on the subject has been negotiated, the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May 1948 stands and there can be no question of altering that Agreement, except by a fresh agreement.”

I have indicated above how my mind is working on this subject. I am not anxious about a particular form of wording, which no doubt, can be improved by Hon’ble Minister for Transport and Hon’ble Minister for Works, Mines and Power.....

2393. Note from the High Commissioner for India in Pakistan to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Karachi, October 5, 1949.

The High Commissioner for India in Pakistan presents his compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations of the Government of Pakistan and has the honour to refer to that Ministry’s note No.I.A. 14/2/49-(II) dated the 12th August 1949, which was received by the High Commissioner on the 19th August and reached the Government of India on the 24th August. That note forwarded the views of the Government of Pakistan on the letter dated the 6th August 1949, from the Leader of the Indian Delegation to the Inter-Dominion Conference on Canal Water Dispute, which took place at New Delhi on the 4th to 6th August 1949, to the Leader of the Pakistan Delegation. The High Commissioner is desired by his Government to communicate the following views on the note of the Pakistan Government.

2. The proposal made by the Leader of the Indian Delegation at the Inter-Dominion Conference on August 4-6, 1949, contemplates an investigation by a Joint Technical Commission of alternative sources of supply for the Dipalpur and Central Bari Doab Canals, as envisaged in the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May 1948, followed by the preparation of an inventory of the water resources of the entire Indus Basin and of the reasonable irrigation requirements of culturable areas in both India and Pakistan within the physical limits of command of the rivers of that basin and which depend for their water supply on these rivers. Having prepared this inventory of resources and requirements, the Commission would proceed to investigate the engineering works required for the utilization of these water resources, on an equitable basis, for maximum benefit to both India and Pakistan. The entire work to be done by the proposed Commission will be without prejudice to the rights and contentions of either Government. The Government of India, therefore, urge that no attempt should be made to prejudice either the result of the proposed investigation or to seek recognition, at this stage, of the prior claims of any canal system, existing or proposed.

3. There can be no question of altering, in any way, the terms of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May 1948 until a fresh agreement on the subject has been negotiated after the Report of the Joint Technical Commission is available or until, after a consideration of this Report, it unfortunately becomes apparent that no agreement is possible.

4. Given the necessary goodwill and accommodation on both sides, the Government of India do not despair of a satisfactory agreement emerging after a consideration of the Report of the Joint Technical Commission and they, therefore, do not propose to do, or agree to, anything which might create an atmosphere likely to make the task of the Joint Technical Commission difficult. They, therefore, do not propose at this stage to consider the procedure to be adopted in case it should unfortunately not be possible to come to an agreement by negotiation; all efforts must, in the first instance, be directed to conclude a satisfactory agreement on a consideration of the report of the Joint Technical Commission.

5. Subject to the general remarks made above, and with a view to clarify further some of the points raised in the Note, dated 12th August 1949, from the Government of Pakistan, the following detailed comments are offered:

(1) Paragraph 2 of Pakistan’s Note of the 12th August 1949; sub-paragraph (i) of paragraph 1 of India’s draft.— The report of the Joint Technical Commission, will show whether adequate quantities of water are available or not for irrigation of culturable areas in both India, and Pakistan. Their findings need not be anticipated.

The Government of India cannot agree, in advance, to the claim for the full satisfaction of pre-partition supplies to all channels of various kinds in Western Pakistan. Waters that rise in India have first to satisfy the needs of undeveloped and un-irrigated lands in this country. It was in recognition of this fact that Pakistan agreed to a progressive diminution of supply to West Punjab canals to enable the East Punjab Government to discharge their obligations to develop areas where water is scarce and which are under-developed in relation to parts of West Punjab. The interval involved in such progressive diminution was also intended to give adequate time to the Pakistan Government to find and construct alternative sources of irrigation for the areas in Pakistan the supply to which may be diminished by its diversion to the under-developed areas of East Punjab.

The Government of India cannot recognise that supplies for the Thal and Upper and Lower Sind Barrages and for making up the alleged shortages in the Sutlej Valley canals have any prior claim over the requirements of projects for the undeveloped areas in India.

The Government of India also do not see how non-irrigation requirements such as the hypothetical navigation requirements of the Indus can be given precedence over the irrigation requirements in India or Pakistan. This issue, raised for the first time by the Pakistan Delegation at the last Inter-Dominion conference, can only be of academic interest in the context of the history of irrigation development in India and Pakistan.

(2) Paragraph 3 of Pakistan’s Note.— The expression “area, within physical limits of command” is not new and is well understood by Irrigation Officers. As far back as 1870, the Secretary of State for India accepted as “undoubtedly correct” the principle that an Administration should receive “a supply of water in proportion to the area of its land within the influence of the canal.” The object aimed at in the preparation of every irrigation project has always been to extend irrigation, irrespective of territorial boundaries, up to the physical limits of command. Irrigation facilities from a river have never been and cannot be necessarily confined to the basin of that river. The scope of a project can be limited only with regard to the needs of areas which can be physically commanded by that project.

The expression “area within physical limits of command” means the area which can be physically commanded by a canal system, ordinarily by flow. In practice, however, it also includes areas, within irrigation boundary of a canal system, of which the level is too high to allow of irrigation by flow but which can be irrigated economically by water raised to the necessary level at some point in the supply system with reference to the Indus basin, the expression implies all such areas in both India and Pakistan to which waters of the Indus basin can physically be conveyed by canals in the manner indicated above.

(3) Paragraph 4 of Pakistan’s Note: Sub-paragraph (ii) of India’s draft.— It is not desirable to anticipate the findings of the Joint Technical Commission. It will be for that Commission to determine—

(i) the exact extent of the untapped waters at various times of the year, including the period middle of July to middle of September, and

(ii) the availability of storage facilities.

(4) Paragraph 6 of Pakistan’s Note: Clause (a) of paragraph 1 of India’s draft.— For a settlement on the basis of equitable distribution of the available supplies, it is necessary to bring under review all existing canal systems of the Indus Basin in India and Pakistan. It does not follow that existing canals must necessarily be deprived of supplies already being used, wholly or in part. Some modifications and rearrangements may be inevitable.

The term “possible points of utilisation” refers to sites of new off-takes on rivers and to sources not yet tapped.

Clause (b). The elucidation made above will, it is hoped, make the meaning of this clause clear.
Clause (c). It does not appear necessary to stipulate any conditions at this stage. The proper time for negotiating such conditions will be after the Report of the Joint Technical Commission is available and has been considered. The meaning of the expression “within physical limits of command” has already been explained in paragraph 5 (2) supra.

(5) Paragraph 7 of Pakistan’s Note: Paragraph 2 of India’s draft.—The Governments of India and Pakistan would no doubt give necessary facilities, on a reciprocal basis, for such inspections and investigations as are unanimously considered necessary by the Joint Technical Commission.

(6) Paragraph 10 of Pakistan’s Note: Paragraph 5 of India’s draft. As already stated in paragraph 4 above, the two Governments need not fetter their discretion in any way until the report of the Joint Technical Commission is available and every effort has been made to come to an amicable settlement. Even if, unfortunately, such a settlement should not be reached as a result of the labours of the Joint Technical Commission, the Government of India are convinced that the dispute should be settled by peaceful methods, and all such methods should be explored. A reference of the dispute to the International Court of Justice would involve long delay and would certainly not be a speedy method of arriving at a settlement. A Court sitting far away from the scene of the dispute would not be able to deal easily with the facts, and will in any case have to appoint Technical Commissions to investigate facts and make recommendations regarding possible methods of equitable settlement. In view of these difficulties, any commitments at this stage about an uncertain future, which might possibly not arise, are not desirable. But, as stated above, the Government of India will always be anxious to explore all peaceful methods of settlement.

As stated in paragraph 3 above until a fresh agreement on the subject has been negotiated, the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May 1948, stands and there can be no question of altering that Agreement except by a fresh Agreement.

6. It is hoped that with the further clarification now furnished, the Government of Pakistan will agree to the proposal made by the Leader of the Indian Delegation at the Conference on August 4-6, 1949 at New Delhi, viz., that a Joint Technical Commission be appointed to examine and report on the problem in the manner explained above. An investigation of this kind is a necessary preliminary to a settlement of the contentions of the two parties, whether by negotiation or otherwise.

7. If the Government of Pakistan agree, it may be helpful, as a first step, to appoint a, small negotiating Committee, not exceeding 3 members to be nominated by either Government, to settle the terms of reference of the Joint Technical Commission and for otherwise exploring possibilities of a settlement of the dispute. Any difference of views could more easily be resolved by a small Committee of this type.

Karachi, November 1, 1949.

2. We have already transferred 12,29,491 (repeat 12,29,491) rupees subject to adjustment when proper undisputed charges for second quarter have been ascertained. With regard to disputed amounts we have deposited in Reserve Bank of India 3,62,509 (repeat 3,62,509) rupees in ESCROW pending resolution of disagreements and without prejudice to PAKISTAN’S rights. In view of PAKISTAN the period contemplated during which the interim arrangement of May 4th, 1948, was to run has long since expired. The disputed amount is once more deposited despite the expiration of arrangement as an earnest of desire of PAKISTAN to reach a permanent friendly solution of all questions affecting our common water.

3. We are completing studies of observations submitted by you respecting point as to which clarification was sought by Pakistan. We hope shortly to submit a revised draft agreement for joint studies designed to facilitate permanent agreement for equitable apportionment of water desired to India and Pakistan. We believe that progress has already been achieved in that we are now in accord that we can discuss this matter, making joint studies and propose solutions without prejudice to legal contentions of either side.

4. In this connection and while two Dominions are seeking to resolve the matter in dispute we submit that PAKISTAN should NOT be asked to deposit even in ESCROW any further amounts that are disputed. While we appreciate that deposits heretofore made CANNOT be utilised except with the consent of both sides the making of these deposits constitutes a drain on West Punjab which, as amounts are disputed, it seems unfair to aggravate. Inasmuch as the period contemplated in interim arrangement of May 4th, 1948 has been exceeded and since it is express desire of both Dominions to reach as promptly as possible a solution in most friendly atmosphere and in view of fact that deposits of disputed amounts are placing upon West Punjab a burden of NO immediate benefit to anyone, it would appear appropriate to regard as superfluous any further deposits of disputed amounts.

5. In our revision of draft agreement, we are seeking to take due account of point of view of each side. We will complete and submit it earliest possible.
7. The presumption in paragraph 2 of your telegram No.30661, dated September 24th, 1949, is correct. In fact Pakistan definitely considers itself entitled to such supplies as part of its rights always. We repeat again it is necessary to have New Delhi’s acceptance and CANNOT accept the interpretation contained in memorandum 1681-PRIMIN, dated October 18th, 1948.

2395. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commissioner for India in Pakistan.

No. 1A.14/2/49(III) November 23, 1949

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations present their compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and, with reference to their note No.IHC. 21/Poll./49/VII, dated the 5th October, 1949, have the honour to request that the following views on the proposals made by the Government of India may kindly be transmitted to the Government of India.

2. The note of 5th October, if correctly understood, proposes that a negotiating committee meet to explore the possibilities of settling the dispute, including agreement as to the terms of reference of a commission to investigate and report upon the facts affecting an equitable apportionment of the waters of the Indus Basin common to India and Pakistan. It further proposes that no attempts should be made at this stage by either side to prejudge the final result or to seek recognition of the rights or claims of either Government. These proposals are along the lines of the proposals which the Government of Pakistan has been preparing. They are accepted.

3. It is suggested that each Government name two, or if the Government of India prefers, three negotiators, that the negotiators be instructed to meet in continuous session until an agreement has been reached and approved by the respective Governments as to the procedure and scope of the studies to be undertaken, and that they begin their meetings at the earliest practicable date in December. The Government of Pakistan suggests that the opening meetings take place in Karachi and that the negotiators be free to hold their subsequent meetings at such place or places as they may determine.
4. In order to facilitate the work of the negotiators there is submitted for your study a draft of agreement which the negotiators for Pakistan will submit at the opening meetings. Pakistan is prepared to accept this draft and will also be prepared to consider such changes as may be suggested by the Indian negotiators to promote permanent agreement for the equitable distribution and maximum utilization of the water resources of the Indus Basin common to India and Pakistan. The draft preliminary agreement is attached.

5. The note of 5th October, in addition to making the proposals accepted by Pakistan in paragraph 2 of this note, presents the contentions of India on matters which it is now understood should be left to discussion by the negotiators or by the Governments of India and Pakistan with the benefit of the discussions of the negotiators and of the projected technical studies. These contentions will be discussed at the appropriate time in a spirit of friendly adjustment of the interests of the different territories which depend upon the Indus Basin waters. The remarks that follow are offered to clarify the work of the negotiators and to avoid any possibility of misunderstanding.

6. The note of 5th October suggests (in paragraph 2) that the proposed investigation should first explore alternative sources of supply for the Dipalpur and Central Bari Doab Canals. Pakistan will not object to any investigation believed by either side to be useful in arriving at an agreement for the equitable apportionment and maximum utilization of the common waters of the Indus Basin. In its view no apportionment would be either equitable or economically sound if it decreased the supply for uses now existing or allocated. But these views may be discussed by the negotiators, each side keeping in mind that neither is seeking to prejudge the final result. The Government of Pakistan accordingly assumes that no attempt will be made to confine the proposed studies to the accomplishment of a rearrangement of the supply of the Dipalpur and Central Bari Doab Canals or to the accomplishment of any similar preconceived result. It believes that the studies should be directed to provide reports on the water requirements of the developed and undeveloped tracts at different times of the year at both existing and possible points of utilization. It might appear in the course of a general investigation that by rearrangement of the source of supply for the Dipalpur and Central Bari Doab Canals optimum utilization of the water resources of the basin would or would not be promoted. The result which we appear to be in agreement in desiring is an equitable apportionment with optimum utilization. The specific ways of achieving this remain to be ascertained through our joint studies and discussions.

7. It would appear from the note of 5th October that the negotiators for India will be instructed to ask for the investigation of the requirements of areas that lie outside of the basin. Pakistan will interpose no objection to thus extending the studies so long as this extension does not delay or prejudice the study of the requirements of the basin itself. It is the position of Pakistan that the basin should in no event be called upon to sacrifice its water resources, to the extent that they are needed in the basin, for the purpose of developing areas outside of the basin. It may well appear in the course of the studies that the apparent divergence in the views of Pakistan and India respecting the area entitled to share in the Indus Basin waters has little practical importance.

8. The harmonious atmosphere necessary for the success of the proposed negotiations and studies would not be promoted by repetition of the different view’s taken with respect to the interim arrangement of 4th May 1948. From telegram from Foreign, Karachi, No.4576, dated the 1st November 1949, and other communications from the Government of Pakistan, the Government of India will appreciate that Pakistan does not accept the Indian interpretation of that arrangement and that Pakistan considers the period contemplated during which that arrangement would remain in force has long since expired. Apart from these considerations, a new interim arrangement that is fair to both sides to cover the period when we are seeking a final solution is appropriate and such an arrangement is included in the draft agreement submitted by Pakistan.

9. It is the view of Pakistan that with goodwill on both sides and a determination to reach by agreement an equitable apportionment of the waters, it will be unnecessary to refer the dispute now existing to the arbitrament of the International Court of Justice. On the other hand, it would seem quite clear that the determination to reach a fair result by friendly negotiation will be promoted and not hindered by agreement in advance that in the event of failure each side will accept the arbitrament of the International Court. Such an agreement in advance will further promote the harmonious atmosphere desired on both sides through the assurance it will give to the populations dependent upon the waters of the basin that their right to livelihood will be given fair treatment. Should negotiation settle many points in dispute but fail to resolve all, only the points that remain open would need to be referred to the International Court. The contemplated joint studies should remove any disagreements as to the facts; but were issues of fact to arise that could be settled only by an impartial arbitrator, the International Court could under its statutes send a commission of inquiry to the Indus Basin. Agreement in advance to accepting the decision of this Court would, of course, not preclude resort to other means of mediation or arbitration; the parties might in the light of the circumstances existing at a future date find means to settle any issues which the negotiators could not resolve. With these reconsiderations in mind, and bearing also in mind that the International Court is not an “outside” authority but the instrument set up by the United Nations to settle such matters as are involved in the dispute between India and Pakistan, it is very much to be hoped that the Government of India will instruct its negotiators to accept the jurisdiction of the International Court with the understanding that such acceptance will not impair the mutual determination to seek a solution by friendly negotiation.

The Ministry avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of their highest consideration.

DRAFT AGREEMENT

The representatives of the Governments of India and Pakistan agree on behalf of their Governments to seek a friendly solution to the dispute over the water of the Indus Basin common to India and Pakistan as follows:—

“The two Governments agree to set up a Commission to investigate and report for the entire Indus basin on:—

(a) the water requirements of the developed and undeveloped tracts at different times of the year at both existing and possible points of utilization,

(b) the water supply, utilized and unutilized, available at different times of the year at the points of utilization mentioned in (a) above, and

(c) the engineering works necessary to secure the optimum supply to meet the requirements mentioned in (a) above and their financial implications, with the object of promoting agreement for the development of the optimum utilization of the water resources of the basin and the equitable apportionment of the supply between India and Pakistan.

2. The Commission shall consist of five persons, two nominated by India, two by Pakistan and a neutral Chairman agreed upon by a majority of the other four Commissioners. The Commission shall determine its rules of procedure by majority vote of its members. The Commission shall have authority to employ technical investigators and advisers, including a senior Engineer nominated by the Indian Commissioners; a senior Engineer nominated by the Indian Commissioners, and a Chief Engineer nominated by the Chairman. The Commission and its staff shall be entitled to hold meetings and to make investigations in Pakistan and in India as the Commission determines. It shall report the result of its investigations and make recommendation to the Governments of India and Pakistan but shall have no authority to arbitrate or to bind either Government. All proceedings of the Commission shall be without prejudice to the legal rights of either side and to claims resulting therefrom.

3. Both Governments agree to provide all necessary facilities to the Commission in the execution of its task. In particular, if the Commission requires any data for its enquiry, the two Governments undertake to carry out such surveys or investigations as may be requested by the Commission, to supply the Commission with the data requested, and to facilitate verification by the Commission and its staff of such surveys, investigation and data.

4. The cost of the Commission and of the surveys and investigations shall be shared equally by the two Governments.

5. The Commission shall be set up and begin its work as early as possible and shall complete its investigations and submit a report to the two Governments on or before 1st May, 1950; provided that the period may be further extended by the two Governments from time to time up to a maximum period of 6 months from 1st May, 1950.

6. Until other agreement is reached between the two Governments or until one of the Governments serves notice on the other that it doubts that a satisfactory permanent agreement can be reached by negotiations, the following interim arrangement shall be observed:—

(a.) Each Government will refrain from any interference in the enjoyment by the other of the supplies of water allocated to its territory prior to partition from the tributaries of the Indus common to India and Pakistan and the canals connected therewith;

(b) Each Government will furnish and afford the other the opportunity at all reasonable hours to verify, at the appropriate locations on its territory, all data (1) concerning the flow and distribution between Pakistan and India of the water supplies of the tributaries of the Indus common to India and Pakistan, including the canals capable of drawing water therefrom, and (2) the actual costs of construction, maintenance and operation of all irrigation works of common benefit;

(c) Each Government will refrain from constructing, proceeding with or altering any works affecting the distribution between India and Pakistan of the waters common to India and Pakistan except in agreement with the other; and

(d) Each Government will pay a share of the actual carrying charges and costs of maintenance and operation of all irrigation works of common benefit proportionate to the benefits received.

7. Each of the Governments agrees that, upon notice by either of them that it doubts that a satisfactory permanent solution can be reached by negotiation, the International Court of Justice shall have jurisdiction to resolve the dispute upon application by either party.”
2396. Extract from the Express letter from Ministry of External Affairs to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

New Delhi, November 25, 1949.

Subject: Deposit of disputed amounts under paragraph 5 of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May 1948.

Please refer to your telegram No.4576, dated 1st November 1949.

5. As regards paragraph 4 of your telegram under reply, the Government of India consider that the deposit of the sum in dispute, in the manner specified above, is an essential part of the Agreement of 4th May 1948. They cannot, therefore, agree either to waive the deposit of these sums or to permit any change in the manner in which they are now being determined.

6. The Government of India note with surprise the statement in paragraph 2 of your telegram that "in view of Pakistan the period contemplated during which the interim arrangement of May 4th, 1948, was to run has long since expired". They are entirely unable to understand the basis or the reasons for this view which has been expressed by Pakistan for the first time. Even at the Inter-Dominion Conference held in Delhi in August 1949, there was no suggestion by the Pakistan delegation that the 4th May 1948 Agreement had come to an or in any way ceased to operate. The Government of India are clearly of the view that the Agreement continues to stand that its basic provision, viz., the recognition of the of East Punjab to progressively diminish the supply of water to the canals in order to give reasonable time to West Punjab to tap alternative sources, remains binding on parties. It is felt that the efforts being made both by India and Pakistan towards a prompt and final settlement of dispute in a friendly atmosphere can be assured of success if the status-quo is maintained while negotiations and joint studies are in progress.

7. With reference to paragraph 7 of your telegram of 1st November 1949, the Government of India cannot accept Pakistan’s contention that it is "entitled to supplies of water as part of its rights always". It serves little purpose however to reiterate the respective contentions of the two parties when it been agreed to leave all such contentions aside for the present and approach the problem in a practical spirit.

8. The Government of India are glad to note from paragraph 3 of your telegram that the Pakistan Government have agreed to the principle of joint studies as proposed by the Indian Delegation at the last Inter-Dominion Conference with a view to facilitating a permanent settlement of the dispute. They await with interest the revised draft promised in paragraph 5 of your telegram.

2397. Letter from the Secretary to the Ministry of External Affairs to Secretary to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

New Delhi, December 17, 1949.

No. F. 8-2/49-Pak-III  December 17, 1949

Subject—Bahawalpur State Distributary of the Eastern Canal—Supplies for—

With reference to your letter No. IA.14/2/49 (Ill), dated the 19th November 1949, I am directed to say that the points raised in your letter have been previously considered by the Government of India more than once, and that the Government of India are satisfied that the Government of East Punjab are not under any obligation to supply water from the Eastern Grey Canal to Bahawalpur State free of seigniorage.

2. It may be recalled that the question of supply of water to the Bahawalpur State Distributary was raised for the first time in your telegram No.2125, dated the 4th June 1948, to which a reply was given in para 4 of our telegram No. PRIMIN-1342, dated the 15th June 1948,—that we were prepared to ask the East Punjab Government to supply water immediately to the Bahawalpur State Distributary on terms similar to those contained in the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May, 1948, i.e., subject to the payment by the Bahawalpur State of interest and maintenance charges and the deposit of seigniorage. It is understood that in response to an enquiry from the Chief Engineer, Bahawalpur, the Chief Engineer, East Punjab, in his telegram, dated the 18th June 1948, informed the Chief Engineer, Bahawalpur, that the total of these charges would be of the order of Rs.3,32,000/- per annum. This included a sum of about Rs.20,000 only on account of seigniorage. Our offer to supply water to the Bahawalpur State Distributary on the terms noted above was repeated at the Inter-Dominion Conference at Lahore on the 21st July, 1948, and once again at the Inter-Dominion Conference at New Delhi on the 4th, 5th and. 6th August, 1949.

3. In view of what is stated in paragraph 2 of your letter under reply, the Government of India are surprised that this offer which involved only a deposit of Rs.20,000 or so by way of seigniorage should not have been accepted earlier. They repeat that the offer previously made is still open. If the Government of Pakistan now desire to take advantage of the offer, the Government of India, with a view to foster good neighbourly relations and to give reasonable time to the Government of Pakistan to make alternative arrangements for supply of water to these areas, will instruct the Government of East Punjab to supply water to the Bahawalpur State Distributary for the next flow season, viz., Kharif 1950.
The High Commission for India in Pakistan present their compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations of the Government of Pakistan and with reference to their Note No. IA. 14/2/49 (III), dated the 23rd November, 1949, have the honour to communicate the following comments of the Government of India on the proposals made and views expressed by the Government of Pakistan.

2. The views of the Government of India on these matters are clearly stated in this High Commission Note No. IHC. 21- Poll/49-VII, dated the 5th October, 1949 and in Express letter No.44/49-S., dated the 25th November, 1949, from Foreign, New Delhi, to Foreign, Karachi. While the Government of Pakistan would appear not to have fully appreciated the position in all respects, the Government of India feel that there is a sufficient measure of agreement to enable the two Governments to proceed with the appointment of a Negotiating Committee for the purpose of setting up a Joint Technical Commission.

3. The Government of India accordingly nominate the following three negotiators and request the Government of Pakistan to nominate their negotiators so that they may begin their work at the earliest practicable date—

(1) Sri B. K. Gokhale.
(2) Sri A. N. Khosla.
(3) Sri M. R. Sachdev.

The Government of India have no objection to the opening meeting of the Negotiating Committee taking place in Karachi as suggested by the Government of Pakistan. The negotiators will be free to hold their subsequent meetings at such place and time as they may determine. The remarks that follow are offered to facilitate the work of the negotiators and to minimize possibilities of misunderstanding.

4. The Government of India suggested the appointment of a Negotiating Committee to settle the terms of reference of a Joint Technical Commission and for otherwise exploring possibilities of a settlement of the dispute. The Government of India feel that the first step towards a settlement of the dispute should be to undertake a technical survey of water resources and the means of using them for supply to the Dipalpur and Central Bari Doab Canals, as envisaged in the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May, 1948, and also to complete an overall survey with the object that the entire waters of the Indus basin may be utilized equitably for the maximum benefit of culturable areas within physical limits of command in both India and Pakistan. Since the objective of the investigation as agreed to by the two Governments is the collection of technical data, the Government of India feel that the Commission should consist only of technical men.

5. The views of the Government of India in respect of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May 1948, have already been conveyed to the Government of Pakistan in Express letter No.444/49-S, dated the 25th November, 1949, from Foreign, New Delhi, to Foreign, Karachi. The Government of India consider that the proposed investigation is in continuation of the technical survey envisaged in paragraph 6 of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May, 1948. As such they are definitely of the opinion that no new arrangements are necessary while both sides are seeking a friendly solution.

6. The Government of India reciprocate the hope expressed by the Government of Pakistan that, with goodwill on both sides and a determination to reach agreement, it will be unnecessary to refer the dispute now existing to the arbitrament of the International Court of Justice. They further feel that, when entering upon the proposed negotiations, both sides should be determined to reach a reasonable settlement. To anticipate the contingency of a failure of the negotiations and to agree in advance as to the step to be taken on such failure might, in their view, far from promoting a settlement, have the opposite effect. A reference is also invited in this connection to paragraph 5 (6) of this High Commission Note No.IHC. 21/Poll/49-VII, dated the 5th October, 1949.

7. The Government of India have taken note of the draft agreement which the negotiators for Pakistan will submit at the opening meeting. The negotiators on behalf of the Government of India will place before this meeting the draft which forms Appendix I to the minutes of the Inter-Dominion Conference held on August 4-6, 1949. They will, of course, be prepared to consider such changes as may be suggested by the Pakistan negotiators with a view to promote agreement regarding the appointment and the working of the Joint Technical Commission.

8. The Government of India do not wish to discuss at this stage the various other points of difference which have already been dealt with in previous correspondence. There would be no advantage in restating these points and fettering in any way the work of the negotiators, particularly when it has been agreed by both sides that no attempt should be made by either side to prejudge the final result or to seek recognition of the rights or claims of either Government and that the investigations and studies to be made by the Joint Technical Commission shall be without prejudice to the legal rights of either side or to the claims resulting therefrom.

9. The High Commissioner avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the Government of Pakistan the assurances of their highest consideration.

New Delhi, January 18, 1950.

5. The canal water issue has been the subject of correspondence between the two Governments and both are practically agreed that a joint technical commission should be set up for making a factual investigations. On the basis of the report of the Commission, the two Governments will confer with a view to arriving at a settlement. If it is not found possible to reach a settlement, we are quite prepared to refer the matter to arbitration or some tribunal approved of by both Governments. You will appreciate that the manner of subsequent procedure as well as the forum can hardly be decided satisfactorily before we know what the results of the technical Commission are.

Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the High Commission for India in Pakistan.

No. 1.A.4/50 (I) January 27, 1950

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations present their compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and, with reference to letter from the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs No. F.8-2/49-Pak-III, dated the 17th December 1949, have the honour to request that the following reply may kindly be transmitted to them.

2. The Government of Pakistan since the partition and the State of Bahawalpur since before the partition have maintained, and continue to maintain, their right to receive the share of water allocated to the State of Bahawalpur for supply through the State Distributary of the Eastern Grey Canal. They deny that India has any right to interfere in the flow of this supply or to exact as the price of non-interference the payment of any tax, whether called seigniorage or otherwise. There is, of course, no disposition on the part of Pakistan to avoid making those contributions provided for under the arrangements existing at partition toward the actual expenses of the installations in question. It is the charges in excess of such agreed contributions that are in issue.

3. In the view of the Government of Pakistan there is no foundation whatsoever for the Indian assertion of a right to exact a payment for supplies of water to which Pakistan is entitled. The Government of Pakistan are aware that the Government of India take a different view and they would welcome a suggestion from the Government of India as to how this sharp issue can be resolved in a friendly manner, once and for all.

4. The most serious aspect of the contention made in the letter under reply is the reassertion, despite the expression in other notes of the desire of India to settle the water dispute by friendly means, of a right to use India’s physical power as an upper riparian to withhold water from any part of Pakistan as a means of winning acquiescence in the Indian contentions. An interference in the flow of water that has been used, unchallenged, for irrigation in an arid country is a public international wrong. It is a weapon the employment of which cannot be reconciled with the agreement to settle the Inter-Dominion disputes in a friendly way. It is a violation of the obligations the Governments of India and Pakistan have undertaken toward each other and all other members of the United Nations.
5. In view of the genuine efforts being made by India and Pakistan to create a cordial atmosphere that will assure the success of the pending negotiations as to all questions in dispute with regard to the common waters, the Government of Pakistan invite the Government of India to reconsider the position taken in their letter of the 17th December 1949 with a view to issuing new instructions so that the customary supplies of water for the State of Bahawalpur will flow unhindered from the 1st April 1950 through the State Distributary of the Eastern Grey Canal.

6. Pakistan does not request that by ceasing to interfere with the flow of water, India prejudice its contentions. It asks only that while the issues between the two Governments are being worked out by negotiations or other friendly means, India should not prejudice the result by cutting off the supply. If India had offered to arbitrate the point in issue and Pakistan had refused, the matter might be different. The fact is that an offer by Pakistan to accept the decision of an international tribunal on this and on all other issues affecting the common waters has long been outstanding, and it is India that, up to the present, has refused. The Governments of India and Pakistan are agreed that in their negotiations neither party should seek to prejudge the final outcome. This being the case, surely the status quo at the time of partition cannot properly be altered by either party.

7. In the interest of the desired harmony and of a restoration of the economy in Bahawalpur that has been seriously damaged by the withholding late in 1947 and in 1948 and again in 1949 of the supplies to which it is entitled, the Government of Pakistan request that assurance be given as promptly as possible that the supply will be restored, so that the Government of Pakistan may inform the farmers of Bahawalpur that they may count on the restoration of their traditional supplies through the State Distributary of the Eastern Grey Canal beginning on the 1st April, 1950.

The Ministry avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of their highest consideration.
2401. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission for India in Pakistan.

No. 1A.4/50 January 28, 1950

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations present their compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and, with reference to Note from the High Commission No. IHC.21-Poll/49-VII, dated the 19th December 1949, and Express Letter from Foreign, New Delhi, No. 444/49-S., dated the 25th November 1949, have the honour to request that the following reply may kindly be transmitted to the Government of India.

2. The Government of Pakistan are happy to learn that the Government of India feel that there is a sufficient measure of agreement to enable the two Governments to proceed with the appointment of a negotiating Committee, that the Government of India have nominated three negotiators and request the Government of Pakistan to nominate their negotiators to the end that the negotiations may be initiated the earliest practicable date.

3. The Government of Pakistan have nominated as their negotiators Messrs. Mohammad Ali, H. A. Majid and Pir Mohammad Ibrahim. Mr. Mohammad Ali will be able to return from New York to Karachi in time to begin negotiations there before the end of February. It is suggested that the first meeting of the negotiators begin at 10 A.M. on Monday, the 27th February 1950, in Karachi. As agreed by the Government of India, the negotiators will be free to hold their subsequent meetings at such places and times as they themselves from time to time shall determine.

4. With respect to paragraph 4 of the High Commissions note of the 19th December 1949, the Government of Pakistan consider that ultimate satisfactory agreement between India and Pakistan will be better facilitated if the proposed commission consists of non-technical representatives of India and Pakistan, with an impartial and non-technical chairman. This commission would in turn employ the technical men suggested by India, direct their studies and assist both Governments in applying the technical data to the concrete solution of the common problem.

5. It appears that the Governments of India and Pakistan are in agreement that the technical men should complete an overall survey with the object that the entire waters of the Indus Basin may be utilized and apportioned equitably for the maximum benefit of both countries. Such a study will of necessity include a survey of the water resources of the Sutlej and Ravi Rivers and the points from which and the canals through which the share of each country will be drawn. As stated in paragraph 8 of the High Commission’s note of the 19th December 1949, it would, however, be inconsistent with the basis on which the negotiations and investigations are to be conducted were either side to restrict the studies so as to prejudge the agreement to be reached on the allocation of the supplies of any particular river or canal system.

6. Except for the point that Pakistan believes that the common objective will be better served by having the commission consist of non-technical statesmen who will enlist the services of the technical experts, the Government of Pakistan accept fully the statement of the basis of the negotiations expressed in paragraph 8 of the High Commission’s note of the 19th December 1949. This being the case no useful purpose is to be served by again taking issue with certain contentions of the High Commission’s note of the 19th December 1949, notably paragraphs 4 and 5, or in Express Letter from Foreign, New Delhi, No. 444/49-S, dated the 25th November 1949. The different views of the Government of Pakistan have been set forth in previous discussions and correspondence, including telegram from Foreign, Karachi, to Foreign, New Delhi, No. 4576, dated the 1st November 1949, and the Ministry’s note No. IA.14/2/49) (III), dated the 23rd November, 1949,

7. There remains only to clear up what appears to be a misunderstanding regarding the Pakistan proposal that each side agree to accept the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the resolution of any issue that cannot be settled by negotiation. The High Commission’s note of the 19th December 1949 queries whether such an agreement might not weaken the expressed determination of each Government to work out an equitable apportionment through friendly means, The reference to paragraph 5(6) of the High Commission’s note of the 5th October 1949, suggests that the Indian apprehension is based upon a fear that such an agreement might invite a premature reference to the Court by Pakistan of issues which could with patience more quickly be resolved by negotiation. As to this, the Government of India may rest assured that Pakistan will not invoke the jurisdiction of that tribunal before a genuine deadlock has in fact been reached. With this assurance, it is submitted no valid reason can be advanced against acceptance by each side of the ultimate jurisdiction of the International Court.

8. The Government of India stress the importance to the success of the impending negotiations of a friendly atmosphere and of determination on each side to reach a reasonable settlement. With this, Pakistan is in wholehearted agreement. This is the reason why Pakistan attaches special significance to the attitude of the Government of India towards the Pakistan proposal to agree now that either party may avoid a stalemate by asking the Court to decide what is reasonable and right.
9. One point now sharply in issue will illustrate this. Indian spokesmen have in the past advanced the extreme view that as upper riparian India has the right to determine unilaterally how much water Pakistan may receive through the artificial channels that supplied a part of the Pakistan share prior to partition. Acting on this contention, certain of these supplies were actually cut off. India demanded, as the price of ceasing this interference, that Pakistan should pay a tax, called "seigniorage", for its own waters, as well as charges in excess of the actual carrying charges on irrigation installations of common benefit. Although the Government of India have permitted these disputed amounts to be deposited in escrow, the fact remains that they assumed (and in their letter of the 17th December 1949 still assume as to one canal) the right to withhold water unless deposits of these disputed amounts are made periodically in such sums as they prescribe.

10. The State of Bahawalpur has been denied since about the 25th August 1947 the supplies of water it is entitled to receive through the Eastern Grey Canal. It will be assumed that India is sincere in believing it is entitled to exact a payment for that water. Pakistan no less genuinely believes such an exaction is without justification of any kind. Whether India is right or Pakistan is right, one thing is most clear. It is an international wrong to cut off the flow of water while this issue is debated. The withholding or the threat to withhold water indispensable to life in an arid country cannot be reconciled with a desire to resolve differences of opinion in a friendly manner. Such action is moreover a use of or threat to use force contrary to the obligations of membership in the United Nations. Agreements exacted under such a use of or threat to use force are not voluntary, friendly or fair.

11. Pakistan's concern over India's reluctance to accept the jurisdiction of the International Court is not, therefore, based upon imaginary fears. Despite India's recently expressed determination to reach a reasonable solution by friendly means, the Government of India continue to use their physical power as a means of inducing acquiescence in India's position. The friendly atmosphere essential to the success of the impending negotiations will be enhanced by an agreement to accept the jurisdiction of the International Court and thus ensure the resolution of all deadlocked issues without recourse to force.

12. With these considerations in mind, it is the earnest hope of the Government of Pakistan that the Government of India will give renewed and favourable consideration to the suggestion that their negotiators be empowered to accept the jurisdiction of the International Court for the resolution of issues that cannot be settled by negotiation.

The Ministry avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of their highest consideration.

2. The High Commission shall be grateful if the Government of India will kindly take immediate steps to ensure regular water supplies in these channels so that there may be no further damage to irrigation in the West Punjab on account of the non-supply of canal water to that Province.

3. The High Commission request the favour of an early reply.

4. The Pakistan High Commission take the opportunity to renew to the Government of India the assurances of their highest consideration.

2403. Extract from the Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Karachi, February 14, 1950.

7. Again, the canal water dispute is a justifiable issue which should be referred to the International Court of Justice if no agreement by negotiations can be reached, and yet India has so far refused to agree to this course. It is true that both Governments have practically agreed that a Joint Commission should be set up, although Pakistan believes that the common objective will be better served if the Commission consists of non-technical statesmen who will enlist the services of technical experts, than by appointing a technical commission. On the basis of the Commission’s report, the two Governments will confer with a view to arriving at a settlement; but if an agreement is not reached, the proper way of resolving differences in a matter of this kind would be a reference to the International Court of Justice. What is most urgently needed is to set at rest the fear operating on the minds of the people likely to be affected that the dispute may drag on indefinitely while their welfare and prosperity are progressively put in jeopardy. They must be assured that, in the event of the dispute not being resolved by the method now being pursued, it will be settled by adjudication of the Tribunal best fitted to resolve it. Since you are prepared to accept arbitration, there should be no objection to designating the International Court of Justice as the arbitral authority.
In an accompanying Aide-Memoire the Government of Pakistan Inter alia said:

(iii) Canal waters. — The issue is a juridical one and if negotiations between the two Governments do not succeed, both Governments should agree in advance to refer the matter to decision by the International Court of Justice.

(iv) Evacuee property. — The evacuee property dispute can only be settled after the canal waters dispute has been settled since a decision on the canal waters dispute has a vital bearing on the question of evacuee property. A settlement of the canal waters dispute is, therefore, an essential preliminary to a settlement of the evacuee property. After the canal waters dispute has been settled, the evacuee property dispute should be settled by negotiation aided, if necessary, by mediation and if that does not prove successful by a resort to arbitration.

Karachi, February 23, 1950

No. IHC. 21 – Poll/49 – VII

February 23, 1950

The High Commission for India in Pakistan present their compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations of the Government of Pakistan, and with reference to their Notes No. IA.4/50(I), dated the 27th and 28th January 1950; have the honour to transmit the following reply from the Government of India.

2. The Government of India have already intimated that they are agreeable to the first meeting of the Negotiators being held in Karachi on the 27th February 1950 since postponed to 27th March 1950. They trust that the negotiators will enter upon their task with good-will on both sides and with a determination to reach agreement. The Government of India, therefore, do not propose to reiterate their views regarding the supply of water to Bahawalpur through the Eastern Canal or the composition and functions of the proposed Joint Technical Commission or the suggestion that each side agree in advance to refer to the International Court of Justice any issue that cannot be settled by negotiation. The views of the Government of India on these matters have already been very clearly expressed in earlier correspondence. The Government of India do not propose to say anything at this stage which might make it more difficult for the negotiators to reconcile conflicting views.

3. The Government of India regret to note that the Government of Pakistan have considered it necessary and proper to make the task of the negotiators more difficult by accusing the Government of India of committing an ‘international wrong’, of “using or threatening to use force contrary to the obligations of membership of the United Nations”, and “of continuing to use their physical power as a means of inducing acquiescence in India’s position”. The Government of India emphatically protest against these allegations which are entirely unfounded and extremely difficult to reconcile with a desire on the part of the Government of Pakistan for an amicable settlement of the dispute. They completely ignore the fact that the Government of India have throughout maintained a most helpful attitude and have continued for the time being to give waters to Pakistan Canals, irrespective of their own rights and the needs of their own people, only because of the Inter-Dominion Agreement entered into by representatives of India and Pakistan on the 4th May 1948. They have also offered to supply water to Bahawalpur State through the Eastern Canal on terms similar to those mentioned in the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May 1948, although they are under no obligation to supply water to Bahawalpur through an artificial canal running through their own territory.

4. The Government of India do not propose to indulge in recriminations which may prejudice the chances of success of the impending negotiations. While they would reiterate their determination to explore all peaceful methods of reaching a final agreement, they would insist that such agreement has necessarily to be without prejudice to their obligation towards their own people in the under-developed areas - an obligation clearly recognised by the Pakistan Government in paragraph 3 of the Agreement of the 4th May 1948. On their part the Government of India have equally recognised that as the discharge of this obligation will involve the progressive diminution of the supply of water to certain Pakistan canals, the Government of Pakistan should be given reasonable time to tap alternative sources of supply for these canals.

The High Commission avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the Government of Pakistan the assurances of their highest consideration.
2405. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the High Commission for India in Pakistan.

No. 1A.4/50 (I) March 22, 1950

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations present their compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and, with reference to their note No.IHC.21-Poll/49-VII, dated the 23rd February, 1950, have the honour to request that the following reply may kindly be transmitted to the Government of India.

2. A review of notes leading up to the forthcoming negotiations reveals that agreement has been reached on certain points and that disagreement persists as to others. For negotiations to succeed it is clear that both sides must build up on points of agreement and avoid conditioning further co-operation on acceptance by the other side of views on which agreement has proved to be impossible. There is not a single point of disagreement over the common waters which the Government of Pakistan are unwilling to submit to the impartial decision of the International Court of Justice. If it should unfortunately develop that issues on which both sides cannot agree stand in the way of a solution built upon the issues where they do agree, the Government of India will, it is hoped, recognise the necessity of accepting the decision of this impartial Tribunal.

3. Fortunately the Governments of India and Pakistan are in agreement on the basic proposition that the common waters are a matter of common concern. They appear also to be in agreement that friendly solution must be reached that provides an equitable and lasting adjudication of each nation's interest in the use and development of these common waters. It remains to be discovered at the forthcoming negotiations how close both sides can come to reaching agreement upon those interests of each nation which the other must respect. Pakistan for its part is prepared to work out an allocation of the common waters in application of the principle of equitable apportionment. Since this is the principle that has been accepted by civilised communities as the basis of reconciling competing interests of riparians, and since it was upon this principle that allocations of the common waters in effect at the time of partition were made, it is to be hoped that agreement can be reached on interests to be respected in conformity with that principle.

4. The Government of Pakistan recognise the interest of the Government of India in developing to the extent that their resources permit areas within their jurisdiction where water is scarce. Reciprocally the Government of India should recognise the interest of the Government of Pakistan in developments needed in their jurisdiction. The recognition by one community of the interest of the other in developing irrigation where there is scarcity does not convey a right to appropriate supplies its expense. Nor can interest in developing prospective uses justify the sacrifice of existing beneficial uses. Where the deferred apportionable supply is barely adequate to take care of existing beneficial uses, it becomes duty of all interested riparians to co-operate in increase and equitable apportionment of usable supplies. The Government of Pakistan are prepared to do this.

5. The Governments of India and Pakistan are in agreement that forthcoming negotiations and arrangements to be made leading up to a permanent solution shall be without prejudice to legal rights of either nation. They are further agreed to refrain from seeking in any interim and procedural arrangements to prejudice generally final results. Since the appropriateness of this has been recognised, it has appeared to the Government of Pakistan that each side should recognise the appropriateness of refraining, pending a final solution, from any action affecting the common waters prejudicial to the other side. It is fundamental to any agreement of permanent validity that, during the period of negotiation, each side must be free from compulsion. There being no disagreement as to allocations of water existing at partition, the status quo then existing should be respected until the permanent solution is found. It is the interferences with these flows, not their characterisation as “public international wrongs” that create a condition that make an amicable settlement difficult, if not impossible.

6. Before partition there was no question of payment of “Seigniorage” for conveyance of supplies of waters allocated to any zones now in Pakistan. Since partition, the Government of India have claimed a right to collect “Seigniorage”. The Government of Pakistan have disputed their claim. Inasmuch as such “Seigniorage” was not payable at the time of partition, and inasmuch as submission of this dispute for decision by the International Court of Justice has been delayed owing only to the reluctance of the Government of India to agree to such submission, it is submitted that there is no warrant for the Government of India to condition its non-interference with the flow alloated to Pakistan upon payment of this disputed charge. The great damage that this interference has been and is causing to Pakistan and its people has been brought to the attention of the Government of India. The Government of India are accordingly again requested to give necessary orders to that end that all interference with the flow of waters allotted prior to partition of zones now in Pakistan should cease.

7. Both sides agree that good will is essential to the success of the forthcoming negotiations. The cessation of interferences in flow allocated to Pakistan will demonstrate, better than words, that there is no intention on India's part to prejudice or prejudge by unilateral act the fair result each side is seeking. The Government of Pakistan on their side are prepared to assure and do now guarantee that cessation of interference will not be used by Pakistan to prejudice or prejudge the final decision on the issue of “seigniorage”. If at any time the Government of India are willing to accept the decision of the International Court of Justice and that Court finds that the claim of India to “Seigniorage” for the use of artificial channels on its territories is well founded, the amounts adjudged by the Court to be owing by Pakistan will promptly be paid to the Government of India. In the meantime with these incidental disputes removed or reserved for arbitrament, it is hoped that the forthcoming negotiations may establish procedures by which a lasting agreement may be reached for the equitable apportionment of water resources of the Indus Basin.

2406. Note from High Commission for Pakistan in India to the Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, April 15, 1950.

No. F.62 (6) P/50 - 1065

April 15, 1950

The Pakistan High Commission in India present their compliments to the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi, and in continuation of this Mission’s communication No.62(6)P/50-403, dated the 4th February 1950, regarding water supplies to the Pakistan channels of the Upper Bari Doab Canal, have the honour to say that during the month of November 1949, when water supply was in keen demand for Rabi irrigation, Pakistan's share in the first balancing turn was withheld by the Government of the Punjab (India) and given to their own channels. This part of the year is considered vital as it is on this supply that the Rabi crops can be sown. Again during January 1950, when Kor watering was to be given to the Rabi crops, 800 cusecs of Pakistan's share of water supply were utilised by the Government of Punjab (India) in their own channels.
During the months of October, November and December, 1949 and the period from the 1st January to 17th January, 1950, there were no rains in the Punjab (Pakistan) and canal water supplies were in keen demand. The first shower of rains came on the 18th January 1950 and naturally the demand for water slackened. The Government of the Punjab (Pakistan) had however asked the authorities concerned in the Punjab (India) telegraphically on the 17th January 1950 to make up the shortage of water supplies to their channels and during the second balancing turn from the 28th January to the 5th February 1950, full supply of water was given in the Pakistan channels. It may mean making up the short supplies given in the first balancing turn in terms of cubic feet of water but it is no compensation for the water supply withheld during the vital period as water loses its value after rainfall.

As such withholding of water supplies is likely to cause considerable damage to the crops in the Punjab (Pakistan), the High Commission shall be grateful if the Government of India will kindly ensure that the Pakistan channels of the Upper Bari Doab Canal are given their full supplies of water in future. The result of the action taken by the Government of India may kindly be intimated to this Mission for communication to the Government of Pakistan.

The Pakistan High Commission take the opportunity to renew to the Government of India the assurances of their highest consideration.

The MEA in its reply on February 21, 1951 repudiated the allegations contained in this note and pointed out the water was indeed supplied in “close accordance with the prescribed programme during rabi’ 1949-50, including the months of November 1949 and January 1950”. It further added that “during the Kur watering period, which began on 26th November 1949, the various branches were run closely in accordance with the prescribed rotational programme, which has to be followed irrespective of weather conditions and obviously cannot be altered in between for the benefit of any particular area”.
2407. Note from Ministry of External Affairs to the High Commission for Pakistan in India.

New Delhi, April 18, 1950.

The Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India present their compliments to the Pakistan High Commission in India, and with reference to the High Commission letter No. 62(6)P/50-403, dated the 4th February 1950, have the honour to state that the channels mentioned in paragraph 1 of the letter referred to above have never been, and are not being, taken into account in calculating the share of maintenance charges of the Upper Bari Doab Canal payable by the Government of Punjab (Pakistan); nor is the Government of Punjab (India) under any obligation to supply water to these channels.

2. As stated in the last two sentences of telegram No. PRIMIN 1155, dated the 29th April 1948, the supply of water was resumed to the Central Bari Doab Canal on the basis of the agreement arrived at between the Chief Engineers of East and West Punjab on the 18th April 1948, subject to any variation which might be made at the Inter-Dominion Conference on the 3rd and 4th May 1948. No mention was made of any of these channels in the Chief Engineers’ Agreement. The question of supply to these channels was never raised by the Governments of Pakistan or Punjab (Pakistan) at the Conference in May, 1948. There is consequently no mention of these channels in the Agreement of the 4th May, 1948. Accordingly, no supplies are being given; nor, as stated above, are these channels being taken into account in calculating the share of maintenance charges payable by Punjab (Pakistan). The question of giving supplies to these channels does not, therefore, arise.

3. The Ministry avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of their highest consideration.

New Delhi, June 9, 1950.

Ministry of External Affairs
Government of India

No. 6-3/50-Pak.III. June 9, 1950.

The Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India present their compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India and with reference to their Note No. P.62(6)P/50-1161 dated the 24th April, 1950, have the honour to state as follows.

2. With reference to the correspondence referred to in paragraph 2 of the note under reply, attention is invited to Mr. Dutt's D.O. No. F.12-9/48-Pak.I, dated the 25th July, 1949, in paragraph 6 of which the High Commission was informed that left Marginal Bund at Sulemanki is actually being maintained by the East Punjab Government in anticipation of some mutual agreement being reached as suggested in paragraph 3-5 above. Pending a reply from the Government of Pakistan to the proposal made in this connection in paragraph 5 of this Ministry’s Note No.F.37-2/49-Pak.III, dated the 12th November, 1949, and repeated in this Ministry Note and express letter of the 9th January, 1950, the Punjab (India) Government has continued to maintain the left Marginal Bund and will continue to do so.

3. As regard inspection by Pakistan Officers of the left Marginal Bund at Sulemanki, the Government of India, would invite reference to their communications dated the 25th July, 1949 and 12th November, 1949, already referred to above, in which it was clearly explained that in the view of the Government of India the arrangements for inspection of the Left Marginal Bund at Sulemanki should be on the same basis as those for the Right Marginal Bund at Ferozepur.

4. In view of the above, the Government of India request that the Government of Pakistan may accept at an early date, the proposals referred to in paragraph 2 above. They have every hope that an agreed solution of the problem will be found during discussion in the new atmosphere of good-will and understanding.

5. The Ministry take the opportunity to renew the assurance of their highest consideration.

2409. Note from the High Commission for India in Pakistan to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Karachi, July 8, 1950.

No. IHC. 21-Poll/49- VII  July 8, 1950

The High Commission for India in Pakistan present their compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations of the Government of Pakistan and with reference to their Note No.IA.4/50(I), dated the 22nd March, 1950 have the honour to transmit the following reply from the Government of India.

2. The Government of India were rather surprised to receive this communication from the Government of Pakistan on the very eve of the first meeting of the Negotiating Committee fixed for the 27th March 1950. It does not correctly represent the attitude of the Government of India on various points and confuses the legal issues with the practical approach which the Government of India have suggested for a friendly solution of the problem, regardless of legal contentions and the results flowing therefrom. Since, however, the negotiators for Pakistan at the meeting in Karachi from the 27th to 29th March 1950, approached the problem in a practical spirit and did not take up the points raised by the Government of Pakistan, in their note dated the 22nd March 1950, the Government of India refrained from sending a reply to the communication of the 22nd March 1950, so as not to prejudice the negotiations then in progress and not to make the task of the negotiators to reconcile conflicting views more difficult. The Government of India, however, now consider it necessary to avoid misunderstanding by clarifying their attitude on some of the points raised in Pakistan’s note of the 22nd March 1950.

3. With reference to para.3 of Note No.IA.4/50(I), dated the 22nd March 1950, the Government of India have made it abundantly clear that, as a result of the Indian Independence Act and the Orders made thereunder, the Dominion of Pakistan and the Republic of India both have full and exclusive jurisdiction over the management, control and utilisation of natural waters available in their territories. Accordingly, while the Government of India, with a view to promote friendly relations, are keen that a friendly solution be reached, no question of the adjudication of each Nation’s interests in the waters lying in the territory of the other arises. What each Nation has to respect are the interests of the other in the resources lying within its territory which belong to it by virtue of its sovereignty and the various instruments of partition. Again, while the Government of India are prepared to examine, in order to reach a friendly solution, whether an allocation of the waters of the Indus and its tributaries on an equitable basis cannot meet the reasonable requirements of both countries, the Government of India cannot agree that they have accepted the principle of an equitable distribution of waters, alleged to be common waters or that an allocation of such alleged common waters was made at the time of the partition or even that the use of the river waters in the combined Punjab could have been based on any such principles.

4. The Government of India are glad to note that the Government of Pakistan recognise that in many parts of India, depending for their water supplies on the Indus and its tributaries, there is urgent need for water. It is no doubt true that the Government of India can develop these areas only to the extent the natural resources available in India permit. But while fully recognising the interest of the Government of Pakistan in developments needed in their jurisdiction, the Government of India cannot accept the position that India’s interest in developing prospective uses should be limited by considerations arising out of existing utilizations in Pakistan. This will not, however, in any manner affect the Government of India’s co-operation in reaching a friendly solution on the basis of the maximum utilization of the available supplies of all the six rivers.

5. The Government of India have no doubt agreed that no attempt should be made at this stage to prejudice the legal rights of either Nation and to prejudge the final results of negotiations. It does not, however, follow that the Government of India should agree to maintain any so called status quo before the partition. With the setting up of two independent Dominions, a new relationship came into being on the 15th August, 1947. Whatever arrangements or agreements existed prior to the partition lapsed on that date, except to the extent provided in the Indian Independence Act and Orders thereunder. After the 15th August 1947, waters from rivers in India may be given to Pakistan only as a result of fresh agreements negotiated between the two countries after the partition. The Government of India consider that since there is no question of maintaining any status quo as alleged by Pakistan, the question of interference by India with the alleged status quo does not arise.

6. It is true that before the partition there was no question of payment of seigniorage; there could not be any such charge between areas in the same administrative unit of the same country. It is incorrect to state that any part of the waters of rivers in India is allocated to Pakistan. The Government of India are therefore not prepared to reopen at this stage the terms of the Inter-Dominion agreement of the 4th May 1948, that amounts claimed as seigniorage should be deposited in ESCROW by Punjab (Pakistan).

7. As already stated, the Government of India do not accept the position that any waters of the rivers in India have been allocated to Pakistan. The question of interference with such allocations does not, therefore, arise. Water supplies from one independent country to another can be given only on the basis of agreements arrived at between the two countries. The Government of India have on their part fully abided by the terms of the Agreement of 4th May 1948 and have continued to give uninterrupted supplies to Pakistan canals in terms of that Agreement. While, therefore, negotiations for a settlement are proceeding between the two countries, it is clear that the only working basis can be the agreement of the 4th May 1948 already arrived at.

8. The Government of India are determined to make every effort to secure by negotiation a friendly settlement of this dispute to the mutual benefit of both countries, regardless of legal contentions and the results flowing therefrom. They regret to note that the negotiators on behalf of Pakistan were not agreeable to the only practical approach to this problem, namely, to set up a Joint Technical Commission, as envisaged by the Government of India for collection of factual data, which must be made available and examined before any further steps are taken for a settlement of the dispute. The Government of India would, therefore, earnestly request the Government of Pakistan to agree to a Joint Technical Commission consisting of engineers on both sides, with a view to collect factual data, on agreed lines, as early as possible.

9. The High Commission avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the Government of Pakistan the assurances of their highest consideration.

Karachi, August 23, 1950.

My dear Pandit Nehru,

The Government of Pakistan have today sent the High Commission for India in Pakistan a communication on the canal water dispute to which I attach great importance. I hope it will receive your personal attention.

2. I believe we are both agreed that there should be arbitration if negotiation fails. It seems clear now that negotiation has failed. Without putting blame on either country the fact is that after more than two years of negotiations the views of our governments as to their relative rights are if anything further apart. The consequences of this disagreement daily become more serious.

3. In your letter of the 18th January, 1950, speaking of arbitration you suggested that we should have a report of a technical nature before concluding that a settlement could not be reached by negotiations and in order better to decide the points that are at issue and the forum suited to resolve those points. Since then we have had the benefit of studies by highly competent Indian and Pakistan irrigation engineers and they have met together. A meeting of the negotiating committee on the 29th-31st May, 1950, disclosed, however, that disagreement is less over technical questions than over the question of the fundamental rights of riparians of international rivers.

4. In a Note dated the 8th July, 1950, from the High Commission for India in Pakistan, the Government of India repeat a suggestion made by the Indian negotiators that further steps towards settlement should be postponed pending factual research by a joint Commission of Engineers. The discussion of this suggestion at the meeting of the negotiators made it quite clear, however, that no amount of further factual research would lead to agreement by negotiation. The factual data already collected has made it clear that Pakistan could not agree to diminution of its share of supplies from the rivers Sutlej with its tributary Beas, Ravi and Chenab. On India’s part, the negotiators announced that whether the research they proposed was made or not, they could not agree that the projects designed to diminish the supplies heretofore allocated to Pakistan be suspended. Those projects constitute such a threat to the vital interests of Pakistan and the maintenance of good neighbourly relations that if we do not agree now to arbitrate the result will be a situation endangering international peace and security and justice.
5. The differences that have been brought out in the negotiations are differences of a juridical nature. This is the case both as to our fundamental rights and the contentions made by the Indian negotiators as to the interim arrangement of 4th May, 1948. Since our differences are juridicial, the International Court of Justice appears from every point of view to be the most suitable forum.

6. Under the optional clause the Government of India have agreed to accept the jurisdiction of the International Court on the application of countries which are not members of the Commonwealth. The exception doubtless contemplated that there would be Commonwealth machinery equally suited to the judicial settlement of disputes. While such Commonwealth machinery is lacking it would be anomalous to deny to a sister member of the British Commonwealth the friendly means of judicial settlement that is offered by India to countries outside the Commonwealth.

7. If we can agree promptly to accept the decision of the International Court in the canal works dispute matter, it will, I am sure, facilitate agreement upon other matters that have divided us. The latest international developments have, I am sure, strengthened your resolve as they have mine to maintain the most friendly cooperation between our countries.

Yours sincerely

Sd. Liaquat Ali Khan

The Hon'ble
Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi.

2411. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission for India in Pakistan.

Karachi, August 23, 1950.

No. 1.A. 4/50 (III) August 23, 1950

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations present their compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and, with reference to the positions taken on behalf of India in the negotiations that ended on the 31st May, 1950, and to the High Commission’s note No. IHC.21-Poll/49-VII, dated the 8th July, 1950, have the honour to request that the following reply may kindly be transmitted to the Government of India.

2. The decision of the Government of India, disclosed at the meeting of the negotiators held on the 29th to the 31st of May, 1950, to continue the present interferences with the flow of water allocated to areas in Pakistan and to appropriate additional supplies of water vital to Pakistan, has created a situation so serious as to endanger international peace and security and justice unless other peaceful means of settling of the dispute are promptly agreed upon in compliance with the United Nations Charter.

3. It will be remembered that before partition the river supplies of the Indus Basin were allocated in accordance with principles and under orders to which all of the affected areas agreed. The principles were those that are recognized as governing the apportionment of water supplies from international as well as from inter-state and inter-provincial rivers. The Arbitral Tribunal, established to settle disputes arising out of the partition of India, acted on the premise that these principles and the existing allocations would continue to be respected. The Tribunal was not requested to give an express decision upon the division of the common waters because both the Indian and Pakistan members of Committee B, set up to certify for arbitration questions arising out of the partition of the Punjab, reported that “there is no question of varying the authorised shares of water to which the two Zones and the various canals are entitled”.

4. The Arbitral Tribunal wound up its work on the 31st of March, 1948. The following day the Punjab (India) began withholding water allocated to areas in Pakistan and shortly thereafter the Government of India for the first time asserted it had a right to withdraw supplies allocated to uses in Pakistan. From that time to the present the Government of Pakistan have sought continuously to find a solution by negotiation and the other means of settlement prescribed in Article 33 of the Charter.

5. It has been the view of the Government of Pakistan that agreement by negotiation would be facilitated if each side bound itself in advance to accept, on any issue where negotiation failed, the arbitrament of the International Court of Justice. The Government of India have maintained the view that advance agreement to arbitrate might jeopardize the successful conclusion of negotiations. The negotiations, therefore, continued without agreement as to the arbitral procedure in the event of failure, but with assurances on behalf of the Government of India that they would accept arbitration if negotiation should fail.

6. In the view of the Government of Pakistan negotiation has failed. Negotiation has failed to find the required solution of the canal waters dispute. It has failed to discover any substantial area of agreement as to our relative rights as riparians of international rivers. It has even failed to establish, during the negotiations and without prejudice to the final solution, an interim agreement that protected the status quo at partition.

7. The Government of Pakistan are advised and maintain that under international law the uses existing and the allocations authorized prior to partition must be respected, and that any increase in supplies made available through storage dams or other installations must be shared in accordance with the principle of equitable apportionment. The Government of India on the other hand have claimed the right to appropriate all of the supplies from the rivers Sutlej with its tributary Beas, Ravi and Chenab and through their negotiators have admitted that projects are under way to exercise as fully as possible this alleged right. Pakistan cannot do without the supplies allocated to it from these four rivers and it needs its full share of the additional supplies that can be made available through engineering projects.

8. Water being the life-blood of arid regions, it is imperative for the maintenance of peaceful and friendly relations that a settlement of the basic issues of this water dispute should be no longer postponed. Once the basic rights of the two countries are determined, agreement by negotiation on practical and engineering questions should become possible. The experience of the last two years has, however, demonstrated that while the views of the two countries upon their basic rights remain so divergent a practical solution is not possible. Until the basic rights are settled, the situation is certain to deteriorate.

9. The Government of Pakistan, accordingly, request the Government of India to accept the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice to decide on the application of either party any issue arising out of the dispute respecting the apportionment of the waters common to India and Pakistan.

10. The Government of Pakistan also request that the Government of India agree, without prejudice to the final solution, to an interim arrangement that preserves the status quo at partition. Unless and until the International Court of Justice decides otherwise, the uses and allocations then existing should be respected. And unless and until the International Court of Justice determines that the appropriations which India contemplates making with the new installations now under construction do not exceed India’s equitable portion of the common waters, such construction should be discontinued.

11. Certain incidental issues that have complicated the dispute have arisen as a result of a pre-existing arrangement. It may be that these can be removed by a clarification of the position of the Government of Pakistan. If the Government of India continue to take a different position, the Government of Pakistan will, of course, accept the decision on these incidental issues of the International Court of Justice.

12. During the period while India was withholding the supplies of the Dipalpur and Upper Bari Doab canals it proposed an interim arrangement for those canals and set forth conditions on which India would agree to restore the supplies allocated to the Punjab (Pakistan). The interim arrangement so entered into is referred to as the Delhi Agreement of 4th May 1948. With millions of people facing the loss of their herds, the ruin of their crops and eventual starvation from lack of water, Pakistan was under compulsion to accept whatever India proposed. The proposal so accepted included the provision for the deposit in escrow of an ad hoc sum to be specified by the Prime Minister of India. In the meantime legal issues would be reserved and further discussions would take place. Pakistan performed the agreement. It made the deposit specified by the Prime Minister of India and it has participated in further discussions. The so-called Delhi Agreement, if ever it was binding upon Pakistan, has long since expired. The Government of Pakistan have on numerous occasions given to the Government of India notice to this effect. If, however, in the view of the Government of India any further action or notice is needed to render the so-called Agreement of 4th May, 1948, without present effect, it will be appreciated if this communication will be accepted as such action or such notice.

13. When the so-called Delhi Agreement was signed it was contemplated that a permanent solution would replace it, as the Prime Minister of India telegraphed to the Government of Pakistan, “before the end of June,” 1948. No solution having been reached by that time, the Government of India demanded a second deposit for a three months period beginning July 1, 1948. Fearful that if the deposit were not made supplies vital to Pakistan would again be withheld, the amount then specified by the Prime Minister of India was deposited. Every three months since there have been renewed demands for deposits. The Government of Pakistan have pointed out the inappropriateness of those demands but as an earnest of the desire of Pakistan to create an atmosphere conducive to negotiation the deposits have been made in the amounts specified. Unfortunately, the making of these deposits instead of encouraging a more reasonable attitude on the part of India appears to have contributed to a stiffening of the Indian position.

14. Pakistan recognises the duty of riparians of international waters to pay their share of the actual maintenance costs of installations of common benefit. Pakistan will continue to transfer to the Government of India those amounts that represent the share of Pakistan in the actual cost of maintaining the hydraulic installations of common benefit. If the International Court of Justice should determine that more is owing, Pakistan will, of course, pay whatever the Court may award. If that Court directs that deposits of disputed amounts be made pending its final decision, the Government of Pakistan will make the deposits in the amounts specified by the Court. Regarding the deposits of the disputed amounts heretofore made, it is suggested that joint instructions be given to the Reserve Bank of India to return these to the Government of the Punjab (Pakistan). The Government of Pakistan will, if the Government of India should think it necessary, establish credits equal to the amount returned as a guarantee that if the International Court should decide that any part of that sum is owing to India the amount will promptly be paid.

15. In the High Commission’s Note of 8th July, 1950, the Government of India, after expressing regret that the negotiators on behalf of Pakistan were not agreeable to the establishment of a Joint Technical Commission for collection of factual data, request the Government of Pakistan “to agree to a Joint Technical Commission consisting of engineers on both sides, with a view to collect factual data, on agreed lines, as early as possible”. The position of the Pakistan negotiators has not been clearly understood. They did not object to the collection of factual data. They objected to the proposal that was coupled with that suggestion and repeated in the Note of 8th July, 1950, that no further steps should be taken for settlement of the dispute until after the Fact Finding Commission had completed its research. Further, the Indian negotiators refused to agree that pending settlement of the dispute the construction of projects designed to diminish supplies to Pakistan should be suspended. Under such circumstances it was apparent that the appointment of a Fact Finding Commission would serve to prolong and make more serious a situation that calls for immediate solution.

16. Although sufficient data has already been collected through studies by competent engineers on both sides, the Government of Pakistan will co-operate fully in any procedure for further collection, verification and exchange of information desired by the Government of India provided that the procedure does not impede taking of steps necessary for settlement of the fundamental dispute. That dispute exists not because of disagreement over facts. It exists because of disagreement over our respective rights in our common waters and because of the refusal of India to respect rights of ‘Status quo’ at partition pending an impartial definition of our rights. It is on the just settlement of these real issues that attention should be focussed.

17. As members of the United Nations, India and Pakistan are under an obligation to “settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered”. (Article 2(3) of the 10 Charter). The continuance of this dispute is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security. Negotiation has failed to produce a solution and the issues in the dispute are such as to call for judicial settlement. It is hoped, therefore, that the Government of India will agree to the immediate reference of this dispute to the International Court of Justice.

The Ministry avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of their highest consideration.

2412. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Governor of Punjab C. M. Trivedi.

New Delhi, August 28, 1950.

My dear Trivedi,

I enclose a copy of a letter I have received from the Prime Minister of Pakistan. This relates to the canal waters dispute and you will notice that he suggests that the matter be referred to the International Court of Justice at The Hague.

This, of course, is not a new proposal and Pakistan has said so many times before. We have not liked the idea and we have been insisting on technical surveys and the like.

We shall still ask for full surveys, but it is clear that if our negotiations fail then there is a deadlock. We have been at this for the last two and a half years without much success. We may say, as we do, that Pakistan did not act properly and has caused all this delay by its tactics of avoiding a proper survey. That may be perfectly correct but the fact remains that the deadlock continues. How is that deadlock to be solved? If we leave out war, we come back to some form of arbitration or a reference to a judicial tribunal. As a matter of fact, in a letter I wrote to the Prime Minister of Pakistan on January 18th, 1950, I wrote as follows:

The canal waters dispute has been the subject of correspondence between the two Governments and both are agreed that a Joint Technical Commission should be set up for making factual investigation. On the basis of the report of the Commission, the two Governments will confer with a view to arriving at a settlement. If it is not found possible to reach a settlement, we are quite prepared to refer the matter to arbitration or some tribunal approved of by both Governments. You will appreciate that the manner of subsequent procedure as well as form can hardly be decided satisfactorily before we know what the results of the Technical Commission are and what the remaining points for decisions are.

We have thus entered into a commitment about a reference to arbitration or to some tribunal approved of by both Governments. We need not stress again on a technical or other commission to find out the facts. But, in any event, we arrive at the same conclusion.

Apart from any other reason, we are convinced that The Hague Court is not a suitable place for this matter to be referred to. That Court can do nothing at The Hague without having a commission of enquiry on the spot. So we do not propose to agree to The Hague Court. But, ultimately, we shall have to agree to some form of arbitration. This will probably consist of both Governments selecting a nominee and then jointly choosing a third person.

Before finally deciding and replying to Liaquat Ali Khan, we should like to confer with representatives of your Government. But I wanted to tell you how matters stood. Your Government as well as our W.M.P. (Ministry of Water, Mines and Power) have been reluctant to accept arbitration. I do not see how they can avoid it. Personally I think it is the proper course and we should not be afraid of it.

We should like to refer the evacuee property question also to arbitration. Gopalaswami Ayyangar is carrying on some correspondence with Pakistan on this subject, and there is a faint hope that it may lead to some satisfactory result. If this fails, then we propose to refer the matter to arbitration of the kind indicated above.

I shall let you know when we want your representatives to come here.

Your sincerely

Jawaharlal Nehru
Extract from letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.

New Delhi, September 3, 1950.

I received your letter of August 23rd dealing with the canal water dispute, some days ago. In that letter you referred to communication which your Government has sent to our High Commissioner in Pakistan on this subject. I waited to receive this communication. It took several days to reach us.

I have naturally read both your letter and the communication with care. I need hardly tell you that we are very anxious to settle this canal water dispute, as well as other disputes between us, as soon as possible. It was with a view to a solution of the canal water dispute that we had previously suggested that a technical examination was necessary. Whatever the method finally adopted for solving this dispute, such a technical examination seems to me essential. I regret that your Government has been unable to proceed on the lines suggested by us in this matter.

I confess that I have read the communication of your Government with some surprise. We shall naturally answer it fully. I should also like to write to you on this subject and draw your particular attention to some matters. For the present, I am rather overwhelmed with work, and early tomorrow morning I am going to Assam for a personal survey of the consequences of the great earthquake we had there.

2414. Letter from Governor of Punjab C. M. Trivedi to Deputy Prime Minister Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel.

Simla, September 4, 1950.

Barnes Court, Simla 4 September 1950

My dear Sardar Patel,

I am very glad to know from Sachdev, our Chief Secretary, who telephoned to me last night from Delhi, that you were present at the conference convened by the Prime Minister yesterday to discuss the canal water dispute. I understand that certain conclusions were reached and a draft reply is being prepared. The reply is to be considered at a meeting to be held in Delhi either on the 10th or 11th, and Sachdev conveyed to me the Prime Minister’s message that he wishes me specially to be at Delhi at the meeting to consider the draft reply. Very likely, the meeting will be held on the 10th, and on this assumption I will be at Delhi on the 10th. If Dr. Gopichand feels well enough he would also come, but I do not wish him to take any risks with his health.

2. In this connection, I enclose for your information a copy of a letter which I wrote to Pandit Nehru on 2 September. This was followed by a telephone message to him requesting that any conclusions which may be reached at the meeting on 3 September should be sent to us for information and comments. I made this request because, owing to circumstances beyond my control, ministerial advice had not been available to me. It is, presumably, in response to this request that Pandit Nehru had asked me specially to come to Delhi.

3. I will make it a point of seeing you at Delhi on the 10th, if you are not otherwise engaged.

Yours sincerely,

C.M. Trivedi

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel
Deputy Prime Minister
New Delhi.

ENCLOSURE

Barnes Court, Simla. 2 September 1950

My dear Pandit Nehru,
I am grateful to you for your letter dated 28 August, regarding the canal water dispute. I have also seen the Pakistan Government’s note dated 23 August, on the same subject. We are sending our Chief Secretary and our Chief Engineer (Bhakra Dam) to represent us at the meeting you are holding tomorrow to consider what reply should be given to Liaquat Ali Khan. It has not been possible for any Honourable Minister to represent us, because Dr. Gopichand is ill, and no other Honourable Minister is very much conversant with the question.

2. If, you say, we shall have to agree to some form of arbitration over the canal water dispute, I think that our agreement to arbitration should be contingent on the following conditions:

   (a) The terms of reference for arbitration must be previously determined and agreed to by both parties. We know from experience what a great deal of trouble and embarrassment arise either from no terms of reference or vague terms of reference. I myself feel that it will be very difficult for arbitration to proceed until there are technical data, and one of the terms of reference will probably have to be the appointment of a joint technical commission. I do not think the matter is as simple as is sought to be made out in the note of the Pakistan Government.

   (b) The Pakistan Government should, at the same time, agree to the reference of the evacuee property dispute to arbitration. Here also the terms of reference must be defined by agreement. You will remember that when I had a talk with you about the canal water dispute in March last, I had pressed the view and you had more or less agreed that should it be considered desirable or necessary to refer the canal water dispute to arbitration, we must at the same time secure that the evacuee property dispute is referred to arbitration. I should add that the question of arbitration over this issue will not, of course, arise if the dispute is settled otherwise as a result of the correspondence which Gopalaswami Ayyangar is carrying on with Pakistan, to which you have referred in your letter.

3. So much for conditions prior to or accompanying arbitration. These I have suggested on the assumption that we must agree to arbitration immediately. There is a commitment by you in this respect in your letter to the Prime Minister of Pakistan, dated 18th January 1950, but it is quite clear that this commitment is contingent on a joint technical commission being set up for making a factual investigation, and the two Governments not being able to reach a settlement on the basis of the report of the commission. Pakistan has all along adopted a most unhelpful, if not a positively obstructive, attitude regarding the setting up of this commission. It is all very well for them to say that the negotiation has failed. If one party to a dispute is determined not to let negotiation succeed, it is, of course, bound to fail. In such circumstances, it should not be open, or it is at least illegitimate for a party responsible for the failure of negotiation, to advance that failure as a reason for resort to arbitration to which you have agreed on certain conditions in your letter of 18 January. You may say that this is a debating point. Perhaps it is so, and we have to face the facts as they are, but it does seem to me to be wrong that intransigence should be rewarded.

4. There is yet another point. The Pakistan Government's note repudiates the agreement of 4 May 1948 in no uncertain terms, and alleges that Pakistan was under compulsion to accept whatever India proposed. They have now given formal notice that the “so called” agreement of 4 May 1948, is without present effect and that henceforth they will make no deposit in escrow of an ad hoc sum to be specified by you from time to time. In the past, Pakistan had attempted to resile from this agreement, and now it has said so in most explicit terms. Are we going to agree to arbitration without a successful challenge of the Pakistan Government's position, and if the Pakistan Government does not withdraw from the position, what are we going to do? They probably want us to take some extreme step like the stoppage of water supplies. If we do this, we furnish them with a cause belli. If we do not, we accept the position that the agreement has no present effect. In this matter, we are, it seems to me, on the horns of a dilemma. The matter has both legal and political aspects, and at the proposed meeting these will no doubt be considered very carefully.

5. A final point is this; Pakistan proposes that during the pendency of arbitration no further works should be constructed. They have certainly Harike in mind, but may also be referring to the Bhakra project. As you know, it was Pakistan's action in digging a channel in May 1948 (which action would have seriously jeopardised the utility of the Ferozapore headworks), which led us to think of Harike as a measure of self-defence. In spite of our entreaties, they did not stop the work of digging the channel. Now the boot is on the other leg. I think that there can be no question whatever of stopping the works at Bhakra or Nangal, but it may be possible to arrive at some satisfactory arrangement about Harike, provided Pakistan is really earnest to reach a satisfactory interim settlement. Our engineering representative will suggest a way out, and this may be considered, if deemed suitable.

6. These are the preliminary views which I have formed. Many of them are in the nature of posers, but I have put them for consideration and examination. I quite agree that we must remove all causes of conflict between Pakistan and us. At the same time, we must effectively safeguard our interests, which in the matter of irrigation are very vital to the people of this State. I am sure you will give our representative a patient hearing. Our representation has had to be at the level of permanent officials. I know that by virtue of their position they are somewhat at a disadvantage in a conference at a very high level, but I have told them to express their views very frankly, knowing as I do that you always welcome frankness.

7. At one time, I did not think that I should write a letter, but on further reflection I thought that perhaps a letter was due from me one behalf of the Punjab, particularly as my Chief Minister is out of action, and I did not want my Government to think that I had not discharged my duty in his very unfortunate absence from work.

Yours sincerely

2415. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Deputy Prime Minister Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel.

New Delhi, September 9, 1950.

My dear Vallabhbhai,

On my return from Assam I have had a number of letters from you, five I think, I am sorry for the slight delay in answering them, but I have been rather overwhelmed not only with work but also with Cabinet meetings and committee meetings.

About the canal water dispute, we have had several meetings in committee and discussed it at length. Setalvad came back this morning and we had another conference with him. Trivedi comes tomorrow and there will be a full conference on the 11th morning when we hope to finalise the draft. I cannot send you the draft yet because it is not ready. What has been prepared is very sketchy. Perhaps by tomorrow evening we might have the draft ready. I shall certainly send it to you as soon as it is ready. The delay of a day or two does not matter, but the answer has to go to Pakistan before some of us leave for the Nasik Congress.

Our present decisions are more or less as follows: We do not propose to deal argumentatively with many of the points that have been raised in the Pakistan letter. That is to say, we do not deal with the merits of the case. We shall, of course, deal with certain important aspects such as the agreement of 4 May 1948 and their assertion that it was under coercion. We shall also deal with our repeated attempts to have a technical survey which we consider quite essential in any event, whatever further steps might be taken.

There is not much dispute about this thus far. Of course, when the draft is prepared, it will have to be carefully considered. The argument has revolved round two points: One, whether we should in the final analysis agree to the Hague Court or arbitration tribunal, and, secondly, which of these two is preferable.

You will remember my suggestion that we might adopt the USA-Canada example about a joint commission for certain border and water disputes. On further consideration this was found not to be feasible. Of course, in any event, such a joint commission could not deal with the evacuee property dispute.

After lengthy argument we came to the conclusion that there was no escape from our agreeing to some tribunal, either the Hague Court or arbitration. In any event, this was to be linked up with the canal water dispute.

Regarding the second point, we finally decided to suggest a judicial commission consisting of two Indian judges and two Pakistani judges. There was to be no foreigner. Of course, it can be said that they may not agree, and what then? We say nothing about it at this stage. If Pakistan raises the point, we propose to say that we can consider the matter then and refer such points as are still in dispute to some other tribunal, whenever that might be. This Indo-Pakistan Arbitration Commission would have full powers and, in any event, can clear the ground very much. If anything has to be referred after that, they will be limited issues. But this can be considered later. Even this Commission would inevitably have to appoint a fact-finding commission of experts.

This very Arbitration Tribunal can take up the evacuee property problem to which we shall attach great importance. We shall lay stress on the urgency of that matter and the importance of that being taken up immediately.

Gopalaswami has received a reply from Liaquat Ali Khan about evacuee property. This reply is a brief one saying that his Finance Minister is not here and he must await his return. Gopalaswami has now written to Liaquat Ali Khan formally suggesting arbitration about evacuee property.

Yours

Jawaharlal

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel

2416. Letter from Deputy Prime Minister Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Bombay, September 11, 1950.

My dear Jawaharlal,

Thank you for your letter dated 9 September 1950 and your top secret letter of 10 September regarding the canal water question. I have seen the draft. On the whole it seems to be on the right lines, but I understand that this morning some changes have been suggested. I should like to have an idea of those changes in order to let you have my final comments. I have telephoned to this effect to Dharma Vira. On receipt of the revised draft tomorrow, I shall telephone my comments.

2. I am glad about the manner in which you have linked the two questions of canal water dispute and evacuee property. I am also glad to know that Gopalaswami has written to Liaquat Ali Khan formally suggesting arbitration about evacuee property.

Yours sincerely

Vallabhbhai Patel

The Hon’ble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru
New Delhi.

My dear Vallabhbhai,

This morning we had a full conference about canal waters. Trivedi and a whole contingent from the Punjab were present and we had long discussions and ultimately unanimously passed a draft. We have now, therefore, finalised this. I had, however, decided to wait till tomorrow for any suggestions that you might have to make. I have just received Shankar’s message conveying to me two points which you wish to emphasise.

One of these points relates to our saying that Pakistan has no right to repudiate the agreement unilaterally. We have already made this clear in the draft.

The second point is about the charges which Pakistan pays. In a larger sense this matter has been referred to, though not specifically. We feel that any argument about charges would lead to a somewhat detailed consideration of this question. This would spoil the main points of the letter and upset its balance. We have deliberately concentrated on a few principal points in our answer. But that answer really covers this points because of what we have said about the Agreement of 4 May.

I have consulted Rajaji and Gadgil about this and they were of the same opinion.

I am sending you separately a copy of the revised letter. We intend dispatching this sometime tomorrow.

Yours

Jawaharlal

DRAFT

The High Commissioner for India in Pakistan presents his compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations of the Government of Pakistan and has the honour to communicate the following reply from his Government to the Pakistan Government’s communication dated 23 August 1950.

2. The Government of India have noted with surprise and regret the statements of the Government of Pakistan:
that the disclosure by the Government of India’s representatives at the meeting of the negotiators held on 29 to 31 May, 1950, “to continue the present interferences with the flow of water allocated to areas in Pakistan and to appropriate additional supplies of water vital to Pakistan” has created a situation so serious as to endanger international peace and security, and

(2) that the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4 May 1948, regarding the supply of water to the Central Bari Doab and Dipalpur canals in Pakistan was accepted by Pakistan under ‘compulsion.’

3. As regards (1), the Government of India deny categorically that there has been any interference with the flow of water to Pakistan since the signing of the Agreement of 4 May, 1948. The negotiators for India made it perfectly clear to the Pakistan negotiators that the Government of India would continue (a) to abide by the terms of the Agreement of 4 May 1948 and (b) to supply water to Pakistan until final agreement was reached. In spite of the notice that the Government of Pakistan have now given of their intention to terminate the Agreement of 4 May 1948 the Government of India adhere to their intention to continue the supply of water to the canals referred to, until the dispute is settled. They are, therefore, unable to understand why any threat to international peace and security should be apprehended from any attitude or action of theirs.

4. As regards (2), the Government of India wish to recall that the Agreement of 4 May 1948 was reached between the Prime Minister of India and the Finance Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Ghulam Mohammad, at a conference that was marked by cordiality and goodwill. When the joint communiqué announcing this Agreement was issued by the two Governments on 7 May 1948 there was no suggestion of compulsion, nor was any such suggestion made in the note that was submitted three weeks later by the West Punjab Government to the Punjab Partition Committee. When the Inter-Dominion Conference, at which Pakistan was represented by the Hon’ble Sir Mohammad Zafrullah Khan, met at Lahore on 21 July 1948, no complaint of compulsion was made. Thirteen months later, in June 1949, when, for the first time, the Government of Pakistan stated that the “present modus vivendi is onerous and unsatisfactory to Pakistan, and that a final solution should no longer be postponed” there was no allusion to compulsion having influenced the Government of Pakistan in accepting the Agreement of 4 May 1948. the Government of Pakistan will appreciate that, against this background of the sequence of events and their declared intention not to interfere with the supply of water to the Pakistan canals in reference, the Government of India are unable to accept the contention of the Government of Pakistan that the Agreement of 4 May 1948 was accepted by them unwillingly and under compulsion.
5. The Government of Pakistan have asked that their communication of 24 August should be treated as notice of termination of the Agreement of 4 May 1948. The Government of India wish to point out that the Punjab Partition Committee approved of the Standstill Agreements executed by the Chief Engineers of East and West Punjab on 20 December 1947. At a subsequent meeting held on 26 and 27 May 1948, this Committee also formally noted the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4 May 1948. The Government of India hold the view that the Agreement of 4 May 1948 must also be treated as an integral part of the arrangements made at the partition, which cannot be unilaterally terminated or abrogated by either side. For their part, the Government of India regard the Agreement as valid and they propose to abide by its terms.

6. The Government of Pakistan requests the Government of India to agree to accept the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice and to agree to the immediate reference of the dispute over canal waters to that Court. The Government of India have never refused to refer this dispute for decision to an appropriate body, if negotiations should fail to result in agreement. But as a preliminary to reference to such a body, if that should become necessary, they have repeatedly urged a comprehensive investigation by fully qualified engineers of both Governments working together in order to determine the availability of water both to India and to Pakistan from the rivers of the Indus basin. They have done so in the conviction that whatever the legal claims of the two parties, the problem of the utilization of the waters of these rivers should be resolved not in a spirit of narrow legalism but primarily with the desire to serve the needs and advance the welfare of the millions of human beings in both countries, whose contentment and prosperity depend upon the use of these waters. The Government of India are satisfied that no ad hoc body could decide the various issues involved, with the due regard to human welfare, until the results of the investigation, which the Government of India have repeatedly proposed, become available. Once more the Government of India would request the Government of Pakistan to agree to such an investigation being started immediately. Since in paragraph 16 of the note under reply it is stated that the “Government of Pakistan will co-operate fully in any procedure for further clarification, verification and exchange of information desired by the Government of India,” it should be possible to work out detailed plans for the investigation without difficulty or delay.

7. The Government of Pakistan have always expressed a preference for reference of the dispute over canal waters to the International Court of Justice. The Government of India do not question the high authority of that judicial body. There are two reasons, however, why they feel that this matter should be dealt with by an ad hoc tribunal. The first is that, for a correct and prompt settlement of the dispute, it will be necessary for those to whom adjudication of the dispute may be entrusted to appraise the relevant factual data in the light of firsthand knowledge of the geographical and engineering elements of the problem. This can be done more conveniently and effectively by a small group of persons working in India than by a court which has its seat at The Hague.

8. The other, and even more important, reason is the great urgency to settle the question of evacuee property. The continued failure to do so merely prolongs the sufferings of millions of refugees on both sides of the border, and the passions engendered by a sustained sense of frustration and grievance inevitably have an adverse effect on the relations between India and Pakistan. In order to ensure a prompt solution of this problem, the Government of India consider it desirable that it be referred immediately for decision to an ad hoc body. For obvious reasons, this task cannot be entrusted to the International Court of Justice. An ad hoc tribunal, working in the sub-continent, could apply itself at once to the solution of both the problems, namely, the problem of evacuee property and the dispute over canal waters.

9. The Government of India accordingly propose that the two Governments should proceed to nominate, without delay, two judges from each country of the highest judicial standing to enquire into and to decide these two matters. Such a body will have the necessary attributes of impartiality and judicial competence. Since it will be working in the sub-continent, both Governments will find it more convenient and more economical to produce before its members the varied and voluminous data that would be needed for a complete understanding of these important and complicated issues. The experience and responsibility of the members should be a guarantee that they will approach these problems with the sole desire to do justice. They see no reason why a body so constituted should not be able to arrive at agreed conclusions on the issues refereed to it.

10. In conclusion the Government of India would observe that they have limited their reply to the major and practical issues involved. They consider it unnecessary at this stage to comment on the other points arising out of the Pakistan Government’s note of 23 August 1950.
Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.

New Delhi, September 12, 1950.

I have already sent you a brief reply to your letter of August 23rd which dealt with the Canal Water dispute. After my return from Assam, I have given a good deal of time and attention to this matter. Indeed, right from the beginning, I have been personally interested in it. You may remember that I was present at the meeting of representatives of India and Pakistan who met to consider this matter in May, 1948. It was at that meeting, on the 4th May, 1948, that an agreement was arrived at between the two countries on this subject.

An official reply is being sent to your Government through our High Commissioner in Pakistan. I need not, therefore, reply to you at any length. I wish to assure you, however, that I attach great importance to a satisfactory settlement of this dispute, as of other disputes between our two Governments. It was because of this that I associated myself with these negotiations at an early stage. It seemed to me then that, whatever the legal and other aspects might be, and they were important, it was not possible to arrive at any correct decision without a full factual survey by experts representing the two Governments. Even if the matter is referred to any tribunal, the first step will have to be to find out the facts through such a survey. Because of this, we put forward the proposal long ago that a joint survey should be made. This was agreed to by Pakistan, but later your Government felt that they could not pursue the matter. I confess I was unable to understand this because whatever approach we make, such a survey seems a necessary preliminary.

There has been, I agree, unnecessary delay in dealing with this matter, though the consequences have not been and are not likely to be serious, as the normal flow of water has continued.

We have at no time been opposed to reference to a proper tribunal. We have felt, however, that a certain preliminary should be attended to before such a reference could be made. If, however, it is felt that a reference should be made now, we would agree to it. We have suggested in our official letter to your Government the procedure we think the most appropriate for this purpose. That procedure has many advantages. It is the best suited for this particular Canal Water dispute. It is also eminently suited to another dispute of old-standing between India and Pakistan which appears to us to be even more important and urgent than the Canal Water dispute. This relates to the Evacuee Property problem which, as you know, affects large numbers of persons and is a continuous source of trouble for them and for their respective Governments. Both from the point of view of alleviating the distress of these large numbers of persons and in order to remove a serious cause of friction between our two Governments, it is of the utmost importance that we should deal with this matter immediately in the way we have suggested.

The proposal we have made for the settlement of both the Canal Water dispute as well as the Evacuee Property problem has even larger implications. This proposal may be adapted subsequently to the settlement of other disputes between the two Governments of a nature which can be dealt with in this way. Thus, this procedure would fit in with the proposal we have been considering for the adjustment of present and future disputes between the two Governments in connection with a “No-War Declaration”.

I do not wish to deal here with other aspects of the Canal Water dispute to which reference has been made in your Government's official communication to us. But there is one matter which I cannot pass over without comment. It has been stated in your Government's communication that the Agreement of 4th May, 1948, was accepted by Pakistan under “compulsion”. This has surprised and distressed me greatly. As I have mentioned above, I was myself personally associated with this agreement. I participated in the discussions and helped in drafting that agreement in cooperation with the representatives of Pakistan present at the Conference. Among these representatives were Ghulam Mohammad and your High Commissioner in India. There were also present two Ministers of the West Punjab Government. The whole discussion was of a friendly character and both parties approached the question with a desire to find a mutually satisfactory way out. We reached this agreement unanimously and it was signed by all those present there. I cannot imagine how any question of compulsion could possibly have arisen in these circumstances. There was then no kind of threat or even suggestion about stopping the flow of water. Ever since then, on numerous occasions, this agreement has been referred to by both parties and acted upon. I am sure that if you go into all the facts, you will agree with me that the allegation of compulsion is totally without foundation. You can ask Ghulam Mohammad or your High Commissioner in India or anyone else present about it.

I earnestly trust that your Government will accept the proposal we have made for the settlement of both the Canal Water and the Evacuee Property disputes and thus not only help in solving these difficult and troublesome problems, but also lay the basis for a machinery for settlement of future disputes. That will go a long way towards improving relations between India and Pakistan.

Yours sincerely,

Jawaharlal Nehru

2419.  Note from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Karachi, September 15, 1950.

No. IHC. 21 – Poli/49 – VII  September 15, 1950

The High Commissioner for India in Pakistan presents his compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations of the Government of Pakistan and has the honour to communicate the following reply from his Government to the Pakistan Government’s communication No. IA. 4/50 (III), dated the 23rd August, 1950.

2.  The Government of India have noted with surprise and regret the statements of the Government of Pakistan:

(1)  that the disclosure by the Government of India’s representatives at the meeting of the negotiators held on the 29th to 31st May, 1950 “to continue the present interferences with the flow of water allocated to areas in Pakistan and to appropriate additional supplies of water vital to Pakistan has created a situation so serious as to endanger international peace and security”, and

(2)  that the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May, 1948, regarding the supply of water to the Central Bari Doab and Dipalpur canals in Pakistan was accepted by Pakistan under ‘compulsion’.

3.  As regards (1), the Government of India deny categorically that there has been any interference with the flow of water to Pakistan since the signing of the Agreement of 4th May, 1948. The negotiators for India made it perfectly clear to the Pakistan negotiators that the Government of India would continue to abide by the terms of the Agreement of the 4th May, 1948. The Government of India regret that they are unable to accept any repudiation or notice of termination of the agreement. They adhere to their intention to continue the supply of water to the canals referred to, until the dispute is settled. They are, therefore, unable to understand why any threat to international peace and security should be apprehended from any attitude or action of theirs.

4. As regards (2), the Government of India wish to recall that the Agreement of 4th May, 1948, was reached between the Prime Minister of India and the Finance Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Ghulam Mohammad, at a conference that was marked by cordiality and goodwill. Ministers of the Governments of Punjab (India) and Punjab (Pakistan) participated in the Conference and signed the agreement. The Government of Pakistan will appreciate that, against this background of the sequence of events, the Government of India are quite unable to accept the contention of the Government of Pakistan that the Agreement of May, 1948, was accepted by them unwillingly and under compulsion.

5. The Government of Pakistan request the Government of India to agree to accept the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice and to agree to the immediate reference of the dispute over canal waters to that Court. The Government of India have at no time ruled out reference of this dispute for decision to an appropriate body, if negotiations should fail to result in agreement. 7. The other, and even more important reason is the paramount urgency to settle the question of evacuee property. The continued failure to do so merely prolongs the sufferings of millions of refugees and the passions engendered by a sustained sense of frustration and grievance inevitably have an adverse affect on the maintenance of friendly relations between India and Pakistan. The Government of India regret that their repeated efforts to arrive at a final settlement of the evacuee property problem have not met with an adequate response from the Government of Pakistan. In order to ensure a speedy solution of this problem, the Government of India consider that it be referred immediately for decision to a tribunal. For obvious reasons, this task cannot be entrusted to the International Court of Justice. An ad hoc tribunal, working in the Subcontinent, could apply itself at once to the solution of both the problems, namely the problem of evacuee property and the dispute over canal waters.

The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry the assurances of their highest consideration.

2420. Extract from letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.

New Delhi, October 8, 1950.

* * * * *

I am not aware of any instance where two independent nations have bound themselves down to refer every dispute, whatever its nature, to a particular authority, much less to an external authority. There is the well-known case of Canada and the United States of America. They created an International Commission, consisting of representatives of the two countries, for settlement of certain disputes. But that Commission had no outside member in it, and it dealt only with certain specified types of disputes between the two countries. I would gladly agree to any similar procedure for India and Pakistan. But, inevitably, it will have to deal with certain specified types of disputes and a Commission appointed for the purpose will consist only of an equal number of judges chosen by India and Pakistan respectively. It is true that there is always a possibility of a lack of agreement between the members of the Commission, but if they are judges of the highest standing, they will consider the issues before them in a judicial spirit and are highly likely to come to a unanimous or majority decision. Even if they fail to agree, the area of difference will have been narrowed down by the measure of agreement reached and only the outstanding point or points of difference will remain to be dealt with. The two Governments could then consider the matter afresh, including the question of reference to a third party. To think, ab initio, of a third party will lessen the sense of responsibility of the judges and will also be a confession of our continued dependence on others. That would hardly be becoming for proud and self-respecting independent nations.

This leaves us with the questions of evacuee property and canal waters. We wrote to you about both of these some time ago and suggested a precise method for their final settlement. We have had no answer from you to that proposal but you have referred to it in the course of your speech on Kashmir before the Pakistan Parliament, and I regret to find from that brief reference that you do not view our proposal with favour. Your main objection appears to be that the judges from India and Pakistan may not agree with each other and there is no provision for meeting that contingency. You seem to think that such disagreement is almost certain to occur and that only outsiders can decide for us. I confess that I am unable to appreciate the force of this argument, which, as I have indicated above, reduces us to a dependent status relying upon the pleasure of others; this is something wholly repugnant to me and, in my view incompatible with the dignity of both India and Pakistan.

If you read the two last letters that I have written to you, namely, the one dealing with the No War Declaration and the other with Canal Waters and Evacuee Property, you will find that, in effect, we have suggested not only a general and rather vague declaration, but also a precise method of dealing with what might be called, justifiable issues. I have suggested a judicial tribunal of high standing to consider and decide the questions of canal waters and evacuee property. I am perfectly prepared to extend this principle to any other justifiable issue. Thus we provide not only for present disputes but for future disputes except those which cannot be considered by a judicial tribunal. I think we have gone farther in making this proposal than any two nations have ever gone. If we agree on this basis, it will not only be a great thing for India and Pakistan but also something that will powerfully impress the world at a time when despair is seizing it.

I cannot myself see how we can go into greater detail either in regard to timing or procedure. I regret, therefore, that I am unable to accept the draft declaration proposed by you. I would beg of you to give thought to the considerations I have urged in this letter. I would gladly add to my draft a reference to our constituting a joint tribunal, as I have suggested, for the final decision of the evacuee property and canal waters problems, and to say that the decision of the majority shall be binding. Further, I shall be willing to say that this tribunal may also consider any other matters in dispute which are justifiable.

Karachi, October 18, 1950.

My dear Pandit Nehru,

I greatly appreciate the personal attention you are giving to the matter of the waters dispute.

If I am correct in understanding your letter of the 12th September and the communication of your Government of the 15th September as assuring that Pakistan will receive without diminution its pre-partition supplies until other allocations are in the future adjudicated or agreed to, we are indeed on the road toward a just solution. The grave situation to which I referred in my letter of 23rd August to you arose from the fact that until now our repeated requests to respect the status quo as of the time of partition have not been accepted and it was even declared by the Indian negotiators that certain projects, which cannot be reconciled with continuation of Pakistan's supplies, were going forward whatever we might do.

We are studying with great care your proposals for an ad hoc body to adjudicate this question, the evacuee property question and possibly other matters. It would assist us if we had a draft of the convention governing the composition, the authority, the rules of decision and procedure etc.

I am reluctant to mar the improved atmosphere created by your assurances by harking back to the situation in May 1948. You asked me, however, to review what happened and this I have done. It has verified to my mind the correctness of our position that agreement which was signed then was in no sense a voluntary one for Pakistan. Contrary to your recollection and indeed to the recitals in that instrument, supplies of water vital to Pakistan were not restored until after Pakistan signatures were affixed. I trust, however, that those unhappy memories can be buried in the past.

As to a commission of engineers, am I correct in believing that your Government accepts our view that this feature must not be permitted to delay the adjudication of the underlying issues? With this understood, we have at all times been ready to go forward, and we will give prompt consideration to any concrete proposal your Government is prepared to make. It would add to the reassurance given by the Government communication and your note if the proposed commission were authorized to make joint measurements of current flows and withdrawals on both sides of the border to verify that the pre-partition allocations are being respected. I feel it to be my duty to invite your attention to official communications of my Government stating the specific instances in which pre-partition supplies have been withheld.
We are continuing our study of your proposal, but if we have the draft of agreement for the ad hoc court, it will assist us greatly in weighing the relative merits of such an ad hoc tribunal with those of the International Court of Justice.

Yours sincerely

Sd. Liaquat Ali Khan

Hon’ble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India, New Delhi.

Karachi, October 18, 1950.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations present their compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and with reference to their Note No. IHC.21-Poll/49-VII, dated the 15th September, 1950, have the honour to request that the following reply may kindly be transmitted to the Government of India.

2. The Government of Pakistan are studying with care the proposals made in the communication of the Government of India, of the 15th September. One reason why the Government of Pakistan have thought that the International Court of Justice would serve better to resolve the fundamental issues in the canal waters dispute is that that Court is already established and functioning successfully. The International Court of Justice could proceed to the adjudication of the merits without any delay in formulating an agreement as to its composition, its jurisdiction, rules of decision, procedure and the like. It will make the greatest difference in the consideration of the relative merits of the proposed ad hoc tribunal and the International Court of Justice if there appears to be no doubt but that agreement can be reached without protracted negotiations for the establishment of an effective tribunal. It would help to resolve doubts on this score if the Government of India were to elaborate its proposals respecting the proposed tribunal preferably in the form of a draft convention which they are prepared to sign.
3. It will be greatly appreciated if the Government of India will have such a draft agreement prepared and will forward it at the earliest opportunity. The Government of Pakistan will, in the meantime, continue their study of the general proposal in the hope that upon receipt of the concrete draft, a joint decision can quickly be taken by the two governments on the procedures best suited to resolve our differences.

4. Comment upon other points mentioned in the communication of the Government of India of the 15th September has been deferred in order to avoid delay in transmitting this request.

The Ministry avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of their highest consideration.

2423. Extract from letter of Pakistan Prime Minister to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Karachi, October 21, 1950.

You have referred to the arrangement between Canada and the United States, whereby they refer certain disputes to a Commission of representatives from the two countries. I believe this arrangement was made at a time when the International Court of Justice was not in existence. I am inclined to the view that the creation of the International Court of Justice and the voluntary acceptance of its jurisdiction by various countries marks a much bigger step forward towards peace and progress. In addition, ad hoc tribunals are set up for settling disputes between independent countries. Only recently Afghanistan and Iran agreed to refer the dispute over the apportionment of the water of the Helmond river to an independent tribunal of three nations. For the matter of that both of us appointed Justice Bagge of Sweden as the Chairman of the Tribunal in our boundary dispute and agreed to abide by his award. I do not, therefore, think that the appointment of an independent tribunal for arbitration is in any way inconsistent with national honour, prestige or independence.

There is, however, one aspect in which the proposal that I have made marks an important advance over anything that has happened before in human history and that advance consists in obligation voluntarily accepted of referring to arbitration every dispute that our two countries fail to resolve by negotiation.
and mediation. Such a provision would, to my mind, provide greatest incentive towards the success of our efforts to settle disputes by direct negotiation. It would encourage moderation and reasonableness on both sides. It would be the first example in history of two independent nations agreeing to settle all their disputes by peaceful methods. It would put India and Pakistan in the vanguard of human progress.

I do not propose in this letter to deal with the question of which disputes are justiciable and which are not or to the kind tribunal to which particular disputes should be referred. I am here merely on the point of principle. In the letter I wrote a few days ago regarding the canal waters dispute, I have requested you to elaborate your proposals for an ad hoc Court, but what I have stated above is relevant in that context also.

2. I have read all these communications with great care. Since the disputes relating to canal waters and evacuee property are part of the issues now outstanding between India and Pakistan, and the specific method of solving them that I have suggested is susceptible, in our view, of extension to the settlement of other disputes of a like nature, it seems reasonable to treat them as part of the general problem. I have therefore, decided to deal with your three letters together.

5. Canal waters and evacuee property.— In regard to two of the major disputes between our two countries, viz., canal waters and evacuee property, negotiation, over a protracted period failed to produce any result. We, therefore, suggested immediate reference to a tribunal of the highest standing, consisting of two judges from India and two judges from Pakistan. There was no question of delay in this.
6. You ask me to send a draft of the convention governing the composition, the authority, the rules of decision and procedure, etc. of this tribunal which we have suggested. I am afraid I have not quite followed what you mean by a convention. Clearly there must be agreement between us regarding the composition of the tribunal, its terms of reference and powers. The composition has already been dealt with. As regards the tribunal's powers, I think we should lay it down that it should have final authority to deal with the matters referred to it. The judges can decide unanimously or by majority. They will have all the powers of superior courts in regard to summoning of witnesses, etc. They will settle their procedure and method of working, as such tribunals do. We must invest the tribunal with the highest authority and not make it feel that it is just a stepping stone to something else. We must agree to abide by its decision in all matters referred to it.

10. Certain facts relating to canal waters.— Before concluding, I should like to refer to certain points relating to the canal waters dispute which you have mentioned in your letter of the 18th instant. I am surprised at your statement that supplies of water to Pakistan were not restored until after Pakistan's signatures were affixed to the agreement of May 4, 1948. This is a simple question of fact, which can easily be verified. We sent you a telegram on the 29th April, 1948, in which it was stated that orders were being issued immediately for resumption of water supply from the Upper Bari Doab and Dipalpur canals. On the 1st of May you were good enough to acknowledge this telegram. Orders to renew the supply of water were issued immediately and renewal of supply actually took place on the 3rd May; the slight delay between the order to renew supplies and the actual renewal was unavoidable as the authorities concerned required a little time to carry out the orders. The agreement was signed on the 4th May evening. Perhaps I may claim to speak with some authority on this subject, because I was present at that conference. Paragraph 2 of the Agreement itself shows that the East Punjab Government had revived the flow of water into these canals before the agreement of 4th May was signed. Moreover, Pakistan's representatives, who included Mr. Ghulam Mohammad and the High Commissioner for Pakistan in India as well as a Minister of the West Punjab Government, can testify to the fact. There was no question of coercion about this agreement. Indeed, it was one of the happiest agreements arrived at in a friendly, co-operative atmosphere and no one then, or for long afterwards, ever raised the complaint which has recently been made on behalf of Pakistan.

11. The second paragraph in your letter of the 18th October is not quite correct and raises certain controversial issues about which we have had a lengthy correspondence in the past. Our position is that we shall continue the supply of water to the two canals, until the dispute is settled in accordance with the agreement of the 4th May, 1948. I sincerely hope that this dispute will be expeditiously settled; indeed, I am confident that if we set up quickly the tribunal that we have proposed, a satisfactory settlement will soon be reached. I regret, however, that I cannot undertake to stop the new irrigation projects that we now have in hand.

12. You refer to a commission of engineer’s. It has been and is our view that no proper consideration of the canal waters question can take place without a technical survey carried out by engineers. For this reason, we have been pressing for such a technical survey. This was not meant to delay matters but to expedite them. In view, however, of your Government’s attitude in regard to this matter, we have expressed our willingness to refer canal waters issue at one to the ad hoc tribunal we have suggested. If your Government agrees, we can appoint the tribunal as well as the commission of engineers. Alternatively, we can go ahead with the tribunal and leave it to that body to appoint the commission of engineers.

2425. Note from the High Commission for India in Pakistan to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
Karachi, November 1, 1950.

No. IHC. 21-Poll/49 – (VII) November 1, 1950.

The High Commission for India in Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations of the Government of Pakistan and has the honour to communicate the following reply to the Ministry’s note No. IA.4/50(III) of the 18th October, 1950.

In the High Commission’s note of September 15, full reasons have been given why the Government of India consider that instead of a reference to the International Court of Justice, the canal waters dispute should be referred to a Tribunal constituted of two Judges to be appointed by the Government of Pakistan and two Judges to be appointed by the Government of India. The Government of Pakistan have now asked for the draft of a convention regarding the authority, powers and procedure of the Tribunal suggested. The Government of India have not been able to follow exactly what the Government of Pakistan mean by a ‘convention’. Clearly there must be agreement between the two Governments regarding the composition of the tribunal, its terms of reference and powers. The composition has already been dealt with in the previous communication to the Pakistan Government. As regards the tribunal’s powers, the two Governments should agree that the tribunal should have final authority to deal with the matters referred to it. The Judges can decide unanimously or by majority and will have all the powers of the superior courts in regard to summoning of witnesses etc. The tribunal should settle the procedure and method of working, as such tribunals usually do. The two Governments should agree in advance to abide by the decision of the Tribunal in all matters referred to it. If, unfortunately, there is an equal division of opinion among the Judges, the two Governments should consider those parts of the dispute which have not been finally decided and try to settle them themselves, or, failing that, resort to arbitration or adjudication by a mutually agreed special agency or an International Organisation recognised by both Governments.

The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry the assurances of its highest consideration.

2426. Extract from the Telegram from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Indian Ministry of External Affairs.

Karachi, November 6, 1950.

No. 4956. November 6, 1950

With regard to disputed amounts requested by Government of India attention is invited to previous communications particularly that of Government of PAKISTAN 23rd August 1950 and reply of Government of India 15th September 1950. It is apparent that the disputed amounts constitute one of incidental issues of canal water dispute which negotiation has failed to resolve. It now being agreed that these issues should be adjudicated further discussion of their merits would only detract from our joint efforts directed towards the end of selecting Tribunal best suited to resolve promptly our differences. With the foregoing in mind and to remove any apprehension that PAKISTAN is seeking to prejudice any issue to be adjudicated Government of Pakistan has today establish with State Bank of Pakistan an irrevocable credit in amount of 15 lakhs rupees (Indian) in favour of SCHRODER Trust Company New York City to be held by its Indian State ESCROW Agent. This amount is believed to be ample to cover all disputed canal water claims for year ending 30th June 1951. If Indian claims are larger than this amount Government of Pakistan would appreciate being informed.

The SCHRODER, Trust Company 57 Broadway New York City has agreed to act as Escrow Agent in accordance with terms set forth in following letter:

The Governments of India and Pakistan are seeking to reach agreement upon procedures for adjudication of a dispute over appointment sic (apportionment) of water common to two Countries. Incidental to fundamental issue is question whether Government of India are entitled to receive as they claim “SEIGNIORAGE” for water received by Pakistan through Central BARI DOAB canal, DIPALPUR canal and Bahawalpur State DISTRIBUTARY of Eastern Grey canal and carrying charges for MADHOPUR Head-works and carrier channels based upon amounts in excess of actual cost.

In order to remove any apprehension on the part of Government of India that Pakistan is seeking to prejudice any issue to be adjudicated, Government of Pakistan have established a credit deemed by them to be ample to assure that any judgment in favour of Indian claims will NOT remain unsatisfied.

The irrevocable credit in amount of 15 lakhs rupees (Indian) has been established with State Bank of Pakistan for unlimited use of SCHRODER Trust Company. This credit shall be held by SCHRODER Company in ESCROW. The terms of ESCROW are that SCHRODER Trust Company shall issue instructions to State Bank of Pakistan to pay from such credit.

Firstly, to Government of India the amount necessary [but NOT in excess of 15 lakhs rupees (Indian)] to satisfy any judgment of International Court of Justice or of any other International Tribunal agreed to between India and Pakistan and handed down in proceedings certified to ESCROW agent to have been begun NOT later than June 30th, 1951 for recovery of charges claimed by Government of India to be owing as SEIGNIORAGE for water received by Pakistan during year beginning with July 1st 1950 through Central BARI Doab canal, DIPALPUR canal and Bahawalpur State DISTRIBUTARY of Eastern Grey canal, or as carrying charges during that year, for MADHOPUR Head-works and carrier channels in excess of amounts shown to have been previously paid.
Secondly, to Government of PAKISTAN to extent NOT required to satisfy any judgment described in paragraph No.1 or in full if contention of Government of Pakistan is sustained that India is entitled to receive only payments currently being made by PAKISTAN or if NO the proceedings of character described in para No. 1 are begun before July 1st 1951.

The instructions are to be issued promptly following receipt of proof satisfactory to SCHRODER Trust Company of occurrence of any contingency that determines payments to be made in accordance with para No.1 and second.

It is understood that duties of SCHRODER Trust Company as ESCROW Agent are confined to issuing orders in accordance with terms of ESCROW arrangement setforth above and Government of Pakistan will hold SCHRODER Trust Company harmless from any claims arising out of any action or inaction on its part hereunder which is in opinion of Counsel in accordance with these terms.

It is further understood Counsel of SCHRODER Trust Company in this matter will be a partner of New York Law Firm of Sullivan and CROMWELL selected by SCHRODER Trust Company.

In replying to this telegram, the Ministry of External Affairs in their express letter No. F. 8-1/40-Pak-III dated December 16, 1950 expressed surprise that Pakistan had, “without previous consultation and unilaterally chosen to alter the existing Escrow arrangements” and pointed out this this was “clearly in contravention of the terms of paragraph 5 of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May, 1948, which the Government of India consider as binding on both Governments.” New Delhi cautioned Karachi that “any attempt to vary the terms of that agreement and in particular the escrow arrangements, in force until now, will certainly not be conducive to final settlement of the Canal Water Dispute.” It asked Pakistan to “deposit the disputed amounts…with the Reserve Bank of India as heretofore”.

6. At the time of Partition the Indian representatives joined in declaring that there was no question of varying the shares of the two new countries in our Common Waters required for irrigation. Since then India has sought to compel acceptance of greatly increased supplies for India at the expense of irrigation vital to Pakistan. Taking advantage of its position as the stream riparian, India arbitrarily cut off during the critical sowing season in spring of 1948 the supplies of water of every Pakistan canal that crossed the boundary. Contrary to information you have received and no doubt contrary to your personal wishes and orders—the flows were not resumed until after your Government sought to exact certain conditions inimical to Pakistan. Not until certain of these conditions were met was the flow restored in the Central Bari Doab Canal, and it has not yet been restored in the Bahawalpur State distributary. Even your recent assurance that Partition supplies will not again be cut off has since been qualified by conditions which your Government know that Pakistan cannot accept. Our repeated requests to submit the canal waters dispute to the International Court of Justice have not been accepted.

7. Only after two and a half years have your Government accepted even the principle that the Water Dispute should be adjudicated. Instead however of accepting the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice you have proposed the creation of a new Tribunal consisting of two Indian and two Pakistan Judges. If, as may be expected, a Tribunal so composed will be deadlocked, you suggest that the parties might negotiate a new Agreement to submit the stalemate to another Tribunal which this time presumably would consist of an odd number of Judges some of whom would be nationals neither of India nor of Pakistan. This counter-proposal contains a double veto and permits of endless delay. Meanwhile you intimate that your Government had decided to continue the construction of new irrigation projects designed to appropriate more water at the expense of Pakistan. Yet the right to do this is the very issue to be adjudicated.

8. Notwithstanding our apprehension, over this alternative to the International Court and the prejudice to Pakistan threatened in expansion of your irrigation projects during the delay involved, we will, as I indicated in my letter of October 18th, keep an open mind and study sympathetically the draft of governing convention of agreement which has been requested. If this draft provides for a Court that will assure effective adjudication Pakistan will accept.
I do hope that we may have that draft in the near future.

9. Without qualifying in any way what I have just said, I must frankly confess to you that the more we have studied your counter-proposal the more clearly does it appeal to us that the international Court would best serve your suggested purpose as well as ours. It has the great advantage of independence, impartiality and unquestioned competence without being in any sense a foreign Court. It is our Court, India and Pakistan by accepting the statute of the Court and agreeing to its jurisdiction, far from impairing their sovereignty, exercised it in aligning themselves with those nations that have freely chosen to live under the rule of law. By submitting our water dispute to that Court and abiding by its decision we again demonstrate that the highest act of sovereignty is to act in conformity with International Law. The International Court stands for the very same high principles of international conduct with which you have always identified yourself.

10. There are also many practical considerations weighing in favour of international conformity. The court is already functioning successfully. No detailed Agreement need be worked out to fix its composition, its jurisdiction, its rules of procedure or of decision. As you and your advisers consider the actual terms of the Draft Agreement governing the Tribunal you propose, I believe you will come to appreciate the full merit of the International Court. I therefore again request that rather than postpone settlement while seeking to create a new Tribunal as good as the International Court, we accept now the jurisdiction of that court to examine the Canal Waters dispute.

11. We have failed by negotiation to reach agreement to the fair division of our common waters owing to widely divergent views as to our legal rights. The International Court would probably not have to go beyond definition of principles involved. Once this is done we should have little difficulty in applying the legal principles that are laid down.

12. Turning to the matter of Evacuee Property I have had difficulty in finding what questions of a legal nature are involved. To be sure the value of property in a region that requires irrigation depends upon an authoritative definition of that region's rights to a continuation of its water supplies. Apart from that the question seems to be factual and economic. Furthermore, if India will accept our repeated offers that there be freedom of sales and exchanges of urban Evacuee Property in both countries the problem will be reduced to manageable proportions. You have, moreover, our offer to establish concrete procedures to which we would be bound without any right of veto for reserving any matter, justiciable or not, that in the Evacuee Property question and in the other disputes cannot by resolved by mutual accommodation.

New Delhi, November 22, 1950.

The High Commission for Pakistan in India present their compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, New Delhi, and with reference to their Note No. D.3379- Pak. III/50, dated the 18th April, 1950, have the honour to reaffirm that Pakistan’s equitable share of the waters common to India and Pakistan includes the supplies in the same amounts and through the same channels as were receivable at the time of partition in the areas that now are a part of Pakistan. The supplies receivable through the channels mentioned in paragraph 1 of the High Commission’s Note No. 62(6)P/50-403, dated the 4th February 1950 should, accordingly, not be withheld. It is therefore again requested that orders be issued to assure that such supplies, and all other pre-partition supplies now being withheld, be furnished as at the time of partition.

2. Pakistan has been and is ready at all times to pay its share of the actual maintenance costs of all channels used jointly in proportion to the benefit Pakistan receives from those channels. Inasmuch as final adjustment has not been effected with respect to the actual maintenance costs of all the channels used jointly, Pakistan has lacked the data for determining whether the maintenance costs of the channels mentioned in the High Commission’s Note of 4th February, 1950, were not taken into account by the Government of India in calculating the share of the maintenance charges for which payment has been requested by India and has been made by Pakistan. It is clear that no charges are payable for the maintenance of channels while the supplies which should be received through them are withheld. It does not follow, however, that by failing to present statements for the maintenance costs of any particular channel, the Government of India acquires a right to withhold the share of supplies receivable by Pakistan through that channel.

3. The High Commission avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the Government of India the assurances of their highest consideration.

The Ministry of External Affairs in their note No. D.1056-Pak.III/51 dated the 9th February, 1951 did not think it worthwhile to reply in any detail to the Pakistani Note and simply drew the attention of that Government to their Note No. D. 3379 –Pak. III/50 of April 18, 1950.
9. The question of canal waters has been the subject of many conferences and long correspondence. I do not wish to burden this letter with a repetition of what I have said previously on so many occasions. But I must point out that the statement in your letter that, “at the time of partition, Indian representatives joined in declaring that there was no question of varying the shares of the two new countries in our common waters required for irrigation” is not correct. When the matter came up before the Punjab Partition Committee, this was not agreed to. The correct position is set out briefly in subsequent paragraphs. Nor, as I have repeatedly pointed out, is it correct that India has, since partition, sought to compel acceptance of greatly increased supplies for India at the expense of irrigation vital to Pakistan. I am deeply distressed that the agreement reached between the two countries in May 1948, in a friendly spirit, and our honorable fulfillment of it, should be so distorted and denounced.

10. Since we disagree even about facts apart from interpretation, there is little use in my recapitulating at length what I have said before on the subject of this agreement. But I cannot let pass, without challenge, the charge now made that only after 2½ years, India has accepted the principle that the canal water dispute should be “adjudicated”. As far back as May 1948, the Governments of India and Pakistan agreed “to approach the problem in a practical spirit on the basis of the East Punjab (now Punjab, India) Government diminishing its supply to the Pakistan canals, in order to enable the West Punjab (now Punjab, Pakistan) Government to tap alternative sources.” In the same practical spirit, the Government of India suggested, in August 1949, the appointment of a Joint Technical Commission to make an investigation for this purpose. If I may say so, it is Pakistan’s intransigence which has held up this essential preliminary technical investigation. Our objection to reference of this canal waters issue to the International Court of Justice has been due not to any desire to shirk settlement of differences by an impartial body but to the honest belief that a matter of this kind can best be settled by a small group of persons of the highest judicial standing, from India and Pakistan, who can appraise all the vital practical factors on the spot.

11. I do not see why you should say that, as may be expected, a tribunal of the kind that we have suggested will be deadlocked. That seems to me to be an unjustified reflection upon the impartiality of your judges and ours. In any case, we have not suggested that, if the members of this tribunal should be divided, the point or points on which there is a deadlock should be referred to another tribunal which would consist of odd number of judges, some of whom would be nationals neither of India nor of Pakistan. All that we have suggested is that the two Governments should agree in advance to abide the decisions of the tribunal in all matters referred to it, and that, if unfortunately there is an equal division of opinion among judges on any points, the two Governments should try to settle these points by negotiation among themselves and, failing that, resort to arbitration or adjudication by a mutually agreed special agency or an International Organisation recognised by both Governments. Since our proposal provides that the agreed or majority decision of the tribunal should be accepted by both parties, our hope is that the points of difference will be so few as to make their settlement easier and more expeditious than the reference of the whole dispute to a tribunal sitting thousands of miles away.

12. You refer to a governing convention for the creation this tribunal. I cannot do better than quote what I have said on this subject in my letter of the 27th October;

“Clearly there must be agreement between us regarding the composition of the tribunal, its terms of reference and powers. The composition has already been dealt with. As regards the tribunal’s powers, I think we should lay it down that it should have final authority to deal with the matters referred to it. The judges can decide unanimously or by majority. They will have all the powers of superior courts in regard to summoning of witnesses, etc. They will settle their procedure and method of working, as such tribunals do. We must invest the tribunal with the highest authority and not make it feel that it is just a stepping stone to something else. We must agree to abide by its decision in all matters referred to it.’

Once these broad principles are accepted by you, details can be worked out by discussion between your representatives and ours. This is all that seems necessary.

13. You refer to the construction of new irrigation projects by India. To describe as new a project like Bhakra which has been under consideration or preparation for the last thirty years is hardly accurate. Such new proposals as we have considered since Partition are essential for the development of Punjab (India) and adjoining areas in India. As we have pointed out to your representatives repeatedly, in view there is a sufficiency of water in the Indus Basin for all your purposes as well as ours, provided that we approach them in a spirit of mutual accommodation. We have persistently urged a joint enquiry to confirm this but Pakistan avoided such an investigation. That, I venture to say, is no reason why the development of the East Punjab should be held up.
14. I did not suggest reference of the evacuee property dispute to the same tribunal as the one proposed for the canal issue because the problem is legal; I did so primarily to expedite an equitable settlement with the help of an agency whose impartiality would command confidence. This dispute has formed the subject of prolonged discussions between our two Governments and we attach even greater importance to its settlement because of the mass of human suffering involved by delay and its consequent repercussion on relations between the two countries. We both know how intense the feeling on this subject is. The value of agricultural property in certain areas would, of course, depend on irrigation facilities that might be available from existing or alternative sources, the proposed Tribunal would no doubt take this factor into consideration in suggesting how best the dispute should be adjusted between the two parties. Sale and exchange of urban evacuee property were tried on an earlier occasion but without any substantial result for reasons which I need not go into here. After all that has happened, it would not be practicable to revert to an agreement which would leave out large areas of agricultural land affecting the majority of evacuees in each country. Frankly, I fail to see why there should be any objection to settling this matter in the manner proposed by us.

Karachi, November 27, 1950.

7. This letter has already become too long and I would not like to take too much of your time to go into the details of the Canal Waters Dispute. I regret, however, to find that you question the accuracy of my statement that “at the time of partition, Indian representatives joined in declaring that there was no question of varying the authorised shares of waters to which the two zones and the various canals are entitled”. In my letters to you I take great pains to ensure accuracy and I repeat that the statement that I have made in my letter is correct. Nor, I must confess, do I see how you can deny that since partition India has sought to compel acceptance of greatly increased supplies for India, at the expense of irrigation vital to Pakistan. As for the Agreement of May 1948, all that I maintain is that it was made under compulsion.
8. I am amazed that in paragraph 10 of your letter you have actually charged Pakistan with intransigence. May I draw your attention to my letter of the 23rd August? In that letter I have dealt with the question of technical investigation. In view of what I have stated therein the charge of intransigence is most unjustified. My contention is that even though engineers of the two countries have repeatedly met and there is a mass of factual data available, this has not resulted in any progress in the settlement of the dispute. And how could it when you yourself say that such new proposals as you have considered since Partition are essential for the development of Punjab (India) and the adjoining areas in India; while we maintain that these works would inevitably devastate some of the richest areas in Pakistan, and your right to do this is the very issue to be adjudicated.

9. My statement that a tribunal such as the one proposed by you will be deadlocked is neither a reflection upon the impartiality of your judges nor on that of ours. But this is what we fear. And if past experience is any guide a deadlock is almost inevitable. In any case it would be wrong to make any plans without taking cognizance of what at least seems a very probable eventuality. It is for this reason that we suggest that reference might be made to a tribunal of undoubted standing—and “sitting thousands of miles away” so that It could decide the question dispassionately and without getting entangled into the barbed wire of political controversy. Nevertheless we have not rejected the idea of a tribunal. We have asked for a draft of governing convention. You have merely quoted from your previous reference. It was after seeing it that we felt that it was necessary to have a draft of governing convention. From my past experience I can say that unless details are clearly worked out we would find ourselves in the throes of new disagreements. If you would permit me to say so, you are so convinced of the rightness of your stand on every issue that I seem to have utterly failed to persuade you that there may be another side to any issue pending between us.

10. I notice that you have not made any new point with regard to the Evacuee property dispute. I am, however, glad to see that you recognise that the value of agricultural property would in certain areas depend upon the irrigation facilities that are available to it and in consequence, unless we made any progress with regard to the settlement of the Canal Waters Dispute, which vitally affects the most valuable, the most important irrigated area in Pakistan, it may be futile to talk of any equitable settlement. So far as the sale and exchange of urban evacuee property is concerned, if India will accept, as was once agreed upon, our repeated offers that there be freedom of sale and exchange of property, the problem would be greatly reduced.

6. Canal Waters — In your letter dated the 21st November 1950 you had said that “at the time of Partition, the Indian representatives joined in declaring that there was no question of varying the shares of the two new countries in our Common Waters required for irrigation”. I characterised this statement not correct in my letter to you dated the 24th November 1950 and I maintain that I was correct in so characterising it. You based your original statement apparently on, the Report of the Reconstituted Committee B appointed by the Punjab Partition Committee on the Division of Physical Assets of the Punjab. In your present letter you have put within inverted commas certain words taken from this Report which are by no means the same as what you had said in your previous letter. The actual words used in that Report are: “The Committee is agreed that there is no question of varying the authorized shares of water to which the two zones and the various canals are entitled”. It is only fair to point out that your original statement lacked accuracy. I note also that you have not referred to my further statement that, when this Committee’s Report came up before the main Punjab Partition Committee, it was not agreed to. On the contrary, the Punjab Partition Committee concluded that “in regard to canals there was a difference of opinion over fundamental issues and it was decided to refer the matter to the Central Arbitral Committee after both sides had prepared their cases”.

7. Your further assertion that, since partition, India has sought to compel acceptance of greatly increased supplies for herself at the expense of irrigation vital to Pakistan is absolutely without justification. India only proposes to utilise the waters to which she is entitled, but, before doing so, she has generously agreed not to prejudice any existing irrigation in Pakistan with such water until Pakistan has had reasonable time to tap alternative sources which are so abundantly available in her own limits. This was fully realised by the representatives of Pakistan when they put their signatures to the Agreement of 4th May 1948. It is, I confess, a matter of amazement to me that you should still seek to maintain that that Agreement as made under compulsion.

8. Pakistan’s intransigence as regards the technical examination agreed to between the two countries hardly requires proof. Engineers of the two countries have no doubt met more than once, but if, in spite of these meetings and the mass of factual data available, no progress has been made in the settlement of the dispute, it can only be attributed to the refusal of the representatives of the Pakistan Government to permit the two sets of Engineers to get on with the technical examination of the problem. It is incorrect to say that the works, which in India are now in progress, "would inevitably devastate some of the richest areas in Pakistan". It is our firm conviction that, if only the technical examination is allowed to be made in a spirit of mutual understanding and accommodation, not only the richest areas in Pakistan but all other legitimately irrigable areas will get the supply of water they reasonably need. I have no doubt that, if the Tribunal which I have suggested is established and is assisted by the results of such a technical examination, it would not be difficult for it to find an equitable solution of the problem.

9.  Evacuee Property.— I can only regret that you should still think that the tribunal we have suggested would not serve any useful purpose. I am also disappointed at your refusal to discuss the evacuee property dispute pending a settlement in the canal water dispute, except on the basis suggested by you, namely, that there should be freedom of sale and exchange of urban property. In my previous letter I have explained why we feel that this method of approach to the evacuee property problem would not lead to a satisfactory solution. I need not repeat what I have said previously.

New Delhi, May 10, 1951.

No. F. 62(4) P/51-1340  May 10, 1951

The High Commission for Pakistan in India present their compliments to the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi, and with reference to their note No. F.6 Pak.III/51, dated the 12th March, 1951, have the honour to state as follows: 2. The Note under reference repeats various of the contentions of the Government of India in the irrigation water dispute and closes with the statement that the Government of India are still awaiting acceptance of their proposal made on the 15th September, 1950, to give effect to the agreement of the two countries to adjudicate the dispute. It is unnecessary to repeat the Government of Pakistan's answer to the Government of India's contentions on the merits of the disputes. Each country has long been aware of the other, and both have acknowledged that they cannot reach an agreement as to their legal rights. The two countries have, however, agreed to adjudicate the dispute. It is essential that the parties implement that agreement the earliest possible. The Government of India's note on its face appears to share this view, but by ignoring every invitation to transform their proposal of 15th September into an effective means of adjudicating the dispute, the Note in fact promotes delay.

3. It is three years since India began withholding from Pakistan irrigation supplies authorised before partition and agreed to in the course of partition. For three years the Government of Pakistan have requested the Government of India to join with them in referring to the International Court of Justice the dispute thus begun. It is eight months since the Government of India at last agreed that the dispute should be settled by adjudication. But during the eight months the Government of India have refused to implement this agreement by reference to an impartial and effective tribunal.

4. As an alternative to the International Court of Justice the Government of India proposed on the 15th September 1950, the creation of a special court consisting of two Indian and two Pakistani judges. The proposal made no mention of the necessary chairman from a disinterested country. The Government of Pakistan believing that a more definite formulation of the proposal would include some provision for resolving the stalemate to be anticipated with an even number of judges from the interested countries, by their note of 18th October, 1950, requested the Government of India to put forward their proposal in the form of a definite agreement that the Government was prepared to sign. The draft agreement has not been sent.

5. The Government of India, by their Note of 1st November, 1950, gave certain indications of the type of tribunal their proposal of 15th September, 1950 contemplated. These excluded the necessary impartial chairman and suggested "if unfortunately, there is an equal division of opinion among the judges, the two Governments should consider those parts of the dispute which have not been finally decided and try to settle them themselves, or failing that, resort to arbitration or adjudication by a mutually agreed special agency or an international organisation recognised by both Governments." The Prime Minister of Pakistan in a letter of the 21st November, 1950 to the Prime Minister of India inquired whether Pakistan could assume that the second tribunal would consist of an odd number of judges some of whom would be nationals neither of India nor of Pakistan". On the 24th November, 1950, the Prime Minister of India replied that his Government was not prepared to agree to this. He explained that the proposal of the Government of India was that if the court arrived at a stalemate, the two Governments should again try negotiation on the merits. If these negotiations again failed, the two Governments should again try to reach agreement on another court. But the Government of India would not agree in advance, he concluded, upon the second court.

6. The Prime Minister of Pakistan, in a letter of 27th November, 1950, made it perfectly clear that Pakistan could no longer seriously regard the proposal of 15th September, 1950, as an attempt to implement the agreement to adjudicate the dispute. The Prime Minister of India recognized that the proposal was regarded as inadequate when he stated in his letter of the 11th December, 1950:—

   “I can only regret that you should still think that the tribunal we have suggested would not serve any useful purpose”. Yet, the Government of India, in their Note under reference represent that “the Government of India are still awaiting the acceptance by the Government of Pakistan of the proposal made on the 15th September, 1950”.

   The Government of India have long been on notice that the Government of Pakistan are ready to accept the International Court of Justice or any other court that is not less impartial or effective, but that a tribunal constituted so as to promote a deadlock cannot be accepted as implementation of the agreement to adjudicate this dispute.

7. Until the dispute is adjudicated, it is essential that the parties should refrain from acting as though their contentions had already been held by an impartial tribunal to be well-founded. With this in mind, the High Commission invite attention to the plea in their note No. F.62(4)P/51-915 of 31st March, 1951 that the Government of India, pending adjudication of the dispute, respect the status quo at partition by ending all interferences with Pakistan’s pre-partition share of the common supplies and by suspending construction of the Irrigation Projects in India that would decrease Pakistan’s share.

The High Commission avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the Government of India, the assurances of their highest consideration.

Note from High Commission for Pakistan in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, March 31, 1951.

No. F. 62(4) P/51-915 March 31, 1951

The High Commission for Pakistan in India present their compliments to the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi, and with reference to their Note No. D.1056- Pak. III/51, dated the 9th February 1951 and previous communications exchanged (Indian Note No.D.3379-Pak-III/50 dt. 18-4-50) in connection with irrigation water dispute, have the honour to state as follows:—

2. It is with profound concern that the Government of Pakistan learn of the decision of the Government of India to continue their interferences with Pakistan’s pre-partition share of water common to the two countries. Pakistan has repeatedly requested the resumption of its supplies withheld in part in certain of the main canals of the Central Bari Doab system and withheld altogether from other canals in that system and from the Bahawalpur State Distributary. It is regretted that, in rejecting the Pakistan’s requests, the Government of India ignore Pakistan’s agreement to pay its share of the actual maintenance cost of these international channels no less than in the case of the Dipalpur canal; they ignore Pakistan’s agreement to adjudication of every issue in dispute by the International Court of Justice or any other impartial and effective tribunal. India chooses to propose; and they also ignore the escrow credit established by Pakistan to protect India’s claims for seigniorage with regard to all of these channels. The credit guarantees payment to India of the full amount of India’s claims upon the direction of the International Court or any other impartial and effective tribunal acceptable to India.

3. The consequences of the Government of India’s decision to continue their interferences (apart from the announcement of India’s intention to increase its interferences) are so serious that the Government of Pakistan are moved once more urgently to request the Government of India to reconsider their decision and to issue orders to assure that Pakistan’s share in the common waters, authorised and existing at the time of the partition will flow pending adjudication of India’s claims and respective water rights of the two countries.

The High Commission avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the Government of India the assurances of their highest consideration.

Ministry of External Affairs,
Government of India
New Delhi
The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, present their compliments to the Pakistan High Commission in India, and with reference to their Note No. F.62(4)P/51-915, dated the 31st March, 1951 and Note No. F.62(4)P/51-1340, dated the 10th May, 1951 have the honour to state as follows:

2. The Government of India are unable to understand the Pakistan Government’s repeated allegations that the Government of India have interfered and are continuing to interfere with supplies of water to the Pakistan canals, when in fact supplies are being continued in accordance with the Agreement of 4th May, 1948. As has been stated by the Government of India, more than once this Agreement furnishes the only proper and legal basis on which Pakistan can claim, and India can supply, water to these canals.

3. In their note dated the 31st March, 1951, the Government of Pakistan refer to "the resumption of supplies withheld in part in certain of the main canals of the Central Bari Doab System". These are presumably the same as the tail reaches of the eight minor distributaries particulars of which were given in the Pakistan High Commission’s Note dated the 4th February, 1950. According to that Note, the authorised full supply discharge at the border of all these minor channels and water-courses totaled no more than 45.81 cusecs, and the Note itself correctly referred to them as “channels”. The Government of India have no reason to think that what were petty channels, belonging mostly to cultivators, on the 4th February 1950 have or have been, developed into "main canals" of the Central Bari Doab System within the last 15 months. However, that may be the position in regard to these tail ends of channels has already been fully explained in this Ministry’s Note dated the 18th April, 1950, and it is unnecessary to repeat the contents of that Note.

4. The position in regard to the Bahawalpur State Distributary has also been explained more than once. As in the case of the Central Bari Doab and the Dipalpur canal systems, there can be no question of maintaining a so-called status quo ante partition. After 15th August, 1947 Pakistan could claim supplies from India only by virtue of specific agreements entered into after that date. It has in fact received water in these canals, first under the Standstill Agreement of 20th December, 1947 which had effect up to the 31st March, 1948, and then under the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May, 1948. If Pakistan desires to receive supplies in the Bahawalpur State Distributary it could only be on the basis of a fresh agreement between the two countries, either ad hoc or as a supplement to the Agreement of 4th May 1948. The Government of India have expressed more than once their willingness to negotiate such an agreement but there has been no proposal from Pakistan in that behalf.

5. In para. 2 of their Note dated the 31st March, 1951 the Government of Pakistan have charged the Government of India with “ignoring” several matters, but the most surprising of these is the charge of ignoring “the escrow credit established by Pakistan to protect India’s claims for seigniorage”. Such an escrow credit was undoubtedly established by Pakistan under para. 5 of the Agreement of 4th May, 1948, in regard to the waters supplied by East Punjab to the Central Bari Doab and the Dipalpur canals in West Punjab. Far from ignoring this arrangement which has been in full force in respect of the period from 4th May, 1948, to 30th June, 1950, the Government of India have strongly protested against Pakistan’s attempt at a unilateral alteration in that arrangement, vide this Ministry’s Express letter No. F.8-1/49-Pak.III, dated the 16th December, 1950, to which in spite of reminders no reply has been given by the Government of Pakistan.

6. The Government of India affirm, once more, their resolve to carry out their obligations under the Agreement of 4th May, 1948, and trust that the Government of Pakistan will similarly carry out, in the interest of peace and good neighbourly relations, their part of the obligations under this agreement and thus recognise the sanctity of international agreements. It is incumbent on Pakistan to continue to follow the escrow arrangements as established under the Agreement of 4th May, 1948 and to instruct the West Punjab Government to deposit immediately the disputed sums under the Agreement in the Reserve Bank of India as requested in Government of India’s letter dated the 16th December, 1950 and subsequent reminders on that subject. The Agreement of 4th May, 1948, it may be added, clearly lays down the procedure for, and the basis of a final settlement, and the sooner the Government of Pakistan gives effect to its relevant provisions, the sooner will it be possible to reach final settlement.

7. In paragraph 2 of their Note dated the 10th May, 1951, the Government of Pakistan state: “The two countries have however agreed to adjudicate the dispute”. Apparently, this refers to the proposal made by the Government of India in Note No. IHC.21-Poll/49-VII, dated the 15th September, 1950 from the High Commission for India in Pakistan. If so, the proposal must be read in its context, as a whole. A reference to paragraph 7 of the Government of India’s Note dated the 15th September 1950 will show that the Government of India attach great importance to “the paramount urgency to settle the question of evacuee property. The continued failure to do so merely prolongs the sufferings of millions of refugees and the passions engendered by a sustained sense of frustration and grievance inevitably have an adverse effect on the maintenance of friendly relations between India and Pakistan”. Since the repeated efforts of the Government of India to arrive at a final settlement of the evacuee property problem had not met with an adequate response from the Government of Pakistan, “in order to ensure a speedy solution of this problem, the Government of India consider that it be referred immediately for decision to a tribunal........ An ad hoc tribunal, working in the Sub-continent, could apply itself at once to the solution of both the problems, namely the problem of evacuee property and the dispute over canal waters”.

8. The Government of India assume that the term “irrigation water dispute” used in paragraph 2 of the High Commission’s Note dated 10th May, 1951 and the term “disputed” used thereafter in that Note mean the dispute over canal waters mentioned above, regarding which the Governments of India and Pakistan have already entered into an agreement on the 4th May, 1948. They wish to point out the fairly obvious fact that matters on which the two Governments have already come to an agreement cannot be called matters in dispute. If Pakistan would not continue to deny the binding force of the Agreement of May 4th, 1948, there would hardly be any serious matter of dispute between the two countries for the solution of which they have not already agreed upon the procedure for and the basis of a final settlement.

9. The Ministry avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of their highest consideration.

2435.  Note from High Commission for Pakistan in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, June 22, 1951.

No. F. 62 (4)P/51-1785  June 22, 1951

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents their compliments to the Government to India, Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi, and with reference to their Express Letter No. D.2396-Pak. III/51, dated the 31st March, 1951, have the honour to state as follows:-

2.  The Express letter crossed the note of this High Commission of the same date requesting again the cessation of all interferences by India with Pakistan’s share of the common water supplies. The Government of India have, in their Express letter, given their assurance only as to the supplies receivable through the Dipalpur and Central Bari Doab Canals, and the assurance even as to those supplies is restricted to Kharif 1951 and subject to other unwarranted limitations. The Government of India are aware that the proposed limitations are not acceptable to Pakistan.

3.  The Government of Pakistan have made known their position as to the claim of the Government of India of a right to require the deposit in the Reserve Bank of India of disputed amounts. If the Government of India has a legal right to the amounts in dispute, they may collect them under the Escrow credit established by Pakistan for that purpose. While it is believed that there is no basis for the Indian demand that amounts in dispute should be deposited, the Government of Pakistan are nevertheless willing to establish an Escrow credit for the year beginning 1st July, 1951, similar to the one now established for the year ending 30th June 1951 if the Government of India request it. Likewise the Government of Pakistan are prepared to extend to June 30th, 1952, the availability of Escrow credit established for the year ending June 30th, 1951, if Government of India request that.

4.  The Government of Pakistan will, of course continue paying their share of the actual maintenance cost of the international canals as they have done in the past. The amounts for the quarters ending the 31st March, 1951, and 30th June, 1951, have been provided for in full, subject to the usual adjustment. The sum of Rs.2,72,600/-, which the Government of the Punjab (India) have asserted is owing for the quarter ending the 31st March, 1951, has been met by establishing credits in the amounts of Rs. 2,62,966/-, and Rs. 600/- in the Reserve Bank of India and by crediting the Punjab (India) with the balance of Rs.9,034/- in settlement of the amount owing by the Punjab (India) with respect to its share of the maintenance and interest charges on the right marginal bund at Ferozepore. A sum of Rs.9,28,000/- requested by the Government of India in their Express letter, under reference, for the quarter ending 30th June, 1951, has also been remitted.

5. The Government of India in their Express letter mention the grave concern with which they view the continuance of the disagreement over matters incidental to the basic dispute. They intimate that unless Pakistan accepts conditions which they know are not acceptable, those water supplies that were restored in May, 1948, may again be cut off as they were in April, 1948.

6. The proper subject of concern is the effect of the existing diversions and of the threat by India of progressively increasing diversions upon the precarious peace in the Indo-Pakistan sub-continent. The Government of India are aware of the importance of irrigation supplies to a country as arid as West Pakistan. Nothing could be better calculated to disrupt the peace than for India to continue taking by force supplies that the zones to which they have been allocated cannot do without. The situation is seriously aggravated when accompanied with the threat forcibly to take still further supplies vital to Pakistan.

7. In this situation the proper course for each side is clear. The parties should submit their contentions immediately to a tribunal that is already established and functioning, and is capable of settling the differences promptly, impartially and effectively. To this end, the Government of Pakistan have repeatedly requested that the Government of India join them in submitting the dispute to the International Court of Justice. Until the rights of the parties are established by such adjudication, each must respect the shares of water authorized for the other before the dispute began and remove the threat of future interference by suspending the construction of every project that would decrease the supplies authorized to the other side.

8. The High Commission avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the Government of India the assurances of their highest consideration.

2436. Note from Ministry of External Affairs to High Commission for Pakistan in India.

New Delhi, September 18, 1951.

No. F. 6 (1)-Pak.III/51 September 18, 1951

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India present their compliments to be Pakistan High Commission in India and with reference to their Note No. F.62(4)/P-1785, dated the 22nd June, 1951 have the honour to state as follows:

2. The High Commission’s note mentioned above refers only to this Ministry’s Express letter No. D. 2396-Pak. III/51, dated the 31st March, 1951 and makes no mention of this Ministry’s subsequent note on the subject, No. F. 6(1)-Pak. III/51 which was sent to the High Commission on the 13th June, 1951, i.e., 9 days before the despatch of the High Commission’s note referred to above. It has become necessary to point this out as most of the issues raised in the High Commission’s note of the 22nd June had already been dealt with clearly and precisely in this Ministry’s note of the 13th June, 1951. The Government of India are indeed surprised that a further note dealing with the same issues should have been sent by the High Commission without taking into account the views already expressed by the Government of India in the note.

3. As the Government of Pakistan are well aware and as has been clearly stated in paragraph 2 of this Ministry’s note of the 13th June, 1951, the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of 4th May, 1948 is the only basis in International Law for canal water supplies from India to Pakistan and since the beginning of May, 1948 all supplies to the Central Bari Doab and Dipalpur Canals have been made in terms of that Agreement. The continuance of supplies by India to these canals during Kharif, 1951 is strictly in accordance with the terms of that Agreement. The Government of India have always implemented in full the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of May 4, 1948 and they categorically repudiate the allegation made in the High Commission’s note of the 22nd June, 1951 that they have imposed any “restrictions” or “unwarranted limitations” on the supplies contracted for in that Agreement.

4. The Government of India must also emphatically repudiate any suggestions that the carrier channels in India through which supplies have been given to Pakistan in accordance with the terms of the Indo-Pakistan Agreement are “International Canals”, as alleged in paragraph 4 of the note under reply. No such “International Canals” exist in Punjab (India). All canals, water works and in fact all other works of any nature whatsoever, situated in the territory of India and Pakistan vest wholly and completely in the country in which they are situate, without any liability or servitude whatsoever, except for such obligations as India and Pakistan have expressly undertaken through contractual agreements, and therefore in respect of the carrier channels and works related to such channels, the only obligations of the Government of India are those assumed by them under and in terms of the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of 4th May, 1948.

5. The Government of Pakistan are aware of the anxiety of the Government of India that all questions relating to the use of the waters of the rivers of the Indus basin should be finally settled in such manner as would promote the welfare and the continued development of both India and Pakistan. The total volume of waters of the Indus system of rivers is so large and the portion thereof utilised at present comparatively so small, that a practical solution to the questions mentioned above, would be the utilization of the surplus water, at present unused and running waste, towards the development of the areas dependant on them in both the countries. It was because it so happens that the major portion of these unused surplus waters lies in rivers which debouch into the plains within Pakistan and Pakistan is therefore more advantageously situated with regard to the utilization of the surplus at present being wasted, that the Government of Pakistan agreed in May, 1948 to the tapping by it of surplus waters in Pakistan territory and the Government of India agreed in turn, in regard to the Central Bari Doab Canal and the Dipalpur Canal, to diminish the supplies to these canals, which were and are badly needed for use in India itself, in progressive stages in order to give reasonable time to enable the West Punjab Government to tap alternative sources. It was in recognition of these basic facts and for the proper utilisation of these water resources in the best interests of both the countries that the Government of Pakistan had agreed on 4th May, 1948 to a technical survey of water resources with a view to tapping by Pakistan of alternative sources of supply. The Delhi Agreement of 4th May, 1948 therefore not only provides for the supply of water to the Central Bari Doab and Dipalpur canals of Pakistan during the interim period in accordance with the terms of that Agreement and for the gradual diminution of supplies by India to these two canals after tapping of alternative sources by Pakistan, in accordance with Clause 4 of that Agreement but also laid down the general basis and procedure on which the final settlement should take place. It is obvious and indisputable, as stated in this Ministry’s letter of the 13th June, 1951, that matters on which the two Governments have already come to an Agreement cannot be called matters in dispute. If the Government of Pakistan execute loyally and faithfully the treaty arrangements freely entered into in the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of May 4, 1948, which clearly lay down both the interim arrangements and the procedure for and the basis of a final settlement of the dispute, no dispute would remain, and there would be no need for any lengthy and complicated legal proceedings.

6. Similarly no difference would arise between the two Governments with regard to the modalities of the arrangements for payments laid down by the 4th May Agreement, if Pakistan were to observe faithfully and scrupulously the terms to that Agreement. It is not enough, as proposed in paragraph 4 of the High Commission note of the 22nd June, 1951, for the Government of Pakistan to pay merely “their share of the actual maintenance cost” of the carrier channels and connected works in India in connection with the supply of water by India to the Central Bari Doab and Dipalpur Canals in Pakistan in accordance with the terms of the 4th May Agreement. In paragraph 5 of that Agreement, Pakistan has undertaken “to deposit immediately in the Reserve Bank of India such ad hoc sums as may he specified by the Prime Minister of India” and to transfer out of this to East Punjab Government “sums over which there is no dispute”. It is incumbent on the Government of Pakistan to abide faithfully by the undertaking given in the International Agreement referred to above. The Government of India strongly repudiate the suggestion, made in paragraph 5 of the note under reply, that the Government of Pakistan are being asked to accept any new “conditions”. The Government of India cannot agree that their insistence on the loyal execution by Pakistan of freely entered treaty obligations can constitute any such “conditions”. Any arrangements for deposits in “escrow” not in accordance with the terms expressly agreed upon do not represent valid modes of payment and the Government of India formally and expressly reserve all their rights on this subject. It has been made clear in several earlier notes that the Government of India cannot and will not agree to any unilateral change by Pakistan in terms already agreed upon. Such changes can only be regarded as a violation of International obligations undertaken by Pakistan and a continuation of such violation would expose Pakistan to all the legal consequences of this violation including the discharge of India from their obligations under the Agreement.

7. Reference has been made in paragraph 5 of the note under reply to the grave concern with which the Government of India view the continuance of disagreement over matters which the note describes as “incidental to the basic dispute”. The Government of India are entirely unable to agree that the continued failure of the Punjab (P) Government to deposit the charges in accordance with the 4th May Agreement can be brushed aside as a trifling disagreement over an incidental matter. The resolution of the dispute in the best interests of both the countries requires that both the parties to that Agreement should continue to fulfill faithfully all obligations accepted by them under the Indo-

8. In paragraph 6 of the now under reply, reference has been made to the alleged taking by India by force of certain supplies and to “the threat forcibly to take still further supplies vital to Pakistan”. The note also implies obliquely that action taken or to be taken by the Government of India constitutes some sort of threat to the peace of this sub-continent. The Government of India are, extremely surprised at these distortions of facts and the incorrect assumptions on which these allegations are based. Apart from the obvious fact that the use by a country of its own resources within its own territory cannot possibly be interpreted as use of force, they would point out that their letter of the 31st March, 1951, the Government of India made no mention of any cutting off of the supplies being given to Pakistan in accordance with the 4th May Agreement. In fact any suggestion of a sudden discontinuation of such supplies is clearly in contradiction of the express engagement made by India in the Delhi Agreement that a sudden withdrawal of these supplies would not be made, and the Government of India have repeatedly declared their resolve to discharge faithfully all their obligations under that Agreement, so long as Pakistan also continues to execute that Agreement loyally. It has been made clear earlier this note that the Government of India have neither made, nor have they any intention of making, unilaterally any change in their obligations under the Delhi Agreement. It is clear therefore that so long as Pakistan continues to execute faithfully the Agreement of 4th May, 1948, no possible danger of a sudden withdrawal of waters from the Dipalpur and Central Bari Doab Canals can possibly exist or arise. Any violation by Pakistan of the terms of that Agreement alone can expose Pakistan to the legal consequences of that violation including the discharge of India from her obligation under the Agreement. In this eventuality Pakistan could not complain of the results of its own treaty violations. If Pakistan’s violations of her obligations under the Agreement lead to consequences which Pakistan does not like and Pakistan thereon attempts to take recourse to force, surely the responsibility for a threat to the peace of this sub-continent must rest squarely on the shoulders of Pakistan and not on those of India which continues and will continue, in all good faith, to discharge her treaty obligations.

9. As has been clearly demonstrated above, all questions relating to the waters of the rivers in the Indus basin have either been settled or could be settled in accordance with the terms of the Agreement of May 4, 1948 if both the countries loyally carry out their international obligations under that Agreement. The present differences have arisen only because Pakistan is unilaterally attempting to repudiate its own obligations under that Agreement by violations of the Agreement and by allegations of its initial voidness or its subsequent termination. The Government of India cannot recognise such unilateral repudiation of International obligation nor can they subscribe to the view that unilateral violations of an international treaty can confer on the offending party any rights over and above or different from the rights given to it by that treaty. The Government of India would again cordially invite the Government of Pakistan to a full implementation by both parties of their obligations under the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of 4th May, 1948. Should, however, the Government of Pakistan have any doubts regarding the binding character of this Agreement, the proper course would be for them to seek a judicial decision from an impartial international authority on the question of the validity of this Agreement. In case the Government of Pakistan desire to follow this course, the Government of India, while reserving all their rights including those flowing from the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of 4th May, 1948 and from violations by Pakistan of the terms of that Agreement, would be willing to discuss the procedure for such adjudication.

10. Until such time as the Government of Pakistan express their desire for an adjudication on the validity of the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of 4th May, 1948, the Government of India must presume that in accordance with international practice the Government of Pakistan will continue to adhere to and carry out their obligations under that Agreement. In that Agreement, Pakistan had recognized the natural anxiety of India to discharge its obligations to develop areas where water was scarce. The Government of Pakistan were to have reasonable time to enable them to tap alternative sources and a progressive diminution of the water to be supplied by India to the Central Bari Doab and Dipalpur canals was to take place for use within India. The Government of India are of the opinion that during the three years and more that have elapsed since the Agreement of 4th May, 1948, there has been a reasonable time for the Government of Pakistan to tap alternative sources and that the time has therefore come for a gradual diminution of the water to be supplied by India. The Government of India understand, although they have not received any information from the Pakistan Government, that the Government of Punjab (Pak) have already carried out and completed schemes whereby alternative sources of water have been tapped and arrangements made for the use of these alternative waters in the Central Bari Doab Canal. The Government of India would be grateful if the Government of Pakistan would furnish them with the detailed and technical information with a view to laying down a programme for the progressive reduction in the supplies made to this canal from India, so as not to affect in any way the protection given to the Government of Pakistan during the interim period by virtue of India's obligation not to withdraw the supplies suddenly. They would also be grateful if the Government of Pakistan would communicate their own suggestions regarding the stages in this programme and the reduction to be effected at each stage. Since the Government of India understand that the alternative supplies tapped by Punjab (P) in accordance with the Agreement are sufficient to meet the major portion of the requirements of the Central Bari Doab Canal, they hope that the programme to be laid down for the progressive diminution can be so laid down and operated as not to cause any inconvenience or difficulty to Punjab (P) and at the same time make available to the arid areas in India the supplies needed by them at as early a date as possible.

11. With regard to the Dipalpur canal, since this canal is non-perennial, in the ordinary course of events no supplies of water would fall due from India under the 4th May Agreement in respect of the Rabi Crop. The Government of India would however be grateful if the Government of Pakistan would kindly give them information as to the steps that have been taken by the Government of West Punjab or the Government of Pakistan with a view to tap alternative sources to meet the supplies required by this canal. The Government of India understand that the scheme which has already been carried out to give alternative supplied to the Central Bari Doab Canal, has sufficient capacity also to give the required supplies during the Kharif season to the Dipalpur canal. The Government of India would be grateful if this presumption is confirmed. The Government of India would also be grateful if the Government of Pakistan intimate their programme for the progressive reduction of supplies to this canal at as early a date as possible.

12. With regard to paragraph 4 of the note under reply, the Government of India have no objection to the ultimate deduction of any sum spent by Punjab (P) on behalf of Punjab (I) with respect to the latter’s share of maintenance and interest charges for the Right Marginal Bund at Ferozepore. But it is necessary before actually making the adjustment to have the charges verified by that Government. It is requested that necessary action may be taken towards a final adjustment of the sum of Rs. 9,034 less paid by Pakistan for the quarter ending 31st March, 1951.

13. The Ministry take the opportunity to renew the assurances of their highest consideration.

2437. Note from the Pakistan High Commission in India to the Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, March 29, 1952.

Office of the High Commissioner for Pakistan in India
New Delhi

No. F. 62(4)/52 - 966. 29th March, 1952.

The High Commission for Pakistan in India present their compliments to the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi, and with reference to those communications of the Government of India regarding the irrigation water dispute to which replies have in the past months been withheld, including the communications numbered F.6- (1)PakIII/51, dated the 13th June, 1951, and 18th September, 1951, Express letters numbered F.6(1)– Pak III/51, dated the 25th June, 1951, and 31st December, 1951, and express letter No. D-6803-Pak.III/51 dated the 26th September, 51, and No. F.6-Pak.III/51, dated the 15th March, 1952, have the honour to state as follows.

2. For some time the Government of Pakistan have had under consideration communications from the President of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development tendering the good offices of the Bank in working out a plan for the cooperative development of the water resources of the Indus Basin in accordance with the proposal of David E. Lilienthal published on 4th August, 1951. The Government of Pakistan were informed that letters in similar terms have been sent by the President of the International Bank to the Prime Minister of India and that the Government of India were likewise giving the proposal and the Bank’s offer their serious and sympathetic consideration. As an essential feature of the Lilienthal proposal is the avoidance of unnecessary controversy, the Government of Pakistan concluded that they should withhold during the period, when both Governments were considering the letters from the International Bank, further direct correspondence on the waters dispute.

3. By a letter dated 13th March, 1952, the President of the International Bank has confirmed that both sides have agreed to go forward on the basis of the Lilienthal proposal. Designees of each side and of the Bank are to meet beginning in early May to undertake the important task that has been entrusted to them. Under these circumstances and while the two Governments are using the good offices of the International Bank, the Government of Pakistan are of the view that there should be no direct correspondence dealing with past controversies in the waters dispute. It is understood, of course, that neither side will be prejudiced through its willingness to let the direct correspondence rest where it stands.
4. The question of reimbursement of actual costs of maintenance of installations of common benefits has at no time been a matter of controversy. The Government of Pakistan are informed by the Government of Punjab (P) that all “undisputed charges” have been met. The Chief Engineer, Irrigation Works, of the Punjab (P) is prepared to discuss with his counterpart in the Government of the Punjab (I) the accounting details and any appropriate adjustments.

The High Commission take the opportunity to renew to the Government of India the assurance of their highest consideration.

The Ministry of External Affairs,
Govt. of India, New Delhi.

2438. Note from the High Commission for India in Pakistan to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

High Commissioner for India

The High Commission for India in Pakistan present their compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations of the Government of Pakistan and with reference to Note No. F.62(4)P/52-966, dated 29th March, 1952 from the High Commissioner for Pakistan in India to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, have the honour to state as follows.

2. As stated in the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs note No.F.6(1)–Pak III/51, dated 18th September, 1951, the Government of India are anxious that all questions relating to the use of waters of the Indus Basin should be settled in such a manner as would promote the welfare and continued development of both India and Pakistan. The Government of India have, therefore, accepted the invitation of the International Bank for Reconstruction & Development to designate an engineer to the Working Party and to depute him to the Bank’s Washington office to participate in the initial meeting of the party on 7th May, 1952. The Government of India, however, are not aware that, as contended in the High Commission’s note referred to above, “both sides have agreed to go forward on the basis of the Lilienthal proposal”, on the contrary, whilst it is true that the proposal regarding the forthcoming negotiations arose out of Mr. Lilienthal’s article, the letter dated 13th March, 1952, from the President of the International Bank clearly indicates that the Working Party is not bound by any rigidly fixed terms of reference.

3. The Government of India agree that all unnecessary controversy should be avoided, the more so while the Working Party is engaged in its task. But they do not consider that the correspondence relating to the fulfillment by the Governments of India and Pakistan of their treaty obligations under the agreement of 4th May, 1948, can be classed as such “unnecessary controversy”. The Government of India trusts that the forthcoming negotiations will culminate in an agreement which has as its ultimate objective the carrying out in India and Pakistan of specific engineering measures for the most effective utilization of the water resources of the Indus Basin in such a way as to make a maximum contribution to the development of the two countries. It is, however, obvious that the envisaged negotiations do not imply any suspension of the Delhi Agreement of the 4th May, 1948, even for the duration of these negotiations. India will, therefore, continue to supply to Pakistan canals water which she is obliged to deliver only under this agreement, and she is certainly justified in expecting that the Government of Pakistan would also fulfill their part of these treaty obligations until a new agreement has been reached which would take the place of Delhi Agreement. Meanwhile, the Government of India must expressly reserve all rights both with regard to the non-fulfillment in the past of Pakistan’s obligations under this agreement and with regard to any further delay in her fulfillment of those obligations.

4. The High Commission take the opportunity to renew to the Government of Pakistan the assurances of their highest consideration.

New Delhi, January 11, 1953.

For the last two or three months or even more, we have had a barrage of propaganda and complaints in Pakistan about our cutting off or reducing canal waters, which go to Pakistan from India. Whenever I have seen this, I have enquired what the facts were because I know nothing about our doing any such thing. It is an extraordinary thing that all my enquiries have not elicited a satisfactory response yet. Vague answers have been sent. Sometimes we have been told that enquiry is being made from the Punjab Government. Later we are told that nothing has been done contrary to the Agreement arrived at in May 1948. Now there is nothing in that Agreement, this way or that way, about this matter. Again it was hinted that something is being done here in accordance with some previous Agreement between engineers from the two countries. That Agreement has no validity as it was denounced by Pakistan immediately after. We can have no action whatever on that Agreement.

2. From all this it appears rather vaguely that the canal water supply to Pakistan by us has been reduced in quantity. To what extent, I do not know. I have been told that even according to the engineers’ agreement, the reduction made has been greater.

3. Who is responsible for all this curious state of affairs? The canal waters issue is one of the major issues between India and Pakistan. Almost daily there is reference to it in Pakistan. It is connected, unjustifiably, with the Kashmir issue and, indeed, with all our relations with Pakistan. This is not a matter to be dealt with on the official level at all by any officer of the Ministry or any engineer.

On 8 November 1952, the Punjab Provincial Muslim League at a conference in Lyallpur passed a resolution calling upon the Pakistan Government to take steps against Indian interference in supply of waters to West Punjab. On 15 December, the Civil and Military Gazette also alleged reduction of water supplies to the canals running into Pakistan. The Dawn on 3 January 1953 also complained of reduction in canal water supplies resulting in a shortfall in wheat production. On 17 December, an enquiry was made by the Prime Minister’s Office from the Ministry of Irrigation and Power regarding complaint appearing in the Civil and Military Gazette on 15 December about reduction of canal waters by India. Similar enquiry was again made on 9 January 1953.

On December 19, 1952, Commonwealth Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs B.F.H.B. Tyabji, had in a note to Prime Minister Nehru, inter alia suggested that “…any attempts to benefit from our control of the Punjab rivers at the expense of the West Pakistan agriculturists would be against principles guiding Indian foreign policy,” and considering the implications of the questions in our relations with Pakistan he suggested that the canal waters dispute be dealt with at the highest level in the Ministry of External Affairs and not by the East Punjab Government.
The political consequences are far too serious. I am gravely concerned about it and I have a strong feeling that the officers in your Ministry have been acting in an improper way in dealing with this matter. I therefore want you to find out exactly who is responsible for these various decisions and when were they taken and what was the result. It is almost extraordinary thing that I should go on for weeks and months asking for definite replies about facts and that these should not be forthcoming. Meanwhile, I have made statements in public, in Parliament, etc. denying the fact that we are cutting off canal waters. I am thus put in a most embarrassing position. Will you please enquire into this?

You were good enough to write to me a letter dated 28th January in which you referred to various points to which I have been giving careful attention. I was hoping to send you an answer soon. Meanwhile, I have been astonished to see an intensive propaganda being carried on in Pakistan on the canal waters issue accusing India of deliberately following a policy to cause deep injury to Pakistan by withholding canal waters. Charges have been made not only in the public press but also by responsible Minister that we are cutting off canal waters supply to Pakistan. While this propaganda has been going on for some time and we have drawn the attention of your Government to it, so far as I know, no official complaint has been made to our Government. Indeed after full enquiry I have found that the complaints referred to in the public press... have no substance. There has been no question of our cutting off canal waters supply, and certain diminution has been due on both sides to local causes like drought. In any event it is very extraordinary that such propaganda should be carried on without even any reference to us on the subject. It is still more surprising that this should be done at a moment when engineers designated by our two Governments are jointly investigating the problem in cooperation with World Bank officials and have made some progress in their investigations.

I now find that the Pakistan Government has issued an official handout on this subject. I have not seen this yet but from reference to it in a number of Pakistan newspapers it appears that this handout contains statements which are very far removed from facts and makes totally unfounded accusations against India. I must express my great regret that this policy should be followed by the Pakistan Government when it has been our joint desire to promote better understanding between our two countries. You will agree that it is difficult to bridge the gaps which unfortunately separate us when constant attempts are made in Pakistan to widen them.

2441. Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Chief Minister of East Punjab Bhimsen Sachar.

New Delhi March 18, 1953.

My dear Sachar,

I have written to you previously about the dispute with Pakistan in regard to the supply of water to West Punjab from East Punjab. I have been greatly exercised over this matter for some months past. Repeatedly I tried to get at facts but somehow facts have eluded me. Any number of senior officers have considered this matter at length. Letters have been sent to the Punjab Government and the Punjab engineers. The International Bank has come into the picture and generally an impression has been created that we have not kept to our word and our assurance in this matter.

This was bad enough at any time. It is much worse when a third party like the International Bank is concerned. What has troubled me greatly is the difficulty in getting at the facts. I have written several strong notes about it and suggested that the persons responsible for this mess ought to be dealt with fairly severely.
After much enquiry, we have found that the right proportion from the Ferozepore head-works for Pakistan canals should have been 79 per cent of the divisible supplies. Against this, the supply actually made in the Rabi sowing season of 1952, i.e., from October 16 to December 5, 1952 was 69 per cent and that for the Rabi sowing season i.e., from December 5, 1952 to February 12, 1953, was 72 per cent. This was an appreciable reduction over a long period. During this period, constant complaints were received by us and passed on to the Punjab authorities. I wrote numerous letters and notes. Nevertheless, this reduction continued.

I can only conclude that this reduction was not accidental, but was deliberate. I do not know who was responsible for it, but I am given to understand that this was done under orders from some high authorities in the Punjab.

This is a very serious matter involving our honour and our reputation and we shall have to go into this very thoroughly. We have also to make sure of the future and we can afford to take no risks whatever.

In fact, the International Bank has actually suggested keeping one of their own engineers there to watch. We may not agree to this, but it is a grave reflection on our bona fides. You will be coming here soon and I shall meet you. I am writing to you to keep you informed of what the situation is.

Yours sincerely,

Jawaharlal Nehru

Shri Bhimsen Sachar,
Chief Minister, East Punjab, Simla.
Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Minister of Irrigation and Power Gulzarilal Nanda.

My Dear Gulzarilal,

After our long conference this morning on the canal waters issue, we settled what should be said to the International Bank people on our behalf. We also decided that we should have some representative of the Central Government to keep in close touch with the supply of water, etc., to Pakistan from East Punjab*.

There are two aspects of this question, however, which continue to trouble me. We are told that some local people in charge of the head-works were responsible for reducing supplies for Pakistan. It is hinted also that, possibly, some Punjab Ministers encouraged them to do so. Even accepting this, the fact remains how and why our Central supervision was so slack that this could have happened for any length of time, more especially when there was a loud agitation going on in Pakistan and I was constantly asking for facts. This can only mean that there is not enough Central contact. Apparently all that our people here did was to write messages to the Punjab Government or the Punjab engineers. This shows a complete lack of awareness of seriousness of this business. The least that could have been done was for someone immediately to go there and enquire personally and report and put matters right if necessary.

It is not very easy in dealing with these complicated figures for different canals and for different periods to make out one thing or the other. In order to understand the position, one has to delve much more deeply into this business. It has taken you a long time and a great deal of labour to find out the facts, such as they are. But it should not have been difficult for a person fully acquainted with this problem to do so with fair rapidity. I gather that Gulhati has been intimately connected with this throughout and he knows all about it. Why then should he not have known what was happening or not, have intervened as soon as his attention was drawn to it?

* It was decided to reject the World Bank’s proposal to post its engineers at various points on the Ravi and Sutlej in order to watch the regulation of canal water supplies between India and Pakistan. To prevent any over-zealous officials in East Punjab from meddling with regulation of water supplies, the Government of India decided to appoint a special commissioner for canal waters to ensure against any such lapse. The Ministry of Irrigation and Power, for the first time, scrutinized the deliveries of water made to Pakistan from 1948 to the middle of January 1953. Until then it was understood to be a matter for the East Punjab Government to deal with and it was entirely left to them. The scrutiny revealed that East Punjab local officials in charge of regulation of canal waters did not have any clear-cut instructions for day-to-day water supplies and hence there were short supplies to Pakistan canals since the Rabi sowing season of 1952.
Some of Gulhati’s answers at our conference today struck me as not only vague, but thrown out on the spur of the moment without full responsibility. Thus, he said that the new canals that Pakistan has dug could have been used to supply the water deficiency. Now, that was a very important statement. When we cross-examined him a little further, the statement was watered down considerably and ultimately meant nothing much. That is not the type of answer one would accept from a responsible person.

Gulhati appears to me to be a competent officer and he has devoted a good deal of time during the last three or four years to this issue of canal waters. He ought to know this from A to Z. Indeed, he has shown so much enthusiasm about it that sometimes I have a feeling that he has ceased to be objective.

There is another question and that is about certain proposals to build new dams or canals or tunnels on our side. It seems to me that these are put across rather casually, regardless of their implications, financial or other. Possibly, these matters may be raised at the meetings with the International Bank and some kind of commitments made. We have to be careful about that.

The result of all this is to produce a sense of uncertainty in my mind about what takes place in these head-works and canals in East Punjab. I feel that I cannot fully rely upon the statements made by some of our engineers. I do not mean to say that they intend to delude us in any way, but they appear to have a tendency to emphasize some aspects and to ignore the others and thus we did not get a full picture which should enable us to judge what is happening or what should be done. It is important that we should have reliable reports. Therefore, some procedure has to be devised for this purpose.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru
Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Minister of Irrigation and Power Gulzarilal Nanda.

New Delhi, April 26, 1953.

My dear Gulzarilal,

On my return to Delhi this evening. I have received your letter of April 25 about the Bhakra Canals etc.

When we agreed to the standstill clause contained in Black’s letter of 13th March 1952, we made it perfectly clear that this was for a relatively short period. I forget what the actual words were, but I think that there was some reference to these talks with the Bank being concluded within a short period of time. Anyhow, this fact was made quite clear to Black in my correspondence with him as well as orally.

We cannot agree to a continuation of this standstill agreement beyond the date when, in the normal course, we can use the Bhakra canals, that is, beyond April 1954. That is the final date. In effect we should get rid of this restriction before that.

If our talks lead to an agreement in September next, this question does not arise. If they do not lead to an agreement, it must be made perfectly clear then that we are not bound by this standstill clause in view of the Bhakra canal system being ready for use next year. We shall, however, always try to accommodate Pakistan to the best of our ability, but it is essential that they should realise that our demands for the water will be much greater from April 1954 onwards.

Therefore our representatives must have the clearest instructions in this matter. It would be desirable. I think, that Black should be told informally if necessary about this position even before the September meetings. Our representatives in the Bank, B.K. Nehru, should be informed of this, so that Black may not say that we are springing a surprise upon him at a late stage. This gives Pakistan also more time to make such arrangements as may be considered necessary for alternative supplies for their use.

It is likely that we shall have talks with Pakistan on a number of issues in the near future. I am likely to meet the Prime Minister of Pakistan. But probably this meeting will not take place before I go to London. I shall certainly speak about this matter to him. When I go to London, a short brief on this subject should be given to me or preferably to N.R. Pillai (Secretary General of the MEA) who will be accompanying me. I do not want a multitude of papers because obviously I am not going to discuss anything in detail with the Pakistan Prime Minister. Probably early next month there will be a meeting of officials, Indian and Pakistan, in Delhi to discuss various matters. I do not quite know what the agenda is and who will come for that meeting. The canal water issue will not be on the agenda. But it might be desirable, subject to other developments, for N.R. Pillai to have a talk with the Pakistani officials about this aspect of the canal waters issue.

Yours sincerely,

Jawaharlal Nehru

Eugene Black, President of the World Bank, had proposed that the Governments of India and Pakistan should make a joint technical survey of the Indus basin, and had stated that the World Bank would be happy to extend the assistance, financial or technical, necessary for such a survey. He further suggested that so long as cooperative work continued with the participation of the Bank, “neither side will take any action to diminish (water) supplies available to the other side for existing uses.” Since no agreement could be arrived at on the World Bank plan of 5 February 1954, India opened the Bhakra canal system on 8 July 1954.
Press Note issued by the Ministry of External Affair on the question of supply of canal waters to Pakistan.

New Delhi, November 13, 1953.

The Government of India regret to note that unsubstantiated accusations were recently made against India in the Pakistan Constituent Assembly about an alleged reduction of supply of water to Pakistan through the Central Bari Doab and the Sutlej Valley Canals in September and October, 1953. These have been examined by the Government of India’s Special Commissioner for Canal Waters and have been found to be baseless. The accusations have been made on the basis of errors due to wrong recording of supplies received by Pakistan authorities and the adoption of an incorrect ratio of distribution and of wrong periods for working out distribution.

In accordance with the practice prevalent in both countries, the crop season, both kharif and rabi, is divided into various main periods - sowing, growing and maturing. These periods are divided into sub-periods. Short supply in one sub-periods and excess in another is in the nature of things inevitable and has always been accepted as a normal occurrence; water accounts between the two countries are therefore balanced at the end of each main period. The kharif maturing period, both on the Sutlej Valley and Upper Bari Doab Canals, lasts from the 6th September to the 15th October; and the rabi sowing period from the 16th October to the 3rd December. Although the supplies given to Pakistan in kharif maturing period as a whole should have been considered before any conclusion was drawn, Pakistan authorities have erred by taking the figures of a sub-period during which supplies were less, and by not taking into account other sub-periods during which supplies were in excess. Taking the figures for the entire kharif maturing period, the balanced account shows that Pakistan received 60% excess supplies in the Sutlej Valley Canals, and only a negligible shortage of 1.45% in the Central Bari Doab Canal.

New Delhi, November 13, 1953.

[On November 10, 1953 Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru had also in a letter to Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Bogra gave the details of the supplies made to Pakistan in reply to a complaint made by him.]

World Bank’s Proposals on Canal Waters

1. The entire flow of the Western rivers—Indus, Jhelum, and Chenab would be available for exclusive use of Pakistan, except for a small volume from Jhelum for Kashmir.

2. The entire flow of the Eastern rivers—Ravi, Beas, Sutlej would be available for the exclusive use of India except that for a specified period, transitional in nature, India would supply to Pakistan withdrawals from these rivers, which would be calculated on the basis of the time estimated to be required to complete the link canals needed in Pakistan to make transfers for the purpose of replacing supplies from India.

3. Each country would construct works located on its territories, but the cost of Pakistan’s link canals mentioned above would be met by India.

Prime Minister Nehru’s comments:

I have read all these papers.

The President of the International Bank wrote to me a letter some time ago and sent me the International Bank’s full proposal regarding the use of canal waters by India and Pakistan. I passed on this letter to Commonwealth Secretary and the Ministry of Irrigation & Power. I am not quite sure if this letter has been acknowledged thus far. Obviously it has to be replied to by me. No reference is made in these papers as to what reply I should send. Presumably my reply would be similar to the reply that Mr. Khosla intends sending to General Wheeler.

As for the proposed reply by Mr. Khosla, I do not see why we should be asked to commit ourselves finally in regard to every particular, before Pakistan discloses its hand. Thus far they have said nothing. I should have thought it quite enough for us to say that we accept the general principles governing this proposal, but in drawing up any agreement on the basis of it, naturally careful drafting will be necessary and a number of relatively minor matters will have to be cleared up. If Pakistan also accepts the general principles of the proposal as we have done, then we can proceed to these details and to the drafting.

Some such reply should meet the situation without our rejecting it and without our accepting every small detail.

The reply can be sent, as suggested, round about the fourth week of March.
It has always been Pakistan's practice not to commit itself to anything and to get our commitment. The result is that the next stage of the basis of discussion is our commitment and their lack of commitment. Why should we be in this position?

I agree generally that we should not appear to reject in any way the Bank's proposal. But why should it be necessary for us to swallow every little bit of it wholesale at this stage?

(Regarding the Jhelum, the Bank proposal had provided for continued enjoyment by India of the uses already developed but no provision was made for any new irrigation development from this river in Indian territory. The proposal denied India the right to tap the Chenab in her territory as India was planning to withdraw waters of Chenab at Marhu and Merali.)

_Cable sent by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to President of the World Bank on March 19 in reply to his letter forwarding Wheeler's proposals:_

We have now examined the proposals of the International Bank for Development and use of Indus basin waters..... We welcome the Bank's attempt to help in the solution of this problem and, as suggested in your letter, we are prepared to accept generally the principles governing the Bank proposals as the basis of agreement.

Our delegation in the Indus Basin Working Party will formally indicate our attitude to the Bank proposals. The actual agreement, which will be worked out with the assistance of the Bank authorities, will naturally deal with a number of details including the question of the small requirement of Jammu and Kashmir. If Pakistan also agrees to accept the general principles governing the Bank proposals as the basis of agreement, we can go on to the next stage of considering details with the assistance of the Bank which you have so kindly offered.

A.N. Khosla was the Indian Designee to the Indus Basin Working Party. The formal Indian reply sent by A.N. Khosla to R.A. Wheeler on 25th March pointed out that if India gave up, as proposed, her intention to withdraw waters from Chenab at Marhu, some part of Rajasthan would remain desert forever. The financial burden imposed on India for paying the cost of link canals in Pakistan would cause serious blow to economicvelopment of the country but in the interest of a speedy and constructive settlement, India would accept the Bank proposals as the basis of agreement, to be worked out in detail, which should also safeguard existing uses of water within Jammu and Kashmir. Indian acceptance of the proposals was given with the expectation that Pakistan would also accept the same at an early date. It was also mentioned that regarding new projects in both countries expected to be opened shortly an _ad-hoc_ agreement about them might be reached.

2446. AIDE MEMOIRE from the Government of India to the Government of the United States.

New Delhi, February 8, 1954.

The attention of the Government of India has been drawn to a news item published in the Dawn of Karachi dated 28.12.53 referring to the 22 million Dollar aid under the T.C.A. Programme by the Government of U.S.A. to the Government of Pakistan for Pakistan’s economic development plans. Projects covered for the year ending June 30, 1954 include expenditure of 2.1 million Dollars on construction of the Taunsa Barrage in the Punjab. As will appear from the attached extracts from the Pakistani Press, the Taunsa Barrage is intended to be a gigantic multi-purpose project, the object of which is to withdraw substantial quantities of water from the Indus to bring under irrigation 14,00,000 to 17,50,000 acres of land in Muzaffargarh and Dera Ghazi Khan Districts.

It will be recalled that when the Government of India approached the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development in 1949 for a loan for the Bhakra Dam and the Nangal Project, the Bank represented to the Government of India that it “took note of the existence of a water dispute between India and Pakistan and expressed the view that the Bhakra Dam and the Nangal Project raised issues which were very material to this dispute.” When in 1951 the question arose of similar aid to Pakistan for the Lower Sind Barrage Project, the Bank likewise refrained from making a loan as such loan “would anticipate the ultimate settlement of the dispute” and “prejudice the terms of the final settlement.”

Substantial withdrawals from the Indus by means of the Taunsa Barrage for bringing large new areas under irrigation are, from the point of view of the Government of India, open to the same objection as in the case of the Lower Sind Barrage. The Government of India would therefore request the Government of the U.S.A. to refrain from giving aid for the execution of a project which would anticipate the ultimate settlement of the water dispute or which may have repercussions on or otherwise prejudice the terms of such a settlement. The Government of the U.S.A. are no doubt aware that the Indus Basin Working Party is engaged, under the auspices of the International Bank, in working out a Comprehensive Plan for the utilization of the Indus Basin water resources. The Government of India wish to state that while a decision on division of the total available water resources between India and Pakistan is still pending, any promise of aid to one party for the execution of a multi-purpose project affecting the water resources which form the subject of the Working Party’s investigations is likely to prejudice the negotiations which have been in progress in Washington since the 8th September, 1953.

U.S. AID PUTS ACCENT ON AGRICULTURE

With the signing today of a 22 million dollar aid agreement between the Governments of Pakistan and the USA, the US Government’s total contribution to Pakistan’s economic development plans since the inception of their TCA Programme will stand at 44 million dollars.

Pakistan’s Foreign Secretary will sign on behalf of Pakistan, and Ambassador Horace A Hildreth for the USA. The agreement covers the year ending June 30, 1954.

Negotiations, it is understood, have already been completed regarding the individual projects and operational agreements governing these are expected to be signed by the middle of next month.

Projects covered for the current year include a further expenditure of 3.5 million dollars on the fertilizer factory at Daud Khel, 2.1 million dollars on construction of the Taunsa Barrage in the Punjab, 2.5 million dollars on the Ganges-Kobadak scheme (East Pakistan) and 0.75 million dollars on engineering consultant services in connection with the Karnafulli project in East Pakistan.

Besides this about 4 million dollars are to be spent on the import of fertilizers and a further sum of 2 million dollars is earmarked for the setting up of a factory for the manufacture of agricultural implements and equipment. It is understood that no decision has yet been taken on the question of location of this factory.

The various important projects included in the proposed agreement indicate a definite slant towards the development and improvement of agriculture.

New Delhi, March 19, 1954.

We have now examined the proposals of the International Bank for Development and use of Indus basin waters forwarded with our letter of 8th February. We welcome the Bank’s attempt to help in the solution of this problem and, as suggested in your letter, we are prepared to accept generally the principles governing the Bank proposals as the basis of agreement.

2. Our delegation in the Indus Basin Working Party* will formally indicate our attitude to the Bank proposals. The actual agreement, which will be worked out with the assistance of the Bank authorities, will naturally deal with a number of details including the question of the small requirement of Jammu and Kashmir.

3. If Pakistan also agrees to accept the general principles governing the Bank proposals as the basis of agreement, we can go on to the next stage of considering details with the assistance of the Bank which you have so kindly offered.

 Regarding the Jhelum, the Bank proposal had provided for continued enjoyment by India of the uses already developed but no provision was made for any new irrigation development from this river in Indian territory. The proposal denied India the right to tap the Chenab in her territory as India was planning to withdraw waters of Chenab at Marhu and Meral.
2448. Note from Ministry of External Affairs to High Commission for Pakistan in India.

New Delhi, May 10, 1954.

No. P-III/54/2821/2

The Ministry of External Affairs present their compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India and have the honour to state as follows:

2. In their Note No. F.6(1)-Pak.III./51, dated the 18th September 1951, to the High Commission, the Government of India expressed “the opinion that during the three years and more that have elapsed since the agreement of 4th May, 1948, there has been a reasonable time for the Government of Pakistan to tap alternative sources and that time has therefore come for a gradual diminution of the water to be supplied by India”. The Government of Pakistan were also requested to “furnish them with the detailed and technical information with a view to laying down a programme for the progressive reduction in the supplies” and to “communicate their own suggestions regarding the stages in this programme and the reduction to be effected at each stage”. Since this Note was sent, another two and a half years have elapsed, but no reply has been furnished to these specific questions, presumably because in the meantime a Working Party had been set up, with the good offices of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, to prepare a comprehensive long-range plan for the most effective utilization of the water resources of the Indus Basin.

3. When the Working Party was set up it was anticipated that with due cooperation from all sides it would not take very long to reach agreement. In any case it was not anticipated that the negotiations would continue beyond spring 1954, the scheduled date for opening the Bhakra Canals in India. Unfortunately this expectation has not materialised. However, on February 5 this year, a Proposal for the Development and Use of the Indus Basin Waters was put forward, on behalf of the Bank for acceptance by both sides as the basis of agreement. One of the principles of the Bank Proposal is the provision of a transition period during which the supplies to Pakistan canals, now being given from the 'eastern' rivers in India, are to be progressively diminished according to an agreed schedule and finally discontinued.

4. Although, according to the Bank Proposal, India was called upon to make extremely heavy sacrifices which would constitute serious blow to the economic development of the Indian part of the Indus Basin, the Government of India decided to accept the principles of the Bank Proposal in the spirit of goodwill and friendship that has guided them ever since the beginning of this controversy. In his letter of acceptance, dated March 25, 1954, the Indian Designee referred inter alia to a number of new projects in both countries which were nearing completion and suggested that in case it should unfortunately not be possible to reach in due time a final agreement, it would be desirable to reach an ad hoc agreement about the operation of such works of immediate urgency. The Government of Pakistan have so far neither indicated their acceptance of the Bank Proposal, nor entered into negotiations for this ad hoc agreement.

5. The Government of India understand that the Bambanwala-Bedian Link in Pakistan was completed over two years ago but has not yet been opened. If it had been duly brought into operation, it would have been possible for the Government of India to increase supplies to a number of new channels on the Upper Bari Doab Canal which have so far been given only restricted supplies in view of the understanding indicated in Mr. Black’s letter of March 13, 1952, even though the area served by these new channels is badly in need of increased supplies. India is, therefore, making a great sacrifice in order to fulfill to the utmost the engagement undertaken when establishing the Indus Basin Working Party. The Government of India trust that it will be possible to give relief to this area, at an early date, as an integral part of the transition arrangements to be provided for in the agreement to be negotiated under the Bank Proposal or, if necessary, in an ad hoc agreement referred to in paragraph 4 above.

6. The Government of Pakistan have recognized the natural anxiety in India “to discharge the obligation to develop areas where water is scarce” and are certainly aware of the great urgency and importance that the Government of India have always attached to the opening of the Bhakra Canals, as soon as possible, with a view to relieve distress in the scarcity areas of North West India. This position was explained by the Prime Minister of India to the Prime Minister of Pakistan in the summer of 1953 and has been mentioned more than once in the meetings of the Indus Basin Working Party. The Government of India have learnt that the Balloki-Suleimanke Link in Pakistan has been opened on April 2, 1954. This makes it possible to open also the Bhakra Canals without interfering with Pakistan’s existing uses. The Government of India understand that the supplies that can be delivered, during 1954, by the Balloki-Suleimanke Link to the Sutlej Valley Canals will adequately replace what these canals got from the Sutlej waters. The Government of India have therefore decided to open the Bhakra Canals in June 1954.

7. This intimation is being sent in order to enable the Government of Pakistan to suitably adjust the use of the waters of the new link on their Sutlej Valley canals for replacement of supplies to be withdrawn by the Bhakra Canals. This arrangement will have to be incorporated in the final agreement under the Bank Proposal as one of the first steps of the transition regulations. Since it might take some time to work out the details of the transition arrangements to be provided for in the agreement to be negotiated under the Bank Proposal, the Government of India would prefer that the operation of the Balloki-Suleimanke Link in Pakistan and of the Bhakra Canals in India, as indicated above, during 1954, should be covered by the ad hoc agreement already mentioned. The Government of India hope that this ad hoc agreement can be urgently concluded within the next few weeks.

8. The Ministry take the opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of their highest consideration.

High Commission for Pakistan
New Delhi

2449. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Ali to President of the World Bank Mr. Eugene Black.

Dear Mr. Black,

Since receiving your letter of February 8th we have studied carefully your recommendations and the effect of a division of supplies as proposed by the Bank Representative in the light of factual data available to us. We have also, as you know, obtained an independent appraisal of the proposal by Mr. Royce J. Tipton of Denver, Colorado, a Consulting Engineer, recommended to our Government as one of the most competent and experienced in United States in matters dealing with effective utilization of irrigation supplies and their equitable apportionment between States and nations. You have, I am sure, studied the draft of his report which Mr. Tipton’s associate left with the Bank Representative and undertook to go over with him. Mr. Tipton’s study is based on certain approximations as explained verbally by the Pakistan Engineer Designee to the Bank Representative. More refined studies would indicate shortages of a more serious nature.

2. I share your views as to the vital importance of reaching an agreement settling this dispute over the water supplies of the Indus basin. In my view the best hope of reaching an agreement is through the participation of the International Bank and I share your opinion that negotiation for an agreement while involving continuance of Working Party calls for participation by management of Bank and statesmen representing two sides.

3. The Bank proposal sets forth certain principles which Bank accepts and implies, we should accept as a basis for further negotiations. The division of supplies to meet essential test of fairness must assure that existing uses are protected from disturbance and that surplus supplies including those that may be developed are allocated in accordance with the principle of equitable apportionment. In working this out, water resources should be applied so as most effectively to promote development. The shift of large masses of population (across the border), who now need irrigated land, should be realistically taken into account. The cost of new works should be borne by the two countries according to new benefits. Until new works are completed in accordance with an agreed schedule the withdrawals should continue according to historic disbursement. The Government of Pakistan are in accord with these principles. They regret to note, however, that the Bank’s proposal as regards the division of supplies does not in fact meet the test of fairness laid down by the Bank and unless necessary adjustments are made my Government will not be able to accept it. They are accordingly instructing their representatives to work out with the assistance of the Bank an agreement which gives effect to the principles enunciated by the Bank which I have endeavoured to set out above.

4. The Bank proposal also states that “It is desirable so far as practicable to avoid control of supplies by India over waters on which Pakistan will be dependent.” I must say that I have been gravely perturbed by application of this concept suggested by the Bank Representative. I cannot understand how it is practicable under a plan that meets the test of fairness to cut off supplies which Pakistan has traditionally received from Eastern rivers. After the proposal of Bank Representative was made, our Engineers sought to work out with him the effect of division of supplies which he suggested. It became clear as Tipton Report independently demonstrates and, as I believe, Bank Management must now appreciate that it is neither practicable, nor equitable to cut off Pakistan’s historic supplies from Eastern rivers. The Government of Pakistan cannot visualise with equanimity the possibility of the implementation of a plan which would affect its vital interests adversely for all time to come. Adjustments in this regard will also therefore, be necessary if the proposed plan is to meet the test of fairness.

5. With these adjustments and other necessary changes within the framework of the principles stated in the proposal I remain confident that an agreement can be worked out which meets the test of fairness and will be acceptable to Pakistan. It is imperative that such an agreement be achieved.

6. I was gratified to have renewed assurance of your continued appreciation of the importance of reaching a fair settlement of the Indus basin water dispute and of continued willingness of the Bank to participate in the cooperative work of reaching and carrying out an agreement along the lines of Lilienthal proposal.
I am accordingly sending our representatives to Washington to work cooperatively on a treaty that will achieve the results visualised.

7. I need hardly add that, as stated in your letter of March 13, 1952, the legal rights of the two sides will continue unaffected except as may hereafter be agreed under a treaty. Rights so vital to a country as are the rights of Pakistan to its share of common water supplies cannot be impaired except by a treaty duly ratified.

I remain,

Yours sincerely,

No. 249 May 22, 1954

Nandaji from Khosla.

Following is text of memorandum by Bank handed to Pakistan Ambassador today.

Begins.

1. The management of the Bank has carefully studied the message from the Prime Minister of Pakistan to Mr. BLACK which was enclosed with a note dated 14th May, 1954, from the Ambassador of Pakistan to Mr. BLACK (F.24/54/60). The message does not differ from the draft which the Bank had previously been given an opportunity to examine.

2. When the Bank management first saw the draft message, they advised representatives of the Government of Pakistan that, in their opinion, the draft did not constitute an acceptance even in principle of the Bank proposal, and thus did not offer any prospect of carrying forward the work of the Working Party. They had in mind particularly the sentence in para 3 reading as follows:

“They regret to note, however, that the Bank’s proposal as regards the division of supplies does not in fact meet the test of fairness laid down by the Bank and unless necessary adjustments are made my Government will not be able to accept it.”; and also the following sentence in para 4: “It became clear as the Tipton Report independently demonstrated and as I believe the Bank management must now appreciate, that it is neither practicable, nor equitable to cut off Pakistan’s historic supplies from the Easter rivers. The Government of Pakistan cannot visualise with equanimity the possibility of implementing a plan which would affect its vital interests adversely for all time to come. Adjustments in this regard will also therefore be necessary if the proposed plan is to meet the test of fairness.”

The Bank management also took exception to the phrase in the above-quoted passage in para 4- “As I believe the management must now appreciate” - on the grounds that the phrase attributed to the Bank views which the Bank did not share. The management also mentioned that there were certain other points on which clarification was desirable, but regarded them as of minor importance in the context of the impression created by the passages quoted above.

3. The conversations that took place with the representatives of Pakistan concerning the meaning of the text of the draft message did not remove the impression created by the message itself that it amounted to a rejection of the Bank proposal. The representatives of Pakistan were so informed and were also advised that, in the Bank’s opinion, the Indian representatives would consider the draft message to be a rejection of the Bank proposal, and that its presentation would endanger the continuation of the joint discussions.

4. The management’s study of the message since its official delivery has not led to any change of these views of the management. The management are still unable to perceive that the message constitutes an acceptance of the Bank proposal in principle, either as a basis for agreement, or even as a basis for further joint discussions. Moreover, as the Bank expected, and is now informed, the Indian designee interprets the message as a virtual rejection of the Bank proposal and is unable to read the message as narrowing materially the area of discussion as it existed two years ago. The Indian designee feels also that, in the absence of clearer terms of reference than appear to be afforded by the message from the Prime Minister of Pakistan, no useful purpose would be served by further joint discussions.
5. In the circumstances, the Bank management must inform the Government of Pakistan that, in their opinion, there is no prospect of progressing with the cooperative work undertaken with the participation of the Bank unless it is possible to obtain clarification of the lines along which future discussions will continue and definition of the terms of reference for such discussions.

6. The management would like to emphasise that, regarding the Bank proposal, it is envisaged that after the transition period, with improved operational methods possible under a system of inter-linked canals, the following requirements in Pakistan would be met from the flow waters of the three western rivers:

(a) historic (pre-partition, actual) withdrawals of all canals;
(b) bringing most of the Sutlej Valley Canals up to allocation; and
(c) meeting the planned annual requirements of Thal (3.6 M.A.F.) and Kotri (9.5 M.A.F.).

In addition there would be a surplus out of the flow of the three Western rivers which the Bank has not attempted to allocate to individual canals or projects, but which could be applied to meet additional uses at Sukkur or Gudu if any. These supplies could be supplemented in due course from storage.

7. The management believes that, if any progress is to be made with the cooperative work, there must be, as a minimum, an understanding that further discussions will proceed on the basis of the Bank proposal, taking as a starting point the division of waters there proposed and attempting to work out a plan by which that division of waters would accomplish the irrigation uses envisaged in the proposal as mentioned above.

8. It would be implicit in such an understanding that if, in the process of preparing a definitive agreement, it became clear that with the proposed division of waters, a plan could not be worked out which would provide Pakistan with the irrigation uses which the Bank proposal envisages, then the Bank would be prepared to continue to use its good offices to bring about adjustments acceptable to both sides.

9. The management therefore, earnestly requests that the Government of Pakistan should within the next week advise the management of the Bank of their readiness to accept an understanding in the foregoing sense and send to Washington a representative authorised to enter into such an understanding.

10. Meanwhile, the management has advised the Indian designee that Pakistan Representatives will arrive in Washington on 24th May, 1954, to negotiate an ad hoc agreement for the year 1954. Ends.
Above memorandum incorporates my comments orally made to Bank and conclusion “nominally signalled” reached by Bank after prolonged discussions with us from 17th to 20th May. Bank memorandum puts onus for eventual breakdown of negotiations unequivocally on Pakistan. This definitely creates a more favourable position for India.

If within one week Pakistan does not respond to Bank’s appeal, it would thereby break up Working Party and India would regain freedom of action whilst retaining advantageous situation created by Bank proposal. If Pakistan accepted Bank appeal this would imply acceptance of Bank proposal by Pakistan as basis of further discussions thereby radically changing situation envisaged in SIVASANKAR’s telegram No. 79045, 20th May.

SUD and JAINI leaving next week. SAHNI leaving soon after. I shall await developments of next week and leave in any case by 10th June. Roorkee University may be informed accordingly. In view of possible change in situation described above question of return of BERBER MALHOTRA, BARKATRAM and BHIMSEN will require reconsideration after expiry of one week in which Pakistan must intimate its final decision.

Letter from Pakistan Ambassador to the U.S.A. to the President of the World Bank, regarding Government of India’s Note No.P.III/54/2821/2, dated the 10th May, 1954.

Dear Mr. Black,

On May 11, 1954, the International Bank made available and transmitted to my Government copy of a letter from Prime Minister Nehru delivered to Bank on May 10th. The letter dealt with a request previously made through the International Bank for negotiation of an ad hoc agreement with respect to operation of certain works described as of immediate urgency. Previously I had passed on to my Government suggestions from the Bank that a representative be sent to discuss such an agreement and had conveyed to Bank the information that a representative of Pakistan was being sent to Washington to carry on such discussions through the good offices of the Bank.

2. On May 10th Government of India handed to High Commissioner in New Delhi a note parallel in substance to Prime Minister's letter to you. A copy of that note is enclosed. In order that talks about ad hoc arrangements may not be obstructed by misunderstandings which might arise from certain statements in Indian communications my Government have instructed me to make clear their position in this regard.

3. The Pakistan Representative is coming to carry on discussion under Lillienthal proposal and your letters to Prime Ministers of September 6th and November 8th, 1951 and March 13th, 1952. In other words he will endeavour to continue co-operative work and will continue to expect confirmation by India of Pakistan’s existing uses which the proposal described as starting point and minimum which should be accepted without question. The participation by a representative in discussion requested by India must not be construed or represented as having any other significance. Particularly it must not be construed or represented as indicating Pakistan’s acquiescence in any of the contentions made by India in the past or statements made in Prime Minister Nehru’s letter or Indian note of May 10th.

4. These communications in disregard of your letter of November 8th, 1951, seek to revive past claims made by Government of India in a joint statement issued in May 1948, at the time of reopening by India of Dipalpur and Central Bari Doab Canal systems. These claims were a principal source of difficulties described in Mr. Lillienthal’s article and which the approach he proposed was designed to put at rest. The Government of Pakistan understood when they accepted the suggestions made in your letters mentioned above that so long as cooperative work continued with the participation of Bank, India had agreed not to complicate constructive approach agreed upon by reviving these past claims. My Government are going forward with discussions for an ad hoc agreement and further negotiation for a permanent agreement on the basis that this understanding will be respected.

5. Apart from the agreement not to complicate present negotiations with the revival of past claims it is apparent that any attempt to give to a past ad hoc arrangement an effect reaching beyond the common intendment when it was entered into would make difficult a new ad hoc arrangement for fear it would later be similarly misused.

6. Indian communications assume various references to proposal of Bank representative put forward on February 5th, 1954. As you know the Government of Pakistan are fully in accord with principles of this proposal referred to by Prime Minister in his communication to you of May 14th, 1954. The Government of Pakistan are prepared to enter into a treaty within framework of these principles and in the first instance to work out an ad hoc arrangement to be negotiated as part of overall settlement. The willingness of my Government to enter into negotiation for such an ad hoc arrangement, however, must not be taken as implying acceptance of division of supplies suggested by Bank representative which as Prime Minister has indicated is not in accordance with principles accepted by the Bank. No ad hoc arrangements can be made before parties have reached agreement on eventual division of supplies if either side sees through that arrangement to pre-determine what eventual division should be.

7. The Indian communications make reference to Bhambanwala-Ravi-Bedian and Balloki-Suleimanki links which have been constructed in Pakistan. My Government agree that these links should be amongst the new works to be included in working out transitional arrangements which may be negotiated as a part of an overall settlement. The Indian communications, however, appear to misconceive the purpose of these links.

8. The Bhambanwala-Ravi-Bedian Link was designed to deliver Chenab supplies now used by Lower Bari Doab Canal to channels of Central Bari Doab Canals in exchange for Ravi supplies (now used in these canals) which would then be passed down Ravi to lower Bari Doab Canal. While this adjustment would not in itself make available additional supplies on Ravi, it would remove a source of friction due to uncertainly in supplies in Central Bari Doab Canals now received from India through a multiplicity of Canals.

9. The Balloki-Sulaimanki link, as you know, was planned prior to partition. One of the purposes of link was to provide additional supplies for Sutlej Valley Canals. Historically supplies available for these canals during critical sowing and maturing periods have proved to be inadequate. You are aware of near famine conditions which were experienced by areas served by these canals in 1952 and 1953. The link was pressed to completion to ensure that distress of this magnitude would not recur. It was designed to make available such supplies as could be brought through the link from Chenab and Ravi without prejudice to Pakistan’s other requirements. The Pakistan representative cannot ignore obvious needs of Sutlej Valley Canals for increased supplies; nor can it ignore the fact that during 1952-53 the year of greatest distress in Pakistan, the area in India dependent on supplies from Sutlej had one of its best years in terms of food production. The Pakistan Representative while obliged to take foregoing into account will enter into discussions with desire to make available during 1954 through exchange for Bhakra Canals such a portion of supplies transferred through Balloki-Sulemanki link as is consistent with Pakistan’s own requirement.

10. It is assumed of course that an ad-hoc arrangement entered will provide that Government of India will pay a share of operation, maintenance and capital charges of any schemes operated for their benefit proportionate to new benefits they will enjoy and may make provision for exchange of data on river discharges and withdrawals and for joint observation as desired by either side.

11. The communications speak of an Indian decision “to open Bhakra canals in June 1954”. My Government instruct me to point out that any new or increased withdrawals the effect of which is to diminish the supplies traditionally received in Pakistan for existing use would be violation of Pakistan’s rights under International Law, and Statutes, Orders and Awards governing partition as well as agreement confirmed in your letter of March 13th, 1952. My Government request that you use your good offices to prevent any such new withdrawals in anticipation of an agreement that remains to be worked out.

12. My Government are anxious to cooperate in working out such an ad hoc arrangement and a permanent treaty. They regret that a permanent agreement has not long since been reached. They are confident that as soon as both sides are prepared to accept a division of supplies that meets test of fairness enunciated by the Bank, there will be no difficulty in reaching a permanent agreement and transitional or ad hoc arrangements.

Sincerely yours

(Amjad Ali)
Note from High Commission for Pakistan in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, June 5, 1954.

No. F.62 (4) P/53 – 1986

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents their compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, and, with reference to their Note No. P. III 54/2821/2, dated the 10th May 1954, have the honour to state as follows:

2. Inasmuch as the question of an ad hoc arrangement is one aspect of cooperative work now going forward with participation of the International Bank, the Government of Pakistan, consistent with the policy adopted in the past, are communicating their position through the Bank. A copy of this communication is enclosed.

3. The Government of India are aware that any new or increased withdrawals by India, the effect of which is to diminish supplies traditionally received in Pakistan for existing uses, constitute a violation of Pakistan’s rights under International Law and Statutes, Orders and Awards governing partition as well as agreements confirmed in President Black’s letter of March 13th 1952. The Government of Pakistan most earnestly request the Government of India to restrain from making any new or increased withdrawal in anticipation of an agreement that remains to be worked out. As stated, the Government of Pakistan are anxious to co-operate in working out with all possible despatch an ad hoc agreement and a permanent treaty settling the water dispute.

4. A copy of a message from the Prime Minister of Pakistan to the President of the International Bank delivered on May 14th, 1954 is also enclosed. It will be noted that while the Government of Pakistan are in accord with the principles of the Bank’s proposal referred to in the letter they do not accept division of waters suggested by the Bank representative in as much as it is not in accordance with the principles accepted by the Bank and implicit in the Lilienthal proposal under which it was agreed to go forward.

5. The High Commission take this opportunity to renew to the Government of India the assurances of their highest consideration.

New Delhi, June 21, 1954.

Dear Mr. Black,

I refer to your letter of 13th March, 1952, concerning the setting up and functioning of the Indus Basin Working Party and my letter of 15th March, 1952, in which I indicated our readiness to participate in the cooperative work proposed by you for resolving the dispute that had existed for sometime past between India and Pakistan regarding the distribution of the waters of the Indus system of rivers. We were confident at the time that, with the good offices of the Bank, it would not be long before the Working Party would reach agreement on a comprehensive plan for the most effective use of the water resources of the Indus Basin for the greatest good of both countries.

2. The cooperative approach initiated by the Bank enabled the Working Party to collect and study a large mass of engineering data indispensable for the planning, on a functional basis, of the development of the water resources of the Indus system of rivers with its many complicated technical problems. This immense task would never have been accomplished but for the invaluable help and assistance afforded throughout by the Bank Engineers.

3. Notwithstanding this very useful basic work, prolonged efforts to agree on a common approach towards comprehensive planning proved fruitless. At the instance of the Bank representative, both parties, however, agreed to put up plans of their own. These plans showed such basic divergence of concept that it became clear there was no prospect of making any progress towards settlement unless the Bank took some initiative in the matter.

4. In these circumstances the Bank representative put forward on 5th February, 1954, with the full support of the Management of the Bank, a proposal for the consideration of both sides to serve as the basis of an agreement. This proposal was, according to the Bank, “based on concepts of its own which produced a fair and economic result.” At the same time the Bank made it clear that the proposal involved a large element of compromise under which each country would have to forego some of the irrigation uses that it wishes to develop.

5. Although aware that the Bank proposal would not meet some of the essential irrigation requirements of scarcity areas in India and would demand extremely heavy sacrifices from us, we accepted nevertheless, on 25th March 1954, the principles of the Bank proposal as the basis of agreement in the interest of a speedy and constructive settlement and in the spirit of goodwill and friendship that has guided us ever since the beginning of this controversy.
6. Unfortunately Pakistan's reaction to the Bank proposal has been negative. Its reply dated 14th May, 1954, contains a virtual rejection of the Bank proposal. According to the Bank's memorandum to Pakistan dated 21st May, 1954, the Bank was "unable to perceive that the message constituted acceptance of the Bank proposal in principle, either as a basis for agreement, or even as a basis for further joint discussion." Notwithstanding this the Bank in its memorandum made an urgent appeal to Pakistan for a reconsideration of this negative attitude and expressed the belief "that if any progress is to be made with the cooperative work, there must be, as a minimum, an understanding that further discussions will proceed on the basis of the Bank proposal, taking as a starting point the division of waters there proposed......". The Bank Management earnestly requested "that the Government of Pakistan should within the next week advise the Management of the Bank of their readiness to accept an understanding in the foregoing sense...". This appeal, as also the subsequent efforts of the Bank over the last two weeks, has produced no positive result. Under these circumstances there is, as had been stated in the Bank memorandum, no prospect of progressing with the cooperative work undertaken with the participation of the Bank. The persistently negative and uncooperative attitude of Pakistan has, therefore, made impossible the continuation of the talks initiated by you in March, 1952, and Pakistan has thereby voided the understanding under which we have been working for the last two years.

7. I would like to take this opportunity of expressing our high appreciation of the spirit of impartiality and fairness with which the Management and the Engineers of the Bank have approached this delicate problem through the last two years. The Bank proposal in its precision, succinctness and objectivity has definitely proved that, with a practical approach and with readiness on both sides to make sacrifices, it is possible to find a solution of this complicated problem. The Bank proposal will be regarded as an invaluable contribution towards the solution of this long-drawn dispute. I trust that sooner or later the Government of Pakistan will come to realise the benefits of an agreed settlement on the basis of the Bank proposal and the substantial advantages that would accrue to Pakistan therefrom.

8. Notwithstanding the persistently negative attitude of Pakistan which has until now frustrated all attempts at settlement we would be ready to consider arrangements for renewed cooperative work on the basis of the Bank proposal as soon as Pakistan indicates its willingness to you on that basis. I trust that the good offices of the Bank would in that case be available in as helpful and ample a measure as in the last two years.

9. Although, in view of the situation explained in para 6 above we are no longer bound now by the unilateral restriction implied in your letter of 13th
March 1952 under which, de facto, India could not undertake any major new developments whilst Pakistan could do so without any restriction, we would be willing to include in the arrangements for renewed cooperative work, referred to in para 8 above, appropriate provisions for the transitional period which would enable developments to proceed in both countries on an agreed schedule as envisaged in the Bank proposal.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru

2454. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission for India in Pakistan.

No. I (I) 4/2/54 (I) July 10, 1954

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations present its compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and in continuation of Note No. F.62 (4)P /53-1986, dated 5th June 1954, presented by the High Commission for Pakistan in India, has the honour to state as follows:-

2. The Government of Pakistan have viewed with grave concern the action taken by the Government of India in opening the Bhakra Canal in utter disregard of Pakistan's rights under International Law and Orders, Statutes and Awards governing partition and in flagrant and unilateral violation of the agreement recorded in President Black's letter, dated March 13th, 1952 addressed to the Prime Ministers of Pakistan and India. The Government of Pakistan regret that the Government of India have not seen their way to comply with the earnest request made by them in their Note cited above. At a time when goodwill is most needed in the interests of a peaceful solution of the water dispute to the lasting good of the common man on both sides of the border, it is regretted that by this unilateral action the Government of India have dealt a grievous blow to the co-operative work of the Indus Basin Working Party, constituted with the good offices of the International Bank. This action is all the more surprising when viewed in the perspective that Pakistan had, in anticipation of the overall settlement, expressed her willingness to negotiate an ad hoc arrangement and had made a concrete offer in this regard through her delegation at Washington. The Government of Pakistan are constrained to lodge a strong protest against India’s action and to reserve the right to claim compensation for damage caused to cultivation in Pakistan dependent on the supplies which have been unilaterally withheld by the Government of India for running the Bhakra Canal.

3. The Government of Pakistan would therefore once again earnestly request the Government of India to take steps immediately to restore conditions confirmed in the agreement of 13th March 1952, so that the co-operative work of the Indus Basin Working Party may proceed in an atmosphere of understanding and cordiality. It is obviously in the interest of both India and Pakistan that negotiations in regard to both an overall settlement and transitional arrangements should be brought to a successful conclusion by an early date.

4. In line with the policy of the Government of Pakistan explained in earlier communications on the subject, a copy of this Note is being supplied to be International Bank.

5. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations avails itself of this opportunity of renewing to the High Commission the assurances of its highest consideration.

2455. Extract from Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Ali to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Karachi, July 14, 1954.

Thank you for your letter of April 13. I am sorry I was not able to write to you earlier owing to an unusually heavy pressure of engagements.

* * * * * * * * * *

2. In the meantime, another grave development has taken place. You have opened the Bhakra canals. This has been done while negotiations were still in progress for the settlement of the canal waters dispute with the World Bank and in spite of the undertaking contained in President Black’s letter of March 13th, 1952, that so long as this co-operative work continues with the participation of the Bank neither side will take any action to diminish the supplies available to the other side for existing uses. That undertaking has been unilaterally repudiated by India and the waters of the Sutlej have been diverted to the newly completed Bhakra–Nangal canals to the serious detriment of supplies to Pakistan. I find this action all the more surprising since we had, at India’s instance and in compliance with the wishes of the World Bank, sent a delegation to Washington to negotiate an ad hoc arrangement regarding supplies to the Bhakra canals and had gone to the length of offering in advance to make waters available for the Bhakra canals. We had made this gesture in order not merely to facilitate a constructive settlement of the canal waters dispute but in the hope also that we might thereby help build up a co-operative atmosphere for the settlement of all other Indo-Pakistan disputes. The Bhakra canals have been opened before our two delegations could even take up consideration of ad hoc arrangements for these canals.

3. This precipitate action of India’s has made a most unfavourable impression on the people in Pakistan and has struck a grievous blow to the cause of Indo-Pakistan amity which you and I have been labouring to promote. The livelihood of millions in West Pakistan depends on the adequacy of supplies of canal waters. To Pakistan, it is a most vital matter. When these supplies are cut in the fashion you have chosen to do, no amount of professions of Indo-Pakistan friendship and goodwill on your part or mine would I fear carry any conviction with our people.

No. P. III/54/28210/2

The Ministry of External Affairs present their compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India and with reference to the Note No. F.62(4)P/53-1986, dated 5th June 1954, from the High Commission for Pakistan in India, and the Note No.1(I)/4/2/54(1), dated 10th July 1954, from the Government of Pakistan, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, have the honour to state as follows:

2. The Government of Pakistan contend that the Bhakra canals have been opened in violation of Pakistan's alleged rights under International law as well as Orders, Statutes and Awards governing Partition. As the Government of Pakistan are well aware, the Government of India have always repudiated such an interpretation which has no foundation in International Law and Partition Agreement. It has been clearly stated in para 2 of the Ministry's Note, dated 13th June 1951, paras 3 and 4 of the Ministry's Note, dated 18th September 1951, and para 3 of Note No. C-14(II)-IHC, dated 5th May, 1952, from the High Commissioner for India, that the Agreement of 4th May 1948 is the only agreed basis between India and Pakistan concerning the use of waters flowing from India into Pakistan.

3. The Government of Pakistan also contend that by the opening of the Bhakra canals there has been a violation of the Agreement confirmed in the letter, dated March 13, 1952 from Mr. Eugene R. Black, President of the International Bank for Reconstruction & Development. As has been clearly stated in the letter, dated June 21, 1954, from the Prime Minister of India to Mr. Black (a copy of which was supplied by the Bank to the Government of Pakistan), the persistently negative and un-co-operative attitude of Pakistan had made impossible the continuation of the talks initiated by Mr. Black in March 1952 and Pakistan had thereby voided the understanding under which the Working Party had been functioning for the last two years. The co-operative work, as envisaged in Mr. Black's letter of March 13, 1952, had therefore come to an end and consequently the Government of India were no longer bound by the understanding contained in Mr. Black's letter of March 13, 1952, which was operative only during the continuance of that co-operative work.

It may be mentioned here that in accepting, on March 25, 1954, the Bank Proposal made on February 5, 1954, the Indian Designee clearly stated that a number of new projects in both countries were ready to be put into operation within the next few months and that in case it should, unfortunately, not be possible to reach in due time a final agreement including the necessary transition arrangements, it would be desirable, in order to obviate the necessity for unilateral action to reach an ad hoc agreement about such works of immediate urgency the operation of which could not be delayed any longer. Neither did the Government of Pakistan find it possible to accept the Bank Proposal including the transition arrangements nor was it possible to reach agreement on a workable ad hoc arrangement. It was only after having waited patiently for almost five months for a positive response from the Government of Pakistan that the Government of India had to draw the inevitable conclusion that the agreement of March 13, 1952 had been voided by Pakistan.

4. Reference has been made in Note, dated 10th July 1954, from the Government of Pakistan of their willingness to negotiate an ad hoc agreement and to the concrete offer made in this connection through the Pakistan delegation in Washington. This presumably refer to letter dated June 10, 1954 sent to the World Bank on behalf of the Govt. of Pakistan, which was shown to the Indian Designee. It will be recalled that it was early in April 1954, that the Bank impressed upon the Pakistan Designee the importance of an early conclusion of such an ad hoc agreement and that in their Note, dated May 10, 1954, the Government of India reiterated the necessity of opening the Bhakra canals in June 1954. The proposal contained in the above-mentioned letter of June 10, 1954, was not only thus unduly delayed but was also so obviously unsatisfactory that it was not followed up by the Pakistan representatives themselves; the latter, although sent specially to Washington to negotiate an ad hoc agreement, pleaded lack of information regarding the data for link canals in Pakistan, indispensable for reaching agreement on the ad hoc arrangements and later stated that Pakistan would not be able to make definite proposals in this connection earlier than 10th August 1954. The claim that the Government of Pakistan were willing to agree on an ad hoc arrangement is therefore clearly unjustified.

5. The Government of India must also emphatically repudiate the suggestion that the opening of the Bhakra canals could have in any way affected existing cultivation in Pakistan. Since the Government of Pakistan had not furnished the detailed information sought by the Government of India in their Note of September 18, 1951, regarding a programme for the progressive reduction in supplies and had not communicated "their own suggestions regarding the stages in this programme and the reduction to be effected at each stage", and since they had on April 2, 1954, brought into operation the Balloki-Suleimanke Link, the Government of India were left with no option but to inform the Government of Pakistan vide their Note No. P.III/54/2821/2, dated May 10, 1954, of their intention to open the Bhakra canals and to request the Government of Pakistan to suitably adjust the use of the waters of the new link on their Sutlej Valley Canals for replacement of the supplies to be withdrawn by the Bhakra canals" as envisaged in the Agreement of May 4, 1948 (and also implied in the Bank proposal which had been accepted by the Government of India and was then under consideration of the Government of Pakistan). No damage to cultivation in Pakistan can therefore arise as long as the Government of Pakistan comply with their obligations under the Agreement of May 4, 1948; if any damage should arise, it would be due only to the non-fulfilment by the Government of Pakistan of their own contractual obligations. In any case, there is no basis for any 'right' of Pakistan to claim compensation for alleged damage to cultivation.

6. The Government of India are gratified to note that the Government of Pakistan have now stated that it would be in the interest of both countries that negotiations in regard to an overall settlement and the transition arrangements should be brought to a successful conclusion by an early date, and have expressed to the Bank their desire to reach agreement, as soon as possible, on the terms on which future co-operative effort should be undertaken through the good offices of the Bank and on the transitional arrangements during the new phase of such co-operative effort. The Government of India therefore invite the Government of Pakistan to accept at an early date the Bank Proposal which was accepted by the Government of India some months ago even though it involved considerable sacrifice on their part. The Government of India would repeat the assurance given in the letter dated 21st June, 1954, from the Prime Minister of India to Mr. Black regarding their readiness to consider arrangements for a new phase of co-operative work on the basis of the Bank Proposal and to include in these arrangements appropriate provisions for the transition period which would enable developments to proceed in both countries on an agreed schedule as envisaged in the Bank Proposal.

7. As the Government of Pakistan have already sent to the International Bank a copy of their note of the 10th July, 1954, a copy of this note is also being supplied to the Bank.

The Ministry take this opportunity to renew to the High Commission assurances of their highest consideration.

High Commission for Pakistan
New Delhi

New Delhi, August 19, 1954

Dear Mr. Black,

I thank you for your letter of August 13, 1954, forwarding your proposals for a new phase of cooperative work with the assistance of the Bank.

In my letter of August 8, 1954, I expressed the view that clarification of some points covering the terms of reference should precede the resumption of the negotiations. Nevertheless, in order to afford the maximum assistance to your efforts to resolve this dispute, I am prepared to accept the suggestion now made by you that these clarifications should come about in the actual process of working out the plan. Accordingly, I hereby accept the terms of reference and procedure for the resumption of cooperative work on the basis of the Bank Proposals as contained in Annex A to your letter of August 13, 1954. To avoid any possible misunderstanding, however, regarding the terms of reference as proposed by you, I would like to state that in giving this acceptance, I assume, that the words “feasible means”, used in para 4 of Annex A, refer only to the feasible means, within the framework of the division of waters envisaged in the Bank Proposal, that might be adopted to meet any deficiencies; and that the words “costs involved” in para 5 of Annex A relate only to the cost of replacement works as envisaged in the Bank Proposal, with the uses listed in para 2 of Annex A.

It is of course understood that, as is usual in all such cases, and as had been stated expressly in your letter of November 8, 1951, concerning the former Working Party, the Bank, before selecting its representative and other personnel (para 1 and 6 of Annex A), would ascertain that they would be acceptable to the two Governments.

As regards the transitional arrangements for September and October, 1954, proposed by you in Annex B, they unfortunately do not appear to be fully satisfactory, the supplies available for the Bhakra canals under these arrangements being so small as to have little practical significance. The transfer possibilities indicated by Pakistan in the figures supplied on August 9, 1954, regarding paragraph 1(c) of the Government of Pakistan’s message of 28th July 1954, which apparently form the basis of para 2 of Annex B, do not represent a complete picture. Apart from this, there are a number of other points in connection with Annex B which would appear to need closer examination and discussion. It appears necessary, therefore, that representatives of the Bank should come over to India and Pakistan, as early as possible, to assist in the conclusion of a transitional arrangement for rabi 1954-55 and kharif 1955 be
The Bank, in the main, proposed that: (i) The representatives of India, Pakistan and Bank Would assemble in Washington on 1 October 1954 and prepare, by 30 September 1955, a comprehensive plan, taking as starting point the division of waters envisaged in the Bank's proposal of 5 February 1954 (ii) The plan would aim to accomplish from the flow of water of the three western rivers the following irrigation uses: (a) Historic (pre-partition, actual) withdrawals of all canals in Pakistan and in Jammu and Kashmir State, (b) Bring most of Pakistan Sutlej Valley canals up to allocation: (c) Requirements of Thal and Kotri; and would examine the extent of any surplus available from flow of the western rivers after meeting those uses. (iii) The plan would then examine the extent to which and the manner in which the following additional uses could be met out of any such surplus; the additional requirements of Sukkur and Gudfo, and of the future development in Jammu and Kashmir State; (iv) The plan would outline feasible means that might be developed to meet any deficiencies if the flow supplies of the western rivers were inadequate (v) The planning would include engineering works required, costs involved and sharing thereof, the arrangements for the period of transition and all other pertinent matters; (vi) Each Government would promptly make available to the Bank Representative data and information asked for and give access to irrigated areas and work.

Paragraph one of Annexure B provided that during September and October 1954, India would limit additional irrigation uses in her territory so as not to reduce canal withdrawals in Pakistan; paragraphs two provided: "There will be taken into account, as replacement of supplies available to Pakistan, 70 per cent of the following total: the amount of Ravi supplies which shall actually be received at Balloki plus 1,000 cusecs of Chenab supplies which shall be deemed to be received at Balloki."

New Delhi, August 23, 1954.

My dear Prime Minister,

Thank you for your letter of the 14th July which you sent me in answer to my letter of the 13th April 1954. I hope you will forgive me for the delay in replying to it. You have been away from Karachi for a considerable part of this time and I have also been touring and otherwise very much occupied. I would also draw your attention to the letter addressed by me to you dated May 7, 1954, to which I have had no reply yet. This letter dealt with the evacuee property problem.

2. In your letter of the 14th July, you refer to the opening of the Bhakra canal. I need not deal with this matter fully at this stage because I am glad to find that, through the good offices of the World Bank, a further agreement about future negotiations, on the basis of the World Bank proposals, is in sight. But I should like to remove some misunderstanding. You have not been in touch with this matter except lately and I can, therefore, well understand that you are not fully posted with the background. When the President of the World Bank first made his proposal to the then Prime Minister of Pakistan and to me, and we both agreed to it, it was generally understood that the preliminary talks with the World Bank would take about six months or so. In my talks with Mr. Black, this was mentioned as a rough estimate. I made it clear to him that we could not commit ourselves, indefinitely, to the assurance we had given about not diminishing the supply of water. We pointed out particularly that the Bhakra-Nangal project was under construction and would gradually take shape. We were spending vast sums of money on this project and we could not be expected to suspend it or stop its future development. It is true that no period was mentioned in the written assurance that was given.

3. Instead of six months, as anticipated, these talks went on for a year and then for two years. In the course of these talks, our representatives at Washington clearly mentioned that the Bhakra-Nangal scheme was developing and the time was rapidly coming when part of it would be ready and we would require additional water supplies. Early in 1954 this was clearly stated both to the Bank separately and at the joint meetings. Even when the Bank made its final proposal, this was pointed out by us. We were anxious that your representatives should be fully informed of the position. Later we gave formal notice of it when we found that the negotiations through the Bank had come to a standstill because, at that time, you were not prepared to accept the proposals of the Bank, which we had accepted.
4. You will appreciate that any assurance of the kind that was given by us is of an interim character. It could not possibly continue indefinitely regardless of other circumstances. Otherwise, it would be open to one party merely not to take any step and thereby prevent the other from functioning.

5. Further, as a matter of fact, even on the opening of the Bhakra canal and after, we did not reduce the normal supply of irrigation water to Pakistan, and I must confess I fail to understand the reason for the outcry in Pakistan on this subject.

6. Because of this self-denying act on our part, we have lost a whole season to the great disappointment of large numbers of agriculturists who were expecting this water.

7. I need not go into this question any further at this stage. I hope that further talks will take place now on the basis of the acceptance of the Bank proposal by both sides and, separately, an ad hoc arrangement will also be arrived at.

8. I should like to remind you of the canal water agreement between India and Pakistan which was arrived at on the 4th May 1948. That agreement was signed, among others, by your present Governor-General and by me. It gave India the right to restrict water supplies provided we gave Pakistan enough time to make other arrangements. In fact, we did not lessen or restrict the supply of water to your canals at any time during these six years. There was some argument about a year ago about some minor restriction, but that was, I think, adequately explained at the time. You will observe that we have tried our utmost during these years to be cooperative in this matter with Pakistan and not to take any step which might cause injury to the agriculturists in Pakistan.

Yours sincerely,

Jawaharlal Nehru

Hon’ble
Mr. Mohammad Ali,
Prime Minister of Pakistan

2459. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Ali to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Karachi, September 21, 1954.

I thank you for your letter of August 23rd, 1954. I greatly regret the delay that has occurred in my replying to your letter concerning evacuee property. As you know, I have been unusually busy since the receipt of that letter. I hope, however, to send you a reply shortly.

2. In your letter you say that when the President of the World Bank first offered the Bank's good offices to Pakistan and India to settle the canal waters dispute, it was generally understood that preliminary talks would take about six months or so and that when you found that they had taken two years and that there was no agreement over the Bank's recent proposals you felt that the opening of the Bhakra canal could be delayed no longer. You mention that the assurance given by India that she would not take any action to diminish the supplies of waters available to Pakistan for 'existing uses' was of an interim character and could not continue indefinitely regardless of other circumstances. In this connection you also refer to the canal water agreement between India and Pakistan of May 4th, 1948, which according to you, gave India the right to restrict water supplies provided Pakistan was given enough time to make other arrangements.

3. We are not aware of any understandings that you may have had with Mr. Black with regard to the time that preliminary talks and investigations preparatory to a settlement of the canal waters dispute would take. I gather, at any rate that the question of any such time-limit was never raised during discussions that Pakistan's representatives had with the Bank prior to the issue of Mr. Black's letter dated March 13, 1952, which embodies the agreement between the Bank, India and Pakistan, namely, that 'while the co-operative work continues with the participation of the Bank neither side will take any action to diminish the supplies available to the other side for existing uses', and it has never been raised since. When you decided unilaterally to diminish supplies available to Pakistan in order to feed the Bhakra canals, the co-operative work was, according to the understanding of the Bank and of ourselves, still in progress. That we were anxious to go forward with this co-operative work is evidenced further by the fact that we had deputed our Foreign Minister to Washington to discuss with the Bank proposals both for an overall settlement of this dispute as well as for ad hoc arrangements for the supply of water to the Bhakra canal.

4. It is true that the preliminary talks and investigations have taken a long time. You will, however, I hope, appreciate that this delay was not of our making. In fact, the Bank has expressed satisfaction at the fact that Pakistan was losing no time in going ahead with the works that would facilitate the co-operative effort. It is true also that we knew that the Bhakra - Nagal project was taking shape. But this project was intended to receive its supplies from the Bhakra dam which is still in process of construction. Nevertheless, on receipt of information from the Bank that India intended to draw for the Bhakra canals on the flow supplies of Sutlej, we signified our willingness as early as May 9, to discuss interim arrangements in connection therewith and despatched a delegation to Washington for that purpose. Therefore, I was surprised to learn from press reports that, addressing the Council of States on May 18, you had remarked that India intended to go ahead with the opening of the Bhakra canal in June without waiting for the outcome of Washington talks. On June 11th, we went further in an effort to accommodate Indian demands. Our representative was authorised to make through the Bank an offer on an ad hoc basis of specified supplies for the Bhakra canal even although, as I have stated, these canals were not intended to draw on Sutlej supplies before the completion of the Bhakra dam. This naturally entailed considerable sacrifice on Pakistan’s part, for this offer involved diversion of supplies from our Sutlej Valley canals which had hitherto suffered from chronic shortages. We felt, however, that we must make this offer in order to promote an atmosphere of goodwill and understanding which would help settle not only this dispute but all other Indo-Pakistan disputes as well. The subsequent receipt of your formal notice intimating that India was withdrawing from the co-operative effort and the opening of the Bhakra canals soon thereafter at a time when the Pakistan Delegation was still in Washington ready to negotiate an ad hoc arrangement for the supply of water to that project therefore greatly surprised and distressed me, for in the circumstances it hardly seemed justified.

5. You have claimed that the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of May 4th 1948, gave India the right to restrict water supplies available to Pakistan provided Pakistan was given time enough to make other arrangements. You are doubtless aware of the views repeatedly expressed by my predecessors on the character of that agreement. The agreement was signed under duress. It was signed under the shadow of a national calamity threatened by the sudden stoppage of all supplies of water to Pakistan canals by the East Punjab Government who made resumption of supplies conditional on Pakistan agreeing to renounce all rights to the water. By its very terms, further, this agreement was in the nature only of an interim arrangement. We subsequently terminated it by a formal notice and it has long ceased to be effective.

6. You have expressed surprise that the opening of the Bhakra canal should have resulted in an outcry in Pakistan when according to you the normal supply of irrigation water to Pakistan was not thereby reduced. The facts are that the formal opening of this canal was in fact preceded by a steep fall in supplies reaching Pakistan. The supplies below Ferozepur in the Sutlej fell from 23,700 cusecs on July 4 to 9,810 cusecs on July 7 - i.e., the day preceding the formal opening of the canal. Never in the past had supplies gone so low at that time of the year. This naturally caused alarm among our people, reminded as they were of what followed the total stoppage of supplies in all canals by India in April 1948. Later the supplies improved as usual in the flood months of July and August.

7. You say that India has not restricted the supply of water to Pakistan canals at any time during the last six years. This is not in accord with my information. Even apart from the restriction of supplies in the drought year 1951-52, which contributed to a serious food shortage in Pakistan, construction of new channels and extension or widening of the existing canals in India to effect increased withdrawals since Partition have been reported in the Indian press itself from time to time. These withdrawals cannot but impose a heavy burden on the supplies available in the Sutlej, the Beas and the Ravi rivers to the detriment of existing uses in Pakistan.

8. However, to me the really important thing now is that we go forward with finding a just solution of this problem without loss of time. I am therefore glad that discussions are in progress with the Bank for the early resumption of cooperative work and I share your hope that they will result in a satisfactory settlement.

4. In your letter you repeat that the Agreement of May 4, 1948, in regard to Canal Waters was signed under duress. A more extraordinary statement I do not remember to have come across at any time. I wrote to you once about this at some length and pointed out that the Agreement was signed by your present Governor—General who, you will agree with me, is not a man to suffer duress. I speak from personal experience of this Agreement, which you do not possess. There was no question of stoppage of water in the event of the Agreement not being signed. In fact, this was never hinted at. It was with the utmost goodwill that the Agreement was discussed and signed. It is not difficult for you to confirm this by reference to your Governor-General and the others who were present there including many Ministers of the Pakistan and the West Punjab Government. It took two years for your Government to discover that the Agreement was signed under duress.

5. This approach to this question of Canal Waters itself indicates how completely divorced it is from reality. I do not wish to discuss the past at any length here because I have dealt with it previously. But, coming to the present, the issue is of the utmost simplicity. The World Bank made some proposals which, in spite of their onerous character, we have accepted. If Pakistan accepts them in the same way without reservation, we lay the foundations of a full agreement for the future. If it does not accept them, then we have to continue to labour in order to find some basis for agreement. But we cannot consider ourselves bound by any arrangement till some agreement is arrived at. We have assured you however, that we shall continue to pay every attention to the needs of West Punjab in this matter in so far as we can. Indeed, we have shown our goodwill in this matter by not adding to ours during the past two or three months even though the Bhakra canals were completed. We did so, not because of any particular subsisting agreement with Pakistan but because we do not wish the farmers of West Punjab to suffer. Our aim throughout has been that we should prevent or at least minimise any suffering to farmers on either side of the border. That was the basis of the Agreement of the 4th May 1948 which you repudiate.

6. I do not wish to say much more in this letter on this subject. I would refer you to my previous letters to you as well as to my letters to Mr. Black, the President of the World Bank. Three years ago, I wrote to Mr. Black on the 25th September 1951. In the course of this letter I stated “we have at present under construction a big river valley scheme in the East Punjab called the Bhakra-Nangal project. This project will, of course, have to continue. I mention this because the Pakistan Government have sometimes suggested that work on this project should be stopped. For all these years, we had made our position perfectly clear and it has been a matter of the utmost surprise to us that you should continue to raise objections which have no basis in fact.

The heavy sacrifices India has been called upon to make for resolving the long outstanding Canal Water Dispute with her neighbour Pakistan, are confirmed again in the release issued from Washington by the World Bank. According to the text of the release, an embargo has been placed on the diversion of Chanderbhaga (Chenab) waters which will condemn millions of acres of Rajasthan to remain desert forever.

As compared with the Eastern rivers, Sutlej Ravi and Beas, the Chenab has the predominant characteristic of an earlier rise in supplies from which additional benefit can be derived for the kharif sowings. Deprived of these valuable waters, further development of areas in Rajasthan is bound to be most adversely affected. It is to be noted that less than 3% of Rajasthan's culturable area is served with canal irrigation. The rest of the land is an arid desert where people have utmost difficulty in even obtaining drinking water.

The withdrawals which were contemplated by India from the Chenab were so small that the interest of Pakistan could not have been appreciably affected. For a total of 39.3 million acres of culturable area, Pakistan has been allocated a usable annual inflow of 97 million acres feet whereas India has in her eastern rivers only 22 million acre feet for a total culturable area of 25.6 million acres. Measured by the same yardstick as Pakistan, India's requirements should have been met by allocating further supplies which could only be derived from Western rivers. India's desire to have some flow supply from the Chenab was, therefore, very modest and entirely justified.
Any solution that India may have now to find for Rajasthan, is bound to be difficult and very costly. It is a matter of common knowledge that supplies derived from storage are much more expensive due to cost of dams and appurtenant works as compared with the flow irrigation projects based on diversion weirs and barrages. The unit cost of water to Pakistan for development of her areas, is much less as Pakistan canals are fed with flow supplies. There is thus a great loss to India as not she is deprived of flow waters of the rivers flowing in her own territory but any additional supplies have to be found by expensive storage projects.

The situation is further worsened for India because of the cost of the link canals and other works which India is required to pay to Pakistan. These link channals are required by Pakistan in her territory to replace supplies of the Eastern rivers. India feels that having the right of using waters in her own territory, she is under no obligation to make any such payment to somebody else.

The arrangement is thus going to involve India in heavy financial burden as the new canals in India, under the division of waters envisaged in the Bank Proposal would be much more expensive than if all the waters available to India (including the Chenab) and indispensable for her normal development, could have been utilized therein.

India thus feels that it has to make heavy sacrifices to use her own waters.

Nevertheless India has decided to accept the principles of the Bank Proposal in the Interest of a speedy and constructive settlement. She has offered her goodwill to the maximum in appreciation of the Bank’s services which she believes are motivated by a spirit of impartiality and fairness displayed by the management and engineers of the International Bank in their deliberations during the last 2 1/2 years.

Even though the contribution of the Bank towards the solution of this long drawn dispute is regarded as invaluable, India, consistent with her obligations to her own people, cannot stretch her concessions any further.

It is hoped that Pakistan and the rest of the world will have due appreciation of the heavy sacrifices and concessions made by India with a desire to end the long drawn dispute and to enable each country to go ahead with its programme of development. These sacrifices and concessions by India cannot be justified on any other grounds.
Statement made by Irrigation, Power and Planning Minister Gulzarilal Nanda in Lok Sabha on the India – Pakistan Dispute on the use of Indus Basin Waters.

New Delhi, March 5, 1955.

On 27 August 1954, as the House will recollect, after giving a brief history of the negotiations on the canal water dispute, I referred to the World Bank proposal of 5 February 1954, which India accepted, but which Pakistan did not. At the instance of the Bank discussions were resumed in Washington on 6 December 1954, on the basis of certain new terms of reference. These terms of reference were published on 13 December 1954.

‘The management of the International Bank attach great importance to finding a satisfactory solution of this dispute. When the discussions were resumed in December 1954, it was decided that the Bank group taking part in these discussions should be under the direct guidance of the Bank’s management and that Mr. W.A.B. Iliff, Assistant to the President of the Bank, should represent the management as the day-to-day head of the Bank team. The rest of the Bank group includes Messrs. Wheeler, Bashore and Bass who have been participating in this work on behalf of the Bank since the beginning. As the new phase of the work involved detailed planning, it was necessary for the Bank to add to its staff a certain number of new engineers.

There is no question of going over the entire ground afresh or re-opening all the intricate issues. The terms of reference are quite clear, and the starting point of the new negotiations remains as before the division of waters originally proposed by the Bank on 5 February 1954. The field trip has become necessary partly to enable the new officers of the Bank to acquaint themselves with the Indus Basin and partly to examine at site some of the specific problems which have arisen in the preparation of a comprehensive plan under the Bank proposal. It is not correct to say that the Bank Mission has no personal knowledge of the problems of the Indus Basin. Messrs. Iliff, Wheeler and Bengston - three members of the Mission - have been associated with the negotiations from the very beginning.

The Government of India are hopeful that with the deep interest evinced by the World Bank and the determination of both sides to resolve the dispute, a satisfactory settlement would be reached.

Whereas representatives of India and of Pakistan, together with representatives of the International Bank, are engaged in the preparation of a comprehensive plan for the irrigation use of the waters of the Indus System of rivers, and,

Whereas it is considered desirable that ad hoc transitional arrangements should be made for the period 1st April to 30th September, 1955.

Now therefore, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agree as follows:

1. Except as provided in paragraphs 2 and 3 below, India agrees to limit canal withdrawals in Indian territory in each 10-day period during the months of June and September 1955, and in the first 10-day period of July, to the equivalent of the following:
   (a) 10,250 cusecs during June and the first 10-day period of July, and 10,500 cusecs during September, from the Sutlej, as at Rupar, plus
   (b) 5,500 cusecs from the Sutlej and Beas combined as at Ferozepore, provided that the withdrawal from the Beas component does not exceed 16% of that component, plus
   (c) Any Ravi supplies transferred to the Beas and received at Ferozepore.

2. In addition to the withdrawals that India would be entitled to make under paragraph 1 above, India may make further withdrawals equivalent to amounts related to Pakistan’s ability to replace. These amounts be ten-day periods, shall be the aggregate of (a) and (b) below:
   (a) 80% of the equivalent (at Ferozepore) of any Ravi supplies escaped below Madhopur, and
   (b) The following ad hoc amounts:

(b) When there is an escape below Islam, India may withdraw amounts equivalent to the amount of these escapage.

(c) There shall be no restriction on Indian withdrawals:

(i) Between July 11 and August 31, 1955, or

(ii) when, during any 10-day period, the supply at Ferozepore below (including withdrawals by the Dipalpur Canal), plus the amounts specified in paragraph 2 above, exceed 35,000 cusecs in June or in the first 10-day period of July, and 30,000 cusecs in September.

4. The corrections to be applied for time-lag, gains and losses shall be as set out in Annex I to this Agreement.

5. India will continue to supply the existing withdrawals of Central Bari Doab Canals as hitherto.

6. An attempt will be made to balance water accounts by ten-day periods, but any excess or deficit in Indian withdrawals in any ten-day period will be carried over to the next ten-day period for adjustment.

7. The Governments of India and Pakistan will each nominate a Special Commissioner, who shall be charged with the responsibility of supervising, in India and in Pakistan respectively, the implementation of this Agreement. Each Government may, if it so desires, appoint a Deputy Special Commissioner to assist the Special Commissioner.
(ii) The two Commissioners will consult with each other, on the request of either, and each Commissioner will furnish to the Commissioner of the other Government the data specified in Annex II to this Agreement. On the request of the Commissioner of the other Government, each Government will afford to the Commissioner of the other Government, or his Deputy, all reasonable access to the irrigation works concerned.

(iii) In the event of any serious damage to irrigation works arising from causes beyond the control of the Government of Pakistan, which would have the effect of diminishing the supplies in the Balloki-Suleimange Link, there shall be consultation between the Special Commissioners as to whether or not any modification should be made in the terms of paragraph 2 of this Agreement on account of such an emergency, and also with regard to the steps to be taken to restore the position to normal. In the event of such an emergency, the use of the B-R-B Link will be considered by the Special Commissioners.

(iv) In the event of any dispute arising with respect to the implementation of this Agreement, which cannot be resolved by discussion between the Special Commissioners, the matter will be referred to the representatives of the two Governments (on the Indus Water Talks in Washington) either of whom may, if he considers it necessary, enlist the good offices of the International Bank.

8. This Agreement will be without prejudice to any rights or claims of either Government, and will imply no commitments other than those specified herein for the period covered by the Agreement.

9. This agreement applies to the period April 1, 1955 to September 30, 1955. For the period April 1, 1955 to May 31, 1955, the amounts actually withdrawn by India are accepted for the purposes of this Agreement on an ad hoc basis.

New Delhi, June 23, 1955.

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, with the good offices of the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development, have entered into an Inter-Governmental Agreement which was signed in Washington D.C., on 21 June 1955 by the leaders of the Indian and the Pakistan delegations now in Washington. The two delegations are engaged in the preparation of a comprehensive plan for the irrigation use of the waters of the Indus system of rivers. The Inter-Government Agreement makes provision for ad hoc transitional arrangements for the period 1 April to 30 September 1955, and, after taking into account Pakistan’s ability to transfer water in replacement from the western rivers, establishes agreed ad hoc amounts for additional canal withdrawals by India from the three eastern rivers (Ravi, Beas and Sutlej) during the period covered by the Agreement.

The conclusion of this Agreement enables the Indian and Pakistani delegations to continue to work, with the participation of the International Bank, on the preparation of the comprehensive plan, in an atmosphere of co-operation and goodwill.

2465. Agreement between the Governments of India and Pakistan on ad hoc Transitional Arrangement for the use of the Waters of the Indus System of Rivers.

WHEREAS representatives of India and Pakistan, together with representatives of the International Bank, are engaged in the preparation of a comprehensive plan for the irrigation use of the waters of the Indus system of rivers, and

WHEREAS by agreement dated June 21, 1955, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agreed upon ad hoc transition arrangements for the period April 1, 1955, to September 30, 1955, and

WHEREAS it is considered desirable that ad hoc transitional arrangements should be made for the period October 1, 1955, to March 31, 1956,

Now THEREFORE, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agree as follows:

1. Except as provided in paragraphs 2 and 3 below, India agrees to limit canal withdrawals in Indian territory in each water accounting period specified in paragraph 6 of this Agreement to the equivalent of the following:

   (a) 10,000 cusecs from the Sutlej, as at Rupar, plus

   (b) 5,100 cusecs during the first 15 days of October, 3,500 cusecs during the next 16 days of October and 2,720 cusecs thereafter from the Sutlej and Beas combined, as at Ferozepur, provided that the withdrawal from the Beas component corrected for gains and losses between Ferozepore and Islam does not exceed 16% of that component, as so corrected, up to and including October 15, 1955, or 21% thereafter, plus

   (c) Any Ravi supplies (after having given effect to paragraph 5 of this Agreement) transferred to the Beas and received at Ferozepore.

2. In addition to the withdrawals that India would be entitled to make under paragraph 1 above, India may make further withdrawals equivalent to amounts related to Pakistan’s ability to replace. These amounts for the first 15 days of October shall be the aggregate of (a) and (b) below:

   (a) 80% of any Ravi supplies escaped below Madhopur, and

   (b) an ad hoc amount of 500 cusecs in view of the expected good supplies in 1955. These amounts for the period thereafter shall be such amounts, if any, as may be agreed upon between the Special Commissioners.
3. In addition to the withdrawals that India would be entitled to make under paragraphs 1 and 2 above, India may make further withdrawals to the extent and in the circumstances specified below:

(a) When the supplies at Ferozepore below (including withdrawals by Dipalpur Canal) plus the amounts specified in paragraph 2 above exceed 13,000 cusecs during October 1-10 and 9,500 cusecs during October 11-15, India may withdraw 50% of the excess and will allow the balance to escape below Ferozepore.

(b) When there is an escape below Islam (except during the annual closure at Islam headworks) India may withdraw amounts equivalent to the amount of the escapage.

(c) There shall be no restriction on Indian withdrawals from the Sutlej and Beas when, during any water accounting period specified in paragraph 6 of this Agreement, the supply at Ferozepore below, corrected for gains and losses between Ferozepore and Islam, including withdrawals of Dipalpur Canal, plus the amounts specified in paragraph 2 above, exceeds 25,000 cusecs during the first 15 days of October, and 10,000 cusecs thereafter.

4. The water account required under paragraph 6 of the Agreement will be prepared on the basis of identical dates at various points of river supply and canal withdrawals, without any allowance for time-lag, and without any allowance for gains or losses, except for those in the reach from Ferozepore to Islam. For this reach; the gains and losses shall be the actual gains and losses, calculated without any allowance for time-lag.

If, at any time between the closure of the Suleimanke Barrage (about the middle of October) and December 25, any supplies are released below Suleimanke, the Special Commissioners will agree on an estimate of the gains which would have accrued in the reach from Suleimanke to Islam but for such release and these estimated gains will be used in the water account instead of the actual gains or losses but not beyond December 25. This provision will not apply if the release is made when the supply reaching Suleimanke is in excess of 6,000 cusecs or when the supply reaching Islam falls below 350 cusecs, in which event the actual gains or losses will be adopted for purposes of the water account.

5. India will continue to supply the existing withdrawals of Central Bari Doab Canal as hitherto.

6. An attempt will be made to balance water-accounts by ten-day periods (except for the period October 11 to October 20 when the water account will be balanced by five-day periods), but any excess or deficit in Indian withdrawals in any such period will be carried over to the next period for adjustment.

7.(1) The Governments of India and Pakistan will each nominate a Special Commissioner, who shall be charged with the responsibility of supervising, in India and in Pakistan respectively, the implementation of this Agreement. Each Government may, if it so desires, appoint a Deputy Special Commissioner to assist the Special Commissioner.

(2) The two Commissioners will consult with each other on the request of either, and each Commissioner will furnish to the Commissioner of the other Government the data specified in Annex I to this Agreement. On the request of the Commissioner of the other Government, each Government will afford to the Commissioner of the other Government, or his Deputy, all reasonable access to the irrigation works concerned.

(3) In the event of any dispute arising with respect to the implementation of this Agreement, which cannot be resolved by discussion between the Special Commissioners, the matter will be referred to the representatives of the two Governments (on the Indus Water Talks in Washington) either of whom may, if he considers it necessary, enlist the good offices of the International Bank.

8. This Agreement will be without prejudice to any rights of claims of either Government, and will imply no commitments other than those specified herein for the period covered by the Agreement.

This Agreement applies to the period October 1, 1955, to March 31, 1956.

DONE at Washington, D.C., this 31st day of October, 1955, in three counterparts, of which one shall be retained by each of the parties to this Agreement and the third deposited in the archives of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

New Delhi, March 1, 1956.

Dear Mr. Black,

Thank you for your letter of the 13th February, 1956, with which you have forwarded a note by Mr. Iliff regarding repairs to the damage caused to certain portions of the Firozpur Head-works by the floods in October, 1955.

We have been anxious to repair this damage as rapidly as possible and, in fact, have made repeated attempts to do so since December last. To our surprise and regret, the Pakistan authorities, who stand most to gain by these repairs, have come in the way of work being done. Because of this interference, a situation has been created which might endanger the supply of water from the Firozpur Head-works to the Dipalpur Canal, which supplies water to cultivators in Pakistan. I am enclosing a note with plans to explain the situation.

In accordance with the Radcliffe Award, which demarcated the boundary between India and Pakistan, Bela and nearby land is clearly in Indian territory. Unfortunately Pakistan authorities have progressively encroached on the Indian territory in the region of the Firozpur Head-works. Even so, Bela was not under their occupation. But when earth was being removed by our engineers from Bela for this repair work, Pakistan authorities interfered.

You will appreciate that the Government of India cannot admit the right of any foreign power to interfere with their sovereignty over any part of the territory of India. The difficulty that has arisen is none of our seeking. We do not want to raise any question in this indirect way. All we want is to carry out the necessary repairs to the Firozpur Headworks so as not to cause any hardship to the Pakistan cultivators who receive water from the Dipalpur Canal. I would have thought that the Pakistan authorities would cooperate with us in this matter in every way.

We have undertaken repairs to the floor of the right pocket, despite the greater labour and heavier cost involved in bringing earth on boats from long distance. While these repairs will ensure reasonable supply to the Dipalpur Canal, there is still a serious risk of the supplies being affected by our inability, owing to Pakistan's interference, to carry out repairs to the Right Divide Wall.

Though valuable time has been lost, we are, even at this late stage, prepared to carry out these repairs provided there is no further interference. We are in fact issuing instructions for the work to be carried out.

I am enclosing in this connection copy of a telegram dated 25th February received by us from the Pakistan Government and our reply to this telegram. The solution of a purely technical problem of repairs, which are vital to the welfare and well-being of Pakistan cultivators, has been unnecessarily complicated by the Pakistan Government making unjustified political claims to Indian territory and interfering through their military pickets with the repair work being done. I can assure you, however, that we shall continue to take all measures that are possible to see that supplies of water to Pakistan cultivators who depend upon the Dipalpur Canal are not unduly affected.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

Jawaharlal Nehru

Editor's Note: During the unprecedented floods in October 1955, the Right Upstream Divide Wall and the upstream floor in the Right Pocket of the Firozpur Head-works were badly damaged. Maintenance of the Head-works was the responsibility of the Government of India. In identical letters to the Prime Minister of India and Pakistan, Black appealed that Governments of both the countries should endeavour to arrive at a mutually satisfactory understanding on the points at issue in order that the necessary repairs proceed without delay.

On 11 January 1956, the Government of India requested the Pakistan Government to issue immediate instructions to the military and other authorities to allow work on the bund to proceed without any interference. In their reply dated 25 February, the Government of Pakistan, while agreeing to allow the removal of earth up to one million cubic feet from portions of the Bela, said that the balance should be found by India from places in Indian control. Expressing surprise that Pakistan Military should have interfered and any conditions should have been imposed for removal of earth from Indian territory, the Government of India stated in their reply on 1 March that they were nevertheless issuing instructions for work to be started. They further said that if, in spite of their best efforts, adequate supplies of water could still not be passed in the Dipalpur canal at any stage due to incomplete repairs, the responsibility would be entirely that of Pakistan.

Subject: Payment of Canal Water charges by Pakistan under the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of 4.5.1948

Sir,

I am directed to refer to the Government of India’s Express letter No. F.6(4)-Pak.III/56 dated the 2nd April 1956 on the subject mentioned above and to state as follows:

2. The accumulation of “disputed” charges due for deposit in the Reserve Bank of India, under the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May, 1948, by the Government of West Pakistan has now reached the figure of Rs. 70,22,705/- for the period 1st July 1950 to 30th June 1956. The Government of India have in the past made it clear to the Government of Pakistan that the unilateral action taken by the Government of Pakistan in 1950 modifying the arrangement for deposit of these amounts was a serious contravention of the 1948 Agreement. The Government of India have, however, in a spirit of goodwill, continued to fulfill their obligations to supply water to Pakistani canals under the Agreement. I am therefore to request you to move the Government of Pakistan to instruct the Government of West Pakistan to take early action to deposit the sum of Rs. 70,22,705/- in ESCROW in the Reserve Bank of India in accordance with the Agreement of the 4th May 1948 and to make deposits for future quarterly periods from the 1st July 1956 in a similar manner.

3. The sums outstanding from the Government of West Pakistan on account of “undisputed” charges for the period of 1st July 1955 to the 30th June 1956 and on account of certain unilateral deductions made by the Government of West Pakistan from “undisputed” charges in the past now stand at the figure of Rs.47,02,231/ The details are :

(i) Unilateral deductions made by Pakistan in the past on account of India’s share of the maintenance of that portion of the Right Marginal Bund which falls in Pakistani territory under the Radcliffe Award:

(ii) Charges for the quarter July-September 1955 Rs. 9,72,500

(iii) Charges for the quarter October-December 1955 Rs. 4,99,140

(iv) Charges for the quarter January-March 1956 Rs. 18,83,700

(v) Charges for the quarter April-June 1956 Rs. 9,70,330

Total : Rs. 47,02,231

4. The Government of Pakistan in their letter No.1(I)/4/55 dated the 29th December 1955 and No.1(I)/4/56 dated the 29th February 1956 intimated that the Government of West Pakistan has been instructed to remit to the Government of the Punjab the undisputed charges for the period July-September 1955 and October-December 1955. These charges amounting to Rs. 14,71,640/- have not yet been received by the Government of the Punjab. The Government of India are unable to understand the delay by the Government of West Pakistan in complying with the instructions of the Government of Pakistan. I am therefore to request you to move the Government of Pakistan to take necessary steps to ensure that the charges for the two period mentioned above are immediately paid by the Government of West Pakistan to the Government of the Punjab.

5. The questions raised by the Government of Pakistan in their letter No. 1(I)/4/56 of the 29th February 1956 regarding the “undisputed” charges for the quarter January-March 1956 are under examination. Pending this examination, I am to request you to move the Government of Pakistan to arrange for immediate payment of the charges as specified to the Government of the Punjab. Any adjustment that may become necessary as a result of the examination of the questions raised by the Government of Pakistan in their letter of the 29th February mentioned above can be made in subsequent quarters. I am also to request you to move the Government of Pakistan to arrange for payment of the unilateral deductions made in the past by the Government of West Pakistan from the “undisputed” charges and the “undisputed” charges for the period April-June 1956.

Yours faithfully

Washington (D.C), September 24, 1956.

Whereas representatives of India and of Pakistan, together with representatives of the International Bank, are engaged in the preparation of a comprehensive plan for the irrigation use of the waters of the Indus system of rivers, and

Whereas by agreements dated June 21, 1955, and October 31, 1955, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agreed upon ad hoc transitional arrangement for the period April 1, 1955, to September 30, 1955, and for the period October 1, 1955, to March 1956, and

Whereas it is considered desirable that ad hoc transitional arrangements should be made for the period April 1, 1956, to March 31, 1957,

Now therefore, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agree as follows:-

A. For the period April 1 to October 15,
1. Except as provided in paragraphs 2 and 3 below, India agrees to limit canal withdrawals in Indian territory in each water-accounting period specified in paragraph 9 of this Agreement to the equivalent of the following:

(a) 10,250 cusecs from April 1 to July 10, 10,500 cusecs during September, and 10,000 cusecs from October 1 to 15 from the Sutlej, as at Rupar, plus

(b) 3,500 cusecs during April, 4,500 cusecs during May and 5,500 cusecs from June 1 to July 10 and during September and 5,100 cusecs from October 1 to 15 from the Sutlej and Beas combined as at Ferozepore, provided that the withdrawal from the Beas component does not exceed 16% of that component (during the period October 1 to October 15 the Beas component shall be as corrected for gains and losses between Ferozepore and Islam), plus

(c) Any Ravi supplies (after having given effect to paragraph 8 of this Agreement) transferred to the Beas and received at Ferozepore.

2. In addition to the withdrawals that India would be entitled to make under paragraph 1 above, India may make further withdrawals equivalent to amounts related to Pakistan's ability to replace. These amounts by water-accounting periods from April 1 to July 10 and from September 1 to October 15, shall be the aggregate of (a) and (b) below limited to amounts related to the effective capacities of the link canals, such amounts being shown in Column 4 under (b) below:

(b) The ad hoc amounts shown in Column 2 below for each water-accounting period,

(c) If during the last water-accounting period of September and the first fifteen days of October river supplies in Pakistan are sufficiently good to permit the transfer of additional amounts, Pakistan will cause such supplies to be transferred and will through its Special Commissioner notify the Indian Special Commissioner of the amounts which may be made available as additional replacement supplies.

3. In addition to the withdrawals that India would be entitled to make under paragraphs 1 and 2 above, India may make further withdrawals to the extent and in the circumstances specified below:

(a) When in any water-accounting period the supplies at Ferozepore below (including withdrawals by the Dipalpur Canal), plus the aggregate of the amounts specified for India in paragraph 2 above, exceed the amounts set out below, India may withdraw the equivalent of 50% of the excess and will allow the balance to escape below Ferozepore:

(b) When there is an escapage below Islam, India may withdraw amounts equivalent to the amount of the escapage.

(c) There shall be no restriction on Indian withdrawals
   (i) between July 11 and August 31, or
   (ii) when, during any water-accounting period, the supply at Ferozepore below (including withdrawals by the Dipalpur Canal), plus the amounts specified in paragraph 2 above, exceeds 35,000 cusecs between April 1 and July 10, 30,000 cusecs in September (without correction for gains and losses), and 25,000 cusecs (corrected for gains and losses between Ferozepore and Islam) during the first 15 days of October.

B. For the period October 16 to March 31:

4. Except as provided in paragraphs 5 and 6 below, India agrees to limit canal withdrawals in Indian territory in each water-accounting period specified in paragraph 9 of this Agreement to the equivalent of the following:
   (a) 10,000 cusecs from the Sutlej, as at Rupar, plus
   (b) 3,500 cusecs during the last 16 days of October and 2,720 cusecs thereafter from the Sutlej and Beas combined, as at Ferozepore, provided that the withdrawal from the Beas component corrected for gains and losses between Ferozepore and Islam does not exceed 21% of that component, as so corrected, plus
   (c) Any Ravi supplies (after having given effect to paragraph 8 of this Agreement) transferred to the Beas and received at Ferozepore.
5. In addition to the withdrawals that India would be entitled to make under paragraph 4 above, India may make further withdrawals equivalent to amounts related to Pakistan’s ability to replace. These amounts shall be such amounts, if any, as may be agreed upon between the Special Commissioners.

6. In addition to the withdrawals that India would be entitled to make under paragraphs 4 and 5 above, India may make further withdrawals to the extent and in the circumstances specified below:

(a) When there is an escapage below Islam (except during the annual closure at Islam head-works) India may withdraw amounts equivalent of the amount of the escapage.

(b) There shall be no restriction on Indian withdrawals from the Sutlej and Beas when, during any water-accounting period specified in paragraph 9 of this Agreement, the supply at Ferozepore below, corrected for gains and losses between Ferozepore and Islam, including withdrawals of Dipalpur Canal, plus the amounts specified in paragraph 5 above, exceeds 10,000 cusecs.

(c) General

7. The water-account required under paragraph 9 of this Agreement will, during the period April 1 to July 10 (Ferozepore dates), be prepared with due allowance for time-lag as set out in annex I to this Agreement. During the period July 11 to March 31 such water-account will be prepared on the basis of identical dates at various points of river supply and canal withdrawals, without any allowance for time-lag. During the period April 1 to September 30, the corrections to be applied for gains and losses shall be as set out in Annex I to this Agreement. During the period October 1 to March 31 there shall be no allowance for gains or losses, except for those in the reach from Ferozepore to Islam. For this reach, the gains and losses shall be the actual gains and losses, calculated without any allowance for time-lag.

If, at any time between the closure of the Suleimanke Barrage (about the middle of October) and December 25, any supplies are released below Suleimanke, the Special Commissioners will agree on an estimate of the gains which would have accrued in the reach from Suleimanke to Islam but for such release and these estimated gains will be used in the water-account instead of the actual gains or losses but not beyond December 25. This provision will not apply if the release is made when the supply reaching Suleimanke is in excess of 6,000 cusecs or when the supply reaching Islam falls below 350 cusecs, in which event the actual gains or losses will be adopted for purposes of the water-account.
8. India will continue to supply the existing withdrawals of Central Bari Doab Canal as hitherto.

9. Each calendar month will be divided into three periods (1st to 10th, 11th to 20th and 21st to the end of the month) for the purposes of the water-account, except October which will be divided into four periods (1st to 10th, 11th to 15th, 16th to 20th and 21st to 31st). An attempt will be made to balance the water-account for each of the periods specified above but any excess or deficit in Indian withdrawals in any such period will be carried over to the next period for adjustment.

10. (1) The Governments of India and Pakistan will each nominate a Special Commissioner, who shall be charged with responsibility of supervising, in India and in Pakistan respectively, the implementation of this Agreement. Each government may, if it so desires, appoint a Deputy Special Commissioner to assist the Special Commissioner.

(2) The two Commissioners will consult with each other, on the request of either, and each Commissioner will furnish to the Commissioner of the other Government the data specified in Annex II to this Agreement. On the request of the Commissioner of the other Government, each Government will afford to the Commissioner of the other Government, or his Deputy, all reasonable access to the irrigation works concerned.

(3) In the event of any serious damage to irrigation works arising from causes beyond the control of the Government of Pakistan, which would have the effect of diminishing the supplies in the Balloki-Suleimanke Link, there shall be consultation between the Special Commissioners as to whether or not any modification should be made in the terms of paragraph 2 of this Agreement on account of such an emergency, and also with regard to the steps to be taken to restore the position to normal.

(4) In the event of any dispute arising with respect to the implementation of this Agreement, which cannot be resolved by discussion between the Special Commissioners, the matter will be referred to the representatives of the two Governments (participating with the international Bank in the Indus Water Talks) either of whom may, if he considers it necessary, enlist the good offices of the International Bank.

11. This Agreement will be without prejudice to any rights or claims of either Government, and will simply no commitments other than those specified herein for the period covered by the Agreement.

12. This Agreement applies to the period April 1, 1956, to March 31, 1957.
Done at Washington, D.C., this 24th day of September, 1956, in three counterparts, of which one shall be retained by each of the parties to this Agreement and the third deposited in the archives of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Reference Correspondence resting with your Letters No. F. 6(4) –P-III/56 dated 2nd and 4th January 1957, regarding demand of the Government of India for the payment of disputed and undisputed charges for the operation in India of Irrigation works for the benefit of Pakistan.

2. It is recognized that when one country calls upon another to build, operate and maintain works for its benefit, it assumes a legal obligation to put the latter in funds to cover the actual cost of construction, operation and maintenance. If the two countries agree to the building, operation and maintenance of these works for their joint benefit, the costs are to be shared on a proportionate basis. When a country calls upon another to devote in parts for its benefit works already built by the latter, the former must pay in addition to the share of the actual cost of operation and maintenance, its share of the annual carrying share of the capital value (or in the alternative, its share of the capital value or capitalized carrying cost). As to this there is no dispute.
3. For almost nine years, Pakistan has in fact paid to India substantial sums representing at least Pakistan’s full share of the operation and maintenance and carrying charges of the capital cost of the works built before Partition for the benefit of the areas now in Pakistan and India. Over the last several years Pakistan has had to operate works in Pakistan in part for the benefit of the areas in India. The amount representing India’s share of the cost is considerably larger than the amount representing Pakistan’s share of the costs of works operated in India in part for Pakistan’s benefit. India has not so far tendered reimbursement of these costs. It has declined to include in the interim agreements, which called upon Pakistan to operate works for India’s benefit, if any provision for reimbursement beyond the provisions that the agreement is without prejudice to Pakistan’s claims. More recently it has, through its Water Delegation in Washington, sought to avoid even a discussion of procedures for providing for reimbursement. Notwithstanding this, the Government of India have repeatedly asked for punctual payment of Pakistan’s share of the cost incurred by India and in addition have demanded of Pakistan to deposit with the Reserve Bank of India additional payments representing charges, which India has recognized are disputed.

4. Since Partition, Pakistan has fulfilled its obligations to pay the undisputed charges claimed by the Government of India. The charges for the quarter beginning July and October 1956 and January 1957 will be paid as soon as the Government of India respond to our request for explanation of the extra-ordinary high charges for the quarter ending January – March 1956 which were paid subject to adjustment. These represent India’s view of Pakistan’s share of the actual cost of operation and maintenance of the Madhopur and Ferozpur head-works and the Upper Bari Doab canals for the joint benefit of India and Pakistan, and the maintenance and operation for the benefit of Pakistan of the 300 yards of the Diplapur Canal under Indian control. Pakistan has done this though the supplies received from these works have fallen often and at times seriously below Pakistan’s share of the carrying charges of the capital value, taken at twice the original cost. Twice the original cost has been accepted as a basis because the Arbitral in arriving at the value as of partition took twice the book value (original cost). The Government of India have, notwithstanding this added two further charges. These are the disputed charges.

5. The first of the disputed charges represents the carrying charges of the capital value of the Madhopur works. This demand is for the difference between undisputed charge (based in twice the book value) and the Indian claim for carrying charge based on four times the book value – twice the value at partition found by the Arbitral Tribunal. The second of the disputed charges is a claim for the so called Seigniorage. The basis for this claim has not been made clear. Certainly no precedent for such a claim has found sanction under international law. In the opinion of the Government of Pakistan this claim is not granted and is contrary to the holdings of the Arbitral Tribunal and the agreements and orders governing Partition.

6. In 1948 when the supplies were cut off in the canals crossing the newly drawn boundary, the Government of India first declined to restore the flow for Kharif 1948 unless payment was made for the disputed charges. After protest it was stated that the flow could be resumed if the West Punjab Government deposited in the Reserve Bank of India “such ad hoc sum as may be specified by the Prime Minister of India”. Out of this the bank was authorized to pay over to the East Punjab Government only the amount representing “sums over which there is no dispute”. The balance representing the disputed charges was to be held in escrow. The question whether the disputed charges were payable was thus left open for future negotiation, or if negotiation failed, adjudication. It was contemplated on both sides when it was agreed in 1948 to make this one deposit in escrow that the question would be resolved in one way or another before the end of Kharif 1948. Unfortunately, subsequent meetings failed to resolve the differences.

7. Notwithstanding that Pakistan considers the disputed charges to be entirely unwarranted and notwithstanding that there has been no agreement to deposit any disputed charges after the end of Kharif 1948, the Government of Pakistan, as a gesture of goodwill and to promote an atmosphere conducive to a friendly solution, deposited in escrow with the Reserve Bank of India the amounts indicated by the Government of India for Rabi 1948-49, for Kharif 1949, for Rabi 1949-50 and for the first three months of Kharif 1950. Throughout this period attempts were made by Pakistan to resolve the differences by negotiation. All of these met in failure. Every proposal by the Government of Pakistan to resolve the question by impartial and effective adjudication was rejected. On October 8, 1950, the Prime Minister of India admitted that the differences between Pakistan and India regarding the waters of the Indus Basin were a proper subject for adjudication, including, it was presumed, the incidental issue over the disputed charges. He offered to submit the questions for adjudication but the court he proposed was to consist of an even number of judges from Pakistan and India. He refused Pakistan’s request to make the adjudication impartial and effective by adding a neutral Chairman. He also refused to agree if the court with an even number of judges reached a deadlock, the matter would automatically go to an impartial and effective court. He agreed only to agree later on a “special agency” that could be mutually agreeable—in other words, he agreed only to resume the negotiations that had failed.

8. Pakistan maintains that a deposit made in escrow carries with it an obligation on the part of claimants to the deposit to take part in proceedings for an impartial and effective adjudication of their rights within a reasonable time following failure to resolve the differences by negotiation. The Government of India having failed to comply with this obligation, the Government of Pakistan by telegram No. 4956, dated November 6, 1950 informed the Government of India that the next deposits of disputed charges would be under an escrow arrangement that assured to each side prompt means of asserting its rights by impartial and effective adjudication. The telegram reads in part as follows:

“…Government of Pakistan has today established with the State Bank of Pakistan an irrevocable credit in amount of 15 laks rupees (Indian) in favour of Escrow Trust Company, New York City to be held by it as Escrow agent. This amount is believed to be ample to cover all disputed canal water claims for the year ending June 30th 1951. If the Indian claims are larger than this amount, Government of Pakistan would appreciate being informed.”

The telegram described the agreement reached with the escrow agent to pay over to the Government of India such portion of the credit as was necessary

“…to satisfy any judgment of International Court of Justice, or of any other International Tribunal agreed to between India and Pakistan and handed down in proceedings certified to ESCROW agent to have been begun not later than June 30th 1951 for recovery of charges claimed by Government of India to be owning as “SEIGNORAGE” for water received by Pakistan during the year beginning with July 1st 1950 through Central Bari Doab canals, DIPALPUR canal and Bahawalpur State distributary of Eastern Gray Canal, or as carrying charges during that year for MADHOPUR Headworks and carrier channels in excess of amounts shown to have been previously paid.”

The Government of India failed to take advantage of the opportunity to establish the correctness of their claim and to collect the amount, if any, due to them.

9. The deposit made covered the year July1, 1950 to June 30, 1951. The Government of India, according to their note of December 16, 1950 found they were “entirely unable to agree or associate themselves, in any way”, with such an effective escrow arrangement. They persisted in demanding that the amounts of disputed charges should be deposited with the Reserve bank of India under an escrow that India had not yet agreed to implement. As the period agreed by the effective escrow drew to a close, the Government of Pakistan by note dated June 22, 1951 informed the Government of India:

“While it is believed that there is no basis for the Indian demand that the amounts in dispute should be deposited, the Government of Pakistan are nevertheless willing to establish an escrow credit for the year beginning 1st July 1951, similar to the one now established for the year ending 30th June 1951, if the Government of India request it. Likewise the Government of Pakistan are prepared to extend by June 30th 1952 the availability of Escrow Credit established for the year ending June 30th 1951 if the Government of India request that.

The Escrow Credit have been established for the period from July 1, 1951 to June 30, 1952 for the reason only that the Government of India have not made the appropriate request.

10. The offer quoted above, made on June 22 1951, is renewed and is made applicable to all demands for disputed charges for the period beginning after June 30, 1950. In other words, the Government of Pakistan remain prepared to establish with the Schroder Trust Company in New York City an irreversible credit to the full amount of the disputed charges claimed for the year after June 30, 1950 to be held in effective escrow. The Government of Pakistan are further prepared to agree to a period of one year from the establishment of that effective escrow in which the Government of India may indicate preference against the credit established for the period beginning July 1, 1950 and the subsequent credits for the determination of the correctness of the Indian contention that it is legally entitled to the disputed charges. The Government are further prepared to discuss with the Government of India with the good offices of the International Bank any alternative to this procedure that will ensure to both sides ample protection of their legal rights. The Government of Pakistan await only the request of the Government of India that this be done.

11. Adverting to the recognized obligation of a country to reimbursement of the actual cost of the construction, operation and maintenance of works for the benefit of another country, the Government of Pakistan regret that they must invite directly the attention of the Government of India to a matter that has been discussed indirectly through the Water Delegations of the two countries and the International Bankers good offices. In connection with the interim agreements that have been negotiated through the Water Delegations, and otherwise, the Government of Pakistan have had to operate certain works in Pakistan in part for the benefit of India. Very substantial sums are involved in the operation of, for example, the Bhambanwala – Ravi – Bedian, Upper Chenab, Marala – Ravi and Belloki – Sulemanki canals and their related headworks to release supplies for new uses in India. The Indian representatives refused to agree to incorporate in the interim arrangements provisions for reimbursement to Pakistan. The agreements, while failing to provide for reimbursement, preserve the financial claims of each side. As a step towards reaching agreement on the amounts owing and setting up procedures for payment, the head of the Pakistan Water Delegation on November 23, 1955 submitted the following proposal:

“…up to the present time no move has been made either towards determining the amount of India's accumulating indebtedness for the operation for its benefit of works in Pakistan or towards reappraising the extent of Pakistan's obligation for the operation of works in India in the light of the developments of recent years.

“3. We feel that the time has come when steps should be taken to put on an equitable basis the mutual accounts growing out of these operations. At the present time, in view of the large sums which Pakistan is spending for works from which India benefits, the net financial obligation is from India to Pakistan. To avoid augmenting the present imbalance in the accounts which otherwise might be paid to India should be retained and applied against India’s growing financial obligations to Pakistan.

“4. India and Pakistan have been using the Bank’s good offices both as to the overall problem and as to the interim arrangements. The purpose of this letter is to solicit the exercise of the Bank’s good offices as to the financial side of the interim arrangements, which is of particular importance to Pakistan. Our thought is that without allowing down or interfering with the other work, the Bank might invite the two governments to join with it in creating a separate tripartite committee to study the problem and make recommendations for its solution. In the mean time each nation should, of course, keep all necessary records and accounts and make them available to the committee so that when a conclusion is reached it will be possible to apply it retrospectively as well as prospectively”.

12. The head of the Pakistan Water Delegation was subsequently informed through the International Bank that the head of the Indian Water Delegation has indicated that his government was not prepared at the time to proceed with the Pakistan proposal. The Government of Pakistan request the Government of India to inform the head of the Indian Water Delegation that the time has now come to proceed with the Pakistan proposal.

EXPRESS LETTER

From : Foreign Karachi.
To : Foreign, New Delhi

Continuation our letter No. I(I)-4/57 of January 31, 1957 regarding demands of the Government of India for the payment of certain “undisputed” charges for the operation in India of irrigation works for the benefit of Pakistan.

2. The Government of India in their letter of April 9, 1956 mention a sum of Rs. 376,561 which had been withheld by Government of Pakistan from past payments of “undisputed” charges to offset the liability of the Government of India for the maintenance by Pakistan of the portion of the Ferozepore bund that lies in Pakistan territory. The Government of Pakistan considers that the withholding of these amounts as an offset for India’s liability was correct. They do not however, presume to be the final judge of the reasonableness of their own action in this regard, and are prepared at the request of the Government of India to establish an irrevocable credit in the amount of Rs. 376,561 under an escrow arrangement which would provide for payment over to the Government of India or the Government of Pakistan as determined by negotiation or by arbitration.

3. The Government of Pakistan are constrained once again to invite the attention of the Government of India to the fact that the request for an explanation of the extraordinarily high charges for the quarter January-March 1956 has not been complied with. These charges exceeded the highest previous charges for a January-March quarter by some Rs. 15 lakhs. The “undisputed” charges for the quarters July-September and October-December 1956, are, in the aggregate, less than this apparent overcharges. Under the circumstances, the Government of Pakistan consider that the West Pakistan Government have been entirely justified in seeking to postpone payments for these quarters pending receipt of the requested explanation, and a determination by agreement or arbitration of the proper amount of the charges for the quarter January-March 1956.
4. The Government of India, in their letter No. P.III/54/2824/2 dated January 3, 1956 state that “the difference between the ‘undisputed’ amount referred to in para 2 above, and that intimated for the previous quarters is due to the heavy repairs to the Madhopur Head-works and the Upper Bari Doab Canal System on account of the damage caused by the unprecedented floods of October 1955”. It has been and continues to be the opinion of the Government of Pakistan that Pakistan should bear its proper share of the cost of necessary repairs made in part for its benefits, but the Government of Pakistan are at the very least entitled to an accounting of the actual expenditures, an explanation as to why they were necessary, and the question remains as to whether they should be treated as current expenditures or as capital investments. In the latter case, the Pakistan payment should correspond to its share of the increased carrying charge, as pointed out in our letter No. I(I)-4/56 of February 29, 1956.

5. The Government of India in their letter No. F.6(5)P.III/56 dated April 9, 1956 assured that the points raised in the letter of the Government of Pakistan of February 29, 1956 were under examination. With this and subsequent assurances in mind, the Government of Pakistan instructed the West Pakistan Government to pay the “undisputed” charges for January-March 1956 as well as for April-June 1956. The delay in payments for the quarters July-September and October-December 1956 is attributable only to the failure of the Government of India to come forward with the explanation for the extraordinarily high charges for the quarter January-March 1956. Notwithstanding these explanations have not yet been received, but in faith that they will shortly be forthcoming, the Government of Pakistan have instructed the West Pakistan Government to pay the “undisputed” charges for the quarters July-September and October-December 1956 and also for the quarter January-March 1957. This instruction has been given in the further faith that if agreement is not reached as to the propriety of the extraordinarily high charges for the quarter January–March 1956, or the appropriate adjustment of these charges, then the Government of India will establish an irrevocable credit in the amount of Rs.15 lakhs under escrow arrangement which would provide for payment over to the Government of Pakistan as determined in further negotiation or by arbitration.

2471. Letter from President of World Bank Eugene Black to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

My dear Prime Minister,

Indus Waters

As you know, the present arrangements for the cooperative work between India, Pakistan and the Bank expired on March 31, 1957.

I feel that a situation has now arisen in which it is important that, not only the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, but also the Bank, should have an opportunity of reviewing the useful work which has been accomplished in the course of the cooperative discussions up to March 31, 1957.

For my part, I would wish the Bank to have some further period of time in which to complete the appraisal envisaged in paragraph 11 of the Aide Memoire of May 21, 1956, and to determine what future course of action might appropriately be proposed to each of the Governments.

I would therefore recommend that the two Governments should concur in a formal extension of the cooperative work until September 30, 1957.

During this period, the Bank does not envisage that any discussions would be held in Washington requiring the presence there of either of the Delegations. But, so long as the Bank is continuing its participation, I would hope that it would be possible for each of the Governments to keep mobilized the expert knowledge that the Delegations have acquired, in the event that the Bank, at some later date, may desire to enlist their help.

I have sent a letter in similar terms to the Prime Minister of Pakistan.

Yours sincerely

(Eugene R. Black)

His Excellency Jawaharlal Nehru
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi, India.

New Delhi, April 24, 1957.

Dear Mr. Black,

Thank you for your letter of 11th April 1957, recommending a formal extension of the cooperative work until September 30, 1957.

You have stated that a situation has now arisen in which it is important that the Bank and the Governments of India and Pakistan should have an opportunity of reviewing the work which has been accomplished in the course of the cooperative discussions. While agreeing to the extension of cooperative work until March 31, 1957, Government of India had expressed the hope that a sufficient measure of agreement will be forthcoming within the next few months in order that a final settlement could, with the assistance of the Bank, be reached by March 31, 1957. I am seriously concerned at the absence of any progress during this period. You will appreciate that, in the absence of any indication by the Government of Pakistan of their intention to accept the Bank proposal of February 1954, it is difficult for us to make any useful appraisal of the situation.

It was envisaged in the Bank Proposal that, after a transition period, roughly estimated to be about five years, it would not be necessary to continue any supplies to Pakistan from the Eastern rivers. Three of these five years have already elapsed. During this period, in view of our acute problems of food shortage and rehabilitation, we have been proceeding with certain development plans in areas which depend for their water supply on the Indus system of rivers. The Bhakra canals were opened in Kharif 1954, the Bhakra Dam and the Sirhind feeder will soon come into operation and work has been taken in hand on the construction of a canal from the Head-works at Harike to feed the arid areas of Rajasthan. These schemes form part of an integrated development plan and you will appreciate that they cannot be held up because Pakistan Government have delayed indication of their attitude to the Bank Proposal for over three years.

You have expressed the view that the Bank should have some further period of time in which to complete the appraisal envisaged in paragraph 11 of the aide-memoire of May 21, 1956, i.e., to consider whether the employment of its good offices could make any further contribution to a solution and to determine, in the light of this appraisal, what future course of action might appropriately be proposed to each of the Governments. I agree to the formal extension of cooperative work, as recommended by you, until September 30, 1957. I hope, however, that the Government of Pakistan will give an early indication of their policy with respect to the Bank Proposal as, obviously, this is necessary to assist the appraisal contemplated by the Bank and also for the appraisal by the Government of India of the cooperative work done so far.

During this period of formal extension of the cooperative work, our Representative will, as before, keep the Bank Representative informed of our views on various technical and financial problems relating to the cooperative work, in order to assist in every way the efforts of the Bank towards a final settlement of the question, which efforts my Government and I highly appreciate.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

Jawaharlal Nehru

2473. Note from Indian High Commission in Pakistan to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Karachi, May 27, 1957.

No.7/1/57-Genl. May 27, 1957

The High Commission of India presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations and has the honour, with reference to their Express Letter No.I(I)4/57, dated the 30th January 1957, regarding payment, by the Government of Pakistan, of disputed and undisputed charges under the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May 1948, to state that the matter has been considered by the Govt. of India. The comments of the Government of India on the letter referred to above are at paragraphs 2 to 8 below.

2. In paragraph 2 of the Express letter from the Govt. of Pakistan, certain general statements have been made and it has been added “As to this there is no dispute”. None of these statements has ever been subject of discussion between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan and, therefore, much less of an agreement. In any case, they are irrelevant to the discharge of obligations under the contractual arrangement entered into between the two Governments as on 4th May 1948. The Government of India do not therefore consider it necessary to express any views with respect to these statements.

3. In paragraph 3 of the letter, referred to above, it has been claimed that “over the last several years Pakistan has had to operate works in Pakistan in part for the benefit of areas in India”. It is well known to the Government of Pakistan that no areas in India receive any water through any works in Pakistan. The basis of this claim is, therefore, not understood. Nor was there any provision in the “interim agreements” mentioned in paragraph 3 of the letter (presumably, these refer to the agreements between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan for ad hoc transitional arrangements for Kharif 1955, rabi 1955-56, and for the period April 1, 1956, to 31st March 1957) which called upon Pakistan to operate any works for India’s benefit. On the other hand, by these agreements, the Government of India agreed “to limit canal withdrawals in Indian territory” for the benefit of areas in Pakistan.

4. It has been stated in paragraph 11 of the letter under reference that a proposal was submitted on November 23, 1955, by the head of the Pakistan Water Delegation. The Government of India never received a copy of this proposal. The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, however, informed their Representative, in this connection, that the Bank did not consider it necessary to transmit the Pakistan suggestion to him and that it had also informed the Pakistan Representative that no basis existed for discussing such a proposal in the circumstances. The Government of India also understands that a similar reply has been given by the Bank to another request on this subject recently made by the Pakistan Representative.

The Government of Pakistan would not doubt appreciate that, between two independent countries, there can be no financial liability except on the basis of a contractual obligation between them or on the basis of an award which they had agreed to accept.

5. In paragraphs 4-6 of the letter, reference has been made to various provisions of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of the 4th May 1948, covering the Canal Water Dispute. The relevant articles of the Agreement are;

“2. The East Punjab Government has revived the flow of water into these canals on certain conditions of which two are disputed by West Punjab. One, which arises out of the contention in paragraph 1, is the right to the levy of seigniorage charges for water and the other is the question of the capital cost of the Madhopur Head-works and carrier channels to be taken into account.”

* * *

“5. The West Punjab Government has agreed to deposit immediately in the Reserve Bank such ad hoc sum as may be specified by the Prime Minister of India. Out of this sum, that Government agrees to the immediate transfer to East Punjab Government of sums over which there is no dispute”.

While the agreement referred to above, did not specify the period during which disputed and undisputed charges would be paid by the Government of Pakistan in the manner stated above, it was claimed by the Government of Pakistan, vide their telegram dated the 15th September 1948, that the “Delhi Agreement clearly provides for continual supplies to West Punjab till final agreement is arrived at”. Although the Government of India had some reservations with regard to this claim, they have until now continued to supply water to the canals concerned, in order to give time to the Government of Pakistan “to tap alternative sources”, as provided in the Delhi Agreement. On their part, the Government of Pakistan have been paying to the Reserve Bank of India various sums “for credit to the Canal Dispute Account with them in accordance with Inter-Dominion Agreement”. Unfortunately, after abiding fully with the provisions of the Agreement for more than two years, the Government of Pakistan unilaterally discontinued depositing in full, in accordance with the Agreement, the ad hoc sums specified by the Prime Minister of India; instead only the sums which represented the undisputed charges were paid to the East Punjab Government through the Canal Dispute Account maintained with the Reserve Bank of India.

6. With regard to the unilateral action taken by the Government of Pakistan, on November 6, 1950, to alter the existing ‘escrow’ arrangements, without prior consultation with the Government of India and without an agreed modification of the relevant clause of the Delhi Agreement, attention is invited to Express Letter No.F.8-1\49-Pak.III dated 16th December 1950. The Government of India did not then agree to associate them in any way with this proposal. Nor are they now prepared to associate themselves, in any way, with the new offer of the Government of Pakistan, as contained in paragraph 10 of their letter under reference. The Government of India do not see any reason why the arrangement under the Delhi Water Treaty which had been followed for more than two years should not be maintained.

7. There are a number of other statements in the letter under reference with which the Government of India do not agree and on which they do not desire to comment at this stage. With reference to the first sentence of paragraph 8 of the letter, however, it has always been the understanding of the Government of India, that if no satisfactory settlement can be mutually worked out by negotiation with regard to the disputed charges deposited and to be deposited by the Government of Pakistan with the Reserve Bank of India, under the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May 1948, it would be fair to seek an impartial and effective settlement of the question. Accordingly, the Government of India would be willing to discuss with the Government of Pakistan arrangements, including reference to arbitration if necessary, for such a final settlement of the entire amount of the disputed charges, as soon as the Government of Pakistan have complied with their obligations under the Agreement of 4th May 1948, and deposited in “escrow” with the Reserve Bank of India, all the disputed charges intimated to them from time to time by the Prime Minister of India. The sum so outstanding, as on 31st March, 1957, is Rs.78,38,555/-.

8. In order, therefore that the question of the ‘disputed charges’ under the Delhi Water Treaty be settled satisfactorily, the Government of India would invite the Government of Pakistan to deposit immediately all the outstanding sums in ‘escrow’ with the Reserve Bank of India, Calcutta. As soon as this has been done, the Government of India would be ready to cooperate with the Government of Pakistan in working out satisfactory arrangements for a final settlement with regard to these charges.

The High Commission for India avails itself of the opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations the assurances of its highest consideration.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, Karachi.

New Delhi, June 10, 1957.

Mr. Iliff of the World Bank saw me this afternoon and was with me for about forty-five minutes. He said that he had talks with our Minister for Irrigation & Power and he paid a tribute to his charm and ability in stating India’s case.

2. He said that he was feeling unhappy and not at all optimistic about the response he is likely to get from Pakistan. He could understand our position. Pakistan had, however, pointed out that if they agreed to the principles and if later there was no agreement about the details, then India would act unilaterally, and this would put Pakistan in a very difficult position. Iliff felt that there was some justification for this.

3. I repeated the usual arguments to Mr. Iliff and also spoke about the background of this case as well as of our dealings with Pakistan which had been very frustrating. I told him further that the idea that we wanted to injure Pakistan and break it up was fantastic because if there was such a break up there, political or economic, it would have a boomerang effect on our own country. As it was, owing to the difficulties in East Pakistan, we had to endure this tremendous and continual influx of people. We could hardly bear this additional burden. What if the remaining nine million people in East Pakistan came over to us?

4. So we were anxious that Pakistan should function properly and flourish and should leave us in peace. It was natural for us to develop good relations with a neighbouring country, more especially as there were such intimate contacts in other ways, historical, cultural, etc. But, it had been our misfortune that every effort of ours had met with obstruction, whether this was in Kashmir or Canal Waters or Evacuee Property or this influx of people from East Pakistan.

5. Iliff expressed sympathy. He said he understood. Nevertheless, he said what are we to do about it, because he did not expect Pakistan to agree to accept the principles about this Canal Waters division at this stage. He did not wish this to breakdown, and at the same time, he intended telling them that the World Bank’s patience might be exhausted. He would, therefore, like to carry on somehow till after the Pakistan elections, which might bring about a more stable Government in Pakistan. Here in India we had our elections and we had a strong Government. Pakistan was full of political and other difficulties.

6. I told him that we had no desire to see these talks breakdown. After all, we had been carrying them on for five years and had shown repeatedly our desire for some settlement. We had been patient, but how long is this to continue? The Bhakra Dam was getting ready and people were anxious to utilize the benefits from it. The moment this was quite ready, we cannot stop supplying water through the canals. The pressure on us would be too great.

7. Also I said that I thought that relying on the elections in Pakistan for something to happen was not good enough. Nobody knew when the elections would take place, and even if they took place, no one knew what the result would be. Therefore, the elections should not be considered in this connection.

8. I pointed out to him that we were not against a Commission or even arbitration. In fact, in 1949, I had myself made a proposal for some kind of a joint Commission of India and Pakistan to deal with all river problems. But no Commission can work unless there was an agreed basis of principle. We cannot ask a Commission to decide on principles, and we cannot ask them to decide on details before the principles were decided upon.

9. Iliff agreed, but nevertheless said that here was this difficult position and all he could do was to gain time in order to avoid a breakdown. He further said that in some matters which ought to be easy to decide by engineers, the difference between Indian engineers and Pakistan engineers was complete.
The World Bank had their views about them, but they could not impose their will. I said that I understood that, but surely without any imposition of a decision, the World Bank could express their view from the engineering point of view.

10. Iliff said that they had succeeded in getting Pakistan to accept that there was enough water to go round for everybody and further that it was possible by engineering works to utilize that water fully. The only question that remained was as to how this was to be done and the cost of it. I said that it was clear to me that no adequate progress could be made without some agreement on principles. We cannot work in the air and later be saddled with commitments which we could not accept.

11. Finally, Iliff said he would try to do his best, but he did not hope for much.
The most he could do was to try to gain time. After seeing the Pakistan Prime Minister, he would come back here and have further talks with our Minister for Irrigation & Power.

2475. Statement by Minister of Irrigation and Power S. K. Patil in the Lok Sabha on Canal Waters Issue.

New Delhi, July 25, 1957.

The House is aware that on 4 May 1948 the Governments of India and Pakistan entered into an agreement on the canal waters. The two Governments then agreed to approach the problem in a practical spirit on the basis of India progressively diminishing supply to Pakistan canals in order to give reasonable time to enable Pakistan to tap alternative sources. The question, however, still remains unsettled due to the unwillingness of Pakistan to settle it in the only manner possible, namely, by developing supplies through alternative sources to replace the pre-partition historic withdrawals of the Pakistan canals from the three eastern rivers.

In 1952, a working party comprising an engineer each from India and Pakistan and a representative of the World Bank, was set up, at the instance of Mr.
Eugene R. Black, President of the Bank, to work out a plan of “specific engineering measures, by which the supplies effectively available to each country will be increased substantially beyond what they have ever been". Intensive engineering studies were undertaken but all efforts to find an agreed basis for a settlement ended in failure. It was, however, clear that there was enough water in the Indus Basin rivers to meet the requirements of both India and Pakistan.

The Bank representative, thereupon, put forward, on 5 February 1954, a proposal for the consideration of both sides to serve as a basis of agreement. This proposal, as is well known to the House, envisaged that the three western rivers (Indus, Jhelum and Chenab) except for minor uses in the State of Jammu and Kashmir, would be available for the use and benefit of Pakistan, and the three eastern rivers (Ravi, Beas and Sutlej) for the use and benefit of India. It also envisaged a transition period of roughly five years, during which Pakistan was to build link canals to replace the waters received by some of its canals from the eastern rivers. India was to contribute towards the cost of the link canals.

In the interest of a speedy settlement, we accepted the proposal notwithstanding the fact that its acceptance involved extremely heavy sacrifices by us. Pakistan, however, did not accept the Bank proposal. Later, it was agreed at the instance of the Bank that both sides would co-operate in working out a plan, taking as a starting point the division of waters envisaged in the Bank proposal. Although a considerable amount of useful work was done, the Bank found itself unable to bring about a settlement between the two parties.

In May, 1956, the Bank handed over to both sides an aide memoire in which it reiterated its conviction that the division of waters proposed by the Bank in 1954 afforded the best prospects of a settlement. The Bank also felt, on the basis of a study carried out by its consultants, that it might be necessary to provide some storage as a part of the replacement plan to meet the uses that the Bank had adopted for this study.

Though the talks were extended to 31 March 1957, the Bank again found it difficult to make much progress because of the attitude of the Pakistan representative who would not cooperate in working out a plan on the basis of the Bank proposal and the aide memoire. In April, 1957, the Bank suggested that the co-operative work should be extended up to 30 September 1957, to give the Bank and the Governments of India and Pakistan an opportunity to review the situation.

In June last, a Bank team, headed by Mr. W. A. B. Iliff, Vice-President of the Bank, visited India and Pakistan and held consultations with the Prime Ministers and Ministers concerned in both countries. Before leaving for Washington, Mr. Iliff handed over to both sides a letter in which he has asked for the views of the two Governments, in writing, on certain heads of agreement which should form the basis of an approach to an international water treaty. These heads of agreement follow generally the Bank proposal of 1954 but seek to provide some machinery for resolving points on which the Bank may be unable to secure an agreement. After receiving the views of the two Governments, the Bank would obtain the comments of each Government on the views of the other. The Bank would then decide whether the employment of its good offices could make any further contribution and, if so, along what lines the work should proceed.

During the recent months, there has been a good deal of propaganda by and on behalf of Pakistan, aimed at misleading world opinion by suppression and distortion of facts. Among other things, it has been alleged that India has cut off, or is threatening to cut off, canal supplies to Pakistan; that India is constructing a dam on the river Sutlej which would convert the whole of West Pakistan into a 'dusty bowl'; and that Pakistan's economy is in danger unless it continues to receive supplies from the three eastern rivers.

The statements made against India have not only no basis in fact, but are completely misleading. Ever since the agreement of May, 1948, to which I have already referred, there has not been a single occasion when supplies were cut off from Pakistan. For the two years ending 31 March 1957, three agreements were executed through the good offices of the Bank and formed the basis of regulation of canal waters between the two countries. Under these ad hoc transitional agreements, India agreed to restrict her additional withdrawals for the Bhakra canals in accordance with Pakistan's ability to replace supplies. There is no such agreement, however, from April, 1957, as no request was made for one. It is understood that the three link canals already constructed in Pakistan are capable of replacing all the waters that the new Indian canals would withdraw during the current kharif season.

The Bhakra Dam which has been under construction since 1945 will go into operation with partial reservoir capacity in 1958. By 1960, it would operate with full capacity. This will not have any effect on the Pakistan canals as the dam would store supplies only during the flood season when ample supplies are available. On the other hand, such storage would reduce flood hazards and damage by floods in Pakistan.

A dam on the Sutlej cannot in any event hold up waters flowing into the Indus, the Jhelum and the Chenab which carry 80 percent of the waters of the Indus system. At present only about 10 percent of the irrigation in West Pakistan depends on the waters from the eastern rivers. The fact is - and this has been generally recognised by those who have studied the problem - that the three western rivers (Indus, Jhelum and Chenab) have such a large irrigation potential that Pakistan would be able to undertake, in addition to replacing supplies hitherto received from the eastern rivers, extensive new developments for many years to come. To say, in these circumstances, that the whole of the irrigated area in West Pakistan will revert to desert by the withholding of waters from the eastern rivers is a grave distortion of facts.

It was in a spirit of good neighbourliness that we accepted the Bank proposal although it meant giving up our rights on certain vital supplies flowing through our territory. In the same spirit we voluntarily imposed on ourselves restrictions on the utilisation of the waters flowing through our rivers although in the context of the tremendous problems of rehabilitation following partition, we would have been fully justified in rapidly extending irrigation to areas which depend for their development on the waters of the eastern rivers. And, in our anxiety to see that the Pakistan cultivators were not penalised for the faults of their Government of Pakistan, contrary to the agreement of May, 1948, have defaulted in the payment of canal water charges, the arrears of which have steadily mounted up to over Rs.10 million. There is, however, a limit to our patience. India will not wait indefinitely for a settlement, ignoring the needs of her own people.

New Delhi, August 21, 1957.

The House is aware that the Government of India and Pakistan entered into an agreement on the Canal Waters as far back as May 1948 on the basis of India progressively diminishing supply to Pakistan canals in order to give reasonable time to Pakistan to tap alternative sources. Although over nine years have elapsed since the signing of the agreement, the Indus Water dispute still remain unsettled owing to the unwillingness of Pakistan to settle it in the only manner possible namely, by developing supplies from the western rivers to replace the pre-partition withdrawals from the eastern rivers. The House is also aware that in 1952, at the instance of Mr. Eugene R. Black, President of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, negotiations were started on an engineering basis to work out a comprehensive plan for the co-operative development of the waters of the Indus system of rivers. After a careful study of the problem, the Bank put forward in February 1954, a proposal which envisaged the division of waters on the basis that the three western rivers (Indus, Jhelum and Chenab), except for minor uses in the State of Jammu and Kashmir, would be available for the use and benefit of Pakistan and the three eastern rivers (Ravi, Beas and Sutlej) for the use and benefit of India. That proposal also provided for a transition period of about five years during which Pakistan was to construct link canals from the western rivers. India was also required to pay for the cost of these link canals. Notwithstanding the fact that its acceptance involved great sacrifices, financial and other, on our part, we accepted the Bank proposal in principle but Pakistan did not. The negotiations thereupon broke down but were resumed again at the instance of the Bank in December 1954. When these talks also failed to bring about an agreement the Bank put forward an aide memoire in which, while reiterating its conviction that the division of waters envisaged in its proposal of 1954 afforded the best prospects of a settlement, the Bank indicated that it might be necessary to provide for some storage as a part of the replacement plan. Though the talks were extended up to 31 March 1957, no significant progress could be made because of Pakistan’s unwillingness to co-operate in working out a plan on the basis of the Bank proposal and the aide memoire.

In April 1957, the Bank suggested that the co-operative work should be extended up to 30 September 1957 to give the Bank and the Governments of India and Pakistan an opportunity to review the situation. This was agreed to by the two Governments.

In June last, a Bank Team headed by Mr. W.A.B. Iliff, Vice-President of the Bank, visited India and Pakistan and held consultations with the Prime Minister and Ministers concerned in both the countries. Before leaving for Washington, Mr. Iliff handed over to both sides a letter in which he asked for the views of the two Governments, in writing, on some General Heads of Agreement which should form the basis of an approach to an international water treaty. These Heads of Agreement follow generally the Bank proposal of 1954, but seek to provide some machinery for resolving points on which the Bank may be unable to secure an agreement. The two Governments have since communicated their views to the Bank who have in turn forwarded the views of each Government to the other for comments. Pakistan Government’s reply to the Bank is under examination.

The Government of India have scrupulously refrained from making any statements on the canal water dispute which might even remotely have the effect of embarrassing the Bank in its difficult and delicate task of bringing about a settlement between the parties.

But in the recent months statements have been made by persons in authority in Pakistan which are so palpably false and mischievous that they cannot be allowed to go unchallenged. Among other things it has been alleged that India has cut off or is threatening to cut off canal supplies to Pakistan and that Pakistan’s economy is in grave jeopardy as Pakistan would revert to desert if India stops the supply of water from the eastern rivers.

The statements made against India have not only no basis in fact, but are completely misleading. Even since the Agreement of May 1948 to which I have already referred, there has not been a single occasion when supplies were cut off from Pakistan. For the two years ending 31 March 1957, three agreements were executed through the good offices of the Bank and formed the basis of regulation of canal waters between the two countries. Under these ad hoc transitional agreements, India agreed to restrict her additional withdrawals for the Bhakra canals in accordance with Pakistani’s ability to replace supplies. There is no such agreement, however, from April 1957 as no request was made for one. It is understood that the three link canals already constructed in Pakistan are capable of replacing all the waters that the new Indian canals would withdraw during the current kharif season.

The three western rivers allocated to Pakistan under the Bank proposal carry 80 per cent of the waters of the Indus system. At present Pakistan depends upon the eastern rivers only for about five per cent, of the total supplies used by her for irrigation in the Indus basin in Pakistan, if she makes full use of the link canals already constructed by her. There is, therefore, no question of the whole of the irrigated area in West Pakistan turning into a desert, or of Pakistan’s economy being endangered.

Had the World Bank proposal been accepted by Pakistan in 1954, the transition period would have expired some time in 1959. Unfortunately, Pakistan has imparted a political bias to what is essentially an economic and engineering problem and while going ahead with her development plans on the western rivers has sought to hold up development on the eastern rivers in India by placing difficulties in the way of a quick settlement. We have shown great restraint by imposing on ourselves restrictions on the utilisation of the waters flowing through the eastern rivers during the last nine years. To avoid suffering to the cultivator in Pakistan we have continued to supply water in spite of the fact that Pakistan, contrary to the obligations under the Agreement of May 1948, has defaulted in the payment of canal water charges.

We owe a duty to our own people and cannot wait indefinitely for a settlement. Despite our pressing needs, we have, with a view to promoting a settlement, informed the Bank that we would be prepared to extend the transition period up to 1962, that is, five years from now, although under the Bank proposal this period would have terminated in 1959. We cannot go any further without jeopardising the vital interests of millions of our people.
February 11, 1958.

Mr. W.A.B. Iliff, Vice-President of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, was in New Delhi from 28 January to 1 February 1958. On his way here from Washington, he had stopped for about four days in Karachi for discussions with the Government of Pakistan.

During his stay in New Delhi, Mr. Iliff met the Prime Minister. He also met me and held informal discussions with officers of the Ministry of Irrigation and Power.

These discussions aimed at exploring the possibilities of various approaches towards a settlement of the Canal Waters question. No concrete proposals have so far emerged from these discussions. The House will appreciate that, until various aspects of the suggestions, which were mentioned in the talks by Mr. Iliff, have been examined and further discussions regarding any concrete suggestions that may be made are held with the Bank, Government are not in a position to make a detailed statement on these exploratory discussions.

February 12, 1958.

Shri S.K. Patil, Minister of Irrigation and Power, informed the Lok Sabha on 12 February 1958 that the last agreement between the Governments of India and Pakistan for ad hoc transitional arrangements regarding the supply of canal waters expired on 31 March 1957. No further agreement had been reached between the two Governments for any period subsequent to 31 March, 1957.

The arrangements for co-operative work between India, Pakistan and the Bank which had formally been extended up to 31 December 1957 had also expired. It was understood, however, that the Bank would informally continue to lend its good offices towards finding a solution acceptable to both sides.

The Minister said that during his recent visit to India and Pakistan, Mr. Iliff discussed with the two Governments possibilities of various approaches towards a settlement of the canal water dispute. These discussions had not yet led to any concrete result. Government had seen press reports of a statement in which the Pakistan Minister of Industries and Commerce was reported to have said that Pakistan was willing to submit disputed questions to arbitration.

He further added that the Government of India had not received any communication on the subject directly from the Government of Pakistan. The Bank proposal of February, 1954, clearly states that where two sovereign authorities were concerned, problems relating to the development of water resources must be solved by negotiation and agreement rather than by decision. However in case the Government of Pakistan agreed to a settlement on the basis of the Bank Proposal of February, 1954, the Government of India had already indicated their willingness to establish, if necessary, an appropriate procedure for arbitrating disputes concerning the allocation of costs in accordance with the Bank Proposal.

New Delhi, June 12, 1958.

The attention of the Government of India has been drawn to certain statements reported to have been made by the Prime Minister of Pakistan and the Chief Minister of West Pakistan and also to a Press Note issued by the Government of Pakistan alleging withdrawal by India of what has been described as “Pakistan's share of the historic supplies” from the Beas and the Sutlej.

The supplies in the river Beas, which during early kharif is the only source of supply for all the Sutlej Valley canals in Pakistan and the Eastern and Bikaner canals in India, have been abnormally low from about the middle of May. Towards the end of the month, the supply in the river was hardly half of the average of the previous 10 years. The other eastern rivers -- the Sutlej and the Ravi -- have also been much below normal.

As a result of the serious shrinkage in river supplies, the Bhakra canals in India have either remained closed or have received only nominal supplies. Some of the channels of the Upper Bari Doab Canal did not receive any water. On all our canals, sowing operations have received a serious setback. Reports about this serious situation of drought which, in fact, extends over large areas of Northern India have already appeared in the Press.

The Pakistan Sutlej Valley canals have had the advantage since 1955 of an additional source of water supply from the River Chenab through the Merala-Rave, Balloki-Suleimanki and other link canals. The supply in the River Chenab has been sufficient to enable substantial quantities of water (even more than the total supply of the River Beas) being brought, through these link canals, to all the Pakistan Sutlej Valley canals, including the lower part of the Dipalpur canal. The Pakistan cultivator has thus been in a much better position regarding canal water supplies than his Indian Counterpart.

From 1 April to 10 May, the Dipalpur canal received its full requirements as intimated by the Pakistan canal officers and substantial quantities were delivered below Ferozepore. From 11 May, the river supplies fell and it was not possible to meet the indent of either the Dipalpur canal or the Indian canals at Ferozpur. The Dipalpur canal was closed on May 15, on receipt of a request from the Pakistan canal officers to do so; it remained closed until 26 May; when this canal was reopened, at Pakistan’s request, on 27 May, its indent was pitched high at 6,950 cusecs. The total supply in the River Beas, at that time, being about 7,000 cusecs, it was impossible to meet this indent in full.

The total volume of water given to the Dipalpur canal at Ferozepur, during the month of May this year, was 50 percent more than what this canal received in the same period in 1941 when the river supply was of the same order. In several other years, prior to 1947, the Dipalpur canal received less water than it did this year. As stated above, this canal should also have received this year some supplementary supplies from the link canals.

Daily intimation is sent by the canal officers in the Punjab to their counterparts in Pakistan about the supplies delivered to Pakistan canals. It was, however, only after 23 May that a number of telegrams were received from the canal officers in Pakistan complaining about shortage of water. Replies were sent promptly informing them of the low level of river supplies and the difficulties being felt in India on this account.

The Indian and Pakistani delegations, during the discussions under the auspices of the World Bank, arrived at three agreements ad hoc for transitional arrangements for the period April, 1955, to March 1957. In these agreements, India was entitled to make “additional withdrawals” from the eastern rivers equivalent to Pakistan’s ability to replace these withdrawals through its link canals mentioned above. The additional withdrawals made by India during the latter part of May this year were in fact less than those provided for this period in the Agreement for 1956. It may be pointed out that the withdrawals agreed upon in 1956 were fixed at a relatively low figure on account of the damage to the link canals caused by the floods of October, 1955, which had not been fully repaired. Since then, these link canals have been repaired and their capacity must now be much larger.
In view of the above, it is difficult to understand the complaints and press propaganda being made in Pakistan particularly when the conditions on the Sutlej Valley canals in Pakistan should be much better than that on the Punjab canals. Far from acting in a manner contrary to the spirit of the current negotiations, under the auspices of the World Bank, India has been imposing unilateral restrictions on her own withdrawals in accordance with the spirit of the Agreement of 4 May 1948, and the principles governing the withdrawals of water as put forward by the Bank for the transition period.

The Agreements for ad hoc transitional arrangements, referred to above, provided for exchange between India and Pakistan of data relating to river flow and canal withdrawals, on a reciprocal basis. On the expiry of the last of these Agreements in March 1957, Pakistan discontinued the supply of this information while India continued to supply such data as was being supplied earlier in accordance with arrangements existing under the Agreement of 4 May 1948.

The Government of India have now proposed to the Pakistan authorities that both sides should resume, with immediate effect, the supply of data in accordance with the Agreement of 1956-57 and, as a gesture of India’s goodwill and co-operation, instructions to this effect have already been issued to local canal officers in Punjab. It is hoped that Pakistan will also co-operate and resume the supply of data relating to its side.

2479. Note from the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

Karachi, August 29/30, 1958

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs & Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, presents its compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and with reference to the Indus Basin Water Dispute has the honour to state as follows :-

2. On March 26, 1958 the Indian Minister for Irrigation & Power speaking in Lok Sabha with respect to the Eastern Rivers of the Indus Basin declared that “We (India) shall not wait a day longer than 1962 when our (Rajasthan) canal and the Sirhind feeder are ready. We shall withdraw the water and now goes to Pakistan.” The Indian Minister also went on to declare that this “is the last word so far as the Government of India is concerned.”
3. The announcement of this decision by the Government of India to proceed unilaterally came at a time when the two countries were preparing to meet with the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development in Rome as a part of the continuing negotiations under the good offices of the Bank. The announcement was promptly followed by commencement of construction on the Rajasthan canal to irrigate areas outside the Indus Basin. This project is dependent to a great extent on supplies presently used in Pakistan.

4. This declaration was accompanied by the incompatible statement that "The interest of the millions of peasants in Pakistan is as much dear to us as the interest of millions of peasants in this country." While the Minister relates that the Indian Prime Minister would not let the fields of these peasants go dry, the implementation of the March 26 decision to cut off the waters would produce a diametrically opposite result. India’s diversions, planned to begin in 1962, will irrigate new land-described by India itself as now a desert - while at the same time returning to desert the green fields in Pakistan built up by the labour of generations of farmers.

5. The announcement by the Indian Minister that his Government have decided to "withdraw the water that now goes to Pakistan" by 1962 directly contravenes the fundamental basis upon which the continuing negotiations under the good offices of the Bank have all along proceeded. "The water that now goes to Pakistan" is the very heart of the dispute being negotiated under the good offices of the Bank. It will be appreciated that a party to a dispute cannot unilaterally take possession of the very subject matter of the dispute being negotiated.

6. In his March 26 declaration, the Indian Minister also stated that "what little God has given to us or the good offices of the World Bank have given us in the 1954 proposal, we shall enjoy." The Government of India cannot possibly contend that the Bank Proposal, which engineering studies have since proved must include storage on the Western Rivers in addition to link canals, envisages such unilateral action as they propose to take. In fact it prohibits such action as set out in the Proposal itself:

   "It will be necessary under the Bank proposal for India to continue to supply the Pakistan canals until the necessary works are completed by Pakistan for transfer of supplies from the Western Rivers. This will involve preparation of a construction time schedule and of a time schedule for actual transfer of supplies. These schedules would allow the actual transfer of supplies to go into effect progressively and the deliveries by India to diminish accordingly. They must be prepared cooperatively as agreed to by both countries."

7. It is known to the Government of India that the construction time schedule and the time schedule for actual transfer of supplies have not yet been “prepared coop eratively as agreed to by both countries.” Nor have any arrangements been made for the payment of the cost of replacement works in Pakistan whether link canals or storage. These very matters are now under negotiation. Differences as to these matters which cannot be ironed out in negotiation should be resolved by arbitration or the other peaceful means set forth in the charter of the United Nations, and not, by threats of use of physical power afforded by geography, to take what the Government of India wants, in disregard of legal rights and claims.

8. If a permanent solution satisfactory to the Government of India is not reached promptly, and the Government of India remain unwilling to submit unresolved matters in connection with the Canal Waters Dispute to impartial arbitration, the Government of Pakistan stand, as always, ready to refer the unsettled questions at issue to the decision of the International Court of Justice.
Pakistan has stood ready to do this since the beginning of the dispute. The latest proposal contained in a letter dated September 24, 1957, and standing on March 26, 1958, and is still open to acceptance:

“My Government renew their request in the interest of promoting agreement on these means of implementing the principles of the Adjusted Bank Proposal (The Bank Proposal of the 5 February, 1954, and Aide Memoire of 21 May’56), that the Bank in the exercise of its good offices seek agreement now that if these means are not accepted or carried through successfully, each side will submit to the International Court of Justice every issue which either side decides to raise related to the rights of the parties in and to the waters of the Indus system of rivers, and agree to seek no advantage by reason of negotiations under the auspices of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and to carry out the decisions of the International Court of Justice.”

9. Apart from the obligation inherent in the negotiations extending over a period of ten years, the Minister’s assertions also contravene the rights of the two countries, established at partition. These rights have not been altered by any presently effective agreement between the countries. In addition, the announcement of an intention “to withdraw the water that now goes to Pakistan” is totally incompatible with well-established principles of international law as evidenced in such formulations as the Declaration of Madrid (1911) and Declaration of Montevideo (1933), of multilateral conventions such as those of Barcelona (1921) and Geneva (1923), of such statement of agreed principles as that of the Indus Commission (1942) under the Chairmanship of Sir Bengal Rau, of the Practices that constitute the basis of customary international law, as well as of the general principles evolving out of the decisions of international and federal courts and teachings of highly qualified publicist.
10. The Government of Pakistan strongly object to and view with serious concern any change in the existing regime of the rivers common to India and Pakistan that could interfere with the lawfully established beneficial uses in Pakistan dependent on these rivers and that could otherwise interfere with the realization by Pakistan of its right to share on a just and reasonable basis in the use and benefits of common rivers. Since the Government of Pakistan have amply demonstrated their willingness to reach a prompt and just solution by the pacific means envisaged in the Charter of the United Nations, the Government of India must fulfill their obligations by refraining from making or allowing any change which could interfere with the flow of these rivers into Pakistan except as the parties specifically agree or in conformity with a decision rendered.

11. On March 29, 1958, and again April 2, 1958, the Govt. of Pakistan requested the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development as good officer to secure from the Government of India appropriate assurances regarding their threatened unilateral action. To date the Government of Pakistan have received no such assurances. According to the releases of the Information Service of India in Washington, D.C. the Prime Minister of India has declined to deny India’s intention of withdrawals of waters that flow into Pakistan. In fact as recently as August 12, the Deputy Minister for Irrigation and Power is reported to have confirmed this intention in a statement to the Lok Sabha.

12. The Government of Pakistan earnestly request the Government of India to reconsider their attitude and in the interest of amity, justice and peace to agree to maintain the status quo, pending a negotiated settlement.

13. Copies of the note are being sent to the Secretary General of the United Nations and to the President of the International Bank.

14. The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of its highest consideration.
2480. Statement laid on the Table of the Lok Sabha by Minister of Irrigation and Power Hafiz Mohammad Ibrahim on distribution of Indus Waters.

New Delhi, September 1, 1958.

The House will recall the last two statements made in the House on July 25, 1957 and February 11, 1958, with regard to the negotiations between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan on the distribution of the Indus waters. As stated therein, a Bank team headed by Mr. W.A.B. Iliff, Vice President of the Bank, visited India and Pakistan in June 1957 and held discussions with the representatives of the two countries.

As a result of these discussions, Mr. Iliff wrote to both sides a letter in which he set out certain general Heads of Agreement, based on the Bank proposal of February 5, 1954 and on the aide memoire dated May 21, 1956, as a firm starting point from which to proceed to the formulation of the detailed text of an International Water Treaty, and asked for the views in writing, of the two Governments on these Heads of Agreement. The two Governments indicated their views to the Bank and later furnished their comments on the views expressed by the other Government.

It was, thus, for the first time after the Bank proposal had been made in 1954, that the Government of India came to know of the views of the Government of Pakistan with respect to the Bank proposal, which that Government had accepted in 1954 as a basis of discussion.

These views, purporting to be an acceptance, were hedged with such reservations, modifications and “understandings” as to constitute not acceptance, but non-acceptance of both the Bank proposal and the Heads of Agreement.

In January this year, Mr. Iliff paid another visit to India and Pakistan and tried to explore the possibility of a settlement of the dispute on eastern and western rivers. Mr. Iliff’s approach envisaged continuity of some supplies to Pakistan from the eastern rivers, allocated to India under the Bank proposal of February 1954, and withdrawal by Indian of an equivalent quantity from the western rivers allocated to Pakistan. These talks did not, however, lead to any concrete results.

On an invitation received from Mr. Iliff, further talks were held in Rome in April-May 1958. These talks were in continuation of the discussions held earlier by Mr. Iliff with the representatives of the two Governments and were intended to further explore the possibilities of various approaches towards a settlement of the canal water dispute.
As a result of these talks the Bank suggested a new approach on the basis of which the Pakistan representative was asked to put up a replacement plan for all Pakistan uses from the three western rivers, with a storage on the Jhelum.

As decided in the meeting held in Rome, the Pakistan representative submitted a plan to the Bank at the meeting held in London towards the beginning of July this year. The Pakistan Plan was subsequently handed over to the Indian representative who, after a preliminary examination of the plan, obtained certain clarifications and asked for some additional information which the Pakistan representative promised to supply.

The Indian representative has asked for more time to enable him to study the Pakistan Plan in greater detail before giving his comments. The talks in London were accordingly adjourned on July 31, 1958.

The Indian delegation has since returned and the Pakistan Plan is at present under detailed examination.

During recent months, there has been a good deal of propaganda in Pakistan, alleging withdrawal by India of what has been described as “Pakistan’s share of the historic supplies” from the Sutlej and Beas. These allegations are completely baseless and without foundation.

The correct position is that in early kharif, the river Beas is the only source of supply for all the Sutlej Valley canals in Pakistan and the eastern and Bikaner canals in India. The supplies in the river Beas were unusually low this year from about the middle of May; as a matter of fact the quantity of water in the river towards end of May was hardly half of the average of the previous 10 years. The other eastern rivers, the Sutlej and the Ravi, had also been running considerably below normal.

As a consequence, some of the channels in India did not receive any water and in some areas even drinking water was not available.

Nevertheless, during this critical period, the supply to Pakistan channels was continued in accordance with the principles put forward by the world Bank for the transition period.

During the period April 1955 to March 1957 the supply of water to Pakistan from the eastern rivers was regulated by three ad hoc Agreements concluded between the two Governments. India was entitled, under these agreements, to make additional withdrawals from the eastern rivers, equivalent to Pakistan’s ability to replace these withdrawals through the link canals.
The additional withdrawals made by India this year during the later part of May and early June, were in fact, less than those provided for in the Agreement for kharif 1956 when Pakistan's ability to replace was less than what it is today.

No such agreement was concluded for any period after March 1957. The Government of India are, however, continuing to distribute river supplies between the two countries on the basis of the Agreement of the 4 May 1948 and the principles proposed by the Bank for the transition period.

Under the Bank Proposal of February 1954 the transition period for the complete withdrawal of waters of the eastern rivers from Pakistan has been roughly estimated to be about five years. This period would have expired some time in 1959. Notwithstanding our pressing needs, we have with a view to promoting a settlement, informed the World Bank and Pakistan that we would be prepared to extend the transition period up to 1962 by which time we shall be in a position to utilize the waters for our Rajasthan Canal Project and other projects.

On the expiry of the last ad hoc Agreement in March 1957, Pakistan discontinued supply of data relating to river flow and canal withdrawals which was exchanged under the Agreement, on a reciprocal basis, while India continued to supply certain data in accordance with the arrangements existing under the Agreement of 4 May 1948.

On receipt from Pakistan of the ill-founded complaints of stoppage of supplies, the Government of India proposed to the Pakistan authorities that both sides should resume the exchange of data.

Pakistan agreed and the Special Commissioners of India and Pakistan met on 22 June 1958 at the Wagh border for exchange of data.

The World Bank had also sent out a team authorising Mr. Larz H. Bengston, General R. A. Wheeler and Sir K. Guinness to study the situation created by abnormally low supplies in the rivers Beas and Sutlej. The World Bank team visited certain areas in Pakistan and India with the participation of the Indian and Pakistan representatives, during June-July 1958.

The data collected by the Bank team appear to be still under examination and the Government of India are not yet aware of their findings.

Meanwhile, the exchange of data initiated by us is being continued.

2481. Note from Indian High Commission in Pakistan to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Karachi, October 7, 1958.

No.F.7(2)58-Genl(P) October 7, 1958

The High Commission of India in Pakistan presents its compliments of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan and, with reference to the letter's note No.I(1)-4/5/58, dated August 29/30, 1958, has the honour to enclose relevant extract from the Minister's speech in question and to reply as follows:-

The Indian Minister of Irrigation & Power, speaking in the Lok Sabha on March 26, 1958, did not say anything new with respect to the Indus waters question which has not been stated before and which was not known to the Government of Pakistan or indeed to the authorities of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development for the past many years. The Minister's speech was to in no sense a threat or an ultimatum. It only voiced the deep concern of the Government of India for the development of the arid areas of the Indus Basin within Indian territory, the urgency of which was recognised even before partition and has been consistently stressed by the Government of India ever since 1947.

This natural anxiety of the Government of India to discharge their obligations to develop areas on the Indian side of the Indus basin where water is scarce and which are under-developed in relation to the areas on the Pakistan side of the basin, was recognised in the Inter-dominion Agreement of May 1948 in which both India and Pakistan agreed to approach the problem in a practical spirit on the basis of India progressively diminishing its supply to Pakistan in order to give reasonable time to enable the Pakistan Government to tap alternative sources. It was also in the interests of a speedy and constructive settlement on the basis of a relatively short "transition period" which was estimated by the Bank to be about 5 years that India accepted the Bank proposal of 1954, though it involved extremely heavy sacrifices and constituted a serious blow to the economic development of the arid regions. This short transition period is almost over and yet we are nowhere near a solution.

In accepting the Bank proposal, the Government of India were motivated by a desire for an early and amicable settlement. The Indian representative stated:

"I am giving this acceptance in the expectation that Pakistan will at an early date likewise accept the principle of the Bank proposal as the basis of the Agreement; my acceptance cannot, as you will appreciate, extend unilaterally for an indefinite period."
The Government of India are seriously concerned at the attitude of the Pakistan authorities who are going deliberately slow in construction and operation of link canals, neglecting to repair the link canals already built, and proceeding, presumably with a view to making an implementation of the Bank proposal difficult or even impossible with the execution of development projects based on additional, i.e. non-historic, uses of water of the three western rivers which developments, in accordance with the Bank proposal, were to be taken up after the replacement works had been completed and the Bank proposal had been implemented.

Partition did not confer any rights on India or Pakistan with regard to canal waters, nor was any such right conferred on Pakistan by any decision of the Punjab Partition Committee. Prior to the Inter-Dominion Agreement of May 1948, the only arrangement governing the supply of water from India to Pakistan was the ad hoc agreement signed in December 1947 between the Chief Engineers of the East and West Punjab which expressly limited validity of the agreement to the end of the then Rabi Crop., i.e. March 31, 1948. Later, the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May, 1948, on canal waters was signed by leading members of the then Governments of India and Pakistan, as well as of the State Governments of East and West Punjab. This was 10 years ago. The Government of India have consistently adhered to the terms of this Agreement and the spirit underlying it throughout these ten years, despite the failure of the Government of Pakistan to honour this agreement or to arrive at an agreement in terms of the Bank proposal and continued to give water to Pakistan out of their earnest desire to act not only in conformity with agreements arrived at, but also to avoid any injury to the interest of the peasantry in Pakistan. The Government of India will continue firmly to follow that policy and do all they can to arrive at agreed arrangements to settled what is essentially a human problem in a spirit of friendly and neighbourly relations. They cannot, however, accept unilateral repudiation by the Government of Pakistan of agreements arrived at in the past nor can they agree to hold up indefinitely pressing and urgent development schemes for the supply of water to arid areas in Indian territory.

The suggestion of arbitration made in the Ministry’s note seems to the Government of India, to have been made with the object of indefinitely blocking Indian development, an object that the Pakistan authorities have been steadily pursuing since 1948, in violation of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May, 1948. The Government of India repeat the offer, made several times in the past, to have the validity of this Agreement adjudicated upon by an impartial tribunal.

The Government of India cannot accept the position that the Government of Pakistan can go on repudiating existing agreements, decline to arrive at new agreements and, meanwhile, execute further projects in Pakistan and yet expect that the Government of India should remain committed to the terms of agreements or proposal which the Government of Pakistan decline to implement. Such a position would be a travesty of agreements negotiated between sovereign states and an abuse of the good offices of the World Bank.

The High Commission would like to point out, with reference to the Ministry's assertion that any withdrawal by India would be totally incompatible with well established principles of International Law, that Government of India are not parties to the various International conventions and Declarations referred to in the Note nor do these represent international law in the accepted sense of the term or apply to the present case. The issues involved concern sovereign rights of the sovereign States of India and Pakistan and can only be governed by agreements arrived at between the two Governments, i.e., the Inter-Dominion Agreement of 4th May, 1948, or any other agreement that may be arrived at in future.

The High Commission taken this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, the assurances of its highest consideration.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, Karachi.

New Delhi, April 6, 1959.

As the House is aware, the Inter-Dominion Agreement of May 4, 1948, between India and Pakistan provided for the progressive diminution of supplies to Pakistan canals from the eastern rivers in order to give time to Pakistan to tap alternative sources. In pursuance of the agreement Pakistan started the construction of a few link canals to transfer supplies from the western rivers to canals fed by the eastern rivers.

In February 1954, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development put forward a proposal according to which the entire flow of the western rivers (Indus, Jhelum and Chenab), except for the insignificant volume of Jhelum flow presently used in Kashmir, has been allocated to Pakistan and that of the eastern rivers (Ravi, Beas and Sutlej) to India, save that for a specified transition period India would continue to supply the historic withdrawals from these rivers in Pakistan. The proposal also envisaged that during the transition period Pakistan would construct certain other link canals from replacing the supplies received from the eastern rivers.

Three link canals, viz., Bambanwala-Ravi-Bedian-Dipalpur Link, Merala-Ravi Link and Balloki-Suleimanke Link, the construction of which was started in Pakistan after the Inter Dominion Agreement of May 1948, have since been completed. The withdrawal of waters by India is related to the capacity of these link canals to replace supplies hitherto received from the eastern rivers. For various reasons Pakistan has not been running these canals to full capacity. If so run, the link canals are capable of replacing nearly half of the supplies which the canals in Pakistan have been getting from our rivers. India cannot wait indefinitely and will gradually withdraw more and more supplies as and when more replacement works are built by Pakistan.

In the course of the talks under the aegis of the World Bank, which commenced in 1952, the Government of India and Pakistan entered into ad hoc transitional arrangements for the supply of water on three occasions: for Kharif 1955, Rabi 1955-56 and for the period from April 1, 1956 to March 31, 1957. Copies of these agreements have already been placed in the Parliament Library. Although the Pakistan Government did not enter into an agreement for the period after April 1, 1957, we continued to give supplies to Pakistan in accordance with the agreement of May 4, 1948, and the principles of the proposal. Discussions have just concluded in Washington on proposals for ad hoc transitional arrangements for the period from April 1, 1959 to March 31, 1960. The draft agreement now under consideration follows broadly the lines of the agreement for Kharif 1956, except that we stand to get a somewhat larger proportion of the waters hitherto supplied by us to Pakistan. The indications are that the agreement will be signed in Washington shortly. A copy of the agreement, after it is signed, will be placed in the Parliament Library.

Washington, 17 April 1959

WHEREAS representatives of India and of Pakistan, together with representatives of the International Bank, are engaged in the preparation of a comprehensive plan for the irrigational use of the waters of the Indus system of rivers, and

WHEREAS by agreements dated June 21, 1955, October 31, 1955 and September 24, 1956, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agreed upon ad hoc transitional arrangements for the periods April 1 to September 30, 1955; October 1, 1955 to March 31, 1956; and April 1, 1956 to March 31, 1957 respectively, and

WHEREAS it is considered desirable that ad hoc transitional arrangements should be made for the period April 1, 1959 to March 31, 1960,

NOW THEREFORE, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agree as follows:

A. FOR THE PERIOD APRIL 1 TO OCTOBER 15:

1. Except as provided in paragraphs 2, 3, and 7 below, India agrees to limit withdrawals from river flow (for direct use in canals or for storage) in Indian territory, in each water-accounting period specified in paragraph 10 of this Agreement, to the equivalent of the following:

   (a) 10,250 cusecs from April 1 to July 10, 12,000 cusecs from July 11 to August 31, 10,500 cusecs during September, and 10,000 cusecs from October 1 to 15 from the Sutlej, as at Rupar, plus

   (b) 3,500 cusecs during April, 4,500 cusecs during May, 5,500 cusecs from June 1 to September 30, and 5,100 cusecs from October 1 to 15 from the Sutlej and Beas combined; as at Ferozepore, provided that the withdrawal from the Beas component does not exceed 16% of that component (during the period October 1 to October 15 the Beas component shall be as corrected for gains and losses between Ferozepore and Islam), plus

   (c) Any Ravi supplies (after having given effect to paragraph 9 of this Agreement) transferred to the Beas and received at Ferozepore.

2. In addition to the withdrawals that India would be entitled to make under paragraph 1 above, India may make further withdrawals equivalent to amounts related to Pakistan's ability to replace. These amount, by water-accounting periods, shall be the aggregate of (a) and (b) below limited to amounts related to the effective capacities of the link canals, such amounts being as defined under (c), below

(a) 80% of the equivalent (at Ferozepore) of any Ravi supplies escaped below Madhopur.

(b) 80% of the gross amount, determined as below

When the discharge at Merala is below the floor discharge shown in column 2 of the following Table, the gross amount, as at Ferozepore, shall be zero. When the discharge at Merala reaches or exceeds the ceiling discharge shown in column 3 of the Table, the gross amount as at Ferozepore shall be the amount shown in column 4 of the Table. For discharges at Merala between those shown in columns 2 and 3, the gross amount, as at Ferozepore, shall be the proportional intermediate amount.

(d) During October I to is, India may make additional withdrawals, over and above those specified in paragraphs 1 and 2 (a) above, of 400 cusecs as at Ferozepore. If, during this period, river supplies in Pakistan are sufficiently good to permit the transfer of further additional amounts, Pakistan will cause such supplies to be transferred and will, through its Special Commissioner, notify the Indian Special Commissioner of the amounts which may be made available as additional replacement supplies.

In addition to the withdrawals that India would be entitled to make under paragraph 1 and 2 above, India may make another withdrawals to the extent and in the circumstances specified below:

3.(a) When, in any water accounting period the supplies at Ferozepore below (including withdrawals by the Dipalpur Canal), plus the amounts specified for India under paragraph 2 above, exceed the amounts set out below, India may withdraw the equivalent of 50% of the excess (provided that this quantity, viz. 50% of the excess, shall be reduced, but not below zero, by the equivalent at Ferozepore of the amounts, if any, stored during that period) and will allow the balance to escape below Ferozepore:

(b) (i) When there is an escapage below Islam, India may withdraw equivalent to the amount of the escapage.

(ii) If, during a water-accounting period, the equivalent at Ferozepore of the actual delivery at the tail of the Balloki-Suleimanki Link is less than the effective capacity (column 5 of the Table under paragraph 2(b)) and there is an escapage below Khanki or below Balloki not due to an operational emergency, India may withdraw additional amounts, limited to the unused effective capacity or to the equivalent of the escapage, whichever is less. If the escapage has been due to an operational emergency, Pakistan will take steps to discontinue the escapage as soon as the emergency is over.

There shall be no restriction on Indian withdrawals when, during any water accounting period, the aggregate of (i), (ii) and (iii) below exceeds 35,000 cusecs (without correction for gains and losses) between April 1 and August 31, 30,000 cusecs (without correction for gains and losses) in September and 25,000 cusecs (corrected for gains and losses between Ferozepore and Islam) during the first fifteen days of October:

(i) The supply at Ferozepore below (including withdrawals by the Diplapur Canal).

(ii) The equivalent (at Ferozepore) of any Ravi supplies escaped below Madhopur.

(iii) Between April 1 and September 30, the appropriate gross amount under paragraph 2(b) above, and, during the October 1 to 15, the amount under paragraph 2(d) above.
The aggregate of (10 and (iii) will be limited to the effective capacity shown in column 5 of the Table under paragraph 2(b) above.

B. FOR THE PERIOD OCTOBER 16 TO MARCH 31:

4. Except as provided in paragraphs 5, 6 and 7 below, India agrees to limit canal withdrawals in Indian territory in each water accounting period specified in paragraph 10 of this Agreement to the equivalent of the following:

(a) 10,000 cusecs from the Sutlej, as at Rupar, plus

(b) 3,500 cusecs during the last sixteen days of October and 2,700 cusecs thereafter from the Sutlej and Beas combined, as at Ferozepore, provided that the withdrawal from the Beas component corrected for gains and losses between Ferozepore and Islam does not exceed 21% of that component, as so corrected, plus

(c) Any Ravi supplies (after having given effect to paragraph 9 of this Agreement) transferred to the Beas and received at Ferozepore.

5. In addition to the withdrawals that India would be entitled to make under paragraph 4 above, India may make further withdrawals equivalent to amounts related to Pakistan’s ability to replace. These amounts shall be such amounts, if any, as may be agreed upon between the Special Commissioners.

6. In addition to the withdrawals that India would be entitled to make under paragraphs 4 and 5 above, India may make further withdrawals to the extent and in the circumstances specified below:

(a) When there is an escapage below Islam (except during the annual closure at Islam headworks) India may withdraw amounts equivalent to the amount of the escapage.

(b) There shall be no restriction on Indian withdrawals from the Sutlej and Beas when, during any water accounting period specified in paragraph 10 of this Agreement, the supply at Ferozepore below, corrected for gains and losses between Ferozepore and Islam, including withdrawals of Dipalpur Canal, plus the amounts specified in paragraph 5 above, exceeds 10,000 cusecs.

C. GENERAL

7. India may utilise the stored waters in any manner it likes.

period July 11 to March 31 such water account will be prepared on the basis of identical dates at various points of river supply and canal withdrawals, without any allowance for time-lag. During the period April 1 to September 30, the corrections to be applied for gains and losses shall be as set out in Annex I to this Agreement. During the period October 1 to March 31, there shall be no allowance for gains or losses, except for those in the reach from Ferozepore to Islam. For this reach, the gains and losses shall be the actual gains and losses, calculated without any allowance for time-lag.

If, at any time between the closure of the Suleimanke Barrage (about the middle of October) and December 25, any supplies are released below Suleimanke, the Special Commissioners will agree on an estimate of the gains which would have accrued in the reach from Suleimanke to Islam but for such release and these estimated gains will be used in the water-account instead of the actual gains or losses but not beyond December 25. This provision will not apply if the release is made when the supply reaching Suleimanke is in excess of 6,000 cusecs or when the supply reaching Islam falls below 350 cusecs, in which event the actual gains or losses will be adopted for purposes of the water-account.

9. India will continue to supply the existing withdrawals of C.B.D.C. as hitherto.

10. Each calendar month will be divided into three periods (1st to 10th, 11th to 20th and 21st to the end of the month) for the purposes of the water-account, except October which will be divided into four periods (1st to 10th, 11th to 15th, 16th to 20th and 21st to 31st). An attempt will be made to balance the water-account for each of the periods specified above but any excess or deficit in Indian withdrawals in any such period will be carried over to the next period for adjustment.

11.(1) The Governments of India and Pakistan will each nominate a Special Commissioner, who shall be charged with the responsibility of supervising, in India and in Pakistan respectively, the implementation of this Agreement. Each Government may, if it so desires, appoint a Deputy Special Commissioner to assist the Special Commissioner.

(2) The two Commissioners will consult with each other, on the request of either, and each Commissioner will furnish to the Commissioner of the other Government the data specified in Annex II to this Agreement. On the request of the Commissioner of the other Government, each Government will afford to the Commissioner of the other Government, or his Deputy, all reasonable access to the irrigation works concerned.

(3) In the event of any serious damage to irrigation works arising from causes beyond the control of the Government of Pakistan, which would have the effect of diminishing the supplies in the Balloki-Suleimanke Link, there shall be consultation between the Special Commissioners as to whether or not any modification should be made in the terms of paragraph 2 of this Agreement on account of such an emergency, and also with regard to the steps to be taken to restore this position to normal.

(4) In the event of any dispute arising with respect to the implementation of this Agreement, which cannot be resolved by discussion between the Special Commissioners, the matter will be referred to the representatives of the two Governments (participating with the International Bank in the Indus Water Talks) either of whom may, if he considers it necessary, enlist the good offices of the International Bank.

12. This Agreement will be without prejudice to any rights or claims of either Government, and will imply no commitments other than those specified herein for the period covered by the Agreement.

13. This Agreement applies to the period April 1, 1959 to March 31, 1960. If, at any time during the currency of this Agreement, the International Bank should give notice to the two Governments of its withdrawals from the work of preparation of a comprehensive plan for the irrigation use of the waters of the Indus system of rivers, this Agreement shall cease to have effect as from a date three months after the date of the Bank’s withdrawal, or from 31st March, 1960, whichever is earlier.

DONE at Washington, D.C., this 17th day of April, 1959, in three counterparts, of which one shall be retained by each of the parties to this Agreement and the third deposited in the archives of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Karachi, April 29, 1959.

The High Commission of India in Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, and, with regard to the Ministry's Note No.1(1)-4/5/58 of March 10, 1959, has the honour to invite a reference to the High Commission Note of October 7, 1958, in which the Indian position in respect of developments on the Indian side was clearly stated.

2. The Inter-Dominion Agreement of May 1948 envisaged progressive reduction in the supplies from the Eastern rivers made to Pakistan canals to give reasonable time to Pakistan to tap alternative sources. The World Bank Proposal of February 1954 also provided for a "transition period" which was estimated by the Bank to be about 5 years for the same purpose. Both these documents referred to historic supplies from Eastern rivers to Pakistan canals and placed no restrictions whatsoever on the utilisation of surplus supplies of the Eastern rivers for new development in India.

3. The Government of Pakistan have, during all these years, gone ahead with the execution of development projects based on additional, i.e., non-historic uses of the waters of the three Western Rivers. They have, however, been extremely slow in the completion and operation of replacement works. This attitude of the Government of Pakistan is contrary to the spirit of the Inter-Dominion Agreement of May 1948 and of the World Bank proposal of February 1954 and has resulted in holding up the development of arid areas on the Indian side. Despite this, the Government of India have all along acted in conformity with the 1948 Inter-Dominion Agreement and the principles of the World Bank Proposal of 1954.

4. The Government of India are surprised that in the face of the factual position stated in paras 2 and 3 above, the Government of Pakistan should in their note dated the 10th March 1959, object to the operation of the barrage at Harike on the vague and flimsy pretext that it would "interfere with the lawfully established beneficial use in Pakistan." In the communication dated 24th November 1958 from the Indian Special Commissioner for Canal Waters addressed to the Pakistan Irrigation Commissioner, it was made clear that the surplus supplies stored in the Harike pond in the flood season would be utilized to feed the newly constructed Sirhind Feeder and this would not in any way affect the releases below Ferozepore weir for Pakistan channels which would be maintained at 79% of the Beas flow supplies at Ferozepore, corrected for gains and losses between Ferozepore and Islam, after taking into account the replacement supplies that may be available to Pakistan.
5. It will be clear from the factual position stated in paragraphs 2 to 4 above that the Government of Pakistan have been grievously misinformed about the factual position and gross confusion has been created in their mind between the historic supplies from the Eastern rivers given to Pakistan canals and the surplus supplies of the Eastern rivers. The High Commission has been instructed by the Government of India to inform the Government of Pakistan that, in the view of the Government of India, the objection raised by the Government of Pakistan to the operation of the Harike Barrage is totally misconceived and groundless.

6. As the Government of Pakistan are aware, negotiations to settle the Indus Basin Water question are going on under the aegis of the World Bank and an ad hoc transitional agreement to cover the period from 1st April 1959 to 31st March 1960 has already been signed by the representatives of the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan.

7. The High Commission takes this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, the assurances of its highest consideration.

No.F.112(5)/56-Genl(P) the 4th May, 1959/14 Vaisakha, 1881.

2. The Government of India are surprised to note that the Government of Pakistan should have deemed it necessary, at this stage, to reiterate their alleged legal position, as at partition, and advance various other claims which are not directly related to the question of deposit, by Pakistan, of the outstanding sums under “disputed charges.” The Government of India are already aware of the position and claims advanced in the Pakistan note, referred to above. Equally, the Government of Pakistan should be aware of the views of the Government of India with respect to these matters which have been clearly and fully stated to these earlier communications. It is not understood, therefore, what purpose is now sought to be served by a reiteration of their position and claims by the Government of Pakistan.

3. India’s request for deposit of the ‘disputed charges’ which forms the subject matter of this exchange of notes, is based not on any vague general principles, or contentious arguments, but on the clear and precise terms which were formally accepted by the Government of Pakistan (see paragraph 7 of the Agreement of 4th May 1948, which states: “The Dominion Governments of India and Pakistan accept the above terms......”).

4. Obviously, if an Agreement has been concluded between two parties and if one party contends that it has become void while the other holds that it is still valid, the proper method to determine whether the Agreement is valid or not is to submit the problem of the validity of the Agreement to the judicial decision of an impartial authority. As the Government of Pakistan will recall, it is now more than seven years since the Government of India suggested this course in paragraph 9 of their Note No. F.6(1)Pak-III/51 dated the 18th September 1951 in the following words :-

“The present differences have arisen only because Pakistan is unilaterally attempting to repudiate its own obligations under the Agreement by violations of the Agreement and by allegations of its initial voidness or its subsequent termination. The Government of India cannot recognise such unilateral repudiation of international obligations nor can they subscribe to the view that unilateral violations of an international treaty can confer on the offending party any rights over and above or different from the rights given to it by that treaty. The Government of India would again cordially invite the Government of Pakistan to a full implementation by both parties of their obligations under the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of 4th May 1948. Should, however, the Government of Pakistan have any doubts regarding the binding character of this Agreement, the proper course would be for them to seek a judicial decision from an impartial international authority on the question of the validity of this Agreement. In case the Government of Pakistan desire to follow this course, the Government of India, while reserving all their rights including those flowing from the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of 4th May 1948 and from violations by Pakistan of the terms of that Agreement, would be willing to discuss the procedure for such adjudication.”
5. Apart from the above, with regard to the “disputed charges”, already deposited and to be deposited with the Reserve Bank of India, the Government of India have, in paragraph 7 of their note of 27th May 1957, assured the Government of Pakistan that if no satisfactory settlement can be mutually worked out by negotiation, the Government of India would be willing, as soon as the Government of Pakistan have carried out their part of the obligation, to discuss arrangements, including reference to arbitration if necessary, for a final settlement of the entire amount of the “disputed charges”. The Government of India are unable, therefore, to understand the hesitation of the Government of Pakistan to deposit immediately the outstanding sum. If the Government of Pakistan are really in earnest to resolve the question fairly, there is no reason why, instead of suggesting yet another procedure in paragraph 25 of their note of 25th August 1958, they cannot adhere to one which they had already followed for more than two years.

6. At a time when negotiations are proceeding, with the good offices of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, for a settlement of the question regarding the use by India and Pakistan of the waters of the Indus system of rivers, both sides having generally agreed that the problem “should be solved on a functional and not a political plane, without relation to past negotiations and past claims,” the Government of India would not like to comment on the claims put forward by the Government of Pakistan in paragraph 2-9 of their note of August 25, 1958, on the basis of their alleged “legal position at partition.”

It appears necessary, however, to clarify the status of the Expert Committee ‘B’ on whose report the Government of Pakistan appear to rely for their alleged legal position. This Committee had no legal status whatever under the Indian Independence Act, 1947. Under this Act, the only competent body to take decisions regarding matters arising out of the partition of Punjab was the Punjab Partition Committee. This Committee rejected the recommendations of the Expert Committee “B” with regard to the Upper Bari Doab Canal and the Ferozepore Head-works; instead, it asked for a re-examination of the problem and later, at its meeting held on 19th and 20th December, 1948, it approved the Standstill Agreements reached between the Chief Engineers of East Punjab and West Punjab. After the Agreement of 4th May 1948 had been concluded, the West Punjab Government thought it necessary to place the following note before the partition Committee:-

“3. Maintenance of Upper Bari Doab Canal and Ferozepore Head-works.
Note by West Punjab Government –

The Expert Committee ‘B” appointed for the division of the physical assets of the Punjab province considered the question of the future management of the Upper Bari Doab Canal and secondly, the Ferozepore Head-works, and made certain recommendations vide para 15 of their report. The Partition Committee, however, asked Messrs. Sarup Singh and Hameed to put up a joint proposal in the matter. The two Chief Engineers agreements in this case valid up to the 31st March 1948, were duly approved by the Partition Committee. No further agreements were, however, executed after the 31st March 1948, and the supply of canal water to the West Punjab was stopped. The supply has, however, since been resumed on the basis of an agreement between the two dominions and the facts are known to the representatives of both the East and West Punjab Governments on the Partition Committee. Further negotiations will also take place at Dominion level. The matter is now laid formally before the Partition Committee for their information.”

The Committee noted this information.

(Extract from proceedings of the Punjab Partition Committee held on the 26th and 27th May 1948).

It would thus be clear that the statements of the Expert Committee ‘B’ have no relevance so far as the rights of India and Pakistan to the waters of the Indus system of rivers are concerned.

7. In paragraphs 26-31 of their note dated 25th August 1958, various financial claims against India have been advanced on the basis of Pakistan’s own interpretation of proposal made on February 5, 1954, by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development as the basis of an agreement. In spite of prolonged efforts by the Bank and the fullest cooperation by the Government of India, it has not yet been possible to reach any agreement on that basis. The Government of Pakistan would appreciate that there can be no question of any financial liability between two independent countries except on the basis of a contractual obligation.

With regard to Pakistan’s interpretation of some paragraphs of the Bank proposal, on the basis of which the alleged claims mentioned above have been advanced, the position of the Government of India should by now be well known to the Government of Pakistan from communications on the subject exchanged through the Bank. At this stage, when the Bank is engaged in trying to negotiate an agreement between the two countries, the Government of India would not like to make the Bank’s task more difficult by entering into separate discussions with the Government of Pakistan on the interpretation to be put on various paragraphs of that proposal.
8. The Government of India regret to note that, apart from the question of deposit in escrow of the “disputed charges”, there has been considerable delay on the part of the Government of Pakistan to pay to the Reserve Bank of India, for credit to the Punjab (India) Government the “undisputed charges” fixed by the Prime Minister of India from time to time. The amount so outstanding for the period ending 30th June 1959 is Rs.15,75,561.

9. The High Commission avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations the assurances of their highest consideration.

2486. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations
Government of Pakistan
Karachi

No. I (1)-4/5/58 the 7th May, 1959

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations Government of Pakistan presents its compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and with reference to the letter’s Note No.F.7(2)-58-Genl(P) dated October 7, 1958, has the honour to state as follows :-

2. The Government of Pakistan are studying the Note of the High Commission in which the Government of India have discussed, among others, issues involving around their position with respect to the Joint Statement of May 4, 1948, and have offered “to have the validity of the agreement (the Joint Statement of May 4, 1948) adjudicated upon by an arbitral tribunal.” Before making a full reply to the Note of October 7, 1958, the Government of Pakistan seek clarification of this offer by Government of India. As the Government of India are aware, the Government of Pakistan deny the Joint Statement of May 4, 1948, to be subsisting. The Joint Statement was a purely temporary arrangement, without prejudice to the legal rights of the parties, and is unrelated to the Bank Proposal of February 5, 1954, and Aide Memoire of May 21, 1956.
3. The Government of Pakistan, in their Note of August 29, 1958, renewed their offer, in the interest of promoting agreement on the implementation of the principles of the Bank Proposal and Aide Memoire, to reach now an agreement committing each side to submit to adjudication every issue related to the water question. This offer covers every contention that the Government of India might decide to raise related to the water question, including the validity of the Joint Statement of May 4, 1948.

4. Government of India would appreciate that adjudication respecting the validity of the Joint Statement to have meaning must of necessity include every point related to the Joint Statement which the parties may wish to raise. It will be appreciated if the Government of India will state precisely what issues relating to the Joint Statement the Government of India are prepared to adjudicate. As the Joint Statement of May 4, 1948 is unrelated to the Bank Proposal and Aide Memoire, any such reference shall be without prejudice to the negotiations now in progress through the good offices of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

5. Since the Government of Pakistan continue prepared to commit Pakistan to adjudicate every issue related to the Water Question, they are desirous to explore with the Government of India, precisely what issue the Government of India are prepared to adjudicate. The Government of Pakistan have made their original offer in order to promote an early and just solution of the Indus Water Question. In as much as the Government of India have also expressed the desire for such a solution, the issues to be adjudicated would, of course, be those that stand in the way of agreement.

6. By their letter dated 22nd December, 1958 delivered to the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development through the head of their Water Delegation, the Government of Pakistan re-affirmed their acceptance, without condition or reservation, of the Bank Proposals of February 5, 1954 and Aide Memoire of May 21, 1958 as the continuing basis for reaching a cooperative solution of the Indus Waters question with the assistance of the Bank. By the same letter, they also re-affirmed their agreement to all differences as to interpretation of Bank Proposal and Aide Memoire or implementation that cannot be promptly resolved by agreement, being resolved any arbitration.

7. It will be appreciated if the Government of India will, either through the International Bank, or in reply to this enquiry, state whether they agree that all the differences as to the interpretation of the Bank proposals and Aide Memoire or implementation that cannot be promptly resolved by agreement should be resolved by arbitration.
8. Copies of this Note are being sent to the Secretary General of the United Nations and the President of the International Bank.

9. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of its highest consideration.

2487. Press Statement of President of the World Bank Eugene Black.

New Delhi, May 16, 1959.

During the past three days I have held, with the Indian authorities, a series of conversations on the Indus Waters question.

I have discussed the matter with Prime Minister Nehru, Mr. Morarji R. Desai (Minister of Finance), and Hafiz Mohd. Ibrahim (Minister of Irrigation and Power), and there have also been discussions at the official level.

As a result of these various conversations, certain general principles have been established along lines acceptable to the Government of India. The establishment of these principles represents in my view important progress towards a settlement of this issue which has been so long a cause of friction between India and Pakistan. There are, however, some difficult obstacles that remain to be surmounted.

I am now going to Karachi to hold conversation with President Ayub and the members of his Government.

I venture to express the hope that my conversations with the Pakistan authorities will carry matters another stage further along the road to a settlement.

New Delhi, June 9, 1959.

The Government of India have now received information from the World Bank regarding the results of recent discussions in Karachi between Mr. Eugene Black, President and Mr. W.A.B. Iliff, Vice President, World Bank, and the Government of Pakistan. These discussions followed similar discussions held earlier in New Delhi with the Government of India.

Though there are still several matters to be worked out in detail, these discussions have resulted in the formulation of certain general principles which would afford a basis on which it should be possible to move forward towards a settlement of the Indus Basin waters question.

The Government of Pakistan have conveyed to Mr. Eugene Black its willingness to go forward on the basis of a system of works proposed by the Bank. This system of works would be constructed by Pakistan, and one of its purposes would be the replacement from the three western rivers of the pre-Partition uses on those canals in Pakistan, which were dependent on supplies from the three eastern rivers.

The Bank has reached an agreement in principle with the Government of India on the amount of financial contribution to be made by India towards the cost of construction of these works.

The transition period, that is to say, the period of time after which India would be entitled to the exclusive use of the waters of the three eastern rivers, would be approximately 10 years.

In order to meet the full requirements of the Rajasthan and other new Indian canals, which will be ready to withdraw water much before the end of this long transition period, the Bank has agreed to attempt to secure for India necessary financial assistance to enable the construction of a storage on the Beas which will be taken up as early as possible.

The above understandings are contingent on the Bank’s success in obtaining assurances of adequate financial assistance from friendly Governments. Over the next two months, the Bank hopes to be able to obtain appropriate assurances in this regard.

A meeting of the representatives of India and Pakistan and of the Bank will be held in London early in August, 1950* to work out the heads of agreement of a Water Treaty between India and Pakistan, as also various details including the regulation of supplies, from the eastern rivers between India and Pakistan during the transition period.

After a period of 11 years, during which the Government of India has been patiently negotiating for a peaceful settlement of this problem and in which the World Bank has devoted for the last seven years considerable time, energy and expense, the Government of India sees some prospects of a solution. They hope that, with goodwill on both sides and the assistance of the World Bank, it would be possible to reach before long a final settlement of the Indus basin waters question in the lasting interests of the people of the Indus Basin in both countries.

New Delhi, August 3, 1959.

“In my statement of September 1, 1958, concerning the negotiations of the Indo-Pakistan Canal Waters question, I brought to the notice of the House that the plan of replacement works submitted by Pakistan at the London meeting of July 1958 was under examination. Our comments on the Pakistan plan were conveyed to the Bank when the talks were resumed in Washington in December 1958. Along with our comments the Indian representative put forward an alternative plan of replacement works.

“An important feature of that plan was the diversion of the waters of the Chenab at Marhu through Indian territory for supply to Pakistan at suitable points. It was much less expensive than the Pakistan Plan and had the merit of enabling the replacement works to be completed in a relatively short period. But it was not acceptable to Pakistan.

“Although in the course of the discussions in Washington, Pakistan signified, for the first time, its unconditional acceptance of the division of waters as suggested by the Bank in its proposal of 1954, it continued to have reservations on some of the other features of the Bank proposal.

“As there was no prospect of an agreement between the parties, the Bank felt that it should put forward, for consideration by India and Pakistan, its own proposals for a settlement of the dispute.

“In May 1959, Mr. Eugene Black, President of the Bank, visited New Delhi and held consultations with the Prime Minister and the Ministers for Irrigation and Power and Finance.

“In the course of the discussions he put forward certain general principles as furnishing a basis for the implementation of the Bank proposal of 1954 for the division of waters of the Indus Basin. He also visited Karachi and held similar consultation with the representatives of the Pakistan Government.

“The position as it has emerged from Mr. Black’s discussions in Delhi and Karachi may be briefly summarized as follows:

(a) The Government of Pakistan has conveyed to the Bank their willingness to go forward with a system of engineering works to be constructed by Pakistan, one of whose purposes would be the replacement, from the three Western rivers, of the pre-partition supplies of those canals in Pakistan which were dependent on supplies from the three Eastern rivers. Particulars of these works have not been furnished to India as India will have no concern with their planning construction, costs or operation.
(b) The Bank has reached an agreement, in principal, with the Government of India on the amount of financial contribution to be made by India.

(c) The transition period, that is to say, the time required by Pakistan to construct and bring into operation the works mentioned in (a) above and after which India would be entitled to the exclusive use of the waters of the three Eastern rivers, will be approximately 10 years.

(d) These elements of agreement are contingent on the Bank being able to secure for Pakistan adequate financial assistance from friendly Governments for the construction of these works in Pakistan.

“The House will recall that the Bank proposal of 1954 provided for a transition period of 5 years. This estimate was based on a system of replacement works which consisted mainly of link canals and did not include any storages.

“It was later felt that this estimate was somewhat optimistic and limited storage may be necessary. The engineering works now proposed are materially different from the replacement works formerly contemplated and, according to the Bank, they will also provide for replacement of the waters now drawn by Pakistan from the Eastern rivers, though it will take about 10 years to construct and bring them into operation.

“We would not have accepted a transition period of 10 years as the basis of a settlement if it was calculated to postpone unduly the date we had in view for the opening of the Rajasthan canal. We have agreed to it on the clear understanding that the link canals, already constructed in Pakistan, would be operated from 1960 onwards to their full designed capacities.

“We have also been assured that the Bank would try to obtain the necessary financial assistance for the construction of a dam on the Beas to make available perennial supplies to the Rajasthan canal well before the expiry of the transition period now suggested.

“The running of the link canals in Pakistan to full capacity will enable India to adhere the target date for opening the Rajasthan canal in 1962 or, even earlier, if the canal can be completed earlier. But for the first few years this canal, like the Bhakra canal, will have to function largely on a non-perennial basis.”

“The Beas dam may take 7 or 8 years to complete but limited perennial supplies will be available for Rajasthan canal in about 6 years when the dam can be expected to being impounding water, although not to its full capacity.”

The Minister also said: “The House will agree that the acceptance by the parties of certain broad principles as the basis of an agreement constitutes an advance towards a settlement of this difficult question."
“This satisfactory result has been achieved by the unremitting labours of the World Bank and the personal interest of its President whose contribution to the success of the recent talks it is difficult to over-estimate.

“While there may be reasonable grounds for optimism, it cannot be said that from now on everything is smooth sailing and that there are no difficulties ahead. Many hurdles have still to be crossed before a final settlement of the Indus Waters Question can be reached.”

2490. Statement the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on the Information supplied to Lok Sabha by the Minister of Irrigation and Power Hafiz Mohammad Ibrahim regarding payment from Pakistan of various dues from Pakistan on account of supply of canal waters.

New Delhi, August 4, 1959.

Shri Hafiz Mohd. Ibrahim, Union Minister of Irrigation and Power, stated in the Lok Sabha on August 4, 1959 that, as a result of further correspondence on canal water dues against Pakistan, Pakistan Government had made another payment of Rs. 16,21,370/- representing ‘undisputed’ charges for the period from October 1, 1957 to September 30, 1958.

[The Minister was giving a written reply to a question by Shri Vidya Charan Shukla and Shri D.C. Sharma regarding the result of further correspondence with the Government of Pakistan on settlement of the disputed as well as the balance of undisputed charges and the latest position of outstanding on these accounts.]

The Minister also stated that the amount outstanding from the Government of Pakistan, both ‘disputed’ and ‘undisputed’, up to the period ending September 30, 1959, were as follows:

<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>

<td>Disputed</td>

(The Minister added that the matter was under correspondence between the two Governments for the remaining payment).

On 26th February 1960 the Lok Sabha was informed that no further payments either “disputed” or “undisputed” have since been received from Pakistan.

2491. Note from High Commission of India in Pakistan to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Karachi, August 4, 1959.

High Commission of India
Karachi

No. F.7(1)/59-P. 4th August, 1959/ Sravana 13, 1881 (Saka).

The High Commission for India in Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, and, with reference to the latter’s Note No.1(1)-4/5/58 dated the 7th May, 1959 has the honour to state as follows:

2. With regard to the Water Agreement of 4th May, 1948, the position of the Government of India was clearly stated eight years back, in paragraph 9 of their Note No.F.6(1)-Pak.III, dated 18th September, 1951, which is reproduced below for ready reference:

“As has been clearly demonstrated above, all questions relating to the waters of the rivers in the Indus basin have either been settled or could be settled in accordance with the terms of the Agreement of May 4, 1948, if both the countries loyally carry out their international obligations under that Agreement. The present differences have arisen only because Pakistan is unilaterally attempting to repudiate its own obligations under that Agreement by violations of the Agreement and by allegations of its initial voidness or its subsequent termination. The Government of India cannot recognize such unilateral repudiation of International obligations nor can they subscribe to the view that unilateral violations of an international treaty can confer on the offending party any rights over and above or different from the rights given to it by that treaty. The Government of India would again cordially invite the Government of Pakistan to a full implementation by both parties of their obligations under the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of 4th May, 1948. Should, however, the Government of Pakistan have any doubt regarding the binding character of this Agreement, the proper course would be for them to seek a judicial decision from an impartial international authority on the question of the validity of this Agreement. In case the Government of Pakistan desire to follow this course, the Government of India, while reserving all their rights including those flowing from the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of 4th May, 1948 and from violations by Pakistan of the terms of that Agreement, would be willing to discuss the procedure for such adjudication.........”
It would also be clear from the foregoing that by offering to have the validity of the Agreement of May 4, 1948, adjudged by an arbitral tribunal, the Government of India intended to determine whether the Government of Pakistan had any right to unilaterally denounce this Agreement in accordance with its provisions.

3. The Government of India are surprised that the Government of Pakistan should, on the eve of the visit of Mr. Black, President of the International Bank, to India and Pakistan, to discuss with the two Governments certain general principles for the settlement of the Indus Water question, have deemed it necessary to suggest in their Note, referred to above, that all differences as to the interpretation and the implementation of the Bank’s proposal and Aide Memoire be resolved by arbitration. These documents, being in the nature of proposals of a good officer exploring points of common understanding, the details of which had not been fully worked out, were never intended to be precise instruments enjoining any legal obligations capable of interpretation by the application of rules of law. Furthermore, for the same reasons, these documents cannot be compared with a bilateral agreement, such as the Water Agreement of 1948, in regard to their legal sanction or the rights and obligations flowing therefrom.

4. Since, as a result of Mr. Black’s discussions referred to above, it has been stated by the Bank that certain general principles have been established which afford a satisfactory basis for working towards a final settlement and further discussions are shortly going to be held in this connection between the representatives of India, Pakistan and the Bank, the Government of India would not like to make the Bank’s task more difficult by making detailed comments on various extraneous issues raised in the Ministry’s Note on 7th May, 1959.

5. The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Government of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs And Commonwealth Relations,
Government of Pakistan
Karachi.

2492. Statement laid on the Table of the Rajya Subha by Minister of Irrigation and Power Hafiz Mohammad Ibrahim on the Indo-Pakistan Canal Waters Dispute.

New Delhi, August 10, 1959.

In my statement of 1st September 1958 concerning the negotiations on the Indo-Pakistan Canal Waters question, I brought to the notice of the House that the plan of replacement works submitted by Pakistan at the London meeting of July 1958 was under examination. Our comments on the Pakistan plan were conveyed to the Bank when the talks were resumed in Washington in December 1958. Along with our comments the Indian representative put forward an alternative plan of replacement works. An important feature of that plan was the diversion of the waters of the Chenab at Marhu through Indian territory for supply to Pakistan at suitable points. It was much less expensive than the Pakistan plan and had the merit of enabling the replacement works to be completed in a relatively short period. But it was not acceptable to Pakistan.

2. Although in the course of the discussions in Washington Pakistan signified, for the first time, its unconditional acceptance of the division of waters as suggested by the Bank in its proposal of 1954, it continued to have reservations on some of the other features of the Bank proposal. As there was no prospect of an agreement between the parties, the Bank felt that it should put forward, for consideration by India and Pakistan, its own proposal for a settlement of the dispute.

3. In May 1959, Mr. Eugene Black, President of the Bank visited New Delhi and held consultation with the Prime Minister and the Ministers for Irrigation and Power and Finance. In the course of the discussions he put forward certain general principles as furnishing a basis for the implementation of the Bank proposal of 1954 for the division of waters of the Indus Basin. He also visited Karachi and held similar consultation with the representatives of the Pakistan Government.

4. The position as it has emerged from Mr. Black’s discussions in Delhi and Karachi may be briefly summarised as follows:

(a) The Government of Pakistan have conveyed to the Bank their willingness to go forward with a system of engineering works to be constructed by Pakistan, one of whose purpose would be the replacement, from the three Western rivers, of the pre-partition supplies of those canals in Pakistan which were dependent on supplies from the three Eastern rivers. Particulars of these works have not been furnished to India as India will have no concern with their planning, construction, costs or operation.
The Bank has reached an agreement, in principle, with the Government of India on the amount of financial contribution to be made by India.

The transition period, that is to say, the time required by Pakistan to construct and bring into operation the works mentioned in (a) above and after which India would be entitled to the exclusive use of the waters of the three Eastern rivers, will be approximately 10 years.

These elements of agreement are contingent on the Bank being able to secure for Pakistan adequate financial assistance from friendly Governments for the construction of these works in Pakistan.

The House will recall that the Bank Proposal of 1954 provided for a transition period of about 5 years. This estimate was based on a system of replacement works which consisted mainly of link canals and did not include any storages. It was later felt that this estimate was somewhat optimistic and limited storage may be necessary. The engineering works now proposed are materially different from the replacement works formerly contemplated and according to the Bank, they will also provide for replacement of the waters now drawn by Pakistan from the Eastern rivers though it will take about 10 years to construct and bring them into operation.

We would not have accepted a transition period of 10 years as the basis of a settlement if it was calculated to postpone unduly the date we had in view for the opening of the Rajasthan canal. We have agreed to it on the clear understanding that the link canals, already constructed in Pakistan, would be operated from 1960 onwards to their full designed capacities. We have also been assured that the Bank would try to obtain the necessary financial assistance for the construction of a dam on the Beas to make available perennial supplies to the Rajasthan canal well before the expiry of the transition period now suggested.

The running of the link canals in Pakistan to full capacity will enable India to adhere to the target date for opening the Rajasthan canal in 1962 or even earlier, if the canal can be completed earlier. But for the first few years this canal, like the Bhakra canal, will have to function largely on a non-perennial basis. The Beas dam may take 7 to 8 years to complete but limited perennial supplies will be available for the Rajasthan canal in about 6 years when the dam can be expected to begin impounding water, although not to its full capacity.

On the basis of the understandings reached by the President of the Bank with the Government of India and Pakistan, discussions have been resumed on the 5th August in London between the representations of India, Pakistan and the World Bank with a view to working out Heads of Agreement for an International Water Treaty. The talks will also cover matters connected with the regulation of supplies from the Eastern rivers during the transition period and with the uses which must be reserved for India in the upper reaches of the three Western rivers before they enter Pakistan.

8. The House will agree that the acceptance by the parties of certain broad principles as the basis of an agreement constitutes an advance towards a settlement of this difficult question. This satisfactory result has been achieved by the unremitting labours of the World Bank and the personal interest of its President whose contribution to the success of the recent talks it is difficult to overestimate. While there may be reasonable grounds for optimism, it cannot be said that from now on everything is smooth sailing and that there are no difficulties ahead. Many hurdles have still to be crossed before a final settlement of the Indus Waters Question can be reached.

New Delhi, March 15, 1960.

The Government of India have seen the announcement made by the World Bank on March 1, 1960, which refers inter alia to the current negotiations for the conclusion of a water treaty between India and Pakistan in settlement of the Indus waters question and the Bank’s finance plan and the participation of various friendly governments in this plan.

The Bank’s finance plan is related to the system of works to be constructed which would provide not only replacement from the three western rivers of supplies to meet the irrigation uses in those areas of Pakistan which have hitherto depended on supplies from the three eastern rivers, but also further substantial additional irrigation developments and development of important hydroelectric potential. These works would also make an important contribution to soil reclamation and drainage in Pakistan.

The Government of India are grateful to the Bank for the strenuous efforts they have made and are making for the settlement of the Indus Waters question and are also glad that friendly governments are assisting in the implementation of the Bank’s finance plan.
The Bank’s finance plan of 1,000 million dollars is mainly for works in Pakistan and it does not include works under construction in India, like the Bhakra Project and the Rajasthan Canal Project, which are necessary to enable India to utilise the waters of the eastern rivers and on which we are ourselves spending more than 700 million dollars.

The Bank’s finance plan is, as stated in the Bank announcement, contingent on the ratification of the Water Treaty now under negotiation. While it is implicit in India’s acceptance of the Bank proposal of 1954 that it will make some contribution to meet the cost of constructing replacement works, the question of making such a contribution will arise only when full agreement is reached on the transitional arrangements, limited essential uses in India of the waters of the Western rivers and other questions which are at present being discussed in Washington. While the Government of India hope that the current negotiations will lead to an early settlement they consider it premature to specify India’s contribution to the Bank’s finance plan at this stage.

2494. Extract from the speech of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru while replying to the debate on Foreign Affairs in Lok Sabha.

New Delhi, September 1, 1960.

AN HON. MEMBER asked me about the Canal Waters Agreement. Broadly it is based on the World Bank’s proposal of 1954, the salient feature of which was the allotment of the waters of the Indus, the Jhelum and the Chenab, except for minor uses in Jammu and Kashmir, to Pakistan and those of the Sutlej, the Ravi and the Beas to India. A transition period during which Pakistan would construct canals etc., to replace supplies hitherto received by her from the rivers going to India was to be fixed, India contributing towards the replacement works and allowing to Pakistan progressively diminishing supplies from the eastern rivers during this transition period.

The main features of this treaty are: Pakistan should build these replacement works, presumably in ten years’ time, and during these ten years we supply water to them, though in a progressively diminishing degree. In building these works, Pakistan is going to be helped by us financially to the extent that we are going to deprive her of the water that she has been getting so far. In effect, however, Pakistan is going to build on a much bigger scale with the help of a number of countries and the World Bank. Large sums of money are going to be given to Pakistan by the World Bank and by a number of other countries. But that has nothing to do with our agreement. We are going to make an ad hoc contribution spread over ten year.

It has taken a long time to decide how much water we are to give during the transition period of ten years and in what form the payment should be made. The ten-year period began on April 1, 1960, the date on which the treaty came into effect, and it can be extended by a further period of three years at Pakistan’s request. The extension is subject to a reduction in our contribution by 5 per cent in the first year, 10 per cent over two years and by 16 per cent over the three years. The ten-year period is to be roughly divided into two phases, 1960-66 and 1966-70. The water to be supplied by India to Pakistan from the eastern rivers during the transition period is to be of a diminishing scale. India will have no responsibility for their canals, etc.

A question that troubles many people is what effect this agreement with Pakistan is likely to have on the Rajasthan Canal. According to present plans, the Rajasthan Canal will be ready to carry some irrigation water up to 1,200 cusecs in 1961, 2,100 cusecs in 1962 and 3,000 cusecs in 1963. Thereafter it is proposed to enlarge the capacity in such a way that by about 1970 the Canal would be developed to 18,500 cusecs. We are trying to provide water to the Rajasthan Canal throughout this period on an increasing scale. This will partly depend also on another scheme, namely, the Beas scheme. Although the Rajasthan Canal will get water in an increasing quantity during this period, the full supply will come only when the Beas scheme is completed. Because we are accommodating Pakistan to a considerable extent, the World Bank has promised us aid for the construction of the Beas Dam.

The treaty provides for a Permanent Indus Commission, consisting of commissioners from India and Pakistan. Each commissioner will be the representative of his Government for all matters arising out of the treaty and will serve as a regular channel of communication on all matters relating to the implementation of the treaty. The permanent Indus Commission will take the first steps to iron out any differences between the two sides. The treaty also provides for a neutral expert to whom differences of a technical nature would be submitted for solution. A court of arbitration has been provided to deal with the major disputes on the interpretation of the treaty. This, broadly, is the position.

New Delhi, September 19, 1960.

The Prime Minister of India has, a short while ago, signed with the President of Pakistan a Treaty regarding the use by India and Pakistan of the waters of the Indus system of rivers and matters incidental thereto.

In signing this Treaty, Pakistan has agreed that, after a transition period of 10 years, India may retain for its own use about 12 million acre-feet of water of the rivers Sutlej, Beas and Ravi which was being delivered to Pakistan for the irrigation of about four million acres in the district of Lahore, Montgomery, Multan and in the former State of Bahawalpur. In return, India has agreed to pay to Pakistan over the next 10 years, a fixed sum of Rs. 83 crores to enable Pakistan to construct such works as it may consider necessary to replace from the Western Rivers i.e. the Indus, the Jhelum and the Chenab, the waters which were previously being supplied to Pakistan canals from the Sutlej, the Beas and the Ravi.

The fixed sum of Rs. 83 crores which we have agreed to pay to Pakistan represents, in the view of our engineers, a fair estimate of the costs of the replacement to be effected.

During the transition period, some waters of the Eastern Rivers will continue to be delivered to Pakistan; the quantity of water to be delivered under the terms of the Treaty represents a substantial reduction from that given under the last ad-hoc agreement and this quantity will further be reduced progressively after five or six years until the deliveries are discontinued on the expiry of the transition period.

It has been agreed that the waters of the three Eastern Rivers shall, for all time to come, be available for use by India and the waters of the three Western Rivers, except for essential uses in India within their own catchments, shall be allowed to flow down for all time to come for use by Pakistan. These essential uses in India include such domestic, municipal and industrial uses as we may consider necessary, the supplies required for the irrigation of about one million acres of land already irrigated from these rivers in the State of Jammu and Kashmir, Punjab and Himachal Pradesh and the supplies required for the development of irrigation to a further area of about 700,000 acres in these States. Ample provision has been made for the storage of water for purposes of flood control. Additional provision has been made for the storage by India of about three million acre-feet of water on the Western Rivers for various purposes including hydro-electric development.

This broad division of the waters of the Indus system rivers-Eastern Rivers for India and Western Rivers largely for Pakistan -- will enable each country to plan its own development in accordance with its own requirements and its own resources. In this manner the waters of these rivers will be developed for the maximum advantage of the people of both India and Pakistan.

Provision has been made in the Treaty for full and complete exchange of data of river supplies and canal withdrawals in both countries, and for undertaking works, on a co-operative basis, for the development of water resources, flood control and drainage in the interests of both countries. Appropriate Provision has also been made in the Treaty for the resolution of such differences and disputes as may arise during the course of its implementation.

The signing of this Treaty concludes a series of protracted negotiations with an agreement which follows not only the general principles proposed by the World Bank in 1954 which the Government of India had then accepted but also the principles underlying the agreement reached in May, 1948 between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan. During all these long negotiations, the Government of India have always recognised the fact that the waters of the Indus rivers are important for both countries and must therefore be developed for the benefit of both. Whereas in discharge of our obligations to our own people we have been anxious to increase the use of these waters on our side of the border, we have never been unmindful of the interests of the Pakistan cultivators.

In accordance with our plans, we hope to open the Rajasthan Canal for non-perennial irrigation from Kharif 1961 and as new channels are constructed and new lands are broken for cultivation, increased supplies will be available for them under the terms of the Treaty. Rabi supplies for this canal will, however, not be available from the flow waters of the Beas until after the end of the transition period or from storage until the Beas Dam is built. Work on this dam will begin very soon.

On the entry into force of the Treaty, the agreement of May 4, 1948 will lapse. The ‘undisputed’ charges due under this agreement are being paid by Pakistan in full and it has been agreed to accept from Pakistan a sum of about Rs. 62 lakhs in full settlement of the ‘disputed’ charges.

I trust that the signing of the Treaty will bring a new era of co-operation between India and Pakistan in harnessing the large natural resources of the Indus and its tributaries in the interest of the people of both India and Pakistan.
In conclusion, I would like to express my gratitude and that of the Government of India to Mr. Black, President of the World Bank, and Mr. Illif, Vice President of the Bank, for the great interest they have taken in securing this settlement.

New Delhi, August 23, 1954.

Thank you for your letter of the 14th July which you sent me in answer to my letter of the 13th April 1954. I hope you will forgive me for the delay in replying to it. You have been away from Karachi for a considerable part of this time and I have also been touring and otherwise very much occupied. I would also draw your attention to the letter addressed by me to you date May 7, 1954, to which I have had no reply yet. This letter deals with the evacuee property problem.

2. In your letter of the 14th July, you refer to the opening of the Bhakra canal. I need not deal with this matter fully at this stage because I am glad to find that, through the good offices of the World Bank, a further agreement about future negotiations on the basis of the World Bank proposals is in sight. But I should like to remove some misunderstandings. You have not been in touch with this matter except lately and I can, therefore, well understand that you are not fully posted with the background. When the President of the World Bank first made his proposal to the then Prime Minister of Pakistan and to me and we both agreed to it. It was generally understood that the preliminary talks with the World Bank would take about six months or so. In my talks with Mr. Black, this was mentioned as a rough estimate. I made it clear to him that we could not commit ourselves, indefinitely, to the assurance we had given about not diminishing the supply of water. We pointed out particularly that the Bhakra—Nangal project was under construction and would gradually take shape. We were spending vast sums of money on this project and we could not be expected to suspend it or stop its future development. It is true that no period was mentioned in the written assurance that was given.

3. Instead of six months, as anticipated, these talks went on for a year and then for two years. In the course of these talks, our representatives at Washington clearly mentioned that the Bhakra—Nangal scheme was developing and the time was rapidly coming when part of it would be ready and we would require additional water supplies. Early in 1954, this was clearly stated both to the Bank separately and at the joint meetings. Even when the Bank made its final proposal, this was pointed out by us. We were anxious that your representatives should be fully informed of the position. Later we gave formal notice of it when we found that the negotiations through the Bank had come to a standstill because, at that time, you were not prepared to accept the proposals of the Bank, which we had accepted.

4. You will appreciate that any assurance of the kind that was given by us is of an interim character. It could not possibly continue indefinitely regardless of other circumstances. Otherwise, it would be open to one party merely not to take any step and thereby prevent the other from functioning.

5. Further, as a matter of fact, even on the opening of the Bhakra canal and after, we did not reduce the normal supply of irrigation water to Pakistan, and I must confess I fail to understand the reason for the outcry in Pakistan on this subject.

6. Because of this self-denying act on our part, we have lost a whole season to the great disappointment of large numbers of agriculturists who were expecting this water.

7. I need not go into this question any further at this stage. I hope that further talks will take place now on the basis of the acceptance of the Bank proposal by both side and, separately, an ad hoc arrangement will also be arrived at.

8. I should like to remind you of the canal water agreement between India and Pakistan which was arrived at on the 4th May 1948. That agreement was signed, among others, by your present Governor-General and by me. It gave India the right to restrict water supplies provided we gave Pakistan enough time to make other arrangements. In fact, we did not lessen or restrict the supply of water to your canals at any time during these six years. There was some argument about a year ago, about some minor restrictions but that was, I think, adequately explained at the time. You will observe that we have tried our utmost during these years to be co-operative in this matter with Pakistan and not to take any step which might cause injury to the agriculturists in Pakistan.

14. I have in the past drawn your attention to the violent propaganda in Pakistan in favour of war with India. Many instances of this have occurred in recent months. You will appreciate that this is not a background for friendly talks. So far as I am concerned, I am anxious and eager for a settlement about Kashmir and other issues. In regard to the canal waters issue, we agreed to the World Bank's proposals even though they threw a very heavy burden on us. No one can accuse the World Bank of partiality to India in this matter. They went deeply into this question and considered it, in consultation with your engineers and ours, for two and a half years. In regard to the evacuee property matter, my last letter to you, written more than three months ago, has elicited no reply.

2497. Letters exchanged between India and Pakistan terminating the May 4, 1948 Agreement on Canal Waters.

High Commission of India Karachi

September 19, 1960

Excellency,

I have been instructed by my Government to communicate to you the following:

“The Government of India agrees that, on the ratification of the Indus Waters Treaty 1960, the Inter-Dominion Agreement on the Canal Water Dispute signed at New Delhi on 4th May 1948 (of which a copy is annexed hereto) and the rights and obligations of either party thereto claimed under, or arising out of, that Agreement shall be without effect as from 1st April 1960.

The position of the Government of India stated above and Your Excellency’s Note of today’s date stating the position of the Government of Pakistan on this question will form part of Annexure A to the Indus Water Treaty 1960.”

Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurance of my highest consideration.

Yours sincerely

sd/- K.V. Padmanabhan

His Excellency Mr. Manzur Qadir, Minister for Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations,
Government of Pakistan,

19th September, 1960

Excellency,

I have been instructed by my Government to communicate to you the following:-

“The Government of Pakistan agrees that, on the ratification of the Indus Waters Treaty, 1960, the document on the Canal Water Dispute signed at New Delhi on 4th May, 1948, (of which a copy is annexed hereto) and the rights and obligations of either party thereto claimed under, or arising out of, that document shall be without effect as from 1st April, 1960.

The position of the Government of Pakistan stated above and Your Excellency’s Note of today’s date stating the position of the Government of India on this question will form part of Annexure A to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960.”

Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurance of my highest consideration.

Foreign Minister

His Excellency Mr. K.V. Padmanabhan, I.F.S., Acting High Commissioner for India in Pakistan,
Karachi.
2498. Statement by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru while signing the Indus Water Treaty.

IS INDEED A UNIQUE occasion and a memorable day, memorable in many ways, memorable certainly in the fact that a very difficult and complicated problem which has troubled India and Pakistan for many years has been satisfactorily solved. It is also memorable because it is an outstanding example of a co-operative endeavour among our two countries as well as other countries and the International Bank.

On behalf of India I congratulate you, Mr. President, and I congratulate you, Mr. Iliff, as representative of the International Bank. I know how Mr. Black and you have laboured these past many years. Indeed, I often marveled at your patience and your persistence in spite of all manner of difficulties.

This settlement is memorable because it will bring assurance of relief to large numbers of people-farmers and others-in Pakistan and India. All of us, in spite of many scientific improvements, still depend upon the good earth and good water and the combination of these two leads to prosperity for the peasant and the countries concerned. By this arrangement we have tried to utilize to the best advantage the waters of the Indus river system. These waters have flowed down for ages past, the greater part going to the sea without being utilized. This is a happy occasion for all of us. The actual material benefits which will arise from this are great. But even greater than these material benefits are the psychological and emotional benefits. This treaty, Mr. President, is a happy symbol of the larger co-operation between your country and mine. I should like to express my deep gratitude to the International Bank and to all those who have laboured within Pakistan, in India and in the other friendly countries, and to all who have come to our assistance in this matter and generously made contributions towards solving this problem.

I feel sure that if we approach any problem in the world in a spirit of co-operative endeavour, it will be much easier of solution than it might appear to be. Therefore, most of all I welcome the spirit which, in spite of all difficulties and obstructions and obstacles, has triumphed in the end. Ultimately, the spirit does triumph even in this material age. I should again like to express my deep satisfaction at the happy outcome of many years’ labour and hope that this will bring prosperity to a vast number of people on both sides and will increase the goodwill and friendship between India and Pakistan.

2499. Treaty between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan Concerning the most complete and satisfactory utilisation of the Waters of the Indus System of Rivers.

PREAMBLE

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, being equally desirous of attaining the most complete and satisfactory utilisation of the waters of the Indus system of rivers and recognising the need, therefore, of fixing and delimiting, in a spirit of goodwill and friendship, the rights and obligations of each in relation to the other concerning the use of these waters and of making provision for the settlement, in a cooperative spirit, of all such questions as may hereafter arise in regard to the interpretation or application of the provisions agreed upon herein, have resolved to conclude a Treaty in furtherance of these objectives, and for this purpose have named as their plenipotentiaries:

The Government of India:
Shri Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India,

and

The Government of Pakistan
Field Marshal Mohammad Ayub Khan, HP., H.J.
President of Pakistan;

who, having communicated to each other their respective Full Powers and having found them in good and due form, have agreed upon the following Articles and Annexures:

Article I
Definitions

As used in this Treaty:

1. The terms “Article” and “Annexure” mean respectively an Article of, and an Annexure to, this Treaty.

Except as otherwise indicated, references to Paragraphs are to the paragraphs in the Article or in the Annexure in which the reference is made.

2. The term “Tributary” of a river means any surface channel whether in continuous or intermittent flow and by whatever name called, whose waters in the natural course would fall into that river, e.g. a tributary, a torrent, a natural drainage, an artificial drainage, a nadi, a nallah, a nai, a khad, a cho. The term also includes any sub-tributary or branch or subsidiary channel, by whatever name called, whose waters, in the natural course, would directly or otherwise flow into that surface channel.

(3) The term “The Indus,” “The Jhelum,” “The Chenab,” “The Ravi,” “The Beas” or “The Sutlej” means the named river (including Connecting Lakes, if any) and all its Tributaries: Provided however that

(i) none of the rivers named above shall be deemed to be a Tributary;
(ii) The Chenab shall be deemed to include the river Panjnad; and
(iii) the river Chandra and the river Bhaga shall be deemed to be Tributaries of The Chenab.

(4) The term “Main” added after Indus, Jhelum, Chenab, Sutlej, Beas or Ravi means the main stem of the named river excluding its Tributaries, but including all channels and creeks of the main stem of that river and such Connecting Lakes as form part of the main stem itself. The Jhelum Main shall be deemed to extend up to Verinag, and the Chenab Main up to the confluence of the river Chandra and the river Bhaga.

(6) The term “Western Rivers” means The Indus, The Jhelum and The Chenab taken together.

(8) The term “Connecting Lake” means any lake which receives water from, or yields water to, any of the Rivers; but any lake which occasionally and irregularly receives only the spill of any of the Rivers and returns only the whole or part of that spill is not a Connecting Lake.

(9) The term “Agricultural Use” means the use of water for irrigation, except for irrigation of household gardens and public recreational gardens.

(10) The terms “Domestic Use” means the use of water for

(a) drinking, washing, bathing, recreation, sanitation (including the conveyance and dilution of sewage and of industrial and other wastes), stock and poultry, and other like purposes;
(b) household and municipal purposes (including use for household gardens and public recreational gardens); and

(c) industrial purposes (including mining, milling and other like purposes);
   but the term does not include Agricultural Use or use for the generation of hydro-electric power.

(11) The term “Non-Consumptive Use” means any control or use of water for navigation, floating of timber or other property, flood protection or flood control, fishing or fish culture, wild life or other like beneficial purposes, provided that, exclusive of seepage and evaporation of water incidental to the control or use, the water (undiminished in volume within the practical range of measurement) remains in, or is returned to, the same river or its Tributaries; but the term does not include Agricultural Use or use for the generation of hydro-electric power.

(12) The term “Transition Period” means the period beginning and ending as provided in Article 11(6).

(13) The term “Bank” means the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

(14) The term “Commissioner” means either of the Commissioners appointed under the provisions of Article VIII(1) and the term “Commission” means the Permanent Indus Commission constituted in accordance with Article VIII(3).

(15) The term “interference with the waters” means:
   (a) Any act of withdrawal therefrom; or
   (b) Any man-made obstruction to their flow which causes a change in the volume (within the practical range of measurement) of the daily flow of the water: Provided however that an obstruction which involves only an insignificant and incidental change in the volume of the daily flow, for example, fluctuations due to afflux caused by bridge piers or a temporary by-pass, etc., shall not be deemed to be an interference with the waters.

(16) The term “Effective Date” means the date on which this Treaty takes effect in accordance with the provisions of Article XII, that is, the first of April 1960.

Article II

Provisions Regarding Eastern Rivers

(1) All the waters of the Eastern Rivers shall be available for the unrestricted use of India, except as otherwise expressly provided in this Article.

(2) Except for Domestic Use and Non-Consumptive Use, Pakistan shall be under an obligation to let flow, and shall not permit any interference with, the waters of the Sutlej Main and the Ravi Main in the reaches where these rivers flow in Pakistan and have not yet finally crossed into Pakistan. The Points of final crossing are the following: (a) near the new Hasta Bund upstream of Suleimanke in the case of the Sutlej Main, and (b) about one and a half miles upstream of the syphon for the B-R-B-D Link in the case of the Ravi Main.

(3) Except for Domestic Use, Non-Consumptive Use and Agricultural Use (as specified in Annexure B), Pakistan shall be under an obligation to let flow, and shall not permit any interference with, the waters (while flowing in Pakistan) of any Tributary which in its natural course joins the Sutlej Main or the Ravi Main before these rivers have finally crossed into Pakistan.

(4) All the waters, while flowing in Pakistan, of any Tributary which, in its natural course, joins the Sutlej Main or the Ravi Main after these rivers have finally crossed into Pakistan shall be available for the unrestricted use of Pakistan: Provided however that this provision shall not be construed as giving Pakistan any claim or right to any releases by India in any such Tributary. If Pakistan should deliver any of the waters of any such Tributary, which on the Effective Date joins the Ravi Main after this river has finally crossed into Pakistan, into a reach of the Ravi Main upstream of this crossing, India shall not make use of these waters; each Party agrees to establish such discharge observation stations and make such observations as may be necessary for the determination of the component of water available for the use of Pakistan on account of the aforesaid deliveries by Pakistan, and Pakistan agrees to meet the cost of establishing the aforesaid discharge observation stations and making the aforesaid observations.

(5) There shall be a Transition Period during which, to the extent specified in Annexure H, India shall

(i) limit its withdrawals for Agricultural Use,

(ii) limit abstractions for storages, and

(iii) make deliveries to Pakistan from the Eastern Rivers.

(6) The Transition Period shall begin on 1st April 1960 and it shall end on 31st March 1970, or, if extended under the provisions of Part 8 of Annexure H, on the date up to which it has been extended. In any event, whether or not the replacement referred to in Article IV(1) has been accomplished, the Transition Period shall end not later than 31st March 1973.
(7) If the Transition Period is extended beyond 31st March 1970, the provisions of Article V(5) shall apply.

(8) If the Transition Period is extended beyond 31st March 1970, the provisions of Paragraph (5) shall apply during the period of extension beyond 31st March 1970.

(9) During the Transition Period, Pakistan shall receive for unrestricted use the waters of the Eastern Rivers which are to be released by India in accordance with the provisions of Annexure H. After the end of the Transition Period, Pakistan shall have no claim or right to releases by India of any of the waters of the Eastern Rivers. In case there are any releases, Pakistan shall enjoy the unrestricted use of the waters so released after they have finally crossed into Pakistan: Provided that in the event that Pakistan makes any use of these waters, Pakistan shall not acquire any right whatsoever, by prescription or otherwise, to a continuance of such releases or such use.

Article III
Provisions Regarding Western Rivers

(1) Pakistan shall receive for unrestricted use all those waters of the Western Rivers which India is under obligation to let flow under the provisions of Paragraph (2).

(2) India shall be under an obligation to let flow all the waters of the Western Rivers, and shall not permit any interference with these waters, except for the following uses, restricted (except as provided in item (c) (11) of Paragraph 5 of Annexure C) in the case of each of the rivers, The Indus, The Jhelum and The Chenab, to the drainage basin thereof

(a) Domestic Use;
(b) Non-Consumptive Use;
(e) Agricultural Use, as set out in Annexure C; and
(d) Generation of hydro-electric power, as set out in Annexure D.

(3) Pakistan shall have the unrestricted use of all waters originating from sources other than the Eastern Rivers which are delivered by Pakistan into The Ravi or The Sutlej, and India shall not make use of these waters. Each Party agrees to establish such discharge observation stations and make such observations as may be considered necessary by the Commission for the determination of the component of water available for the use of Pakistan on account of the aforesaid deliveries by Pakistan.
Except as provided in Annexure D and E, India shall not store any water of, or construct any storage works on, the Western Rivers.

Article IV
Provisions Regarding Eastern Rivers and Western Rivers

(1) Pakistan shall use its best endeavours to construct and bring into operation, with due regard to expedition and economy, that part of a system of works which will accomplish the replacement, from the Western Rivers and other sources, of water supplies for irrigation canals in Pakistan which, on 15th August 1947, were dependent on water supplies from the Eastern Rivers.

(2) Each Party agrees that any Non-Consumptive Use made by it shall be so made as not to materially change, on account of such use, the flow in any channel to the prejudice of the uses on that channel by the other Party under the provisions of this Treaty. In executing any scheme of flood protection or flood control each Party will avoid, as far as practicable, any material damage to the other Party, and any such scheme carried out by India on the Western Rivers shall not involve any use of water or any storage in addition to that provided under Article III.

(3) Nothing in this Treaty shall be construed as having the effect of preventing either Party from undertaking schemes of drainage, river training, conservation of soil against erosion and dredging, or from removal of stones, gravel or sand from the beds of the Rivers: Provided that

(a) in executing any of the schemes mentioned above, each Party will avoid, as far as practicable, any material damage to the other Party;

(b) any such scheme carried out by India on the Western Rivers shall not involve any use of water or any storage in addition to that provided under Article III;

(c) except as provided in Paragraph (5) and Article VII(I)(b), India shall not take any action to increase the catchment area, beyond the area on the Effective Date, of any natural or artificial drainage or drain which crosses into Pakistan, and shall not undertake such construction or remodeling of any drainage or drain which so crosses or falls into a drainage or drain which so crosses as might cause material damage in Pakistan or entail the construction of a new drain or enlargement of an existing drainage or drain in Pakistan; and
(d) should Pakistan desire to increase the catchment area, beyond the area on the Effective Date, of any natural or artificial drainage or drain, which receives drainage waters from India, or, except in an emergency, to pour any waters into it in excess of the quantities received by it as on the Effective Date, Pakistan shall, before undertaking any work for these purposes, increase the capacity of that drainage or drain to the extent necessary so as not to impair its efficacy for dealing with drainage waters received from India as on the Effective Date.

(4) Pakistan shall maintain in good order its portions of the drainages mentioned below with capacities not less than the capacities as on the Effective Date

(i) Hudiara Drain
(ii) Kasur Nala
(iii) Salimshah Drain
(iv) Fazilka Drain.

(5) If India finds it necessary that any of the drainages mentioned in Paragraph (4) should be deepened or widened in Pakistan, Pakistan agrees to undertake to do so as a work of public interest, provided India agrees to pay the cost of the deepening or widening.

(6) Each Party will use its best endeavours to maintain the natural channels of the Rivers, as on the Effective Date, in such condition as will avoid, as far as practicable, any obstruction to the flow in these channels likely to cause material damage to the other Party.

(7) Neither Party will take any action which would have the effect of diverting the Ravi Main between Madhopur and Lahore, or the Sutlej Main between Harike and Suleimanke, from its natural channel between high banks.

(8) The use of the natural channels of the Rivers for the discharge of flood or other excess waters shall be free and not subject to limitation by either Party, and neither Party shall have any claim against the other in respect of any damage caused by such use. Each Party agrees to communicate to the other Party, as far in advance as practicable, any information it may have in regard to such extraordinary discharges of water from reservoirs and flood flows as may affect the other Party.

(9) Each Party declares its intention to operate its storage dams, barrages and irrigation canals in such manner, consistent with the normal operations of its hydraulic systems, as to avoid, as far as feasible, material damage to the other Party.

(10) Each Party declares its intention to prevent, as far as practicable, undue pollution of the waters of the Rivers which might affect adversely uses similar in nature to those to which the waters were put on the Effective Date, and agrees to take all reasonable measures to ensure that, before any sewage or industrial waste is allowed to flow into the Rivers, it will be treated, where necessary, in such manner as not materially to affect those uses:

Provided that the criterion of reasonableness shall be the customary practice in similar situations on the Rivers.

(11) The Parties agree to adopt, as far as feasible, appropriate measures for the recovery, and restoration to owners, of timber and other property floated or floating down the Rivers, subject to appropriate charges being paid by the owners.

(12) The use of water for industrial purposes under Articles 11(2), 11(3) and HIM shall not exceed

(a) in the case of an industrial process known on the Effective Date, such quantum of use as was customary in that process on the Effective Date;

(b) in the case of an industrial process not known on the Effective Date:

(i) such quantum of use as was customary on the Effective Date in similar or in any way comparable industrial processes; or

(ii) if there was no industrial process on the Effective Date similar or in any way comparable to the new process, such quantum of use as would not have a substantially adverse effect on the other Party.

(13) Such part of any water withdrawn for Domestic Use under the provisions of Articles 11(3) and 111(2) as is subsequently applied to Agricultural Use shall be accounted for as part of the Agricultural Use specified in Annexure B and Annexure C respectively; each Party will use its best endeavours to return to the same river (directly or through one of its Tributaries) all water withdrawn therefrom for industrial purposes and not consumed either in the industrial processes for which it was withdrawn or in some other Domestic Use.
(14) In the event that either Party should develop a use of the waters of the Rivers which is not in accordance with the provisions of this Treaty, that Party shall not acquire by reason of such use any right, by prescription or otherwise, to a continuance of such use.

(15) Except as otherwise required by the express provisions of this Treaty, nothing in this Treaty shall be construed as affecting existing territorial rights over the waters of any of the Rivers or the beds or banks thereof or as affecting existing property rights under municipal law over such waters or beds or banks.

Article V
Financial Provisions

(1) In consideration of the fact that the purpose of part of the system of works referred to in Article IV(1) is the replacement, from the Western Rivers and other sources, of water supplies for irrigation canals in Pakistan which, on 15th August 1947, were dependent on water supplies from the Eastern Rivers, India agrees to make a fixed contribution of Pounds Sterling 62,060,000 towards the costs of these works. The amount in Pounds Sterling of this contribution shall remain unchanged irrespective of any alteration in the par value of any currency.

(2) The sum of Pounds Sterling 62,060,000 specified in Paragraph (1) shall be paid in ten equal annual installments on the 1st of November of each year. The first of such annual installments shall be paid on 1st November 1960, or if the Treaty has not entered into force by that date, then within one month after the Treaty enters into force.

(3) Each of the installments specified in Paragraph (2) shall be paid to the Bank for the credit of the Indus Basin Development Fund to be established and administered by the Bank, and payment shall be made in Pounds Sterling, or in such other currency or currencies as may from time to time be agreed between India and the Bank.

(4) The payments provided for under the provisions of Paragraph (3) shall be made without deduction or set-off on account of any financial claims of India on Pakistan arising otherwise than under the provisions of this Treaty: Provided that this provision shall in no way absolve Pakistan from the necessity of paying in other ways debts to India which may be outstanding against Pakistan.

(5) If, at the request of Pakistan, the Transition Period is extended in accordance with the provisions of Article 11(6) and of Part 8 of Annexure H, the Bank shall thereupon pay to India out of the Indus...
Basin Development Fund the appropriate amount specified in the Table below:

(6) The provisions of Article IV(1) and Article V(1) shall not be construed as conferring upon India any right to participate in the decisions as to the system of works which Pakistan constructs pursuant to Article IV(1) or as constituting an assumption of any responsibility by India or as an agreement by India in regard to such works.

(7) Except for such payments as are specifically provided for in this Treaty, neither Party shall be entitled to claim any payment for observance of the provisions of this Treaty or to make any charge for water received from it by the other Party.

Article VI

Exchange of Data

(1) The following data with respect to the flow in, and utilisation of the waters of, the Rivers shall be exchanged regularly between the Parties:

(a) Daily (or as observed or estimated less frequently) gauge and discharge data relating to flow of the Rivers at all observation sites.
(b) Daily extractions for or releases from reservoirs.
(c) Daily withdrawals at the heads of all canals operated by government or by a government agency (hereinafter in this Article called canals), including link canals.
(d) Daily escapages from all canals, including link canals.
(e) Daily deliveries from link canals.

These data shall be transmitted ‘monthly by each Party to the other as soon as the data for a calendar month have been collected and tabulated, but not later than three months after the end of the month to which they relate: Provided that such of the data specified above as are considered by either Party to be necessary for operational purposes shall be supplied daily or at less frequent intervals, as may be requested. Should one Party request the supply of any of these data by telegram, telephone, or wireless, it shall reimburse the other Party for the cost of transmission.

(2) If, in addition to the data specified in Paragraph (1) of this Article, either Party requests the supply of any data relating to the hydrology of the Rivers, or to canal or reservoir operation connected with the Rivers, or to any provision of this Treaty, such data shall be supplied by the other Party to the extent that these are available.

Article VII
Future Co-operation

(1) The two Parties recognize that they have a common interest in the optimum development of the Rivers, and, to that end, they declare their intention to co-operate, by mutual agreement, to the fullest possible extent. In particular:

(a) Each Party, to the extent it considers practicable and on agreement by the other Party to pay the costs to be incurred, will, at the request of the other Party, set up or install such hydrologic observation stations within the drainage basins of the Rivers, and set up or install such meteorological observation stations relating thereto and carry out such observations thereat, as may be requested, and will supply the data so obtained.

(b) Each Party, to the extent it considers practicable and on agreement by the other Party to pay the costs to be incurred, will, at the request of the other Party, carry out such new drainage works as may be required in connection with new drainage works of the other Party.

(c) At the request of either Party, the two Parties may, by mutual agreement, co-operate in undertaking engineering works on the Rivers.

The formal arrangements, in each case, shall be as agreed upon between the Parties.

(2) If either Party plans to construct any engineering work which would cause interference with the waters of any of the Rivers and which, in its opinion, would affect the other Party materially, it shall notify the other Party of its plans and shall supply such data relating to the work as may be available and as would enable the other Party to inform itself of the nature, magnitude and effect of the work. If a work would cause interference with the waters of any of the Rivers but would not, in the opinion of the Party planning it, affect the other Party materially, nevertheless the Party planning the work shall, on request, supply the other Party with such data regarding the nature, magnitude and effect, if any, of the work as may be available.

Article VIII
Permanent Indus Commission

(1) India and Pakistan shall each create a permanent post of Commissioner for Indus Waters, and shall appoint to this post, as often as a vacancy occurs, a person who should ordinarily be a high-ranking engineer competent in the field of hydrology and water-use. Unless either Government should decide to take up any particular question directly with the other Government, each Commissioner will be the representative of his Government for all matters arising out of this Treaty, and will serve as the regular channel of communication on all matters relating to the implementation of the Treaty, and, in particular, with respect to

(a) the furnishing or exchange of information or data provided for in the Treaty; and
(b) the giving of any notice or response to any notice provided for in the Treaty.

(2) The status of each Commissioner and his duties and responsibilities towards his Government will be determined by that Government.

(3) The two Commissioners shall together form the Permanent Indus Commission.

(4) The purpose and functions of the Commission shall be to establish and maintain co-operative arrangements for the implementation of this Treaty, to promote co-operation between the Parties in the development of the waters of the Rivers and, in particular,

(a) to study and report to the two Governments on any problem relating to the development of the waters of the Rivers which may be jointly referred to the Commission by the two Governments; in the event that a reference is made by one Government alone, the Commissioner of the other Government shall obtain the authorization of his Government before he proceeds to act on the reference;

(b) to make every effort to settle promptly, in accordance with the provisions of Article IX(1), any question arising there under;
(c) to undertake, once in every five years, a general tour of inspection of the Rivers for ascertaining the facts connected with various developments and works on the Rivers,

(d) to undertake promptly, at the request of either Commissioner, a tour of inspection of such works or sites on the Rivers as may be considered necessary by him for ascertaining the facts connected with those works or sites; and

(e) to take, during the Transition Period, such steps as may be necessary for the implementation of the provisions of Annexure H.

(5) The Commission shall meet regularly at least once a year, alternately in India and Pakistan. This regular annual meeting shall be held in November or in such other month as may be agreed upon between the Commissioners. The Commission shall also meet when requested by either Commissioner.

(6) To enable the Commissioners to perform their functions in the Commission, each Government agrees to accord to the Commissioner of the other Government the same privileges and immunities as are accorded to representatives of member States to the principal and subsidiary organs of the United Nations under Sections 11, 12 and 13 of Article IV of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations (dated 13th February, 1946) during the periods specified in those Sections. It is understood and agreed that these privileges and immunities are accorded to the Commissioners not for the personal benefit of the individuals themselves but in order to safeguard the independent exercise of their functions in connection with the Commission; consequently, the Government appointing the Commissioner not only has the right but is under a duty to waive the immunity of its Commissioner in any case where, in the opinion of the appointing Government, the immunity would impede the course of justice and can be waived without prejudice to the purpose for which the immunity is accorded.

(7) For the purposes of the inspections specified in Paragraph (4) (c) and (d), each Commissioner may be accompanied by two advisers or assistants to whom appropriate facilities will be accorded.

(8) The Commission shall submit to the Government of India and to the Government of Pakistan, before the first of June of every year, a report on its work for the year ended on the preceding 31st of March, and may submit to the two Governments other reports at such times as it may think desirable.
Each Government shall bear the expenses of its Commissioner and his ordinary staff. The cost of any special staff required in connection with the work mentioned in Article VII(1) shall be borne as provided therein.

The Commission shall determine its own procedures.

Article IX

Settlement of Differences and Disputes

(1) Any question which arises between the Parties concerning the interpretation or application of this Treaty or the existence of any fact which, if established, might constitute a breach of this Treaty shall first be examined by the Commission, which will endeavour to resolve the question by agreement.

(2) If the Commission does not reach agreement on any of the questions mentioned in Paragraph (1), then a difference will be deemed to have arisen, which shall be dealt with as follows:

(a) Any difference which, in the opinion of either Commissioner, falls within the provisions of Part I of Annexure F shall, at the request of either Commissioner, be dealt with by a Neutral Expert in accordance with the provisions of Part 2 of Annexure F;

(b) If the difference does not come within the provisions of Paragraph (2) (a), or if a Neutral Expert, in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 7 of Annexure F, has informed the Commission that, in his opinion, the difference, or a part thereof, should be treated as a dispute, then a dispute will be deemed to have arisen which shall be settled in accordance with the provisions of Paragraphs (3), (4) and (5): Provided that, at the discretion of the Commission, any difference may either be dealt with by a Neutral Expert in accordance with the provisions of Part 2 of Annexure F or be deemed to be a dispute to be settled in accordance with the provisions of Paragraphs (3), (4) and (5), or may be settled in any other way agreed upon by the Commission.

(3) As soon as a dispute to be settled in accordance with this and the succeeding paragraphs of this Article has arisen, the Commission shall, at the request of either Commissioner, report the fact to the two Governments, as early as practicable, stating in its report the points on which the Commission is in agreement and the issues in dispute, the views of each Commissioner on these issues and his reasons therefore.
Either Government may, following receipt of the report referred to in Paragraph (3), or if it comes to the conclusion that the report is being unduly delayed in the Commission, invite the other Government to resolve the dispute by agreement. In doing so it shall state the names of its negotiators and their readiness to meet with the negotiators to be appointed by the other Government at a time and place to be indicated by the other Government. To assist in these negotiations, the two Governments may agree to enlist the services of one or more mediators acceptable to them.

A Court of Arbitration shall be established to resolve the dispute in the manner provided by Annexure G

(a) upon agreement between the Parties to do so; or

(b) at the request of either Party, if, after negotiations have begun pursuant to Paragraph (4), in its opinion the dispute is not, likely to be resolved by negotiation or mediation; or

(c) at the request of either Party, if, after the expiry of one month following receipt by the other Government of the invitation referred to in Paragraph (4), that Party comes to the conclusion that the other Government is unduly delaying the negotiations.

The provisions of Paragraphs (3), (4) and (5) shall not apply to any difference while it is being dealt with by a Neutral Expert.

Article X
Emergency Provision

If, at any time prior to 31st March 1965, Pakistan should represent to the Bank that, because of the outbreak of large-scale international hostilities arising out of causes beyond the control of Pakistan, it is unable to obtain from abroad the materials and equipment necessary for the completion, by 31st March 1973, of that part of the system of works referred to in Article IV (a) which relates to the replacement referred to therein, (hereinafter referred to as the replacement element) and if, after consideration of this representation in consultation with India, the Bank is of the opinion that

(a) these hostilities are on a scale of which the consequence is that Pakistan is unable to obtain in time such materials and equipment as must be procured from abroad for the completion, by 31st March 1973, of the replacement element, and

(b) since the Effective Date, Pakistan has taken all reasonable steps to obtain the said materials and equipment and, with such resources of materials and equipment as have been available to Pakistan both from within Pakistan and from abroad, has carried forward the construction of the replacement element with due diligence and all reasonable expedition, the Bank shall immediately notify each of the Parties accordingly. The Parties undertake, without prejudice to the provisions of Article XII (3) and (4), that, on being so notified, they will forthwith consult together and enlist the good offices of the Bank in their consultation, with a view to reaching mutual agreement as to whether or not, in the light of all the circumstances then prevailing, any modifications of the provisions of this Treaty are appropriate and advisable and, if so, the nature and the extent of the modifications.

Article XI
General Provisions

(1) It is expressly understood that

(a) this Treaty governs the rights and obligations of each Party in relation to the other with respect only to the use of the waters of the Rivers and matters incidental thereto; and

(b) nothing contained in this Treaty, and nothing arising out of the execution thereof, shall be construed as constituting a recognition or waiver (whether tacit, by implication or otherwise) of any rights or claims whatsoever of either of the Parties other than those rights or claims which are expressly recognized or waived in this Treaty.

Each of the Parties agrees that it will not invoke this Treaty, anything contained therein, or anything arising out of the execution thereof, in support of any of its own rights or claims whatsoever or in disputing any of the rights or claims whatsoever of the other Party, other than those rights or claims which are expressly recognized or waived in this Treaty.

(2) Nothing in this Treaty shall be construed by the Parties as in any way establishing any general principle of law or any precedent.

(3) The rights and obligations of each Party under this Treaty shall remain unaffected by any provisions contained in, or by anything arising out of the execution of, any agreement establishing the Indus Basin Development Fund.

Article XII
Final Provisions

(1) This Treaty consists of the Preamble, the Articles hereof and Annexures A to H hereto, and may be cited as “The Indus Waters Treaty 1960”.
(2) This Treaty shall be ratified and the ratifications thereof shall be exchanged in New Delhi. It shall enter into force upon the exchange of ratifications, and will then take effect retrospectively from the first of April 1960.

(3) The provisions of this Treaty may from time to time be modified by a duly ratified treaty concluded for that purpose between the two Governments.

(4) The provisions of this Treaty, or the provisions of this Treaty as modified under the provisions of Paragraph (3), shall continue in force until terminated by a duly ratified treaty concluded for that purpose between the two Governments.

In Witness Whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed this Treaty and have hereunto affixed their seals.

ANNEXURE A-EXCHANGE OF NOTES BETWEEN GOVERNMENT OF INDIA AND GOVERNMENT OF PAKISTAN

I. Note dated 19th September 1960, from the High Commissioner for India in Pakistan, Karachi, to the Minister for Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan.

19th September, 1960

EXCELLENCY:

I have been instructed by my Government to communicate to you the following:

“The Government of India agrees that, on the ratification of the Indus Waters Treaty 1960, the Inter-Dominion Agreement on the Canal Water Dispute signed at New Delhi on 4th May 1948 (of which a copy is annexed hereto) and the rights and obligations of either party thereto claimed under, or arising out of, that Agreement shall be without effect as from 1st April 1960.

The position of the Government of India stated above and Your Excellency’s Note of to-day’s date stating the position of the Government of Pakistan on this question will form part of Annexure A to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960.”

Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurance of my highest consideration.

ANNEX

A dispute has arisen between the East and West Punjab Governments regarding the supply by East Punjab of water to the Central Bari Doab and the Depalpur canals in West Punjab. The contention of the East Punjab Government is that under the Punjab Partition (Apportionment of Assets and Liabilities) Order, 1947, and the Arbitral Award the proprietary rights in the waters of the rivers in East Punjab vest wholly in the East Punjab Government and that the West Punjab Government cannot claim any share of these waters as a right. The West Punjab Government disputes this contention, its view being that the point has conclusively been decided in its favour by implication by the Arbitral Award and that in accordance with international law and equity, West Punjab has a right to the waters of the East Punjab rivers.

2. The East Punjab Government has revived the flow of water into these canals on certain conditions of which two are disputed by West Punjab. One, which arises out of the contention in paragraph 1, is the right to the levy of seigniorage charges for water and the other is the question of the capital cost of the Madhavpurl Head Works and carrier channels to be taken into account.

3. The East and West Punjab Governments are anxious that this question should be settled in a spirit of goodwill and friendship. Without prejudice to its legal rights in the matter the East Punjab Government has assured the West Punjab Government that it has no intention suddenly to withhold water from West Punjab without giving it time to tap alternative sources. The West Punjab Government on its part recognise the natural anxiety of the East Punjab Government to discharge the obligation to develop areas where water is scarce and which were under-developed in relation to parts of West Punjab.

4. Apart, therefore, from the question of law involved, the Governments are anxious to approach the problem in a practical spirit on the basis of the East Punjab Government progressively diminishing its supply to these canals in order to give reasonable time to enable the West Punjab Government to tap alternative sources.
5. The West Punjab Government has agreed to deposit immediately in the Reserve Bank such ad hoc sum as may be specified by the Prime Minister of India. Out of this sum that Government agrees to the immediate transfer to East Punjab Government of sums over which there is no dispute.

6. After an examination by each party of the legal issues, of the method of estimating the cost of water to be supplied by the East Punjab Government and of the technical survey of water resources and the means of using them for supply to these canals, the two Governments agree that further meetings between their representatives should take place.

7. The Dominion Governments of India and Pakistan accept the above terms and express the hope that a friendly solution will be reached.

ANNEXURE B- AGRICULTURAL USE BY PAKISTAN FROM CERTAIN TRIBUTARIES OF THE RAVI

(Article II (3))

1. The provisions of this Annexure shall apply with respect to the Agricultural Use by Pakistan from certain Tributaries of The Ravi under the provisions of Article 11 (3) and, subject to the provisions of this Annexure, such use shall be unrestricted.

2. Pakistan may withdraw from the Basantar Tributary of The Ravi such waters as may be available and necessary for the irrigation of not more than 100 acres annually.

3. In addition to the area specified in Paragraph 2, Pakistan may also withdraw such waters from each of the following Tributaries of The Ravi as may be available and as may be necessary for the irrigation of that part of the following areas cultivated on sailab as on the Effective Date which cannot be so cultivated after that date: Provided that the total area whether irrigated or cultivated on sailab shall not exceed the limits specified below, except during a year of exceptionally heavy floods when sailab may extend to areas which were not cultivated on sailab as on the Effective Date and when such areas may be cultivated in addition to the limits specified:

</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tarnah</td>
<td>1,800</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ujh</td>
<td>3,000</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

4. The provisions of Paragraphs 2 and 3 shall not be construed as giving Pakistan any claim or right to any releases by India in the Tributaries mentioned in these Paragraphs.
5. Not later than 31st March 1961, Pakistan shall furnish to India a statement by Districts and Tehsils showing (i) the area irrigated and (ii) the area cultivated on sailab, as on the Effective Date, from the waters of each of the Tributaries specified in Paragraphs 2 and 3.

6. As soon as the statistics for each crop year (commencing with the beginning of kharif and ending with the end of the following rabi) have been compiled at the District Headquarters, but not later than the 30th November following the end of that crop year. Pakistan shall furnish to India a statement arranged by Tributaries and showing for each of the Districts and Tehsils irrigated or cultivated on sailab from the Tributaries mentioned in Paragraphs 2 and 3:

(i) the area irrigated, and
(ii) the area cultivated on sailab.

ANNEXURE C-AGRICULTURAL USE BY INDIA FROM THE WESTERN RIVERS

(Article III (2) (c))

1. The provisions of this Annexure shall apply with respect to the Agricultural Use by India from the Western Rivers under the provisions of Article 111 (2) (c) and, subject to the provisions of this Annexure, such use shall be unrestricted.

2. As used in this Annexure, the term “Irrigated Cropped Area” means the total area under irrigated crops in a year, the same area being counted twice if it bears different crops in kharif and rabi. The term shall be deemed to exclude small blocks of ghair mumkin lands in an irrigated field, lands on which cultivation is dependent on rain or snow and to which no irrigation water is applied, areas naturally inundated by river flow and cultivated on sailab thereafter, any area under floating gardens or demb lands in and along any lakes, and any area under water plants growing within the water-spread of any lake or in standing water in a natural depression.

3. India may withdraw from the Chenab Main such waters as India may need for Agricultural Use on the following canals limited to the maximum withdrawals noted against each:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name of Canal</th>
<th>Maximum withdrawals for Agricultural Use</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>(a) Ranbir Canal</td>
<td>1,000 cusecs from 15th April to 14th October, and 350 cusecs from 15th October to 14th April.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
(b) Pratap Canal 400 cusecs from 15th April to 14th October, and 100 cusecs from 15th October to 14th April.

Provided that:

(i) The maximum withdrawals shown above shall be exclusive of any withdrawals which may be made through these canals for purposes of silt extraction on condition that the waters withdrawn for silt extraction are returned to The Chenab.

(ii) India may make additional withdrawals through the Ranbir Canal up to 250 cusecs for hydro-electric generation on condition that the waters so withdrawn are returned to The Chenab.

(iii) If India should construct a barrage across the Chenab Main below the head regulators of these two canals, the withdrawals to be then made, limited to the amounts specified in (a) and (b) above, during each 10-day period or sub-period thereof, shall be as determined by the Commission in accordance with sound irrigation practice and, in the absence of agreement between the Commissioners, by a Neutral Expert in accordance with the Provisions of Annexure F.

4. Apart from the irrigation from the Ranbir and Pratap Canals under the provisions of Paragraph 3, India may continue to irrigate from the Western Rivers those areas which were so irrigated as on the Effective Date.

5. In addition to such withdrawals as may be made in accordance with the provisions of Paragraphs 3 and 4, India may, subject to the provisions of Paragraphs 6, 7, 8 and 9, make further withdrawals from the Western Rivers to the extent India may consider necessary to meet the irrigation needs of the areas specified below:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Particulars</th>
<th>Maximum Irrigated Cropped Area (over and above the cropped Area irrigated under the provisions of Paragraph 3 &amp; 4) (acres)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>(a) From The Indus, in its drainage basin</td>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>(c) From The Chenab</td>
<td>225,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(i) In its drainage basin of which not more than 100,000 acres will be in Jammu District</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
(ii) Outside its drainage basin in the area west of the Deg Nadi (also called Devak River), the aggregate capacity of irrigating channels leading out of the drainage basin of Chenab to this area not exceeding 120 cusecs.

Provided that

(i) in addition to the maximum Irrigated Cropped Area specified above, India may irrigate road side trees from any source whatever;

(ii) the maximum Irrigated Cropped Area shown against items (a), (b) and (c) above shall be deemed to include cropped areas, if any, irrigated from an open well, a tube-well, a spring, a lake (other than a Connecting Lake) or a tank, in excess of the areas so irrigated as on the Effective Date; and

(iii) the Aggregate of the areas specified against items (a), (b) and (c) (i) above may be re-distributed among the three drainage basins in such manner as in between the Commissioners.

6. (a) Within the limits of the maximum Irrigated Cropped Areas specified against items (b) and (c) in Paragraph 5, there shall be no restriction on the development of such of these areas as may be irrigated from an open well, a tube-well, a spring, a lake (other than a Connecting Lake) or a tank.

(b) Within the limits of the maximum Irrigated Cropped Areas specified against items (b) and (c) in Paragraph 5, there shall be no restriction on the development of such of these areas as may be irrigated from General Storage (as defined in Annexure E) : the areas irrigated from General Storage may, however, receive irrigation from river flow also, but, unless the Commissioners otherwise agree, only in the following periods :

(i) from The Jhelum : 21st June to 20th August
(ii) from The Chenab : 21st June to 31st August

Provided that withdrawals for such irrigation, whether from General Storage or from river flow, are controlled by Government.

7. Within the limits of the maximum Irrigated Cropped Areas specified against items (b) and (c) in Paragraph 5, the development of these areas by withdrawals from river flow (as distinct from withdrawals from General Storage cum river flow accordance with Paragraph 6(b)) shall be regulated as follows:

(a) Until India can release water from Conservation Storage (as defined in Annexure E) in accordance with sub-paragraphs (b) and (c) below, the new area developed shall not exceed the following :
(i) from The Jhelum 150,000 acres:
(ii) from The Chenab 25,000 acres during the Transition Period and 50,000 acres after end of the Transition period.

(b) In addition to the areas specified in (a) above, there may be developed from The Jhelum or The Chenab an aggregate area 150,000 acres if there is released annually from Conservation Storage, in accordance with Paragraph 8, a volume of 0.2 MAF into The Jhelum and a volume of 0.1 MAF into The Chenab; provided that India shall have the option to store on and release into The Chenab the whole or a part of the volume of 0.2 MAF specified above for release into The Jhelum.

(c) Any additional areas over and above those specified in (a) above may be developed if there is released annually from Conservation Storage a volume of 0.2 MAF into The Jhelum or The Chenab, in accordance with Paragraph 8, in addition to the releases specified in (b) above.

8. The releases from Conservation Storage, as specified in Paragraphs 7(b) and 7(c), shall be made in accordance with a schedule to be determined by the Commission which shall keep in view, first, the effect, if any, on Agricultural Use by Pakistan consequent on the reduction in supplies available to Pakistan as a result of the withdrawals made by India under the provisions of Paragraph 7 and, then, the requirements, if any, of hydroelectric power to be developed by India from these releases. In the absence of agreement between the Commissioners, the matter may be referred under the provisions of Article IX (2) of decision to a Neutral Expert.

9. On those tributaries of Jhelum on which there is any Agricultural Use or hydro-electric use by Pakistan, any agricultural Use by India shall be so made as not to affect adversely the then existing Agricultural Use or hydro-electric use by Pakistan on those Tributaries.

10. Not later than 31st March 1961, India shall furnish to Pakistan a statement showing, for each of the Districts and Tehsils irrigated from the Western Rivers, the Irrigated Cropped Area as on the Effective Date (excluding, only the area irrigated under the provisions of Paragraph 3), arranged in accordance with items (a), M and (c) (i) of Paragraph 5: Provided that, in the case of areas in the Punjab, the date may be extended to 30th September 1961.

11.(a) As soon as the statistics for each crop year (commencing with the beginning of kharif and ending with the end of the following rabi) have been compiled at the District Headquarters, but not later than the 30th
November following the end of that crop year, India shall furnish to Pakistan a statement showing for each of the Districts and Tehsils irrigated from the Western Rivers, the total Irrigated Cropped Areas (excluding the area irrigated under the provisions of Paragraph 3) arranged in accordance with items (a), (b), (c) (w) and (c) (ii) of Paragraph 5: Provided that, in the case of areas in the Punjab, the 30th November date specified above may be extended to the following 30th June in the event of failure of communications.

(b) If the limits specified in Paragraph 7(a) or 7(b) are exceeded for any crop year, the statement shall also show the figures for Irrigated Cropped Areas falling under Paragraph 6(a) and 6(b) respectively, unless appropriate releases from Conservation Storage under the provisions of Paragraph 8 have already begun to be made.

ANNEXURE D- GENERATION OF HYDRO-ELECTRIC POWER BY INDIA ON THE WESTERN RIVERS

(Article III (2) d)

1. The provisions of this Annexure shall apply with respect to the use by India of the waters of the Western Rivers for the generation of hydro-electric power under the provisions of Article III (2) (d) and, subject to the provisions of this Annexure, such use shall be unrestricted: Provided that the design, construction and operation of new hydro-electric plants which are incorporated in a Storage Work (as defined in Annexure E) shall be governed by the relevant provisions of Annexure E.

Part I - Definitions

2. As used in this Annexure:

(a) “Dead Storage” means that portion of the storage which is not used for operational purposes and “Dead Storage Level” means the level corresponding to Dead Storage.

(b) “Live Storage” means all storage above Dead Storage.

(c) “Pondage” means Live Storage of only sufficient magnitude to meet fluctuations in the discharge of the turbines arising from variations in the daily and the weekly loads of the plant.

(d) “Full Pondage Level” means the level corresponding to the maximum Pondage provided in the design in accordance with Paragraph 8(c).

(e) “Surcharge Storage” means uncontrollable storage occupying space above the Full Pondage Level.

(f) “Operating Pool” means the storage capacity between Dead Storage Level and Full Pondage Level.

(g) “Run-of-River Plant” means a hydro-electric plant that develops power without Live Storage as an integral part of the plant, except for Pondage and Surcharge Storage.

(h) “Regulating Basin” means the basin whose only purpose is to even out fluctuations in the discharge from the turbines arising from variations in the daily and the weekly loads of the plant.

The average discharge for each 10-day period (1st to 10th, 11th to 20th and 21st to the end of the month) will be worked out for each year for which discharge data, whether observed or estimated, are proposed to be studied for purposes of design. The mean of the yearly values for each 10-day period will then be worked out. The lowest of the mean values thus obtained will be taken as the minimum mean discharge. The studies will be based on data for as long a period as available but may be limited to the latest 5 years in the case of Small Plants (as defined in Paragraph 18) and to the latest 25 years in case of other Plants (as defined in Paragraph 8).

(j) “Secondary Power” means the power, other than Firm Power, available only during certain periods of the year.

Part 2- Hydro-Electric Plants in Operation, or under Construction, as on the Effective Date

3. There shall be no restriction on the operation of the following hydro-electric plants which were in operation as on the Effective Date:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name of the Plant</th>
<th>Capacity (Exclusive of standby Units)-(Kilowatts)</th>

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
4. There shall be no restriction on the completion by India, in accordance with the design adopted prior to the Effective Date, or on the operation by India, of the following hydro-electric plants which were actually under construction on the Effective Date, whether or not the plant was on the date in partial operation:

5. As soon as India finds it possible to do so, but not later than 31st March 1961, India shall communicate to Pakistan the information specified in Appendix I to this Annexure for each of the plants specified in Paragraphs 3 and 4. If any such information is not available or is not pertinent to the design of the plant or to the conditions at the site, it will be so started.

6.(a) If any alteration proposed in the design of any of the plants specified in Paragraphs 3 and 4 would result in a materials change in the information furnished to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 5, India shall, at least 4 months in advance of making the alteration, communicate particulars of the change to Pakistan in writing and the provisions of Paragraph 7 shall then apply.

(b) In the event of an emergency arising which requires repairs to be undertaken to protect the integrity of any of the plants specified in paragraph 3 and 4, India may undertake immediately the necessary repairs or alterations and, if these repairs or alterations result in a change in the information furnished to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 5, India shall as soon as possible communicate particulars of the change to Pakistan in writing. The provisions of Paragraph 7 shall then apply.

7. Within three months of the receipt of the particulars specified in Paragraph 6, Pakistan shall communicate to India in writing any objection it may have with regard to the proposed change on the ground that the change involves a material departure from the criteria set out in Paragraph 8 or 18 of this Annexure or paragraph 11 of Annexure E as the case may be. If no objection is received by India from Pakistan within the specified period of three months, then Pakistan shall be deemed to have no objection. If a question arises as to whether or not the change involves a material departure from such of the criteria mentioned above as may be applicable, then either party may proceed to have the question resolved in accordance with the provisions of Article IX (1) and (2).

Part 3 — New Run – of – River Plants

8. Except as provided in Paragraph 18, the design of any new Run-of-River Plant (Hereinafter in this Part referred to as a Plant) shall conform to the following criteria:

(a) The works themselves shall not be capable of raising artificially the water level in the Operating Pool above the Full Pondage Level specified in the design.

(b) The design of the works shall take due account of the requirements of Surcharge Storage and Secondary Power.

(c) The maximum Pondage in the Operating Pool shall not exceed twice the Pondage required for Firm Power.

(d) There shall be no outlets below the Dead Storage Level, unless necessary for sediment control or any other technical purpose; any such outlet shall be of the minimum size, and located at the highest level, consistent with sound and economical design and with satisfactory operation of the works.

(e) If the conditions on the site of the Plant make a gated spillway necessary, the bottom level of the gates in normal closed position shall be located at the highest level consistent with sound and economical design and satisfactory construction and operation of the works.

(f) The intake for the turbines shall be located at the highest level consistent with satisfactory and economical construction and operation of the Plant as a Run-of-River Plant and with customary and accepted practice of design for the designated range of the Plant's operation.
(g) If any Plant is constructed on the Chenab Main at a site below Kotru (longitude 74° East and latitude 33° North), a Regulating basin shall be incorporated.

9. To enable Pakistan to satisfy itself that the design of a Plant conforms to the criteria mentioned in Paragraph 8, India shall, at least six months in advance of the beginning of construction of river works connected with the Plant, communicate to Pakistan, in writing, the information specified in Appendix II to this Annexure. If any such information is not available or is not pertinent to the design of the Plant or to the conditions at the site, it will be so stated.

10. Within three months of the receipt by Pakistan of the information specified in Paragraph 9, Pakistan shall communicate to India, in writing, any objection that it may have with regard to the proposed design on the ground that it does not conform to the criteria mentioned in Paragraph 8. If no objection is received by India from Pakistan within the specified period of three months, then Pakistan shall be deemed to have no objection.

11. If a question arises as to whether or not the design of a Plant conforms to the criteria set out in Paragraph 8, then either Party may proceed to have the question resolved in accordance with the provisions of Article IX (1) and (2).

12. (a) If any alteration proposed in the design of a Plant before it comes into operation would result in a material change in the information furnished to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 9, India shall immediately communicate particulars of the change to Pakistan in writing and the provisions of Paragraphs 10 and 11 shall then apply, but the period of three months specified in Paragraph 10 shall be reduced to two months.

(b) If any alteration proposed in the design of a Plant after it comes into operation would result in a material change in the information furnished to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 9, India shall, at least four months in advance of making the alteration, communicate particulars of the change to Pakistan in writing and the provisions of Paragraphs 10 and 11 shall then apply, but the period of three months specified in Paragraph 10 shall be reduced to two months.

13. In the event of an emergency arising which requires repairs to be undertaken to protect the integrity of a Plant, India may undertake immediately the necessary repairs or alterations; if these repairs or alterations result in a change in the information furnished to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 9, India shall, as soon as possible, communicate particulars of the change to Pakistan in writing to enable Pakistan to satisfy itself that after such change the design of the Plant conforms to the criteria specified in Paragraph 8. The provisions of Paragraphs 10 and 11 shall then apply.
14. The filling of Dead Storage shall be carried out in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 18 or 19 of Annexure E.

15. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 17, the works connected with a Plant shall be so operated that (a) the volume of water received in the river upstream of the Plant, during any period of seven consecutive days, shall be delivered into the river below the Plant during the same seven-day period, and (b) in any one period of 24 hours within that seven-day period, the volume delivered into the river below the Plant shall be not less than 30%, and not more than 130%, of the volume received in the river above the Plant during the same 24-hour period: Provided however that:

(i) where a Plant is located at a site on the Chenab Main below Ramban, the volume of water received in the river upstream of the Plant in any one period of 24 hours shall be delivered into the river below the Plant within the same 24 hours period;

(ii) where, a Plant is located at a site on the Chenab Main above Ramban, the volume of water delivered into the River below the Plant, in any one period of 24 hours shall not be less than 50% and not more than 130% of the volume received above the Plant during the same 24-hour period; and

(iii) where a Plant is located on a Tributary of The Jhelum on which Pakistan has any Agricultural Use or hydro-electric use, the water released below the Plant may be delivered, if necessary, into another Tributary but only to the extent that the then existing Agricultural Use or hydro-electric use by Pakistan on the former Tributary would not be adversely affected.

16. For the purpose of Paragraph 15, the period of 24 hours shall commence at 8 A.M. daily and the period of 7 consecutive days shall commence at 8 A.M. on every Saturday. The time shall be Indian Standard Time.

17. The provisions of Paragraph 15 shall not apply during the period when the Dead Storage at a Plant is being filled in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 14. In applying the provisions of Paragraph 15

(a) a tolerance of 10% in volume shall be permissible; and

(b) Surcharge Storage shall be ignored.

18. The provisions of Paragraphs 8, 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13 shall not apply to a new Run-of-River Plant which is located on a Tributary and which conforms to the following criteria (hereinafter referred to as a Small Plant):

(a) the aggregate designed maximum discharge through the turbines does not exceed 300 cusecs;
(b) no storage is involved in connection with the Small Plant, except, the Pondage and the storage incidental to the diversion structure; and

(c) the crest of the diversion structure across the Tributary, or the top level of the gates, if any, shall not be higher than 20 feet above the mean bed of the Tributary at the site of the structure.

19. The information specified in Appendix III to this Annexure shall be communicated to Pakistan by India at least two months in advance of the beginning of construction of the river works connected with a Small Plant. If any such information is not available or is not pertinent to the design of the Small Plant or to the conditions at the site, it will be so stated.

20. Within two months of the receipt by Pakistan of the information specified in Appendix III, Pakistan shall communicate to India, in writing, any objection that it may have with regard to the proposed design on the ground that it does not conform to the criteria mentioned in Paragraph 18. If no objection is received by India from Pakistan within the specified period of two months, then Pakistan shall be deemed to have no objection.

21. If a question arises as to whether or not the design of a Small Plant conforms to the criteria set out in Paragraph 18, then either Party may proceed to have the question resolved in accordance with the provisions of Article IX (1) and (2).

22. If any alteration in the design of a Small Plant, whether during the construction period or subsequently, results in a change in the information furnished to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 19, then India shall immediately communicate the change in writing to Pakistan.

23. If, with any alteration proposed in the design of a Small Plant, the design would cease to comply with the criteria set out in Paragraph 18, then the provisions of Paragraphs 18 to 22 inclusive shall no longer apply and, in lieu thereof, the provisions of Paragraphs 8 to 13 inclusive shall apply.

Part 4-New Plants on Irrigation Channels

24. Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this Annexure, there shall be no restriction on the construction and operation by India of new hydro-electric plants on any irrigation channel taking off the Western Rivers, provided that

(a) the work-, incorporate no storage other than Pondage and the Dead Storage incidental to the diversion structure, and
(b) no additional supplies are run in the irrigation channel for the purpose of generating hydro-electric power.

Part 5—General

25. If the change referred to in Paragraphs 6 (a) and 12 is not material, India shall communicate particulars of the change to Pakistan, in writing, as soon as the alteration has been made or the repairs have been undertaken. The provisions of Paragraph 7 or Paragraph 23, as the case may be, shall then apply.

APPENDIX I To ANNEXURE D

(Paragraph 5)

1. Location of Plant

   General map showing the location of the site; if on a Tributary, its situation with respect to the main river.

2. Hydraulic Data

   (a) Stage-area and stage-capacity curves of the reservoir, forebay and Regulating Basin.

   (b) Full Pondage Level, Dead Storage Level and Operating Pool.

   (c) Dead Storage capacity.

3. Particulars of Design

   (a) Type of spillway, length and crest level; size, number and top level of spillway gates.

   (b) Outlet works: function, type, size, number, maximum designed capacity and sill levels.

   (c) Aggregate designed maximum discharge through the turbines.

   (d) Maximum aggregate capacity of power units (exclusive of standby units) for Firm Power and Secondary Power.

   (e) Regulating Basin and its outlet works: dimensions and maximum discharge capacity.
4. General

Probable date of completion of river works, and dates on which various stages of the plant would come into operation.

APPENDIX II To ANNEXURE D

(Paragraph 9)

1. Location of Plant

General map showing the location of the site; if on a Tributary, its situation with respect to the main river.

2. Hydrologic Data

(a) General map (Scale: 1/4 inch or more = 1 mile) showing the discharge observation site or sites or rainfall gauge stations on whose data the design is based. In case of a Plant on a Tributary, this map should also show the catchment area of the Tributary above the site.

(b) Observed or estimated daily river discharge data on which the design is based (observed data will be given for as long period as available; estimated data will be given for as long period as possible; in both cases data may be limited to the latest 25 years).

(c) Flood data, observed or estimated (with details of estimation).

(d) Gauge-discharge curve or curves for site or sites mentioned in (a) above.

3. Hydraulic Data

(a) Stage-area and stage-capacity curves of the reservoir, forebay and Regulating Basin, with contoured survey maps on which based.

(b) Full Pondage Level, Dead Storage Level and Operating Pool together with the calculations for the Operating Pool.

(c) Dead Storage capacity.

(e) Maximum designed flood discharge, discharge-capacity curve for spillway and maximum designed flood level.

(f) Designated range of operation.

4. Particulars of Design
5906  INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS

(a) Dimensioned plan showing dam, spillway, intake and outlet works, diversion works, head-race and forebay, powerhouse, tail-race and Regulating Basin.

(b) Type of dam, length and height above mean bed of river.

(d) Type of spillway, length and crest level; size, number and top level of spillway gates.

(e) Type of intake, maximum designed capacity, number and size, sill levels; diversion works.

(f) Head-race and tail-race: length, size, maximum-, designed capacity.

(g) Outlet works: Function, type, size, number, maximum designed capacity and sill levels.

(h) Discharge proposed to be passed through the Plant, initially and ultimately, and expected variations in the discharge on account of the daily and the weekly load fluctuations.

(i) Maximum aggregate capacity of power units (exclusive of standby units) for Firm Power and Secondary Power.

(j) Regulating Basin and its outlet works: type, number, size, sill level and designed maximum discharge capacity

5. General

(a) Estimated effect of proposed development on the flow pattern below the last Plant downstream (with details of estimation).

(b) Probable date of completion of river works, and dates on which various stages of the plant would come into operation.

APPENDIX III To ANNEXURE D
(Paragraph 19)

1. Location of Small Plant

General map showing the location of the site on the Tributary and its situation with respect to the main river.

2. Hydrologic Data

(a) Observed or estimated daily Tributary discharge (observed data will be given for as long a period as available; estimated data will be given for as long a period as possible; in both cases, data may be limited to the latest five years).

(b) Flood data, observed or estimated (with details of estimation).

(c) Gauge-discharge curve relating to discharge site.

3. Hydraulic Data

(a) Stage-area and stage-capacity curves of the forebay with survey map on which based.

(b) Full Pondage Level, Dead Storage Level and Operating Pool together with the calculations for the Operating Pool.

4. Particulars of Design

(a) Dimensioned plan showing diversion works, outlet works, head-race and forebay, powerhouse and tail-race.

(b) Type of diversion works, length and height of crest or top level of gates above the mean bed of the Tributary at the site.

(d) Head-race and tail-race : length, size and designed maximum capacity.

(e) Aggregate designed maximum discharge through the turbines.

(f) Spillway, if any : type, length and crest level; size, number and top level of gates.

(g) Maximum aggregate capacity of power units (exclusive of standby units) for Firm Power and Secondary Power.

ANNEXURE E-STORAGE OF WATERS BY INDIA ON THE WESTERN RIVERS

(Article III (4))

1. The provisions of this Annexure shall apply with respect to the storage of water on the Western Rivers, and to the construction and operation of Storage Works thereon, by India under the provisions of Article 111 (4).

2. As used in this Annexure :

(a) “Storage Work” means a work constructed for the purpose of impounding the waters of a stream; but excludes
(i) a small Tank,
(ii) the works specified in Paragraphs 3 and 4 of Annexure D, and
(iii) a new work constructed in accordance with the provisions of Annexure D.

(b) “Reservoir Capacity” means the gross volume of water which can be stored in the reservoir.

(c) “Dead Storage Capacity” means that portion of the Reservoir Capacity which is not used for operational purposes, and “Dead Storage” means the corresponding volume of water.

(d) “Live Storage Capacity” means the Reservoir Capacity excluding Dead Storage Capacity, and “Live Storage” means the corresponding volume of water.

(e) “Flood Storage Capacity” means that portion of the Reservoir Capacity which is reserved for the temporary storage of flood waters in order to regulate downstream flows, and “Flood Storage” means the corresponding volume of water.

(f) “Surcharge Storage Capacity” means the Reservoir Capacity between the crest of an uncontrolled spillway or the top of the crest gates in normal closed position and the maximum water elevation above this level for which the dam is designed, and “Surcharge Storage” means the corresponding volume of water.

(g) “Conservation Storage Capacity” means the Reservoir Capacity excluding Flood Storage Capacity, Dead Storage Capacity and Surcharge Storage Capacity, and “Conservation Storage” means the corresponding volume of water.

(h) “Power Storage Capacity” means that portion of the Conservation Storage Capacity which is designated to be used for generating electric energy, and “Power Storage” means the corresponding volume of water.

(i) “General Storage Capacity” means the Conservation Storage Capacity excluding Power Storage Capacity, and “General Storage” means the corresponding volume of water.

(j) “Dead Storage Level” means the level of water in a reservoir corresponding to Dead Storage Capacity, below which level the reservoir does not operate.

(k) “Full Reservoir Level” means the level of water in a reservoir corresponding to Conservation Storage Capacity.
“Multi-purpose Reservoir” means a reservoir capable of and intended for use for more than one purpose.

“Single-purpose Reservoir” means a reservoir capable of and intended for use for only one purpose.

“Small Tank” means a tank having a Live Storage of less than 700 acre-feet and fed only from a non-perennial small stream: Provided that the Dead Storage does not exceed 50 acre-feet.

3. There shall be no restriction on the operation as heretofore by India of those Storage Works which were in operation as on the Effective Date or on the construction and operation of Small Tanks.

4. As soon as India finds it possible to do so, but not later than 31st March 1961, India shall communicate to Pakistan in writing the information specified in the Appendix to this Annexure for such Storage Works as were in operation as on the Effective Date. If any such information is not available or is not pertinent to the design of the Storage Work or to the conditions at the site, it will be so stated.

5. (a) If any alteration proposed in the design of any of the Storage Works referred to in Paragraph 3 would result in a material change in the information furnished to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 4, India shall, at least 4 months in advance of making the alteration, communicate particulars of the change to Pakistan in writing and the provisions of Paragraph 6 shall then apply.

(b) In the event of an emergency arising which requires repairs to be undertaken to protect the integrity of any of the Storage Works referred to in Paragraph 3, India may undertake immediately the necessary repairs or alterations and, if these repairs or alterations result in a change in the information furnished to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 4, India shall as soon as possible communicate particulars of the change to Pakistan in writing. The provisions of Paragraph 6 shall then apply.

6. Within three months of the receipt of the particulars specified in Paragraph 5, Pakistan shall communicate to India in writing any objection it may have with regard to the proposed change on the ground that the change involves a material departure from the criteria set out in Paragraph 11. If no objection is received by India from Pakistan within the specified period of three months, then Pakistan shall be deemed to have no objection. If a question arises as to whether or not the change involves a material departure from such of the criteria mentioned above as may be applicable, then either Party may proceed to have the question resolved in accordance with the provisions of Article IX(1) and (2).
The aggregate storage capacity of all Single-purpose and Multipurpose Reservoirs which may be constructed by India after the Effective Date on each of the River Systems specified in Column (2) of the following table shall not exceed, for each of the categories shown in Columns (3), (4) and (5), the quantities specified therein:

<table>

Provided that

(i) the storage specified in Column (3) above may be used for any purpose whatever, including the generation of electric energy;

(ii) the storage specified in Column (4) above may also be put to Non-Consumptive Use (other than flood protection or flood control) or to Domestic use;

(iii) India shall have the option, to increase the Power Storage Capacity specified against item (d) above by making a reduction by an equal amount in the Power Storage Capacity specified against items (b) or (e) above; and

(iv) Storage Works to provide the Power Storage Capacity on the Chenab main specified against item (e) above shall not be constructed at a point below Naunut (Latitude 33° 19’ N. and Longitude 75° 59’ E.)

8. The figures specified in Paragraph 7 shall be exclusive of the following:

(a) Storage in any Small Tank.
(b) Any natural storage in a Connecting Lake, that is to say, storage not resulting from any man-made works.

(c) Waters which, without any man-made channel or works, spill into natural depressions or borrow-pits during floods.

(d) Dead Storage.

(e) The volume of Pondage for hydro-electric plants under Annexure D and under Paragraph 21 (a).

(f) Surcharge Storage.

(g) Storage in a Regulating Basin (as defined in Annexure D.)

(h) Storage incidental to a barrage on the Jhelum Main or on the Chenab Main not exceeding 10,000 acre-feet.

9. India may construct on the Jhelum Main such works as it may consider necessary for flood control of the Jhelum Main and may complete any such works as were under construction on the Effective Date: Provided that

(i) any storage which may be effected by such works shall be confined to off-channel storage in side valleys, depressions or lakes and will not involve any storage in the Jhelum Main itself; and

(ii) except for the part held in lakes, borrow-pits or natural depressions, the stored waters shall be released as quickly as possible after the flood recedes and returned to the Jhelum Main lower down.

These works shall be constructed in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 11(d).

10. Notwithstanding the provisions of Paragraph 7, any Storage Work to be constructed on a Tributary of The Jhelum on which Pakistan has any Agricultural Use or hydro-electric use shall be so designed and operated as not to adversely affect the then existing Agricultural Use or hydro-electric use on that Tributary.

11. The design of any Storage Work (other than a Storage Work falling under Paragraph 3) shall conform to the following criteria

(a) The Storage Work shall not be capable of raising artificially the water level in the reservoir higher than the designed Full Reservoir Level except to the extent necessary for Flood Storage, if any, specified in the design.

(b) The design of the works shall take due account of the requirements of Surcharge Storage.
(c) The volume between the Full Reservoir Level and the Dead Storage Level of any reservoir shall not exceed the Conservation Storage Capacity specified in the design.

(d) With respect to the Flood Storage mentioned in Paragraph 9, the design of the works on the Jhelum Main shall be such that no water can spill from the Jhelum Main into the off-channel storage except when the water level in the Jhelum Main rises above the low flood stage.

(e) Outlets or other works of sufficient capacity shall be provided to deliver into the river downstream the flow of the river received upstream of the Storage Work, except during freshets or floods. These outlets or works shall be located at the highest level consistent with sound and economical design and with satisfactory operation of the Storage Work.

(f) Any outlets below the Dead Storage Level necessary for sediment control or any other technical purpose shall be of the minimum size, and located at the highest level, consistent with sound and economical design and with satisfactory operation of the Storage Work.

(g) If a power plant is incorporated in the Storage Work, the intakes for the turbines shall be located at the highest level consistent with satisfactory and economical construction and operation of the plant and with customary and accepted practice of design for the designated range of the plant’s operation.

12. To enable Pakistan to satisfy itself that the design of a Storage Work (other than a Storage Work falling under Paragraph 3) conforms to the criteria mentioned in Paragraph 11, India shall, at least six months in advance of the beginning of construction of the Storage Work, communicate to Pakistan in writing the information specified in the Appendix to this Annexure; if any such information is not available or is not pertinent to the design of the Storage Work or to the conditions at the site, it will be so stated:

Provided that, in the case of a Storage Work falling under Paragraph 9,

(i) if the work is a new work, the period of six months shall be reduced to four months, and

(ii) if the work is a work under construction on the Effective Date, the information shall be furnished not later than 31st December, 1960.

13. Within three months (or two months, in the case of a Storage Work specified in Paragraph 9) of the receipt by Pakistan of the information specified in Paragraph 12, Pakistan shall communicate to India in writing any objection that it may have with regard to the proposed design on the ground that the design does not conform to the criteria mentioned in Paragraph 11. If no objection is received by India from Pakistan within the specified period of three months (or two months, in the case of a Storage Work specified in Paragraph 9), then Pakistan shall be deemed to have no objection.

14. If a question arises as to whether or not the design of a Storage Work (other than a Storage Work failing under Paragraph 3) conforms to the criteria set out in Paragraph 11, then either Party may proceed to have the question resolved in accordance with the provisions of Article IX (1) and (2).

15. (a) If any alteration proposed in the design of a Storage Work (other than a Storage Work failing under Paragraph 3) before it comes into operation would result in a material change in the information furnished to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 12, India shall immediately communicate particulars of the change to Pakistan in writing and the provisions of Paragraphs 13 and 14 shall then apply, but where a period of three months is specified in Paragraph 13, that period shall be reduced to two months.

(b) If any alteration proposed in the design of a Storage Work (other than a Storage Work failing under Paragraph 3), after it comes into operation would result in a material change in the information furnished to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 12, India shall, at least four months in advance of making the alteration, communicate particulars of the change to Pakistan in writing and the provisions of Paragraphs 13 and 14 shall then apply, but where a period of three months is specified in Paragraph 13, that period shall be reduced to two months.

16. In the event of an emergency arising which requires repairs to be undertaken to protect the integrity of a Storage Work (other than a Storage Work failing under Paragraph 3), India may undertake immediately the necessary repairs or alterations; if these repairs or alterations result in a change in the information furnished to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 12, India shall, as soon as possible, communicate particulars of the change to Pakistan in writing to enable Pakistan to satisfy itself that after such change the design of the work conforms to the criteria specified in Paragraph 11. The provisions of Paragraphs 13 and 14 shall then apply.

17. The Flood Storage specified against item (b) in Paragraph 7 may be effected only during floods when the discharge of the river exceeds the amount specified for this purpose in the design of the work; the storage above full Reservoir Level shall be released as quickly as possible after the flood recedes.

18. The annual filling of Conservation Storage and the initial filling below the Dead Storage Level, at any site, shall be carried out at such times and in accordance with such rules as may be agreed upon between the Commissioners. In case the Commissioners are unable to reach agreement, India may carry out the filling as follows:

(a) if the site is on The Indus, between 1st June and 20th August;
(b) if the site is on The Jhelum, between 21st June and 20th August; and
(c) if the site is on The Chenab, between 21st June and 31st August at such rate as not to reduce, on account of this filling, the flow in the Chenab Main above Merala to less than 55,000 cusecs.

19. The Dead Storage shall not be depleted except in an unforeseen emergency. If so depleted, it will be refilled in accordance with the conditions of its initial filling.

20. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 8 of Annexure C, India may make releases from Conservation Storage in any manner it may determine.

21. If a hydro-electric power plant is incorporated in a Storage Work (other than a Storage Work falling under Paragraph 3), the plant shall be so operated that:

(a) the maximum Pondage (as defined in Annexure D) shall not exceed the Pondage required for the firm power of the plant, and the water-level in the reservoir corresponding to maximum Pondage shall not, on account of this Pondage, exceed the Full Reservoir Level at any time; and
(b) except during the period in which a filling is being carried out in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 18 or 19, the volume of water delivered into the river below the work during any period of seven consecutive days shall not be less than the volume of water received in the river upstream of the work in that seven-day period.

22. In applying the provisions of Paragraph 21(b)

(a) the period of seven consecutive days shall commence at 8 A.M. on every Saturday and the time shall be Indian Standard Time;
(b) a tolerance of 10% in volume shall be permissible and adjusted as soon as possible; and
(c) any temporary uncontrollable retention of water due to variation in river supply will be accounted for.

23. When the Live Storage Capacity of a Storage Work is reduced by sedimentation, India may, in accordance with the relevant provisions of this Annexure, construct new Storage Works or modify existing Storage Works so as to make up the storage capacity lost by sedimentation.

24. If a power plant incorporated in a Storage Work (other than a Storage Work failing under Paragraph 3) is used to operate a peak power plant and lies on any Tributary of The Jhelum on which there is any Agricultural Use by Pakistan, a Regulating Basin (as defined in Annexure D) shall be incorporated.

25. If the change referred to in Paragraph 5(a) or 15 is not material, India shall communicate particulars of the change to Pakistan, in writing, as soon as the alteration has been made or the repairs have been undertaken. The provisions of Paragraph 6 or Paragraphs 13 and 14, as the case may be, shall then apply.

APPENDIX To ANNEXURE E
(Paragraphs 4 and 12)

1. Location of Storage Work
General map showing the location of the site; if on a Tributary, its situation with respect to the main river.

2. Hydrologic Data
(a) General map (Scale : 1/4 inch or more = 1 mile) showing the discharge observation site or sites or rainfall gauge stations, on whose data the design is based. In case of a work on a Tributary, this map should also show the catchment area of the Tributary above the site.
(b) Observed or estimated daily river discharge data on which the design is based (observed data will be given for as long period as available; estimated data will be given for as long period as possible; in both case data may be limited to the latest 25 years).
(c) flood data, observed or estimated (with details of estimation).
(d) Gauge-discharge curve or curves for site or sites mentioned in (a) above.
(e) Sediment data.

3. Hydraulic Data
(a) Stage-area and stage-capacity curves of the reservoir with contoured survey maps on which based.
(b) Reservoir Capacity, Dead Storage Capacity, Flood Storage Capacity, Conservation Storage Capacity, Power Storage Capacity, General Storage Capacity and Surcharge Storage Capacity.
(c) Full Reservoir Level, Dead Storage Level and levels corresponding to Flood Storage and Surcharge Storage.

(d) Estimated evaporation losses in the reservoir.

(e) Maximum designed flood discharge and discharge capacity curve for spillway.

(f) If a power plant is incorporated in a Storage Work
   (i) Stage-area and stage-capacity curves of forebay and Regulating Basin, with contoured survey maps on which based.
   (ii) Estimated evaporation losses in the Regulating Basin, head-race, forebay and tail-race.
   (iii) Designated range of operation.

4. Particulars of Design

(a) Dimensioned plan showing dam, spillway, diversion works and outlet works.

(b) Type of dam, length and height above mean bed of the river.

(d) Type of spillway, length and crest level; size, number and top level of spillway gates.

(e) Type of diversion works, maximum designed capacity, number and size; sill levels.

(f) Outlet works: function, type, size, number, maximum designed capacity and sill levels.

(g) If a power plant is incorporated in a Storage Work,
   (i) Dimensioned plan showing head-race and forebay, powerhouse, tail-race and Regulating Basin.
   (ii) Type of intake, maximum designed capacity, size and sill level.
   (iii) Head-race and tail-race, length, size and maximum designed capacity.
   (iv) Discharge proposed to be passed through the plant, initially and ultimately, and expected variations in the discharge on account of the daily and the weekly load fluctuations.
(v) Maximum aggregate capacity of power units (exclusive of standby units) for firm power and secondary power.

(vi) Regulating Basin and its outlet works: type, number, size, sill levels and designed maximum discharge capacity.

5. General

(a) Probable date of completion of river works and probable dates on which various stages of the work would come into operation.

(b) Estimated effect of proposed Storage Work on the flow pattern of river supplies below the Storage Work or, if India has any other Storage Work or Run-of-River Plant (as defined in Annexure D) below the proposed Storage Work, then on the flow pattern below the last Storage Work or Plant.

ANNEXURE F-NEUTRAL EXPERT
(Article IX (2))

Part I-Questions to be referred to a Neutral Expert

1. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 2, either Commissioner may, under the provisions of Article IX (2) (a), refer to a Neutral Expert any of the following questions:

(1) Determination of the component of water available for the use of Pakistan

(a) in the Ravi Main, on account of the deliveries by Pakistan under the provisions of Article 11 (4). and

(b) at various points on The Ravi or the Sutlej, on account of the deliveries by Pakistan under the provisions of Article 111 (3).

(2) Determination of the boundary of the drainage basin of The Indus or The Jhelum or The Chenab for the purposes of Article III (2).

(3) Whether or not any use of water or storage in addition to that provided under Article III is involved in any of the schemes referred to in Article IV (2) or in Article IV (3) (b) and carried out by India on the Western Rivers.

(4) Questions relating to

(a) obligations with respect to construction or re-modeling of, or pouring of waters into, any drainage or drain as provided-in Article IV (3) (c) and Article TV (3) (d); and
(b) maintenance of drainages specified in Article IV (4).

(5) Questions arising under Article IV (7) as to whether any action taken by either Party is likely to have the effect of diverting the Ravi Main between Madhopur and Lahore, or the Sutlej Main between Harike and Suleimanke, from its natural channel between high banks.

(6) Determination of facts relating to questions arising under Article IV (11) or Article IV (12).

(7) Whether any of the data requested by either Party falls outside the scope of Article VI (2).

(8) Determination of withdrawals to be made by India under proviso (iii) to Paragraph 3 of Annexure C.

(9) Determination of schedule of releases from Conservation Storage under the provisions of Paragraph 8 of Annexure C.

(10) Whether or not any new Agricultural Use by India, on those Tributaries of The Jhelum on which there is any Agricultural Use or hydro-electric use by Pakistan, conforms to the provisions of Paragraph 9 of Annexure C.

(11) Questions arising under the provisions of Paragraph 7, Paragraph 11 or Paragraph 21 of Annexure D.

(12) Whether or not the operation by India of any plant constructed in accordance with the provisions of Part 3 of Annexure D conforms to the criteria set out in Paragraphs 15, 16 and 17 of that Annexure.

(13) Whether or not any new hydro-electric plant on an irrigation channel taking off the Western Rivers conforms to the provisos to Paragraph 24 of Annexure D.

(14) Whether or not the operation of a Storage Work which was in operation as on the Effective Date substantially conforms to the provisions of Paragraph 3 of Annexure E.

(15) Whether or not any part of the storage in a Connecting Lake is the result of man-made works constructed after the Effective Date (Paragraph 8 (b) of Annexure E).

(16) Whether or not any flood control work constructed on the Jhelum Main conforms to the provisions of Paragraph 9 of Annexure E.

(17) Whether or not any Storage Work to be constructed on a Tributary of the Jhelum on which Pakistan has any Agricultural Use or hydro-electric use conforms to the provisions of Paragraph 10 of Annexure E.

(18) Questions arising under the provisions of Paragraph 6 or 14 of Annexure E.

(19) Whether or not the operation of any Storage Work constructed by India, after the Effective Date conforms to the provisions of Paragraphs 17, 18, 19, 21 and 22 of Annexure E and, to the extent necessary, to the provisions of Paragraph 8 of Annexure C.

(20) Whether or not the storage capacity proposed to be made up by India under Paragraph 23 of Annexure E exceeds the storage capacity lost by sedimentation.

(21) Determination of modifications to be made in the provisions of Parts 2, 4 or 5 of Annexure H in accordance with Paragraphs 11, 31 or 38 thereof when the additional supplies referred to in Paragraph 66 of that Annexure become available.

(22) Modification of Forms under the provisions of Paragraph 41 of Annexure H.

(23) 1. Revision of the figure for the conveyance loss from the head of the Madhopur Beas Link to the junction of the Chakki Torrent with the Beas Main under the provisions of 4.5 (c) (11) of Annexure H.

2. If a claim for financial compensation has been raised with respect to any question specified in Paragraph 1, that question shall not be referred to a Neutral Expert unless the two Commissioners are agreed that it should be so referred.

3. Either Commissioner may refer to a Neutral Expert under the provisions of Article IX (2) (a) any question arising with regard to the determination of costs under Article IV (5), Article IV (11), Article VII (1) (a) or Article VII (1) (b).

Part 2- Appointment and Procedure

4. A Neutral Expert shall be a highly qualified engineer, and, on the receipt of a request made in accordance with Paragraph 5, he shall be appointed, and the terms of his retainer shall be fixed, as follows:

(a) During the Transition Period, by the Bank.

(b) After the expiration of the Transition Period,
(i) jointly by the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, or
(ii) if no appointment is made in accordance with (i) above within one month after the date of the request, then by such person or body as may have been agreed upon between the two Governments in advance, on an annual basis, or, in the absence of such agreement, by the Bank.

Provided that every appointment made in accordance with (a) or (b) (ii) above shall be made after consultation with each of the Parties.

The Bank shall be notified of every appointment, except when the Bank is itself the appointing authority.

5. If a difference arises and has to be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of Article IX (2) (a), the following procedure will be followed:

(a) The Commissioner who is of the opinion that the difference falls within the provisions of Part 1 of this Annexure (hereinafter in this paragraph referred to as “the first Commissioner”) shall notify the other Commissioner of his intention to ask for the appointment of a Neutral Expert. Such notification shall clearly state the paragraph or paragraphs of Part 1 of this Annexure under which the difference falls and shall also contain a statement of the point or points of difference.

(b) Within two weeks of the receipt by the other Commissioner of the notification specified in (a) above, the two Commissioners will endeavour to prepare a joint statement of the point or points of difference.

(c) After expiry of the period of two weeks specified in (b) above, the first Commissioner may request the appropriate authority specified in Paragraph 4 to appoint a Neutral Expert; a copy of the request shall be sent at the same time to the other Commissioner.

(d) The request under (c) above shall be accompanied by the joint statement specified in (b) above; failing this, either Commissioner may send a separate statement to the appointing authority and, if he does so, he shall at the same time send a copy of the separate statement to the other Commissioner.

6. The procedure with respect to each reference to a Neutral Expert shall be determined by him, provided that:

(a) he shall afford to each Party an adequate hearing;

(b) in making his decision, he shall be governed by the provisions of this Treaty and by the compromis, if any, presented to him by the Commission; and
(c) without prejudice to the provisions of Paragraph 3, unless both Parties so request, he shall not deal with any issue of financial compensation.

7. Should the Commission be unable to agree that any particular difference falls within Part 1 of this Annexure, the Neutral Expert shall, after hearing both Parties, decide whether or not it so falls. Should he decide that the difference so falls, he shall proceed to render a decision on the merits; should he decide otherwise, he shall inform the Commission that, in his opinion, the difference should be treated as a dispute. Should the Neutral Expert decide that only a part of the difference so falls, he shall, at his discretion either:

(a) proceed to render a decision on the part which so falls, and inform the Commission that, in his opinion, the part which does not so fall should be treated as a dispute, or

(b) inform the Commission that, in his opinion, the entire difference should be treated as a dispute.

8. Each Government agrees to extend to the Neutral Expert such facilities as he may require for the discharge of his functions.

9. The Neutral Expert shall, as soon as possible, render a decision on the question or questions referred to him, giving his reasons. A copy of such decision, duly signed by the Neutral Expert, shall be forwarded by him to each of the Commissioners and to the Bank.

10. Each Party shall bear its own costs. The remuneration and the expenses of the Neutral Expert and of any assistance that he may need shall be borne initially as provided in Part 3 of this Annexure and eventually by the Party against which his decision is rendered, except as, in special circumstances, and for reasons to be stated by him, he may otherwise direct. He shall include in his decision a direction concerning the extent to which the costs of such remuneration and expenses are to be borne by either Party.

11. The decision of the Neutral Expert on all matters within his competence shall be final and binding, in respect of the particular matter on which the decision is made, upon the Parties and upon any Court of Arbitration established under the provisions of Article IX (5).

12. The Neutral Expert may, at the request of the Commission, suggest for the consideration of the Parties such measures as are, in his opinion, appropriate to compose a difference or to implement his decision.

13. Without prejudice to the finality of the Neutral Expert’s decision, if any question (including a claim to, financial compensation) which is not within the competence of a Neutral Expert should arise out of his decision, that question shall, if it cannot be resolved by agreement, be settled in accordance with the provisions of Article IX (3), (4) and (5).

Part 3-Expenses

14. India and Pakistan shall, within 30 days after the Treaty enters into force, each pay to the Bank the sum of U.S. $5,000 to be held in trust by the Bank, together with any income therefrom and any other amounts payable to the Bank hereunder, on the terms and conditions hereinafter set forth in the Annexure.

15. The remuneration and expenses of the Neutral Expert, and of any assistance that he may need, shall be paid or reimbursed by the Bank from the amounts held by it hereunder. The Bank shall be entitled to rely upon the statement of the Neutral Expert as to the amount of the remuneration and expenses of himself (determined in accordance with the terms of his retainer) and of any such assistance utilized by him.

16. Within 30 days of the rendering of a decision by the Neutral Expert, the Party or Parties concerned shall, in accordance with that decision, refund to the Bank the amounts paid by the Bank pursuant to Paragraph 15.

17. The Bank will keep amounts held by it hereunder separate from its other assets, in such form, in such banks or other depositories and in such accounts as it shall determine. The Bank may, but it shall not be required to, invest these amounts. The Bank will not be liable to the Parties for failure of any depository or other person to perform its obligations. The Bank shall be under no obligation to make payments hereunder of amounts in excess of those held by it hereunder.

18. If at any time or times the amounts held by the Bank hereunder shall in its judgment be insufficient to meet the payments provided for in Paragraph 15, it will so notify the Parties, which shall, within 30 days thereafter, pay to the Bank, in equal shares, the amount specified in such notice as being the amount required to cover the deficiency. Any amounts so paid to the Bank may, by agreement between the Bank and the Parties, be refunded to the Parties.

ANNEXURE G-Court OF ARBITRATION (Article IX (5))

1. If the necessity arises to establish a Court of Arbitration under the provisions of Article IX, the provisions of this Annexure shall apply

2. The arbitration proceeding may be instituted

(a) by the two Parties entering into a special agreement (compromise) specifying the issues in dispute, the composition of the Court and instructions to the Court concerning its procedures and any other matters agreed upon between the Parties: or

(b) at the request of either Party to the other in accordance with the provisions of Article IX (5) (b) or (c). Such request shall contain a statement setting forth the nature of the dispute or claim to be submitted to arbitration, the nature of the relief sought and the names of the arbitrators appointed under Paragraph 6 by the Party instituting the proceeding.

3. The date of the special agreement referred to in Paragraph 2(a), or the date on which the request referred to in Paragraph 2(b) is received by the other Party, shall be deemed to be the date on which the proceeding is instituted.

4. Unless otherwise agreed, between the Parties, a Court of Arbitration shall consist of seven arbitrators appointed as follows

(a) Two arbitrators to be appointed by each Party in accordance with Paragraph 6; and

(b) Three arbitrators (hereinafter sometimes called the umpires) to be appointed in accordance with Paragraph 7, one from each of the following categories:

(i) Persons qualified by status and reputation to be Chairman of the Court of Arbitration who may, but need not, be engineers or lawyers.

(ii) Highly qualified engineers.

(iii) Persons well versed in international law.

The Chairman of the Court shall be a person from category (b) (i) above.

5. The Parties shall endeavour to nominate and maintain a Standing Panel of umpires (hereinafter called the Panel) in the following manner:

(a) The Panel shall consist of four persons in each of the three categories specified in Paragraph 4(b).

(b) The Panel will be selected, as soon as possible after the Effective Date, by agreement between the Parties and with the consent of the persons whose names are included in the Panel.

(c) A person may at any time be retired from the Panel at the request of either Party: Provided however that he may not be so retired

(i) during the period after arbitration proceedings have been instituted under Paragraph 2(b) and before the process described in Paragraph 7(a) has been completed; or
(ii) during the period after he has been appointed to a Court and before the proceedings are completed.

(d) if a member of the Panel should die, resign or be retired, his successor shall be selected by agreement between the Parties.

6. The arbitrators referred to in Paragraph 4(a) shall be appointed as follows:

The Party instituting the proceeding shall appoint two arbitrators at the time it makes a request to the other Party under Paragraph 2(b). Within 30 days of the receipt of this request, the other Party shall notify the names of the arbitrators appointed by it.

7. The umpires shall be appointed as follows:

(a) If a Panel has been Dominated in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 5, each umpire shall be selected as follows from the Panel, from his appropriate category, provided that the category has, at that time, at least three names on the Panel:

The Parties shall endeavour to agree to place the names of the persons in each category in the order in which they shall be invited to serve on the Court. If such agreement cannot be reached within 30 days of the date on which the proceeding is instituted, the Parties shall promptly establish such an order by drawing lots. If, in any category, the person whose name is placed first in the order so established, on receipt of an invitation to serve on the Court, declines to do so, the person whose name is next on the list shall be invited. The process shall be repeated until the invitation is accepted or all names in the category are exhausted.

(b) If a Panel has not been nominated in accordance with Paragraph 5, or if there should be less than three names on the Panel in any category or if no person in a category accepts the invitation referred to in Paragraph 7(a), the umpires, or the remaining umpires or umpire, as the case may be, shall be appointed as follows:

(i) By agreement between the Parties.

(ii) Should the Parties be unable to agree on the selection of any or all the three umpires, they shall agree on one or more persons to help them in making the necessary selection by agreement; but if one or more umpires remain to be appointed 60 days after the date on which the proceeding is instituted, or 30 days after the completion of the process described in sub-paragraph (a) above, as the case may be, then the Parties shall determine by lot for each umpire remaining to be appointed, a person from the appropriate list set out in the Appendix to this Annexure, who shall then be requested to make the necessary selection.

(iii) A national of India or Pakistan, or a person who is, or has been, employed or retained by either of the Parties shall be disqualified from selection under sub-paragraph (ii) above.

Provided that

(1) the person making the selection shall be entitled to rely on a declaration from the appointee, before his selection, that he is not disqualified on any of the above grounds; and

(2) the Parties may by agreement waive any or all of the above disqualifications in the case of any individual appointee.

(iv) The lists in the Appendix to this Annexure may, from time to time, be modified or enlarged by agreement between the Parties.

8. In selecting umpires pursuant to Paragraph 7, the Chairman shall be selected first, unless the Parties otherwise agree.

9. Should either Party fail to participate in the drawing of lots as provided in Paragraphs 7 and 10, the other Party may request the President of the Bank to nominate a person to draw the lots, and the person so nominated shall do so after giving due notice to the Parties and inviting them to be represented at the drawing of the lots.

10. In the case of death, retirement or disability from any cause of one of the arbitrators or umpires his place shall be filled as follows:

(a) In the case of one of the arbitrators appointed under Paragraph 6, his place shall be filled by the Party which appointed him. The Court shall, on request, suspend the proceedings but for not longer than 15 days pending such replacement.

(b) In the case of an umpire, a new appointment shall be made by agreement between the Parties or, failing such agreement, by a person determined by lot from the appropriate list set out in the Appendix to this Annexure, who shall then be requested to make the necessary selection subject to the provisions of Paragraph 7(b) (iii). Unless the Parties otherwise agree, the Court shall suspend the proceedings pending such replacement.

11. As soon as the three umpires have accepted appointment, they together with such arbitrators as have been appointed by the two Parties under Paragraph 6 shall form the Court of Arbitration. Unless the Parties otherwise agree, the Court shall be competent to transact business only when all the three umpires and at least two arbitrators are present.

12. Each Party shall be represented before the Court by an Agent and may have the assistance of Counsel.

13. Within 15 days of the date of institution of a proceeding, each Party shall place sufficient funds at the disposal of its Commissioner to meet in equal shares the initial expenses of the umpires to enable them to attend the first meeting of the Court. If either Party should fail to do so, the other Party may initially meet the whole of such expenses.

14. The Court of Arbitration shall convene, for its first meeting, on such date and at such place as shall be fixed by the Chairman.

15. At its first meeting the Court shall
(a) establish its secretariat and appoint a Treasurer;
(b) make an estimate of the likely expenses of the Court and call upon each Party to pay to the Treasurer half of the expenses so estimated: Provided that, if either Party should fail to make such payment, the other Party may initially pay the whole of the estimated expenses;
(c) specify the issues in dispute;
(d) Jay down a programme for submission by each side of legal pleadings and rejoinders; and
(e) determining the time and place of reconvening the court.
   Unless special circumstances arise, the Court shall not reconvene until the pleadings and rejoinders have been closed. During the intervening period, at the request of either Party, the Chairman of the Court may, for sufficient reason, make changes in the arrangements made under (d) and (e) above.

16. Subject to the provisions of this Treaty and except as the Parties may otherwise agree, the Court shall decide all questions relating to its competence and shall determine its procedure, including the time within which each Party must present and conclude its arguments. All such decisions of the Court shall be by a majority of those present and voting. Each arbitrator, including the Chairman, shall have one vote. In the event of an equality of votes, the Chairman shall have a casting vote.

17. The proceedings of the Court shall be in English.

18. Two or more certified copies of every document produced before the Court by one Party shall be communicated by the Court to the other Party; the Court shall not take cognizance of any document or paper or fact presented by a Party unless so communicated.

19. The Chairman of the Court shall control the discussions. The discussions shall not be open to the public unless it is so decided by the Court with the consent of the Parties. The discussions shall be recorded in minutes drawn up by the Secretaries appointed by the Chairman. These minutes shall be signed by the Chairman and shall alone have an authentic character.

20. The Court shall have the right to require from the Agents of the Parties the production of all papers and other evidence it considers necessary and to demand all necessary explanations. In case of refusal, the Court shall take formal note of it.

21. The members of the Court shall be entitled to put questions to the Agents and Counsel of the Parties and to demand explanations from them on doubtful points. Neither the questions put nor the remarks made by the members of the Court during the discussions shall be regarded as an expression of an opinion of the Court or any of its members.

22. When the Agents and Counsel of the Parties have, within the time allotted by the Court, submitted all explanations and evidence in support of their case, the Court shall pronounce the discussions closed. The Court may, however, at its discretion re-open the discussions at any time before making its Award. The deliberations of the Court shall be in private and shall remain secret.

23. The Court shall render its Award, in writing, on the issues in dispute and on such relief, including financial compensation, as may have been claimed. The Award shall be accompanied by a statement of reasons. An Award signed by four or more members of the Court shall constitute the Award of the Court. A signed counterpart of the Award shall be delivered by the Court to each Party. Any such Award rendered in accordance with the provisions of this Annexure in regard to a particular dispute shall be final and binding upon the Parties with respect to that dispute.

24. The salaries and allowances of the arbitrators appointed pursuant to Paragraph 6 shall be determined and, in the first instance, borne by their Governments; those of the umpires shall be agreed upon with them by the Parties or by the persons appointing them, and (subject to Paragraph 13) shall be paid, in the first instance, by the Treasurer. The salaries and allowances of the secretariat of the Court shall be determined by the Court and paid, in the first instance, by the Treasurer.

25. Each Government agrees to accord to the members and officials of the Court of Arbitration and to the Agents and Counsel appearing before the Court the same privileges and immunities as are accorded to representatives of member states to the principal and subsidiary organs of the United Nations under Sections 11, 12 and 13 of Article IV of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations (dated 13th February 1946) during the periods specified in these Sections. The Chairman of the Court, with the approval of the Court, has the right and the duty to waive the immunity of any official of the Court in any case where the immunity would impede the course of justice and can be waived without prejudice to the interests of the Court. The Government appointing any of the aforementioned Agents and Counsel has the right and the duty to waive the immunity of any of its said appointees in any case where in its opinion the immunity would impede the course of justice and can be waived without prejudice to the effective performance of the functions of the said appointees. The immunities and privileges provided for in this paragraph shall not be applicable as between an Agent or Counsel appearing before the Court and the Government which has appointed him.

26. In its Award, the Court shall also award the costs of the proceedings, including those initially borne by the Parties and those paid by the Treasurer.

27. At the request of either Party, made within three months of the date of the Award, the Court shall reassemble to clarify or interpret its Award. Pending such clarification or interpretation the Court may, at the request of either Party and if in the opinion of the Court circumstances so require, grant a stay of execution of its Award. After furnishing this clarification or interpretation, or if no request for such clarification or interpretation is made within three months of the date of the Award, the Court shall be deemed to have been dissolved.

28. Either Party may request the Court at its first meeting to lay down, pending its Award, such interim measures as, in the opinion of that Party, are necessary to safeguard its interests under the Treaty with respect to the matter in dispute, or to avoid prejudice to the final solution or aggravation or extension of the dispute. The Court shall, thereupon, after having afforded an adequate hearing to each Party, decide, by a majority consisting of at least four members of the Court, whether any interim measures are necessary for the reasons hereinbefore stated and, if so, shall specify such measures:

(a) the Court shall lay down such interim measures only for such specified period as, in its opinion, will be necessary to render the Award: this period may, if necessary, be extended unless the delay in rendering the Award is due to any delay on the part of the Party which requested the interim measures in supplying such information as may be required by the other Party or by the Court in connection with the dispute; and

(b) the specification of such interim measures shall not be construed as an indication of any view of the Court on the merits of the dispute.
29. Except as the Parties may otherwise agree, the law to be applied by the Court shall be this Treaty and, whenever necessary for its interpretation or application, but only to the extent necessary for that purpose, the following in the order in which they are listed

(a) International conventions establishing rules which are expressly recognized by the Parties.

(b) Customary international law.

Part 9 General

Part 10 Special provisions for 1960 and 1961

Appendix I Provisions for Time-lag and for Determination of the ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ and the Seas Component at Ferozepore

Appendix II Forms of water-account

Appendix III-Calculations for determining proportionate working expenses to be paid by Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 48 and 50

Appendix IV-Calculations for determining proportionate working expenses to be paid by Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraphs 49 and 50

PART 1
Preliminary

1. The provisions of Article 11 (5) with respect to the distribution of the waters of the Eastern Rivers during the Transition Period shall be governed by the provisions of this Annexure. With the exception of the provisions of Paragraph 50, all the provisions of this Annexure shall lapse on the date on which the Transition Period ends. The provisions of Paragraphs 50 and 51 shall lapse as soon as the final refund or the additional payment referred to therein has been made for the last year of the Transition Period.

2. For the purposes of this Annexure, the Transition Period shall be divided into two parts: Phase I and Phase II.

3. Phase I shall begin on 1st April 1960 and it shall end on 31st March 1965, or, if the proposed Trimmu-Islam Link is not ready to operate by 31st March 1965 but is ready to operate prior to 31st March 1966 then, on the date on which the link is ready to operate. In any event, whether or not the Trimmu-Islam Link is ready to operate, Phase I shall end not later than 31st March 1966.

4. Phase II shall begin on 1st April 1965, or, if Phase I has been extended under the provisions of Paragraph 3, then on the day following the end of Phase I but in any case not later than 1st April 1966. Phase II shall end on the same date as the Transition Period.

5. As used in this Annexure

(a) The term ‘Central Bari Doab Channels’ or ‘C.B.D.C.’ means the system of irrigation channels located in Pakistan which, prior to 15th August 19.47, formed a part of the Upper Bari Doab Canal System.
(b) The terms ‘kharif’ and ‘rabi’ respectively mean the crop seasons extending from 1st April to 30th September (both days inclusive) and 1st October to 31st March (both days inclusive).

(c) The term ‘Water-accounting Period’ means the period which is treated as a unit for the purpose of preparing an account of the distribution of waters between India and Pakistan.

(d) The term ‘Seas Component at Ferozepore’ means the amount of flow water derived from The Beas which would have reached Ferozepore if there had been
   (i) no transfers from The Ravi or contribution from The Sutlej,
   (ii) no withdrawals by the canals at Harike,
   (iii) no abstraction of flow waters by, or release of stored waters from, any storage reservoir on The Beas or the pond at Harike,
   (iv) no withdrawals by the Shahnehr Canal in excess of those specified in Paragraph 55, and
   (v) no withdrawal by any new canal from The Beas or from the Sutlej Main between Harike Below and Ferozepore constructed after the Effective Date with a capacity of more than 10 cusecs.

(e) The term ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ means the amount of flow water derived from The Sutlej which would have reached Ferozepore if there had been
   (i) no transfers from The Ravi or contribution from The Beas.
   (ii) no withdrawals, as at Rupar, in excess of those specified in Paragraph 21(a), and

PART 2

Distribution of the Waters of The Ravi

6. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 20 and to the payment by Pakistan, by due date, of the amounts to be specified under the provisions of Paragraph 48, India agrees to continue the supply of water to the C.B.D.C., during the Transition Period, in accordance with the provisions of Paragraphs 7 to 19. The balance of the waters of The Ravi, after India has made the deliveries specified in these Paragraphs or the releases specified in Paragraph 20, shall be available for unrestricted use by India.
7. India will deliver supplies to the C.B.D.C. throughout rabi and during April 1-10 and September 21-30 in kharif (dates as at the points of delivery, no time-lag being allowed from Madhopur to these points), at the points noted in Column (3) of Table A below, according to indents to be placed by Pakistan, up to the maximum quantity noted against each point in Column (4) of Table A:

8. (a) The supply available in the Ravi Main, at Madhopur above, after deducting the actual withdrawal (the deduction being limited to a maximum of 120 cusecs during April 1-10 and September 21-30 and to nil cusecs during rabi) for the Kashmir (Basantpur) Canal, will be taken as the ‘gross supply available’: Provided that any withdrawal from The Ravi upstream of Madhopur by a new canal constructed after the Effective Date with a capacity of more than 10 cusecs will be accounted for in working out the supply available in the Ravi Main at Madhopur Above.

(b) From the ‘gross supply available’ as determined in (a) above, the escapages, if any, from the Upper Bari Doab Canal into The Ravi will be deducted to get the ‘net supply available’. India will use its best endeavours to limit these escapages to the minimum necessary for operational requirements.

(c) The ‘net supply available’ as determined in (b) above, limited to a daily ceiling of 6,800 cusecs during April 1-10 and 21st September to 15th October and of 5,770 cusecs during 16th October to 31st March, will be taken as the ‘distributable supply’.

9. If the ‘distributable supply’ falls below 6,800 cusecs during April 1-10 or 21st September to 15th October, the aggregate deliveries to the C.B.D.C. may be reduced to 34.7 per cent of the ‘distributable supply’. If the ‘distributable supply’ falls below 5,770 cusecs during 16th October to 31st March, the aggregate deliveries to the C.B.D.C. may be reduced to 41 per cent of the distributable supply.

10. If in any year after the Rasul-Qadirabad and the Qadirabad-Balloki Links are ready to operate, the average discharge for a period of five consecutive days during 21st February to 6th April in the Jhelum Main at Rasul above (including the supply in the tail-race of the Rasul hydro-electric plant) exceeds 20,000 cusecs and the daily discharge is not less than 17,000 cusecs on any of these five days, India may, from a date four days after the expiry of the said period of five days, discontinue deliveries to the C.B.D.C. from that date until 10th April in that year: Provided that, if India should decide to exercise this option, India shall notify Pakistan telegraphically three days in advance of the date proposed for the discontinuance of deliveries.

11. As soon as the supplies specified in Paragraph 66 are available for reduction of deliveries by India during September 21-30 and rabi, the Commissioners will meet and agree upon suitable modifications in the provisions of this Part of this Annexure. In case the Commissioners are unable to agree, the difference shall be dealt with by a Neutral Expert in accordance with the provisions of Annexure F.

12. A rotational programme will be followed for the distribution of supplies during 16th October to 31st March; it will be extended, if necessary, for the distribution of supplies during 21st September to 15 October and April 1-10. This programme will be framed and, if necessary, modified by the Chief Engineer, Punjab, India, in such manner as will enable the C.B.D.C. to get the due percentage of the ‘distributable supply’ during each of the following Water-accounting Periods:

(i) 21st September to 15th October.
(ii) 16th October to 2nd December (rabi sowing period).
(iii) 3rd December to 12th February (rabi growing period).
(iv) 13th February to 31st March (rabi maturing period).
(v) April 1-10.

In framing, operating and, if necessary, modifying the rotational programme, the Chief Engineer, Punjab, will make every effort to see that, within each of the Water-accounting Periods specified above, the supplies delivered to the C.B.D.C. are spread out over the period as fairly as the prevailing circumstances permit.
13. The Chief Engineer, West Pakistan, will communicate to the Chief Engineer, Punjab (India) by 31st August each year, his suggestions, if any, for framing the next rotational programme and the Chief Engineer, Punjab, in framing that programme, will give due consideration to these suggestions. Copies of the programme shall be supplied by the Chief Engineer, Punjab, to the Chief Engineer, West Pakistan, and to the Commissioners, as early as possible but no later than 30th September each year. Copies of the modified programme shall similarly be supplied as soon as possible after the modifications have been made and the Chief Engineer, West Pakistan, and the Commissioners will be kept informed of the circumstances under which the modifications are made.

14. Neither Party shall have any claim for restitution of water not used by it when available to it.

15. India will give Pakistan adequate prior notice of any closures at the head of the Upper Bari Doab Canal during the period 21st September to 10th April. If, however, on account of any operational emergency, India finds it necessary to suddenly close the Upper Bari Doab Canal at head, or any channel specified in Table A, India will notify Pakistan telegraphically.

16. No claim whatsoever shall lie against India for any interruption of supply to the C.B.D.C. due to a closure of the Upper Bari Doab Canal at head, or of any channel specified in Table A, if such closure is considered necessary by India in the interest of the safety or the maintenance of the Upper Bari Doab Canal system.

17. India will use its best endeavours not to pass into any of the channels listed as items 1, 2 and 6 of Table A, any supplies in excess of 110 per cent of the corresponding figure given in Column (4) (if that Table. Any supplies passed into any of the aforesaid channels in excess of 105 per cent of the corresponding figure given at Column (4) of Table A will not be taken into account in drawing up the water-account. If however the indent of any channel is less than the corresponding figure given in Column (4) of Table A, the supplies passed into that channel up to 110 per cent of the indent will be taken into account in drawing up the water-account.

18. If, because of unavoidable circumstances arising out of the inherent difficulties in the operation of the Upper Bari Doab Canal (U.B.D.C.) system, deliveries to C.B.D.C. are temporarily reduced below the amounts indented or due (whichever amounts are less), no claim for financial compensation shall lie against India on this account. India will make every effort to bring about at the earliest possible opportunity a resumption of deliveries to C.B.D.C. up to the amounts indented or due (whichever amounts are less.)

19. The delivery into each of the channels specified in Table A will be regulated by India in accordance with the discharge table current for that channel on the Effective Date until that table is revised, if necessary, on the basis of
(i) any discharge observation made by India whenever it may consider necessary to do so, but not more often than once in two months; or
(ii) any joint discharge observation by India and Pakistan which may be undertaken at the request of either Commissioner, but not more often than once in three months; the observation shall be made within a fortnight of the receipt of the request.

India will supply to Pakistan, for each channel specified in Table A, a copy of the discharge table current on the Effective Date and of any revised discharge table prepared thereafter in accordance with (i) or (ii) above.

20. Pakistan shall have the option to request India to discontinue the deliveries to C.B.D.C. at the points specified in Table A and to release instead equal supplies (that is, those due under the provisions of Paragraphs 7 to 11) into the Ravi Main below Madhopur. This option may be exercised, effective 1st April in any year, by written notification delivered to India before 30th September preceding. On receipt of such notification, India shall comply with Pakistan’s request and thereupon India shall have no obligation to make deliveries to C.B.D.C. at the points specified in Table A during the remaining part of the Transition Period, but will use its best endeavours to ensure that no abstraction is made by India below Madhopur from the supplies so released.

Distribution of the Waters of The Sutlej and The Beas in Kharif during Phase 1

21. Except as provided in Paragraphs 22, 23, 24 and 27, India agrees to limit its withdrawals during Phase I at Bhakra, Nangal, Rupar, Harike and Ferozepore (including abstractions for storage by the Bhakra Dam and for the ponds at Nangal and Harike) and by the Bachherewah Grey Canal from the flow waters (as distinct from stored waters) present in the Sutlej Main and from the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’, in each Water-accounting Period, to the equivalent of the following:

(a) 10,250 cusecs from April 1-10 to July 1-10; 12,000 cusecs from July 11-20 to August 21-31 and 10,500 cusecs during September 1-10 to 21-30 from the Sutlej Main, as at Rupar; plus
(b) 3,500 cusecs during April 1-10 to 21-30; 4,500 cusecs during May 1-10 to 21-31 and 5,500 cusecs from June 1-10 to September 21-30, as at Ferozepore, from the ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ and the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’, taken together. Provided that this withdrawal shall not exceed the sum of the ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ and 16 per cent of the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore.’
22. In addition to the withdrawals under Paragraph 21, India may make further withdrawals, in each Water-accounting Period, equivalent to the amount related to Pakistan’s ability to replace. This amount shall be determined as follows:

(a) For each Water-accounting Period, the ‘average discharge at Merala Above’ shall first be worked out as follows:

<table>

(ii) The average of the daily figures, limited in accordance with (1) above, will be taken as the ‘average discharge at Merala Above’, for the water accounting.

When the ‘average discharge at Merala Above’ is equal to the Floor Discharge shown in Column (2) of Table B, the ‘gross amount’, as at Ferozepore, shall be zero. When the average discharge at Merala Above equals or exceeds the Ceiling Discharge shown in Column (3) of Table B, the ‘gross amount’, as at Ferozepore, shall be the amount shown in Column (4) of Table B. For an ‘average discharge at Merala Above’ between those shown in Columns (2) and (3) of Table B, the ‘gross amount’, as at Ferozepore, shall be the proportional intermediate amount:

to zero, then for the succeeding April 11-20 the figures for Columns (2), (3) and (4) of Table B will be taken as 12,000, 23,400 and 8,600 respectively; no change will be made for calculating the ‘gross amount’ in any subsequent Water-accounting Period in that year, but if, in addition to the conditions already stated for April 1-10, the ‘average discharge at Merala Above’, during April 11-20, equals 12,000 cusecs, then for the succeeding April 21-30 the figures for Columns (2), (3) and (4) of Table B will be taken as 12,100, 23,500 and 8,600 respectively; no change will be made for calculating the ‘gross amount’ in any subsequent Water-accounting Period in that year;

(ii) if during March 21-31 in any year, the average discharge at Merala Above (obtained by limiting the daily values to a maximum of 27,000 cusecs) exceeds 22,000 cusecs, then for the succeeding April 1-10 the figures for Columns (2), (3) and (4) of Table B will be taken as 11,100, 26,700 and 12,900 respectively; no change will be made for any subsequent Water-accounting Period in that year; and

(iii) if, during any Water-accounting period from April 1-10 to September 21-30, the Upper Chenab Canal (U.C.C.) and M.R. Link are both closed at head (any day, on which some supplies are passed into U.C.C. in order that the head across the U.C.C. Head Regulator should not exceed 17 feet, being treated as a day of closure), on account of the discharge on any day in the Jammu Tawi having exceeded 30,000 cusecs, or on account of the discharge at Merala Above on any day having exceeded 200,000 cusecs, the ‘gross amount’, as at Ferozepore, will be worked out as follows

For each of the days for which both U.C.C. and M.R. Link remain closed at head, the ‘gross amount’, as at Ferozepore, shall be taken as 108 per cent of Q during April 1-10 to August 21-31 and 100 per cent of Q during September 1-10 to 21-30, where Q equals 67 per cent of the corresponding actual river supply at Balloki Above (allowing three-day time-lag from Merala to Balloki) minus 300 cusecs; Q being limited to 8,000 cusecs during April 1-10, to 11,000 cusecs during April 11-20, to 13,000 cusecs during April 21-30, and to 15,000 cusecs from May 1-10 to September 21-30. For the remaining days in the Water-accounting Period, the ‘gross amount’ shall be worked out on the basis of the average of the daily discharges at Merala Above for those days, the daily discharges being limited, where necessary, in accordance with (a) (i) above. The ‘gross amount’, for the Water-accounting Period taken as a whole, will be taken as equal to the sum of the ‘gross amount’ for each of the days of closure plus the ‘gross amount’ for the remaining days of the Water-accounting Period multiplied by the corresponding number of days, the aggregate being divided by the total number of days in the Water accounting Period.

Pakistan will notify India about any such closure by telegram stating therein the discharge of Jammu Tawi, the discharge at Merala Above and the discharge of U.C.C. at head, and will continue to supply similar information daily by telegram till the U.C.C. and M.R. Link are re-opened.

(c) The ‘gross amount’, as at Ferozepore, as determined under (b) above, will then be multiplied by the corresponding factor in Column (5) of Table B to obtain the amount of further withdrawals by India, as at Ferozepore.

23. During September 11-20 and September 21-30, an adjustment shall be made in the withdrawals which India may make under the provisions of Paragraphs 21 and 22 by adding the actual gains in the Sutlej Main from Ferozepore to Islam to the value determined under the provisions of Paragraphs 21 and 22 and deducting from the resulting total 3,400 cusecs during September 11-20 and 2,900 cusecs during September 21-30.

24. If, in any Water-accounting Period, the sum of W and (ii) below exceeds 35,000 cusecs during April 1-10 to August 21-31, or 30,000 cusecs during September, then India may make further withdrawals, as at Ferozepore, from the flow waters of the Sutlej and the Beas to the extent of the excess over 35,000 cusecs or 30,000 cusecs, as the case may be.

(i) The supply available from the ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ and from the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’ less the withdrawals due to be made by India under the provisions of Paragraphs 21 (b), 22 and 23.

(ii) The appropriate ‘gross amount’, as at Ferozepore, determined in accordance with Paragraph 22 (b).

25. After allowing for the withdrawals by India under the provisions of Paragraphs 21(b), 22, 23 and 24, the balance of the ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ and of the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’ shall be delivered at Ferozepore for use by the Pakistan Sutlej Valley Canals.

26. Pakistan undertakes that, between 1st April and 30th June, and between 11th and 30th September, when the flow at Meral above on any day is less than the appropriate Ceiling Discharge shown in Column (3) of Table B, it will not allow surplus water to escape below Khanki or below Balloki (except in circumstances arising out of an operational emergency or out of inherent difficulties in the operation of the system of works) and will cause such surplus waters to be transferred to Suleimanke. If, however, there should be spill at Khanki or at Balloki because of the aforesaid circumstances, Pakistan will immediately inform India of the reasons for such spill and take steps to discontinue the spill as soon as possible.

27. If the aggregate of (i) and (ii) below does not exceed 35,000 cusecs during any Water-accounting Period from April 1-10 to June 21-30, or 30,006 cusecs during September 11-20 or 21-30, and if Pakistan expects at any time during any of these Water accounting Periods, that on one or more days it would be unable to use in its Sutlej Valley Canals the supplies likely to be available to it under the provisions of Paragraph 25 and the probable transfers under Paragraph 26, and that there is, therefore, a likelihood of escapage below Islam, Pakistan agrees that it will give such timely information to India as will enable India to make such additional withdrawals at or above Ferozepore on the day or days to be specified as will reduce the escapage below Islam to a minimum.

(i) The likely delivery to Pakistan at Ferozepore under the provisions of Paragraph 25.
(ii) The probable appropriate ‘gross amount’ as at Ferozepore, determined in accordance with Paragraph 22(b).

Provided that the above provisions shall not apply during any Water-accounting Period in which (i) above is zero.

28. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 64 and to the payment by Pakistan, by due date, of the amounts to be specified under the provisions of Paragraph 49, India agrees to deliver into the Dipalpur Canal at Ferozepore, during each Water-accounting Period, such part of the supplies due to be released by India under the provisions of Paragraph 25, as Pakistan may request, limited to a maximum of 6,950 cusecs: Provided that no claim shall lie against India if, because of circumstances arising out of the inherent difficulties in feeding the Dipalpur Canal, the supply delivered into the Dipalpur Canal should at any time fall below the supply requested by Pakistan to be fed into this Canal out of the total supplies due to be released by India at Ferozepore.

Distribution of the Waters of The Sutlej and The Beas in Kharif During Phase II

29. Subject to the provisions of Paragraphs 30 and 31 below, India agrees to deliver at Ferozepore for use by the Pakistan Sutlej Valley Canals the following minimum supplies during Phase II:

(a) In each Water-accounting Period during April 1-30:
74 per cent of the amount calculated for delivery at Ferozepore under the provisions of Paragraph 25 minus 21 per cent of the ‘gross amount’ determined in accordance with Paragraph 22(b): Provided that, during April 1-10 in any year, if the discharge at Trimmu Above is less than 8,500 cusecs, the delivery during April 1-10 in that year shall be the same as under the provisions of Paragraph 25.

(b) In each Water-accounting Period during May 1-31:
71 per cent of the amount calculated for delivery at Ferozepore under the provisions of Paragraph 25 minus 24 per cent of the ‘gross amount’ determined in accordance with Paragraph 22(b).

(c) In each Water-accounting Period during June 1-30:
58 per cent of the amount calculated for delivery at Ferozepore under the provisions of Paragraph 25 minus 36 per cent of the ‘gross amount’ determined in accordance with Paragraph 22(b).
(d) July 1-10 : 3,000 cusecs.
(e) July 11-20 to August 21-31 - 4,000 cusecs.
(f) September 1-10 : 3,000 cusecs.
(g) September 11-20 and 21-30 :

As under the provisions of Part 3 of this Annexure reduced by the following:

66 per cent of the amount by which the discharge at Trimmu Above (corrected for actual gains and losses between Trimmu and Panjnad, allowing a time-lag of three days from Trimmu to Panjnad) exceeds the smaller of the following two quantities:

(i) the sum of the actual withdrawals by the Panjnad and Haveli canals; and
(ii) 19,600 cusecs:

Provided that the gains from Trimmu to Panjnad shall be deemed to be limited to the actual withdrawals at Panjnad and provided further that the reduction, as thus calculated, shall be limited to a daily maximum of 7,000 cusecs and shall not exceed one-third of the sum of the supply which would have been delivered at Ferozepore under the provisions of Paragraph 25 and the 'gross amount' determined in accordance with paragraph 22(b).

30. As soon as the Rasul-Qadirabad and the Qadirabad - Balloki Links are ready to operate, the deliveries at Ferozepore for use by the Pakistan Sutlej Valley Canals, as specified in Paragraph 29, may be reduced

(a) in each Water-accounting Period during April 1-10 to June 21-30, by (AX-AB) cusees limited to (AY) cusees where

X = the actual discharge at Rasul Above (including the supply in the tail-race of the Rasul hydro-electric plant),

Y = difference between 18,400 cusecs (limited during April 1-10 to 21-30 to the 'gross amount' as at Ferozepore corresponding to the Ceiling Discharge in Table B, read with provisos (i) and (ii) of Paragraph 22(b) and the actual gross amount worked out under Paragraph 22(b),

A = a factor equal to 0.60 from April 1-10 to May 1-10, 0.65 for May 11-20, and 0.70 from May 21-31 to June 21-30, and
B = 24,000 cusecs from April 1-10 to 21-30, 32,000 cusecs from May 1-10 to 21-31 and 40,500 cusecs from June 1-10 to 21-30; and
(b) during July 1-10 and 11-20, by 1000 cusecs.

31. As soon as the supplies specified in Paragraph 66 are available for reduction of deliveries by India during September, the Commissioners will meet and agree upon modifications in the September 11-20 and 21-30. In case the Commissioners are unable to agree, the difference shall be dealt with by a Neutral Expert in accordance with the provisions of Annexure F.

32. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 64 and to the payment by Pakistan, by due date, of the amounts to be specified under the provisions of Paragraph 49, India will arrange to deliver into the Dipalpur Canal at Ferozepore, during each Water-accounting Period, such part of the supplies due to be released for Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraphs 29, 30 and 31 as Pakistan may request, limited to a maximum of 6,950 cusecs: Provided that no claim shall lie against India if, because of circumstances arising out of the inherent difficulties in feeding the Dipaipur Canal, the supply delivered into the Dipalpur Canal should at any time fall below the supply requested by Pakistan to be fed into this canal out of the total supplies due to be released by India at Ferozepore.

33. Subject to the provisions of Paragraphs 29 to 32, and Paragraph 57, there shall be no restriction on the use by India of the waters of The Sutlej and The Beas in kharif during Phase II.

PART 5

Distribution of the Waters of The Sutlej and The Beas in Rabi

34. Subject to the provisions of Paragraphs 35 to 38, during the Transition Period India agrees to deliver at Ferozepore for use by the Pakistan Sutlej Valley Canals, the following minimum supplies during rabi

(a) October 1-10 and October 11-15: (i) 84 per cent of the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’ plus (ii) 1,670 cusecs minus (iii) the actual gains from Ferozepore to Islam.

(b) October 16-20: (i) 79 per cent of the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’ plus (ii) 960 cusecs minus (iii) the actual gains from Ferozepore to Islam.
(c) October 21-31
(i) 79 per cent of the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’ plus
(ii) 640 cusecs minus (iii) the actual gains from Ferozepore to Islam.

(d) November 1-10:
(i) 79 per cent of the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’ plus
(ii) 570 cusecs minus (iii) the actual gains from Ferozepore to Islam.

(e) In each Water-accounting period from November 11-20
35. When the flow at Trimmu Above, during March 1-10, 11-20 and 21-31 in any year, exceeds the smaller of the following two quantities:

(i) the supplies required at Trimmu above to meet the withdrawals of the Haveli and Panjnad Canals (after allowing a time-lag of five days from Trimmu to Panjnad), and

(ii) 7,500 cusecs during Phase I or 10,000 cusecs during Phase II, the deliveries specified in Paragraph 34(e) may be reduced, during March 1-10, 11-20 and 21-31 in that year, by amounts related to Pakistan’s ability to replace. For March 1-10, 11-20 and 21-31, these amounts shall be taken as equal to 60 per cent of the ‘gross amount’ determined as follows:

When the sum of (a) the average discharge at Merala Above (obtained by limiting the daily values to a maximum of 25,000 cusecs during March 1-10, a maximum of 26,000 cusecs during March 11-20 and a maximum of 27,000 cusecs during March 21-31) and (b) the Ravi Component at Balloki Above (total supply at Balloki minus the delivery at U.C.C. tail minus the delivery at M.R. Link outfall minus the delivery into the Ravi Main through B.R.B.D. escapes, the result being limited to a minimum of zero) is less than or equal to the Floor Discharge shown in Column (2) of Table C below, the ‘gross amount’, as at Ferozepore, shall be zero. When this sum equals or exceeds the Ceiling Discharge shown in Column (3) of Table C, the ‘gross amount’, as at Ferozepore, shall be the amount shown in Column (4) of Table C. When the sum is between the values shown in the said Columns (2) and (3), the ‘gross amount’, as at Ferozepore, shall be the proportional intermediate amount.

36. If, during any Water-accounting Period, the aggregate of (i), (ii) and (iii) below exceeds 25,000 cusecs during October 1-10 and 11-15 or 10,000 cusecs from October 16-20 to March 21-31, the deliveries due to be made under the provisions of Paragraphs 34 and 35 may be reduced by the amount of such excess over 25,000 cusecs or 10,000 cusecs, as the case may be.

- (i) Deliveries due to Pakistan at Ferozepore under the Provisions of Paragraphs 34 and 35.
- (ii) During March only, 60 per cent of the appropriate ‘gross amount’, as worked out under Paragraph 35.
- (iii) During October 1-10 to November 1-10 only, the actual gains from Ferozepore to Islam, or, under the circumstances specified in paragraph 62 the estimated gains agreed upon between the Commissioners.

37. In Phase II, during March, the deliveries to Pakistan, under the provisions of Paragraphs 34 to 36, may on any day be reduced by 60 per cent of the amount by which the discharge of Trimmu Above two days earlier exceeds 10,000 cusecs, but the reduction on this account shall not exceed 12 per cent of the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’.

38. As soon as the supplies specified in Paragraph 66 are available for reduction of deliveries by India during rabi, the Commissioners will meet and agree upon modifications in the deliveries to be made by India at Ferozepore during rabi. In case the Commissioners are unable to agree, the difference shall be dealt with by a Neutral Expert in accordance with the provisions of Annexure F.

39. Subject to the Provision of Paragraph 64 and to the payment by Pakistan, by due date, of the amounts to be specified under the provisions of Paragraph 49, India agrees to deliver into the Dipalpur Canal at Ferozepore, during October
1-10 and 11-15 in each year, such part of the supplies due to be released for Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraphs 34 to 38 as Pakistan may request, limited to a maximum of 6,950 cusecs: Provided that no claim shall lie against India if, because of circumstances arising out of the inherent difficulties in feeding the Dipalpur Canal, the supply delivered into the Dipalpur Canal should at any time fall below the supply requested by Pakistan to be fed into this canal out of the total supplies due to be released by India at Ferozepore.

40. Subject to the provisions of Paragraphs 34 to 38 and Paragraph 57, there shall be no restriction on the use by India of the waters of The Sutlej and The Beas during rabi.

Part 6- water-Accounts at Ferozepore

41. An account of the distribution of waters, as at Ferozepore, under the provisions of Parts 3, 4 and 5 of this Annexure will be maintained by each Commissioner in accordance with the provisions of Paragraphs 42-46, and appropriate Forms will be used both for Phase I and Phase II in order to facilitate, and to provide a record of, the distribution of waters in accordance with the provisions of this Annexure. Such Forms for Phase I are set out in Appendix II to this Annexure. Appropriate Forms for Phase II will be prepared by the the Commission. The Forms (both for Phase I and Phase II), may, from time to time, be modified or added to by the Commission, but only to the extent that the Commission finds it necessary to do so in order to further facilitate, and to maintain an appropriate record of, the distribution of waters in accordance with the provisions of this Annexure. In the absence of agreement in the Commission, the question shall be referred to a Neutral Expert for decision in accordance with the provisions of Annexure F.

42. Each calendar month will be divided into three Water-accounting periods, viz., 1st to 10th, 11th to 20th and 21st to the last day of the month, except the month of October which will be divided into four Water-Accounting Periods, viz., 1st to 10th, 11th to 15th, 16th to 20th and 21st to 31st.

43. For each Water-accounting Period, the river supplies or withdrawals or deliveries at any point will, unless otherwise specified in this Annexure, be taken as the average values to the daily figures for the days included in or corresponding to that Water-accounting Period.

44. The Water-accounts for the period April 1-10 to July 1-10 (Ferozepore dates) will be prepared with due allowance for time-lag as set out in Appendix I to this Annexure.

45.(a) The ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ during each water-accounting Period from April 1-10 to September 21-30 and the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’ during each Water-accounting Period from April 1-10 to March 21-31 shall be worked out in accordance with Appendix I to this Annexure.

(b) During the Water-accounting Periods from September 11-20 to November 1-10 the gains and losses in the reach from Ferozepore to Islam shall be taken as the actual gains or losses calculated without allowance for time-lag.

(c) A conveyance loss of 6 per cent from the head of the Madhopur Beas Link to the junction of the Chakki Torrent with the Beas Main shall be adopted until revised, at the request of either Commissioner, as follows:

(i) The figure may be revised by agreement between the Commissioners, either after a study of available data and general considerations or after an analysis of discharge observations to be carried out jointly by the Commissioners, at the request of either Commissioner, or

(ii) if the Commissioners are unable to agree on a suitable figure (or figures) for the conveyance losses, the matter may be referred to a Neutral Expert for decision in accordance with the provisions of Annexure F.

(d) The procedure for working out the equivalents, at Mandi Plain, of any withdrawals from the Beas Main by any new canal constructed after the Effective Date, with a capacity of more than 10 cusecs, or of any abstractions from the flow waters by, or releases of stored waters, any reservoir on The Beas will be determined by the Commission at the appropriate time.

(e) An allowance for run-out (Nikal) shall be made in the water-account in respect of the waters passed into the Beas by the M.B. Link (including escapages from the U.B.D.C. into) the Beas). This allowance shall equal the volume of water passed by the Link (including escapages from U.B.D.C.) into The Beas on the last two days of the operation of the Link during the period from 1st September to 15th October and it shall be accounted for at Mandi Plain during the Ten days following the closure of the Link:

Provided that this allowance shall be made only once and if the Link is re-opened thereafter, on further allowance on the account shall be made.

46. Every effort will be made by India to balance the Water-account of Ferozepore for each of the Water-accounting Periods, but any excess or deficit in deliveries, due to Pakistan, in any Water-accounting Period, under the Provisions of this Annexure, that may arise out of the Inherent difficulties in determining these deliveries shall be carried over to the next Water-accounting period for adjustment: Provided that:

(a) If, in any Water-accounting Period during Phase I the sum of (i), (ii) below exceeds 35,000 cusecs during April 1-10 to August 21-31, 30,000 cusecs during September 1-10 to 21-30, 25,000 cusecs during October 1-10 or 11-15, or 10,000 cusecs during October 16-20 to March 21-31, then there will be no carry-over from any such period to the next period.

(i) The supply at Ferozepore Below (including withdrawals by the Dipalpur Canal, if any).

(ii) During March 1-10 to September 21-30, the appropriate ‘gross amount’, as at Ferozepore, determined in accordance with paragraph 22(b) or Paragraph 35.

(iii) During September 11-20 to November 1-10, the actual gains and losses from Ferozepore to Islam, losses being treated as negative gains; or, under the circumstances specified in Paragraph 62, the estimated gains agreed upon between the Commissioners.

(b) If, in any Water-accounting Period, the indents of the Indian Canals at Ferozepore and Harike have been fully met and there is an excess delivery to Pakistan at Ferozepore, than such excess shall not be carried forward to the next period.

(c) In each year, the water-account shall be finally closed at the end of the Water-accounting Period March 21-31 and any excess or deficit in the water-account, at the end of that period, shall not carried over to the succeeding Water-accounting Period, viz., April 1-10.

(d) If, during phase I, in any Water-accounting Period from April 1-10 to June 21-30, the withdrawals computed as due to India under the Provisions of Para under the provisions of Paragraphs 21(b), 22, 23, and 24 exceed the supply available to India from the ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ and from the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’ taken together, then, in the Water-account only 50 per cent of such excess shall be carried over for use by India.

(e) If, during Phase II, in any Water-accounting period from April 1-10 to June 21-30, the withdrawals computed as due to India from the ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ and from the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’ after allowing for the deliveries due to Pakistan at Ferozepore under the Provisions of India from the ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ and from the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’, then such excess shall be treated separately and accounted for as below :-

(i) The excess may be carried over for adjustment to the succeeding Water-accounting Period and, where necessary, to the next succeeding Water-accounting period, but shall be deemed to have lapsed if not adjusted by then.

(ii) The cumulative excess carried over shall not exceed 2,000 susecs from April 1-10 to May 21-31 and 3,000 cusecs during June 1-10 to 21-30.

(iii) In no case shall the excess be carried over beyond June 21-30.

47. As soon as possible after the end of each Water-accounting Period, each Commissioner will intimate to the other, by telegram, the excess or deficit carried over to the next Water-accounting Period. On receipt of this information, either Commissioner may, if he considers it necessary, ask for an exchange of the relevant water accounts.

Part 7-Financial Provisions

48. For each year for which Pakistan has not exercised the option under the provisions of Paragraph 20:

(a) India will by 1st February preceding, communicate to Pakistan, in writing the estimated proportionate working expenses payable by Pakistan for the Madhopur Headworks and the carrier channels calculated in accordance with Appendix III to this Annexure; and

(b) Pakistan will pay to the Reserve Bank of India, New Delhi, for the credit of the Government of India, before 1st April of that year, the amount intimated by India.

49. For each year for which Pakistan has not exercised the option under the provisions of Paragraph 64:

(a) India will, by 1st February preceding, communicate to Pakistan, in writing, the estimated proportionate working expenses payable by Pakistan for the Ferozepore Headworks (including the part of the Dipalpur Canal in India) calculated in accordance with Appendix IV to this Annexure; and

(b) Pakistan will pay to the Reserve Bank of India, New Delhi, for the credit of the Government of India, before 1st April of that year, the amount intimated by India.

50. As soon as the figures of actual audited expenditures on the Mahopur Headworks and the carrier channels and on the Ferozepore Headworks for each year are supplied by the Accountant General, Punjab (India), but not later than one year after the end of the year to which the expenditure relates, India will communicate to Pakistan, in writing, the actual expenditure corresponding to the estimated proportionate working expenses paid by Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 48(b) and 49(b). If the actual proportionate expenditure is less than the amount paid by Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraphs 48(b) and 49(b), India shall, within one month, refund the difference to Pakistan and if the actual proportionate expenditure is more than the amount paid, Pakistan shall, within one month, make and additional payment to India to cover the difference.

51. The payments by Pakistan to India under the provisions of Paragraph 48, 49 and 50 and the refund by India under the provisions of Paragraph 50 shall be made without any set off against any other financial transaction between the Parties.

Part 8-Extension of Transition Period

52. In the event that Pakistan is of the opinion that the replacement referred to in Article IV (1) cannot be effected unless the Transition Period is extended beyond 31st March 1970, this period may be extended at the request of Pakistan

(a) by one, two or three years beyond 31st March 1970; or

(b) having been extended initially by one ear beyond 31st March 1970, then by one or two years beyond 31st March 1971; or

(c) having been extended initially by two years beyond 31st March 1970, or having been extended by one year beyond 31st March 1971 under (b) above, then by one more year beyond 31st March 1972.

53. A request by Pakistan for any extension under the provisions of Paragraph 52 shall by made to India by formal notice in writing, and any such notice shall specify the date up to which Pakistan requests an extension under the aforesaid provisions. On the receipt of such notice by India within the time-limit specified in Paragraph 54. The Transition Period shall be extended up to the date requested by Pakistan.

54. A formal notice under Paragraph 53 shall be given as early as possible and, in any event, in such manner as to reach India at least twelve months before the due date for the expiration of the Transition Period. Unless such a notice is received by India within this time-limit, the Transition Period shall expire on the due date without any right of extension or further extension: Provided however that the Transition Period shall be extended, within the provision of Paragraph 52, by an exceptional notice of request for an extension received by India not later than five months before the due date for expiration of the Transition Period if, within the twelve months prior to such due date heavy flood damage should have occurred which, in the opinion of Pakistan, cannot be repaired in time to operate the system of works as planned.

Part 9 General

55. India may continue to irrigate from the Eastern Rivers those areas which were so irrigated, as on the Effective Date, From The Sutlej, The Beas or The Ravi by means other then the canals taking off at madhopur, Nangal, Rupar, Harike and Ferozepore: Provided that

   (i) any withdrawals by the Shahnahr Canal in excess of 940 cusecs during any Water-accounting Period shall be accounted for in the estimation of the Beas Component at Ferozepore', and

   (ii) the capacity of the Shahnahr Canal shall not be increased beyond its actual capacity as on the Effective Date (about 1,000 cusecs).

If India should construct a barrage across the Beas Main below the head of the Shahnahr Canal or undertake such other works as would enable the Canal to increase its withdrawals by more than 50 cusecs over above those attained as on the Effective Date, the withdrawals during each Water-accounting Period in excess of the average withdrawals for each such period during the five years preceding the completion of the barrage or of such other works shall be accounted for in the estimation of the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’.

56. India agrees that, from 21st September to 31st March, it will not make any withdrawals for Agricultural Use by Government canals or by power pumps from the Ravi Main below madhopur, in excess of the withdrawals as on the Effective Date.

57. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 55, India agrees that it will not make any withdrawals withdrawals for Agricultural Use from the Sutlej Main below Ferozepore from the supplies delivered at Ferozepore for use by the Pakistan Sutlej Valley Canals.

58. India shall be entitled to utilize without restriction the waters stored by it (in accordance with the provisions of this Annexure) in any reservoir on the Eastern Rivers or in the ponds at Nangal or Harike.

59. Pakistan agrees that

   (i) it will have filled the ponds at Suleimanks and Islam by 10th September in each year to the maximum extent possible without causing the maximum working head across the weirs and the maximum pond levels to exceed the values given in Table D below:
Table D

(ii) after the river has fallen to a stage at stage at which the releases from the ponds will not result in a spill below Islam, it will lower the pond levels gradually to R.L. 565.5 at Suleimanke and R.L. 449.0 or lower if possible, at Islam, and complete the lowering, as far as possible, by 31st October, without spilling below Islam; and

(iii) it will use its best endeavours to fill the pond at Islam to R.L. 455.0 provided that this does not endanger the safety of the weir:

Provided that the above provisions in so far as they relate to the Islam Weir shall lapse on the date Pakistan discontinues the use of this weir. Instead, the pond at the new weir below Islam shall be filled by 10th September each year and lowered by 31st October in accordance with the above provisions, but the maximum working head in feet, the maximum pond level and the level to which the pond is to be lowered by 31st October shall be determined in accordance with the design of the new weir.

60. Pakistan agrees that it will not release any water below the barrage at Suleimanke between October and 10th November, except when the supply reaching Suleimanke on any day (including the delivery, if any, from B.S. link tail) is in excess of 6,000 cusecs, when the excess on that day over 4,000 cusecs may be released. If the supply reaching Islam falls below 350 cusecs, Pakistan may release supplies below Suleimanke provided that such releases shall be so regulated that the supply reaching Islam does not appreciably exceed 20 per cent of the sum of the withdrawals, at head, of the perennial Pakistan Sutlej Valley Canals.

61. Pakistan agrees that from 21st August to 15th September it will, except under unavoidable circumstances, run the B.S. Link with a discharge not less than 13,000 Cusecs, at head.

62. If, for any reason, Pakistan is unable to adhere to the Programme for filling and emptying the ponds at Suleimanke and Islam, as set out in Paragraph 59, the Commissioners will agree on an estimate of the gains which would have accrued in the reach from Ferozepore to Islam but for Pakistan’s inability to adhere to the aforesaid programme and these estimated gains will be used in the water-account instead of the actual gains or losses.
63. In the event of an emergency, leading to circumstances under which Pakistan is unable to fulfill the provisions of Paragraph 61, the actual gains or losses will be the water-account, and the Pakistan Commissioner will immediately inform the Indian Commissioner of the emergency and take steps to restore normal conditions as soon as possible.

64. Pakistan shall have the option to request India to discontinue the deliveries into the Dipalpur Canal. This option may be exercised effective 1st April in any year by written notification delivered to India before 30th September preceding On receipt of such notification, India will cease to have any obligation to make deliveries into the Dipalpur Canal During the remaining part of the Transition Period.

65. If, owing to heavy floods,

(i) damage should occur to any of the Link Canals (including Headworks) specified in Columns (1) below during the period specified for that particular Link Canal in Column (2) below and,

(ii) as a result of such damage, the ability of that Link Canal to transfer supplies should have been diminished to an extent causing serious interruption of supplies in irrigation canals dependent on that Link Canal, then the two Commissioners will promptly enter into consultations, with the good offices of the Bank, to work out the steps to be taken to restore the situation to normal and to work out such temporary modifications of the relevant provisions of this Annexure as may be agreed upon as appropriate and desirable, taking equitably into consideration the consequences of such modifications on the cultivators concerned both in India and in Pakistan. Any modifications agreed upon shall lapse on the terminal date specified in Column (2) below:

66. If, at any time before the end of the Transition period, the Bank is of the opinion that the part of the system of works referred to in Article IV (1) is ready to provide supplies during September 11-30 and rabi, over and above the replacements in these periods specifically provided for in Parts 2 to 5 of this Annexure, it shall so notify the parties. On receipt of such notification, Pakistan shall provide, towards a reduction of the deliveries by India during September 11-30 and rabi to the C.B.D.C. and at Ferozepore under the provisions of Parts 2 to 5 of this Annexure, the equivalent (at points of delivery) of 60 percent of the total supplies made available by the whole of the above-mentioned system of works: provided that, in computing the aforesaid total supplies, any contribution from the Indus and any supplies developed by tube-wells shall be excluded.

67. The provisions of this Annexure may be amended by agreement between the Commissioners. Any such amendment shall become effective when agreement thereto has been signified in an exchange of letters between the two Governments.

68. The actual withdrawals made by India and the actual deliveries made by India into the C.B.D.C. into the Dipalpur Canal and into the Sutlej Main at Ferozepore, during the period between the Effective Date and the date on which this Treaty enters into force, shall be deemed to be withdrawals and deliveries made in accordance with the provisions of this Annexure.

69. For the year commencing on 1st April 1960, (a) the communication by India of the amount of the estimated proportionate working expenses specified in Paragraphs 48 (a) and 49 (a) shall be made within one month of the date on which this Treaty enters into force and (b) the payment by Pakistan to India specified in Paragraphs 48 (b) with respect of that year shall be made by Pakistan within three months of the date on which this Treaty enters into force and the provisions of Paragraph 50 shall than apply.

70. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 28 and if the supplies due to be released for Pakistan at Ferozepore, during 1961 from April 1-10 to June 21-30, are less than the amounts set out in Column (2) below and Pakistan and Pakistan is unable to deliver into the Dipalpur Canal from the B.R.B.D Link during April, May or June amounts equal to the aggregate amounts specified for that month in Column (2) below, India will make additional deliveries into the Dipalpur Canal at Ferozepore to make up these aggregate amounts in such manner as to ensure that the canal is not closed for more than 10 days either in May or in June 1961.

For other periods and reaches unless otherwise specified in this Annexure, the dates will be taken to be the same as the dates at Ferozepore, with no allowance for time-lag.

B. Sutlej Component at Ferozepore corresponding to assumed releases of flow waters below Rupar
(i) The assumed releases of flow waters below Rupar shall be taken as equal to the Sutlej flow waters, as distinct from stored waters, which would have been released below Rupar if the aggregate of the net Indian withdrawals from these flow waters had been limited to the values specified in Paragraph 21 (a) of this Annexure.

(ii) For each of the Water-accounting Periods from April 1-10 to August 21-31 (Ferozepore dates) the values of the ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ corresponding to the assumed releases below Rupar shall be worked out from the following table:

For intermediate values of the assumed released below Rupar, in excess of 500 cusecs, the ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ will be worked out proportionately.

(iii) During September 1-10 to 21-30, the ‘Sutlej Component at Ferozepore’ shall be taken as equal to 090 S plus 400 cusecs, where S equals to assumed releases of flow water below Rupar (allowing three days time-lag between Ferozepore and Rupar).

C. Beas component at Ferozepore (X) corresponding to the sum (Y) of the Beas component at Mandi Plain and the discharge of the western Bein
For each Water-accounting Period the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’ (X) shall be working out by multiplying the sum (Y) of the Beas Component at Mandi Plain and the discharge of the Western Bein by the appropriate factor given in the following table:-

D.O. No.F.4(18)/62-I.
New Delhi, the 27th July, 1962

My dear Mian Sahib,

Kindly refer to Mr. M.A. Hamid’s d.o. letter No. WT(38/2)(35-A/PGIW, dated the 18th May 1962, regarding the construction of a barrage across the Jhelum Main.

2. It has been stated in your letter referred to above that, “Paragraph 8 of Annexure E deals with the figures of storage capacity specified in Paragraph 7 of the same Annexure which, in turn, does not provide for any flood storage capacity on the Jhelum Main, but merely refers to Paragraph 9 thereof, thus making the latter paragraph as the one to govern the construction of flood control works on the Jhelum Main”. I am afraid I do not agree with this view as Paragraph 8 is an independent paragraph: it is not a subsidiary paragraph to either Paragraph 7 or Paragraph 9, although it contains a reference to Paragraph 7.

3. As I stated in paragraph 2 of my letter of 24th March 1962, a barrage is proposed to be constructed across the Jehlum river with a view to divert the winter supply temporarily into the side channel and to return it to the river lower down, in order to make the reach below the barrage workable for a distance of about 13,100 feet for removal of the deposited sediment. The purpose of the barrage, therefore, is to maintain in proper condition that reach of the river which receives heavy sediment including large boulders. You will kindly appreciate that there could have been no mention of a barrage on the Jhelum Main in Paragraph 8(h) of annexure E, if, according to paragraph 3 of your letter referred to above, India was not entitled to construct a barrage on the Jhelum Main with an incidental storage not exceeding 10,000 acre-feet.

Assuring you of my best co-operation at all times and with best wishes,

Yours sincerely

Sd/- H.C. Kalra

D.O. NO.WT(38-a)/(609-A)/PCIW. 5th December, 1962.

My dear Kalra Sahib,

Kindly refer to your letter No. F.4(18)/62-IC dated the 27th July 1962 regarding the construction of a barrage across the Jhelum Main as a flood control work.

2. It appears that the views expressed in my letter No. WT(38/1)/(352-A)/PCIW dated the 18th May 1962 have been misunderstood. According to paragraph 8(h) of Annexure E to the Treaty the storage capacities mentioned in paragraph 7 of the said annexure are exclusive of the storage incidental to a barrage on the Jhelum Main, provided it does not exceed 10,000 acre feet. This only means that the storage incidental to a barrage not exceeding 10,000 acre feet on the Jhelum Main is not ruled out as far as paragraphs 7 and 8 of Annexure E are concerned. However, according to paragraph 9 of Annexure E the works to be constructed on the Jhelum Main, that may be considered necessary for the flood control of the Jhelum Main, are to be such that “any storage which may be effected by such works shall be confined to off-channel storage in side valleys, depressions or lakes and will not involve any storage in the Jhelum Main itself”. Thus, according to paragraph 9 of annexure E a barrage for flood control of the Jhelum Main, which involves any storage in the Jhelum Main itself, cannot be constructed.

Assuring you of my best cooperation at all times and with kind regards,
Yours sincerely,

Sd/- M.A.Hamid  S.Q.A.

2503. Letter from Indian Commissioner for Indus Waters to Pakistan Commissioner for Indus Waters.

New Delhi, March 12, 1963.

Government of India
Ministry of Irrigation & Power

H. C. Kalra
Commissioner for Indus Waters

My dear Sheikh Sabib,

Kindly refer to your d.o. letter No. WT (38/1)/(609-A)/FCIW dated 5th December 1962, regarding the construction of a barrage across the Jhelum Main.

2. As already stated in my d.o. letter No. F.4(18)/62-IC, dated 27th July 1962, Paragraph 8 of annexure E is an independent paragraph and is not a paragraph subsidiary to either Paragraph 7 or Paragraph 9. The reference to Paragraph 7 in Paragraph 8 is merely to clarify that the figures specified in Paragraph 7 shall be “exclusive of” the storages visualized in Paragraph 8. Paragraph 8, therefore, is not effected by the limitations indicated in Paragraph 7, whether for general storage capacity or for power storage capacity or for flood storage capacity. The flood storage capacity shown in Paragraph 7 against the Jhelum Main has been stated “as provided in Paragraph 9”. This only means that the storage mentioned in Paragraph 8(h) is over and above the storage “as provided in Paragraph 9” and is not restricted to the storage given in Paragraph 9.

Paragraph 7 of annexure E has to be read along with Paragraphs 8 and 9. So read, India is entitled to provide for storage upto 10,000 acre feet incidental to a barrage on the Jhelum Main and, in addition, for off-channel storage in side valleys, depressions or lakes. Paragraph 8(h) clearly contemplates the construction of a barrage on the Jhelum Main and the interpretation sought to be placed by you has the effect of rendering null and void the provisions of Paragraph 8(h).

In the light of the above, I regret I cannot agree with you that there is a restriction on the construction of barrage on the Jhelum Main with an incidental storage not exceeding 10,000 acre feet for whatever reasons this barrage may be required.

3. I would like to again add for your information that the purpose of the proposed barrage on the Jhelum Main, as stated in paragraph 3 of my d.o.
letter No. F.4(18)/62 IC dated 27th July, 1962, is to help maintain the natural channel of the river by removing deposits in the bed in the small length which is subject to choking by the detritus material including large boulders which roll down the steep hill torrents that join the Jhelum Main in that length.

Assuring you of my best co-operation at all times and with best wishes,

Yours sincerely

D.O. No. WT (38/1)/(811-A)PCIW 8th June, 1963

My dear Kalra Sahib,

Kindly refer to your letter No. F.4(18)/62-IC dated 12th March 1963 regarding the construction of a barrage across the Jhelum Main as a flood control work.

2. Paragraph 9 of annexure E to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960, which deals with the works considered necessary for flood control of Jhelum Main states in unambiguous terms that such works are not to ‘involve any storage in the Jhelum Main itself’. However, from your letter under reference, it appears that you are of the view that under the provisions of paragraph 8(h), India could construct a barrage on the Jhelum Main, for flood control of the Jhelum Main, provided the incidental storage did not exceed 10,000 Acre feet. If your view is correctly presented above I regret that I do not subscribe to it and the question will need to be taken up under the provisions of article IX of the Treaty.
3. It is not correct to say that my interpretation of paragraph 9 of Annexure E renders the provisions of paragraph 8(h) of the said annexure null and void. In this connection your kind attention is invited to paragraph 2 of my letter No. WT(36/1)(609-A)/PCIW dated the 5th December 1962. I had nowhere stated that a barrage for purposes other than ‘flood control of the Jhelum Main’ was also ruled out by the paragraph 9 of Annexure E.

4. Incidentally, the data communicated vide your letter No. 16(19)/61-IT dated the 24th March 1962 does not indicate the top levels of the gates of the barrage and the head-regulator. In the absence of the top level of the barrage gates I do not know the level to which the barrage could store the waters of the Jhelum. In any case the water level has to be higher than the crest of the head regulator so as to feed the diversion channel. Moreover, the data supplied by you indicate a vertical drop of 4.0 ft. at R.D. 11,200 of the Jhelum Main. I do not understand why such a fall has been shown when, as far as I know, none actually exists at site. The proposed barrage may also affect levels in the Wooler lake.

It is quite probable that the storage created by the barrage, when reworked out after taking into account the above points, may even exceed 10,000 Acre-feet.

5. You would also appreciate that even if a barrage with storage less than 10,000 Acre-feet, and for purposes other than flood control, was to be constructed on the Jhelum Main, the information regarding it would have to be communicated to Pakistan as provided for in paragraph 12 of Annexure E.

Assuring you of my best co-operation at all times and with kind regards.

Yours sincerely

New Delhi

No.F.1(2)P/63 15th April, 1964.

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, and has the honour to state that during the Tenth Meeting of the Permanent Indus Commission, held at Karachi from 25th to 31st March, 1963, the two Commissioners agreed that paragraph 45(c) of Annexure 'H' to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 be deleted and that appropriate action be taken, in this connection, towards an exchange of letters between the two Governments, as required under the provisions of Paragraph 67 of Annexure 'H' to the Treaty.

2. The High Commission accordingly signify through this Note the agreement of the Government of Pakistan to the amendment of Annexure 'H' by the deletion of the aforesaid Paragraph 45(c) of Annexure 'H' to the Treaty. This amendment shall become effective upon the receipt of a similar Note from the Government of India signifying their agreement to the amendment.

3. The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs the assurances of its highest consideration.

Your Excellency,

I have the honors to say that, during the Tenth Meeting of the Permanent Indus Commission, held at Karachi from 25th to 31st March, 1963, the two Commissioners agreed that Paragraph 45( C ) of Annexure H to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 be deleted and that appropriate action be taken, in this connection, towards an exchange of letters between the two Governments, as required under the provisions of Paragraph 67 of Annexure H to the Treaty.

2. The Government of India accordingly signify, through this letter, their agreement to the amendment of Annexure H by the deletion of the aforesaid Paragraph 45( C ) of Annexure H to the Treaty. This amendment shall become effective upon the receipt of a similar letter from the Government of Pakistan signifying their agreement to the amendment.

Accept, your Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

( C.S. Jha )
Commonwealth Secretary

H.E. Mr. M. Arshad Husain,
High Commissioner for Pakistan in India,
Sher Shah Road Mess, New Delhi.
My dear Commonwealth Secretary,

I called on the Pakistan Foreign Secretary this afternoon.

2. Mr. Ikramullah kept me with him for about 40 minutes. He was to exchange formally with the Swiss Charge d’Affairs the instruments of ratification of the Swiss - Pakistan treaty on Avoidance of Double Taxation at 1 p.m. and the Chief of Protocol dropped into his office twice to remind him that it was already a few minutes past the time and that everybody was waiting. Mr. Ikramullah however continued talking to me saying that I was an old friend from the Commerce Ministry and from London.

3. In the beginning Mr. Ikramullah talked of weather, particularly the unwholesome aspects of it in Dacca, his visit to Rawalpindi from where he had come the previous night, his wife’s miraculous escape from certain death and other time wasting topics of small consequence. He also asked me to apologise to Padmanaban for not being able to see him when he came to Foreign Office to say good bye a couple of days before his departure.

4. I then handed over to him your letter of the 7th of October (502 CS/60) regarding exchange of areas on the western border in adverse possession of the two countries. He said he was somewhat embarrassed at the date suggested, particularly in view of the commitment he had already made to his President. He told me that he had discussed the matter with you during your last visit and he got the impression that the actual exchange could commence a week after the introduction of the requisite Bills in the Parliament. To be on the safe side he had suggested that the end of November be fixed as the appointed date. He had mentioned this earlier to his President, who had agreed that in view of the legislative processes that would be constitutionally necessary in India, Pakistan should agree to the suggested postponement from the 15th of October to the 30th of November.

5. During his discussion with you in Murree you had stated that it would be prudent to fix 31st of December. Mr. Ikramullah said he then offered a compromise and suggested 15th December. You said you would write to him from Delhi but got the impression that there would be no difficulty in agreeing to this date. He therefore, went again to his President and got his approval to a second postponement to the 15th of December.

6. Mr. Ikramullah therefore asked me to write to you immediately and place his difficulties before you. He said that “Ayub was after all a dictator” and one could not go to him again and again on a matter of this kind. As it is, the President does not think much of civil servants and would be justifiably irritated with these changes. He might also get the impression that people on both sides were unnecessarily delaying the matter”.

7. I told him I had seen the draft Bills in Delhi and that they would be introduced in Parliament at its forthcoming session. This would be duly reported and every one in Pakistan would know that India was proceeding with the implementation of the agreement. Mr. Ikramullah said he appreciated this point but felt that he was still not sure that the President would not feel somewhat uneasy if he spoke to him again of a further formal postponement. He added on a personal basis that a fortnight here or there would hardly make any difference and that even if the agreed date of exchange were fixed at 15th of December and the legislative processes in India took a little longer, the people in Pakistan would not be perturbed if the actual exchange took place somewhat later. He was aware that no Government could say firmly that its Legislature would do something by a fixed date. The agreed date was therefore only an estimate. Mr. Ikramullah, therefore, asked me to request you to agree to the 15th of December.

8. I said I shall write to you and let him have your reply.

9. Having changed from weather to politics, Mr. Ikramullah continued to expostulate on his theories on Indo-Pakistan relations and his views on some pending issues. He talked of Mr. Jinnah and the Congress. He said that immediately after Partition, some people went to see the Quaid and told him that one Jinnah got them Pakistan but that even one hundred Jinnahs could not rehabilitate and develop Pakistan. After the deputationists had left, Mr. Jinnah told him (Mr. Ikramullah) that even one hundred Jinnahs could not have got Pakistan and that it was the narrow-mindedness of the Congress which was responsible for its creation. Mr. Ikramullah said that India could have “killed” Pakistan with kindness even after its establishment.

10. This led him to the issues still outstanding on the eastern border. He said he was prepared to let Assam have the five Patharia villages as well as Umapati provided that East Pakistan could have in return the Chhatak quarries.
East Pakistan was economically backward and had no indigenous raw materials for cement. Any kindness shown to East Pakistan, therefore, would be greatly appreciated. On the other hand, if India did not take a generous attitude, he, on his part, was going to be difficult. I said I was sorry to hear this, particularly as the position of Umapati was quite clear. If Pakistan raised this matter seriously, it would run counter to the entire approach and the intention of the two Governments in arriving at the border settlement at the October meetings. Mr. Ikramullah said that as far as he was concerned, there were two approaches. One was mutual accommodation and the second was legalistic attitudes. If he did not get the quarries, he would be legalistic on Umapati. He added that he had told Padmanabhan very clearly that he would not get the quarries; he would be legalistic on Umapati. He added that he had told Padmanabhan very clearly that he would not agree to a settlement of their claim over Umapati except as part of a deal involving the Chhatak quarries.

11. I could have pointed out to him the obvious contradictions in the stand taken by him. I did not however wish to conduct a disputation with him at my first meeting. Having made my point, therefore, I kept quiet and let the Chief of Protocol conduct him to the conference room, the Swiss Charge d'affairs and the press photographers.

12. I was somewhat disappointed at this approach at his first meeting with me despite his personal affability. I had known him in Delhi when he was Joint Secretary in the Ministry of Commerce before Partition and I was Deputy Secretary. At that time, he and his wife were busy achieving Pakistan for Mr. Jinnah. But I thought the passage of time might have sobered him.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

2507. Note from the Pakistan High Commission in India to the Ministry of External Affairs.
New Delhi, April 15, 1964.
Office of the High Commissioner for Pakistan in India
New Delhi

No.F.1(2)P/63 15th April, 1964

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, and has the honour to state that during the Tenth Meeting of the Permanent Indus Commission, held at Karachi from 25th to 31st March, 1963, the two Commissioners agreed that paragraph 45(c) of Annexure ‘H’ to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 be deleted and that appropriate action be taken, in this connection, towards an exchange of letter between the two Governments, as required under the provisions of Paragraph 67 of Annexure ‘H’ to the Treaty.

2. The High Commission accordingly signify through this Note the agreement of the Government of Pakistan to the amendment of Annexure ‘H’ by the deletion of the aforesaid Paragraph 45(c) of Annexure ‘H’ to the Treaty. This amendment shall become effective upon the receipt of a similar Note from the Government of India signifying their agreement to the amendment.

3. The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs the assurances of its highest consideration.

2507. Note from the Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan High Commission in India.

New Delhi, November 20, 1965.

No. P.I/112/7/64 November 20, 1965.

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, presents their compliments to the Pakistan High Commission in India, and with reference to their Note No.1(42)CS.VI/65 dated 17th November, 1965, have the honour to state as follows:

2. Paragraph 7 of Annexure H to the Indus Waters Treaty provides, inter alia that India will deliver supplies to the Central Bari Doab Channels from 21st September to 10th April “according to indents to be placed by Pakistan“, subject to certain maxima specified in that Paragraph. During the previous years, indents have invariably been placed by Pakistan as required by the Treaty. This year, however, no indents have been received from Pakistan, even to this date. As an indent indicates the requirement of water for a channel, it was obvious that Pakistan did not want any supplies to be run in these channels. Naturally, India could not be expected to deliver water into these channels without any indication of the actual requirements or indents for the channels from Pakistan. On receipt of indents, India will deliver waters to these channels, in accordance with the relevant Treaty provisions.
3. As regards the Government of Pakistan’s suggestion that Pakistan’s share of water in the C.B.D. Channels may be delivered in the river Ravi below Madhopur, as a temporary measure, it is pointed out that deliveries to these channels are regulated by the provisions in Annexure H to the Treaty. According to Paragraph 20 of that Annexure, Pakistan is entitled to ask for this share to be released in the river itself but only by giving due notice to India, and this arrangement would then be applicable for the entire balance of the Transition Period. The Treaty does not provide for making such an arrangement temporarily as suggested in Paragraph 4 of Pakistan’s Note. Also, it is wrong to say that it is not practicable to deliver supplies into the C.B.D. Channels at the points specified in Paragraph 7 of Annexure H to the Treaty.

4. So far as the deliveries to the Dipalpur Canal are concerned, Pakistan has already exercised her option not to get any waters in this channel with effect from 1st April, 1966. Also, under paragraph 39 of Annexure H, the Dipalpur Canal is not entitled to get any waters after 15th October during the rabi season i.e. from 16th October to 31st March. The period to be considered is, therefore, from 23rd September to 15th October, 1965.

During September, 1965, the Ferozepore Head-works was subjected to heavy shelling by Pakistan and some of the irrigation staff were killed or seriously injured. No regulation of supplies as between Dipalpur Canal and below Ferozepore was physically possible and even the Indian Canals taking off on the left side could not be fed from the Head-works. Also, after the cease-fire, there has been unprovoked firing from Pakistan at and in the vicinity of the Head-works and regulation at this place has become extremely dangerous. However, the supplies let into Sutlej, according to the estimated share of Pakistan under the Treaty, have been passed down to Pakistan. It is complete travesty of facts to say that Pakistan is not being given its due share under the Treaty or that at present almost all the waters of the Sutlej and Beas are being withdrawn by India.

5. The Ministry of External Affairs avail of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for Pakistan in India the assurances of their highest consideration.

The High Commission for Pakistan in India,
New Delhi.
2508. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

Islamabad, December 14, 1965.

No.1(4)-13/10/65, 14th December 1965.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission of India in Pakistan and with reference to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India’s Note No. P.I/112/7/64, dated 20th November, 1965, has the honour to state as follows -

2. Paragraph 7 of Annexure H to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 provides inter-alia that India will deliver supplies to the Central Bari Doab Channels “at the points mentioned in column (3) of Table A below, according to indents to be placed by Pakistan up to the maximum quantity noted against each point in column (4) of Table.” However, the quantum of supplies to be delivered by India has to be determined, independent of the indents, in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 8 and 9 of the said Annexure. Paragraph 7 does not provide that indents be placed afresh every year nor does it contemplate that in the absence of fresh indents, it is to be presumed that Pakistan does not require any water at all and that, therefore, the water-supply should be stopped. The purpose of placing indents is obviously to enable Pakistan to get the deliveries in any channel reduced by changing the indent if so warranted by an emergency such as sudden damage to the channel or the works connected with it. The indents were repeated each year during September simply as a matter of courtesy and to serve as a reminder rather than in fulfillment of any obligation under the Treaty. However, the same indents would have been repeated this year as well during September 1965 but for the disruption of communications as a result of India’s wanton aggression against Pakistan. In any case, in the absence of any advice to the contrary from Pakistan, the Government of India should have taken the same indents as for the last three years to be the requirement of Pakistan rather than divert the share of Pakistan for use in India for which there is no justification under the Treaty. By depriving Pakistan of its rightful share of the Ravi waters, serious damage has been caused to cultivation in Pakistan for which India alone is responsible.

3. The Government of Pakistan is still of the opinion that, at present it is not practicable to receive supplies in the C.B.D. Channels at their crossings of the international boundary. As a result of the Indian aggression, these points as well as certain lengths of the channels are at present under the adverse control of the Indian Forces. Pakistan, therefore, for the present, could neither receive these supplies at the international border nor ensure their safe passage through the Pakistan territory adversely held by India. It is, therefore, against suggested that Pakistan’s share of the C.B.D. Channels be temporarily delivered into the Ravi river below Madhopur till the Indian Forces have withdrawn from Pakistan territory and Pakistan acquires full control of the points of these channels specified in Paragraph 7 of Annexure H.

4. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs is constrained to point out that the arguments put forward in the Note under reply regarding the non-delivery of water to the Dipalpur Canal are fallacious. The Dipalpur Canal continued to run with supplies from Hussainiwala Head-works during the fighting. It was only after the cease fire that the supplies were suddenly cut off while the Pakistan indent, already with India, had not been changed. It is also not correct as has been alleged in the Note under reply that Pakistan’s share of the Sutlej and the Beas waters has been passed down in the Sutlej below Ferozepore. During the last two months the supplies reaching Suleimanki, other than those transferred through the links by Pakistan, have been far less than even a thousand cusecs while Pakistan’s share must have been over five thousand cusecs.

5. The Government of Pakistan would once again impress upon the Government of India the urgent and imperative need of restoring to Pakistan its full share of the waters of the Eastern Rivers and would suggest, without prejudice to their right to compensation for losses caused and being caused to Pakistan by India’s failure to deliver Pakistan’s full share, that the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, which has been so closely associated with the Indus Waters Treaty and continues to be keenly interested in its implementation, be requested to depute an observer to check up the facts.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of India in Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

Ministry of External Affairs

(Pak. I Registry)

No. PI/112/7/64 January 20, 1966.

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, presents its compliments to the High Commission of Pakistan in India, and with reference to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan Note No. I(4)-13/10/65 dated the 14th December, 1965 (copy enclosed —Document No………..) has the honour to state as follows :-

2. Paragraph 7 of Annexure H to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 requires Pakistan to place indents for their C.B.D. Channels which are entitled to receive supplies only in the period from September 21 to April 10 every year. The purpose of placing indents is to indicate the requirements of water for each of the channels and obviously India could not assume the requirements of water in Pakistan. Such indents have been placed by Pakistan every year in the past with reference to Paragraph 7 of Annexure H to the Treaty. Furthermore, the indents have at times been modified by Pakistan.

In Paragraph 2 of the note from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, it has been stated that indents could not be placed due to the disruption of communications between India and Pakistan in September 1965. In this connection, the Government of India observe that the Government of Pakistan had sent a communication to the Government of India, under Paragraph 64 of Annexure H, towards the end of September 1965, through the World Bank when the communications between the two countries were in a state of disruption. Furthermore channels of communication through the Diplomatic missions of India and Pakistan in the respective countries were always available.

3. Paragraph 20 of Annexure H to the Treaty provides an option to Pakistan to have the supplies due for the C.B.D.C. to be released into the Ravi river below Madhopur. This option, however, has to be exercised before 30th September preceding and, thereafter, India has no obligation to make deliveries to these channels from 1st April succeeding, for the remaining part of the Transition Period. This option has not so far been exercised by the Government of Pakistan. Keeping particularly in view of the happy conclusions reached recently at Tashkent between the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan and as a measure of goodwill and co-operation, the Government of India would, on receipt of indents from Pakistan, be glad to ensure safe passage of water through these channels in the area under their de facto control in the current Rabi season, till the date of withdrawal of the armed personnel of the two countries.

4. The Ministry of External Affairs again point out that due to the heavy shelling of the Ferozepore Head-works during September 1965 and the cease-fire violations in that area even after the cease-fire, the regulation of the supplies at Ferozepore was rendered extremely difficult and at times even impossible. In spite of these difficulties, the Government of India have continued to honour their obligations under the Treaty.

5. With regards to the suggestion made in paragraph 5 of the Pakistan note under reply, it may be stated that the Treaty provides that any question which arises between the parties concerning the interpretation or application of the Treaty, shall first be examined by the Permanent Indus Commission. If the Government of Pakistan should so desire, any such matters can be looked into by the Commission. The last meeting of the Commission was held in Pakistan in May-June 1965. As the meetings of the Commission, according to the Treaty, are to be held alternatively in India and Pakistan, its next meeting can be held in Delhi at the convenience of Pakistan.

6. The Ministry of External Affairs avails of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan in India the assurance of its highest consideration.

2510. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

Islamabad, January 25, 1966.

No.1 (4) – 8/10/65 January 25, 1966

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission of India in Pakistan and with reference with reference to Ministry of External Affairs Note no. 1(4)-9/10/65 dared the 14th December 1965, has the honour to state as follows-

The Government of Pakistan in para 3 of the previous Note referred to above had suggested that its share of the C.B.D.C. be temporarily delivered into the Ravi river below Madhopur till the Indian armed forces had withdrawn from Pakistan territory. It is regretted that this has not been done so far and India continues to withhold Pakistan’s share of the water of the Ravi river for which there is no justification under the Indus Waters Treaty 1960.

In view of the Government of India’s refusal to deliver the supplies in the Ravi river and in view of the changed circumstances brought about by the Tashkent declaration the Government of Pakistan requests that supplies may immediately be restored by the C.B.D.C. As regards the indents of these channels attention is invited to para 2 of the Ministry’s previous note under reference and without prejudice to its views expressed therein the Government of Pakistan hereby informs the Government of India that indents for the current season are the same as communicated last year. These are reported below. Lahore branch 615 main branch lower 1382 pull distributary to Kohali distributary 26 Khaira distributary 11 and Bhuchar Kahna distributary 317.

Para 12 and 13 of Annexure H to the Indus Waters Treaty of 1960 provide the framing of a rotational programme for the distribution of Ravi Waters. According to the provisions of the Treaty Chief Engineer Punjab was to supply copies of the programme of the Pakistan Commissioner for Indus Waters and Chief Engineer West Pakistan not later than September 30, 1965. The programme which has not been received so far may please be supplied immediately.

The Government of Pakistan is constrained to point out that the supplies being received in the Sutlej are still considerably short of Pakistan’s share under the Treaty. The supplies received during October, November and December were not even 20 per cent of Pakistan’s share. Of late there has been some improvement in the supplies delivered in the Sutlej below Ferozepore but these are still considerably short of Pakistan's share. The Government of Pakistan would therefore once again impress upon the Government of India the imperative need of restoring to Pakistan its full share under the Treaty.
The Ministry of Foreign Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of India in Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

High Commission of India in Pakistan,
Islamabad.

2511. Note from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan High Commission in India.
New Delhi, February 3, 1966.
Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission of Pakistan in India, New Delhi, and with reference to the Note handed over by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the High Commission of India in Pakistan, Islamabad, on 25th January, 1966, in regard to the distribution of river supplies under the Indus Waters Treaty, has the honour to state as follows:-

2. The Government of India have noted with satisfaction that the Government of Pakistan have placed the indents for the Pakistan Central Bari Doab Channels (C.B.D.C.). The indents have been taken as effective from the morning gauges of 31st January, 1966 and necessary action has been taken to deliver supplies to the C.B.D.C. according to the Rotational Programme for the current \textit{rabi} season. The Pakistan Army Officer at site had requested the local irrigation authorities in India to release supplies into the M.B.L. not earlier than 30th January afternoon. The High Commission for Pakistan in Delhi was requested on telephone on 30th January, 1966, to advise the Pakistan Commissioner for Indus Waters that the supply in M.B.L. was likely to reach the border that evening.

3. A copy of the Rotational Programme for the Upper Bari Doab Canal for \textit{rabi} 1965-66 is enclosed, along with a copy of the revised Rotational Programme for the portion of the \textit{Rabi} Growing Period from 4.1.66 to 12.2.66. This revision was necessitated by the shifting of the annual closure scheduled for 20.1.66 - 4.2.66 to 1-10.4.66, on account of the failure of rains and the prevailing dry weather. Copies of the Rotational Programme could not be furnished by the Chief Engineer, Punjab, to the Pakistan Commissioner for Indus Waters and Chief Engineer, West Pakistan, because of the disruption of communications.
In order to enable the C.B.D.C. to get water at the earliest time, the revised programme has been further modified to afford first priority to the Main Branch Lower during the period 28.1.66 - 4.2.66. This modified programme will follow.

4. In regard to the supplies delivered in the Sutlej at Ferozepore, the attention of the Government of Pakistan is invited to paragraph 4 of the Ministry of External Affairs, India, note No. PI/112/7/64, dated the 20th January, 1966, in reply to the Pakistan’s note No.1(4)-13/10/65, dated the 14th December, 1965. However, this matter can be discussed, if desired, between the two Commissioners in their next meeting which is likely to be held during February, 1966.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan in India the assurances of its highest consideration.

The High Commission of Pakistan,
New Delhi.

Report on the Dispute Concerning Article IX (1) of the Indus Water Treaty - 1960

New Delhi, March 31, 1967.

At the 21st meeting of the Permanent Indus Commission, held at Delhi from 28th September to 4th October, 1966, the Pakistan Commissioner presented certain questions concerning the deliveries to Pakistan from the Eastern Rivers during the period September 1965 onwards, for examination by the Commission under the provisions of Article IX(1) of the Treaty. These questions are reproduced below:

“1. Deliveries to be Central Bari Doab Channels (CBDC) under the provisions of Annexure ‘H’ to the Treaty.
   (i) Does Paragraph 7 of Annexure H to the Treaty contemplate the placing of fresh indents by Pakistan before 21st September every year, or would the indents placed in one year hold good for subsequent years in the absence of any further indents modifying the said indents?
   (ii) Considering the special circumstances prevailing during the period 6th September 1965 to late January 1966, should India not have delivered Pakistan’s share of the Ravi waters in the C.B.D.C. and, when Pakistan requested for it in November 1965, in the river Ravi below Madhopur?
   (iii) What amount should be paid by India to Pakistan to compensate it for the losses suffered on account of the non-receipt of its share of waters from 21st September 1965 to about the end of January 1966?

II. Deliveries to the Dipalpur Canal at Ferozepore.
   (i) Were supplies delivered into the Dipalpur Canal during the period 11th September to 15th October 1965 in accordance with the indent placed by Pakistan? If not, what was the extent of shortages?
   (ii) What amount should be paid by India to Pakistan to compensate it for the losses suffered on account of non-receipt of the indented supplies during the period 11th September to 15 October, 1965?

III. Deliveries below Ferozepore.
   (i) What was the extent of the shortages in deliveries due to Pakistan, below Ferozepore, during the period 11th September 1965 to 10th January 1966?
   (ii) What amount should be paid by India to Pakistan to compensate it for the losses suffered on account of the non-receipt of its full share of waters from 11th September 1965 to 10th January 1966?”

2. The Indian Commissioner held the view that the questions to be examined under Article IX(1) of the Treaty should be as under:

“1. Deliveries to the Central Bari Doab Channels (CBDC) under the Provisions of Annexure H to the Treaty.
Paragraph 7 of Annexure ‘H’ to the Treaty stipulates that India will deliver supplies to the C.B.D. Channels “according to indents to be placed by Pakistan”. Was not Pakistan, therefore, required to place indents on India for supplies to be delivered to C.B.D. Channels from 21st September 1965 onwards, particularly when Pakistan had been consistently placing such indents every year in the past?

II. Deliveries to Pakistan at Ferozepore (including Dipalpur Canal).

What were the deliveries due to Pakistan at Ferozepore in each Water-accounting period from 11th September 1965 to 10th January 1966, and what were the deliveries actually made to Pakistan, separately below Ferozepore and into the Dipalpur Canal, in each of these Water-accounting periods?

3. After detailed discussions relating to the questions in paragraphs 1 and 2 above, the Commission, at its 21st meeting, decided that before the subject was taken up again, at the next meeting of the Commission, further consideration should be given to the points mentioned below:

(i) Whether the questions to be examined under Article IX(1) are to be framed by the Commission or by the Party making the reference to the Commission?

(ii) Can the Commission examine under Article IX(1) a claim for financial compensation raised with respect of any question to be examined by it under the said Article? If so, should the claim for compensation be raised at the time of the initial reference of the question to the Commission or should it be raised after the Commission has completed the examination of the basic question?

(iii) In the examination of a question under Article IX(1) of the Treaty, should the Commission, as a single body, hear the Parties and/or consider the material submitted by the Parties, or should the two members of the Commission also simultaneously act as representatives of the Parties and argue the respective points of view of the Parties between themselves, or should the Commission follow some other procedure and, if so, what would be the appropriate procedure?

(iv) Can the Commission while examining and endeavouring to resolve a question under the provisions of Article IX(1), act independently of the Parties?

4. At its 22nd meeting held at Islamabad from 17th to 24th January 1967, the Commission gave further consideration to the four points mentioned in paragraph 3 above. In addition, the Commission also considered a fifth point, viz.,
Can the Commission ask the Parties to supply data and any other information that may be needed for the examination of a question under Article IX(1) of the Treaty?

5. Detailed discussions were held at the 22nd meeting of the Commission on all the five points listed in paragraph 3 and 4 above and as no agreement could be reached on them, it was decided to treat these five points as “questions” under Article IX(1) of the Treaty, which the Commission had endeavoured but failed to resolve by agreement. Since none of these five “questions” fell within the provisions of Part I of Annexure F to the Treaty, the Commission decided that these questions would have to be treated under the provisions of Article IX(2) as “disputes” to be settled in accordance with the provisions of Paragraphs 3, 4 and 5 of Article IX. It was also agreed that a report regarding these disputes would be submitted under Article IX(3) which is reproduced below:-

6. Accordingly, the views of each Commissioner on each of the five issues in dispute, and his reasons therefor, are set out in paragraphs 7 to 11 below.

As regards the questions reproduced in paragraphs 1 and 2 above, the Commission, at its 22nd meeting, agreed that it would examine them further at its next meeting, without prejudice to the views held by the two Commissioners regarding the five issues in dispute which are the subject matter of this report.

7. Issue No. (i): Whether the questions to be examined under Article IX(1) are to be framed by the Commission or by the Party making the reference to the Commission?

7.1 The Pakistan Commission held the view :-

“The questions to be examined under Article IX(1) are to be framed by the Party making the reference to the Commission.”

7.2 He gave the following reasons in support of this view :-

“(a) As Article IX(1) does not provide that the Commission is to frame the questions, it naturally follows that the Party desirous of referring the matter to the Commission will frame the questions.

(b) If there is any pre-condition that a question to be examined by the Commission must first be approved by the other Commissioner then in case of disagreement between the two Commissioners upon its phrasing, the framing of the question itself would become a dispute. This would only delay the resolution of questions and settlement of differences and disputes and this cannot be the intention of the Treaty. However, either Party is free to refer to the Commission questions even regarding matters about which questions may have already been referred to the Commission by the other Party. In such a case the Commission could examine the two sets of questions in the chronological order of their reference or, if possible, even simultaneously.

(c) The framing of questions itself is not a procedural matter and is not covered by Article VIII (10) read with Articles VIII(4)(b) and IX(1).

(d) Questions which arise between the Parties regarding the Treaty would naturally concern the interpretation or application of the Treaty or the existence of any fact which, if established, might constitute a breach of the Treaty. If the two Commissioners were to frame the questions before these could even be entertained under Article IX(1), a situation can arise where one of the Commissioners by holding the view that the matter did not attract the provisions of Article IX(1) could even obstruct the taking up of the matter and proceeding to the subsequent stages under Article IX of the Treaty. This would cut across the very basis and purpose of Article IX of the Treaty. It is therefore logical that the Party concerned should frame the question."

7.3 The Indian Commissioner held the view:-

"The questions to be examined are to be framed by the Commission itself i.e., by the two Commissioners acting together. However, if the two Commissioners, who constitute the Commission, do not agree on the formulation of a question, then the Commission may determine, as a matter of procedure, that each Commissioner representing his Government may submit his own separate version of the 'question' which has arisen between the Parties."

7.4 The Indian Commissioner gave the following reasons for his view:-

"(a) The word 'question' used in Article IX(1) actually refers to the substance of the point or points at issue, its phraseology or formulation being a subsequent step. The aim has, therefore, to be to frame the question in such a way that the underlying issue is expressed in clear and objective terms. If the Party wanting to bring the question before the Commission, under Article IX(1), were to be the sole judge or the form in which the question is to be put, then it could lead to the position that the question might be so worded as to appear to prejudge the issue or to lay, by implication, the onus of default on the other Party. It could also happen that, in the opinion of the other Party, the 'question' does not even concern the interpretation or application of the Treaty, in which case it could not even be entertained under Article IX(1). Consequently, it is necessary that the Commission (the two Commissioners acting together) should itself formulate the question.

(b) Although Article IX(1) of the Treaty does not specifically provide that the Commission is to frame the questions, there is no doubt that Article VIII(10) of the Treaty which states that the Commission (meaning the two Commissioners together) will determine its own procedures, applies just as much to the discharge of the Commission's function under Article IX(1) as it does to the discharge of the Commission's other functions mentioned in Article VIII(4). The reference to Article IX(1) in Article VIII(4)(b) makes this position abundantly clear.

(c) As the two Commissioners together form the Commission, the Commission can proceed to discharge its function under Article IX(1) only when the two Commissioners are agreed between themselves as to what the issue is which has arisen between the Parties, which the Commission must examine and endeavour to resolve by agreement. The two Commissioners must, therefore, agree on the formulation of the 'question' between themselves bringing out the substance of the point or points at issue. Failing this, the Commission may agree to let each Commissioner submit his separate version of the 'questions' for examination by the Commission.

(d) If the two Commissioners fail to agree on a joint formulation of the question, to be examined under Article IX(1), this should not necessarily mean that this question, as to how the 'question' themselves should be framed, would have to be referred to a Neutral Expert or Special Negotiators/Court of Arbitration. Failing agreement on the joint formulation of the questions the Commission (the two Commissioners together) can always decide on a question of procedure e.g., each Commissioner may frame his own questions for examination by the Commission and the Commission (meaning the two Commissioners together) may take up the questions as framed by the two Commissioners for examination in a particular order, for example, alternately or two together or in some other order mutually considered convenient in a particular case. It would thus be seen that a situation cannot arise when one of the Commissioners, by holding the view that a particular question cannot be examined under Article IX(1), can obstruct a Party from taking up the matter to the subsequent stages of Article IX."

8. Issue No.(ii): Can the Commission examine under Article IX(1) a claim for financial compensation raised with respect of any question to be examined by it under the said Article? If so, should the claim for compensation be raised at the time of the initial reference of the question to the Commission or should it be raised after the Commission has completed the examination of the basic question?

8.1 The Pakistan Commissioner held the view:--

“A claim for financial compensation could be raised, for examination under Article IX(1) of the Treaty with respect to a question referred to the Commission under the said Article.”

8.2 He gave the following reasons in support of this view:--

“(a) The word ‘application’ used in Article IX(1) of the Treaty is comprehensive enough to fully cover the raising of a question which includes a claim for compensation.

(b) A perusal of the scheme and language of Article IX clearly indicates that the intention of the two Parties was that, in the first instance, all questions relating to the interpretation, application etc. of the Treaty should be examined by the Commission, and it was only when the Commission was unable to resolve a particular question that resort should be had to the time consuming and expensive procedure of referring the question to a Neutral Expert or Special Negotiators and Court of Arbitration. It is precisely to achieve this purpose that Paragraph 1 of Article IX has been framed in broad terms.

(c) Paragraph 2 of Annexure F clearly shows that the Treaty contemplates that financial compensation may be claimed with respect to a question referred to the Commission for examination under Article IX(1) of the Treaty.

(d) The phrase ‘financial compensation as may be claimed’ in Paragraph 23 of Annexure G to the Treaty, read with Article IX of the Treaty, also indicates that the claim for financial compensation can be made before the stage of reference to the Court of Arbitration is reached and it could form a part of a question to be examined under Article IX(1) of the Treaty.

(e) As ‘differences’ to be referred to the Neutral Expert and ‘disputes’ to be referred to the ‘Court of Arbitration’ have to pass through an earlier stage where they are termed as ‘questions’, it is obvious that a claim for financial compensation which could be a part of a ‘difference’ or a ‘dispute’ should, where raised, also form a part of a question under Article IX(1).”

8.3 The Indian Commissioner held the view:--

8.4 He gave the following reasons for this view:-

“(a) The questions which could be examined by the Commission under Article IX(1) are only those concerning (i) the interpretation of the Treaty, (ii) the application of the Treaty and (iii) the existence of any fact which, if established, might constitute a breach of the Treaty. Since a question concerning a claim for financial compensation for an alleged breach of the Treaty does not fall within any of these three categories, the Commission was not competent to examine it under Article IX(1).

(b) The intention of the Parties to the Treaty must be gathered from the language of Article IX(1) which is quite explicit and unambiguous. It gives power to the Commission to examine and endeavour to resolve, by agreement only, the three categories of questions mentioned therein.

(c) A claim for financial compensation can only arise as a consequence of a breach of the Treaty, the establishment of which alone can be examined by the Commission.

(d) The Treaty itself does not contain any provisions relating to financial compensation on account of a breach of the Treaty. In the absence of any such provision in the Treaty the Commission could not be considered as ‘applying’ the Treaty, if it were to examine any question of financial compensation for an alleged breach of the Treaty and award financial compensation.

(e) There is no basis in any of the other provisions of the Treaty to suggest that the intention of the Parties was that the Commission shall examine questions relating to financial compensation. Where, for instance, the Parties intended to confer such power on the Court of Arbitration provided for under Article IX(5), they specifically conferred this power by Paragraph 23 of Annexure G to the Treaty. The language of Paragraph 23 of Annexure G also rightly brings out the fact that financial compensation can only be claimed as a relief by either Party from the Court of Arbitration.

(f) Under Article IX(2), power has been conferred on the Neutral Expert, vide Annexure F Paragraph 2, to examine a claim for financial compensation raised with respect to any question specified in Paragraph 1 of Annexure F, only if the two Commissioners are agreed that it should be so referred. But this provision of Annexure F in Paragraph 2 can hardly be relied upon to support the proposition that the Commission itself can examine a claim for financial compensation under Article IX(1). Article IX(1) itself does not provide that the Commission can examine such a question and even if the provisions of Annexure F Paragraph 2 are relied upon to show that a question relating to a claim for financial compensation can be ‘raised’ by a Party, it still does not prove that the Commission (meaning the two Commissioners together) are competent to examine such a question which falls outside the three categories of questions mentioned in Article IX(1). In fact, the power to refer a question of financial compensation to a Neutral Expert, under Annexure F Paragraph 2, is a power conferred on the two Commissioners by the provisions of this paragraph but by its nature, it is distinct from the duty of the Commission under Article IX(1), which is limited to the examination of the three categories of questions mentioned therein.

(g) It is not correct to say that if a claim for financial compensation is not examined by the Commission under Article IX(1), it cannot be taken to the subsequent stages of Article IX.”

9. Issue No.(iii): In the examination of a question under Article IX(1) of the Treaty should the Commission, as a single body, hear the Parties and/or consider the material submitted by the Parties, or should the two members of the Commission also simultaneously act as representatives of the Parties and argue the respective points of view of the Parties between themselves, or should the Commission follow some other procedure and, if so, what would be the appropriate procedure?

9.1 The Pakistan Commissioner held the view:-

“The Commission, as an independent body, while examining a question, can hear the Parties or act in any other way it deems fit.”

9.2 He gave the following reasons in support of this view:-

“(a) The Commission as an independent body (see issue No.(iv) below) can examine a question under Article IX(1) of the Treaty in any manner it deems fit. Moreover, this being a procedural matter, and as Article VIII(10) of the Treaty provides that the Commission is to determine its own procedures, the Commission can hear the Parties or adopt any other appropriate procedure.

(b) The provision in Article VIII(1) that ‘each Commissioner will be the representative of his Government for all matters arising out of this Treaty and will serve as the regular channel of communication on all matters relating to the implementation of the Treaty.’ would apply to all actions that a Commissioner, as such, might take on behalf of his Government. This does not prevent the Commission, sitting as a body, from hearing the views of the Parties separately. There is no prohibitory provision anywhere in the Treaty to allow that once a question has been referred to the Commission as a body, no other person could represent the views of the two Governments at the deliberations of the Commission.”

9.3 The Indian Commissioner held the view:-
“The Commission could not, as a single body, hear the Parties. The two Commissioners constituting the Commission, being the representatives of their individual Governments, have to argue the respective points of view of their Governments between themselves.”

9.4 He gave the following reasons for his view:-
(a) Article VIII of the Treaty, which deals with the setting up of the Permanent Indus Commission and the appointment of the Commissioner by each Government, clearly stipulates in Paragraph 1 itself that each Commissioner will be the representative of his Government for all matters arising out of the Treaty and will serve as the regular channel of communication on all matters relating to the implementation of the Treaty.

(b) Article VIII(2) of the Treaty provides that the duties and responsibilities of the two Commissioners towards their own Governments will be determined by their respective Governments. They cannot, therefore, expect to hear the two Governments and/or consider the material submitted by the two Governments as a single body, nor can they examine any questions except as representatives of their Governments.

(c) It is true that under Article VIII(10) of the Treaty, the Commission can determine its own procedures. But the question whether or not the Commission can hear the Parties as a single body, cannot be considered by the Commission as merely a question of its own procedure which the Commissioners acting together can determine on their own. the express provisions of Article VIII(1) which state that the Commissioners are the representatives of their Governments for all matters arising out of the Treaty and have to serve as a regular channel of communication on all matters relating to the implementation of the Treaty excludes any possibility of the Commission determining, as a matter of procedure, that the Governments would appear before them through other representatives and/or submit material to the Commission as a single body through other representatives.”

10. Issue No.(iv): Can the Commission, while examine and endeavoring to resolve a question under the provisions of Article IX(1), act independently of the Parties?

10.1 The Pakistan Commissioner held the view:-
“The Commission, while examining and endeavouring to resolve a question under the provisions of Article IX(1), acts as an independent body.”
10.2 He gave the following reasons in support of this view:

“(a) The scheme of things provided for in the Treaty as a whole and specifically the provisions relating to the Commission lead to the irresistible conclusion that the Commission has been constituted as a separate independent entity whose decisions regarding functions allocated to it are final and have to be carried out by the Parties. For example Article III(3) provides that each Party will establish such discharge observation stations or make such observations as may be considered necessary by the Commission.

(b) The provision in Article VIII(4) that one of the functions of the Commission will be to promote co-operation between the Parties also clearly shows that the Commission is separate from the Governments and has an independent entity of its own.

(c) The concept of agreement for the resolution of a question under Article IX(1) does not mean that the Commission is not an independent body, but as it consists of only two members, it could resolve a question only by the agreement of the two members of the Commission and in no other way. If the members of the Commission were to act only as the representatives of the Parties and not independently while sitting in the Commission, then their failure to resolve a question under Article IX(1) would amount to a failure of the two Governments to resolve a question. In that case the provisions of Article IX(4), which contemplate the resolution of the disputes by the two Governments by agreement through negotiators, would not have been necessary. This is all the more so because the Commission has to examine under Article IX(1) all questions and not only those limited to the field of hydrology and water use.

(d) Article IX(1) gives a mandate to the Commission to ‘endeavour to resolve the question by agreement’, and, as long as agreement is reached, the powers of the Commission, i.e. of the two Commissioners as members of the Commission, are not limited in this behalf.

(e) The provision in Article VIII(1) that ‘each Commissioner will be the representatives of his Government for all matters arising out of this Treaty and will serve as the regular channel of communication on all matters relating to the implementation of the Treaty’, would apply to all actions that a Commissioner might take on behalf of his Government. However, it does not mean that the Commission because its two members happen to be the Commissioners, cannot act independently in examining and resolving the questions under Article IX(1).”
10.3 The Indian Commissioner held the view:-

“While examining and endeavouring to resolve a question under Article IX(1), the Commission could not act independently of the Parties. It had to endeavour to resolve the question arising between the Parties by agreement but such agreement must be the agreement of the two Commissioners as representatives of the two Parties and not an agreement between themselves, as individuals, independents of the Parties.”

10.4 He gave the following reasons for his view:-

“(a) Nowhere in the Treaty is it stated that the Commission is to be an independent body or that the members of the Commission are to act independently of the Parties. On the contrary, Article VIII of the Treaty, which deals with the setting up of the ‘Permanent Indus Commission’ and the appointment of the Commissioner by each Government, clearly states in Paragraph 1 itself that each Commissioner will be the representative of his Government for all matters arising out of the Treaty and will serve as the regular channel of communication on all matters relating to the implementation of the Treaty.

(b) The provisions of Article VIII(4), which state that the purpose and functions of the Commission is to promote co-operation between the Parties, clearly show that the Commission is not an independent body, but the two Commissioners are only the representatives of their respective Governments. If the Commissioners, while acting as member of the Commission, were not the representatives of their Governments, it is difficult to see how they could promote co-operation between the Parties.

(c) It is not correct to say that the concept of agreement for the resolution of the questions has been used in Article IX(1) only because the Commission is a body consisting of two members. The words in Article IX(1), to the effect that the Commission will ‘endeavour to resolve the question by agreement’, are indeed significant. They express clearly the intention of the Parties that under Article IX(1) the Commission is not to ‘decide’ the questions or ‘adjudicate’ on them or give its own findings on them as an independent body. The Parties intended that the Commission is to resolve the questions by agreement and such ‘agreement’ obviously refers to the agreement between the two Commissioners as representatives of their Governments.

(d) It is not correct to say that the Commissioner are the representatives of the Governments for the purpose of examining the questions that may have arisen between the Parties under Article IX(1), the provisions of Article IX(4), which bring in the two Governments later are redundant. Article IX(4) gives a chance to the two Governments to resolve any dispute directly by agreement after the Commission has failed. Article IX(4) was obviously provided to afford an opportunity of reviewing the dispute between the two Governments at another level with a view to exploring a further possibility of reaching mutual accord on the issue in dispute.

Under the Article VIII(1) the two Commissioners are persons who are ordinarily high ranking engineers competent in the field of hydrology and water use. While they would therefore be generally able to deal with such questions as may arise within their field, there may be other questions or other aspects of the same question arising between the Parties, which the Parties may like to deal with subsequently at a different level.

(e) Further, the wording of Article IX(4) supports the view that the Commission is not an independent body but the two Commissioners even while acting under Article IX(1) are representatives of the two Governments. Thus Article IX(4) provides that even when the Commission has not yet submitted its Report to the two Governments under Article IX(3), if either Government comes to the conclusion that the report is being unduly delayed in the Commission, it can invite the other Government to resolve the dispute by agreement. Such a provision could not have been there in Article IX(4) if the Commission were to be an independent body and the members of the Commission were not the representatives of the two Governments."

11. Issue No. (v): Can the Commission ask the Parties to supply data and any other information that may be needed for the examination of a question under Article IX(1) of the Treaty?

11.1 The Pakistan Commissioner held the view:-

“The Commission can ask the Parties to supply data and any other information that may be needed by it for the examination of a question under Article IX(1) of the Treaty.”

11.2 He gave the following reasons in support of this view:-

“(a) Article IX(1) requires the Commission to examine any question which arises between the Parties. As such, any information required by the Commission for such an examination has to be provided to the Commission by the Parties.

(b) The Parties, having entrusted the Commission with the task of examining the questions and endeavouring to resolve them by agreement, have to co-operate with the Commission and facilitate its work by producing the information that the Commission may need. The work of the Commission is likely to be frustrated if this is not done.”

11.3 The Indian Commissioner held the view:-

“The Commission cannot, as an independent body, ask the Parties to supply any data and/or information. Each Commissioner can only ask the other Commissioner for data in so far as the Party represented by the other Commissioner is obliged to provide such data by a specific provision of the Treaty and not otherwise.”

11.4 He gave the following reasons for his view:-

“(a) Nowhere in the Treaty is the Commission, as such, authorised to demand or call for any data from the Parties.

(b) Under Article VIII(1) each Commissioner representing his Government serves as a regular channel of communication on all matters relating to the implementation of the Treaty, and, in particular, with respect to the furnishing of data provided for in the Treaty e.g., under specific provisions of Article VI and VII (2).

(c) If the intention of the Parties was that the Commission should act as an independent body, under Article IX(1), and be in a position to call for any data from the Parties considered by it to be relevant to the questions under examination, the whole scheme of Article VIII and IX would have been different. The Parties to the Treaty have not conferred such power on the Commission as they have specifically done on the Court of Arbitration under Paragraph 20 of Annexure G. This provision empowers the Court to ‘have the right to require from the Agents of the Parties the production of all papers and other evidence it considers necessary and to demand all necessary explanations’. In the absence of a similar provision in the Treaty, in respect of the Commission, and in the face of the clearly contrary intention of the Parties expressed in the wording of Article VIII(1)(a), it is not correct to presume that the Commission as such has any power under Article IX(1) to call for any data from the Parties other than that covered by the Treaty itself.

(d) Under the scheme of the Treaty, the obligation of the Parties to supply data to each other is a limited and defined obligation restricted to the specific provisions of the Treaty requiring them to do so, such as Article VI and VII (2). The Commissioners, under Article VIII(1), are required in such cases to act as the channel of communication between the Parties for the furnishing or exchange of data.

If, under Article IX(1), a Party were to be under an obligation to furnish any data not required by a specific provision of the Treaty, it would lead to a position where either Commissioner could take recourse to the machinery provided for settlement of differences under Article IX(1) merely to elicit data from the other Party which he could not have normally obtained under any other provision of the Treaty. This could not have been the intention of the Parties and hence it stands to reason that under Article IX(1) each Commissioner can only ask the other Commissioner for supply of data in so far as the Party represented by the other Commissioner is bound to provide such data under some specific provision of the Treaty."

NOTE

The Disputes in question were resolved by the Negotiators of India and Pakistan. Please see Document No.2518.
2513. Statement by Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi in the Lok Sabha congratulating Pakistan President Ayub Khan on the completion of the Mangla Dam.

New Delhi, November 15, 1967.

While overflying West Pakistan on my way to Moscow, as is customary, I sent a message of greetings to the President of Pakistan. I expressed the hope that the successful conclusion of the talks on the restoration of telecommunications would lead to further progress in our mutual relations. I also conveyed my congratulations on the completion of the Mangla Dam. This did not imply any departure from our stand as to the status of the territory of the State of Jammu and Kashmir on the other side of the cease-fire line.

The Indus Waters Treaty was signed by India and Pakistan in September 1960. It was placed before the Lok Sabha in November 1960 and ratified in December 1960. As provided in the Preamble, the Treaty had for its aim and I quote:

“the most complete and satisfactory utilization of the waters of the Indus System of rivers”

by India and Pakistan. Accordingly, the Treaty allocated the waters of the three Western Rivers, viz, the Indus, the Jhelum and the Chenab, to Pakistan, and those of the Sutlej, Ravi and Beas to India.

As provided in Article IV (1) of the Treaty, and I quote:

“Pakistan shall use its best endeavours to construct and bring into operation, with due regard to expedition and economy that part of a system of works which will accomplish the replacement, from the Western Rivers and other sources, of water supplies for irrigation canals in Pakistan which, on 15th August, 1947, were dependent on water supplies from the Eastern Rivers.”

Under the aegis of the World Bank, an Indus Development Fund was set up, to which a number of countries contributed funds for the replacement works envisaged in the Treaty and for connected development works. Under the Treaty, India undertook to make a fixed contribution towards the cost of the replacement works in Pakistan.

On the completion of the Mangla Dam, more water will be available to Pakistan which, in turn, will also enable India to make additional withdrawals from the Western Rivers for her own use. The Indian Commissioner appointed under the terms of the Treaty, has been periodically visiting the Dam site, along with his Pakistani counterpart. This fact had been mentioned in the Annual Reports of the Indus Commission, which were placed on the Table of the House on June 16, 1962 and August 18, 1965. The Indian Commissioner is now discussing the extent of the withdrawals which India can make because of the earlier completion of the Mangla Dam and other works.

The Mangla Dam is located on the international border between the Indian territory of the Jammu and Kashmir State in the occupation of Pakistan, and that of West Pakistan. Our protests, which relate to a period prior to the conclusion of the Indus Waters Treaty of 1960, were intended to safeguard our sovereign rights over the territory involved. The Treaty itself safeguards these rights under Article XI (1) (b) as follows:

“nothing contained in this Treaty, and nothing arising out of the execution thereof, shall be construed as constituting a recognition or waiver (whether tacit, by implication or otherwise) of any rights or claims whatsoever of either of the Parties other than those rights of claims which are expressly recognized or waived in this Treaty”.

On the 16th November, 1959, Prime Minister Nehru said in the Lok Sabha in reply to supplementary questions on starred question No. 2 regarding the Mangla Dam, and I quote:

“….the hon. Member is correct in thinking that it (Mangla Dam) may be connected with the Canal Water issue. In that sense, there is no question of any dispute; the dispute is about Kashmir, if you like. The other is the question of an arrangement about canal waters, about which we are dealing with Pakistan……”

“….there are two parts of this matter. One is a question that arises over our territory in Kashmir State even though that might now be occupied by Pakistan, and our claim that they should not do anything on the territory which is ours. That is one question which is part of the Kashmir issue. The other question is connected with the canal waters, as to the best use that might be made of canal waters, for India and for Pakistan. In that connection, the US Government and the World Bank, and perhaps various governments, are, at the instance of the World Bank, offering considerable sums of money to Pakistan. That is not our concern what money they offer to Pakistan in connection with the development of their canal system.”

The position of the Government of India was reiterated in this House, in answer to questions, on several occasions, viz. on 17th February, 1960 and 30th November, 1960 by Prime Minister Nehru and on 31st August 1961 by his Parliamentary Secretary. There has been no departure whatsoever from that position.
The construction of the Mangla Dam has aroused much international interest not only because of the financial contributions made by a number of foreign countries but also as an engineering feat. A number of foreign dignitaries are expected to be present at the opening of Dam. The completion of this irrigation system will now benefit millions of human beings in our neighbouring country and also in our own as it will enable us to draw more water for Punjab, Haryana and Rajasthan.

I should like to end by recalling that it has been our firm conviction that India and Pakistan can cooperate with each other in a meaningful way for the benefit of our respective peoples.

2514. Letters exchanged by the Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India for the amendment of Annexure H to the Indus Waters Treaty, 1960.

Pakistan Foreign Secretary’s Letter.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

No. 2/1/67-I (V) 18th November, 1967

Your Excellency,

I have the honour to say that, during the Twenty sixth Meeting of the Permanent Indus Commission, held at Islamabad from 8th to 13th November 1967, the two Commissioners agreed that Annexure H to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 may be amended as below:-

(i) By the addition of a new part (Part 12) after Part 11, as given below:-

“PART 12 – Additional Provisions for Rabi 1967-68

77. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 78, India agrees to deliver at Ferozepore for use by the Pakistan Sutlej Valley Canals, the following minimum supplies during each of the Water-accounting periods from November 21-30 to March 21-31:-

(a) November 21-30 to 71.5 per cent of the ‘Beas
   December 21-31 Component of Ferozepore.’

(b) January 1-10 to 67 per cent of the March 21-31 ‘Beas Component of Ferozepore.’
78. If, during any water-accounting Period from November 21-30 to March 21-31, the aggregate of (a) and (b) below exceeds 10,000 cusecs, the deliveries due to be made under the provisions of paragraph 77 may be reduced by the amount of such excess over 10,000 cusecs.

(a) Deliveries due to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 77.

(b) The differences between 79 per cent of the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’ and the deliveries due to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 77.

79. If, in any Water-accounting Period from November 21-30 to March 21-31, the sum of (a) and (b) below exceeds 10,000 cusecs, then there will be no carry-over from any such period to the next period.

(a) The supply at Ferozepore below.

(b) The difference between 79% of the ‘Beas Component at Ferozepore’ and the deliveries due to Pakistan under the provisions of Paragraph 77.

80. The provisions of Paragraphs 34, 35, 36, 37 and 46 (aa) shall not be applicable during the Water-accounting Periods from November 21-30 to March 21-31.

(ii) By the modification of the first sentence of Paragraph 41 of Annexure H to read as follows:-

“An account of the distribution of waters, as at Ferozepore, under the provisions of Parts 3, 4, 5, 11 and 12 of this Annexure will be maintained by each Commissioner in accordance with the provisions of Paragraphs 42-46, and appropriate Forms will be used, both for Phase I and Phase II, in order to facilitate, and to provide a record of, the distribution of waters in accordance with the provisions of this Annexure.”

2. The Government of Pakistan signify, through this letter, their agreement to the amendment of Annexure H to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 as indicated in the preceding paragraph, and in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 67 of that Annexure, agree that this amendment shall become effective upon the receipt of a similar letter from the Government of India signifying their agreement to the amendment.

Accept, Your Excellency, the assurance of my highest consideration.

Indian Foreign Secretary’s Letter:
No. PII/112/2/68, 29th August, 1968.

Your Excellency,

I have the honour to say that, during the Twenty-eighth Meeting of the Permanent Indus Commission, held at Islamabad/Lahore from 7th to 13th August, 1968, the two Commissioners agreed that Annexure H to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 may be amended as below:-

(i) By the addition of a new Part (Part 14) after Part 13, as given below:-

82. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 86, India may not release any supplies into the Ravi Main below Madhopur during the period from 21st September 1968 to 20th February 1969. From 21st February to 31st March 1969, however, the supplies due to Pakistan under the provisions of Part 2 of this Annexure will be delivered by India into the Ravi Main below Madhopur.
83. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 86 and notwithstanding the provisions of Paragraph 29(g), India agrees to deliver into the Sutlej Main below Ferozepore for use by the Pakistan Sutlej Valley Canals, the following minimum supplies during the period from 11th to 30th September 1968:

(a) September 11 - 20: 5,000 cusecs
(b) September 21 - 30: 3,000 cusecs

84. Subject to the provisions of Paragraph 86 and notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph 34:

(i) India agrees to deliver into the Sutlej Main below Ferozepore for use by the Pakistan Sutlej Valley Canals the following minimum supplies during the period from 1st to 15th October 1968:

(a) October 1 - 10: 2,000 cusecs
(b) October 11 - 15: 1,500 cusecs

(ii) During the period from 16th October 1968 to 20th February 1969, India may discontinue the deliveries into the Sutlej Main below Ferozepore.

(iii) From 21st February to 31st March 1969, the supplies due to Pakistan under the provisions of Part 5 of this Annexure will be delivered by India into the Sutlej Main below Ferozepore for the use of the Pakistan Sutlej Valley Canals.

85. If the Mangla reservoir does not fill to the Full Reservoir Level of 1202 feet by the end of kharif 1968, India shall deliver into the Sutlej Main below Ferozepore, for the use of the Pakistan Sutlej Valley Canals, supplies aggregating in volume to 40 percent of the difference between the capacity at Full Reservoir Level and the maximum capacity to which the Mangla reservoir fills during kharif 1968, in addition to the deliveries specified in Paragraph 84. These additional deliveries will be made with effect from 11th October 1968 and in accordance with the schedule agreed to between the two Commissioners. If necessary, the two Commissioners will meet in the first week of October 1968 to work out the agreed schedule of the additional deliveries.

86. If, owing to damage or apprehension of damage to the newly constructed works of Mangla Dam, Rasul Barrage, Qadirabad Barrage, Rasul-Qadirabad Link Canal or Qadirabad-Balloki Link Canal, or owing to unavoidable circumstances arising out of the difficulties in the operation of these works, the transfer of the water stored in Mangla reservoir to Balloki through the Rasul-Qadirabad-Balloki Link system is or has to be interrupted, or materially reduced, Pakistan shall so inform India, also stating the date from which the interruption or the material reduction has taken place and India shall, within two days of the receipt of this information, resume the deliveries into the Ravi Main below
Madhopur and into the Sutlej Main below Ferozepore in accordance with the provisions of Parts 2 to 5 of this Annexure, notwithstanding the provisions of Paragraph 82, 83, 84 and 85, provided that:

(i) If the supplies available at Harke/Ferozepore have to be supplemented by releases from the Bhakra reservoir to ensure the delivery of Pakistan's full share into the Sutlej Main below Ferozepore, the period of two days mentioned above shall be extended to a maximum of 5 days in respect of the supplies that are released from the Bhakra reservoir.

(ii) Pakistan will not invoke the provisions of this Paragraph if the duration of the Interruption or the material reduction in the transfer of supplies through the Rasul – Qadirabad - Balloki link system is not likely to exceed two days.

(ii) By the modification of the first sentence of Paragraph 41 of Annexure H to read as follows :-

"An account of the distribution of waters, as at Ferozepore, under the provisions of Parts 3,4,5,11,12, 13 and 14 of this Annexure will be maintained by each Commissioner in accordance with the provisions of Paragraphs 42 - 46, and appropriate Forms will be used, both for Phase I and Phase II, in order to facilitate, and to provide a record of, the distribution of waters in accordance with the provisions of this Annexure."

2. The Government of India signify, through this letter, their agreement to the amendment of Annexure H to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 as indicated in the preceding paragraph, and in accordance with the provisions of Paragraph 67 of that Annexure, this amendment shall become effective upon the receipt of a similar letter from the Government of Pakistan signifying their agreement to the amendment.

NOTE

The matter in italics in Pakistan’s letter which did not figure in the Indian Foreign Secretary’s letter of August 29, 1968, was subsequently added as requested by the Government of India in their letter No. P.II/112/2/68 dated the September 27, 1968 to Pakistan High Commissioner in New Delhi.

The Pakistan High Commissioner while acknowledging the above letter pointed out a few other typographical omissions in the Indian letter vide his letter No. 1 (42) CSV/65 dated October 8, 1968. These were:

(i) Paragraph 1(i) - 5th line : Comma appearing between ‘March’ and ‘1969’ was not there in the original text.

(ii) Paragraph 83(a) and (b): Full stops at the end of the two sentences are missing.
Press Release issued by the High Commission of India in Pakistan at the end of the Transition period as specified in the Indus Water Treaty.
Islamabad, April 1, 1970.

INDUS WATERS TREATY

The transition period under the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 came to an end on March 31. From today, April 1, India is entitled to use exclusively flow of eastern rivers of the Indus basin (Ravi, Beas and Sutlej).

As the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 is a perpetual treaty the ending of the transiting period will have no effect on the other provisions made therein regarding its functioning including tours and meetings of the Commission.

To establish and maintain cooperative arrangements for the implementation of the Treaty and to promote co-operation between the parties in the development of waters, the permanent Indus Commission comprising permanent Commissioners for India and Pakistan has been set up under the provisions of the Treaty.

For the fulfilment of the above purpose and its other functions the Commission is required to undertake once in every five years a general tour of inspection of the rivers and hold meetings at least once a year alternately in India and Pakistan.

During the last ten years the permanent Indus Commission has held 16 meetings and undertook eleven general tours and twelve special tours in India and 16 meetings, eleven general tours and nine special tours in Pakistan.

This is an example of active cooperation between the two countries on mutually beneficial projects.

Background: Under the Indus Waters Treaty 1960, which is a perpetual treaty, the entire flow of the three eastern rivers (Sutlej, Beas and Ravi) of the Indus system was allocated for unrestricted use of India.

However the transition period of ten years ending on 31st March, 1970 was provided in the treaty during which time India was to continue supplying waters to Pakistan from the eastern rivers for the use of such Pakistan canals as were dependent on the eastern rivers at the time of Partition.

This period was allowed in order to enable Pakistan to construct engineering works in Pakistan which would enable waters to be transferred from the western rivers (Indus, Jhelum and Chenab) of the Indus system for replacing supplies received by these canals from the eastern rivers.

Under the treaty India also agreed to make a fixed contribution of Pound 62,060,000 (about Rs.980 million) to meet a part cost of these engineering works. The tenth and the last installment was paid on October 31 last year.

2518. Report submitted by the Indian and Pakistan negotiators to resolve the differences of opinion among the Permanent Commissioners regarding interpretations of Article IX (1) of the Indus Water Treaty 1960.

Islamabad, January 22, 1976.

From :

(i) Shri B. Sen and Shri O.P. Chadha
    Negotiators of the Government of India and

(ii) Sheikh Ghias Mohammad and Khalil-ur-Rahman,

To :

(i) The Government of India,
    New Delhi.

(ii) The Government of Pakistan,
    Islamabad.

Subject: Resolution of The Disputes concerning Article IX (1) of the Indus Waters Treaty 1960.
Sir,

2. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan had, under the provisions of Article IX(4) of the Treaty, invited the Government of India to resolve the said disputes by agreement and had, for this purpose, appointed Sheikh Ghias Mohammad and Mian Khalil-ur-Rahman, as the Government of Pakistan’s Negotiators. The Government of India appointed Shri B. Sen and Shri P.R. Ahuja, as the Government of India’s Negotiators. For the fourth meeting of the Negotiators Shri O.P. Chadha was appointed as Negotiator in place of Shri P.R. Ahuja.

3. The Negotiators held four meetings in all. These meetings were held at the places and on the dates indicated below :-

At the meetings the Negotiators were assisted by the following advisers: -

India

1. Dr. J.K. Malhotra (1st meeting only)
2. Shri B.S. Bansal (2nd and 3rd meeting)
3. Shri O.P. Chadha (1st, 2nd and 3rd meeting)
4. Shri I.P. Khosla (1st, 2nd and 3rd meeting)
5. Dr. R.K. Dixit (1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th meeting)

Pakistan

1. Mr. M.A. Ameen (1st, 2nd and 3rd meeting)
2. Mr. Iftikhar Ali Qureshi (1st and 2nd meeting)
3. Mr. Zahid Saeed (1st, 2nd and 3rd meeting)
4. Mr. C.A. Rehman (4th meeting)
5. Mr. A.G. Chaudhary (4th meeting)
(4th meeting) (4th meeting)

4. The Negotiators are happy to inform the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan that they have been able to resolve all the five issues in dispute as below :-

(i) The first issue in dispute was :-

"Whether the questions to be examined under Article IX(1) are to be framed by the Commission or by the Party making the reference to the Commission?"

The Negotiators resolved this issue in the following manner:-

"When a question is brought before the Commission under the provisions of Article IX(1) of the Indus Waters Treaty 1960, the Commission shall, at its meeting held for the consideration of the question, endeavour to make an agreed formulation of the question for examination. However, if either Commissioner, after discussion of the matter, comes to the conclusion that an agreed formulation of the question is not possible, then each Commissioner should formulate the question independently and the Commission should thereafter examine both the formulations of the question."

(ii) The second issue in dispute was:-

"Can the Commission examine under Article IX(1) a claim for financial compensation raised with respect to any question to be examined by it under the said Article? If so, should the claim for compensation be raised at the time of the initial reference of the question to the Commission or should it be raised after the Commission has completed the examination of the basic question?"

The Negotiators resolved this issue in the following manner:-

"When any question concerning the application of the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 or the existence of any fact which, if established, might constitute a breach of the said Treaty, is referred to the Commission, the Commission shall examine the question under the provisions of Article IX(1) of the Treaty, and in the event of the Commission coming to an agreed conclusion that the facts established constitute a breach of a provision of the Treaty, the Commission shall, if a Party so desires, also examines the claim for financial compensation as a consequence flowing from the said breach. Nothing will preclude a Party from stating in its reference to the Commission that a relief in the form of financial compensation would be claimed if the existence of the facts giving rise to the claim for financial compensation is established.

Even where the Commission has not agreed on the question of breach of a provision of the Treaty and has consequently not examined the claim for financial compensation, it will not preclude the Negotiators, appointed under Article IX(4) of the Treaty, or the Court of Arbitration, established under Article IX(5) of the Treaty, from considering the claim for financial compensation in addition to the existence of the facts giving rise to the claim for financial compensation.”

(iii) The third and the fourth issues in dispute, which being inter-linked were considered together by the Negotiators, were :-

“(iii) In the examination of a question under Article IX(1) of the Treaty, should the Commission, as a single body, hear the Parties and/or consider the material submitted by the Parties, or should the two members of the Commission also simultaneously act as representatives of the Parties and argue the respective points of view of the Parties between themselves, or should the Commission follow some other procedure and, if so, what would be the appropriate procedure?”

The Negotiators resolved these two issues in the following manner:-

“In examination of a question under Article IX(1) of the Treaty :-

(a) The two Commissioners act as the representatives of the Parties, namely, their respective Governments;

(b) As representatives, the Commissioners can present the view points of their own Governments but this will not preclude the Commissioners from invoking the help of advisers;

(c) The Commissioners act to resolve the question as the representatives of their Governments; and

(d) As the Commissioners are accredited agents of their respective Governments and arrive at a solution of a question in that capacity by agreement, their agreed solution will bind their principals i.e., the two Governments.”
(iv) The fifth issue in dispute was:

“Can the Commission ask the Parties to supply data and any other information that may be needed for the examination of a question under Article IX(1) of the Treaty?”

The Negotiators resolved this issue in the following manner:-

“If the two Commissioners, acting in the Commission as representatives of the Parties, agree that certain data or information provided for in the Treaty, which may not have been furnished, is needed for the examination of a question under the provisions of Article IX(1) of the Treaty, the Parties shall supply such data or information.”

For the Origin of the Dispute Please see Document No.2512.
2519. Joint Communiqué issued at the end of talks on Salal Project on the River Jehlum.

New Delhi, October 7, 1976.

At the invitation of His Excellency Shri J.S. Mehta, Foreign Secretary, Government of India, a Pakistan delegation led by His Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi, Foreign Secretary, Government of Pakistan, visited New Delhi, from October 3 to 7, 1976 to hold talks concerning differences over the design of the Salal Hydro Electric Project to be built by India on the River Chenab.

The Pakistan Foreign Secretary was assisted by the following: His Excellency Mr. Fida Hassan, Pakistan Ambassador in India, Mr. Khalilur Rehman, Additional Secretary, Ministry of Fuel, Power and Natural Resources, Mr. Hayat Mehdi, Director-General, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Habibur Rehman, Pakistan Indus Water Commissioner, Mr. Shahid M. Amin, Minister, Embassy of Pakistan, Mr. Mujahid Hossain, Counsellor, Embassy of Pakistan, and Mr. Zafar Hilaly, Director, Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

The Indian Foreign Secretary was assisted by the following: Sheri Y.K. Murthy, Chairman, Central Water Commission, Sheri K.S. Bajpai, Ambassador of India in Pakistan, Shri C.C. Patel, Additional Secretary, Department of Irrigation, Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation, Shri K.S. Subramanyam, Member, Central Electricity Authority, Dr. I.P. Singh, Joint Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, Dr. S.P. Jagota, Joint Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, Shri O.P. Chadha, Joint Secretary, Department of Irrigation, Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation, and Commissioner for Indus Waters, Shri R.C. Bhargava, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Energy, Shri A.N. Harkauli, Member (Design & Research), Central Water Commission, Shri K. Doshi, Counsellor, Embassy of India, Islamabad, Shri M.N. Venkatesan, Director (Monitoring), Central Water Commission and Mrs. L.K. Ponappa, Under Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs.

During his stay in New Delhi, His Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi was received by the Prime Minister of India, Smt. Indira Gandhi. He also called on Shri Jagjivan Ram, Minister of Agriculture and Irrigation, Shri K.C. Pant, Minister of Energy and Shri P.N. Haksar, Deputy Chairman, Planning Commission.

The two delegations held several rounds of detailed discussions with a view to arriving at a mutually satisfactory settlement of their differences regarding the design of the Salal Plant, in terms of the Indus Water Treaty 1960.

The discussion were held in an amicable atmosphere.

The two Foreign Secretaries noted that the spirit of accommodation shown by both sides had enabled differences to be considerably narrowed. They recognized that despite their best efforts it had not been possible to agree on all points relating to the design of the plant in the short space of the current round of negotiations. They agreed that the matter should be discussed further. For this purpose the Pakistan foreign Secretary has extended an invitation to an Indian Delegation led by the Indian Foreign Secretary to visit Islamabad from 19th October to 21st October, 1976.

The Pakistan foreign secretary expressed his sincere thanks to the Indian Foreign secretary for the warm hospitality extended to the Pakistan delegation.

2520. Joint Communiqué issued on the conclusion of talks on Salal Project on the River Jehlum.
Islamabad, October 21, 1976.

Pursuant to the invitation extended by His Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi, Foreign Secretary, Government of Pakistan, at the conclusion of the talks held in New Delhi from 3 to 7 October 1976 on the design of the Salal Hydro-Electric Project, an Indian delegation led by His Excellency Mr. Jagat S. Mehta, Foreign Secretary, Government of India, visited Islamabad from 19 to 21 October, 1976.

The Indian Foreign Secretary was assisted by the following: H.E. Mr. K.S. Bajpai, Ambassador of India in Pakistan, Mr. C.C. Patel, Secretary, Department of Irrigation, Mr. Y.K. Murthy, Chairman, Central Water Commission, Dr. I.P. Singh, Joint Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, Mr. O.P. Chadha, Joint Secretary, Department of Irrigation and Commissioner for Indus Waters, Mr. R.C. Bhargava, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Energy, Mr. Kiran Doshi, Counsellor, Embassy of India, Mr. Nareshwar Dayal, Counsellor, Embassy of India, Mr. M.N. Venkatesan, Director, Central Water Commission, Dr. R.K. Dixit, Director, Ministry of External Affairs and Mrs. L.K. Ponappa, Under Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs.

The Pakistan Foreign Secretary was assisted by the following: His Excellency Mr. S. Fida Hassan, Ambassador of Pakistan in India, Mr. Masrur Hasan Khan, Secretary, Ministry of Fuel, Power and Natural Resources, Mian Khalilur Rehman, Additional Secretary, Ministry of Fuel, Power and Natural Resources, Mr. Hayat Mehdi, Director General, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Mr. S. Habibur Rehman, Pakistan Commissioner for Indus Waters and Mr. Z.A. Hilaly, Director, Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

During his stay in Islamabad His Excellency Mr. Jagat S. Mehta was received by the Prime Minister of Pakistan Mr. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. He also called on Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs.

The two delegations resumed discussions on various points relating to the design of the Salal Project. The discussions, which were comprehensive in nature, succeeded in creating a better understanding of each other’s viewpoint and in resolving some of the outstanding points. It was recognized that certain aspects needed to be studied further. They, therefore, agreed that the two delegations should meet again as soon as these studies had been completed.

The talks were held in the same amicable atmosphere as prevailed during the discussions in Delhi. The Foreign Secretaries expressed satisfaction at the earnest efforts made to resolve the remaining differences in keeping with the letter and spirit of the Indus Waters Treaty of 1960. They expressed the hope that during the next round of talks the two delegations would be able to arrive at a mutually satisfactory solution.

The Indian Foreign Secretary expressed his sincere thanks to the Pakistan Foreign Secretary for the warm hospitality extended to the Indian delegation.

2521. Letter from Chief Minister of Jammu and Kashmir Shaikh Mohammad Abdullah to Prime Minister Morarji Desai conveying proposal to construct a barrage on River Jhelum.

My dear Morarji Bhai,

I encroach upon your valuable time on a matter of great urgency and importance to us. The winter discharge of the Jhelum river is about 2,000 cusecs as against 10,000 cusecs during summer. We are hard hit by it, in that our navigation comes to a standstill and generation of power in our old power house at Mohora and in the one going to be commissioned soon at Gantamulla as well as that proposed to be built near Uri, all located below Baramulla, goes down by 80%.

We intend building a barrage upstream of Sopore town just below the exist of Wular lake. But under the Indus Water Treaty we can build storage dams only on the tributaries of the Jhelum and not on the main river Jhelum itself. There being only a single outlet for the Jhelum river at Khadanyar below Baramulla, capable of discharging a maximum of 35,000 cusecs, it makes no difference to Pakistan whether dams are built either on the tributaries of Jhelum or on the Jhelum itself. Building dams on tributaries would cost us hundreds of crores of rupees. On the other hand, construction of a barrage over the Wular just below the exist of the lake high enough to raise the level of the lake to 5,177 ft. which is 9-10 ft. below the highest flood level, would cost us only Rs.12-14 crores. This will enable us to use the river not only for navigation during the lean period, but also help increase the water discharge of the river from 2,000 cusecs to 4,000 cusecs to firm up power generation in our run-of-the river schemes at Mohora and in the one to be commissioned soon at Gantamula as well as the one proposed to be built near Uri.

We feel that Pakistan will also stand to gain by this, inasmuch as Mangla dam which otherwise would remain partly empty during the four months of winter will also get 2,000 cusecs of extra water at a time when the discharge from Kishenganga and Jhelum tributaries completely trickles down.

According to newspaper reports our Foreign Minister is likely to visit Pakistan soon. May I request that he may kindly be asked to broach the subject to his counterpart in Pakistan if you deem fit?

With highest regards,

Yours sincerely,

(S.M. Abdullah)

Shri Morarji Desai,
Prime Minister,
Government of India,
New Delhi
Agreement between India and Pakistan on the Design of the Salal Hydro Electric Project.

New Delhi, April 14, 1978.

Being desirous of promoting and strengthening friendly relations between them on the basis of sovereignty, equality and mutual benefit.

Taking into consideration the provisions of the Indus Water Treaty, 1960, to which both the government are parties.

Having discussed the differences that had arisen between the two Governments regarding the design of the Salal Hydro-electric Plant on Chenab Main, and Without prejudice to the provisions of the Indus Waters Treaty, 1960 (hereinafter referred to as the Treaty) or to the rights and obligations of the parties thereunder,

Have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE 1

The salient features of the Salal Hydro-electric Plant shall conform to the following:

(i) Location : at Salal,
Longitude : 74 50' East
Latitude : 33 08' North

(ii) Full Pondage Level : Not higher than EL 1600 feet.

(iii) Operating Pool : 'NIL'

(iv) Dead Storage Capacity : Not exceeding 230, 303 acre feet.

(v) Immovable Crest Level of the Spillway : Not more than 30 feet below the full Pondage Level

(vi) Spillway Gates : 2 numbers, 50 feet wide and 30 feet high. The design shall provide for water to spillover the top of the spillway gates if the gates are not opened in time.

provision of the Treaty.
(vii) Level of Power Intakes: The centre line of the penstocks at the intake to be not lower than 27.5 feet below the full pondage level.

(viii) Outlet Works: Six numbers with sill level not below EL 1365 feet. These shall be permanently closed with concrete plugs within one year of the date of the first filling of the reservoir up to the Full Pondage Level or within three years of the date of the first filling of the reservoir up to the crest of the spillway, whichever is earlier. The Dead Storage shall not be depleted except in an unforeseen emergency endangering the safety of the earth of the concrete dams. In that event, India shall give immediate information to the Government of Pakistan of the nature of the emergency and may simultaneously undertake such action as may be necessary. In case of the removal of concrete plugs becomes necessary, India shall hold immediate consultations with the Representatives of the Pakistan Government including site inspection of the plant.

India shall not make any further alterations in the features of the design of the Plant specified in article I above except by mutual agreement.

ARTICLE 3

Any question which arises between the Parties concerning the interpretation of application of this Agreement or the existence of any fact which, if established, might constitute a breach of this Agreement shall be dealt with under the provisions of Article IX of the Treaty.

ARTICLE 4

Matters not expressly provided for in this Agreement shall be governed by the
ARTICLE 5

The terms used in this Agreement shall have the same meanings as in the Treaty.

ARTICLE 6

This agreement shall come into force upon signature.

Done in duplicate in the Hindi, Urdu and English languages at New Delhi on this Fourteenth day of April, 1978. All the texts will be equally authentic, however, in case of doubt, the English text will prevail.

2523. Statement to the Press by Pakistan Advisor on Foreign Affairs Agha Shahi after signing the Salal Dam Agreement.

New Delhi, April 14, 1978.

We have just signed an agreement of major importance to the two countries. It has taken us eight long years of difficult negotiations, marked by recurrent setbacks to arrive at a compromise which while ensuring great benefits to India, will at the same time safeguard the vital interests of Pakistan under the Indus waters Treaty of 1960.

The accord reflects the determination of the two countries to find peaceful adjustment of their essential interests. As such, it augurs well for an equitable settlement of outstanding disputes or differences.

The Heads of Government of Pakistan and India- General Zia-ul-Haq and Prime Minister Morarji Desai have made an indispensable contribution to the conclusion of the Salal agreement. It is their statesmanship, and their vision of Pakistan and India living together as good-not warring-neighbours, in permanent peace that has influenced the course of our negotiations. Foreign Minister Vajpayee’s role has been crucial to the successful outcome.
I believe that my visit, like Mr. Vajpayee’s earlier visit to Pakistan, has contributed to the further improvement of relations between Pakistan and India. Furthermore, I return to Pakistan, not unhopeful that the momentum of this process can carry us forward towards the goal of strengthening peace and security of the region in this nuclear era.

I would also like to pay a tribute to the members of the two delegations led by the Foreign Secretaries who have worked tirelessly and with a great sense of dedication and responsibility to prepare the ground for the conclusion of this agreement.

New Delhi, April 14, 1978.

The House will recall that the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 provided for exclusive use of three eastern rivers (Sutlej, Ravi and Beas) to India while Pakistan was allowed the exclusive use of waters of the three western rivers (Chenab, Jhelum and Indus). Exclusive use meant that except for some limited uses for domestic and agricultural purposes, the waters of the western rivers could not be utilized except for non-consumptive purposes such as the generation of hydro-electric power. However, under the Treaty, Pakistan, as a lower riparian, was entitled to study the design and raise objections on the grounds that the design did not, in their opinion, conform to the criteria laid down in the Treaty.

The Salal Hydro-electric Project on the Chenab in the state of Jammu and Kashmir was planned by the Central Water and Power Commission which, when completed, will generate 345 megawatts of power and provide significant increase in the availability of power for the State of Jammu and Kashmir and other States of the Northern Region. The designs were first sent to the Pakistan Commissioner for Indus Waters in 1970. Pakistan raised various objections to the design and urged in brief that the design was not in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty. It was also suggested that it would give India the capacity to manipulate the flows of the river which may cause harm to Pakistan. As a consequence, discussions had been going on in the Permanent Indus Commission since 1974 and were continued at the Foreign Secretary’s level since 1975.
These discussions did not resolve the difference, and as a result, at one stage, it was being discussed that the question might be referred, under the provisions of the Treaty, to a neutral expert. However, following the agreement for the restoration of diplomatic relations and other severed links and in keeping with the understanding reached in the Simla Agreement of 1972, we took the initiative to invite Pakistan to resume bilateral negotiations to resolve this problem. Pakistan agreed to the suggestion and two rounds of discussions were held at the Foreign Secretaries level in October 1976 at New Delhi and Islamabad. These negotiations succeeded in narrowing the differences and a broad understanding was reached on the points at issue pertaining to the design. However no agreement could be finalised.

VISIT TO ISLAMABAD

When I went to Islamabad in February this year, the Pakistan Government indicated their willingness to resume the negotiations on the Salal Plant. I am glad to report to the House that as a result of the present discussions it has been possible to reach and sign an agreement on the design of the Salal Hydro Electric Plant today. In terms of this Agreement, the height of the spillway gates shall be 30 feet and all the sluices shall be closed within one year of the date of first filling of the reservoir up to the full pondage level or within three years of the date of the first filling of the reservoir up to the crest of the spillway, whichever is earlier. Adequate provision has been made to meet any unforeseen emergency if the safety of the plant might be endangered. In essential respects, the specifications of the design are the same as were informally agreed in Islamabad in October 1976.

Thus, an important and most difficult problem which has been bedeviling relations between the two countries has been resolved to the satisfaction of both the countries.

The discussions were held in an atmosphere of understanding and cordiality which reflected a desire to foster friendly and good neighbourly relations on the basis of sovereign equality and mutual benefit in order to usher in an era of cooperation and confidence between the two countries.

INHERITED OBLIGATIONS

The Agreement once again demonstrates that the Janata Government respects inherited obligations and seeks to build with greater vigour cooperative relations with our immediate neighbours. We hope this Agreement will be a significant step to consolidate and to reinforce these policies and to make our subcontinent an area of stability and thus enable the nations of the region to optimize their natural resources and spur their development and promote the well-being of the people in the countries of the region.

2525. Aide Memoire from Embassy of India in Pakistan to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Islamabad, July 21, 1986.

Aide Memoire

The Governments of India and Pakistan have been engaged in government-level talks on Tulbal Navigation Project in terms of Article VIII of Indus Waters Treaty 1960. The first round of government-level talks was held in Islamabad on 4-5 October 1987. Since then these government-level talks have been held alternatively in New Delhi and Islamabad. The last round of these talks was the fifth one of the series and was held in Islamabad from 24-27 May 1988.

The Government of Pakistan had requested that construction on the project be suspended while government level talks with a view to reaching an amicable bilateral settlement were continuing. As a gesture of goodwill, good neighbourliness, cooperation, and in order to facilitate an early settlement, on a bilateral basis, Government of India, without prejudice to their rights and obligations under the Treaty, had agreed in October 1987, to suspend construction activities on the control structure for a period of three months. This was subsequently extended twice for further periods of three months each, on Pakistan's, specific requests. It was the hope and expectation of the Government of India that it would be possible to reach an amicable bilateral settlement during this period.

Even though the period of suspension of work agreed to by the Government of India had been only up to 2 June 1988, Government of India have refrained from resuming construction activity over the last seven weeks, i.e. ever since the last round of talks in Islamabad in May 1988, in the hope of receiving some positive indication from Government of Pakistan about a settlement. The Government of Pakistan would appreciate that it would be difficult for Government of India to continue with an indefinite suspension of work of the project particularly in the absence of tangible indication of Pakistan's desire to reach an amicable bilateral settlement.

The Government of India, at their highest level are to consider this matter within the next few days. It would help, prior to that date, if Government of India could receive from the Government of Pakistan some indication of their position in regard to reaching an amicable bilateral settlement on this issue.

Letter from Ambassador of India in Pakistan S.K. Singh to Foreign Secretary A.P. Venkateswaran enclosing an Aide Memoire from the Government of Pakistan.

Islamabad, September 28, 1986.

Ambassador of India
Islamabad

No.ISL/Amb/277/86 28 September,1986

My dear Foreign Secretary,

Please refer to your telegram No.34446 of September 24, regarding Tulbal Navigation Project being constructed by India on the river Jhelum main.

2. I enclose herewith copy of an Aide Memoire which was handed over to me by Foreign Secretary Abdul Sattar today when he called me to the Foreign Office. He wanted me to read this Aide Memoire first before he made oral comments and explanations. I told him that even before reading this I wanted to make some comments of my own on how their politicisation of a technical matter like this has appeared to us. I said that this matter had been under discussion between the Pakistani and Indian Commissioners for Indus Water for several months now. I told him that the data requested by the Pakistan Commissioner had been supplied even though no data was required to be supplied under the Treaty in a matter like this. Also that the Pakistani engineers had been enabled to visit the area in May 1986. In a situation like this, we were surprised, sadly surprised, to note that this matter was considered worthy of the attention by their Cabinet and the press briefed in exaggerated detail immediately thereafter on 23 September. Thereafter, the next day i.e. 24 September the Foreign Secretary himself, as Foreign Office spokesman gave a detailed and lengthy briefing to the international media representatives here plus Pakistani press (Indian media representatives were excluded).

3. And now, he was giving me this Aide Memoire which again is bound to be shared by them with the press. I told him that this, in my view, was no way of handling bilateral technical, engineering problems governed by a bilateral treaty; a treaty that has served both our countries well for more than a quarter of a century.

4. Thereafter I read the Aide Memoire and said that I notice the terms ‘… Pakistan taking a serious view’ ‘Pakistan protesting’ etc. in this document, I am sure they would go to town with this in their press. I said one could not avoid getting the impression that the effort is to focus attention on yet another dispute concerning even a technical matter related to the soil and water of Kashmir.
5. My comments put Sattar quite a bit on the defensive. Before making the following points, he said that he had decided to start calling the PTI man in Islamabad to all his briefings!

(i) that they should have been provided information at least 6 months in advance of the physical undertaking of the storage works.

(ii) That when they asked for data, it was not provided in 1985. They were given a three line reply.

(iii) That their fear is that India is going ahead constructing a barrage which will be 439 feet in length and that they will try later on to present this as a fait accompli.

(iv) That it is their hope that the issue will be settled between the technical experts. If it cannot be then the rest of the machinery for resolving differences e.g. inter-Governmental negotiations will have to be undertaken.

6. I should be grateful for instructions. However, it may be best to keep on handling this matter on the technical level. We must not respond point by point, or copiously, to Pakistan. Perhaps, an element of lofty disdain is in order.

Yours sincerely,

(S.K. Singh)

Aide Memoire from the Government of Pakistan

Under the provisions of the Indus Waters Treaty, 1960 between India and Pakistan, all the waters of the three Western Rivers i.e. the Indus, the Jhelum and the Chenab have been allocated to Pakistan for its unrestricted use. Article III (4) of the Treaty states that “Except as provided in Annexures D and E, India shall not store any water of, or construct any storage work on, the Western Rivers”. The permitted storage and uses of waters, which are an exception to the “unrestricted use” by Pakistan, are subject to the limits of Annexures D and E. Furthermore the provisions of Annexure E bind India to supply specified information at least 6 months in advance of the physical undertaking of storage works, and Pakistan has the right to object to the works on the ground that their design does not conform to the criteria laid down in the Annexure.

2. The Government of Pakistan has learnt that India has commenced work on the construction of a barrage on the Jhelum Main (Wullar Lake) in the area of the Indian held Jammu and Kashmir. The foundation of navigation lock, under sluices and adjoining bay of the barrage, had already been reportedly excavated.

3. The Pakistani Commissioner for Indus Waters had, at a number of times, conveyed Pakistan’s serious concern about the proposed barrage to his counterpart in India and sought details of the Project. The Indian Commissioner employed dilatory tactics and supplied partial and inadequate information only recently.

4. The Project, as now known to the Government of Pakistan, is expected to comprise of a barrage 439-feet in length located at the out-fall of Wullar Lake with a gated weir, under sluices and a 12 meter wide navigation lock.

5. The construction of this Project is in violation of Article III (4) of the Treaty as it far exceeds the limits of Annexure E. Pakistan was also not informed, again in violation of the Treaty provisions six months in advance of the commencement of works.

6. Strict observance of the Indus Waters Treaty is obviously indispensable to ensuring protection of the rights of the parties under the Treaty. The Government of Pakistan takes a serious view of the non-supply of the complete information in respect of the barrage being built by India on the Jhelum Main in clear violation of the provisions of the Treaty. The Government of Pakistan protest at this breach of Treaty obligations by India.

7. Article IX of the Treaty contains a self-executing procedure for resolving differences and disputes which arise between the parties concerning the interpretation or application of the Treaty. It is to be hoped that the matter will be resolved expeditiously, precluding prejudice to Pakistan’s interests due to delay in the settlement of the problem.

8. The Government of India is also urged, as a first step in that direction, to stop forthwith all construction work on the barrage in question. This would be in keeping with the mutual desire to promote good-neighbourly relations between the two States.

Islamabad,
28 September, 1986.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
2527. Statement by Pakistan Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Zain Noorani in the National Assembly.

Islamabad, September 30, 1986.

The National Assembly was informed on September 30 by the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Zain Noorani, that the construction of a barrage on the Jhelum river at the mouth of Wullar lake in Kashmir would entail a grave breach of the Indus Water Treaty.

Speaking on an adjournment motion sought to be moved by Mumtaz Ahmad Tarar, Mr. Zain said, the Pakistan Government will take effective measures in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty to prevent any detriment to Pakistan’s rights.

He declared that under the Treaty, India is not allowed even to store waters of the western rivers or construct any storage work on them.

He said the Pakistan Commissioner for Indus Waters has taken appropriate action under the Indus Treaty and the question has now to be resolved under the relevant provisions of the Treaty. If the Indus Commission does not reach a settlement, the Pakistan Government can take up the matter with the Indian Government to resolve the dispute by agreement, he added.

The treaty, he said provides also for the establishment of a court of arbitration for resolving a dispute not settled by agreement between the parties.

He said the question should be settled without delay as the Pakistan Government cannot resort to dilatory tactics for the creation of a fait accompli. Therefore, the government attaches great importance to an expeditious resolution of the question.

The Federal Cabinet, he said, has already given exhaustive consideration to this matter and taken serious note of the Indian plan. Pakistan’s official concern has already been conveyed to India expressing the hope that the matter would be resolved expeditiously precluding prejudice to Pakistan’s interests due to delay in the settlement of the problem.

As a first step in that direction Pakistan has called upon India to stop forthwith all construction work on the barrage.

He further said the two countries should implicitly honour the commitments under the Indus Treaty which has served the two countries well and contributed to the promotion of trust.
2528. Press Release issued by Embassy of India on Tulbul Navigation Project.

Islamabad, October 1, 1986.

The Indus water treaty concluded by Pakistan and India in 1960 has stood the test of time and served the two countries well. The Minister of State for Foreign Affairs of Pakistan, H.E. Mr. Zain Noorani is right in saying that this treaty is an elaborate and comprehensive document. It has been effective. And it has worked satisfactorily and contributed to promoting cooperation and goodwill between the two signatories.

2. There is no reason why this happy state of affairs should not continue. The Pakistani and Indian Commissioners for Indus waters have by now had more than a quarter of a century of experience in implementing the provisions of the treaty.

3. Against this background, it is regrettable that a comparatively small matter, concerning the Tulbul navigation project on the river Jhelum main, designed to permit round the year navigation in the Wullar Lake, which has been under discussion between the two commissioners should through this publicity be built up as an issue in Indo-Pak bilateral relations. It is noteworthy that the technical level discussions in this context are continuing; and have been conducted by the two sides in a spirit of cooperation and mutual understanding.

4. The fact that discussions are continuing has been emphasized in the press reports flowing from the official briefings given by the spokesman of the Cabinet on September 23, and of the Foreign Office on September 24, 1986. The statement made in the National Assembly by the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs on 30 September, further confirms this. In all these reports it is acknowledged that the technical level discussions between the two commissioners are yet to be concluded. These are indeed continuing. The Minister of State has informed the National Assembly also that there are available, under the provisions of the Indus Water Treaty, other methods of ironing out differences in case discussions in the Indus Commission fail to resolve this issue.

5. What all these briefings, statements and press reports do not clarify is why at this intermediate stage of bilateral discussions, the Pakistani side has deemed it appropriate or necessary to focus high wattage publicity on this technical matter.

6. Also these various statements etc. do not clarify that the bulk of the data which was requested by the Pakistan Commissioner for Indus water has already been supplied to him. In addition to supplying the required data, as a gesture of goodwill, and with a view to consolidating the spirit of cooperation which has been maintained in the implementation of the Indus Water Treaty, a Pakistani team was invited and did visit the project in May 1986.

7. It deserves to be mentioned that during the course of discussions the two sides have also given consideration to those aspects of this project which through regulating the depletion of the lake, maintaining the possibility of year-round navigation, would benefit Pakistan, through increasing the lean season flows in the Jhelum, obviating spills from the Mangla dam and making waters available at a later stage.

8. The above facts, which have not been mentioned hither-to deserve to be known.

9. It is India’s considered view that it does not serve any useful purpose, at this stage, to start a public debate, through the media, of technical issues presently under discussion in the technical forum prescribed under the treaty.

Islamabad, October 1, 1986.

Ambassador S.K. Singh addressing a Press conference at the Indian Embassy in Islamabad, regretted that the Pakistan government had tried to propagandise a “minor point” into a major controversy when talks were still continuing at technical level within the framework of the treaty “in a spirit of co-operation and understanding.” He failed to understand why “the Pakistani side deemed it necessary to focus high voltage publicity on this technical matter.”

As had been stated by the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Zain Noorani in the National Assembly, the Ambassador said the treaty signed in 1960 was an elaborate and comprehensive document. “It had been effective, and it had worked satisfactorily and contributed to promoting co-operation and goodwill between the two signatories,” he added. He, therefore, saw no reason why this happy state of affairs should not continue. It was not fair to blow up the matter to excite the minds of Pakistani people as if “something terrible was happening,” he added.

Giving details of the works, the Ambassador said it was designed to permit round-the-year navigation in the Wullar Lake which had been under discussion between the two Commissioners.
During the course of discussion, he added, the two sides had also given consideration to those aspects of the project which, through regulating the depletion of the lake and maintaining the possibility of year-round navigation, would benefit Pakistan by increasing the lean season flows in the Jhelum, obviating spills from the Mangla dam, and making water available at a later stage.

A newsman pointed out that Pakistan had expressed the apprehension that the Indian government was using delaying tactics so that it might be presented with a fait accompli after the project was completed.

"Has it happened so far?" Mr. Singh asked.

In reply to a question, he said that he did not know when the excavations started for construction of the project. "I don’t have precise information.” “These probably, started six or seven months before the Indus Treaty Commissioners visit in May”, he added.

The water in the Jhelum would be stored and released in lean period. So there would be no denial of water to Pakistan.

The Pakistan government had stated that the water to be impounded under the project would be used for irrigation and power generation. The Indian Ambassador replied that this was not the case.

He told a questioner that his government would reply to Pakistan's protest in a manner conducive to continuance of talks in due course of time. The two neighbours had never rejected each other's protests so far as he could remember. In the last 26 years there had been many problems including the Salal Dam project which had been resolved. There was no reason why the matter of Wullar Lake project could not be resolved, Mr. Singh added.

That discussions were continuing had been emphasized in the Press reports flowing from the official briefings by the Pakistani authorities. The Minister of State had informed the National Assembly that under the treaty, other methods of ironing out differences were available in case discussions in the Indus Commissioner failed to resolve the issue. The talks were still in the first phase.

The Commissioners of Pakistan and India, accompanied by secretaries of the relevant ministries, had discussed the project as recently as the first week of September, he disclosed.

These various statements, Mr. Singh went on to state, did not clarify that the bulk of the data requested by the Pakistan Commissioner had already been supplied to him. "As a gesture of goodwill and with a view to consolidating the spirit of cooperation which has been maintained in the implementation of the treaty, a Pakistan team was invited and did visit the project in May last."
2530. Media Briefing by the Official Spokesman of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs

Islamabad, October 1, 1986.

A Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman told newsmen in Islamabad on October 1 that the Pakistan government had asked the Indian government that if it proceeded with the construction of barrage in the present shape, it would present Pakistan with a fait accompli. “We want to avoid this situation by urging India to start talks at the commissioner level to resolve the issue without any delay,” he said.

He said the treaty was comprehensive, elaborate and precise and contained self operating mechanism for resolving a dispute between the two countries. There were different stages in the treaty for settling a dispute. First, he explained the matter was to be discussed at technical level involving commissioners on both the sides. If they failed to arrive at a settlement, it was to be referred to the governments for taking up at political level.

In the event of a failure to resolve the issue at governmental level it would be sent for arbitration, he said.

The spokesman pointed out that Pakistan had been able to establish the existence of a question which was important for moving further in the matter. He said the Pakistan commissioner of the Indus Waters Treaty had approached its Indian counterpart for a meeting but the other side had not so far given any response.

Pakistan, he said, could not acquiesce to India’s bid to go ahead with the construction of such a barrage which would affect uninterrupted and natural flow of water downstream to which Pakistan had exclusive right under the treaty.

India under the treaty, he said, was obliged to provide any information regarding undertaking of any plan upstream without delay. But in this case, it took them a lot of time to provide Pakistan design information of the project. It was supplied to us in last spring while the matter was taken up a year earlier as it came to our notice, he said.

2531. Aide Memoire from the Embassy of India in Pakistan to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Islamabad, November 11, 1986.

In its Aide Memoire dated 28th September 1986, which was handed over on that date by the Pakistan Foreign Secretary to the Indian Ambassador, the Government of Pakistan have alleged that the Tulbal Navigation Project, reportedly under construction, is in violation of Article III (4) of Indus Waters Treaty 1960 and have urged immediate cessation of all construction work on the Project. They have also complained about non-supply of complete information in advance of the commencement of the work under the provision of Annexure E to the Treaty and that the Indian Commissioner employed dilatory tactics and supplied partial and inadequate information only recently.

2. The allegations made by Pakistan in the above mentioned Aide Memoire have been carefully examined and are found to be totally unjustified and are denied. Pakistan’s allegations presume that India was bound to supply information in advance and did so belatedly, whereas it was in fact necessary to examine whether advance information was obligatory and whether there was any violation of the Treaty as alleged. Examination of these issues necessarily took some time and this did not constitute any delay on the part of the Indian Commissioner. The Indian Commissioner responded to Pakistan Commissioner’s requests for information with reasonable promptness and readiness and in a spirit of good will and cooperation. He informed the Pakistan Commissioner that the Tulbal Navigation Project had been taken up to improve the navigation of the Jhelum river and that, as this Project was not a storage work, provisions of Annexure E were not attracted; however, he made available the important salient features of the Project and drawings in a spirit of good will and cooperation. The Pakistan Commissioner wanted to visit the Project and this was readily arranged by India and the Project was visited. It is, therefore, not understood why Pakistan had said that they had ‘learnt’ that the work on Tulbal Navigation Project had been commenced and that foundation had been reportedly excavated. After the visit to the Project the Pakistan Commissioner gave a list of further data prepared in his own handwriting and practically all of this was also supplied by the Indian Commissioner. The matter was discussed in the Commission in May 1986 when the Indian Commissioner handed to the Pakistan Commissioner a copy of the note covering the scope of the Project and India’s views. It was again discussed in the Commission meeting held in July-August 1986 when the two Commissioners agreed to hold the next meeting in December 1986 and take up the matter under Article IX(i) of the Treaty at the next meeting.
3. In a nutshell the Tulbal Navigation Project is purely a control structure meant for improving the navigability of the Jhelum river. A natural storage is already available in the Wular Lake and this structure will neither contribute to raising the water level in the Wular Lake nor involve any consumptive use of the waters. The Tulbal Navigation Project is not a storage work and as such provisions of Article III (4) are not violated, and the limits of the Annexure E do not apply. Accordingly, India was not bound to communicate, in advance, the information specified in that Annexure, which is meant for storage works. Nevertheless all the information required by the Pakistan Commissioner was supplied as a gesture of good will and cooperation and a visit to the Project was readily arranged on the request of the Pakistan Commissioner.

4. Since the Tulbal Navigation Project is in complete conformity with the Indus Water Treaty 1960, there is no call for considering the stoppage of work on the Project.

5. As Pakistan’s Aide Memoire itself points out, the Treaty contains a self-executing procedure for resolving differences and disputes which arise between the Parties concerning the interpretation or application of the Treaty. The issue relating to Tulbal Navigation Project has been taken up by the two Commissioners under Article IX (1) of the Treaty. The procedure laid down under this Article can be followed. Alternatively, the matter can also be taken up by either Government directly with the other Government under Article VIII(1). It is therefore, regrettable that instead of following the procedures laid down in the Treaty, Pakistan has seen fit to mount a veritable publicity campaign in the matter made up of slanderous and unfounded charges against India. The Government of India is deeply concerned at this step of Pakistan, which has not only given yet another setback to the normalization process between the two countries but is also quite unwarranted and indeed against the spirit of the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 as the issue is still under discussion within its framework. Further, there is no prejudice to Pakistan’s interests from this Project. On the contrary, Pakistan would stand to benefit from this Project. The Government of India sincerely hopes that the Government of Pakistan would adopt a more constructive approach so that such technical issues can be resolved in the relevant technical fora.

10. Syed Habib-ur-Rehman, formerly Pakistan Commissioner for Indus Waters.

2. Two new members were added to the Pakistan Delegation at Sl. Nos 9 and 10 above. These new members were formerly Pakistan Commissioners for Indus waters. Mr. Khalilur-Rahman held the post for nine years from 1964 to 1973 whereas Syed Habib-ur-Rehman held this post for about 13 years from 1973 to 1986. The treaty came into effect in 1961 and thus, in 27 years of the life of the Treaty, these two officers remained as Pakistan Commissioner for Indus water for almost 22 years.

Brief Account of discussions (on 23.2.1988)

3. After exchange of pleasantries, Secretary (Water Resources) recalled that good ground had already been covered during the last two rounds of Secretary-level talks. The only significant event which took place after the two rounds of Government-level talks was the technical discussions at the level of the two Commissioners held at Lahore at the end of January 1988. India had also supplied to Pakistan the studies for the Tulbal Navigation Project based on the historical data for 10 years 1975-76 to 1984-85. It would be better for both the sides if the two commissioners could tell us the areas covered by them and the outcome of the discussions.

4.1 The Indian Commissioner for Indus Waters recalled that during the second round of Secretary-level talks (held from 10th to 14th November, 1987) it was decided that India would supply the studies for 10 years during November, 1987 itself and Pakistan was to send its comments within 10 days after receipt of Indian study. Thereafter, the Commissioners were to meet for discussions at the technical level. India supplied the studies on 25.11.87; but till today Pakistan's comments on the studies supplied by India had not been received. Mr. Abdul Rahim had been telling that they would require some more time. However when contacted on telephone, the Pakistan Commissioner said that they would give their reactions at the time of technical discussions at Lahore from 29.1.1988 to 1.2.1988. After these discussions, the Pakistan Commissioner gave the Indian Commissioner a rough study for only a period of 10 months (from May 1981 to February 1982) regarding the effect of Tulbal Navigation...
Project on supplies reaching Mangla Dam. The Pakistan Commissioner also gave a stage-capacity curve for Mangla reservoir for the pre-1985 and post-1985 periods. The Pakistan Commissioner was given the study for the 10th year 1984-85.

4.2 During the technical discussions the Pakistan Commissioner broadly raised the following points:–

1. The full operating level of 5177.90 ft. assumed in the design of Tulbal Navigation Project was not the dominant level and was on the high side.

   It was explained by us that the Project was formulated in 1981 and that the Wular Lake did achieve a dominant level of 5177.90 ft. A statement was given to Pakistan Commissioner in support of this conclusion.

2. The Tulbal Project would have adverse impact not only on Mangla and the proposed Kohala and Abbasiya Projects in Pakistan but also on lower Jhelum and the proposed Uri Hydel Project in India.

   It was explained by us that initially there could be some impact but ultimately the operation of the Tulbal Project would firm up power generation at Mangla as well as at Kohala and Abbasiya. Further, the fluctuations, if any, would be only on the side and would be evened out by the large valley storage on a length of 240 Km up to Mangla.

3. India had kept the minimum operating level of 5167.00 ft but it had the capability of going below this level.

   It was explained by us that in order to keep the channel navigable towards the side the lock is located, it would be desirable to operate only the overflow portion No.1 and as such the minimum operating level of 5167 ft. was ok. In any case, the additional capacity up to the level it would go, would only be 1300 acre feet or so.

4. India did not earlier indicate that the design of the project was based on 12-hour release of 4000 cusec in a day. All along it was indicated that 4000 cusec would be run in the outfall channel for 24 hours a day.

   It was explained by us that the 12 hours operation was based on the 1981 project itself and was not a recent change.

4.3 The Indian Commissioner, requested that Pakistan should now give their response to our 10 year study already supplied to Pakistan.

5. The Pakistan Commissioner stated that stage-area and stage-capacity curve of Mangla had already been supplied to India on 1.2.1988 and India could itself work out the impact of the Wular Barrage on the supplies reaching at Kohala. The missing data regarding Mangla Project had also been supplied.

6. The Indian Commissioner explained that immediately after the technical discussions, the Pakistan Commissioner was informed that India did not have the inflow or the outflow data at Mangla Dam on which Pakistan’s study for one year (1981-82) handed over on 1.2.1988, was based. This data had not yet been supplied. However assuming the Kohala discharges as inflow into the Mangla, we have made an assessment that Tulbal Project would be beneficial to Pakistan also.

[Later this point was discussed with the Pakistan Commissioner and WAPDA Officials and it was agreed to by them that inflow or the outflow data of Mangla Dam was not available with India and would have to be supplied to India within a week or 10 days.]

7. Pakistan Secretary (Water and Power) stated that he did agree to the supplying of study for only 10 years by India, but he had also suggested for the study for the post-Mangla period from 1967-87 i.e. for 20 years. According to him it was not possible to draw conclusions based on data for such a short period. The conclusions based on longer data could be entirely different. If only 50% data is supplied, the probability would only be 50%. He further stated that his boys were reluctant to undertake the study unless full 20 years' study for 1967-87 was supplied by India. According to him, the operation of Mangla and Wular Barrage had to be simulated and the data to be made available by India had to be superimposed on Mangla. This was necessary because as stated by him earlier that the Mangla spilled in 13 out of 20 years (In fact Mangla spills in 12 out of 16 years).

8. The Pakistan Secretary also brought out that 12 hours operation in a day was not informed earlier by India. Such an operation would have effects on Mangla and other projects lower down. Further, with the 12 hours operation how much time the water would take to travel; this study was also required to be done by India.

9. The Pakistan Secretary again reminded for supply of the Tulbal Project report. If India could supply the project report, Pakistan could superimpose the data in Mangla. No Project was based on 10 years data. In hydrology, data of 50 to 100 years was considered the minimum.

10. The Pakistan Secretary further said that a non-technical person had suggested that India could achieve the same objective by constructing 10-12’ high ungated weir at Baramulla without infringing the Treaty. The slopes in the reach, Wular to Baramulla, are very gradual as the velocity of 3. km. per hour
(as given by the Indian Commissioner) indicated. Earlier a number of alternatives like series of barrages, flat bottom barges etc. were discussed but such a simple proposal as suggested by a non-technical person never occurred either to India or to Pakistan. The Pakistan Secretary recalled his opening remarks at the first round of Secretary-level talks when he mentioned that sanctity of the Treaty was of paramount importance and the less it was interfered with, the better it would be. Any interference with the Treaty had to be avoided. This alternative would not interfere with the Treaty and should be examined by India. Below Baramulla, there were rapids and no navigation was possible.

11. The Indian Secretary (Water Resources) stated that the question was of time. The time was the essence of the matter. The matter had been put to the CCPA and it was with great difficulty that the CCPA agreed to suspension of the work for a limited period. Lot of objections were being received from the state Government also who were executing this project. It would be difficult for India to go in for an open ended discussion. After the last meeting in Delhi in November, 1987, the two Commissioners were still finalizing the data.

12. Coming to supply of data for a longer series, the Secretary (Water Resources) Stated that he had no objection for consideration of data of 50 or 100 years, but that would depend on the size of the project. This kind of a small project for control structure could be described as a peanut compared to large multi-purpose projects. He had no hesitation to go into as many details as were necessary. Also lots of refinements could be done. But for the present, in his opinion, some broad conclusions could be reached even on the basis of studies for 10 years already supplied by India. It was required at this stage only to see whether this project was advantageous to Pakistan or disadvantageous. It was not necessary to exactly measure these with general accuracy at this stage. If it was assessed that this project was of material disadvantage to Pakistan then it would not be processed within its present shape. It should be seen whether it was causing disturbances which would prejudice the interests of Pakistan over the years. This was the point on which a conclusion should be reached within the time-frame.

13. Regarding the 12 hour operation, the Indian Commissioner reiterated that 12-hour operation was nothing new but already provided for in the 1981 project planning itself.

14. As regards the Project Report the Secretary (Water Resources) stated that, besides, the concurrence of the State Government of J&K, concurrence of a number of ministries was also required. Efforts were being made to obtain their concurrence. According to the practice in India, Project Reports of one State could be given to the other state only after the concurrence of the owner. Nevertheless, Secretary (Water Resource) stated that this project, being a Transport Project, the Report mainly discussed the road transport versus river transport etc. Much more data than was contained in the Project Report had already been supplied by India.

15. Referring to the alternative of a weir at Baramulla, Secretary (Water Resources) stated that this alternative must have been considered, but still he would get it examined again. The Indian side also explained that because of heavy silt and debris being brought down by Pohru and other tributaries joining the Jhelum below the Wular Lake such a proposal was not practicable. Further, this proposal would require substantial raising of banks of the river in a length of about 20 Kms. which besides being very costly would require acquisition of land which would be very difficult. The Tullbal Navigation Project, besides improving the draft in the channel below it, would also improve the draft upstream of the Wular also. Further, already huge expenditure (Rs.15-20 crores) had already been incurred on the Tullbal Project.

16. Reacting on the point of 12-hours operation the Indian Commissioner stated that with a velocity of about 3 Km/ hour it would take about 6 hours for the water to travel between the Project and Baramulla to build up the required draft and the flotillas could be used in the remaining 6 hours period and as such the 12 hours operation would be quite feasible. Further, the Mangla dam was 240 Km below the project and fluctuations, if any, would be evened out by valley storage in this long reach of the river.

17. Secretary (Water Resources), thereafter, requested that Pakistan should give their reactions on the 10 years study already supplied by India. This would indicate to us Pakistani approach in the matter.

18. Pakistan Secretary (Water & Power) reiterated that his officers were reluctant to take up the study unless complete study for 20 years (1967-87) was supplied by India.

19. Secretary (Water Resources) at this stage handed over the study for the period 1967-68 to 1974-75 and stated that this would mean a study for 18 years had been supplied by India. The study for the remaining two years would also be supplied after collecting the missing data from the state Govt, but that should not hold up Pakistan’s reactions in the matter. Pakistan should give their reaction on the 18 years study already supplied to them.

20. At this stage, the former Pakistan Commissioner for Indus waters Syed Habib-ur-Rahman was asked to give his reaction in the matter. He stated that to come to a definite conclusion it was necessary to have longer data. Why it was important to have longer data was evident from India’s own studies. The lake did not attain the level of 5178’ or so every year as claimed by India.
When queries were made, it was explained that regulation of the project would be started at different levels in different years. Sometimes, this level was achieved in April. Further queries revealed that India would operate the project only for 12 hours a day. As such, long period data was necessary as we had to sell this project to the people. We could not sell it unless we show them that it would not cause any damage to Pakistan’s interests. From the Indian side the premises had been changed and conclusions amended from time to time. No timings of operation had been indicated in the Indian studies.

21. The Pakistan Commissioner for Indus Waters (Mr. Abdul Rahim) said that besides the missing data India had also to supply the long-section and cross-section of the outfall channel. This data should be supplied now as the one supplied in the sixties was obsolete. India had also not supplied the Ningli discharges after 1986.

22. The Indian side enquired how the long-section and cross-sections of the outfall channel were relevant to the study. Further, in case these long-sections and cross-sections were not readily available it would take lot of time to carry out the required surveys.

23. Syed Habib-ur-Rahman stated that it was India’s view, that the long-section and cross-section were not relevant. Pakistan wanted to know the present discharging capacity of the outfall channel to study the effect of Tulbal Project on the supplies reaching Pakistan. The long-section and cross-section of the outfall channel were very much relevant to determine the retention time of supplies reaching Pakistan.

24. The Indian Commissioner stated that he was doubtful if the latest long-section and cross-sections were readily available and it would take time if these were to be surveyed. He, however, requested that even with 10 years study, broad conclusions could be drawn out. Now the studies for 18 years had been made available and Pakistan should give their comments expeditiously. It was also indicated that the concurrent discharges of Jhelum at Kohala and at Sopore had been examined and it was seen that there were no material differences. The changes likely to be effected by the Tulbal Project in the Sopore discharges were superimposed on the Kohala discharges for the 10 years. The position which had emerged was very happy. This showed that even with the studies for 10 years a trend could be discerned.

25. After some discussions, the following was agreed:

(1) Pakistan would supply their comments on India’s study for 18 years within a week or 10 days.
(2) ‘Pakistan would also supply the data of outflows/inflows at Mangla dam .for the period 1967-87.

(3) India would supply their study of the remaining two years 1985-86 and 1986-87 soon.

(4) India would also try to supply the long-section and cross-sections of the outfall channel, if these were readily available and without involving fresh surveys.

(5) The fourth round of Secretary-level talks will be held at New Delhi from 22nd to 24th March, 1988. It could, if considered necessary, be extended by one more day.

2533. Statement by Pakistan Minister for Water and Power Kazi Abdul Majid Abid in Pakistan National Assembly.

Islamabad, April 17, 1988.

The National Assembly was informed on April 17 that government was fully seized of the matter regarding the construction of barrage “Tulbal Navigation Project” by India on Wullar Lake and was handling the issue seriously with caution and care.

The Pakistan government, he said, had agreed to hold negotiation on the desire of the Indian government with the pre-condition that work on the project would be stopped. The Indian government, he added, had responded, positively in this regard.

Four meetings on government-to-government basis at the Secretaries level, he said, had been held so far, two each in India and Pakistan. The fifth meeting in this connection would be held in the last week of the current month.

Explaining the Pakistan’s point of view, he said that the construction of the barrage was violation of the Indus Water Treaty. The Indian government, he said, had probably spent Rs. 180 million on the project so far.

Kazi Abid told the questioner, if the negotiations did not yield any positive result, there was a prescribed procedure under the treaty to proceed further in this matter. The Pakistan government, he said, would then have to go for arbitration in the International Court.
However, the Minister stressed that clauses of the treaty and its sanctity must be observed. Pakistan, he added, firmly held on its stand and had not shown any complacency in this regard.

2534. Statement by Pakistan Minister of Water and Power Kazi Abdul Majid Abid in the National Assembly.

The Minister for Water and Power, Kazi Abdul Majid Abid, has said that Pakistan would not allow India to deprive her of a single drop of due share of river water and for this purpose negotiations were continuing with India.

“But we have not given up other options including going in for international arbitration on the question of unilateral action of India to build up Wullar Barrage on river Jhelum,” he added, while winding up a two-hour discussion in the National Assembly on an admitted adjournment motion regarding the construction of the barrage on river Jhelum in ‘occupied’ Kashmir.

He said that the Indian Government had stopped the construction of the Wullar Barrage as the stoppal was Pakistan’s pre-condition to accept the Indian offer for bilateral negotiation.

Kazi Abdul Majid Abid said; “if we do not succeed in negotiations with India we have not given up other options available to us including going to international arbitrations provided in the Indus Basin Water Treaty.”

The Minister said that our experts were preparing sound and logical case. They had already done a good job and the report was ready for consideration by the Cabinet.

Kazi Abdul Majid said in unequivocal terms “India has violated the sacred provisions of the treaty. If it does not accept our case; we have the option of going for international arbitration”.

Dispelling the apprehensions of some of the members, Kazi Abdul Majid Abid said “the Government has not been negligent in the discharge of its duty. We will do our utmost to fight for our cause and will not allow even a drop of water to go from what is our right under the Indus Basin Treaty.

The Minister for Water and Power said “we will not allow anything that could jeopardize our right.” Any diversion of water from river Jhelum would damage our agriculture.
Kazi Abdul Majid Abid said Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo's Government fully shared the concern expressed by the members during the course of the discussion in the House. We have nothing to be shy and for every drop of water "we will resist with full courage. This Government is here to perform its functions with courage, conviction and patriotism. We are an elected government and there is no disagreement on the issue under discussion".

He said "we are particular to see that the terms of the treaty are honoured".

India started the construction of the barrage without consulting Pakistan to whom she had given a solemn pledge. We made a complaint of violation and had meetings of two Commissioners of Indus Water Treaty who also inspected the site. We asked India to stop work on Wullar Barrage to which India responded by saying she was prepared to discuss the matter on Government level, he added.

Kazi Abdul Majid Abid said that the Government shall not let down the country.

He said that the matter would come up for discussion of the House Standing Committee on Water and Power on Thursday, and invited Mr. Illahi Baksh Soomro, Chairman of the All Pakistan Engineers Association, to attend the committee meeting to give his expert opinion.

2535. Letter from Ambassador S.K. Singh to Pakistan Minister for Water & Power Kazi Abdul Majid Abid.
Islamabad, April 24, 1988.

Ambassador of India
Islamabad

No..ISL/112/1/8 24th April 1988

Excellency,

I have seen press reports of the statement you made on 18 April 1988 in National Assembly on the Tulbal Navigation Project. You are, therefore, aware that our two Governments have been engaged in Government level talks as provided for in Article 8(i) of the Indus Waters Treaty, in this matter. Four rounds of Secretary-level talks have already been held on this subject.

2. These Government-level talks commenced in October 1987. Prior to the commencement of these talks, Government of India, in the interest of goodwill, cooperation and for creating a proper atmosphere for an amicable bilateral settlement, decided to suspend construction on the project for a period of 3 months. Subsequently, in January 1988, Government of India agreed to a request of the Government of Pakistan for a further suspension of construction activity in another 3 months. In April 1988, Government of India extended this suspension for one more month. The understanding of the Government of India was that an amicable bilateral settlement would be reached during this period.

3. In pursuance of the decision taken at the 2nd round of talks held in New Delhi in November 1987, Government of India provided technical data and regulation studies relating to the projects. Government of India also arranged for the visit of the representatives of the Government of Pakistan, including the Indus Waters Commissioners of Pakistan to visit the project site in December 1987. The Pakistan side had agreed, at that time, to provide written responses and reactions to the data supplied by India. Regrettably, these responses and reactions have not yet been communicated. We feel that it would be difficult to hold any meaningful and result-oriented discussions until Pakistan has provided their responses.

4. The 5th round of Secretary-level talks was scheduled to be held in Islamabad from 23–25 April 1988. Pakistan authorities have indicated that they are too pre-occupied with relief operations necessitated by devastation and the resultant dislocation caused by the recent tragic Ojheri Camp accident to be able to hold this meeting here until after Eid.

5. It is understandable that the Government of Pakistan are unable to hold this meeting at the present moment, in Islamabad / Rawalpindi. Indeed, we have, at the highest level, conveyed our sympathy and condolences for the loss of human life in this tragedy. In this situation, the Government of India have decided, in a spirit of friendship and goodwill, and in an effort to reach an amicable bilateral settlement in the earliest time frame possible, to invite Pakistan to send its delegation to India before the end of this month for the next round of talks as was earlier agreed upon by the two sides.

6. I look forward to receiving your Excellency’s response at the earliest convenience.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(S.K. Singh)

H.E. Mr. Kazi Abdul Majid Abid,
Minister for Water and Power, Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, Islamabad.
Letter from Secretary Ministry of Water Resources Naresh Chandra to Foreign Secretary K.P.S. Menon.

Secretary to the Government of India
Ministry of Water Resources

Dear Shri Menon,

As you are aware, we had gone to Islamabad for the fifth round of Secretary-level talks on the Tulbal Navigation Project last week. I took the opportunity to call on the new Minister for Water & Power, Mr. Wazir Ahmed Jogezai on 25th May. Shri S.K. Singh, Indian Ambassador and the Secretary, Water & Power (Pakistan) were also present.

From my discussions with the Minister and Secretary, Water & Power, Pakistan, we learn that the issue relating to the Tulbal Navigation Project and the provisions in the Indus Treaty were discussed at length by the Cabinet of the Government of Pakistan. It appears that both the former Minister of Water & Power (Mr. Kazi Abdul Majid Abid) and the Secretary, Water and Power expressed themselves strongly in favour of coming to a bilateral settlement with India. They could not, however, convince the other Members of the Cabinet to come to a decision. Accordingly, the matter was deferred and the Ministry of Water and Power, Pakistan were asked to further examine the long-term implications of condoning the alleged violation of the Treaty by India going in for a “storage project” on the main stem of Jhelum river.

Consequent on the above directions by the Cabinet, the Ministry of Water and Power, Pakistan pressed for a further suspension of work on the Tulbal Navigation Project for a period of three months. At the same time, the forthright commitment has not been given by Pakistan that this would be sufficient to work out an agreement to settle the dispute amicably. We made it clear during the discussions that it would not be possible for us to continue with the period of suspension indefinitely in view of the fact that nothing tangible has been given by the Pakistan side so far. While they have informally admitted that the Tulbal Navigation Project would not prejudice the interest of Pakistan, even going to the extent of admitting grudgingly that it would confer benefit on them in terms of additional power generation and more irrigation during the lean months, they have not expressed their views in writing in reply to the studies furnished to them by the Indian side.

During discussions with the Minister, we also explained to him that under the Indus Waters Treaty 80 per cent of the water was allocated to Pakistan and the three eastern rivers allocated to India account for only 20 per cent of the total waters available. The so-called storage of 0.3 MAF temporarily created on the Wullar Lake is a small proportion of the 134 MAF of water flowing to Pakistan in a normal year. We emphasised the need for explaining the facts to the Members of their Senate and National Assembly in the proper perspective as also to counter misinformed press reports on the subject.

From our side we gave an indication that we would have to allow the Government of J & K to resume their work on the existing structures in order to insure them against possible damage during heavy flood in that area. It was also explained that these works are not on the Jhelum main but on one side of the river channel slightly down-stream of the Wular Lake. Technically speaking, these works do not involve any violation at all. We gave them to understand that we can accommodate their request for suspension to the extent of not permitting the State Government to start any work on the Jhelum main or at the point of out-fall from the Wular Lake to the river channel and that this should be taken as a sufficient gesture by India to continue the Secretary-level talks for arriving at an amicable bilateral settlement.

We understand that some of the officers of the Foreign Ministry Pakistan who have been taking part in the discussions are sympathetic to this view but they are not sure what the decision at the higher level would be.

We are expecting a formal communication from Pakistan any day requesting for further suspension of work on the project for another period of three months, i.e. from 2nd June 1988 to 1st Sept., 1988. We propose to reply to them on the lines indicated in the previous paragraphs.

It is felt that this matter could be raised during the talks shortly to be held at New Delhi at the level of Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan. In case the Pakistan Foreign Secretary could be persuaded to appreciate our point of view it might enable us to resume the work on the Tulbal Navigation Project without disruption of the talks at the level of Secretaries of Water Resources of the two countries and avoid a situation where Pakistan goes in for immediate steps to raise the matter in arbitration.

As regards the background to the case, this is contained in our last note for the CCPA dated 9th May 1988 which would be available in your Ministry.

With regards,

Yours sincerely,

(Naresh Chandra)

Shri K.P.S. Menon,
Foreign Secretary,
South Block, New Delhi.
2537. Draft Agreement on Tulbal Barrage.

October 12-13, 1991.

The Government of Islamic Republic of Pakistan and the Government of Republic of India

Desirous of promoting and strengthening friendly relations between the two countries on the basis of sovereign equality and mutual benefit.

Re-affirming their continued commitment to the Indus Water Treaty, 1960 (hereinafter referred to as the Treaty) and their sincere desire to maintain its sanctity and Desirous of arriving at a negotiated settlement on the Wullar Navigation Project (hereinafter referred to as the Project) on the Jhelum.

Have, in accordance with the provision of the Treaty, agreed as follows.

Article 1

The salient features of the Project shall conform to the features as laid down in the Annexure to this Agreement.

Article 2

India agrees to keep 6.2m of the structure as ungated with a credit level at EL1574.90 m (5167 ft).

Article 3

India shall not make any alteration in the salient features of the Project specified in Article 1 and 2 above except by mutual agreement between India and Pakistan.

Article 4

India shall forego a General Storage Capacity of 0.30 million acre-feet out of the provision permitted to it on the Jhelum (excluding the Jhelum Main) under Item (b) Paragraph 7 of Annexure to the Treaty.
Article 5
In consideration of India foregoing a General Storage Capacity of 0.3 Maf in terms of Article 4 above, the Project shall be entitled to attain Full Operational level of 5177.90 ft. each year. The annual filling of the lake upto the Full Operational Level and initial filling below the Dead Storage Level should be carried out at such times and in accordance with such rules as may be agreed upon between the Commissioners. In case the Commissioners are unable to reach agreement, India may carry out the filling during 21st June and 20th August.

Article 6
Except for the uses specified in Article III (2) of the Treaty and subject to the provisions of Article 5 of the Agreement, India shall be under an obligation to let flow all the waters entering Wullar Lake.

Article 7
Any question which arises between the Parties concerning the interpretation and application of this Agreement or the existence of any fact which, if established, might constitute a breach of this Agreement shall be dealt with under the provisions of Article IX of the Treaty.

Article 8
Matters not expressly provided for in the Agreement shall be governed by the provisions of the Treaty.

Article 9
The terms used in this Agreement shall have the same meanings as in the Treaty.

Article 10
The Agreement shall come into force upon signature.

2538. Joint Press Statement issued at the end of India Pakistan talks on Wullar Barrage/Tulbal Navigation Project.

New Delhi, November 5, 1998.

As part of the composite and integrated dialogue between India and Pakistan on the basis of the agreed agenda of 23rd June, 1997, Wullar Barrage/Tulbal Navigation Project was discussed in New Delhi on 5.11.1998. The Indian delegation was led by Shri Z. Hasan Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of Water Resources and the Pakistan delegation was led by Syed Shahid Husain Secretary to Government of Pakistan, Ministry of Water and Power.

Syed Shahid Husain will call on Shri B.C. Mishra, Principle Secretary to the Prime Minister of India.

The discussions were held in a frank and constructive atmosphere. While reaffirming their continued commitment to the Indus Water Treaty of 1960, both sides exchanged views and took note of the previous discussions on the subject from October 1987 to August 1992.

It was agreed that the discussions would continue at the next round of the dialogue process with a view to finding a solution to the issue consistent with the provisions of the Treaty.

2540. Joint press statement on India - Pakistan talks on Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project.

The delegations of Pakistan and India met in Islamabad on 29-30 July 2004 for discussions on the Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project as part of the Composite Dialogue. The Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Ashfaq Mahmood, Secretary to the Government of Pakistan, Ministry of Water & Power and the Indian delegation was led by Mr. V.K. Duggal, Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of Water Resources.

Mr. V.K. Duggal and the members of the Indian delegation called on Mr. Aftab Ahmad Khan Sherpao, Minister for Water & Power.

The talks were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere. Both sides reaffirmed their commitment to the Indus Waters Treaty of 1960.

It was agreed that the discussions would continue at the next round of the dialogue process with a view to finding a solution to the issue consistent with the provisions of the Treaty.

¹ At the conclusion of the talks, the leader of the Indian delegation and Secretary, Water Resources V.K. Duggal said: “The issues were discussed with total understanding towards the point of taking them to a resolution.” Pakistan’s Water Resources Secretary Ashfaq Mehmood said: “We had good discussion with an open mind, in an atmosphere of give and take and have covered sufficient ground” adding that “it is win-win situation.”
Media briefing by Secretary (Water Resources) V. K. Duggal on the failure of India–Pakistan talks on Baglihar dam project.

New Delhi, January 7, 2005.

The Secretary (Water Resources) V.K. Duggal told the media at the end of the India–Pakistan talks on the Baglihar Dam Project that Pakistan’s insistence that it will seek the appointment of a “neutral expert” to arbitrate on the project is not reflected in the agreed minutes, but “if it chooses to do it then we will state our position. India is clear that there is no deviation from the provisions of the Indus Water Treaty of 1960. A week in the seven-year history of the project was not a big time. But this was not accepted by the Pakistan delegation. Now both parties will report this position to the respective governments.” Mr. Duggal indicated that there could be convergence on some of the technical issues. He said there was no talk of re-opening of the treaty, “which had stood the test of time.” Asserting that this was the first time that quantitative discussions on the technical data had been held, Mr. Duggal said India received Pakistan’s observations on its technical data on December 31 with the request to hold talks from January 3. “We told them we needed more time to study the data yet we agreed to a meeting from January 4. On the second day of the talks we identified six technical issues, including weir at low level, pondage, level of intake, (un)gated spillway, free-board height and low-level tunnel. We even had a smaller group of engineers discuss the technical data but needed more time”, said Mr. Duggal.

Mr. Duggal, however maintained that the talks were “constructive and focused” and had moved forward. “Even though the discussions were inconclusive, a breakthrough had been achieved on the technical aspects,” he asserted. He said as a goodwill gesture India was willing to consider Pakistan’s objections provided they did not impact on the safety of the dam and the people. India even asked Pakistan to come up with alternate design calculations or some alternate fact sheet which could be examined on a “two-way basis.”

[Mr. Duggal’s media briefing came in the wake of failure of the India–Pakistan Baglihar talks. Pakistan said it would go ahead and seek the appointment of a “neutral expert” to address the differences with India as permitted by the Indus Water Treaty of 1960. Ashfaq Mahmood, Pakistan’s Water Resources Secretary told pressmen that this “next step” would be taken, as there had been no progress in the three-day]
In a related development, an External Affairs Ministry official said India was ready to continue technical discussions with Pakistan on Baglihar dispute. According to him the Indian position remained that the design of the project was well within the definitions contained in the Indus Treaty. According to the official, Pakistan's intention was to ensure that the Government of India could not go ahead with any project that would benefit the people of Jammu and Kashmir. All this was being done to prevent India going ahead with the Baglihar project. India, the official said, would not stop the construction of the project as demanded by Pakistan. In the case of Tulbul project, the construction was halted some 16 year ago, and since then the matter had been the subject of bilateral discussion, with Pakistan showing no urgency in resolving the issue. India did not want Baglihar to meet the same fate.

Earlier the two-day talks on the Baglihar had been extended by a day to resolve the differences persisting between the two delegations. Mr. V. K. Duggal told the media that both sides agreed that the talks were "constructive and focused" around the six technical issues short-listed on the previous day. "The talks are mid-way. We understand each other's point of view. We hope to conclude the talks by tomorrow," said Mr. Duggal. The Pakistani counterpart too agreed that the talks were "issue based".

1. External Affairs Minister Natwar Singh speaking in New Delhi after delivering the Lal Bahadur Memorial lecture on January 14 referred to the failed talks on Baglihar and said that the standoff between the two countries on the Baglihar power project would figure during his three-day visit to Islamabad beginning February 15. The Pakistani High Commissioner in New Delhi who was present, said that Islamabad had not yet taken any decision on approaching the World Bank to appoint a neutral expert to resolve the Baglihar project. "The issue is being examined by the Government of Pakistan. Whenever there is a decision, it will be announced", the High Commissioner said.

On January 18 the Spokesman of the Pakistani Foreign Office conceding that it was not a "good omen" for the Indo – Pakistan peace process, announced petitioning the World Bank for its arbitration in the Baglihar project. Same day i.e. January 18 India described Pakistani decision as not justified. The Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs Navtej Sarna said: "Our view has been that during the detailed discussions held at the level of Secretaries of Water Resources recently, there had been some convergence and we believe that through continued technical discussions, further convergence would be promoted. We do not believe that the reference to the World Bank is justified. The media quoting official sources in New Delhi said India had no intention to stop construction at the project as demanded by Pakistan. Pointing to the Tulbul navigation project on the Jhelum river, they said that Pakistan wanted the work to be stopped for three month; but now it was 17 years since the work had come to a stand still on Tulbul.
Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz on January 10 directed relevant government departments to make preparations on priority basis for seeking the World Bank intercession to resolve the Baglihar hydropower project dispute with India. The move has come two days after talks with India failed to resolve the dispute as both sides stuck to their positions. Pakistan maintains that the Baglihar dam, being constructed by India on river Chenab in Kashmir, violates the 1960 Indus Waters Treaty but India asserts it does not.

A high-level meeting presided over by Prime Minister Aziz at the PM House on recommended that the case be referred to the World Bank for appointment of a neutral expert. It may be recalled that the World Bank had originally brokered the bilateral water-sharing treaty on the Indus and also stood as its guarantor. The treaty gave both countries the third-party option in case of a deadlock over any issue.

Pakistan’s Water and Power Secretary Ashfaq Mahmood, who led the Pakistani delegation at the talks on the Baglihar dam issue in New Delhi, presented his report to the meeting. The crux of his report was that Pakistan had a sound case. Attorney-General Makhdoom Ali Khan, who was also present at the meeting, maintained that Pakistan had a strong legal case and recommended that Article IX of the treaty be invoked. The article provides for settling disputes through neutral experts or arbitration if they cannot be resolved between the two Indus Waters Commissioners.

During the two-hour meeting, the prime minister was informed by Mr. Mahmood that the Pakistani side made every effort to resolve the issue bilaterally but the Indian attitude remained inflexible. He said that India as usual wanted to buy time and further delay the process. “What they were offering was merely an eyewash and not a substantial adjustment in the design of the dam that could have paved the way for an agreement,” the meeting was informed. The Secretary Water Resources said that at the last round of talks, India took the stand that the Baglihar project was based on ‘techno-economic’ considerations. However, it was pointed out by the head of the Pakistani delegation that it should have been guided by the provisions of the Indus Waters Treaty. The Pakistani side maintained that the run of the river project did not call for a head 475 feet high and the project design should be based on low weir. The Pakistani side was said to have argued that the calculation of pondage and firm power in the design was not consistent with the treaty. Moreover, it maintained that as per provisions of the treaty, the project design should be based on un-gated spillways.
At the heart of the dispute is the design of the project which, according to Pakistan, provides for submerged gated spillways and, therefore, allows Indian control over Pakistani waters in breach of the water treaty. Pakistan believed that the construction of a dam of such a magnitude would interfere with the flow of water. Pakistan's main concern was said to be that the gated structure would provide India the capability to manipulate the flow of water to Pakistan's disadvantage. One serious consequence was, according to Pakistani experts that it would arm India with the capability to cause acute water shortages in Pakistan. Experts warned that it could deprive Pakistan of up to 8,000 cusecs of water per day.

A Spokesperson of the Pakistan Foreign Ministry cautioned India that its failure to come to a settlement on the Baglihar dam issue in the last round of talks in New Delhi would have an indirect impact on the ongoing political talks on Jammu and Kashmir and peace and security.

Answering questions at his weekly news briefing, Foreign Office spokesman Masood Khan said he believed that there was a relationship between the talks on the Baglihar dam and the composite dialogue. He said that lack of a positive result of last week's Baglihar talks had a 'demonstrative effect' on the whole process of composite dialogue as scheduled during the course of this year. He, however, categorically stated that the impasse in Baglihar talks in no way meant a "collapse of the confidence-building measures or the bilateral composite dialogue on Jammu and Kashmir and peace and security issues" and said that both the processes were continuing and were on track. Mr Khan said that the failure of New Delhi talks did betray a widening deficit of trust between the two sides to resolve the contentious issues and disputes. The minimum requirement which Pakistan sought from India, he maintained, was to categorically undertake to stop or suspend the new construction at the Baglihar dam so long as no agreement was reached between them.

He said that India's design to raise the height of the dam to a higher level would interfere with Pakistan's acknowledged right to draw the whole of River Chenab's waters under the 1960 Indus Basin Treaty.

The spokesman avoided to comment when Pakistan would take the Baglihar dam dispute to the World Bank to secure its legitimate right to the Chenab water, and indicated that the level of talks on the dam issue might be raised to a higher political level at the scheduled meetings to be held early this year at the leadership plane and between the foreign ministers of the two countries.

However, he reiterated that India must, in the meantime, stop or suspend the new construction at the Baglihar site to keep the direct bilateral talks alive. Asked how long Pakistan might take to raise the dam issue with the World Bank, the spokesman said that in the course of time, Islamabad would prepare its case supported by facts and figures which had been debated with India during the last several years in detail and comprehensively. He did not set any time-frame even when pressed hard by newsmen.

On January 11, Pakistan gave detailed briefing to some 20 envoys from key European and Western missions on the Baglihar dam at the Foreign Office. The Pakistan media said the briefing was organized on the request of some foreign missions that have been closely monitoring the matter that they believed had the potential of turning into a major political issue between the two nuclear-armed South Asian neighbours. The briefing was conducted by Water and Power Secretary Ashfaq Mehmud who led the Pakistan delegation at the last round of talks on the Baglihar issue with India. Foreign Ministry’s South Asia Director-General Jalil Abbas Jilani, who was a member of the Pakistani delegation, also spoke on the occasion. Besides heads of the EU missions, envoys from the embassies of Canada, US, China, Australia and Japan also attended the 90-minute briefing. They were told that since differences were conclusively established and bilateral track had failed to resolve them, the only option for Pakistan was to resort to other avenues provided by the treaty to settle the dispute. It was underlined that differences pertaining to the Baglihar hydro-power project were technical and experts needed to give a determination on it. It was also conveyed to them that Baglihar issue would not have a direct bearing on the composite dialogue process as it was never part of the composite process. It was pointed out that the treaty had its own built-in mechanism to take care of the differences. When questioned about the general view of the diplomatic community on the Baglihar issue, a senior official said: “There is a lot of concern and interest, especially on the part of Western countries.”

Question: What did Mr. Tariq Aziz talk to EAM about?
Answer: Mr. Tariq Aziz paid a brief visit to New Delhi to offer condolences on behalf of President Musharraf on the passing away of Shri J.N. Dixit, National Security Advisor. During this visit Mr. Aziz called on the Prime Minister and the External Affairs Minister and he also went to Mr. Dixit’s residence to personally express his condolences to Mrs. Dixit. That is all I have on the visit.

Question: Any discussion on the SAARC dates when he was here?
Answer: No, I have no other details of what happened during the talks. As I said, he came to offer his condolences on behalf of President Musharraf.

Question: Pakistan has threatened to go to the World Bank for the Baglihar project. What is India’s stand on that?
Answer: Our stand is very well known on the Baglihar project, which is a run of the river project. We believe it is fully compatible with the provisions of the Indus Water Treaty between the two countries. In the recently concluded bilateral talks between India and Pakistan on the Baglihar project the Indian side presented very detailed technical information to the Pakistani side to convince them that there is no ground for any apprehension that the project violates the Indus Water Treaty, that the technical parameters violate any of those that are laid down in the Indus Water Treaty. This is the first time, I can tell you, that such detailed technical discussions were held and we found that they were very useful and some convergence has appeared. We also feel that more technical discussions are likely to lead to further convergence and we have offered Pakistan that we should have further technical discussions.

Question: In case Pakistan still refuses to go in for the discussions?
Answer: If Pakistan still chooses to go to the World Bank disregarding the offer that we have made for further technical discussions then we will respond appropriately.

Question: You were saying there was some convergence...
Answer: As I said this is the first time that technical discussions were held with data etc and some convergence did appear but since this was the first time there is possibility of increasing this convergence through further technical discussions and that is why we have made the offer.
Question: Can you tell us what was the convergence?

Answer: These are technical issues. As you know, Water Resources Secretary has already been talking to the press. They have a better idea. I cannot identify to you exact things on which there was convergence. But yes, our feeling at the end of the technical discussions was that they were useful. There were some things on which because of data that we provided, because of technical discussions that took place, there was some convergence and there is possibility of more if we have more discussions.

Question: But they say there is no scope for further discussion…

Answer: We believe that this is the first time that we have had technical discussions. We believe that the data that we have given to Pakistan should convince them that the technical parameters of the project are not violative of the Indus Water Treaty provisions. We believe that further technical discussions would be useful as these have been. So this is our offer.

Question: On Tariq Aziz – did he come as a special envoy of President Musharraf?

Answer: Frankly, I would not be able to characterize that, but, as I said, the purpose of the visit which he came for was to present his condolences on behalf of President Musharraf.

Question: Nothing to do with Tsunami, reports today said he (Mr. Tariq Aziz) also offered condolences on that.

Answer: Well, it is quite possible that it may have been discussed. Earlier on also the Government of Pakistan’s condolences on this issue have been conveyed.

Response of the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs to a question on Baglihar Project.

New Delhi, April 29, 2005.

In response to a question on Baglihar Project the Official Spokesperson said:

"We have been informed by the World Bank that on the basis of Pakistan's representation, it has, as required under the terms of the Indus Waters Treaty, proposed the appointment of a neutral expert to examine certain issues raised by Pakistan on the design of the Baglihar project. We have consistently declared that India intends to remain in strict conformity with the provisions of the Treaty and, therefore, intends to cooperate fully with the World Bank in the selection of a neutral expert. It may be recalled that India had conveyed to Pakistan its readiness to consider any design changes or technical modifications, in conformity with the Treaty, in case Pakistan was able to provide quantified technical objections in this regard. This was conveyed to Pakistan as recently as during the visit of President Musharraf to Delhi earlier this month. Since Pakistan has chosen to invoke the role of the World Bank, as provided for in the Treaty, India will have no hesitation in making available whatever technical details the neutral expert may require, within the parameters clearly laid down in the Treaty. The Government of India attaches considerable importance to the Baglihar project, which will bring significant economic benefits to the people of Jammu and Kashmir. India will, however, observe all its solemn commitments to the Indus Waters Treaty, which has, for the past 45 years, stood the test of time".

Press release of the Ministry of External Affairs on discussions in Paris on the Baglihar Hydroelectric Project.
New Delhi, June 11, 2005.

The Indian delegation led by Secretary, Ministry of Water Resources attended the first meeting with the Neutral Expert appointed by the World Bank in consultation with the Governments of India and Pakistan under the provisions on the Indus Waters Treaty of 1960.

It may be recalled that the World Bank, had appointed Prof. Raymond Lafitte of the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology, as the Neutral Expert who is to make a determination on the issues of difference which Pakistan had referred to him.

This was the first meeting on the matter held on 9-10 June 2005 in Paris.

The Pakistani delegation was led by Mr. Makhdoom Ali Khan, Attorney General.

Opening the meeting, Mr. Roberto Danino, Senior Vice President and General Counsel, World Bank, appreciated the constructive manner in which the Indus Waters Treaty had been operated for the past 45 years. He pointed out that the Neutral Expert, Prof. Lafitte was appointed in consultation with the Governments of India and Pakistan and he was happy that the Bank had a constructive and positive role to play in the process.

The first meeting focused on setting the procedures, which the Neutral Expert would adopt to enable him to arrive at a determination of the differences in a fair and equitable manner.

The discussions were held in a cordial atmosphere and the Neutral Expert heard the views of the delegations of India and Pakistan on issues of procedure and documents.

The procedure settled by the Neutral Expert affords both parties three occasions each to explain their respective stances which is in line with the practices followed by international courts and other tribunals to reach a just and equitable resolution. The Neutral Expert also proposes a site inspection on mutually convenient dates.

Hari Narayan, Secretary, Ministry of Water Resources, Government of India.

3. The talks were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere. The two sides exchanged views on the project and had a better understanding of each other’s views. They reaffirmed their commitment to the Indus Waters Treaty 1960.

4. The two sides agreed to continue discussions during the next round of Composite Dialogue with a view to resolving the issue in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty.

2548. Press Release of the Ministry of External Affairs on the award of the neutral expert Prof. Raymond Lafitte on the design of the Baglihar Dam.

New Delhi, February 12, 2007.

1. The overall design of the Baglihar dam being built by India on the Chenab as a run-of-river plant has been upheld by Prof. Raymond Lafitte, the Neutral Expert (NE) appointed by the World Bank to consider Pakistan’s objections to the Baglihar project, in his decision delivered today in Berne to the representatives of India and Pakistan.

2. The NE has emphasized the need to incorporate state of the art technology for projects built under the Indus Waters Treaty for reasons of safety and optimum utilization of the waters. He declares that “the general rules of treaty interpretation allow him to have recourse to rules of science and technology and the state of the art practices, in his assessment of the concept and design of the Baglihar Dam and Hydro Electric Plant”.

3. The decision of the NE recognizes India’s right to utilize the waters of the Western Rivers more effectively, within the ambit of the Treaty, for power generation.

4. This is the first time since the signing of the Indus Waters Treaty 1960 that a Neutral Expert has been appointed. Pakistan’s request made on 15th January, 2005 raised a number of Points of Difference for Expert Determination in respect of the design of the Project on the basis that certain features of the design did not conform to criteria specified in the Treaty. Pakistan contended, inter alia, that conditions at the Baglihar site did not require a gated spillway; that the spillway gates were not at the highest level; Indian calculations of the design flood and the height of the dam (Freeboard) were excessive; India's calculation of the required Pondage of 37.5 MCM was also too high as the correct Pondage should be 6.22 MCM; and that the level of intakes for the Power Plant were not at the highest level as required by the Treaty.

5. After consulting the Governments of India and Pakistan, the World Bank appointed Mr. Raymond Lafitte, Professor at the Federal Institute of Technology of Lausanne, Switzerland as the Neutral Expert (NE) on 10th May, 2005.

6. During the 18 months period after his appointment, the NE held 5 meetings - in Paris, Geneva, London, Paris & Washington and also visited the Baglihar site and its hydraulic model at Roorkee. The Parties made written and oral submissions during the course of the Expert Determination.

7. The NE after a detailed analysis of a data base of about 13000 dams from the International Commission on Large Dams (ICOLD)'s World Register of Dams to analyse the type of spillway, gated or ungated, and a historical review of construction of large orifice outlets as well as a consideration of ICOLD guidelines, held that the site conditions at Baglihar require a gated spillway, and also held that in view of the high flood discharges and heavy silt loads, India's design of gated spillways - both chute (surface) spillway and sluice spillways, as well as the number, size and location of their gates for the Baglihar dam complies with the design criteria set out in Annexure D of the Indus Waters Treaty.

8. This important element in the NE's Determination will deeply influence all future interpretations of the Indus Waters Treaty. The NE has observed that the present day state of scientific and technical knowledge with advances in technology in dam design, not known or developed in 1960, can and should be utilized in dealing with problems such as those posed by heavy sediment which shorten the effective life of a plant. He is of the view that the reference in the Treaty to conceptual notions such as the need to ensure “satisfactory construction and operation”, “sound and economical design” and “customary and accepted practice of design” clearly not only permit but require use of latest technology. The NE has adopted the principle of effective interpretation which gives full effect to the rights and obligations provided by the Treaty, taking into account its object and purpose set out in the Preamble which is “attaining the most complete and satisfactory utilization of the waters of the Indus System of rivers”.

9. The NE accepts and regards as prudent India’s calculation of the design flood of 16,500 cumec (as against Pakistan’s figure of 14,900 cumec) in view of the uncertainties of flood analysis, possibilities of climate change etc.
10. The NE observes that the designer of a spillway is not only faced with the problem of flood control but also with that of sediment control and cites the "ICOLD" to note that the state of the art is today that "Bottom outlets may be used for under sluicing of floods, emptying of reservoirs, sluicing of sediments and preventing sediment from entering intakes etc."

11. Accordingly, India’s design of sluice spillway at Baglihar with five outlets is regarded as appropriate and permissible under the Treaty for sediment control of the reservoir and evacuation of a large part of the design flood and being in conformity with the international practice and the state of the art. This decision will help India to deal more effectively with the problems of sedimentation in its future projects as the NE has confirmed India’s design of large bottom outlets (sluice spillway) as the most important technique to be employed in managing the high volumes of sediment which characterise the Himalayan Rivers. Incidentally, this had been an element of strenuous objection and India, in the course of the Expert Determination, constantly maintained that India’s design to deal with sedimentation problems by modern methods does not in any way interfere with the flow of waters of the Chenab River into Pakistan as required by the Treaty.

12. Based on the guidelines of ICOLD, the NE considers that the freeboard could be reduced by 1.5 metres. In this context, it is to be noted that India, in the spirit of good neighbourly relations, had offered possible reduction of freeboard to Pakistan even before the process of Expert Determination had started.

13. According to the NE, the first objective of “Pondage” is to regulate the flow of the river to meet the consumer demand. He considers that “Pondage” volume should be calculated taking into account only the variations in the load thus confirming the methodology adopted by India for calculation of Pondage. He disagrees with Pakistan’s method of determination of “Pondage” i.e. with the objective of operating the plant at constant power and regulating the fluctuations in the river flow. The NE has recognized the uncertainties in projecting future load variations. He has arrived at a slightly lower value of 32.56 Million Cubic Metre (MCM) of maximum permissible “Pondage” as against India’s design of 37.50 MCM. The NE has arrived at the lower value as he adopted a daily pattern of power generation which is slightly different from that adopted by India. As a result, there will be a minor change in the schedule of peak power generation. However, the number of hours of power generation per week would remain at about 49 hours as designed by India. According to Pakistan’s calculations, the maximum “Pondage” allowed was 6.22 MCM.
Another Point of Difference raised by Pakistan was regarding the elevation of Intakes for the Turbines for the Plant. The Treaty requires these to be located at the highest level, consistent with satisfactory and economical construction and operation of the Plant and with customary and accepted practice of design for the designated range of the Plant’s operation. Pakistan had suggested that provision of anti-vortex devices could raise the intake levels by about 7 metres from that designed by India. According to the NE, the normal practice is to go in for an appropriate arrangement of the intake structure. In particular cases where this is not possible for technical or economic reasons, then recourse could be taken to anti-vortex devices. The NE has also observed that the intakes should be so located as to avoid asymmetrical flow of water towards them. From his application of well known semi-empirical formulae, the NE considers that it is necessary to raise the power intakes by 2 metres and an additional 1 metre to allow for the slight reduction in “Pondage”. While the Indian designers of the project do not agree with the NE’s approach, as it reduces the water seal by 2 metres, no difficulty is expected in incorporating this change in the design of the Baglihar Plant.

The three elements of design which require marginal changes, i.e. reductions in freeboard and Pondage and increase in the height of the Intakes, all arise from calculations and not from basic principles.

The NE’s Final Determination confirms that India’s design has been compliant with the basic principles of the Indus Waters Treaty.
Pakistan termed “great victory” the decision of the World Bank’s neutral expert who vetted three of its four objections on the design of Baglihar Hydroelectric Plant on river Chenab in the Indian occupied Kashmir and asked New Delhi to accept it as a moral obligation.

“This is the moral, legal and political obligation of India to accept the World Bank’s decision on the Baglihar dispute. India got nothing from violating the Indus Water Treaty of 1960,” Water and Power Minister Liaquat Ali Jatoi said at the press conference.

He said Pakistan had gone to the right forum to get the issue resolved with New Delhi as per the spirit of bilateral water treaty. “India has wasted not only its time but will now also face problems when it will demolish or further raise some of its constructions to meet the obligations of an altered design as decided by the neutral expert.”

He said that the decision also had a positive outcome on the issue of Kishanganga Hydropower Project on river Neelum as the Indian cabinet had decided not to allow the construction work before reviewing its design.

“India should respect the decision as it is vital for the peace (process),” he added.

The WB water expert, Prof Raymond Lafitte, who was appointed in May 2005, has accepted three of the four objections Pakistan had raised over the design of the dam.

In 1992, India had shared the project design with Pakistan which expressed reservations over the water storage capacity (pondage), water level above the dam level (free board), level of power intakes and spillway of the dam.

The expert has, however, not supported Pakistan’s viewpoint on the issue of the spillway. But, the minister said various technical and legal aspects were being studied and Pakistan reserved the right to take up the issue again.

“We have the right to take up the spillway issue anytime at an appropriate forum,” Mr Jatoi said in response to a question.

Pakistan was of the view that free board for the dam was excessive and provided capability to India for raising artificially the water level in the operating pool.
above the full pondage level. So, it demanded that the free board should be reduced.

The neutral expert found that India’s calculations on free board were inaccurate. He decided that the crest level of the dam should be kept at the lowest and directed India to reduce the free board from 4.5 metres to three metres — a 33 per cent reduction.

The second contention of Pakistan was that dam’s intake for the power plant should be raised in accordance with the water treaty. The neutral expert also determined that the location of power intake stipulated by India was not at the highest level as required by the treaty. He decided that the intakes be raised from the present elevation of 818 metres to 821 metres, which means that the power intake should be raised by three metres.

Pakistan demanded a reduction in pondage (water storage capacity) of the dam. The expert also directed India to reduce pondage from 37.722 million cubic metres to 32.56 mcm.

Pakistan was of the view that the location of the spillway gate 27 metres below the Dead Storage Level — the level below which water cannot be drawn down or depleted except in emergencies — was unnecessary. It said that either an un-gated spillway or surface-gated spillway could be provided with the bottom of gates at the highest level.

The World Bank expert held that the spillway gates were in conformity with the international practice and were state-of-the-art.

However, Mr Jatoi said, the expert had observed that the Indian design and analysis were incorrect.

“The results of model tests (of spillway) are also not representative of the reality and are illusory,” Mr Jatoi said. Pakistan’s view was that the expert should have gone strictly by the Indus Water Treaty as any other practice was not relevant, he added.
Joint Statement on Composite Dialogue between India and Pakistan, on the Tulbul Navigation Project/Wullar Barrage.

New Delhi, August 31, 2007.

As part of the Composite Dialogue between India and Pakistan, the delegations of the two countries met in New Delhi on 30-31 August 2007 for discussions on the Tulbul Navigation Project/Wullar Barrage. The Indian delegation was led by Mrs. Gauri Chatterji, Secretary, Ministry of Water Resources, Government of India and the Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Muhammad Ismail Qureshi, Secretary, Ministry of Water and Power, Government of Pakistan.

2. The talks were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere. The two sides further discussed their respective positions on the project and had a better appreciation of each other’s views. They reaffirmed their commitment to the Indus Waters Treaty of 1960.

3. The two sides emphasized the need for an early and amicable resolution of the issue in accordance with the provisions of the Indus Waters Treaty of 1960 for the socio-economic development of the peoples of the two countries. The Secretaries agreed to hold discussions including at technical-level on mutually acceptable dates. Both sides looked forward to the next round of talks under the Composite Dialogue with a view to resolving the issue at an early date.

4. The Pakistan delegation also called on H.E. Prof. Saifuddin Soz, Minister for Water Resources, Government of India.

1. According to a report in the Chennai based paper the Hindu on September 5, “India and Pakistan have agreed to set up a technical-level mechanism to take forward their talks on the Tulbal Navigation Project in the Baramullah district of Jammu and Kashmir. This is the first time that the two sides have agreed on a mechanism. India says the project is a “navigation lock” on river Jhelum, while Pakistan maintains it is a “barrage.” Mr. Qureshi, Leader of the Pakistani delegation who called on Water Resources Minister Saifuddin Soz, told media persons that the talks held as part of the Composite Dialogue were “cordial.” Describing the talks as a “step in the forward direction,” Mr Soz said India was not violating any aspect of the Indus Water Treaty with Pakistan. Navigation was permissible under the treaty. “No irrigation potential is being created and no dam or barrage is being built. The Pakistan team visited the Wullar lake area in March. On their request, India allowed it as a goodwill gesture. We are confident that the issue will be settled amicably,” he said. The Tulbal Navigation Project was started by India in 1984 and was halted in 1986 after Pakistan raised objections.”

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan C.C. Desai to Minister for Irrigation and Power Gulzarilal Nanda.

High Commission of India in Pakistan
Karachi

D.O. No. HC/55/D.276 August 17, 1955

My dear Nandaji,

The way that rivers in Assam, North Bengal and Northern India have been flooding vast territories and bringing devastation and destruction to homes and fields, I can well imagine it must be one of your major headaches to-day. I know that several steps have been, and are in the process of being taken to study these floods and to devise ways and means of controlling them. I appear to have read some news-item a few days ago that co-operation for this purpose was being sought from Tibet and perhaps China, as these rivers originate in those areas. I am, however, not quite familiar with the steps taken and with the up-to-date situation.

2. Just as these floods bring havoc to Assam and North Bengal, similarly they bring havoc to East Bengal also. I understand that this year the damage is even more extensive than last year which experienced the worst ever floods. As a token of our sympathy and appreciation, we have just announced a donation of commodities worth Rs. 1,00,000/- for the sufferers from floods in East Bengal. The Governor General and the Prime Minister of Pakistan are now making a tour of East Bengal and assessing the flood situation from the point of view of both immediate relief and long term prevention. I understand that it is the feeling in Governmental circles in East Bengal that for the control and regulation of these floods, there must be co-ordination between India and Pakistan and that East Bengal by itself could achieve very little. It is possible that on their return, the Governor General and the Prime Minister may make a proposal to us for a joint Indo-Pakistan flood control board or commission to take stock of the situation and to adopt such measures as may be necessary to minimize this recurring catastrophe. So I thought I should write to you giving you advance intimation of a possible proposal. Any such suggestion for co-ordination would, I hope, be supported by us as it would be in common interest and as it would be for the benefit of humanity. Meanwhile I was wondering if the Ministry of Irrigation and Power could prepare a note on the steps taken so far in the matter of flood control in Assam and North Bengal, so that when the

Karachi, August 19, 1955.

High Commissioner for India
Karachi

My dear Subimal,

Only yesterday I wrote to Shri Gulzarilal Nanda about a possible approach by Pakistan Government for joint investigation or commission for prevention of floods in India and Pakistan in the Eastern Wing. I had written that letter on receipt of confidential information from one of our officers whom I had specially asked to keep in touch with East Bengal Government. A copy of my letter to Shri Nanda is herewith enclosed. The same proposal has now been made by Choudhury Mohamad Ali in his broadcast from Dacca made yesterday, vide cutting herewith enclosed. It shows how our officers are reliable in their contacts with high parsonages in East Bengal and also how things are moving briskly in the matter of flood control. My talks with various people here indicate that the main reason for these recurrent floods is that the rivers have been silting rapidly of late, with the result that water does not drain into the sea as quickly and as voluminously as in the past. According to this theory, these recurrent occasion arises, I could talk from information on and with a certain amount of authoritativeness.

With kindest regards,

Yours Sincerely

floods will be a constant feature until action is taken to dredge the rivers and to restore the channels to their previous depth and width. Excessive rain in the catchments area is not the only cause of these floods. If the view expressed by people over here has any force in it at all, it means that joint action by both India and Pakistan is absolutely necessary. If the rivers are silted in East Bengal, no amount of preventive action in India and Tibet would reduce the floods, though constructions like embankments might curtail the area of damage. I am, therefore, definitely of the opinion that the proposal made by Choudhury Mohmad Ali when received officially by us should be immediately supported and both countries should set up a joint commission for the survey, regulation and control of floods in the Eastern Wing of India and Pakistan. I suppose we would hear some time in the course of the next few days from Choudhury Mohamad Ali, who is returning to Karachi to-day.

2. In passing, I might tell you that the particular officer, who is working under my instructions and who is in close touch with leading personalities in East Bengal, has done excellent work during the last two weeks. I had sent for him specially to Karachi, where he was constantly in contact with Members of the Constituent Assembly from East Bengal. He is in the personal confidence of Fazlul Huq and many others, and is able not only to know but even to influence what is going on. My difficulty is, however, that I can't have that officer here most of the time and he has got to get back to East Pakistan, although his utility to India would be greatly increased if I had the power to arrange for flexibility in his movements. That is also the reason why I asked the other day for a Bengali-speaking assistant information officer to be attached to Karachi. The proposal was turned down on the ground that the volume of work did not justify the post. I am afraid it is not possible for me to place all my cards on the table to satisfy so many Under Secretaries in the External Affairs and Finance Ministries. You must have faith in my judgment and you must judge me by my results. You must also view my proposals in the light of the circumstances in which I work and of the task which I have to perform. I grant that mere information work would not justify the second post. At the same time, if I have him here, I could use him for contact purposes in respect of a group of people who are useful otherwise. I am confident that the result I would achieve would more than counterbalance the cost involved. In these matters you must remember that I cannot use the same man for contact with different groups. I have to attach ‘A’ to one group and ‘B’ to another group, as all these people live in the same premises and the popping in and popping out of the same man would only create suspicion and confusion and would defeat the purpose. I hope that it would be possible for you to send for that file and to persuade the Government to agree to my proposal. It has the added merit, in the sense that a new Information officer is now going to Dacca and present man there, Raychaudhuri, would be a surplus hand. He has been there long and he knows the people over there and, therefore, he would be an ideal choice for an agent of mine in Karachi. This is not special pleading, but a genuine proposal about the soundness of which I have personally not the slightest doubt. I wonder whatever
I have been able to carry conviction to you.

With Kindest regards,

Yours ever

No. 668. August 20, 1955

Prime Minister from Desai.

Met Chaudhuri Mohammad Ali this morning for 45 minutes at his instance. He started saying I was first diplomatic representative to be seen by him thus emphasizing importance he attaches to maintenance of most cordial relations between our two countries. On this occasion he said he would refer to two matters namely joint cooperation for flood control in our Eastern Regions and attitude of minorities in both countries.

2. About first point he said he was so sure of our Prime minister’s approach that even without previous consultations between the two countries he referred to desirability of Joint Flood Control Commission in his broadcast at Dacca and again on arrival in Karachi. Problem same in both countries and both causes and relief require joint study and joint action to be effective and lasting. Floods may be due to heavy rains in upper regions, silting of rivers lower down, earthquakes in Assam. Some may be remediable and some remedies might take long time and cost vast sums of money. Nevertheless matter must be attended to urgently and seriously. I told him of what we had already done to study flood phenomena and of joint action between India and Nepal, Bhutan, Sikkim and Tibet. I also told him that speaking personally his proposal was sound and was sure to find ready response from our Government. He said that he had not gone into details about terms of reference, composition, location, funds etc. but this could be done immediately on receipt of our Government’s favorable response. His idea appears that we should take definite decision within month. I also told him that our central Hydraulic Research Institute at Khadakvasla was one of best in the world for study of such phenomena and that our people would be happy to study East Bengal problems there and advise on ways and means of mitigating hardships by training of rivers or construction of spurs and embankments. He told me that this discussion should be treated as formal request by him and that he will not now be writing in confirmation.

3. As silting is one of major factors causing floods remedy cannot be effective unless entire river basin studied and tackled as a whole. I would therefore humbly advise acceptance of suggestion in principle to be followed by discussion at highest possible level during next few days.

As Chaudhuri Mohammad Ali himself taking interest and as he cannot get away from Pakistan because of Constituent Assembly, may be necessary for our minister for Irrigation to come here during next few days for talks with him.

4. Mohammad Ali said that he also looked at proposed cooperation from wider angle. Any joint action proving beneficial to people would lay surer foundation of goodwill between our two countries. This is not merely pious reasoning but genuine. I am enamoured of idea as it would bring two Bengal’s closer together and if coordination is successful it might have salutary effect on morale of minorities.

5. Instructions solicited as to what reply should be given to Chaudhuri Mohammad Ali formally on behalf of our Government.

No. 21291 August 22, 1955

High Commissioner from Prime Minister

Your telegram 668 August 20th

We are completely agreeable to cooperate with Pakistan in dealing with floods. These floods, especially in the eastern region, are a common menace to both our countries and it is obviously desirable for collaboration in dealing with them. In fact, these eastern floods come chiefly through Bhutan and Tibet and we have been in touch with these two countries in order to have previous information as well as, in Bhutan, to devise other methods of control.

2. Each major river valley region has to be considered separately from the point of view of floods. Last year we appointed several river commissions dealing with this flood menace. Among these commissions are Brahmaputra River Commission and the Ganga River Commission. They are expert Commissions and State Governments concerned are associated with them. They have already done good work. The main danger to East Pakistan comes from the Brahmaputra river and its tributaries. Also perhaps to some extent from the Ganga.

3. We accept in principle the proposal for cooperation between India and Pakistan in flood control in this eastern region which is so often devastated by floods. The manner of this cooperation will have to be carefully worked out. It might be desirable for Pakistan Government to constitute its own flood control commission for the eastern region. This commission could cooperate fully with our Eastern Commissions and they may even have a joint body or we may have a joint commission for that region. This is essentially a matter for expert engineers to deal with. We suggest that we might send soon one of our senior engineers dealing with flood control to Karachi to discuss broadly various approaches to this problem and to find out what suggestions the Pakistan Government has in mind. The next stage will be to consider the matter in greater detail and formulate specific proposals. If necessary, Ministers can meet at that stage, but previous discussions should take place at expert level.

4. Please convey this message to Chaudhuri Mohammad Ali.

Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to High Commissioner for India in Pakistan C.C. Desai.

New Delhi, August 22, 1955.

No. 1502-PMH/55

My dear C. C.,

I have just sent you a telegram in reply to yours, about the proposal to have a joint flood control commission with Pakistan. There is no point at all in a Minister going to Karachi at this stage. The whole question is one for Engineers to deal with. Ministers only agree in principle. As soon as we hear from you, we shall arrange to send one of our top-most engineers dealing with this problem, probably the Chairman of the Central Water & Power Commission. Tell them what we have done and try to find out that what Pakistan has in mind.

There can be no single commission to deal with all the flood control problems of India and Pakistan. We have to consider this matter separately in terms of different river valleys. We have at present three river commissions for this purpose—(1) the Brahmaputra River Commission, (2) The Ganga River Commission and (3) the North Western River Commission, which includes Jammu and Kashmir. We intend to have a fourth dealing with Central India.

The question of floods in the western area does not affect Pakistan much and in any event it is difficult to deal with an area which includes Jammu and Kashmir. We must, therefore, limit the area for consideration to the eastern zone, which really is the important one from the flood control point of view, for Pakistan as well as India.

Yours Sincerely

Brief prepared by the Ministry of Irrigation and Power for the Indian delegation going to Pakistan for talks on Flood Control measures in the East and the Minute by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Ministry of Irrigation & Power

Brief for the Technical Delegation proceeding to Karachi on the 9th September 1955 in regard to Flood Control in the Eastern Region. The discussions should relate to technical matters and be confined to Brahmaputra valley only as suggested in Para 2 of the telegram No.709 dated the 3rd September 1955 from the High Commissioner for India at Karachi. If there is any mention by Pakistan delegates of the measures relating to the Ganga Basin, we may hear them but not enter into any discussions.

2. The proposal for a joint Indo-Pakistan Commission having been mooted by Pakistan, the object of the meeting should be mainly to ascertain from them the nature of assistance they expect from us rather than discuss details of the organisation that should be constituted to render such assistance.

3. We may suggest to Pakistan that they should constitute a Brahmaputra River Commission on their side on the lines of the Brahmaputra Commission constituted in India. There should be no commitment in regard to the constitution of a joint commission at this stage. This is a matter of policy which should be left for decision at Ministers’ level.

4. We may suggest consultations between officers on both sides engaged in the formulation of flood control measures.

5. If Pakistan wants warnings of floods to be given we may agree to do so.

6. Pakistan have suggested in one of their communications that “a party of Indian and Pakistan officers be nominated to survey the upper reaches of the Ganga and Brahmaputra and submit a preliminary report to the two Governments on the ways and means by which floods could be brought under control or their recurrence prevented”. The suggestion, if made in discussion, should be discouraged. It should be pointed out that we have an adequate organization for formulating flood control measures on our side and that it would be desirable if each country undertook its own surveys.

7. If Pakistan suggests that they should be consulted before we take up any flood control schemes in the upper reaches in India, we may parry the question and enquire from them how such consultation is likely to help Pakistan.

**********
Minute by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru on the Note submitted to him on the proposed visit to Pakistan of a Technical Delegation for discussion on flood control.

New Delhi, September 7, 1955.

Prime Minister Secretariat

I have read this note for a brief for the Technical Delegation which is going to Karachi in regard to flood control. I would like to add that our approach should not appear to be unfriendly or uncooperative. We have nothing to hide about this matter. Naturally any proposals made will have to be considered later at Ministers level...

We should definitely propose that the best course would be for Pakistan to have a river commission for the eastern region just like we have and, secondly, that there should be arrangements for the two Commissions to cooperate fully. For this purpose each Commission can nominate its representatives who can meet from time to time.

We should give them full information about flood control measures. If they wish to visit Dibrugarh or any other place, I see no reason why they should not be invited to do so.

The suggestion to survey the upper regions of the Ganga and the Brahmaputra is not a feasible one. The Ganga belongs to a different region. So far as the Brahmaputra is concerned, the upper reaches are in Tibet or in the NEFA, which is difficult of access. If, however, as I have said above, any of their engineers wish to see what work we have done in Assam proper, there should be no objection. This does not mean a survey but rather an inspection.

There can be no question of either India or Pakistan saying that they should be consulted before anything is done in the other country, but we should tell them that we shall keep them informed of important developments which may even be discussed when there is a joint meeting.

I do not like the idea of an impression being given that we are parrying questions or being evasive. We should be quite straightforward about this matter and if any complicated question or any question relating to political issues arises, our engineers should say frankly that the matter should be referred to their Government.

New Delhi, September 7, 1955.

D.O. No. 68(I)-CWD/55 the 7th September, 1955

My Dear Desai,

Please refer to your D.O. No. HC/55/D-276 dated the 17th of August, 1955. We appreciate the feeling in East Bengal that for the control and regulation of floods in the eastern region, there must be cooperation between India and Pakistan, as East Bengal by itself would achieve very little. The Prime Minister of India has already accepted, in principle, the proposal of joint cooperation between India and Pakistan in dealing with measures to control the floods on the Ganga and Brahmaputra. The manner in which such cooperation can be best achieved will, however, have to be carefully worked out and as a first step towards our offer of a cooperative approach, we are sending a delegation of technical officers headed by the Chairman, Central Water & Power Commission to Karachi on the 9th of September as desired in your telegram No. 709 dated the 3rd of September, 1955 to the Prime Minister.

2. The rivers in Assam, North Bengal, Bihar and U.P. have experienced heavy floods again this year and have caused considerable damage to crops and dwelling houses. All the flood control works constructed last year have proved to be reasonably effective in giving protection to the towns and the areas for whose benefit they were constructed. As more flood control works are constructed further protection will be afforded.

3. Last year we requested the People’s Republic of China to set up gauge and discharge sites at 3 places along the Tsanpo (The name of Brahmaputra in Tibet) from July onwards. They are transmitting us the daily discharge by wireless. These discharge stations are:

(a) Shigatso - about 590 miles from head.
(b) Chushal Dozong - about 117 miles from Shigatso
(c) Tsela Dozong - about 246 miles from Chushul Dozong.

A study of this information shows that the maximum discharge at Tsela Dozong this year was of the order of 3 Lakh cusecs in August, the corresponding figure at Passighat being of the order of 5 lakhs cusecs and at Pandu of the order of 18 lakhs cusecs. From these it would appear that the contribution of flood water from Tibet area is not of very great consequence. In any case the receipt of daily information is very useful.

4. I have no doubt that the floods must be doing lot of havoc in East Bengal. I shall be glad to have further information from you about the nature of the damage.

5. The amount of help we can render would naturally depend on the nature of the flood control works envisaged by East Bengal. India, of course, give flood warnings if East Bengal is interested. If East Bengal is contemplating construction of embankments they may not require much help from India. In case, however, they are contemplating the construction of reservoirs in the higher reaches for the purpose of flood control it may be possible for India to investigate and prepare schemes at suitable sites to see to what extent the cost can be shared by the two countries.

6. A brief note on the steps taken so far in the matter of flood control in Assam and North Bengal is enclosed for your information. So far as our experts can make out most of the damage to East Bengal must be from the Brahamputra river. We have already constituted a Brahampoutra River Commission to render technical advice on the various aspects of the problems pertaining to the floods in the Brahamputra. We may suggest to the Government of Pakistan to form a similar river commission for the East Pakistan. I may for your information state that while India could give some help in the matter of flood control to Pakistan there is hardly anything which Pakistan can do to help India in this particular respect.

7. Closely linked with the flood control measures on the common rivers to India and Pakistan in the Assam, West and East Bengal is the question of utilization of the waters of these rivers for irrigation, navigation and hydro-electric purposes. In this connection, the Government of Pakistan sent us a note in October 1951 for information relating to the nature and scope of Ganga Barrage Project. The note expressed the fear that the consequences of the contemplated diversion would be a grave danger to the “agricultural economy and commercial life” of East Bengal during the dry season and asked that the Government of Pakistan might be consulted before any such scheme was put into operation. We replied at that time that the project was only under preliminary investigation and the questions raised by Pakistan were purely hypothetical.

8. In May 1952, Pakistan referred to a report published in The statesman regarding the Ganga Barrage Scheme and an article on the Ganga Project. Pakistan wanted to know the correct position of the projects and their scope and at the same time expressed the fear that the projected works would “have ruinous effect on the agricultural and commercial economy of East Bengal”.
While a reply to the reference was under consideration in this Ministry, the position was complicated on account of a communication that issued from another Ministry. To get over that complication, we extended an offer of “co-operative development” by India and Pakistan of the water resources of the Ganga. This offer has been welcomed and accepted by Pakistan. In our last communication to Pakistan, we stated that in view of the extensive and frequent damage in East Bengal and West Bengal caused by the floods in the Ganga and Brahmaputra, a further field of fruitful co-operative work would be the formulation of the flood control measures on the two rivers. The Government of Pakistan have welcomed this proposal and have now suggested that “a party of Indian and Pakistan officers may be nominated to survey the upper reaches of these rivers and submit a preliminary report to the two Government on the ways and means by which the floods can be brought under control or their recurrence prevented”. While we are completely agreeable to co-operate with Pakistan in dealing with the floods, we cannot agree to any survey of the upper reaches of the Ganga and Brahmaputra by Pakistan officers. In any proposal that may emerge after negotiations with Pakistan for a co-operative approach in dealing with the floods, we wish to avoid such a contingency.

9. There is yet another important aspect of this problem. We have a dispute over the Indus Basin waters with Pakistan and negotiations for the settlement are in progress at Washington with the good offices of the World Bank. There are indications that we may have a similar dispute over the Ganga and Brahmaputra waters also in the near future. We must therefore, be extremely cautious in whatever we communicate to Pakistan so that we do not do anything in the matter of flood control in the eastern region that may complicate or jeopardize our position on the Ganga Brahmaputra case at a future date. This is why Kalra who deals with the Canal water Dispute in this Ministry is going with the delegation to Karachi on or about the 9th of September in response to your telegram No. 709 dated the 3rd September to the Prime Minister. Kalra delegation calls on you at Karachi.

Your Sincerely
(G.L. Nanda)

2558. Minutes of the Meeting of Indian and Pakistani delegations on Flood Control held on 10th September, 1955 at the Ministry of Industries, Government of Pakistan, Karachi.

Indian Delegation:
1. Mr. Kanwar Sain
   Chairman Central Water and Power Commission (Leader).
2. Mr. A.R. Khanna
   Chief Engineer, Flood Control, CW&PC.
3. Mr. K.L. Rao
   Chief Engineer, Flood Control CW&PC.
4. Mr. H.C. Kalra
   Deputy Secretary, Ministry of Irrigation and Power.
5. Mr. A.C. Gupta,
   Secretary, Indian High Commission in Pakistan.

Pakistan Delegation:
1. Mr. Mohsin Ali
   Consultant, Planning Board. (Leader).
2. Mr. K. Azeemuddin,
   Chief Engineer, Karnafuli Project.
3. Mr. A.F. Quraishi,
   Chief Engineer, Warsak Dam Project.
4. Mr. S. Masood Hussain
   Director, Central Engineering Authority.
5. Mr. B.M. Abbas,
   Deputy Chief Engineer (Irrigation),
   Government of East Bengal
6. Mr. A. Latif,
   Executive Engineer, C.E.A. (Member-Secretary).

In welcoming the Indian Delegation, Mr. Mohsin Ali invited their cooperation in the exchange of data and other technical information for reliving the suffering caused by the frequent floods in the north eastern region of the sub-continent. He particularly stressed the duty of engineers looking at such problems purely from a professional point of view irrespective of political boundaries.
2. Mr. Kanwar Sain, on behalf of the Indian delegation reciprocated wholeheartedly to the observations made by Mr. Mohsin Ali and said that the Prime Minister of India had expressed a keen desire for mutual cooperation in such matters between the two Governments.

3. Information was exchanged about the methods adopted or proposed in the two countries for combating the flood menace. Details were given by the Indian delegation regarding the organizational set up in India for:

(a) Investigation and surveys and collection of data;
(b) Execution and maintenance of flood control works; and
(c) Provision of funds for the purpose.

4. After discussion the India delegation offered to give flood warnings and supply such hydrological and metrological data for the monsoon period (15th June to 30th September) regarding the Brahmaputra valley as may be of assistance in dealing with floods in Pakistan. The following were specifically mentioned:

(a) Gauge and discharge readings at Gauhati including the previous gauge readings.
(b) Gauge readings at Dibrugarh to be supplemented with the discharge readings, when a discharge station is set up.
(c) Co-relation curve between the discharges at Gauhati and gauges at Dibrugarh, when ready.
(d) Silt analysis and silt transportation investigations on the Brahmaputra.
(e) Pakistan delegation desired to have information regarding streams south of Brahmaputra from the Khasi Juntia hills. The India delegation promised to give all help in this respect on receipt of a formal request from the Government of Pakistan.
(f) Gauge, discharge and silt analysis data of (a) Patna Station on the Ganges and of the Kosi river; (b) Silchar Station on the River Barak.
(g) Study of rainfall and intensities of rainfall in the region or a period of 20 years when completed.

5. It was suggested by the Indian delegation that a River Commission be constituted for tackling flood problems in East Pakistan. It also appeared desirable to both the delegations that the Chairmen of both the Indian and Pakistan flood control commissions be authorized by their respective governments to correspond direct on technical meters. The procedural matters and manner of exchange of information be finalized at a meeting of the Ministers concerned of the two Governments.

6. On an enquiry, Mr. Kanwar Sain indicated that he would very gladly welcome the visit of any Pakistani engineers in Gauhati, Dibrugarh and other sites of interest on the Brahmaputra Valley as well as the central water and power research station, Poona, to see the models of the Brahmaputra river set up for study of flood control measures.

7. It was suggested by Pakistan delegation that flood warnings information be centralized at Calcutta from Shillong, Darjeeling, Gauhati and Dibrugarh and other places and broadcast daily from Calcutta station of the All India Radio on short-wave which will be picked up by Radio Pakistan, Dacca, and monitored, throughout the monsoons i.e. from 15th June to 30th September. The Indian delegation promised to have the feasibility of this arrangement examined.

8. The message of His Excellency the Indian High Commissioner offering full cooperation in this respect was greatly appreciated by Pakistan delegation. It was noted that Mr. A.C. Gupta, Second Secretary will liaise in the initial stages for collection of information from India.

9. The Meeting was marked by a perfect spirit of cordiality and mutual desire to cooperate with each other.

High Commissioner for India

No. H.C/55/25
September 13, 1955
My Dear Shri Nanda,
I am most grateful to you for your detailed and comprehensive letter No.68(1)-CWD/55 dated the 7th September, 1955, on the subject of cooperation between India and Pakistan in connection with flood control in the eastern region of the Indian sub-continent.

2. Since then the Flood Control Mission headed by Kanwar Sain has come and gone. They were received on the first day by the Prime Minister, Chaudhri Mohamad Ali, who told them how keen he was on this coordinated endeavour stressing that this was a long-term and slow process but one worthwhile beginning without any loss of time. Our team then met the Pakistan delegation led by Mohsin Ali and they had a very fruitful discussion, judging from the proceedings which must have been seen by you by now. They left the next day according to programme.

3. Although the visit was a short one, it was a most business-like one and I have heard repeatedly from Mohsin Ali, Shaikh and others that the meeting was businesslike and that a definite and hopeful beginning has been made. The next stage will probably be a meeting between the Ministers, presumably in Delhi.

4. Here in the High Commission, I have asked one of my officers to be in charge of the file and to act as Liaison officer so that he keeps abreast of all developments and receives and supplies information to both sides as desired from time to time.

5. I have noted our special interest in the Ganga project and the desirability of avoiding as far as possible conduct of survey in upper regions by Pakistani Engineers. Anything that is absolutely necessary for a joint understanding of the project would, I expect, be permitted and could be taken no exception to.

6. I am happy at the very satisfactory beginning of a joint effort which has vast potentiality not only for the benefit of the people of the two countries but also for better understanding between the two Governments. I hope that further progress would be conducted in the light of this principle.

With kind regards,

Your Sincerely

2560. Brief Note put up by Commonwealth Secretary S. Dutt to the Prime Minister on the visit of a delegation of engineers to Pakistan for cooperation in Flood Control.

New Delhi, September 23, 1955.

Ministry of External Affairs

In Pursuance of the exchange of telegrams between the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan in regard to Indo-Pakistan co-operation for flood control in the eastern zone, a Delegation of Indian experts visited Karachi in the second week of September for talks with Pakistan experts. The Indian Delegation met the Pakistan Prime Minister and held a conference with Pakistan officers on the 10th September. Agreement was reached on concrete measures which India will take in assisting Pakistan in the matter.

2. The Indian Delegation explained the factors which generally lead to floods, particularly those relating to earthquakes, snowfall and rainfall. They also explained the working of their Flood Control Organization at the Centre (Including the Central Flood Control Board) and of the State Flood Control Boards and other agencies. Measures taken at the village level with the assistance of the local population were indicated to the Pakistan Delegation. Shri Kanwar Sain, who was the Indian leader, also explained the organizational set-up for flood control in China.

The Indian Delegation further offered to give flood warnings and relevant hydrological and meteorological data for the monsoon period regarding the Brahmaputra valley, which would be of assistance in dealing with floods in Pakistan. It was also agreed that the question of centralizing at Calcutta the information on flood warnings from various relevant stations like Shillong, Darjeeling, Gauhati and Dibrugarh and broadcasting such warnings daily during the monsoon from the All India Radio station at Calcutta to be picked up by the Radio Pakistan at Dacca would be examined by the authorities concerned. The nature of the data including flood warnings and gauges and discharges at various sites, to be given to Pakistan was gone into great detail. The Indian Delegation also stated that they would welcome the visit of Pakistani engineers to Gauhati, Dibrugarh and other sites of interest in the Brahmaputra valley as well as the Central Research Station in Poona. It was agreed that the Chairman of the Indian Central Water & Power Commission and of the corresponding Commission to be established by Pakistan would correspond direct for the exchange of technical data and information regarding flood control.

3. The Pakistan Delegation expressed their complete satisfaction at the results of the conference. It was suggested that the Ministers concerned of the two Governments should meet shortly to discuss the matter further and finalize the necessary arrangements.

Letter from Minister of Irrigation and Power Gulzarilal Nanda to High Commissioner for India in Pakistan C. C. Desai.

New Delhi, November 18, 1955.

Minister for Irrigation & Power
New Delhi

No. 68(I)-CED(GB)/55 November 18, 1955

My dear

Many thanks for your letter No. HC/55/25 dated the 13th September, 1955, in regard to the co-operation between India and Pakistan for flood control measures in the eastern region.

2. I have seen the proceedings of the meeting held between the technical experts at Karachi. I am glad to hear of the feeling in Pakistan circles that a good and hopeful beginning has been made. Our delegation, you must have noticed, extended their utmost cooperation in dealing with the question of controlling floods in East Pakistan.

3. The Minister for Public Works, East Bengal Mr. Abdus Salam Khan met me at Delhi on the 29th of October, 1955. He stated that a decision to form a Technical Board for flood control in East Pakistan had been taken and he hoped to announce its formation soon after his return to Dacca. It is only after the constitution of their Board that the manner in which their board and our Brahmaputra River Commission can cooperate with each other and the other allied questions can be considered. The flood control problems were also discussed between me and the Pakistan Foreign Minister when we met at Singapore in October last. We both agreed over the need for collaboration between India and Pakistan in regard to flood control measures. We were also of the view that useful joint projects of benefit to both the countries should be sponsored under the Colombo Plan.

4. As regards the meeting, I suggested to the East Bengal Minister that it would be useful if before the meeting, Pakistan sent us a note indicating the flood control work already done, the studies they had carried out and the proposals they had in view. Similarly, I offered to supply such information regarding the work that had been done or the experience that had been gained in India as could be useful in dealing with similar problems in East Bengal. We agreed, that the programme of surveys and common projects should be ready before the meeting, so that the same could be discussed and the proposals for assistance from Colombo Powers finalized. The East Bengal Minister felt that the flood control measures mainly concerned the West and the East Bengals and if our meeting is held at Calcutta instead of Delhi, the local officers of the states concerned could also take part in the discussions. I told him that I had no objection to this change.

5. You have referred to the Ganga Barrage Project and expressed the hope that anything which is necessary for a joint understanding of the project would be permitted. As you are aware, we have ourselves offered to join in the cooperative development of the water resources of the Ganga and its tributaries and our offer has been welcomed by Pakistan. We have also told Pakistan that we would supply a copy of the project as soon as we are in a position to do so.
We are prepared to fully co-operate with the Government of Pakistan but at the same time we feel that there is need for caution and that nothing should be done which may weaken our case, should Pakistan decide to take the Ganga case before the International forum. Any request received from Pakistan for a proper understanding of the project will receive our most earnest consideration.
6. Kanwar Sain has told me how helpful you have been to our delegation and of the personal interest you have been taking in this important problem. I fully share your sentiments that the joint effort may lead to better understanding and goodwill between the two countries.

With kind Regards,

Your Sincerely

(G.L. Nanda)

2562. Note from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan High Commission in India.

New Delhi, February 23, 1956.

Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.

No. F. 6 (10) –PAK.III/55 the 23rd February, 1956

The Ministry of External Affairs present their compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan and with reference to the High Commission’s Notes No.F.62(20)P/54, dated the 3rd and the 27th May 1955, have the honour to state as follows:

2. With regard to the scheme for the construction of a barrage across the Teesta river near Gondivari stated to be under the active consideration of the Government of Pakistan, the Government of India would appreciate it if they could be informed of the particulars of the scheme in due course. The Government of Pakistan would no doubt be aware that a scheme for the development of the waters of the Teesta, in its head reach in India, has been under the consideration of the Government of India for some years past. After full particulars of the two schemes are available, it would no doubt be in the common interest of the two countries to consider these schemes simultaneously.

3. The Government of India would also be glad to receive fuller details (including the project report) of the Ganges-Kobadak Scheme, Phase I, undertaken in East Bengal for the irrigation of about 200,000 acres. As is known to the Government of Pakistan, the Government of India have also some projects in the Ganga system in India which, together with the above scheme in East Bengal, may with advantage be discussed between the two countries after necessary investigations have advanced sufficiently.

4. As regards the suggestion that a party of Indian and Pakistani officers be nominated to survey the upper reaches of the rivers Ganga and Brahmaputra, the Government of India have already set up a special organization to undertake surveys and investigations and have also constituted Ganga and Brahmaputra Commissions to deal with the flood control measures on these rivers in West Bengal and Assam. The Government of India suggest that the Government of Pakistan may also consider the desirability of similar action on their side.

5. In reply to a message from the Prime Minister of Pakistan the Prime Minister of India has already conveyed his acceptance, in principle, to a cooperative approach in dealing with the floods in the eastern region. The manner in which such cooperation can be best achieved is, however, a matter the details of which can be worked out between the two Governments.

The Ministry of External affairs take the opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan the assurance of their highest consideration.

The High Commission of Pakistan
New Delhi.

2563. Press Note issued simultaneously in New Delhi and Karachi on the talks held in New Delhi on cooperation between India and Pakistan in the control of floods in the Eastern Region of the two countries.

New Delhi/Karachi, August 24, 1956.

The hope that co-operation between India and Pakistan in tackling the problem of floods in the eastern regions of the two countries would help to reduce the flood risks and so mitigate the sufferings of the people was expressed by the Ministers of the two countries in their speeches at the Indo-Pakistan Conference on Flood Control held in New Delhi on 24 August.

The Indian delegation was led by the Union Minister of Irrigation and Power and Planning Shri Gulzarilal Nanda, and the Pakistan delegation by Mr. Habib Ibrahim Rahimtolla, Central Minister of Industries and Commerce.

Welcoming the Pakistan Minister, Shri Gulzarilal Nanda recalled that in September 1955 a delegation of Indian engineers went to Karachi in response to a request from the Prime Minister of Pakistan for co-operation in controlling floods in East Bengal. He explained the main features of the flood problems confronting India and pointed out the similarity of experience in regard to floods on both sides of the border. He referred to the arrangements made in India for flood forecasting and flood warning and gave details of the comprehensive surveys undertaken for the collection of hydrological and other relevant data by setting up a network of rain and river gauges, discharge and silt observation sites and indicated the nature of the various protection measures to moderate floods, all of which, he said, would prove helpful to Pakistan in dealing with their problems. India was reasonably well equipped now to assist Pakistan by way of timely information of approaching floods which should help to avoid untoward consequences in their areas. He added that the human aspect of the problem was in the forefront of his mind and he felt that it was a neighborly obligation on the part of India to render all possible assistance which it would gladly discharge.

The Pakistan Minister in his address expressed pleasure over the opportunity of conferring with his Indian friends on the common problems relating to floods. It was a happy augury, he said, for the conference that the Prime Ministers of the two countries so keenly desired mutual co-operation in this matter. Observing that flood control was a highly technical problem, Mr. Rahimtolla stated that there could be no two opinions about the recommendations made by the technical experts of both the countries at the meeting held in Karachi in September 1955. Mr. Rahimtolla hoped that the procedure of exchange of information which might now be agreed upon would pave the way for the formulation of flood control schemes in both the countries in the near future.

The Minister of Pakistan and India authorized the Chairmen of the East Bengal Flood Commission, Pakistan, and the Brahmaputra River Commission, India, to exchange information necessary for measures for flood control in the eastern regions of the two countries. The two Chairmen would correspond with each other direct on technical matters and request for such information as may be of assistance in tackling flood problems in this region.

The various directions in which the co-operative work should proceed were then discussed and it was agreed that the details should be gone into by the Chairmen of the two Commissions. The Chairmen of the two Commissions met later and made certain recommendations regarding details of the information required by each side and the manner of exchange of such information.
Some of the important recommendations approved by the conference were: (a) flood warnings to be given from Dibrugarh, Gauhati, Patna, Silchar, Gomti, Khawai and Dholal from India to Pakistan; (b) flood warnings from Atrai in Pakistan to be given to India; (c) heavy rainfall data from Shillong to be transmitted to Pakistan; (d) heavy rainfall data from Sylhet and Habibganj in Pakistan to be sent to India; and (e) India will endeavour to furnish such other information relating to the Brahamputra Valley or other assistance as may be considered necessary by the two Chairmen for formulating flood schemes.

The discussions were held in an atmosphere of cordiality and goodwill.

2564. Request made by the Government of Pakistan to the UN Technical Assistance Administration for help in the study of water resources of East Pakistan.

Karachi, November 12, 1956

United Nations Technical Assistance Administration

Request of the Government of Pakistan

Job Description

PAK -26 12 November 1956

General field : Water Resources Development-- Flood control
When Required : As soon as possible.
Duration : Three months
Number of Posts : Four

The team of advisers would be headed by a top level experienced executive planner with wide experience in river control and multipurpose projects who would be assisted by up to three advisers as required.

Duties:

1. To review at the highest governmental level the objectives of Pakistan, with the control and development of the water of the Brahamputra -- Ganges Basins as a basis for developing a programme for large scale multi-purpose water resources development in East Pakistan.
To examine and evaluate existing material, studies and plans related to the control and development of these basins and to determine in which areas necessary data are lacking.

3. To conduct a preliminary survey on the spot and determine the stages for further specific studies.

4. To report results of these investigations. Identify major problems to be encountered in developing a long term control and development programme and recommending the steps to be taken for their solution including recommendations concerning public policies, organization, personnel requirements and other major factors affecting work schedules.

5. To consult with the Government concerning plans for flood control and water resources development in West Pakistan with particular references to the Indus River Basin.

Background:

The Brahmaputra River rises in the glaciers of the Himalayas in south-eastern Tibet and under its Tibetan name Tsang-Po, flows about 900 miles south eastward parallel to the Himalayas. It then veers to the northeast through a series of gorges and turns sharply south and southwest into India where it takes the name of Brahmaputra and flows in a broad island dotted stream for 450 miles down the Assam Valley turning south around the western end of the Assam range in Pakistan where it joins the Ganges at Goalundo and, under the name of Padma, flows to the Bay of Bengal. It is 1800 miles long and drains an area of 361,000 square miles.

The Ganges rises in the glaciers of the Himalays in Nepal near the Afghan (sic) border and flows southeast on an alluvium plane across India into East Pakistan where it joins the Brahmaputra near Goalundo. It is 1,600 miles long and drains an area or 350,000 square miles.

For many years the control of the waters of the Ganges and Brahmaputra rivers in East Pakistan has been a serious problem particularly during the flood season. In recent years floods have raised the toll in lives. Property and crops and caused increasing human misery, famine and economic disaster. A number of useful pertinent studies have been undertaken in recent years and some material is available. Work has been undertaken on some of the smaller eastern tributaries. Under the United States bilateral aid programme for the control and development of these rivers and their basins touching among other things on agriculture, Irrigation, Communications, drainage, commerce, land industries, finance, foreign affairs, power and engineering.
The first-five year plan provides an estimate of 666.7 million rupees for water and power resources in East Pakistan over the period 1956-60. Of this total, 5.9 million is for general investigation, 424.3 million is for multi-purpose development, 29.9 million is for irrigation, 100 million is for Flood Regulation and Drainage and 106.6 million is for Power. The plan advocates comprehensive and long range schemes for multi-purpose development, the design and construction of integrated systems bases on these plans and their coordinated operations as the keys to the greatest values at the least cost. It recommends the establishment of a statutory public agency in East Pakistan to be charged with coordinating and administering the programme.

Your telegram 752 of 1st December regarding KRUG Mission. On December 5 AZIMUDDIN addressed Kanwar Sain regarding visit of Pakistan Engineers pursuance para 3 of minutes of meeting held 24th August 1956. Subsequently AZIMUDDIN sent another letter stating KRUG expressed desire to accompany Pakistan Engineers to see Brahmaputra river up to DIBRUGARH and little beyond. This was followed by similar request from Secretary Industries Pakistan.

2. Have now received form JAMES KRUG Resident Representative UNTA BOARD letter forwarding copy of Pakistan’s Project Request leading to KRUG Mission. KRUG States he has been requested by UNTAA to enquire if India Government agreeable to KRUG Mission visiting Delhi sometime February.
Object of visit as stated is discussions with concerned officials and possibly thereafter survey of Indian part of Brahamputra-Ganga Basin. KRUG’s letter states KRUG Mission investigating flood problem in Ganga -- Brahamputra Basin at Pakistan’s request. Pakistan Project Request to UNTAA however describes general field of KRUG Mission’s activities as Water Resources Development – Flood Control and its duties, amongst other, as follows:-

(a) Review at highest governmental level objectives of Pakistan, with control and development of waters of Brahamputra - Ganges Basins as basis for developing programme for large scale multi-purpose water resources development in East Pakistan

(b) Identify major problems to be encountered in developing a long term control and development programme and recommending steps to be taken for their solution.

(c) Consult with Government concerning plans for flood control and water resources development in West Pakistan with particular reference to Indus River Basin.

Copies of relevant papers sent by bag on 21st.

3. We propose inviting KRUG to see Brahamputra as requested by Pakistan and then to Delhi for discussions on flood control only. Kindly cable advice. Have also addressed BWRER in similar terms.

New Delhi, February 15, 1957.

D. O. No. 640 – NGO/57

My Dear Chatterjee,

Please refer to the Commonwealth Secretary’s telegram No. 30362 dated 14th February to the High Commissioner regarding a visit of the Krug Mission to Delhi. I enclose a copy of letter No. 1-4-04 (B1) dated January 8, 1957 from the Resident Representative of United Nations Technical Assistance Board to the Ministry of Finance together with a copy of the Project Request from the Government of Pakistan which has led to the Krug Mission.

2. You will observe that whereas Keen’s letter describes the object of the Mission as flood control in the Brahmaputra – Gangas Basin, the Project request visualizes that in addition to flood control the Mission activities will cover water resources development not only in East Pakistan but also in the Indus River Basin. The Government of Pakistan have sent us several communications about arranging a visit by the Mission to India. In all of these they have been at pains to emphasize that Krug would be concerned with flood control only. In his d.o. letter No. 1399 –F.C. dated the 5th December 1956 to the Chairman, Central Water and Power Commission wrote as follows: “The United Nations sent a mission recently to advise us on the problem of flood control in East Pakistan”. In his letter No. W1-15(25)-56 of the 24th December 1956, Khaleeli writing to the Secretary, Ministry of Irrigation and Power referred to the mission in the same terms: “You might have learnt that the Government of Pakistan have obtained the services of a UN team of experts headed by Julius A. Krug to advise them on flood problems in East Pakistan”. From the outset however, there have been indications that the UNTA mission would concern itself with water utilization problem. For example in the memorandum dated November 16. 1956 which the Resident Representative handed over to the High Commissioner it was stated that the mission would carry out a preliminary study of the whole problem of flood control and matters related thereto on the watersheds of the Gangas and Brahmaputra rivers in East Pakistan. The significant statement here is the phrase “matters related thereto”. Again there was the news item in the Dawn of 18th November 1956 which spoke of the Mission being concerned with a “broad program of flood control and water utilization”.

3. I view of these indications the Ministry of Irrigation and Power had from the beginning taken a cautious attitude towards the question of a visit by Krug to India. It had been apprehended that the Pakistan Government might endeavor through Krug to reach some arrangement which would give them direct or indirect control over our developments on the Gangas and Brahmputra. In view of the fact that the period of the notice required for our denunciation of the convention and statute on the Regime of Navigable Waterways of International Concern has not yet expired, no risks could be taken and the matter was given very careful consideration. The following decisions have now been taken:

i) The Krug Mission may be allowed to visit India for consultations with officials at Delhi; a visit to the Brahmputra will also be arranged if desired.

ii) The discussions with Indian officials to be confined to East Pakistan flood control problems on the Brahmputra.

iii) The Mission should visit India after completing its work in East Pakistan (They will then be in a better position to know what information they require from us to help them in resolving problems studied by them in East Pakistan. Also knowing their problems we shall be in a better position to help them).

4. A reply on the above lines is being sent to the Resident Representative of UNTA. We expect that this will be done today. I shall send you a copy as soon as possible.

Please show this letter to the High commissioner.

Yours Sincerely

(J.C. Kakar)

PS. Shri H.C. Kalra of the Ministry of Irrigations & Power whom you met during your last visit to Delhi has asked me to invite your attention particularly to item (4) of the Mission duties as set out in the Project Request. The words "identify major problems to be encountered in developing long-term control and development program" might well entail a meddlesome interest on the part of the Mission in our Ganga Barrage Project.
I hasten to write to tell you of the pleasure and inspiration which came to us through our whirlwind one-week visit to your country.

We were met at Bombay airport by Mr. Kanwar Sain, Chairman of the Central Water and Power Commission, and Mr. H.C. Kalra, Deputy Secretary of the Ministry of Irrigation and Power, and flown to Poona by chartered Government aircraft. We spent a most interesting afternoon visiting this well directed and splendidly equipped hydraulic laboratory.

Tuesday morning we went on to Delhi and had a good meeting with Deputy Minister Shri Jaisukhlal Hathi, Ministry of Irrigation and Power, and his top staff. Wednesday morning we left before dawn and had the unforgettable experience of seeing the Taj Mahal at daybreak. We flew on from there to visit Bhakra Nangal and must admit that it exceeds even the boldest of our attempts so far to capture the power of falling water in deep and difficult mountain gorges.

We then proceeded to Calcutta and drove out to witness the accomplishments of the Damodar Valley Corporation and visited both the Maithon and Panchett flood control and power projects and we also inspected the vast crop lands which will be irrigated by this project. Our whole visit was another example that you have to see in order to believe.

We were particularly impressed by the fact that these projects are being carried forward almost entirely through the supervision of India engineers and through your own organizations of skilled craftsmen and well directed workers rather than by outside contract as so often is the case.

May we express again our deep appreciation for your speedy efforts in arranging this visit. Although I am no longer an official of the United States Government, I hope I will have a chance to return the favour when any of your great engineers visit our country in the future.

Thanking again for your courtesies.

D. O. No. 8(1)/57-Genl. March 2, 1957

My dear Dr. Krug,

I am very happy, indeed, to receive your letter No.JAK/A/14, dated February 26, 1957, and to learn there from that you had a successful visit in India and that you had fruitful discussions with our Ministers and others concerned with Irrigation and Power. I have no doubt that your complimentary remarks would give great satisfaction to our people even though you may have been led to say such nice things out of a sense of courtesy and goodness.

2. Both in our First Five Year Plan and in the Second five year plan we are laying great emphasis on the development of irrigation and hydraulic power as we consider that these two developments would constitute a sure foundation for the building up of our future prosperity and progress. We have to increase our supply of food grains and we have to provide cheaper power for our growing industry. I wished you had a little more time for being spent in India in which case we would have been happy to take you round some of our other big irrigation projects such as the Hirankund which has just been completed and the Kosi and the Chambal which are now in the process of implementation.

3. I shall be looking forward to an opportunity of meeting with you and having a general talk when you return to Karachi after your arduous and important labours in East Pakistan.

Thanking you once again for having done us the honor of a visit to our Hydraulic Research Laboratory at Kharakvasla and to some of our irrigation projects and with kindest regards,

Your Warmly

Sd/-

D. O. No. 8(1)/57-Genl. March 2, 1957

My dear M.J.,

You remember that it was not without some difficulty that I got our Government to agree to receive the Krug Mission in India on the dates and in the manner suitable to the members of the Krug mission rather than in accordance with our own convenience which suggested a slightly different programme. The Krug mission wanted to visit India before going to Dacca and wished to see the Hydraulic Research Laboratory, Poona, Bhakra, Nangal and the Damodar Valley Corporation in that order. On the other hand our people desired that the mission should first go to East Bengal and have a meeting with our people on the way back and that the first meeting should take place in Delhi after which the mission should go out to the various places. I was happy to find, however, that Government accepted my advice and the Krug Mission was enabled to adhere to their programme which was fully carried out. I have now heard from Dr. Krug vide copy of his letter herewith enclosed. Even allowing for the usual courtesy of praising the hosts I feel that Dr. Krug’s letter is a complete vindication of the trouble that we took to accommodate him and to show him round in his own way. Knowing the work of our Central Hydraulic Research Laboratory at Khadkvasala and the magnitude of our projects for the Sutlej Valley and the Damodar Valley, I am inclined to take the view that Dr. Krug’s description is by no means an exaggeration and that he has merely said what he actually feels in his own heart. All this is very gratifying to us and that is why I have taken the trouble to write this letter in the hope that you would see it on your return from Accra and that in the mean time copies would be shown to the Ministry of Irrigation & Power and especially to Dr. Kanwar Sain, Chairman of the Central Water and Power Commission who created such a deep impression on Dr. Krug and the members of his party. I am one of those who believe that ours is an open book and that anyone can come and see our projects, that we should let others chalk out and adhere to their own programme and that in the end this attitude brings far better dividends than any policy of hide and seek or maneuvering for position. I am sure I would hear much more about this visit of Dr. Krug when he returns to Karachi after his investigations in East Pakistan.
2. I am sure P.M. would also be happy to see the letter of Dr. Krug.

With kindest regards,

Yours ever

SECRET

Letter from High Commissioner of India in Pakistan C.C. Desai to Commonwealth Secretary M.J., Desai.

Karachi, March 31, 1957.

High Commissioner for India
Karachi

D.O. No. 8(1)/57-Genl. 31st March, 1957

My dear M.J.,

Will you kindly refer to Kakar's letter No.31/168/NGO/55 dated March 11, 1957 on the subject of Dr. Krug's visit to India while on his mission to Pakistan to study flood control and irrigation potentialities in East Pakistan? Dr. Krug and one of his engineers returned some time back to Karachi and were good enough to call on me at the Chancery. They told me how deeply grateful they were to the Government of India for making excellent arrangements for their visits to Kharakvasala, Delhi, Bhakra, Nangal, Calcutta and DVC. About the Hydraulic Research Laboratory at Kharakvasala, Dr. Krug said that they had not seen anything like that even in the United States where such a laboratory would be under covered premises and could not therefore be of the same size and dimension as the Indian one. Apart from the size of the laboratory, they had nothing but the highest praise for the manner in which different river systems were being studied and the advice was being built and that the engineers employed on the dam had the hardest time and were pursuing their task with the best possible engineering skill. He pointed out that foundation engineering was extremely difficult but that the people employed at Bhakra were tackling the task with wonderful skill and efficiency. He was also highly impressed with the DVC which he saw from one end to the other.

2. As for future flood control in the eastern part of this sub-continent Dr. Krug told me that he had impressed upon his Pakistani friends that without cooperation with India nothing was possible and no worthwhile results could be achieved. He was hopeful that this attitude would be adopted by the Pakistan authorities. He said that whatever was done in East Bengal had its effect on the portions of the rivers passing through India and thus the problem was mutual one which could be tackled only on a cooperative basis. He was not interested in politics and he regarded the work as one of benefit to humanity.

3. The thing which he mentioned to me and which impressed me most was the immense potentiality for power by harnessing the steep fall in the Brahmaputra just outside Assam and at the corner of the junction between China and India. He said that within a short distance the mighty river had a tremendous fall which, if harnessed, could give something like 30 million K.W. which is fantastic but nevertheless which is capable of achievement. The entire Tennessee Valley Development in America which is the basis of American prosperity and industry gave only 10 million k.w., whereas the Brahmaputra scheme would alone give 30,000,000 k.w. Such a development would require cooperation between China and India with interest on the part of Pakistan and Burma. This may look like a distant project but one has to think of a thing like that for a long time before it becomes a reality. I am sure the Prime Minister would be interested to be told of this possibility which no doubt he is already aware of. Even so, I am not afraid of repeating because the thing is something wonderful which, if achieved, would mean such a radical change in the way of life of the people in this rather backward and inaccessible part of the world.

With kindest regards,

Yours ever,

(C.C. Desai)

2572. Note from High Commission for Pakistan in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi. Not dated

Office of the High Commissioner for Pakistan In India
New Delhi

No. 62(20)P/54 (Not dated)

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs and with reference to their Note No. F.6(11) – P.III/56 dated 12th March, 1957, has the honour to state that the Government of Pakistan are gratified to note the assurance of the Govt. of India that press reports to the effect that the Government of India have decided to proceed with the Ganga Barrage Project are totally without foundation.

2. The Government of Pakistan welcome reiteration by the Govt. of India of their agreement for a co-operative development by the two countries of the water resources of the Ganges and the Brahmaputra Rivers. In this connection, it may be recalled that at the suggestion of the Government of India, this agreement has already been extended to include the formulation of flood control measures on these two rivers and discussions were held to this end in September, 1955, at Karachi at experts’ level and in August 1956 at New Delhi at Ministers’ level. In the view of the Government of Pakistan, time is now propitious for the establishment of a procedure for furthering and reconciling the interests of India and Pakistan in developing the Ganges and Brahmaputra river systems.

3. The Government of Pakistan suggest that the Government of India join with them in securing the advisory and technical services of a United Nations body to assist in planning for the co-operative development of these river systems. The Government of Pakistan have in mind an international body comparable to the River Boards provided for in the Government of India River Boards Act, 1956, to advise the Indian states on Inter-State rivers.

4. The Government of Pakistan are prepared to establish an engineering board to participate in discussions with the international organization referred to above and with a corresponding board established by the Government of India.

5. The High Commission would be grateful to be informed whether the Government of India are agreeable to this procedure or would like to suggest any other procedure which in their view might be more conducive to an effective co-operative development of the Ganges and the Brahmaputra river systems.
6. Is regards paragraph 4 of the Government of India’s note under reference the Government of Pakistan regret that they are unable to subscribe to the view that the purposes of the “Barcelona Convention and Statute on the Regime of Navigable Waterways of International Concern” which the Government of India has denounced have been superseded, explicitly or implicitly, by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. In particular, the Government of Pakistan would invite attention to Article 10, Sub-Section 1, reproduced below which is not reflected in any of the provisions of the GATT:

“Each riparian State is bound, on the one hand, to refrain from all measures likely to prejudice the navigability of the waterways or to reduce the facilities for navigation, and on the other hand, to take as rapidity as possible all necessary steps for removing any obstacles and dangers which may occur to navigation.”

The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the ministry the assurances of its highest consideration.

2573. Note from Ministry of External Affairs to High Commission for Pakistan in India.

New Delhi, October 31, 1957.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No. F.6(13)-Pak.III/57. October 31, 1957

The Ministry of External Affairs present their compliments to the Pakistan High Commission in India and with reference to their Note No.62(20)/P/56 dated nil, have the honour to state as follows:-

2. As the High Commission is aware, the Governments of India and Pakistan have agreed in principle on a cooperative approach regarding the development of the water resources of the Ganga on a reciprocal basis and also on formulation of flood control measures in the Eastern region. The furtherance of this
The cooperative approach is, in the view of the Government of India, the most practical way of promoting development satisfactory to both countries. The Government of India therefore consider that there is no need to secure the advisory and technical services of any United Nations body.

3. Further procedures to give effect to the cooperative approach agreed to in principle can best be worked out by the representatives of India and Pakistan meeting at expert level. Such a meeting can be arranged when the experts are ready with technical data on the basis of which procedures for furthering this cooperation can be established.

The Ministry takes the opportunity to renew the assurances of their highest consideration.

The High Commission for Pakistan

2574. Note from High Commission for Pakistan in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, September 1, 1958.

Office of the High Commission for Pakistan in India
New Delhi

No.62(20)P/54 September 1, 1958

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India and in continuation of the correspondence resting with the Ministry’s Note No.F.6(11)P.III/56 of December 20,1957 has the honor to state as follows:-

2. In their note No.F.6(13)P.III/57 dated October 31, 1957, the Government of India proposed a meeting at experts level as the best way to work out “further procedures to give effect to the co-operative approach” and stated that such a meeting “can be arranged when the experts are ready with technical data on the basis of which procedures for furthering this cooperation can be established”. The Government of Pakistan are prepared to appoint experts now to meet the experts of the Government of India and proposes that the first meeting may take place in Dacca in September or October 1958. If this is convenient to the Govt. of India, the High Commission shall be grateful to know the names of their experts, who will attend the meeting.

3. The Government of Pakistan appreciate that the Govt. of India may not have completed the detailed engineering studies that experience demonstrates should precede the planning of projects presently contemplated by the latter but in the view of the Government of Pakistan, joint examination should take place before the point is reached where local pressures may demand the construction of projects without regard to the accommodation inherent in the cooperative approach to which the two Government have agreed.

4. The Government of Pakistan are in no position to evaluate correctly the possible effects in Pakistan of the projects contemplated in India unless Government of India supply to the Government of Pakistan the data in their possession. For example, in its Note No. F.6(11)P.III/56 dated December 20, 1957, the Government of India stated that the position regarding Ganga Barrage project was still the same as reported in the Note No. F.6(11)P.III/56 of March 12, 1957 i.e., “in an investigation stage”. The Government of Pakistan note that this is substantially the same report received six years ago when the Government of India, in its Note No. F.6.(8)-Pak.III/51 of March 8, 1952 stated that the Ganga Barrage Project was “only under preliminary investigation”. It is hoped that additional data with respect to this project are now available. In this connection it is noted that the Indian Minister for Irrigation and Power on March 26, 1958 asserted before Lok Sabha that “as soon as more resources are available (the Ganga Barrage project) would be taken up”. The note under reply states that “the Government of India have not yet taken a final decision on the scheme”. The point that the Government of Pakistan desire to emphasize is that the exchange of data and a meeting at experts’ level should not wait until there has been a “final decision” on this or any other schemes affecting Pakistan.

5. The Government of Pakistan welcome the statement of the Indian Minister for Transport and Communications delivered at Calcutta on the 30th June, 1958 and reported in the 1st July issue of the Times of India to the effect that “India would do nothing that would prejudicially affect the riparian rights of Pakistan”. Referring however, to the Farraka Barrage Scheme, he is reported to have said that “this project had been examined by independent international experts more than once and they had expresed the opinion that Farraka scheme was not only feasible but that it would not in any way affect navigation in Pakistan”. It appears from this statement that the Farraka Scheme has reached well beyond the investigation stage. The Government of Pakistan would, therefore, reiterate their request to be supplied with the details of this scheme. They expect the Government of India not to take any decision on it, till it is established to the satisfaction of the Government of Pakistan that it would not “prejudicially affect the riparian rights of Pakistan”. Hence the necessity for an early meeting of the experts.

6. The Government of Pakistan desire to state that on the basis of such technical data as are presently available to them, the entire low supply period discharge of the Ganges River in East Pakistan is required to maintain navigation and for the overall Ganges Kobadak project, and other uses.

7. In this connection, the Government of Pakistan do not presume to judge by itself the reasonableness of its requirements, and it is for this reason that they still consider it appropriate and desirable for engineering experts from the United Nations to participate in the meetings at the experts’ level. The desirability of the participation of such independent experts is emphasized in a recent resolution adopted by the Economic and Social Council, which in this regard specifically (stated):

“Further requests the Secretary-General to give proper consideration to application by Government for assistance in the development of river basins, including the joint development of international rivers”.

8. The participation of independent experts suggested in the High Commission’s note No.62(20)P/54 of May 30, 1957, would undoubtedly contribute to an understanding of the problems and would facilitate the collection and exchange of engineering and hydrological data. The Government Pakistan, therefore, reiterate their request to the Government of India that the latter join with them in applying to the Secretary-General of the U.N. for the appointment by him of an engineer or engineers to participate in the meeting of the experts’ level. As this procedure is likely to take time and as Government of Pakistan are anxious to hold discussion at experts level, as early as possible the first meeting proposed for September/October, 1958, may be confined to experts named by the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan.

9. The Government of Pakistan will be glad to know the reactions of the Government of India to the point raised in para 6 of the High Commission’s note No.62(20)/54 dated 30th May, 1956 regarding India’s denunciation of the “Barcelona Convention and Statute on the Regime of Navigable Waterways of International concern”. The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry the assurances of its highest consideration.

2575. Note of Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan High Commission in India.

New Delhi, December 29, 1958.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

The Ministry of External Affairs present their compliments to the Pakistan High Commission in India and with reference to the High Commission’s Note No. 62 (20) P/54, dated the 1st September, 1958, have the honour to state that the High Commission appears to have been misinformed, probably due to some journalistic misunderstanding, about the statement made by the Minister of Transport and Communications at a Political meeting held in Calcutta on the 30th June, 1958. For instance, no “riparian rights” were discussed and the Minister only casually referred to the general policy of the Government of India to steer clear of any violation of rights established under International Law, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations.

2. The Government of India are of the view that the appropriate stage for the meeting of the experts of the two countries would be when they are ready with adequate technical data. Nevertheless, to meet the wishes of the Government of Pakistan, the Government of India agree to a meeting being held earlier, and suggest that the expert’s meeting may take place some time in April or May, 1959. The Government of Pakistan would, no doubt, appreciate that in the absence of sufficient data, the experts will be able to discuss only the procedural details and arrangements for the exchange of whatever little data would have been collected by that time.

3. As regards paragraphs 3, 4 and 5 of the High Commission’s note referred to above, the Government of India wish to make it clear that investigations in respect of the Ganga Barrage project are still in progress and that no final decision has been taken so far. The Government of Pakistan have suggested a meeting at the level of experts before a final decision is taken by the Government of India on this project. While the Government of India are anxious to take into consideration the reasonable interests of East Pakistan before taking a decision on the project, they cannot recognize any claim for a “joint examination”. In this connection, the Government of India are constrained to observe that no such examination was considered necessary by the Government of Pakistan in respect of their projects, final decisions concerning which have been taken and the execution of some of which has already started without consulting the Government of India. The Ganges-Kobadak project is an instance in point.
4. In this Ministry’s Note No. F.6(10)-Pak.III/55, dated 22/23rd February, 1956, the Government of India had requested the Government of Pakistan for fuller details (including the Project Report) of the Ganges-Kobadak scheme undertaken in East Pakistan for the irrigation of about 2 lakh acres. This request was repeated in the Ministry’s note No. F.6(II)-Pak.III/56, dated the 12th March, 1957. Neither the Project report nor any other details have been received so far. The Government of India would appreciate if this request which has been outstanding for almost three years is complied with at an early date.

5. In paragraphs 7 and 8 of the High Commission’s note, the Government of Pakistan have suggested the association of engineering experts from the United Nations in the meeting at the expert’s level. The Government of India do not see any justification for this proposal. On the other hand, the Govt. of India are of the considered view that such association is calculated to complicate the work of the experts of the two countries and would ultimately make their task more difficult. The Government of India hope that the Government of Pakistan will appreciate the advantages of direct bilateral discussions.

6. As regards paragraph 9 of the High Commission’s note concerning the Barcelona Convention and Statute on the Regime of Navigable Waterways of International Concern, it may be mentioned that the reasons for denunciation have already been fully explained in paragraph 4 of the Government of India’s Note No.F.6(II)56, dated the 12th March, 1957. The Government of India would reiterate their opinion that the navigational interests of India and Pakistan are fully protected by the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs.

The Ministry of External Affairs avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan in India the assurances of their highest consideration.

The High Commission of Pakistan in India,
Sher Shah Road Mess,
New Delhi.

Note of High Commission for Pakistan in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, March 18, 1959.

Office of High Commissioner for Pakistan in India
New Delhi

No. 1(26)P/58. 18 th March, 1959

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, and with reference to the Ministry's notes No. F. 6(5)-Pak.III/58, dated the 2nd January, 1959 and 10th February, 1959 has the honour to state that the Government of Pakistan fail to understand the anxiety and concern of the Government of India over the construction of the Karnafuli Dam, in view of the assurance already given by them to the Government of India that the Dam, which is under construction at present, is not likely to flood any additional Indian territory. The concern seems to be all the more unnecessary as under the terms of the Interim Agreement subsequently proposed by them to the Government of India, they have already offered to pay fair compensation to the Government of India, in case the joint surveys and investigations referred to in the Agreement established, that some additional Indian territory would be submerged as a result of the Karnafuli reservoir.

2. The Ministry allege that the Government of Pakistan tried to mislead the Government of India by saying at first that the reservoir was not likely to flood any territory in India. This allegation is not borne out by facts. The position of the Government of Pakistan regarding the flooding of the Indian territory as a result of the Karnafuli reservoir has been consistent and uniform throughout. The term “not normally submerged” was used merely further to clarify the position and not to amend their earlier stand, as alleged by the Ministry. It was felt that the term “not normally submerged” was simple and expressive enough and did not require any detailed explanation. However, now that the Government of India seem to be in doubt about the meaning of this term, it may be pointed out for their information that the term implies that normally the water of the Karnafuli reservoir is expected to be confined to the normal river section in India territory, and that during floods the back water aflux produced by the Dam is not expected to exceed the levels of the river which would be reached by similar floods under present conditions when there is no dam.

3. With reference to the desire of the Government of India to send an Indian engineer to visit the site of the Karnafuli Dam for making an on-the-spot study, the Government of Pakistan consider that separate visits by Indian engineers to the site of the Dam and by Pakistani engineers to the Indian territory across the border would merely result in long delays. It was because of this consideration that they had proposed, in the Interim Agreement, joint surveys by the Governments of Pakistan and India. However, if the Government of India desire to send an Indian engineer to East Pakistan to work out the mechanics of the joint survey of the Karnafuli river, the Government of Pakistan would have no objection to such a visit. The Indian engineer may come to Dacca and on his arrival hold a meeting in the office of Mr. Masud, Secretary to the Government of East Pakistan Works, Housing and Settlement (Irrigation) Department, with the Officer In-charge of the Karnafuli Project and the Chief Engineer.

The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry the assurance of its highest consideration.

2577. Note from Ministry of External Affairs to High Commission for Pakistan in India.

New Delhi, April 25, 1959.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No. F. 6(4) Pak. III/59 the 25th April, 1959

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India present their compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India, and with reference to the latter’s Note No. 1(6)P/58, dated the 18th March, 1959, have the honour to state as follows :

2. The High Commission repeat their argument that there will be no additional flooding of Indian territory not normally submerged and that during floods the backwater afflux produced by the Dam will not exceed the levels of the river reached by floods at present. Pending the completion of the surveys and collection of the necessary data, the Ministry are not in a position to offer any comments on the extent of additional Indian territory which will be flooded. It is quite evident, however, that whereas at present the reservoir normal high water level is reached only for a few hours or days and the water thereafter recedes and the river section which is benefited by flooding can be cultivated, the submergence resulting from the operation levels of the reservoir produced by the Dam is likely to be of a more permanent nature and therefore of a different order.

3. The High Commission refer to the Interim Agreement proposed by the Government of Pakistan and state that it contains an offer to pay fair compensation to India in case any additional territory is flooded. As explained in the preceding paragraph, compensation will have to be paid not only for additional areas flooded but also for more permanent flooding of areas which are at present only occasionally flooded for a few hours or so during high flood.

4. An examination of the Pakistan proposal shows that, while it seeks to provide for Indian agreement on continuation of the construction of the Dam and consequent flooding of Indian territory, it leaves negotiations about compensation to a later date. Further, the principle of determining the actual extent of flooding is left entirely vague and open to misconstruction. It was in view of this vagueness that the Ministry made it clear to the High Commission in paragraph 5 of their Note No. F. 6 (5)/Pak.III/58, dated the 19th September, 1958 that the Government of India considered it premature to discuss terms of any agreement relating to the Project until the necessary investigations had been carried out and the relevant data collected.

5. The Government of India had suggested the visit of an Indian Engineer to the site of the Dam in the middle of February to make an on the spot study of the operational feature of the Project so that he could assist in evaluating the result of the Indian survey now in progress on the Indian side of the border, and state precisely the extent of flooding and damage that would take place in India. This would enable the Government of India to formulate and settle the terms of agreement with the Government of Pakistan expeditiously. In case the Indian suggestion had been promptly accepted, the visit would have been completed well before the Pakistan Note was dispatched and in view of this it is difficult to understand the reason given in the Note for turning down the suggestion, viz. that it would cause long delays. The Government of Pakistan have again referred to their scheme for survey of the Indian side of the Karnafuli River by Pakistani Engineers which, they are well aware was rejected by the High Commission of India in Pakistan vide the Ministry’s Note No. F8(2)57 - Genl. dated the 16th April, 1958 addressed to the Min. of Foreign Affairs & Commonwealth Relation, Govt. of Pakistan and which therefore could only have been made to evade the issue. The Ministry repeat the offer to send an Indian team of 3 officers to proceed to the Project site and would be grateful if the Government of Pakistan would convey suitable dates for their visit. The Indian Engineers could also take the opportunity to visit the office of Mr. Masood, Secretary to the Government of Pakistan, Works Housing and Settlement (Irrigation Department), at Dacca, and discuss points of mutual interest with a view to expedite discussion and settlement of the terms of Agreement.

6. The Government of India are gravely concerned at the non-cooperative and secretive attitude of the Government of Pakistan and at the continuing threat of flooding of Indian territory and hope that the Government of Pakistan would seek a solution in cooperation with India. In the meantime, the Government of India must necessarily, in accordance with International Law and Custom, reserve all rights in this regard.

7. The Ministry of External Affairs avail themselves of this opportunity of renew to the High Commission for Pakistan in India the assurances of their highest consideration.

No. F. 6(4) – Pak.III/59 the 8 August, 1959/Saravana17, 1881

Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, present their compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India and with reference to paragraph 5 of the Ministry's Note No. P.6 (4) Pak.III/59 dated the 25th April 1959, and have the honour to state that reports have reached Government of India that work on the Karnafuli Dam project is proceeding and will be completed before July 1960. The Government of India would appreciate confirmation from the Government of Pakistan that these reports are not correct and that the project will not be completed pending finalization of the question which is under correspondence between the two Governments.

2. The Ministry may kindly be informed of the Government of Pakistan views on the proposal contained in their note under reference for an Indian team of 3 officers to visit the site of the Karnafuli Dam and also discuss any points of mutual interest with the officers of the Government of East Pakistan, with a view to expedite discussions and settlement of the terms of the Agreement, has met the concurrence of the Government of Pakistan.

The Ministry avail themselves of the opportunity the renew to the High Commission of Pakistan the assurances of their highest consideration.

2579. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs & Commonwealth Relations
Karachi

No. I(I)-4/20/59. 10th September, 1959

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, presents its compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and has the honour to state as follows:

2. The Government of Pakistan are deeply concerned to learn of the West Bengal Irrigation Minister’s statement in Calcutta on the 25th July, 1959, about the 220 ft. wide, 20ft, deep and 400 yds long canal, recently constructed to ensure greater flow of the Ganges water to the Bhagirathi at Biswanathpur in Murshidabad District, about five miles below the point where the river Bhagirathi emerges from the river Ganges.

3. The Government of Pakistan feel that this unilateral action is a violation of generally accepted principles and spirit of international law and conventions. Such a step would also be repugnant to promotion of friendly and neighbourly relations between Pakistan and India. Government of India would appreciate that such an action by them would greatly set back the cooperative approach for which the Government of Pakistan have been striving over the past several years. The experts of the two countries are scheduled to meet for discussions on the question of exchange of information about the Ganges Barrage project, and it is felt that execution of schemes, even of temporary nature, which disturb the quantum of water flowing down the Ganges, will greatly hinder the progress of these discussions and will make the task of the experts difficult.

4. The Government of Pakistan would appreciate if the Government of India would let them know the complete details of the canal constructed (generally referred to as the Biswanathpur Cut) by the Government of India and the quantity of water to be withdrawn from the Ganges during different periods of the year, and if these withdrawals are in addition to the normal off-take of the Bhagirathi river from the Ganges at the point where it originally emerges from the Ganges river. Government of Pakistan would further request the Government of India for an assurance that the withdrawals from the Ganges through the Bishwanathpur Cut are not to be in addition to the normal off-take of the Bhagirathi river, at all times of the year.

The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of his highest consideration.

2580. Note from High Commission for Pakistan in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, September 24, 1959.

Office of the High Commissioner for Pakistan in India
New Delhi

No.1(26)P/58. the 24th September, 1959

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs Government of India and, with reference to the Ministry's Note No. F.6(4) Pak. III/59, dated the 25th April, 1959, has the honour to state that the Government of Pakistan are surprised and distressed to find the allegation of non-cooperative and secretive attitude contained therein against them. The facts are that they had furnished the Karnafuli Project Report and other relevant information to the Government of India as long ago as June 1958. The Government of Pakistan have also proposed the terms on an interim Agreement between the two Governments which, inter alia, provide for payment for fair compensation by the Government of Pakistan to the Government of India in case the joint surveys and investigations, referred to in it, establish that some additional Indian territory will be submerged as a result of the Karnafuli Reservoir. The Government of Pakistan have also conveyed their concurrence vide the High Commission's note of 18th March 1959 to the visit of an Indian engineer to Dacca and to discuss and settle with the officers of the Government of East Pakistan the mechanics of the Joint surveys of the Karnafuli River. The Government of Pakistan have, thus been making every effort to co-operate with the Government of India and they are sincerely at a loss to understand the repeated allegation of non-cooperative and secretive attitude against them.

2. As regards the Ministry's new proposal to send an Indian team of three engineers to visit the site of the Karnafuli Project, the Government of Pakistan, as an expression of their continued desire to co-operate with the Government of India in every possible way, are agreeable to such a visit also. However, to make the discussions between the Indian team and the Pakistan team more fruitful and to enable the Pakistan authorities to carry out an engineering appraisal to their own before the meeting takes place, the High Commission's request that the Government of India may be good enough to furnish to the Government of Pakistan the latest data collected by them as a result of the surveys and investigations carried out by them on the India side of the Border. In case this data cannot be made available to the Government of Pakistan soon and if the Government of India so desire, they may still send the Indian team to the Project site in early November 1959 for an exploratory meeting with the Pakistan authorities. The exact date when it would be convenient for the Indian engineers to visit East Pakistan may please be communicated to the High Commission as early as possible. The Government of Pakistan hope that the Indian team’s visit would lead to the expeditious signing of the Interim Agreement and to the carrying out of the joint surveys which it envisages.

3. The Ministry have observed that while the Interim Agreement proposed by the Government of Pakistan to the Government of India provides for Indian Agreement on continuation of the construction of the Karnafuli Dam, it leaves negotiations about compensation to a later date. What the Interim Agreement exactly provides among other things, is that the Governments of Pakistan and India on the basis of the survey data, will negotiate a formal agreement to permit flooding in the Indian territory, if any, and to provide for fair compensation by the Government of Pakistan if appropriate. Obviously it is the joint survey and survey data which would establish the need or otherwise of a formal agreement about compensation. It would be premature to go into the terms of that formal agreement at this stage and would only delay the conclusion of the Interim Agreement between the two Governments and the essential co-operative work which it envisages. As regards the Ministry’s Note No. F.6(4) – Pak-III/59 dated the 8th August 1959, the High Commission has the honour to state that the reports reaching the Government of India that work on the Karnafuli Dam Project would be completed before July, 1960, are not correct.

4. The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry the assurances of its highest consideration.

High Commission of India
Karachi

No. F.8(1)/59-P 18th December, 1959/Agrahayana 27, 1881 (Saka)

The High Commission of India in Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan and with reference to the Ministry’s Note No. I(I) 4/20/59, dated the 10th September 1959 has the honour to state that the Government of Pakistan appear to have been misinformed regarding the nature of the Biswanathpur Cut.

2. Up to the end of the 1958 flood season, the river Ganga had been sharply eroding its right bank at Biswanathpur and had come within less than 300 ft. (not 400 yards) of the Bhagirathi. It was with a view to guard against that imminent risk of a sudden breakthrough by natural causes on the restarting of the erosion along the concave bank and avoiding the consequential dangers that a small pilot cut 50 ft. (bottom width) x 20 ft. depth was made through the remaining narrow ‘char’. As was to be expected the erosion recommenced with the onset of the floods in the Ganga during the current season and engulfed the Biswanathpur Cut, as the accompanying Plan will show. It will be clear that no new canal has been constructed and the Biswanathpur Cut has not made any difference to the supplies which the Bhagirathi would have obtained after the break-through by natural erosion.

3. The High Commission of India avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations the assurances of its highest consideration.

2582. Letter from Pakistan High Commissioner in India O.H. Malik to Minister of Steel, Mines and Fuel Swaran Singh.

New Delhi, December 19, 1959.

Office of The High Commissioner For Pakistan In India
New Delhi.

No. 1 (26)P/58 19th December, 1959

My dear Minister,

I have been asked by the Government of Pakistan to pass on to you the following message from Lt. General K.M. Sheikh:
Begins

“You will recall that while discussing the use of common rivers for irrigation and power development in East Pakistan the question of raising height of Karnafuli Dam was mentioned by Pakistan Delegation during Indo-Pakistan Conference on East Pakistan disputes and you gave an assurance that India will raise no objection to development activities in connection with Dam Project, on consideration of submergence of some area in India. This assurance is contained in paragraph 7 of agreement.

Indian engineers who visited Karnafuli Dam recently mentioned that they were unaware of the question of raising height of Dam and that they were authorized to deal only with clearance of possible submergence of India territory on the basis of present design. You will recall that we had agreed to the insertion of a provision in the agreement that in the event of the Dam being raised, the Governments of India and Pakistan would discuss how the claims of the Government of India regarding the loss if any, caused by the flooding of the Indian territory would be settled. Desai had got a clearance from the Ministry of works before the agreement was signed.

I would request you to impress upon the Government of India to instruct their engineers in conformity with the spirit of conference and not to raise any objection to the increase of height of the dam on consideration of possible submergence in India. Government of East Pakistan are already taking steps to demarcate the portion of the boundary where some Indian area might possibly be flooded by raising the height of Dam”.

Ends.

Yours sincerely

(O.H. Malik)

Hon’ble Sardar Swaran Singh,

New Delhi
Letter from Minister for Steel, Mines, and Fuel Swaran Singh to Pakistan Minister of Interior Lt. General K. M. Shaikh.

New Delhi January 1, 1960.

My dear General Shaikh,

Thank you for your message in connection with the visit of the Indian engineers to Karnafuli Dam and their reaction to the question of raising the height of the Dam. This message, delivered through your High Commissioner in New Delhi, reached me on 21st December.

I have looked into this matter in consultation with my colleagues in the Ministries of External Affairs and Irrigation & Power.

It is true that the Indian engineers, who had been working on the Project Report supplied by the Government of Pakistan last year, reserved their opinion on the proposal of raising the reservoir level by ten feet till they could study additional data connected with the proposal. This was natural because they did not have the requisite data connected with this new proposal. Some of the data was supplied during the discussions at Dacca and Kaptai. The Pakistan Delegation promised that the rest of the data required by the Indian engineers will be supplied as soon as possible.

I can assure you, however, that, while examining the revised design consequent on the raising of the reservoir level by ten feet, our engineers will bear in mind that the principle embodied in para 7 of the Agreement of the Indo-East Pakistan Border Conference should govern their examination of the revised design i.e. the engineers will raise no objection to the revised design merely because it result in additional submergence. As a matter of fact, our engineers had made this position clear to the Pakistan engineers during their meetings at Dacca and Kaptai.

We have impressed the urgency of the matter on our engineers and told them to act in conformity with the spirit of the principle embodied in para 7 of the Agreement. I will be grateful if you will, on your part, expedite boundary demarcation on this border where Indian territory is likely to be flooded by the execution of this project and also issue instructions to the authorities in charge of the project to furnish the additional data they promised to supply to the Indian engineers without any further delay so that this question can be discussed very early and the principles on which compensation will be based, the quantum of electric power that can be supplied to India and the terms and conditions for this supply could be finally settled.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

2584. Note from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan High Commission in India.

New Delhi, June 17, 1960.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No.F.6(15)-Pak.III/59. June 17, 1960/Jyaistha 27, 1882 (Saka)

The Ministry of External Affairs present their compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India and have the honour to state as follows :-

2. In their Note No. F.62(20) P/54, dated the 3rd May 1955, the Government of Pakistan informed the Government of India that they had under active consideration a scheme for the construction of a barrage across the Teesta River near Goadivari about 2 1/2 miles from the Hathibhandha Railway Station to irrigate 1.125 million across in the Northern portion of East Bengal. While asking for particulars of the scheme, the Government of India informed the Government of Pakistan in their Note No. F.8(10) Pak.III/55, dated the 22/23rd February 1955, that a for the development of the waters of the Teesta, in its head reach in India, had been under the consideration of Government of India for some years past.

3. In their Note No. 62 (20) P/54, dated the 15th May 1957, the Government of Pakistan informed the Government of India that they had accorded administrative approval to the Teesta Barrage Scheme in East Pakistan on the basis of a preliminary technical note and that they had ordered the preparation of a detailed Project for which surveys and investigations were stated to be in hand. The Government of Pakistan promised to apply a copy of the Project Report to the Government of India, when available. The Government of India regret to observe that neither the project report nor any further information concerning the project has so far been made available. Until full particulars of this Project have been received and studied, the Ministry of External Affairs, in their Note No. F-6.(11)P.III/56, dated the 20th November 1958, have already informed the Government of Pakistan that they reserve their position on this scheme.

4. According to the news appearing in the Press, it is learnt that preliminary works on the Teesta Project are in progress and, in order to get some immediate benefit, a sub-project to irrigate 45,880 acres of land has been taken in hand. The Government of India are much concerned at this unilateral action taken by the Government of Pakistan. Since the Barrage is proposed to be located very near the West Bengal-East Pakistan border, the Government of India apprehend that it is likely to raise the flood levels in the adjoining Jalpaiguri District of West Bengal. Further, due to accretion which will occur upstream of the Barrage, the rise in river levels will be felt a long distance upstream of the river in the Indian territory. As Jalpaiguri in already a flood-affected district, the Teesta Barrage Projects in East Pakistan is sure to increase flood hazards and inundation in India territory. The question of water supplies that would be available for the Indian and the East Pakistan Projects on the Teesta river also require very careful consideration.

As the consequence of the contemplated Teesta Barrage Scheme in East Pakistan will be of grave concern to the contiguous areas in India, the Government of India would reiterate that it would be in the common interests of the two countries to consider these schemes simultaneously, after particulars of the two schemes are available and before any commitments are made.

5. The Ministry of External Affairs avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for Pakistan in India the assurances of their highest consideration.

The High Commission for Pakistan in India
New Delhi
2585. Record of discussions at the Meeting of the Water Resources Experts of India and Pakistan. New Delhi, June 28 to July 3, 1960.

A meeting of the Water Resources Experts of India and Pakistan was held in New Delhi from 28th June 1960 to 3rd July 1960. The delegations comprised the following:

Indian Delegation:
1. Shri K.K. Framji, Leader
2. Dr. N.K. Bose
3. Shri P.L. Malhotra
4. Shri J.M. Bazaz

Pakistan Delegation
1. Mr. M.A. Hamid. S.Q.A., Leader
2. Mr. B.M. Abbas A.T.
3. Mr. Manzur Ahmad
4. Mr. M.A. Rahman
5. Mr. A. Latif
6. Mr. S. Masood Hussain

2. On behalf of the Government of India and his delegation, the leader of the Indian delegation welcomed the Pakistan delegation and expressed the hope that these meetings would lead to a better understanding of each other’s problems and that the co-operative approach would yield fruitful results. On behalf of the Government of Pakistan and his delegation, the leader of the Pakistan delegation thanked the Government of India and the Indian delegation for their hospitality and reciprocated the sentiments expressed by the leader of the Indian delegation.

3. It was recognized that the data in respect of the rivers common to India and East Pakistan was inadequate. Both the delegations expressed the view that as engineers they should aim at evolving a practical approach to the problems under discussion.

4. It was also recognized that the co-operative approach made it desirable that exchange of information and studies for a project should be carried out on the merits of the project and that progress on such exchange regarding one project should not be held up because the availability of data of another project lagged behind for unavoidable reasons.

5. It was noted that the agenda for discussion at the meeting as agreed to by the two Governments consisted of the following items:-

   (i) to make recommendations to the two Governments on

       (a) procedural details,

       (b) arrangements for the exchange of data, and

   (ii) To exchange whatever data are available on projects of mutual interest.

6. It was agreed that Mr. M.A. Hamid and Mr. K.K. Framji could correspond with each other on projects for which data were exchanged or on information mutually agreed at this meeting to be exchanged. The exchange of other information could be considered at subsequent meetings. Another officer would be nominated by each Government as an alternate. From Pakistan the name of Mr. B.M. Abbas A.T. was proposed. It was also agreed that there should be frequent meetings. The Pakistan delegation expressed the view that visits to sites of works would be helpful to a better understanding of these projects and proposed that such visits might be directly arranged between the engineering nominees of the Governments of India and Pakistan, but the Indian delegation stated that this would have to be arranged at Government level, as the Projects were in the jurisdiction of the State Governments. It was proposed by the Pakistan delegation that a panel of three experts be selected from each country for visiting the projects and that permanent category ‘D’ visas should be issued to these experts so that they could visit the sites together. From the Pakistan side the three officers would be: Mr. M.A. Hamid, Mr. B.M. Abbas, A.T. and Mr. S. Masood Husain. While agreeing in principle to this suggestion of visits of experts of both countries to the site of works, the leader of the Indian delegation, however, reserved his position stating that the composition of the Indian delegation on each occasion would be a matter for Government to decide.

7. The Pakistan delegation suggested that as it would take some time to prepare and complete project reports and get the approval of the various authorities concerned, it might be better to furnish the important information on the magnitude and scope of the projects in the first instance.

8. The Indian delegation stated that their complete project report for the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta (which had been otherwise referred to as the Ganga Barrage or the Farakka Barrage project) was ready and could be exchanged at this meeting for a similar complete project report of the Ganges -- Kobadak Project (including the Khulna Multipurpose Project). The detailed designs were in hand for the Project for the preservation of the Port of Calcutta. The Pakistan delegation noted this development particularly as they were under the impression that so far only meager data were available as indicated in the note of the Government of India dated 24th/28th March 1960. The Indian delegation explained that the meagerness of data referred to in the Indian note related to the hydrological data of the Basin. In view of the difficulties expressed by the Pakistan delegation of finalizing the project report of the Ganges--Kobadak Project (including the Khulna Gravity Scheme) in the near future, since the various units of the Project were at different stages of investigation or progress, it was agreed that the exchange of important information concerning these two and other projects should be made on agreed data formats. The data formats for exchange of information were discussed and finalized as under:-

Annexure I - Irrigation cum Drainage cum Flood Control projects.

Annexure II – The Project for the preservation of the Port of Calcutta.

9. In addition to the above-mentioned formats, the following formats were exchanged by the Indian and Pakistan delegations:-

Annexure III – Format for information requested by the Indian delegation to assess the effect (if any) of projects in East Pakistan:

(a) Navigation
(b) Irrigation
(c) Salinity intrusion.

Annexure IV – Format for supplementary information requested by the Pakistan delegation on the Project for the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta to study its implications.

The two delegations agreed to supply the information against these lists on the understanding that the mere supply of information did not commit either side to the relevancy of the data requested for to the problem or the projects under issue. It was also agreed that the lists exchanged at the present meeting were not intended to be comprehensive and could be supplemented at future meetings.

10. The Indian delegation suggested that it would be desirable to have a common agreed list of projects of mutual interest to both parties, with notes showing the reservations made by the two delegations. The Pakistan delegations, however, suggested that each delegation should submit its list of projects of interest to it in the other country. This was agreed to and the lists are set out below:-
Indian delegation List

I. Ganges Basin
   1. Ganges--Kobadak Scheme (Kushtia and Jessore Units)
   2. Khulna Multipurpose Gravity Canal Scheme.
   3. Tidal Embankments Scheme.
   4. Tangon Irrigation Project (Tangon and Korotoya Barrage)

II. Brahmaputra Basin (including Teesta River)
   1. Gadimari Teesta Barrage Project.
   2. Brahmaputra Multipurpose Project.

Pakistan Delegation’s List

II. Ganges Basin
   1. Project for the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta.
   2. Kosi Irrigation Project
   3. Gandak Irrigation Project

II. Brahmaputra Basin (Including Teesta River)
   1. Tista Project (India)
   2. Flood Embankments is Assam.

(These lists are not comprehensive and can be supplemented).

11. The Indian delegation expressed the view that the Kosi and the Gandak Projects were located on tributaries; very far from the border and in view of the regeneration that would occur, their effects would be negligible. In any case, the true effects could not be assessed due to the inadequacy of the data of the losses and gains in the river reaches and, therefore, the Indian delegation stated that the discussions in respect of the Ganges Basin should at this stage be confined to the projects in the two Bengals, i.e. projects of which there was a clear likelihood that they would adversely affect the water situation of the other country.

12. The Pakistan delegation emphasized their interest in information regarding the Kosi and Gandak Projects because they felt that the proposed withdrawals under these projects would affect the supplies reaching Pakistan. They added that it would be possible to assess their effects only after data had been furnished on these projects and that no one party should presume to be the judge of the requirements or effects on, the other party of its own projects.

13. It was agreed that these schemes could be discussed at a subsequent meeting when sufficient data became available.

14. As it was realized that the discussions in New Delhi would have to extend beyond the 30th June and in view of the statement by the Indian delegation that no construction work had been done at Farakka on the Project for the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta, the visit to this site was deferred at the suggestion of the Pakistan delegation.

15. It was agreed to exchange information for the Indian and Pakistan Project on the Tista River and for the Project for the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta and the Ganges--Kobadak Project (including the Khulna Scheme) on the agreed formats. It was explained by the Pakistan delegation that the data in respect of item 5 of the Format at Annexure I in respect of the Ganges—Kobadak Project was not immediately available. It was therefore agreed to exchange the data on the Project for the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta and on the Ganges Kobadak Project (including the Khulna Multipurpose Project) at a meeting to be held in Dacca or Calcutta later this month. The delegations agreed, however to exchange the data formats for the Tista Projects at this meeting. The Indian delegation supplied a Note on their Tista Projects and the Pakistan delegation supplied the information on their Tista Project in the Format at Annexure I as well as a copy of the Consultants ‘Reports on this Project.

16. It was further agreed that the information contained in the Appendices to the formats as Annexure I and Annexure II should be exchanged as far as possible, within a period of four months at a joint meetings.

17. As regards information requested by one delegation from the other, vide Annexure III and Annexure IV, it was agreed that it should be supplied to the extent available within a period to be fixed at the next meeting.

18. As regards the flood embankments in Assam, at the suggestion of the Indian delegation, it was agreed that the procedure already approved by the two Governments in pursuance of co-operative approach on the Flood Control measures on the Brahmaputra should be followed, namely consultations between the flood control organizations concerned in India and Pakistan.
19. It was decided to issue at the end of the meeting a joint press communiqué the draft of which was approved by both the delegations.

20. The delegations appreciated the very cordial and cooperative spirit maintained throughout the discussions.

No. 1 (18) P/58 February 28, 1961

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, and has the honour to state that Mr. G. Mueenuddin, Secretary, Ministry of Fuel, Power and Natural Resources, Government of Pakistan, while in India in connection with the exchange of the Ratification documents of the Indus Basin Waters Treaty, had on informed discussion with Mr. Sachdev, Secretary, Ministry of Irrigation and Power, Government of India, regarding the projects in India and in East Pakistan respectively on the Teesta river. Mr. Sachdev promised to write to Mr. Mueenuddin after examining the problem, suggesting further detailed discussion. Mr. Mueenuddin has not yet received Mr. Sachdev's letter which may kindly be expedited.

The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry the assurances of its highest consideration.

No.F.6(15)-Pak III/59. March 14, 1961

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, present their compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India, and have the honour to refer to the High Commission’s note No. 1(18)P/58, dated February 28, 1961. Enquiries from the Ministry of Irrigation & Power reveal that no discussions on the projects in India and in East Pakistan on the Tista river took place between Mr. M.R. Sachdev, Secretary, Ministry of Irrigation & Power Government of India, and Mr. G. Mueenuddin, Secretary, Ministry of Fuel, Power & Natural Resources, Government of Pakistan, while the latter was in India in connection with the exchange of the ratification documents of the Indus Basin waters, as stated in the High Commission’s note. Mr. Mueenuddin had expressed a desire to informally discuss this subject and Mr. Sachdev replied that he would consider the matter*.

1. In his D.O. letter No. F.8(4)60-GB, dated March 9, 1961, a copy of which is enclosed, Mr. Sachdev had inter alia informed Mr. Shafqat, the High Commissioner for Pakistan in India, that the Engineers should first meet at the earliest opportunity and exchange information on the Ganga and Tista before any useful informal discussions could take place. The High Commission’s attention is also drawn in this connection to para 3 of Ministry’s note No. 6/1/ Pak. III/60. dated March 2, 1961, where it was made clear that the data in respect of the Projects on the Tista Barrage Projects of Pakistan supplied to the Engineers was particularly inadequate, and the hope was expressed that more complete information would be made available at the forthcoming meeting.

The Ministry of External Affairs avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for Pakistan in India, the assurance of their highest consideration.

Dated, New Delhi, the 14th March, 1961.
The High Commission for Pakistan in India,
New Delhi.
Letter from Pakistan President Field Marshal Mohammad Ayub Khan to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Dacca, March 27, 1961.

President’s House
DACCA

27th March, 1961

My dear Prime Minister,

When I discussed with you in London the problem relating to the use of the waters of the rivers common to India and Pakistan in the Eastern Region, you were good enough to agree that discussions should take place at Ministers’ level. I would like to suggest that such a meeting should be arranged early.

As General Shaikh and Sardar Swaran Singh have successfully negotiated the border dispute it may be desirable to let these two Ministers conduct these negotiations also.

Although a detailed agenda for the meeting will be drawn up later, I have listed on a separate sheet some of the points which might be discussed at this meeting.

A brief history of the case prepared by the Ministry of Fuel, Power and Natural Resources is also enclosed.

In the end let me assure you of my Government’s continued desire to approach this problem in a spirit of cooperation and neighbourly goodwill.

With regards,

Yours sincerely

Sd/- M.A. Khan

His Excellency,
Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi (India).

ENCLOSURE – I

Points suggested for Discussion at the proposed Ministerial Meeting

a) A procedure for delimiting the share of the two parties in each of the international rivers in the Eastern Region of the two countries should be agreed to. Pakistan would like to propose that in the first instance there should be bilateral discussions; it should, however, be further agreed that in case of failure to reach agreement within a reasonable time through direct negotiations, the good offices of a recognized international body would be sought to facilitate the reaching of an agreement. In case the negotiations with the help of the good offices also bear no fruit, the question would be solved through arbitration.

b) The two sides should undertake not to proceed with any project on the International Rivers till the procedure proposed in (a) above has been agreed to. Once agreement has been reached on the procedure either side may undertake, even before the actual delimiting of shares is completed, construction of such projects, provided it is agreed that such construction will not give rise to any rights or claims.

c) In view of recurring food shortages Pakistan is anxious to proceed with the construction of the Ganges - Kobadak and Teesta Projects. It is presumed that India is equally anxious to do something for the Port of Calcutta. It may, however, be impossible to design these projects satisfactorily without determination of the requirements of each country. It should, therefore, be agreed that the negotiations proposed under (a) above should be completed as early as possible and the first two steps should not be prolonged beyond a reasonable period.

d) The Government of India agreed in Para 4 of their Note No.F.6 (II) P, III/56, dated 20th November 1958, to supply to Pakistan the details of any project included in their plans. In spite of this there has been some question as to which projects in each country affect the other and the data with regard to which should be exchanged. It should be left to either country to choose the projects for which it would require data and both countries should agree, in the spirit of your Government's Note quoted above, to supply all data so required.

e) After a decision is available on the distribution of the waters of the Ganges and the Teesta, the experts of the two countries should explore the possibility of having joint works for the utilization of these waters as this might not only be more economical but also more beneficial in the interest of both the countries. Perhaps it can be agreed to build a barrage on the Ganges at the border, which could deliver supplies both to Pakistan for irrigation and to India for the Hooghly River. Similarly a dam on the Teesta River built at joint expense may improve supplies in the dry weather for the benefit of both the countries.

ENCLOSURE - II
BRIEF HISTORY OF THE CASE

In 1951, the Indian Press carried reports that the Government of West Bengal was seriously considering a scheme for the diversion of the waters of the Ganges to resuscitate the Bhagirathi, a feeder of the Hooghly river, by constructing a barrage at Farakka on the Ganges. As the agricultural economy and the commercial life of East Pakistan depends upon these waters, the Government of Pakistan expressed their grave concern to the Government of India in their Note No.F.62/5/P-5368, dated the 29th October, 1951. A request was made that, in the interest of good neighbourly relations and to avoid any possible hardship to the people of East Pakistan, the Government of Pakistan may be consulted by the Government of India before putting into operation any scheme which may tend to prejudice the interests of East Pakistan. It was also stated in that note that cooperation in this matter would be beneficial to both the countries. In their reply the Government of India stated that the project was then only in a preliminary stage of investigations. The Government of India, however, appreciated the desire for cooperation between the two countries.

2. As a result of further correspondence, it was agreed that cooperative development by Pakistan and India of the water resources of the Ganges and other rivers common to them would be desirable. The Government of India stated in their Note No. 6(8)Pak.III/51, dated 22nd May, 1953, that “they would appreciate cooperative development by India and Pakistan of the water resources of the Ganga, but obviously cooperation can only be on a reciprocal basis....”.

3. To give a practical shape to this agreement, it was suggested by the Government of Pakistan that the two Governments should join in securing the advisory and technical services of a United Nations body to assist in planning for cooperative development of the common rivers. The Government of India, however, preferred bilateral discussions at experts’ level. The experts of the two countries have accordingly held two meetings, the first at New Delhi in June-July 1960 and the other at Dacca in early October of that year. At these meetings, which were held in an atmosphere of extreme cordiality, some data of the projects of each country was exchanged. Further data was agreed to be exchanged at subsequent meetings.

4. In the correspondence exchanged with the Government of Pakistan, the Government of India extended an assurances in their Note No.F.6 Pak.II/57, dated 29th December, 1958 that they were anxious to take the reasonable interests of East Pakistan into account before taking a decision on the Farakka Barrage Project.

5. Mr. K.K, Framji, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Irrigation and Power, Government of India has stated in his letter No.F.7/ 18/60-GB, dated January 30, 1961 to Mr. M. A. Hamid, Chief Engineering Adviser to the Government of Pakistan, that the work on the construction of some components of the Farakka Project had already been completed and design would proceed concurrently with construction of other components. The Government of Pakistan has protested against this unilateral action.

2589. Note from High Commission for Pakistan in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, March 31, 1961.

Office of the High Commissioner for Pakistan in India
New Delhi

No.1(18)P/58. 31st March, 1961

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, and in continuation of its No. I (18)P/58 dated 27th January, 1961, has the honour to state as follows:

2. The attention of the Government of Pakistan has been drawn to a letter No. F-7/18/60-GB dated 30th January, 1961 addressed to Mr. M.A. Hamid, Chief Engineering Adviser, Government of Pakistan by Mr. K.K. Framji, Joint Secretary to the Government of India.

3. Before dealing with the serious issues raised in Mr. Framji’s letter, the High Commission would like to comment on the procedure adopted. The Government of India will recall that on the basis of the recommendations of the First Meeting of Water Resources Experts of India and Pakistan Mr. K.K. Framji and Mr. M.A. Hamid were authorized to correspond with each other directly on projects on which the data has been exchanged or is agreed to be exchanged. But as stated in paragraph 2 of the Ministry of External Affairs Note No. F6(1) Pak. III/60 dated March 24/28, 1960, the experts recommendations were to be confined to matters regarding procedural details and arrangements for the exchange of data. The experts recommendations did not, therefore, imply replacement of the normal channels of communications between the two Governments. When the issues go beyond the exchange of data, as do in this case, they should appropriately be the subject of correspondence at Government level.

4. The High Commission is directed by the Government of Pakistan to convey to the Government of India their strong protest at the unilateral decision of the Government of India to start implementation of the Ganga Barrage Project, and at the commencement of execution of the Project, in contravention of the agreement reached between the two Governments on a cooperative approach to the development of rivers common to India and East Pakistan. The need for such an approach was repeatedly recognized in the correspondence exchanged between the two Governments since October 1951 when the grave consequences of contemplated diversions for this Projects to the agricultural economy and commercial life of East Pakistan were first brought to the notice of the Government of India. The actions is a clear departure from the categorical assurance of the Government of India that they “are anxious to take into consideration the reasonable interests of East Pakistan before taking any decision on the Project.” The Government of Pakistan regard this action also as a violation of the letter and spirit of international law. They are deeply perturbed at this alarming development which has caused widespread concern in the country.

5. As the Ministry will recall the Government of India did not agree to the proposal of the Government of Pakistan to associate an impartial body of experts preferably of the U.N. to assist the experts of the two countries in furthering the agreement on cooperative approach. The Government of Pakistan, therefore, had no course but to agree to give a trial to the procedure, suggested by the Government of India, of bilateral discussions at experts level. But while the task of these experts was still incomplete, the Government of India seem to have chosen to take unilateral action on the Project, relying merely on the supply of “meager data” to the Pakistan Delegation at the Experts Meeting. The views of the Government of Pakistan on the Project Report supplied by the Indian Delegation have already been communicated to the Government of India in paragraph 5 of the High Commission Note under reference. It was stated in that Note that this report is mostly descriptive in nature and is full of statement unsupported by facts and evidence, that it does not appear to be even a feasibility report and does not in any way establish the need for upland discharge. While the Government of Pakistan were anxiously awaiting the supply of a complete Project Report, including the information requested at the Experts’ Meeting and of data on the Kosi, Gandak and other Projects contemplated or already under implementation in India on the Ganges system, upstream of Farakka, to enable them to make an appraisal of the effect on supplies vitally needed in East Pakistan, the Government of India seem to have taken a decision on the execution and even taking in hand actual construction of the works of the Farakka Barrage Project.

6. It has been asserted in paragraph 3 of Mr. Framji’s letter that “this exchange has doubtless conveyed to Pakistan that their reasonable interests are safeguarded”. The Government of Pakistan would like to point out that the Government of India cannot be the judge of the interests of East Pakistan and would like to state that on the data supplied so far they are of the opinion that their interests have not been safeguarded to their satisfaction.

7. The Government of Pakistan have been unable to reconcile the statement of the Government of India that they are “vitally interested in the reaches of the Ganges below Farakka because of the goods traffic between West Bengal and Assam, even after the Ganga Barrage Project, has to use the water routes across East Pakistan” with the action taken by them to proceed with the execution of a Project aimed at the diversion of a considerable portion of the dry weather flow which would seriously affect even the navigability of the said reach, keeping in view the planned requirements of Pakistan.

8. The Government of Pakistan are also unable to find any basis for the statement made in Mr. Framji’s letter that “the Project will also improve the river condition in East Pakistan during the flood season.” The stage for an examination of a statement of this character did not arise at the Experts’ Meeting because the full data had not yet been supplied by the India Delegation. Such statements can, therefore, only confuse rather than help the situation.

9. The Government of Pakistan earnestly hope that the Government of India in the interest of good neighbourly relations, justice and equity will refrain from proceeding with the execution of the Ganga Barrage Project till the issues, which the Government of Pakistan consider to be negotiable, have been settled to the mutual satisfaction of both Governments through discussions at Experts’ Meetings or any other agreed forum. For their part, the Government of Pakistan, while reiterating their willingness to find a settlement through bilateral discussions, are prepared, in case no agreement is reached in this manner, to abide by any impartial determination of the rights of the two countries on the waters of the Ganges.

The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry the assurances of its highest consideration.

The Ministry of External Affairs,
Government of India
New Delhi
My dear President,

Thank you for your letter of March 27, together with its enclosures, on the Rivers in the Eastern Region, which was delivered by your Acting High Commissioner to our Commonwealth Secretary on 5th April, 1961.

2. When we met in London, last months, you spoke to me about the schemes of mutual interest to our two countries in the east, which are the Farakka Barrage Project of India and the Ganges-Kobadak Project of Pakistan and also the schemes on the Tista. I agreed that it might be useful for our two Ministers to meet, if they could arrive at some pragmatic proposals to implement the mutual desire for co-operation, rather than our standing in each other's way in these matters. Although the engineers of our two countries have made a fairly good start in the exchange of data in regard to these schemes, a lot apparently still remains to be done in this direction; and until full data are available, a Minister's level conference, I feel, cannot result in any suggestions leading up to a satisfactory solution of the problem. The engineers' meeting, the third of its kind, is again being held from the 25th of this month. On our side, our engineers, I am told, are ready to exchange the full available data that are scheduled for the next and subsequent meetings. I express the hope that the Pakistan engineers will, likewise, reciprocate and complete the full exchange of data, as soon as possible, to enable the Minister's level meeting to be held soon.

3. I must, however, point out that if the Ministers meeting is to be useful, it must start with a suitable, practical agenda. The points listed by you in Enclosure - I of your letter concerns legalistic issues and the formulation of procedures. They are based on interpretations and implications or assumptions which are not in conformity with the generally accepted international law and practice, and it would be futile to expect any agreement on such premises. Instead of this approach, the agenda, I would suggest, should be narrowed down to a discussion of the projects on which the data are now being exchanged and a genuine effort made, in a co-operative spirit, to understand the reasonable mutual requirements of our two countries in respect of those projects.

4. Enclosure - II of your letter which has been termed as "Brief History of the Case", I regret to say, is a very one-sided version, which we cannot accept. Although since early in 1956, we have been asking for the particulars, including the Project Report of the Ganges-Kobadak Project in East Pakistan, and had reserved our position in respect of the supplies required for that Project, the Government of Pakistan has been proceeding with its construction and increasing the scope of the Project without giving us the information and without consulting us. On the other hand, despite the fact that Calcutta is our largest port and its extinction would spell calamity to our economy, we delayed our Farakka Barrage scheme for some years, in spite of the repeated advice of our technicians and foreign experts that we had to go ahead, most urgently, with this project to save the port of Calcutta. This was solely because we wanted to take into consideration Pakistan’s reasonable interests. Indeed, we still wish to give full consideration to all concrete and detailed information that your Government would like to give us.

5. Your enclosure - II, to which I have referred above, ends with a reference to your Government having lodged a protest against our alleged unilateral action. To this we will, naturally, reply, in due course: but I will add here that the fact of your lodging this protest, after our talk in London, was a matter of some surprise to me. I would, however, like to assure you that I am as anxious as you are to continue to approach this problem in a spirit of co-operation and good neighbourliness.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely
(Sd) Jawaharlal Nehru

His Excellency
Field Marshal Mohammad Ayub Khan,
President of Pakistan,
Rawalpindi.

APPENDIX-I

Comments on each of the points for discussion at the Minister-level Meeting proposed by President Ayub Khan in Enclosure I to his letter to Prime Minister dated the 27th March, 1961

Point (a):

Bilateral negotiations must of necessity be preceded by a full exchange of data, if they are to result, as should be their aim, in a pragmatic and practical accommodation of each other’s interests. Pakistan has so far not furnished data on its established irrigational uses, the existing depths in the navigable reaches of its rivers and the minimum river discharges and levels at which navigation is sustainable and the basic data to determine the existing tidal intrusion in East Pakistan. Three successful meetings of Indo-Pakistan Experts to exchange data have already taken place but the above-mentioned data still remains outstanding.

The suggestion of mediation (through the induction of good officers as on the Indus) is even more premature. It is also dangerous for India. The induction of a good officer may mean the placing of an embargo on the Ganga Barrage Project as well as on all our other projects on the Ganga e.g. the Kosi, Gandak, Chambal, Rehand etc., till a final solution has been reached. The Canal Waters negotiations which lasted for nearly a decade demonstrate the impossibility of finding quick solutions, while the negotiations on the Ganga are likely to be more prolonged because of the greater complexities caused by the involvement of tidal hydraulics navigational problems and the insufficiency of the hydrological data that have been observed in the Ganges System.

As to the principle of arbitration, no water dispute has so far been settled by arbitration. Provision in a treaty for arbitration is something very different from deciding a dispute by arbitration. It would also be premature to fix straightaway the total number of procedures to be followed and precede en the presumption, at this stage, that mediation or arbitration will have to be resorted to.

2. Besides these practical difficulties, the point (a) of President Ayub starts from legalistic interpretation and implications which are not in conformity with the generally accepted international law and practice. For example, it is wrong to define the Ganga Water as international waters. A river becomes an international river only by an agreement between the co-riparians to so recognize it. Under international law all the waters of the Ganga Basin lying in India (8,000 miles) are Indian waters and not international waters.

Point (b):

The proposed step of estoppels of all works pending agreement presumes the right of previous consent of the lower riparian to works by the upper riparian, or the right of veto by the lower riparian, which is neither valid in law nor acceptable to us. Under the generally accepted principles of international law, a riparian has every right to go ahead with a project in its territory provided it takes into account the reasonable interests of the other party and ensures that it does not adversely affect the reasonable interests of the other party. This is clear from the recent decisions in the Lac Lanoux case (1957) between France and Spain where it has been stated:

“As a matter of form, the up-stream State has, procedurally the right of initiative; it is not obliged to associate with the down-stream State in the elaboration of its projects. If, in the course of discussions, the down-stream State submits projects to it, the up-stream State must examine them, but it has the right to give preference to the solution contained in its own project provided it takes into consideration, in a reasonable manner, the interests of the downstream State.”

India has already made available to Pakistan the project report of the Ganga Barrage Project and has agreed to furnish more data that Pakistan may require to enable Pakistan to assure itself that its reasonable interests are safeguarded. Pakistan did not consult India before starting their Ganges-Kobadak Project. Pakistan merely informed India about it. If we agree to point (b) of President Ayub the estoppels would be as applicable not only to the Ganga Barrage, but to all other projects on the Ganga until an agreement has been reached with Pakistan which might take 5 years or 15, which will mean a great blow to Indian development as well as the certain extinction of the port of Calcutta. Furthermore, this delay would be in Pakistan’s interest as it would give them time to appropriate more waters further down the stream, so much so, that a day might arrive when it would be impossible to justify any withdrawals through the Ganga Barrage Project or any other consumptive project on the river upstream in India, as then these withdrawals might indeed adversely affect the established uses in Pakistan. The Pakistan proposal does not take into account at all the vital need and urgency of our Ganga Barrage for the Port of Calcutta. Under International Law the vital necessity of each party (as also established uses) receive the highest priority in any sharing of the waters.

Point (c):

The suggestion here is that India cannot avoid arbitration for very long. It has been stated above that arbitration is not obligatory under international law. It has its obvious dangers. It has been generally accepted (even by the United States Supreme Court) that such disputes are not suitable for adjudication by a Court or arbitration, but only for settlement by way of agreement.

Point (d):

Acceptance of this principle would enable Pakistan to widen the scope of dispute to cover the whole Ganga Basin. The Ganga in India is 1000 miles long and the length of its 39 principal tributaries is 7000 miles. There are many Indian unfinished projects in the Ganga Basin. The dangers of widening the dispute to cover the whole Ganga Basin have already been covered above. Further discussion on the the Ganga, based on a water account for the whole Basin, would be far more involved that on the Indus, because of the much larger number of tributaries and withdrawals, and the serious lack of hydrological data of river discharges and withdrawals. Much of the withdrawals further up are made good by regeneration. We may be faced with the situation that all our projects on the Ganga Basin are held up pending agreement with Pakistan.
For this reason we must limit firmly our discussions to our project which is near the Pakistan border with their Ganges - Kobadak Project.

Point (e):

The barrage on the border would be 12 miles from the mouth of the Bhagirathi and will not effectively resuscitate the Bhagirathi, which is the whole aim of our scheme. There are other serious technical limitations and drawbacks of such a scheme also, which will give Pakistan all the benefits but none to India. The suggestion is also based on the assumption that we have not yet started work on our project. But the fact is that preliminary work on the project has already been completed and further works are in hand. We have recently in consultation with the West Bengal Government set up a high powered Control Board for the Farakka Barrage Project to ensure that the work can proceed expeditiously. A joint project was refused by Pakistan on the Indus.

2591. Record of Discussions at the Third Meeting of the Water Resources Experts of India and Pakistan held in Calcutta from 28th April to 30th April, 1961.

The Third Meeting of the Water Resources Experts of India and Pakistan was held in Calcutta from 28th to 30th April, 1961. The delegations comprised the following :-

Indian Delegation

1. Shri K.K. Framji Leader
2. Dr. N.K. Bose
3. Shri P.L. Malhotra
4. Shri J.M. Bazaz
5. Shri V.N. Nagaraja
6. Shri. M.L. Madan

Pakistan Delegation

1. Mr. M.A. Hamid, S.Q.A. Leader
2. Mr. B.M. Abbas A.T.
3. Mr. S. Masood Husain.
4. Mr. Manzur Ahmad
5. Mr. M.A. Rahman
6. Mr. P.B.A. Salim
7. Mr. A Latif
8. Mr. G.R. Choudhury

2. Earlier the delegations took a trip on the River Hooghly by a pilot vessel from Calcutta to Saugor and back on 26th and 27th April, 1961 at which some the navigational difficulties experienced, resulting in draft limitations and bunching of ships and the training measures and dredging undertaken were explained by the officers of the Calcutta Port Commissioners.

3. In welcoming the Pakistan delegation the Leader of the Indian delegation expressed the hope that this meeting would also be carried on in the same spirit of mutual understanding as in the past. He said that he looked forward to a fruitful and co-operative exchange of data, which had become all the more urgent as the two Governments were anxious to discuss the matter at a higher level. He added that his delegation was ready with all data (including the supplementary data) agreed to be exchanged, to explain any data already furnished and to supply, on a reciprocal basis, any further basic data that might be asked for by the Pakistan delegation.

4. The Leader of the Pakistan delegation acknowledged with thanks the courtesies shown to the members of his delegation and the hospitality extended to them both during their stay at Calcutta and during the trip along the Hooghly river between Calcutta and Saugor. He assured the Leader of the Indian delegation that the Pakistan delegation would continue to work in a spirit of understanding and join with the Indian delegation in applying their combined experience and knowledge to a fruitful exchange of a data sufficient to enable one party to understand the magnitude, scope and effect of the Projects under consideration of the other party adding that this might form a helpful basis for discussions at a higher level for settlement. He shared the keenness of the Leader of the Indian delegation on making quick progress in the exchange of useful and accurate data.

5. The following documents were supplied by the Indian delegation:

(1) Appendix (Technical Data) of Annexure II for the Project for the Port of Calcutta (details set out in a prefatory note enclosed with the Appendix).

(2) Preliminary Project Report on the Tista Multipurpose Barrage Project.

(3) Appendix (Technical Data) of Annexure I for the Tista Multipurpose Barrage Project (details set out in a prefatory note enclosed with the Appendix).

(4) (a) Gauge data of River Ganga at Rajmahal (in four volumes) -

(i) 1 June 1910 to 6 April 1919.

(ii) 7 April 1919 at 31 December 1928.

(iii) 1 January 1929 to 15 September 1948.

(iv) 16 September 1948 to 30 September 1960.

(b) Supplementary data of discharge of river of Ganga at Farakka from July 1960 to September 1960.

(5) A note on ‘Littoral Drift in the Bay of Bengal with particular reference to the Hooghly Estuary’.

(6) A note on ‘Interference by Estuarine Closures’.

(7) (a) A note indicating the equipment used for and the techniques of measuring and computing discharges of the river Ganga at Farakka.

(b) A map with an explanatory statement showing the location of the gauge and discharge sites in the Project area of the Project for the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta.

(8) A map of the river Hooghly from Bansbaria to ‘M’ Buoy compiled by the Commissioners for the Port of Calcutta (1955-56).

6. The following documents were supplied by the Pakistan delegation:

(1) Appendix (Technical Data) of Annexure I to the Data Format of the Ganges- Kobadak Project for

(a) Kushtia Unit.

(b) Jessore Unit.

(c) Khulna Unit.

(2) Appendix (Technical Data) of Annexure I to the Data Format of the Teesta Barrage Project.
(3) Coastal Embankment Project in East Pakistan.

(4) A note indicating equipment used and techniques of measuring and computing discharges of the river Ganges at Hardinge Bridge.

(5) A note on the gauges at Rampur-Boalia, Hardinge Bridge and Goalundo on the Ganges River.

(6) Monthly crop deltas and water requirement of the Ganges-Kobadak Project for the Kushtia, Jessore and Khulna Units.

(7) Gauge data of the Ganges river at
   (i) Hardinge Bridge for the year 1910 to 1932
   (ii) Goalundo from August 1946 to December 1948 and 1957 to 1959.
   (iii) Rampur-Boalia from 1951 to 1953 and 1957 to 1959.

(8) Teesta Barrage Project (Drawings).

7. It was stated by the leader of the Pakistan delegation that some important concepts of the Project for the Khulna Unit were being changed and it was now proposed not only to increase the number of the bolders to avoid closure of large rivers but also to change the method of irrigation i.e., instead of irrigation by flooding, irrigation by conventional means of distribution would be adopted. In the view of the leader of the Pakistan delegation, irrigation by the latter method would actually require more water, but he assured that the revised requirements would be restricted in critical months to the figures already given in the Consulting Engineers’ Report on the Khulna Unit supplied at the First Meeting by the Pakistan delegation. The Leader of the Indian delegation, however, considered that by the avoidance of the use of large rivers as parts of the supply channels, there would be less requirements of water. The Leader of the Pakistan delegation stated that this was not the only factor involved but agreed that if calculations on the basis of conventional method of irrigation showed less requirements in any month, these would be restricted to the lower figures.

8. As regards the Jessore Unit it was pointed out by the Leader of the Pakistan delegation that the Technical Appendix to Annexure I had been framed on the basis of the best available data as the surveys and investigations on this unit were still going on and were likely to take some time. On an enquiry by the Leader of the Indian delegation about the comparative figures of water requirements now and previously specified for the Jessore Unit, it was explained that the water requirements would be less in March and April but larger in May. He added that the earlier figures were on a prorate basis as shown in the note on the Project supplied at the second meeting. The Leader of the Indian delegation stated that May was frequently the worst month for the Ganga in India and any revision upwards in the figure of withdrawals specified earlier would be unacceptable, as such changes in data are inappropriate in his view.

9. The Leader of the Indian delegation stated that besides the information on the Project for Preservation of the Port of Calcutta agreed to be furnished at this meeting vide Appendix (Technical Data) to Annexure II, the Indian delegation were also ready with the supplementary information asked for by the Pakistan delegation as set out in Annexure IV and this information was brought for exchange at this meeting with the information set out in Annexure III in regard to the Ganges-Kobadak Project (including the Khulna Multipurpose Gravity Canal Scheme). The Leader of the Pakistan delegation stated that the collection and compilation of the information set out in Annexure III was not complete and would take some time. It was, therefore, agreed to exchange the data listed in Annexure III and IV at the next meeting.

10. It was agreed that further information on the Project for the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta and the Tista Project of India as required by the Pakistan delegation and similar additional information on the Ganges-Kobadak Project (including the Khulna Unit) and the Teesta Barrage Project of Pakistan as required by the Indian delegation set out in Annexures VI and V respectively, should also be exchange at the next meeting.

11. The Leader of the Indian delegation stated that Teesta Multipurpose Project Report, which was handed over at this meeting, was a preliminary project report, and he hoped that, by about October this year, the final Project Report would be made available by the Indian delegation, as the investigations were well advanced.

12. The Leader of the Indian delegation supplied to the Pakistan delegation printed copies of errata to their Farakka gauge and discharge data, cyclostyled copies of which had been previously furnished. He also handed over a supplementary list of the apparent typographical errors in this Hardinge Bridge data and said that he would be grateful to have the views of the Pakistan delegation in due course so as to have mutually accepted hydrological data for use by both the delegations. The Leader of the Pakistan delegation pointed out that the discharges computed for dates between those for which discharges were observed were different for the same gauge levels. The Leader of the Indian delegation explained that the interpolated discharges were obtained from gauge-discharge curves now supplied under Appendix (Technical Data).
of Annexure II and requested an examination of the gauge-discharge curves of both Farakka and Hardinge Bridge to arrive at mutually accepted data.

13. A brief discussion took place as to the possible reason for the difference in discharge data at Farakka and Hardinge Bridge. The Leader of the Pakistan delegation stated that there was no apparent consistency in the pattern of gains and losses. The Leader of the Indian delegation stated that this was not an unusual feature but it would require a study of subsoil water level and rainfall data along the river and verification of the methods of discharge observations during the abnormal years for reconciliation. It was agreed that the two delegations would further examine the matter and exchange their ideas at a subsequent meeting.

14. The leader of the Pakistan delegation stated that in view of the proposal to revise the Project for Khulna Unit, which would not involve significant closures of major estuarine channels it appeared that it would not be necessary to furnish the information asked for by the Leader of the Indian delegation as set out in paragraph 16 (ii) of the Record of discussions of the Second Meeting. He, however, offered to examine the matter further in the light of the note supplied by the Indian delegation entitled: “Interference by Estuarine closures.”

15. The leader of the Indian delegation stated that there were serious practical difficulties of simultaneous observations of velocities, salinity and silt intensity at five verticals, at five depths at each vertical, during a complete tidal cycle, in springs and neaps, during monsoon and winter, at suitable cross sections near Garden Reach, about one mile above Damodar Outfall, and at Roy Chak Column, as requested by the Pakistan delegation in para 17 (ii) of the Record of Discussions of the second Meeting. He added that this was supported by the Officers concerned of the Port Commissioners. He explained how these observations would be impracticable and inaccurate so that it appeared that it would not be necessary to furnish the information. The Leader of the Pakistan delegation, however, requested the Leader of the Indian delegations to supply to him a note on the difficulties involved, to which the latter agreed.

16. The Leader of the Indian delegation asked whether the data regarding the raising of the Karnafuli dam could be discussed at this meeting. The Leader of the Pakistan delegation stated that a letter from the Government of Pakistan would shortly be sent to the Government of India and that this matter should be discussed separately.

17. The Pakistan delegation supplied to the Indian delegation, in pursuance of paragraph 7 of the Record of discussions of the Second Meetings, a note with a map showing a suggested gauge and discharge observations site on the Ganges at the Border. The Leader of the Indian delegation stated that their reconnaissance had shown that no site was suitable for joint observation but he agreed to consider the suggestion of the Pakistan delegation and give their own views at the next meeting.

18. The Leader of the Indian delegation invited attention to paragraph 9 of the Record of discussions of the Second Meeting and requested the Pakistan delegation to start daily measurements of discharges at Hardinge Bridge so as to have data at least from the latter part of the current dry season onwards.

19. The leader of the Indian delegation requested the leader of the Pakistan delegation that, pending the supply of full information asked for under Annexure III, he would appreciate if the Pakistan delegation would furnish information (with supporting data) on river discharges and levels which in their view would be sufficient and necessary to sustain navigation in the various reaches of the Ganges in East Pakistan. The Leader of the Pakistan delegation stated that such a study had not been carried out in the past and expressed the view that this was also not the stage for exchange of such a study. The Leader of the Indian delegation clarified that what he was asking for was the data, not studies, namely, items(3) and (4) of Section A of Annexure III.

20. The Leader of the Pakistan delegation expressed a desire for visits by the Pakistan engineers to the Farakka and Jangipur barrage sites and also the Tista dam and barrage sites and alignments of canals. The Leader of the Indian delegation stated that, as already decided, this matter would have to be taken up at Governmental level. When asked about his reaction to the suggested visits, the Leader of the Indian delegation said that he would support the request for visit to Farakka and Jangipur sites, but he would suggest that the visit to the Tista Projects sites should be requested for at a later stage when the final project reports would have been made available to the Pakistan delegation.

21. The Leader of the Indian delegation expressed a wish for a visit between the middle of May and the middle of June 1961 by the Indian engineers to the site of the intake works of the Kushtia, Jessore and Khulna Units, to the Hardinge Bridge discharge site, and the head reaches of the supply channels to the three units and for a trip along the river form Hardinge Bridge to Goalundo. He would also request for a visit to the Teesta Barrage and canal alignments on a subsequent occasion. The Leader of the Pakistan delegation stated that he would support the requests for these visits when made to the Government of Pakistan.

22. The Leader of the Pakistan delegation supplied a note on their Faridpur Barisal Project and at the request of the Leader of the Indian delegation, elucidated the status and scope of the scheme. It was explained that the project was at a preliminary stage of investigations and would cover a cultivable area of 1.5 million acres between the eastern boundary of the G.K. Project and the Ganges and the Arial Khan with a weir over the Ganges and an intake a mile below the off take of the Kushtia Unit. The Leader of the Indian delegation expressed surprise and strongly reserved his position in view of the low water supplies in the river Ganges at times in certain periods of the dry season and because this Project had never been mentioned before. The Leader of the Pakistan delegation stated that he did mention about other areas requiring water from the Ganges although this project was not specifically named and added that the list of the project considered so far was not meant to be comprehensive. He further said that the question of water availability was an issue to be considered. The leader of the Indian delegation stated that there was no indication previously about other areas requiring water from the Ganges at any stage and that this project would almost double the scope of the water requirements for irrigation from the Ganges in East Pakistan over the figures heretofore indicated by them at the experts meetings. The Leader of the Pakistan delegation pointed out that up till independence, the areas comprising East Pakistan had remained sadly neglected and no water development works whatsoever had been carried out in this region. He further said that adequate irrigation development had therefore now to be undertaken to meet the acute food shortage in the Province. The Leader of the Indian delegation said that the questions regarding rights and historical usages were wholly outside the scope of the agreed terms of reference of the present series of meetings of the Experts.

23. The Leaders of the two delegations considered that the next meeting should be held in Dacca within about 2 months.

24. It was decided to issue a joint press statement, the draft of which was approved by the Leaders of the two delegations.

25. The meeting was held in a very cordial and cooperative spirit.

Projects for the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta

1. River flow of the Bhagirathi at a site near Biswanathpur off-take and the Kalna from the year 1930 daily or as observed.

2. Storage capacity of any dam under consideration on the tributaries of the Bhagirathi.

3. The desired hydrograph at Kalna and how derived?

4. Relevant extracts of available reports of Experts mentioned in para 3. 22 of the project report.

5. The actual HW and LW at Garden Reach from 1930 onwards.

6. Frequency of bore tides month by month from 1930 onwards.

Tista Multipurpose Project in India

1. Gauge and discharge data of all rivers crossing the canal alignments and flowing in the Project.

2. Type of crossing of the canals and the rivers.

3. Clarification of 5% perennial area.

4. Storage capacity of the dam, active and dead.

5. Dimensions of craft and towing methods for which the various reaches of canals will be designed.

6. Break-up of monthly water requirements from areas on each canal.

7. Cross section of the different reaches of the canals and locations and size of navigation locks proposed.

8. Area to be commanded lying between rivers crossing.

9. Areas district-wise proposed to be irrigated and cropping pattern.

10. Seasonal variation in the subsoil water level in the Project area.

11. Location and capacity of escape channels.

My dear Prime Minister,

Thank you for your letter of April 24, 1961 on the allocation of waters of our rivers, the Ganges and the Teesta in the eastern region.

2. I am glad that the proposal that our two Ministers look at this problem from their level and vantage point continues to be acceptable to you. Let me at the very outset assure you, Mr. Prime Minister, that we are animated by an earnest desire to settle these issues in a spirit of friendship and understanding. As, however, the availability of water of these rivers is a matter of life or death for the people of Pakistan, you would, I am sure, appreciate our anxiety to protect our legitimate rights. Basically, this is a human problem and as such, we are prepared and indeed keen to appreciate your problem in the confidence that you are equally willing to understand our difficulties. Threatened, as we are, by the gravity of rising food shortage in the context of our fast growing population, the need for increased agricultural production, is as fundamental as the urge to survive. This crucial demand becomes all the more compelling in the frame work of our development plans which are inescapably necessary in the age of rising expectations.

3. I am in complete agreement with you that if the Minister’s Conference is to be useful, it must start with a suitable practical agenda. Since, however, our views on the rights of co-riparians under international law evidently differ, the best course would be, as is usual, for the parties to reserve their legal rights and try to explore a solution on any other mutually acceptable basis. This, we are prepared to do. The agenda for the river Teests covering Pakistan’s Teesta Barrage Project and India’s Tista Multi-purposes Barrage Project appear to be workable. However, the agenda for the river Ganges, to be realistic, should not only embrace the projects on which data were exchanged, but it should also cover our requirements for the Faridpur — Barisal Projects, a note on which was supplied by our Engineers to yours at their Calcutta meeting. The requirements of these projects on this river should be studied in relation to the existing water situations at the border, which I am told, your experts believe, will not be affected by other projects on your side upstream. I may mention here that our requirements for the Teesta Barrage Project on the river Teesta, the Ganges - Kobadak Project and the Faridpur - Barisal Project on the river Ganges are those which can be realistically foreseen at present. Fresh consultations between the Parties would be necessary if further requirements come to light later on or India plans another Project on those rivers in addition to the ones on which data have so far been exchanged.

4. I understand that the experts have already made progress and that the outstanding available data of each other’s projects are scheduled to be exchanged at their fourth meeting at Dacca in June - July this year. Would you not agree that after this meeting, a stage will perhaps be appropriate for the Ministerial meeting aimed at achieving a workable agreement in principle for the projects on the Ganges and the Teesta? Simultaneously, the experts can continue their meetings so that details for such an agreement can be evolved.

5. The matter is of such vital concern that I would like the Ministers to make a start on the problem soon after the Engineer’s next meeting. With this in mind, I would refrain, at this stage, from commenting on the contents of paragraph 4 of your letter or explaining, whether or not, we increased the scope of our Ganges - Kobadak Project over and above that indicated in our Note sent to your Government in September 1954.

6. I am, however, happy to note the desire of the Government of India to take into account Pakistan’s reasonable interest, and your statement that your Government “wish to give full consideration to all concrete and detailed information” that the Government of Pakistan would like to supply to the Government of India. On our part, we would not like to stand in the way of the Government of India developing the resources of the common river so long as Pakistan is assured the supplies required to meet its vital interests.

7. There seems to be some misunderstanding on the question of our protest. As a matter of procedure this was found to be necessary because the Government of India decided to begin construction of the Farakka Barrage Project unilaterally and at a time when the experts of the two countries were still exchanging data in furtherance of a co-operative approach. Under these circumstances, the Government of Pakistan was compelled to reserve its position on this project and the only way to put this on record was to lodge a protest. The protest from Pakistan was all the more necessary as any work constructed by an upper riparian on an international river gives it the potential to ruin the economy of a lower riparian, while the risk of works build by a lower riparian is borne entirely by the latter.
8. I would like to assure you again of our continued keenness and desire to find a mutually satisfactory solution of the problem in the interests of amity, peace and neighbourly goodwill.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

Sd/ Mohammad Ayub Khan

His Excellency
Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi.
the port of Calcutta, the Ganga-Bhagirathi opening should remain within the Indian Union, in spite of Murshidabad district in which it is situated being a Muslim area. The case was contested by Pakistan. Sir Cyril Radcliffe, the Chairman of the Commission, awarded Murshidabad to India and compensated Pakistan by awarding to East Pakistan the Hindu majority area of Khulna. The Government of Pakistan are also aware that despite the fact that Calcutta is India’s largest port, through which about half of the total imports and exports of the country are routed, and that its extinction would be disastrous to Indian economy and notwithstanding the advice of technical experts to go ahead with this project the Government of India delayed it for some years, solely because they wanted to take into consideration Pakistan’s reasonable interests. At the very first meetings of the Indian and Pakistan Water Resources Experts in June and October, 1960, the Project Report of the Project was handed over to the Pakistan engineers, and the extreme urgency with which the Government of India viewed the scheme was also conveyed to them. Further, Shri K.K. Framji, Joint Secretary to the Government of India, informed Mr. Hamid, Chief Engineering Adviser to the Government of Pakistan, in his letter of 30th January, 1961 (referred to in para 3 the High Commission of Pakistan Note), the position then obtaining on the project i.e., that preliminary work and an important component had been completed and further construction on the major components was proceeding and the detailed designs of the remaining components would go on concurrently with construction. A copy of this letter was also handed over by Commonwealth Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs to the High Commissioner for Pakistan in India.

The understanding on a co-operative approach between the two countries did not enjoin the parties to seek the previous consent of the other, before commencing works in its own territory. No such prior permission was considered necessary by the Government of Pakistan in respect of their projects — the Ganges Kobadak Project (Kushtia Unit) and the Karnfully project— final decisions regarding which have been taken and execution started without consulting the Government of India. While the Government of India, in deference to the understanding on the co-operative approach, delayed the Indian project only to take into consideration the reasonable interests of Pakistan, the Government of Pakistan has given no consideration whatever to Indian interests in planning or executing their projects and indeed, have inflated their water requirements to prejudice Indian projects, as is detailed in para 4 below.

The Government of India’s attitude is also fully in conformity with the rules of International Law, which do not require one of several riparian starting or continuing works to obtain before-hand the consent of the other riparian, except where this is prescribed by mutually accepted international treaty. No such treaty or agreement exists between India and Pakistan concerning the Ganga, and the mutual acceptance of the principle of co-operative approach does not in international law or practice imply the necessity of previous consent of the other party, thus making the development in one country dependent upon the discretion of another. Nevertheless, the Government of India has constantly made every effort to keep the Government of Pakistan informed and to take fully into consideration Pakistan’s reasonable interests, and it may be added that the Government of India propose to continue to do so and to give full consideration to all concrete and detailed information that the Government of Pakistan adduce in support of the genuine and bona fide interests of Pakistan.

3. In para 4 of the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India Note No.6 (1)-Pak.III/60 dated 2nd March, 1961, it has been clearly explained that the report of the project for the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta, which has been furnished is a complete document with all the necessary information on the magnitude and scope of the Project, its urgent and vital necessity, supporting the conclusion that the project is the only technical means of ensuring the regulation of the upland supplies for the problem of the Bhagirathi-Hooghly and the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta. At the recent third meeting of the Indian and Pakistan water resources experts, Indian Engineers were, none the less, prepared to exchange any reasonable additional information that might be required for a further understanding of the Project. Indeed the additional information asked for by the Pakistan Engineers vide Annexure VI, Record of Discussions, does not substantiate the contention that the Report lacks facts or evidence to support its statements or conclusions or that it does not establish the need for upland discharge. For that matter, the Government of Pakistan already have in their possession sufficient information for a full and complete appraisal of the effect on supplies needed in East Pakistan of the operation of the Indian Project.

4. The Government of India desire to point out that although in law Pakistan cannot claim any right of prior consent or consultation for works undertaken in India, in the interests of good neighbourly relations, it was the Government of India that initiated the Meeting at Experts Level to give effect of the co-operative approach, and agreed in principle to the exchange of data, with a view to securing a fair reconciliation of the mutual interests of the two countries. At each of these three meeting, as the records amply prove, the Indian Delegation have shown their readiness to always furnish more data than the Pakistan Engineers were prepared to do, on a reciprocal basis. Even at the recent third meeting, the Indian Engineers expressed their readiness to exchange the supplementary data asked for by each country in respect of the projects of the other country (namely Annexure III and IV of the Data Formats prescribed at the first meeting), to explain any data already furnished and to supply, on a reciprocal basis, any further basic data that might be asked for by the Pakistan delegation, (e.g. Annexure VI). The Pakistan delegation, however, explained that it would take some more time for them to be prepared for the exchange of the supplementary information reciprocally asked for by the Indian Engineers. The Government of India are ready to intensify these exchanges and are prepared to ensure such completion of the exchange of data, by the next meeting, which is scheduled to take place within two months. The Government of India cannot, however, accept the demand to stop their Project, which is vital for the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta, and which does not violate International Law.

It may be observed that the Government of Pakistan have, themselves, in the past, not practiced, in regard to their own schemes, what they now seem to demand from the Government of India. They have, on the contrary, gone on from time to time, to increase the scope and magnitude of their demands on the waters of the Ganga. At first in September 1954, the Government of Pakistan informed the Government of India that their requirement for phase I of the Ganges-Kobadak Project for an acreage of 200,00 acres would be 1500, to 2000 cusecs; but later in May, 1957, they stated that the F.A.O. had revised the project, doubling the commanded area to 400,000 acres. In the Note received in 1954, it was merely mentioned that in the Ganges-Kobadak region, the net area available for agricultural production was estimated to be of the order of 2 million acres and that “agronomical survey has indicated that a maximum withdrawal of 20,000 cusecs from the river Ganges is practicable against its minimum dry weather flow of 60,000 cusecs". At that time, there was no suggestion whatever, of any gravity command and, a barrage having been ruled out, a pumping scheme for a discharge of 20,000 cusecs, with a maximum lift of about 30 feet, did not appear to be a practicable preposition for an area already intensively cultivated and subject to heavy rainfall and inundation; but according to the latest indications the Government of Pakistan show their maximum requirement for the Project to be 22,000 cusecs of which about 8,800 cusecs are by flow irrigation. At the third meeting of the Experts, the Government of Pakistan have gone a step further and indicated another possible, future project form the Ganga for an area of 1.5 million acres in the Faridpur-Barisal Districts, which would require some 11,000 to 13,000 cusecs additional supply in the driest months and a maximum supply of over 30,000 cusecs, also by pumping, in spite of a weir across the Ganga. While the Government of India have followed up their long- delayed program with the with the utmost moderation and with due regard, at each step, to Pakistan’s reasonable interests, the Government of Pakistan have kept on steadily inflating their demand to quantum, which appear to be unreal, without any consideration for the legitimate interests of India — which has riparian interests on by far the greater length of the Ganga than Pakistan— although such consideration is prescribed by international law. The Government of India expressly reserve all their rights in this respect and they do not consider that these rights are in any way prejudiced by Pakistan's exaggerated and unreal claims as to their requirements.

5. Obviously, only such problems can come within the preview of bilateral discussions, at any level, as have international aspects. For projects, this means that there must exist a clear likelihood, that they will adversely affect the water situation in the other country. Where this is not the case, the Government of India cannot agree to discuss any such project which would clearly be “matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction” (Article 2 para 7 U.N. Charter). In view of the entirely insufficient hydrological data that are available and the total unlikelihood of far distant projects having any significant effect on the river near the border, the more so in view of the increased regeneration that will occur, the Government of India must insist on limiting the discussion or the exchange of data to the Project for the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta, on the one hand and the Ganges – Kobadak Project, on the other, with a view to an early practical settlement of the Indo-Pakistan problem on the Ganga.

The Government of India cannot agree to the definition of the Ganga Waters as “waters of the rivers common to India and Pakistan in the Eastern Region” or as “International Rivers in the Eastern Regions” because all river waters in India are under the jurisdiction of India and they can become international or common waters only by an International Treaty. At present there is no such treaty governing the uses of Ganga Waters.

It is generally recognised in International Law and even in Federal Law, that the best method to arrive at the regulation of water situation, which has not otherwise been regulated by a treaty, is negotiation and it is this method that had led to satisfactory results on the questions of water of the Indus between India and Pakistan. On the Ganga the first stage of discussions on an engineering basis has so far produced satisfactory results and these discussions are an indispensable preliminary, to the ultimate working out of a satisfactory solution of our mutual requirements in this region. The Pakistan engineers have not, however, so far, furnished the minimum data required for a practical approach such as the data of the available depths in the navigable reaches of the river and the maximum river discharges and levels at which navigation is sustainable or the basic data to determine the existing and apprehended tidal intrusion in East Pakistan. The Government of India would welcome suggestions from the Government of Pakistan for intensifying and making these discussions more effective.

With reference to Government of Pakistan’s Note Verbale No. F.1 (18)P/58 dated 21st September, 1960, the Government of India would like to point out as is clear from the above, that they do not share Pakistan’s interpretation of International Water Law, which is contrary to what is generally accepted in State practice.

6. The High Commission of India avails itself of this opportunity of renew to the Ministry of External Affairs the assurances of its highest consideration.

2594. SECRET
Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan President Field Marshal Mohammed Ayub Khan.
New Delhi, July 6, 1961.

New Delhi, 6th July, 1961

My dear President,

Thank you for your letter of the 19th May 1961 in which you deal with the rivers in the Eastern region of India. I am sorry for the slight delay in answering your letter. These matter, as you will appreciate, are technical and complicated and we have to consider them in consultation with our technical advisers. As a matter of fact, we have already sent to the Pakistan Government a formal note in reply to Pakistan Government’s procedural letter of protest against our proceeding with the further construction of the Farraka Barrage Project. This note which is dated the 26th June 1961, deals with some of the points you have raised in your letter. I presume it has come to your notice. But, for facility of reference, I enclose a copy of this note of ours dated the 26th June.

2. We have already agreed to a meetings, on the level of Ministers, to discuss these subjects. But, as you have said in your letter, such a meeting can only be useful if it has a suitable practical agenda and after a full exchange of data. I entirely agree with you that basically this is a human problem and that it should be tackled by attempting to understand each other’s needs and difficulties. I do not like the two Governments to be tied up in a discussion of legalistic issues on rights and procedures. But any discussion has to be based on factual data.
3. I doubt very much if this exchange of data will be completed at the fourth meeting of our engineers at Dacca. I am told that the progress on the exchange of data was not satisfactory at the third meeting in April last. At that meeting, the Pakistan Delegation was unable to furnish information set out in Annexure III and said that this will take some more time. Some important changes are still being introduced on your side in the concept of the project for the Khulna Unit and the surveys and investigations in the Jessore Unit are still far from complete. Our engineers had also asked for information (with supporting data) on river discharges and levels which the Pakistani engineers considered adequate and necessary to sustain the navigation in the various reaches of the Ganges in East Pakistan; but this information has also not been supplied. Furthermore, you will appreciate that the engineers of the two sides must, first necessarily agree on each other’s figures and on the basic data, particularly on river discharges in the key sites, before the Ministers can usefully discuss the issues. I would therefore, suggest that we ask our engineers to let us know as soon as they feel that a full exchange of data has taken place and there is general agreement on this matter. The two Governments can then consider the experts’ recommendations and also fix the dates for the Ministers’ meeting.

4. I am grateful for your assurance that you did not like to stand in the way of our vital development and I will therefore, not reiterate the importance of the Farakka Barrage Project for us which is the only means we have of saving our vital Port of Calcutta. I appreciate no less your problem of food shortage and a growing population and we would like, to the best of our ability, to be helpful in the solution of this problem. But, you will no doubt appreciate that problems of food shortage and a growing population are common to us both and that far more people depend on the Ganges in India than they do in East Pakistan. These waters are indeed for the Indian people even more a matter of life and death and I hope you will readily understand our anxiety to safeguard our vital interests. I have no doubt, however, that given a frank and co-operative approach on both sides, the interests of both are capable of a rational reconciliation.

5. You have referred in your letter to the Faridpur — Barisal Irrigation Projects. I must confess that we have never heard of this new project until it was mentioned at the last meeting of the engineers at Calcutta in April 1961. Our engineers tell me that only a very sketchy note, with very inadequate data on the necessity and justification of this project, has been furnished. There is no mention of this in Pakistan’s Second Plan where merely the need for “A comprehensive drainage scheme for Faridpur” and for protection of portions of Barisal District by “The Tidal Embankment Project” is mentioned. Our engineers find it difficult to accept that irrigation should be provided for this area by diversion from the Ganges, which is known to have critical supplies in certain months, barely sufficient for existing demands. Any data that may now be furnished on the Faridpur-Barisal Irrigation Project is likely to be of a speculative nature and therefore, it would be necessary to restrict the agenda of the proposed Ministers’ meeting to the projects on which data is actually, at present, being exchanged and which, on the Ganges, are the Ganges Kobaddak Project of Pakistan and the Project for the preservation of the Port of Calcutta of India.

6. One more matter to which I must also refer is the distinction you still seem to make between the rights of the upper and lower riparian in paragraph 7 of your letter that the lower riparians can proceed unilaterally with projects while the upper riparian should not be free to do so. If this was to be so, it would enable the lower riparian to create, unilaterally, historic rights in its favour and go on inflating them at its discretion thereby completely blocking all development and uses of the upper riparian. We cannot obviously, accept this point of view, especially when three-fourths of the length of the Ganges lies in Indian territory which gives India the priority of interest in this river.

7. I am referring to these matters not because I wish to raise legalistic arguments, but because we have to be clear in our approach to this subject before we can deal with it satisfactorily. I would repeat that we should like this problem to be treated as a human problem affecting large numbers of human beings in India and in Pakistan. It should be our endeavour to meet their needs in the largest possible measures. We have throughout been very careful to take into account Pakistan’s reasonable interests on the Teesta as well as on the Ganges and I am assure you that we shall continue to consider these matters with goodwill, friendship and frankness.

With warm regards,

Yours sincerely

Sd/ Jawaharlal Nehru

2595. Note from Pakistan High Commission to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, November 29, 1961.

Office of the High Commissioner for Pakistan in India
New Delhi

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, and with reference to their Note No. F-6(1)- Pak. III/60 dated 2nd March, 1961 has to honour to state as follows:

2. At the Second Meeting of the Water Resources Experts of India and Pakistan, held from 1st to 3rd October, 1960, the Pakistan representatives supplied the following documents in connection with the Ganges-Kobadak Project:-

1. A Note on the Ganges-Kobadak Project in East Pakistan.
2. Data format for the Ganges-Kobadak Project.
5. Gauge and discharge data of the Ganges River.

The Jessore Unit required pumped supply like the Kushtia Unit and its requirements could be gauged to be similar to those of the Kushtia Unit in the proportion of the culturable areas.

The above information was sufficient to assess the magnitude and the effect of the Ganges-Kobadak Project, specially when the proposed monthly withdrawals had been indicated in the Data Format on this Project. However, the following additional data on this Project was supplied at the Third Meeting of the Experts held at Calcutta from the 28th to 30th April, 1961:

1. Monthly crop delta and water requirement of the Ganges-Kobadak Project for the Kushtia, Jressore & Khulna Units.
2. Appendix (Technical Data) of Annexure I to the data format of the Ganges-Kobadak Project for
   a. Kushtia Unit,
b. Jessore Unit, and
c. Khulna Unit.

Additional details asked for would, as agreed between the experts, be furnished at their next meeting.

3. The Government of Pakistan are, however, surprised at the opinion expressed by the Government of India that since the Project involved pumping, it would be economically prohibitive. Our study belies this and its economic feasibility has been established. We are faced with recurring food shortages and cannot go on importing food at the cost of developmental work.

4. Regarding the consultant's Feasibility Report of the Teesta Barrage Project, supplied by the Pakistan Experts at the First Meeting, attention is invited to the correspondence exchanged between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan prior to this meeting. The Government of India had then informed the Government of Pakistan that only meager data was available about their Farakka Barrage Project and the agenda was to be primarily limited to procedural matters. The Pakistan team, therefore, took only one copy of the Teesta Barrage Project Report without drawings to that Meeting for their own use. This had been cyclostyled for circulation amongst the WAPDA officers from the original Consultants' Report, of which only a limited number of copies were received. During the Meeting, however the Leader of the Pakistan team, as a gesture of goodwill, and without getting any literature in return on reciprocal basis from the Indian team, supplied the cyclostyled copy of the Feasibility Report to the Leader of the Indian team. Additional copies of the Report, were supplied at a subsequent Meeting.

The impression of the Government of India that some pages of the original Report were excluded from the cyclostyled copy is not correct and is unfortunately due to the typographical error in page numbering which resulted in the two sheets bearing the same page-number.

5. The Government of Pakistan regret to observe that the Report on the Preservation of the Port of Calcutta (Farakka Barrage Project) supplied to Experts is far from being full and comprehensive, as has been stated by the Government of India, and they are, therefore, anxiously awaiting the further details and clarifications requested from the Experts of the Government of India. The Government of Pakistan would specifically like to know how the withdrawal pattern of the Project has been arrived at and would, therefore, request the Government of India to kindly ask their Experts to supply this information also at the next Meeting.
6. It is encouraging to note that the data on the Kosi and Gandak Projects are available for over two years. The Government of Pakistan are, however, unable to understand the reasons for denying them the available data. The Government of Pakistan learn that substantial withdrawals of water are proposed by the Government of India for their Kosi and the Gandak Projects and are, therefore, anxious to study the effects of these Projects on the water situation at the border. The Government of India are requested again kindly not only to furnish the project reports on the Kosi and the Gandak Projects but also to supply the available discharge data of the river Ganges at the junction with the Kosi and the Gandak, and of the Kosi and the Gandak on the basis of which these Projects have been framed. The Government of Pakistan note the statement made by the Government of India that the withdrawals upstream would not affect the situation at the border, but would like to study the problem on their own. It is, therefore, requested that the data on which the Government of India base their conclusion may please be supplied.

7. A copy of the Tidal Embankment Project has since been supplied to the Experts of the Government of India. The closing of tidal inlets in East Pakistan, whose tidal basins are not connected with the tidal basin of the Hooghly River, should not have any adverse effect on the Hooghly River. However, it will be observed from the Coastal Embankment Project that it does not provide from any closing of major tidal inlets.

8. The Government of Pakistan’s stand on the acceptance of the Record of Discussions of the various Meetings of the Experts has already been dealt with in this Missions’ Note No.F.1 (18)P/58 dated the 27th January, 1961.

9. The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry the assurances of its highest consideration.

Press Note issued by the Ministry of External Affairs clarifying its position on the Farakka Project.

New Delhi, September 27, 1962.

Press Note

Farakka Barrage Scheme
India’s Position Clarified

The attention of the Government of India has been drawn to reports carried by the Pakistan Press that the Prime Minister of India has agreed to a proposal made by the President of Pakistan that a Minister-level conference should be held for talks over the Farakka Barrage Scheme of India.

It transpires that the matter was mentioned by President Ayub Khan to the Prime Minister in London as they were both leaving the Marlborough House after the Commonwealth Prime Ministers’ Conference. President Ayub Khan said that the engineers of India and Pakistan had met and that they had collected and exchanged necessary information and data. President Ayub Khan went on to suggest that the time had now come for the matter to be considered at the Ministers’ level.

The Prime Minister of India replied that he was not sure that the engineers had finished their work. Prime Minister Nehru said that it was for the engineers to make the recommendation which could then be considered by the Ministers.

The position of the Government of India in this matter has not changed since the Prime Minister wrote to President Ayub Khan last on this subject. In his letter dated 6th July 1961, which has not been replied to, the Prime Minister of India has stated that he was agreeable to a conference at the Ministerial level, but that such a meeting could only be useful if it had suitable practical agenda and after a full exchange of technical data between experts of the two sides. This was what the Prime Minister had said in an earlier letter also to the President of Pakistan, viz. that until technical data had been fully exchanged, a Minister-level conference would be of no use.

It may be stated that the engineers of the two sides have not exchanged the necessary technical data so far on the basis of which an early Minister-level conference could be usefully held.
Press release issued by the Government of India on the conclusion of Indo-Pakistan talks regarding cooperation in control of floods in the eastern regions of India and Pakistan

New Delhi, August 24, 1965

The hope that co-operation between India and Pakistan in tackling the problem of floods in the eastern regions of the two countries would help to reduce the flood risks and so mitigate the sufferings of the people was expressed by the Ministers of the two countries in their speeches at the Indo-Pakistan Conference on Flood Control held in New Delhi on 24 August.

The Indian delegation was led by the Union Minister of Irrigation and Power and Planning, Shri Gulzarilal Nanda, and the Pakistan delegation by Mr. Habib Ibrahim Rahimtoo, Central Minister of Industries and Commerce.

Welcoming the Pakistan Minister, Shri Gulzarilal Nanda recalled that in September 1955 a delegation of Indian engineers went to Karachi in response to a request from the Prime Minister of Pakistan for co-operation in controlling floods in East Bengal. He explained the main features of the flood problems confronting India and pointed out the similarity of experience in regard to floods on both sides of the border. He referred to the arrangements made in India for flood forecasting and flood warning and gave details of the comprehensive surveys undertaken for the collection of hydrological and other relevant data by setting up a network of rain and river gauges, discharge and silt observation sites and indicated the nature of the various protection measures to moderate floods, all of which, he said, would prove helpful to Pakistan in dealing with their problems. India was reasonably well equipped now to assist Pakistan by way of timely information of approaching floods which should help to avoid untoward consequences in their areas. He added that the human aspect of the problem was in the forefront of his mind and he felt that it was a neighbourly obligation on the part of India to render all possible assistance which it would gladly discharge.

The Pakistan Minister in his address expressed pleasure over the opportunity of conferring with his Indian friends on the common problems relating to floods. It was a happy augury, he said, for the conference that the Prime Ministers of the two countries so keenly desired mutual co-operation in this matter. Observing that flood control was a highly technical problem, Mr. Rahimtoo stated that there could be no two opinions about the recommendations made by the technical experts of both the countries at the meeting held in Karachi in September 1955. Mr. Rahimtoo hoped that the procedure of exchange of information which might now be agreed upon would pave the way for the formulation of flood control schemes in both the countries in the near future. The Ministers of Pakistan and India authorised the Chairmen of the East Bengal Flood Commission, Pakistan, and the Brahmaputra River Commission, India, to exchange information necessary for measures for flood control in the eastern regions of the two countries. The two Chairmen would correspond with each other direct on technical matters and request for such information as may be of assistance in tackling flood problems in this region.

The various directions in which the co-operative work should proceed were then discussed and it was agreed that the details should be gone into by the Chairmen of the two Commissions. The Chairmen of the two Commissions met later and made certain recommendations regarding details of the information required by each side and the manner of exchange of such information.

Some of the important recommendations approved by the conference were:

(a) flood warnings to be given from Dibrugarh, Gauhati, Patna, Silchar, Gomti, Khawai and Dholal from India to Pakistan;
(b) flood warnings from Atrai in Pakistan to be given to India;
(c) heavy rainfall data from Shillong to be transmitted to Pakistan;
(d) heavy rainfall data from Sylhet and Habibganj in Pakistan to be sent to India; and
(e) India will endeavour to furnish such other information relating to the Brahmaputra Valley or other assistance as may be considered necessary by the two Chairmen for formulating flood schemes. The discussions were held in an atmosphere of cordiality and goodwill.
2598. Statement of the Deputy Minister in the Ministry of External Affairs, Surendra Pal Singh in response to Calling Attention Notice in the Rajya Sabha on the “Reported statement of Foreign Minister of Pakistan regarding Farakka Project”.

New Delhi, June 24, 1967.

Madam Deputy Chairman, the Government of India are not yet in possession of the text of the statement made by the Foreign Minister of Pakistan in the Pakistan National Assembly on 15th June, 1967. The same has been called for from our mission in Pakistan and on its receipt due consideration will be given to it. Reports which have appeared in Indian and Pakistani newspapers mention that in a statement laid on the Table of the House, the Foreign Minister of Pakistan has charged India with pressing ahead with the Farakka Barrage Project to present Pakistan with a fait accompli thus foreclosing the possibility of, what he called, a reasonable solution. The Pakistan Foreign Minister is also reported to have assured the House that his Government would do its best to prevent India from proceeding with the Project.

The facts relating to the Farakka Project are already well known to the House. This is a simple Project to save the premier port of Calcutta from a process of sure extinction and it has no element of irrigation or power. Farakka Barrage Project has not been conjured up over-night, but has been the result of a continuous search for ways to save the port of Calcutta, spread over more than a century. Starting from Sir Arthur Cotton, who as far back as 1858 planned barrage across the Ganga, to Dr. Walter Hensen, an expert German engineer, a century later, a galaxy of engineers who devoted their attention to the problem of Bhagirathi-Hooghly has unanimously asserted that the construction of a barrage with the objective of supplying additional water into the Bhagirathi-Hooghly system was the only measure by which the alarming rate of deterioration of the Hooghly approaches to the port of Calcutta could be arrested. This Project is of great national importance to India and will not be detrimental to Pakistan. Pakistan’s objections to the construction of the barrage are also not new but have been continuing for the last several years. It was with a view to allaying the fears of the Government of Pakistan that the Government of India had agreed to the exchange of technical data relating to river projects of mutual interest to the two countries. For this purpose four meetings of water resources experts of both the countries were held between June 1960 and January 1962. The Government of India had written to the Government of Pakistan in 1965 to arrange the 5th meeting of the experts but the outbreak of hostilities between the two countries stood in the way of such a meeting being held and this proposal is still pending with Pakistan.
Shri Surendra Pal Singh: I am prepared to give the assurance that we will not succumb to any pressure whatsoever in this regard. This is a very vital project for our country and we are going ahead with it at full speed. This much is true that Pakistan has actually objected to the building of the barrage there. The two main objections that Pakistan has come forward with are that if this barrage is built there, it will reduce the flow of water in summer to their part of the river in East Pakistan and secondly if we built this barrage, it will aggravate the flood situation in their country during the monsoon season. We have assured Pakistan that both these things will not happen and that their interests will not be put in jeopardy. As far as we are concerned we propose to go ahead with it and we shall see that it is completed within the scheduled time.

We have not received any communication or protest from Pakistan about the Farakka Barrage. As regards the question of modification in the design of the barrage, it is a technical question which I cannot actually answer but as far as I know the design of the barrage has not been actually modified or changed to such an extent as to have any adverse effect on the Calcutta port. The main purpose of building this project is to supply additional water to the Calcutta port and this objective will always be uppermost in our mind.

The Minister of Irrigation and Power (Dr. K. L. Rao): Sir, may I add that the design of the project is exactly the same as was decided upon and we are not deviating even an inch from the original design?

Shri Surendra Pal Singh: Madam, we are willing to thrash out all our differences with Pakistan; there is no doubt about that. As regards the meeting of the experts, as I have already said in the main reply, we had invited Pakistan for the fifth meeting but because the war intervened, the meeting could not be held. Our invitation is still open and it is up to Pakistan to accept the invitation and have this meeting. As regards the meeting of the Foreign Ministers of India and Pakistan in New York, I take it that a number of subjects will be discussed when they meet but I cannot say whether this specific question will be taken up or not.

......that there is no justification whatsoever on the part of Pakistan to have any objection to this project and as I have already said before, while we are prepared to meet Pakistan's demand to some extent to allay her fears in regard to the supply of water and control of floods, we do however intend to go ahead with this project and there is no question of giving it up or modifying it despite Pakistan’s objections which we do think are unreasonable.

2599. Statement by Pakistan Foreign MinisterSharif Uddin Pirzada on Farakka Barrage.

Rawalpindi, December 14, 1967.

The Government is fully alive to the serious threat posed to the economy of the country by the construction of a barrage at Farakka in India. In the course of my visit to East Pakistan last year I toured the region threatened by the Farakka Barrage and met engineers, officials and Union Council members to apprise myself on the spot of the situation and the ill effects which this project will have on the economy and development of that part of East Pakistan.

During the last budget session of the National Assembly, in answer to a question I had given a detailed answer in this behalf.

Indian Objectives

India is constructing the Farakka Barrage with the stated objective of flushing the Hoogly River in order to improve navigation in the Calcutta Port. According to an official explanation the project is also designed to improve communication facilities, drainage and sanitation and water supplies in Calcutta and inland water transport with a rail cum road project over the Farakka. A note on the project in the 1965-66 Indian budget stated that considering the strategic and international importance of the project, the construction program had been advanced by one year and that the project would be competed by 1969-70.

Effects on Pakistan

As a result of the construction of this Barrage, as well as of two others on the Kosi and Gandak tributaries of the Ganges, between a third and a half of the dry weather flow of the Ganges, which would have otherwise flowed into East Pakistan would be diverted into the Hoogly. East Pakistan whose economy had been tied for centuries past with the river Ganges will thus be denied the most important source of water. The deleterious effects of this diversion on the economy of East Pakistan are incalculable.
Negotiations with India

The adverse effect on Pakistan’s economy of the construction of the Farakka Barrage was taken up with the Government of India as early as 1951, when the news of the Government of India’s plans in this regard first came to our notice. It was pointed out to the Government of India that Pakistan should be consulted before any scheme likely to prejudice the vital interests of this country were put into operation in India. The Government of India’s reply was to the effect that the Ganges Barrage Project was only at the stage of preliminary study and that Pakistan’s apprehensions were purely hypothetical. They agreed, however, on the need for cooperation between the two countries in this matter. Later that year the Government of India’s attention was once again drawn to the reports about top priority being given to the construction of Farakka Barrage and Gandak Projects and requested the Indian Government for full information on the nature and scope of these projects. The Government of India replied to the effect that both projects were under investigation and added that cooperation between the two countries in this matter would have to be reciprocal.

In 1954, the Pakistan Government supplied India with details of the Ganges-Kobadak Projects and requested for the supply of similar information in respect of the Indian projects on the Ganges. The Indian reply was evasive but suggested cooperation on flood control in the Ganges and Brahmaputra basin. In May 1955, we again addressed the Government of India on the subject and proposed in pursuance of the Indian proposal regarding flood control that a party of engineers of two countries should survey the upper reaches of the two rivers. In their reply sent in February 1956, the Government of India sidetracked the proposal but advised the Government of Pakistan to set up a flood control commission of its own on the model of those set up by India.

It is obvious that while the Government of India were paying lip service to the idea of cooperation, they were not willing to give the idea a practical shape. In 1957, therefore the Pak Government suggested that both countries should approach the United Nations for Advisory and Technical services in planning the optimum and mutually beneficial use of the common rivers. The Government of India rejected this proposal and held that bilateral discussions at the level of experts would be adequate. The Pakistan Government without giving up the proposal for reference of the problem to a third party agreed to the proposal for discussions between experts of the two countries. Four meetings were accordingly held between experts of the two countries the last being in January 1962.

In the course of these meeting technical data on the respective projects of the two countries were exchanged. At the last meeting both sides expressed the view that satisfactory progress had been made in the exchange of data; subsequently the Indian side put in requests for a great deal of further data, much of which was considered to be irrelevant by the Pakistan side. Further data was however made available to India but no further meeting has since been held.

Meanwhile in 1961, in the course of Commonwealth Prime Ministers meeting in London President Ayub and Prime Minister Nehru discussed this question and in the course of subsequent correspondence between them on the subject it was agreed that as soon as exchange of data had been completed at experts’ level, the problem should be discussed at the level of Ministers.

In 1963, the Government of Pakistan proposed a further meeting of experts to be held in order to complete the exchange of data. No reply having been received to this proposal, a reminder was sent in May, 1965. The Government of India in reply agreed in August, 1965, to hold an expert level meeting which could not be held due to outbreak of war between the two countries.

India’s Approach

It is evident from the reference in the Indian budget to the “strategic and international importance” of the project that the Government of India have other considerations in mind than that of ensuring the navigability of the Hoogly river. Pakistan has it on the authority of international experts that the Farakka Barrage is not the best way of dealing with the problem of silting in the port of Calcutta. In pressing ahead with the project, the Indian Government obviously intend to present Pakistan with a fait accompli thus foreclosing the possibility of a reasonable solution of this problem which permit each country to make optimum use of the waters of this common river without harming the interests of others. On June 24, 1967, when members of the Indian parliament referred to my statements in this connection, the Irrigation Minister of India told the Lok Sabha that the Government of India had no intention of giving up the project or modifying it in any way in response to Pakistan’s objections. India’s approach has thus been contrary to international law and practice and uncooperative.

Pakistan’s Approach

We believe that the waters of the Ganges should be equitably shared by the two countries on the basis of genuine need and in accordance with the international law. Friends and well wishers of both countries have urged the need for economic co-operation and joint development between Pakistan and India. The Farakka barrage threatens the entire ecological pattern of the deltaic region of East Pakistan and for Pakistan the question assumes an importance which transcends purely economic considerations. What is required is not only to ensure an equitable share of the waters of the common rivers to East Pakistan but also to guarantee the rights of East Pakistan as the lower riparian through adequate controls on the unilateral action of the upper riparian for optimum development of the areas served by the Ganges and its tributaries in both countries. The whole history of our attempts to seek a fair solution of the problem demonstrates Pakistan’s practical and reasonable approach. We are ready to explore avenues of settlement with India on that basis and hope the Government of India will realise that its present unilateral course of action can only make the problem more complex and render increasingly difficult a rational and mutually beneficial solution.

Assistance By Third Party

It will be recalled that as early as 1967 Pakistan suggested that the advisory and technical services of an appropriate UN body might be secured in the endeavor to reach an agreed solution with India on this dispute. India rejected this suggestion. Since then on a number of occasions Pakistan has raised the issue in international forums and drawn attention to the grave consequences of the Indian project on the economy of East Pakistan. Pakistan has also raised this question at other international bodies. In October this year we have again proposed to India that we should hold talks on this problem. India’s reply to this proposal awaited. The Government is constantly reviewing measures that may be open to Pakistan in tackling this problem and hope that India will enter into fruitful negotiations with us on this dispute. If our efforts at solving this problem through negotiations with India do not yield any result within a reasonable time, the Government would approach the concerned international agencies.

Note from the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

Islamabad, June 21, 1968.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission of India and with reference to the correspondence exchanged between President of Pakistan and the Late Prime Minister of India in 1961, has the honour to state as follows:

Then the President of Pakistan in his letter dated 27th March 1961, referred to the agreement reached with the late Prime Minister of India on the holding of a Ministerial level meeting to discuss the problem arising out of the construction of Farraka Barrage by India, the late Prime Minister expressed the view that the experts of the two sides, who had by then had held three meetings had not completed the exchange of data. The Government of Pakistan agreed to hold a further meeting of experts with a view to paving the way for Ministerial Level talks. This meeting was held at Dacca from 27th December, 1961 to 8th January, 1962. The joint communiqué issued at the end of this meeting stated that both the delegations had been briefed by their respective governments to complete the exchange of data. The communiqué also stated that voluminous data had been exchanged and some further information would be furnished by correspondence. Since then a lot of data were actually furnished through correspondence. As the Government of India insisted on holding yet another experts’ level meeting, the Government of Pakistan agreed to the proposal after clarifying in its Aide Memoire dated January 31, 1968 that it would be the final meeting of the experts of the two countries and that its purpose would be to prepare the ground for a Ministerial meeting.

2. The Government of Pakistan note that a great deal of additional data were exchanged at the meeting in Delhi for May 13 to May 28, 1968. In spite of their best efforts the two teams of experts were unable to secure any measure of agreement on the interpretation of these data and the conclusion drawn therefore. The Governments of Pakistan, therefore are of the view that a stage has now been reached when the two governments should, in a spirit of genuine co-operation, hold substantive discussions with a view to reaching a mutually satisfactory solution of the basic problems.

3. The Government of Pakistan, therefore, proposed that a meeting between the two Governments be held at Ministerial level and invite the Government of India to send a delegation led by a Minister to hold talks at Islamabad. Should the Government of India consider it more convenient to hold the proposed meeting in New Delhi, the Government of Pakistan would be willing to send a delegation there. In view of the need for an early solution of the problem, the Government of Pakistan propose that the meeting be held during the month of July, 1968 on any dates that may be convenient to the Government of India.

The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of its highest consideration.

High Commission of India in Pakistan, Islamabad.

2601. SECRET

Record of the call by Pakistan High Commissioner Sajjad Haider on Deputy Prime Minister Morarji Desai.

New Delhi, July 12, 1968.

Ministry of External Affairs

The Pakistan High Commissioner, Mr. Sajjad Haider, called on the Deputy Prime Minister at 5-30 p.m. today.

After some general talk, the High Commissioner said that he had come from Islamabad with instructions to work for improving the relations between the two countries and with this end in view, the Government of Pakistan had just before his arrival sent a note proposing a ministerial level meeting on the question of the waters of the Eastern Rivers. He hoped that the Government of India would accept their invitation to send a Ministerial delegation to visit Pakistan. The DPM replied that while India has no objections to talk on any and all subjects, there was no point in asking third parties, like the World Bank, to mediate in this matter. Nor will any maneuver on the part of Pakistan to stop the building of the barrage (succeed). The division of waters is what has been determined by nature and our share cannot be given away. If Pakistan keeps on asking for more and more, it will not help matters especially when they keep on saying that India is the enemy at every opportunity. We realise that we are two separate countries and we have no wish to alter this fact. It is our hope that the two countries can live in peace. But as long as the abuses and anti-India propaganda continues and there is no real desire in Pakistan to improve relations, nothing can happen.

The High Commissioner interjected to say that, ever since his arrival here, he has found the same kinds of things being said about Pakistan. For example when Pakistan gets help from other countries, India protests. The DPM said that India will certainly protest if Pakistan continues to arm itself because this is meant against us.

The High Commissioner asked for whom the Indian arms were meant? The DPM replied that India’s defense build-up was aimed at China. We have not attacked any country and do not covet anyone’s territory. No one need worry on that score. As a matter of fact, Pakistan had attacked India twice in 1965. We have no intention to wage war but we will defend ourselves against any attack. The High Commissioner protested that Pakistan wanted to be friendly and did not want war. In that case, the DPM asked, why is Pakistan not prepared to talk with India on all subjects. For restoring telecommunications, India did not press for the payment of dues by Pakistan to show goodwill towards Pakistan. There should be some reciprocity in these matters.

The High Commissioner then said that since he has come here he is trying to take up matters regarding air services as well as Ministerial meeting on Farakka. He is hoping to have some positive response from India. The DPM replied that talks should be held on all subjects with which the two countries are concerned and not limited to subjects of special interest to Pakistan only. We believe that it is always better to meet and talk so that sooner or later something can come out of it. The High Commissioner agreed and said that he hoped that during his tenure here the two heads of Government will meet and that he had made a mention of this to PM. He again expressed the hope that Pakistan’s invitation for a Ministerial meeting on Farakka would be accepted and the DPM would take this opportunity to visit Pakistan. The DPM said that the Government of India will reply to the Pakistani note.

Note from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan High Commission.

New Delhi, July 20, 1968.

Government of India
Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No.PII/112/1/68 July 20, 1968

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, presents its compliments to the High Commission of Pakistan in India and with reference to the Record of Discussions of the Fifth Meeting of the Water Resources Experts of India and Pakistan, held at New Delhi in May, 1968, has the honour to state that the Government of India have since considered the above mentioned Record of Discussions. The Ministry would particularly like to draw the attention of the High Commission to the following issues that emerge there from.

The Government of India note with serious concern that the Pakistan Government propose to construct a barrage across the Padma, as detailed in the “Preliminary Design Report” prepared by Tippets - Abbet McCarthy—Stratton, a copy of which was furnished to the Indian Experts by the Pakistan Experts Team at the Fifth Meeting (vide para 21 of the Record of Discussions.). Such a barrage when completed will cause immense harm to large tracts of territory belonging to India. The Government of India, therefore, lodge a strong protest against proposed construction of the barrage which would constitute a serious infringement of the territorial sovereignty of India by causing injury to Indian interests in the areas affected thereby. The Government of India reserve their right to take such action as they consider necessary to protect their interests and the sovereignty of their territory which would be adversely affected by the construction of the proposed barrage by Pakistan.

The Government of India also strongly protest against the construction of the “Teesta Barrage as described in the Report of Teesta Barrage Project-EPWAPDA March 67” (Vide para 29 of the Record of Discussions) or any such other structure across the Teesta in East Pakistan, which would involve inundation of Indian territory and interfere with the utilisation of water in India and have other serious repercussions on India.

The Government of India invite specific attention to para 28 of the Record of Discussions relating to the Karnafuli Project and restate their position as to the damage caused to India as earlier clarified in their note No.F.8(2)/57-Genl(P) dated July 29, 1964. While the Government of India will separately communicate to the Government of Pakistan their assessment of the compensation payable to India for the damages caused to Indian areas and interests, they wish to emphasize that the Government of Pakistan should not operate the Karanfuli Reservoir, so as to cause submersion of Indian territory before undertaking a joint technical examination of the levels up to which the reservoir could be operated without causing loss to Indian territory and property.

In conclusion, the Government of India wish to state that they fully endorse the suggestions made by the Indian delegation, vide para 32 of the Record of Discussions (Annexure I). They accordingly urge the Government of Pakistan to ensure that the Pakistani experts join hands with Indian experts in the various studies listed therein so that in due course they are able to recommend to their respective Governments the basis on which further progress could be made.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan in India the assurances of its highest consideration.

The High Commission of Pakistan, New Delhi.

***************

Annexure—I

Paragraph 32 of the Record of Discussions of the Fifth Meeting

The Indian delegation stated that they were entirely in disagreement with the statements made and conclusions drawn in paragraph 31. While India had consistently followed the path of cooperative approach, this has not been fully reciprocated by Pakistan. The Indian delegation have avoided entering into legalistic issues which are totally outside the scope of the experts meeting. The Indian delegation cannot also recommend the induction of a third party as this suggestion is not in consonance with the spirit of cooperative approach. The Indian experts have tried to satisfy the Pakistan apprehensions in regard to the possible adverse effect of the project on the river in Pakistan.

The Indian delegation referred to the Record of the Fourth Meeting as follows:

“The delegations were happy to learn that significant progress had been made in the exchange of basic data through sustained and genuine efforts on both sides.”

While the changing scope of the Pakistan projects on the Ganges and its water requirement in the lean months when the water situation is critical, the progress of these discussions has not been according to the original expectation. This situation can, however, be rectified if the two delegations could function in a constructive and co-operative manner.

The Indian delegation is of the view that there are still a large number of important points of technical nature in regard to which the experts of the two countries could usefully have further discussions provided there is the willingness on both sides to exchange the relevant information freely and fully. Some of these point are:-

1) First and foremost, Pakistan should undertake to give a final picture of its water requirements form the Ganga which can be justified in a truly technical manner and for which inadequate and incomplete information has been provided so far. It is possible for Pakistan to give a firm picture of the final projects they have in view and its requirements of water, which can be discussed by the delegation on a technical basis.

2) Discussions should also be held between the experts as to what areas essentially require supplies from the Ganga and what areas can receive irrigation from other sources or by other irrigation techniques. For the areas to be irrigated from the Ganga, discussions are necessary on the beneficial intensity, crop pattern and duties and deltas — that is, water requirements which while taking into account Pakistan's reasonable requirements would not injure India's interest.

3) The Indian delegation has made preliminary estimates of 18,000 cusecs regeneration between Farakka and Hardinge Bridge from past data of river supplies at these places. This figure has not been accepted by Pakistan. It is, therefore, suggested that the two delegations make a study of the present regeneration of water between these point and the likely additional regeneration after Farakka Barrage is in operation.

4) A detailed technical study of the possible effects of the high level Ganges Barrage of Pakistan on the submergence of Indian territory and its effects on the operation of the Farakka Barrage Project are also required. A joint survey is considered necessary and this should be undertaken without any delay after final stage of Pakistan requirements is known.

5) Since Pakistan have expressed doubts in the accuracy of their measurements of river discharges at Hardinge Bridge, it is essential for the experts of the two countries to make a special study and to establish a correlation between Hardinge Bridge and the new site at which measurements have been recently started. Joint visits to the discharge sites may also be made by the experts of the two countries.

6) A technical study of the likely effects of the Teesta Project on Indian Territory and other Indian interests by the experts of the two countries is essential before the Government of Pakistan go ahead with the project.

The proposed joint visits of the Pakistan and Indian engineers to the sites of Farakka Barrage and the Ganges Kobadak areas would no doubt provide opportunity to carry forward the present discussions and help mutual understanding. It hopes that these visits will be followed by further discussions is order to complete the task assigned to the experts of the two countries.

The Indian delegation stated that it will thus be seen that while much useful work has been done at the past meetings, there is much that remains to be done before enlightened discussions at Government level could take place for lasting beneficial solutions satisfactory, to both the countries. The Indian delegation, therefore, suggests that the two delegations recommend to their respective Governments that further technical discussions of the experts of the two countries should be held in respect of the point mentioned above and other relevant matters. In particular during these discussions a genuine effort should be made to assess the reasonable water requirements of Pakistan which must be met from the Ganga and the manner in which these can be met.

2603. Statement of the Indian Minister for Irrigation and Power Dr. K. L. Rao replying to Half-an-hour discussion in the Lok Sabha on the “Visit of Pakistani Experts to Farakka Barrage site”.

New Delhi, July 26, 1968

The Minister of Irrigation and Power (Dr. K.L. Rao) : Mr. Chairman, Sir, I am very glad the House is taking a lot of interest in this very important project of our country. I shall first clear up the points raised by the hon. Member, Shri Naidu, and later on answer the questions put by other hon. Members.

The first question raised was about the progress of the project. I want to say that the progress of the project is going even ahead of what we thought. We originally thought that this project will be ready only in June, 1971. But we are proceeding at such a rapid rate—and I must say the river has been very kind to us so far—that we hope now that this Barrage will be completed by June 1970—
i.e., one year ahead. I must also tell hon. Members that this is one of the most difficult engineering feats of the world. It is not an ordinary thing to construct a barrage at the very end of Ganga. It is a very difficult problem and such a thing has not been attempted so far in any country. In fact, Pakistan was afraid of constructing a barrage in their own territory, otherwise they would have suggested one long ago. Only after seeing our work they are more courageous and they are suggesting a barrage lower down in their country. As I said, it is a very difficult project and it involves an expenditure of more than Rs. 150 crores. The Government of India is very anxious about this project. We are doing everything possible to see that this project is completed as early as possible. In view of the very difficult conditions it is not possible to switch on the date of progress beyond what we are doing. Two-third work has been done on the Barrage and 40 per cent work has been done on the feeder canals. These are the two main components of this project. Therefore, the House should really be glad to know that we are going to do this work one year ahead of schedule.

The second question was about the invitation given to their engineers to visit the project. It is not correct. No such invitation was made. What happened was, we agreed for a bilateral discussion between this country and Pakistan at the experts level.

Shri Kanwar Lal Gupta: Why? Why did you do that when there was no dispute?

Dr. K.L. Rao: After all, in any problem we can always have bilateral discussions.

Shri Kanwar Lal Gupta: When this is not under dispute, why do you make it a disputed case?

Dr. K.L. Rao: It is not a question of any dispute. Ganga was originally flowing into Bhagirathi. It was flowing by Calcutta. Padma was another branch. River Ganga was having two outlets—one was Bhagirathi and the other was Padma. This was 400 years back. Then, 400 years ago there was an avulsion and Padma became the main Ganga and Hoogly became the smaller Ganga without much water except during the monsoons. Therefore, a major portion of Ganga flows through India and a part of its waters enter into the sea through Pakistan. You can have a discussion on this problem between the two countries. That was agreed to as far back as 1957, that we shall have discussion at the experts level or the technical level. In pursuance of that we had four meetings and the fifth meeting was held recently in the month of May. In that meeting they said that they would like to visit the project. We said that we would like to show them the project at a later date. But they said that they would like to see it... (Interruptions) ...immediately. Their engineers wanted to see the project. We have come to a stage at which we would like their engineers to come and see... the project. They were under the impression that this project was not completed, it had not reached such a stage of development as we had stated. They were thinking that we were stating lies. So, when they said, “all right we want to come and see the project”, we said “all right”. And when they saw the project, what impression did they get? They have expressed the view that a major portion of the work has been done, more than two-thirds, there is nothing more which can be done and the project can be treated as a completed project.

Shri Rabi Ray: Not very convincing.

Dr. K.L. Rao: At the same time, we insisted that our engineers should see their project, that project for which they were claiming waters, that is, Ganga-Kabaddak-Faridpur-Barisal project. We said “let our engineers see the project” and they agreed. So, we are sending our engineers in the month of October/November to see what progress they have made.

I will submit that there is nothing wrong in showing them a project which is completed. After seeing the project they are convinced that it is over. Their experts visited the project on 21st and 22nd June when the Ganga was flowing full. This has convinced them that two thirds of the work has been done. So much for the Ganga. With regard to the other question, he has made two suggestions.

The hon. Member has made two valuable suggestions. We should look to the destination of Bhagirathi to ensure that the canal and river lower down are ready to take up the water which can be used for the Calcutta port. That is a very good suggestion; in fact, we are aware of that, but that is a work which has to be done in consultation with the Ministry of Transport. We will do that; it is a question of funds.

Another important question which he has raised is this. It is desirable to have a navigation canal from Farakka to Assam through Indian territory completely so as to avoid passage through Pakistan which our vessels have to take in normal conditions. Actually, this project is Farakka-Dhubri Project through Tista. This project has not been taken up so far only because of the financial difficulties. The project costs Rs. 200 crores and we cannot afford to spend that much money now. It will be taken up as soon as we are in a position to find the funds for it. The project has been fully investigated and we can put it on the field straightaway. It consists of canals 300 miles long and it will enable our vessels to go from Ganga to Brahmaputra through Tista. It is a very valuable project and we will take it up as soon as we get a little better financially.
There is one point on which hon. Members were very critical. They have given various versions of it specially its repercussions in East Pakistan and so on.

About that particular letter I want to submit and categorically state that the only sentence that it has got about this project expressed a desire that both countries should show goodwill in the search of a mutually acceptable solution as in the past in the case of the Indus system.

* * *

There is no question of a third party. What it meant was that he wished that there might be an acceptable solution found out by the efforts of these two people. That is a general wish which anybody can express. We do not mind that. Our policy is very distinct and clear in the case of the Ganga and the use of its waters.

The case of the Ganga waters is entirely different from that of the Indus waters. The Indus has an intricate system of canals and rivers. Part of the headworks are in India and the canals are in Pakistan. It was an intricately connected system there, but in the case of the Ganga there is no such inter-connected system.

There are many other reasons why the Indus and Ganga systems are entirely different. For example, the Indus system irrigates an area where there is no rainfall—it is very highly dry and it is a completely dry system—whereas in the case of the Ganga system the rainfall in East Bengal is of the order of 100 to 150 inches.

What I mean to say is that they are two entirely dissimilar problems and there is no question about it. We are very definite that there is no necessity for any third party intervention and we will not allow any kind of intervention or induction of a third party into the question.

If anybody studies the problem in its scientific bearing, the legal issues and in its proper style, one would feel that the claims of Pakistan are rather unfortunately and unnecessarily exaggerated. For example, in the first meeting they wanted 3,500 cusecs; now they have gone to 49,000 cusecs. If really this water is granted to them, Professor Guha will be able to tell you that this will do them more harm than good because it is an area where really a drainage system is more indicated than irrigation. We know all the facts very thoroughly about the whole thing. I will be very happy to consult Professor Guha if this problem comes up, because he comes from East Bengal and he will be able to help us very much if anything really comes up.

I do not think Pakistan is really serious about the discussions when they suggest such a large volume of water. Nobody would, normally, 'suggest any such thing. If one is really interested in getting something, one must make a reasonable demand. No one goes to the extent of this absurd exaggeration. That defeats their case itself. I know the case. There is very little for us to feel, in any way, about having any kind of doubt on our stand about this issue. After all, Ganga river is an Indian river. It is entirely an Indian river. It serves about 40 per cent of India's population and the entire water, more than 99½ per cent, comes from India. Generally there should be no question of any discussion on the subject. But still if a neighbouring country wants to have a discussion, we do not want to deny it at the technical level. That is all to which we have committed so far.

Then, as I submitted, unfortunately, there is a misunderstanding about the letter of the hon. Prime Minister of U.S.S.R. As far as I know about the subject, there has been no such suggestion at all in that letter either for a third party or the World Bank or anything of that kind. All that it says is, "You please, both of you discuss and come to a settlement." There is nothing wrong in that. It is purely a bilateral discussion to which we have committed so far. Nothing more than that.

The hon. Member, Shri Madhu Limaye, asked about a pending legal case. There is nothing that we need to be afraid of because these plans of Farakka Barrage are entirely with us. Anyway, the Project is nearing completion. But about the pending suit I am not up to-date. I know that there was something like that. I shall write to the hon. Member, Shri Madhu Lemaye, separately about that after I get the information on the subject.
No.PII/112/1/68. September 25, 1968

The Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India presents its compliments to the High Commission of Pakistan in India and with reference to the Government of Pakistan's note No. 2/1/68-I(V) dated the 21st June, 1968, has the honour to state as follows:

(1) In their note No. PII/112/1/68 dated July 20, 1968 the Government of India, after a very careful consideration of the record of discussions of the Fifth Meeting of Experts, of May, 1968, had recommended to the Government of Pakistan the continuance of the technical level talks for the exchange and compilation of basic data which the note also sought to identify. The Government of India consider that these studies are an essential step for preparing the groundwork for discussion at the Minister level, for it is obvious that the two Governments cannot be expected to take decisions before the essential data is available. The question is not one of interpretation of the data as stated in the Pakistan note but of ascertaining certain basic facts and attempting to reach an agreement thereon. For example, an understanding of the amount of water that is available in the Padma at Hardinge Bridge near the Indo-Pakistan border, particularly during the low water months, is essential before a meaningful Government level discussion can be held for a solution of the problem. But this has been made impossible by the doubts cast by the Pakistan delegation on its own hydrological data furnished earlier in regard to the key-site at Hardinge Bridge. Again, according to the papers furnished to India, the scope of the Pakistan scheme on the Padma (namely, the Ganges Kobadak project) has been progressively enlarged, and the summer water demand from the Padma which was 3500 cusecs in 1960 has now been raised by 14 times which amounts to almost the entire flow of the Ganga at Farakka during the low water months, leaving no water for the Bagirathi-Hooghly channel on which the great port of Calcutta is situated. It is clear that the nature and scope of the project and the river flow data have been continuously changed by Pakistan and are as yet unsettled. The Government of India had entered into these discussions in a spirit of cooperation and good neighborliness. It is unrealistic to expect then to agree to the proposal that a full assessment of the technical aspects of Pakistan’s demand is not necessary. When it is remembered that the Ganges is almost entirely an Indian river and large areas which are affected by periodic droughts depend upon it, Pakistan’s position appears even less justified.

Apart from the above, large areas of Indian territory are threatened with submergence and erosion by barrages proposed by Pakistan. It is, therefore, also necessary for the experts to undertake an immediate appraisal of the likely effects of these schemes and the means necessary to prevent harm to Indian Territory.

2. The Government of Pakistan have referred to the Ayub-Nehru agreement of 1961. It is indeed this understanding which constitutes the basis of the technical level meetings that have been held since 1961. It also lays down the agreed conditions for the termination of the technical level talk and the beginning of Minister-level meetings. Mr. Nehru stated in his letter of July 6, 1961:

“We have already agreed to a meeting, on the level of Ministers, to discuss these subjects. But as you have said in your letter, such a meeting can only be useful if it has a suitable practical agenda and after a full exchange of data..... You will appreciate that the engineers of the two sides must first necessarily agree on each other’s figure and on the basic data particularly of river discharges in the key sites, before the Ministers can usefully discuss the issues. I would, therefore, suggest that we ask our engineers to let us know as soon as they feel that a full exchange of data has taken place and there is general agreement on this matter. The two Governments can then consider the experts’ recommendations and also fix the dates for the Ministers’ meeting.”

The President of Pakistan had agreed with this, although he had expressed an interest in a speedy conclusion of the technical level talks.

The Indian Government have throughout been anxious for a faithful implementation of the above agreement so that the two Governments could get down to substantive talks to solve the issue at the earliest date. The correspondence exchanged between the two Governments between the Fourth technical level meeting in 1962 and the Fifth meeting of this year and the Record of Discussions of the Fifth Meeting bear ample testimony to this. Even though the technical level talks started in 1960, to imagine that they have continued for seven years, would give a misleading impression of the true facts. The last meeting before 1968 took place in 1962. For full 6 years no meeting took place for reasons well known to Pakistan and the blame for this long lull can hardly be placed on India. The Foreign Minister of Pakistan has indeed explained to the Pakistan National Assembly on June 2 the various factors that prevented the holding of a meeting. Nor did India ever agree, as is contended in Pakistan's note, that the technical level meeting of May, 1968, should be the final meeting. Obviously, the final meeting can take place only when the agreed purpose of these talks has been fulfilled. To unilaterally terminate the technical level talks at this stage would be tantamount to a breach of the 1961 agreement and to resile from the path of cooperation to which both countries are committed.

(3) The Government of India are as eager as the Government of Pakistan to hold a Minister level meeting and to contribute to the solution of the problems. They are, however, equally convinced that for the reasons referred to above, the stage to terminate the technical level talks and to begin the Minister level meeting has not yet been reached. To abandon the technical discussions in favor of political talk cannot at this stage be justified either on grounds of practicability or on the basis of the 1961 agreement and the cooperative approach. Indeed, India believes that at the present stage it would be pointless to think in terms of talks at the political level; without the indispensable data the Ministers would be groping in the dark and the meeting would be condemned from the outset to failure, thus making the problem more intractable.

It follows that what is necessary is to complete the technical level talks at the earliest possible date. And the Government of India are prepared to offer their unstinted cooperation in this behalf. In their view the material point is the continuation of the exchanges under agreed cooperative approach, the level of the talk being determined according to the relevant factors. One possible step to accelerate and intensify these talks could be to establish small working groups for specific items requiring urgent attention. If the Government of Pakistan have any further suggestions, the Government of India would welcome them.

On the other, hand if the Government of Pakistan so wish the Government of India would be agreeable to a Ministry-level meeting at an early date, the purpose of which would be that the Secretaries of the concerned Ministries of the two countries, assisted by their advisers, would review the progress already made in respect of the technical discussions and establish procedures for the proposed intensification and speeding up of the technical level talk. In that event, the Government of India suggest that if it is convenient to the Government of Pakistan, the meeting may take place in New Delhi as early as practicable.

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

2605. Note from Pakistan High Commission in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, October 19, 1968.

Pakistan High Commission
New Delhi

No. F.1 (61) CSVI/65-Vol.II October 19, 1968

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India and with reference to the Ministry’s Note No.PII/112/1/68 dated September 25, 1968 has the honour to state as follows:

2. As the Government of India are aware, the problems of sharing the Ganges water has assumed special urgency in view of the action taken by the Government of India in speeding up the pace of construction of the Farakka Barrage which, on completion, would cause grave and permanent damage to East Pakistan.

3. The Government of Pakistan had agreed to the technical level talk which commenced in 1960 on the understanding that these would lead to a discussion of the substantive issue at the political level before action was taken to implement the Farakka Barrage and other schemes on the upper reaches of the Ganges. What has actually happened, however, is that while technical data were being exchanged between 1960 and 1962 the Government of India unilaterally started the construction of the Farakka Barrage. The continuance of these experts level talks would have served the purpose for which they were held only if India had withheld the implementation of their schemes on the Ganges in deference to the agreement reached between the two countries, for a cooperative approach in the development of the waters of the Ganges river.

4. The Government of Pakistan, have therefore, continued to emphasise, in various communications including the letter addressed by the President of Pakistan to the Prime Minister of India, the need for urgent talks at the political level to secure a solution of this problem.

5. Nonetheless, the Government of Pakistan agreed in January this year to participate in yet another experts' level meeting in the hope that this would prepare the ground for an early settlement of the issue through Ministerial level talks. In this meeting held in New Delhi from 13th May to 26th May, 1968 the two delegations reviewed the data exchanged so far. The record of discussions at this meeting, however, revealed that there were basic disagreements on almost every single issue discussed at the fifth experts' level meeting.

6. After careful consideration of the record of discussions of the fifth experts' meeting, the Government of Pakistan were confirmed in their view that no useful purpose would be served by continuing the technical level exchanges which have gone on for the past 8 years at five meetings and through voluminous correspondence. The Government of Pakistan, therefore proposed in their note of 21st June, 1968 an early Ministerial level meeting as sufficient data were already available to enable the two Governments of start substantive talks with a view to finding a mutually acceptable solution of the problem of apportionment of waters of the Ganges.

7. The Government of Pakistan have given due consideration to the points raised in sub para (1) of the Ministry's note referred to above. They do not wish to enter into arguments or start a fresh controversy over these points but for purpose of clarification and record, it is necessary to point out that the imperfections of the data concerning the flow of the river at Hardinge Bridge were already known to and acknowledged by the water resources experts of India. It was on these considerations that the two Delegations had agreed in 1960 that a new site should be established for observing discharges on the Ganges in Pakistan. In any case, there should be no serious impediment to reaching settlement on the basic question as the relevant data of the flow of the Ganges at Farakka in India and for a limited period of Paksey, the new site in East Pakistan, are available. Secondly, it is a matter of record that the requirements of all the areas in Pakistan dependent on the Ganges were never indicated by the Government of Pakistan as 3,500 cusecs. This is the requirement of only one unit viz. Kushtia Unit of Ganges Kobadak Project. Indeed, as long ago as 1954 the requirements of the Ganges - Kobadak area alone were intimated to the Government of India to be of the order of 20,000 cusecs during the dry seasons. Since then Pakistan has indicated the full water requirements of the projects dependent on the Ganges on the basis of detailed scientific studies carried out subsequently. Finally, the statement in the Indian note that the Ganges “is almost entirely an Indian river” is neither tenable under international law nor does it accord with the spirit of the agreement reached between the two countries to follow a cooperative approach in the development of the waters of this river.

8. As regards the last part of sub-para (1) of the Government of India’s Note under reference, the Government of Pakistan wish to affirm that their project on Ganges is not a new one. The details of the project were intimated to India as early as 1961. Besides, what is much more important is to determine first the share of the two parties in the waters of the Ganges river which can then be followed by a cooperative effort to ensure that the design or operation of the projects of one country is so arranged as to avoid any damage to the other.

9. The Government of Pakistan sincerely regret that the Government of India have not accepted the proposal put forward in their note of 21st June, 1968. However, they have noted with satisfaction the assurance that “the Government of India are as eager as the Government of Pakistan to hold a Minister level meeting and to contribute to the solution of the problems” in consonance with their attitude of accommodation and cooperation, the Government of Pakistan, therefore agree to the suggestion made by the Government of India for a Secretaries’ Level meeting. In communicating their agreement to the proposed meeting, the Government of Pakistan have taken into account the conversation held between Mr. B.R. Bhagat, Minister of State for External Affairs, with the High Commissioner of Pakistan in New Delhi on the 28th September 1968, in which the Government of India agreed that these talks would include not only the review of the technical discussions but also the preparation for a Ministerial Level Meeting.

10. The Government of Pakistan express appreciation to the Government of India for offering New Delhi as the venue of the meeting but they feel that since the last Indo-Pakistan meeting on Farakka was held in New Delhi in May this year it would be more appropriate to hold the Secretaries’ level meeting in Islamabad. The Government of Pakistan therefore suggest that, if it is convenient to the Government of India, the Secretaries’ level meeting may start in Islamabad on or about the 7th November, 1968.

* The Ministry of External Affairs in reply vide their note No. P.II/112/1/68 dated October 25 suggested that while New Delhi examined Pakistan’s note, in the meantime, a visit of Indian engineers to the Ganges-Kobadak project be arranged by the end of current month so that by the time the Secretaries met, Indian side would have the advantage of the report of their experts in hand. In making this suggestion, New Delhi reminded Islamabad that the Pakistani experts had already made their visit to the Farakka Barrage site in June 1968.
The High Commission for Pakistan avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs the assurances of its highest consideration.

2606. Question in the Lok Sabha: “Demand by Pakistan for increased water supply from Ganges”.
New Delhi, November 11, 1968

Will the Minister of Irrigation and Power be pleased to state:

(a) whether it is a fact that Pakistan has been continuing to increase its demand on the waters of Ganga from 3,500 cusecs to 49,000 cusecs since the last round of expert level talks held in Delhi in May, 1968, and

(b) if so, the details thereof?

The Deputy Minister in the Ministry of Irrigation and Power (Shri Siddheshwar Prasad):

Note from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan High Commission in India.

New Delhi, November 19, 1968.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No.PII/112/1/68 November 19, 1968

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, presents its compliments to the High Commission of Pakistan in India and with reference to the High Commission's note No.F.1(61)/CSV/65-Vol II date October 19, 1968 and in continuation of Ministry's note No.PII/112/1/68 dated October 25, 1968 has the honour to state as follows:

2. The Government of India regret that the Government of Pakistan should have stated in their note that the completion of the Farakka Barrage would cause grave and permanent damage to East Pakistan. The Padma flows only for a short distance in East Pakistan before it joins the Brahmaputra and for most of the year, the problem concerning the Padma is that of too much rather than too little water. Moreover, on the basis of full data supplied to the Government of Pakistan at the technical level discussions, Pakistan is fully aware that the Farakka Barrage will not cause damage to even the small area commanded by the Padma, let alone to the whole of East Pakistan. Further, it is also clear from the correspondence exchanged between the two Governments that the Government of India have always been willing to see that no harm is caused to the areas depending upon the Padma; and indeed, it is for this purpose that the experts of the two countries have been meeting so that Pakistan's interest in the waters of Padma can be understood and, the manner in which they could be met, discussed. It is unreasonable for Pakistan to avoid a full assessment of Pakistan's demands from the Padma by the technical experts by pressing for the termination of the technical level talks and at the same time to make unsubstantiated and serious allegations against Indian intentions.

3. The Government of India also regrets that Pakistan objects to the statement that the Ganga is almost entirely an Indian river. The drainage area of the Ganga is overwhelmingly larger in India than in Pakistan: the population depending upon the Ganga is similarly overwhelmingly larger in India than in Pakistan, in fact 200 million or 40% of the whole Indian population depends on the Ganga basin; the contribution of water to the Ganga by India is similarly overwhelmingly superior to that of Pakistan; the economic and social needs of the Indian side are also overwhelmingly greater and more pressing, without the relieving feature of substantial alternative resources available in East Pakistan which has much more rainfall and a much more favourable level of ground water than the drier regions of the Ganga area in India. These are self evident facts. Merely because the Government of India, in a spirit of good neighborliness, agreed to hold technical level talks to discuss Pakistan’s demands, it would be incorrect to draw the conclusion that the fact that Ganga is an Indian river is open to question.

4. Pakistan’s note asserts that the technical level talks were agreed to “on the understanding that these would lead to a discussion of the substantive issue at political level before action was taken to implement the Farakka Barrage and other projects on the upper reaches of the Ganges.” It is, however, clear from the correspondence exchanged between President Ayub Khan and Prime Minister Nehru in 1961 that Pakistan had been intimated and was well aware that India had started construction of the Farakka Barrage at the time of Ayub-Nehru agreement of 1961. That there was no question of India delaying any development of water resources in India during the duration of the technical level talks is clear from President Ayub’s letter of May 19, 1961 to Prime Minister Nehru in which President Ayub stated: “On our part we would not like to stand in the way of the Government of India developing the resources of the common rivers so long as Pakistan is assured of the supplies required to meet its vital interest.”

5. In paragraph 5 of their note, the Government of Pakistan have stated that the Record of Discussions of the Experts’ meeting held from May 13 to 26, 1968 revealed basic disagreement on almost every single issue discussed and have also contended, in paragraph 6, that sufficient data was available to terminate the technical level talks and begin the Minister level meeting. The Government of India consider that disagreement at the Fifth Meeting of Experts alone would not be an adequate justification to question the necessity of the technical level discussions. It is only on the basis of such discussions that the “vital interests” of Pakistan in regard to its project on the Padma can be properly examined. It is also a fact that the data on the flow of the river in East Pakistan and full data for Pakistan’s project on the Padma which are indispensable for a further consideration of the matter are not yet available. Till the technical level exchanges started in 1960 the only project drawn up by Pakistan would not have needed more than 3500 cusecs of the Padma waters. The scope of the water demand for the project underwent substantial changes from meeting to meeting; and even as late as May 1968, an altogether new project was presented, raising the demand for water to fourteen times over the one intimated up to 1961. In the face of these facts, it has not been possible for India to assess, and much less to accept, any of the continuously increasing estimates of the so-called vital water requirement of East Pakistan from the Padma.

Further, the Government of Pakistan’s statement that “the imperfections of the data concerning the flow of the river at Hardinge Bridge was already know to and acknowledged by the water resources experts of India” is not in accordance with facts. All that the Indian engineers had advised was that measurements were required to be made daily in the months of January to June instead of fortnightly. On the question of an additional site, the Pakistan engineers had stated that a site upstream of Hardinge Bridge (such as Paksey) had been investigated and found unsuitable. Pakistan’s own consultants have held the view that, particularly for the months of low supplies, the data collected at Hardinge Bridge are reasonably accurate and hence dependable. The data of the Paksey site in Pakistan is for a brief period of about two and a half years only and cannot be considered as a workable substitute for the Hardinge Bridge data which has been available for over 30 years.

As mentioned in the Government of India’s note of September 25, 1968 to state that the technical level talks have gone on for eight years gives a misleading impression, since for six years between 1961 and 1968, no meeting had taken place. India, therefore, cannot accept the contention that further technical level talks would serve no useful purpose or that the incomplete data new available is adequate for making further progress. The point that emerges, therefore, is that the continuance of the technical level discussions is more necessary now than ever before. For this purpose, what is imperative is that the Pakistan experts must extend their fullest cooperation in these discussions so that all the relevant data could be collected and assessed as early as possible and the ground prepared for substantive discussions.

6. The Ministry would here like to correct the statement in paragraph 9 of the Pakistan High Commission’s note date October 19, 1968, that Shri B.R. Bhagat, Minister of State in the Ministry of External Affairs, had “agreed that these talk would include not only the review of the technical discussions but also the preparations for a Ministerial level meeting.” The Ministry would like to point out that the above understanding of the Pakistan High Commissioner regarding his conversation with the Minister is wholly incorrect. At the meeting between Shri Bhagat and the High Commissioner of Pakistan, the Minister said that the Government of India were not opposed to hold a Minister level meeting but that such a meeting could only profitably take place after a good deal of preparation and in this context he emphasized that the prospects of the Minister Level meeting would depend upon the successful conclusion of the technical level discussions.

7. The crux of the issue is that the two Governments have accepted to co-operate as good neighbours and to see that no harm is caused to each other’s interests in the Eastern Rivers. For this purpose, they have agreed to have the relevant scheme of each party examined by the other and also exchange the necessary data. The Nehru-Ayub agreement of 1961 lays down the procedure for the holding of the bilateral discussions. The Government of India are determined to implement the above understanding for any step which militates against the cooperative approach is likely to create a new and intractable situation. The welfare and prosperity of the inhabitants of the region served by the Eastern Rivers depend upon the continuation of Indo-Pakistan co-operation on this issue which throw added responsibility on the two Governments in this respect. The Government of India therefore note with satisfaction that the Government of Pakistan have agreed to the meeting at the Secretary level, which is to begin on December 9, 1968. They hope that the meeting would be able to evolve procedures for the intensification and speeding up of the technical level exchanges so that a stage for substantive talks and solution of the problem could be reached early. The Government of India, on their part, would put forward positive suggestions at the meeting for the intensification and speeding up of the technical level exchanges.

8. In accordance with paragraph 28 of the record of discussions of the Fifth Meeting of Experts, the Secretaries may also discuss the situation arising from the operation of the Karnafuli reservoir and the manner in which Indian interests should be safeguarded.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

2608. Note from Pakistan High Commissioner in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, December 6, 1968.

High Commissioner for Pakistan in India
New Delhi

No.1/61-CSVI/65. December 6, 1968

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, and with reference to the Ministry’s Note No. P.II/112/1/68, dated November 19, 1968 has the honour to state as follows:

2. The Government of Pakistan are surprised that the Government of India are persisting in their claim that the Ganges “is almost entirely an Indian river.” The Government of Pakistan reject this untenable claim. Not only does the Indian contention militate against an obvious geographical fact and the established principles of International law and usage, but it also violates the spirit of the agreement between the Governments of Pakistan and India to adopt a cooperative approach in the development of the water resources of the Ganges river. That the Ganges is an international river has been accepted as the basic factor in the correspondence exchanged between the two Governments since 1951. The Government of Pakistan are not aware of any other basis of the agreement for cooperation than the recognition by both the countries of each other’s vital interests in and rights on the waters of this international river. In this connection, attention is invited, in particular to paragraph 3 of the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India’s note No. F-6 (II)-P.III/56 dated March 12, 1957 which states: “The Government of India reiterate their desire for cooperative development of water resources of Ganges by both the countries. Such an approach, however, must be on a reciprocal basis”. The Government of Pakistan therefore express the hope that there would be no further argument about the status of the Ganges as an international river. Furthermore, calling the Ganges by a different name would not alter, in any way, the physical fact of this river flowing through the territories of Pakistan.

3. The Government of Pakistan also regret that the Government of India have chosen to dispute the fact that the Farakka Barrage would cause grave and permanent damage to the territories of Pakistan. The attention of the Government of India was drawn to the serious repercussions of this barrage on East Pakistan in the very first note of the Government of Pakistan in 1951 protesting against India’s unilateral decision to construct the barrage. There is nothing in the data furnished by the Indian experts which would in any way affect the conclusion that the cumulative effect of the Indian projects which have been completed or are in the process of being completed in the Ganges basin, will be most injurious to the interests of Pakistan. Any interference with the regime of the Ganges river of the scale of the Indian projects would (a) cause serious and intolerable shortage of water for irrigation on which depends the livelihood of millions of people in East Pakistan, (b) increase the lift of irrigation pumps already installed or being installed, (c) lower the ground water table and reduce the moisture content of soil which sustains existing agricultural conditions in large areas commanded by the Ganges and its spill channels, (d) adversely affect inland navigation in the Ganges and its spill channels, (e) increase inland penetration of saline water with serious effects on agriculture, municipal and industrial water supply, (f) increase the silt load of the Ganges causing a rise in the river bed and thereby accentuating the flood hazard and (g) increase flood heights, silt deposition in the rivers and ports, adding to the cost of protective embankments, dredging and river training.

4. The Government of Pakistan are also unable to agree the full data of all the Indian projects which will affect the quantum of waters of the Ganges reaching East Pakistan had been supplied to the Government of Pakistan. The record of the experts’ level discussions and the correspondence exchanged between the two Governments would show that while all relevant available data of Pakistan’s projects on the Ganges have been furnished by Government of Pakistan, the Government of India have been persistently refusing to supply to Pakistan the data concerning the Kosi, the Gandak and other Indian projects on the Ganges upstream of Farakka.

5. The Government of Pakistan welcome the reiteration of the assurance that “the Government of India have always been willing to see that no harm is caused to the areas depending upon the Ganges.” However, they regret to observe that this assurance is belied by the action of the Government of India who without settlement of the question of apportionment of the waters of the Ganges between India and Pakistan, continue to proceed with the execution of their projects which will take away almost the entire dry weather flow of the Ganges river to the detriment of the areas dependent on it in East Pakistan.

6. Paragraph 2 of the Ministry’s note refers to certain factors like the distance for which the Ganges flows in East Pakistan or the contribution of the various segments of its drainage basin to the run-off which are not relevant to the determination of the water requirements of Pakistan. What is relevant is the dependence on the waters of this river of a net irrigable area of 4.25 million acres in East Pakistan. This area is by no means small as alleged by the Government of India; it constitutes about one fifth of the total culturable area in East Pakistan which supports more than one fourth of its population. The need for the development of the water resources of this region has become all the more pressing because of neglect of the pre 1947 era. Similarly the statements that the problem in East Pakistan is “that of too much rather than too little water” and that East Pakistan has “much more rain-fall” do not reflect a correct appreciation of the hydrological cycle in East Pakistan. East Pakistan is essentially a water scarce area in the dry period as the rainfall is concentrated in a few months and there is no rainfall at all for more than six months of the year. What causes grave concern is that during this part of the year, Pakistan is being deprived of vital water supplies by diversion of the bulk of the flow of the river. The reference in the Ministry’s note to the other point concerning the more favorable level of ground water is also not valid. Ground water is being developed in East Pakistan where good sources of such water are found. In view of the texture of its sub-surface strata and its proximity to the saline zone the possibility of developing ground water in the area commanded by the Ganges on a dependable basis is remote. On the other hand, unlike East Pakistan a number of storage sites are available in India which can be exploited to improve the dry weather flow of the Ganges. The Government of India also seem to have overlooked the fact that East Pakistan is one of the most densely populated areas of the world and has a high rate of growth of population. To feed this population, intensive cultivation of land in all the seasons is becoming increasingly essential. This cannot be achieved without providing irrigation throughout the year. The Government of India had themselves accepted the need for such intensive development of agriculture in East Pakistan when the Prime Minister of India in his letter dated the 6th July, 1961 to the President of Pakistan stated; “I appreciate no less your problem of food shortages and a growing population; we would like to the best of our ability to be helpful in the solution of this problem.”

7. The Government of Pakistan reiterate that President of Pakistan’s letter of May 19, 1961 a part of which has been reproduced in paragraph 4 of the Ministry’s note remains the key note of the Government of Pakistan’s policy that “so long as Pakistan is assured of the supplies required to meet its vital interests”, the Government of Pakistan would not object to the Government of India developing the resources of the Ganges.
As regards the data concerning the flow of the Ganges in East Pakistan and water requirements of Pakistan’s projects, this has been discussed at length in paragraph 7 of the High Commission’s Note of October 19, 1968. All salient data about Pakistan projects which can legitimately be of interest to India have been furnished including cropping intensities, crop patterns, water requirements and their monthly distribution. In this connection the Government of Pakistan regret to note that the Government of India are still maintaining that till 1960, the only project drawn up by Pakistan would not have needed more than 3500 cusecs of water from the Ganges. The Government of India’s attention is again drawn to the fact that they were intimated as far back as 1954 about the dry season requirements of 20,000 cusecs for the Ganges Kobadak Project alone. The Government of India were also later informed that as other projects were drawn up their requirements would be intimated to them. This too has been done.

With reference to the Government of Pakistan’s statement regarding the imperfection of the data concerning the flow of the river at Hardinge Bridge quoted in the Ministry’s Note under reply, the Government of Pakistan wish to draw the attention of the Government of India to paragraph 8 of the Record of Discussions of the 2nd meeting of the Water Resources Experts held in Dacca from the 1st to 3rd October, 1960 which states

“In response to suggestion from the leader of the Indian Delegation, the Leader of the Pakistan Delegation promised to examine the question of selecting a discharging site near Hardinge Bridge which gives more reliable data than the one at the Bridge itself.”

It is thus clear that the Indian Delegation was convinced about the unreliability of the Hardinge Bridge data. It is admitted that Paksey data are available for a short period but Farakka data extend for a number of years and can well be the basis for substantive discussions. The Ministry’s Note also refers to the view of Pakistan’s consultants about Hardinge Bridge data during the low flow period. This view cannot be conclusive as data for this site alone were available to the consultants at the time and they had no occasion to assess the accuracy of the available data.

The Ministry’s Note refers to the fact that no meetings of experts were held between 1962 and 1968. This however does not mean that no exchanges took place at the technical level during this period. In fact voluminous correspondence consisting of over 400 letters were exchanged between the two sides through which a great deal of additional data were furnished to each other. In this connection, it would not be irrelevant to point out that considerable time was taken by the Government of India in replying to some of the important communications of the Government of Pakistan.

11. The Government of Pakistan note with regret that in spite of the voluminous data furnished by Pakistan about its essential requirements of the waters of the Ganges at the five rounds of expert’s level talk and through the correspondence exchanged between the two Governments for seventeen years, the Government of India are still insisting on the continuance of the expert level exchanges. The Government of India cannot be oblivious of the fact that further delay in holding substantive discussions will render the problem increasingly complex and difficult to solve. What is even more disconcerting is the fact that the Ministry in paragraph No. 2 of its note dated 19th November should describe the purpose of talks as mere understanding of Pakistan’s interest in the Ganges. This is contrary to the assurances given by the Government of India vide paragraph 4 of the High Commission of India’s note No. F.(3)/2/61-P, dated that June 26, 1961 that the purpose of the exchange of data was to secure “a fair reconciliation of the mutual interests of the two countries.” In his letter dated 6th July, 1961 to the President of Pakistan the Prime Minister of India had reiterated that “given a pragmatic and co-operative approach on both sides the interest of both are capable of a rational reconciliation”. The Government of Pakistan fully share this sentiment and urge upon the Government of India to appreciate that the data supplied to date by the Government of Pakistan are adequate for finding a settlement of the basic question relating to the apportionment of the waters of the Ganges between the two countries. The Government of Pakistan are of the considered opinion that in view of the basic disagreement at the fifth experts level meeting and the continued reluctance of the Government of India to have recourse to the assistance of a competent third party in resolving the differences or reconciling the divergent conclusions, further discussions at the level of experts only will not yield any useful result. In the circumstances the best course would be for the two countries to enter into substantive talks with a view to arriving at “some pragmatic proposals to implement the mutual desire for co-operation” as stated by the Prime Minister of India in his letter dated April 24, 1961.

12. The Government of Pakistan, therefore, feel that the Secretaries’ level meeting should address itself to the task of promoting the settlement of this dispute without further delay. In this connections the Government of Pakistan would not like to enter into argument about the position explained in para 6 of Ministry’s note under reference. The Government of Pakistan continue to maintain that this human problem can be resolved in a mutually beneficial manner provided the two sides show good will and understanding. The Government of Pakistan had agreed to the Government of India’s proposal for a Secretaries’ level meeting on the understanding communicated in the High Commission’s note of October 19, 1968. The Government of Pakistan are accordingly sending their delegation to participate in the Secretaries’ level meeting at New Delhi beginning on December 6, 1968 in the hope that substantive talks would take place to find a solution and that the Government of India would extend full cooperation in facilitating this task.

The High Commission for Pakistan avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs the assurances of its highest consideration.

MOST IMMEDIATE

No.PII/112/1/68 December 7, 1968

The Ministry of External Affairs, presents its compliments to the High Commission of Pakistan in India and with reference to the High Commission’s Note No.1/61-CSVI/65 dated December 6, 1968 has the honour to state as follows.

2. The Government of Pakistan, inter alia, question the fact that the Ganga is an Indian river; they assert that the Farakka would “cause grave and permanent damage to the territories of Pakistan”. The Government of Pakistan have also advanced arguments and contentions on other points. The Government of India would only wish to state that neither these contentions nor the grounds on which they are based are acceptable to them. The Government of India reserve their position entirely on these matters and they hope to deal with the Government of Pakistan’s stand in regard to them in due course.

3. At the present stage, the Government of India consider it necessary to clarify their position in regard to paragraph 12 of the High Commission’s note in which it has been stated that “The Government of Pakistan had agreed to the Government of India’s proposal for a Secretaries’ level meeting on the understanding communicated in the High Commission’s note of the October 19, 1968”. If the reference in this quotation is to the last sentence of paragraph 9 of the High Commission’s note of October 19, 1968, the Government of India feel compelled to draw the attention of the Government of Pakistan not only to paragraph (3) of the Ministry’s note PII/112/1/68 of September 25 1968, but also to paragraphs 6 and 7 of its note PII/112/1/68 of November 19, 1968 wherein the scope and purpose of the Secretaries’ level meeting have been specified, without leaving room for ambiguity. In order to avoid any misunderstanding, the Ministry would once again like to clearly state that the purpose of the meeting would be to review the progress already made in respect of the technical discussions and to establish procedure for the intensification and speeding up of technical level talks. The Government of India trust that the Government of Pakistan share this understanding.

4. The Government of India place considerable importance on the successful conclusion of the technical level talks for they believe that this would lead to solutions beneficial to both countries.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of the opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan in India the assurances of its highest consideration.

The High Commission of Pakistan in India, Chanakyapuri, New Delhi.
2610. Joint Communiqué issued at the end of the meeting of Secretaries of India and Pakistan on the Eastern Waters.

Islamabad, March 25, 1969.

The Secretary, Ministry of Irrigation and Power, Government of India and the Secretary, Ministry of Industries and Natural Resources, Government of Pakistan, assisted by their advisers, met in Islamabad at the invitation of the Government of Pakistan for talks on Farakka Barrage Project and other projects on Eastern Rivers. The meetings were held from the 21st March to the 25th March 1969. The Leaders of the two delegations also met separately.

2. These takes were held in a cordial atmosphere.

3. It was noted with satisfaction that further data was exchanged and fruitful discussions took place at the present meeting. It was agreed to hold another Secretary level meeting by early July. The next meeting will make further preparations for the Ministers’ level meeting on the basis of the agreement between President Ayub and Prime Minister Nehru for a cooperative approach.

Islamabad, Tuesday, the 25th March, 1969.

Sd/- Syed Saeed Jafri, Secretary to Govt. of Pakistan, Ministry of Industries & Natural Resources and Leader of Pakistan Delegation.

Sd/- K.P. Mathrani, Secretary to Government of India, Ministry of Irrigation and Power and Leader of Indian Delegation.

2611. Statement of the Indian Minister of Irrigation and Power K. L. Rao in the Lok Sabha: “Secretary level Indo-Pakistan talks on eastern rivers held in New Delhi from July 15 to 26, 1969.”

New Delhi, July 28, 1969

As the House is aware, during the Indo-Pakistan Secretaries’ level meeting on Farakka Barrage and other projects on Eastern Rivers held at Islamabad in March, 1969, it was agreed that another meeting would take place at New Delhi in July. Accordingly, a meeting was held at New Delhi from the 15th to 26th July, 1969. The Pakistan team was led by Mr. A.G.N. Kazi and the Indian team was led by Shri K.P. Mathrani.

There were lengthy discussions on various technical aspects, viz:

(i) reconciliation of basic flow data in the Padma at Hardinge Bridge in East Pakistan;
(ii) gains in the flow in the Ganga-Padma between Farakka in India and Hardinge Bridge in East Pakistan; and
(iii) Pakistan’s project on the Padma.

Apart from the above, there were some discussions on the Indian and Pakistan projects on the Tista, the Karanafuli problem and certain miscellaneous issues.

On the basis of the technical material that was made available by Pakistan after the Islamabad meeting and the studies made by the Indian experts, discussions took place for establishing the basic technical facts relating to the flows in the river as well as the reasonable summer water requirements for Pakistan’s project. Although good progress was made in these technical discussions, there are still some important aspects on which discussions were inconclusive and need to be further considered.

India made it clear to Pakistan that the gains in the flow between Farakka (India) and Hardinge Bridge (East Pakistan) are quite substantial and represented an important factor to be considered in the overall water requirements of irrigation in East Pakistan from the waters of the Padma.

Pakistan’s demand for the waters of the Padma has been stepped up from time to time and from meeting to meeting. The demand which was 3,500 cusec upto 1960, was raised to 58,000 cusec at the Islamabad meeting in March this year. At the recent meeting India made it clear that the project, as now conceived by Pakistan, was unrealistic and would be a serious threat to Indian territory, apart from causing large scale submergence and erosion; and, calculated to lay claim on the entire summer flow at present in the Padma, the project could not form the basis of any meaningful discussion.

The Pakistan delegation continued to take their earlier stand that technical discussions were futile and that the matter should be considered at political level. The Indian delegation made it clear that before the matter could be discussed at the political level, the basic technical facts essential for fruitful discussions should be established.

It was finally agreed by the leaders of the two delegations that the next meeting should be held at Islamabad in Pakistan in four months’ time to complete the considerations of the technical issues and to consider the substantive issues, Statement of the Leader of the Indian delegation at the Secretary level Indo-Pakistan talks on eastern rivers.
Islamabad, February 24, 1970
Mr. Kazi and Members and Advisers of the Pakistan delegation,

We are happy to be here with you for discussion on issues relating to the Eastern rivers. I wish to express our sincere thanks to you for the cordial welcome and hospitality extended to us by your Government.

I wish to state at the outset that our approach to these talks has been of trying to be helpful to the utmost extent possible not one of asserting points of a legal nature. That spirit of helpfulness has found expression in our approach to the Karnafuli and Tista projects and in our contribution in the evolution of cooperative measures of river training works on certain border rivers.

As in parts of India, floods pose a serious problem for East Pakistan. This is another area in which we have been trying to be of assistance. We have taken steps to intensify our efforts in the Brahmaputra Valley for obtaining advance information in regard to rainfall and river water levels at specific stations. We will be happy to share this information with Pakistan. This would, we believe, be of interest to Pakistan in providing timely warnings to the affected people and evacuating them to safer places in time. We would be happy to discuss the manner in which Pakistan would like to derive advantage from this offer.

INDIA DEPENDENT ON GANGA WATERS

However, the extent to which one State can go in helping a neighbouring State is limited by its own needs and the challenges posed by its own needs and problems. Our dependence on the waters of the Ganga is so overwhelming that whatever portion of it we may forego, will involve a sacrifice on our part. Before we agree to a sacrifice of this nature, it is but just that we should know what the extent of the sacrifice should be and how it can be justified, having in view the importance of the Ganga to India and of Padma to Pakistan.

Let me mention a few points relating to Ganga Basin which bring out its supreme importance to India. Ganga with its principal tributaries flows through five thousand miles of Indian territory draining a catchment area of 300,000 square miles. The culturable area in the region concerned is over 150 million acres and a large population of 210 million lives in the Gangetic plain. The annual rainfall is only from 15 to 50 inches giving an average of about 30 inches.

Contrast this with hardly 100 miles of the course of the Padma and her tributary in Pakistan; the two thousand square miles of its catchment area; the four and a quarter million of the corresponding culturable area and the population of twelve million and an annual rainfall varying from 55 to 100 inches and you will appreciate what Ganga means to India in relation to what Padma means to Pakistan. And, let me add, the uninterrupted flow of Ganga waters through the Bhagirathi-Hooghli is crucially important for the saving from extinction the Calcutta Port whose importance to the economy of India is too well known to need elaboration.

DISASTROUS PAKISTAN PROJECTS

Such being the position the Pakistani project on the Padma, as contemplated in the report given to us, has caused us deep concern. It is conceived in utter disregard of the overwhelming dependence of India on the waters of the Ganga. Besides, the project will, if executed, inundate large densely populated areas of India and will be a threat to the operation of the Farakka Barrage itself. Naturally, therefore, we cannot view with equanimity any such project fraught with disastrous consequences to India.

Is a project of this nature at all justified or necessary for meeting the reasonable water needs of the agricultural land in the region proposed to be benefitted by it? In all humility, I would reply in the negative. The project does not pay adequate attention to certain relevant conditions in East Pakistan, which, if duly taken into consideration, would render it unnecessary to embark upon a project for the seeming benefit of areas in East Pakistan, but fraught with disastrous consequences to India.

The project overlooks the importance of factors which point to a minimal use of surface waters for irrigation in East Pakistan where water is an item of superfluous luxury—and even a nuisance—rather than a precious necessity as in the arid regions of India. The abundant rainfall and the favourable ground water and soil moisture conditions in East Pakistan render it unnecessary to invest in costly projects for long haulage of surface waters for irrigation. These important facts have not duly been taken into account in the formulation of the project.

The proposed annual irrigated cropping intensity of more than 200 per cent of culturable area is not known to have been achieved anywhere else in such large blocks of areas as those proposed in the project; this is unrealistic. Experience indicates that it is also impracticable.

The high irrigation intensity proposed seeks to support a cropping pattern which places an undue emphasis on the cultivation, in the water scarce season of high water consuming, but comparatively less harvest yielding crops. A better balanced cropping pattern with proper emphasis on the irrigation of aman and boro paddy, coupled with a diversification of crops by inclusion of mustard, wheat, vegetables and rabi crops would be appropriate from all points of view.

Further, the water requirements for the crops have been estimated on the basis of experiments which had not been subjected to the scientific control requirements necessary for reaching correct results. This, coupled with an underestimate of the available moisture in the area, has led to a gross overestimation of the irrigation needs of the project.

While the irrigation requirements per acre have thus been placed at highly unrealistic levels, the amount of culturable area also appears to have been overestimated and in disregard of the findings of the FAO soil survey which found hardly 57% of the area as suitable or moderately suitable for irrigation.

PAKISTANI DEMAND ARTIFICIALLY INFLATED

The cumulative result of all the above features is an artificially inflated demand for water during the dry period—a demand which can drastically be reduced if more realistic objectives are aimed at and better attention is bestowed on the climatic and soil conditions of East Pakistan.

I would urge upon you to give due consideration to what I have said and formulate a scheme which adequately meets the points made—a scheme which, while being realistic and satisfying the reasonable irrigation requirements of the regions in East Pakistan under consideration, does not force India into an intolerable position.

The prerequisite to the consideration of any scheme is of course the availability of agreed hydrological data because such data is basic to all planning of water resources development. If the progress in reaching an agreement on basic data is tardy, the progress elsewhere will inevitably be halted to a corresponding extent: I see from the records that an agreement has already been reached in regard to the flow data relating to Farakka. I do not see why a similar agreement should not be reached with regard to the flow data relating to Hardinge Bridge. In our talks we have to give utmost consideration to this important matter.

2613. Statement of the Indian Irrigation and Power Minister Dr. K.L. Rao in the Lok Sabha on Indo-Pak talks on eastern rivers.

New Delhi, March 5, 1970

The Minister of Irrigation and Power (Dr. K.L. Rao) : I beg to lay on the Table a statement on the Secretary-level talks between India and Pakistan held at Islamabad (West Pakistan) to discuss Farakka Barrage and other Eastern Rivers.
Statement

1. As the Honourable Members are aware, a Statement was laid on the Table of the House on the 28th July, 1969 on the conclusion of the Indo-Pakistan Secretary-level meeting on the eastern rivers held in Delhi in July, 1969. It was decided at that meeting that another meeting would be held to consider the completion of technical issues and to consider substantive issues.

2. A meeting was accordingly held at Islamabad from 24th February to 2nd March, 1970. The Indian delegation was led by Shri V.V. Chari, Secretary, Ministry of Irrigation and Power, and the Pakistan team was led by Mr. A. G. N. Kazi, Secretary, Ministry of Industries and Natural Resources.

3. Detailed discussions took place regarding the project on the Padma proposed by Pakistan. The Indian and Pakistan projects on the Tista, the issues relating to the Karnafuli project in East Pakistan, and cooperative measures in regard to river training works on border rivers in the eastern region, were also discussed.

4. There were full and frank discussions on the various, technical matters concerning Pakistan's proposed project on the Padma. The Indian delegation reiterated the Government's stand that the project as put forward by Pakistan was not only unrealistic in many ways but would inundate densely populated areas in India. Naturally India could not view with equanimity any such project and urged the Pakistan delegation to revise their project in a realistic manner. The Pakistan delegation took the view that their project was viable and that the water requirements of the project could be reviewed only in the context of an agreement on the waters of the Ganga-Padma.

5. The Indian delegation once again explained at length how Pakistan's fears about the effects of the Farakka Barrage Project on East Pakistan were unfounded.

6. It was finally agreed that another Secretaries level meeting would be held in New Delhi within four months for carrying forward the discussions on substantive issues and related matters.

7. A copy of the joint communique issued at the end of the meeting is enclosed.

Joint Communique

Delegations headed by the Secretary, Ministry of Irrigation and Power, Government of India, and the Secretary, Ministry of Industries and Natural Resources, Government of Pakistan, met from 24th February, 1970 to 2nd March, 1970, in Islamabad at the invitation of the Government of Pakistan for talks on Farakka Barrage Project and other matters relating to the Eastern Rivers. The talks took place in a very cordial atmosphere.
It was agreed that another Secretaries’ level meeting would be held in New Delhi within four months for carrying forward the discussions of substantive issues and related matters with a view to enabling the early holding of a Ministers’ level meeting.

2614. Question in the Lok Sabha : “Farakka issue to be raised by Pakistan In the UNO”.

New Delhi, May 6, 1970

Will the Minister of External Affairs be pleased to state :

(a) whether Government’s attention has been drawn to the statement of the President of Pakistan that the Farakka issue would be raised in the United Nations;

(b) whether as a sequel to this, intense diplomatic lobbying has been started by Pakistan towards this end; and

(c) if so, the steps which Government have taken to forestall the raising of the issue in the United Nations?

The Deputy Minister in the Ministry of External Affairs (Shri Surendra Pal Singh):

(a) Yes, Sir.

(b) and (c). Government are watching the possibility of intensive diplomatic (activity) by Pakistan towards this end. Our view is that this question as other issues between the two countries can and should be settled bilaterally. This has been conveyed to third countries.
Shrimati Sharda Mukerjee: The delay in the completion of this barrage gives added advantage to Pakistan. I should like to know from the Government what efforts are being made by them to see that the barrage was completed by June, 1970 as was originally expected because in this way if it is delayed the Pakistan Government is gaining advantage?

The Minister of External Affairs (Shri Dinesh Singh): I am sure that the Ministry of Irrigation and Power is fully engaged in this matter and they are trying their best to see that this barrage is completed as quickly as possible. I believe there has been some discussion about this matter in the House and complete information was given to the House at that time.

Shrimati Sharda Mukerjee: That was not my question. Any way, attempts are being made by Pakistan to take this question above the official level to a political level and this is being done in order to take this into international political circles. What is the Government's reaction to this move to take it from the official level to the political level?

Shri Dinesh Singh: We have conveyed to Pakistan our desire to discuss this matter with them and to satisfy them that Farakka is not going to be of any disadvantage to them and if any of their legitimate interest is likely to suffer because of this dam we would be willing to consider this matter. This is an exercise in which we are engaged. Unfortunately the Government of Pakistan had not been able to supply all the technical information that was required. They have inflated their demands to a fantastic figure. That is where it has been necessary to continue with the technical talks till we reach a decision when we are able to assess the legitimate requirements of Pakistan and see in what way we could help. Thereafter, we have said, we are agreeable to discuss the matter at the political level to find a solution. There is no question of our agreeing to an international consideration of this question because it is purely a bilateral matter between Pakistan and us.

Shri Thirumala Rao: Pakistan is intensifying its diplomatic offensive against India and the hon. Minister just now said that the Ministry of Irrigation and Power are proceeding with the work on the dam in order to complete it quickly. Are the Government aware that because of agitations by local people, mainly due to the efforts of political parties, there is trouble in that area? What steps are the Government taking to see that the dam is constructed according to schedule?

The Minister of Irrigation and Power (Dr. K.L. Rao): What the hon. Member has stated is correct. There has been some labour trouble and the progress of the work had slowed down. During the last one month the labour situation has improved and we only hope that we shall be able to make up for the lost time.
Any way, we must be prepared for not being able to complete the work as per schedule.

Shri Ranga: Why don’t you utilise the services of the Army?

Shri Samar Guha: The efforts of the Government of Pakistan to raise the question of Farakka in the United Nations are nothing but political. The Government of Pakistan has simply failed to rouse the people of East Bengal by their Hate-India campaign on the issue of Kashmir or Canal waters and so they are trying to take advantage of Farakka and create an atmosphere of hostility towards India among the people of Bengal. The People of Bengal, the Muslims of East Bengal are not anti-Indian; you will be astonished to know that more of them listen to Indian radio than Pakistani radio. It is a political move to rouse the people of East Bengal against India. In view of this, will the Government launch a counter-offensive and tell people that the problem of East Bengal is more water and not less water and that the people of East Bengal suffer on account of floods and not for want of water and that this is a political move to rouse the people of East Pakistan?

Shri Dinesh Singh: I am inclined to agree with the hon. Member that Pakistan is playing it up as a political issue without any sufficient justification in technical terms. That is why we have been trying to discuss the technical details with them, when it will become self-evident that there is no basis for their propaganda. In fact, the problem of East Pakistan is largely of too much water, rather than shortage of water.

2615. Joint communique issued at the end of the Indo-Pak talks on Farakka Barrage Project and other eastern rivers.

New Delhi, July 21, 1970

Delegations headed by the Secretary, Ministry of Industries and Natural Resources, Government of Pakistan and the Secretary, Ministry of Irrigation and Power, Government of India, met from the 16th July, 1970 to 21st July, 1970 in New Delhi at the invitation of the Government of India for talks on Farakka Barrage Project and other matters relating to the Eastern Rivers. The talks took place in a very cordial atmosphere.

Both sides agreed to submit to their respective Governments for their consideration the following agreed recommendations:
(i) The point of delivery of supplies to Pakistan of such quantum of water as may be agreed upon will be at Farakka.

(ii) Constitution of a body consisting of one representative from each of the two countries for ensuring delivery of agreed supplies at Farakka is acceptable in principle.

(iii) A meeting be held in 3 to 6 months time at a level to be agreed to by the two Governments to consider the quantum of water to be supplied to Pakistan at Farakka and other unresolved issues relating thereto and to Eastern Rivers which have been the subject-matter of discussions in this series of talks.

2616. Statement of the Indian Deputy Minister of Irrigation and Power Prof. Siddheshwar Prasad in the Rajya Sabha on Indo-Pakistan talks on eastern rivers.

New Delhi, July 27, 1970

As the Hon’ble Members are aware a statement was laid on the Table of the House on the 5th March, 1970, on the conclusion of the fourth Secretary-level meeting between India and Pakistan on the Eastern Rivers held at Islamabad in February-March, 1970. It was agreed at that meeting that the next meeting would be held in New Delhi within 4 months for carrying forward the discussions.

A meeting was accordingly held at New Delhi from 16th to 21st July, 1970. The Indian delegation was led by Shri V.V. Chari, Secretary, Ministry of Irrigation & Power, and the Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. A.G.N. Kazi, Secretary, Ministry of Industries & Natural Resources.

OVERWHELMING NEED OF INDIA

There were lengthy discussions on the quantum of supplies of water to East Pakistan from the Padma. The Indian delegation emphasised that these supplies had to be related to properly reformulated project of Pakistan taking into consideration all the relevant factors like cropping intensities, rainfall, soil moisture, alternative sources of supplies etc. It should also take into account the overwhelming interests of India on the waters of the Ganga having regard to the fact that the best part of the catchment, culturable area, population etc. of the basin lay in India. The Indian delegation also made it clear that Pakistan should see to it that no Indian territory would suffer any submergence due to the construction of any structure by Pakistan.

The Pakistan delegation, however, reaffirmed their earlier stand that the reformulation of their ‘Ganga Barrage Project’ could be undertaken only after they had an idea of the guaranteed supplies of water that would be made available to Pakistan. They, however, made it clear that they had no intention of causing any damage to Indian territory and that the question of safeguarding Indian interests against any adverse effects of any structure in Pakistan would be dealt with in arriving at an agreement between the two Governments.

The position at the end of the discussions was that while the Indian delegation held that without the formulation of a realistic project they could not, in value, state a figure of supplies, the Pakistan delegation took the view that unless a figure of supplies was indicated in advance by India they could not reformulate a project.

FARAKKA—POINT OF DELIVERY

At this stage it was considered that an agreement on the point of delivery of such supplies as may be agreed upon would facilitate the consideration of the quantum of supplies. It was agreed to recommend to the two Governments that the point of delivery of such supplies of water as may be agreed upon could be at Farakka, this being the point where India would have operational control. The delegations also agreed to recommend to the two Governments the acceptance in principle of the constitution of a body consisting of one representative from each country of supervising such deliveries as may be agreed upon.

The Pakistan delegation have been pressing for a Minister-level meeting for quite some time now but the Indian delegation have always taken the position that in the absence of general agreement based on adequate data they found themselves unable to recommend such a meeting. However, as a situation had arisen in which Pakistan delegation was unwilling to reformulate their project in the absence of a prior indication by India of the quantum of supplies and the Indian delegation considered that the reformulation of the project taking into account the various factors referred to was a pre-requisite for taking a view of the quantum of supplies, it was agreed that the two delegations should bring this situation to the notice of their respective Governments and suggest that the next meeting should be held at a level to be agreed upon by the two Governments within a period of three to six months to consider unresolved issues.

TRADE AND COMMERCE
2617. Extract from the AIDE-MEMOIRE of the Government of Pakistan on the disruption of trade between India and Pakistan.

Karachi, October 13, 1947.

At the meeting of the Partition Council held on the 5th of August, 1947, the Council considered the report of Expert Committee No. III (i) (Central Revenues) and it was agreed ‘that while all assets and liabilities existing prior to the 15th August, 1947, were subject to division between the two Dominions, the question of sharing future revenue arising on or after that date was a matter for free negotiation between the two Dominions or for submission by agreement to the Arbitral Tribunal’. At the same meeting the Council also approved the proposals made in paragraph 13 of the report of Expert Committee No. VII on Economic Relations (Control) regarding the maintenance of the status quo in matters affecting trade and movements between the two Dominions up to the 29th of February, 1948, but the Pakistan members reserved the right ‘to revise their attitude in view of the stand taken by the Dominion of India regarding customs revenue’.

a) Jute. It is estimated that Pakistan produces approximately 73 percent of the total jute crop, but most of the exports both of raw jute and jute manufactures are at present made through Calcutta. In the budget estimates presented last February the total receipts from duties on raw jute and jute manufactures were estimated at Rs. 5.5 crores. Chittagong’s share of these duties is at present estimated to be only Rs. 40 lakhs. Thus under the present arrangements India is likely to receive over 90 percent of the jute revenue, although only 27 percent of the jute is grown in that Dominion. Moreover 62.5 percent of the total revenue from jute has hitherto been paid to the producing Provinces in accordance with the provisions of the Niemeyer Award. If however Pakistan receives less than 10 percent of the total revenue the principal producing Province (i.e. East Bengal) will be deprived of this source of revenue. The Pakistan Government recognize that jute manufactures can at present be produced only in West Bengal, and they do not therefore claim the full amount of revenue which would accrue to them if they exported the whole of the East Bengal crop. They consider however that Pakistan should receive, at least 75 percent of the export duty on 59 lakhs bales.

b) Central Excise Duties. In the budget estimates presented last February the total net revenue from Central Excise duties was estimated at approximately Rs. 41 crores. Out of this amount collections in Pakistan are not expected to exceed Rs. 3 crores in a full year. This is obviously much less than the amount of duty payable on excisable commodities consumed in Pakistan, but under the existing arrangements no refund or rebate of excise duty is being granted on goods exported from India and Pakistan. On the other hand cotton and other commodities produced in Pakistan are being exported to India without payment of any duty. The Pakistan Government therefore consider that for the period of 7½ months ending on the 31st March, 1948, Pakistan should be given a reasonable share of the total central excise revenues, on the basis of the quantity of excisable goods consumed in Pakistan territory.

2618. Aide Memoire from the Government of India to Government of Pakistan regarding the latter’s Aide Memoire of October 13, 1947.

New Delhi, October 30, 1947.

The Government of India have given full consideration to the Aide-Memoire, dated the 13th October, 1947 presented by the Government of Pakistan.

In the light of the subsequent discussions which took place between the officials of the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan on the subject, the Government of India consider that under the present arrangements, which cover the period from 15th August, 1947 to 31st March, 1948, each of the dominions is entitled as a Sovereign State to the taxes which it levies and collects within its own territories. There is nothing illogical in it, or in the arrangements which have been made for practical convenience and for the uniformity of taxation and freedom of trade between the two countries. This is purely a short-term working arrangement and it would scarcely be fair to question its equity by isolating any particular sources of revenue, such as Jute Export Duty or Central Excise in regard to which one party may feel that it had any special claims. A matter such as this will have to be considered comprehensively over the whole field of import, export and Central Excise duties in relation to common economic and fiscal policies and the absence of any customs or trade barriers, or in other words in the light of a Customs and Excise Union and all that such a Union implies.

The Government of India would enquire whether the Pakistan Government desire a comprehensive and reasonably long-term settlement between the two Dominions in respect of:
(a) Freedom of trade and commerce between the two Dominions inter se, covering in particular the question of trade and customs barriers between the two Dominions;

(b) Uniformity of policy, legislation and taxation in respect of customs and central excises;

(c) The division of customs and central excises of both the Dominions on an equitable basis; and

(d) As far as possible, a general agreement on other relevant matters of mutual interest in the economic sphere.

If the answer is in the affirmative, the Government of India suggest that discussions should be initiated at once, in order that in the interests of both the Dominions, final conclusions may be reached in time for the budget for 1948-49.

If a comprehensive agreement is reached on these lines, the Government of India would be quite prepared to give effect to it from the 15th August, 1947 in order to deal with the present claim of the Pakistan Government.

2619. Notification issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Commerce treating India as a foreign country for import/export.

Karachi, November 14, 1947.

No. 6 (3-1) and F.T./47. in exercise of the power conferred by section 5 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1934, (XXXII of 1934), the Government of Pakistan declares the Dominion of India to be foreign territory for the purposes of the said section and directs that a duty of customs at the rate prescribed by or under the said Act, in respect of any of the following articles when exported from a port in the Dominion of Pakistan shall be leviable on any such article when exported by land from the said Dominion:

2620.  Press Communiqué of the Government of India expressing surprise on the Pakistan Government imposing duty on the export of jute from East Pakistan to India.

New Delhi, November 23, 1947.

The Government of India have read with considerable surprise the Press Note issued by the Ministry of Finance of the Government of Pakistan justifying their action in imposing a duty on raw jute exported from East Bengal to India. Under the arrangements put into effect by both the Dominions each is entitled to retain the taxes which it levies and collects in duties and there was to be complete freedom in the movement of goods across the frontiers of the two Dominions, and no import or export duties were to be levied on such goods. This arrangement was to cover the period from August 15th, 1947, to March 31st, 1948. Moreover, each of the Dominions is entitled to retain the taxes which it levies and collects in its own territories. As a purely short-term working arrangements involving any form of customs and central excise union after April 1, 1948, providing, inter alia, for an equitable division of such revenues between the two Dominions subject to certain conditions. The arrangements which have been made between August 15, 1947, and March 31, 1948 are therefore purely temporary working arrangements.

About a month ago, the Pakistan Government put forward a claim to a share in the export duty on jute levied and collected by the Government of India at the port of Calcutta on the ground that Pakistan produces nearly 73 percent of the raw jute of both the Dominions, and that Pakistan was in consequence entitled in equity to a share of the export duty on jute collected by the Indian Dominion. They further put forward a claim to a share in all the Central Excise duties levied and collected by the Indian Government on the produce on manufactures of the Indian Dominion, on the ground that a considerable proportion of such excisable articles was in fact consumed in Pakistan. Discussions were held between the official representatives of the two Dominions in the middle of October, 1947. It was explained to the Pakistan officials that claims in respect of particular items of revenue could not be dealt with in isolation and would have to be considered along with the claims which the Government of India may have in respect of other items, and that it would therefore be necessary to undertake a comprehensive examination of the entire question of the customs and excise revenues. Such an examination would have to be on the basis of a reasonably long-term comprehensive settlement designed to cover the whole field of import, export and central excise duties in relation to common economic and fiscal policies and the absence of any customs or trade barriers, or in other words in the light of a customs and excise union and all that such a union implies. In spite of the opposition of the Pakistan member on the Expert Committees to any form of customs and excise union after April 1, 1948, the Government of India made it quite clear that they were prepared to initiate discussions at once for the negotiation of a reasonably long-term agreement which would be equitable to both sides indeed, in the event of a settlement, the Government of India undertook to give effect to it from August 15, 1947 in order to cover equitably the request of the Pakistan Government in respect of a share of the jute export duty and the central excise duties.

The Government of India are therefore surprised that the only reply of the Pakistan Government to the reasonable offer of the Government of India has been a unilateral action by that Government levying immediately a duty on jute exported from Pakistan to India, and a misrepresentation of the Government of India’s attitude, as unreasonable. The Prime Minister of India has protested to the Prime Minister of Pakistan against this, but no reply has yet been received.

In view of the unilateral action of the Pakistan Government the Government of India are now examining what parallel measures they should take in order to protect the interests of the Indian Dominion. Any action taken would, however, be without prejudice to reconsideration, should there be any hope of arriving at an amicable and reasonably long-term settlement over the entire field of freedom of trade and commerce between the two Dominions and allied matters.

New Delhi, December 10, 1947.

Whereas the Government of the Dominion of India and the Government of the Dominion of Pakistan desire to conclude an agreement for the avoidance of double taxation of income chargeable in the two Dominions in accordance with their respective laws:

NOW, THEREFORE, the said Governments do hereby agree as follows:

Article I

The taxes which are the subject of the present Agreement are the taxes imposed in the Dominions of India and Pakistan by the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 (XI of 1922), the Excess Profits Tax Act, 1940 (XV of 1940), and the Business Profits Tax Act, 1946 (XXI of 1947), as adapted in the respective Dominions.
Article II
Subject to the provisions of Article IX this Agreement shall continue in force so long as the basis of residence and the scope of charging provisions in the aforesaid Acts as adapted remain unaltered in both the Dominions, and shall apply to the following assessments made under the said Acts in the two Dominions:

(i) Assessments made on or after 15th day of August, 1947, for the assessment year 1947-48 or for the corresponding chargeable accounting period.

(ii) All other assessments made on or after 1st day of April, 1948, excepting excess profits tax assessments for chargeable accounting periods for which provisional assessments have been made before 1st day of April, 1948.

Article III
Save under the provisions of Section 34 of the Income-tax Act, 1922, and Section 15 of the Excess Profits Act, 1940, as adapted neither Dominion shall charge to tax any income of a person whose assessment (whether regular or provisional) including such income had been completed before the 15th day of August, 1947, or 1st day of April, 1948, as the case may be, by an Income-tax Officer or Excess Profits Tax Officer functioning respectively under the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, or the Excess Profits Act, 1940, or under those Acts as adapted and applied to any Areas or to either Dominion.

Article IV
Each Dominion shall make assessment in the ordinary way under its own laws; and, where either Dominion under the operation of its laws charges any income from the sources or categories of transactions specified in column 1 of the Schedule to this Agreement (hereinafter referred to as the Schedule) in excess of the amount calculated according to the percentage specified in columns 2 and 3 thereof, that Dominion shall allow an abatement equal to the lower amount of tax payable on such excess in either Dominion as provided for in Article VI.

Article V
Where any income accruing or arising without the territories of the Dominions is chargeable to tax in both the Dominions, each Dominion shall allow an abatement equal to one-half of the lower amount of tax payable in either Dominion on such doubly taxed income.

Article VI
(a) For the purposes of the abatement to be allowed under Article IV or V, the tax payable in each Dominion on the excess or the doubly taxed income, as the case may be, shall be such proportion of the tax payable in each Dominion as the excess or the doubly taxed income bears to the total income of the assessee in each Dominion.

(b) Where at the time of assessment in one Dominion, the tax payable on the total income in the other Dominion is not known, the first Dominion shall make a demand without allowing the abatement but shall hold in abeyance for a period of one year (or such longer period as may be allowed by the Income-tax Officer in his discretion) the collection of a portion of the demand equal to the estimated abatement. If the assessee produces a certificate of assessment in the other Dominion within the period of one year or any longer period allowed by the Income-tax Officer, the uncollected portion of the demand will be adjusted against the abatement allowable under this Agreement; if no such certificate is produced, the abatement shall cease to be operative and the outstanding demand shall be collected forthwith.

Article VII

(a) Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed as modifying or interpreting in any manner the provisions of the relevant taxation laws in force in either Dominion.

(b) If any question arises as to whether any income falls within any one of the items specified in the Schedule and if so under which item, the question shall be decided without any reference to the treatment of such income in the assessment made by the other Dominion.

Article VIII

The Schedule to this Agreement may be modified from time to time by agreement between the Central Boards of Revenue of the two Dominions and references to the Schedule in the foregoing Articles shall be read as references to the Schedule as modified.

Article IX

Either of the Contracting Parties may, six months before the beginning of any financial year (beginning on the 1st day of April) give to the other Contracting Party, through diplomatic channels, notice of termination and in such event this Agreement shall cease to have effect in relation to any assessment to income-tax for the financial year beginning with the 1st day of April next following and in relation to assessments to any other tax on the income of the corresponding chargeable accounting period.
2622. Notification issued by the Government of India declaring Pakistan to be a foreign territory for export of jute manufactures to Pakistan.

New Delhi, December 23, 1947

No. 134-T (59)/47 – In exercise of the powers conferred by section 5 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1934 (XXXII of 1934), the Central Government is pleased to declare the Dominion of Pakistan to be foreign territory for the purposes of the said section and to direct that on and from the 23rd December, 1947 a duty of Customs at the rate prescribed by or under the said Act or any other law for the time being in force in respect of raw jute manufactures, when exported from a port in the Dominion of India, shall be leviable on the said articles when exported by land to the Dominion of Pakistan.

2623. Press Communiqué issued by the Government of India declaring Pakistan to be a foreign territory for the purpose of export of jute and jute manufactures to that country.

New Delhi, December 23, 1947.

In their communiqué of November 23, the Government of India, while dealing with the imposition of a duty on raw jute by the Pakistan Government, stated that they were examining what measures they should take in order to protect the interests of the Indian Dominion. The matter has received further careful consideration of the Government of India and they have decided to declare forthwith the Dominion of Pakistan to be foreign territory for the purpose of levying customs duty on the export of raw jute and jute manufactures, from India to Pakistan.

To implement this decision the Government of India have issued the necessary notifications under the Indian Tariff Act, the Sea Customs Act and the Land Customs Act with immediate effect.

The Government of India are also taking suitable measures to ensure that sufficient stocks of raw jute are kept available in the Indian Dominion.

The above decisions or any others that the Government of India may be called upon to take to cope with the situation caused by the levy of Customs duties by the imposition of export duty on raw jute by the Pakistan Government are, however, as already stated, without prejudice to reconsideration of the position if an amicable and reasonably long-term settlement is reached over the entire field of freedom of trade and commerce between the two Dominions, levy of Customs and excise duties, their pooling and allied matters.

New Delhi, the 27th February 1948

No.24-T(1)/48- In exercise of the powers conferred by section 5 of the Indian Tariff Act, 1934 (XXXII) of 1934) and in supersession of the Notification of the Government of India in the Ministry of Commerce No. 134-T(59)/47, dated the 23rd December 1947, the Central Government is pleased to declare the Dominion of Pakistan to be foreign territory, with effect from the 1st March 1948, for the purposes of the said section and to direct that on and from that date a duty of customs at the rate prescribed by or under the said Act or any other law for the time being in force in respect of any article when imported into or exported from a port in the Provinces of India, shall be leviable on any such article when imported by land into, or exported by land from, the Provinces of India from or to the Dominion of Pakistan.

S. Ranganathan
Joint Secy.
My dear Jawaharlal,

Before I fell ill, I had in mind to speak to you about suitable arrangements here to co-ordinate discussions on matters regarding trade policy, tariffs, economic controls, etc., between ourselves and Pakistan. I had written to Chetty some time ago emphasizing the importance of negotiating with Pakistan further agreements on all these matters in a co-coordinated manner. He said that this was desirable, but subsequent negotiations seem to have been taken up more in isolation than in any degree of co-ordination. Instances in point are the barter deals with Pakistan resulting in an exchange of cotton cloth for cotton and of wheat for rice. I need hardly say that such isolated transactions are apt to result in our settling individual items without having regard to the over-all picture of economic arrangements with Pakistan, and there is substantial danger of our sacrificing the bargaining advantage which we undoubtedly hold in certain matters and of Pakistan securing advantage over us in certain other in which we are in a comparatively weak position. Thus we would be deprived of useful levers in our attempt to persuade Pakistan to come to a satisfactory economic arrangement.

This, of course, applies to financial arrangements as well or to arrangements regarding property of evacuees. It is far from my intention to suggest that we should necessarily aim at a general agreement and not deal with individual problems as they arise. My sole object is to ensure that, while we are dealing with individual problems we do not lose sight of our interests in an over-all arrangement or of the final balance sheet of advantages and disadvantages, bearing in mind a more comprehensive picture of our economic and financial arrangements with Pakistan. In dealing with such items, for instance, we should not ignore many serious hardships which our people in Assam, West Bengal and Tripura are undergoing on account of the setting up of customs barrier in consequence of the expiry of the Stand-still agreement on 1st March 1948, or for the matter, recent breaches of the provisional agreement and transit facilities committed by Pakistan in holding up our communication plans or demanding duty from passengers coming by air from foreign countries and travelling direct to India.
I would, therefore, suggest that we should set up at Cabinet level a Committee to co–ordinate all our dealings with Pakistan in fiscal, financial and economic and other matters. This Committee of the Cabinet should be assisted at Secretariat level by a Committee presided over by the Secretary of the Ministry of Commonwealth Relations and consisting of the Secretaries of Ministries mostly concerned with such negotiations, as for example, Finance, Industry & Supply, Food, Relief & Rehabilitation and Patel who has a valuable background and experience of inter–Dominion negotiations and Partition matters. I also suggest that, in future, negotiations on these matters should be handled by the Ministry of Commonwealth Relations, whose responsibility it will be to have each matter examined in the appropriate Ministry of the Government and then to place the proposals of the Ministry before the Committee of Secretaries mentioned above. After this Committee has examined the proposals, they should be approved by the Committee of the Cabinet which would refer suitable cases for the approval of the Cabinet.

I do not think that this procedure would lead to any delay. On the other hand, it will enable us to see each matter against the background of all facets of our relationship with Pakistan.

Yours sincerely

Sd/- Vallabhbhai Patel

The Hon. Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India.
2626. Record note of discussions between the Commerce Minister of India and Finance Minister of Pakistan on Excise, Tariff, Commodities and Trade Control and Rebate on Central Excise.

New Delhi, April 8, 1948.

A. Excise, Tariff, Commodities and Trade Control:

In the course of an informal discussion between the Honourable Mr. K.C. Neogy, the Commerce Minister of India, and the Honourable Mr. Ghulam Mohammed, the Finance Minister of Pakistan, with a view to exploring possibilities of increasing inter-dominion trade by the reduction or removal of fiscal and other barriers, it was agreed that they would recommend to their respective Governments that the following propositions may be accepted and that the final decisions of the two Governments should be communicated to each other by the 14th April, 1949.

1) Each Dominion will grant full rebate of excise on excisable commodities exported to the other Dominion if such rebates are given on exports of the same commodities to any other country. Further for a period of one year from the date on which such agreement comes into force the two Governments will give such rebates on all commodities that are at present excisable, or may during that period be made subject to excise duty, irrespective of whether such rebates are given on exports to other countries or not. The rebates will become effective as early as possible on a date to be agreed upon between the two Governments and, in any case not later than the 1st of June 1949.

2) The two Governments will enter into negotiations to secure that the benefits arising out of the grant of rebates are not unduly impaired by the imposition or enhancement of other duties, or by the imposition of unreasonable quantitative restrictions.

3) In view of this agreement, the Pakistan Government will immediately instruct their delegation at Annecy provisionally not to proceed with the consideration of their complaint before the Contracting Parties and as soon as the agreement is ratified, Pakistan will instruct their delegation to withdraw that complaint finally.

4) With effect from the date on which the rebate of excise becomes effective Pakistan will withdraw their export duties on bamboo and fish exported to India and, provided the necessary administrative arrangements can be made, India will reduce the import duty on unmanufactured tobacco from Pakistan to rates corresponding to the rates of excise duty which would be payable on similar Indian tobacco used for similar purposes, this being the position that obtains and will continue to obtain in Pakistan.

5) An inter-Dominion conference should begin not later than the first week of May for considering the extension of the Inter-Dominion commodities agreement, and at the same conference should also be considered.

(i) Proposals for abolition or reduction of import and export duties on certain items;

(ii) Simplification of the import/export control regulations. For this purpose each Dominion will communicate to the other Dominion by the 25th April 1949 a list of items on which such fiscal relief is desired and also a minimum list of articles on which they consider it necessary to maintain import or export control.

6) About the same time the two Governments will enter into negotiations with a view to a more comprehensive agreement being reached with reference to the production, manufacture and sale of jute and cotton. These discussions are intended to deal with long range problems and should not delay the conclusion of agreements in respect of the foregoing items.

With reference to the record of the informal discussions between the Commerce Minister of India and the Finance Minister of Pakistan, it is agreed that the reference to jute and cotton in item 6 does not exclude them from the purview of the negotiations for the extension of the Inter-Dominion Commodities Agreement referred to in item 5. They are separately mentioned in item 6 as that refers only to long-term aspects.

P. J. Shearer. S. Ranganathan

B. Agreement on Rebate of Central Excise:

The following decisions have been reached as a result of recent discussion between India and Pakistan:

(1) With effect from 1st June 1949 each Dominion will grant full rebate of excise on excisable commodities exported to the other Dominion if such rebates are given on exports of the same commodities to any other country. Further for a period of one year from the same date, the two Governments will give such rebates on all commodities that are at present excisable or may during that period be made subject to excise duty irrespective of whether such rebates are given on exports to other countries or not.

(2) In view of Clause (1) above the Pakistan Government will withdraw their complaint before the Contracting Parties to the General Agreement on Tarrifs and Trade regarding rebates of excise duties.

(3) With effect from 1st June, 1949 and subject to India continuing to supply to Pakistan mustard oil free of export duty, Pakistan will withdraw their export duties on bamboo and fish exported to India and provided necessary administrative arrangements can be made India will reduce the import duty on un-manufacture tobacco from Pakistan to rates corresponding to the rates of excise duty which would be payable on similar Indian Tobacco used for similar purposes this being the position that obtains and will continue to obtain in Pakistan.

(4) An Inter-Dominion Conference will be held on a suitable date before the expiry of the current arrangements to negotiate a fresh agreement for the supply of commodities. The two Dominions will exchange lists of requirements at least a week before the conference begins.

(5) The two Dominions will also enter into negotiations at a separate conference on a date convenient for both to consider (i) the abolition or reduction of import or export duties on certain items and (ii) the simplification of import and export control regulations. For the purpose of these negotiations each Dominion will communicate to the other Dominion a list of items on which such fiscal relief is desired and also a minimum list of articles on which they consider it necessary to maintain import or export control.

(6) Either Government will give due consideration to any representation that may be made by the other Government should the latter feel that the achievement of the full benefits of this agreement is in any way hampered.

Mr. Farouque proposed and Mr. Hasnie seconded that Mr. Narahari Rao should take the chair during the proceedings of the Committee. This was unanimously agreed to.

Whereas the Government of the two Dominions agree that mass exodus of minorities is not in the interest of either Dominion and they are determined to take every possible step to discourage such exodus and to create such conditions as would check mass exodus in either direction and would encourage and facilitate, as far as possible, return of evacuees of their ancestral homes the two Dominions agree as follows:

The report of the Expert Committee appointed by the Inter-Dominion Conference to consider certain economic issues was discussed and the two Dominions agreed to give immediate effect to the recommendations made therein subject to the modifications described in the addendum appended thereto. The report of the Committee is annexed.

MINUTES OF THE OFFICERS COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO THE INTERDOMINION CONFERENCE
2. The Committee unanimously agreed that such practical recommendations and proposals as they were to put forward with a view to removing the economic hardships and grievances resulting from the termination of the standstill agreements and the imposition of customs barriers must be as smooth and simple as possible, while ensuring at the same time the genuine and legitimate interests of both the Dominions. One of the Principal factors to be kept in the background of these recommendations was that the additional irritants which gave an impetus to the exodus of minorities should be removed.

3. The items of the agenda specifically referred to this committee were Nos. (1), (2) and (5) of the main agenda which are stated below:

I. To discuss situation caused by termination of Standstill Agreement between India and Pakistan and imposition of restriction on movement of goods and to find ways and means of facilitating movement under existing conditions.

II. Pending a final Trade Agreement between India and Pakistan to arrive at some arrangement regarding the supply by each Dominion of essential requirement of the other.

III. Implementation all levels of Interim Agreement confirmed in PAKREW Telegram No. 169/CUS./47 of March 13th and Indian Ministry of Finance Telegram No. 204(6) (CUS-1)/48, Of March 31st regarding free transit from one another through Pakistan territory and vice versa.

A few other items were also added later on and have been dealt with.

In regard to item (1) of the agenda, the Committee recommends as follows:

(i) Both Dominions must strive to reduce to the minimum the restrictions which hamper the free movement of passengers between the two Dominions and for this purpose, the following measures are recommended:

(a) The Customs authorities of the two Dominions should together work out a common set of simple baggage rules applicable on both sides to passengers traveling from one Dominion to the other.

(b) The application of the baggage rules should be made with due consideration so as to avoid irksome restrictions and unnecessary harassment of passengers.

(c) Passengers’ baggage should be checked only by duly authorized Customs staff and no one else.
(d) Personal searches should as a rule be avoided, and only carried out in cases where there is genuine suspicion of smuggling. In such cases, the search should only be conducted under the personal orders of the seniormost Customs official present and a record of all searches made should be maintained. Liaison Officers should be allowed facilities to ensure a fair application of the rules.

(e) The personal search of women passengers, if at all made, should be carried out only by women Officers, as provided for by the Sea Customs Act.

(f) Both Dominions should re-examine their tariff Schedules and their Import and Export control Notifications to see what relaxations are possible with a view to minimize or render unnecessary any Customs formalities in regard to the personal effects of passengers.

(g) Passengers should be shown every consideration and as far as possible suitable arrangements should be made to facilitate the easy movement of through-passengers without needless examination and harassment.

(h) No person other than an authorized Government servant, e.g. a Police Officer duly authorized may hold up any person crossing the frontier on the ground that he is carrying or suspected to be carrying contraband goods or is smuggling. Such a person should be taken or directed to the nearest Customs post by such officer for examination and no examination of his luggage or person should be made by anyone who does not belong to the Customs staff. All such authorized officers should wear distinctive badges.

(i) All authorized Customs officers should carry suitable badges or other means of identification.

(j) Once a passenger has passed the Customs frontier, no further search or examination of his luggage or person should be made.

(2) In order to facilitate the movement of goods and commodities in general the Committee makes the following recommendations:

(a) As far as possible, the two Dominions should set up parallel Customs posts as near to each other as possible so that for each Customs post in one Dominion there is an opposite number.

(b) Having regard to economic considerations, both Dominions should try to reduce the number of commodities which when moving from one Dominion to the other, shall be subject to an import or export duty. In fact only specified articles should be liable to duty and the rest should be free. This would obviate the absurd difficulties which have arisen in regard to perishables such as fish, fresh fruit, etc.

(c) A similar examination of the Export Trade Control Notification should be made by both Dominions. There is no import control between the two Dominions at the moment.

(d) The Pakistan representatives claimed that if the Havana Charter is ratified, each Dominion will become entitled to 'most favoured nation' treatment in respect of rebates of excise duties and urged that in the interests of Inter-Dominion trade such treatment should be authorized by both Dominions without further delay. The Indian representatives stated that the present practice is not, in fact, uniform and that this is due to certain practical difficulties and other circumstances. The Pakistan representatives expressed their willingness to co-operate in removing any practical difficulties and requested that a final decision on the claim already put forward officially should be reached within a month in order to enable them to settle their import policy. India promised to reach a decision at an early date.

(e) Where any cultivator living in a border village of one Dominion has land in a border village in the other Dominion he should be permitted within a reasonable period after the harvest, to take across the border to his residence reasonable quantities of any controlled commodities produced by him for his domestic consumption with the minimum of restriction and formalities.

3 The Committee adopted the following recommendations in regard to item (5) of the agenda for the approval of the two Governments:

(1) Transit

(a) Each Dominion should take effective measures for the smooth implementation of transit facilities to the other Dominion in accordance with the provisions of International Agreements governing such transit.

(b) The foreign exchange earning or liability for any transit cargo moving in bond shall belong to the Dominion of origin or destination as the case may be and not to the Dominion of transit.

(c) Transit cargo should in general be given the same transport priority as is accorded to similar cargo moving internally.

(d) The Custom experts of the two Dominions should get together to evolve a procedure for transit which should be as simple as possible and take into account the peculiar difficulties arising on account of geographical and transport Considerations, e.g., the need of transhipment and the location of transport heads at points different from the Inter-Dominion boundary. The procedure already introduced by the two Dominions, should be reviewed.

(e) The production of a certificate from a Customs Officer of the Dominion from which the goods are being sent should ordinarily be taken as conclusive evidence of the origin of such commodities at the point of entry for transit and transit facilities shall not be denied on the ground that there is any suspicion that the goods might have originally come from the other Dominion.

(f) In order to ensure the smooth working of the transit arrangements the officers of each Dominion should receive suitable instructions to co-operate with the officers of the other Dominion to avoid disputes and difficulties.

(g) Each Dominion should post Liaison Officers at important Customs outposts and important points en route selected by agreement in the other Dominion so as to facilitate the removal of any difficulties that might crop up. These Liaison Officers should be persons specially selected for their capacity to smoothen difficulties. These Liaison Officers will also have other functions in connection with the removal of difficulties of travelers and movement of goods and baggage.

(h) Where road or river transport is involved by itself or in combination with any other form of transport, arrangements should be made for transit facilities by establishing suitable out-agencies.

(2) Transport

(a) To ensure that transport bottlenecks and congestion are avoided mutual contacts are necessary at operational levels between the railways of the two Dominions. Operational Committees consisting of representatives of the three railways in the Eastern Region and the two railways in the Western Region should be set up to deal with difficulties relating to rail transport including in particular:

(i) Delay in the turn round of wagons;

(ii) discriminatory treatment in the allotment of wagons or charging of freight;

(iii) matters affecting priorities.

(b) It is further recommended that a Railway Operational Committee be established on an Inter-Dominion basis which could settle broad principles of Inter-Dominion rail transport.
(3) Facilities for Repairs

The movement of machinery, etc. sent for one Dominion to the other for repairs and return should be dealt with under the arrangements normally provided for under the import and re-export rules. To cover, however, past cases of machinery sent before the establishment of customs frontier reasonable latitude shall be given for a matter of three months in the application of the rules.

(a) In order to ensure the avoidance of undue hardship resulting from the switch-over from the standstill to the new situation, the two Dominions will consider sympathetically applications for the

At this stage of the discussions, India suggested that one way of overcoming the various difficulties would perhaps be to revive the Standstill Agreement for 3 or 6 months at the outside. This interval could then be utilized for arriving at an agreement relating to Customs Union and trade to suit the special requirements of the two Dominions. While recognizing that such a procedure might have certain advantages, Pakistan representatives felt that it would not be possible to revive the Standstill Agreement.

After considering the views put forward by the representatives of the several Governments the Committee recommended that the restrictions whether imposed by a Central or Provincial Government on the movement between the two Dominions of commodities such as fresh fruit, vegetables, fresh milk and its products, poultry and eggs, local spices, bamboo and firewood, and any customs duties thereon must be removed.

That the Indian Government agreed to discuss the supply of mustard oil to East Bengal to be decided at a meeting to be arranged within the next 3 weeks. Until then the Pakistan Government shall continue to allow the free movement of fish without any duty.

The Committee considered that it would be in the interests of both the Dominions if an agreement or agreements could be reached in the near future for the mutual supply of commodities essential for each other economy. Such agreements and their implementation would promote the continuance of the close economic relationship which have existed in the past between the areas now included in the two Dominions. The time for the commencement of discussions on the and other connected matters should be settled between the two Governments at an early date. Meanwhile a list of commodities, the supply of which to Pakistan is considered essential by Pakistan, was considered. In view of short notice and inadequate information available at Calcutta the Pakistan representatives agreed to accept provisional replies covering at least their immediate requirements if final answers could not be given across the table. The list of commodities, and the estimated annual requirements and the agreed conclusions of the Committee are shown in the Annexure to this report.

As regards the commodities the supply of which India would require from Pakistan, India’s representatives stated that as detailed discussions were not anticipated, they could not put forward their full requirements under all headings. Discussions will have to take place subsequently. Meanwhile the following agreed conclusions were reached:

(1) Pakistan should supply India’s requirements of rock salt and gypsum.

(2) Pakistan should give priority to the requirements of cotton for Indian Textile Industry before exporting elsewhere except when such export is necessary for earning hard currency or for obtaining essential supplies of cotton textiles and yarns which cannot be met by India. Details would have to be settled at the forthcoming discussions for reaching a Trade agreement.

(3) Jute is of course one of the principal commodities required by India from Pakistan. Since there was no immediate difficulty in respect of jute supplies it was agreed that there was no need to bring up the matter at this stage especially as this Committee were dealing primarily with items in respect of which difficulties of supplies were being experienced but the long-term aspect of this question should be considered by the two Governments at an early date.

(4) Among the other commodities which Pakistan could supply to India were food grains, cement and hides and skins. It was agreed that the Government of India will prepare quantitative statements of their requirements and communicate them to the Pakistan Government as soon as possible.

Additional Matters

A number of other miscellaneous points were discussed. These are summarized below:-

a) Pakistan representatives suggested that in order to keep down prices the Government of India should not levy any export duty on cotton textiles going to Pakistan and that Pakistan should not levy the export duty on raw cotton exported to India. The Committee agreed that this matter should be further considered by the Government of India.

b) Insurance Companies.

It was agreed that difficulties experienced by the Insurance Companies owing to the partition should be examined in detail. Discussions between the representatives of the two Dominions had already been arranged.

c) Postal, telegraphic and telephone rates.

It was agreed that this question, as well as the question of simplifying the movement of letters and postcards so as to reduce the delays which now arise by passing them through the exchanges should be examined urgently by exports of both the Dominions. Arrangements were already in train for these discussions. The question of parcels which are subject to customs duty, might require a different treatment.

d) Partition stores.

To facilitate the movement of stores between the Dominions, which were covered by the orders of appropriate authorities dealing with the division of assets as a partition matter, it was agreed that such movement should be exempt from the normal export and import control and customs duties. Both the Governments, should introduce at an early date an agreed procedure for simplifying the formalities relating to their movement. It was considered that in certain cases powers would have to be delegated by the Central Governments to officers of the Provincial governments in regard to such movements.

e) The Pakistan representatives complained that no accounts had been received for the cross railway traffic. The Indian Delegation agreed to take up the matter with the appropriate authorities were similarly wanting in respect of interchange of traffic.

f) In regard to the general complaint that there had been discriminatory practices against minorities in India in respect of the grant of export and import licenses and assessment of Income tax and similar matters, the Indian Delegation pointed out that it was impossible to deal with vague and general accusations of this nature. Indeed there were grave allegations of discrimination and injustice against minorities in Pakistan and specific cases had been brought to the notice of the Government of India. So far as India was concerned there was no question of discrimination against any minority, and individuals with concrete grievances had the right of redress at the hands of the highest authorities. The Government of India would deal sternly with any genuine cases of injustice or oppression. The Pakistan representatives agreed that their Government would do likewise.
g) The non-receipt by the Pakistan Railways of their share of the supply of railway stores ordered prior to the 15th August, 1947 and the non-receipt by the Eastern Punjab Railway of its share of stores from the North western Railway were mentioned.

The Committee could not settle these issues, but recommended that this matter should be considered at a meeting of the representatives of the Railway Boards of the two Dominions and the other officers concerned.

They further recommended that in order to provide for a smoother working, a close liaison should be established between the two Railway Boards.

h) In regard to the complaint about the non-payment of the sum of Rs. Five Crores, it was stated that the views of the Government of India had been explained by Mr. H.M. Patel in a letter addressed to the hon'ble the Finance Minister, Pakistan.

i) The Committee agreed that orders should be issued by both the Governments to the authorities concerned for terminating forthwith the unauthorized hold-up of goods including personal effects which had occurred in the past between the two Dominions in the light of the conclusions now reached. The articles which were already in movement through recognized carriers before the termination of the Standstill Agreement should be let through with the minimum of formalities.

Liaison and Co-ordination

The Committee considered that it is a matter of paramount importance that there should be liaison between the officers of the two Dominions at all levels for ensuring close coordination and freedom from harassment and delays of every kind. Apart from the system of the appointment of special Liaison Officers of suitable grades wherever the volume and nature of the work justified, the officers of the Provincial Governments and the Central Governments of the two Dominions should make it a point of maintaining mutual contact and goodwill with their opposite numbers with a view to the removal of each others difficulties. The successful implementation of, any agreement, or rules, largely depends upon the goodwill and cooperation of officials at all levels, and the highest administrative officers of the two Dominions should endeavour to instill this spirit amongst their officers and subordinates of every grade.

Ministry of Industry and Supply, New Delhi.

No. 1982-CS(G)-48/9779  Simla, the 22nd April, 1948

Subject: Trade with Pakistan.

Sir,

I am directed to say that enquiries from various concerns are being received by the East Punjab Government as to whether there are restrictions on the export of commodities like cloth, yarn, tea, soap etc., from this province to places situated in Pakistan.

2. In accordance with Government of India Cotton Textiles (Control of Movement) Order, 1946, the Cotton Cloth and yarn cannot be exported from one Zone to another without an export permit to be granted by the Textile Commissioner, Bombay. Similarly these commodities cannot be exported from East Punjab to places situated in Pakistan without a permit to be granted by the Provincial Government, under the East Punjab Cotton Cloth and Yarn (Regulation of Movement) Order, 1947.

3. As regards articles like woolen goods, silk cloth and yarn, sugar, tea, soap etc. there are no restrictions under the provincial law on the export of these commodities from East Punjab to Pakistan. Since Pakistan is now a foreign territory, presumably restrictions have been imposed by the Central Government on the export of all such commodities. I am, therefore to request you to inform this Government with regard to the export policy and the part which the Provincial Government, has to play in the implementation of this policy.

I have the honour to be

Letter from Ministry of Commerce, Government of India to the Provincial Governments in India regarding trade policy towards Pakistan.

New Delhi, May, 1948

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
MINISTRY OF COMMERCE

New Delhi, the MAY 1948

From : K.K. Chettur, Esquire, M.A., Joint Secretary to the Government of India.

To : The Chief Secretaries of all the Provincial Governments.
All the Chief Commissioners.

Sir,

With reference to Mr. Mangat Rai’s letter No.1982-CS(G)-48/9779 dated the 22nd April 1948 addressed to the Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of Industry and Supply (copy enclosed) I am directed to say that there seems to be a certain amount of confusion in regard to the restrictions on the movement of goods and commodities going to Pakistan from India since the termination of the Standstill Agreement and the declaration of Pakistan as a foreign territory for purposes of trade with effect from the 1st March 1948. The correct position in this regard is set out below.

2. From the date of the partition until the 25th February 1948, the movement of trade between the two Dominions was governed by the Standstill Agreement which had the effect of giving this trade a purely internal and domestic character and, as a rule, only those restrictions applied to such trade as were applicable in regard to movements between one part of India and another. In other words, where the movement of any commodity within India was subject to any form of restriction or control, whether Central or Provincial, that restriction applied equally to movements to Pakistan. Where no such restriction existed, the commodity in question could move freely from India to Pakistan.

3. With the termination of the Standstill Agreement, Pakistan is being treated as foreign territory, which means that the restrictions applicable in regard to Pakistan are not internal restrictions but those which govern the movement of goods and commodities going to Pakistan.
goods and commodities from India to any other country like Australia or the United Kingdom. The position in regard to such movements is that no commodity, which is included in the E.T.C. Notification, can go out of India, save and except under a valid licence granted by the appropriate authority under the said Notification. A complete list of such commodities, which are controlled, will be found in the Gazette of India dated 30th November 1946, and although some minor amendments have subsequently been made, for all practical purposes this list may be taken as representing the position as it is today. Commodities, which are not included in this Notification, are, on the other hand, free to go to Pakistan unless they are the subject matter of any special restrictions imposed on their export by any other ad hoc legislation, e.g. the Indian Tea Licensing Act. Unless, however, any commodity is controlled under the E.T.C. Notification or under any other relevant act, the Customs staff will not restrict the movement of such goods to Pakistan though duty will be claimed where payable.

4. As the Provinces will realize; the E.T.C. Notification referred to above was framed having in view the nature of commodities which would in the absence of control have gone out of undivided India as a whole. With the creation of Pakistan as a separate State, however, it may become necessary either to impose special restrictions in order to conserve supplies in the Indian Union or to allow some special liberalization in order to keep alive trade connections and the normal pattern of the economic relationship subsists between adjoining regions. In either event, changes can only be made by the Central Government and, therefore, Provincial Governments are requested to examine the existing Notification and to forward their proposals in this respect to the Ministry of Commerce at the earliest possible date.

5. In this connection I am to point out that it is obviously desirable that there should be only one Central machinery to check the export of all commodities from India to Pakistan and that there should as a rule be no occasion for separate check by both Provincial Government officers and the Central Government officers. The Staff of the Government of India which is engaged on this task has been instructed not to allow the movement of controlled goods and commodities except on the production of a licence from the appropriate authority. The licensing authority in regard to most items covered by the E.T.C. Notification is the Chief Controller of Exports in New Delhi and his deputies at the ports of Bombay, Calcutta and Madras. Similar organizations may be set up elsewhere if necessary to deal with cases locally as far as possible. I may add for your information in this connection that it is proposed to set up an Export Trade Control Organisation at Amritsar.

6. Although as explained above, Provincial Governments have been called upon not to play any direct part in controlling exports to Pakistan, they can, and the Government of India hope, they will, contribute to the shaping of Central policy on the subject taking into account the interests of both consumers as well as producers and traders within their jurisdiction and suggesting such changes as may appear to them to be necessary from time to time.

7. I am accordingly to request that the Provincial Governments will be so good as to examine the list of commodities at present being controlled and favour the Government of India with their views as to the modifications which may be considered necessary. For their information, I am to state that as a result of the agreement reached between India and Pakistan at Calcutta it has been decided that the movement of fresh fruits, fresh vegetables, fresh milk and milk products, fish (dried and fresh), poultry and eggs and local spices will be free from any restrictions or duties.

2630. Agreement between India and Pakistan for the Mutual Supply of certain Essential Commodities.

The Representatives of the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan having considered the requirements of essential commodities which each Dominion needs from the other have, subject to ratification by their respective Governments, agreed as hereunder:

1. The quantities of each commodity which each Dominion undertakes to make available to the other are stated in Annexures I and II (not reproduced here). The Annexures also indicate the demands made by each Dominion in respect of each commodity and special features, if any.

2. Apart from the commodities listed in the Annexure I and II it was agreed to show the maximum consideration in facilitating the export of goods from one Dominion to the other. It was agreed that imported goods which had been shipped and paid for in either Dominion before the 31st of December 1947 out of the undivided exchange account will be allowed to be re-exported to the other Dominion wherever it is established that the goods were originally intended for consumption in that Dominion.

3. The period of the agreement will be one year from 1\textsuperscript{st} July 1948 to the 30\textsuperscript{th} June of 1949 except as regards:

(a) Raw cotton and cotton textiles, for which the agreement shall cover the period from 1\textsuperscript{st} September 1948 to 31\textsuperscript{st} August 1949; and

(b) Food grains for which the agreement will be for the period 1\textsuperscript{st} June 1948 to 31\textsuperscript{st} August 1949.

4. With such exceptions as may be mutually agreed upon, supplies will ordinarily be made through commercial channels. Commodities which are not subject to any control either internally or for export present no problems. In the case of commodities which are not subject to internal control but are subject to export control, the supplying Dominion shall issue necessary export licences in such a manner that the export of the agreed quantities will be facilitated. In respect of commodities which are subject to internal as well as export control, the supplying Dominion shall either supply on a Government to Government basis or make specific allocations in conformity with their internal control as well as issue export licences.

5. In regard to raw jute, India agrees to restrict her exports of raw jute from the Indian Dominion to 9 lakhs of bales predominantly of the Indian varieties the bulk of which is not suitable for use in Indian mills and is usually exported.

6. It is agreed that neither Dominion will re-export to any country any commodity imported from the other Dominion in the form in which it was imported.

7. Pakistan agrees to supply food grains to India at the same rate as charged for supplies to its own deficit Provinces. India agrees to supply steel f.o.b. Calcutta at f.o.b. Calcutta prices. The freight will be borne by the buyers. India also agrees that the internal controlled price of coal and paper will continue to be charged for sales to Pakistan also. Supplies of coal to the Government of Pakistan will be paid for out of irrevocable credits to be opened by the Pakistan Government. Other supplies of coal to Pakistan will be made on pre-payment by the purchasers in the usual manner. The prices indicated are exclusive of any export or import duties that may be levied by either Dominion.

8. It was agreed that subject to seasonal considerations each dominion should spread its purchases as uniformly and conveniently as possible.
9. In order to implement the Agreement in a smooth and orderly way, it was agreed that monthly progress reports should be exchanged between the two Dominions and that meetings between representatives of the two Dominions should be held every other month for this purpose.

10. During the currency of this agreement items may be added to or taken away from the lists of commodities included in the annexures by mutual agreement between the two Dominions.

Karachi,
Dated the 26th May, 1948.

C.C. DESAI

2631. Agreement Reached at Karachi in October 1948 to facilitate proper fulfillment of the Agreement of May 1948.

Karachi, October 20, 1948.

In order to facilitate proper fulfillment of the Agreement entered into between the two Dominions at Karachi in May 1948, the Delegations of the two Dominions have, after full discussion, agreed, subject to ratification by the respective Governments, on the following clarifications and arrangements:

Cotton—The Indian Delegation stated that the fixation of monthly quotas for the supply of cotton with a lapsing clause was not acceptable and should be reviewed. The representatives of the Pakistan Government agreed to fix an export quota of 360,000 bales for India for the period ending 31st January, 1949, provided that if Indian purchases during the period fell below 325,000 bales such shortfall will be liable to lapse. The Pakistan Government representatives agreed that export quotas to other countries and purchases by them and for internal consumption in Pakistan will not together exceed 360,000 bales during the same period. Pakistan representatives further agreed that consideration of fixation of quotas on a monthly or quarterly basis for subsequent periods be postponed and examined in due course by prior consultation in the light of working of this arrangement as a whole.

Food grains—At the concern expressed by the Government of India at the inability of Pakistan to supply foodgrains as a result of unexpected floods during the current crop season, the representatives of Pakistan assured the Indian Delegation that they were most anxious to implement the Agreement and that they would make their best endeavours to supply the stipulated quantity of foodgrains from their next Rabi crop.

Coal—Pakistan’s representatives emphasized their inability to move cotton without supply of coal from India. They stated that hitherto they have not received the full quantity which India had promised to supply. At the same time Pakistan appreciated the difficulties which India had to encounter in supplying the full quantity of coal. The Indian Delegation assured the representatives of Pakistan that realizing the importance of coal to Pakistan, they would take steps to ensure that full quantity of coal is supplied every month.

Other Commodities—The representatives of Pakistan stated that nothing has been received from India against the quotas of steel, asbestos cement sheets, sulphuric acid, tyres and tubes, etc.

The Indian Delegation reiterated that they have every intention of fulfilling the terms of the Agreement. In this connection the Indian delegation agreed that steel will be supplied on f.o.b. Calcutta basis as contemplated in the Inter-Dominion Agreement.

Jute—Both parties agreed that there was no occasion to change the existing policy in regard to export of jute to India. It was further agreed that should circumstances otherwise warrant, India will be consulted before any change is effected. At any rate, no change will be effected till the 31st December 1948.

Cloth – The Indian Delegation agreed that they will make arrangements which would enable Pakistan to obtain regular supplies of cloth to Pakistan from India. The exact details of the arrangements will be settled at an early date by mutual consultation.

General – Both Governments recognize that the Agreement must be regarded as a whole and implemented in full; and for this purpose the arrangements for the export of commodities concerned must be devised in such a manner as to satisfy both Governments that the goods would move in accordance with the terms and intentions of the Agreement.

Report of the Economic Committee appointed by the Inter-Dominion Conference at New Delhi in December, 1948.

(1) The Calcutta Agreement of April 1948 was reviewed in detail. The result of the review as well as the fresh recommendations which the Committee found it necessary to make in order to achieve the main objects in view are shown in Appendix I.

(2) The agreement signed at Karachi relating to the mutual supply of certain essential commodities by one Dominion to the other were reviewed and the result of the examination as well as the fresh recommendations made by this Committee are indicated in Appendix II.

(3) The case of stores sold through the disposals organization lying in one Dominion and purchased by a person who resided or had since evacuated to the other Dominion had been considered at previous Conferences without any agreement having been reached. The present Committee having reviewed the matter recommends the following solution:-

a. All such purchasers should be given the option either to take delivery of the stores before the 28th February 1949, or to ask for the cancellation of the sale.

b. Where the purchaser prefers the former alternative every facility should be provided to him by the Dominion where the goods are lying to take these goods to the other Dominion if the purchaser so desires.

c. Where the purchaser exercises his option to have the sale cancelled, any money deposited by him should be refunded in full without deducting any demurrage, rent, etc., by the Dominion in which the stores are located.

d. The arrangement outlined above should apply even to persons who fall in the category of an evacuee and payment should be made to him and not to the Custodian of Evacuee Property. If necessary, the relevant law of either Dominion should be amended in order to let the purchaser have the full benefit of this recommendation.

(4) The review of the Agreements reached so far has shown that while the two Dominions have found it easy and even necessary to agree on fair and equitable principles in dealing with the wide variety of problems arising out of partition, in actual implementation there have been frequent and recurrent lapses on both sides. The Committee therefore recommends that the machinery set up in Section II, Clauses 2(i), (ii) and (iii) of the Agreement should also be utilized for the purpose of ensuring the implementation of the various agreements reached by this Committee in the spirit in which they are entered into.

(5) A number of instances, where there had been lapses in the implementation of the agreements reached so far or there had been other difficulties, came up before the Committee and agreed decisions were taken as indicated in Appendix III.

Review of the Two Agreements at Karachi Regarding the Supply of Essential Commodities from one Dominion to the Other

The Agreement signed at Karachi in May 1948 had been reviewed at another conference in October 1948. The developments since then were further reviewed. The position in regard to the various commodities and the conclusions reached in respect of them are summarized below:

India’s exports to Pakistan

1. Coal—The latest available figures showed a distinct improvement on the earlier ones and India agreed to do everything possible to see that the full quantity of coal as agreed to at Karachi was supplied each month. India also agreed to consider supplying a larger proportion of the total quantity by rail.

   Pakistan complained that no supplies of hard coke had been received. This had been due to a serious fall in Indian production and it was pointed out that even the original agreement was not a firm one in respect of hard coke supplies.

   It was agreed that Pakistan would supply to India a list of its essential requirements of metallurgical hard coke in order of priority and India would try to meet these requirements as far as possible. The Indian delegation further stated that an improvement was expected by the end of January when it would be possible to make larger supplies to Pakistan.

2. Cloth and yarn.—Arrangements had only recently been finalized by a conference between the two Dominions held at Bombay.

3. Steel, pig iron and scrap—India explained that there were no supplies in the first few months of the agreement as it took about five months for supplies to become available after orders had been placed.

   India hoped to step up deliveries with a view to supply the entire quantity of steel agreed to at Karachi during the period of the agreement. If any appreciable portion remained undelivered, India would extend the time-limit.

4. Paper and board—Monthly allocations on the various mills were made by the I. & S. Ministry and export licences were issued accordingly. Pakistan asked that the licences should not lapse at the end of each month. It was explained that export licences were normally valid for a period of three months and a similar validity would be given to the paper and board licences; if any licences had expired owing to a shorter time-limit having been given, they would be extended.

5. Chemicals and pharmaceuticals—The sulphates did not need any export licences and there was no hold-up on the Indian side in the normal free movement of sulphates to Pakistan. The quantities of acids that have so far been licensed were communicated to the Pakistan Delegation who intimated that some orders for acids had been placed by the Pakistan Government on Bombay and Calcutta firms. The Pakistan Delegation would communicate the particulars to the Indian Chief Controller of Exports, who would issue export licence to them within the quota if they are eligible.

(6) Asbestos cement sheets.—No applications had been received for exports when applications had been invited from manufacturers. A licence for 200 tons had been given so far to Asbestos Cement Ltd. It was agreed that licences at the rate of 500 tons a month should be given to the same firm who were the only manufacturers, so that the full quota could be supplied within the period of the agreement.

(7) Paints and Varnishes—Many varieties are decontrolled. It was agreed that licences should issue for half the agreed quantity of paints, enamels and varnishes to be supplied by India in respect of the controlled categories containing lead and zinc. Licences for the remaining half would be in the de-control varieties. The Pakistan Delegation would communicate particulars to the Indian Chief Controller of Exports to enable him to issue licences to eligible parties within the quota.

(8) Leather and footwear and myrobalams were decontrolled items.

(9) Jute manufacturers were allowed to go to Pakistan without export licence being necessary.

(10) Woollen and worsted goods—Practically the whole quantity had been licensed already.

(11) Groundnut oil—Licences have been issued for a portion, but movement has been slow.

(12) Mustard Oil—The quantity licensed was satisfactory but there was complaint regarding actual movement. The Indian figure of actual movement was very much higher than the one of which Pakistan appeared to be aware. To expedite supplies it was decided that all licence-holders should be told by the Government of India that unless they moved the oil within the time for which the licence was valid, the licence would be given to other parties and they would be permanently debarred from getting any licences in the future. It was further agreed that particulars of licences issued and quantities moved would be supplied regularly to the Pakistan authorities.

(13) Tyres and tubes—Approximately half the quantity had been licensed for export by India and it was agreed that the full quantity should be immediately licensed.

(14) Tobacco—There was no export control over tobacco in India. The Pakistan Delegation pointed out, however, that if India insisted on charging the maximum rate of excise duty on the fluecured tobacco, the agreement would in fact be ineffective since the importers would not lift the tobacco on those terms.

(15) Seed potatoes—Pakistan pointed out that although India had agreed to supply one lakh maunds of seed potatoes they had no information of any quantity having moved. India stated that movement of potatoes, both table and seed, from Assam to Pakistan had been made free.

(16) Additional matters.—Pakistan asked for the export of bauxite to Pakistan at the rate of two wagons a month. India agreed to this.

Pakistan asked for a quota of 6,000 tons of linseed oil. India promised to examine the matter and to make a suitable allocation to Pakistan during 1949.

It was agreed that India will do everything possible to ensure that the goods licensed for export actually did move and for this purpose would

(a) issue export licences expeditiously,

(b) take suitable action against parties who having got export licences failed without reasonable excuse to move the goods in time, and

(c) ensure that transport difficulties were removed as expeditiously as possible.

India also agreed to give special consideration to orders placed by the Pakistan Government with suppliers in India within the frame-work of the general export licensing policy, provided timely intimation of Pakistan Government’s orders was received.

Pakistan’s Exports to India

(1) Raw Jute—The Indian Delegation expressed concern over supply position and the slow movement of raw jute to India and considered that in view of final forecast figure issued by East Bengal (Agriculture Ministry) namely 54.7 lakh bales the maintenance by Pakistan of exports of raw jute to other destinations at the level mutually agreed to in Karachi in July last might have the effect of causing a shortfall in the agreed supply to India.

The Pakistan Delegation assured the Indian Delegation that they need not apprehend any reduction in the quantities earmarked for India under the Karachi Agreement. According to Pakistan's latest and most reliable estimates of jute crop the actual crop in Pakistan would not be less than 60 lakh of bales after allowing for local consumption and therefore they were satisfied that Pakistan's exports to other countries on the existing scale would not actually interfere with the delivery of 5 million bales of raw jute to India. In regard to movements, Pakistan agreed to upgrade the priority under which raw jute was moving to the mills in Calcutta to the extent necessary with a view to maintaining movements approximately at 1946 level. In order to improve matters in connection with the movement of jute traffic on the E.B. Railway, representatives of Railway Board (India) agreed to supply Broad Gauge empties to the extent necessary. The General Manager, E.B. Railway should intimate his exact requirements to the East Indian Railway. It was agreed that the position should be reviewed again in the near future. Pakistan also suggested that a Joint Committee consisting of competent representatives of the two railway systems and transport and jute interests concerned should be set up in Calcutta so as to keep the problem of raw jute transport by road, rail and river under constant review.

(2) Raw cotton—India drew attention to the recent orders issued by Pakistan which required that India should not only purchase 325,000 bales of cotton before the 31st January 1949, but should also export them out of Pakistan to India. India took the view that the Karachi Agreement of 20th October, 1948, was clear and unambiguous on the point that India was required only to purchase the cotton by the end of January and there could be no objection to the physical export taking place later. Pakistan agreed that this was the correct interpretation. India stated that as the time-limit for making purchases of raw cotton was very short and Indian importers had to be asked to start buying immediately after the Karachi Agreement of October last, the system of distribution of quotas to India through different shippers which was being adopted by Pakistan was bound to give rise to difficulties in actual practice. For example it might happen that some of the contracts entered into by Indian importers were not with parties who got export licences from Pakistan. It was agreed therefore that for the current licensing period, special consideration should be given to India’s difficulties in this respect and an officer should go from India to Karachi in order that any possible difficulties might be resolved on the spot. Pakistan added that as a substantial portion of the quota was being given to shippers who were exporting before partition it would be possible in most instances to accommodate Indian orders within the framework of Pakistan export licensing.

(3) Food grains.

1. The estimated loss of the rice crop in the normally surplus Provinces of West Punjab, Sind and Baluchistan in the current Kharif year due to floods was shown by Pakistan as in statement attached (Schedule A). As the loss was above 4 annas of the average of the past five years production of rice in the said provinces Pakistan urged that it was not in a position to supply any foodgrains to India.

2. India claimed that the basis for reckoning the percentage of loss should be the total rice crop of the dominion as a whole. In substantiation India stated that in the case of a normal crop in West Pakistan and serious failure in East Pakistan, the dominion of Pakistan would certainly have pleaded extenuation and diverted rice earmarked for India to its Eastern Wing. Pakistan urged that if that interpretation was accepted it would imply that Pakistan would have to supply 175,000 tons of rice even if there was total loss of rice crop in West Pakistan plus a loss of 1 million tons in the rice crop in East Pakistan. Therefore, the intention could not have been to apply the escape clause to the rice crop of Pakistan as a whole.

3. Pakistan Government agreed that if during the current Kharif year the surplus declared by the surplus areas turns out to be in excess of the requirements of the deficit areas in Pakistan and becomes available for export it will be supplied to India and no rice will be exported to any other country.

4. Pakistan also agreed that if a surplus of wheat becomes available for export during Rabi harvest, April-May 1949 Pakistan will supply it to India against its commitment of 175,000 tons of foodgrains under the Karachi Agreement. If the surplus wheat position from that harvest permits it Pakistan will increase this quantity. No wheat will be exported to any other country from the Rabi harvest April-May 1949 until the above commitment has been met.

5. In order to ascertain if a surplus of wheat is available for export to India for the purposes of para.4 above India suggested that if the procurement of wheat in the wheat surplus areas exceeds a figure agreed between the two dominions the excess should be deemed to be available for export. This matter will be settled between the Food Ministries of the two dominions.

6. The restriction against export referred to in paras.3 and 4 will not cover token exports of small quantities, e.g. quantities sent to meet requirements of Pakistan Embassies etc. abroad.

7. Even on the basis suggested by Pakistan in para.1 the loss works out to about 28 percent. The actual figures of acreage and yield of these areas are not available yet. India, therefore, reserves the right to re-open the question of supply of rice by Pakistan if finally the loss of rice works out to less than 25 percent of the average referred to in para. 1.

The estimates of acreage and yield for 1948-49 are not available, but the estimate of loss received by Pakistan Government in terms of rice is as follows:-

- Sind - 150,000 tons
- West Punjab - 1,09,000 tons

(4) Additional matters—It was agreed that the movement of soft wood should be made free of all control on both sides.

Individual cases of difficulties were discussed by the Economic Committee and the following agreed decisions were taken for immediate implementation by both sides:-

1. The following consignments meant for Tripura and held up in East Bengal will be released:-
   - Oil drilling machinery belonging to B.O.C. in respect of which Pakistan Government have already issued orders.
   - One jeep and two trailers going from Calcutta.
   - 1,000 maunds of salt going to Sabroom held up at Dhoomghat.

2. S.D.O. Hbiganj had imposed a ban on the movement of dried fish to Tripura. This should be removed.

3. It was reported that vehicles working for the out-agency of the E.B. Railway at Balu Ghat were not being allowed to enter the railway station. which was in East Bengal. It was agreed that the difficulty should be removed.

(4) It was reported that at Hill railway station some difficulty was still being experienced in the booking of transit cargo as there was no customs official on the Pakistan side. It was agreed that Pakistan will make suitable arrangements to facilitate this movement.

(5) Pakistan agreed to issue orders for the release of 400 wagons reported to be held up at Lal Monir Hat for inviting particulars.

(6) Milk and milk products have recently been brought under export control by the Deputy Chief Controller of Imports and Exports, Chittagong. It was agreed that this was on account of a misunderstanding and the notification will be cancelled at once.

(7) It was reported by Pakistan that an agreement reached in February 1948 regarding the supply of cement from East Bengal to Assam and from India to East Bengal had not been implemented on the Indian side. A permit for 2,000 tons for immediate supply was being issued by India and a regular supply in terms of the original agreement was agreed to by both sides.

(8) Four of the reparation plants allotted to Pakistan are still lying at Bombay. India agreed to issue export permits for them as soon as particulars were received from the Pakistan Government. As the allocation of these plants to Pakistan had been made before they landed at Bombay, Pakistan requested that India should examine the question of exempting these consignments from the payment of Indian import duty. India promised to give a quick reply.

(9) Pakistan mentioned that electric plant and machinery for the electric supply companies in East Bengal ordered through Calcutta firms had been landed in Calcutta before Partition. It was agreed that such plant and machinery will be allowed to be exported to East Bengal. India further agreed to consider sympathetically the question of allowing the export of spares and maintenance stores which are fabricated in Calcutta for the electric supply companies in East Bengal.

(10) India agreed to consider Pakistan’s request for the export of 15 maunds of Bangalee printing type from Calcutta to Pakistan. The particulars will be communicated direct to the Chief Controller of Exports, India.

(11) Pakistan requested that an export of 120 tons of sulphur to East Bengal should be permitted to meet an immediate requirement of certain sugar factories and Pakistan would supply this quantity to India later when direct imports had been made. This was agreed to.

(12) Pakistan complained that movement of commodities like gunny bags and cloth from India to East Bengal was hampered owing to the non-availability of wagons. Pakistan stated that wagons for the movement of foodgrains at stations like Rohanpur, Nachol, and Godagari worked by the Indian railways though situated in East Bengal were not being made available. India promised to see that steps are taken to facilitate the movement of these Commodities and it was agreed that these matters should further be considered at the next meeting of the Railway Operation Committee.

(13) It was agreed to allow cylinders to go out as containers of gas on the understanding that their return will be allowed without any restriction.

2633. Agreements arrived at the Inter – Dominion Conference at PART IV.

Remittance facilities – Customs and Exports and Imports Controls.

(1) Both Dominions will provide reasonable exchange facilities for remittances arising out of this agreement if and when foreign exchange control between India and Pakistan is instituted.

(2) The Pakistan representatives expressed the view that such facilities would be governed by the separate agreement which is at present under negotiations between the two Dominions regarding the terminating of the Reserve Bank of India’s functions as the exchange and currency authority in Pakistan.

(3) The representatives of India, however, were of the view that some special provision would have to be made whether in the agreement referred to by the Pakistan representatives or in an agreement ancillary thereto, in view of the special character and magnitude of remittances arising out of this agreement.

(4) In regard to Customs and Export and Import Controls, arrangements should be made in accordance with the agreement set out in Annexure A.
Annexure A

A. Agreement regarding Customs and Export and Import Controls in respect of Evacuee Property and Government Stores and Vehicles

(1) It is agreed that goods which are allowed to be moved by evacuees from one Dominion to the other in pursuance of the arrangements arrived at between the two Dominions shall be exempt from export and import trade regulations as well as from export and import duties. Such goods will cover the following:

(i) Goods carried in evacuee special trains;
(ii) persons and household effects intended for personal and household use, including articles like motor cars, cycles, gramophones, radios and radiograms, electrical goods, musical instruments, sewing machines, typewriters, private libraries, professional instruments, apparatus and equipment, cattle and other animals, jewellery, currency notes, shares, bond securities, and licensed arms and ammunition. This exemption will cover accompanied as well as unaccompanied goods, provided that such goods shall be covered by a permit granted by an authority to be designated in this behalf by each Dominion;
(iii) goods carried by evacuees proceeding by motor convoys straight from district camps in one Dominion to the other. This exemption will also cover vehicles forming such convoys; and
(iv) trade goods and merchandise including stock in trade belonging to an evacuee excluding gold and silver bullion provided that they are covered by a permit granted by an authority to be designated in this behalf by each Dominion.

(2) Evacuees traveling by evacuee special trains or road convoys should be made to declare whether they have with them any bullion. Searches should be restricted to suspicious cases and should be conducted by Customs officials only in the presence of a responsible officer.

(3) It is agreed that military stores consigned by one Dominion Government to the other, or carried by the M.E.O. or vehicles under the command of the M.E.O. whether carrying such stores or not, shall be exempt from export and import trade regulations as well as from export and import trade duties if any, on production of a certificate from the Ministry of Defence of the Dominion from which they are being exported, or from an officer authorized by such Ministry in this behalf that they are such stores or vehicles.
(4) It is agreed that all Government stores other than those covered by paragraph (3) above, e.g., Railway and P. and T. stores, allocated to each of the two Dominions as a result of partition shall be exempt from export and import trade regulations as well as from export and import duties, if any, on production of a certificate from the Ministry concerned of the Dominion from which they are being exported, or from an officer authorized by such Ministry in this behalf that they are such stores. This exemption will also cover vehicles carrying such stores.

(5) It is agreed that all vehicles crossing the border if covered by Movement Orders issued by the Joint M.E.O. shall be exempt from export and import trade regulations as well as from export and import duties. This exemption does not apply to the goods carried in such vehicles.

(6) It is agreed that all vehicles used by officers of either Dominion in the discharge of their duties and crossing the border shall be exempt from export and import trade regulations as well as from export and import duties on production of a certificate from the High Commissioner or the Deputy High Commissioner of the Dominion to which the officer belongs, or from an officer authorised by them in this behalf that the vehicle is so employed.

(7) Subject to the conditions specified in paragraph (2) above, it is agreed that the Customs authorities will conduct a search on the border only in cases where the import or export of goods is, under the aforesaid provisions, required to be covered by a certificate or permit from an appropriate authority. No searches will however be undertaken in cases covered by paragraphs (3) and (4) above.

(8) It is agreed that if, for any reason, any articles are detained by the Customs authorities, a receipt giving details of the articles detained shall be furnished by these authorities to the owner of the articles.

(9) It is agreed that adequate publicity should be given to the arrangements in both Dominions and machinery set up for receiving complaints of alleged violations and their investigation.

PART VII

1. Inter Dominion Commission. – (1) A permanent Inter-Dominion Commission shall be set up at Secretariat level, which will meet at regular intervals, or according to the urgency of the work before it, in each Dominion in turn.
1. The functions of the Commission will, inter alia, include:

(a) Review and supervision of the working of the agreed arrangements in regard to:

(i) the administration, sale and transfer of evacuee property in both Dominions, and

(ii) the payment and remission of moneys etc., connected therewith.

(b) Consideration of matters other than important questions of policy, that may arise in regard to refugees and evacuees between the two Dominions.

(c) Consideration of other matters referred to it by the Government of either Dominion.

(3) The Commission shall consist of the Secretary and one other officer of the two Dominion Ministries dealing with refugees, with the addition of such officers as it may be necessary to include for the purpose of any meeting.

2. Inter-Dominion Refugees and Evacuees Council. In addition an Inter-Dominion Refugees and Evacuees Council shall be set up composed ordinarily of two Ministers each from India and Pakistan this Council will meet, whenever necessary, to resolve matters on which the Inter-Dominion Commission is unable to agree or to consider questions of policy which require settlement at Ministerial level.
2634. Extract from the letter of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.

New Delhi, March 15, 1949

My dear Nawabzada,

I should like to draw your attention to two leading articles in the Dawn newspaper appearing in the issues of the 12th and 14th March. One of these is entitled “Trade Policy” and the other “Wishful Delhi”. They refer to the Government of India’s desire to encourage free trade as far as possible between Pakistan and India. How far free trade is practicable or desirable it is for the two countries to determine. But for the last many months during inter-Dominion conferences as well as during private conversations, the necessity to remove trade barriers between India and Pakistan has been repeatedly stressed on both sides. We have been anxious to do everything in our power to promote friendly relations between the two countries and to remove causes of conflict. In our anxiety to achieve this we have been thinking more and more of a trade policy which would lead to the removal of such barriers as far as possible. Now that a suggestion to this effect is made, we are treated to the kind of articles in Dawn to which I am drawing your attention. I shall not say much about these articles and I leave it to you to judge whether this is the kind of response that might be called friendly and cooperative. If it is not Pakistan’s desire to go ahead in this or in other directions, we shall naturally adapt our policy accordingly. In view, however, of your repeated statements that Pakistan is anxious and eager to promote friendly and cooperative relations with India, this type of criticism and sarcastic comment does not seem to fit in with your declared policy. In one of your speeches you said that Pakistan is prepared to clap hands, but one hand could not be clapped by itself. The suggestion was, I presume, that the Government of India was not reciprocating in the matter. My own impression has been the exact reverse of this. In any event the way our present approach has been met by Pakistan would seem to indicate that the non-cooperation is on the side of Pakistan. I shall be glad to know what Pakistan’s policy is in regard to trade matters. We have been led to believe by our talks that it was different from what the Dawn newspaper states and we had proceeded on that basis. If we have been misled, I shall be grateful to be corrected by you.

* * *

When Prime Minister Nehru met Pakistan Finance Minister Ghulam Mohammad a few days later on April 1 he told the Prime Minister that Pakistan was eager to remove customs barriers between the two countries, but that this could not be done in a hurry. He instead advocated a step by step approach.
Trade Agreement Between India and Pakistan
Karachi, 24 June 1949.

Whereas the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan are desirous of continuing arrangements regarding the supply by each country of the requirements of the other they have agreed as follows:-

Article I

The Government of India agree to permit the importation from and exportation to Pakistan and the Government of Pakistan agree to permit the exportation to and importation from India, of the commodities and goods specified in Schedules A and E at least up to the limits for each class of goods mentioned therein during the period of this Agreement on the terms and conditions of this Agreement.

Article II

With regard to such commodities and goods specified in the said Schedules as are, or may be, subject to export or import licences, the two Governments agree to grant, upon receipt of applications duly made, export or import licences at least up to the quantitative or monetary limits specified in Schedules A and B in respect of such commodities and goods in accordance with the law of the country and regulations and administrative practices of the Government granting the licences.

Article III

During the currency of this Agreement, the two Governments may, by mutual agreement, alter, extend or supplement the Schedules to this Agreement.

Article IV

Articles I and II of this Agreement are without prejudice to the right of traders of either country entering into business transactions in respect of goods and commodities not forming part of this Agreement subject to, and in conformity with, the laws and regulations of either country for the time being in force.

Article V

The two Governments agree to render all reasonable assistance in facilitating the export and import of goods and commodities included in Schedules ‘A’ and ‘B’ and to consult each other in respect of any matter arising from, or in connection with, the exchange of commodities and goods between the two countries during the currency of and in accordance with this Agreement.
Article VI
Neither party shall re-export to any other country any scheduled commodity obtained by either country from the other in the form in which it was imported. Change of packing does not constitute change of form for the purpose of this Article.

Article VII
Subject to seasonal considerations and delivery requirements indicated in Schedules ‘A’ and ‘B’ each country shall spread its purchases as uniformly and conveniently as possible.

Article VIII
The two Governments agree to promote the contacts between the trade interests of the two countries and undertake to give every reasonable facility for the import and export of commodities, and in particular to facilitate the use of the routes and methods of transportation which are most economical and convenient.

Article IX
This Agreement, subject to ratification by the two Governments, shall remain in force for a period of twelve months from the 1st July 1949 to the 30th June 1950, except where otherwise specified in the Schedules.

Article X
In order to implement the Agreement in a smooth and orderly way the two Governments will exchange monthly progress reports and arrange meetings every other month between representatives of the two countries.

In accordance with Article V of the Trade Agreement between India and Pakistan signed on the 24th June, 1949 the question of facilitating the transport of goods and commodities included in the Schedules to the Agreement was examined.

Coal. - Mr. Faruque stated that on the basis of the firm commitment of 1,70,000 tons per month Pakistan’s programme of requirements of coal from August 1949 onwards would be approximately 89,200 tons for West Pakistan and 80,800 tons for East Pakistan per month.

It was agreed that the Government of India would place on an average 80 wagons per day for 26 days in a month for the all-rail movement of coal to West Pakistan. This would mean the transport of nearly 45,760 tons per month to West Pakistan by the all-rail movement. The balance of Pakistan’s requirements, i.e. 43,400 tons would move by the rail-cum-sea route from Calcutta to Karachi.
No difficulty was anticipated in meeting the entire requirements of East Pakistan by the all-rail route provided the East Bengal Railway would accept the traffic without prejudice to the existing agreed quota of 100 broad gauge full wagon-loads a day of all traffic for stations in the Indian Dominion.

In regard to the additional 30,000 tons of coal per month which according to Schedule B to the Agreement, India had undertaken to make every effort to supply, if transport could be arranged, it was agreed that if some additional quantities were required for East Pakistan, India would make every endeavour to effect the necessary dispatches by rail provided sufficient advance notice was given by Pakistan. It was further agreed that India would facilitate as far as possible dispatches to West Pakistan by rail-cum-sea route for some additional shiploads provided that Pakistan gave sufficient advance notice of such additional requirements.

Other Commodities.—No difficulty was anticipated either from the Indian side or from the Pakistan side in moving the quantities of other goods covered by the Agreement. Both sides should facilitate easy and expeditious passing of wagons by Customs on the frontier.

Jodhpur Railway.—It was agreed that through goods booking between North Western Railway and Indian Railway over the Jodhpur railway should be resumed from the 1st August, 1949.

W.D. Wagons.—It was agreed that the division of W.D. wagons between India and Pakistan, when it actually took (takes) place, should be by units and not by individual wagon numbers. It was further agreed that the actual division of those wagons should be finalized as early as possible. Meanwhile each country was free to use, and should use, such wagons in her possession. It was also agreed that when the division was agreed upon, the wagons rehabilitated by either country within the total number due to her would not be liable to be surrendered to the other country.

Statement made by Minister of Commerce K. C. Neogy in the Constituent Assembly (Legislative).

New Delhi, December 24, 1949.

With your permission, Sir, I should like to take this opportunity of making a statement explaining in some detail the latest developments in our trade and commercial relations with Pakistan. The House is aware that these have been based on a series of Trade Agreements, the last of which was entered into in June 1949. these Agreements proceeded on a recognition by both countries of the importance of continuing arrangements regarding the supply by each country of the requirements of the other and to do all that is necessary for the purpose. Thus, under the 1949 agreement, which is valid for the period July 1949 to June 1950, Pakistan agreed to make available to India four million bales of raw jute and 450,000 bales of cotton, while India was to make available to Pakistan 150,000 bales of cotton textiles, 80,000 tons of steel and 2 million tons of coal. I have mentioned only the principal commodities. I should add in this connection that India is herself an importer of large quantities of steel from the hard currency countries, nevertheless we agreed to supply steel to Pakistan in order to preserve as far as possible the traditional pattern of trade.

Soon after the 1949 Trade Agreement was signed, it became clear that Pakistan was not serious about implementing it. For instance, far from helping the import of cotton textiles from India into Pakistan, they actually took measures to restrict this trade. It is stated in the Agreement that the import of Indian textiles into Pakistan was governed by Open General License. But the Indian textiles were frozen on arrival while textiles from other countries were allowed to be sold freely. Thus there was positive discrimination against Indian textile a discrimination which they continued to maintain in spite of representations. Towards the end of September we were suddenly informed that the O.G.L. for the import of several commodities from India including textiles had been suspended temporarily. This was followed by a proposal to cancel the O.G.L. for mill-made textiles from all countries including India. Not only were our protests ignored, but Pakistan went a step further. On the 12th November Pakistan published by notification a list of countries from which no import of textiles would be allowed. India was included in the list. The Inter-Dominion Agreement for free movement of certain types of handloom cloth was never implemented by them, although we on our part continued to import handloom cloth from East Bengal.

In spite of the difficulties over textiles, India continued to buy jute in normal way and there were no difficulties to start with. I should explain at this stage that it has always been the custom for Indian buyers to purchase jute through agents whom they finance. As a rule the agents pay for the jute on the spot in Pakistan. In this way as much as 12 lakhs of bales of raw jute had been purchased in Pakistan by the middle of September. Since then Indian buyers have found it virtually impossible to make fresh purchases of Pakistan jute owing to its high cost. Meanwhile the movement of jute already purchased began to be interfered with. These difficulties became even more acute after the establishment of the Pakistan Jute Board. This body has not only fixed minimum prices but is also exercising certain checks on exports of raw jute. Under their orders as much as 5 lakh bales out of the 12 lakh bales purchased by India have been held up in Pakistan. All this jute is clearly Indian property, having been paid for long before the Jute Board had been established. A large portion of this jute has been passed by the Pakistan customs; the Pakistan export duty has been paid and the jute had actually been loaded in barges and flats. The hold-up of this jute is thus inexplicable and clearly indefensible. Repeated attempts were made by the Indian buyers and their agents to get this jute released. Claims were made to the Jute Board both verbally and in writing. The steamer companies produced before the Jute Board evidence regarding dates of loading. All this produced no result except admissions in principle by the Jute Board that the jute which is Indian property would be released. To find out what precisely had to be done to secure the release of this jute, the Indian Jute Mills Association sent a representative to discuss the matter with the Board, but his visit proved equally fruitless. It became clearer every day that the formalities regarding proof of transactions were only being used as a pretext to detain the jute. Numerous buyers who were naturally anxious to comply with all necessary formalities individually approached the Jute Board and other authorities for clarification and advice about the action expected of them, but none of them was given any clear ideas about the precise formalities to be complied with or the nature of the proof of payments, contracts, etc., which they had to produce to the Jute Board. Others wrote to the Jute Board on these matters, but their letters were left unanswered. All this time the jute had been deteriorating. The Government of India, therefore, brought these facts to the notice of the Pakistan Government and requested them to release the jute immediately, and to facilitate a quick decision even went to the length of offering arbitration to settle outstanding claims on either side. But the reply from Pakistan was that the proposal for arbitration was premature, that the reasons for the detention of jute had been misrepresented to us, that detention of jute was actually a nuisance to Pakistan, and that Indian buyers had failed to take advantage of their simple and easy procedure for making claims. These statements are completely at variance with the facts which I have already stated. The value of the Indian owned jute lying in Pakistan for over three months runs into crores of rupees. When this money is locked up, when the jute is lying exposed and is deteriorating and losing value everyday, it cannot be seriously suggested that the owners have failed to make their claims, or that the procedure is easy and simple as represented by Pakistan. The inference is irresistible that the procedure if any, is really designed to hold up all movements of jute.

The detention and obstruction to movement of jute is not confined to Pakistan grown jute bought by Indian nationals. Such obstruction has of late been extended to Indian jute in transit from Assam through Pakistan to Calcutta. A number of barges and flats loaded with Assam jute are also being held up at various points in Pakistan. To our knowledge there are thirty of them, carrying nearly a hundred thousand bales. The detention of Pakistan jute bought by Indian nationals, taken together with the obstruction to the movement of Indian jute in transit through Pakistan can lead only to one conclusion, namely, that Pakistan is deliberately denying jute to Indian jute mills with a view to exercising economic pressure on the industry. There have been many other cases of hold up of transit goods, particularly of railway stores required for the Assam railway line.

To make matters worse, the Pakistan Government have in some cases called upon the Steamer Companies to unload the barges in Pakistan, the result of which would be further deterioration of the jute. In any case, detention of these barges is immobilizing river transport and causing congestion on the riverways which constitute the main artery of communication between Calcutta and Assam, apart from such action resulting in the infliction of hardship and losses on the steamer companies.

The supply of jute by Pakistan to India, and of coal by India to Pakistan are among the cardinal features of the trade agreement. India has throughout consistently fulfilled her obligation of supplying coal. Pakistan, on the other hand, far from facilitating the supply of jute is deliberately obstructing such supply to India.

The Trade Agreement, which both countries accepted only a few months ago as the basis of their mutual commercial relations is thus being honoured by Pakistan only to the extent of receiving in full their monthly quota of coal. Some days ago, we pointed out to the Pakistan Government that unless there is reciprocity we shall have to reconsider our attitude to the agreement itself. The Pakistan Government in their reply have argued that the only obstacle in the way of fulfillment of the agreement is India’s failure to recognize their rate of exchange. This is not understandable at all. If Pakistan wishes to maintain a certain rate of exchange with other currencies, it is obviously her business to buy and sell Indian Rupees. On the other hand, banks and individuals are prevented from doing so, except at the rate of exchange notified by Pakistan. Apparently, no one is able to do business on these terms. In this connection Honourable Members will recall that for sometime after devaluation trade continued between the two countries, although on a reduced scale, until the Pakistan Rupee came to be quoted at par with or even below the Indian Rupee.
It was then that the Pakistan Government issued orders prohibiting their Banks to buy or sell Indian Rupees except at the rate of exchange notified by them. Any impediment to trade and commerce on account of exchange difficulties is therefore due to Pakistan’s own regulations. Banks in India are free to buy or sell Pakistan Rupees, without restriction.

We had on more than one occasion in the past suggested a Customs Union or other similar arrangements with Pakistan but there has been no response whatever. A formal and duly ratified Agreement which had resulted from my personal discussions with the Pakistan Finance Minister in March last contemplated a conference to be held as soon as possible to find ways and means of relaxing import and export regulations to encourage and expand trade between the two countries. No conference has, however, yet been held. It has been postponed on some ground or other advanced by the Pakistan Government. Meanwhile, we have tried to discharge our obligations under the Trade Agreement. But the operation of the Trade Agreement amounts now only to the export of coal from India. There is no other trade between the two countries. On the other hand an enormous quantity of jute purchased and paid for by our nationals is being deliberately detained. The Government of India decided not to allow this situation to continue indefinitely. A telegram was therefore sent to Pakistan on the 20th of this month in which the offer of arbitration was reiterated and Pakistan requested immediately to release all our raw jute. Till yesterday morning we had no reply. We were, therefore, compelled to suspend temporarily dispatches of coal to Pakistan from yesterday and we have informed the Pakistan Government accordingly. We have also informed the Pakistan Government that as soon as resumption of trade is rendered possible by them particularly by the release of raw jute, we shall be prepared not only to resume supplies of coal but even to make up the short supplies.

I hope, Sir, that in the circumstances stated by me, the Government will have the fullest support of the House in the action taken by them.

2638. Agreement between India and Pakistan on Trade.
Karachi, April 21, 1950.

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan being desirous of reviving trade on a balanced basis between their two countries have, through their respective representatives, who met in Karachi on the 19th-21st April 1950, agreed as a first step as under:-

2. The Government of Pakistan through their Jute Board shall arrange to supply to the Chairman of the Indian Jute Mills Association, on the specified dates, 40,00,000 maunds (old measure of weight—roughly 37.50 kg) of raw jute in accordance with the terms and conditions given in the annexure to this Agreement.

3. The Government of India undertake to arrange the supply of 20,000 tons of jute manufactures of Indian origin to the Jute Board of the Pakistan Government in accordance with the terms and conditions stated in the annexure and grant licences for this purpose where necessary with maximum dispatch.

4. In addition, the two Governments shall facilitate the purchase by Pakistan from India through normal trade channels of goods and commodities given below:

5. The two Governments agree to use their good offices to ensure prompt deliveries of the goods mentioned in clauses 2, 3, and 4 above.
6. Transactions under clauses 2, 3 and 4 of this Agreement shall take place in Indian rupee for which a separate account shall be maintained by the State Bank of Pakistan with the Reserve Bank of India. The value of goods and commodities purchased by Pakistan under clauses 3 and 4 of the Agreement shall, as near as possible, be equal to the value of jute purchased by India.

7. In addition to the commodities mentioned above the two Governments agree that trade in the following commodities shall be permitted to take place without import, export and exchange restrictions on either side in respect of transactions in these commodities, to the extent that traders in either country are able to finance exchange of goods without any assistance from either Government in the shape of releases of foreign exchange:-

(i) To and from India and Pakistan.
   - Vegetables.
   - Fruits – fresh and dry.
   - Fish – fresh and dry.
   - Poultry.
   - Eggs.
   - Milk and Milk products.
   - Betel leaf (pan)

(ii) From Pakistan to India.
   - Cotton seed.
   - Soda Ash.
   - Hides and skins.
   - Handloom cloth.
   - Betelnuts.

From India to Pakistan.
- Leather.
- Spices.
- Myrabolam.
- Soaps other than washing soaps.
- Paints and varnishes.
- Drugs, chemicals and acids.
- Cigarettes, bidis and matches.

Sewing machines.
Electric fans.
Silk and artificial silk fabrics.
Glassware.
Bauxite.
Umbrellas.
Silica sand.
Washing soap. For East Bengal.
Lanterns.
Handloom cloth.

Following descriptions:-

Saronges, Kailiez, Visakuthu, Sarongs, Burma Lungis, Kasturia, Kattaries, Pattanies, Gingams, Ammavarikuppams, Bambans, Jublees.

8. The goods imported under this Agreement shall not be re-exported by either country.

9. (a) The two Governments undertake to give every reasonable facility for the import and export of commodities, and in particular to facilitate the use of the routes and methods of transportation which are most economical and convenient.

(b) In order to facilitate resumption of normal rail movement and to ensure that transportation difficulties are promptly attended to a meeting of the representatives of the Railway authorities of the two Governments shall be arranged as soon as possible.

10. Both parties shall arrange to meet as frequently as possible and in any case once in a month in order to:

(a) examine the progress in the movement of goods on either side;

(b) ensure that a balance of trade is maintained in the transactions covered by this Agreement;

(c) settle any issues that may arise in connection with this Agreement; and

(d) explore possibilities of extending the scope of this Agreement.

11. The Government of Pakistan agree to supply 1,50,000 tons of wheat to the Government of India at a price to be settled between the two Governments for which purpose negotiations will be opened as soon as possible.
12. This Agreement shall come into force with immediate and shall remain in force up to 31st July 1950 but shall continue to apply beyond that date in respect of such goods and commodities specified in clauses 2, 3 and 4 above as are not supplied before the expiry of that date for good and valid reasons. It shall be deemed to have been ratified by both Governments unless either Government notified to the contrary before the 30th April 1950.

The Committee reviewed the question of trade between the inhabitants of the border areas adjoining the Indo-Pakistan frontier between East Bengal on the one hand and the States of West Bengal, Assam and Tripura on the other.

The Committee felt that a distinction was desirable between full scale commercial trading in the goods produced in these areas and small scale trading between the inhabitants of these areas.

The former was not really border trade. Thus the export on a commercial scale of fruits grown in Khasi and Jaintia Hills to East Bengal for general consumption could be regulated by the general terms and conditions governing trade between the two countries. It was open to the two Governments to agree to make special concessions to facilitate such trade. In so far as the difficulty was one of foreign exchange, it should be possible to make suitable arrangements whereby there would be an approximate balance between such imports and exports. For example, if betel leaves were to be exported from one country to the other the foreign exchange commitment could be reduced by allowing the import of betel nuts or some other similar commodity of equal value. This problem was, however, left by the Committee for consideration in the context of the general agreement which the main conference may come to.

The Committee confined itself to the problem of border trade in the narrow sense. The main object of such trade would be to provide certain reasonable facilities for the inhabitants of the bordering areas to obtain their daily necessities by trading, which would be necessarily on a small scale.

One of the main problems to be considered in this context was that any facilities given should not encourage smuggling and trafficking in currency notes. After a full examination of the problem the following were the main conclusions which emerged:-

(a) The objective should be to arrange a balanced trade.

(b) It would be desirable to divide the entire border for the purpose of facilitating border trade into small sectors because the nature of commodities entering into the border trade varied from place to place. The following sectors were tentatively suggested:-
1. Lushai Hills- Chittagong Hill Tracts.
2. Tripura- East Bengal.
5. Rest of India -East Bengal Border.

(c) It was felt that the people living around these borders who held a Visa should be allowed to do some small scale trading without the need to pass through customs check points. To insist that they must carry commodities only through customs points would virtually mean denying to them the facility which the ‘A’ Visa is supposed to provide. Further, in some cases, the people concerned would have to make fairly long journeys over hills in order to pass through these check points. Therefore, permission for border trade should be for trading across the border rather than through check posts.

(d) In order that this concession is not abused, it should be confined to holders of ‘A’ Visas and there should be a definite list of commodities limited by quantity which each person could carry across with him when crossing the border. In drawing up a final list it may be necessary to consult local authorities. The Committee, however, felt that the list should not be confined to local produce and the principle should be one of necessity. The commodities like salt and oil may have to be covered though they would not be produced locally. The point to guard against, however, would be that since some of these items may be of imported origin, the quantity on either side should be evenly balanced.

(e) The question of rice was specifically discussed. Neither country can afford to export rice. On the other hand, if approximately equal quantities of rice were allowed to move in both directions, the result might be advantageous to both countries. Thus rice could move from the Chittagong Hill Tracts to Lushai Hills, while it could move from Tripura to East Bengal.

(f) Subject to the quantitative and qualitative limits the holders of ‘A’ Visas should be free to move goods at any point of the border where their Visas are valid and no question of customs duties etc. should arise for such trade.

(g) In general, most people engaged in such trade would sell what they produced and buy what they need across the border. But an exact balance was not possible from day to day. Sometimes especially in the case of seasonal products, sales would exceed purchases and the balance would have to be carried in the shape of cash. It was agreed that the existing limits of Rs. 50/- in Indian currency and Rs. 50/- in Pakistan currency at present applicable to passengers should apply to these people also and larger sums in cash should not be allowed to be carried.

The Committee considered what further safeguards were necessary to prevent an abuse of these concessions. It was felt that suitable checks could be devised in the case of critical commodities such as rice by having some kind of a rationing arrangement linked with the ‘A’ visas. Furthermore, in the light of the experience gained, the quantitative and qualitative limits could be revised from time to time by consultation between the two Governments once in three months or so. Subject to these safeguards, the Committee felt that the danger of trafficking in currencies would not be aggravated by these concessions. On the contrary if two way trade was encouraged, the currency earned would be spent in buying goods rather than sold in the black market. In any case even as things are a certain amount of such trade continues to take place. By regularizing it and properly defining its scope there was much less danger of smuggling and other evils than by driving it underground.

The Committee felt that if the two Governments concerned accepted the approach outlined above in principle, details could be worked out in further discussions at which representative of the local areas would naturally have to be present.

2640. Agreed Decisions following discussions between the Leaders of the Indian and Pakistan Trade Delegations.

New Delhi, March 20, 1953.

(a) To enable Pakistan to plan her production of raw jute, India has indicated that, according to the best estimates, she will need at least 18 lakhs of bales per year from Pakistan. Government of India have agreed to give import licences for this amount in each of the three jute years commencing July 1, 1953. Should, however, larger quantities be required by India, Pakistan will facilitate the export of raw jute up to 25 lakhs bales in a year. The trade will be through normal channels.

(b) India will provide improved facilities for the export of coal to Pakistan and the movement of coal by rail to West Pakistan will be increased.

(c) The problem of trade between the inhabitants of the areas adjoining the Indo-Pakistan border between East Bengal on the one hand, and West Bengal, Assam and Tripura on the other was recognised as needing special treatment. Certain principles to regulate such trade have been formulated and on approval by the respective Governments, there will be a further Conference before the end of April to translate them into practice.

(d) It was agreed that at a later date, there should be further discussions between the two Governments with a view to widening the scope and expanding the volume of trade between the two countries.

I. Resumption of rail traffic via additional rail links between West Pakistan and India.

It was agreed that rail traffic should be restored on the following routes: -

(i) Kasur - Ferozepur
(ii) Khokrapar - Munabao

The General Managers of North Western Railway (Pakistan) and Northern Railway (India) should meet at an early dated and work out the details for the resumption of traffic on these routes in conjunction with the representatives of customs and police authorities. The target date for the resumption of this traffic should be the 1st June, 1955.
II. Resumption of through passenger service between West Pakistan and India.

It was agreed that Railways and other departments concerned of the two countries should work out the details for providing suitable through passenger services between the following points:

(i) Lahore and Calcutta via Saharanpur;
(ii) Lahore and Delhi;
(iii) Lahore and Bombay via Delhi; and
(iv) Hyderabad (Sind) and Ahmedabad via Khokrapar.

It was further agreed that every endeavour should be made to commence the through service between Lahore and Calcutta from the 1st of June 1955.

III. Resumption of movement of cross traffic between stations in India on the Eastern Zone via the East Pakistan route.

It was agreed to resume through booking of this traffic with effect from the 1st of May 1955 in accordance with the details outlined in Appendix ‘A’.

IV. Customs and Police checks.

The Ministers were anxious that a rational system of customs and police inspection, which would substantially minimize the inconvenience and delay to the passengers, should be adopted.

It was, therefore, agreed that:

(a) In regard to passenger traffic moving between Amritsar and Lahore, these examinations should be made at Amritsar and Lahore and not at intermediate border points;

(Note: Instructions have already been issued to the respective General Managers to fix up the details of these arrangements in conjunction with the Police and Customs authorities of the two countries).

(b) Arrangements for Police and Customs check should be so adjusted on all the routes that they are completed, as far as possible, within an hour.

V. It was agreed that all payments hereafter between the two railway systems should be adjusted from month to month between the railways concerned and the balances paid up currently. These transactions should remain independent of other Government to Government transactions and should conform to recognized business principles.
VI. It was agreed that the two Governments should ratify these decisions as early as possible and in any case before the end of April 1955 and that in the meantime, the railway authorities concerned should initiate action to implement them in time.

APPENDIX - ‘A’

Goods traffic from India to India via Eastern Bengal Railway (Pakistan).

(i) The above traffic will be resumed in accordance with the conditions mentioned in the minutes (copy attached), of the meeting held at Calcutta on 4th and 5th April 1955 between the Railway and Customs officials concerned of India and Pakistan. It is further agreed that to attract traffic and to enable the Indian Railways to allocate regularly an agreed quota of traffic to the above route, the E.B. Railway shall quote special rates via border station to via border station which will be derived by giving a special rebate of 30% over their existing rates between the border stations concerned, with such exception as may be necessary in the case of any particular commodity to conform to what the traffic can bear.

(ii) The cross traffic over the E.B. Railway will be resumed from the 1st May, 1955. As the examination of exceptions may take time, the E.B. Railway will quote, as an immediate measure, special rates on the basis of 30% reduction mentioned in (i) above. Exception, if any, will be made later.

Minutes of the meeting held in Eastern Railway Headquarters, Calcutta on 4th and 5th April, 1955 to discuss the feasibility of restoration of cross traffic across the Eastern Bengal Railway.

PRESENT:-

Pakistan Officials

1. Mr. M.J. Chughati, General Manager,
   Eastern Bengal Railway.
2. Mr. M.K. Mohiuddin,
Chief Traffic, Manager, Eastern Bengal Railway.

3. Mr. S.M. Raza, Financial Adviser and Chief Accounts Officers, Eastern Bengal Railway.

4. Mr. S.M. Abbasi, Collector of Central Excise and Land Customs.
Excise and Land Customs.

Indian Officials

1. Mr. B.Arora, General Manager,
North Eastern Railway.

2. Mr. B. C. Malik, Director, Rail Movements, Railway Board.

3. Mr. P. K. Sarkar, Financial Advisor and Chief Accounts Officer, Eastern Railwlay.

4. Mr. J. S. Mathur, Chief Operating Superintendent,
North Eastern Railway.

6. Mr. H.P. Sen Gupta, Assistant Collector, Land Customs.

------------------

It was recognized that all the three modes of transport, viz:-

(i) All India Link route to and from North Bengal and Assam,

(ii) Steamer route through Indian and Pakistan waters to and from North Bengal and Assam, and

(iii) Route across the Eastern Bengal Railway should be availed of.

In regard to movement by the route across the Eastern Bengal Railway, the following agreements were reached:-

1. Routes over which Cross Traffic will be permitted to move through the Eastern Bengal Railway.

   (a) Via Darsana – via Chilhati.

   (b) Via Darsana – via Mogalhat.

   (c) Via Biral – via Mogalhat.
The Indian representatives enquired whether it would be possible for the Eastern Bengal Railway to move traffic on the Bhurangamari – Sonahat Section so that traffic via Mogalhat can also move directly to Golakganj. The Eastern Bengal Railway representatives stated that a bridge on this section was damaged during the floods and it will take considerable time to repair it. If, however, substantial traffic was expected to move that way, they would consider the restoration of the section. The Indian representatives stated that most of via Mogalhat traffic could pass over this section.

II. Volume of Traffic.

1. The Indian representatives roughly estimated that the traffic will amount to:

   (a) One Broad Gauge train–load a day of about 60 Broad Gauge wagons from via Darsana to via Mogalhat – (goods to be transshipped at Santahar); and

   (b) About 15 Broad Gauge wagon loads a day from via Darsana to via Chilhati. This traffic is expected to develop to about 30 Broad Gauge wagons a day as soon as adequate transshipment facilities are provided at Haldibari by the North Eastern Railway.

   Substantial traffic is not expected to materialize on the other routes.

2. All traffic to North Bengal and Assam is at present planned and co–ordinate by the Director, Rail Movements, Railway Board, in consultation with the Governments of West Bengal and Assam and other important users in the area. This arrangement will continue and the Director, Rail Movements will now also plan for traffic across the Eastern Bengal Railway and in doing so, will consult the Chief Traffic Manager, Eastern Bengal Railway as and When necessary.

   In allocating the traffic to the three modes of transport, the Eastern Bengal Railway will be allotted a reasonable share of high – rated traffic.

3. The Eastern Bengal Railway representatives enquired what the traffic in the reverse direction would be. It was explained by the Indian representatives that even on the North Eastern Railway traffic to North Bengal and Assam is considerably heavier than return traffic and empties are worked to certain points in the reverse direction. The position will substantially be the same in respect of the new routes via the Eastern Bengal Railway. There was however, a possibility of a substantial amount of timber in logs being offered in the reverse direction if facilities for transshipment could be provided at Santahar. The Eastern Bengal Railway representatives promised to examine this and advise the North Eastern Railway and the Director, Rail Movements of the position. There may also be a possibility of bamboos moving from the hill section via Latu and Darsana.

III. Operating Arrangements:

1. The traffic moving via Santahar will be offered by the Broad Gauge section in three groups, viz: (i) for destinations between Gitaldaha and Alipur – Duar Jn. inclusive (also Bamanhat), (ii) stations east of Alipur – Duar Jn. and (iii) stations north and west of Alipur – Duar Jn. Eastern Bengal Railway will, after transshipment, marshal the goods trains in the same three groups before handing them over at Lalmanirhat.

2. The Eastern Bengal Railway will exercise running power on the Broad Gauge Section from the Pakistan – India border to Haldibari.

3. On the Mogalhat side, North Eastern Railway manned trains are running at present only up to Mogalhat. With the re-introduction of cross traffic running powers would be exercised by the North Eastern Railway, as in the past, up to Lalmanirhat.

4. At Haldibari, broad gauge shunting will be performed by the Eastern Bengal Railway locomotives operated by the Eastern Bengal Railway crew under the directions of Traffic shunting staff of the North Eastern Railway. The charges for these locomotives shall be paid for on an hourly basis.

5. Eastern Bengal Railway are at present maintaining a credit balance with Indian Railways both on Metre Gauge and Broad Gauge. With the responsibility for finding rolling stock for carrying cross traffic they may need to adjust these balances to some extent. It this is found necessary, they will give adequate notice.

IV. Commercial Matters:

1. Rates: Class, schedule and special rates, if any, over the Eastern Bengal Railway portion by the various routes will be calculated by Eastern Bengal Railway in terms of Indian currency and communicated to Eastern and North Eastern Railways who will then issue necessary foreign rate circulars to their staff.

Except in cases where a modification of rates is found necessary on account of a change in the basic rates structure or in the basis of calculation of such rates in terms of Indian currency, no change will be effected without prior consultation.

It was recognized that there will be no manipulation of rates by any party with a view to altering the balance of movements between the various routes.

2. Booking: All traffic moving across the Eastern Bengal Railway shall be booked freight pre–paid.

Smalls traffic, if booked across the Eastern Bengal Railways will be handed over in sealed wagons.

Arms and ammunition and military stores and equipment will not be booked across the Eastern Bengal Railway.

3. Claims: The responsibility for claims arising in respect of consignments will be determined in terms of the “Fundamental and Subsidiary Rules for interchange of traffic between India and Pakistan” in force from time to time. All other rules in respect of interchange of Railway traffic and rolling stock etc. contained in the Fundamental and Subsidiary Rules will equally apply except that Note 2 to Rule (7) of Annexure I will now be treated as cancelled.

4. Documentation: (a) Separate series of Invoice Books (of distinctive colour) will be used by all stations in booking such traffic. It will also be arranged by the Eastern and North Eastern Railways that wagons are labeled with distinctive labels. Usual seals will be used and any additional seals required by the Customs authorities will also be provided.

The invoice will be prepared in six foils, as follows:

(i) Booking Station Record.
(ii) Railway Receipt.
(iii) Border Station Invoice.
(iv) Invoice for Destination Station (Through Invoice).
(v) Junction Invoice.
(vi) Accounts Foil - to be specially forwarded by the forwarding station to the combined Foreign Traffic Accounts Office, Calcutta. This copy will be attached to the Division – Sheet, which will be submitted by the Financial Adviser & Chief Accounts Officer, Eastern Railway, Calcutta to the Financial Adviser & Chief Accounts Officer, Eastern Bengal Railway, Chittagong.

(b) Five copies of in – transit manifest for customs requirements will also be prepared by the booking station for each invoice. These manifests will contain the following particulars:–

(i) Invoice No.
(ii) Station From.
(iii) Station to.
(iv) Name of Consignor.
(v) Name of Consignee.
(vi) Number of packages.
(vii) Description of contents.
(viii) Weight.

Four copies of these manifests will be securely pinned to the Junction and Border Invoices and sent to the first customs station.

V. Financial Settlement:

1. As regards payments to the Eastern Bengal Railway for carrying the cross traffic, it was suggested by the Eastern Bengal Railway representatives that some special arrangements will have to be devised to effect prompt settlement. An arrangement already exists according to which the value of and freight on coal from India for Pakistan are paid in India currency at Calcutta out of an irrevocable credit placed with a Bank at Calcutta by the Pakistan Government. On the same lines the Indian Railways will place an irrevocable revolving credit with a bank at Chittagong in favour of the Eastern Bengal Railway and authorize the Eastern Bengal Railway each month to draw upon this credit for its dues.

The amount of this irrevocable credit in the initial stage may be fixed at Rupees three lakhs, subject to modification on periodical review in the light of traffic actually carried, the underlying principle being that this credit should not be less than the freight earned by the Eastern Bengal Railway during any month.
2. The Eastern and North Eastern Railways will submit cross traffic Division sheets to the Eastern Bengal Railway three times a month and an authority of payment will accompany the last Division sheet for the month and on this authority the Eastern Bengal Railway will draw upon the credit opened by the Indian Railways in the bank at Chittagong.

3. Any discrepancies detected either by the Financial Adviser & Chief Accounts Officer of the Eastern Bengal Railway or the Financial Adviser & Chief Accounts Officer of Eastern North Eastern Railways on check of these Division Sheets /Invoices will be communicated to the Financial Adviser & Chief Accounts Officer concerned for acceptance. On communication of this acceptance, the adjustment will be made by the Financial Adviser & Chief Accounts Officer, Eastern/North Eastern Railway in the account to be submitted in the month following.

VI. Customs Procedure:

1. Through wagons will be sealed by the Indian Customs at the last Customs – sealing station in India and by the Pakistan Customs at the first Customs station in Pakistan. Seals will be liable to be checked at any Customs Station on the in – transit route. If seals are found broken at any time wagons will be detained and a complete inventory of the goods taken in the presence of Railways and Customs representatives. In any case, the Customs Officer in charge of the last Customs Station en route in Pakistan will verify the seals and certify that they are intact.

2. At the station of entry in Pakistan, in the case of all trains carrying in – transit cargo, the railway guard will present to the Customs Officer copies of the manifests referred to in para IV. 4. (b). These will serve as in – transit manifests. The Customs Officer will retain one copy and return the other copy duly stamped to the guard for presentation to the Customs Officer at the station of exit. These two copies will be forwarded by the Customs officers of the stations of entry and exit to the Land Customs Audit Department for check. No other customs documents will be required by the Pakistan Customs.

3. Similarly two copies of the in – transit manifests will also be presented to the Indian Customs station of exit. The Indian Customs Officer will retain one copy, stamp the other, put the stamped copies in a sealed cover and hand over this sealed cover to the train’s guard for onward transmission through the Eastern Bengal Railway to the Indian Customs Station at the point of entry. No other documents will be required by the Indian Customs.

4. In the case of goods to be transshipped in Pakistan from broad – gauge to metre gauge and vice versa, the wagons will be sealed by the Indian and the Pakistan Customs to begin with, but these seals will be broken by Pakistan Customs at the transshipment station viz. Santahar. A register will be maintained by the Eastern Bengal Railway at this station, in which particulars of goods transshipped with the Nos. of wagons will be entered. The Customs Officer will attest this register after every transshipment operation, and prepare two copies for his own records. Transshipment will be done under Customs supervision. The railway officials at Santahar will arrange with the Customs for the posting of the required number of officers. One copy of the transshipment record will be sent by the local Customs in weekly batches to the Land Customs Audit Department for check with the in – transit manifests.

5. In case of any discrepancies noticed in transshipment cargo, intimation will be sent by the Customs Officer, Santahar to the Indian Customs Officers of the two stations of exit and entry. The Eastern Bengal Railway will also send an intimation to the Indian Railway concerned. Goods will not be detained on account of such discrepancies, unless prohibited goods like gold or silver bullion, opium and dangerous drugs or arms and ammunition are found to be carried. Indian Customs seals will not be broken except in the event of information being received by Pakistan Customs that such prohibited goods are being carried in a particular consignment, provided further that the seals can be broken in such cases only under the orders of an officer not below the rank of an Assistant Collector, who will report the case to the Collector of Central Excise and Land Customs, Chittagong.

6. In order to avoid the Indian and Pakistan Customs having to deal with individual consignors and consignees of goods which may involve delay, the Indian Railways will act as the agents of the owners of the goods for the in – transit formalities, and at the time of booking of goods will take a declaration from the owner authorizing them to act as his agents for this purpose and indemnifying the Railway against penalties imposed by the Customs authorities of either country on account of contravention of Customs and allied laws and regulations. This declaration may be in such form as the legal advisers of the Railways may recommend.

7. The Indian Railways may depute an officer at Santahar to act as their agent for assisting the Pakistan customs and Railway staff in the quick movement of goods, especially in the event of any discrepancies detected. This will also assist in the disposal of claims that may arise on this account.

VII. Ratification: The agreements recorded above are subject to ratification by the respective Governments.

Proceedings of a meeting held in the room of Mr. Hameed Uddin Ahmed, Deputy Secretary, Ministry of Interior at 10.30 AM on 28th November, 1956 on matters relating to cotton trade.

Karachi, November 28, 1956.

Government of Pakistan
Ministry of Interior.

Present

1. Mr. Hameeduddin Ahmed
   Deputy Secretary, Ministry of the Interior.

2. Mr. Masrur Hasan Khan, C.S.P.
   Secretary, Chief Commissioner, Karachi.

3. Mr. Idris Ahmed
   Under Secretary, Ministry of Finance.

4. Mr. Abdul Qawi
   Under Secretary, Ministry of Commerce.

5. Mr. Mohammed Rafi
   Asst. Sec., Ministry of F.A. & C.R.

6. Mr. J.M. Soares
   Passport Officer, Ministry of F.A.& C.R.

7. Mr. I.H. Qarni
   State Bank of Pakistan
Mr. Hameeduddin Ahmed explaining the object for which the meeting was called, stated that as the cotton trade in Pakistan was one of the country it is necessary to safeguard it against domination of foreign interests particularly if these are inimical to the country. There have been reports both from official as well as non-official sources about the objectionable activities of Indian nationals and firms engaged in this trade in Pakistan. These Indians are reported to be manipulating the market to the disadvantage of Pakistan. Almost all of them are evading income tax on their very substantial earnings which they show as very meager. Apart from this loss on income-tax they are causing serious loss of foreign exchange through transfer of funds to India a very small portion of which is transferred legally; the bulk being sent through illegal processes. It was for similar objectionable and anti-Pakistan activities of this group of Indians that Government decided as early as 1951 that permits (which were then in vogue) should not issue to Indians connected with the cotton trade. This followed the view expressed by the Ministry of Commerce that Muslims have now gained sufficient experience of the trade and the services of Indians are no longer required. As a result of this policy the number of Indian cotton brokers was drastically reduced. This number unfortunately again increased as a result of the introduction of the Passport-cum-visa system between India and Pakistan and liberalization of our visa policy. The matter was reviewed by Government again in 1954 when Government decided that no visas should issue to Indians connected with the cotton trade. Despite these orders the present position is that at present there are about 25 Indians cotton brokers in Karachi, out of which 16 are confirmed Indian nationals and the rest have not yet declared their nationality.

2. Mr. Mirza, Chairman of the Cotton Association endorsing the above viewed gave a resume of the action taken by him and the Cotton Association to minimize the effects of the losses caused by the Indians. He however expressed difficulty over making the Directors two of whom are Hindus – and two Europeans to do anything substantial to prevent the mischief that these brokers are causing.

3. The question as to how Indian cotton brokers happen to be here despite orders of the Government was considered. It was explained by Mr. Soares that in all probability these persons have secured visas for visiting Pakistan on grounds other than the cotton trade. As this amounted to obtaining visas on false pretense it was decided that the visas of the 26 Indian cotton brokers should be immediately cancelled and they should be made to leave Pakistan. This was only implementing an existing decision of the Government.

4. Those who have not yet declared their nationality should be asked to do so by the Cotton Association who issue cotton trade licences to them. Enquiries should also be made by the Chief Commissioner Karachi, about the national status of these persons. If they are found to be Indians, action should be taken against them as in para 3 above. This should be on the basis of an authentic list of Indian national connected with the cotton trade communicated by the Ministry of Commerce to the Ministry of F.A. & C.R. The Ministry of F.A. & C.R. will also ensure that no visa is issued to these persons in future.

5. It was stated by Mr. Soares that under our agreement with the Government of India, we are compelled to give ‘E’ and ‘F’ visas to persons who have business connection in this country since before the introduction of the Passport System. Mr. Masrur Hasan Khan suggested that all applications for category ‘E’ and ‘F’ visas should be referred to the Chief Commissioner Karachi, for security checking. Visas should not issue in cases when there is security objections to the continuance of these Indians in the business in which they are engaged. The suggestion was accepted.

6. It was pointed out that in future most of the persons connected with the cotton trade will cease to work as such but will be employed by Pakistani in all industrial and business concerns in Pakistan. This was necessary for security, political and foreign exchange reasons. The present rules which applied only to export and import business concerns allowed up to 50 % outsiders. This is too high a limit which needs to be drastically reduced. Mr. Qarni stated that the question was already under consideration on the initiation of the Ministry of Labour and the decision taken that connection would be applicable to Indian Nationals employed with Pakistani firms dealing with the cotton trade.

7. As regards the Pakistani Cotton brokers who kept their families in India and are sending their earnings to India, it was decided that while we cannot possibly force them to bring back their families to Pakistan, attempt should be made to check the method of transmission of money by them to India. Action in this regard should be taken by the Ministry of Finance (State Bank) and Chief Commissioner, Karachi.

8. Almost all cotton brokers particularly Indians were earning money which they grossly understated for purposes of tax assessment or transfer to India. To overcome this it was agreed that the Ministry of Finance should carry out special inquiries through the Income Tax authorities. At the same time the Cotton Board should enforce measures to ensure that all transactions including forward and factory selections contracts are duly registered with the Cotton Trade Association.

9. In the case of Indian nationals who have partnership in firms in Pakistan it was decided that it would not be possible at present to take any isolated action in respect of Cotton firms. The general issue of allowing partnership by Indians in concern in this country should be examined by the Ministry of Commerce. On grounds of security and for saving foreign exchange it was necessary to limit such partnerships and to impose conditions which will prevent the firms from working against the interests of Pakistan.

Sd/- Hameeduddin Ahmed
Deputy Secretary to the Government of Pakistan

New Delhi, 22 January 1957

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan being desirous of strengthening and developing commercial relations between their respective countries have agreed as follows

Article IV
With respect to commodities/goods not included in Schedules ‘A’ and ‘B’ export or import shall also be permitted in accordance with the laws, regulations and procedures in force in either country from time to time.

Article V
Each Government shall accord to the commerce of the country of the other Government treatment no less favourable than that accorded to the commerce of any third country.

Article VI
The provisions of Article V shall not apply to:
(a) any advantage which either country has accorded or may accord at any time during the period of validity of this Agreement to other bordering countries in order to facilitate frontier traffic,
(b) any advantages accorded in connection with a customs union or free zone of which either country may become a member,
(c) preferences or advantages accorded by either country to any third country prior to the 15th August 1947 or in replacement thereof.

Article VII
The two Governments recognising the need for entering into special arrangements as contemplated by Article XXIV (11) of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade agree to enter into such arrangements. The commodities covered by such special arrangements and the nature and scope thereof are set out in Schedule ‘C’.

Article VIII
In order to meet the day-to-day requirements of the people living within a ten mile belt of the border between West Bengal, Assam and Tripura on the one hand and East Pakistan on the other and with a view to providing facilities to these people to dispose of their goods, border trade shall be allowed in the commodities specified in accordance with Schedule ‘D’ to this Agreement.
Article IX
In order to facilitate the implementation of this Agreement the two Governments shall consult with each other as and when necessary and in any case review the working of the Agreement every six months.

Article X
Subject to the approval of the Governments of India and Pakistan this Agreement shall come into force with effect from the 1st February 1957. It shall remain in force up to the 31st January 1960, provided that after the expiry of the first year it may be terminated by either party giving six months notice in writing to the other. The schedules attached to the Agreement will be subject to revision by mutual consultation before the commencement of the years 1958 and 1959. Press Note issued by the Government of India on the signing of the India-Pakistan Trade Agreement.

New Delhi, January 23, 1957.

Press Note

Indo - Pakistan Trade Agreement
Negotiations between the Trade Delegation from Pakistan and the representatives of the Government of India for strengthening and developing commercial relations between the two countries began in New Delhi, on January 15, 1957. The negotiations, which concluded today, have resulted in a Trade Agreement which was signed today on behalf of the Government of India by Shri S. Ranganathan, Secretary Ministry of Commerce and Consumer Industries, and on behalf of the Government of Pakistan by Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Secretary, Ministry of Commerce.

Subject to ratification by the two Governments, the Agreement is expected to come into force from February 1, 1957 and is likely to remain in force for three years.
Under the Agreement the two Governments have undertaken to explore all possibilities for expansion of trade between the two countries on the basis of mutual advantage. They have agreed to facilitate imports and exports of commodities specified in two schedules attached to the Agreement, to the extent permitted by their laws, regulations and procedure.

The items available for export from India to Pakistan include coal, chemicals, drugs and medicines, mill-board and straw-board, machinery and mill work, workshop equipment, electrical instruments, cinema films, sugar, tea for blending, coffee, betel leaves, bidi and hooka tobacco and bidi leaves. The items available for export from Pakistan to India include raw jute, hides and skins, fish, poultry and eggs, betel nuts, spices, honey, cinema films, machine tools, bicycle and spare parts, surgical instruments and sports goods.

Export or import of commodities not listed in the schedules will also be permitted in accordance with the laws, regulations or procedures of either country. The two Governments have agreed to enter into special arrangements for commodities listed in a separate schedule, up to quantities or values specified for each item. These include coal, hard and soft wood, stone boulders and sea salt for export from India and rock salt and forest produce for export from Pakistan to India.

The two Governments have also agreed to accord to each other’s commerce the most-favoured-nation treatment. In order to meet the day-to-day requirements of the people living within a ten-mile belt of the border between East Pakistan on the one hand and West Bengal, Assam and Tripura on the other, the two Governments have agreed that border trade will be allowed in the commodities specified in a separate schedule. These commodities include items of daily consumption like fish, poultry and eggs, soap, vegetables and fresh fruits, milk and milk products, kerosene, betel leaves, fodder and firewood. It has been agreed that after six months from the date the present Agreement comes into force, this trade will be carried on only through specified routes.

The working of the Agreement will be reviewed every six months and the schedules of commodities will be subject to revision before the beginning of each calendar year.

Office Memorandum

Subject : Indo-Pakistan Trade Agreement (1957-60)

Will the Ministry of External Affairs etc. please refer to this Ministry’s O.M. of even number dated the 31st January, 1957 forwarding copy of Indo-Pakistan Trade Agreement mentioned above, as well as of letters exchanged regarding ziratia tenants and transit facilities?

2. In the course of discussions certain views were expressed by the two delegations on the following items:

(1) Modification of the Articles of Agreement.
(2) Most favoured Nation treatment.
(3) Ziratta tenants.

Both the delegations agreed that it was not necessary to exchange formal letters on these subjects, but the two sides would keep a record of these discussions on their respective files.

A copy of note in question is attached for information.

(B.K.Kochar).
Deputy Secretary to the Government of India

Agreed record of note of discussions resulting in the Indo-Pakistan Trade Agreement of 1957.

In the course of discussions which resulted in the Trade Agreement between India and Pakistan, certain views were expressed by the two delegations on matters connected with the Agreement. It was agreed that the formality of exchange of letters in these cases should be dispensed with, both sides keeping
1. Regarding modification of the Articles of Agreement.

(1) Article X of the Trade Agreement reads as follows:

“Subject to the approval of the Governments of India and Pakistan this Agreement shall come into force with effect from the 1st February 1957. It shall remain in force up to the 31st January 1960, provided that after the expiry of the first year it may be terminated by either party giving six months notice in writing to the other. The schedules attached to the Agreement will be subject to revision by mutual consultation before the commencement of the years 1958 and 1959.”

This Article provides for termination of the Agreement after the expiry of the first year by either party giving six months’ notice in writing to the other, and for modification of the schedules attached to the Agreement at the beginning of 1958 and 1959. There is no provision in the Agreement for modification of the substance of the Agreement itself. The Pakistan Delegation was anxious to provide for this. The Indian delegation on the other hand was of the view that this was unnecessary because the Agreement could be modified by mutual agreement at any time and it was not necessary to provide for this in the Agreement itself. In fact to do so would be to deprive it such merit as was sought to be secured for it by making it valid for a period of 3 years. This view was accepted.

II. Most favoured-Nation treatment:

Article V of the Agreement reads as follows:

“Each Government shall accord to the commerce of the country of the other Government treatment no less favourable than that accorded to the commerce of any third country.”

The Pakistan Delegation made it clear that this would not affect Agreements already concluded by them and the single country licensing which was being done by them in pursuance of those Agreements. The Indian Delegation while nothing the point expressed the hope that those Agreements would not be extended and similar Agreements concluded in future but if Pakistan found this to be necessary at any time it would enter into consultations with the Government of India to find out whether the Government of India were prepared to enter into similar arrangements in return for which Pakistan was prepared to issue single country licences in favour of the third country. In regard to subsisting agreements the Indian Delegation pointed out that if India was able to make out a comparable case, we would expect similar treatment to be accorded to import of the same commodities from India.
III. Ziratia tenants:

The previous Trade Agreement which expired on the 31st January, 1957, contained the following Article in connection with the rights of Ziratia tenants:-

“Tenants, including Ziratia tenants, residing in the border areas of East Pakistan on the one hand and Assam and Tripura on the other who have land on either side within a ten mile belt of the border and paddy thereon shall be allowed to take across the border within a reasonable period after the harvest 40 maunds of paddy per family or the total produce of such lands cultivated by them, whichever is less.”

No such Article appears in the body of the new Agreement. The arrangements relating to Ziratias is now covered by separate letters which were exchanged on the 22nd January, 1957. This was considered advisable by both delegations since the provision relating to Ziratia was not a normal feature of a Trade Agreement. Article IV of the previous agreement was incorporated in the letters exchanged without any change, because the Pakistan Delegation stated that they did not have the necessary authority from their Government to modify it in any way. Nevertheless the Indian Delegation, brought to the notice of the Pakistan Delegation the fact that some difficulty had arisen in the past with regard to the interpretation of the words “take across the border within a reasonable period after the harvest 40 maunds of paddy per family or the total produce of such land cultivated by them whichever is less”. Varying interpretations had been sought to be put on this clause, the view consistently adhered to by the Government of India being that the concession, which was intended to enable a Ziratia tenant to take out only that quantity of paddy which would be required for consumption by his family, did not entitle him to take out 40 maunds of paddy per harvest. A ziratia tenant was in the view of the Government of India entitled to take only 40 maunds or the total produce, whichever is less, during the whole of each agricultural year. This view had been agreed to by the Commerce Minister of Pakistan (Mr. Abul Mansur Ahmed) in the course of his discussions with C.I.M. Shri Aziz Ahmed stated that his Delegations was prepared to accept this interpretation, and that Pakistan would not put any other interpretation on the wordings occurring in the letter exchanged on the subject.

Note on the work of the Indian Delegation at the Indo–Pakistan Trade Agreement Review Conference held at Karachi from 19th to 22 December 1957.

The Trade Agreement concluded in January 1957 with Pakistan provided for the review of the working of the Agreement at six monthly intervals (Article IX) Agreement and review of the Schedule attached to that Agreement (Article X), before the commencement of the year 1958. These were to be reviewed in mutual consultation between the two Governments. Schedule ‘D’ to that Agreement further provided that “each Government will after such consultation with the other as may be necessary, be free to prescribe an adequate number of such routes having regard to the requirements of bona fide border trade”. Similarly, sub-clauses (3) and (4) of the first letter exchanged between the Commerce Secretary, India, and the Commerce Secretary, Pakistan, regarding Ziratia tenants, also provide for review of the implementation of the arrangements relating to such tenants, the provision of authorized routes only through which such tenants may cross the border as well as the improvements made in the transit facilities through East Pakistan into Tripura.

2. It was with the object of conducting these reviews that a Delegation consisting of was sent to Karachi by the Government of India. The Delegation assembled at Delhi on the 17th and left for Karachi on the 18th December 1957. They were, on arrival, received with due courtesies by officers of the Pakistan Government as also of the Indian Mission at Karachi. The Government of Pakistan offered to treat the entire Delegation as state guests during their stay in Karachi. This offer was availed of by six members of the Delegation, while the Leader of the Delegation was, through the very kind courtesy of the High Commissioner, put up at the India House and two members of the Delegation stayed with their own friends in the Indian High Commission. The Pakistan Commerce Ministry also invited the Delegation to a lunch and this hospitality was returned again through the very kind courtesy of the High commissioner, at India house.

3. The two Delegations met for their work in the morning of the 19th December 1957. The Pakistan Delegation was composed as follows:-

   i. Mr. S. Osman Ali, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Commerce
   ii. Mr. Wazir Ali, Joint Secretary, Revenue Division.
   iii. Mr. S.S. Jaffri, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Industries
   iv. Mr. B. A. Kureshi, Director General, Supply and Development
   v. Mr. I.A. Khan, Chief Controller, Imports & Exports.
   vi. Mr. M.E. Khan Choudhary, Liaison Officer, Government of East Pakistan.
   vii. Mr. K. A. Waheed, Deputy Director General, Supply and Development and Coal Commissioner.
   viii. Dr. S.A. Wajid Khan, Director, Department of Trade Promotion and Commercial Intelligence
   ix. Mr. M.U. Ahmad, Deputy Secretary, Ministry of Commerce.
  x. Mr. Idris Ahmed, Deputy Secretary, Ministry of Finance.
 xi. Mr. R.A. Sadique, Joint Director (Traffic), Railway Division.
 xii. Mr. A.H. Siraj, Officer on Special Duty, Ministry of F.A. and C.R. xiii. Mr. O. Yusuf Khan, Officer on Special Duty, Ministry of Commerce.

The Leader of Pakistan Delegation Shri Osman Ali, opened the proceedings, with the usual expression of sentiments appropriate to the occasion and mentioned that on his side only the following items stood in need for review, viz., stones (Pakur) included in Schedule ‘A’ to the Trade Agreement and coal, boulders, cement and timber provided for in Schedule ‘C’. He also expressed apologies for the delay in the ratification of the transit facilities Agreement reached at an official level between the Delegates of India and Pakistan in Dacca in March 1957. In private conversation, Shri Osman Ali sought to explain this delay on the rather naïve ground that from September onwards an argument had been going on inside the Central Secretariat of Pakistan as to whether the Railway Ministry or the Commerce Ministry should obtain the orders of Government in this matter. At the meeting held on the 20th, he stated that a part of delay was also due to the East Pakistan Government’s uneasiness in the matter of the movement of rice crops, cultivated by the Pakistan Ziratia tenants in Tripura. Both privately, as well as at an official meeting, he, however, assured to Indian Delegation that steps have now been taken to obtain the necessary governmental approval and he hoped to communicate it formally to us before our departure from Karachi in spite of the fact that a new Commerce Minister has only very recently taken over and that soon after the latter’s installation he had to proceed on tour to Lahore. He was also at pains to explain his own preoccupation with the Trade Delegation of Iran, which was also present in Karachi and accordingly, suggested that the next meeting should take place only on the afternoon of Friday, the 20th December, and that subsequent meetings could be held on the forenoons of Saturday and Sunday.

5. The results of those discussions have been embodied in the form of agreed minutes which form an annexure to this report.

6. The general impression gathered by the Delegation as a result of these talks, is that the Pakistan Government are perhaps not in earnest either in maximizing trade between the two countries or in removing the apparent disequilibrium in their trade and payments position. So far as commodities mention in Schedules ‘A’ & ‘C’ are concerned, they harped repeatedly on the prompt fulfillment of our own commitments in respect of coal, boulders, timber and cement without displaying the same anxiety in the matter of implementation of their part of the bargain as for example, in the case of Indian films. As far as border trade is concerned, considerable publicity had been given to the fact that with effect from the 17th December 1957 the Pakistan Army, Navy and Air Force have taken over in conjunction with the Customs, Police and Railway authorities, the administration of the entire East Pakistan border with a view ostensibly to prevent smuggling. They frankly admit that they have set up “a reign of terror” on the frontier by imposing “dusk to dawn curfews” and by issuing instructions to the armed forces to “shoot suspects at sight”. Leading articles in the Dawn as well as the Karachi Times obviously officially inspired, claim that as much as Rs. 80/- crores worth of goods and other assets as being exported illegally each year from Pakistan to India. This attitude seems to be prima facie inconsistent with the fact that Indian currency still commands a heavy premium over Pakistan currency in the free market. On being informally asked about this situation, no convincing reply was forthcoming.

7. It seems reasonably clear, therefore, that the object of this move is primarily political rather than economic, because even otherwise, as we are ourselves aware, West Pakistan perhaps, more than East Pakistan is a center of organized smuggling activities. It is curious, therefore, that no overt action has yet been taken or perhaps even contemplated to disturb that position.

8. After the meeting of the Delegations Shri Osman Ali referred to the correspondence which he was having with Shri K.B. Lall of the Union Commerce Ministry regarding the alleged discrimination against Pakistan in the matter of issue of import licences for raw cotton of more than one inch staple length. He claimed that according to a printed publication of the Indian Central Cotton Committee, certain varieties of Pakistan cotton did exceed one inch in staple length and urged that such licences should, therefore, be made available for the import of Pakistan raw cotton as well. Shri Than took note of this point which needs some looking into.

9. It remains for me to record our appreciation of the very valuable services rendered to the Delegation by the Member-Secretary, Shri Vibhakar, as well as certain members of the office staff of the Indian High Commission. They had to work late hours in connection with the typing of the draft minutes and other incidental activities. Our thanks are also particularly due to the members of the Drafting Committee, namely, M/s S. Than, S.K. Sircar and P.C. Mathews, who too had to work till the small hours of the morning both on Friday the 20th and Saturday the 21st December 1957. But for their efforts the work entrusted to the Delegation would not have been completed by the 22nd afternoon.

2649. Record of discussions between the Indian and Pakistan Delegations held at Karachi regarding the working of the Trade Agreement, 1957 and the Agreement on Ziratias and transit facilities for Tripura.

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan being desirous of strengthening and developing commercial relations between their respective countries concluded a Trade Agreement in January, 1957. Agreements relating to Ziratia tenants and improvement in transit facilities through East Pakistan into Tripura were also concluded at that time as contained in the letters dated 22nd January, 1957, exchanged between the leaders of the two delegations. Articles IX and X of the Agreement and the above mentioned letters provided, respectively, for:-

(i) a review of the working of the agreement every six months;
(ii) revision of the Schedules attached to the Agreement by mutual consultation before the commencement of the year 1958 and 1959; and
(iii) a review of the implementation of the arrangements relating to Ziratia tenants and the improvements made in the transit facilities through East Pakistan into Tripura.

The representatives of the two Governments accordingly met in Karachi from 19th to 22nd December, 1957 and undertook a review of the working of these arrangements.

A. Review of the working of the Trade Agreement

(Article IX)

Schedules A & B: Two items under these Schedules came up for discussion, namely,

i. Stones (Pakur) and

ii. Books, Periodicals and Newspapers.

Stones (Pakur): The Pakistan representatives stated that a large quantity of Pakur stones was required by East Pakistan but that transport and other difficulties had stood in the way of completion of deals already put through by private parties in regard to the movement of this item from India to Pakistan. They, therefore, suggested that the possibility of this commodity being handled on Government to Government basis be examined. It was explained by the Indian representatives that in view of the special instructions already issued to the Eastern Railways inadequate supplies of this commodity were due not so much to difficulties of transport as to the fact that so far no indents for wagons had been placed by the exporters concerned. It was further stated by them that the movement of 4 to 5 wagons a day was not likely to be a problem and that this quantity could be increased during the slack period for the Railways (July to October). Regarding the suggestion that the State Trading Corporation of India handle the export of this commodity, the Indian representatives pointed out that the item being included in Schedule A, it should normally be handled through private trade channels. They, however, promised to have the suggestion for trading on Government to Government basis further examined.

Books, Periodicals and newspapers: The Indian Delegation pointed out that considerable difficulty was being experienced in the import of Indian books, periodicals and newspapers, including Government of India publications, into Pakistan. It was presumed that intending importers of Indian publications were experiencing difficulties in getting the necessary import licences. The Pakistan Delegation explained that according to the import policy of the Government of Pakistan these items could be imported from any country in the world and that, therefore, there should be no difficulty in regard to import of Indian books, periodicals and newspapers.

Schedule ‘C’: Coal, Stone, boulders, Hard wood and Soft wood, Cement, Sulphuric Acid and Cinema films came up for review under this Schedule.

Coal: The Pakistan representatives stated that the procedure for procurement of coal from India was so complicated and cumbersome that it was not possible in actual practice to dispatch quantities according to the targets agreed in Schedule ‘C’ unless the Coal Commissioner, Pakistan, was permitted to programme about 25% more than the agreed quotas. Thereby it was expected that the actual receipts by Pakistan would be nearer the agreed quotas. If, however, in a particular quarter, the dispatches to Pakistan were on the average more than the quotas fixed by the Agreement, the excess would be adjusted in the next quarter. The Indian Delegation pointed out that the procedure for placing of indents was the same for all indentors, whether domestic or foreign, and that, therefore, they anticipated practical difficulties in accepting this suggestion. It was explained that the present arrangement of allowing an extra 10% monthly over 30,000 tons to West Pakistan for programming as mutually agreed upon between the Coal Commissioners of Pakistan and India would continue and, in addition, the Coal Commissioner, India, would consider the recoupment of serious shortfalls in a preceding month by allowing extra quantities and wagons in addition to the normal quotas in the succeeding month, as far as may be possible. It was also agreed that both the Coal Commissioners should consider simplifying their existing procedures.
Stone boulders: The two delegations expressed concern over the fact that stone boulders have not moved from India to East Pakistan for one reason or the other. The main difficulty was understood to be the delay in reaching an agreement by the Railways concerned on the technical details in regard to running of the boulder trains. The two delegations agreed that a Conference of the Principal Officers of the headquarters of the Indian and Pakistan Railways concerned should be called at Calcutta to discuss the issues involved and to arrive at an agreed arrangements, as quickly as possible, but not later than 31st January, 1958.

Hardwood: The Pakistan Delegations stated their willingness to import as much as 4 lakh C. ft. of hard wood if India was in a position to spare it. This was noted by the Indian delegation for further examination.

Soft wood: The Pakistan Delegation stated that in addition to the quantity mentioned in the trade agreement, which was being received, their further requirement of soft wood was of the order of 10 to 20 lakh C. ft. per year for construction purposes. Of this quantity, 70% could be Deodar and 30% Kail, though these percentages were not rigid. As regards sizes, Pakistan preferred to import scantlings (10’ × 10” × 5” all ups) and logs (10’ × 60” all ups) though some quantities in smaller sizes (scantlings – 8’ × 8” × 5” all ups & logs – 8’ × 48” all ups) would be acceptable. The Indian Delegation explained the general shortage of soft wood in India but assured the Pakistan Delegation that the question would be examined in detail.

Cement: The Pakistan Delegation stressed that the exchange of cement under the Agreement had not taken place and that in view of the acute shortage of cement in East Pakistan, they attached considerable importance to the exchange of cement provided in the Agreement. The Indian Delegation explained that they had a surplus of cement in the Western region and a deficit in the eastern region and therefore, they offered to supply the requirement of East Pakistan from South India by sea. The Pakistan Delegation pointed out that supplies by sea created serious transport problems from ports in East Pakistan onwards but that they would consider this offer for limited quantities, provided Indian cement prices were competitive.

To meet part of the immediate requirements of East Pakistan as indicated by the Pakistan delegation, the Indian Delegation agreed to supply 10,000 tons of cement from the Bihar area by rail to East Pakistan either for cash or for adjustment against supplies due from West Pakistan under earlier contracts.

Sulphuric Acid: The two delegations noted that the two-way movement of sulphuric acid had not taken place. They agreed to consider what steps could be taken to facilitate this movement.
Cinema Films: The Indian representatives pointed out that whereas Pakistan films were being freely licensed for import into India, no licences had been issued for import of films from India to Pakistan. The Pakistan representatives pointed out that delay had occurred in the issue of these licences as time was taken in the settlement of procedures and policies for import. The position was that import licences for fourteen films had already been issued against applications received in pursuance of the Public Notice of the 16th November, 1955 and one more licence against these applications was under issue. The Pakistan representatives stated that if further changes in the import arrangements were not made by the Government of Pakistan it should be possible to issue licences for fifteen Indian films (19 Bengali and 5 Urdu/Hindi films) within about two months' time. The Pakistan delegation assured the Indian delegation that every effort was being made to license the import of Indian films as required under the current trade agreement, but in case the agreed quota was not licensed during the first year of the Agreement it was their intention to carry forward the balance.

Schedule ‘D’ – Border Trade: The Indian Delegation pointed out that their experience has been that the border trade arrangements as contemplated under the Agreement had not worked satisfactorily because of wholesale seizure of the passports of ‘A’ category visa holding Pakistani nationals engaged in this trade and other reasons. The Pakistan Delegation stated that their understanding of the situation was somewhat different and that according to their information the working of these arrangements in most of the sectors had been reasonably satisfactory. They, however, assured the Indian representatives that it was their intention that these arrangements should be enabled to work smoothly.

Revision of the Schedules attached to the Agreement (Article X)

The Pakistan Delegation stated that it was not in a position to discuss revision of the Schedules at this stage as the examination of the question had not been completed on their side. In these circumstances it was agreed by the two Delegations that a review of the Schedules should be postponed to a future date.

C. The Review of the implementation of the arrangements relating to Ziratia tenants and the improvements made in the transit facilities through East Pakistan into Tripura.

Ziratia tenants: The Pakistan Delegation mentioned a number of difficulties encountered by the Ziratias on their side and pointed out that they were unhappy in regard to the implementation of the arrangements relating to Zirtia tenants. Similar difficulties were pointed out by the Indian Delegation in respect of Ziratia tenants who were Indian nationals. The major difficulties pointed out by the Pakistan Delegation related to the situation arising out of the delay in mutation of names in the revenue records and non-issue of ‘A’ category visas. It was explained by the Indian Delegation that the difficulty regarding mutation was due to the provisions of the revenue law in Tripura (as in the revenue law of almost all states) which required presentation of applications for mutation within a certain period. It was further pointed out that this was normal provision in revenue law and was equally applicable to all tenants in Tripura and that this law had been in existence for a long time. So far as non-issue of ‘A’ category visas to Ziratias was concerned, the Indian Delegation stated that their information was that while India had been issuing these visas liberally, corresponding facilities were not forthcoming from the Pakistan side. On the Pakistan Delegation pointing out that strict enforcement of relevant laws in the circumstances would result in hardships for Ziratias, the Indian Delegation agreed to examine the matter further in the light of this consideration. As regards the other difficulties mentioned by the two delegations, it was agreed that both sides would collect more specific information with a view to resolving those difficulties.

Improvement of transit facilities:

The Pakistan Delegation stated that due to certain unavoidable reasons delay had occurred in the ratification of the Minutes of the meeting held in Dacca in March, 1957, but that these Minutes had since been approved by the Government of Pakistan and formal intimation about their ratification would be communicated to the Indian Government shortly. In the circumstances, it was agreed that the railways on both sides should get together, as soon as possible, but not later than 15th January, 1958 and complete the joint preliminary survey of the sites for the provision of the siding facilities in Tripura by the end of that month. The Indian Delegation stated that there were a few other minor difficulties which could be removed even now without waiting for the implementation of all the arrangements contemplated in the said Minutes, e.g., the difficulties occasioned by the lack of co-ordination between the Pakistan Railway authorities and the Pakistan Customs in respect of the clearance of wagons booked for Tripura, particularly at the Akhaura railway station and charging of demurrage in cases of non-clearance of goods for Tripura in circumstances beyond the control of the consignees. The Pakistan Delegation agreed to look into this matter on an immediate basis and to issue suitable instructions to the local authorities where necessary.

Statement by Deputy Minister for External Affairs Shrimati Lakshmi Menon in Lok Sabha on Border Trade with Pakistan.

New Delhi, March 23, 1959.

Border trade between West Bengal, Assam and Tripura on the one hand and East Pakistan on the other is governed by Article VIII of the Indo-Pakistan Trade Agreement (1957-60).

Pakistan had put various obstacles by restricting visas etc. and by harassment of those engaged in border trade. This was pointed out to the Pakistan Delegation at the 1957 Trade Agreement Review Conference held at Karachi in December. Since then, however, this border trade has come to a complete standstill as a result of “Operation Close Door” started by the Government of East Pakistan since the beginning of 1958.

The High Commissioner for Pakistan in India during his visit to Assam in November, 1958, told Rev. Nochols Roy, M.L.A. and an ex-Minister, that the Government of Pakistan were anxious to improve trade, particularly border trade, with India and suggested that the Chief Secretaries of Assam and East Pakistan meet to discuss border trade without waiting for the Indo-Pakistan Trade Review Conference between the Governments of India and Pakistan. The State Government not sure whether the High Commissioner meant business particularly in view of the exactly opposite policy followed by his Government, referred the High commissioner’s suggestion to us. After consulting the Ministry of Commerce & Industry, we request the Government of Assam to accept the High Commissioner’s suggestion for a Chief Secretaries Conference on border trade provided the Chief Secretaries of West Bengal and Tripura also participated in the proposed conference. After the Governments of West Bengal and Tripura had agreed to our suggestion, the Chief Secretary, Government of Assam, wrote to the Government of East Pakistan on 5th December, 1958, welcoming the High Commissioner’s suggestion in a formal manner and leaving it to the Government of East Pakistan to suggest the date and venue for the meeting. No reply from the Government of East Pakistan was received to this letter for over two months although there were periodical reports in the Pakistani Press that Pakistan was anxious to improve trade relations with India. On 9th February, 1959, the Chief Secretary, Government of East Pakistan, however, informed the Government of Assam that a meeting of Chief Secretaries to discuss the question of border trade was not necessary and that border trade was a part of the general trade agreement between Pakistan and India.

Apart from the above, there were news items in the East Pakistani Press during December, 1958, and January, 1959, that Pakistan intended to send a dlegation consisting of three representatives of the Local Chamber of Commerce in East Pakistan to neighbouring States in India. On attempts by the First Secretary (Commercial) at Karachi to verify the truth of these newspapers stories, it was invariably discovered that the Government of Pakistan had no such proposals before them.

According to article IX of the Indo-Pakistan Trade Agreement (1957-60), there has to be a six monthly review of the working of the Trade Agreement. The last review took place in a Conference at Karachi in December 1957. Since then, several approaches have been made to the Government of Pakistan for a Trade Agreement Review Conference at Delhi but no such Conference has yet been held. Our Ministry of Commerce and Industry have been anxious to hold the Review Conference which has been overdue since July, 1958.

The Government of East Pakistan who showed great keenness to have a Chief Secretaries’ meeting to discuss border trade arrangements have obviously not been able to convince the Pakistan Government at Karachi about the urgency of this problem and the latter do not seem to be keen to have an early conference to review the Trade Agreement of which the border trade arrangements are a part.

2651. Record Note of Discussions between the Indian and Pakistani Delegations held at New Delhi to Review the working of the India-Pakistan Trade Agreement (1957 – 60)

New Delhi, July 27, 1959

As contemplated in Article IX of the Trade Agreement concluded between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, the second review of the working of the Indo-Pakistan Trade Agreement between the representatives of the two Governments was held in New Delhi from 22nd to 24th July, 1959.

2. The two Delegations took note of the fact that the volume of trade between their two countries had fallen to a low level, and expressed the hope that as a result of this review, the trade between their countries would expand.

3. Both the Delegations felt that as the major volume of trade between their two countries was carried on under the special arrangements listed in Schedule ‘C’ of the Indo-Pakistan Trade Agreement of 1957, it would be more appropriated to discuss the main commodities in that Schedule item by item. The following four items of Schedules ‘A’ & ‘B’ came up for a brief discussions:-

I. Stones (Pakur);

II. Books, Periodicals & Newspapers;

III. Drugs & medicines including Ayurvedic & Unani medicines; and

IV. Raw Cotton.

4. Stones (Pakur): The leader of the Pakistan Delegation stated that arrangements regarding supply of Pakur stones to meet the requirements of East Pakistan still remain unfulfilled and they would appreciate if necessary arrangements were made to see that it reached its destination in East Pakistan at the rate of two to three wagons per day till the quantity contemplated under the Agreement was fully supplied. The leader of the Indian Delegation stated that, according to his information, Pakistan contractors had not placed indents for railway wagons to lift Pakur stones and it was suggested that they might impress upon their contractors to place indents expeditiously. It was suggested by the Leader of the Pakistan Delegation that as the buyer on their side was Government, it would be appreciated if the transaction took place on a Government-to-Government basis. The Leader of the Indian Delegation stated that there are indications that the State-sponsored agency is now in a position to undertake supplies to the Pakistan Government.

5. Books Periodicals & Newspapers: It was pointed out by the Leader of the Indian Delegation that the position relating to the import of books, periodicals and news- papers of Indian origin into Pakistan had not shown any improvement since the matter was reviewed last, while the import of this item from Pakistan had shown a steady increase. The leader of the Pakistan Delegation explained that he was not aware of any decline in the volume of trade and further stated that no restrictions were imposed by the Government of Pakistan on the trade for the import of books, periodicals and newspapers from India. It was therefore, not understood as to why there was a decline, if at all, in the exports from India. He would, however, look into the matter.

6. Drugs & Medicines: The Leader of the Indian Delegation pointed out that the export of Indian drugs and medicines into Pakistan had shown a progressive decline over the years. It was stated by the Leader of the Pakistan Delegation that he was not aware of any decline, but if there was any, it might perhaps be due to local manufacture or consumer preference. The Leader of the Indian Delegation requested the Leader of the Pakistan Delegation to take effective steps to remove impediments, if any, in the free flow of trade in this item, as the Indian produces conform to international standards and are being exported in increasing quantities to other neighbouring countries. The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation stated that there were no impediments and licences were issued without any restrictions (except for a small quantity under bilateral agreements).

7. Raw Cotton: The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation stated that India was not importing raw Cotton from Pakistan though she imported the same or similar varieties from elsewhere. He stated that Pakistan desired that restrictions, if any, on import of raw cotton from Pakistan be removed and Pakistan given equal facility to compete with other suppliers. The Leader of the Indian Delegation stated that according to the current policy, India allowed imports of cotton stapling 1-1/16" and above and there was no reference to the country of origin, importers being free to get their requirements from the country of their choice, including Pakistan.

8. The following major items under Schedule ‘C’ came up for discussion:

   (i) Coal;
   (ii) Stone Boulders;
   (iii) Potato Seeds;
   (iv) Raw Jute & Jute cuttings;
   (v) Cinema films; and
   (vi) Cement.

9. Coal: The Leader of the Indian Delegation stated that there has been a considerable improvement in the supply of coal to Pakistan after the last review. During the year, 1958, India supplied 12.08 lakh tons, while during the first five months of 1959, the supplies were to the tune of 4.14 lakh tons, which was, in the main, in accordance with the quantities mentioned in the Agreement. The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation observed that while this was so, difficulties had often been experienced in obtaining specified quantities of this commodity according to time schedule. Secondly, there were complaints in respect of quality and weight at the points of delivery. He stated that Pakistan Government would be prepared to take larger quantities of coal, provided these were supplied by rail in agreed quantities. The Leader of the Indian Delegation replied that there were procedural difficulties also on the side of Pakistan, but for which dispatches would have been better. As to quality and shortages in weight, it was suggested that the matter be taken up by them with their supplying agents. Upon the Leader of the Pakistan Delegation expressing the desire to have additional quantities only by rail, in spite of the existing difficulties, in the interest of promotion of trade between the two countries, it was agreed to arrange movement by rail of ad-hoc supply of additional quantities of 30,000 tons and 5,000 tons per month to East and West Pakistan, respectively, during the three months from August to October, 1959. The Leader of the Indian Delegation further mentioned that India was in a position to supply larger quantities of coal to Pakistan by sea as even by this route the price of Indian coal at Karachi/Chittagong would be competitive. It was also agreed that the Coal Commissioners of the two countries should meet and consider simplifying the procedures for the movement of coal.

10. Stone Boulders: The two Delegations noted the latest position in respect of the movement of stone boulders. The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation mentioned that Pakistan was still interested in the supply of this item, but the movement had not taken place as contemplated in the Schedules. The Leader of the Indian Delegation stated that the reason for this was that no indents had been placed by Pakistan contractors. It was, therefore, suggested that the contractors should place indents expeditiously. Alternatively, the transaction could be on a Government-to-Government basis. On receipt of indents from Government of Pakistan, necessary action could then be taken by the Indian State-sponsored agency. The Leader of the Indian Delegation also pointed out that while the Eastern Railway (India) and the East Bengal Railway (Pakistan) had come to an understanding in this regard, agreement between the East Bengal Railway (Pakistan) and the North-East Frontier Railway (India), still remained to be finalized by the officers of the two Railways. It was agreed that they be asked to finalize their agreement at an early date.

11. Hard Wood & Soft Wood: The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation mentioned that Pakistan was still interested in those items, and would like to take at least Five to Seven thousand tons over and above the quantities specified for West Pakistan. The Leader of the Indian Delegation replied that during the period under review, Pakistan had not lifted the agreed quantity, as envisaged in the Agreement. With regard to the additional quantity, he stated, that since India was herself in short supply, this perhaps might not be possible. The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation stated that if additional supplies were not possible, supplies as specified in Schedule ‘C’ might be arranged, preferably via Pathankot. The Leader of the Indian Delegation promised to look into the matter.

12. Potato Seeds: The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation stated that although the agreed quantities of potato seeds had been supplied, deliveries were generally delayed and supplies received after the sowing season was over. He would, therefore, appreciate timely deliveries to Pakistani cultivators particularly in the coming two months. The leader of the Indian Delegation promised necessary assistance in the matter.
13. Raw Jute & Jute Cuttings: The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation stated that it was suggested in the talks held recently at Karachi between the Indian High Commission and the Pakistan Commerce Minister that it would be in the mutual interest of the two countries, to adopt a co-ordinated approach regarding this commodity. He also observed that both countries were faced with foreign competition and threat of substitutes, which posed a serious problem requiring very careful consideration. He also stated that the off-take of raw jute by India had been steadily falling and in the current year the quantities indicated by India had not been lifted. The Leader of the Indian Delegation, while appreciating the point of view of the Leader of the Pakistan Delegation, mentioned that the lower off-take during the current year was due to the unexpectedly good crop of jute. The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation further stated that India which was the main buyer of jute cuttings had lifted very little quantity of this variety of jute. The Leader of the Indian Delegation promised to consider as to whether further quantities of jute cuttings in excess of those already lifted could be imported during the currency of the present Agreement.

14. Cinema Films: The Leader of the Indian Delegation mentioned that the position with regard to films had not improved since the last review. He added that while India was issuing import licences freely for Pakistani films without any restriction on their circulation, the agreed number of films had not been imported into Pakistan during the period under review. It was also brought to the notice of the Leader of the Pakistan Delegation that 618 Indian films in Pakistan had been ‘uncertified’ and certain popular Indian films were not allowed to be imported. In reply, the Leader of the Pakistan Delegation observed that certain mal-practices had been brought to notice and, therefore, a new procedure was being evolved under which Indian films would be obtained through their High Commission in New Delhi. He also mentioned that Pakistan was going into the matter of re-certifying some of these films, which had, sometime ago, been ‘uncertified’. The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation expressed the hope that as a result of the new measures taken by them for the purchase of Indian films, the position would probably show an improvement. He also stated that as far as he was aware very few Pakistani films had actually been imported into India.

15. Cement: The two Delegations took note of the fact that the exchange of quantities stipulated in the Agreement had not taken place. The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation, however, stated that Pakistan was still interested in movement of cement up to 50,000 tons for East Pakistan, if supplies could be made available by rail, as India has an exportable surplus, and further added that India would prefer a long term arrangement. As explained at the last Review Conference, it was also stated by the Leader of the Indian Delegation that India had achieved self-sufficiency in cement and was, therefore, not interested in importing 50,000 tons of cement from West Pakistan. The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation agreed to examine the proposal.

16. Border Trade: The Leader of the Indian Delegation pointed out that border trade arrangement as contemplated under the Agreement, were meant to be free from Import/Export control, Exchange Control Regulations, Customs Duties and other formalities and for helping the inhabitants of the border area of both the countries with regard to some of the daily requirements, such as eggs, poultry, fish, betel leaves, etc. The present indications were that this arrangement had not worked and that border trade had almost come to a standstill. The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation pointed out that there were no restrictions on bona-fide border trade as provided for in the Agreement. Any effect on it, however, might be the result of the anti-smuggling measures taken by Pakistan Government.

17. At the conclusion of the Review, the Leader of the Pakistan Delegation stated that apart from the commodities mentioned in the Schedules, Pakistan was interested in the growth of trade in the following commodities:-

i) Import & export of fresh fruits

ii) Import & export of betel leaves;

iii) Export of a small quantity of newsprint from October, 1959 rock salt, eggs & poultry;

iv) Import of a small quantity of tea seeds & live stock from Bihar; and

v) Export of small quantities of Chuna Khari peaes and Daincha seeds from East Pakistan.

18. The Leader of the Indian Delegation mentioned that he would have this matter considered and stated that apart from stepping up the exports of commodities mentioned in the Schedules, specially with regard to heavy items which had an advantage in view of the proximity of the two countries, India was interested in the movement of larger quantities of her manufactured goods, particularly the products of her recently developed industries to Pakistan.

D.O. No. F. 3-17/59-Pak. II. New Delhi, Dated the 24th Aug., '59

My dear Ambassador / High Commissioner/ Charge d’ Affaires.

As you are aware, an Indo-Pak Trade Review Conference was held at New Delhi recently. This was the second Review of the Indo-Pakistan Trade Agreement 1957-60. The Review scheduled for last year was postponed at Pakistan’s instance. I enclose a record of the Review.

2. The following figures will show the deterioration in Indo-Pakistan Trade during the last decade:

This has largely been caused by dwindling of raw jute exports from Pakistan to India and virtual stoppage of cotton piece goods export from India to Pakistan. These two, in the old days, accounted for virtually 75% of Indo-Pak Trade. The main items we to-day buy from Pakistan are fish, jute, (including jute cutting and waste) and hides & skins and the main items Pakistan buys from us are coal, coke & briquettes bid leaves, medicinal & pharmaceutical products, cement, building material (gravel, stone boulders, limestone), timber, etc. While little can be done to improve trade in jute and cotton piece goods, as both countries are embarked upon a programme of self-sufficiency in this regard, there is scope, if there be will, to increase exchange in certain other commodities. Pakistan could for example buy more coal from India rather than from far off countries such as Poland and China. In view of the dams and canals that will be built there in connection with the settlement of the canal water dispute, Pakistan’s demand for cement is likely to rise and we could perhaps accommodate her on cement to a certain extent. Pakistan could also take certain kinds of manufactured goods particularly the products of India’s recently developed industries. Undoubtedly, without jute and cotton piece goods, trade could never perhaps recover to its pre-1950 eminence and the balance of trade, unlike in the past, would be in India’s favour, the rot could, all the same, be stemmed.

The Americans also appear to be keen that Pakistan develop trade relations with India. They are particularly keen that Pakistan buys coal, cement and pig iron from us rather than from the communist countries.

Another feature of the Indo-Pak Trade Agreement 1957-60 was the Border Trade Agreement (Schedule D). According to this, border people were allowed to exchange commodities on a barter basis. This agreement was brought to a standstill after the promulgation by Pakistan of Operation Closed-Door in East Pakistan in August, 1957. Since March, 1958, after firing incidents were begun by Pakistan and there has been a complete stoppage of border trade, particularly on the Assam-East Pakistan border.

3. I may mention the following principal decisions of the present Review.
The above background may help you to appreciate the significance of these decisions:-

(a) Pakistan agreed to take, during the next three months, one lakh tons of coal over and above the stipulated amount under the Trade Agreement. Pakistan insisted that she receive all coal by rail. We preferred to supply coal by sea owing to our tight wagon position and worked out that even by sea, Indian coal would cost less to Pakistan than coal from some other countries.
(b) Pakistan agreed to take 50 thousand tons of cement during the next three months.

(c) Pakistan did not commit herself to import of Indian machinery, household appliances etc.

(d) India failed to commit herself to lift Pakistani jute to the extent under the Agreement.

(e) India did not commit herself to take increased quantity of Pakistani newsprint, fish, fowl, betal nuts, etc., which they were in a position to supply to us. This was largely because of foreign exchange difficulties and the fact that these commodities are not essential commodities.

(f) There was no progress on border trade. Our border people are getting adjusted to alternative sources.

4. In addition to the items under the Agreement discussed at the Review, India also took up with the Pak delegation the following:

i. Increasing harassment of Indian industrial and commercial interests in Pakistan.

ii. Recovery of timber washed down by the floods from Kashmir.

iii. Failure of Assam-Bengal Cement Co., Ltd., East Pakistan to buy Assam coal as in previous years.

iv. Closure of river communication for commercial traffic on river Ganga (Padma) in West (East?) Bengal where both banks belong to Pakistan.

The Leader of the Pakistan delegation made a note of these items but did not give any reply.

5. The Review helped the two sides to get a better appreciation of the thinking of each other which might help in negotiating the next Trade Agreement in 1960.

Yours Sincerely,

(Narendra Singh)
Limited Payments Agreement between the Governments of India and Pakistan.

Karachi, 3 December 1959

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, animated by the desire to develop and strengthen trade between the two countries and promote closer economic relations, have agreed to the exchange of certain commodities on a self-balancing basis under the following Payments Agreement. This Agreement shall be in addition to the normal trade under the existing Trade Agreement between the two countries.

Article I

All payments in respect of the sale and purchase of the commodities listed in the schedules at Annexure I up to the values mentioned therein, shall be made by Pakistan and India in nonconvertible Indian rupees.

Article II

For the exclusive purpose of facilitating such payments, the National Bank of Pakistan, Karachi, shall open a separate Clearing Account (hereinafter referred to as Account 'A' with the State Bank of India.

Article III

Payments in respect of the sale and purchase of the commodities listed in the said schedules, shall be cleared through Account 'A'.

Article IV

All transactions in the commodities listed in the said schedules for the purposes of Account 'A' shall be valued either on FOR or C&F basis depending on the terms of the contracts entered into.

Article V

Account 'A' shall be a self-balancing Account with a swing limit of Rs. 25 lakhs (Rupees Twenty five lakhs only) on either side. When the outstanding amount in Account ‘A’ exceeds the swing limit, limit the country running an import surplus may suspend imports temporarily, while the country running an import deficit shall take steps to expedite imports so that the imbalance is rectified. The rate of interest and technical details for the operation of Account ‘A’ shall be as settled between the National Bank of Pakistan and the State Bank of India as per Annexure II.
Article VI

In order to facilitate the implementation of this Agreement, the two Governments shall review the working of this Agreement and other consequential problems arising therefrom at the expiry of three months from the date of signature and compare the debits and credits on either side to devise such measures as may be mutually agreed upon to rectify the imbalance, if any, in favour of one or the other country.

Article VII

In case of any change in the parity rate of the rupees on either side, the balance in Account ‘A’ shall be adjusted in proportion to the change in the rate.

Article VIII

If at the close of the currency of this Agreement, there remains any amount outstanding in Account ‘A’ to the credit of either Government, the same shall be liquidated by the import of goods mentioned in the schedules by the country concerned except that if a small balance not exceeding say Rs. 1,000/- (Rupees one thousand only) remains unadjusted for six months after the termination of this Agreement, this amount may be adjusted by a remittance from Pakistan if the account is in debit or a remittance from India if the account is in credit.

Article IX

The list of commodities in the schedules may be amended from time to time by mutual consent.

Article X

This Agreement shall be valid for a period of one year with effect from the date of signature and may be extended for such further period as may be mutually agreed upon.

Article XI

This Agreement is signed in Karachi on the third day of December 1959 in two original copies in the English language, both of which are authentic.

For and on behalf of the Government of India. Sd/- (K.R.F. Khilnani) Leader Indian Trade Delegation

For and on behalf of the Government of Pakistan Sd/- (I. A. Khan) Leader Pakistan Trade Delegation
The sale and purchase of commodities exchanged under this agreement will be subject to laws, rules, regulations and procedures in force from time to time governing imports and exports in either country.

[Note: The Annexure I listing the commodities for import/export is omitted]

ANNEXURE II

Banking Arrangement between the State Bank of India and the National Bank of Pakistan for Financing the Movement of Goods under the Limited Payments Agreement between Pakistan and India

December 3, 1959.

The National Bank of Pakistan, Local Principal Office, Karachi, shall maintain a special non-convertible Indian Rupee Account with the State Bank of India, New Delhi, for the purpose of making and receiving of payments in respect of the sale and purchase of commodities covered by the above Limited Payments Agreement dated the 3rd December 1959. This account shall be styled “NATIONAL BANK OF PAKISTAN CLEARING ACCOUNT ‘A’.”

2. All claims or adjustments in respect of goods exchanged under this Agreement as also all bank charges shall be settled through the said account.

3. The account shall have a swing limit of Rs. 25 lakhs (rupees twenty five lakhs only) on either side subject to the proviso that all outstanding Letters of Credit and other commitments on the part of either the National Bank of Pakistan or the State Bank of India shall be honoured, even if the balance, debit or credit, exceeds the said limit. The balance in the account, both credit and debit shall carry interest at 2 1/2% per annum on a daily product basis, and this interest shall be credited or debited monthly to the said account under the advice to the National Bank of Pakistan.

4. The handling of transactions under this agreement shall be restricted to the National Bank of Pakistan on the side of Pakistan and to the State Bank of India on the side of India. The inter-branch transfers in India for credit or debit to the Clearing Account shall be effected at par.

PROCEDURE:

5. Exports from Pakistan to India

The Offices of the National Bank of Pakistan handling export documents will send these documents under the covering schedule to the concerned office of the State Bank of India in India, and will at the same time send a copy of this schedule to the State Bank of India, New Delhi.
Exports from India to Pakistan

The offices of the National Bank of Pakistan opening Letters of Credit will advise the credits through the concerned offices of the State Bank of India in India, and will send a copy of each such Letter of Credit to the State Bank of India, New Delhi.

Collecting offices of both National Bank of Pakistan and State Bank of India will advise the respective remitting offices on the other side of the payment of each bill received for collection. Copies of such advices issued by offices of the State Bank of India will in each case be sent to the National Bank of Pakistan, Local Principal Office, Nicol Road, Karachi.

The State Bank of India, New Delhi, will send weekly statements of account to the National Bank of Pakistan, Local Principal Office, Karachi. The statements will indicate the relative bill and Letter of Credit number against each item posted in the Statement; and also the name of the office of the National Bank of Pakistan concerned.

LETTERS Exchanged between the Leaders of the Indian and Pakistan Delegations

No.1. Letter from The Leader of Pakistan Delegation:

Ministry of Commerce
Karachi

3rd December, 1959

K.R.F. KHINANI, Esquire.,
Leader, Indian Trade Delegation, Karachi

Dear Mr. KHILNANI,

You would recall that with reference to Article VII of the Limited Payments Agreement signed today, the National Bank of Pakistan had raised the point that the exchange guarantee under that Article should also cover the next forward commitment of the National Bank of Pakistan. You stated that it would not be possible for you to make any commitment on this point without consulting the Reserve Bank of India, but promised to take up the matter with them on your return to New Delhi. Should the Reserve Bank of India, for any reason, not find it possible to accept the point made by the National Bank of Pakistan, the matter would be raised in the Review Meeting contemplated under the Agreement.
I hope you will kindly confirm that the above correctly sets out the discussions between us on this issue..

Yours sincerely
Sd/- I. A. KHAN

No. 2

Ministry of Commerce

Karachi
3rd December, 1959

K.R.F. Khilnani, Esquire
Leader, India Trade Delegation, Karachi

Dear Mr. Khilnani,

We have today signed a Limited Payments Agreement. The transactions under this Agreement shall be made in non-convertible Indian rupees. The purpose of this Agreement is to promote trade between two countries by exchange of commodities on a balanced basis without involving any expenditure of foreign exchange. With a view to achieve this end we discussed and agreed that every endeavour shall be made to transport goods, as far as possible, without involving expenditure of foreign exchange.

I hope you will kindly confirm that the above correctly sets out the understanding reached between us.

Please refer to your letter of 3rd December, 1959, regarding the Limited Payments Agreement between India and Pakistan which reads as follows:

The Limited Payments Agreement between India and Pakistan which we have just signed, will be without prejudice to any contracts or any movement of goods between the two countries independent of this Agreement in the normal commercial manner.

I shall be grateful if this is confirmed by you.

Yours sincerely,
Sd/- I. A. KHAN

K.R.F. Khilnani, Esquire
Leader, Indian Trade Delegation, Karachi

Dear Mr. Khilnani,

Please refer to your letter of 3rd December, 1959, regarding the Limited Payment Agreement between India and Pakistan which reads as follows:

“The Limited Payments Agreement between India and Pakistan which have just been signed, will be without prejudice to any contracts or any movement of goods between the two countries independent of this Agreement in the normal commercial manner.

I shall be grateful if this is confirmed by you.”

I confirm the understanding as set out in your letter quoted above.

Yours Sincerely

Sd/- I. A. Khan

Mr. K.R.F Khilnani,
Leader, Indian Trade Delegation, Karachi.

Dear Mr. Khilnani,

Please refer to your letter of 3rd December, 1959 concerning our discussion in course of negotiations on the Limited Payments Agreement, which reads as follows:

“I refer to our discussions regarding Limited Payments Agreement between the Governments of India and Pakistan to develop and strengthen trade ties between the two countries and develop trade in addition to normal trade under the existing arrangements between the two countries.
The two Governments, desirous of expanding the trade between the two countries as much as possible, like to provide adequate facilities for import and export of goods from and into either country in accordance with the export and import and foreign exchange regulations in force from time to time in the two countries.

I had made a mention of India's capacity to supply the requirements of Pakistan of light engineering goods. India's export in these lines has been steadily growing and I expressed the hope that Pakistan also would be able to avail herself of the goods that India can supply competitively as to quality and price.

I made a special mention of the following items:
- Domestic sewing machines and parts. Cycle parts and accessories.
- Diesel engines.
- Electric motors.
- Electrodes. Transformers.
- Bolts, nuts, screws and rivets. Agricultural implements and accessories.
- Umbrella ribs.
- Transmission towers.
- Textile machinery parts and accessories. Steel lockers, locks, vault doors and office equipment. Fluorescent tubes and fittings.
- Aluminum foil
- Aluminum sheets and circles.

Your delegation assured me that Pakistan Government will make arrangements that these goods would be covered under the heading “Hardware and light engineering goods and machinery”.

It was also agreed that we should explore new lines of trade as well as the old lines in which the trade has dwindled down and find out ways and means of furthering trade in those items.

I shall be grateful if this is confirmed by you.

I confirm that the letter correctly records the discussions we have had.

Yours sincerely

Sd- I. A. Khan

K.R.F. Khilnani Esquire
Leader, Indian Trade Delegation, Karachi.
A Trade Delegation from Pakistan, led by the Hon. Mr. Hafizur Rehman, Minister of Commerce, arrived in New Delhi on March 14, 1960, for negotiating a new trade agreement to replace the Indo-Pakistan Trade Agreement which expired on January 31, 1960.

After preliminary discussions between the Hon. Mr. Hafizur Rehman, Pakistan Minister of Commerce, and Hon. Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri, Indian Minister of Commerce and Industry, negotiations continued between the Pakistan and Indian Delegations at official level. The two Delegations exchanged views on the impediments in the smooth flow of trade between the two countries and felt that closer trade and economic relations would be to their mutual benefit, and that there was considerable scope for expanding the present level of trade between the two countries.

As the result of these negotiations, a new Trade Agreement was signed in New Delhi on March 21, 1960 by Mr. I.A. Khan on behalf of Pakistan and by Shri K.B. Lall on behalf of India. The validity of the Agreement, which comes into immediate effect, will be for a period of two years and may be extended for a further period of one year provided either Government does not give notice to the contrary. Letters have also been exchanged between the two Delegations extending the validity of the last Trade Agreement till March 20, 1960. The new Trade Agreement comes into force from today.

Appended to the new Trade Agreement are two Schedules, indicating the commodities available for export from India and Pakistan respectively. The export and import of commodities mentioned in the Schedules as well as those not mentioned therein will be subject to the laws, regulations and procedures of either country. The Agreement also provides for the most favoured nation treatment being accorded to the commerce of either country.

A Protocol to the Agreement has also been signed, which supersedes the Limited Payments Agreement signed at Karachi on December 3, 1959. The values of commodities to be exchanged under this Protocol have been raised from Rs.2 crores to Rs.4.10 crores either way. Under this arrangement, Pakistan has agreed to supply India with jute cuttings to the extent of Rs.1 crore and also to raise the ceiling for cotton from Rs. 1 crore to Rs.1.5 crores. India, on the other hand, has agreed to supply Pakistan with iron and steel to the extent of Rs. 1 crore and has raised the ceiling for cement and biri leaves from Rs. 70 lakhs to Rs. 150 lakhs. The list of items to be exchanged has also been enlarged to cover, inter-alia, the following items:-
Betel leaves, films, fish (dried and salted), drugs and medicines (Ayurvedic and Unani), rock salt, betel nuts, Kapok, etc. from Pakistan, and betel leaves, films, spices, groundnut seeds H.P. S. and stone boulders etc., from India.

As in the previous Agreement, the two Governments have entered into special arrangements by means of another protocol, for supply by India of coal, hard and soft wood and stone boulders to Pakistan. Pakistan has also agreed under this Protocol to supply India with raw jute, the quantity and value will be determined as heretofore. In spite of India’s own difficulties in regard to movement and supply of coal, she has agreed to make available to Pakistan, by rail and by sea, an additional quantity of 30,000 tons per month over and above one lakh tons of coal per month to both wings of Pakistan in accordance with the provisions of the Trade Agreement.

The question of the extension of the border trade arrangements provided for under Schedule ‘D’ of the last Trade Agreement for meeting the day-to-day requirements of the people living within a ten mile belt of the border between East Pakistan on the one hand and West Bengal, Assam and Tripura on the other, was also discussed. While the Pakistan Delegation felt that border trade did not lead to bona fide trade, they, however, agreed to hold further consultations in this behalf.

The two delegations also felt that there was scope for co-operation in respect of the production and exchange of several commodities, such as raw jute, raw cotton, coal, newsprint, pig iron, steel of different sorts including structural, cement and wood and timber. The two delegations agreed that it would be desirable to take such steps as might be found practicable to promote commodity consultations with a view to entering into long-term arrangements of mutual benefit.

The two delegations expressed the hope that the new Trade Agreement would lead to a considerable expansion of trade and economic co-operation between the two countries to their mutual advantage.

The working of the Agreement will be reviewed from time to time, at least once a year. The Protocols will also be subject to review every six months.
Joint Communiqué issued at the end of Review talks on India – Pakistan Trade Agreement

Meetings between the Indian and Pakistan Trade Delegations to review the Trade Agreement took place in New Delhi from March 22 to March 28, 1961. The agreed minutes of the meeting were signed on March 28 by Mr. I. A. Khan for Pakistan and Mr. K. R. F. Khilnani for India. The progress made was noted and the difficulties experienced in the working of the Agreement were examined in detail. It was agreed that steps would be taken to facilitate further movement of trade. The ceilings agreed for the first year have been repeated for the second year in addition to the carry-over of the balances of the first year except in the case of live stock. The groups have been re-arranged and one group has been deleted, but the commodity (betel leaves) mentioned there in has been moved to another group, i.e. miscellaneous commodities. The ceilings for the current year would be as follows:-

Group A – Fresh fruits, fruit plants and seeds ........ Rs. 40 Lakhs Group B – Raw cotton from Pakistani bidi leaves, Cement, stone boulders and railway materials etc. from India....... Rs. 150 Lakhs Group C – Live stock including horses from Pakistan... Rs. 5 Lakhs Group D – Jute cuttings from Pakistan Steel materials and coal from India. ....... Rs. 100 Lakhs Group E – Miscellaneous commodities...... Rs. 115 Lakhs

Total — Rs. 410 Lakhs

It is expected that as a result of the detailed review, the flow of trade will increase.

Joint Communiqué issued at the end of Trade Review Talks between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 2, 1962.

Talks were held at New Delhi from May 23 to June 1, 1962, between the Pakistan Trade delegation led by Mr. K. S. Islam, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Commerce, and the Indian Trade Delegation led by Mr. S. Vohra, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Commerce and Industry. The working of the Indo-Pakistan Trade Agreement (1960-63) was reviewed and decisions were taken regarding the value of the commodities to be imported by the two countries in the final year of the Agreement ending March 20, 1963. The talks were held throughout in a cordial atmosphere.

The two major commodities to be supplied respectively by Pakistan and India both under the Special Payments Arrangement and against convertible foreign exchange during the third year of the Agreement are cotton to the extent of 1,00,000 bales and coal at the rate of 1,30,000 tons per month.

It was agreed that the unutilized amounts of the ceilings of the last two years under the Special Payments Arrangement will be carried over into the third year. In addition the ceilings fixed under this Arrangements for the third year are: Rs. 40 Lakhs for import of fruits by each country, Rs. 210 lakhs for import of cotton and Rs. 40 lakhs for import of jute cuttings by India, Rs. 180 lakhs for import of coal by Pakistan, Rs. 70 lakhs for import of iron and steel items, bidi leaves, railway material, cement etc. by Pakistan and Rs. 115 lakhs for import of miscellaneous commodities by each country.

Difficulties experienced in the free flow of trade between the two countries were discussed and measures were agreed upon for removing the bottlenecks.

The Agreed Minutes of discussions were signed today by the Leaders of the two Delegations.
2657. Joint Communiqué issued at the conclusions of Trade Talks between India and Pakistan.

Rawalpindi, July 17, 1964.

An Indian delegation led by Shri Y.T. Shah, Joint Secretary to the Government of India in the Ministry of Finance, Department of Economic Affairs, arrived in Pakistan on July 1, 1964 to purchase Kangni and Joshi rice from Pakistan. The visiting delegation held discussions at the Ministries of Commerce and Agriculture and works. As a result of these discussions, the Governments of Pakistan and India on July 17, 1964 concluded an agreement in Rawalpindi under which Pakistan would supply Kangni and Joshi rice to India valued at Rs. 36.5 million during the next six months. In exchange, India would supply to Pakistan coal, railway equipment and other specified commodities over the next 12 months. A Protocol for the exchange of these commodities was concluded on July 17, 1964.

The two Governments also concluded another Protocol providing for the exchange of fresh fruits to the value of Rs. 5 million each way during the next 12 months.

The Agreement for the sale of rice was signed by Mr. M. Khurshid, Secretary, Agriculture, on behalf of the Government of Pakistan. The Protocol for import of coal and other specified Indian goods as well as the Protocol for exchange of fresh fruits was signed by the Commerce Secretary, Mr. M. Aslam. Shri Y.T. Shah, Leader of the Indian delegation, signed the Agreement and the two Protocols were signed at a ceremony in Rawalpindi.

The Indian delegation comprised Shri Shah (Leader), Shri H.K. Kochar, deputy Secretary in the Ministry of Commerce and Shri Ishwar Chandra, Deputy Secretary in the Department of food.

2. All payments in respect of sale and purchase of the commodities listed in para 1 shall be made by Pakistan and India in non-convertible Indian Rupees up to the values mentioned therein into and from the special rice account styled as “National Bank of Pakistan – Special Rice Account” which has been opened by the National Bank of Pakistan with the State Bank of India in pursuance of Protocol I (of 1964) to the Trade Agreement of 1st September 1963. The value of rice exported from Pakistan under the rice agreement dated the 17th July 1964 has already been credited to the “Special Rice Account” referred to. The value of rice to be supplied under the rice agreement dated the 11th January will likewise be credited to that account. The value of commodities imported into Pakistan from India, as listed in the Schedule in Paragraph 1 above, is already being debited, in respect of the values shown in column (4) of the Schedule, to the Special Rice Account and will continue to be so debited for further imports in respect of values of commodities shown in columns (4) and (5) of the Schedule.

3. Imports into Pakistan of Indian commodities as listed in the Schedule will be deemed to have been made against the values shown in column (4) of the Schedule until the provision thereunder is exhausted. Thereafter, the imports will be deemed to have been made against the provision as made in column (5). The imports will proceed in this manner irrespective of the state at which payment is credited to the Special Rice Account in respect of the rice to be delivered by Pakistan under the Rice Agreement dated the 11th January 1965.

4. All transactions in respect of the commodities to be imported into Pakistan shall, for the purpose of the Special Rice Account, be valued either on F.O.R. or F.O.B. or C&F basis depending on the terms of the contract entered into. The rice exported from Pakistan under this Arrangement shall be valued on F.O.B. basis.

5. In case there is insufficient credited balance in the Special Rice Account to meet payment in respect of imports into Pakistan from India, the State Bank of India shall allow an over-draft in the Special Rice Account and all outstanding Letters of Credit and other commitments on the part of the national Bank of Pakistan shall be honoured by the State Bank of India. The balance in the Special Rice Account, both credit and debit, shall carry interest at 2.5% per annum, on a daily product basis, and this interest shall be credited or debited monthly, to the Special Rice Account under advice to the National Bank of Pakistan.

6. In case of any change in the parity rate of the Indian Rupee, the balance in the Special Rice Account shall be adjusted in proportion to the change in the rate.
7. It is the intention of both Governments that rice should be imported into India by the 31st March 1965 and the Indian goods be imported into Pakistan by the 11th January 1965. If at the end of this period, there has been any shortfall shall be made good by supplying coal of equivalent value instead, over the next three months, that is, by the 11th April 1966. If any Rupees lie to the credit of the Special Rice Account as on 11th April 1966, by reason of any shortfall in the supply of coal in lieu of the shortfall of other commodities, as provided for in para 1, then the said funds shall be remitted in convertible Pounds sterling to Pakistan in three equal monthly instalments as follows:-

8. While the export and import of goods between the two countries as envisaged under this arrangement will take place on the basis of commercial contracts to be executed between the parts directly concerned in the two countries, both Governments will in every way facilitate the movement of goods and will, inter alia, issue import/export licences where necessary.

9. In case of any shortfall in the delivery of rice to India which might affect the estimated imports into Pakistan commodities of the value of Rs. 625 lakhs, the value of the various Indian goods to be exported to Pakistan will stand revised in the same proportion.

10. All payments under Letters of Credit for import of coal into Pakistan from India established or after the 17th July 1964 shall be made from the Special Rice Account. In respect of other commodities as listed in paragraph 1 above, this arrangement shall apply

   a) in respect of biri leaves, lime stone, spices, umbrella fittings, crude drugs, railway equipment and stone boulders to all contracts concluded on or after the 17th July 1964

   b) in respect of tea machinery, khari salt, law books, sil batta, conch shells and buffalo horns to all contracts concluded on or after the 11th January 1965.

11. The provisions of Protocol I (of 1964) to the Trade Agreement of 1st September 1963 signed on the 17th July 1964 will be deemed to have been modified to the extent the provisions of the said Protocol are at variance with the provisions of the present Protocol.
12. This Protocol is signed in Rawalpindi on the Eleventh January 1965 in two original copies in the English language both of which are equally authentic.

2659. Joint Communiqué issued by the Government of India on the Indo-Pakistan Agreement on Telecommunications.

New Delhi, April 2, 1968.

A meeting of the representatives of the Telecommunication Administrations of India and Pakistan was held at New Delhi from March 30 to April 2, 1968.

The Indian Team was led by Mr. L.C. Jain, Chairman, Post and Telegraph Board, and the Pakistan Team was led by Mr. Mir Mohammed Hussain, Director-General, Telegraph and Telephone.

The two Teams reviewed the working of the telecommunication services in the light of the Agreement signed at Karachi on October 11, 1967. It was observed that there was steady improvement in the services between the two countries after these were fully restored on November 1, 1967. The meeting discussed measures to be taken for further improvement in these services. In this regard various measures were agreed upon. Both the Administrations agreed to install improved equipment in their respective countries on the three major routes, namely, Lahore-Amritsar New Delhi, Calcutta-Dacca and Karachi-Jodhpur-Bombay. It is hoped to complete these improvements by the middle of May, 1968.

The two Teams examined the pattern of traffic between the two countries and it was felt that, to ensure free flow of traffic between the two countries, accounting procedures could be conveniently simplified to the mutual benefit of both the countries. After discussions it was agreed that for terminal traffic exchanged between the two countries, there may be no sharing of revenues. This arrangement will be effective for all traffic between the two countries from November 1, 1967.

It was also agreed that the telegraph and telephone rated for traffic from one country to the other may be streamlined and these should be comparable in the two directions. The two teams agreed that, depending upon the growth of traffic, further upgrading of the circuits both in respect of quality and capacity, would be kept under review.

The discussions were held in a cordial atmosphere and there was genuine desire on both sides to encourage the flow of telecommunication traffic between the two countries.

2660. Press Release issued by the High Commission of India in Pakistan reproducing the Press Note issued by the Ministry of External Affairs in New Delhi regarding resumption of trade between India and Pakistan.

Karachi, October 30, 1969.

The Government of India have contradicted persistent reports appearing in the East Pakistan Press that India is not in favour of import of fish on large scale from East Pakistan.

A Press Release issued in New Delhi states: “The fact is that as in case of other items of trade between the two countries, the Government of India would welcome import of fish from East Pakistan. This is particularly so because of acute shortage of fish in West Bengal. The problem is not that India does not wish to import fish from East Pakistan but that Pakistan refuses to resume its trade links with India.

The Government of India have since 1965 made their position perfectly clear in regard to trade with Pakistan. It unilaterally lifted ban on trade with Pakistan in May 1966 and had since made several proposals for resumption of trade between the two countries. As recently as July this year, the Prime Minister repeated her offer in this respect to President Yahya Khan. However all efforts by India have met with a negative response from Pakistan. President Yahya Khan’s reply to our Prime Minister’s letter clearly showed that Pakistan adheres to its policy of refusal to resume trade or any other contacts unless what Pakistan calls 'Basic Disputes' may be reproduced freely with or without acknowledgement are settled first. The Government of India would continue to make efforts to persuade Government of Pakistan that trade between India and Pakistan would benefit peoples of both countries".

New Delhi, 30 November 1974

RECALLING the provisions of the Simla Agreement of 1972 to progressively restore and normalise relations between the two countries,

REAFFIRMING the desire of their respective Governments for resumption of trade and cooperation in economic and other agreed fields,

RESOLVING to explore possibilities of establishing channels of trade on a mutually beneficial basis,

REALISING the significant opportunities arising out of economic growth in the two countries, and DESIRING to develop and extend the commercial relations between their two countries on the basis of equality and mutual benefit.

The Delegations of India and Pakistan which met in New Delhi from 26 to 30 November, 1974,

HAVE agreed as follows:

1. Necessary steps will be taken by both countries to lift the embargo on trade between the two countries with effect from 7th December, 1974.

2. Trade will be conducted on the basis of free convertible currency in accordance with the foreign exchange regulations in force from time to time in each country.

3. Trade between the two countries will be on the basis of the most-favoured-nation treatment in accordance with the provisions and decisions of the GATT.
4. To begin with, and unless otherwise agreed, trade will be conducted on Government-to-Government basis or through Government Controlled Trade Corporations of the two countries, for which purposes representatives of the concerned organisations will meet from time to time.

In this connection, the immediate possibilities of commencing trade in the following commodities was noted:

- Cotton
- Engineering goods
- Jute manufactures
- Iron Ore
- Railway equipment
- Rice
- and Tea.

5. Keeping in view the importance of immediate restoration of direct shipping services between the two countries for facilitating the movement of goods and trade, it was agreed that experts of the two countries should meet in December, 1974 to work out details in this regard. Likewise, discussions will be arranged at a mutually convenient time for the restoration of the rail links to serve mutual trade:

6. A Trade Agreement will be concluded between India and Pakistan in the near future for which purpose a delegation from India will visit Pakistan in the first week of January, 1975. This Protocol will come into force on the date of signing.

New Delhi, 15 January 1975

RECALLING the provisions of the Simla Agreement of 1972 to progressively restore and normalise relations between the two countries, and

RECALLING further the Protocol on Resumption of Trade between India and Pakistan signed at New Delhi on the 30th November, 1974, and

RESOLVING to restore direct shipping services between the two countries,

The Delegations of India and Pakistan, which met in New Delhi from the 11th to 15th January, 1975,

HAVE agreed as follows:

1. Necessary steps will be taken by both the countries to restore direct shipping services by the 15th February, 1975, on the principles of sovereign equality, and mutual benefit.

2. Such services will cover the carriage of cargo between the two countries.

3. Such carriage will only be by the vessels of the mercantile marine sailing under the flag of either country in accordance with its laws and regulations.

4. All cargo between the ports of the two countries shall be carried on the principle of equality in matters relating to cargo liftings and freight earnings on an annual basis.

5. Vessels of either country will load in the ports of one country only such cargo as is destined for the other country.

6. For coordination of all questions connected with the operation of direct shipping services between both the countries, the Government of India hereby nominate the Director General of Shipping, Bombay on their part and the Government of Pakistan likewise nominate the Director General of Ports and Shipping, Karachi, on their part.

7. The authorities referred to in Article (6) will nominate the shipping companies of their respective countries to determine by mutual discussion the details of operation of the services. For this purpose, the representatives of the Shipping Companies shall meet, as early as possible, on a mutually convenient date.

8. The vessels of either country, their crew, and cargoes shall be admitted to the territorial waters and the ports of the other country and shall be accorded the most-favoured-nation treatment relating to their entry, stay loading/unloading of cargo, leaving of the ports, and all necessary facilities for safe maritime navigation.

9. The provisions of Article (8) shall be subject to Article (5) and such restrictions as are or may be imposed, from time to time, by the laws of either country.

10. Either country shall adopt, within the limits of their laws and port regulations, all appropriate measures to facilitate and expedite maritime traffic, to prevent delays to vessels and to expedite the carrying out of customs and other formalities, applicable at the ports.

11. All ship documents including those relating to nationality, registration, tonnage and survey issued or recognised by one country shall be recognised by the other country.

12. Either country shall recognise the seamen’s identity documents issued by the appropriate authorities of the other country.

13. Holder of Seaman’s identity documents specified in Article (12) shall, during the stay of the vessel in the ports of the other country, be permitted to land on temporary shore leave without visa, on his obtaining a Landing Permit valid for a period not exceeding 24 hours, provided he deposits his Continuous Discharge Certificate with the Immigration Authorities and provided further that the crew list has been submitted to the concerned authorities in accordance with the laws and regulations in force in the port. The said person shall be subject to customs control. His entry and stay in port shall be governed by the provisions of the India-Pakistan Visa Agreement of the 14th September, 1974, and the laws and regulations in force in that port.

14. When a member of the crew disembarks in the port of the other country due to illness, he shall be permitted to enter a hospital. He shall also be permitted to rejoin ship or be repatriated if a member of the crew is left behind for reasons such as “missing the ship”, or his transfer from the ship, he shall be permitted to rejoin ship or be repatriated.

15. The captain of the vessel staying in the port of the other country or a person authorised by him shall be permitted and assisted to contact or visit the Consular official representing the interest of the other country.

16. If a vessel of either country be involved in maritime peril or encounters any other danger off the coast or in the ports of the other country, the vessel, the cargo, the crew and the passengers shall receive the same assistance which is accorded to a national vessel, its cargo, crew and passengers. This will be subject to the respective laws and international obligations of the two countries.
17. The cargo, ship stores, machinery spares etc., of the damaged vessel which have to be off loaded, shall not be subject to customs duties and taxes provided the same are taken out of the country within a reasonable period.

18. All payments and expenses relating to shipping services between the two countries shall be effected in freely convertible currency in accordance with the foreign exchange regulations in force from time to time in each country.

19. The representatives of the two authorities referred to in Article (5) above shall meet, as necessary, to discuss and resolve all outstanding problems. If they are unable to settle any question concerning the interpretation or application of this Protocol, such questions shall be referred to the respective Governments for settlement.

20. To facilitate urgent consultations in matters relating to implementation of this Protocol and any arrangements made thereunder, visas shall be granted immediately, on request, to four nationals of either country nominated by the respective authorities referred to in Article (6), for travel to the other country. Names and full particulars of the nationals so nominated shall be exchanged as soon as possible and Consular authorities representing the interest of both the countries informed accordingly.

21. Both the governments shall take necessary steps to rescind with effect from the 1st February, 1975, the existing restrictions on the entry of merchant vessels of their countries to each other’s ports.

22. The working of this Protocol shall be reviewed by the two Governments after the lapse of one year and thereafter as may be mutually agreed upon.

23. This Protocol will come into force on the date of signing.

New Delhi, 15th January, 1975

The Government of INDIA and The Government of PAKISTAN, DESIRING to develop, extend and strengthen the commercial relations between the two countries on the basis of equality and mutual benefit,
HAVE AGREED as follows:

Article 1
The two Governments shall, subject to the laws, regulations and procedures in force in their respective countries from time to time, take all appropriate measures to facilitate, strengthen and diversify trade between the two countries.

Article 2
In order to advance the objectives of Article 1 of this Agreement, the two Governments shall also encourage relevant enterprises and organizations of their respective countries to explore the scope for long-term contracts and, where appropriate, to conclude such contracts.

Article 3
The two Governments undertake to grant import/export licences in accordance with their respective laws and regulations relating to import/export and foreign exchange. To begin with, and unless otherwise agreed, trade will be conducted on Government-to-Government basis or through Government controlled Trade Corporations of the two countries.

Article 4
Ir The two Governments shall accord to each other in their trade regulations the most favoured nation treatment in accordance with the provisions and decisions of the GATT.

Article 5
The two Governments agree to cooperate effectively with each other to prevent infringement and circumvention of the laws, rules and regulations of either country in regard to matters relating to foreign exchange and foreign trade.

Article 6
In order to advance the objectives of this Agreement each Government shall, subject to the laws and regulations in force in its country encourage and facilitate the holding within its territory of trade fairs and exhibitions by enterprises and organizations of the other country.

Article 7
All payments and charges in connection with trade between the two countries shall be effected in freely convertible currency in accordance with the foreign exchange regulations in force from time to time in each country.

Article 8
The goods exported from Pakistan and India under this Agreement will be of Pakistan and Indian origin and for consumption in India and Pakistan respectively. The said goods shall not be re-exported to third counties.

Article 9
For the purpose of promoting the aims of this Agreement a Committee of representatives to be designated by the respective Governments shall be established.

The committee shall meet at least once a year, or as often as may be mutually agreed upon alternatively in India and Pakistan.

The Committee shall:
(a) review the implementation of the provisions of this Agreement;
(b) examine and recommend measures for the solution of problems which may arise in the implementation of this Agreement or in the course of the development of trade between the two countries;
(c) consider proposals made by either of the Governments, within the framework of this Agreement, aimed at further expansion and diversification of trade between the two countries.

Article 10
This Agreement shall come into force on the date of signature and shall be valid for a period of one year. Thereafter, it shall automatically be extended for two years unless, within a minimum period of three months prior to the expiration of the initial period validity of one year, either Government gives to the other a written notice of its intention to terminate the Agreement.

Memorandum of Understanding
Islamabad, 23 January 1975

1. For the purpose of giving effect to the provisions of Article 7 of the Trade Agreement and ensuring expeditious settlement of trade transactions under contracts concluded hereafter and other transactions incidental thereto, the two Governments recognize the need of commercial banks in India and Pakistan entering into suitable agency arrangements, subject to laws and regulations in force in the respective countries from time to time. These arrangements will be applicable only to trade transactions concluded after the 23rd January, 1975. Exports from India to Pakistan will be covered by irrevocable documentary letters of credit opened by a bank in Pakistan with a bank in India and expressed in convertible currency. Similarly, exports from Pakistan to India will be covered by irrevocable documentary letters of credit opened by a bank in India with a bank in Pakistan and expressed in convertible currency.

In order to avoid multiplicity of banks handling transactions in initial stages on either side, such transactions may for the present be confined to the State Bank of India in India and the National Bank of Pakistan in Pakistan. Suitable agency arrangements may be entered into between these two banks for this purpose. As trade between the two countries gathers momentum, arrangements may be reviewed at a later date with a view to including other banks in the financing of trade between India and Pakistan.

2. In accordance with clause 4 of the Trade Protocol of 30th November, 1974, the delegations from the concerned Organizations are scheduled to meet at the end of January, 1975 to explore the possibilities of trade in cotton. The delegations of the Government controlled corporations of the two countries will meet in March or April, 1975 in New Delhi to explore the possibilities of trade in other commodities such as, engineering goods, jute manufactures, tea, coal, iron and steel products, rice bidi leaves and railway track materials etc., which have been indicated as available for export. Further meetings of the representatives of the concerned Organizations will be held as and when necessary.

This Memorandum of Understanding will constitute an integral part of the Trade Agreement signed on this date.
Joint Press Release

In pursuance of the provisions of the Trade Agreement and the Memorandum of Understanding concluded between India and Pakistan at Islamabad on the 23rd January, 1975, a ten member delegation led by Mr. Izharul Haque, Chairman of the Trading Corporation of Pakistan visited India from the 22nd April to the 30th April 1975 and held a series of discussions with the Indian Trade Delegation led by Shri Vinod Parekh, Chairman of the State Trading Corporation of India.

During the course of its stay in India, the Trade Delegation from Pakistan visited various commercial and industrial establishments in and around Delhi, Bangalore, Madras and Bombay to acquaint themselves with the range, specifications, prices and delivery schedules of products which could be of import interest to Pakistan.

The two delegations agreed upon the modalities to be followed in the conduct of mutual trade: it was agreed that the focal point for coordinating trade enquiries and exchange of other relevant information would be the State Trading Corporation of India, New Delhi and the Trading Corporation of Pakistan, Karachi.

Consequent upon these discussions and visits, the two delegations identified specific areas in which commercial transactions could take place to the mutual advantage of both sides. The items of immediate interest agreed to by the two delegations were – Pig Iron, Coal, Coke and \textit{Bidi leaves}.

The two delegations agreed that details and specifications furnished in respect of Engineering Goods required further examination in Pakistan.

Corporation of Pakistan will communicate with the State Trading Corporation of India with a view to facilitating conclusion of contracts on a mutually acceptable basis. For this purpose, exchange of specialized purchase and sales teams would be arranged as and when required.

The two delegations further agreed to initiate action through their respective shipping agencies nominated by the two Governments to negotiate and determine the freight rates applicable in respect of items of trading interest.

The Chairman, Trading Corporation of Pakistan extended an invitation to Chairman, State Trading Corporation of India to visit Pakistan on a mutually convenient date.

2665. Record Note of discussions held between the Indian Trade Delegation and the Pakistan Trade Delegation from 11th to 14th January, 1976.

Islamabad, January 14, 1976.

As envisaged in the Trade Agreement and the accompanying Memorandum of Understanding signed between India and Pakistan at Islamabad is January 1975, a seven-member Indian Trade Delegation led by Mr. Vinod Parekh, Chairman, State Trading Corporation, visited Pakistan from 11th to 14th January 1976, to continue discussions with the Pakistan Trade Delegation headed by Chairman, Trade Corporation of Pakistan, Mr. Riaz Ahmed Naik, on the further expansion of trade between the two countries.

2. During its visit, the Indian delegation visited a number of commercial and industrial establishments in Pakistan. Several rounds of talks were held between the two delegations and the leader of the Indian delegation also visited Islamabad for discussions with the Secretary, Ministry of Commerce, Government of Pakistan.

3. In the course of these discussions, the two sides reviewed the progress made in the expansion of trade between the two countries since their last meeting in April 1975. They expressed satisfaction that it had been possible to finalist contracts for the export of pig iron and bidi leaves from India and hoped that there would be further similar contracts leading to an expansion in the two-way trade.
4. Both sides agreed that it was necessary to take steps to facilitate and speed up the exchange of trade information between the two countries. Towards this end, they agreed on the following:

i) Tenders, Trade enquiries etc. floated by Government and Public Sector agencies will be communicated expeditiously to the agencies concerned in the other country.

ii) Public Sector agencies in one country may deal directly with their counterparts in the other.

5. The two delegations identified specific commodity groups in which commercial transactions could take place to the mutual advantage of both sides. The items of interest agreed upon were:

1) Coal and coke.
2) Automobile components including Tyres and Tubes and Tractors and Tractor components.
3) Railway material.
4) Iron and steel items.
5) Ferro Alloys.
6) Chemicals.

6. To expedite negotiations in this regards, it was agreed that specialized Trade Teams from appropriate Public Sector agencies in both countries would visit each other as frequently as necessary.

7. The Indian Delegation expressed their deep appreciation of the warm hospitality extended to them during their visit to Pakistan.

8. The leader of the Indian Delegation extended an invitation to the Chairman, Trading Corporation of Pakistan, to visit India at an early date.

Progress of trade between India and Pakistan was reviewed at Islamabad between January 11 and 14, 1976 during the visit of a seven member Indian trade delegation to Pakistan led by Shri Vinod Parekh, Chairman of State Trading Corporation. During their stay, export contracts of pig iron and bidi leaves from India were signed and the two delegations expressed the hope that there would be further similar contracts for purchases from India leading to an expansion in the two way trade. The Indian delegation has returned here this morning.

Both sides agreed that it was necessary to take further steps to facilitate and speed up the exchange of trade information between the two countries. Towards this end, it had been decided that tenders and trade enquiries floated by Government and public sector agencies would be communicated expeditiously to the agencies concerned in the other country. The two delegations had also agreed that public sector agencies concerned in the other country might deal directly with their counterparts in the other.

The two delegations identified specific commodity groups in which commercial transactions could take place to the mutual advantage of India and Pakistan. These commodities were coke and coal, automobile components including tyres and tubes, tractors and tractor components, railway materials, iron and steel items, ferro alloys and chemicals.

It was also agreed that specialized trade teams from appropriate public sector agencies in both the countries would visit each other as frequently as necessary.

The Indian trade delegation held detailed discussions with Trading Corporation of Pakistan, Pakistan Automobile Corporation, Pakistan Tractor Corporation, Water and Power Development Authority, Railway Board, Pakistan Tyre Corporation, Federal Light and Heavy Engineering Corporation and other engineering units. They also called on the Pakistan Commerce Secretary at Islamabad.

The Leader of the Indian delegation extended an invitation to the Chairman, Trading Corporation of Pakistan to visit India at an early date.

Pak Team

It may be recalled that a Pakistani delegation led by Mr. Izharul Haque, Chairman of the Trading Corporation of Pakistan, visited India towards the end of April... last year to probe the prospects of increasing trade between the two countries. The Pakistani delegation visited various commercial and industrial establishments in and around Delhi, Bangalore, Madras and Bombay to acquaint themselves with the range specifications, prices and delivery schedules of products which could be of import interest to Pakistan. They also expressed interest in commodities like iron and steel products, engineering goods including railway track material, coke and coal and bidi leaves.

Trade between India and Pakistan was resumed on December 7, 1974 in accordance with the protocol signed here between the two countries earlier. A formal Trade Agreement was concluded in Islamabad in January, 1975 envisaging a Most-Favoured Nation treatment in accordance with the provisions and decisions of General Agreement on Trade and Tariff to each other. It was also agreed that the trade between the two countries would be conducted on Government to Government basis or through Government controlled trading corporations.

The initial trade Protocol listed several items for mutual exchange including cotton, engineering goods, jute manufactures, iron ore, railway equipment, rice and tea. The list was later enlarged to include Coal, Coke and bidi leaves.

Press Release issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Commerce clarifying that no special facilities or concessions had been given to India in its trade with Pakistan.

Islamabad, August 16, 1976.

A section of our Press and some political elements have, of late, been trying to distort and misrepresent the normalization of relations between India and Pakistan. The latest example of this perverse exercise in falsehood is a report published in NAWAI WAQT about the Indo-Pakistan Agreement. This report is replete with inaccuracies and it has tried to misrepresent the nature and consequences of trade between Pakistan and India.

The report tries to make out that Indian goods imported into Pakistan would adversely affect our industry and economy. It has claimed, for example, that bicycles will be imported from India, and this would damage the bicycle industries in Pakistan. This is a deliberate and patent falsehood, because there is no question of importing items like bicycles from India.
It has to be made clear that the recently concluded trade agreement with India is on the lines of the trade agreements concluded by Pakistan with other countries of the world. No special privileges or favours have been granted to India under this agreement. This trade agreement will operate under the overall context of the general import policy, announced by the Ministry of Commerce for the fiscal year 1976-77. The Government’s policy has given adequate safeguards to the local industries and manufactures. Most of the items, which are manufactured in the country, are banned from import. Only those items, which are either not produced in the country at all or are not adequate to meet the domestic requirements, are importable and in the latter case adequate protection has been given to the local industry and manufactures by levying import duties.

In addition to these safeguards contained in the import policy, the Government keeps a watchful eye on the international market and carries out a revision of the import duties in accordance with the price fluctuations in the world and in the interest of protecting the local industry. It has been alleged that India produces cheap goods, which will harm the local industry. The import policy takes sufficient care of this situation. Moreover, why should Pakistan not buy importable items from India at cheap rates; instead of wasting its valuable foreign exchange on purchasing these items from other countries on higher prices? It may also be pointed out that Pakistan imports a large number of items from China, which is one of the cheapest sources in the world, but it has not done any harm to the local industry. How can this happen in case of imports from India?

The report has mentioned the prospective import of iron bars and cycles from India. This is a malicious propaganda. The import of these items is totally banned under the Import Policy Order, 1976. The question of import of these items from India, therefore, does not arise. It may also be pointed out that the import of some other items is the exclusive monopoly of the Trading Corporation of Pakistan, for example, billets and iron and steel pipes. The question of import of these items by private traders does not arise. As these items are imported in the public sector, the Government will naturally not only import these items from the cheapest source, but will also look after the interest of the local industry.

The Indo-Pakistan trade in the private sector has been opened with effect from the 15th July, 1976. The private traders in the two countries are still exploring and the contacts between them have not been so intensive and extensive as reported in the Urdu daily. No foreign trade delegation, whether governmental or private, can visit Pakistan or a similar Pakistani delegation visit a foreign country without the permission of the government. No request has been received from India by the Government of Pakistan for the visit of any trade delegation. The report that two trade delegations from India will be visiting Pakistan in the near future is absolutely baseless and tendentious.
It has been maliciously alleged in this report that trade with India will affect the balance of trade of Pakistan adversely, as goods worth fifty crores of rupees will be imported from India. The spite in this report is obvious. The trade with India will be in the context of the overall import policy of the country and will not be outside that import policy. The items which are to be imported by the country to meet its domestic requirements will obviously be imported from the cheapest source in the world including India, but excluding certain specific countries, such as South Africa, Israel, etc. The imports from India, therefore, will not be an additional burden on the balance of trade but, in fact, the Indian goods will have to compete with the goods imported from other countries into Pakistan.

It has been maliciously alleged in the report that the Indian tradesmen will act as middlemen for trade between Pakistan and Bangladesh. The public in the country is aware that Pakistan has already entered into a trade agreement with Bangladesh in order to allow direct flow of trade between the two countries. The question of Indian tradesmen becoming middlemen in the Pak-Bangladesh trade does not arise. Similarly it has been tendentiously alleged that the trade with India will affect Pakistan’s trade with Muslim countries. This is also not correct, as the pattern of trade with India will not be the same as with Muslim countries and Pakistan has surplus goods and commodities which are required by India. Already, informal enquiries have been made by India for the purchase of Pakistani cotton and the trading circles are fully aware how Pakistan faced difficulty sometime back for the disposal of its surplus cotton. The trade with India will not affect Pakistan’s trade with the Muslim countries, which will not only be maintained but continue to grow.

2668. Note from Embassy of Pakistan in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, September 28, 1976.

Most Immediate
Embassy of Pakistan
New Delhi

No. Trade/1/76 September 28, 1976

The Embassy of Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs and has the honour to state that while the State Bank of Pakistan has taken up with the Reserve Bank of India the question of settlement of trade transactions between Pakistan and India through the A.C.U.; as an interim measure, Pakistani importers have been authorized to open letters of credit for imports from India in convertible foreign exchange. It has been reported, however, that the Government of India have imposed certain restrictions on exports from India to Pakistan which do not apply to exports to other countries; whereby the exporter has to obtain a licence for export to Pakistan by producing evidence of an irrevocable letter of credit in convertible foreign exchange. Pakistan nonetheless, has not laid any special condition for exports from Pakistan to India which are permitted under the normal regulations applicable to exports to other countries.

2. The matter is being brought to the notice of the Ministry of External Affairs, with a view to ascertaining the correct position as regards the procedures adopted by the Government of India to regulate exports to Pakistan. If extraordinary restrictions are applied to exports to Pakistan these would tend to restrict trade and removal of such restrictions would contribute to the growth of trade between the two countries. It is hoped too that the Government of India would find it possible to agree to the proposal for settlement of trade transactions between the two countries through the A.C.U.

The Embassy of Pakistan avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs, the assurances of its highest consideration.

The Ministry of External Affairs,
(Attention Mr. S.N. Puri, Dy. Secretary (Pak-aff)

2669. Agreed Minutes of the Trade Review Talks between India and Pakistan held in New Delhi from the 11th of April, 1977 to the 14th April, 1977.

A meeting between the delegations of the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan was held to review trade between the two countries in New Delhi from the 11th to 14th April, 1977. The Indian delegation was headed by Dr. P.C. Alexander, Secretary (Foreign Trade), Government of India and the Pakistan delegation was headed by Mr. E.A. Naik, Commerce Secretary, Government of Pakistan. The composition of the two delegations is at Annexure – I.

2. The following agenda was adopted for the review talks:

1. Review of working of the 1975 Trade Agreement
2. Review of trends of trade
3. Review of Transport arrangement-
   a) railways and (b) road.

3. At the outset the Leader of the Indian Delegation extended a warm welcome to the Pakistan Delegation and expressed the hope that the meeting would review the implementation of the Trade Agreement between the two countries with a view to promoting bilateral trade. The Leader of the Pakistan Delegation thanked the Government of India for the hospitality extended to the Pakistan Delegation and also expressed the hope that the review talks would help to find solutions for the problems that have come to notice in Indo-Pakistan trade since its resumption in November 1974.

Agenda Item No. 1: Review of Working of the 1975 Trade Agreement.

With reference to Article 9 of the Trade Agreement between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, it was agreed that the Committee envisaged in this Article be set up for promoting the aims of the Trade Agreement. It was agreed that permanent members of the Committee may be designated at this stage. Other concerned officials on either side may be coopted at the time of the deliberations of the Committee keeping in mind the problems that may arise from time to time. The Committee would consist of the following permanent members:

<tr>
<td>1. Secretary (Foreign Trade)</td>
<td>Secretary Commerce</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
3. A representative of the Min. of External Affairs
4. Joint Secretary/Deputy Secretary, Department of Foreign Trade – Member Secretary.

With reference to the provisions of Article 10 of the Trade Agreement, the two sides noted that the validity of the current Trade Agreement between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan would extend up to 22nd of January, 1978. It was agreed that the two sides would take appropriate action in due course regarding the future of the Trade Agreement.

The provisions of the Memorandum of Understanding dated 23rd January, 1975 attached to the Trade Agreement were reviewed by the two sides. In view of the changes already introduced on both sides in financial and banking procedures applicable to trade transactions, particularly the introduction of the Asian Clearing Union for settlement of accounts, it was decided that the said Memorandum was no longer necessary. It was, therefore, agreed that the said Memorandum may be deleted. Article 7 of the Trade Agreement provides the necessary framework for regulating arrangements for trade transaction hereafter.

Agenda Item No. 2: Review of Trends of Trade

The trends of trade between the two countries were reviewed. It was pointed out by the Pakistan side that since the induction of private sector in trade between Pakistan and India, letters of credit for a value of 30 million $ for imports into Pakistan from India had been opened up to the end of February 1977, whereas exports from Pakistan to India were negligible. The Pakistan side expressed concern over this trend which amounted to one-way traffic in trade between the two countries and suggested that efforts may be made to narrow down this gap. The Indian side indicated that according to their figures for the period April 1976 to March 1977, licences issued for export from India to Pakistan were of the order of Rs. 20 crores. Imports from Pakistan during this period amounted to Rs. 1.7 crores. It was stated that since the accounting periods varied, the figures did not tally. However, the trend was clear that while exports from India to Pakistan had picked up substantially after the induction of private sector, the imports from Pakistan to India were at a negligible level.

The Indian side stated that they were fully conscious of the need for the promotion of two-way trade and indicated that they would be willing to effect imports from Pakistan and towards this end suggested that identification of exportable items from Pakistan to India may be made so that the gap could be narrowed.

It was indicated that Pakistan was exporting approximately 200 items on a global basis. While noting that cotton and rice are likely to be the major items of export from Pakistan to India, the Pakistan side indicated some other items available for export to India. The following items were indicated by the Pakistan side as having good prospects, for immediate export to India.

1. Cotton yarn
2. Rock salt
3. Fresh and dried fruits
4. Gypsum
5. Industrial alcohol
6. Tobacco
7. Onyx; and
8. Medicinal herbs.

This list was understood to be indicative and not a comprehensive one. The Indian side stated that some of the items suggested by the Pakistan side are not permissible for imports to India. However they would give due consideration to the suggestions made by the Pakistan side and would let the Pakistan side know of the possibilities of imports shortly.

The Indian side enquired about the possibility of import of naphtha and furnace oil from Pakistan. In respect of these items, it was indicated by the Pakistan side that the normal policy was to invite international tenders for sale, in which Indian parties could also participate. However the possibility of a deal between the respective public sector organizations in the two countries would be examined in consultation with the Ministries concerned in Islamabad.

It was indicated by the Indian side that they would continue to explore possibilities of increasing imports from Pakistan in order to promote two way trade.

Agenda Item No. 3. Review of Transport Arrangements:

(a) Railways:

The problems of movement of goods by rail were discussed and the Indian side presented on Aide-Memoire on the subject to the Pakistan side which is at Annexure II. The Pakistan side agreed to refer these problems to the concerned authority for examination.
(v) Road:

The problems connected with transport by road were discussed. The Indian side suggested that if a system of back-to-back loading/unloading and joint customs inspection could be introduced, the volume of goods transported by road could be increased, thereby relieving pressure on the railway system. It would also improve the economy of road transport. The Pakistan side agreed to consider the proposals and to refer them for examination to the appropriate authorities. It was agreed that, in order to further consider these proposals a meeting of the experts of the two sides at an appropriate level may be arranged at a mutually agreed date.

Agenda Item No. 4: Measures for Promotion of Bilateral Trade

The Pakistan side was of the view that the liberal import policy followed by Pakistan had facilitated a higher level of Indian exports to Pakistan. On the other hand, the Indian import policy did not favour to the same extent, imports from Pakistan into India. The Indian side pointed out that in their opinion there was nothing in the import policy of India which was inhibiting imports from Pakistan; on the other hand it was the inadequacy of export items of interest to India in Pakistan which was limiting the flow of imports from that country.

In order to explore new items of export from Pakistan to India, it was felt that appropriate encouragement would be necessary for visits by businessmen on both sides. In order to promote contacts between the business communities on the two sides, it was also suggested that better facilities for travel from India to Pakistan may be provided. The Pakistan side stated this matter was under examination.

The talks were held in a friendly and cordial atmosphere and the two sides agreed that the meeting of the Committee constituted under Article 9 of the Trade Agreement between the two, Governments be held before the end of 1977, at Islamabad.

Annexure – II
Aide – Memoire

Streams of Traffic
There are two distinct streams in the flow of traffic from India to Pakistan:
(i) Piecemeal traffic loaded from various stations in the country (logs and timber chemicals, cycle parts etc.)
(ii) Bulk traffic loaded from major producing centres like cement factories and steel plants.

Traffic Potential
According to present estimates traffic potential by rail is to the tune of about 100 wagons per day – requiring the running of 2 trains daily – one to clear piecemeal traffic of about 40 wagons and the other to clear the bulk movement of about 60 wagons.

Present Position
Presently the clearance of traffic by Pakistan Railway is very inadequate and irregular. Only 8 to 9 wagons, on an average, are able to get across. Movement takes place on hardly 10 to 12 days in the month. The trends of movement during the past 3 months are given below:

<table>

Traffic Awaiting Clearance
There is a heavy backlog. Over 750 wagonloads are awaiting clearance, despite loading having been regulated for the past 10 to 15 days. Indian Railways have stopped accepting registrations for Pakistan traffic. A large number of LCs are reported to be expiring.

Constraints
There is no official communication from Pakistan setting out the difficulties encountered in handling the traffic from India. An Indian team of Railway Divisional officials who visited Lahore for a meeting in January, 77 noted that the main problems relate to:-
(A) Spare constraints in Lahore area inhibiting the free handling of traffic in Lahore Goods shed.

(B) Late receipt of documents by consignees due to procedural and postal delays.

Suggested Remedies

According to the existing Rail Agreement between the two countries, traffic in wagon loads can be booked, through to destinations which are open for the booking of goods. Traders and Government Agencies may diversify the loading patterns accordingly and not confine all loading to Lahore alone. This will necessitate a review of the present procedure of Customs examination of all freight traffic at Lahore only.

Dumps should be created for various types of bulk traffic like cement, steel etc., at suitable locations where the wagons could be unloaded for further distribution as required.

Documents such as railway receipts, bill of lading, etc., may move through the Train Guard of through a Courier Service daily. Pakistan Governments (Railway, Customs, and Banking Departments) would, however, have to clear these arrangements. If wagons could be released and consignments delivered promptly on the basis of these authenticated duplicate documents, it is likely that much of the hold ups may disappear.

As far as bulk traffic is concerned, details have to be worked out with the Pakistan Railway and Customs. Without sorting out the related technical matters concerning bulk movement it is not possible to start the movement of steel plant traffic, cement etc. to Pakistan. A meeting at the headquarters level has been suggested on the 14th April, 1977 at Attari.
The Indian Railways delegation to Islamabad, Pakistan, has achieved a significant breakthrough in their talks with the Pakistan side which is likely to give a boost to exchange of goods and parcels traffic between the two countries.

The annual meeting between the Railway delegations of India and Pakistan took December 26 to 29, 1977. The Indian delegation was led by Shri S.N. Sachdev, Director, Traffic Transportation, Ministry of Railways (India) and the Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Sheikh Anwar Hussain, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Railways (Pakistan).

Both sides took note of the increasing level of freight traffic and assessed the scope of its further increase. To meet the demand of traffic, detailed procedure for exchanging 100 wagons daily was laid down. The procedure now agreed upon provides for greater flexibility in the day-to-day transactions of wagons between the two countries. A significant breakthrough was also achieved by realistically reformulating the standards of wagons, interchangeable between the two countries, in the light of changes in design and other structural modifications. This will enable more wagons becoming acceptable for loading and exchange between India and Pakistan. Iron and steel traffic from India to Pakistan has been steadily on the increase and to enable a higher volume of this traffic moving into Pakistan, the interchange of bogie open flat wagons, which carry heavy steel material, has been accepted in principle by both countries. Special rules have been framed to facilitate a regular flow of bogie open flat wagons between India and Pakistan. The Pakistan side has also assured that more and more terminals will be diversified and dumps created to deal with bulk traffic in iron and steel, asbestos pipes, conductors, cement, etc.

Another important decision taken at the meeting relates to the facility of a daily parcel service between the two countries. Modalities have been worked out to provide a bogie parcel van daily on the Express train running between Amritsar and Lahore.

The talks were held in a frank and cordial atmosphere and the decisions taken at this meeting are expected to come into force from February 1, 1978.
2671. Joint Press Statement issued on the conclusion of India-Pakistan Trade Talks.

Islamabad, May 9, 1978.

The Commerce Secretaries of the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and the Government of the Republic of India met in Islamabad from the 6th to the 8th May, 1978 to review trade relations between the two countries. The talks were held in a cordial and friendly atmosphere.

The two sides acknowledged the need for strengthening mutual commercial relations and agreed to promote bilateral trade. The Pakistan side explained that the prevailing regulatory mechanism governing external trade in either country was not suited to the conduct of bilateral trade in accordance with the principles of equality, mutual benefit and diversification which formed the basis of resumption of trade between the two countries. The Indian side, while explaining its view that trade could be conducted on the pattern followed hitherto, expressed its readiness to cooperate in solving the problems put forward by the Pakistan side.

In recognition of the right of an importing country to seek an orderly marketing arrangement, the two sides considered various regulatory measures which could be adopted to bring about the necessary improvements in the nature and direction of trade. They agreed in principle that indicative lists of goods and commodities in which trade would be in mutual interest would be exchanged. They further decided to resume their talks after a brief adjournment.

The problems of Pakistan were several and complex and these were explained by the Pakistan Times on May 10, 1978: “Pakistan had been particularly worried about the marked imbalance in the exchange. In the current financial year, the country has not been able to interest the Indians in anything apart from quantities of naptha fuel oil. On the other hand, Pakistani businessmen have almost made a rush of Indian goods, several of them non-essential category. Partly the phenomenon is inherent in the present situation of unequal development. Pakistan has little to compare with the range of goods India offers. The kind of imbalance this is bound to create is not necessarily harmful. It does not detract from the principle of mutual benefit. The benefit that accrues to Pakistan in such cases is that it is able to substitute costlier and more distant sources of its imports with one that is more convenient and less expensive. In the case of non-essential or of such goods as compared with our manufacturers (like some agricultural machinery), the onus would seem to lie largely on ourselves. There ought to be an effort to regulate imports in the private sector, if necessary by reducing the free list and transferring the trade in selected commodities to the public sector. The import policy should in any case have been carefully reviewed following the opening of trades with India. After following all this, there still seems room for India to be more accommodating in regard to the import of Pakistani goods. The Indian import policy is highly restrictive and has no more than 17 items on the free list (compared to Pakistan’s 400). No basic change in that can be expected, as the Islamabad statement also indicates, but there is still enough scope to make substantial adjustments and to remove bottlenecks that make even the flow of
There has also been some problems in the Indians meeting the supply schedules agreed. Pakistan’s economy, its industrial activity particularly, has been through a rough patch recently. In normal conditions and with necessary facilities there is no reason why mutual trade should not be a lot more to mutual benefit. In the interim, Islamabad, would rightly expect Delhi to appreciate the anxieties of both official and non-official circles in Pakistan; India should make a bold effort at the next round of talks to ensure that trade ties between the two countries are rationalized and put on a sounder footing.”

There was an undercurrent of worry in Pakistan as to what would happen to the Indo-Pakistan trade in view of no agreement having been reached. The official sources trying to assuage the worries of the trading community said that status quo in trade would continue. As such the letters of credit opened under the 1975 Indo-Pakistan Trade Agreement, which expired this January but were still being honoured, would be acted upon until such time as the Federal Government stopped trading with India in the private sector through a notification. The media reiterated the stand taken by Pakistan at the talks that in the absence of an agreement on new trading arrangements, the legal position regarding trade with India would revert to the provisions of the Trade Protocol signed by them in 1974.
It was very kind of you to renew during our meeting in Nairobi your earlier invitation to me to visit India. The appreciation you have shown of the difficulties that stand in the way of my visit encourages me to believe that you will bring your great experience and outstanding statesmanship to bear on their resolution.

With profound regards,

Yours sincerely

General
(M. Zia-ul-Haq)

Pakistan’s Objection to Unrestricted Participation of Private Sector in Indo-Pakistan Trade

Trade between Pakistan and India was liberalised and thrown open to private sector from 1st July, 1976, consequent upon Joint Statement of the two countries’ Foreign Secretaries on 14th May, 1976.

2. At that time India and Pakistan were following different types of trade policies. After July 1976 while Pakistan’s liberal import policies allowed Indian private sector virtually unlimited access to the Pakistan wide open market the private sector in Pakistan did not receive reciprocal benefits in the highly protected Indian market. The change to the private sector trading coincided with the cessation of cotton exports from Pakistan, this being the only item which India had imported previously. As a result Pakistan’s exports to India after 15 July 1976 suddenly fell to almost nil while India’s exports burgeoned.

3. Apart from the large trade imbalance experienced in the first year (1976-77), the following consequences of the trade liberalization were felt :-

(a) Adverse effects on local Industry

(i) Import from India adversely affected Pakistan’s nascent domestic industry since the industrial development in the two countries is, at present, at different levels. India has the advantage of local availability of raw material and older and more advanced and sophisticated technology;

(ii) Some of the light engineering products of India were exported at artificially low prices which hit the domestic industry resulting in the closure of some, and leading to unemployment and dissatisfaction in others.

(iii) A large number of items which were not actually importable from India or from any other country found their way into Pakistan market, primarily due to mis-declaration of Indian exporters (of course in collusion with Pakistani importers).
Pakistan has developed over the years trade relations with some countries of the region which are reliable sources of supply as well as markets for Pakistani exports. Freight cost being nominal India exported many items at much lower prices causing understandable concern to Pakistan’s traditional trading partners who could hold out the threat of retaliatory measures thus affecting Pakistan’s exports. Since Indian goods compete with Pakistan’s in those markets Pakistan could ill afford to accept temporary cheaper imports from India at the cost of regular supplies from and Pakistani exports to these markets.

The level of trade with India remained open ended and there could be no limit to its dimensions. The already massive balance of trade deficit against Pakistan in the first two years of trade on private account would have grown from bad to worse leading to growing political controversy and justifiable economic discontent.

The Reasons for Reverting to ‘Government to Government’ Trade

4. The realities of limited opportunities in Indian market available to us, our unequal competitiveness with India and the liberal pattern and features of our trade regime, evolved in isolation of any trade relations with India for well over a decade, are not conducive to conducting mutually beneficial trade with India on a completely unregulated basis. It would surely be appreciate that unless there is mutuality of advantage trade with other countries cannot be palatable to industry, business and particularly the public. It was, therefore, considered necessary to evolve a framework of safeguards against the import of such items from India as adversely affected our industry as well as safeguards against an unlimited imbalance of trade. The exercise would obviously take some time and we sincerely believe that patience would be in the mutual long-term interest rather than haste which might prove counterproductive. Keeping in view these objective factors the leader of the Pakistan delegation at the conclusion of the last trade talks informally informed the leader of the Indian delegation that unless another acceptable basis was agreed to earlier, trade with India would, under the Pakistan’s import policy for 1978-79, be governed by the Protocol of November 1974. Legally this situation had in fact come about in January 1978 when the 1975 Trade Agreement had expired.

5. The public sector plays an important role in industry as well as trade in India and Pakistan. The presumption that trade in public sector would, somehow, restrict the volume of trade seems to be premised on the experience of 1975-76 when Pakistan and India, after resumption of trade relations, transacted business only in a few commodities. That was a very special period. During that period the public sector in the two countries were trying to familiarise themselves with the procedures of respective corporations and working to identify items which could be traded. Moreover 1975-76 was the peak period of international recession which also witnessed in Pakistan a huge accumulation of public sector import inventories leaving no room for the further purchase of items which could be imported from India. Such a situation does not exist any longer. We, therefore, do not see any reason why substantial trade cannot be conducted on Government-to-Government basis.

6. Trade between the public sectors of the two countries would provide equitable and mutually advantageous framework which cannot be subjected to any political controversy. The public sector trading in both the countries could handle a much larger volume of trade and offer benefits to the partners in trade which unfortunately the private sector could not ensure.

2673. Joint Press Statement issued at the conclusion of India – Pakistan Trade Talks.

Islamabad, October 9, 1978.

The second round of trade talks between India and Pakistan was held at Islamabad from October 7 to 9, 1978.

The Indian trade delegation was led by Mr. C.R. Krishnaswamy Rao Sahib, Secretary Commerce, Government of India and the Pakistan trade delegation was led by Mr. Izharul Haque, Secretary Commerce, Government of Pakistan.

The talks were held in an atmosphere of cordiality.

The two sides reiterated their resolve to conduct trade on a mutually beneficial basis. The Pakistan side re-emphasised the problems which had caused concern in Pakistan on account of actual experience of trading in the last two years.

The Indian side, while reiterating their stand, offered to resolve all these problems.

The two sides held constructive discussions regarding the scope and modalities of trade suitable to their respective trade regions and requirements.

After a detailed exchange of views, substantial progress towards finding solutions to these problems was registered.
The two delegations agreed to hold another round of talks in New Delhi in the near future to examine the remaining issues.

Pending finalization of a trade agreement, while trade on Pakistan side would continue to be conducted through public sector agencies, on the Indian side both the private and public sectors could participate in such trade.

IMMEDIATE

No. 034-SAV.  January 29, 1979

Commerce Secretary from Ambassador.

Reference your enquiry about prospects for trade talks. SATTAR, who met me before returning from his meeting here, confirmed impression given to you by his Commercial Counsellor that Pakistanis were soon going to suggest early dates but we have it from fully reliable sources that nothing of this sort is contemplated, other commitments making any resumption with us physically impossible for several weeks, and political circumstances making progress equally impossible. Commerce Minister SARFRAZ, who stayed at length at function at my house two days ago, while volunteering all sorts of good intentions (which he promptly belied by very sharp criticism of us to some foreign correspondents who met him) also said we must leave timing to him.

2. This of course we are perfectly content to do, but we need to clarify basis for next round, about which officials concerned here are professing a totally different view from ours. You will recall we were discussing four lists Pakistani exports through (i) State organizations (ii) private channels, and Pakistani imports through (iii) their public sector and (iv) what they would allow from us in their private sector. Their suggestions for fourth list were derisory, but our clear impression was we had only started discussions and no list was finalized, as we were only temporizing pending basic decision whether Pakistan was ready to sign any agreement at all. When they asked us to postpone everything, ZIA himself said some at least of our industrial goods should be included in fourth list, but his officials take the line that agreement was already reached on four lists and only timing of signing was put off. SATTAR went so far as to say Pakistan Commerce Secretary had “understanding” with you to this effect, which I promptly denied. As you know lists we were looking at represent no real change from present ban on private trading, at least unless fourth list is expanded substantially. This is not a matter of working through Public Sector (which they know we like but which in practice they are not acting through despite their promises) or of opening doors to private sector: Pakistani ban is politically directed to prevent growth of any group here which would have vested interest in good relations with us and once we accept their present formulation, they will just call it a day and not allow any change in future. It is therefore of considerable long term consequence to our interests to persist in widening of trade framework now. You might take early informal opportunity to urge through SATTAR need for expansion of fourth list as prerequisite for any agreement, emphasizing talks here had only reached exploratory stage and were far from final.

2675. Record of a meeting between Commerce Secretary and Pakistan Ambassador Abdul Sattar.

New Delhi, April 24, 1979.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

The Pakistan Ambassador, Mr. Abdul Sattar, called on Commerce Secretary at 3 PM today.

2. The Ambassador began by communicating his Government’s “wish” and “decision” to conclude a trade Agreement with India at the next round of talks. He stated that after two sessions held in May and October, 1978, both sides know each other’s position well. During the October talks, Pakistan had candidly informed the Indian Delegation that the reasons for their inability to conclude an Agreement then were neither economic nor commercial, but political. The “timing” was not considered right. The situation is somewhat different now and Pakistan feels it necessary that an Agreement be reached at the next round. The Ambassador said that if there were any remaining problems or differences it would be advantageous to sort them out before the meeting of the Commerce Secretaries.

3. C.S. said we were happy to know that the Government of Pakistan was now in a position to resume a dialogue with us in Delhi. We ourselves feel that at the forthcoming session, an agreement should be reached. The only outstanding issue that needs resolution first relates to expansion of List IV viz., “Items to be imported from India by the Private Sector in Pakistan”. C.S. recalled the discussions he had with Pakistan’s Commerce Secretary last October when it was clarified that this list must include some manufactures particularly engineering goods. We were prepared to consider applying voluntary restraint on exports, both in terms of value and quantity, on items considered sensitive by Pakistan. But we cannot accept a total denial of trading in manufactures to the private sector in both countries. Commerce Secretary added that this point had also come up during his call on the Pakistan President who himself felt that Indian products could be included for imports through private trading channels as long as Pakistani industry was not hurt and the items were competitive. For follow-up by Pakistan, we had left a list behind giving particulars of the commodities in the engineering sector on which trade enquiries had been received from Pakistan parties.

4. Ambassador Sattar said that the impression in Islamabad was that the lists had really been finalized last October. They had in fact been approved by the Economic Committee of the Cabinet. Any amendment now would require fresh, high level clearance, which itself may mean delay and hard bargaining. His Government hoped that at the next round they would not have to reargue on points already discussed exhaustively. It has taken six months to reach a point when talks could be suggested. Pakistan’s new trade policy is to be announced on 1st July, 1979. Pakistan would like the agreement to be concluded before that date. If there were to be marginal changes in the lists, the matter could be sorted out. But such changes should not be made a pre-requisite to either holding of the next round of talks or to the signing of an agreement. Difficulties which India had in this regard could be sorted out subsequently through the inclusion in the agreement of a “review clause”; a review could be held say at end-year when items of export interest to India could quietly and “invisibly” be inserted into list IV.

5. C.S. clearly told the Pakistan Ambassador that it would be very difficult for us to sign any agreement which totally excluded engineering goods from trading by the private sector in the two countries. He reminded the ambassador that India’s largest export item was engineering goods and the Government was fully committed to encouraging the dynamic sector and exports of value added commodities. Our Parliament would not accept any arrangement under which trade by the private sector is restricted to items which we were exporting in the “sixteenth century” especially when a wide variety of manufactures were being imported by Pakistan freely from other countries. In view of Pakistan’s sensitivity, however, we were not insisting that the entire range of engineering goods be included in our agreement; even for some items that are agreed for inclusion, we would be prepared to consider exercising self-restraint in exports.

6. C.S. suggested that if the Government of Pakistan were to consider this whole matter in terms of specific commodities, they may well find that the problem is not too difficult of resolution. C.S. said we might even be agreeable to not having a generic heading of engineering goods in List IV; instead, specific products could be identified under a formula in which:

(i) No restrictions on imports are placed on items not manufactured in Pakistan and whose entry into Pakistan is permitted under the relevant regulations;

(ii) Items in which Pakistan is totally self-sufficient and where competition is feared from more competitive Indian goods could be excluded;

(iii) Some quantitative or value restrictions could be applied on exports of those items from India for which Pakistan has some manufacturing capacity but allows import from other countries to meet the domestic requirements.

An agreement on these lines should meet Pakistan’s objective.

7. Mr. Sattar felt that his Commerce Secretary would not have a flexible enough brief to take spot decisions in Delhi which would provide for major expansion in the lists. C.S. appreciated this point and straightaway communicated our willingness to receive in Delhi, prior to the Secretary-level talks, a lower-level team from Pakistan, technically equipped to sort out this issue. Alternatively, if Pakistan desired, the matter could be resolved through diplomatic channels.

8. Mr. Sattar again urged consideration by the Government of India of the Pakistani suggestion that an agreement now be concluded, with the various lists being made the subject matter of bilateral review at a subsequent date, especially as the Pakistan Government definitely was of the view that full understanding had virtually been reached during the October talks.
9. C.S. replied that while he would certainly place the Pakistani viewpoint before the Commerce Minister, he would like to make it absolutely clear that Pakistan’s understanding that a final shape had been given to the lists in Islamabad was incorrect. C.S. added that he did not think it would be possible for Government to go in for an agreement on the basis of what had been worked out so far. In terms of Government’s policy of fostering the closest economic and commercial links with our neighbouring countries, we had already taken a large number of measures to provide for the special needs and sensitivities of Pakistan. We have been entirely sincere in our approach. We hoped that Pakistan appreciated the steps taken by us and would cooperate in arriving at a mutually acceptable formula that could also be defended in India.

10. Ambassador Sattar noted these observations and took leave stating that his Government was grateful for the principled stand adopted by India towards Pakistan which had greatly helped in creating an atmosphere of confidence in our bilateral relations.

IMMEDIATE

No. 147-SAV.

Commerce Secretary from Ambassador.

Dayal will have informed you that during meetings between Foreign Secretaries in Delhi May 30th Pakistanis agreed to let technical experts from both sides work out details of what Pakistani private sector could import from or export to India before final round of trade talks between your and Pakistan Commerce
Secretary. When I called on SHAH NAWAZ here June 9th to pursue various points requiring action after our Delhi meetings, this also came up, Pakistan Foreign Secretary suggesting we send our team here quickly so agreement could be worked out before June 30th announcement of Pakistan’s annual import policy. This was originally the approach of Pakistan’s Commerce Secretary but when I saw him today to work out dates, he made it clear nothing could be done by June 30th and he himself could not come to Delhi before mid-August. For discussions between technical experts he suggested first or last week of July. I deliberately emphasized on our side we were ready for the experts to meet now but he said all concerned on his side would be heavily preoccupied and invited us to come July 2nd.

2. IZHARUL HAQUE also reiterated his understanding and preference that agreement be confined to what Pakistan was ready to accept had signature been politically possible at our last round. He acknowledged you had warned him at airport before leaving Islamabad that it would be very difficult for us to accept any agreement unless it provided for some Pakistani private sector import of our engineering goods, but he maintained that basically we had agreed on the components of the four lists already. He argued that reasons for proceeding very gradually and having only very limited imports through private sector still prevailed, but to meet our point of view his Government were prepared to consider inclusion of “one or two” engineering items at present, which could always be reviewed later.

3. This promise of later expansion is meaningless. It will be recalled that when they banned private trading, the Pakistanis promised we would see how their public sector would expand trade with us and of course nothing has happened. As I told IZHARUL HAQUE, we are not interested either in the quantum of trade or in doing any favours to private sector; on contrary, we went trade to be instrument for improving relations and are ourselves very public-sector oriented. However, apart from our objections to discrimination against India, we felt private trading would promote more people to people contact, which was the best way to improve broader relations. It is of course precisely because they realize this that the Pakistani die-hards are so adamant about limiting private sector trade. Once Pakistani Government makes any concession to those die-hards it becomes virtually impossible to get them to move forward – as we are seeing in this very case of the trade ban. Pakistanis also have a habit of trying to get agreements on all sorts of oral assurances which they then proceed to forget completely. (they have incidentally been trying to project our joint statement of last October as confirming acceptance of their position – another typical Pakistani casuistry which makes it so important to insist on even punctuation marks when dealing with them.)
4. Since what they now have in mind is so insignificantly marginal a change in their position of last October, there seems to be little point in having any expert level discussions merely to work out “one or two” engineering items. Since it is also now apparent that they are not serious about having an agreement before announcing their new policy, we had best stick to our position that after such a long wait, when they have had ample time for the sort of review of their import needs and policies such as they promise us for the future, it would be impossible for us to explain to our public why we were agreeing to a “new” trading arrangement which in all practical terms was no different from the existing position, which had all along been an unacceptable to us, that we were singled out for exclusion from Pakistan’s private sector trading. As for doing business with us, Pakistan can go ahead even now through its public sector if it is serious, because trade can move even without any agreement. The new agreement must be a positive forward step, and since we have waited so long, we are prepared to wait even longer till Pakistan feels ready to accept an import arrangement which genuinely adds something to existing position and not just pan, bidi and tea.

5. I told Pakistanis I would check with Delhi when it would be convenient for our experts to come. We should in any case plead other commitments for first week July as it would be inappropriate for us to commence talks on the very morrow of their new import announcement, as though we have come running because we are still excluded. About our having any meeting at all, I suggest that you call their Ambassador in Delhi when convenient, tell him we are ready to send experts but since his Government say here they can only accept changes so marginal they would in fact be purely pro forma, we would like to resume talks even at experts level only when they have re-examined their position and are ready to improve on it significantly.
SECRET

Letter from Ambassador of India in Pakistan K. S. Bajpai to Ministry of Commerce.
Islamabad, July 11, 1979.

Ambassador of India
Islamabad

You will have seen the gist of the Pakistan Commerce Secretary’s announcement of the Import Policy on June 30, press versions of which have been sent to you. The Dawn version which usually is fuller puts the position in more promising terms than the Pakistan Times report which, inadvertently but perhaps more accurately, reveals the real approach of the authorities here that “import from India would only be done by the public sector.”

2. I trust the Commerce Secretary is now back and that you have been able to formulate your views on the Pakistani proposal for preliminary talks at expert level to identify the items that could be traded in the private sector. Most people here knowledgeable in such matters, see very little chance of the present regime being able to undo the damage already done by the ban on private sector trading; as you know, once anybody takes a hard line position here in regard to India, he becomes a prisoner of what for convenience we can call the Nawai-Waqt lobby (though it extends far beyond that newspaper) and the fear of being accused of going soft on India inhibits all objective re-thinking. Some private firms here who are anxious to do business with us, if only to represent our concerns in negotiating with the Pakistani public sector organisations, tell me that with the acute foreign exchange position of this country, complicated by very poor aid expectations, the importers here will be compelled to turn to the cheapest source and we have very good prospects. Even they, however, accept my skepticism about anything more than nominal changes in regard to the private sector and agree that the powers in the Establishment with a negative approach towards us will probably persist in denying us even public sector contracts. However, there are some areas where, we are advised, efforts on our part would still pay dividends. Some of the projects which have been given the highest priority – e.g. power development are due to come up with aid which is of such a nature that even those in this Government opposed to doing business with us will be hard put to it to reject our bids. For example, the transmission lines from Guddu to Karachi are being financed by a Kuwaiti loan and ours should prove so much the best bid that if the Pakistanis try to raise obstacles, we should be able to intervene with the Kuwaiti benefactors. Similarly, the power project at Pipri is not likely to come up unless there is a loan from the A.D.B. Here also, we should be able to persuade or pressurize the Pakistanis to decide on purely objective merits. I gather some projects with German aid are also of a nature that some of the components at least can be supplied by us under the aid-giver’s policy of allowing other developing countries to be suppliers.

3. To divert for a moment, Pakistani business circles in Karachi tell me that they were rather surprised we did not put in a bid for some transformers that were needed by KESC as our bid could not have been rejected. Heaven knows we have tried earlier hard enough, and I feel that our own people are so fed up with the Pakistani attitudes that we are beginning to lose interest. That is a good talking point for negotiations, but in practical terms, I feel we might continue to keep our eyes and ears open and put in bids; if only to build up a case history of Pakistani prejudices. I am endorsing a copy of this letter to JS(PAK-IRAF) and perhaps you will both advise BHEL accordingly.

4. But to revert to the main question of the further steps on Indo-Pakistan Trade negotiations, I happened to have occasion to get Najmuddin Shaikh’s views on this. I told him that during my talk with Izharul Haq, there seemed little change in the Pakistani position of confining private trade to a handful of what we now call ‘sixteenth century’ items like Paan and Bidi. Shaikh looked genuinely surprised, saying that the decision was that we should, while avoiding controversial items like engineering goods, move beyond the Brussels tariff nomenclature and accept a few broad categories – e.g. “spare parts”. I said that this approach would be a little more promising though it would be better still if Pakistan would accept our self-restrained approach and give us the negative list of what they do not want to allow into Pakistan rather than a small “positive list”. However, that was merely my standard gambit and I am not suggesting we go back to that position if there is a real possibility of the Pakistanis moving towards a reasonable agreement with us. What makes me a little intrigued by Najmuddin’s remarks is that when I called on Foreign Secretary Shah Nawaz in another context a few days later, he asked what was happening on trade; I said that we were awaiting Delhi’s reply and that in view of what Najmuddin had told me, perhaps something useful could be worked out. While seeing me off in the corridor afterwards, Najmuddin hastened to clarify that what he had said was his own impression and was not based on any talks with the Commerce Ministry. It may well be that the latter is merely safeguarding its negotiating position and taking a rigid stand now in order to make whatever little concessions they make in the actual talks look like a major change of approach. Taking the picture here as a whole, however, that is rather doubtful. I repeat my advice that our Commerce Secretary might send for Sattar (who is here for a Conference of Pakistani Ambassadors, but should be back in Delhi next week) and tell him that we have considered and are willing to send a small team here, preparatory to the meeting of the Commerce Secretaries, that we would be glad to have just a preliminary talk if the Pakistan Government are seriously interested in a genuine, as distinct from a superficial, move away from the present discriminatory policy towards India, that is the Pakistanis were trying to make us agree to the small list which they had put forward for discussions last time, then there was a little chance of success; but if a real, however, limited, shift was possible in the Pakistani position, then we would be glad to sent you and, at most, one other expert here for discussions on the scope of private trade. I do not think we should make an issue of whether the talks are there or here – it is easier for them to get decisions here.

Yours Sincerely

(K.S. Bajpai)

2. The position on the ground is that the Government of Pakistan has finally released a list of 40 items in the last week of October which can now be imported by private importers through the Trading Corporation of Pakistan (TOP). As per the circular of the State Bank of Pakistan dated October 23, 1982 imports of the specified items from India will be made against irrevocable Letter of Credit to be established under Asian Clearing Union arrangement by the Trading Corporation of Pakistan on behalf of the private importers holding import licences issued by the Chief Controller of Imports and Exports. The TOP will levy a commission ranging from 1% to 2.5% depending upon the nature of goods subject to a minimum of Rs.2,000/-.

3. While the Pakistani business community has by and large welcomed the Government’s decision they have expressed serious misgivings on two counts. Firstly, they feel that bringing in the TOP, which has earned notoriety for corruption, would result in cumbersome delays, and render the free flow of trade difficult. Secondly, they feel that the list is highly restrictive and a large number of commodities, whose import would have been economically beneficial to Pakistan, have been excluded from the list. The other point that the business community has been making is that a single journey permission in a year granted by the Government for visit to India would make regular trade contacts very difficult.

4. As far as the question of opening free trade with India at par with other countries is concerned, opinion appears to be divided. While the businessmen of Punjab area, particularly belonging to the Lahore Chamber, staunchly support the Government’s line that free trade would adversely affect Pakistan’s nascent industries and result in a huge imbalance of trade, the businessmen in Karachi favour a more liberal approach. Similarly, while the manufacturers and big import/export houses appear to be in favour of restrictive and regulated trade the medium ranking traders support freer trade with India. The big trading houses, who have well established trade contacts with Western countries are jittery of Indian competition and form the backbone of lobby which supports discriminatory trade with India. Incidentally, this lobby which consists of close relatives or associates or senior Generals or top bureaucrats, both retired and serving, is quite powerful in Pakistan and close to the powers that be.

5. In the Government also there appears to be divided opinion on the subject. While Ghulam Ishaq Khan, Federal Finance and Commerce Minister, who controls all the important economic ministries appears to be a hardliner in respect of trade with India, Sheikh Ishrat Ali during a personal discussion with Shri V.P. Punj, President, PHD Chamber delegation, at Islamabad on October 12, went as far as to suggest that India should maintain the pressure on the Government of Pakistan for eliminating the TOP as an intermediary for trade. with India. Though in formal meetings he had been towing the Government line, in his personal capacity his attitude appears to be more moderate. However, I have a hunch that as long as Ghulam Ishaq Khan continues to be at the helm of economic ministries, a radical change in the Government’s trade policy towards India cannot be expected. Nevertheless, if the pressure is maintained by the Pakistani business community, which I assess it will, they may expand the list of 40 items and make the role of TOP less cumbersome. So far, no Letters of Credit have been opened by any businessmen and it will take some time before we can really gauge the actual impact of the decision taken by Pakistan to permit trade in 40 items with India.

6. The visit of the PHD Delegation to Pakistan was very opportune and created a favourable and lasting impact here. They had extensive meetings with local business community and had the occasion to address Lahore, Karachi, Sialkot, Gujranwala and Faisalabad Chambers of Commerce. There was record attendance in all the meetings addressed by them. During their meetings they were able to drive home the point that increased economic interaction and trade between the two countries was very much in the economic interest of Pakistan. They also convincingly dispelled the apprehension that if trade was liberalized Indian goods may flood the Pakistani markets. They were also able to remove to a large extent, the misgivings in Pakistani business circles that India’s import policy was highly restrictive. The delegation’s major success was in generating a fund of goodwill in the trading community which in due course would probably help in building a strong pro-Indian trade lobby. As you might be aware, the PHD Delegation signed two Memoranda of Understanding with Lahore and Karachi Chambers under which they formed two separate sub-committees which would meet once in three months to discuss various matters concerning bilateral trade and economic cooperation.

7. During their meetings here, Pakistani businessmen displayed a lot of interest in joint ventures in third countries and transfer of technology between the two countries. While businessmen from both sides appeared enthusiastic about the idea they did not appear to be clear about the form it could take in view of policies of their respective Governments. May be in coming months some of them would try to explore the possibilities further.

8. During the meeting with Sheikh Ishrat Ali and other officials of the Government of Pakistan on 11 November, the PHD Delegation strongly recommended elimination of TOP for ensuring smoother trade between the two countries. They also mooted the idea of opening trade centres in important commercial cities which could help the businessmen in each country to know about the products and market trends in the other. They suggested that travel formalities between the two countries should be simplified and grant of visas made easier. Pakistan officials agreed to examine the matter, particularly the suggestion to open trade centres.

9. The Press also adopted a highly sympathetic approach and gave a wide and prominent coverage to the visit of the Indian delegation. Actually, in recent years no other trade delegation from any country in Pakistan has received so much attention from the Press as the Indian delegation did.

Yours sincerely,
(K.D. Sharma)

Shri Abid Hussain,
Secretary, Ministry of Commerce,
New Delhi.

New Delhi, March 10, 1983.

The Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan,

Committed to the principles of peaceful coexistence,

Mindful of the need to strengthen good neighbourly relations, and Desirous of strengthening mutual understanding, and of Promoting their bilateral relations and cooperation in various fields,

Have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE - I

An Indo-Pakistan Joint Commission is established to strengthen understanding and to promote cooperation between the two countries for mutual benefit in economic, trade, industrial, education, health, cultural, consular, tourism, travel, information, scientific and technological fields.

ARTICLE - II

The Joint Commission will submit mutually agreed reports and recommendations within the area of its competence to the appropriate authorities of the two governments. Both governments will consider taking such legal and administrative measures as will facilitate the fulfillment of the tasks entrusted to the Joint Commission.

ARTICLE - III

The Joint Commission may appoint sub-commissions as may be deemed necessary to deal with specific areas of cooperation. The sub-commissions will submit reports of their work to the Joint Commission at each session.

ARTICLE - IV

The Joint Commission will normally meet once a year, alternately at New Delhi and Islamabad. The respective delegations will be led by the Minister of External Affairs of India and the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Pakistan and will include, in addition, representatives designated by each Government.

ARTICLE - V

The sub-commissions will meet as often as mutually considered necessary and may invite, to such meetings as may be agreed, official or non-official experts and advisers.

ARTICLE - VI

The Joint Commission and its sub-commissions may adopt such rules of procedure as may be necessary for their functioning in accordance with the provisions of this agreement.

ARTICLE - VII

The decisions and other conclusions of the Joint Commission will be drawn up in for form of reports or agreed minutes.

ARTICLE - VIII

The agenda for each session will be prepared after exchanging proposals through diplomatic channels, at the latest in the month preceding the opening of the session, and will be adopted on the opening day of the session.

ARTICLE - IX

This agreement shall remain in force for a period of five years and shall be automatically renewed for each subsequent period of five years unless either party gives a written notice to the other six months in advance of its intention to terminate the agreement. This agreement may be modified by mutual consent.

ARTICLE - X

The present agreement is subject to ratification*. It shall enter into force provisionally on the date of signing and definitively on the date of exchange of instruments of ratification.
Signed at New Delhi on this tenth day of March 1983 in duplicate in Hindi, Urdu and English language, all the texts being equally authentic, except in case of doubt, the English text shall prevail.

For the Government of the Republic of India
Sd/- (P.V. Narasimha Rao) Minister for External Affairs

For the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan
Sd/- (Shahabzada Yaqub Khan) Minister for Foreign Affairs

* The Instruments of Ratification were exchanged between the two foreign ministers on June 1, 1983 when they met in Islamabad for the inaugural session of the Joint Commission.

2680. Opening Remarks by the Pakistan Minister of Foreign Affairs and Indian External Affairs Minister at the Inaugural Session of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission meeting.

Islamabad, June 1, 1983.

Remarks by Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan:

Excellency Mr. Narasimha Rao,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

It gives me great pleasure to extend to your Excellency and to the distinguished members of your delegation a warm and cordial welcome to our country on this historic first meeting of the Indo-Pakistan Joint Commission.

When the idea of this Commission was put forward by Her Excellency Prime Minister Indira Gandhi last year, it evoked a prompt and positive response from Pakistan, and President Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq had no hesitation in accepting the Prime Minister's suggestion when he met her in New Delhi on November 1 last year. The establishment of the Joint Commission is therefore a tribute to the sagacity of our leaders, whose guidance enabled us to negotiate the text expeditiously, and it was in their presence at the memorable occasion of the Non-Aligned Conference in New Delhi that Your Excellency and I had the honour and privilege or signing the agreement.

Excellency,

The concept of cooperation between neighbouring countries is by no means new. Both our countries have established Joint Commission with a number of friendly countries, including neighbors. Such commissions have a proven value... and efficacy. They enable us to identify feasible proposals of common interest; they promote mutually beneficial cooperation within an institutionalized framework; they strengthen respective national endeavours for economic development and for improving the quality of life, in an atmosphere of harmony and cooperation. Cultural, social and economic exchanges at the level of the people can surely serve to bring nations closer to each other and to fortify the foundations on which an edifice of mutual trust and confidence can gradually be built.

Trust and confidence should indeed be the watchwords in our future dealings for liberating ourselves from prejudices and from a past haunted by hatred and seared by strife. Grace and vision should be our guiding lights for dispelling the miasma rancour and recrimination which have tended to poison and corrode our relations.

These imperatives demand that we look beyond the exigencies of the here and how, however important or pressing they may be to relate the totality of our associations to wider horizons and longer term perspectives.

It is with these deeper objectives in mind, that the Government of Pakistan and the Government of India have under consideration two other proposals our for the conclusion of an agreement on non-aggression and non-use of force and India’s for a treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation. A pact that solemnly rules out the use of force and pleges the two countries to resolve their differences exclusive through peaceful means should foster that degree of mutual confidence and sense of security which are inseparable from friendship and cooperation.

At another level, as Your excellency is aware, Pakistan as well as India, are simultaneously participating in efforts to promote cooperation in South Asia on a regional basis. That forum of seven nation should enable us all to profit from a larger reservoir of experience of knowledge and of resources. In the process, we may also hope to contribute to the promotion of peace and stability and the consolidation of good-neighbourly relations in the region. The bilateral Joint Commission will serve to supplement the cooperation already underway in the regional context.

I think it is important, at this stage, to recognize that salutary progress has already been made in the normalization of good neighbourly relations between Pakistan and India in recent years. The dialogue between us will now enter a new and more intensive phase. I am confident that the regular meetings between our two delegations in an institutionalized forum would provide fresh impetus for meaningful cooperation between our two countries.
At this first meeting of the Joint Commission, we can proceed expeditiously to organize our work. In view of the specialized and technical nature of many of the subjects. It is proposed that we may appoint four sub-Commissions.

We hope that the Sub-Commissions will be able, at this meeting, not only to identify specific proposals for the enhancement of cooperation in agreed fields but also to exchange views on some steps which can be taken at this meeting. On other aspects, more detailed consideration may be necessary in order to determine their scope and feasibility. The Sub-Commissions will, of course, continue their work in the interval between the first and the second meetings of the Joint Commission. We trust each one will recommend its own schedule.

The tasks before the Joint Commission will not always be easy, but with goodwill and sincerity we shall ensure that these first, somewhat modest steps, in a new endeavour along the path of cooperation and neighbourly understanding will be steady and sure and will not disappoint the expectations of people of goodwill on both sides of the border.

Confident in this expectation, I once again bid your Excellency a cordial welcome and hope that you and the members of your delegation will find their stay in Islamabad comfortable as well as productive.

Reply Remarks by External Affairs Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao:

Your Excellency Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan and members of the two delegations.

I would like to thank you and the Government of Pakistan for the warm welcome accorded to me and my delegation and for the traditionally gracious and generous hospitality that has been extended to us.

I was in your country almost two years ago to the day and am happy to be here once again. Several important developments have taken place since then. We have had the pleasure of welcoming on our soil His Excellency President Zia-ul-Haq twice and Your Excellency three times. These visits have afforded us an opportunity to know each other’s perspectives better and establish close report. The non-aligned Summit in New Delhi earlier this year enabled us to not only strengthen our contacts as members of the family of Non-Aligned nations, but also cooperate fruitfully on matters of common concern.

It is a matter of satisfaction for me and my delegation to participate in the inaugural session of the Indo-Pak Joint Commission. You will recall, Excellency, both of us signed this Agreement on March 10 in the presence of my Prime Minister Shrimati Indira Gandhi and the President of Pakistan His Excellency Gen. Zia-ul-Haq during the Seventh Non-Aligned Summit. That this was the only bilateral agreement India signed during the Conference is indicative of the importance we attach to our relations with your country. We have gathered this morning to give substance and content to the idea that reflects the collective will of our two peoples to seek peaceful and mutually beneficial cooperation. These were the goals we had set before ourselves at Simla nearly eleven years ago.

The Joint Commission will deal with major subjects like trade, education, health, culture, consular, tourism, travel, information, communications, social sciences and economic subjects. I am accompanied by a team of officials and experts who are competent to deal with these subjects. I have come here with the expectation that the deliberations will make a concrete and substantial contribution towards creating new bonds between our countries. We have also come with full confidence that our proposals are for mutual interest and hope that your side too would find them so.

We in India earnestly seek to achieve with you normal and friendly links as between two sovereign, equal and independent neighbours. We would like cooperation with you in largest possible number of spheres of activity for the benefit of our peoples. We would like to promote exports to and from each other and to plan for greater cultural contacts on the basis of mutually agreed priorities. We would also like to ease travel restrictions and simplify procedures so that more and more people from one country can visit the other. We could open up additional routes. We could think of travel facilities for a wider cross-section of our people, who have hitherto not been exposed to each other, such as tourists and academics, scientists and engineers, youth and students, professionals and businessmen. I am happy to say that as a gesture of goodwill, we currently welcoming the first such group of students and teachers of the Dawood School of Engineering, Karachi. We would like to improve communications. We would like uniformly reduced postal rates between our two countries. Institutions and organizations dealing with similar subjects should be encouraged to increase contacts where they exist and explore possibilities of new ones where they don’t. during the deliberations of the Sub-Commissions my delegation will give you separate drafts on cultural relations and promotion of tourism between our two countries. We will also like to finalise the review of the Shipping Protocol. We would also like discussion on the review of the Visa Agreement which is nine years old now.

Much can be done in these and other fields. Taken individually these measures are utilitarian and may not therefore appear dramatic. Yet, whether they make headlines or not, they bring benefits to the common man. They also strengthen the news of friendship and prove conducive to healthy interaction between the two countries.
The fact that I have with me the largest number of officials and experts to have visited Pakistan in a single delegation from India in recent times is proof of the earnestness of our mission.

Two years ago I had occasion to voice our belief, which I am sure is common to both of us, that cooperation can transcend or be male to transcend whatever difference we might happen to have. It is this faith that infuses the structure of the Joint Commission with a sense of purpose. As the great Iqbal said, life is concealed in a search.

I cannot but think of the task before us as a quest. It may prove, at moments, an uncertain quest – searching, groping, not fully free doubt. But its intensity will be matched by the will of our peoples to seek solutions. And that is makes the exercise worthwhile and rewarding.

Our nations have been blessed with richness of resources and human skill and potential. If we are persuaded of the relevance of a particular experience to our needs, why should we not share it? The younger generations of today both in India and Pakistan need no longer be inhibited by the various limiting factors of the earlier generation. Only the present can prove to be a wholesome investment for the future. The appropriate time for this process is now.

Excellency, I bring with me the greetings and good wishes of our Prime Minister, Shrimati Indira Gandhi, and the Government and people of India. Let us now get on with the task of carrying out the wishes of our leaders which are embodied in the setting up of this Joint Commission.
2681. Agreed Minutes of the Meeting of Sub-Commission on Economic Matters (Including Industry, Agriculture, Communications) Health, Scientific and Technological Cooperation held in Islamabad on June 1, 2 & 3, 1983.

I. The Sub-Commission discussed various proposals for cooperation between the two countries in different fields. The two delegations comprised the following:

<table>

</tbody>
</table>
II. The Subject discussed were as follows:

1. Economic Matters
   — Avoidance of Double Taxation
   — Industry
   — Agriculture
   — Communications(Telecommunications, Railways, Shipping, Postal Services)

2. Health

3. Science and Technology

III. The agreed minutes are as follows:

Economic Matters

1. It was agreed that a process should be initiated for consultations on long term planning for economic cooperation between India and Pakistan.

2. For this purpose, a Working Group may be set up headed by the Secretary, Planning Division, Government of Pakistan and his counterpart in Government of India which should formulate practical suggestions for promoting and accelerating economic cooperation.

3. With a view to promoting informal exchange of ideas amongst the experts and administrators on different aspects of cooperation between the two countries, a Seminar may be organized sometime in August in Pakistan.
4. Avoidance of Double Taxation

Discussions took place on Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement between the two airlines. It was noted with satisfaction that the competent taxation authorities of two countries have already agreed to hold negotiations during July 18-23, 1983 at Islamabad to have a dialogue on the subject of avoidance of double taxation of income to review the existing position and explore possibility of concluding a comprehensive tax treaty or a limited treaty applicable to airlines only.

Industry

5. Both sides noted with satisfaction that the delegations of businessmen and industrialists of each country have visited the other country, and established contacts with their counterparts in order to explore areas of industrial cooperation for mutual benefit. It was agreed to encourage such visits of businessmen and industrialists so that opportunities for collaboration between the entrepreneurs of the two countries are identified and projects based on such cooperation established.

6. The Indian side indicated that there were good prospects of technological collaboration and supply of machinery between the two countries in the following fields:

   (a) Automotive components manufacturing
   (b) Manufacture of agricultural machinery and implements
   (c) Chemicals and dyes particularly for tanning and textile industry
   (d) Drugs and pharmaceutical industry to produce basic ingredients
   (e) Dairy products and equipment
   (f) Medium and heavy electrical equipment
   (g) Material testing and process control equipment
   (h) Compressors

7. The Pakistani side agreed to consider specific proposals which may be made in the fields mentioned above, by the entrepreneurs of the two countries.

8. The Indian side suggested that the areas and sectors of industry wherein the two countries can cooperate in the establishment of joint ventures in third countries especially in North Africa and West Asia be explored and identified. The Pakistani side noted the suggestions. The two sides agreed to continue discussions in this area.

9. Recognising the need for developing small scale and cottage industries sector, it was agreed to exchange information on the experience and development programmes, with each other. Both sides would exchange visits at suitable levels, for the purpose of study and training.

Agriculture

10. Both sides agreed to the need for cooperation in agriculture. To this end, both sides agreed in principle that the Pakistan Agricultural Research Council and the Indian Council for Agricultural Research would enter into an agreement providing inter-alia for exchange of scientists, technologists and experts, germ plasma and breeding materials, scientific literature, information and methodologies and participation of the scientists, technologists and experts in each other’s seminars, symposia, workshops, etc. Both sides also agreed to explore the possibility of cooperation between other specialized institutions in the field of agricultural research.

Communication

11. Telecommunications: Both sides were of the view that the existing state of telecommunication facilities between the two countries were inadequate and unsatisfactory and agreed to take following short term and long term measures to improve it:

   (i) Overhead Carrier System

   The existing overhead line between Lahore and Amritsar should be fully repaired and maintained by the respective sides. The Carrier System would be upgraded and its full capacity would be utilized. After renovation of second pair, the possibility of adding a second 12 channel Carrier System would be explored and necessary technical investigation would be carried out immediately. As suggested by the Pakistan delegation it was agreed to provide new trunk circuits between other cities/towns of both the countries if justified by the volume of traffic.

   (ii) U.H.F. Link

   In order to bridge the gap between Lahore and Amritsar in the interim stage, Pakistan side proposed to establish a 24 channel U.H.F. System between Lahore – Amritsar and offered to supply the terminal equipment at their own cost for Indian side also. The equipment could subsequently be returned to Pakistan on commissioning of Coaxial Cable Link. For this it was agreed that technical survey should be carried out before the next coordination meeting between the two sides.
(iii) Coaxial Cable System

The laying of approved Coaxial Cable between Lahore and Amritsar should be expedited in order to commission the Broad Band System by mid 1984.

(iv) Satellite Link

Pakistan side proposed the augmentation of the Satellite route between Karachi – Bombay and suggested that the feasibility of introducing I.S.D. service between the two countries should be explored. Indian side agreed to examine the relevant technical factors. It was also agreed by the two sides that pending introduction of subscriber dialing the disposal of operator controlled traffic would be improved through progressive augmentation of channels.

(v) Coordination Meeting

Both sides agreed that T&T officials at the executive level on both sides should have frequent meetings at the border to discuss and remove the difficulties for the improvement of telecommunication facilities between the two countries. Both sides also agreed that the Heads of Telecommunication Departments of both the countries should meet each other periodically to ensure implementation of proposals agreed with a view to improve the state of telecommunications.

(vi) Settlement of Accounts

The Indian delegate mentioned about the need for early settlement of pending T&T Account between the two countries. It was agreed to expedite the matter relating to the settlement of telecommunication account. It was further agreed that coordination meetings between experts of the two countries would take place to expedite the settlement.

Railways

12. It was agreed in principle that passengers from either country should be afforded the facility of purchase of through tickets from the points of entrainment in one country to the points of detrainment in the other and recommended that the experts of the two countries should meet and discuss the details of financial arrangements to be made in this regard.

13. It was agreed that the customs and immigration facilities for the passengers of either country traveling between India and Pakistan should be organized on Indian side at Amritsar instead of Atari. The Sub-commission noted that from the Pakistan side such facilities were available at Lahore.
14. It was agreed that the two sides should examine the feasibility of conducting customs and immigration checks on running trains instead of at specified points as at present.

15. It was felt that there was a need for early settlement of pending financial transactions by the Railway authorities of both countries.

16. Shipping

The Sub-Commission reviewed the scope and implementation of the Protocol on Resumption of Shipping concluded between the two countries in New Delhi on 15th of January, 1975. The Protocol is presently confined to the carriage of bilateral trade only i.e. trade which originates in India and is destined for Pakistan and vice versa. The Pakistan delegation proposed that the scope of the Protocol should be expanded. The Indian Delegation welcomed the suggestion and stated that the carriage of all 3rd Country cargo should be included within the scope of the Protocol. The matter could be further examined.

17. It was clarified that the scope of the Protocol will not extend to vessels of either side chartered out to any Third Flag country. Thus such chartered out vessels will not be permitted to participate in the carriage of any cargo to and from either country.

18. Certain infringements of the Protocol were noted and it was agreed that steps will be taken to strictly follow the Protocol.

19. The expansion of the Protocol to cover the passenger trade would be taken up at a later date.

Postal Services — Reduction of Postal rates

20. Pakistan has reduced postage rates on letters and postcards both surface and air as well as on Aerograms posted for India, by 15% effective 1.7.82. India has reduced with effect from 1.6.82. postage rates for Pakistan by 15% in case of all categories of letter post items and postal parcels sent by air except Aerograms. In case of surface articles, India, between 1977 and June 1982 has progressively reduced postage rates by 37 percent for all categories of letter post items and by 15% for parcel post.

21. In order to further improve good neighbourly relations and promote greater communications between the two countries, the Pakistan delegation agreed to recommend to the Government of Pakistan to further reduce postage on surface mail letters, book posts up to 20 grams and post cards by another 22% and on all other items of postal mail both by air and surface by 15%. Indian side agreed similarly to recommend to the Government of India to reduce the rate for aerograms also by 15%.

22. Settlement of Outstanding Postal Dues

The Indian delegation raised the question of settlement of outstanding postal accounts and Postal Savings Bank Accounts between India and Pakistan on service to service basis and suggested a meeting between the representatives of the two postal administrations to discuss and expedite the settlement. The Pakistan delegation felt that the question of outstanding postal accounts is linked with the overall settlement of financial dues of post-independence origin like outstanding pensions etc. Both sides felt that the matter needs further discussion.

Health

23. Both the delegations identified the following areas of mutual cooperation:-

A - Exchange of information in Health Field
B - Communicable Diseases Control
C - Research
D - Traditional medicine
E - Population Planning
F - Primary Health Care

24. It was agreed that (i) initially in so far as Communicable Disease Control is concerned priority will be given to Malaria, Leprosy, T.B. and Dermal Lishmaniasis (ii) after exchange of information on the country status of these diseases, there will be exchange of visits of experts in either country to study the strategy involved, progress made and share experiences to the benefit of both, (iii) it was agreed further that in national seminars held in either country, delegates may be invited from the other country, whereas in Inter Regional and Inter-national Seminars delegates will be invited to participate and share experience.

25. It was further agreed that exchange of visits of members of PMRC and ICMR will take place to identify fields of Research collaboration between the two countries. Similarly exchange of visits of health administrators will take place to see the Primary Health Care System, process of integration of traditional medicine in Primary Health Care and general health services, strategy used for Population Planning as well as the services being provided to the effect.
26. It was agreed that concrete plan may be drawn up as quickly as possible especially with regard to exchange visits of experts/Health administrators to identify more specific areas of joint collaboration and chalk out details thereof accordingly.

The Sub-Commission on trade met in two sessions held in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the 1st and 2nd June 1983. The following agenda was agreed and adopted for the discussions:-

(i) Measures to increase trade;
(ii) Facilities to use land routes for trade;
(iii) Trade display centres and other export Promotion measures;
(iv) Reciprocal participation in trade fairs and International Exhibitions;
(v) Exchange of trade delegations.

3. On the principal agenda item relating to increasing trade between the two countries, the two delegations agreed to resume the dialogue from where it was left off in the trade talks held in November 1980 in Islamabad and later Secretary level discussions in Delhi in November 1981.

4. The two delegations reiterated the keen desire of both sides to expand bilateral trade. To this end, they exchanged views on the question of concluding a new trade agreement on the basis of mutuality of advantage. The two delegations agreed to work purposefully towards formulation of feasible approaches to bilateral trade, that would take care of the major concerns of each, and at the same time would lead to further improvement of trade between the two countries.

5. On agenda items (ii) to (v), it was recognized that these were interlinked with agenda item (i) and will be discussed when the new trade agreement is finalized.

6. It was agreed that the Sub-Commission would meet next in New Delhi at an appropriate level as early as possible.

2683. Agreed Minutes of Sub-Commission III on Information, Education (including, Social Sciences) Culture and Sports.
Islamabad, June 3, 1983.

The Sub-Commission III on Information, Education, Culture, Sports and Social Sciences held four sessions from 1st to 3rd June 1983. During these sessions, both sides exchanged views and examined specific proposals with a view to promoting cooperation in the above fields. The deliberations of the Sub-Commission are covered in the succeeding paragraphs.

Culture

2. The Indian side presented for study and consideration a draft Cultural Cooperation Agreement between the two countries. The leader of the Pakistan Delegation stated that this draft would be studied in consultation with the concerned Ministries of the Government of Pakistan and that they would revert to the subject in due course.
3. It was agreed that pending finalization of the Cultural Cooperation Agreement or a formal Cultural Exchange Programme between the two countries, a short-term operational programme of Exchanges on the basis of reciprocity could be initiated in the fields of Education, Culture and Sports.

Archaeology:

4. The following proposals made by the Indian side were accepted:
   i) No country is to be used as a channel for illegal export of the antiquities belonging to the other.
   ii) Illegally imported cultural property/antiquity belonging to other country is to be returned to the country of its origin without the payment of any compensation for the restitution of the cultural property.
   iii) The Indian side proposed that appeals be made by the Joint Commission on behalf of the two countries to all those nations which in their capacity as colonial powers in the past took away valuable antiques from Indo-Pakistan sub-continent to return these cultural properties. The Pakistan side stated that they support the proposal in principle but for the time being both sides may pursue the matter through UNESCO.

5. It was also agreed to exchange expertise in the field of pre-history and proto-history. The Indian side proposed that an Archaeological Congress in specific problems connected with archaeology and associated subjects relating to each country may be held annually. It was further proposed that publications pertaining to archaeological discoveries and researches be exchanged between the two sides. The Pakistan side stated that these two proposals have been noted for consideration in consultation with the experts.

Museums:

6. It was agreed that both sides would promote exchange visits of museum experts. Proposals would be processed through the concerned government agencies.

Conservation:

7. The Indian side proposed that the two sides should promote conservation of cultural property through exchange of information and publications, joint research studies and training facilities in the field of conservation of cultural property. The Pakistan side stated that they have noted the proposal for consideration in the next meeting.

Archives:

8. The two sides agreed to the exchange of archival materials. The Pakistan side presented a draft agreement for exchange of archival materials which the Indian side agreed to study and revert back in due course.

9. Pending consideration and decision regarding Pakistan’s proposal to conclude a Protocol on the exchange of archival materials, the two sides agreed to the following proposals made by the Indian side:

i) Visits of two archivists would be exchanged annually between the two countries.

ii) Archival publications would be exchanged after mutual consultations.

iii) The two sides would cooperate in promoting the activities of South West Asian Regional Grant of the International Council on Archives (SWARGICA) of which both countries are members.

Libraries:

10. Both sides agreed to encourage exchange of books between the national libraries of the two countries. Details of these exchanges would be worked out through mutual consultations.

Exhibitions:

11. The two sides agreed to exchange exhibitions of photographs, folk crafts and handicrafts.

12. The two sides agreed to exchange exhibitions of musical instruments and contemporary musical archives through mutual consultations.

13. Both sides agreed to exchange annually exhibitions of paintings which could be accompanied by an expert in the field. Details would be worked out through mutual consultations.

Performing Arts:

14. The Indian side proposed that both sides exchange annual visits of performing artists such as soloists, Ghazal/Qawal/Folk/Classical Singers and theatre groups on the basis of reciprocity, details about the number of groups and the date and duration of visits would be decided through mutual consultations.

15. The Pakistan side responded that male Ghazal singers, classical and semi-classical singers and instrumentalists may perform in the diplomatic premises or other mutually designated places of the other country on such occasions as National Days.
16. The two sides stated their respective positions on the exchange of visits of performing artists and decided to discuss the matter further.

Writers and Poets:

17. The Indian side proposed the exchange of writers and poets. The proposal was noted for consideration.

18. The Indian also brought to the notice of Pakistan side the desirability of arranging talks/interviews of visiting Indian writers/scholars on Pakistan Television and Radio. The Pakistan side noted the proposal for consideration.

Education:

19. The Indian side then submitted proposals for an Operational Programme of Exchange in the field of education. These proposals were taken up one by one. The two sides agreed that:-

i) The focal points for exchange of information and sharing of experiences would be the National Council of Educational Research and Training in India and the Curriculum Wing of the Ministry of Education in Pakistan.

ii) They would exchange materials relating to school education, open universities particularly the distance learning systems, science education and universalization of elementary education.

iii) Materials may be exchanged regarding kinds and levels of education with a view to sharing common experiences in the future.

20. With a view to sharing experiences in each other’s educational system and identifying possible areas of cooperate it was agreed to exchange academics, scientists and educational administrators at various levels of education in mutually agreed areas.

21. The Indian proposal on the infringement of copyright was noted for future consideration by the Pakistan side.

Sports

22. Both sides noted with satisfaction the exchanges already taking place between the two countries in field of sports. They agreed to further promote cooperation in exchange of sports teams, coaches and personnel dealing with sports as may be mutually agreed. Furthermore, it was agreed to increase exchanges in the field of Hockey and Cricket, details of which would be worked out by the respective National Federations/Boards. It was also agreed to promote, through mutual consultations between the respective National Federations, the exchange of teams in the fields of Athletics, Wrestling, Kabaddi, Squash, Boxing, Polo, Football and Swimming.
Social Sciences
23. The proposals submitted by the Indian side in respect of various types of exchanges in Social Sciences, bibliography and documentation services were noted for consideration.

24. The proposals submitted by the Indian side regarding a Seminar on “Indus Valley Civilization – Anthropological perspectives” and other anthropological studies were noted for consideration.

Information
25. Both sides noted the important role played by the media in promoting friendly relations between the two countries and emphasized that it should support the on-going effort to reduce tension in the interest of fostering good neighbourly relations.

26. Bearing in mind the relevant provision of the Simla Agreement, the two sides agreed that Radio and Television Organisations should continue to exercise the utmost care in desisting from hostile propaganda directed at the other country and that instances of such propaganda be brought to the notice of the concerned Government through diplomatic channels.

27. The two sides also agreed that with a view to promoting understanding following measures may be taken:-

   i) The visits of journalists between the two countries should be encourages.

   ii) One more Indian/Pakistani correspondent representing a newspaper/news agency may be appointed in each other’s country at their respective capitals on reciprocal basis.

   iii) Pakistan Broadcasting Corporation and All India Radio may favourably consider the appointment of a correspondent in the other country on reciprocal basis.

28. The two sides further agreed that:

   a) Radio in Pakistan and India can reach millions of people in each other’s country and can help in promoting understanding. Periodical meetings could be held under the aegis of the Sub-Commission or directly between the two organizations, to promote cooperation and prevent hostile propaganda.

   b) Pakistan Broadcasting Corporation and All India Radio should make available to each other, on request, documentary and music programmes as mutually agreed. For this purpose information on existing programmes will be exchanged from time to time.
c) Pakistan Broadcasting Corporation and All India Radio should provide studio facilities on appropriate occasions.

d) Pakistan Television and Doordarshan can exchange on cost basis specifically selected programmes required by either side.

e) Live and recorded coverage on sporting events between the two Television Organisations of the two countries may be exchanged on a bilateral or cost basis.

29. The two sides discussed the visit of Indian Minister for Information and Broadcasting and the Secretary of that Ministry at the invitation of the Government of Pakistan. The Indian side stated that the visit would take place shortly.

Cinema

30. The Pakistan side noted for consideration the following suggestions made by the Indian side for possible cooperation in the field of Cinema:-

i) Non-Commercial presentation of selected Pakistani films in India and Indian films in Pakistan on a periodic basis as mutually agreed.

ii) Exchange of visits by Film Personalities either in association with the presentation of films referred to in para (i) above, or otherwise on a mutually agreed basis.

General:

31. With the objective of promoting further contacts and cooperation between the two countries, both sides agreed to exchange visits of important persons in the concerned Ministries dealing with Culture, Sports, Education and Information.

32. Both sides agreed to hold the next meeting of the Sub-Commission in December 1983 at New Delhi.
Agreed Minutes of the Sub – Commission — IV on Travel, Tourism and Consular Matters.

Islamabad, June 4, 1983.

Pakistan Delegation  Indian Delegation

1. Mr. Mohsin Kamal (Leader)  Mr. T. Ramaswamy (Leader)
   Joint Secretary (Tourism),  Joint Secretary, Ministry of Culture,  Ministry of Home affairs.
   Sports and Tourism

2. Mr. Abdul Wahab, Joint  Mr. G. Parthasarthy, Secretary, Ministry of Interior  Consul General, Karachi.

3. Mr. Baqir H. Nasim, Deputy  Mrs. Vibha Pandhi, Secretary, Ministry of Religious Affairs.  Deputy Director General Tourism.

4. Mr. Abbas Haider Zaidi  Acting Director,
   Acting Director,  Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
   Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

The Sub-Commission considered the various proposals made by the Indian Delegation on the following matters and arrived at the following conclusions:

I) Review of Indo – Pak Visa Agreement
   Of September 14, 1974.

The agreed conclusions in this regard are as follows:

Clause 2(a) (i):

The Indian side suggested that the period of validity of Diplomatic Visas could be extended from one year to the duration of assignment of diplomatic personnel. This would obviate revalidation of the visa at the end of each year of that tenure. The Pakistan side concurred in the proposal.

Clause 2(a) (ii)

The Indian side suggested that the provision for the grant of Diplomatic Visa for single entry to high ranking dignitaries should be amended to include high ranking dignitaries/officials visiting on official business or to attend international conferences and who hold diplomatic passports. The Pakistan side drew the attention of the Indian side to the problems which they would encounter in agreeing to this proposal in view of the fact that senior Pakistani officials and high ranking dignitaries were often not issued with diplomatic passports. In view of this, the Indian side agreed that clause 2(a) (ii) need not be amended.

Clause 2(a):
The Indian side suggested that the period of validity of non-diplomatic visas should be for the duration of assignment as in Clause 2(a). The Pakistan side concurred in the proposal.

Clause 2(d) (i):
The Indian side suggested that this provision could be amplified as the term “legitimate purpose” has not been defined. They suggested that the clause may be amended to read as follows:

“A visitor visa will be issued to persons visiting the other country for the following purpose:

i) to meet relatives

ii) to meet friends

iii) for business

iv) for any other legitimate purpose like sports study and educational tours of professional interest.

The Pakistan side felt that the existing provision was adequate and does not require any change.

The Indian side suggested that with a view to promoting trade and economic relations the visa policy for businessmen may be liberalized. After discussion both sides agreed that visitor visa valid for 3 visits for a period not exceeding six month for up to….may be granted to businessmen. The existing clause 2(d) (i) of the Visa Agreement will have to be re-drafted to give effect to this suggestion.

The Indian side suggested that only businessmen sponsored by a recognized Chamber of Commerce would be eligible for this facility. While the Pakistan side agreed that safeguards would have to be provided to ensure that only \textit{bona fide} businessmen would avail of this facility, they felt that this was a matter of detail and need not form part of the Visa Agreement.

The Indian side also suggested that businessmen availing of such Visas may be exempted from Police reporting. It was agreed that the question of exemption from Police reporting in such cases could be discussed further at the next meeting of the Sub-Commission.
Clause 2(e):
The two sides agreed to discuss the possibility of issuing transit visa valid for two entries through Diplomatic channels before the next session of the Sub-Commission. The Indian side will initiate this process.

Clause 5:
The Indian side suggested that in the case of persons holding visitor and transit visa for a period of 14 days or less, reporting in person to the local Police may be dispensed with and it should be enough if a registered communication with acknowledgement due is sent. In such cases, the acknowledgement due slip would constitute the necessary documentation for immigration authorities at the time of exit. For visits exceeding 14 days they also suggested personal appearance before the Police authority will be necessary. Pakistan side agreed to consider the suggestion and give their reaction through diplomatic channels.

It was agreed that in the case of families, one member of the family alone need appear before the registering authority for registering himself and the members of his family.

Clause 7.
Both sides agreed that in view of increased costs and the need to provide prompt service to visa applicants, the visa fee should be raised to Rs. 15/- inclusive of all charges.

Both sides agreed that the amendments/ additions to the Visa Agreement which had been mutually agreed upon would come into effect from 1st July 1983.

II. Tourism
The Indian side presented a Draft Protocol to promote group tourism between the two countries. The Pakistan side agreed to the proposal in principle that organized group tourism between the two countries should be promoted and stated that the Indian Draft Protocol needed further study.

Both sides also agreed to hold further discussions on the subject in about three months time.

III. Visits by Organised Groups of Academics, Professionals, Students etc.
The Indian side proposed that facilities should be provided for fostering visits by organized groups of academics, professionals, students etc. it was agreed that to begin with such facilities may be extended to academics and professionals.
IV. Enlargement of Lists of Religious Shrines

The Indian side conveyed their readiness to open more religious shrines for visit by Pakistani pilgrims and handed over a list of shrines in Pakistan for inclusion in the list of agreed shrines to be visited by Indian pilgrims, which is appended. The Pakistan side indicated that the proposal required detailed examination.

V. Re-Opening of Khokhrapar — Munabao Check-posts

The Indian side referred to the need to re-open the Khokhrapar-Munabao checkpoints in order to facilitate travel between the two countries. The Indian side also expressed its readiness to arrange for the re-opening of this route for travel between the two countries. The Pakistan side referred to certain administrative, financial and operational difficulties in re-opening the check post from the Pakistan side and stated that the matter was under consideration.

VI. Modalities for Return of Civilians and Detenus and Consular Access

The various issues relating to modalities for return of civilian detenus who have completed their sentences and for consular access under the Protocol which was signed on 2 November 1982 were discussed and the following conclusions were arrived at:

i) The prisoners on either side who have completed their sentences and whose nationality had already been ascertained, will be exchanged at the Wagah /Attari border by 30 June, 1983.

ii) The prisoners on either side who have completed their sentences will be assembled in Multan jail on the Pakistani side and at a jail to be designated by the Indian side for the purpose of identification in terms of Protocol of 2nd November 1982. This process will be completed by 31st August 1983.

iii) Prisoners who are undergoing sentences and who are under detention will be governed by the Protocol of November 1982.

The exchange of lists of prisoners in terms of article 1 of the Protocol on Consular Access of November 1982 took place.

The Sub-Commission will meet again to discuss matters of mutual interest before the end of the year.

Statements made by the Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqyub Khan and External Affairs Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao at the concluding session of the Joint Commission.

Islamabad, June 4, 1983.

Statement by Pakistan Foreign Minister:

Excellency:

With the signing of the Report of the Joint Commission, the business of this first meeting reaches its conclusion. However, before we formally close the meeting, I would like to express my sincere satisfaction at the results achieved over the last three days. In this short period:

— We have organized the Joint Commission;
— The Sub-Commissions were able to consider proposals covering a wide spectrum of the mandate of the Commission; and — The Joint Commission has achieved agreement on a number of proposals which will directly affect the lives of our two peoples. We have been able to formulate recommendations for cooperation in important areas which would benefit our countries.

2. Specifically, we have agreed to take steps to improve the telecommunication facilities and to carry out a further reduction of postal rates between the two countries. In the field of health several areas where the two countries could benefit from each other’s experience have been identified and it has been decided to initiate the process of formulating concrete plans of action.

3. We have identified a considerable scope for cooperation in the field of science and technology as well as industry. It has been recommended that the Pakistan Agricultural Research Council and the Indian Council for Agricultural Research negotiate an agreement to promote cooperation in their field.

4. A number of steps have been suggested to alleviate the hardship faced by visitors, by streamlining travel arrangements between the two countries. Regular meetings between experts and administrators of the national planning organizations of India and Pakistan are also to be initiated.

5. In regard to trade, the discussions have confirmed the keen desire of both sides to explore the possibility of concluding a new agreement on the basis of mutuality of benefit. The Sub-Commission on Trade is to hold another meeting in New Delhi as early as possible to continue discussions in this regard.
6. An agreed programme of cooperation in the fields of information, school and higher education, archaeology, museums, archives, libraries, exhibitions and sports has been prepared. It has been decided to discuss further mutual cooperation in the fields of social sciences, performing arts, anthropological studies, copyrights book promotion and exchanges of writers and poets.

7. It has also been agreed that two draft agreements, one presented by the Indian side on cultural cooperation, and the other presented by Pakistan, on the exchange of archival material, would be examined for further discussion.

8. Your Excellency’s stay in Pakistan also provided us a most valuable opportunity to discuss measures to strengthen mutual understanding that would foster a conducive climate in which the full potential of cooperation between our two countries can be realized. To that end, we have decided that the Foreign Secretaries should hold an early meeting to give further consideration to our proposal for the conclusion of an agreement on non-aggression and non-use of force and the Indian proposal for a treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation. An agreement that rules out war between the two countries and provides for settlement of differences exclusively by peaceful means will complement and reinforce the efforts we are making in the Joint Commission to build harmonious and cooperative relations between the two countries.

Excellency:

9. The results we have been able to achieve and the friendly exchanges we have had on matters of vital interest to our two countries have demonstrated the keen desire on both sides to promote cordial and good neighbourly relations in consonance with the aspirations of our peoples for a future of peace, amity and cooperation. While we realize the complexity of the task that lies ahead of us, we are confident that under the guidance of our two leaders, we would overcome any impediments which may come in our way and forge ahead towards the achievement of our common goal of progress and prosperity for the mutual benefit of the peoples of Pakistan and India.

Excellency:

10. Before concluding I would like, on behalf of my delegation, to express our warmest thanks to all members of the Indian delegation for their valuable contribution to the work of the Joint Commission and for the constructive spirit in which it was performed.

11. I would also like to express my profound personal appreciation to Your Excellency for the cooperation, cordiality, goodwill and understanding that has pervaded our discussions in the course of this memorable first meeting of the Joint Commission.

12. We look forward to the second meeting of the Joint Commission to be held in New Delhi next year in the confidence that the process initiated in Islamabad would gather further momentum.

Statement by External Affairs Minister:

First of all, I would like to thank, on behalf of my delegation, the Government of Pakistan for the warm hospitality extended to us during our stay here. I am indeed grateful for the excellent arrangements made for the inaugural meeting of the Joint Commission which contributed in no small measure to its successful outcome. I am gratified that the four sub-commissions which were charged with the task of formulating concrete proposals for bilateral cooperation in different areas like economic cooperation, travel and tourism, consular matters, information, education, social sciences, culture and trade have been able to come up with suggestions whose implementation will go a long way in generating goodwill and the cooperative spirit between the two countries. I am told that never before have so many persons from both countries dealing with such diverse subjects been involved together in an exercise to find solutions to problems. I would like to offer my congratulations to members of both the delegations. I am hopeful that the spirit of good neighbourliness and friendship that has pervaded our deliberations in the last four days will continue to prevail so that a wholesome and forward looking substantive content is given to our relationship.

As I said in my inaugural statement, steps taken by the two countries in the direction of cooperation, however, small or merely utilitarian they might seem, benefit the common man in both countries and, therefore, ought to be sustained and promoted. This Joint Commission has the unique privilege of dealing with matters affecting that common man whether it is reduced postal rates, through railway bookings, better communications or liberalization of travel facilities. A special responsibility rests on us because what we do affects persons, who are poor, distant and longing for contacts and to whose happiness we have the responsibility to contribute.

In quest of the larger objective of fostering friendship and understanding between our two peoples, we are keen that travel should be eased, cultural contacts increased and our experiences in building for a better future shared on the basis of mutuality of benefit.

It is clear that in our relations the Joint Commission will have an important role to play and function to perform. We have noted with satisfaction that before our next session in 1984, all the four sub-commissions will again meet in the next few months. I hope that officials of both countries would meanwhile give thought to proposals made by each other. In this intervening period I would particularly wish that there be a special concentration on those areas in which the progress has been comparatively less. Further, a very important aspect is the implementation of decisions taken. I hope that both our countries will take swift action to implement agreed proposals. I can assure you that no our part, we will take whatever action is required at the earliest.

At this time yesterday I was in Mohenjodaro, I was deeply moved to see the legacy of that great civilization. History tells us that the people of the Indus Valley had extensive contacts in many fields with people of other distant lands. As we set out to open a new and purposeful chapter in the history of our two countries with the setting up of the Joint commission, let us be guided by the spirit of Mohenjodaro which stands as a monument to the innovative spirit of man which time cannot erase.

I am not given to exaggeration but I want to share my joy at the modest but useful progress made in the last four days.

I would, once again, like to thank you, Mr. Foreign Minister, members of your delegation and the Government of Pakistan for your kindness and the excellent manner we were looked after during our stay here. I would particularly like to thank the conference staff for the valuable help they gave to my delegation which enabled us to finish our work in time. All of us will retain very pleasant memories of our stay here in connection with the inaugural session of our Joint Commission. We look forward, Excellency, to welcoming you in our country in a few months in our endeavours to further cooperation in the South Asian region, a process which has a new dimension of its own.

Report of the India – Pakistan Joint Commission Meeting held in Islamabad from June 1 to 4, 1983.

{The following report was signed on the conclusion of the first meeting of the Indo-Pakistan Joint Commission held in Islamabad from June 1 to 4, 1983.}

In pursuance of agreement between the Government of Pakistan and the Government of India on the establishment of a Joint Commission signed at New Delhi on 10 March 1983, with a view to strengthening understanding and to promote cooperation between the two countries for mutual benefit in economic, trade, industry, education, health, cultural, consular, tourism, information, scientific and technological fields, the first meeting of the Joint Commission was held in Islamabad on June 1-4, 1983.

The Pakistan delegation was led by His Excellency Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, Minister for Foreign Affairs. The Indian delegation was led by His Excellency Mr. P.V. Narasimha Rao, Minister of External Affairs.

At the inaugural session of the Joint Commission held on June 1, 1983, the two Foreign Ministers exchanged the instruments of ratification of the Agreement (on Joint Commission). Reaffirming the resolve of their Governments to foster good-neighbourly and harmonious relations between the two countries, they expressed gratification at the establishment of the Joint Commission which would provide an institutional framework for promotion of bilateral cooperation.

It was agreed to appoint four Sub-Commissions to deal with the various subjects as specified below:

I. Economic, health, scientific and technological (including agriculture, communications & industry).

II. Trade.

III. Information, education, social sciences, culture & sports.

IV. Travel, tourism and consular matters.

The Sub-Commissions held a number of working sessions during which both sides put forward concrete proposals for cooperation in various areas.

Discussions in the Joint Commission as well as the Sub-Commissions were held in a cordial atmosphere, reflecting a constructive and positive attitude. It was realized that confidence-building and cooperation was a continuous process and that some of the proposals discussed at the first meeting would require further examination and negotiations.

The attached reports submitted by the Sub-commissions were adopted by the Joint Commission. The main conclusions of the Joint Commission are as follows:

SUB-COMMISSION-I

Economic Matters (Including Industry, Agriculture, Communications), Health, Scientific and Technical Cooperation.

Avoidance of Double Taxation: Discussions took place on Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement between the two airlines. It was noted with satisfaction that the competent taxation authorities of the two countries have already agreed to hold negotiations during July 18-23, 1983 at Islamabad on the subject of avoidance of double taxation, to review the existing position and explore the possibility of concluding a comprehensive tax treaty or a limited treaty applicable to airlines only.

Planning: Consultations on long term planning would be initiated with the setting up of a Working Group and the organization of a Seminar as early as possible.

Industry: The two sides agreed to encourage visits of business men and industrialists in order to identify opportunities for collaboration between the entrepreneurs of the two countries and establish projects based on such cooperation.

The Indian side indicated that there were good prospects of technological cooperation and supply of machinery, in such areas as manufacture of agricultural machinery and implements, chemicals and dyes, dairy products and equipment, electrical equipment, process control equipment and compressors. The Pakistan side took note of the above proposals.

The two sides agreed on the exchange of visits, and of information on the experiences of development programmes of small scale and cottage industries.

Agriculture: Both sides recognized the need for cooperation in agriculture. It was agreed in principle that the Pakistan Agricultural Research Council and the Indian Council for Agricultural Research would enter into an agreement providing inter alia, for exchange of scientists, technologists and experts, germ plasm and breeding materials, scientific literature, information and methodologies and participation of the scientists, technologists and experts in each other’s seminars, symposia, workshops, etc. Both sides also agreed to explore the possibility of cooperation between other specialized institutions in the field of agricultural research.

Communications: Telecommunication: It was mutually agreed that existing telecommunication facilities between the two countries would be improved and augmented by adding more channels. Exchange of visits and discussions between the telecommunication executives of the two countries would take place with a view of improving cooperation and coordination of telecommunication operations. It was also decided that the installation of the broad-band coaxial cable system between Lahore and Amritsar would be taken up with priority.

Railways: An agreement was reached in principle that passengers from either country should be afforded the facility of purchase of through tickets from the points of entrainment in one country to the points of detrainment in the other. It was also agreed that customs and immigration facilities for passengers of either country should be organized on the Indian side at Amritsar.

Shipping: The Sub-Commission reviewed the scope and implementation of the Protocol on Resumption of Shipping concluded between the two countries in New Delhi on 15th of January, 1975. The Protocol is presently confined to the carriage of bilateral trade only i.e. trade which originates in Indian and is destined for Pakistan and vice versa. The Pakistan delegation proposed that the scope of the Protocol should be expanded. The Indian delegation welcomed the suggestion and stated that the carriage of all 3rd country cargo should be included within the scope of the Protocol. The matter could be further examined.

Postal Services: Pakistan has reduced postage rates on letters and postcards, both surface and air, as well as on aerograms posted for India by 15 per cent effective from 1.7.1982. India has reduced, with effect from 1.6.1982, postage rates for Pakistan by 15 per cent in case of all categories of letter post items and postal parcels sent by air except aerograms. In case of surface articles, India has, between 1977 and June 1982, progressively reduced postage rates by 37 per cent for all categories of letter post items and by 15 per cent for parcel posts.

The Pakistan delegation agreed to recommend to the Government of Pakistan to further reduce postage on surface mail letters, book post up to 20 grams and postcards by another 22 per cent and on all other items of postal mails, both by air and surface, by 15 percent. Indian side agreed similarly to recommend to the Government of India to reduce the rate for aerograms also by 15 per cent.

Health: Both the parties agreed that in the field of Health the following areas could provide the basis for useful mutual cooperation:

i) exchange of Information, ii) communicable diseases control, iii) research, iv) traditional medicine, v) population, family welfare and vi) primary health care. Details of collaborative programmes can be worked out after exchange of visits of experts and health administrators, which would begin as soon as possible.

Science and Technology: Discussions took place on mutual cooperation in the field of science and technology. In this context, reference was made to the areas identified by the science and technology Working Group under the aegis of South Asia Regional Cooperation. It was agreed that exchange of delegations may take place between the two countries and suggest concrete measures for cooperation in such areas as clean energy, metallurgy, marine sciences, genetic engineering and bio-technology, medical research, environment (with special reference to population control) and optics.

Sub-Commission – II

Both sides reiterated their keen desire to expand bilateral trade. With this objective, views were exchanged on the question of concluding a new trade agreement on the basis of mutuality of advantage. It was agreed to work purposefully towards formulation of feasible approaches to bilateral trade that would take care of the major concerns of each side, and at the same time, would lead to further improvement of trade between the two countries.

In the discussion on other items, it was recognized that these were interlinked with the measures to increase trade and would be discussed when the new trade agreement is finalized.

Sub—Commission — III

(Information, Education, Social Sciences, Culture and Sports)

An agreed programme of cooperation relating to exchanges in Information, school education, higher education, archaeology, museums, archives, libraries, exhibitions and sports was prepared. It was decided to continue discussions on mutual cooperation regarding exchange of writers, poets and in the fields of social sciences, performing arts, conservation of cultural property, anthropological studies, copyright and book promotion.

The Indian side presented a draft agreement on cultural cooperation between the two countries and the Pakistan side presented a draft Agreement regarding exchange of archival materials. The two draft would be examined for further discussions.

Sub – Commission - IV

(Travel, Tourism and Consular)

Detailed discussions were held on travel, tourism and consular matters. In particular, views were exchanged on the promotion of group tourism, travel, visits of businessmen and organized groups of professionals and academics were agreed to. Furthermore, agreement was reached on the need to promote group tourism between the two countries. Measures to expedite exchange of civilian prisoners between the two countries were also agreed upon.

The Foreign Ministers expressed satisfaction at the results achieved during the first meeting. They were confident that the Joint Commission would facilitate the strengthening of mutual understanding and the promotion of cooperation between the two countries.

The Foreign Minister of India expressed gratitude for the reception and hospitality extended to the Indian delegation by the Government of Pakistan.

It was agreed that the next meeting of the Joint Commission would be held in India in 1984. Meanwhile Sub-Commissions I and II would meet in Islamabad and Sub-Commissions III and IV in New Delhi before the end year.

In addition to the deliberations of the Joint Commission, the two Foreign Ministers also exchanged views on a number of subjects of common interest. Recalling the statement issued after the meeting between the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India on 1 November 1982, the two Ministers reiterated the commitment of their Governments to hold further discussions at an early mutually agreed date, on Pakistan’s proposal for an agreement on non-aggression and non-use of force and India’s proposal for a treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation.

No. 32930-Circular June 6, 1983

Head of Mission/Post from Natwar Singh

Foreign Minister visited Islamabad from 1-4 June 1983 for inaugural session of Indo-Pakistan Joint Commission. He had several rounds of talks with Pakistan Foreign Minister SAHABZADA YAQUB KHAN. Foreign Minister could not meet ZIA as he had been operated upon and hospitalized. Pak Government and media highlighted visit. Text of Joint Statement and FM’s speech at inaugural and concluding sessions separately sent to you.

2. Foreign Minister was accompanied by 15 officials from different Ministries. I had gone to Islamabad two days prior to FM’s arrival with an advance team for preliminary discussions. I had discussions with Pak Foreign Secretary NAIZ NAIK. Later I had discussions on some important bilateral matters with Lt. Gen. ARIF, Chief of Staff to President.

3. At the inaugural session of Joint Commission on June 1, it was agreed to constitute the following four Sub-Commissions:

   I. Economic matters (including Industry, Agriculture, Communications, Health, Scientific and Technological Cooperation.

   II. Trade

   III. Information, Education, social Sciences, Culture and Sports.

   IV. Travel, Tourism, Consular.

4. Highlights of the decisions taken in the four Sub-Commissions pertained to improvement in telecommunication facilities, uniformly reduced postal rates, cooperation in areas such as Health, Population/Family Welfare, Science and technology, Information, School Education, Higher Education, Archaeology, Museums, and to discuss further mutual cooperation in the field of social sciences, performing arts and exchange of writers and poets, contacts between agricultural research institutes consultations to take place between planning agencies of two countries to formulate practical suggestions for promoting economic cooperation etc.

5. We gave drafts of separate agreements on culture and tourism which they promised to consider. In the sphere of travel/consular some limited liberalization has taken place but Pakistanis did not accept some of our suggestions like opening of a new route for travel as provided in 1974 Visa Agreement or liberalization regarding personal reporting in police stations by visitors from either country as at present. They only agreed to consider these. Measures to expedite exchange of civilian prisoners were agreed upon. There was no progress in the Sub-Commission dealing with Trade. Similarly they did not agree to liberalizations proposed by us in the Shipping Protocol whose review has been pending since 1976. It was however agreed to increase visits by businessmen and industrialists to identify opportunities for collaboration. They took note of our proposal for cooperation for joint ventures in third countries and supply of machinery in some specified fields. Judging from initial reactions, we do not expect any substantial progress in these fields. All sub-commissions will again meet before the end of this year.

6. There was a tendency on part of Pakistanis to implicitly suggest that climate of relations could improve substantially only if efforts of Joint Commission were reinforced by conclusion of No War Pact. YAQUB in his discussions with Foreign Minister suggested resumption of dialogue on Pakistan proposal for a No War Pact and our offer of a Treaty of Peace and Friendship, in August, at the Secretary’s level. Foreign Minister agreed to this suggestion stating that precise dates could be worked out by mutual agreement.

7. Other points raised by FM were:

(a) He urged Pakistan not only to continue its search for Defence personnel missing since 1971 but also permit their families to visit Pakistan. Pakistanis agreed that families of missing Defence Personnel could visit Pakistani jails accompanied by an Embassy official in terms of the recently concluded protocol on Consular Access.

(b) Foreign Minister reminded YAQUB KHAN about Pakistan’s unfulfilled promise on return of hijackers. YAQUB stated that their trial in Pakistan would commence soon after the meeting of Joint Commission but mentioned no dates.

8. Afghanistan: YAQUB KHAN gave a detailed report to FM on the latest position in Afghanistan. He said that CORDOVEZ had been over-optimistic in his statements but conceded that progress had been made in Geneva particularly in regard to consultations with refugees about their return. He also confirmed that CORDOVEZ had given a draft document to both sides. He was however adamant that any settlement has to be linked with the withdrawal of Soviet troops and that they were not prepared to have direct talks with the KARMAL regime. About his recent tour abroad he said he had give similar briefing to the French, British and Saudis but had more detailed discussions with the Chinese and Americans as they could be possible guarantors along with Soviet Union. He would be having discussions in Moscow on the 9th before going to Geneva for the 3rd round commencing June 16.

9. Joint Commission meeting useful as it was first time that officials dealing with various subjects in both countries met together face to face. Pakistanis conceded importance of Joint Commission and recognized its value in improving relations. Predictably there was reluctance on their part in agreeing to different concrete proposals regarding bilateral trade, travel, shipping and furthering cultural exchanges. There was also a feeling that Pakistanis who had initially been hesitant with regard to discussions in Joint Commission had been obliged to come up with more concrete proposals on their own or pay more serious attention to our own proposals because of the momentum which had developed. In spite of Pakistan dragging its feet on bilateral matters, we were able to extract agreement on a few aspects and promise of consideration on others. We had not gone to Pakistan with any high hopes. We were conscious of their restraints and reservations.

10. Foreign Minister in his address at the concluding session of the Joint Commission described its result as “modest but useful”.
Inaugurating the meeting of Sub-Commissions III and IV of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission on January 19, 1984 the Foreign Secretary, Shri Maharajkrrishna Rasgotra said:

The first and second Sub-Commissions of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission met for the first time earlier this week. From all accounts, the meeting achieved some progress. That should be a matter of satisfaction to us.

This meeting of the third and fourth Sub-Commissions here in New Delhi is a welcome and happy occasion, which I feel privileged to inaugurate. I have great pleasure in extending a warm and friendly welcome to the members of the Pakistan delegation. I wish them a pleasant stay here. I hope the discussions they are going to have with our officials will carry this constructive dialogue between our two countries a long step forward and the results of this meeting will impart meaningful content to the relations between our two countries in the fields covered by the two Sub-Commissions.

I hope that our friends from Pakistan will not grudge me the thought – and the hope – that this meeting will register even greater achievement than the Islamabad meeting earlier this week. I say this not from a sense of rivalry but from the desire, so often demonstrated by our leaders, for a positive and cooperative turn in India-Pakistan relations. For too long and far too often has the world heard only of differences and disagreements between India and Pakistan: we think it is time for a change.

FORUM

It was in this spirit that our Prime Minister, Shrimati Indira Gandhi, proposed the setting up of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission as a forum for forgoing constructive and mutually beneficial cooperation between our two countries which would help transcend the differences and misunderstandings of the past.

As you know, the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan agreed to set up the Joint commission and this decision was brought into effect when a formal agreement was signed by the two Foreign Ministers in March 1983. The Commission’s first meeting took place in Islamabad in June 1983. It was a good beginning and we were happy that we made some useful, though modes progress. The goals that we set out to achieve last year were the same as those enshrined in the Simla Agreement of more than a decade ago.
The two Sub-commissions meeting here deal with information and culture, education and social sciences, travel and tourism. These are important areas of extensive potential contacts between the information media, the academic, intellectual and the ordinary citizens of our two countries. The progress achieved in our meetings will help generate understanding between our peoples. Larger interaction between them is bound to be beneficial to both.

Positive Approach

Our approach, might I repeat, is positive and constructive. We are anxious to give meaning and substance to the relations between our two countries in different areas. We are anxious to do so because Pakistan is our neighbor, and a strong tradition of good neighbourliness characterizes our history and our culture.

The Prime Minister of India, Shrimati Indira Gandhi, said some time ago: neighbours are a gift of geography. India and Pakistan are neighbours, that is a reality and it is given to neither to change it. India desires normal and friendly relations with Pakistan as between two sovereign, equal and independent neighbouring countries.

Our country is blessed with many neighbours. We have differences over some matters with some of them, and that is but natural. But the general tenor of our relations with each one of them is excellent and our cooperation with them is diverse and extensive. We work together with them as good neighbours: where we differ or disagree, we do so as friends. As friends, we try to narrow differences and widen the areas of understanding and cooperation. Why should the situation between India and Pakistan be any different? In appropriate forums both countries should give careful thought to this question.

This is the spirit in which our delegations to this meeting of the two Sub-Commission in New Delhi will discuss issues with their counterparts from Pakistan. We wish to work for greater contacts among wider cross-sections of our two peoples.

We seek cooperation in the largest possible number of areas of common interest for mutual benefit on the basis of agreed priorities.

I am confident that cordiality and the spirit of friendship will prevail in these meetings and your talks will be productive and useful. Looking beyond these meetings, I hope that the agreements reached here will be acted upon by the respective agencies and organizations of the two Governments so that we can move forward to the full achievement of the aims in pursuit of which the Joint Commission was established.

I wish all success to your endeavours. May your work lead to the opening of new vistas of understanding and cooperation between our two countries.

Sub-Commission - I

Sub-commission 1 of the Indo-Pakistan Joint Commission, which deals with economic matters has completed its deliberations, the highlights of which are as follows:

Planning and Development

A working group consisting Secretary, Planning and two senior officials of the Planning Commission of both countries has been constituted to formulate suggestions for economic cooperation. A seminar on long-term economic cooperation is to be held in Islamabad in April 1984.

Agriculture

The two sides exchanged drafts on agricultural cooperation between the Indian Council for Agricultural Research and the Pakistan Agricultural Research Council. A revised draft has also been prepared for final approval by the two governments.

Railways

It has been agreed to introduce through bookings, for the passengers traveling between Pakistan and India, to seven designated railway stations in both countries. Passengers will be able to buy tickets in their own currency. These arrangements are expected to come into effect in July 1984.

Health

Both sides agreed to exchange delegations for discussions between the Directorate General Health Services and Medical Research Council of both countries. Areas of cooperation would include control of communicable diseases, control and prevention of goiter and other water-borne diseases, as well as research and training of teachers for the handicapped. A Pakistani delegation is to visit India in April 1984 and an Indian delegation would visit Pakistan subsequently.

Industry

Progress was reviewed regarding (i) exchange of visits; (ii) technological cooperation and supply of machinery; (iii) joint ventures and (iv) exchange of information. A proposal to set up a Joint Business Council was noted for consideration. A delegation of industrialists and officials would visit India to explore prospects of industrial cooperation and exchange of information. Both sides agreed to encourage their entrepreneurs to invest in the Export Processing Zones of the other country.

Shipping

It was agreed that it would be mutually beneficial to expand the scope of the 1975 'Protocol on Resumption of Shipping Services' between India and Pakistan to cover carriage of third country exchange cargo. A Pakistani delegation is expected to go to India to discuss further liberalization of the Protocol and related issues.

Telecommunication

It was decided to add one more telephone carrier system between Lahore and Amritsar for which the terminal for installation at Lahore will be loaned by India.

A radio telephone link in the VHF range will also be installed shortly for which the terminal for installation at Amritsar will be loaned by Pakistan.

It was decided that the co-axial cable system between Lahore and Amritsar which is a part of the Asia Telecommunication Networks should be completed by the end of 1984. After this system is installed better quality circuits would be available.

Auto telex circuits would also be expanded over the terrestrial and satellite telex traffic. Both sides further agreed to examine the introduction of semi-automatic telephone working and try to overcome the related technical problems in this connection.

Postal

The two sides expressed deep appreciation at the reduction of postal rates for mail between the two countries. It was agreed to hold a meeting of the two postal administrations by mind 1984 for the settlement of postal accounts prior to 1971.

Science and Technology

It was agreed to exchange visits for exploring cooperation in clean energy, marine science genetic and bio-technology medical research, environment and optics with a view to sharing each other’s experience.

Islamabad, dated 17th January 1984.
2690. Press Statement issued at the conclusion of the meetings of the Indo-Pakistan Joint Sub-Commissions III and IV.

New Delhi, January 21, 1984.

The second meeting of Sub-Commission III on information, education, social sciences, culture and sports and Sub-Commission IV on travel, tourism and consular matters of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission was held in New Delhi between January 19 and 21, 1984.

The meeting of the two Sub-Commissions was inaugurated by Shri M. Rasgotra, Foreign Secretary of India. H.E. Mr. Riaz Piracha, Ambassador of Pakistan was present on the occasion.

The Pakistan delegation for the meeting of the two Sub-Commissions was led by Mr. M.A. Beg, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Culture and Sports and Mr. Mohsin Kamal, Joint Secretary, Tourism Division, Government of Pakistan. The Indian delegation was led by Shri J.K. Bhattacharya, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Information and Broadcasting and Shri Surjit Singh, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Home Affairs.

During the discussions, which were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere, the two sides reviewed the progress of the implementation of decisions made at the last meeting of the two Sub-Commissions held at Islamabad in June 1983 and exchanged views on specific proposals aimed at promoting mutually beneficial cooperation in these fields.

A protocol on promotion of group tourism, the text of which has now been finalized, will be signed soon.

In the course of deliberations in Sub-Commission III, various other proposals were discussed and decisions reached in regard to exchanges in the fields of information, education, culture, sports, performing arts, etc. It is hoped that this will facilitate visits of artists, poets, writers, performing artists and experts in various fields between the two countries.

The meeting considered further measures to implement decisions taken at the last meeting in regard to cooperation among national libraries, national archives and national museums and for the preservation of cultural property, prevention of illegal exports of antiques etc.

Fresh proposals have been made to give further impetus to the tempo of exchanges in the field of sports and plans have been made for exchanging teams of sportsmen in different fields during 1984. Exchange of exhibitions of paintings, photographs, handicrafts and folk-crafts are also envisaged.
In the Sub-Commission IV steps to streamline modalities in respect of return of civilian detenus who have completed their sentences were further discussed. It was agreed that measures would be considered to increase the number of shrines for visit of pilgrims of both countries. It was decided that, in future double entry transit visas would be issued by both countries.

All the four Sub-Commission of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission will meet again in New Delhi during the 2nd Meeting of the Joint Commission.

2691. Press Release issued by the Federation of Indian Chamber of Commerce and Industry on the visit of 12-member Trade Delegation representing the Federation of Pakistan Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

New Delhi, March 26, 1984.

Potential for increased trade between India and Pakistan exists and should be fully explored. India is keen to improve trade between the two countries to a significantly higher level. Trade could play a vital role between the two countries and assist in cementing the relationship.

These ideas were exchanged today when a 12 member delegation representing the Federation of Pakistan Chambers of Commerce and Industry called on Commerce Minister, Shri V.P. Singh here today. Shri N. R. Laskar, Minister of State for Commerce and Shri Abid Hussain Commerce Secretary were also present. The Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Saifullah Khan Paracha, Chairman of FPCCI. The delegation is in India on the invitation of FICCI.

The leader of the Pakistan delegation observed that during this visit he had found a strong desire amongst the Indian businessmen to increase trade with Pakistan.

This urge was reciprocated in the business community of his country.

Shri V.P. Singh suggested that various new items for import and export could be identified at the traders level. Mr. Paracha informed him that Indian and Pakistan Chambers of Commerce and Industry were already working on this so that link-ups could be organized shortly.
For certain items like edible oil, basmati rice and carpets which were of import and export interest to both the countries, market intelligence could be exchanged so that the two countries could benefit while trading with third countries, suggested the Commerce Minister.

Similarly industrial collaboration and new technologies and joint ventures were areas, where the two countries could cooperate in.

The Commerce Secretary pointed out that a new dimension could be added to joint ventures cooperation by investment in the free trade zones of each other’s countries.

The Commerce Minister further stated that exchange of visits between the two countries’ State Trading Corporation and other public sector undertaking like the MMTC could be arranged for better information flow and interaction. Mr. Paracha of Pakistan felt that regulations could be eased to facilitate frequent visits of businessmen between the two countries. He made a request for additional facilities in the import policy of India for items of export interest to Pakistan.

Onyx and collaboration in marble production were also considered. There were further discussions on the framework of trade between the two countries.

India’s total exports to Pakistan have risen from Rs. 0.78 crores in 1975-76 to Rs. 6.59 crores in 1982-83. Similarly the imports from Pakistan have gone up from Rs. 2.12 crores in 1975-76 to Rs. 32.46 crores in 1982-83.

Although no trade agreement between India and Pakistan exists, there has been progress in discussions at the two meetings of the Indo-Pak Sub-Commissions on trade in June, 1983 and January, 1984. At the last meeting, it was agreed that trade deficits should not be viewed purely from the arithmetical or short-term point of view. It was also agreed that there was substantial scope for expansion of trade without incurring a large trade imbalances.

Measures to expand trade which were agreed to in Sub-commission Meetings in January, 1984 include;

(i) the two countries will make all possible efforts to meet each other’s requirements of essential commodities caused due to unforeseen shortages.

(ii) The following items were identified for bulk trade between the two countries. Exports to India: Fertilizer (Urea), Low grade oil, pig iron, soda ash, fresh and dried fruits, petroleum products, fish, rock salt, Onyx and industrial alcohol. Exports to Pakistan: Iron ore, steel mill rolls, stainless steel sheets, mica and mica products, selected chemicals, jute and jute products, tea, coffee and Bidi leaves.

India has already imported fertilizers and pig iron worth Rs. 5.5 crores and 9 crores during July 1983 February 1984.

Pakistan participated in a big way in the India International Trade Fair, 1981, and the country’s pavilion was the second largest in the Fair.

Exchange of visits between the business communities have been encouraged. A delegation from Pakistan Federation of Chambers of Commerce and Industry visited India at the invitation of FICCI In November, 1981. The PHD Chamber of Commerce and Industry sent a team to Pakistan in November 1982. A delegation of FICCI also visited Pakistan in February, 1983.

2692. AIDE MEMOIRE from the High Commission of India in Pakistan to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Islamabad, May 12, 1984.

The Sub-Commission on Trade, formed under the Indo-Pak Joint Ministerial Commission, held its last meeting in Islamabad on 15-17 January 1984. In view of the special importance attached to this vital sector of bilateral relations, both sides in the Sub-Commission meeting were led by their respective Commerce Secretaries. The Agreed Minutes of the meeting reiterated the keen desire of both the countries to substantially increase trade between the two countries.

In the Sub-Commission meeting it was, inter alia, agreed to find ways and means of gradually inducting the private sector in the trade between the two countries. While discussing the mechanics of achieving this commonly shared objective, it was pointed out by the Pakistan side that it apprehended injury to its nascent industries if unrestricted trade was permitted between the two countries. The Indian side took note of Pakistan’s concern.

In the above context, it was felt that it would be worthwhile if the Government of Pakistan could identify the specific commodities whose import from India in its judgement would adversely affect some of its industries. Preparation of such a list, it was hoped, would help in resolving the present impasse which had defied a solution for too long. With these considerations in view, the Commerce Secretary of Pakistan had assured the Indian Commerce secretary to give a list to the Indian side identifying the products requiring some protection.

The Government of India would like to receive the list of the products, requiring quantitative or qualitative protection in the context of Indo-Pak trade, if the same has since been prepared, with a view to give a further impetus to the promotion of Pakistan–India trade relations.

2693. Protocol on Group Tourism between the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and the Republic of India.

The Islamic Republic of Pakistan and the Republic of India hereinafter referred to as the Contracting Parties.

Desirous of promoting and strengthening goodwill between the two countries.
And further desirous of promoting tourism between the two countries to enhance understanding of their people about the other country

Have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE I
The Contracting Parties shall develop group tourism between the two countries on the basis of reciprocity.

ARTICLE II
The group tourism envisaged in this Protocol shall not cover the nationals of either Party, if they come with groups visiting either country from third countries, or if they leave for third countries.

ARTICLE III
The Contracting Parties shall grant visitors’ visas for a period not exceeding 15 days to groups of 30 to 100 tourists to visit recognized places of tourist interest in their country. Each Party shall permit the visit of up to 2000 tourists in each quarter of the calendar year.
ARTICLE IV
Visas will be issued for specified places. The visas shall be granted on the basis of fixed itineraries previously approved by the other Party.

ARTICLE V
Initially, these group tours will be handled in Pakistan by the tour operation agency of the Pakistan Tourism Development Corporation, the designated tour operator for Pakistan, and in India by the India Tourism Development Corporation, the designated tour operator for India.

ARTICLE VI
The designated tour operators shall apply for visas, giving names and travel particulars of each tourist group to the Embassy of the other country in its territory, at least one month before the date of arrival of the group in the other country.

ARTICLE VII
Initially, all tourist groups will travel by air only. Entry and exit of these tourist groups will be through a recognized check post. The exit may not necessarily be through the same check post as the check post of entry.

ARTICLE VIII
Tourist shall not be required to personally report their arrival and departure to the local police.

ARTICLE IX
Each Party shall grant, on a reciprocal basis, sufficient foreign exchange to each tourist to promote group tourism between the two countries.

ARTICLE X
The Contracting Parties shall share their experiences in the field of tourism through exchange of statistical publications, research studies and other relevant published material.

ARTICLE XI
This Protocol shall remain in force until either Party revokes it by giving a notice in writing 3 months in advance, to the other party.

The Protocol shall come into operation from a date to be notified by mutual Agreement.
2694. Reports of the Second Meeting of the India - Pakistan Joint Commission held in New Delhi from 2\textsuperscript{nd} to 4\textsuperscript{th} July, 1985.

The second meeting of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission was held in New Delhi from 2\textsuperscript{nd} to 4\textsuperscript{th} July, 1985.

2. the Indian delegation was led by H.E. Shri Khursheed Alam Khan, Minister of State for External Affairs. The Pakistan delegation was led by H.E. Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, Minister for Foreign Affairs.

3. During his stay in New Delhi the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Pakistan called on the President, the Vice President, the Prime Minister, the Ministers for Defence, Agriculture and Education as well as Chairman of the Policy Planning Committee in the Ministry of External Affairs.

4. At the inaugural session held on 2\textsuperscript{nd} July, 1985, the leaders of the two delegations expressed satisfaction at the fact that the second meeting of Joint Commission coincided with the 13\textsuperscript{th} anniversary of the historic Simla Agreement. They reaffirmed their Government’s resolve to pursue the task of promoting friendly and cooperative relations and the establishment of durable peace between the two countries in keeping with the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement. They paid tribute to the late Prime Minister of India, Smt. Indira Gandhi who proposed the creation of the Joint Commission, and the President of Pakistan H.E. General Mohammed Zia-ul-Haq, for their foresight in agreeing to its establishment as an institutional framework for promoting mutually beneficial cooperation in various fields. They expressed the desire that this meeting of the Joint Commission should make a concrete contribution towards further strengthening confidence, cooperation and friendship between the two countries. They directed their respective delegations that this objective must guide the deliberations in the four sub-commissions.
5. The four sub-commissions dealing with: (I) Economic matters (including Agriculture, Communications & Industry), Health, Scientific and Technical Cooperation (II) Trade, (III) Information, Education, Social Sciences, Culture and Sports & (IV) Travel, Tourism and Consular matters, held a number of working sessions in the course of which several concrete proposals were put forward by the two sides.

6. Some important decisions taken and recommendations made by the second meeting of the Joint Commission include: (i) Signing of the Agreement on cooperation in agricultural research; (ii) agreeing on the text of the draft Cultural Cooperation Agreement; (iii) Drawing up of proposals on cultural exchanges for the forthcoming year; (iv) Waiver of requirement of police reporting in respect of bona fide businessmen and holders of transit visas; (v) Commencement of through railway booking facilities between designated railway stations in the two countries from October 1, 1985; (vi) Programme for holding a seminar on long term planning in Islamabad and setting up of a working group for cooperation in this field; (vii) Exchange of information to check trafficking in narcotics.

7. It was decided that with a view to promotion of better understanding and mutual goodwill, the two governments, will facilitate people to people exchanges between intellectuals, students, alumni of recognized educational institutions, professional organizations and welfare clubs.

8. The discussions in the Joint Commission and the four sub-commissions were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere. The importance of timely implementation of various decisions taken by the Joint Commission was emphasized.

9. The Joint Commission adopted the reports submitted by the four sub-commissions, copies of which are attached (not included here). The following are the main conclusions of the Joint Commission:

Sub Commission I

Economic matters (including industry, communications, agriculture) health, scientific and technical cooperation.

(i) Agricultural Cooperation: An agreement on cooperation in agriculture was signed by the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development of the Government of India and the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan on 4th July, 1985.

(ii) Planning: A seminar on long term planning would take place in Islamabad some time in December 1985 – January 1986 to be followed by the setting up of a Working group for promoting economic cooperation. The Minister for Finance, Planning and Development of the Government of Pakistan would visit India in the last quarter of 1985.

(iii) Avoidance of Double Taxation: The tax panels of the two countries would meet in October 1985 to draw up a limited purpose treaty on the avoidance of double taxation.

(iv) Health: In order to strengthen cooperation in the field of health, it was agreed that a delegation from Pakistan would visit India in the first fortnight of August 1985 to be followed by a return visit by an Indian delegation to Pakistan in September, 1985.

(v) Telecommunications: The existing 12 channel carrier system between the two counties has been vastly improved and a second carrier system of 8 channel capacity has also been commissioned between Lahore and Amritsar. Six additional circuits between other cities/towns of both countries have also been introduced. The coaxial cable link between Lahore and Amritsar is expected to be commissioned by September 1985. A coordination meeting of the financial experts of both countries would also be convened in Islamabad at the earliest to settle outstanding financial dues.

(vi) Science & Technology: In order to concretize bilateral cooperation in certain identified fields, an Indian delegation would visit Pakistan in February, 1986 to be followed by a return visit from a delegation from Pakistan to India to April 1986.

(vii) Shipping: An Indian delegation would visit Pakistan in October 1985 to finalise details for liberalization of the bilateral Shipping Protocol of 1975.

(viii) Railways: Through bookings of passenger traffic between selected pairs of stations will be introduced from October 1, 1985.

Sub-Commission II- Trade

There was a review of the development of trade and it was noted that the volume of trade between the two countries had been very modest and did not fully reflect the potential which existed for trade between the two countries. Both sides agreed that expeditious measures needed to be taken to reverse the trend. It was agreed that further discussions would be necessary before a harmonization on basic approaches is possible. In order to achieve the mutually agreed objective of expanding trade, both sides exchanged indicative lists of products of their respective export interest.
Sub-Commission III

Information, Education (including Social Sciences), Culture and Sports

(i) A draft text of the cultural Cooperation Agreement was finalized for the consideration and approval of the two Governments.

(ii) Pending finalization of a Cultural Agreement, several proposals were made by both sides for exchanges during 1985-86. These would be pursued for implementation. The proposals included visits by archaeologists, social scientists, museum experts, writers, poets, artists, classical singers, archivists, library experts, anthropologists, etc.; exchanges of books, publications, sports teams and exhibitions of Urdu books and paintings; joint symposia on social sciences etc. India invited Pakistan to take part in the 6th Art Triennale in New Delhi in November 1985.

(iii) The two sides discussed the draft agreement for exchange of Archival Material. It was felt that the matter required further deliberation.

(iv) Correspondents of AIR and Radio Pakistan will be positioned in Islamabad and New Delhi respectively by end August 1985. One newspaper correspondent from each country will also be in place shortly.

(v) Both sides noted the importance of the role of the media. They emphasized the hope that in accordance with the provisions of the Simla Agreement, the media will contribute to the promotion of understanding and establishment of good neighbourly relations between the two countries.

(vi) Radio and TV organizations in the two countries will identify programmes for reciprocal exchanges.

(vii) Visits will be promoted between intellectuals, poets, writers, alumni of recognized educational institutions, professional organizations and welfare clubs.

Sub-Commission IV –

Travel, Tourism & Consular Matters

i) It was agreed to exempt businessmen visiting each other’s country and transit visa holders from reporting to police in person.

ii) The implementation of the protocol on group Tourism was reviewed and it was noted two group from Pakistan visited India and a group from India was scheduled to visit Pakistan towards the end of 1985.
The Airlines Visa Agreement of 1976 could be further liberalized and the Station Managers of Indian Airlines and PIA could be given assignment visas. Other staff members of the airlines would also have the number of visits increased from three to six each year. The families of the airlines officials would also enjoy these additional facilities.

The number of pilgrims visiting shrines in each other’s country will be increased. Additional facilities for these pilgrims would also be provided.

The procedures for the repatriation of civilian detenus after completion of their sentences were reviewed and it was agreed that lists of civilian detenus and consular access would be provided on a regular basis every quarter.

For the first time, the modalities to check smuggling of narcotics products were discussed and it was agreed that the Directorate of Revenue Intelligence in India and the Directorate of Customs Intelligence and Investigation in Pakistan would exchange information and stay in close touch in order to check trafficking in narcotics.

While in New Delhi Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzads Yaqub Khan apart from attending to the work of the Joint Commission also called on Indian President Zail Singh and Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi at New Delhi on July 2. He conveyed the warmest regards and best wishes of President Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq to Mr. Zail Singh, who cordially reciprocated Gen Zia’s message.

During his 40-minute meeting with Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, Sahabzads Yaqub Khan exchanged views on matters of mutual interest. They agreed that expansion of contacts and exchanges between the two countries at official, as well as non-official level, would positively contribute to further development of good neighbourly cooperation in an environment of mutual trust and confidence. They also agreed that such an evolution could strengthen peace and stability in the region. Gen zia had also had a telephonic conversation with Mr. Rajiv Gandhi to convey his greetings on the occasion of the 13th anniversary of Simla Accord. Reciprocating the greetings of Gen Zia, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi asked Sahabzada Yaqub Khan to convey his best wishes to Gen Zia and Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Juneja. Sahabzada Yaqub Khan also made a courtesy call on Mr. Khurshid Alam Khan, Indian Minister of State for External Affairs.

Speaking at the opening session of the Commission Pakistan Foreign Minister said Pakistan and India had much to gain from mutual confidence and cooperation. As neighbours they could and should be a source of help and strength to each other, he said. As developing countries “we can, and should, benefit from each other's experience,” he added.

He spoke of the shared history, culture and languages and innumerable other ties that bind the two countries and expressed the hope that an expanded exchange could immeasurably contribute to mutual enrichment of the lives of the two peoples with glorious and ancient civilizations. Calling for establishing tension-free, amicable and mutually supportive relation between the two countries, he said these would also strengthen the forces of peace and stability in the region, free from foreign military intervention or interference in the internal affairs of each other. He paid tributes to the late Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, who, he said, would be remembered as a founder of the Joint Commission. A distinguished stateswoman and admired leader of India, she had the foresight to propose the creation of the Commission. The proposal, as indeed it found ready acceptance by Gen Zia-ul-Haq, symbolized a recognition that harmony and cooperation...
10. The leaders of the two delegations expressed satisfaction at the results achieved during the second meeting of the Joint Commission and expressed their confidence that these would further facilitate the promotion of understanding and cooperation between the two countries and peoples.

11. The Foreign Minister of Pakistan expressed gratitude for the warm reception and generous hospitality extended to the Pakistan delegation by the Government of India.

12. It was agreed that:

(i) The Third meeting of the Joint Commission will be held in Islamabad in 1986;

(ii) The sub-commissions would meet in between also to review the progress. Sub-commissions I & II will meet in New Delhi and Sub-Commissions III & IV in Islamabad. These meetings will be held before the end of this year.

and not conflict and confrontation would best serve the real interests of the two countries. Recalling the signing of the Simla Agreement he said “Today, on the 13th anniversary of the signing of the Simla Agreement, we are cognizant especially of the wisdom of its step-by-step, progressive and incremental approach, which has proved its efficacy and effectiveness over the years. We have moved a long way from the state of boycott and severance that unfortunately characterized our relations in the early seventies. While there is always room for improvement, already our relations have moved forward in the fields of travel and trade, culture and communications. With greater mutual confidence, we can and, Insha Allah, shall achieve greater progress. The noble principle of the UN Charter, peaceful co-existence and mutual benefit, can and must be our inspiration and guide,” he added. He pleaded for the early and expeditious conclusion of a bilateral treaty to reinforce their commitment to the principles of non-aggression and non-use of force. He recalled that significant progress was made last year to wards the harmonization of the Pakistan proposal and the Indian draft treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation. The Foreign Secretaries were due to meet at the end of this month in New Delhi and “we look forward to further substantive results.”

Welcoming the Pakistani delegation at the opening of the meeting the Indian Minister of State for External Affairs, Khurshid Aslam Khan, said their objective was to increase contacts and cooperation where they existed and to explore new avenues for such cooperation. Their endeavour would be to concretize various proposals and ideas and reach mutually satisfactory agreements. The four sub-commissions provided a unique forum for Indian and Pakistani experts and officials dealing with a variety of subjects which had a direct bearing on the day-to-day life of the common man in either country, he said.

Mr. Alam said Protocols and agreements were important, but they were not an end in themselves. They represented the starting point in a joint endeavour. “We have to look beyond the signing of agreements. We have to ensure that decisions taken by the Joint Commission through mutual agreement are implemented expeditiously in letter and spirit. Various agencies of the two Governments concerned with their implementation have to ensure timely action in pursuance of these decisions. The two Foreign Minister have a crucial role to play as coordinating agencies,” he said. The people of India, Mr. Khurshid Alam Khan said, sincerely desired cordial, cooperative and good neighbourly relations with Pakistan, devoid of past suspicions, mistrust, and recrimination. “I am confident that our discussions will be marked by cordiality and will be productive and useful, so that we can take another step forward towards the achievement of the goals for which the Joint Commission was established,” he added.

Before leaving for Delhi Mr. Yaqub Khan told newsmen at the Islamabad airport that he was going to New Delhi for the Joint Commission meeting with an open mind and he would have a constructive and positive approach towards the talks with a view to building up mutual confidence and having tension free good neighbourly relations with India.

The second meeting of the Joint Commission ended after reaching a number of important decisions aimed at promoting mutual cooperation and friendship between the two countries. These steps included signing of an agreement on cooperation in agricultural research, finalization of the draft for a cultural agreement, formulation of cultural cooperation program, relaxation of travel regulations including exemption of police reporting in respect of businessmen and transit visitors, finalization of facilities for through railway bookings between designated railway stations and the decision to facilitate exchange of visits by various group organisations like, women’s organisations, lawyers’ associations and old boys associations. It was also agreed that India would hold an exhibition of Urdu books in Pakistan later that year and a seminar on long-term planning. The agreement on agriculture envisaged cooperation and collaboration in the fields of germplasm and breeding material, exchange of scientific literature and their participation in seminars, symposia and workshops and import and export of scientific equipment as available and required for the programmes of common interest.

The Indian Minister for agriculture, Mr. Buta Singh, said the signing of the agreement between the two countries was another step forward in the series of efforts being made to foster greater understanding and bilateral cooperation in diversified fields and to develop good neighbourly relations between the two countries. India wanted to share Pakistan’s experience and knowledge on the basis of “reciprocity and mutuality of interest”. Pakistan’s Foreign Minister, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said the agreement was vital for both countries as it would benefit the peoples of the two countries immensely. Although the step taken was modest, yet this would lead to further steps to clear the atmosphere and dispel the doubts and misgivings between the two countries, Mr. Yaqub Khan said. Sahabzada Yaqub Khan appreciated the work done by the four sub-commissions during their two-day deliberations. The way they had tackled the problems and issues with all seriousness reflected the desire and political will of the two countries, particularly that of President Zia-ul-Haq and Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, to forge good neighbourly and cooperative relations. “It harmonises the feelings of peoples in both the countries,” he said. He gave a firm assurance that the Pakistan Government would give serious attention to the implementation of the decisions arrived at during the three-day deliberations.

Mr. Khurshid Alam Khan, Indian Minister of State for External Affairs, congratulated the members of the two delegations and described the deliberations of the joint Commission as a productive and satisfactory exercise. He said it was gratifying that the discussions had been marked by a spirit of friendship, constructive cooperation and mutual accommodation. “The atmosphere, if I may say so, has been pervaded by the Simla spirit. It is only appropriate and befitting that this should be so,” he said.

The goal for which the joint commission had been established and the objectives they had set before themselves at Simla could be achieved only through sincere and timely implementation of such decisions as they took together under the aegis of the joint commission. In this, time and speed were as important as direction and content. "I have no doubt that our two governments will ensure that all the concerned agencies on both sides take timely action", he said.

During the joint briefing by the Spokesmen of the two delegations, it was stated that the first sub-commission had recommended increasing telephone links with other cities of the two countries for the benefit of the people and introduction of through railway bookings from October, 1985. It was decided that the Pakistan Finance Minister would be paying a visit to India in the last quarter of this year to discuss economic cooperation.

Progress was also made on avoidance of double taxation. The concept of joint venture in third world countries was also identified.

In the second sub-commission dealing with trade, it was agreed to have further discussions in this area, because no specific decision was reached and discussions were left open. In the third sub-commission dealing with information, culture, sports and education, the two sides have been able to work out a draft cultural cooperation agreement. Certain proposals were also worked out for exchanges of social scientists, museum experts, writers, poets and artists. It was agreed to exchange radio correspondents as well as newspaper correspondents. Progress of cooperation was also reviewed in regard to radio and television programme.

In the fourth sub-commission dealing with travel, tourism and consular access, there was liberalization of regulations for some categories of travellers. On the question of repatriation of civilian prisoners, it was decided to streamline the procedure. There would be a visit on the 28th of next month of consular officers of both sides to civilian prisoners. Thereafter, there would be such meetings every four months.

On return to Islamabad Yaqub Khan expressed his satisfaction over the outcome of the Joint Commission meetings. The results of the meeting were very satisfactory and this impression was also shared by other members of his delegation and "our hosts in India", he said. His favourable impression of outcome of deliberations was also confirmed by the persons at all levels he had the occasion to meet during his stay in New Delhi, he added.

The leaders of both the countries had helped the Commission arrive at understanding. He paid tribute to Prime Minister Mr. Rajiv Gandhi and said he had encouraged them greatly and promoted the conclusion of understanding between the two countries. Gen Zia-ul-Haq had also given him instructions that had enabled them to achieve encouraging results.

On the whole, he said, the results of the meeting were substantial. Even if they were to be regarded as modest, it was important to remember that each step, however, small would make the next step easier. He was sanguine that the wide range of decisions that had emanated from the meeting would help generate goodwill and confidence which was imperative for the promotion of cooperative relations between the neighbouring countries.

With continued goodwill and understanding, patience and perseverance, "we can achieve progress even in those areas where it appears to be lacking", he added.

In New Delhi, meanwhile, Foreign Secretary Mr. Romesh Bhandari said in an interview that seen in the context of the history of past 38 years of suspicion, hostilities, mistrust and distrust, the outcome of the Joint Commission meeting was really noteworthy and it should be the endeavour of the two sides to keep working if they had to go further. The legacies of the past should not deflect the two countries from the path of friendship, understanding and harmony, he added. At least, he said, there was no acrimony. "We are not at least snarling at each other. We are trying to find out what new element could be introduced to achieve greater understanding. Mr. Bhandari disclosed that "hot line" was being established between the Indian Foreign Secretary at New Delhi and the Pakistan Foreign Secretary at Islamabad. This would enable the two secretaries to attend to immediate problems. The aim was to change the negative attitude into a positive one 2695. Agreed Minutes of the meeting between Finance Minister V. P. Singh and Pakistan Finance Minister Mahbub-ul-Haq.

Islamabad, January 10, 1986.

In pursuance of the decisions taken of the meeting between the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan at New Delhi on the 17th of December 1985, His Excellency Mr. V.P. Singh, Finance Minister of India visited Pakistan from 8-10 January 1986. He was accompanied by Mr. S.Venkitaramanan, Secretary Finance, Mr. Prem Kumar, Secretary Commerce, Mr. Muchkund Dubey, Additional Secretary Ministry of External Affairs and other senior officials of the Indian Government. Mr. S.K. Singh, Indian Ambassador in Pakistan also joined the delegation.

2. The Pakistan Delegation was led by Dr. Mahbub-ul-Haq Minister for Finance, Planning and Economic Affairs and included Mr. Ejaz Ahmad Naik, Secretary General, Economic Affairs Division, Mr. H.U. beg, Secretary Finance Mr. Mehtab Masud, Secretary Commerce, Mr. Masud Zaman, Secretary Industries, Dr. Moin Baqai, Secretary Planning, Mr. Hasan Zaheer, Secretary Production, Mr. F.K. Bandial, Secretary Communications, Mr. Abdul Sattar, Additional Secretary Ministry of Foreign Affairs and other senior officials of the Pakistan Government. Dr.Humayun Khan, Pakistan Ambassador to India also joined the delegation.

3. During his stay in Islamabad, the Indian Finance Minister called on the President and the Prime Minister of Pakistan.

4. The two Finance Ministers held wide-ranging discussions on matters so that fruitful results for the betterment of the two peoples could be found. Mr. Bhandari however admitted that no progress had been achieved in the Joint commission meeting on trade and about the Khokropar border post. Maybe, Pakistan had some difficulties in the matter.

Within weeks of the meeting of the Joint Commission, on October 19 India and Pakistan agreed to cooperate in the field of Health and Family Planning when the signed agreed minutes of when a Pakistani delegations visited New Delhi.

Both sides agreed that there should be:

1. Exchange of information in the areas of bio-medical research, medical education and training, seminars and workshops at national levels.

2. Collaboration in communicable diseases control, particularly, malaria, tuberculosis, leprosy and control of goiter. The collaboration will be implemented through the Directorate General of India and Pakistan.

4. Exchange of information and experiences in the fields of family planning and welfare.

5. Exchange of experts in specialized fields of health and family welfare.
relating to economic cooperation between the two countries and the means by which this cooperation could be further strengthened. These discussions were intended to contribute to the process of normalising relations and promoting understanding and cooperation between the two countries, set in motion by Prime Minister Shri Rajiv Gandhi and President Zia-ul-Haq. These discussions related to the fields of telecommunications, shipping, air links, industry, trade, industrial joint ventures, education etc.

5. The discussions were held in a friendly and cordial atmosphere. The two sides reaffirmed their commitment to take appropriate steps to further expand and strengthen economic cooperation between the two countries.

6. The following decisions and understandings were reached during the meetings of the two Finance Ministers. An attempt will be made to implement decisions/understandings in all these areas and to finalise, wherever appropriate, texts of agreements, before the forthcoming visit of the Prime Minister of India to Pakistan:

(i) Telecommunications

(a) Direct dialing

Direct dialing services between the two countries should be started before the end of 1986.

(b) Telex facilities

The present telex facilities linking the two countries should be further expanded on the Lahore - Amritsar route.

(ii) Shipping

The amendments to the Shipping Agreement as agreed upon in the last meeting of the Joint Commission should be finalised as soon as possible.

(iii) Air Links

Representatives of the two national airlines should meet at an early date to explore the possibilities of increase in the frequency of services on existing routes and introducing more wide-bodied aircraft to cope with the growth in traffic.

(iv) Trade

7. The two sides agreed that there was considerable scope for the expansion of trade between India and Pakistan in the mutual interest of both the countries.
They also reaffirmed their objective is to conduct this trade in conformity with the commitments, obligations and safeguards under the GATT.

8. It was agreed that efforts should be made to at least double the trade in commodities being traded by the public sector agencies of the two countries, during the current year.

9. In private trade, Pakistan agreed to make an immediate beginning by opening its private sector trade in 42 commodities given in the annexed list. It will also set up a special committee to consider additional items for inclusion in private trade and to finalise those items within a month.

10. Pakistan proposed that as a pragmatic approach the expansion of private trade should be taken up in phases, building up a momentum towards a pattern of two way trade which would be in conformity with the principles of the GATT, while fully safeguarding local industries. Both sides agreed to continue further dialogue on the matter.

(v) Industrial Joint Venture

11. Both sides agreed that setting up of joint ventures in the two countries would be an important means of promoting industrial collaboration and trade between the two countries. This process will be facilitated by setting up a joint business committee of the federations of Chambers of Commerce and Industry of India and Pakistan. Such a committee would help in promotion of trade flows.

12. Representatives of the two governments should meet as early as possible to formulate specific guidelines that would govern such joint ventures arrangements. The two countries should also encourage investments by each other’s entrepreneurs in their export processing zones within the framework of rules and procedures that apply to these zones.

(vi) Exchange of delegations

13. Both sides agreed on the need to encourage greater contact through exchange of delegations of trade, businessmen, and industrialists, scholars and students, and professionals groups with a view to promoting greater understanding and cooperation, especially in the economic field.

(vii) Follow-up action

14. It was decided to set up a special committee of senior officers to be nominated by the two Governments to take follow up action on all the matters mentioned above. The committee would meet in February 1986.

Finance Minister V.P. Singh welcomed the Pakistan move to expand the list of commodities for private trade adding that his country had already permitted unrestricted imports from India which can be processed by a committee of officials to be set up by Islamabad. He described the January 10 accord as “historic” in view of the recent deadlock in their trade, while Pakistan’s Finance Minister, Dr. Mahbubul Haq welcomed it as a good start, adding that the two countries’ economic relations had now entered “a new and more pristine phase”.

Summing up his impressions of the new moves to normalize India-Pakistan relations,
Dr. Mahbub said at the Press conference that these had not been negotiations in the traditional sense of the word, “but a joint voyage towards greater normalisation and friendship”. People on both sides longed for peace and development and “… a new harvest of hope” and “it is our duty to respond to these aspirations”. Both the Finance Ministers emphasized that talks on economic matters had linkage with discussions on other issues and the progress during the last two days would certainly be beneficial for the negotiations planned over the next few weeks in other matters.

Replying to a question, Dr. Mahbub, said Pakistan would be specifically interested in importing from India iron ore, wheat, pesticides and manganese ore. India could import from Pakistan urea fertilizer, cotton, iron and steel products, besides other things of its choice.

While stressing the re-opening of trade in “an orderly and progressive fashion”, Dr. Mahbub reiterated his assurance that the interest of Pakistan’s domestic industries would be fully protected, adding that the Indian side had also shown its sensitivity to this issue.

Dr. Mahbub believed that the decisions now made would “generate a new sense of momentum in our economic relations” and added that “a journey of a thousand miles starts with one step. We have taken that step”.

Finance Minister VP Singh underlined the complementarity of the economies of the two countries and hoped that the dynamics of growth would lead to both horizontal and vertical development of their economic relations.

Mr. Singh said the two sides recognized that there was considerable scope for trade between Pakistan and India but to ensure that the respective industries were not harmed in any way, it was reaffirmed by both sides that it was objective to conduct trade in conformity with the obligation and safeguards provided under the GATT.

When asked why the two sides had sought the GATT safeguards while they had already been demanding reforms in the General Agreement for Trade and Tariff, Mr. Singh said as long as it was not reformed, it was thought practical to use the available instruments.

He said a committee of officials from both the countries would be constituted within a month to follow up and monitor the programme envisaged in the agreed text. Speaking at a lunch hosted in his honour by the FPCCI in Karachi, Mr. Singh called upon the Pakistani businessmen to take the initiative in making the trade traffic thicker on the cooperation road being paved by the two governments. The private sector was the vehicle to promote economic relations between India and Pakistan, he said. Briefing the business community on the outcome of his deliberations with Islamabad, Mr. Singh said that in the context of SAARC, South-South trade and growing protectionist trend in the advanced countries, the growth of economic trade between the two countries should not be a problem. Called for deeper analysis of the trade pattern between the two countries when free trading was allowed, he said: “Two-thirds of Pakistan’s imports from India during this period were of agricultural items and machinery which was not produced locally” Brushing aside the apprehensions that imports from India might hurt the Pakistan Industry, Mr. Singh said only imports of three items from India crossed Rs. 10 million mark and only 20 items could touch the Rs. 1 million line at the graph.

Mr. Singh said that when he was asked by the Indian Press that the balance of trade was in favour of Pakistan, he had replied that it did not matter because the imports were cheaper than it would have been from anywhere else. Mr. Singh assured the Pakistani businessmen that he shared the concern of the developing countries that imports should not be allowed where they hurt the indigenous industry, “but we propose to have trade with you in areas where you are already having it with other countries.”

Sub-Commission III on Information, Education (including Social Sciences), Culture & Sports held sessions on 4 and 5 February, 1986 at its 4th meeting at Islamabad. The discussions took place in a most cordial and constructive atmosphere. Both delegations expressed their sense of satisfaction at the way cooperation was expanding.

I. As decided during the last meeting, the draft Cultural Cooperation Agreement had been examined. The amendments suggested by the Indian side have been incorporated. The Agreement may be initialed at the Joint Commission during its next session.

II. Archaeology and Archives
(a) It was stated by the Indian delegation that an International seminar on the subject would be organized in New Delhi. Details would be forwarded to the Pakistan side to facilitate their participation.
(b) The Pakistan side had already been providing facilities to Indian scholars in this field and, at present, and Indian scholar was studying Gandhara Culture. Proposals for further exchanges in other schools and styles may also be explored.
(c) Both sides had already exchanged their publication. It was agreed to continue such collaboration.
(d) The problems of archaeological conservation, relating to marble and brick structures especially, were discussed in detail. It was felt that each side could benefit from the experience of the other. India had already established institutions in this field. The Indian side agreed to provide details of facilities available at such institution. Pakistan would nominate two representatives for training at such institutions.
(e) Both sides exchanged draft agreements which were examined by the Directors of National Archives of two countries. The draft agreed upon would be submitted to the respective Governments for examination and approval. The Indian delegation suggested that, after approval, this agreement could form a part of the Cultural Cooperation Agreement.
(f) Pakistan had already communicated the names of two archivists who would visit India. It was agreed that the exchange of visits may take place during February-March 1986.
(g) It was noted with satisfaction that archival publications were being exchanged regularly.

III. Libraries and Museum Services
(a) The Directors/Experts of the National Libraries of the two countries will exchange visits in September/October, 1986 for a period of 2-3 weeks to study the catalogues and identify material, publications, micro-films of rare books of mutual interest to form the basis of exchange of materials and development of cooperation. Both sides agreed to exchange art publications.

(b) The Pakistan delegation stated that a number of museums in Pakistan had been reorganized resulting in substantial improvement in display techniques. The Indian side noted this development. It was agreed that both sides would benefit from exchange of experts in this field for which proposals would be formulated.

IV. Cooperation in Folk and Traditional Arts and Crafts

Both sides evinced keen interest in cultural exchanges in the sphere of oral traditions, folk arts, culture and crafts. The following fresh proposals were identified for cooperation in this field:-

1. Pakistan invited 2-4 master artisans to participate in the folk festival being organized at Lok Virsa from 11th to 16th April at Islamabad. Pakistan will provide local hospitality.

2. The Classical Music research Cell and Lok Virsa propose to exchange publications catalogues, indices as well as audio recordings with Sangeet Natak Academy, New Delhi.

3. Lok Virsa, Pakistan proposes to exchange publications, information and jointly develop a computer indicating of folkloric material with an appropriate Indian Institution.

4. Lok Virsa, Pakistan proposes exchanging publications, catalogues and information with Sahitya Academy, Delhi and Lalitkala Academy, Delhi.

5. Lok Virsa, Pakistan proposes to send a craft expert to India to study the organization of the Indian Handicraft Board and the development of traditional handicrafts in India. Similarly an Indian expert would visit Pakistan under the programme on reciprocal basis.

6. Lok Virsa, Pakistan invited experts from India for training/study in documentation of oral traditions and traditional culture in Pakistan.

7. Lok Virsa Media Centre, Pakistan proposes to exchange audio and video programmes on traditional culture with Door Darshan and AIR.

V. Education including Social Sciences

(a) It was decided that exchanges in various aspects of education would receive high priority. The Pakistan side has already invited Secretary Education, Government of India to visit Pakistan along with experts on formal and non-informal education. A similar delegation from Pakistan would visit India. It was also proposed that a 2-3 member delegation from Pakistan may be received in India to study the functioning of the Indian Institutes of Technology.

It was agreed that both sides would exchange information/literature on universalization of primary education including schemes to educate drop outs. The Pakistan delegation requested information on the leading IITs regarding disciplines taught, discipline-wise annual output of graduates, M.Sc.s, M. Phils., Ph.Ds, annual budget and sources of funding, staff, data regarding evaluation of IIT’s. In exchange the Indian side requested for similar literature on engineering institutions and other Centres of Excellence.

b) An offer of five scholarships from India for the session 1986-87 for Pakistani students to study in Indian Institutes of Technology/Engineering Colleges was being processed. Nominations would be sent to India by March, 1986. Five seats for Indian students in the faculties of medicine, engineering, business administration in Pakistan are being secured. The formal offer of scholarships would be communicated to India in March.

c) The Institute of Modern Languages, Islamabad, would exchange literature and materials with the Central Institute of English and Foreign Language(s), Hyderabad and the Institute of Modern Languages, Mysore. This was expected to lead to cooperation and collaboration.

d) Equivalence: Information on the equivalence of Certificates/diplomas/degrees would be exchanged between the two countries. Problems, if any, would be resolved by experts through visits and mutual consultations.

e) Moral Education: It was agreed that bibliographies on Islamic Studies and Moral Education would be exchanged between the two countries. This would enable the identification of subjects on which the two countries can exchange literature.

VI. Copy Right

Both sides reiterated their firm resolve to protect the rights of writers and artists to their intellectual property. The Pakistan delegation stated that the copyright law was being revised in Pakistan. They requested that recent Indian enactments on this subject may be provided. It was felt that material in this area could usefully be exchanged on a regular basis. It was agreed that implementation of copyright regulations in both countries may be reviewed periodically.

VII. Sports

It was noted that substantial exchanges had taken place in sports. The sports events identified by the Sub-Commission, however, are to be organized. It was stressed that these events should be expeditiously organized. With this object the respective sports authorities may formulate calendars of events through mutual consultations.

It was felt that cooperation in the field of sports could be further enlarged. Pakistan’s requirements for expertise in the fields of sports medicines and sports sciences were noted by the Indian side. It was agreed that representatives of the respective sports authorities would exchange visits to work out details.

VIII. Visit of Alumni Groups and Women’s Organizations

It was noted with satisfaction that visits by Alumni Organizations have been taking place. It was agreed that this should continue. The Indian delegation suggested that in cultural exchanges due consideration may be given to the participation of women. The suggestion was noted.

IX. Information

Reviewing matters relating to information the two sides reiterated that the media can and should play an important role in promoting friendly relations between the two countries in the spirit of the Simla Agreement. Both sides emphasized that the media should make greater efforts to contribute towards the establishment of good neighbourly relations.

The Sub-Commission reviewed the implementation of decisions taken at previous meetings and found the progress to be satisfactory.

Exchange of Correspondents

The two sides noted with satisfaction the tempo at which progress has been achieved in the appointment of correspondents on a reciprocal basis. Correspondents of Pakistan Broadcasting Corporation and daily JANG have already been stationed in India. Similarly, correspondents of AIR and TIMES OF INDIA have taken up assignments in Pakistan. The two sides agreed to the posting of one more newspaper correspondent on a reciprocal basis.
Exchange of Radio and TV Programmes

The two sides noted that the existing arrangements for the exchange of Radio Programmes between AIR and PBC are progressing satisfactorily. They agreed to accelerate the process.

Programmes are also being exchanged between Doordarshan and Pakistan Television. The two sides agreed that telecast rights of specifically selected programmes could be obtained by either side on a commercial or any other agreed basis. Both sides agreed that Radio and TV officials should exchange visits to accelerate mutual cooperation.

Visits of Professional Journalists

It was noted that visits of professional journalists of one country to the other were taking place satisfactorily. Each country was providing necessary facilities to the journalists of the other side during their visits. The two sides agreed to further encourage such visits.

Import of Newspapers and Periodicals

The question of import of newspapers and periodicals on a commercial basis between the two countries was discussed at length. It was agreed to continue the discussions.

Review of facilities for Press Telegrams

The two sides noted with satisfaction that their correspondents were provided with adequate facilities for the transmission on dispatches.

Duty Free facilities

The Pakistan side mentioned that their Government has extended the facility of duty-free import of certain essential items to Indian correspondents based in Pakistan. They requested that India should also consider extending such facilities to Pakistani correspondents stationed in India. The Indian side pointed out that such facilities were not being extended, at present, to any foreign correspondent based in India. However, the Pakistani side was assured that their proposal would be given due consideration.

Books Exhibitions and Seminars

Successful exhibitions in Pakistan of Urdu Books, published in India and of holding of Seminars on Urdu literature in which renowned Indian Urdu scholars participated was noted with satisfaction. It was agreed that exhibitions of Pakistani books and Seminars with participation of Pakistani scholars will be arranged in India in February/March, 1987 on similar terms.

Social Sciences

XI. It was agreed that Pakistan’s Centre of Social Sciences and Humanities (COSH) at the University Grants Commission will request the Indian Council of Social Sciences Research and request for supply of literature on its organization, functions, programmes, list of publications etc. Visits of social scientists and staff of the two institutions will be exchanged to develop collaborative programmes and holding a seminar in India. The ICSSR’S invitation to two Pakistan’s Social Scientists for participation was noted.

Anthropology

XII. An Indian anthropologist will visit Pakistan in October, 1986 to study pre-historic fossils/remains/sites, and to explore possibilities of forging long term cooperation with Pakistani research institutions in this field. It will be followed by visit of a Pakistani anthropologist. The Indian request for supply of a plaster-cast of Ramapithicus fossil was noted in this context.

The Sub – Commission discussed the various items on the Agenda consisting of the subjects under its purview and arrived at the following conclusions:
I. (i) Review of Indo – Pak Visa Agreement of September 14, 1974:

Clause 5.

The sub-Commission decided to amend clause 5 under the sub-heading “registration” in the Visa Agreement 1974 as follows:

(a) Holders of visitor visas shall be required to register themselves at the check post of entry and shall, within 24 hours of their reaching the specified places of stay, report their arrival in writing to the prescribed authority or the nearest police station. They shall also make a similar report 24 hours prior to their intended departure from the place of stay. In the case of families, only one member of the family shall be required to appear before the registration authority for registering himself and the members of his family.

(b) Bona fide businessmen going on business visits shall be required to register themselves at the check post of entry. However, they may not be required to report in person to the prescribed authority or the nearest police station for registration. For this purpose they may depute their authorized representatives to report their arrival in writing to the prescribed authority or the nearest police station within 24 hours of their reaching the specified place. The authorized representatives shall also make a similar report on their behalf 24 hours prior to their intended departure from the place of stay.

(c) Holders of transit visas valid for a period not exceeding 72 hours shall be required to register themselves only at the check post of entry. They will not be required to report their arrival/departure to the prescribed authority or the nearest police station for registration.

ii) Proposal for increase of visa fee for both countries.

It was agreed that the visa fee shall be increased from Rs.15 to Rs.25.

iii) Proposal for exemption from police reporting for visitors holding visitor visas valid upto 14 days.

The Indian side had suggested that visitors holding visitor visas valid up to 14 days should be exempted from personal reporting and should instead send a registered communication with acknowledgement due slip which would have constituted the necessary documentation for immigration authorities at the time of exit.

The Pakistan side pointed out the difficulties and the likely delays in postal communication in the two countries and stated that it was agreeable to exempt visitors holding visitor’s visa valid up to 14 days.
from reporting to police in person for registration and that their authorized representatives could be deputed for this purpose, as in the case of businessmen.

It was agreed that both these proposals would remain under consideration.

II. Review of the improvement of facilities to Airline of either country operation/overflying each other territory.

It was proposed by the Pakistan side that PIA Station Managers based in Delhi and Bombay should have permission to visit three more cities in addition to the existing arrangements. The Pakistan side also proposed that PIA Station Managers should have the facility of using either Delhi or Bombay airport as port of entry and exit.

The Indian side agreed to consider the two proposals with reference to their reciprocal application to IAC Station Managers based in Pakistan.

The Indian side proposed that the IAC staff members should not be required to obtain work permit for extension of their visas in the same way as is the case for the PIA staff posted in India. The Pakistani side agreed to consider this proposal.

The Pakistan side agreed to consider the Indian proposal that the IAC crew members arriving at Lahore and Karachi airports would be allowed to disembark and use the transit lounge facilities for rest or refreshment, as this facility is already available to PIA crew members at Delhi and Bombay airports. A decision in this regard would be sent through diplomatic channels at the earliest possible.

III. Facilities to Pilgrims to visit either country including Additional Shrines

Both sides agreed that the facilities provided to the pilgrims may be further improved in both the countries.

The Pakistan side agreed to open two more shrines namely Hazrat Data Ganj Baksh, Lahore and Hazrat Barri Imam, Islamabad, out of the list of thirteen shrines for the visit of devotees from India on the occasion of the Urs. Appropriate administrative measures in this respect will be taken by the Pakistan side.

The question of opening more shrines will also remain under consideration. However, the Pakistan side informed that no shrine exists at the site mentioned at serial No. 11 of the Indian list, namely Rabwah.
The Indian side agreed that Pakistani proposal to open more shrines in India will be considered when received.

5. The Pakistan side also agreed that the Indian request to increase the duration of stay of the pilgrims at Hayat Pitali from 3 to 5 days will be considered.

IV. Re-Opening of Khokhrapar – Munabao Check-post.

The Pakistan side stated that the question of re-opening the Khokhrapar - Munabao check-post continued to be under their active consideration.

XI. Streamlining of Procedure for return of Detainees (including Defence Personnel) of one Country Detained under the Custody of the other.

It was agreed that the particulars of the persons without valid documents claiming to be the citizens of the other country would be furnished to the respective Embassies, immediately after such persons have been convicted by courts, irrespective of the nature and terms of their sentences.

The Indian side also agreed that in view of the legal difficulties mentioned at the last Sub-Commission meeting, ways and means will be explored to ensure that persons who have already completed their sentences but whose national status has not been verified are kept in sight.

Indian detainees whose national status has already been determined will be handed over to the Indian side at Wagah/Attari Check-post on 20 February 1986.

It was agreed that the lists of the detainees who have completed their terms of sentences and are to be repatriated by March 31, 1986 will be exchanged by 24 February 1986 for determination of their national status.

In regard to the Indian defence personnel missing since 1971, the Pakistan side stated that it had after extensive searches satisfied itself that there were no longer any Indian defence personnel in Pakistani jails. However, they agreed to consider some suggestions put forward by the relatives of some of the missing Indian defence personnel, including the checking of records of specified periods in certain jails in Pakistan.

VI. Review of Working of Protocol on Group Tourism

With regard to the implementation of the Protocol on Group Tourism, the Pakistan side stated that three groups from Pakistan had already visited India.
The Indian side stated that a group of tourists was expected to visit Pakistan shortly.

The Sub-Commission felt that PTDC and ITDC should review the situation with a view to promoting tourism between the two countries.

VII. Guidelines to Check Smuggling of Narcotic Products on the India - Pakistan Border.

Both sides agreed to exchange information on matters relating to drug trafficking on “as and when necessary.” A proforma designed for this purpose was mutually agreed upon. It was decided to exchange data through the postal and telex.

In order to deal effectively with the drug menace in both the countries the following cooperative measures were upon:

1) To undertake investigations in their respective countries on requests from the other.
2) To periodically exchange statistical bulletins containing details of narcotics seizures, persons arrested and other related matters;
3) To exchange information regarding changes in Drug laws, procedures for interdiction of drugs and instructions on new control – measures for prevention of trafficking of drugs.

Considering the fact that drug trafficking does not exist in isolation and is an activity controlled by organized international smuggling syndicated dealing in other important high – value items like bullion and currency, the Pakistan side suggested that the above channel be also used for exchange of information in respect of such items. The suggestion was accepted by the Indian side.

My dear F.S.

During President Zia's talk with P.M. in New Delhi on 21 February 1987, you may recall, it was agreed to hold the meetings of two Sub-Commissions I & II which have remained pending for the last one year and more. These Sub-Commissions cover economic cooperation and Trade. P.M. had then suggested to President Zia that India should be allowed to compete on equal terms, with third countries, in case Pakistan could not straightaway accord MFN status to India. President Zia had indicated his agreement, in principle, to this.

2. Like everything else in Indo-Pak relations, all this has a bit of history. India and Pakistan under the Simla Agreement, you may recall, had agreed to certain steps for giving practical effect to their stated objective of ending conflict and confrontation, and for working for the promotion of a friendly and harmonious relationship, and establishment of durable peace. These steps included resumption of communications; posts and telegraphs; sea, land and air links; border posts; travel facilities; trade; economic cooperation; science and culture.

3. Between 1972 and now, a certain amount of implementation on the above points has indeed been achieved. In Annexure ‘A’ which is attached, we summarise these points (not included here).

4. President Zia and the late Prime Minister Indira Gandhi had agreed, in 1983 to establish an Indo-Pak Joint Commission with four sub-commissions under it. In December 1985 our Prime Minister and President Zia had agreed to hold expeditiously meetings of these sub-commissions, followed by the Joint Commission under the Chairmanship of two Foreign Ministers.

5. Invitations for Sub-Commissions III and IV scheduled to be held in Islamabad were given almost immediately by Pakistan and these met in Islamabad in February 1986. Invitations for Sub-commissions I and II were to be given by us, as the venue was New Delhi. We could not give these invitations, as we were unhappy about the way they had handled the implementation of decisions taken by the two Finance Ministers, under their Agreed Minutes of 10th January 1986.
6. There are certain basic elements which should be understood. India affords Pakistan MFN treatment. We have been doing this unilaterally. Pakistan has persisted all these years in providing only a restricted trade regime to India. During the V.P. Singh - Mahbubul Haq discussions, culminating in their Agreement of 10 January 1986 it was recognized that India was in the same category as Israel and South Africa as far as the private trade in 42 items being permitted. Even after this, according to one interpretation, India continues to be in the same category as Israel and South Africa, as these are the only three countries in respect of which special arrangements are insisted upon by Pakistan Government. Even apart from this, India’s efforts to get a meaningful expansion of the list of 42 items have not yet borne any fruit.

7. President Zia had mentioned to P.M. that he hoped that we could invite their delegations to the two Sub-Commissions, to Delhi sometime in April. They also expect that these meetings will be followed by a meeting of the Joint Indo-Pak Commission under the Co-Chairmanship of the two Foreign Ministers.

8. May I suggest that we focus on how we should now proceed.

9. Pakistan had agreed in the V.P. Singh - Mahbubul Haq Agreed Minutes of January 10, 1986, to send expeditiously a delegation (i.e. within one month) of three Secretaries (their Secretary General Economic Affairs; Commerce Secretary; and Finance Secretary) to New Delhi to consider the entire gamut of the infrastructural steps for building up meaningful economic cooperation and trade. This has not happened so far. Pakistan would perhaps wish, now, to hold a routine meeting of the two sub-commissions (perhaps at the level of Joint secretaries) which would lead us nowhere.

10. From our point of view, there could be several ways of handling this. We could ask them, through diplomatic channels, to hold preparatory informal consultations with sub-commissions meetings. Or we could request them to hold the meetings of the sub-commissions at the level of Secretaries; and insist on their fulfilling their earlier commitment, but through the modality of these Sub-commission meetings.

11. Obviously the question is not an entirely economic one, insofar as Pakistan is concerned, but a political one. The expanding contact, and flow of people between the two countries, once trade and economic cooperation is built up, would lead to the consequence of Pakistani’s getting a realistic perception of India’s achievements in the industrial and other allied fields. It is a fact that certain sections of Pakistani business community are genuinely apprehensive of being swamped if trade with India is re-opened, on MFN basis. Conversely a large number of Pakistanis acknowledge too that there are profits to be garnered for Pakistan through open and real trade with India.
12. The current level of our two way trade is approx. Rs. 60 Crores. The balance of advantage is with Pakistan, in the proportion of 2:1. This indeed we should not mind. Our objective should be a significant increase in the near future, rather than an entirely balanced trade, at this stage of our effort of opening things up.

13. Now this is the background. And we must also keep in view the Summit-level understanding on holding the Sub-commission meetings. May I, therefore, respectfully suggest that perhaps you should send for Ambassador Humayun Khan and inform him of our intention of inviting their delegations for the two Sub-commission meetings. And then you could suggest that before doing this we would like to have a clear idea of how they feel about the following points:-

(i) Our pending request with them for an expanded list of meaningful items for trade.

(ii) Exchange of delegations of Chambers of Commerce, professional groupings (e.g. AIEI, and bodies of professionals like Bankers, Chartered Accountants etc).

(iii) Their response to an invitation by us to Pakistani delegations to negotiate banking arrangements between the two countries; shipping arrangements; land transport arrangements (this last one would need to be deliberated by the Government of India, in the light of the Punjab situation).

No doubt, Ambassador Humayun Khan would wish, in response, to make counter suggestions or proposals.

The one point I would like the Pakistanis to understand is that we do not favour holding meetings of the two sub-commissions without a prior understanding of which way the two countries wish to move, or allowing these to be held at routine or subordinate levels. We must be conscious that certain important aspects of implementation have been pending for too long, between us, and the meetings of the two Sub-commissions need to be utilized for solving important questions and not for propaganda or publicity purposes.

Yours sincerely,

(S.K. Singh)

No. ISL/103/3/86
8 July 1987

Please refer to your letter No. J/103/15/87 dated 8 June 1987 addressed to Ambassador which was received here last week. Ambassador discussed this letter with me before his departure on home leave and I am giving below our assessment based on those discussions.

2. The Sub-Commission meeting would be taking place in the backdrop of uncertainty about the immediate political and economic future of this country. Politically, there are rumblings within the power structure. Despite protestations of civilianization, power is very much vested with the armed forces and it is General Zia who calls the shots. Junejo has not been able to emerge as an assertive or independent focus of power nor has he been able to rally the political forces behind him. He has not been able to bring in major political parties like the PPP and ANP, who continue to remain outside the political framework brought into existence in 1985. There is increasing skepticism about the acceptability and the survivability of the civilian edifice. The distinction between Zia and Junejo by Benazir Bhutto and others during 1986 is now thing of the past; Benazir is now focusing on General Zia, dismissing Junejo as a mere figure head. Junejo’s ruling party, Pakistan Muslim League, continues to remain a conglomeration of self-serving, power seeking individuals and interest groups with little manifest, loyalty to the party, any ideology or even to Junejo himself. The Government does not feel certain enough to even announce dates for the Local Bodies election which are due in September and which were held twice by the Martial Law regime. Economically, the situation in serious. The country is facing a resources crunch. The recent budget fiasco revealed that the interest of the armed forces take precedence over that of the economy. Defence allocation at Rs.46 billion out of a total budget of Rs. 153 billion is taking too big a share of the national cake. Defence expenditure along with debt servicing and subsidies take up close to 85 % of the budget leaving little resources for development. In fact, the entire developmental outlay, pegged at Rs. 48 billion for 1987-88, is to be financed by borrowings. The National Taxation Reforms Commission estimates that tax evasion was Rs. 5076 crores compared to the tax collection of Rs. 1930 crores in 1984-85. Corruption is rampant and prof. Mehbubul Haq estimates that some Rs. 40 billion are syphoned off. The Government has shown little inclination to tackle these problems with determination, firmness and perseverance. Being unrepresentative in character, it is unable to withstand pressures in taking hard and unpopular decisions. In order to secure its short-term political future, it resorts instead to populism, adhocism and quick acting palliatives. There is no attempt to address and resolve the basic and structural problems of the economy. The resource crunch generated by inability to mobilize additional revenues or curtail expenditure will necessitate fairly large scale borrowings in the not distant future. The scope for additional concessional assistance is limited; commercial borrowings will create longer term debt servicing problems. In brief, economy is in a bad shape but the Government doesn’t seem to be doing very much about it.

3. In this situation, Prof. Mehbubul Haq’s is a voice of reason. His professional expertise does not equip him to fight political battles. Nevertheless, through his Commerce and Planning portfolios, he has tried to tackle some of the problems. He has focused attention on the need to cut down the trade deficit. His new Trade Policy seeks, over the next 3 years, to finance 85% of the country’s import requirements through exports. A number of concessions, incentives and facilities have been introduced. In regard to India, however, the Trade Policy makes no change.

4. You would recall that Ambassador had called on Prof. Mehbubul Haq on 30 March immediately after he assumed charge as Minister for Commerce. At that meeting Mehbubul Haq had said that intellectually he agreed with GOI position that Pakistan’s trade regime vis-à-vis India was discriminatory and he was formulating some new proposals which he would share with us after seeking Prime Minister Junejo’s political guidance. Since then, we have reminded the Foreign Office on several occasions but there has been no indication of when they would share with us whatever proposals they may now have. Indeed, we are yet to receive a response even in regard to the dates proposed by us. Nor do we have a response to our suggestion, reiterated most recently in Ambassador’s letter of 8 June 1987 to Additional Foreign Secretary, Tanvir Ahmad Khan that, in terms of the V.P. Singh – Mehbubul Haq agreement of 10 January 1986, high-level discussions precede the Sub-commission meeting in order to ensure that it is productive.

5. Clearly political decision regarding liberalization of trade with India is still in the process of being finalized. There might well be resistance in taking major strides on this road. The Pakistani brief for the Sub-commission meeting may, therefore, be circumscribed by these factors. Given the current Pakistani pre-occupation to boost exports and cut down on imports, Pakistan would be looking for new markets for its products. There would be interest in tapping the Indian market. There would also be interest in establishing some kind of import-export linkage. Pakistan would also wish to seek preferential entry into the Indian markets for its products, as it has done before.

6. In regard to our own approach, we should first insist on a review of the V.P. Singh – Mehbubul Haq Agreement. That agreement contained a number of ideas for building up infrastructure and exchanges. (A statement giving the details of the current status in regard to each proposal is annexed (Not included here)). In regard to one or two proposals (e.g. exchange of delegations at the level of Chambers of Commerce and Industry), we ourselves seem to have some reservation (Commerce Secretary’s last discussion with Ambassador Humayu Khan refers). It would not be advisable for us to give the impression of having second thoughts about components of that package. Instead, we could perhaps achieve our objective by seeking some kind of prioritization of the different items in the January 1986 agreement.

7. It does not seem necessary for us to make any new proposals pending Pakistani response. The ball is in their court. The alternatives before us are either to modify our position and accept the Pakistani line of reasoning in the interest of expanding bilateral trade by whatever amount possible or hold firm to our position and wait for Pakistan to fulfill the pledges made 18 months ago. Our own preference would be to follow the latter course since there is no indication of prospects of substantial expansion of trade.

8. We could utilize the sub-Commission also to try and resolve some old and outstanding issues which periodically pop out. For instance, there is the Ministry of Communications proposal regarding the revival of the 1958 Postal Life Insurance Agreement (Ministry’s letter No. J/273/4/86 dated 27 April 1987 refers). We also have one long pending problem regarding our Chancery project at Islamabad. We have been claiming refund of Excise Duty on purchase of cement which is due to us but which has got stuck in the Pak bureaucracy. The sum involved is Rs. 12 lakhs. There are also some problems relating to Indian Airlines, taxation agreements etc. which could be taken up in the Sub-commission.

9. I am annexing brief notes on the economy of Pakistan and its foreign trade which contains relevant statistical data (not included here).

Yours Sincerely
(T.C.A. Rangachari)

Shri Satish Chandra,
Joint Secretary (AP),
Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi.

New Delhi, August 10 to 12, 1987.

The Sub-Commission reviewed the progress of implementation of the recommendations made by the Indo-Pakistan Joint Commission at its meeting in July 1985.

It also discussed and examined proposals requiring further action.

The subjects discussed were as follows:

i) Planning.

ii) Avoidance of Double Taxation Agreement.

iii) Industry.

iv) Agriculture.

v) Telecommunications.

vi) Postal Services.

vii) Shipping.

viii) Railways.

ix) Health.

x) Science and Technology.

The agreed minute are as follows:

Review of deliberations at Indo-Pak Seminar on Long-term Planning held in Islamabad in October 1986.

The two sides confirmed the following themes for the next India-Pakistan Seminar on planning that had been recommended in the first one held at Islamabad.

i) mobilization of savings;

ii) population and social planning; and

iii) irrigation programmes and policies.

The Seminar, bringing together distinguished economists and planners would be held in New Delhi sometime during January-March 1988 at mutually convenient dates to be decided through exchange of letters.
It was agreed to establish, through their national planning bodies, a system for regular exchange of documentation relating to economy and development planning of the two countries. (A list of documents is attached at Annexure II—(not included here))

In order to help the Joint Commission identify research agencies for the establishment of mutual contacts, both sides agreed to suggest that India and Pakistan sponsor short duration visits by scholars who will acquaint themselves with the work of research institutions in the two countries.

Signing of the double taxation avoidance Agreement covering aircraft profits: Both sides stated that necessary procedures had been accomplished and the Agreement approved for signing by the two Governments. The Pakistan side proposed that the Agreement be signed when the Joint Commission meets at Islamabad. The Indian side agreed to this proposal.

The Indian side pointed out that the State Bank of Pakistan were withholding 3% of the gross receipts of Indian Airlines in Pakistan towards tax due under the Pakistan law from July 1, 1986, on the ground that the double taxation avoidance Agreement had not been officially signed. The Indian side further pointed out that the Agreement had been initialed at delegation level and had been approved by the Cabinets of both the Governments and, accordingly, both Indian Airlines and Pakistan International Airlines should enjoy tax exempt status with effect from July 1, 1986. The India side further requested that suitable instructions are issued to appropriate authorities in Pakistan to release the amount withheld from the Indian Airlines since July 1, 1986 as no such tax is payable by the Indian Airlines under the Agreement.

Industry: The Pakistan side stated that concerned authorities could be requested to examine this matter.

Both sides reaffirmed the desire for bilateral cooperation in the industrial field and recognized the need to identify specific areas of cooperation.

It was also noted that communication gap regarding Government rules, procedures and guidelines needed to be bridged to facilitate the process of cooperation. It was noted that this objective can be achieved by exchange of information and promotion of contacts between concerned organizations/Associations of the two countries.

The Pakistan side requested that in due course of time the visit of concerned Indian industrial organizations may take place to Pakistan in response to the visit of the delegation of FPCCI in March 1984.

Agriculture: An Agreement for Cooperation in Agriculture was signed between the two Governments in July, 1985. The first biennial Work plan had been under consideration of the two sides for some time past and the details of the areas of interest of the two sides as well as the details of visits of experts and officials under these areas had already been identified. (Work plan is at Annexure Ill-(not included here)). After discussions on various aspects of the Work plan, the following decisions were taken:-

i) Originally the Work plan was supposed to cover the years 1987-88. But in view of the fact that 1987 was more than half gone and the fact that it would take some more time to actually implement the work plan, it was decided that the Work plan should be for the years 1988-89 (1.1.88 to 31.12.89).

ii) It was further decided that the next Biennial Work plan for the years 1990-91 should be drawn up by mid 1989, preferably in Islamabad (Pakistan).

iii) The Indian side then pointed out that it had been decided to accommodate the request of the Pakistani side to include one more item in the Work plan viz. “Learning the Techniques of Hybrid Cotton Production”.

Telecommunications: Substantial progress has been made since the meeting held in July 1985.

a. Overhead Carrier System.
The carrier systems have since been closed after commissioning of 12 Mhz Coaxial system between Lahore and Amritsar.

The Carrier terminals loaned by each country have also been exchanged as was agreed in the last meeting.

b. Additional direct services for other cities/towns of both the countries.
All the required circuits as agreed during the last meeting have since been opened excepting Lucknow terrestrial circuits, which would be commissioned by August 30, 1987.

c & d. Lahore-Amritsar UHF Link
This proposal has since been dropped in view of the coaxial system already commissioned.

e. Augmentation of Satellite Circuits
No satellite circuits have been added as decided in the last meeting.

f. Coordination meetings.
Three rounds of Coordination meetings at D.G. and Joint Secretary level were held, both in Islamabad and Delhi and most of the issues have now been sorted out.
g. Settlement of Accounts.

In the last Telecommunications Operation Coordination meeting held in July 1987, the outstanding dues have been settled to a large extent and suitable action has to be taken for payment as agreed to. The action for settlement of remaining outstanding dues may be expedited.

h. Introduction of Automatic and Semi-Automatic Services, on terrestrial links

SLODs Circuits between Delhi-Lahore and Delhi-Islamabad and Bombay-Lahore as decided in earlier meeting have already been opened. SLOD circuits between Lucknow-Lahore have also been opened both ways. In the recent Telecom Operation Coordination meeting held on 11-14 July, 1987 following circuits have been proposed:

a). Lucknow-Karachi OTD circuits, one for each direction

i. Auto Telex Service.

The Auto Telex Service between India-Pakistan has opened on 12.1.1987 with tariff lower than that of Satellite link.

j. Maintenance procedure for Lahore-Amritsar Coaxial Link.

The agreement has been signed between the two Operation Departments.

k. Implementation of decision for introduction of ISD between India and Pakistan.

In the last Telecom Operation Coordination meeting held at Islamabad on 11—14.7.86, a detailed schedule of providing direct Dialing Circuits and suitable equipment at both ends were agreed and a tentative date for commissioning of ISD service has been fixed as September 30, 1987. The Indian side has stated that the equipment at their end is ready for commissioning and Pakistan would also be ready by the target date.

l. Rationalization of tariff.

In order to encourage the traffic, the collection and accounting charges may be reviewed by both the administrations. This was also agreed to in the last Telecom Operation Coordination meeting.
Postal Services: Settlement of dues and exchange of information:

At the last meeting of the Joint Commission it was agreed that a meeting between Senior officials of the two Postal Administrations should take place to consider the matter further. It was noted that this meeting had not yet taken place. It was, therefore, decided that the meeting to resolve the issue be held in Islamabad before the end of 1987.

It was agreed to continue exchange of information on matters of mutual interest particularly with regard to recently introduced services, mechanization and computerization.

Shipping: The matter of amendments of clause 3 and clause 5 of the shipping Protocol of 1975 as suggested by Pakistani side were discussed. The Pakistani side indicated that they had completed arrangements for the formalization of the revised protocol and requested that the Indian side do the needful so that the agreement could be signed at the next Joint Commission meeting in Islamabad.

The Indian side stated that the scope of these suggested amendments were under study in consultation with all concerned.

It was agreed that the decision should be arrived at as quickly as possible.

Railways: Settlement of outstanding financial dues.

It was noted that so far only meeting had been held between the two railways in January, 1985 at New Delhi. The next meeting which was agreed to be held in the last week of March, 1985 at Lahore has not been held so far. It was decided to hold the next meeting at Lahore on 12.9.87. Thereafter regular meetings would be held alternatively in New Delhi and Lahore till definite conclusions are arrived at, as already decided in the Inter-ministerial meeting held in Islamabad in April, 1984.

Health: The two sides reaffirmed their desire to further explore and collaborate in areas identified during the last meeting of the Joint Commission as well as during the visit of the Pakistan delegation to India in October, 1985. These include, among other things, exchange of information in the areas of bio-medical research, medical education and training; collaboration in communicable diseases control, particularly, malaria, TB, leprosy and goiter control research collaboration through the respective national research councils; exchange of information and experience in the field of family planning and welfare; and exchange of experts in specialized fields of health and family welfare.
It was agreed that the reciprocal visit of the Indian delegation to Pakistan will take place within the next few months; the exact dates of the visit will be confirmed through diplomatic channels.

Science and Technology: An Indian S&T delegation in the areas of clean energy, medicinal and aromatic plants, genetic engineering and biotechnology, medical research, optics and non-conventional energy which were considered earlier will visit Pakistan. Subject to confirmation by Pakistan side, the visit would take place during the first quarter of 1988.

A reciprocal visit by a S&T delegation from Pakistan to India will take place during the third quarter of 1988. This list of areas will be finalized through mutual consultations.

Drug Trafficking: Drug trafficking is an item on the agenda of Sub-Commission IV. However, both sides took this opportunity to express their satisfaction over the exchange of operational intelligence between the two countries since the first meeting on 26-27 March, 1987 of the Committee specially constituted to combat drug trafficking.

2701. Agreed Minutes of the meeting between Indian and Pakistani Delegations.

1. As desired by the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan at their meeting in Kathmandu on 4th November, 1987 and in continuation of the discussions held between Finance Ministers of the two countries in Islamabad in January, 1986 a delegation from Pakistan comprising Secretary, Planning and Development Dr. Tariq Siddiqui and Secretary, Commerce, Mr. R.A. Akhund and other officials visited New Delhi from 7 to 10 December, 1987 to hold talks with an Indian delegation comprising Secretary, Planning Commission, Shri J.S. Baijal and Secretary, Commerce, Shri A.N. Varma and other officials.

2. The two sides held discussions on matters relating to economic co-operation and expansion of bilateral trade.
Planning

3. It was agreed that the next India-Pakistan seminar on Planning would be held in India in July-August, 1988.

4. Both sides noted with satisfaction that a system for the exchange of information in the field of planning had been established and had been initiated by an exchange of documents by both sides.

Agriculture

5. Both sides expressed satisfaction that the first biennial Work Plan is to commence from January 1, 1988 and hoped that its implementation would lay the basis for future co-operation in this important field.

Avoidance of Double taxation

6. The Indian side requested that the Agreement for the Avoidance of Double Taxation, being an operational agreement, could be formalized at the Ambassadorial level and need not await the convening of the Joint Commission.

7. The Pakistan side stated that the request of the Indian side would be examined by concerned authorities.

Telecommunication

8. While reviewing the recommendations made during the last meeting of Sub-Commission I, the Indian side noted that the issue relating to the rationalization of tariff rates by Pakistan needs to be resolved.

9. The Pakistan side indicated that the matter is under examination and the decision is linked to the completion of ongoing restructuring of the Telecommunications Department.

Railway

10. It was noted that an Indian Railway delegation would visit Pakistan at an agreed date in the coming months.

Industry

11. Both sides reaffirmed the desire for co-operation in the industrial field. The Indian side indicated that representative of an Indian corporate organization could visit Pakistan. The Pakistan side renewed the invitation to a FICCI delegation to visit Pakistan.

12. Both sides agreed to an exchange of visits by representatives of public sector organizations of the two countries.
13. The two sides discussed the scope for joint ventures by industrialists of India and Pakistan. In this connection it was agreed that each side would furnish lists of industries where such joint venture could be set up. Private sector delegations would then be exchanged to identify specific projects.

Science & Technology and Health

14. The Indian side stated that the visits to Pakistan by delegations in the field of Science & Technology and Health could take place in the first half of 1988.

15. The Indian side stated that delegation of Indian Postal officials, due to visit Pakistan before the end of 1987, was awaiting confirmation of dates from the Pakistan side.

Mints

16. The Indian side requested that the issue relating to the outstanding claims of the Bombay and Calcutta Mints pending with the Government of Pakistan be resolved at the earliest.

Trade

17. During the talks the Pakistan delegation intimated their intention to enlarge the list of items that could be imported from India by the private sector in Pakistan as another step forward towards normalization of bilateral trade between the two countries. Trends in bilateral trade would be monitored to ensure balance growth of trade. Either side would be entitled to call for consultations at an appropriate level to review the adverse trends in the balance of trade and to adopt corrective measures. The Pakistan delegation stated that if in spite of these consultations the balance of trade of Pakistan moves into a deficit of around US $ 40 million, Pakistan would have the option to take such necessary steps as it deems fit to remove the imbalance.

18. Further, the following steps would be taken to achieve the objective of expanding trade between the two countries:

i) Both sides will encourage their public sector organizations to expand trade under the existing trading regimes of both countries on a non-discriminatory basis.

ii) Pakistan side welcomed the participation of Indian public sector organizations in international tenders floated by Pakistan Public Sector Companies/Corporation.
iii) India would welcome a broad based Pakistan delegation to discuss and identify items for export to India.

iv) The Indian Delegation indicated that a Tea Delegation from India would visit Pakistan in the near future.

SECRET

Record of the discussions between Commerce Secretary A. N. Varma and Pakistan Ambassador Niaz Naik.

New Delhi, March 17, 1989.

Ministry of Commerce
FT (SA) Division

The Pakistan Ambassador Mr. Niaz Naik, called on Commerce Secretary today. At the start of the discussions, CS referred to the decision taken to schedule the meeting of the Indo-Pakistan Joint Commission, following Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi’s visit to Islamabad in December, 1988. He stated that the Sub-Commission on Trade would have to meet prior to the Joint Commission. The last bilateral discussions on Trade took place when the Commerce and Planning Secretaries of Pakistan visited India in December, 1987.

CS stressed that it was essential that there be a clear perception at the official level, prior to the Sub-Commission discussions on outstanding matters. The central issue was the grant of MFN treatment by Pakistan to Indian exports. CS stated that India did not discriminate against Pakistan and allowed imports from Pakistan at par with imports from other countries within the parameters of India’s import regime. There was also no embargo of any kind on exports from India to Pakistan.

CS stated that the question of Grant of MFN status to India had also been discussed when Commerce Minister visited Pakistan in October, 1988. As signatories to GATT, India and Pakistan were required to provide MFN treatment to each other, but India had so far not raised this issue at GATT.

CS referred to the fact that, after the notification of the list of 249 items permitted for import by private parties in Pakistan, no notification had been issued to give effect to the decision that raw-materials would also be permitted for import from India. Dr. Mahbub-ul-Haq had indicated to our Commerce Minister that such a decision had been taken but to date no notification has been issued. There was also no import of raw-materials from India.

CS also mentioned that items of Indian origin were being imported by Pakistan but through Dubai and Singapore and third parties were gaining at the expense of Indian exporters and Pakistani importers.

CS stated that liberalization of trade would be of benefit to both countries. Since the sub-committee on Trade would have to meet prior to the Joint Commission meeting, CS indicated that India wished to know what would be the agenda for the Sub-committee and what we could look forward to at the discussions. At the moment, there was no indication, whatsoever of Pakistan’s thinking in this regard. From our side, we would reciprocate whatever gestures Government of Pakistan made. The decision as to the shape bilateral trade relations would take lay entirely with the Government of Pakistan.

The Pakistan Ambassador, in response, indicated that after Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi’s visit to Islamabad and the SAARC summit in December 1988, the Pakistan Prime Minister was extremely anxious to expand relations with India in all fields. She was keen that the momentum generated following Prime Minister’s visit should be maintained and, therefore, series of high level meeting were being planned between the Foreign Secretaries, Defence Secretaries. Trade, however, continued to be a difficult issue because of internal problems in Pakistan.

The Ambassador then recalled the developments in trade trends since, 1985. He said that in 1985, following the meeting between late President Zia-ul-Haq and the Indian Prime Minister, the late President indicated that a commitment had been made by him to open up trade. Government of Pakistan, therefore, must draw up necessary programmes in this regard prior to the visit of the then Commerce Minister of India, Shri V.P. Singh, in early, 1986.

The Pakistan Ambassador indicated that at all meetings at the Secretarial and Ministerial level, the Commerce and Industry Ministries had expressed reluctance to open up trade with India on the grounds that it would harm Pakistan's industry. The Foreign Office of Pakistan had been supporting the opening up of trade. The late President Zia had intervened in a meeting, taken by Foreign Minister Sahebzada Yaqub Khan where Ministers from Industry, Planning and Commerce and others were present, and had said that, while business circles in Pakistan had shown interest in liberalization of trade with India, it was the bureaucrats who were expressing hesitation. He had wanted an analysis done, on an industry by industry basis, to identify the actual impact that opening of trade would have on Pakistan's industries. Interestingly, the Pakistan authorities were able to identify only the bicycle industry as a possible sufferer if trade with India was opened up.

Subsequently, domestic tension in Pakistan between Prime Minister Junejo and late President Zia led to trade being relegated to the back ground. Prime Minister Junejo had opposed the opening up of trade with India, because, apparently, he had not been kept in the picture and the Pakistan Foreign Office had prepared a blue print for opening up of trade with India at the behest of the late President Zia.

The Pakistan Ambassador went on to say that the new Commerce Secretary of Pakistan was extremely liberal in his approach towards trade with India and had repeatedly been seeking reports on the trend of trade following the notification of the 249 items. The majority opinion in Pakistan was in favour of opening up trade with India. He also mentioned that Pakistan's economic imperatives today demanded opening up of trade with India and this was a view shared by the new CS and Foreign Secretary of Pakistan. It was, however, a decision that would ultimately have to be taken at the political level.

The Ambassador expressed confidence that the Prime Minister of Pakistan would press for a positive forward movement at the meeting of the Sub-commission on Trade.

The climate of opinion among business circles in Pakistan was in favour of increased trade with India but the communication gap needed to be bridged. A suggestion had been made that a Pakistani delegation should visit India to explore possibilities for increased trade.

The Ambassador, however, went on to repeat that the decision, with regard to the framework for future trade relations with India, would be a political one, particularly in view of the polarization of the political situation recently in Pakistan.

The Pakistan Ambassador cited an example to show the benefit that could accrue to Pakistan by opening of trade with India. He stated that a Pakistan party had mentioned to him that it was contracting for the purchase of a paper pulp plant from India because it was cheaper, spare parts could be easily obtained from India and there would no difficulties in its installation on account of similarity of language of the concerned personnel.

The Pakistan Ambassador indicated that he would go to Islamabad shortly and would apprise the Pakistani Commerce Ministry of Indian thinking and obtain from them a brief for the Sub-Commission on Trade talks. He would then inform Commerce Secretary of the manner in which the Pakistan authorities would approach the meeting of the Sub-commission on Trade.

On the question of MFN treatment, the Ambassador reiterated that it was a political issue and wondered whether there was some way in which the grant of MFN status to India could be disguised.

CS stated that the important aspect was the opening up of imports by Pakistan. He stated that India’s import policy did not in any way mention Pakistan by name and was equally applicable to Pakistan and other countries. If, however, Pakistan’s import policy referred to restrictions imposed on imports from India, then automatically it would imply that India was not being granted MFN treatment.

CS mentioned that one possible alternative for Pakistan to open up imports from India, was the notification of short negative list of items which could be restricted in order to protect Pakistan’s domestic industry. He, however, went on to say that if this negative list was not applicable to other countries and was limited to India, the reality would be that India was not being granted MFN treatment. He also stated, and the Pakistan Ambassador agreed, that the entire concept of restricted list of items was outdated.

CS stated that as long as Pakistan continued with the system of a restricted list, there would always be misgivings as to Pakistan’s commitment to increase bilateral trade.

The meeting ended with the Pakistan Ambassador stating that he would brief Commerce Secretary after his discussions in Islamabad.

CONFIDENTIAL

Letter from Foreign Secretary S. K. Singh to Commerce Secretary A. N. Varma.

New Delhi, June 2, 1989.

Foreign Secretary
Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi - 110011

No. 7206/FS/89 June 2, 1989

My dear amarnath,

During his call on me on May 31, the Pakistan Ambassador made out that consequent upon Pakistan's expansion of list of items which would be imported from India, India-Pakistan trade had picked up. He mentioned that in the last one year, there had been a 200 per cent increase in trade between the two countries. I would appreciate your comments on this point. Are detailed figures regarding the extent of trade between the two countries in 1988-89 available as compared to the previous year?

2. The Pakistan Ambassador also indicated that Pakistan was going to further expand the list of items to approximately 600 which could be imported from India, mainly in the area of raw materials. He further indicated that during his call on you a few days ago he had stated that Pakistan would be quite willing to include in the list of items cleared for import from India those goods which were finding their way to Pakistan from India through third countries, especially Dubai and Singapore. In this context, he mentioned that he had not yet received this list from you but Pakistan would take action immediately on its receipt. May be your office can supply this list to him, with a copy to us. Can this be done before my forthcoming visit to Pakistan for bilateral talks?

3. The Pakistan Ambassador also mentioned that they were interested in setting up of a Joint India-Pakistan Business Council to promote trade between the two countries, as had been agreed during Shri Dinesh Singh's visit to Islamabad. I understand that there has also been some thinking on the idea of setting up of a joint India-Pakistan Chamber of Commerce. We would like to have your considered views in this matter so that we may coordinate action on this issue with the Pakistan side.

With kind regards,

Yours Sincerely

(S.K. Singh)

2704. Agreed Minutes of the Meeting of Sub – Commission on Trade of Indo - Pak Joint Commission.

Islamabad, July 17, 1989.

The third meeting of the Sub-Commission on Trade between India and Pakistan was held in Islamabad on 17th July, 1989. The Pakistani delegation was led by Mr. Hafeez Akhtar, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Commerce and the Indian delegation by Mr. M.R. Sivaraman, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Commerce.

2. The following agenda was agreed and adopted for discussions:-

   i) Review of bilateral trade;

   ii) Normalization of market access for export from India;

   iii) Identification of items of export-import interest and trade promotion measures.

3. The two sides had a detailed exchange of views in a cordial and friendly atmosphere.

4. Both sides recognized that in the difficult international trading environment afflicted by the protectionist policies of developed countries, there was an imperative need for developing countries to increase as far as possible, trade exchange amongst themselves, in a spirit of South-South cooperation.

5. The two sides noted with satisfaction the growth in bilateral trade and agreed that there was still considerable scope for further expansion of trade between Pakistan and India in the mutual interest of both the countries.

6. Pakistani side reiterated that a pragmatic approach should be taken for further expansion of private trade in phases building up a momentum towards a pattern of two way trade which would be in conformity with the principle of GATT while fully safeguarding local industries. In keeping with this the Pakistan side offered a still enlarged list of 322 items developed on Harmonized System Code for the private sector import from India, in addition to the previous list with the same proviso as indicated earlier during the 2nd meeting of the sub-commission. The Indian side indicated that M.F.N. treatment should be accorded to Indian exports by Pakistan. Both sides agreed to continue further dialogue on the matter.

7. Both sides agreed that there was considerable potential for joint efforts in export marketing of selected products such as Guar gum and Basmati rice in the mutual interest of both counties; similarly joint efforts at imports of non ferrous metals and fertilizer would be in the interest of both sides. Mutually beneficial bilateral trade in a wide range of products was discussed and it was proposed that there should be exchange of delegations between the two countries to concretize these prospects. The Indian delegation mentioned the proposed visits by delegations in the field of Tea and Textiles machinery/components. Cooperation in the field of automotive components was agreed as an area of potential growth.

8. Both sides agreed that it would be a desirable export promotional measure to display each other’s products in both the countries. Pakistan side indicated that Pakistan would be displaying a wide range of products in the forthcoming India International Trade Fair 1989.

9. Both sides agreed to setting up of Joint Business Council. The FPCCI would be the nodal agency from the Pakistani side and FICCI along with the PHD Chamber of Commerce would be the coordinator from the Indian side. It was agreed that a delegation from India would visit Pakistan shortly for the establishment of the Council.

10. Indian side expressed its appreciation and thanks to the Government of Pakistan for the generous hospitality and courtesies extended to it as well as excellent arrangements made for the meeting.

❖❖❖❖❖❖
The fifth session of the Pakistan – India Sub-Commission on economic matters was held in Islamabad on 17th July 1989. The Indian delegation was led by Dr. Arvind Virmani, Adviser, Planning Commission while the Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Aftab Ahmad Khan, Additional Secretary, Economic Affairs Division. …

2. The Sub-Commission reviewed the progress of implementation of the recommendations made by the India-Pakistan Joint Commission at its meeting in July 1985. It also discussed proposals in the following areas:

a. Planning
b. Avoidance of Double Taxation Agreement.
c. Industry
d. Agriculture
e. Telecommunications
f. Postal Services
g. Shipping
h. Railways
i. Health
j. Science and Technology.

3. After detailed discussions which were held in a cordial and accommodating atmosphere, the following conclusions were arrived at:-

(a) Planning

(i) Both sides agreed on holding of a seminar on Planning, in India around October-November 1989, focusing on mobilization of savings, population and local planning, irrigation programmes and policies. Exact dates will be conveyed by the Indian side by the first week of August 1989.

(ii) Both sides agreed on the exchange of plan documents and budget papers. The Planning Commissions in Pakistan and India would act as coordinating agencies.
(b) Avoidance of Double Taxation

Both sides expressed their satisfaction on the conclusions of the agreement on Avoidance of Double Taxation on income derived from international air-transport. They also agreed to initiate negotiations for a broad based Convention on the Avoidance of Double Taxation on income. The Pakistan side proposed that experts of the two countries should meet in December 1989 - March 1990 or after August 1990 for this purpose.

(c) Industry

(i) With a view to increasing bilateral industrial cooperation both sides agreed to the exchange of industrial delegations within one year. The Indian delegation will visit Pakistan first. The delegations may also include representatives of public sector enterprises and the construction industry.

(ii) Both sides agreed to exchange information regarding industrial policies, rules and regulations for the setting up of new units to facilitate identification of areas for joint ventures.

(iii) Both sides agreed to cooperate in small and medium industrial sectors including transfer of technology. Pakistan Council for Scientific and Industrial Research and Pakistan's National Centre for Technology Transfer and India’s National Research Development Corporation will serve as nodal organizations for this purpose.

(iv) Both sides agreed to cooperate in automotive components sector. Information with regard to manufacture of components will be exchanged, initially between Pakistan Automobile Corporation and India’s Maruti Udyog Ltd., for exploring possibilities of cooperation.

(v) Both sides appreciated the idea of cooperation in civil engineering and other types of construction projects in both countries as well as in third countries. They agreed to explore the possibilities for such cooperation.

(vi) Both sides also agreed to the exchange of information on management experience in public sector enterprises.

d) Agriculture

After a review of the implementation of the last session's decision it was agreed, as under:-

i) The revised schedule of visits agreed to between the two countries will be completed from September to December 1989.
ii) Joint Workshops on soil salinity and water management and use of saline water in agriculture will be held in Pakistan in September 1989, and on coordinated research and genetic improvement of indigenous breeds of livestock will be held in India in November 1989.

e) Telecommunications

i) Both sides expressed their satisfaction on the recent meeting of the experts and on the progress achieved since the last meeting of the Sub-Commission in 1987. The Indian side raised the question of putting 11 additional circuits into operation from New Delhi to Karachi. Pakistan side explained that there was no problem in doing so provided the Indian side agreed to use the C-5 international signaling system.

ii) Pakistan side raised the issue of the settlement of the telecommunication accounts for the period 1947-67 which had been discussed in the last meeting of the Telecommunication Departments of the two countries. The Indian side noted the issue and agreed that the next meeting of the Telecommunication Departments could finalize the matter.

f) Postal Services

Both sides reviewed in detail the existing cooperation and agreed on the following:-

i) Organization of philatelic exhibitions, on agreed themes, on reciprocal basis, and on mutually agreed dates.

ii) Exchange of visits between the faculty members of the two Postal Staff Colleges and experts of the two postal administrations should be undertaken within one year. Exchange of information should also take place between the postal administrations of both countries.

iii) Both sides expressed their satisfaction that an agreement on the settlement of outstanding dues had been signed in June 1988.

g) Shipping

i) Both sides reviewed the issue of amending clauses 3 and 5 of the 1975 Shipping Protocol. Pakistan side informed that they had already obtained approval to revise the 1975 Protocol in conformity with the suggestions made during the Joint Commission meeting in 1985.

ii) The Indian side presented their counter proposals regarding amendments to clauses 3 and 5 .... It was agreed that the issue be discussed further between the experts of the two countries.
h) Railways

(i) The Indian side observed that the meetings between the Railway Ministries of the two countries needed to be held regularly in order to finalize issues relating to the reconciliation of wagon census. The Pakistani side felt that they were unable to obtain information from Bangladesh regarding the number of Indian railway wagons in Bangladesh. They suggested delinking this issue to expedite settlement. The Indian side noted these suggestions.

(ii) Pakistan side expressed its concern on the inadequate utilization of the through booking facilities to various stations in Pakistan. Indian side assured that the Indian Railways was taking necessary measures to create awareness and encourage passengers to better utilize the above facility.

(iii) The Pakistan side expressed concern regarding the settlement of the outstanding claim by Pakistan Railway in connection with the steel consignment imported from Verka to Lahore, pending since 1982. The Indian side assured that necessary efforts would be made for an early settlement.

(iv) On the issue of up-gradation of facilities in Lahore, Pakistani side explained that some measures have been taken to improve the facilities at Lahore Railway Station.

(i) Health

Both sides agreed to an exchange of medical research delegations (PMRC-ICMR) pertaining to areas of Coronary Heart Diseases and Oncology. The proposed delegations would consist of relevant experts in the two fields from either side. It was further agreed that the Pakistan delegation would visit India in September 1989. This will be followed by a visit of the Indian delegation in November / December 1989.

(j) Science and Technology

Recognizing the importance of cooperation in Science and Technology the two sides agreed to an exchange of visits by Science and Technology delegations to concretize specific subject areas, modalities and cooperation programmes. An Indian delegation would visit in October-November 1989. This would be followed by the visit of a Pakistani delegation in December – January 1990 on mutually agreed dates. The possible areas of Science and Technology cooperation were identified as under:-

2706. Agreed Minutes of the Meeting of Sub - Commission - IV of India – Pakistan Joint Commission.

Islamabad, July 17, 1989.

The Pakistan and the Indian Delegations held discussions on the basis of decisions taken in the informal consultations held in New Delhi from 20th to 25th June, 1989. The Indian delegation was led by Smt. Indira Misra, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Home Affairs and the Pakistan delegation by Mr. Hassan Raza Pasha, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Interior and Narcotics Control (Interior Division). ...The discussions took place in a spirit of cordiality.

2. The following is the record of the recommendations made:

I. Visa Matters

3. Both sides confirmed their agreement on the following matters, on the basis of reciprocity:

i) The number of places that can be visited by nationals of either country should be increased from the present four to eight.

ii) A new category of tourist visa valid for 14 days may be added to the existing categories of visas to cover group tours organized by approved tour operators/travel agents. This visa will be non-extendable.

iii) Both sides agreed that all persons with visas valid for up to 14 days should be exempted from police reporting. This visa will be non-extendable. Sub-Commission IV may review the arrangements after a period of one year and make suitable recommendations to respective governments.

iv) The Indian side proposed that there should be complete exemption from police reporting for people above 65 years of age and children below 16 years of age. The Pakistan delegation agreed to examine the proposal.

v) The present arrangements with regard to the business visa i.e. 3 entries over six months duration should be continued.

vi) There was no objection to the revision of visa fee on either side from Rs. 15/- to Rs. 25/- . However, the Joint Commission may like to take a decision about the timing of enforcement of this revision.

vii) It was agreed that travelers on visitors visa should be allowed to exit from an air-check post other than that of entry. Exit and entry points will be indicated in the visa. This visa shall be non-extendable and shall be granted on the basis of a pre-paid return ticket.
II Tourism

4. Both sides confirmed their agreement on reciprocal basis on the following matters:

i) In the case of group tours organized by tour operators/travel agents approved by either Government, entry and exit points could be different if tours are prepaid, itinerary is pre-determined and the group travels by air.

ii) In addition to the provisions of the existing Protocol on Tourism between the two Governments, it was agreed that private tour operators/travel agents, duly approved by the respective Governments, should also be permitted to operate group tours.

iii) It was agreed that groups may consist of 10 or more persons. The tourists from either country would be granted non-extendable tourist visas valid for up to 14 days and for a maximum of 8 places. While individual members of the group will not be required to register with the Police, the tour operator will furnish copies of the itinerary and other relevant information to the Registration authorities of the places of visit in prescribed form in advance.

iv) Both the Governments shall exchange lists of approved tour operators/travel agents. The list shall be reviewed periodically for incorporating any changes.

III Detainees

5. Both the sides confirmed their agreement on the following matters on the basis of reciprocity:

i) Both sides agreed to increase the number of jails in which consular access would be provided. The additional jails will be at Rajkot in State of Gujarat in India and at Karachi in Pakistan. The consular access at all the jails will be provided thrice a year according to the existing schedule.

ii) Both sides agreed to provide information, including photographs, about nationals of either country arrested/detained in the other country within four weeks to the respective Embassy, within the frame-work of the protocol on consular access of November, 1982.

iii) Both sides agreed that repatriation should be done as soon as possible after completion of the sentence. For this purpose, consular access should be provided well before the completion of sentence and necessary formalities completed to ensure that repatriation is effected soon after the completion of sentence.
IV. Pilgrimage

6. Indian side agreed to raise the number of pilgrims from Pakistan to the Shrines in India to the extent indicated below:
