Please accept, Excellency, my best wishes for your health, happiness and long life and for the ever increasing progress and prosperity of the friendly people of India.

Yours Sincerely,

Summary record of meeting between Pakistan Ambassador and Foreign Secretary.

New Delhi, March 18, 1987.

The Pakistan Ambassador accompanied by his Political Counselor called on Foreign Secretary at his office at noon on 18th March, 1987.

After an exchange of courtesies the Pakistan Ambassador gave a brief expose on Indo-Pak relations and its future prospects. He indicated that notwithstanding the many crises during his tenure of nearly three years in India, he was hopeful and optimistic about the future of Indo – Pakistan relations. This optimism sprang from the ability of the two countries to contain these crises. This was illustrated most spectacularly during the recent crisis between the two countries. While there was a school of thought which regarded this development as a setback to the relationship between the two countries, he drew encouragement from the fact that the two sides had been able to overcome this crisis.

The Pakistan Ambassador proceeded to underline Pakistan’s desire to cultivate good neighbourly relations with India, pointing out that in order to achieve it both sides would have to divest themselves of much of the “psychological baggage” which they had been carrying for the last 40 years. In this context he expressed the hope that with the arrival of the Foreign Secretary, a new beginning could perhaps be made in the relationship between the two countries. Specifically he urged the early convening of the two Sub-commissions on Trade and Economic matters set up under the framework of the Indo-Pak Joint Commission, which had so far been held up. The meeting of these two Sub-commissions had been agreed to during the Zia-PM meeting in Delhi. He had met the Commerce Secretary in this matter and he now sought the Foreign Secretary’s views in this regard. Once agreement for the meetings of the Sub-commissions was arrived at, the agenda could be discussed. He also urged the convening of a Foreign Secretary level meeting. He referred in this context to the understanding reached during the former Foreign Secretary’s meeting with Foreign Secretary Sattar in Islamabad in December 1986 for the holding of such a meeting in Delhi in March or May 1987. In view of F.S’s recent arrival, May 1987 would appear to be the most appropriate time for this meeting.

Finally, the Pakistan Ambassador stressed the importance of the agreement reached during the Home Secretary’s visit to Pakistan in December 1986 for the setting up and the convening of early meetings of the Committee for Combating Drug Trafficking and Smuggling and the Committee on Border Ground Rules. While dates for the former had been agreed to (viz. 26th and 27th March, 1987 in New Delhi), dates for the latter were still awaited. Pakistan attached great importance to the Committee on Border Ground Rules as this was also related to the question of terrorism.

Responding to the points made by the Pakistan Ambassador, Foreign Secretary stated that he was particularly concerned about the suddenness with which developments could get out of hand. This was vividly demonstrated during the recent round of border tension. While it was of course encouraging that the two sides had been able to control the situation, it was important that developments in the relationship were given the closest attention to avoid the repetition of such a situation. FS assured the Pakistan Ambassador that India too was desirous of a lasting the positive relationship with Pakistan and not just a no-war no-peace relationship. While the past had certainly come in the way of evolving good neighbourly relations between the two countries, he was disappointed that even with the new generation past suspicions and attitude persisted. Both sides had to develop new attitudes. While he could engage in a long discussion on this issue and one in which both sides may not agree entirely, he felt that distrust in both countries was working on and feeding on distrust. India felt that Pakistan was arming itself to the teeth and this was motivated not by purely defensive intensions. Pakistan on its part perhaps felt that this was necessary in the context of what India might do. Suspicions about India amongst its neighbours were partially due to its size. India had the feeling that its smaller neighbours were taking advantage of her and were not helping the situation by not accepting its sincere professions. As long as Pakistan gave the impression of being a frontline ally of a Super-Power suspicions between the two countries would persist. On Pakistan’s part, it, no doubt, felt that US support was necessary in the context of its having to face a much a larger neighbour and in the context of India’s special relationship with the Soviet Union. It was important to build up trust and confidence between the two countries. Evolution of confidence building measures would take time and one should not expect any immediate breakthrough.

The Foreign Secretary pointed out that the meetings of the Sub-commissions must precede the Joint Commission meeting. From his conversation with Secretary (Commerce), he had got the impression that the Commerce Secretary felt that the list of items provided by Pakistan for import from India was not wide enough. It was also his impression that the Pakistan side would now be furnishing a broader list of items.

The Pakistan Ambassador gave a brief outline of his discussion with Commerce Secretary, as well as a background of the problem relating to the convening of the Sub-commissions meeting. He admitted that Pakistan had failed to live up to the convening of the Secretary-level meeting to go into this issue and had also been unable to furnish an acceptable list of import items on schedule. He mentioned, however, that during Mr. Vankateswaran’s visit to Pakistan, the Pakistan Minister of State for Foreign Affairs had stated that if the Indian side indicated some additional items of export interest to it, Pakistan would be able to widen its list. In subsequent discussions with Mr. Venkateswaran in New Delhi, the later had mentioned that there was no need for India indicating additional items as in an earlier list informally handed over by it to Pakistan there were as many as 233 items and Pakistan could select any of these for import from India. The Pakistan Ambassador submitted that he had pointed out to the Commerce Secretary that if Pakistan sought to widen the list, this might delay matters. Accordingly, he had suggested to the Commerce Secretary that the Sub-commissions may be convened on the basis of the existing list and during the meeting an undertaking could be given that a wider list would be furnished subsequently. The Commerce Secretary had not agreed to this idea and accordingly he had informed his Government of the position taken by the Commerce Secretary requesting for a modified list. He had, however, also indicated that he would pursue this matter further with the Ministry of External Affairs and revert subsequently. Foreign Secretary pointed out that in the context of the discussions held during the PM-Zia meeting it would be desirable if the Ambassador could obtain a revised and broader list of items which Pakistan would be prepared to import from India in the private sector.

While agreeing to take up this matter with the concerned authorities in Pakistan, the Ambassador expressed some doubts as to whether even with a revised list, Commerce Ministry would agree to sign formal documents on this issue in the Sub-commission meeting. It was pointed out to the Ambassador that while formal signatures may not be possible, this move on Pakistan’s part would certainly serve to improve the atmosphere.

The Pakistan Ambassador briefed the Foreign Secretary on suggestions made by him to the Commerce Secretary for conclusion of a target oriented trade protocol, exchange of visits between the Chambers of Commerce and of trade delegations. Foreign Secretary stated that one should make haste slowly. While the idea of a Trade Protocol was per se a good one, he wondered whether the setting up of targets was such a good idea as in case these targets were not achieved, there would be a feeling of set-back.

There was a brief exchange on the question of trawlers captured by both sides. The Foreign Secretary indicated that while he had no objection per se to the convening of talks on this issue, it was not yet quite clear as to whether we would circumvent the legal process under way in this matter for effectuating exchange of the vessels. We were in the process of finding out all these details and would revert in the matter thereafter.
The Pakistan Ambassador expressed his unhappiness at allegations in the press about entry of Pak intruders into India. He pointed out that these reports were not founded on facts as the border on the Indian side had been sealed. It was explained to him that the Home Ministry’s attention had been drawn to the Pakistan side’s concern over reportage on this issue and they were looking into the matter sympathetically.

The Pakistan Ambassador referred to the request made by his Government for support to the candidature of Sahabzada Yaqub Khan for the post of Secretary-General of UNESCO and in this context urged that an early meeting be arranged for him with Mr. Narasimha Rao. He also requested for a meeting with the Speaker and Defence Minister. It was explained to him that the requests for meetings with Mr. Narasimha Rao and the Speaker had been obtained and cleared. No request had so far been received for a meeting with Defence Minister.

The meeting terminated at 12.50 p.m.

1143. Press Note issue by the Director General, Revenue Intelligence, Ministry of Finance, Government of India.

New Delhi, March 27, 1987.

The first meeting of the Indo-Pakistan Committee to combat drug trafficking and smuggling was held in New Delhi on March 26th and 27th 1987. The Committee had been set up in pursuance of a decision taken during the discussions between the Home Secretary of India and the Interior Secretary of Pakistan at Lahore in December, 1986.

The Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Dilshad Najmuddin, Chairman of the Pakistan Narcotics Control Board and included Mr. Mian Nazir Azhar, Director, Intelligence and Investigation (Customs & Excise), Mr. Mohammad Sulaiman, Chief (Customs), C.B.R., Mr. Liaquat Mahmood, Director, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Mr Fazal Karim Khan, D.S., Ministry of Interior Mr. Mohammad Zaman, Pakistan Rangers and Mr. Mohammad Saeed, Third Secretary, Embassy of Pakistan, New Delhi. The India delegation was led by Mr. B.V. Kumar, Director General, Narcotics Control Bureau and comprised of Shri S.K. Choudhury, Joint Director, D.R.I., Shri Dalbir Singh, Deputy Director General, Narcotics Control Bureau, Shri M.G. Venugopalan, Deputy Secretary, Ministry of Finance, Shri Prabhu Dayal, Deputy Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs and Shri A.K. Patel, D.D. (G), B.S.F.

The discussions which were held in a very cordial and frank atmosphere, covered a wide range of subjects including identification of nodal agencies through whom information will be exchanged, steps to be taken by either side to neutralize the activities of drug traffickers and smugglers, new means or methods used for smuggling and drug trafficking and exchange of information in a wide variety of areas related to such activities.

The situation on Indo-Pakistan border with regard to smuggling of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances was discussed in detail. Both sides agreed to intensify their efforts to check the menace.

Revenue Intelligence
New Delhi

1144. Agreed Minutes of the First Meeting of the Indo - Pakistan Committee to Combat Drug trafficking and smuggling.

New Delhi, March 27, 1987.

In pursuance of the decision taken by the representatives of the Governments of India and Pakistan who met at Lahore on 20th and 21st December, 1986, at Secretary level a committee was constituted to combat drug trafficking and smuggling with the following membership:

INDIA:

i) Director General, Narcotics Control Bureau
ii) Director General, Revenue Intelligence.
iii) Representative of Border Security Force
iv) Representative of Finance Ministry
v) Representative of Ministry of External Affairs

PAKISTAN:

i) Chairman, Pakistan Narcotics Control Board
ii) Director General, Intelligence & Investigation (Customs & Central Excise)
iii) Representative from Pakistan Rangers
iv) Representative from Central Board of Revenue (Member Customs)
v) Representative from Ministry of Foreign Affairs

It was also decided in that meeting that this committee will meet periodically in order to evolve a common strategy to undertake concerted action to counter and eliminate these activities and to exchange information relating to drug traffickers and smugglers operating from either side of the land border. In that meeting the two sides agreed, to exchange operational information and intelligence. They agreed that the information would be supplied which may require follow up action in either country on the basis of urgency.

The committee so constituted met at New Delhi on 26th and 27th March, 1987. (Annexure - I)

The talks were held in a cordial and frank atmosphere with both sides reiterating the resolve and commitment of their respective Government in combating drug trafficking and smuggling in the region.

The situation on Indo-Pakistan border with regard to smuggling of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances was discussed in detail. Both sides agreed to intensify their efforts to check the menace. The Committee took up for consideration the agreed agenda. (Annexure-II).

The two sides took up for consideration at the outset designation of agencies and officers through whom regular exchange of information may be effected. Modalities of such communication between the designated agencies and officers were also discussed. It was agreed that while on matters relating to drugs the nodal agency would be the Narcotics Control Bureau in respect of India and the Pakistan Narcotics Control Board in respect of Pakistan, on issues relating to smuggling of contraband and other customs frauds, the nodal agency would by the Directorate of Revenue Intelligence in respect of India and the Directorate General of Intelligence and Investigation (Customs and Excise) in respect of Pakistan. The list of postal addresses, telephone and telex numbers of the nodal agencies and the concerned officers are at Annexure-III. To begin with, the two sides agreed that the exchange of information will be channelized through the nodal agencies officers specified above and after gaining some experience this may be extended at the regional and field levels, if considered necessary.

The nature of intelligence/information which may be exchanged between the two countries would be of two types: (1) Operational intelligence which may be communicated and followed up immediately through the fastest means of communication i.e. telephone/telex, and (2) Information of a detailed nature which would be communicated through correspondence in order to build up dossiers/index in respect of smugglers, suspects, etc.

In regard to exchange of information relating to smuggling of an emergent nature between the Indian Border Security Force and the Pakistan Rangers it was agreed that the matter may be considered by the ground rules committee constituted for the purpose.

On the question of exchange of information on smugglers/drug traffickers operating on either side of the border, it was agreed that the normal exchange would take place in a prescribed format as adopted by the committee (Annexure-IV).

While the normal mode of exchange of information and operational intelligence in respect of matters relating to drug trafficking and smuggling would be in the prescribed format, other information of significance may be exchanged even outside the format on "as and when necessary" basis. With regard to the steps to be taken by either side was agreed that both countries would endeavor to take firm steps in this regard.

On the question of identification of suspect vehicles, vessels and aircraft, the routes used for smuggling/drug trafficking, it was agreed that regular information would be exchanged between the nodal agencies, of either country. To the extent practicable this information would be integrated in the agreed format.

The two delegations agreed to exchange information on routes, new methods and means used for smuggling/drug trafficking and the emerging trends in the field.

On the subject of exchange of general information relating to new and recurring trends of smuggling/drug trafficking, it was agreed that the area of co-operation would be widened to cover smuggling by land, sea and air, and the frequency may be increased. Such exchange of information could cover customs frauds in addition to smuggling and drug trafficking. In regard to exchange of information in specific cases with trans-border ramifications it was felt that maximum co-operation should be shown by both the sides. It was also agreed that in respect of specific cases of importance, priority should be clearly indicated in the communication so that such cases are pursued with the urgency they deserve.

Considering the extreme importance and usefulness of such inter-governmental committee meetings it was suggested by the Pakistan delegation that the committee may meet once in six months alternately in India and Pakistan. This suggestion was agreed to by the India side subject to government approval.

Note: The Annexures referred to above are not included.
In response to Foreign Secretary’s request the Pakistan Ambassador called on him at his office on Tuesday, 14th April, at 5.00 p.m. The undersigned and Mr. Kamran Niaz, Counselor in the Pakistan Embassy were also present.

2. At the outset, Foreign Secretary expressed his unhappiness at the reported statement of President Zia on Kashmir as carried by the Muslim of 9th April and the recent comments of the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, and the NWFP Governor on the condition of Muslims in India as carried in the Pakistan press. Foreign Secretary handed over the texts of the these statements and comments. He made the point that Zia’s statement on Kashmir went against the Simla Agreement and the comments by Pakistani leaders on the conditions of Muslims in India were most uncalled for.

3. The Pakistan Ambassador indicated that he had not seen the full texts of these statements and he would certainly convey our concern in the matter to the authorities in Pakistan. He, however, gave a categorical assurance that Pakistan continued to abide by the Simla Agreement and had no intention of either reneging from it or from the PM - Zia understanding of 1985 on Kashmir. He, however, pointed out that there were differences of interpretation between the two countries on the Simla Agreement as applicable to Kashmir. India, too, had from time to time made statements that Pakistan was in illegal occupation of a part of Kashmir. Pakistan on its part regarded the entire territory of Jammu and Kashmir as disputed. Statements of this type were often made by leaders of both countries.

4. Foreign Secretary countered that the raising of the Kashmir issue at the OIC or in any other forum went against the spirit of the Simla Agreement. The repeated highlighting of this issue in such a manner gave one the impression that Pakistan was merely paying lip service to the Simla Agreement without really respecting it. There was no need to constantly raise this issue and allude to it in such provocative terms as had been done by President Zia.

5. The Pakistan Ambassador admitted that domestic compulsions sometimes necessitated statements of this type. He, however, re-assured the Foreign Secretary that such statements did not involve any dilution of Pakistan’s commitment to the Simla Agreement. As regards comments about the condition of the Muslim community in India there were no intention on the part of Pakistan to interfere in the internal affairs of India. These comments were actuated by a sense of sympathy for the Muslim community in India and there was no intention to muddy the atmosphere of Indo-Pak relations.
6. Foreign Secretary reiterated that statements about the Muslim community in India made by the Pakistani leaders were totally uncalled for and there was no reason whatsoever to have made them.

7. Foreign Secretary also drew the Pakistan Ambassador’s attention to the incident which had occurred at Panja Sahib (Gurudwara) that morning. He mentioned that while our Cd’A was being presented a Saropa (robe of honour) by our Jatha an effort was made by a Canadian Sikh, Daljit Singh, S/O Gurdip Singh to assault him and pull off the Saropa. He and some other Sikhs also raised pro-Khalistan and anti Indian slogans. The Police authorities took no action and the Canadian Sikh was only prevented from actually assaulting our Cd’A by our own security personnel and other Sikh elements. The Foreign Secretary drew the Ambassador’s attention to the following points:

   i) Visits of our Sikh Jathas should not be made the occasion for anti-Indian propaganda;

   ii) Due protection should be accorded to our officials and our Sikh pilgrims against such anti Indian Sikh elements from abroad;

   iii) The incident was particularly regrettable as on the previous evening itself our Embassy had requested the Pakistan authorities that Daljit Singh was likely to create trouble and that he should be restrained. However, not only was no action taken against him but while he was attempting to disrupt the proceedings, the local Police officials did nothing. In addition, one of the 7 Canadian Sikhs who had earlier assaulted our diplomats, notably Balbir Singh, S/O Gurnam Singh, had apparently also been allowed to come to Panja Sahib from Lahore.

   iv) It was regrettable that the Pakistan authorities have permitted a very large number of Sikh pilgrims to visit the Panja Sahib shrine simultaneously with our Jatha. It was estimated that there were as many as 7,000 Sikh pilgrims at Panja Sahib, whilst our own pilgrim’s party numbered only 3,000 persons. Moreover, in addition to the officially approved pilgrim party from India, several other Sikhs from India seemed to have been granted visas by the Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi for going to Panja Sahib. This was against the Indo-Pak Protocol on pilgrimages.

   v) We would expect Pakistan to ensure that no other untoward incidents occur during the visit of our pilgrim party to Pakistan.

8. The Pakistan Ambassador categorically ruled out the possibility of his Embassy having granted visas to pilgrims other than those cleared by Ministry of External Affairs and was skeptical about the contention that there were as many as 7000 Sikh pilgrims as Panja Sahib. He indicated that he would first like to verify the facts in the matter. Furthermore, he felt that this was a relatively minor incident and should not be blown out of proportion. He had, however, requested his Government over a week ago to ensure that no untoward incident occurred during the pilgrimage. He gave an assurance that he would once again reiterate to his Government the importance of providing protection to our officials during the visit of the Jatha to Pakistan. He however, requested that the incident should not be allowed to colour relations between the two countries which were on the mend.

9. The Foreign Secretary interjected that he certainly did not have the impression that the relations between the two countries were on the mend. Indeed, the general tenor of the relationship left much to be desired. There almost appeared to be new directives on the Pakistan side on this matter as the statements on India were now much worse than a few months ago.

10. The Pakistan Ambassador assured the Foreign Secretary that there was no new directive whatsoever in Pakistan on the relationship between the two countries. If things were not moving properly, the trend must be corrected. There was no doubt some disappointment in Pakistan at the non-convening of Sub-commissions which had been decided upon during the PM-Zia meeting and at the insistence on lists. However, the overall trend was quite favourable particularly as a result of Home Secretary’s meeting in December and as a consequence of the manner in which India and Pakistan had been able to surmount the crisis of January 1987. The Pakistan Ambassador went on to make a pitch for the convening of the Sub-commissions without our insisting on Pakistan providing new lists for import of commodities from India. The Foreign Secretary stated that this may not be a good idea as there was no point in the Sub-commissions meeting if there could be no progress.

12. The meeting terminated at 6.00 p.m.

Now let us take Pakistan, about which many distinguished Members had made mention about our relationship with Pakistan. As you know, India is committed to developing cordial, cooperative and good neighbourly relations with Pakistan in accordance with the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement. In this context, Hon. Members will remember that India has taken a number of initiatives in recent times for normalization of relations with Pakistan, such as the establishment of the Indo-Pakistan Joint Commission. Recently, we have had other steps taken also, like the offer of a Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation, various proposals to ease travel between the two countries including the proposal to reopen the Khokrapar - Manubao rail route, proposal for non-discriminatory trade relations, proposals for the exchange of newspapers and periodicals, proposals for non-attack on each other’s nuclear installations, and the proposals for the recent Secretary level meeting for defusing the tension on the border. All these proposals are on the table. Even when President Zia-ul-Haq was recently here to witness the cricket match in Jaipur our Prime Minister discussed with him, and gave him a suggestion that the Joint Commission should meet early, and the two Sub-Commissions of that Commission should meet earlier, so that we can also improve our economic relations. (Interruptions) Let us see what happens. We are prepared to have these Sub-Commissions meet early. We are prepared to do our bit.

I find that only on April 20 the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Sahabzada Yakub Khan had made a statement in Pakistan’s parliament that Pakistan wants to build tension-free good neighbourly relations with India on the basis of equality, justice, sovereignty and mutual respect. Of course, such statements made by Pakistan are there. We welcome these statements. But let us join to implement these statements. What has been lacking is the fullest adherence to the principles of the Simla Agreement. Therefore, instead of trying to get more armaments, instead of trying to get sophisticated weapons, armaments and the latest aircrafts, AWACS or AEWS from United States and other countries, let Pakistan come to the negotiating table and discuss all those proposals which are already on the table. Recently, when a tense situation developed on the borders of Punjab and Jammu & Kashmir and we had two attacking formations of Pakistan on the border, we tried our level best to defuse the situation. We had two rounds of talks: our Secretary Shri. Gonsalves had two rounds of talks for defusing the crisis. But Pakistan has to move forward, and instead of taking a contradictory position, it has to reconcile with its preferred objectives. What ever it can do, it should do in the practical sense of the term. We also find that our efforts have not met with success because of Pakistan’s weapons-oriented nuclear policy and unwillingness to have non-discriminatory trade relations with India. Therefore, in this context I must say that Pakistan’s nuclear weapons programme is of paramount concern to us since it affects our security environment. We have repeatedly made it clear that Pakistan’s acquisition of nuclear weapons is a development which we cannot afford to ignore. Our objective is a durable structure of peace in the sub-continent and our endavour has been and will continue to be the promotion of greater and closer understanding between India and Pakistan. I would again like to exhort Pakistan to cooperate with us in our sincere effort to build such a relationship as had been enshrined in the Simla Agreement. We feel that the fear and mistrust between our two countries must be removed and the scarce resources that we have in both the countries should be used for development rather than for the acquisition of arms.

Three or four distinguished members had yesterday mentioned this particular fact and I fully support those arguments. We consider this as a major plank of our foreign policy.

SECRET

Letter from the Indian Ambassador in Pakistan S. K. Singh to Foreign Secretary K. P. S. Menon on political situation in Pakistan.

Ambassador of India
Islamabad

No. ISL/AMB/161/87 25 May, 1987

My dear F.S,

For Pakistan this is a year of political ferment and considerable flux. The armed forces of Pakistan continue to have the substance of political power. Simultaneously a sort of National Assembly is functioning and the political parties are making every effort to get greater control over the polity. There are serious anxieties generated by the Afghanistan situation. Pakistan leadership is anxious to maintain and foster their close relationship with USA. They need US protection and military and economic aid. At the same time most political parties and personalities outside the Government hanker and clamour for greater flexibility of response in the context of Afghanistan. They are apprehensive that their present closeness to, and identification with, the USA, may not leave them enough room for manoeuvre; and that they may attract retribution from USSR, India, Iran and even some progressive Arabs.

2. Western media, (BBC, Reuter, VOA, AP, AFP, DPA, et al) are maintaining a studied silence about the problems of ferment in Pakistan. This contrasts with the raucous and shrill publicity given to developments in and about India. The idea is to blame the Indian leadership for incompetence and subject the Indian nation to a kind of psy-war, persuading them to forget their own strength and capacity to cope. At the same time to give the rest of the world the picture of India a tried, fumbling giant about to collapse.

3. We need to take note of certain focused efforts that the USA and her friends are making, which are primarily aimed at India:-

(i) Western experts and strategic writers like Capt. John Moore, Editor of “Janes Naval Review”, have started asserting that India’s naval power is already overwhelming; that India is seeking a position of naval superiority not only in and around the sub – continent but also in the surrounding Ocean and land area; that so a situation is bound to arise in which the major powers with global maritime interests, (not defined which) will be forced to respond. It is being suggested that the American,
Soviet and Chinese interests are bound to be threatened by India's actions in this context. These scholars also assert that any further arming of Indian forces, especially the Indian Navy, will have negative impact on world peace, and could even provoke hostilities in the future. The Pakistani media, during the last several months, has replayed a number of items and analyses echoing these points! The targets of this publicity are two; one, the public opinion of the super powers and major powers; and two, the public opinion of the smaller countries of Asia and Africa. The effort is to condemn the Indian Navy as a factor of de-stabilization in the Indian Ocean region, even before it has geared itself up as a proper Blue Water Navy.

(ii) The Blame for Pakistan acquiring or even seeking nuclear weapon status is entirely India’s. It is being projected as a self-evident truth, part of accepted Western nuclear theology, that the only way to stop Pakistan from moving any further in the nuclear field is by forcing India to halt its nuclear programme. Their basic and simplistic, propaganda line is that already India has the fuel and capacity to manufacture up to 60 nuclear bombs a year. In the process they are also asserting that India's nuclear programme is far more broadly based than China's.

(iii) India’s space programme is being deliberately projected as part of our missile programme. It is being asserted that India’s express purpose in all this is quietly and unobtrusively to acquire the capacity to deliver nuclear weapons through, our own effort. Reports have been mushrooming that the USA and other Western powers are trying to persuade Soviet Union to join them in preventing non-nuclear countries of the Third World, more specially India, from moving any further towards acquiring IRBM and ICBM capability. The Western press asserts that this matter was recently discussed between Shultz and Shevardnadze*, and that the latter’s reaction was positive and constructive. The Western media is actively publicizing efforts of the seven industrialized nations, involved in space work, (U.S., FRG, Japan, France, Italy, UK and Canada) to ban export of missile related technology to non-nuclear countries. The principal target of all these efforts is quite obviously India. The West quite unabashedly indicates, in all this, its anxiety to prevent India from attaining strategic parity with China. The effort seems to be to establish some sort of conceptual inter-relationship between the science and technology of missiles and rockets, and that of the atom; and then proceed to prohibit all developing countries moving in either of these areas. Again the target is India. There are some already beginning to talk of building up a Safeguards System connected for solid and liquid fuels used in space and missile programmes.
4. I am sure the Government of India are aware of these trends. I thought I should share with you the picture as we can see it from Pakistan. In a growing manner I am becoming conscious of issues in which several aspects get merged and fused together. Often there are considerations of strategic and military aspects of science and technology; of publicity and propaganda; and indeed of internal and external political developments in and around our country, which are not always easy to unscramble.

               Your sincerely,
               (S.K. Singh)

               Shri. K.P.S. Menon,
               Foreign Secretary,
               Ministry of External Affairs,
               New Delhi:

1148. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

               PRIME MINISTER

               His Excellency
               Mr. Rajiv Gandhi,
               Prime Minister of India,
               New Delhi.

               Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

               During recent months, concern has been expressed in Pakistan and India regarding each other’s nuclear capabilities and intentions. Doubts and misgivings on this issue can affect the prospects of normalization between Pakistan and India and can prejudice efforts to promote regional as well as global peace and security.

               I had sought to assure Your Excellency in Bangalore last November that Pakistan is committed to the peaceful use of nuclear technology. You have extended similar assurances on behalf of India. We have advanced several proposals for jointly giving formal and irrevocable expression to unilateral declarations eschewing nuclear weapons.

Our proposals reflect a presumption that, despite a demonstrated capability to develop nuclear weapons, India's nuclear programme is designed for professed peaceful purposes. The acceptance of any of Pakistan's proposals would serve to confirm such presumptions of peaceful intent. My government would also respond positively to any other initiative or idea, designed to prevent the emergence of nuclear weapons in South Asia.

Past discussions between Pakistan and India have not been entirely unproductive. The accord reached in December 1985 not to attack each other's nuclear facilities was a welcome development. We look forward to early approval of the text of this agreement.

Earlier, in 1980, the Foreign Ministers of Pakistan and India issued a joint statement declaring that both countries intended to use nuclear energy exclusively for peaceful purposes. It may be useful if, at an early opportunity, the Governments of Pakistan and India could issue an authoritative joint declaration reaffirming our policy of using nuclear energy only for peaceful purposes. We would wish to go further and commit our countries not to produce or acquire nuclear weapons.

Both Pakistan and India have supported the conclusion of a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty. An undertaking on the part of Pakistan and India not to conduct any nuclear explosion would be significant testimony that neither country wishes to pursue a nuclear weapons programme. Pakistan would be prepared to join India in a bilateral or regional accord completely renouncing the testing of all nuclear explosive devices.

Responsibility to our future generations demand that the leadership of both countries transcend populism or transient political advantage. It is within the power of Your Excellency's Government and mine to avert the danger of nuclear weapons proliferation in South Asia. I am confident that the proposal for a bilateral or regional comprehensive test ban would serve the purpose. Let us through dialogue and discussions evolve some equitable means to assure each other, and the world, that neither Pakistan nor India is pursuing, or will ever pursue, programmes for the manufacture or acquisition of nuclear weapons.

Please accept, Mr. Prime Minister, the assurances of my highs consideration and personal regards.

Yours Sincerely,

Sd/-

Embassy of Pakistan
New Delhi

June 13, 1987

Excellency,

I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency the following message from Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo:

Begins:

“Excellency

We asked your Ambassador in Islamabad on 31 May to convey a message from me to Your Excellency about the strain that had recently developed in Sri Lanka’s relations with India. We were apprehensive that the difficulties which had arisen might cast a dark shadow on SAARC. I would like to inform you that we have now addressed a message to the Government of Sri Lanka urging them to participate fully in the forthcoming SAARC meetings in New Delhi.

In my message to you on 31 May, I had particularly expressed the hope that Your Excellency would continue efforts for the promotion of internal reconciliation in Sri Lanka within the framework of the unity of Sri Lanka. It seems to me that the prospects for the resumption of processes leading to the resolution of present difficulties, as well as the dialogue for reconciliation, would greatly improve if Your Excellency and President Jayewardene could meet at the earliest possible date. We are confident that Sri Lanka would respond positively to such an initiative. On our part, we remain ready to assist in any way that Your Excellency deems appropriate to bring about such a meeting.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Mohammad Khan Junejo,
Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan.”
Ends

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Humayun Khan)

His Excellency,
Shri Rajiv Gandhi,
Prime Minister of India,

1150. Letter from the Pakistan Ambassador in India to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi Conveying the message of Pakistan President.

Embassy of Pakistan

June 13, 1987

Excellency,

I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency the following message from President M. Zia-ul-Haq.

Begins:

"Excellency,

As Your Excellency would know from the message sent by Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo to you on 31 May 1987, the recent tension between India and Sri Lanka has been a matter of grave concern to us, mindful as we have been of its deleterious effects both in the bilateral context and in regard to the prospects of SAARC, it has been our desire to render such assistance as we can to defuse tension and create an environment conducive to the resumption of purposeful negotiations,

It is in this spirit that our Foreign Minister has sent a message to the Foreign Minister of Sri Lanka urging that the Government of Sri Lanka participates fully in the forthcoming SAARC meetings in New Delhi.

Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo has now sent messages to Your Excellency as well as President Jayewardene suggesting that an early meeting between you and the President of Sri Lanka would be the most effective way of resolving the present situation. I wish to express the hope that Your Excellency would give the most serious consideration to this suggestion. I have no doubt that such a meeting would create fresh opportunities for a peaceful solution of the problem, an objective for which Your Excellency has steadfastly worked for quite some time.

I would, Mr. Prime Minister, remain available to you for any assistance that you may consider appropriate in bringing about an early meeting with President of Sri Lanka.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurance of my highest consideration.

M. Zia-ul-Haq
President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration

(Humayun Khan)

Excellency, Shri Rajiv Gandhi
Prime Minister of India
New Delhi.

Summary Record of discussions at the meeting between Pakistan Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan and the Minister for Human Resource Development P. V. Narasimha Rao.

The PaK. FM called on Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao, Minister for Human Resource Development, at 1330 hours on the 18th June, 1987. The Pak Ambassador to India, Humayun Khan, was also present. Discussions during the meeting focused on progress in the current SAARC Ministerial Meeting, Yaqub Khan’s candidature for the Director Generalship of the UNESCO, Pakistan’s defence cooperation with Sri Lanka, its arms build-up and the Afghan Question.

SAARC Ministerial Meeting- Sri Lanka: In response to a question from HRDM, the Pak FM said that the meeting of the SAARC Council of Ministers was progressing smoothly. He expressed his satisfaction about the progress achieved in two areas in particular, namely, definition of terrorism and joint action to combat drug trafficking.
UNESCO: Yaqub Khan, who is a candidate for the post of Director General of the UNESCO, raised this issue and said that so far there were 7 candidates formally in the fray. Of these, 4 were from Asia. He added that it was Asia’s turn this time for the post of DG, UNESCO. Asian Countries, however, had not been able to agree upon a common candidate. The ASEAN countries were currently discussing this question but they were unlikely to reach any consensus because there were as many as 3 candidates from that region. Underlining the importance that he attached to India’s support to his candidature, Yaqub Khan remarked that if he received India’s support and eventually lost the election, he would not really mind it. However, if he won the election without India’s support, his joy would be reduced by half!

In his response, HRDM avoided giving any commitment regarding extending support to Yaqub Khan’s candidature.

Pak Defence Cooperation with Sri Lanka: The Pak FM briefed HRDM at length about his discussions with EAM earlier in the day. He said that EAM had expressed his concern about Pakistani military cooperation with Sri Lanka. Yaqub Khan admitted that the Sri Lankan defence personnel were getting training in Pakistan. However, he disclaimed the presence of any Pak defence instructors in Sri Lanka. Regarding supply of arms he said that if Sri Lanka approached Pakistan for small arms, the latter was likely to provide such arms to Sri Lanka because of commercial considerations. However, there was no question of Pakistan providing sophisticated arms to Sri Lanka because it did not manufacture such arms. In any case, Pakistan was in favour of peaceful solution to the ethnic problem in Sri Lanka.

Pak Defence Build-up-AEW: The Pak FM went on to say that EAM had raised with him the question of Pakistan trying to acquire an Airborne Early Warning system (AEW) from the US. He claimed that though Pakistan was definitely interested in acquiring such a system because of repeated Afghan air raids, no decision had so far been taken. Pakistan had to think carefully over a number of complex questions, including the enormous cost of such a system. He added that defensive measures taken by Pakistan in response to Operation Brass Tacks had exposed certain deficiencies in the Pak Defence, which in turn had intensified demand of the Armed Forces for more arms. Remarking that the degree of insecurity in both India and Pakistan remained undiminished despite their acquiring more and more arms, he suggested that the two countries should work towards reaching some kind of limitation on their arms as well as their troop levels. HRDM said that Yaqub Khan could continue his dialogue with EAM on this subject.

Afghanistan: Yaqub Khan also briefed HRDM regarding the Afghanistan question. He said that he was of the view that the Soviet Union wanted to withdraw from Afghanistan but it could do so only with its dignity intact. There had been some talk about the return of Zahir Shah to Afghanistan but it was not clear whether he was acceptable to all Mujahideen groups. Nor was it certain that he would be acceptable to the Soviets. Najibullah’s umbrella for reconciliation was, in any case, not acceptable to the Mujahideens and Afghan refugees. There was, therefore, need to find a more acceptable leader, he added. He went on to say that though Pakistan had some differences with the USA regarding Afghanistan, there had so far not been any split between the two countries on this question, because the Soviet Union had not offered anything which was acceptable to Pakistan but not to the USA.

The meeting lasted about 30 minutes.

1152. Summary Record Note of Meeting between External Affairs Minister and Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan.

New Delhi, June 18, 1987.

Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, the Pakistan Foreign Minister, called on EAM at Vigyan Bhavan at 5.35 p.m. on Thursday, 18th June, 1987.

2. A list of these present is appended. (not reproduced here)

3. After an exchange of courtesies, the Pakistan Foreign Minister indicated that it was Pakistan’s desire to ensure that India’s Chairmanship of SAARC proved to be a success. It was a tribute to Indian statesmanship and leadership that notwithstanding current tensions with Sri Lanka, the SAARC Ministerial meeting has been convened in such a friendly and constructive atmosphere. In the context of Indo-Pak relations it was indeed fortunate that the two countries had been able to dispel border tensions which had clouded the atmosphere earlier in the year. This was due to the sagacity and wise leadership of the Indian Prime Minister and the President and, Prime Minister of Pakistan. It was yet another proof of the fundamental desire in both countries to arrive at a resolution of problems through dialogue.

4. Pakistan Foreign Minister stated that the decision by India to hold the meeting of the Sub-Commission on Trade and Economic matters was very good. Pakistan appreciated the political will behind this decision. Pakistan would approach the meeting in an open and constructive manner. Both sides were aware of each other’s concerns, and India would see the positive approach adopted by Pakistan. Ambassador S.K. Singh suggested that it may be desirable that the Sub-Commission meetings are preceded by informal consultations either in Delhi or in Islamabad so that the two sides would go into the Sub-Commission meetings with a meaningful framework. The Pakistan Foreign Minister indicated that this approach may be helpful and he had no objection to it in principle. The Sub-Commission meetings in turn could set the stage for the Joint Commission meeting. In response to queries from EAM, he indicated that Pakistan’s approach to the widening of the list of items for import into Pakistan would be positive. Ambassador Humayun Khan added that their Commerce Ministry were looking into this matter.

5. The Pakistan Foreign Minister stated that he had earlier in the day informed the Prime Minister about the possibility of Pakistan’s re-entry into the Commonwealth. While desirous of entering the Commonwealth, Pakistan was not desperate. It did not want a re-entry on its knees. He had made known Pakistan’s approach on this issue to Secretary-General Ramphal making it quite clear that it wished to avoid any rebuff and that it was desirous of a dignified entry.

6. The desire to enter the Commonwealth was on the grounds that it would open up another forum for promoting cooperation. There was, however, no transcendental requirement for Pakistan to join the Commonwealth. While he did not expect any answer at this stage in this matter from India, Pakistan Foreign Minister suggested that India might wish to keep this matter under their consideration.

7. The Pakistan Foreign Minister made a brief reference to the Tulbul project and indicated that Pakistan was awaiting a response from India on certain clarifications which had been sought. [JS (AP) indicated that all the required clarifications had been communicated. India had in deference to Pakistan’s request indicated that it would not be undertaking any work on the main channel for the next three months and hoped that Pakistan would now agree to discussions on a Government-to-Government basis to resolve the differences on this issue between the two countries.]

8. Referring to terrorism, the Pakistan Foreign Minister stated that Pakistan wanted to finally put at rest any anxieties that India may have of this issue. It was open to any proposal and was ready for any agreement or suggestion. He added that in regard to the discussion on Border Guidelines, Pakistan would welcome dates for these talks. JS (AP) pointed out that dates had already been furnished - first week of September - and we were awaiting their response.
9. The Pakistan Foreign Minister stated that hostile propaganda continued on both sides. This was not one-sided. Pakistan would, however, do whatever was possible to curb it. The Pakistan government and he personally had come under criticism as they had chosen to take a moderate view of the disturbances in India. They had faced adjournment motions on this issue in Parliament. The Pakistan government had taken the approach that though these disturbances naturally caused concern and anxiety in Pakistan, it was not right for them to take up this issue as it was an internal matter for India. It was Pakistan's hope that the Govt. of India would succeed in dealing effectively with these disturbances. There had also regrettably been similar disturbances in Pakistan. He and the Pakistan government had sought to quell emotions on this issue by urging that inflammatory statements would not provide a more secure environment for the minority community in India.

10. Ambassador S.K. Singh elaborated at some length on the virulent attacks made in the Pakistan Press not only on India but on the Indian leadership in regard to the disturbances in India and pointed out that these were most unfortunate and uncalled for. The Pakistan Foreign Minister agreed that these attacks were to be deprecated. It was most reprehensible for any Head of Government to be attacked in this manner, particularly a Head of Government from a neighbouring country.

11. EAM thanked the Pakistan Foreign Minister for his expose. In respect of terrorism, he pointed out that the implementation mechanism set up following the Home Secretaries' meeting did not appear to have been activated. This should be done. Extremists lodged in Gurdwaras should be removed and entry of extremists from abroad to Pakistan should be discouraged. It had been agreed earlier that Pakistan Missions abroad should be instructed to carefully screen entry of Sikhs into Pakistan with a view to keeping out extremist elements. The Pakistan Ambassador stated that this had already been done.

12. Ambassador S.K. Singh raised the possibility of deporting the 7-8 Canadian Sikhs who were in Pakistan and who were virtually controlling the Lahore Gurdawars. F.S. added that the mischief potential of these 7-8 Canadian Sikhs could be further limited by ensuring that they were not present at the Gurdwaras during the visit of our Jathas. Ambassador S. K. Singh agreed but added they were all over the place. Ambassador Humayun Khan responded that the legal problems pertaining to the deportation of the Canadian Sikhs could be examined.

13. EAM pointed out that it had been agreed to by both the Foreign Ministers that hostile propaganda should be minimized. The Meerut disturbances were India's internal affair and we were doing the needful for a normalization of the situation. The personal attacks on Prime Minister in the Pakistani Press were couched in the most offensive manner and something should be done to prevent a recurrence. Apart from such propaganda, the major cause of Indo-Pak tensions was the acquisition of sophisticated weapons like AWACS by Pakistan. This issue was repeatedly raised in Parliament and the Indian government was under pressure to respond. Such acquisitions moreover were inexplicable in the context of the fact that the Afghan problem seemed to be nearing a solution. Inevitably Pakistan’s arms acquisitions were leading to an arms race in the sub-continent.

14. The Pakistan Foreign Minister indicated that he too felt that there was movement on the Afghan issue. He pointed out that Cordovoz was expected on a shuttle visit in Islamabad/ Kabul on 19th June. The main subject of discussion would be an interim government. The Soviets wanted sufficient assurances that consequent upon their withdrawal, their friends in Afghanistan would not be liquidated. This was acceptable to all parties. An interim government could not, however, be created under Najib as he was not acceptable to all sides. Pakistan had no animus against him. It was prepared to sign a settlement with Najib for an interim government. However he was not acceptable to the Resistance movement. As regard the possibility of an interim government under Zahir Shah, Pakistan has no objection to this. He enjoyed some support among Resistance elements. If he was acceptable to the majority, Pakistan would have no objection to him, but they did not wish to impose him upon Afghanistan. The Soviets had not given any definitive signal about their being ready to accept him as the Head of an interim government. If they received such a signal Pakistan could promote his candidature as the Head of an interim government. To do so without an explicit Soviet signal would not be worthwhile. Pakistan was in touch with the Soviets. There was likely to be a resumption of the dialogue in this matter between the two sides in July. Pakistan felt that the Soviets were keen to withdraw from Afghanistan. Pakistan wanted to facilitate this task and to provide a face-saving device to the Soviet Union.

15. The Pakistan Foreign Minister went on to explain that Afghan raids into Pakistan had increased. Such sneak raids necessitated that Pakistan acquire an air surveillance Radar. The type of system to be obtained by Pakistan was under discussion. The Hawkeyes were suitable for maritime surveillance and cheaper and easier to obtain than the AWACS. In fact the Hawkeyes were quite suitable for use against India but Pakistan was looking at the AWACS as these were more suitable against Afghanistan. No final decision, however, had been made in this matter. All the implications of the various surveillance systems available including Hawkeye and AWACS were under study.

16. As regards the question of an arms race in the sub-continent, Pakistan Foreign Minister suggested that India and Pakistan should discuss the possibility of arms limitation with each other. Pakistan had earlier made some proposals for force reduction. In this context he also pointed out that our exercise ‘Brass Tacks’ had caused much concern in Pakistan and their Defence Forces had built up a forceful argument, for an enhanced shopping list. Pakistan’s purchase of more weapons would naturally lead to another cycle of arms acquisition by India and Pakistan. EAM expressed surprise at the alarm caused in Pakistan by ‘Brass Tacks’. This had been discussed during the Bangalore summit and indeed India had cancelled a part of ‘Brass Tacks’. The Pakistan Foreign Minister stated that while this may very well have happened, the Foreign Office was being asked to give a guarantee that India would not attack Pakistan. This they very well could not do, and hence the arms acquisition. The Pakistan Foreign Minister added that it was not armaments that caused the animosity but vice-a-versa. He was, however, confident that the step-by-step approach involving Sub-Commissions and Joint Commission meetings would ultimately lead to an improvement in the relationship between the two countries.

17. In response to the concern voiced by EAM regarding Pakistan’s nuclear weapons programme the Pakistan Foreign Minister called for further discussions and dialogue between the two sides. Pakistan had made some suggestions in this matter and only recently Prime Minister Junejo had written in this regard to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. Pakistan was prepared for any suggestions from the Indian side. It was necessary to find a solution perhaps on the bilateral plane. The Pakistan Foreign Minister went on to state that he had in fact been encouraged by the trend in Indo-Pak relations over the last 5 - 6 years. During this period the relationship between the two countries had seriously deteriorated on at least three occasions but on all these three occasions it had been brought back on the rails. The climate of opinion in the two countries had repaired the relationship.

18. The Pakistan Foreign Minister reiterated that Pakistan would like to ensure that India’s Chairmanship of SAARC was a success. Pakistan would be prepared to use its marginal influence in this regard with Sri Lanka. Pakistan realized that its room for manoeuvre was small but it would continue to play a helpful rule. EAM explained to the Pakistan Foreign Minister the background of Indo-Sri Lankan relations emphasizing that India had no desire or intention to interfere in that country. Indeed it had been offering its good offices vis-a-vis Tamils only at Sri Lanka’s request. Similarly EAM referred to his recent visit to Beijing and pointed out that India wanted to resolve its problems with China peacefully through dialogue. He mentioned that the Pak Foreign Minister should make it quite clear to the Chinese that India had no hostile intention vis-a-vis that country. The Pak Foreign Minister assured EAM that he would faithfully communicate this to the Chinese Prime Minister during the latter’s upcoming visit to Pakistan.
19. In response to queries by F.S. regarding Pak-Sri Lanka military links, the Pak Foreign Minister stated that Pakistan was training a number of Sri Lankan officers and NCOs as was the case in respect of a number of other friendly countries. There were, however, no Pakistanis in Sri Lanka on training missions. In regard to weapon supplies, the Pak Foreign Minister pointed out that Pakistan was supplying small arms in small numbers on commercial terms to a number of friendly countries. Pakistan could not refuse to do likewise vis-à-vis Sri Lanka. He himself had not seen Sri Lanka’s request in this regard, but this would only comprise of small arms in small numbers.

20. There was a brief discussion on the question of fishermen in each other’s custody. It was felt that it was desirable to have another round of talks on this issue. It was also felt that discussions should be held as soon as possible to work towards the settlement of the maritime boundary between India and Pakistan. Once the maritime boundary was determined, the capture of fishermen by either side would automatically diminish.

The meeting terminated at 6.40 p.m.

1153. SECRET

Summary Record of the meeting between Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan and Defence Minister K. C. Pant.

Ministry of External Affairs
(AP Division)

The Pak FM called on the Raksha Mantri (Defence Minister) at 1015 hours on the 19th June 1987. Mr. Humanuyn Khan, the Pakistani Ambassador in India, was also present. Discussions during the meeting covered SAARC, the Sri Lankan question and issues in bilateral relationship between India and Pakistan.

SAARC-Sri Lanka: The Pak Foreign Minister said that notwithstanding that newspaper had to say this morning, discussions in the SAARC Ministerial Council was progressing smoothly. Referring to the ethnic question in Sri Lanka, he said that he had a long meeting with the Sri Lankan Foreign Minister last, night and the latter had told him about the political pressures under which the Sri Lankan Government had to function. There were similar pressures on the Government of India as well, and, therefore, both India and Sri Lanka were working “within very narrow margins”. He added that it was gratifying that both PM Gandhi and President Jayawardane wanted to continue the dialogue.

Indo-Pak Relations: Mr. Yaqub Khan remarked that the bilateral relationship between India and Pakistan was progressing steadily. He recalled that during the last 5 years or so Indo-Pak relations had been derailed thrice but as there was necessary political will in both countries, it had been possible to put the relationship back on the track every time. He expressed his satisfaction over the Indian suggestion for the convening of meetings of Sub-Commissions on trade and economic matters in July/August this year.

Trade: When RM pointed out that there had been little progress in the area of trade, the Pak FM said that the decision regarding expanding the list of commodities for trade in the private sector could not be taken last year because there were new incumbents in the portfolios of Commerce and Finance in Pakistan. However, an enlarged list of commodities had since been shown informally to Indian officials. He added that suggestions given by the Indian side would be taken into account while finalizing the enlarged list of commodities.

Joint Commission - Peace and Friendship Treaty - Rail link: The Pak FM expressed the hope that after the meeting of the two Sub-Commissions it should be possible to convene the Joint Commission at an early date. He added that it should also be possible to resume negotiations on the Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation/Non-aggression Pact. He was of the view that it should not be difficult to work out a satisfactory formulation regarding the question of bases. He went on to say that the Munabao-Khokharpara rail-link could possibly be opened at an early date. The Pakistani Ambassador interjected to say that last year the Pakistani side was ready to open this rail link but the India delegation could not go to Pakistan because of the sickness of its leader. However, there were some problems now on the Pakistani side.

Defence build-up of Pakistan: Referring to the concern expressed in India about defence build-up in Pakistan, Mr. Yaqub Khan said that Pakistan could hardly afford to spend 40% of its budget on defence. However, several deficiencies in the Pak Defence had been exposed during the tension on Indo-Pak border earlier this year and the Pak Armed Forces were clamouring for more arms. He expressed the hope that it might be possible for India and Pakistan to work out some kind of ratio between their respective troop levels and thereby reduce their defence spending.

Airborne Early Warning (AEW): Mr. Yaqub Khan went on to say that though Pakistan had indicated its desire to acquire an Airborne Early Warning (AEW) system, no final decision had so far been taken. RM pointed out that the acquisition of an AEW system would not in any way help Pakistan against Afghanistan. Since air intrusions from Afghanistan were very brief in duration it would not be possible for the Pak Air Force to intercept intruding Afghan aircraft even with the help of an AEW system unless they were already air borne at the time of intrusion. RM added that it was surprising that at a time when reports from Pakistan and elsewhere indicated the possibility of an early settlement of the Afghan problem, Pakistan should go in for acquisition of an AEW system (allegedly to counter a threat from Afghanistan). He also told the Pak FM that the acquisition of an AEW system and other sophisticated armament by Pakistan was bound to create apprehensions in India because everyone knew that such armament would be used only against India. He pointed out that even Pakistani leaders themselves discounted the possibility of a clash with the Soviet Union or Afghanistan, backed by the Soviet Union.

Tension on Indo-Pak Border in January 1987: Recalling the tension on the Indo Pak border in January this year, the Pak FM said that India’s Operation Brass Tacks had led to considerable misgivings in Pakistan. It was, however, fortunate that tensions were later defused. (In this context, he mentioned that in 1965 also India did not want a war with Pakistan nor did Pakistan want an all-out war with India. However, those who intruded into Kashmir were naïve enough to believe that that such intrusion could be confined to Kashmir only).

The Pak FM went on to say that there were direct channels of communication between defence establishments of the two countries and they should keep in close touch. Ambassador Humayun Khan suggested that it would not be a bad idea for Defence officials of the two sides to enter into a dialogue with each other which would promote rapport between them.

In his response, RM agreed that communication channels be kept open. He did not, however, comment on Ambassador Khan’s suggestion regarding contacts between the defence forces of the two countries.

Pak-US Relations: Mr. Yaqub Khan pleaded that India should not put Pakistan in a position from where it would be driven deeper into its relations with the USA.

He recalled that in 1979 the Pak-US relations were in a trough; Pakistan was not receiving any aid from the USA and there were strong anti-US feelings in Pakistan as evidenced by the burning of the US Embassy. The picture, however, changed with the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the intensification of the rivalry between the super powers in the Gulf. The Pak FM added that though there were manifold pressures on Pakistan it had nevertheless preserved its sovereignty.

The meeting, which lasted about 45 minutes, concluded with an exchange of pleasantries.

1154. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

His Excellency
Mr. Rajiv Gandhi,
Prime Minister of India
New Delhi.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

I would like to congratulate you on the successful launching of the Africa Fund at the Summit hosted by India last January.

Pakistan has actively and consistently supported the cause of liberation and self-determination in Southern Africa. We are fully committed to the decisions of the Harare Summit to eliminate apartheid and to liberate Namibia. Therefore, Pakistan welcomes the adoption of the Plan of Action at the meeting in New Delhi. This offers a practical and a realistic framework to strengthen the capacity of the frontline African states and the liberation movements at this crucial stage in their struggle against South African racism and colonialism.

The Government of Pakistan pledges an amount of Rupees 50 million over the next three years as our contribution to the Africa Fund. Under this allocation, Pakistan will provide technical and other assistance to the frontline states and the African liberation movements. A substantial part of our Special Five-Year Technical Assistance Programme, which is to become operational next month, will be devoted to the provision of such assistance in the fields of agriculture, administration, railways, banking, civil aviation and human resources development.

Although our resources are limited, Pakistan has provided technical and other assistance to African countries bilaterally and through various international organizations. During the past three years such assistance to Africa has amounted to Rs.105 million. We shall maintain and hopefully enlarge such assistance in future.

I wish to convey to you, Mr. Prime Minister, the assurances of our wholehearted cooperation in this noble endeavour which you have pioneered.
to advance the just cause of the valiant people of Southern Africa for self-determination, freedom and equality.

Yours sincerely,
Sd/-
(Mohammad Khan Junejo)

Embassy of Pakistan

New Delhi

No. POL.I/76/87 9th July, 1987

The Embassy of Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs and has the honour to draw the esteemed Ministry's attention to a statement by Mr Jag Parvesh Chandra, Chief Executive Councilor of Delhi that the brutal killings in Punjab and Haryana are "the handiwork of Pakistani agents" reported in the Hindustan Times of 9 July. The Embassy strongly protests against this vicious, slanderous and utterly false statement by a leading member of the ruling party in India, who occupies high office.

The Embassy also takes this opportunity of reiterating that the Pakistan Government condemns terrorism in all its forms. It hopes that countries of South Asia will cooperate with each other, bilaterally and regionally, to wipe out this menace.

It is a matter to be deeply deplored that leading figured should be making such irresponsible and inflammatory statements on events which have already caused such a strong reaction in India. The Embassy hopes that the esteemed Ministry will take appropriate steps to ensure that such statements are not made.

The Embassy of Pakistan avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs the assurances of its highest consideration.

1156. Statement by the Official Spokesperson of the Indian Ministry of External Affair on the reported statement of President Zia-ul-Haq on Kashmir during his visit to Pakistan-Occupied Kashmir.

*President Zia had on July 20 in a speech said that Pakistan would not allow Kashmir issue to be consigned to the cold storage nor would it adopt apologetic attitude on this. He declared that Pakistan would apply all political and peaceful means for securing a peaceful solution of the Kashmir issue in the spirit of the UN resolutions. The meeting was also addressed by 'Azad Kashmir' President Sardar Mohammad Abdul Qaiyum Khan, 'Azad Kashmir' Prime Minister Sardar Sikander Hayat Khan, Federal Minister for Kashmir Affairs Syed Qasim Shah and Speaker of the 'Azad Kashmir' Assembly Sardar Mohammad Ayub Khan. Gen Zia said that Pakistan would continue to raise the issue at all international forums till a peaceful solution was achieved and the whole of Kashmir became a part of Pakistan which both the people of Pakistan and 'Azad Kashmir' had been resolutely demanding for the last 40 years.

Stressing Kashmir's importance for Pakistan, he said that the Quaide Azam had declared more than once that Kashmir was the jugular vein of Pakistan. The people of Pakistan could not remain oblivious of this fact, he said. Both Pakistan and 'Azad Kashmir', he said, were like the heart and soul of the body. Their independence and freedom was interdependent on each other which made it all the more imperative that Kashmir should join Pakistan, he said.

He said that the echo of the voices of the people of Pakistan and 'Azad Kashmir' would not only be heard on both sides of the line of actual control but also throughout the Islamic world. No force or any conspiracy could ever succeed in suppressing the burring passion and sense of sacrifice of the people of Kashmir for their freedom, he said. He said the hearts of the people of Kashmir and Pakistan beat in unison. All the rivers flow from Kashmir into Pakistan. Their economy was interdependent. Both were bound by internal bonds of religion, culture and Islamic brotherhood. The people of Pakistan and Kashmir had liberated area was witness to this, he said. Gen Zia said he could say with confidence that the sacrifices of Mujahideen and their blood would not go in vain and the people of Pakistan and Kashmir would succeed. Gen Zia said in his opinion the world had yet to understand and realize the importance of the stand and point of view of the people of Pakistan and 'Azad Kashmir'. Its importance had neither been fully brought home to the people within Pakistan and 'Azad Kashmir' nor ‘have we succeeded in winning world support’.

He said Kashmir was as important for Pakistan as any other part of the country; defence of both was interlinked. ‘Azad Kashmir' stood like an outer wall of the citadel for the defence of Pakistan. The Quaide Azam had also stressed on many occasions that Kashmir was the life vein of Pakistan without no human body could survive. Both were like heart and soul for each other. The people of Kashmir had already expressed their will in the 'Ithq-e-Pakistan' Resolution passed in 1947 by which they made it clear that they wanted to join Pakistan. He said this matter had been persisting for 40 years. It would take some time more, “maybe, months or years when it would be solved and this could be in our own life-time”, he added.
We have seen reports of President Zia's speech wherein he described Kashmir as "an integral of Pakistan" and spoke in a manner calculated to arouse passions on this issue. It is possible that domestic compulsions may have inspired President in making such a statement. He cannot, however, be unmindful of India's well known and legally irrefutable position that the whole of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India and that the only issue which remains to be resolved is that of vacation by Pakistan of its illegal occupation of POK. President Zia cannot also wish away the fact that both countries are committed to resolve this issue in accordance with the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement. President Zia has himself renewed Pakistan's commitment in this regard during his visit to New Delhi on December 17, 1985 when he had stated that this question would be resolved in accordance with the Simla Agreement and at an appropriate time.

New Delhi, August 12, 1987
Embassy of Pakistan
New Delhi

2 August, 1987

The Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs and has the honour to convey the following message from His Excellency the Prime Minister of Pakistan to His Excellency the Prime Minister of India:

BEGIN:
I WAS DISTRESSED TO LEARN OF THE INCIDENT* AT COLOMBO. SUCH REPREHENSIBLE ACTS OF VIOLENCE MUST BE CONDEMNED. Letter from Consulate General of India in Karachi to the Ministry of External Affairs regarding Pakistan’s reaction to the India-Sri Lanka Agreement.

Consulate General of India
India House, 3 Fatima Jinnah Road
Karachi

No. KAR/DCG/103/2/87 August 13, 1987

Dear Shri Parthasarathy,

We have been covering in our press telexes media reactions to the Indo-Sri Lanka Agreement. As you would have noted, the Agreement and its aftermath have received extensive and prominent coverage in the Pakistani press.

2. Enclosed here with is a sample cross-section of editorials and articles, as well as political cartoons, drawn from the Pakistani print media, both English and Urdu. (not reproduced here) The first clipping, depicting a cartoon which appeared in THE NATION of 10-8-87, seems to sum up the general assessment here, namely that India has, to all intents and purposes, gobbled up Sri Lanka, with President Jawawardene offering the prey on the proverbial platter!

3. Pakistanis have received the Agreement with a sense of distaste, foreboding and fear. Clearly, they do not like the direction in which events have evolved. Perhaps this is an indication of chafing at the fact that India has scored a major political and diplomatic success. However, most observers sincerely feel that Sri Lanka’s sovereignty has been brazenly trampled upon. They see India’s action to be evidence of its hegemonistic designs in the region; of its determination even to intervene directly, if necessary in the internal affairs of neighbouring states when it perceives its own interests to be at stake. Sri Lanka has reminded Pakistanis about Hyderabad, Junagadh, Goa and Sikkim.

4. The Pakistani psyche appears to have been particularly rattled by the induction of Indian troops into Sri Lanka; this it perceives to be an ominous precedent for the region as a whole. Press reports here have given widely varying figure of the number of Indian troops in Sri Lanka; some have put this as high as 30,000!

5. It is worth pointing out that, in the immediate wake of the singing of the Agreement, the Pakistani press rather gleefully projected the strong adverse reaction among right wing Sinhala quarters, using this development as well as the delay in the surrender of arms by LTTE as indications of the Agreement going off the rails even before the ink was dry on it. Peculiarly though, the PAKISTAN TIMES (which, as you know, is an official mouthpiece), in its editorial of 31-7-87, made an unusually positive projection of the Accord. Since then, however, there has been grudging acceptance of the fact that the Accord constitutes the only way out of the impasse and that both countries may well display the necessary political resolve to make it stick. The editorial which appeared in DAWN of 9-8-1987, is clearly more objective, although the newspaper’s sister eveninger, STAR, had brought out a far more vituperative piece only five days earlier. M.H. Askari’s piece in DAWN of 11-8-1987 is also a reasonably well argued one. Hamid Kizilbash’s article in THE MUSLIM of 10-8-1987, however, while acknowledging the significance of the Accord, takes the line that the Agreement is all very well, expect for the fact that Indian forces are now in Sri Lanka; a SAARC role in the whole affairs, including a SAARC military contingent, would have been far more preferable!
6. Clippings are enclosed. CG is separately sending a related dispatch on his conversations on the subject with some prominent Pakistanis.

Your sincerely,

(Amitav Banerji)

1159. Response of Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi to questions relating to Pakistan interference in Punjab by training and arming Extremists: BBC Phone in interview.

New Delhi, August, 16, 1987.

Prime Minister, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, accused Pakistan of direct interference in Punjab by training and arming extremists. Answering questions on the British Broadcasting Corporation’s worldwide 45-minute phone-in interview, Mr. Gandhi said he would not say whether the Pakistan Government was solely responsible for certain individuals there for encouraging the extremists.

Replying to a questioner from Medina in Saudi Arabia Mr. Gandhi said: "It is very difficult to say if the Pakistan Government is directly involved, but we have seized a weapon from a terrorist bearing Pakistani marking."

When the BBC’s New Delhi correspondent, Mark Tully, who was coordinating the interview in London, intervened to ask if Mr. Gandhi had only one instance of Pakistani involvement, the Prime Minister replied; "I am just citing an example." Mr. Gandhi said there were fresh instances of the extremists crossing the border from Pakistan into India. He said India was facing some other problems, like smuggling of drugs from across the border. India, he said, had taken up this question with the Pakistan government, but "we have not really made much headway".

Dear Prime Minister,

Thank you for your warm message of sympathy after the Colombo airport incident.

I hope that the Agreement concluded between Sri Lanka and India will restore peace and harmony after the years of ethnic strife which have plagued Sri Lanka. It meets the legitimate aspirations of the Tamils while strengthening the unity and integrity of Sri Lanka. It also strengthens the Non-aligned Movement. The attempt to harm me and the subsequent terrorist attack on President Jayewardene and his colleagues have only strengthened our mutual resolve to continue on the path chosen by us.

Yours sincerely,

sd/- Rajiv Gandhi

His Excellency
Mr. Mohammad Khan Junejo
Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan
Islamabad.

Dear Mr. President,

I was deeply touched by your warm message immediately after the Colombo incident. I am grateful for your concern and value your good wishes.

The agreement between India and Sri Lanka provides a unique framework for ending the ethnic strife in Sri Lanka while strengthening the unity and integrity of that beautiful country. We were gratified by the spontaneous endorsement of this agreement by the vast majority of countries.

The attempt to harm me and the dastardly terrorist attack on President Jayewardene and his colleagues have strengthened our mutual conviction that we are on the right path.

My wife joins me in sending greetings and good wishes to you and Begum Zia.

Yours sincerely,

Sd/-

His Excellency Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq
President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan

Meeting between Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo and Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi on the sidelines of the SAARC Summit.

Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo and Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi discussed on November 4 a wide range of bilateral matters and agreed to accelerate the dialogue on the outstanding issues.

[During their half-hour meeting, the two Prime Ministers were assisted by their Ministers of State for Foreign Affairs.]

A spokesman of the Pakistani delegation described the meeting as “substantive and useful”.

The two Prime Ministers decided to hold an early meeting of the Secretaries for Economic Affairs of the two countries to discuss promotion of economic cooperation and increasing trade. This meeting was originally scheduled for August last.

The Prime Ministers also agreed to hold an early meeting of the Secretaries for Interior and Home Affairs for taking suitable measures to prevent the illegal crossing of borders by unauthorized persons.

The Defence Secretaries of the two countries were also asked to hold their third meeting to discuss the Siachen Glacier issue. The Defence Secretaries had earlier discussed the same issue. Their first meeting took place after the SAARC summit at Dhaka in 1985.

Similarly, the Surveyors General of the two countries would also meet to demarcate the international boundaries at the Sir Creek close to the Rann of Kutch, the spokesman said.

The settlement of boundaries at Sir Creek will enable both the countries, to help demarcate the maritime boundaries between them. It would also help demarcate Pakistan’s 200-mile exclusive economic zone, he added.

As a result of the dispute over maritime boundaries, several fishing vessels were seized by the law-enforcing agencies of the two countries in recent months. The spokesman said that the maritime boundaries would be settled in accordance with the international laws covering the sea lanes.

The Prime Ministers also agreed to hold the meeting of the joint commission sometime in the first quarter of the next year in Islamabad. It would be the third meeting of the joint commission, he added.

The Prime Ministers decided that the Foreign Secretaries of the two countries meet to discuss the issue of “common concern.”

Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo said that he had positive and meaningful talks with the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, and the leaders had agreed to accelerate the pace for finding peaceful solution to the outstanding problems between the two countries, including the Siachen issue.

He said this at a press conference on November 7 on his return to the capital after attending the SAARC summit at Kathmandu.

He said that during his meeting with the Indian Prime Minister he had identified the problems confronting the two countries.

Mr. Junejo said Pakistan’s stand on the issues was based on principles and he tried to impress upon Mr. Gandhi the need to sort out the issues at the government level through discussions.

Pakistan’s Non-Aggression Pact Offer

While replying to a question, he said that he had detailed discussions with Mr. Gandhi and he drew his attention to the pending non-aggression agreement. Mr. Rajiv promised to examine Pakistan’s draft and to finalize it.

Mr. Junejo was asked that whenever he met Mr. Gandhi he gave the impression that he was satisfied and convinced, but unfortunately soon afterwards the situation became otherwise, and there was a state of confrontation.

He was also asked that after last year’s “Brass tacks” exercise on Pakistan’s border, the Indians were carrying out another exercise known as “Fly-bird”. India had also attacked in Siachen. As such, how long would this situation continue? Mr. Junejo replied that as far as Siachen was concerned, during his talks with Mr. Gandhi he informed him that India had taken unilateral action and had used its army in the area. As a result, Pakistan had to take remedial measure to meet the situation. He said the two Defence Secretaries will meet in the near future to decide the issue.

Pakistan Nuclear Policy Peaceful

Mr. Junejo further said that during his talks he apprised his Indian counterpart that Pakistan was pursuing a peaceful nuclear policy and had no intentions to make nuclear weapons. He said that time and again he had reiterated Pakistan’s nuclear policy. On many occasions, he had impressed upon the Indian leaders the need to sign a non-proliferation treaty at the bilateral level or at the regional basis or at the level of regional countries.

Mr. Junejo said that during his address at the United Nations he put forward similar proposals and was duly convinced that there should be a collective agreement on this issue, which should be followed and respected by all the countries.

On Reported Challenge by Rajiv Gandhi

When reminded that while he had said in Kuala Lumpur that he had cordial talks with Mr. Gandhi, there were reports quoting the Indian Prime Minister as saying, “You will be taught a lesson if you indulge in military action again in Siachen, Mr. Junejo refuted this report.

Mr. Junejo also said, that while Siachen was generally discussed, the Kashmir dispute did not come up.

Mr. Junejo said during his talks with Mr. Gandhi, both the leaders agreed that firm solutions must be found of the Siachen and border area problem. He said that the two leaders also agreed that besides the meeting at the Defence Secretaries and Foreign Secretaries level, a joint commission meeting will also be held in the first quarter of the next year.
Note from Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi transmitting a message from Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq.

New Delhi, February 27, 1988.

Embassy of Pakistan
New Delhi

27 February 1988

Excellency,

I am directed to convey the following message to Your Excellency from the President of Pakistan, General Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq:

Begins:

Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

I am sincerely grateful for your telephone call on 25 February and the invitation you kindly extended to me to visit New Delhi.

As Your Excellency is aware, I have always attached great importance to discussions and dialogue with your country. As on previous occasions, I would have welcomed the opportunity to avail of your invitation. But, at present, we are in the midst of a great political activity inside Pakistan. The Afghanistan issue has taken an important turn attracting the attention of our people who are engaged in an intense national discourse such as has never been experienced in the past. Under these circumstances, Your Excellency will appreciate that it will be extremely difficult for me to leave the country.

However, in view of the importance of the Afghanistan situation for our region, the Prime Minister and myself would be very happy to have the opportunity to exchange views with Your Excellency and to benefit from your assessment of the fast developing situation. I, therefore, renew our long standing invitation to you for a visit to Pakistan.

In case Your Excellency is unable to come to Islamabad, we shall be glad to receive your Emissary at any level you may consider appropriate. I have already consulted the Government of Pakistan who will cordially welcome and extend every cooperation to the Emissary designated by you. A mutually convenient time for the visit can be finalized through our Ambassador. He will also inform your Foreign Office about some details in this regard which I have not included in this message. I look forward to hearing from you soon.
With profound regards,

Yours sincerely,

General Mohamad Zia-Ul-Haq
President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan

Ends:

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Humayun Khan)

His Excellency
Mr. Rajiv Gandhi,
Prime Minister of India, New Delhi.

1165. CONFIDENTIAL

Letter from the Embassy of India in Pakistan to the Ministry of External Affairs regarding Pakistan’s attitude to peace efforts in Afghanistan.

Islamabad, March 6, 1988.

Embassy of India
482-F Sector G-6/4
Islamabad

No. ISL/103/2/88 March 6, 1988.

My dear Satish,

By the last bag, I have written sketching the context in which we need to evaluate the Pakistani acerbic and somewhat incomprehensible reaction to our proposal to send a Special Envoy for discussions on Afghanistan. It is now clear that part of the reason for the Government of Pakistan’s pique at our announcement came from the perceived slight, especially within the PML, but by no means confined to it, that our PM had chosen to speak to President Zia. Prime Minister Junejo’s reaction, as well as the ruling party’s was therefore swift and in unison. Even more surprising was the widespread harmony of views between the Opposition outside the Parliament and Mr. Junejo’s party that our Special Envoy should not be entertained at any cost at this stage.
2. There is a continuity in the Pak hostility to India’s engagement in seeking the solution of the Afghan problem. It is slowly being acknowledged that our decision to arrange for the Minister of State for External Affairs, Shri K. Natwar Singh and ex-King Zahir Shah in Rome, and dispatching Shri G.P. Arora, Secretary (Information), to Kabul, could not have been isolated actions. The Foreign Office here has all along been aware of our acting as an honest broker between Washington and Moscow on the Afghan question. However, Pakistani journalist and observers are just beginning to realize the nature and extent of our limited but important role.

3. This recognition of quiet Indian diplomacy had served to inflame Pakistani complexes. There is an inescapable feeling that just as the Soviet and Americans were quietly reaching accommodation on early and rapid Soviet troop withdrawals, while ignoring the question of an interim Government before the agreement come into effect, we seems to be closer to these high level discussions than even Pakistani diplomats were allowed to be.

4. In several ways, the present Pakistani predicament is the result of serious communications and policy failures.

5. First, it is now evident that Gen. Zia’s personalized management style of the Afghanistan questions led to an increasing divergence between his perception of self interest and national interests and that of the civilian arm of the present regime. This latter, namely PML under Prime Minister Junejo, has found common cause with other political parties within the Pakistani Parliament and outside. A situation has been reached where Gen. Zia’s time tested backers such as the Americans, Saudis and the Chinese, have plumped for early withdrawals without bothering about the demands of the Peshawar based Mujahideen groups, nor Gen Zia’s rationale for the interim government. Viewed in the systemic context, there is thus a clear communications and control failure between Gen. Zia and his small coterie on the one hand, and the rest of the political leadership in Pakistan.

6. Secondly, it seems reasonable to surmise that after the Gorbachev-Reagan Summit in Washington last November, the US Administration defined American self-interest in terms which were no more identical with Pakistan’s. Somewhere between the US State Department and the Pak Foreign Office, and almost certainly also between the latter and Junejo’s civilian government and the opposition, communications appear to have failed. Thus we have different interested parties and vested interest groups arguing at cross purposes today about the priorities that the Geneva agreements must address.

7. Thirdly, in spite of Foreign Secretary Sattar’s many voyages, as well as the journeys by the Pak President, Prime Minister, MOS Zain Noorani and assorted Special Envoys from time to time, in the past few months Pakistan either failed to define its stand on the need for an interim government before the withdrawals, or to win wide-based international support that it assumed exist because of the pattern of the UN vote on Afghanistan.

8. Finally, there is the serious management failure in defining the mutual interests and objectives to the Peshawar based Mujahidden groups and other expatriate Afghan parties or notable such as the group in Iran, and former ex-King Zahir Shah.

9. it is perhaps possible to argue that the diplomatic onslaught in the post-November period overwhelmed Pakistan’s diplomatic resources, and found its decision making capabilities wanting. One upshot of this failure was inevitably a certain realignment in the terms of the Zia-Junejo partnership and a redefinition by Junejo and his men of their political self-interests in the post Afghan phase of Pak politics. Several other players in the game must make the political equations in Pakistan more complex in the days ahead to the 1990 elections.
Some of these factors worth watching are:-

i) Gen. Zia’s prosonall authority is almost certain to suffer in the post Geneva phase. Once Pakistan ceases to be the Frontline State, the rationale for the army’s dominant position in Pak politics, the recent allocations in the Pak national budget on account of defence to the neglect of development and capital formation, and the international support, will be in all probability attenuated significantly. This cannot but seriously erode Gen. Zia’s power base, and call into question the future constitutional propriety of his present status as the President and propriety of his present status as the President and Chief of Army Staff.

ii) The greening of Prime Minister Junejo might now be considered to be over. Coming out of the woods, Junejo must now make some stark choices. To establish his credibility before the elections scheduled in 1990, he must appear to be a distinct political power with party, constituency and programme. No more can he hope to survive as the court favourite.

iii) The Zia-Junejo equation had already shown signs of a new dynamic, witness Zia’s attempts to control PML and above all political organizations in Punjab through Chief Minister Nawaz Sharif, and Junejo’s demands for greater control of the decision making spheres. Crude as the manoeuvre is, the present All Parties meet in Rawalpindi for consultations on the Afghan question, called by Junejo, cannot but re-design the relationship between Zia and the army on the one hand, and the political parties on the other. The latter are bound to perceive common interest in combating the vestiges of the Martial Law and its more crude manifestations such as the Eighth Amendment, political prisoners and the Press and Publications Ordinance. It cannot be a co-incidence that these three themes found repeated emphasis in the remarks made by the Opposition leaders in the Rawalpindi moot. Apart from the initiative to convene the meeting, which was clearly his own, Junejo also successfully insisted on excluding both the President and other Generals from GHQ – something he could not earlier achieve when he convened a joint session of the Parliament to discuss Afghanistan on February 28.

iv) A shift in the Western perspective on Pakistan-Afghanistan will follow the Afghan settlement. Apart from reducing Pakistan’s relevance – though Pakistan will still retain its significance for other strategic considerations such as the Gulf War – the Western effort will now probably focus on re-construction in Afghanistan. Conditional as this is on the containment of conflict among the Mujahideen and PDPA, it is unlikely that the Western countries including the United States will abstain from a major re-construction effort in Afghanistan. While it has been tempting to compare the Afghan conflict with the Indo-China war in the pre-1973 period, there are several obvious reasons which argue for a Western involvement, and not abstention, which we have witnessed thus far on the part of the United States in Vietnam.

v) This has important implications for our policy:

a) In anticipating altered perspectives and policy goals of the United States and the West, the Arab countries, Iran and the Soviet Union, we shall undoubtedly reassess our future role in Afghanistan. It is time to take out from shelf the development projects which we were considering in the pre-1979 era under ITEC, while keeping in view the changed priorities after the civil war.

b) In India-Pakistan relations, we ought to review the prospects for political change in Pakistan and their impact on our policy and assessments. We shall in effect be preparing for a post-Zia phase, and must visualize a set of possible scenarios. Specifically we cannot any more afford to evade the question of how we must manage our relations, and shape negotiating strategies, with a PML government allowed more free reign under a Prime Minister moving out from under the shadow of a father figure President. Unfortunately, in retrospect we appear not to have paid sufficient attention to both Junejo and his ruling Muslim League, predating our policy approach on the Zia vs. Benazir options alone. (I hope to elaborate this in a separate letter.)

vi) In regard to the situation in Pakistan, a fresh look must be had at the political, economic and ethnic consequence which will follow the return of the Afghan refugees. Motives of Governments, whether as aggregates of persons in power or the people organized in interest groups in power are rarely divorced from self-interest. Just as philanthropy under the Islamic injunctions was the façade for Zia’s aid oriented policies, both the leadership and the people of Pakistan are likely to be swayed by other sets of self-interests when the refugees start migrating back to Afghanistan. We, with our memories still fresh of the Partition cannot forget the greed and personal gain which influenced otherwise good neighbours once the process of Hindu-Muslim migration began. The same phenomenon is likely to occur in NWFP and Baluchistan. Will this spawn ethnic tensions and lead to a collapse of law and order? Whether the Durand Line is recognized as the Pak-Afghan boundary in Geneva agreements, the ethnic aspect so peculiar to the Pashtoon tribes on both sides will play a major role in future years.

I have digressed somewhat in the hope of provoking a debate.

Your sincerely

(A.B. Patwardhan)

Shri Satish Chandra,
Joint Secretary (AP),
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.

Sir, coming to South Asia, we have, on a number of occasions, reiterated our commitment to friendship with cordial and cooperative relations with Pakistan. We entertain the warmest sentiments for the people of Pakistan with whom we share much in common, a language, music and literature. We have a common history. There is no ill-will towards the people of Pakistan. We wish them well. And therefore we greatly welcome any exchange at the people’s level—visitors, tourists, students, journalists, trade unionists, women’s groups—at every level. We would like to see much more exchange. We seek interchange with the new generation who has been born and who has grown up as Pakistanis but whom Pakistan policies have kept distanced from the personal knowledge of India. Peace between Pakistan and India is peace between the peoples. To promote such contacts and build cordiality in spirit, in the Simla spirit, we have proposed a number of steps. I do not want to give an exhaustive list but I would like to read out some. We proposed a treaty of peace and friendship. We proposed an agreement for non-attack on nuclear facilities. We have proposed discussions on new ground rules on the border. We proposed an MOU on hijacking. We proposed an MOU on air space violations by military aircraft. We proposed expansion of private trade. We have proposed a move to non-discriminatory regime and the MNF treatment. Indo-Pakistan joint ventures have been proposed—exchanges of writers, of intellectuals, troupes, films, drama, music, dances. We have proposed the exchange of books, periodicals and newspapers. We have proposed many other confidence building and risk reduction measures as mutually agreed. We have proposed the easing of travel restrictions. We have proposed cooperation on drug trafficking and terrorism. Unfortunately, we are stuck with very unsatisfactory response from the Pakistan side. On the other hand, Pakistan forestalls people to people programmes. They pursue what is very obviously a nuclear weapons programme. They assume hostile postures in areas such as Siachen and they allow their territory to be used for the support, sustenance and sanctuary of terrorist and separatists. We have informed the Pakistan Government that our Home Secretaries – the Home Secretary of Pakistan and the Home Secretary of India must meet to discuss the sudden increase of terrorism on our borders. We must have good communications between our two countries at various levels. On the military side, we already have a hotline. Perhaps a hotline is needed between the Home Secretaries also to see that any tensions that build up can be dissipated and reduced as soon as possible or immediately.

We had one such hotline between the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan and Foreign Secretary of India. But at their request it has been dismantled. We would like to have it restored and put back so that tensions, if they build up, can be reduced quickly. I hope that we can get on to quickly genuine and sincere normalization of our relations. A prosperous, stable Pakistan with its independence, sovereignty and integrity fully assured, is in India's national interest and we would like to see a Pakistan like that.

No. POL. I/76/88 21 March, 1988

The Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs and has the honour to state that in a news-item, carried by The Hindu of 21 March, 1988, a remark about Pakistan's alleged involvement in Punjab extremism in attributed to the Honourable Mr. Balram Jakhar Speaker of the Lok Sabha. The items states that the hon'ble Speaker in his address to a gathering in Roop Nagar, on 19 March, 1988 criticised Punjab extremists for killing innocent people at the "instigation of Pakistan". The news-item is enclosed for information.

The Embassy finds it appropriate to reiterate here that the Government of Pakistan strictly adheres to the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of other countries and would like to refute any allegation to the contrary. As the above-mentioned remark remains unconfirmed the Embassy would be grateful if the esteemed Ministry could kindly let it know as to what the hon'ble actually said in his speech at Roop Nagar.

There were similar statements from other ministers and leaders of India on Pakistan's instigation to the Punjab terrorists/extremists and the Pakistan Embassy continued to make similar demarches to the Ministry of External Affairs.
The Embassy avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry the assurances of its highest consideration.

4th April, 1988

My dear Rajeev jee,

As an unexpected fall out of your breakfast meeting regarding the Punjab, Ambassador Hamyun Khan came to meet me on the 31st of March.

The official spokesman's press briefing had caused him "deep anxiety" particularly because of the reported "consensus" in the meeting re: the Pakistan role in the Punjab imbroglio.

Obviously he was assessing the prospects of any new dimension in Indo-Pak relationship that may strain the existing low voltage cordiality between the two governments.

I told him that no discussion regarding the Punjab problem could overlook the increased flow of arms from across the border. Naturally we all felt concerned and upset by enhanced lethality of the terrorists' weapons. I plainly told him that mere assurances and soft words carried little credibility and it was high time the Pakistani administration took effective steps to stem the flow.

He delved at length how free availability of arms was upsetting even his own country's stability. The Mujahadeen-smuggler nexus was playing havoc with the internal and external policies of Pakistan. All the same he was keen to convey his government's intention to contain the mischief though its effective stoppage required a coordinated action plan on both sides of the border. He cited the instance when a timely signal from Indian side had helped in frustrating Jasbir Singh Rode's effort to deplane at Karachi.

According to him he had been trying to arrange a meeting between the two Home Secretaries but every time he was given a cold douche by the Indian side. He still felt that such a meeting could serve a useful purpose.

Shri Girilal Jain's article of the 30th March had added to his anxiety and he had perceived its linkage with the meeting. He apprehended that such bellicose writings might revive the era of polemics on both sides straining the friendly relationships even on the popular levels.

For a while we talked about the Afghan situation as well. Apart from its other aspects he drew my attention to a recent statement by the Afghan Foreign Minister saying that India had asked them to refrain from finalization of any boundary dispute with Pakistan since it involved India's interests too. This, he felt had caused misgivings regarding the role India seeks to play in this complex tangle.

With personal regards,

Yours sincerely,

Dear Shri Gujral,

Thank you for your letter of 4th April regarding your meeting with Ambassador Hamayun Khan on 31st March.

We would like to improve our relations with Pakistan and have taken various initiatives towards this end. Unfortunately, the Government of Pakistan has not responded to many of these initiatives. You have rightly stressed the concern shared by all Indian at Pakistan’s role in aiding and abetting terrorism in the Punjab. We have suggested an early meeting between the Home Secretaries of the two countries. But verbal assurances by Pakistan would need to be matched by concrete actions.

Our efforts to facilitate a solution on Afghanistan have been appreciated by the Soviet Union, the United States and the Afghan Government. It is primarily Pakistan which has shown inexplicable hesitation in seeing how we can cooperate to bring peace and stability to our region prior to and after the signing of the Geneva agreements.

Yours sincerely,

1169. Note from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan Embassy in India.

New Delhi, April 13, 1988.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and has the honour to refer to their Notes Verbal No. POL/I/76/88 Dated 21 March, 1988 and 24 March, 1988.

The Ministry has noted the assertions made by the esteemed Embassy that there is “no Justifiable reason to believe that the Government of Pakistan would wish to encourage extremism in Punjab”, that “Pakistan does not wish to see the unity of India threatened from any quarter and that “Pakistan strictly adheres to the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of other countries”. It is unfortunate that, notwithstanding such assurances and denials made by the Government of Pakistan from time to time, Pakistan has continued to provide encouragement and assistance to extremist activities directed against India. Such assistance has taken a variety of forms, including the continued supply of arms, the setting up to training camps, providing a safe refuge for Sikh extremist, hostile propaganda designed to incite anti-Indian secessionist feelings etc. There is incontrovertible evidence about Pakistan’s continued complicity in subversive anti-Indian activities which belies its protestations of wanting to improve relations with this country. Pakistan’s assistance to terrorist and secessionist elements in India is in clear violation of its commitments under the Simla Agreement and is inevitably a stumbling block in the process of normalisation of relations between the two countries. It is hoped that Pakistan will fulfill its assurances given on this issue, including at the highest level, and desist from aiding and abetting terrorist activities directed against India.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

New Delhi, April 15, 1988.

AIDE MEMOIRE

1. Pakistan's involvement with extremist activities directed against India continues to be a major irritant in Indo-Pak relations. India's serious concern in this matter has been conveyed to Pakistan on several occasions. After the meeting between the Indian Home Secretary and the Interior Secretary of Pakistan in December 1986, there was much hope that such Pakistani activities would cease. Unfortunately, these expectations have been belied. Despite assurances and denials to the contrary, there is incontrovertible evidence that Pakistan continues to aid and abet extremist activities directed against India.

2. As indicated on several earlier occasions, Pakistan's involvement with anti-Indian secessionist activities broadly extends to:

   — Permitting its territory as sanctuary for extremist Sikh elements and a base for training and indoctrination;
— Supply of arms and ammunition to Sikh secessionists;
— Facilitating visits of extremists from abroad;
— Hostile propaganda designed to inflame anti-Indian secessionist sentiments;
— Use of Indian Jathas for instigating secessionist sentiments.

3. Such activities continue unabated even after the meeting of the Home Secretaries held in December 1986.

4. Pakistan has for long given sanctuary to hard core terrorists like Bhai Kanwar Singh and Bhai Amrik Singh of the Akal Federation, Gurjit Singh of the All-India Sikh Students Federation (AISSF), Sukhdev Singh Babbar and Wadhwa Singh of Babbar Khalsa and provided them with every opportunity to address, motivate and participate in the training of Sikh youths.

5. Pakistan's attention was invited to the activities of these extremists and others such as Atinder Pal Singh (AISSF) Sukhvinder Singh and Dhana Singh during the Home Secretary's visit to Pakistan in December 1986 with the request that they be returned to India. Unfortunately, to date no action has been taken on this request and these extremists continue to enjoy the hospitality and support of the Government of Pakistan.

6. Government of Pakistan's sympathy for secessionist activities directed against India has encouraged secessionist elements from India including Labh Singh, self-styled 'General' of the 'Khalistan Commando Force; Gurbachan Singh Manochhal, Wassan Singh Jaffarwal and Avtar Singh Brahma to cross the Indo-Pak border frequently. It is known that Gurbachan Singh Manochhal and Wassan Singh, who are members of the Panthic Committee, visited Pakistan in November and June 1987 and again in January 1988 to establish contacts with extremists from abroad and plan strategy for future action.

7. Under the aegis of Pakistan intelligence authorities, in February 1988, Gurjit Singh (AISSF-G), Wassan Singh, Gurbachan Singh Manochhal (Members, Panthic Committee), Wadhwa Singh (Babbar Khalsa), Avtar Singh Brahma('Khalistan Liberation Force) Gurnam Singh ('Khalistan Commando Force) congregated in Pakistan for discussions about formation of a joint command of different militant organisations to bring about effective liaison and coordination. Wassan Singh was appointed Chief of this joint command. Along with Wadhaw Singh, he was assigned the task of procuring weapons and Gurnam singh was to arrange smuggling of these weapons to India. Gurjit Singh was required to consult other activists and identify 'anti-Panthic targets' whereas Manochhal and Brahma were to implement the Plans of violence.
Training of Extremists

8. There is ample evidence regarding the existence of training and indoctrination centres for Sikh extremists which have been established by the Government of Pakistan. These are usually set up on short duration basis to avoid detection. The training imparted included sabotage techniques, subversive operations, practice in handling weapons etc. Apart from such training, Pakistan Intelligence also indoctrinates Sikh youth to kill Hindus, police officers, Congress leaders and prominent personalities opposed to secessionists. It is well known that the 300 or 400 Sikh youth who had crossed over into Pakistan in 1984-1985 were kept subsequently at Faislabad jail where they received training. They were infiltrated back into India by the Pakistan Rangers by the end of 1987 in small batches, The Punjab Roadways conductor Sarabjit Singh who connived with terrorists in the barbaric killing of bus passengers in Punjab in August 1987 was amongst the misguided youth at Faislabad Jail and the evidence provided by him corroborates the foregoing.

9. As indicated earlier, there is definitive evidence of Pakistan’s involvement in providing arms and ammunition to Sikh extremists, both directly and by facilitating the functioning of smuggling conduits serviced by pro-Khalistanis’ based abroad, Pakistani middlemen and extremists in Punjab.

10. Series of incidents have come to notice where Pakistan Rangers have actively connived in sending Pakistan nationals as couriers with weapons to Indian side for being handed over to the Sikh extremists. To quote a recent instance, on March 18, three Pakistan nationals sneaked into India near BOP Lakha Singhwala (Ferozepur). When challenged by the Indian Border Security Forces, they retreated to the Rangers Post after exchanging fire leaving behind 10 AK-47 rifles.

11. Pakistan has been providing a steady supply of weapons to the various terrorist outfits in Punjab and has been doing it in a manner that they are equipped to deal effectively with the counter terrorist operations of the security forces. For this purpose, there has been a progressive up-gradation in the weapon holdings of the main terrorist groups in Punjab, namely, the ‘Khalistan Commando Force’, the ‘Khalistan Liberation Force’ ‘Bhindranwale Tiger Force of Khalistan’ and ‘Babbar Khalsa’, with the acquisition of sophisticated weapons like the AK-47 Chinese assault rifles, American Armalite rifles and Rocket Launchers, through the active assistance of Pakistan.

12. Militant Sikh organisations are known to shop for arms in the arms bazar of the NWFP. The London Observer in a despatch from Miran Shah, datelined November 1987, corroborated that shopkeepers in NWFP have supplied Sikh militants with arms including Kalashnikovs rocket launchers, mines and grenades.
13. Canadian militants apprehended in India, such as Pushpinder Singh Sachdeva, Kulwinder Singh Malhi and Daljit Singh Sekhon revealed details of purchase and collection of arms in Pakistan by Sikh activists and how they are smuggled across the border. Balbir Singh Brar of the ISYF, based in Canada, is known to make frequent trips to Pakistan as a courier for ISYF leaders. We have evidence of two trips having been made in January and May 1987. Wassan Singh of the Panthic Committee is known to have returned from Pakistan in 1987 with purchase of weapons worth Rs.2 crores. Gurjit Singh, Convener AISSF, is known to have procured from Pakistan sophisticated weapons worth Rs. 2 crores. Gurjit Singh, Convener AISSF, is known to have procured from Pakistan sophisticated weapons including sub machine guns. The deal was financed out of Rs. 5.7 crores looted by the 'Khalistan Commoando Force' from a Bank in Ludhiana on February 12, 1987.

14. That money looted in Indian banks often surfaces in Pakistan was established by the arrest of a Pakistani student, Kashif Mahmood, in March 1987 in the US, for attempting to cash stolen Bank of India Visa travellers cheques. He revealed that the travellers cheques were sold to him by advocate Khwaja Ahmed Tariq Rahim who represents the group of Sikhs accused in the assault of Indian diplomats and who in turn received them as fee from Balbir Singh Brar.

Visits of Extremists from Abroad

15. It is regrettable in spite of handing over lists of Sikh extremists who should be denied entry, they continue to be welcomed in Pakistan. Our concerns on this issue have been pointed out on a number of occasions. We would cite our Aides Memoire of 13 November, 1987, 17 February 1988 and 21 March, 1988, which were personally handed over by our Ambassador to the Pakistan Foreign office. Some recent instances of such visits and the dates of the visits of which we have definite information are:

1. Ajaib Singh Basri -November 1987
2. Sewa Singh Lalli -March 1988
5. Lal Singh -January 1988

16. The Globe and Mail of Toronto in an article datelined December 26, 1987 reported the visit of Tajinder Singh Kahloe to Lahore for a "strategy meeting". A Canadian Gurmukhi weekly Ithihas reported the presence in Pakistan on November 26, 1987 of a number of leading Sikh extremist leaders including Darshan Singh Saini and Kahloe whose names figure in the list which was handed over to the Pakistan Government for exclusion from entry into Pakistan. Ganga Singh Dhillon and Joginder Singh Atwal are known to have been in Pakistan in November/December 1987. Ganga Singh Dhillon visited Pakistan again in March 1988.

17. 5 of the 7 Canadian Sikhs who were detained for assaults on Indian diplomats, and who had been staying in the Dera Sahib Gurudwara since November 1985, have been allowed to escape. Of those remaining Satinder Pal Singh, President ISYF, under the ruse of being technically detained in the Gurudwara, is in reality running a 'forward post' of Canadian Sikh extremists in Pakistan, liaising with Sikhs crossing over from India and has emerged as an important link in the smuggling of arms into India.

Hostile Propaganda

18. The Pakistan media gives wide coverage to inflammatory statements by Sikh extremist leaders and sensationalizes with mischievous intent, alleged atrocities on the minority communities in India.

19. The Nawai Waqt and Jang of April 20, 1987 carried statements by Sardar Gurmej Singh, the so-called 'Prime Minister in exile of 'Khalistan' and Jagjit Singh Chauhan during which allegations were made of Indian atrocities on the Sikh community and a fervent appeal was made for the establishment of 'Khalistan'.

20. Chanan Singh Chan, self-proclaimed 'foreign minister' of 'Khalistan' was reported in the Pakistani press in August 1987 as having addressed a public meeting in Kasur during which he made several provocative statements against India and said that the Pakistan Government had promised to give him Pakistani citizenship.

21. More recently the Nation on February 10, 1988, carried an interview with G.S.Grewal, member, Governing Committee of the World Sikh Organization, during which he spoke of the inevitability of 'Khalistan'. Pakistani diplomats in the UK, Canada and the USA are known to maintain close links with pro-'Khalistan' leaders and editors of publications which propound the cause of the Sikh secessionist movement.

Cases of Jathas fanning Secessionist Sentiments

22. India's concern regarding the visits by Sikh jathas being used for propagandist and anti-Indian activities by foreign based pro-'Khalistan' Sikhs, has been voiced time and again to Pakistan.
23. During the Home Secretary’s visit, India had requested the Government of Pakistan to ensure that the visits of Indian pilgrims were not used for encouraging secessionist sentiments. Requests had also been made that no extremist elements be allowed to enter Gurudwaras. Such pleas have fallen on deaf ears.

24. It has been our experience that foreign-based extremist Sikhs are given a free hand during the visits by Indian jathas to indulge in subversive activities and instigate members of Indian jathas to raise demands for ‘Khalistan’, kill Indian leaders, including the Prime Minister, and indulge in provocative and vituperative propaganda against the Government and people of India. In April 1987, the India CDA was assaulted by Canadian Sikhs while Pakistani officials looked on. Again, during Guruparab in November 1987, when a large number of Sikhs had congregated at Nankana Sahib, militants took over the public address system for 3-4 hours during which they threatened and abused Indian leaders and the Indian people in the most vicious manner. Pakistan intelligence and Auqaf officials were seen actively mingling with the Sikh militants. The occasion was also used to arrange meetings between members of the Panthic Committee and extremist leaders from USA, Canada and the UK.

25. During the Home Secretaries’ meeting, the Indian side had suggested several measures which could be undertaken as a concrete manifestation of Pakistan’s resolve to distance itself from extremist activities directed against India. It is regrettable that not a single one of these steps has so far been taken by Pakistan. Indeed, on the contrary, there is mounting evidence of the active support of Pakistani authorities to extremist elements. As an example, it may be mentioned that when on the night of 5/6 July 1987, the BSF engaged 5 intruders from Pakistan in the area of Border Post(BOP) Udhar Dhariwal opposite Border pillar (BP) No. 97, the Pakistan Rangers fired upon the BSF. Similarly, on 5 different occasions between 7 -- 12 April 1988, BSF ambush parties engaged in encounters with armed extremists trying to enter India from Pakistan. These incidents took place in the vicinity of Indian BOP Ratoke opposite Pakistan BOP Shjra, Indian BOP DS Pura opposite Pakistan BOP Gill, Indian BOP Harbhajan opposite Pakistan BOP Balanwala, Indian BOP Shahpur opposite Pakistan Kot Doeba and Indian BOP Gajjal opposite Pakistan BOP Babboke. The Pakistan BOPs are located quite close to where these incidents occurred and these could not, therefore, have gone unnoticed by the Pakistan Rangers. In all these incidents, the extremists retreated back to Pakistan. Had there been no collusion between the extremists and the Pakistan Rangers, the latter would have definitely enquired about the incidents as normally happens in such cases.

26. Pakistan’s complicity in subversive anti-Indian acts continues and belies all its protestations of wanting to improve relations with India. Pakistan's complicity is in violation of its commitments under the Simla Agreement and is in contravention of accepted norms of international relations. It is all the more regrettable as it runs counter to repeated assurances given to us at the Home Secretaries' meeting and indeed at the highest level that Pakistan would not involve itself in such deliberately unfriendly activities. Such actions on Pakistan's part cannot but place in jeopardy the process of normalisation between the two countries.

1171. Agreed Minutes of the Second meeting of India - Pakistan Committee to Combat Drug Trafficking and Smuggling.

SECOND MEETING OF INDO-PAKISTAN COMMITTEE TO COMBAT DRUG TRAFFICKING AND SMUGGLING

AGREED MINUTES

The second meeting of the Indo-Pakistan Committee to combat drug trafficking and smuggling, constituted in pursuance to the decision taken by the representatives of the Governments of India and Pakistan at secretary level, was held in Islamabad on April 24-25, 1988. The Pakistan side was led by Mr. Dilshad Najmuddin, Chairman, Pakistan Narcotics Control Board. The Indian side was led by Mr. B.V. Kumar, Member Central Board of Excise and Customs and Director General Narcotics Control Bureau.

2. The talks were held in a cordial and frank atmosphere with both sides reiterating the resolve and commitment of their respective Governments in combating drug trafficking and smuggling in the region.

3. The bilateral arrangement agreed to and implemented by both Governments since the last meeting held in New Delhi on 26-27 March 1987, were reviewed and both sides expressed their satisfaction with the exchange of information between the nodal agencies during the last one year, regarding drug trafficking. It was noted that in all cases referred to by the respective nodal agencies, the response was prompt and adequate. It was also noted with satisfaction that information of operational nature in respect of drug trafficking exchanged in a few cases between the two countries had produced significant results. It was agreed that both sides shall endeavor to further reduce the response time and continue to take prompt action to exchange operational intelligence of interest to either side. Both sides also agreed that information of a more detailed nature would be exchanged shortly in order to build up dossiers/index in respect of drug traffickers/suspects operating in the region.

4. Both sides reviewed the magnitude of the problem of illicit drug trafficking and smuggling in their respective countries and expressed concern at the serious proportion which the problem had assumed. The steps taken by the two countries to meet the situation were also reviewed.

5. It was noted that the decision to exchange information of operational nature in respect of drug trafficking had been implemented adequately. Having regard to the spirit and objective with which the committee was constituted both sides agreed to take measures to extend greater cooperation to each other in combating smuggling of contraband goods. For this purpose it was noted that the formats which were laid down during the first meeting of the committee were adequate and could be used for exchange of information.

6. The two sides exchanged information in regard to new trends, modus operandi and the routes being used by drug traffickers and smugglers in the region. Particular reference was made by the Pakistan side of the smuggling of Methaqualone and alcoholic liquors from India. The Indian side explained the various countermeasures taken to neutralize the illicit manufacture of methaqualone in India. A few cases indicating smuggling of arms along with other contraband goods were mentioned by the Indian side. The Pakistan side stated that when these cases are formally taken up necessary inquiries would be made.

7. In order to further strengthen bilateral cooperation in combating drug trafficking and smuggling both sides agreed to exchange:

a) List of important smugglers/drug traffickers and their counterparts operating across the border, within a fortnight.

b) Information in regard to new modes operandi adopted to smuggle goods and drugs.

c) Information in the agreed formats in respect of all cases in which contraband goods (excluding drugs) of a value exceeding Rs. 40 lakhs are seized.

d) Non-classified material and publications relating to training in all aspects of anti-smuggling and combating drug-trafficking.
e) Information relating to new equipment used for combating smuggling and drug trafficking.

f) Information relating to legislative, economic and administrative steps taken for combating drug trafficking and smuggling.

8. In regard to exchange of information relating to smuggling of an emergent nature between the Indian Border Security Force and the Pakistan Rangers, it was agreed that matter may be considered by the Ground Rules Committee constituted for the purpose.

9. It was agreed that the next meeting should be held in New Delhi during the last quarter of 1988, subject to approval by the respective Governments.

1172. Letter from Pakistan Additional Foreign Secretary Khalid Mohmood to Ambassador S. K. Singh.

Excellency,

This Ministry has received, through our Embassy in New Delhi, the Indian Ministry of External Affairs’ Note Verbale of 13 April, 1988 and an Aide Memoire dated 15 April 1988 both containing allegations of Pakistan’s “involvement with anti-Indian secessionist activities”. Although such allegations have been made also in the past and each time, after due investigation by the concerned agencies of Government of Pakistan, found to be baseless the contents of the above communications are being investigated. We shall be able to provide our response shortly.

2. The Government of Pakistan once again affirms its strict adherence to the policy of non-interference in the internal affairs of other States including India.
3. Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Khalid Mahmood)

His Excellency
Mr. S.K. Singh,
Ambassador of India,
Islamabad.

SECRET

Record of the discussions between Indian Foreign Secretary K. P. S. Menon and Pakistan Foreign Secretary Mr. Abdus Sattar.

The delegations of India and Pakistan held two sessions of talks in Islamabad on 3rd May. The talks were led by Foreign Secretary from the Indian side and Mr. Abdus Sattar, Foreign Secretary, from the Pakistani side.

2. Foreign Secretary was assisted by Ambassador S.K. Singh and the undersigned. From the Pakistani side, Ambassador Humayun Khan, Mr. Tariq Altaf, Director India Desk and another officer from the Foreign Office were present.

3. Mr. Abdus Sattar welcomed FS to Pakistan. He recalled that his suggestion to invite F.S to Pakistan, made in late February, had been approved by PM Junejo at that stage itself. However, subsequently, he got tied down with the Geneva negotiations.

4. FS thanked Mr. Sattar for receiving him in Pakistan at very short notice and that too during the month of Ramzan. India was also looking forward to the visit of Mr. Sattar. F S hoped that Mrs. Sattar would also be able to accompany him to New Delhi. FS said that the main reason for his visit to Islamabad was to seek Pakistan's perceptions of the Afghanistan situation in the context of India's invitation to President Najib. Prime Minister was keen that India should consult Pakistan on how it saw things in the aftermath of the Geneva Accords. FS added that, with Mr. Sattar's permission, we would like to convey to President Najibullah the Pakistani assessment on Afghanistan. We would also be prepared to broach any specific proposals that Pakistan may wish us to take up with President Najibullah.

5. Mr. Sattar then gave a detailed briefing on Pakistan’s perceptions of Afghanistan. The main points in Mr. Sattar’s presentation are summarized below:

(i) The Geneva Accords were conceived “in a very limited context” because the Afghan resistance was not a party to it. Pakistan’s central objective in the Geneva negotiations was to seek Soviet troop withdrawal while the Soviets wanted reciprocal agreement on what they termed as interference and intervention by Pakistan and USA. The Geneva Accords had only achieved a settlement of the “external aspects” of the Afghanistan situation. They had not addressed the question of peace inside Afghanistan. In fact, this aspect had never even been discussed in the Geneva framework.

(ii) Diego Cordovez had circulated a paper on Intra-Afghan dialogue in September 1987 which envisaged Cordovez’s contacts with the Mujahideen, the PDPA (and not the Kabul regime, Mr. Sattar stressed) and the Afghan émigrés. Cordovez had felt that this could lead to a national assembly in Afghanistan. Pakistan had accepted this outline and would have liked this paper to be taken up in parallel with Geneva talks. However, the Mujahideen were not very forthcoming and so the idea did not make much headway. The Soviet view was that it should not be linked up with the Geneva talks since the processes outlined in the paper could not be expected to be completed within the timeframe they had in mind for Soviet troop withdrawal.

(iii) The Soviet-US understanding on symmetry was the most important of the “extra Geneva understandings”. Essentially, it involved equality and reciprocity in the relations of the US and the USSR with the respective Afghan parties.

(iv) With prior clearance of the four parties in the Geneva negotiations, namely, Pakistan, Afghanistan, US and the Soviet Union, it was announced on the 8th April in Geneva that Mr. Cordovez would undertake contacts with the Afghan factions to promote an acceptable Government in Afghanistan. This would be done by Mr. Cordovez in his private capacity. However, at the personal request of Mr. Cordovez, who apparently did not wish to be seen to be sidestepping the Secretary General, Mr. Cordovez was not identified by name.

(v) In accordance with this, Pakistan expects Mr. Cordovez to initiate contacts with the parties that he had identified in his paper of September 1987. It was Pakistan’s expectation that this should happen over the coming weeks. After Geneva, Pakistan has been in touch with Mr. Cordvez. Mr. Cordvez himself feels that he should wait for a few weeks. In Cordovez’s view, once the Afghan saw the Soviet troops leaving, they would be more amenable to cooperating with him in his approaches.

(vi) There was some debate in the UN secretariat on whether it was correct for the UN to get into the exercise of forming a government in an independent and sovereign Country. Mr. Sattar said that such doubts had no basis. The UN was not being asked to undertake the establishment of a government. What was being asked of Mr. Cordovez and this was in his private capacity was to lend his good offices because he alone was capable of talking to all concerned in Afghanistan. Mr. Sattar mentioned that though the Mujahideen had in the past entertained reservations on Cordovez, they were somewhat less reluctant to deal with him now than they were earlier. Mr. Sattar explained that the reluctance of the Mujahideen in dealing with Cordovez stemmed from their desire not to have anything to do with a UN which recognised the Kabul Government.

(vii) Pakistan was aware that promoting the establishment of a broad based government in Afghanistan was an uphill task since the gap between the rival positions remained very wide. But then Cordovez had brought about the “miracle” of the Geneva Accords and may yet again pull something off.

(viii) The Afghan with whom Pakistan had been in touch were extremely bitter. They held the PDPA responsible for the events of last decade which have devastated the country. According to Pakistan’s information, between one and a quarter and to one and a half million Afghan lives had been lost. It was asking too much of the Afghan people to accept the puppet regime in Kabul.

(ix) Setting up a government in Afghanistan was not a task which Pakistan assigned to itself. The “limit of Pakistan’s interest” was that all efforts should be made to encourage the Afghans themselves to sort this out. It was impossible for Pakistan to talk of the future government in Kabul. The Alliance had not given any such mandate to Pakistan and Pakistan respected their views.

(x) The Geneva Accords do not affect in any way whatsoever the rights of the Afghan people with regard to the internal situation in Afghanistan.

(xi) Ambassador S.K. Singh asked Mr. Sattar whether the understandings between the super powers were committed to writing and whether the question of Cordvez’s contacts was to come up before the Security Council. Mr. Sattar said the following in response to this query:

(a) As the Geneva Accords began to look plausible, all concerned parties went into their implications more closely. The Soviet Union would have tried to put an asymmetrical interpretation on the obligations devolving from the Geneva Accords which was unacceptable to the US. When Gorbachev went to the US, in December 1987, he refused to give President Reagan any assurances that the Soviet Union would stop the supply of arms to the Najib Government for some time. The US proposal for a moratorium on supply of arms during the period of Soviet troop withdrawal was made during the Shultz - Sheverndadze talks in March. With Pakistan’s support, the US made symmetry the central condition of the Geneva Accords. The suggestion that the understanding between the super powers on these matters should be kept outside the Geneva Accords came from Cordovez. As regards the Exchange of Letters between the US and the Soviet Union, while the Letters themselves remained confidential, the fact of their exchange was well-known. The letter containing this understanding had been sent by the US to the Soviet Union on 31st March. The US interpretation was also confirmed in Shultz’s statement in Geneva on 14th April. The Soviet Union had also known in advance that Pakistan will be a part of the understanding to be arrived at between the US and the Soviet Union on the summitry issue.

(b) The earlier idea UNIMAG (UN Implementation Mechanism Assistance Group) had now been transformed into a UNGOMAP which stood for UN Good Offices Mission in Afghanistan and Pakistan. Cordovez had now to draft a mandate for this exercise. The essential problem before him was how to reconcile the positive symmetry understanding with the other obligations undertaken by the concerned parties in the Geneva Agreements. Pakistan had requested the US and the Soviet Union to help Cordovez in this exercise. Pakistan was aware that there were reservations in the minds of some of the members of the Security Council regarding whether Cordovez had the necessary authorization. Their doubts stemmed from their extreme sensitivity with regard to “peace keeping operations” of the UN and anything that could be linked with it. However, as Pakistan saw it, it was not to be a peace keeping operation but a mission of good offices. It was not to be seen in the context of any particular instrument of the Geneva Agreement, but in the framework of the entire settlement.

(c) Ambassador S.K. Singh referred to a view in New York that the four concerned parties should be asked to pay up the expense in this exercise. Sattar said that this amounted to penny pinching. In any case, there would be a lot of money. Japan, Holland, Germany etc. were all willing to pay up and there would be no cost to the UN at all. Regarding the SG’s reported view that it was up to him to nominate whomsoever he considered suitable for the job, Sattar said that this was unacceptable to Pakistan. Cordvez had been agreed upon by the four concerned parties in the Geneva announcement of 8th April. As far as Pakistan was concerned, it will be Cordvez or nobody else.

6. There was also a brief second session later in the afternoon after FS’s call on Minister of State for External Affairs, Mr. Noorani.

7. FS asked Mr. Sattar for his assessment of the position of the local commanders inside Afghanistan and whether they would cooperate.

8. Mr. Sattar said that the situation inside Afghanistan was very complex. There were commanders who had links with the Peshawar Alliance and there were those with links with Iran. There was yet another category which included those “Who lived off the fact of the land”. He did not elaborate further.

9. There was a brief exchange on the issue of return of refugees and reconstruction of the war-ravaged Afghan countryside. Mr. Sattar said that Pakistan expected some refugees to begin to return after the Soviet troops started returning. However, a great majority of refugees had nothing to return to because of the devastation of the last year. A major UNHCR programme inside Afghanistan was to be launched by the UN. At present, the UNHCR was concentrating on programme for Afghan refugees within Pakistan. However, in due course, Pakistan would expect the UN effort to shift its focus to reconstruction work inside Afghanistan. It was likely that the Secretary General would appoint a coordinator for this purpose. Mr. Sattar said that he understood informally that the UN was thinking in terms of a total expenditure of the one billion US dollars. Among other things, one had to see that if 5 million refugees were to return to Afghanistan, extra food grains to the extent of one million tonnes per annum would need to be made available.

10. Mr. Sattar added that there was no question of relief and aid from UN or the major donor countries being channelised through the Kabul regime because that would be tainted in the eyes of the Afghan people. Apart from the Soviet Union and possibly India, he did not see any other major country routing its assistance through the Kabul Government. He had heard that the UNHCR had already concluded an agreement with the Kabul Government which allowed the UNHCR a lot of flexibility in dealing with the refugees.

11. The meeting ended with usual pleasantries.
12. F S has approved the above summary record.

SECRET

Record of the meeting between Foreign Secretary K.P.S. Menon and President Zia-ul-Haq.

President Zia received FS at his residence. Ambassador S.K. Singh and the undersigned accompanied Foreign Secretary. On the Pakistani side, Mr. Abdus Sattar, the Foreign Secretary, Ambassador Humayun Khan and other senior officials of the Foreign Office were present. The meeting lasted 75 minutes.

2. Welcoming FS to Pakistan, President Zia said that the visit was very short. He wished that FS could have spent more time in Islamabad.

3. FS thanked President Zia for receiving him at very short notice and apologized for having to call on the President during the month of Ramzan.

4. FS recalled India’s continuing interest and involvement in the Afghan situation from the very beginning. His present visit to Islamabad was in the context of President Najib’s visit to India. PM was keen that we should share Pakistan’s perceptions before the Najib visit took place.

5. President Zia agreed that India had a vital interest in Afghanistan. He had discussed the issue with Mrs. Gandhi immediately after the Russian entry into Afghanistan during their meeting at London when they were attending the Lancaster House consultations on Zimbabwe. Mrs. Gandhi had then said to him that she did not approve of what the Russians had done. He had suggested to her that India should help Pakistan. When Mrs. Gandhi asked him what specific action Pakistan expected from India, he had said that India should shout. Mrs. Gandhi, of course, did not agree.

6. President Zia added that he understood India’s predicament. Every country had its national interest to take into account and Pakistan did not expect it of India that it would jeopardize the close and long standing relationship with the Soviet Union on account of the Soviet action in Afghanistan. Besides, he was aware that it was during India’s Chairmanship of NAM that the Movement had adopted the strongest formulations on Afghanistan. India’s interests in Afghanistan were vital and pre-dated even the birth of Pakistan.

7. President Zia then recalled Pakistan’s contacts with the Soviets at different stages of the Afghanistan situation. When the Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister visited Pakistan in 1980, he was told categorically that Pakistan could not be expected to talk to Kabul. Pakistan told the Soviets to “dump Karmal”. When Najib came to power, Pakistan said the same thing to the Soviets since all these individuals had been thrown up by the same process which remained unacceptable to Pakistan as well as to the 5 million Afghan refugees.

8. The Islamic countries had considered this question as early as February and May 1980. A resolution was adopted unanimously, though there was initially hesitation on the part of Libya and Algeria that the Islamic countries would not recognize the regime in Kabul. Pakistan had remained consistent on this account. It did not recognize the Kabul government then and it did not do so now even though it had just signed the Geneva Accords with it. Pakistan regarded the new Accord as an important Agreement. President Zia added that Pakistan was also willing to grant India some credit for helping Pakistan.

9. It was in this context, he said, that the invitation of India to Najib had struck Pakistan as “strange”. “We did not like it”, he said. While it could not be disputed that India had an important role to play or that it was her prerogative to invite whomsoever she chose to, the world expected India to adopt a principled position. In the past India had done so in the UN and NAM even if this position may have been different from that of Pakistan. If India’s invitation to Najib could lead to return of peace in Afghanistan, this would surely be a contribution. However, this was not likely to happen. A minority Government, representing one faction of the PDPA, was in power in Kabul; it could not be expected to enjoy the confidence of the Afghan people. Peace would come about only if the present Kabul regime was removed.

10. President Zia suggested that if India wanted to contribute to the resolution of the Afghanistan situation, it should impress upon Najib that any attempt he might make to make his Government broad-based will not work. The Afghan people will not accept a Communist Government. Najib's contribution to his country would be to get out and this is where India could make a contribution. India should persuade Najib to step aside in the larger interest of his country. This would be in line with the bold action taken by General Secretary Gorbachev in clearing the way for resolution of the Afghanistan problem through withdrawal of Russian troops. A similar bold and unselfish step was now called for on the part of Najib.

11. President Zia also recalled his conversation with the Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vorontsov in February. In reply to President Zia's questions, Vorontsov had conceded that Afghanistan was worse off now than when the Russians had come in. Vorontsov had also said that if, after the withdrawal of Soviet troops, the Najib Government fell, he "could not care less". When President Zia mentioned to him the need for the Soviets to do something to avoid the bloodshed that would inevitably follow an abrupt Russian withdrawal, Vorontsov said "Mr. President, we know we should do something but I do not know if we can". President Zia then told him that the Soviets should take Najib with them. To the Pakistani suggestion that a process should be set in motion to bring about a Government of the Afghan peoples choosing in Kabul, Vorontsov said that Pakistan should first sign the Geneva Accords and then the Soviet Union would cooperate in this process. When President Zia asked him why the Soviets were insistent on prior signing of the Geneva Agreement, Vorontsov said that the Soviet Union felt that Pakistan was using this issue as a pretext for delaying the Geneva Accords. President Zia had told Vorontsov that he would give it in writing that Pakistan would sign the Geneva Accords, but a popular government should be formed first. However; Vorontsov said categorically that the Soviet Union would cooperate but "outside Geneva Accords and after Pakistan had signed it."

12. President Zia concluded his piece on Afghanistan by reiterating once again that India could contribute to the Afghanistan situation by persuading Najib to quit at this stage and to institute a process to bring about a Government acceptable to the Afghan people. He added that he had no doubt that whatever anybody else may or may not do, in due course the Afghan people would themselves settle this problem and bring peace about. However, unless everybody acted this would not be without tremendous bloodshed.

13. Responding to President Zia's remarks on Afghanistan, Foreign Secretary requested him to see India's involvement in the Afghanistan situation in the same spirit as that of Pakistan. Like Pakistan, our objective was to help in whatever way we could to bring peace and stability in Afghanistan. That India could play a useful role had been suggested to us both by the Soviets as well as the Americans. During P.M's visit to Washington last year the US had in fact asked us to pressurize the Soviets for a solution in Afghanistan. When we asked the Americans what precise role they wanted India to play, they said that India should begin contacting various factions in Afghanistan. This is why we were surprised when the US was reported to have expressed some unease over what the US had itself asked us to do. However, this was later sorted out.

14. FS recalled the briefing given to him by Mr. Sattar on Pakistan perceptions on Afghanistan earlier in the day. He stressed that India had no intention of doing anything contrary to what Pakistan was doing. Our involvement was motivated by the desire to be useful in seeking the return of peace and stability in Afghanistan. That was the background of India’s invitation to President Najib. Prime Minister Gandhi was anxious that our action should not be misconstrued by Pakistan and that is why he had been asked to undertake this mission to Islamabad. There was no question of India seeking to prop up any particular faction in Afghanistan. In our view India and Pakistan should work together so as to minimize the possibility of any outside meddling in our region.

15. President Zia then turned to bilateral relations. He praised Prime Minister Gandhi lavishly and said that if ever India and Pakistan stood a chance to improve their relations it was now because we had in Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi a leader of requisite stature. However, the initiative for a qualitative change in the bilateral relationship had to come from India. He suggested that Prime Minister Gandhi should take bold personal initiatives in this regard much as General Secretary Gorbachev had done with regard to Afghanistan.

16. President Zia then referred to the recent letter from Prime Minister Gandhi where PM had expressed concern at the reported Pakistani build-up in Siachen. President Zia said that his own defence people had made similar reports to him with regard to the Indian build-up in Siachen. Pakistan had no intention of aggravating the situation in Siachen. While the Siachen territory was as dear to Pakistan as it was to India, the President continued, “my very strong recommendation is that we should try to solve this and take sound, genuine measures”. President Zia then mentioned India’s action in sending its troops to occupy the Siachen region as a major violation of the Simla Agreement. He quoted the relevant excerpts from the Agreement regarding non-use of force. He added however that he was grateful to PM Gandhi for accepting his suggestion in February 1987 to institute the Defence Secretaries talks. It was good that the Defence Secretaries were meeting again.

17. Foreign Secretary said that our own information was that Pakistan was building up in Siachen at a very fast pace. Our defence people felt that it would be obvious to any military observer that any actions taken by the Indian side were purely defensive in character.
18. President Zia then asked F.S to convey to PM that “Pakistan had not taken an iota of action in Siachen. What we are doing was to institute purely defensive measures”

19. FS said that he had suggested to our defence authorities that the DMOs on the two sides could get in touch on the hot line. But he was told that when the hot line was activated by us in July last year, all that happened was that there was a lull for about three weeks or so and then Pakistan had gone ahead with a major assault in the Siachen region in September.

20. President Zia did not comment directly on this but added that the two DMOs should make greater use of the hot line.

21. FS added that a further factor which had caused us concern with regard to Siachen was a series of strident statements by Pakistani leaders on Siachen recently.

22. President said that neither he nor the Prime Minister had made any recent statements on Siachen. Ambassador Humayun Khan intervened to say that the reference of Foreign Secretary was to the recent debates in the National Assembly where Minister of State for Defence had made some references to Siachen.

23. At this point, President Zia turned to the Punjab question. He pointedly asked FS to convey his regards to the Home Minister Shri Buta Singh. He added that he understood our Minister’s parliamentary compulsions. However, he did not directly mention the Minister’s reported statement calling President Zia “a liar”. He affirmed Pakistan’s readiness to do whatever it could to satisfy India on the Punjab question. While he could not rule out that some incidents could be occurring at lower levels or that some exchanges were taking place between the smugglers from the two sides, there was no question of any governmental involvement on the part of Pakistan in the Punjab situation.

24. He then referred to the view in Pakistan that India was involved “in a lot of things that were going on in Sindh”. A way out of these allegations and counter-allegations, he suggested, lay in India and Pakistan making joint statements “on some hot subjects”, possibly at the level of the two PMs, such as Punjab, Sindh and the whole question of cross-border smuggling, narcotics traffic etc. He proposed that India and Pakistan should undertake joint patrolling of the border, in some if not all areas. President Zia added that whatever sectors India suggested would be acceptable to Pakistan. Similarly, Pakistan would also leave it to India whether such joint patrolling should be done by the border forces of the two sides or by regular troops.
25. President Zia also acknowledged the receipt by the Pakistani side of the recent Aide Memoire handed over to the Pakistani Embassy in New Delhi detailing Pakistani involvement in Punjab. He said that he had been told that certain names had been supplied in the Aide Memore. “It was now up to our chaps to investigate how this has happened,” he said.

26. Foreign Secretary reiterated that Delhi was convinced of Pakistan’s involvement in terrorist activities in Punjab and that our agencies claim to have specific information in this regard. Foreign Secretary wondered whether it was possible that the Pakistani secret services were up to something without the knowledge of the Government.

27. President Zia said that the two secret agencies of Pakistan dealing with external intelligence had been under his direct charge till 1985 and that he had been broadly in the picture since then. These agencies reported directly to the Prime Minister and there was absolutely no question of their doing anything without the Prime Minister’s knowledge. However, he could not rule out the possibility for Pakistani smugglers being involved in some activities in Punjab. In any case there was a nexus between the smuggling cartels on the two sides which was difficult to break. President Zia also mentioned that all kinds of weapons were floating inside Pakistan because of the Afghanistan situation and Klasnikovs could easily be bought in “Mohall’s” in Rawalpindi. Expressing satisfaction at recent successes in joint action by the two countries in controlling narcotics traffic, he said that Pakistan had tightened the controls on its side. He would like to see further confidence building measures of this kind between India and Pakistan.

28. Ambassador Humayun Khan made a brief reference to media reports and Parliament questions in India, arising from the Dhiren Bhagat story about the alleged import of weapons from Kabul into India by R&AW. However, there was no further exchange on this.

29. In conclusion President Zia indicated that he would soon send a reply to the letter of Prime Minister. He also informed FS that he was scheduled to visit China from 30th May to 7th of June and to New York for SSOD thereafter. He would be in New York on the 12th and would deliver a speech on the 13th. He said that if it so happened that PM Gandhi was also in New York during these days, he would of course be honoured to have a meeting with him.

30. FS explained that as per PM’s present programme he was scheduled to speak in New York on the 9th of June and was unlikely to stay on for much longer.

31. Foreign Secretary also expressed India’s sympathy with the victims of the Ozheri tragedy and referred to P.M’s recent message in this regard.
32. President Zia presented Foreign Secretary with a book on Pakistan. He also saw Foreign Secretary off to the lift, a goodish walk from his office.

33. FS has seen and approved the above summary record.

1175. SECRET

Record of Foreign Secretary K. P.S. Menon’s meeting with Mr. Zain Noorani, Pakistan’s Minister of State for Foreign Affairs.

Foreign Secretary’s meeting with Mr. Zain Noorani lasted about 45 minutes. FS was accompanied by Ambassador S.K. Singh and the undersigned. On the Pakistani side, Foreign Secretary Mr. Abdus Sattar, Ambassador Humayun Khan and Director India Desk Tariq Altaf were present.

2. Mr. Noorani welcomed FS to Pakistan. He remarked that visitors from India were always welcome since the more we talk to each other the less are the chances for mistrust and suspicion.

3. FS thanked Mr. Noorani for receiving him at very short notice and apologized for having to bother the Pakistani host during the holy month of Ramzan.

4. Mr. Noorani said that Indo-Pakistan relations have been subject to frequent fluctuations. Sometimes things erupted in the Parliaments of the two countries which generated their own pressures. But as long as India and Pakistan have confidence in each other’s desire for friendliness, these problems could be overcome. He remarked that this would probably happen sooner than many people realized today. India was the largest country in South Asia and had a major role to play. Pakistan, or any other country of South Asia, could hardly deny that. Yet, it was expected of India that she too would respect the pride and integrity of its smaller neighbours.
5. Foreign Secretary assured Mr. Noorani that there would never be any attempt on the part of India to infringe upon the sovereignty, integrity or dignity of Pakistan or indeed any of its smaller neighbours. If ever there was a problem, India was always prepared to talk about it.

6. Mr. Noorani remarked that if some day India came to be accepted as a third super power, Pakistan would be delighted since India was a country from the same region. He added that curiously he enjoyed the reputation of being a hawk on Indo-Pakistan relations. His statements were always played up in the Indian press so much so that he had often wondered whether he was the Foreign Minister of Pakistan or India! At any rate, he had kept quiet for the past one month.

7. Foreign Secretary thanked Mr. Noorani for the regular briefing given to our PR in Geneva by Mr. Sattar on the Geneva negotiations on Afghanistan. Mr. Sattar had also briefed Ambassador S.K. Singh upon his return from Geneva. FS himself had had the benefit of a most exhaustive briefing on Pakistan’s perceptions of the present situation in Afghanistan earlier in the morning.

8. Mr. Noorani then referred to the recent statement of Home Minister Buta Singh where he had been reported as having called President Zia “a liar”. Mr. Noorani said that these things never helped. It was not right of Mr. Buta Singh to have used this expression in relation to the Head of State of a neighbouring country. Pakistan could have responded in similar terms but had deliberately refrained from doing so. Mr. Buta Singh had also said that at the last meeting between the Home Secretaries of the two countries, India had furnished concrete proof regarding Pakistani involvement in extremist activities in the Punjab and that the Pak Home Secretary had accepted the charge. This was not true.

9. Foreign Secretary said that there was no question of any tirade against Pakistan by the Indian leaders. Things had perhaps been said on both sides. Mr. Rana Mahmud, Pak Minister of State for Defence had recently made a combative statement on Siachen in the National Assembly. With regard to the reported statement of Home Minister Buta Singh on the last meeting of Home Secretaries, we had brought it to the notice of our authorities in the Ministry of Home Affairs. In any case, we were now looking forward to the forthcoming meeting of the two Home Secretaries in New Delhi.

10. Mr. Noorani said that it anguished him to see that a man like President Zia, who had personally contributed more than anybody else in recent years to improving relations between India and Pakistan, should have been the target of Mr. Buta Singh’s wrath. Pakistan would have expected that Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, who recently had the occasion to speak to President Zia on telephone, would have expressed a word of regret about it. Since this had not happened, it could justifiably be inferred that the Home Minister's remarks had the approval of Prime Minister.

11. Foreign Secretary remarked that the Government was under very severe pressure both from the public as well as in Parliament on the situation in Punjab. In recent months there had been a qualitative change in the equipment captured from the terrorists in the Punjab. As for Prime Minister's telephonic conversation with President Zia, he possibly had other things in mind and it may not have occurred to him to refer to the statement of Mr. Buta Singh. At any rate, it would be unfair to conclude from the fact that Prime Minister had not spoken to President Zia on the telephone about the Home Minister's remarks that they had Prime Minister's endorsement.

12. Mr. Noorani remarked that these things had to be seen in perspective over a period of time. Pakistan's track record spoke for itself. It never leaked confidential exchanges between the leaders of the two countries to the press.

13. Foreign Secretary said that India was a different society with a free press and certain things went with it. F.S. then asked Mr. Noorani about his impressions of the likely scenario in Afghanistan in the ensuing months.

14. Mr. Noorani said that Pakistan saw the Geneva Accords as only a partial solution to the Afghanistan situation. Pakistan wanted a comprehensive solution which could come about only if a government acceptable to all factions in Afghanistan came into being. It had been agreed at Geneva among the four signatories that Cordovez should make further efforts in this direction.

15. Foreign Secretary recalled the oft repeated claims of Pakistan and Mujahideen that the latter were in control of 80% of the territory of Afghanistan. If that was so, what prevented the refugees from going back to the Mujahideen held areas in Afghanistan?

16. Mr. Sattar said that the Soviet and Afghan forces had systematically destroyed the economic infra-structure and irrigation systems in the Afghanistan countryside. The land had been subjected to unprecedented devastation. While the Mujahideen were in physical control of 80% of the territory, it did not mean that the areas under Mujahideen control had been economically rehabilitated. While a few refugees may return, the majority could not go back until such time as major reconstruction had been carried out within Afghanistan.

17. Mr. Noorani remarked that no Afghan was ever going to accept Najib. "If India was counting on Najib, you are backing the wrong horse".
18. FS asked Mr. Noorani if his observation was confined to President Najib personally or held true for the PDPA or the entire system of Government in Afghanistan.

19. Mr. Sattar drew attention to the stand of the Mujahideen who had been extremely careful in answering this question. All that they had said so far was that they will be talking to “good Muslims”.

20. Foreign Secretary said that it was not correct to say that India was banking on or seeking to prop up President Najib. What we were trying to do was to see what might be the way out of instability and bloodshed in Afghanistan. India was entirely with Pakistan in believing that peace and stability should return to Afghanistan.

Mr. Noorani remarked that India was losing the goodwill of the people of Afghanistan who were bitter about India’s association with the Najib regime. “To speak candidly, every Afghan hates you”, he added.

21. Ambassador S.K. Singh drew the Minister’s attention to some traditional features of Afghan society. It had been a system which had always functioned with minimal government. A sort of consensus existed which enabled tax collection and policing function to be performed, though; in an ad hoc fashion. Ambassador S.K. Singh further referred to the strong nexus of tribal chiefs with the local commanders within Afghanistan as a balancing factor to the influence of the Peshawar Alliance. Besides, several leaders of the Peshawar Alliance many of whom had come to Pakistan in the days of Dawood, were personally tainted. The PDPA also was not without roots - though the individuals may have changed frequently, the groups remained by and large constant.

22. In this situation, Ambassador continued, India had tried to maintain contacts with all the major groups in Afghanistan namely, the Government of the PDPA, Afghan émigrés and the rebels. We had never identified ourselves with any particular faction. Mrs. Gandhi had spoken strongly to Mr. Brezhnev in 1980 regarding the entry of Soviet troops. Subsequently we had taken a forthright and principled position in NAM and other forums. Prime Minister Gandhi had started exploring the possibility of pressurizing the Soviets since 1986. There was, therefore, adequate ground for India and Pakistan to seek to work together on Afghanistan.

23. Mr. Noorani said that while Ambassador S.K. Singh’s assessment of the structure of Afghan society may have been true at one time, a lot had changed over the last decade. The traditional tribal system of authority had crumbled under the Soviet onslaught. Mr. Khatak whom Ambassador S.K. Singh undoubtedly knew during his days in Kabul (he is a very well - known Afghan personality), had given him a long talk on Afghanistan the other day. But he (Mr. Noorani) found that Mr. Khatak was altogether out of date and was speaking of an Afghanistan which no longer existed. If India thought that its role was acceptable to all factions, Pakistan did not grudge it this acceptability. However, Pakistan will never accept Najib.

24. Foreign Secretary thanked Mr. Noorani for the meeting and said that he would convey Mr. Noorani’s views to New Delhi. Since the objectives of India and Pakistan were seek to work together.

25. As FS was taking leave of Mr. Noorani, the latter remarked that foreign policy could not be conducted through newspapers and referred to the immediate disclosure in the press of PM Gandhi’s invitation to President in February. FS explained that the invitation was made immediately after the Armacost visit to Delhi and was deliberately made public in order to avoid any inference being drawn that we were acting under US pressure.

26. Foreign Secretary has seen and approved the above summary record.

1176. Aide Memoire from the Government of Pakistan to Ministry of External Affairs.

AIDE MEMOIRE

It is a matter of disappointment and dismay that once again the Government of India has leveled false and baseless charges against the Government of Pakistan. Many of the allegations contained in the Ministry of External Affairs Note No. J/103/3/88/(III) dated April 13, 1988, and Aide Memoire dated April 15, 1988, hand over to the Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi, are old and discredited, replies to which have been provided in the past. The others too, were obviously of the same ilk.

2. Propagandist repetition cannot, of course, convert falsehood into truth. Each time India has come up with such allegations, the Government of Pakistan ordered a thorough investigation by the competent authorities, and after full ascertainment of the facts, categorically stated that no department, agency or official of the Government of Pakistan had provided encouragement, shelter or assistance to any Indian or foreign citizens for any interference in the internal affairs of India. A similar thorough and exacting investigation was again undertaken. The Government of Pakistan is fully satisfied that the Indian charges are groundless and motivated and that no aid or abetment has been provided by this country to any terrorist or secessionist activities directed against India.

3. The Government of Pakistan adheres scrupulously to the UN Charter and the principles of peaceful coexistence. No objective observer of the South Asian scene can deny that Pakistan has maintained an exemplary record in its relations with India and, indeed, the Government of Pakistan wishes that the Government of India should appreciate and reciprocate its impeccable observance of recognized principles of good-neighbourly relations including in particular the principle of non-interference and non-intervention in internal affairs.

4. The allegation that Pakistan has for long given sanctuary to Sikh terrorists and provided them opportunity to train Sikh youth is no more than a concocted figment of imagination. None of the persons named in paragraphs 4 and 5 of the Aide Memoire, and indeed no other person has been provided sanctuary in Pakistan. Indian authorities have repeatedly alleged that Attinder Pal Singh, Sukhvinder Singh and Dhanna Singh had been allegedly provided sanctuary in Pakistan and should be returned to India. The Government of Pakistan has already informed the Government of Indian through its Ambassador in New Delhi that these people have never been given sanctuary in Pakistan, nor are they present on its territory. In fact, according to Indian Press itself, one Attender Pal Singh was seen at Gurdawara Kesgarh Sahib (in Anandpur Sahib) on 18th February 88, when he addressed journalists after a 2 day convention. His presence in India is an open secret. This is being lamented even by pro-Government newspaper of India (Annexes A&B). Similarly, Sukhdev Singh alias Sukha, was reported to be in Jullunder on 22 January 1988. The police reportedly conducted several raids to apprehend him. In the third week of February 88, the same Sukhdev Singh has issued a signed Press Note about "complaints of Sikh victims and proposals for their redressal." The attached clippings from Indian newspapers, including TRIBUNE of 19 February 1988 belie the Indian Government's allegations. (Annexures C & D).

5. The allegation that members of the Panthic Committee visited Pakistan in June and November 1987 or on any other occasion to consult with extremists from abroad is equally fictitious. Obviously, the Government of Pakistan cannot be held accountable for the false and self serving utterances of some individuals as reported in sections of the press, e.g. the article in the Globe and Mail of Canada published on December 26, 1987 as mentioned in MEA’s Aide Memoire of February 17, 1988. The factual position is that, contrary to the assertion in the article, Tejinder Singh Kaloe is not known even to have visited Pakistan.

6. The Government of Pakistan could cite a number of press reports and articles to the effect that India has the capability to produce 50 atomic bombs. Would India consider such articles as proof falsifying its assertions to the contrary?

7. The Ministry of External Affairs has alleged that there “is ample evidence regarding the existence of training and indoctrination centres for the Sikh extremists” in Pakistan. The only place identified in this regard is Faisalabad Jail and the sole evidence cited in the Aide Memoire is the confession of a bus conductor which was obtained in detention. Such confessions notoriously lack credibility. The Government of India should not have been so na"ive as to cite confessions taken in police custody as evidence.

8. Wild allegations of a "steady supply of weapons" from Pakistan has been made without regard to the absence of any hard and the objective conditions obtaining on the border. The Government of Pakistan categorically rejects the allegation in the Aide Memoire that the Pakistan Rangers connived in sending Pakistani nationals as couriers with weapons. As for the allegation that three Pakistan nationals sneaked into India on March 18, it would be worthwhile to recall that innumerable such allegations of intrusions and infiltration by Pakistan nationals have been made by the Indian Agencies and the Indian press in the past two years. Hundreds of such cases are on record where Indian Agencies have reported shooting and killing of intruders from Pakistan. On each occasion, communications were addressed by the Embassy of Pakistan in New Delhi to the Ministry of External Affairs asking for details of such instances and particulars of the so-called intruders. The fact that not a single reply has ever been received is eloquent proof that agencies of the Government of India indulge in totally false and concocted charges.

9. In this context attention is draw to a recent incident reported by Press Trust of India that two border guards were killed in cross-fire between the Indian border guards and Sikh militants on Amritsar border on 14 April, 1988. Concerned authorities of the Government of Pakistan have carried out enquiries and found that there was no such incident involving Pakistan Rangers or any other Pakistani border guards.

10. A sweeping statement has been made in the Aide Memoire regarding the use of stolen money from banks to buy arms in Pakistan. The Government of Pakistan has no information about one Kashif Mehmood in USA. Nor can any Government be held responsible if it were established that a crime of smuggling was committed across its borders. Otherwise, the Government of India should be accountable for smuggling activities from the Indian side.

11. Regrettably, weapons have proliferated in the region over the years. This is a phenomenon which has assumed serious proportion. The Government of Pakistan is deeply concerned as crimes of violence have greatly increased. Such arms trafficking operations are run not only by well-entrenched international gangs, including some Indians but apparently also by the Indian RAW. According to wide published press reports, 23 crates of arms were received from Kabul in Delhi in November 1987 by Indian Airlines, and were later released to RAW, reportedly for clandestine use in Punjab, either as "evidence" to implicate Pakistan or for cross-border smuggling to saboteurs in Pakistan. The Government of Pakistan invites the Government of India to cooperate in eradicating arms smuggling and trafficking.

12. The concern expressed by the Ministry of External Affairs over the alleged visit to Pakistan by certain non-Indian Sikhs is wholly misconceived. For, India is aware that some of the holiest of Sikh shrines are located in Pakistan. These shrines are open for pilgrims irrespective of their nationality or domicile. Followers of the Sikh faith as also those of Islam and other religions are entitled to free access to their places of worship, in peace and dignity. The Government of Pakistan cannot in good conscience deny entry to foreign pilgrims who are deemed fit by the Governments of their countries to hold passports, unless of course the Government of Pakistan has good reason to believe that the purpose of their visit is different from that stated in their visa applications.

13. In a spirit of cooperation, the Government of Pakistan has been willing to receive names and particulars of foreign citizens suspected by the Government of India to have criminal intent. The authorities of the Government of Pakistan have taken appropriate action. In view of the allegations made in several Indian communications recently, the concerned authorities in Pakistan have thoroughly rechecked their records and found that none of the persons mentioned in these communications, including Mr. Jagjit Singh Chohan have visited Pakistan in recent years. Two of them had once arrived at a port of disembarkation, but were refused permission to enter Pakistan. In contrast, the Government of India is known to have given permission to Pakistan nationals with anti-Pakistan and criminal credentials not only to visit India but to stay there for long periods.

14. The complaint about the coverage given by the Pakistani press to the trouble in Punjab is unfounded. An objective survey would show that the media in Pakistan has scrupulously avoided sensationalism and that it has projected only factual information and that too very sparingly. On the contrary, the Indian media have been indulging in far more hostile propaganda against Pakistan prejudicial to the country's integrity.
15. The allegation of Pakistan using Sikh Jethas for fanning secessionist sentiments has no basis. In fact the Government of Pakistan takes all precautions not to allow occasion of the visit of Sikh Jethas to Pakistan to be used except strictly for religious activities. Its officials in Embassies, at ports of disembarkation in Pakistan as well as in religious places make it a point to actively discourage them from indulging in controversies or political squabbles. Nevertheless, as India's own experience would show, despite the best of intentions, it is not always possible to completely control the conduct of religious ceremonies inside the Gurdawars. In fact, as reported in the Indian press, instances of inflammatory speeches by Sikh extremists are far higher inside the Sikh Gurdawars in India which the Government of India finds unable to curb than the relatively negligible occasions in Pakistan, which may have given cause for complaint to the Indian authorities.

16. Nothing could be more regrettable than the allegation that the Government of Pakistan has not undertaken to implement measures suggested by the Indian side during the Home Secretaries' meeting in December 1986. At that meeting Pakistan had gone out of its way in offering assurances to the Government of India. The Government of India at various levels had appreciated Pakistan's cooperative attitude. Later, to the Indian Foreign Secretary's suggestion that Pakistan leaders make a statement specifically denouncing Khalistan, Pakistan had indicated its willingness to undertake reciprocal obligations with India against interference in each other's country. India has since then balked at accepting such mutual obligations. What is even more regrettable, indeed deplorable, is that the Indian leaders e.g. Home Minister Buta Singh should irresponsibly misrepresent cooperative Pakistani attitude during the Interior Secretaries' meeting as a proof of Pakistan's admission of guilt. The record of the Interior Secretaries' meeting speaks for itself. The Joint press Release issued on the occasion states that "the Government of Pakistan reiterated that it does not and will not provide any support to terrorist activities directed against India. The Home Secretary, Government of India, gave similar assurances in this context."

17. As an earnest of its desire to promote mutual trust and cooperation, the Government of Pakistan has earnestly tried to implement the measures agreed to during the Interior Secretaries' meeting. The Committee to combat narcotic trafficking and smuggling has held two meetings and put on record mutual satisfaction at the progress achieved. The Border Ground Rules Committee has also held a meeting where substantial progress was achieved in drafting new Border Ground Rules. Pakistan Rangers have been extending their fullest cooperation to the Border Security Forces to curb and control cross-border crimes.
18. The Government of Pakistan takes this opportunity to once again reiterate to the Government of India its strong commitment to the establishment of good-neighbourly and cooperative relations between the two countries. It firmly believes that instability on its border is undesirable and does not contribute to Pakistan's security. Pakistan is keen to promote its ties with India on the basis of sovereign equality and non-interference in internal affairs. It remains ready to join India in undertaking solemn reciprocal obligations against allowing the use of respective territories for any acts directed against the internal peace, stability or territorial integrity of the other state. Working together on the basis of mutual benefits, Pakistan and India can contribute positively and actively to the process of normalization of relations and to the furtherance of efforts for peace and development in the region.

1177. Joint statement issued at the end of Second India-Pakistan Home Secretary Level talks.

*Following their meeting in Lahore on the 20th and 21st of December, 1986, the Home Secretary of India and the Interior Secretary of Pakistan held a second meeting in New Delhi from the 14th to 16th of May, 1988.

*The talks were held in a frank and constructive atmosphere with both sides reiterating the resolve of their respective Governments to establish good neighbourly and cooperative relations between the two countries in accordance with the Simla Agreement. They agreed that the problems discussed could find resolution on the basis of good faith and mutual trust.

*Both sides agreed that it was essential to take immediate concrete measures to contain terrorism, drug trafficking, smuggling, illegal border crossings, etc. along the India-Pakistan border. Accordingly it was decided that the India-Pakistan Committee on Border Ground Rules should meet within the next three months in order to finalise the India-Pakistan Border Ground Rules taking into account new realities. In the meanwhile, the following interim measures were agreed to:
1. Regular meeting should be held once a month or more frequently as required between the two border security forces at Wing Commander Battalion Commander-level in order to effectively deal with all illegal trans-border movements.

2. Flag meetings may be held between the two border security forces at Post Company Commander level to pass on any information of immediate importance. Whenever a contact is requested the other side will respond immediately.

3. The border security forces of the two countries should arrest not only trans-border criminals, drug traffickers and smugglers of any nationality but also infiltrators who deliberately cross the border, whether armed or unarmed and deal with them under the law of the land.

4. The two border security forces shall work in close cooperation in order to ensure the eradication of trans-border crimes such as drug trafficking, smuggling of arms and ammunitions as well as other commodities, illegal border crossings etc. For this purpose there shall be mutual and timely exchange of information, intelligence and coordination between the two border security forces at Battalion Commander level.

5. Should instance of smuggling of arms and ammunition and also other contraband including currency, drugs, etc., from one country to the other come to notice, a flag meeting at the Company Commander's level shall be called for facilitating deterrent action against the concerned persons.

6. The border security forces shall send names with other personal particulars of all persons crossing the border illegally to either side along with the dates and places of crossing. The information would thereafter, be expeditiously processed to ascertain if these persons are wanted in any criminal cases or associated with terrorism or smuggling. In cases where such linkages are established, the concerned persons would be handed over to the border security force of the other country, after due process of law.

7. The concerned authorities on each side should ensure that the illegal possession of arms and ammunition and their trans-border sale and movement is strictly and effectively prevented in the border villages. They should also prevent carrying of arms by civilians other than public servants within 150 yards on either side of the boundary.

*As an additional interim institutional arrangement to strengthen cooperation between the border security forces to check the movement of terrorists and arms and ammunition across the border, it was agreed to organize joint border patrolling in selected sensitive areas of Punjab Sector of India-Pakistan border. Joint patrolling would include sending out patrols during day and night and laying of ambushes. While the joint patrolling may be normally organized along the zero-line, the ambushes may be laid in depth by the respective agencies as per their ground requirements.

"To optimize the effectiveness of joint patrolling the broad guidelines agreed to were as follows:

(a) While the overall coordination of the arrangement will be at DIG, BSF/DDG, Pakistan Rangers level, the detailed Planning of the programme, the composition and the conduct of the patrol parties, etc would be planned jointly at Battalion Commander/Wing Commander level. To maintain a certain element of surprise the timing and execution of the programme for joint patrolling will be organized and coordinated at the Company Commander's level.

(b) The joint patrol will be headed by officers of equal rank from both sides.

(c) Proper procedure for briefing of the parties jointly by senior officers and providing of proper communication link at the various levels where coordination is required shall be established.

"The special arrangements for joint patrolling will be tried initially for a period of three months form its introduction and the procedure will be reviewed thereafter.

"Both sides agreed to extend mutual assistance in criminal investigation in matters relating to drug trafficking and smuggling having due regard to their respective administrative and legal systems in the following areas:

(a) Locating suspects or other connected persons;

(b) executing requests for searches and seizures;

(c) examining objects and sites; and

(d) making persons, including persons in custody, available to give evidence or assistance in investigation.

"It was agreed that the Home Secretary of India and the Interior Secretary of Pakistan shall remain in touch with each other and they agreed to meet again within six months in Islamabad."

New Delhi, May 24, 1988.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No. 2786/JS (AP)88 24 May 1988

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and has the honour to invite their attention to the suggestion made by the Home Secretary of India during the recently held India -- Pakistan Home Secretaries’ meeting that, as a token of their good intentions, Pakistan should try and help apprehend some of the top terrorists of Punjab who cross over to Pakistan and expedite the cases pending in the Lahore High Court for over two years against the hijackers of IAC aircraft taken to Pakistan. In this context, it may be recalled that Interior Secretary of Pakistan had agreed to extend his cooperation on both these matters, and suggested that full particulars of the terrorists be transmitted to him. Accordingly enclosed herewith is a set of full particulars and photographs of the following Sikh extremists which the Government of Pakistan may kindly apprehend:

1. Wassan Signgh Zaffarwal
2. Grubachan Singh Manochahal
3. Sukhdev Singh Babbar
4. Wadhawa Singh
5. Bhai Gurjit Singh
6. Atinder Pal Singh
7. Avter Singh Brahma
8. Bhai Kanwar Singh Dhami,
9. Balbir Singh Sandhu

In addition, it would also be appreciated if the Government of Pakistan could kindly expedite the cases pending against the hijackers of the IAC aircraft taken to Pakistan.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan the assurances of its highest considerations.
Record of Discussion during the Opening Session of the India-Pakistan Foreign SECRETARY-LEVEL Talks, held in New Delhi from June 1-2, 1988.

New Delhi, June 1, 1988.

1. The opening session of the Foreign Secretary level talks between India and Pakistan was held on June 1, 1988 from 10.30 hrs to 1350 hrs (The lists of the delegation members is annexed (not reproduced here). The Indian side was led by Foreign Secretary Shri K.P.S. Menon and the Pakistan side by Foreign Secretary Mr. Abdul Sattar.

2. Foreign Secretary extended a warm welcome to the Pakistan delegation and expressed the wish that they could have stayed longer in Delhi.

3. He said that as his mind went back over the years to other rounds of India-Pakistan talks, there was a feeling of regret, frustration - almost a kind of anger at one's impotence to make substantial progress. He said that this was an extra-ordinary situation when two countries knew each other so well. It was this feeling that makes one irritated at our inability to resolve our problems.

4. He said that in a sense, the month of May had been a better month. Two sets of bilateral talks had been held and a third was commencing. He expressed the hope that those two sets of talks would lead to an improvement of relations between the two countries and a better understanding of each other. But, he said, that he was not as optimistic as he would like to be, because judging by the temper of the country, progress would be evaluated on the basis of progress made on some specific issues.

5. FS suggested that the meeting start with a discussion on bilateral issues and the time left over be used for other regional and international issues. FS requested for any suggestions from the Pakistan side. He took the opportunity to express his appreciation of the reception accorded to him during his recent visit to Pakistan.

6. (FS then introduced members of the delegation)

7. In response to FS's opening statement, the Pakistan Foreign Secretary, Mr. Sattar, expressed his gratitude for the warm welcome extended to him. He recalled FS's brief visit to Islamabad during which, in spite of constraint of time, and the subject of discussions being somewhat limited, he was able to get a glimpse of the desire of the Government of Pakistan to dialogue with India. He said that it was after considerable lapse of time that the Foreign Secretaries were meeting. This would enable both sides to discuss in depth all issue bilateral issues. (He then introduced members of his delegation.)

8. Mr. Sattar said that as he listened to FS opening remarks he could not but empathize in the context of opportunities lost and disappointment at the lack of achievements commensurate with the efforts which had been put in over the years in the development of bilateral relations. He said that the achievements were not proportional to either efforts or aspirations. He had found that in terms of one's personal career equal amount of time, spent with other countries had resulted in far more positive gains.

9. However, he said that one had to bear in mind the high stakes in our bilateral relations and the potential for harm if we allow disappointments and frustrations to overtake us. He said that while examining the relations in the perspective of the last 16 year since Simla Agreement, and cataloguing the achievements made since, there was some sense of satisfaction at the steady progress in the normalization of the relations between the two countries. He said that he could recall a time when people of the two countries could not post a letter to each other or visit each other. There was now a far greater degree of normalization. However, this was far short of the aspirations of the Governments, not to speak of the people of the two countries. But he said that one should not lose heart. And it was with this perspective that he looked upon the present meeting.

10. He recalled that only a few days back while in Europe, he had been very impressed by their sense of achievement at the gains made in relations between the countries. He said that there was a great feeling of hope; tensions had relaxed; there was greater confidence; words such as enthusiastic and magnificent have been used to describe relation between the East and West Europe. There was also great prosperity. Similarly, he said, that in the South East Asian region, which was close to us, there was a great sense of achievement. He asked whether India and Pakistan should also not turn their attention to accelerating the progress of normalization and building of relations, given the aspirations and the will of the people to do so. He wondered, whether the two countries could not think of some confidence building measures. He said that perhaps an infrastructure of agreements like those in Europe could be developed. We could and try to examine the role of Helsinki in enabling Europe to overcome the existing cleavages, which were much sharper than are present in the Indian Sub-Continent. He said that we could start with the number of agreements which have been tabled over the years—the proposal for the Friendship Treaty was now over six years old; the Agreement on non-attack of nuclear installations, 2 1/2 years old. More recent proposals had also been made.

11. Mr. Sattar said that there should be a meeting of minds as to whether these agreements are really desirable. The technical work could be done at the level of officials and then the matter could be left to the Governments to decide at a political level as to when to conclude the agreements. He said he would be grateful for assistance to work out, at a technical level, the texts of these agreements without needing to announce that they have been formalized.

12. He asked whether there were any other moves that could be made. The Joint Commission had not met for three years. He said that there were agreements which could be signed at that meeting. He asked whether the political environment was conducive to the holding of such a meeting. He said that the Pakistan side was ready.

13. He agreed with the agenda proposed by FS that as much time as possible should be spent on bilateral issues.

14. FS said that the issue raised by the Pakistan Foreign Secretary about progress in other parts of the world was of relevance to us. This heightened, he said, the question in his mind as to why our part of the world should be left behind. He said there were certain items on which perhaps there could be forward movement. The Joint Commission could meet some time this year in September or thereafter. He said on important agreements such as the Treaty of Friendship and Non-Attack on Nuclear Installations, the two officials could sit together and see what kind of understanding could be reached.

15. FS, however, stressed that progress on these issues could not be divorced from the perception of Pakistan's present policies towards India. He said that after the Home Secretaries' meeting there had been some further developments in Punjab such as the flushing out of the Golden Temple and additional information had since been received regarding Pakistan’s complicity in the Punjab problem. He said that the feeling in India was very intense about Pakistan’s aid to terrorist activities. As long as this continued there was no question of India looking forward to progress in the areas mentioned. This would amount to the right hand not knowing what the left hand was doing. He said that it was absolutely essential for India to be assured that Pakistan was desisting from aiding extremist activities in Punjab. There were items which could be discussed such as trade, people-to-people contacts, but on bigger items we could not move given the present conditions.

16. This did not mean we did not want to work for peace. FS recalled PM’s statement in Parliament on 20th April 1988:-

“we entertain the warmest sentiments for the people of Pakistan with whom we share much in common, a language, music and literature. We have a common history. There is no ill-will towards the people of Pakistan. We wish them well. And therefore, we greatly welcome any exchanges at the peoples’ level - visitors, tourists, students, journalists, trade unionists, women’s groups - at every level we would like to see much more exchange…. Peace between Pakistan and India is peace between the peoples.”

17. FS said that India had been shocked by evidence of further complicity in the events in Punjab. He said that Pakistan was supplying extremists with guns of the latest type which were being used to carry out assassinations of our leaders. As long as this continued it was impossible to make progress on bigger issues.

18. Mr. Sattar expressed his gratitude to FS for expressing his views in such a lucid manner. He said that he could not but be impressed by the perceptions which existed in the Government of India with regard to Pakistani role in Punjab. He said, regrettably, Pakistan had been aware that a perception existed that they were giving support and assistance to elements of India’s population with whom there were some problems. He said that he could state in all sincerity that these perceptions were misplaced. He was personally aware of a high-level policy decision in the Government of Pakistan that in the interest of developing good neighbourly relations with India, everything possible must be done to ensure that Pakistan territory was not being used to threaten the territorial integrity and unity of India. He said that Pakistan had not allowed such elements to establish as refugees on Pakistani soil and seek help from international refugee agencies and neither had they permitted sanctuaries to dissidents and militants. He said that allegations were made from time to time. However, he would like to respectfully submit that the Government of India examines the credibility of its sources of information. He said that in disturbed conditions it was well-known that agencies were capable of manufacturing evidence. He said every one knew how the courts of the two countries treated evidence from the police.

19. He said that some weeks ago they had received a very long paper from the Government of India. A very thorough investigation was undertaken by the competent authorities in the Interior Ministry and the Border States of Punjab and Sind, into the allegations made in the paper. He said they came to the unavoidable conclusion that the charges were not based on fact. He said that names had been given in the Aide Memoire of people who have never touched Pakistani soil. Similarly, names had been given of those allegedly being provided sanctuary. This was also untrue. He asked how could one deal with evidence which had no basis in fact. He said that he knew the perception of the Government of India and also the policy of the Government of Pakistan. There had to be some means of bridging the yawning gap in the perceptions of the two countries. He reiterated that, in all sincerity, he felt that the Government of India’s perception of Government of Pakistan’s policy was incorrect.

20. He said that there were problems in his own country; problems of national integration. Such problems existed in other countries too and the resolution of these problems depended on the objective conditions and policies of the country concerned. He said that in Pakistan there were individuals who were against the national integrity of the State. There were also some personalities from prepartition days who were opposed to the movement which led to the formation of Pakistan. He said that the Government of India and its representatives in Pakistan kept in constant touch with these elements who were known to be against the national integration of Pakistan. He said that what could be done is that both sides scrupulously avoid contacts with anti-nationalist elements, in each other’s country. He said that the Pakistani Embassy in Delhi would refrain from contacting those people who were opposed to the integrity of India and asked the Ministry of External Affairs to issue instructions to its Missions in Pakistan to refrain from cultivating people who were opposed to the integrity of Pakistan.

21. He asked whether it was possible for the two Governments to issue a joint statement endorsing the territorial integrity and independence of each other and saying that both would refrain from giving encouragement whatsoever to secessionist movements in both the countries. He said that if needed these movements could be mentioned by name. He said that such a statement could be made by leaders of the two countries at a later date.

22. He asked as to what the other objective means of setting to rest India’s suspicions of Pakistan’s intentions in Punjab could be. He said that there was talk of sealing the border. Pakistan would be very happy if the Government of India built a fence on their side of the border. Pakistan faced a problem of illegal immigrants from Bangladesh who came across India. He suggested that in future there could be a joint effort - the cost of fencing could be shared by the two countries. He said that he did not have a brief on the subject however, he was sure that the Government of Pakistan would be happy to assist in the sealing of the Indo-Pak border. He said that the Government of India was facing problems in constructing fencing on the India-Bangladesh Border. That money could be invested on the Indo-Pak Border. Pakistan also did not want a border frequented by criminals and saboteurs.

23. He said that the exchange of perceptions through Aides Memoire had been very helpful. Pakistan had investigated each and every charge made. If there were any more charges to be raised they would respond after careful examination. He thanked FS for referring to the Prime Minister’s statement saying that all such statements were followed very closely in Pakistan. He said that just the day before yesterday when the President addressed the Pakistani Press largely in the internal context, he took the trouble to also stress the desire for improvement of relations with India. He said that he had dwelt at length on this matter since it was vital to rectify the misperceptions in India otherwise the environment would not be conducive to the development of relations between the two countries.

24. He said that he would be grateful if officials meet to discuss at the technical level, the text of the agreements on Non-Attack of Nuclear Installations and the Treaty of Friendship. Mr. Sattar said that he understood that India would not like to project trends in contradiction to perceptions at the national level. He suggested, however, that the two delegations try to develop the text of the two agreements to a point of maturity so that they could be submitted to the respective Governments. He said that the understanding to conclude an agreement on the Non-Attack of Nuclear Installations was publicly announced on December 17, 1985 at a press conference by President Zia and Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. He said that the words of leaders were more sacrosanct than agreements.

25. He said that the text of the Friendship Treaty was now unfortunately getting quite old. He said that he would like to know, now or later, whether the Government of India would like to finalize the text. He said that the security context of South Asia was bound to change after the Geneva Accord. Accordingly, perceptions in New Delhi regarding foreign bases in Pakistan should also change in the face of factual developments. The belief that Pakistan was about to sign an agreement with the USA on bases, regarding which even high level officers were convinced had been misplaced. There was a lesson in this not to assume the worst regarding the other side. He asked whether the article relating to bases was of relevance still.

26. Mr. Sattar said that agreements helped to build confidence. The Simla Agreement and agreements signed later in accordance with the Simla Agreement had great value in times of stress. He, therefore, placed on the table the desirability of proceeding with negotiations on the agreements.

27. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary said that he was glad to know that India favoured the meeting of the joint Commission later in the year in September. He said that the Ministers would get busy after September with the UNGA. It was necessary that before the next SAARC summit this item on the agenda be got over with.

28. He said that there were other drafts such as the Avoidance of Double Taxation and the Cultural Agreements which could be signed at the meeting of the Joint Commission.

29. He then raised two other points. He spoke of the totally unnecessary situation arising in January-February 1987 from the misreading of intentions by both sides which resulted in a certain amount of tension along the border. Since India had a large military exercise due in 1989, he asked if it was possible to have - as in the Stockholm Agreement - an understanding to notify each other of large troop movements. In the Stockholm understanding, the threshold was of a 13,000 troops. He said that the two sides would decide on the quantum of troops deployed and distances to be maintained from the border during these exercises. There was a general agreement between the army headquarters of both the countries, but this lacked precision. The second idea related to nuclear proliferation. He said that it was desirable that the two countries extend their commitment to the partial test ban treaty to a comprehensive test ban treaty. He said that Pakistan had signed and ratified the partial test ban treaty which, however, did not deal with underground tests. While neither India nor Pakistan had the intention and - Pakistan certainly did not have the capability – to conduct underground tests, was it possible for this treaty to also extend to underground tests. He sincerely hoped that the time would come when both countries would be ready to do this.

30. FS thanked Mr. Sattar for his very constructive attitude. He said that it would certainly be irresponsible of both countries to make accusations without evidence. He said India had information that the Sikh hijackers of IAC aircraft were kept in jails with a certain amount of comfort. Regarding the question of joint patrolling discussed during the Home Secretaries’ level talks, FS said, that it had been a suggestion made by President Zia-ul-Haq during his visit to Islamabad. However, the elements of surprise ambushes and hot pursuit without which joint patrolling would not be effective, was not agreed to by the Pakistan side. The Indian Government had got a lambasting in the press for agreeing to just joint patrolling.

31. Mr. Sattar then asked what surprise ambushes and hot pursuit would mean on the ground. Would it mean that the Pakistan Rangers involved in the joint patrol could shoot on the Indian side of the border and vice versa?

32. At this Ambassador Humayun Khan, interjected to say that Pakistan had no objections to hot pursuit or ambushes, but that they should be in their respective countries. He said that while on the Indian side, the Indian Border Security Forces could state with pride, the number of people shot dead in encounters, such a thing was not possible without due legal procedures of law in Pakistan. He said that in India the forces could shoot at sight but in Pakistan the instructions were to capture alive those crossing the border illegally.

33. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary said 1700 Bangladeshis had been captured in the recent weeks and they had all crossed over through India. He said it was necessary to make border patrolling more effective. Joint patrols should not be mere spectators of illegalities. He said that there were reports in the Indian Press from time to time saying that infiltrators from Pakistan had been captured or killed. He said that their names and particulars were never provided to the Pakistan side. Neither were their bodies returned. This was necessary so that their families could be informed and also that these incidents would deter others from illegally crossing the border. He said that shooting in each other's country would create extremely complicated problems. He said that he had spoken to the Interior Secretary who had told him that the BSF and the Pakistan Rangers had a meeting on the 24th of April, 1988 to work out the modalities of joint patrolling. However, the feeling was that India had already decided, even before the joint patrolling commenced, that it would be a useless exercise.

34. FS said that this was because the teeth had been taken out of joint patrolling. We did, at present, have ambushes within our own territory. However, if people were to come to know of ambushes through an exchange of information, what would be the point of joint patrols. Therefore, the suggestion of surprise ambushes by the joint patrol had been made.

35. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary enquired whether there were such agreements including hot pursuit, and ambushes between other countries.

36. Ambassador Singh said that such agreements did exist between Mexico and USA and some countries in Europe.

37. JS (AP) interjected to say that during the technical meeting between the Pakistan Rangers and Border Security Force, the Pakistani side had even opposed the concept of joint patrolling as agreed during the Home Secretaries level meeting and had instead wanted only coordinated patrolling with each side keeping 20 yards from the zero line.

38. Ambassador Humayun Khan said that this problem had been resolved.

39. Mr. Sattar said that what was desired was to implement the decision taken between the two Prime Ministers to take effective measures to tackle the problem of illegal movements across the borders. JS (AP) said that during hot pursuit it was possible to agree that security personnel from one side not open fire in the other country.

40. Mr. Sattar said that it was a good idea. He said that if there were legal obstacles, it should be seen how these could be removed. There was always room for improvement in the measures already taken. However, it was not right to reject outright the steps taken. This also should not result in the killing of each other’s personnel, he said, in a humorous vein.

41. He reiterated that in the Punjab context, it was necessary to take active measures to set at rest perceptions on both sides. Besides sincerely believing that the Government of Pakistan followed a policy of non-intervention, Mr. Sattar said it was also his personal perception. He said that, however, the Governments should not be responsible for criminals.

42. FS said that there were also certain perceptions which had come up during the meeting between the two Home Secretaries regarding the misuse of the visits of Indian jathas to shrines in Pakistan. The Home Ministry had also produced some objectionable posters which were found in Gurudawaras in Pakistan.

43. The Pakistan Ambassador Humayun Khan said that apart from the preamble in the posters which thanked Gen. Zia for his support, the rest consisted of demands made on Pakistan. He said that this was rather an amateurish way of proving connivance.

44. Mr. Sattar said that there were some limitations faced by the State which could be recognized. He spoke of the convention in mosques, even in Mecca, which gave freedom to a person to stand up and espouse his views, however, vehement they be. He gave instances of such incidents in Pakistan as well as the Jama Masjid in India. He said that the Government of Pakistan had issued instructions saying that no political activity be allowed during jathas. However, it was difficult to stop those pilgrims who came from Canada and the U.K. He said that the Indian Embassy themselves would be able to vouch for the fact that the arrangements during \textit{jathas} had improved greatly after 1984. In the past, there had been some violent incidents. However, there had been none in the last three years. The Pakistan side gave visas only to those cleared by MEA.

45. FS said that the problem was not so much of pilgrims from India rather than those coming from outside. Mr. Sattar said that based on the lists given by the Indian side, the Pakistan Government had issued instructions in many cases, regarding refusal of visas. He said that Pakistan was prepared to go as far as exchanging lists of foreigners who should not be allowed entry in each country. He said that in future Pakistan could not accept unilateral lists from India. There were some Pakistanis who came into India with foreign passports - Libyan, Cypriot whom Pakistan had brought to the notice of the Indian Government.

46. Ambassador S.K. Singh said that he had been dealing with the issue of \textit{jathas} since 1959. There were three categories - Muslims, Hindu and Sikh pilgrims. The size of the Hindu pilgrims has remained the same over the years however beginning 1979-80 there was a greater interflow of Sikhs from abroad when Indian \textit{jathas} visited Pakistan. He said that as far as the interaction between the Sikhs was concerned, they were of a public and non-public type. He said that on the advice of Pakistan, the presence of the Embassy staff had been scaled down to a minimum. However, it was the experience of the Indian side that microphones and stages maintained by the Aukaf (Wakuf) authorities had been handed over to the most militant Sikhs. This fact had been shrugged off by the Pakistan authorities. He said that he did not think that anything could be done till there was political will in the higher echelons of the Government to deal with these elements. He suggested that the dates for the visits by Indian Sikhs and foreign Sikhs could be separated. However, President Zia had said that this could not be done. Huge quantities of books, videos and literature, espousing the cause of \textit{Khalistan} were available freely during the visits by Indian \textit{jathas}. During a meeting alone with President Zia, the President had admitted that Ganga Singh Dhillon had visited Pakistan.

47. He said that it was time that Pakistan told third country Sikhs that the picnic in Pakistan was over. He asked why there were differences in the treatment of the Sikhs in the 1980s. He said that India was not merely being tiresome but our perceptions were beginning to come in the way of our relations with Pakistan.

48. Mr. Sattar said that Pakistan had as a policy not raised with the Government of India problems relating to its own territory. India had provided instigation and support to certain groups who were against the national integrity. of Pakistan. He said that he was confronted by his authorities with evidence of such statements and incidents. He had not gone into this before because he did not want a perception of tit-for-tat. Prime Minister Junejo has briefly mentioned it to the Indian Prime Minister in 1986. He said both sides required to exercise abundant caution and should be seen to be taking reciprocal steps to set at rest perceptions of interference in the internal affairs of the other’s country.

49. Mr. Sattar said that there was a lacuna in the Agreement of pilgrimages. There were no programmes for Indian Muslim pilgrims to go to Pakistan. He said that until 1982 he had not perceived the emerging situation in Punjab.

50. At the end of the meeting, it was decided that a technical level meeting would be held in the afternoon to discuss the text of the agreement on Non-Attack on Nuclear Installations and the two Foreign Secretaries would meet separately along with their Ambassadors. It was also decided to discuss guidelines on what should be told to the press at the end of the meeting.

1180. SECRET

Record of the discussions of the Officials meeting separately as mandated by the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 1, 1988. (Afternoon)

Ministry of External Affairs
(AP Division)

As agreed during the plenary session in the forenoon, officials of the two sides had a separate meeting in the afternoon of June 1, 1988, to discuss some bilateral issues. During these discussions the Pakistan side was represented by Khalid Mahmood, Additional Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Tariq Altaf, Director-General, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Kamran Niaz, Counsellor, Embassy of Pakistan, New Delhi, while the Indian side comprised of Joint Secretary(AP) and Deputy Secretary(AP). The main points raised during the meeting are summarized below, issue-wise:-

I. Agreement on Non-Attack on Nuclear Installations:

2. At the outset, JS (AP) pointed out that the main sticking point was Pakistan’s insistence on the inclusion of Article II (2), which called upon the two sides to maintain contacts for effective implementation of the Agreement. He added that this paragraph was rather redundant and that Foreign Secretary Sattar had also told Ambassador S.K. Singh that Pakistan would not be dogmatic if India insisted upon its deletion. He explained that in our perception the proposed Agreement should have only 3 ingredients, namely, (i) a declaration on non-attack on nuclear installations/facilities; (ii) definition of nuclear installations/facilities; and (iii) list of installations/facilities to be exchanged by the two sides. Article II already provided for each party informing the other on 1st January of each calendar year of the latitude and longitude of its nuclear installations and facilities and whenever there was any change.

3. When the Pakistan side pressed further, JS (AP) explained that we also had apprehensions regarding this paragraph being misused at a later stage to bring in the concept of mutual inspection which Pakistan had been proposing. The Pakistan side, however, disclaimed any such intention and stated that the contacts referred to in this paragraph were limited only to this particular Agreement and could not be stretched to include other issues. They felt that it would be useful to retain this paragraph in order to ensure smooth implementation of the Agreement.

4. The position which emerged as to the Preamble and other Articles of the Agreement during the discussions is as follows:-

(a) Preamble: No difference. (Two sides have agreed to delete references to both the Simla Agreement and the U.N. Charter).

(b) Article I (1): The phrase ‘any overt or covert action from its territory or outside’ is an additionality in Pakistani formulation as compared to our revised draft. JS (AP) explained that though the phrase ‘overt and covert’ was included in the ad referendum, draft of January 1986, our experts later felt that any covert action by definition would not be admitted by any government. Moreover, inclusion of ‘directly or indirectly’ in this Article already covered all possible action and, therefore, there was no need to include ‘overt or covert’. The Pakistan side, however, insisted that these words should be retained as they made the formulation more precise.

Similarly, while we took the position that the phrase ‘from its territory or outside’ was redundant and should be omitted, the Pakistan side insisted on its inclusion. They maintained that it was useful to retain these words as they covered attacks launched from outside the territory or from the space. We explained that we were rather uncomfortable about this phrase because it was not only redundant but also because its inclusion in the text might give some respectability to the allegations in the Pakistan media about Indian designs to attack nuclear installations in Pakistan with Israeli collusion.

(c) Article 1(2): In the revised draft given to us on March 8, 1988, Pakistan had suggested the insertion of the words ‘uranium enrichment’ and ‘and materials in any form and establishments storing significant quantities of radio-active material’. We informed the Pakistani side that we had no objection to the addition of the words ‘uranium enrichment’ in Article 1(2). However, we were not sure if there was any need to insert a reference to establishments storing significant quantities of radio-active materials. We pointed out that the word ‘significant’ had not been defined and it might lead to a situation where even hospitals storing radio-active material, could be brought under the purview of this Agreement. We indicated that a via media could be the insertion of the words ‘and storages’ after ‘...any other installations’ in our formulation. We agreed to consult the Department of Atomic Energy on this paragraph and revert to the Pakistan side later.

(d) Article II (1): In the revised draft given to us on March 8, 1988, Pakistan had accepted our formulation that the two sides will inform each other about the ‘latitude and longitude’ of nuclear installations on 1st January of each calendar year and whenever there was any change. During the discussions, however, they changed their position and argued that there was no need to specifically refer to ‘latitude and longitude’ and that it would suffice if this paragraph merely required that the two sides would share information regarding the location of nuclear installations. It was explained that we had suggested the addition of the words ‘latitude/longitude’ so that information exchanged was precise in nature. While the Pakistan side did not appear to have any serious reservation on this point, they did not accept our formulation either.

(e) Article III: This Article, inter alia, says that the Agreement will be done in 3 copies in English, Hindi and Urdu, the English text being authentic. The two sides agreed that the present formulation gave the impression that the Hindi and Urdu texts were not authentic and, therefore, we should work out some other formulation which would make it clear that while all texts were authentic the English text would prevail in case of any dispute.

II. Non-Aggression Pact/Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation:

5. There was a very brief discussion on this subject. Tariq Altaf said that we had not so far given our reaction to the formulations on ‘bases’ and ‘bilateralism’ given by them in January 1986. We pointed out that Foreign Secretary Bhandari had given his response at that time itself. Later, in December 1986, Foreign Secretary Venkateswaran had further elaborated on the difficulties we had in accepting Pakistani formulations. We were still of the view that our formulations on ‘bases’ and ‘bilateralism’ were more comprehensive and should be included in the proposed Treaty.

III. Border Ground Rules:
6. Tariq Altaf raised this subject and said that there were three sticking points in the draft agreed on an ad referendum basis in September last year. They related to the nomenclature of the proposed agreement, references to terrorism, and defence-related clauses. As far as the first point was concerned, it was a relatively minor one and could easily be sorted out. During the talks between the Home Secretary of India and the Interior Secretary of Pakistan, the Pakistan side had agreed to include paragraphs with references to terrorism etc. which approximated to the paragraphs which we wanted to include in the border ground rules. The main problem was now of defence-related clauses.

7. JS (AP) explained that these border ground rules provided a framework for cooperation between the border security forces of India and Pakistan. Defence-related provisions which Pakistan wanted to include in the border ground rules were, in fact, within the jurisdiction of Army and not the BSF. Moreover, our Ministry of Defence was not ready to accept these provisions. Tariq Altaf said that it should be possible to resolve this problem at the next meeting of the committee set-up to formulate border ground rules.

IV. Prior Notification of Troop Movements:

8. Tariq Altaf recalled that during the plenary session Foreign Secretary Sattar had raised this subject. JS (AP) pointed out that there was a broad understanding between the Army authorities of the two countries about keeping each other informed about military exercises. He enquired whether Pakistan had worked out a draft agreement, Tariq Altaf replied in the negative but added that they had some tentative ideas in mind. They were of the view that the proposed agreement could be along the line of the Stockholm Accord. It would contain, inter alia, understanding on the number of troops whose movements from their bases would require advance information, period of advance information, information regarding the calendar of planned military exercises, designation of military and other channels of communications and so on. He wondered if two sides could start working on this agreement.

9. JS (AP) said that while we could consider such an agreement at a future date, at present we would first like to have some movement on our major concern (viz. Pakistan's involvement in Punjab). Once the climate of India-Pakistan relations had improved, we could move ahead in several areas.

10. Tariq Altaf again suggested that the two sides could exchange drafts without any publicity JS (AP) gave a non-committal reply.

VI. Agreement on Prevention of Airspace Violation by Military Aircraft:

11. Tariq Altaf said that they were examining the draft given by us recently and would revert in the matter.
VII. Agreement on Hijacking:
12. It was agreed that this could be discussed during the visit of our civil aviation delegation to Pakistan.

VIII. Land and Maritime Boundary:
13. Tariq Altaf again asked if we were ready to hold talks on this subject, JS (AP) explained that there had been some delay on our part because of the surveys we had to carry out and because the Surveyor General had retired and successor was yet to be appointed. He expressed the hope that it would be possible to set dates for these talks by September this year.

IX. Capture of Fishing Trawlers/Fishermen:
14. Tariq Altaf mentioned that according to their figures there were as many as 35 Pakistani vessels along with 58 crewmen, still in Indian custody, while there were only 13 Indian vessels along with 11 crewmen in Pakistani custody. He expressed the hope that the recent agreement on exchange of captured fishing trawlers and fishermen would be expeditiously implemented.

15. JS (AP) pointed out that the figures given by Tariq Altaf did not appear to be entirely accurate because a much larger number of Indian vessels and fishermen were still in Pakistani custody. In fact, 3 sailing vessels alone, which were still in Pakistani custody, had a crew of 43. JS (AP) also mentioned that we had issued instructions to the concerned authorities for the release of Pakistani fishing boats and trawlers and there were no Pakistani fishermen in our custody apart from those captured after the agreement.

16. Both sides agreed that the exchange should be carried out smoothly.

As decided at the opening session of the India-Pakistan Foreign Secretary-level talks, FS held talks with the Pakistan Foreign Secretary Mr. Abdul Sattar in his room at 1530 hours on June 1, 1988. Also present were Pakistan Ambassador Dr. Humayun Khan, Mr. Shafqat Kakakhel, Minister in the Pakistan Embassy, Indian Ambassador in Islamabad Shri S.K. Singh and Smt. Deepa Wadhwa, Under Secretary (Pak).

2. The first session lasted for about 75 minutes after which the Pakistan Foreign Secretary left for a courtesy call on Raksha Mantri Shri K.C. Pant. The meeting resumed at 1750 hours.

3. After an exchange of pleasantries, Ambassador S.K. Singh informed Mr. Abdul Sattar of the draft Press Release which had been prepared. Mr. Abdul Sattar suggested that the word ‘useful’ be also used to describe the nature of the talks.

4. Ambassador Humayun Khan asked what the response of the Spokesman of the Indian side would be if he were asked about the contents of the meeting. Mr. Sattar said that the Spokesman should be allowed to identify the subjects discussed. He said that he would be happy if it were left to the Foreign Secretaries to answer questions raised by the Press.

5. FS said that there were so many agencies involved that he hoped there would be no distortions.

6. Ambassador Humayun Khan said that after the meeting of the Home Secretaries, it was made out as if the visitor had been put on the mat.

7. FS said that he had spoken to the Home Secretary and clarified certain matters raised during the preliminary session. The Home Secretary had confirmed that he had been in favour of hot pursuit and joint ambushes to make joint patrolling more effective. However, the ideas were dropped at the insistence of the Pakistan side. He further said that in the matter of briefing the Press, there had been no breach of faith.
8. Dr. Humayun Khan said that perhaps he had understood incorrectly that the Indian side was also in favour of ambushes and hot pursuit in the respective territories of the two countries.

9. FS said that he was willing to consider the Pakistani proposal to just identify the subjects raised in the course of the talks. However, since the contents of the discussion were bound to come out anyway, he felt that he would express India’s overriding concern regarding Pakistan’s involvement in Punjab and that this was going to affect all aspects of India-Pakistan relations. Because of this perception, the two sides were unable to make progress in other fields.

10. There was then a discussion on Ambassador S.K. Singh’s suggestion for meeting the Press at the airport.

11. Mr. Abdul Sattar said that it was better to answer some questions at the airport. He would like to say there that these talks were a continuation of the process of normalization of relations between the two countries. He said what he wanted to avoid was “orchestrated leaks”.

12. FS said that should the Pakistan Foreign Secretary make a statement, then the Press would naturally follow up with him and the differences would come out in the open.

13. Mr. Sattar said that then there should be more substance in the release. He said that there were people in Pakistan closely following the talks. The two sides should not try to score at each other’s expense. He said that he did not want a regular press conference but would like some pressmen at the airport to whom he could give the press release and express gratitude for the hospitality extended by the Indian side and satisfaction at the talks.

14. FS then broached the subject of the impasse over the Tulbul Project. He gave a detailed background of the various rounds of talks which had been held to sort out this issue.

15. Mr. Sattar said that this matter had been highly politicized in Pakistan. The entire Cabinet had heard a detailed presentation by the Indus Water Commissioner. He said that his recollection of the matter was contrary to the point raised by FS that these works were not in contravention of the Indus Waters Treaty. He said that the Treaty had provisions for work on the tributaries and channels, but there was a limit on the storage permissible on the main channel. The main point of Pakistan’s case was that the work done on the main channel was in contravention of the Treaty. He said that the Foreign Office had kept out of the entire negotiations. Though the matter was of internal political significance, it was not Pakistan’s intention to undermine the rights and obligations of the two parties concerned through political means. Mr. Sattar said that the presentation to the Cabinet had been made by those who had taken both legal and technical advice.

16. He agreed that there should be time bound limits for the negotiations. He asked whether the matter could be raised at a higher level. He also wanted to know whether the Salal Dam project was a precedent.

17. FS replied in the affirmative.

18. Ambassador S.K. Singh gave a factual background of the meetings which had taken place at the technical level and then at the governmental level. He said that two sides could appoint a consultant and as a last resort go in for an international arbitration. He said that the Pakistani side had asked for a lot of data which had been provided by India. India had tried to prove that Pakistan would not suffer any disability due to the project. The net average water on the Pakistan side would not be reduced. In fact, they would be benefited to the tune of an additional 75 megawatts of power per month. He said that the Pakistani side had not controverted these facts. They had, on the other hand, not given data asked for by India. He said that India had agreed to stop the work on the project as a result of which some Rs.5-8 crores spent on the works on the side channels could be washed away. He said the point to be considered was whether work on the side channels should go on, and a schedule be given for resumption of talks on work on the main channel.

19. Mr. Sattar said that an important consideration was whether the effects of this project in Pakistan were good or bad. He also questioned the interpretation of the Treaty itself. He said that Indus Basin Commissioner in Pakistan had been taken to task for waking up late since work on this project had started a long time back. He said that the Pakistan Government would be under pressure if the work was to be resumed. He said that if experts from India and Pakistan fail to reach a settlement, then they could seek the opinion of a mutual expert. He suggested that the meeting could be elevated to the Ministerial level.

20. FS said that he was given to believe by Secretary (Water Resources) that the matter was much simpler. He would now have to revert to him.

21. The next issue raised by FS was that of Pakistan’s installation of a powerful transmitter across Poonch which interfered in TV transmissions from the Indian side. He said that discussions had taken place at the technical level between technical level officials and the officials of Doordarshan and PTV.
Pakistan's contention was that they had not violated international law. However, our transmissions were being affected in our own town and the transmission to Islamabad was also being affected. Mr. Sattar said that he had not heard of this problem before. He said that he did not think that it was a deliberate policy and would report back and find a solution.

22. Ambassador Humayun Khan said that he had seen, as recently as 16/17 May 1988, Doordarshan programmes while in Rawalpindi. Ambassador S.K. Singh said that this was not correct.

23. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary said that if it was a problem of frequencies, then the frequency would have to be changed.

24. FS then spoke about the draft agreement on anti-hijacking measures which were proposed to be given to the Pakistan side during the forthcoming talks between the Civil Aviation Secretaries of both countries.

25. Mr. Sattar said that this draft be given before the meeting so that the Pakistan side could come ready with their suggestions at the meeting.

26. FS said that India was still awaiting confirmation from the Pakistan side regarding the opening of the ‘Khokhrapar-Munabao rail link.

27. Mr. Sattar said that within the first year of taking charge, the former Prime Minister Mr. Junejo had said that the Khokhrapar-Munabao Border Post should be opened, since a large number of visitors to India originate from the southern part of Pakistan. However, in the context of the advice given by other agencies saying that there was no need to make the border more vulnerable there had been some re-thinking on the proposal. He said though there was political desire, because of domestic and bilateral considerations, to open this border route, in view of the evidence produced by the agencies to the Executive, other considerations had come in the way.

28. Ambassador Humayun Khan said that this had become a victim of the suspicions which dominate relations between India and Pakistan. He said a date had been fixed for the visit by an Indian delegation in September 1986 to finalize the opening of the route. However, the leader of the delegation had reported sick. He insinuated that this was a diplomatic illness.

29. Ambassador S.K. Singh said that PM Junejo had told him in 1987 that this route would not be opened now.

30. FS then told the Pakistan side that because of India’s perception of Pakistan’s involvement in Punjab, it would not be possible to go ahead and finalize a number of pending agreements, such as the MOU on air violations, discussions on threat perceptions, agreement on non-attack on each other’s nuclear installations, the setting up of joint ventures and the Treaty of Friendship.

31. Mr. Sattar then mentioned the pending problem of the boundary in Sir Creek. He said that since the territorial waters had not been demarcated in this area, off the Gujarat/Sind coast, fishermen of both sides were put to hardship.

32. FS said that he agreed that the talks on this subject should be held within a couple of months.

33. The meeting resumed after the call by the Pakistan Foreign Secretary on the Raksha Mantri.

34. Briefing the FS on his talks with Raksha Mantri, Mr. Sattar said that he had spoken to him regarding the advance notification of routine military exercises due to be held in 1989. (This matter had also been raised by the Pakistan Foreign Secretary during the preliminary session in the morning). The discussion then went on to the subject of Afghanistan.

35. FS asked whether arms supply to the Mujahideen was continuing.

36. Mr. Sattar referred to the statement by Armacost wherein he had said that the PDPA Government in Kabul was to receive arms worth US $ 1 billion from the Soviets.

37. FS said that these arms were being left behind by the Soviet troops.

38. Mr. Sattar said that it would mean a net transfer of arms. He said that Vorontsov had given him a schedule of the withdrawal of Soviet troops and it was apparent that there would be a net accretion of weapons which would affect the understanding reached in Geneva on symmetry.

39. FS enquired whether leaving behind weapons was also covered in the Geneva accords,

40. Mr. Sattar said that the Geneva Accords made it clear that the US would exercise its right to supply weapons should USSR give military assistance to the Kabul Government. He said that discussions had been held with Diego Cordovez who was fully aware of the letters exchanged at the time of the Geneva Accords. He said that Cordovez had taken a sagacious decision that political actions be taken at the political level and legal actions at the legal level. He said he hoped that the two guarantors of the Accords would stand by their political commitments.

41. He said that Cordovez would remain as a representative of the Secretary-General of the UN on the implementation of the Geneva Accords even after he became Foreign Minister of Ecuador. He said there had been some problems regarding his role as representative of the Secretary General. However, those objections had been sorted out. There were also some doubts on the role given to him for his good offices for the formation of a broad-based government in Kabul. There were those who thought that the formation of a new government in a country was not within the ambit of the UN. He said these arguments were not valid. The government was not to be formed by Cordovez but by the Afghans. He said that the issue had since been sorted out and that Cordovez had the approval of the Secretary General to continue his good offices.

42. He said that India would be happy to know that one of the mandates given to Cordovez by the Ecuador President was to improve relations with India. He said Pakistan proposed to accredit a non-resident representative to Ecuador.

43. FS asked about Mr. Sattar’s recent visit to Geneva. He said that he had gone there to clarify the understanding on the mandate of the good offices mission and to discuss the extension of appropriate facilities to UN organizations in Pakistan involved with the rehabilitation of the refugees in Afghanistan. The third issue was the role of Cordovez himself. He said that Cordovez was in touch with some eminent Afghans and would be visiting Kabul by the end of June. He said that he would be meeting Dr. Najibullah in New York before that.

44. He said that in the context of refugee movement, the task had been given over to the new UN Coordinator, Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan. He said that the relationship between the Coordinator and the representative of the UNHCR was still the subject of some contradictions. Aga Khan had on his visit to Pakistan contacted UN agencies and brought with him members of the UNDP, the Red Cross, WHO, WFP, UNICEF, etc. This team had touched down in all the three capitals, Islamabad, Kabul and Tehran. They had visited refugee camps in Peshawar and held discussions with the representatives of the refugees regarding their return. He hoped that these efforts would bear fruit.

45. FS enquired whether the thinning out of refugee camps has started.

46. Ambassador S.K. Singh said that he had heard this process would start only in August.

47. Foreign Secretary Sattar said that August is being mentioned because by that time Soviets would have withdrawn from the Afghan county side. He said that survey showed that 60% of houses left behind by refugees were in a state of disrepair.

48. He said that refugees would be unwilling to return till they knew there was a basic infrastructure available. There was also the problem of oncoming winter. He said that he wanted the refugees to start moving immediately. There was a fear in Pakistan that because of continuing fighting, more refugees would probably be coming. He said that the UN had felt that it would be difficult to carry out rehabilitation work through Kabul since most of the refugees had come from within 100 kms of the Pak border. Kabul had no control in this area and therefore supplies could not be made through Kabul.

49. Ambassador S.K. Singh said that Kabul had no objection on this score.

50. Mr. Sattar said that the UNHCR had closely studied the origins of the refugees and once a situation was conducive for their return, they would start their journey back to their villages.

51. Ambassador Singh asked whether UNCHCR would travel with the refugees to their villages.

52. Mr. Sattar confirmed this. He said that the UN was very confident of funds. The Secretary General was to issue an appeal for contribution to the funds for rehabilitation of the refugees. He said that there was lot of sympathy in the West. What was required was not a refugee relief programme but a refugee resettlement programme.

53. Mr. Sattar said that if a compromise was possible then a central authority would evolve. Such a compromise was not possible because Mujahideen leaders said they would have nothing to do with PDPA. He said that the Mujahideen hope to extend the territory under their control and the Kabul Government hopes to contain them. So the prospect for Jalalabad/Kandahar was not good. Fighting would probably continue resulting in a further influx of refugees into Pakistan.

54. JS (AP) said that within the range of 50-60 kms. from the Pakistan border, the refugees should not have any trouble in returning since the Kabul Government did not have any control in this area.

55. Mr. Sattar said that the conditions were not suitable. However, the first priority now was the return of the refugees and he hoped that by the summer of 1989; 80-90% of the refugees would have returned. Mr. Sattar then said that during the visit by Dr. Najib to New Delhi, there had been some talk of assistance by India. He asked whether the nature of this assistance had been decided upon.

56. FS said that there had been no further development on this issue.

57. JS (AP) asked how the UNHCR proposed to proceed with the rehabilitation of refugees.

58. Mr. Sattar said there would be extensive use of international voluntary organizations and non-governmental organizations. He said they would try to identify local authorities, establish contacts/agreements with them and set up local offices. Mr. Sattar said there was an impression abroad that Pakistan was able to get things done. He said that this was a gross exaggeration. Pakistan had been unable to persuade the leadership of the Mujahideen alliance to meet Cordovez and it was after much persuasion that one of the leaders (Khais) had attended the meeting. He said that these Mujahideen leaders were extremely independent.

59. FS asked about their relationship with local commanders. Mr. Sattar said that in 13 out of the 27 provinces tribal chieftains had kept both sides out of their areas. Other commanders had varying degrees of independence. He said that no one could foresee with clarity, how the situation in Afghanistan would evolve.

60. The meeting ended at 1845 hours.

SECRET

Summary Record of discussions of the meeting between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 2, 1988. (Forenoon)

Ministry of External Affairs
(AP Division)

The Pakistani and the Indian delegations met on 2nd June at 10.30 A.M. to continue the exchange of views. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary, at the outset, apologized for the delay in his arrival as the previous meeting with Raja Dinesh Singh had been delayed. He then proceeded to give a brief account of his meeting with Dinesh Singh. Mr. Sattar explained that in the context of Indo-Pak relations, Raja Saheb mentioned the same point as FS had raised earlier about alleged Pak interference in Punjab. In addition, he also referred to the perceptions in India of threat from Pakistan and also the Hindu revivalism in response to the rise of Muslim fundamentalism. In this connection, Raja saheb emphasized that the developments in Pakistan have great influence on Indian Muslims. Raja saheb also emphasized the necessity of confidence-building measures between the two countries. In this connection, Raja saheb felt that relaxed meetings between the leaders of the two countries, joint ventures between the businessmen and a solution of Tulbul problem could make important contribution. Mr. Sattar added that he thought it fit to brief the FS about his meeting with Raja saheb as the lady officer accompanying him had chosen to opt out of this meeting which, added Mr. Sattar, humorously, was between ‘men’.

Mr. Sattar then suggested that in this meeting some time could be devoted to evolve a joint briefing to be given to the press. He also wanted to know about how the meeting in Havana had been going. In this connection, he referred to a report that in Havana, the Indian delegation had stated that they would not like to comment on Pak delegate’s statement. Mr. Sattar felt that multilateral diplomacy, despite its limitations should not be allowed to cramp bilateral relations.

FS informed Mr. Sattar that so far we had not had any reports on the Havana meeting.

FS then requested Mr. Sattar for Pakistan’s assessment of Iran-Iraq situation.

Iran-Iraq Situation: Mr. Sattar said that it was Pakistan’s efforts to shield its bilateral relations with Iran or Iraq from the Iran-Iraq conflict. He said that, initially, there were perceptions in Iraq that Pakistan tilted toward Iran. The fact, however, is that Pakistan very strictly avoids any breach of neutrality in Iran-Iraq war. Earlier, perhaps, Pakistan tilted towards Iran, but no longer so. There is no Pak assistance to Iran. Pakistan has not publicly called upon Iran to implement the UNSG Resolution 598. All his previous visits to Iran in the recent past have been devoted entirely to bilateral matters. Mr. Sattar recalled that Iran was strongly opposed to Pakistan’s participation in the Proximity Talks in Geneva.

Mr. Sattar clarified that his knowledge is based on the situation as it prevailed 1 ½ months ago. Iranians do not reject 598 and are, in fact, prepared to proceed on the basis of this resolution, but they attach different priorities to the implementation points mentioned in 598. They are adamant that the aggressor should be first identified and a process for this identification should be initiated.

Pakistan, at the highest level, has suggested to Iran that 598 and the efforts of the Security Council offer the best way out of the stalemate. It is Pakistan’s hope that Iran would consider initiating the UN Secretary General to work out a position which would incorporate Iranian sensibilities also. Iranians do not contest the usefulness of 598.
Mr. Sattar said that Iranian Deputy Foreign Minister, Larijani has been given exclusive charge to work with the UN. He is one of the most outstanding members of the Iranian Foreign Office. He has good contacts in Italy, FRG, etc. He is a good spokesman. This assignment indicates that Iran is looking for support in the West and collaboration with UN Secretary General. Restoration of diplomatic relations between Iran and France is in sight now.

On the internal situation in Iran, Mr. Sattar confessed that he knew very little about it. However, in his view, the Imam is the unquestioned leader. There are some dissidents in Iran who are supported from outside. They are weak and discredited. They have no support in Iran.

Mr. Sattar said that US is following a cautious and calculated policy in respect of Iran.

It has kept all its options open. No doubt, US is using force but the quantum of the force is carefully calculated. Iranians, of course, feel US policy to be inimical but they also avoid getting into a confrontation with US. There are also talks about re-establishment of contacts with USA and Iran. If Iranian isolation is reduced, said Mr. Sattar, it would be better for them.

Mr. Khaled Mahmood gave Pak assessment of the Iraqi position. He has said that from the Iraqi point of view, neutrality of a particular country in Iran-Iraq war was not acceptable to Iraq. They feel that countries should adopt positive neutrality. By this, the Iraqis mean that whenever Iran rejects international calls for peace, it should be condemned.

Secretary (East) then proceeded to give his assessment of Iran-Iraq war and internal situation in Iran. He said that he generally agreed with the Pakistani perceptions of Iran-Iraq war but he had a few points to make. Secretary (East) said that in the recent offensive in the east of Basra in the Suleiman area, the non-regular components of the Iranian army are reported to have given up the struggle. This was most unusual. Secretary (East) agreed with Mr. Sattar’s observations, that Iranians wanted to avoid confrontation with US as is indicated by the fact that Iranian actions in Gulf were restrained and cautious.

Regarding the internal situation, Secretary (East) agreed with the observations that there was inherent basic stability in the political system of Iran. In the recent elections for the Majlis in April/May, the radical clergy had won at the expense of the conservative sections. In the Majlis, one notable conservative clergy, Ayotullah Azeri did not run for elections, while the others who ran were defeated. This clergy association (TMAC) was also split.
Secretary (East) said that UN Secretary General’s efforts and the implementation of the UNSG resolution 598 were the best way out of the stalemate. The UNSG has now in mind some kind of proximity talks at technical level. He has also submitted an outline plan which has not been accepted by Iraq though Iran is willing to go along with it. Iranians have shown greater flexibility on this. Secretary (East) agreed about Mr. Sattar’s observation about Deputy Foreign Minister of Iran, Mr. Larijani. Larijani was certainly able and flexible. His freedom of action, however, was circumscribed by the Imam’s latest directives which clearly spelt out Iranian position. The identification of the aggressor and the consequent action continues to remain the position of Iran.

The result of the elections and strengthening of the radicals would lead one to the conclusion that the regime’s determination to carry on with the war has become even stronger. However, there has been some affect on the morale in Iran on account of the war of the cities. The economic situation has also deteriorated in recent months. Whether there is any connection between this lowering of morale and the dismal performance of non-regulars of Iranian army is not clear.

India supports UN Secretary General’s efforts and welcomes Resolution 598. However, UN Secretary General’s efforts did not carry one too far. Therefore, India supports UN Secretary General’s supplementary efforts including his outline plan and the idea of proximity talks. However, India is not terribly optimistic about the outcome of these efforts.

Mr. Sattar thanked Secretary (East) for his very lucid presentation. He said that it is yet to be seen whether Government in Iran would be able to assimilate the results of what happened in the battle field. The determination of the regime to continue with the present policies cannot remain un-affected by its capability to actually engage in war on the battle field. A large section of the population of Tehran is reported to be leaving the city on account of the frequent and repeated unexpected missile attacks on the city. On the other hand, Iraq’s capacity to carry on with the war has been considerably enhanced. They now have the capability to refuel their war planes in mid-air. Their planes can now go 1100 miles from bases in Iran. The weapons available with Iraq are also technologically superior. Moreover, US have systematically traced Iran’s arms sources and taken some effective steps to squeeze them. For instance, USA has interposed with Scandinavian firms in Iran and intervened with China in this regard. Pressures on Iran to limit its capability for war are building up.

Mr. Sattar said that many initiatives like the ones taken by OIC, NAM have not succeeded. In the OIC, there is no great desire to reactivate its failed initiatives.
Pakistan fully supported UN Secretary General’s initiatives. President himself has spoken to UN Secretary General over phone to give him encouragement and support in his current efforts.

Mr. Sattar concluded by saying that the positions of India and Pakistan on Iran-Iraq were quite similar.

The discussion then turned to voluntary offer by Iranian women to fight at the front. Ambassador S.K. Singh pointed out that it was his information that Iranians have taken a decision to mobilise girls but this has not been made public as it is likely to have an adverse effect on the morale. Secretary (East) said that women have for long been volunteering to join the army. In any case, boys as old as 12 or 13 years were going to the front. Mr. Sattar said that he had himself seen on the Tehran TV girls participating in the military parade, thereby indicating that girls are joining active military efforts.

Secretary (East), referring to Mr. Sattar’s observations about technological inferiorities of Iranian arms, said that Iran has pressed into service a large number of F-14 planes left by the Americans. Secretary (East) felt that despite the recent reverses, Imam’s decision to go on with the war is not likely to be revised. True, the morale of the upper and middle classes is beginning to go down. The other factor contributing to Iranian de-moralization is the extensive use of chemical weapons by Iraq. Mr. Sattar added that this is indeed an important factor. There are apprehensions in Iran that Iraq might drop chemical bombs on Tehran and other Iranian cities. Mr. Sattar felt that while Iraq had not used chemical weapons in the Iranian territory, the fact that the weapons have been used is quite depressing.

Secretary (East) said that Iraq justified the use of chemical weapons saying that Iraq has every right to use all possible means to dislodge the enemy from the Iraqi territory. He did not feel that Iraq would resort to bombing of Tehran and other cities in Iran with chemical bombs. Mr. Sattar said that Dr. Velayti, the Foreign Minister of Iran has distributed photographs of victims of the chemical weapons used by Iraq. The photographs were utterly shocking; He felt that the scale of the use of chemical weapons was unprecedented. The death toll itself was in excess of 5000.

FS felt that Iran possibly wanted some non-aligned initiative. Secretary (East) said that Iran was upset that NAM had not spoken clearly on chemical weapons issue. Mr. Sattar said that OIC has already compromised its capability to influence Iran-Iraq war as in the last session in Amman it adopted a resolution which was entirely to the satisfaction of Iraq. Mr. Sattar said that Iraqi diplomacy is outstanding. Iraqi diplomats were extremely well informed. They had been able to turn the international public opinion in their favour.

Mr. Sattar then touched upon some of the recent conferences organized by Muslim bodies. He said that in one such conference, which was held recently in Pakistan, a resolution was adopted which upset both Iran and Iraq. The Pakistan Government had no say in the adoption of this resolution and yet the resolution precipitated a major crisis in Pakistani bilateral relations with Iraq.

Joint Commission: Mr. Sattar suggested that the India-Pakistan Joint Commission should be convened at an early date preferably in the first half of September, i.e., before the UNGA session. He said that if that period was not convenient for the Indian side, we could consider holding this meeting sometime in October before the next SAARC summit. He mentioned that some agreements which had already been finalized, such as the Cultural Cooperation Agreement, Agreement on Avoidance of Double Taxation of Airlines Profit, etc. could be signed at the next session of Joint Commission. The two countries could also discuss the question of setting up joint ventures.

FS responded by recalling that earlier during the plenary session he had mentioned that Joint Commission meeting would be convened some time later this year. He wondered whether it would be possible to hold this meeting in September which might be too close to the review of the interim arrangements agreed to at Home Secretaries meeting. Mr. Sattar said that he realized that the governing consideration in New Delhi would be whether the political climate of Indo-Pakistan relations would permit the convening of the Joint Commission in September. He, however, reiterated that we should aim at holding this meeting in early September or October this year. FS stated that this would depend upon the outcome of the review.

Agreement on Non-attack on Nuclear Installations: There was a brief discussion thereafter on the proposed Agreement on Non-Attack on each other’s Nuclear Installation, which has been under negotiations. JS (AP) explained that the main sticking point was Pakistan's insistence on the inclusion of Article II (2), which called for contacts between the two sides for effective implementation of the Agreement. He added that this paragraph was redundant because Article II already provided for exchange of information between the two countries regarding their respective nuclear facilities/installations. When Mr. Sattar pressed further, JS (AP) explained that our reservations regarding Article II (2) were also related to our apprehensions that this paragraph might be misused to bring in the concept of mutual inspection of nuclear installations.
which had been proposed by the Pakistan side. He added that this Agreement was being worked out to formalize the announcement made by Prime Minister Gandhi and President Zia on December 17, 1985. In our view, this Agreement should have only three ingredients, namely, a declaration on non-attack on nuclear installations, definition of nuclear installations and exchange of lists of respective nuclear installations of the two countries. If we tried to widen the scope of the Agreement, we would be going beyond the mandate given by the two leaders.

Mr. Sattar said that he fully agreed that we should not seek to expand the scope of the Agreement. He, however, added that Article II (2) called for contacts, if necessary, and necessity would naturally be decided by mutual consent.

Joint Press Release: Discussions then turned towards the question of joint press release to be issue after the Foreign Secretary-level talks. FS handed over to Mr. Sattar a draft joint press release (enclosed) (not included here). After going through the draft press release, Mr. Sattar requested that the Para 5 dealing with Pakistan’s abetment of terrorism in Punjab should be deleted. He remarked that though it was possible to work out another formulation which might be acceptable to Pakistan, there was no time to do so. FS agreed to delete Para 5 and suggested the deletion of Para 6 as well, as it was linked to the earlier paragraph. Mr. Sattar also suggested some reference in the press release to his calls on the Prime Minister, the Minister of Human Resource Development, the Defence Minister and the Minister for Water Resources. FS agreed.

Foreign Secretary-level talks between India and Pakistan were held in New Delhi on June 1-2, 1988.

The Pakistan delegation, led by Mr. Abdul Sattar, Foreign Secretary, comprised the following officials:

i) Dr. Humayun Khan, Ambassador of Pakistan
ii) Mr. Khalid Mahmood, Additional Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs
iii) Mr. Shafqat Kakakhel, Minister, Embassy of Pakistan
iv) Mr. Tariq Altaf, Director General, Ministry of Foreign Affairs
v) Mr. Kamran Niaz, Counsellor, Embassy of Pakistan
vi) Mr. Haroon Rana, Second Secretary, Embassy of Pakistan

The Indian delegation, led by Shri K.P.S. Menon, Foreign Secretary, comprised the following officials:

i) Shri S.K. Singh, Ambassador of India in Pakistan
ii) Shri Satish Chandra, Joint Secretary(AP), Ministry of External Affairs
iii) Shri Aftab Seth, Consul General of India, CGI, Karachi
iv) Shri Arvind Gupta, Under Secretary (Afg), Ministry of External Affairs
v) Smt. Deepa Wadhwa, Under Secretary (Pak), Ministry of External Affairs

The Pakistan Foreign Secretary called on the Prime Minister and conveyed to him the good wishes and greetings of the President of Pakistan.

Pakistan Foreign Secretary Abdus Sattar talking to newsmen at the airport before his departure on June 2 said that his talks with Indian Foreign Secretary K.P.S. Menon spread over 10 hours, covered the whole gamut of relations between the two countries and expressed the hope that over a period of time the positive aspects of Indo-Pak relations would out-balance the matters which obstructed the development of confidence and goodwill between the two countries. While he agreed with a questioner that the process of normalization of relations between the two neighbouring countries was slow but the process was a matter of considerable solace and satisfaction judging from the pattern of development of their relations since 1972. Stressing on the importance of dialogue he said “We should make it deeper and more extensive and include new and position items.”
He also called on Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao, Minister for Human Resource Development, Shri K.C. Pant, Minister for Defence, and Shri Dinesh Singh, Minister for Water Resources.

The two delegations had useful talks in a free, frank and cordial atmosphere. The discussions covered a wide range of bilateral issues. In addition, views were also exchanged on regional matters, including Afghanistan, and the current international situation.

It was agreed to continue these talks at a mutually convenient date.

Bonn, June 8, 1988.

QUESTION: Mr. Prime Minister, you have on frequent occasions referred to the nuclear ambitions of the Pakistanis and on former occasions you have said that India would have to keep her options open. Do you now feel under any constraint also to construct the bomb?

PRIME MINISTER: No.

QUESTION: Why not? When Pakistan is making a bomb is it not in India’s interest to build a bomb too?

PRIME MINISTER: We have no doubt about our security and as long as we are secure we do not build the weapon. If Pakistan does have a weapon and if we feel it threatens us we will have to review our options like I said on earlier occasions.

QUESTION: Pakistan has proposed on many occasions to sign the NPT in order to keep the region free from nuclear weapons. India and you did not react on such proposals. What can you say about this?

PRIME MINISTER: We do not believe that nuclear disarmament or nuclear weapons can be viewed as a regional or bilateral matter because the reach and damage that they do goes well beyond any country’s boundaries. If there is a nuclear war we are not going to be secure if our region does not have nuclear weapons. And what is our region? China is in our region, the Indian Ocean is in our region. There are nuclear weapons in China, there are nuclear weapons in the Indian Ocean. We have demonstrated our will not to make nuclear weapons. We have the capability for sometime now, but we are very clear that we do not want to go down that road and we will do everything that is possible not to go down that road. We feel that the NPT is a discriminatory treaty. It discriminates between nuclear weapon countries and non-nuclear weapon countries and in principle we do not sign any treaty which is discriminatory in that manner. And we will not sign the NPT. At the same time we have demonstrated that we do not need to sign the NPT because we have not made the bomb. The NPT also has not been adhered to by the nuclear weapon powers that have signed the NPT. There is a very clear clause in the NPT to prevent vertical proliferation and that clause had not been adhered to by the weapon countries that have signed the NPT.

Question: May I again refer to the relations with Pakistan? Since the time when you became head of Government one has not been able to talk about normal or even friendly relations with Pakistan. Tensions were continuing which burden the whole situation in this region. Pakistan has proposed to conclude a 'not to attack' agreement with you and you have not reacted on this proposal. Can you make some concrete proposals which could lead to the normalization of the situation in this part of the world?

Prime Minister: I don’t think that there is enough time left to cover all the issues about the proposals that we have made to Pakistan. Let me just say that we have made about 22 proposals to Pakistan ranging from treaties of peace and friendship, non-attack on nuclear facilities, MOUs on air-space violation by military aircraft, direct contacts between military units so that escalation do not take place. On the economic side, a slow opening to both countries on the cultural side – exchange of media, singers, dancers, troupes – a very wide range of things has been suggested.

But one must remember that it is not suggestions and words that count. Today Pakistan is demonstrating two things very clearly: its intention with the nuclear weapon programme and its support to terrorists. Pakistan today is perhaps the largest supporter of terrorism on the globe and it is this that makes the difference.

Question: Everything you said about Pakistan can also be blamed upon you. Among other things there were reports in the Western media that heavy water was smuggled to India and that you too support the terrorists in Pakistan.

Prime Minister: Let me say very clearly that we don’t need to smuggle heavy water and let me also make it very clearly that heavy water does not make bombs, I think that this should be understood very clearly, when I talked with the Prime Minister of Democratic Pakistan last time in Kathmandu, I pointed out to Mr. Junejo that Pakistan has an enriched uranium programme far in excess of its capacity to use enriched uranium. I pointed out to him that they had in Pakistan only one small test-reactor which uses enriched uranium. There is no other reactor, at least officially, which uses enriched uranium.

Where is this enriched uranium going? He could not give me any answer.

On terrorism I don’t think we need to set our case. It started a long time ago. If you remember, a hijacker hijacked an Indian aircraft to Pakistan. That hijacker is still alive. The case against him is being dragged on and is going on – I don’t know – for about 12 years or 13 years now. Just some time ago another man hijacked a Pakistan aircraft to Syria. That man had a death sentence and has died. We asked why equal treatment to two hijackers was not given.

We have given a detailed list of training camps, about the people who are carrying out training, the type of training that has been carried out in the camps. We have given maps of where the camps are, we have given a list of incidents on our border and a majority of incidents take place within 200 meters to 1,200 meters of the Pakistani border. I can go on to give you a very long list. Nobody has accused us of interfering in the Sind. If we wanted to interfere in the Sind, we could easily. But we are not interfering in the Sind.

3. Shri AK Sarabadhikari, DIG BSF
4. Shri VS Sirohi, DIG BSF
5. Shri Ashok Kumar, Staff Officer

PAK RANGERS OFFICERS
1. Col Muhammad Akbar, DDG
During discussions DISG BSF drew attention of the Pak Rangers Officers to the fact that the Joint Press Release issued on May 16, 1988, stipulated that the joint patrolling signified that the BSF and Pak Rangers Patrol Parties will be moving as a body together as close to the Zero-line as possible. DDG Pak Rangers Col Mohd Akber did not accept this and stated that the terms of the agreement meant that the Pak Rangers Patrol will move on their side of the border, and the BSF on the Indian side of the border though they could move as close to each other as possible.

DISG BSF raised the point that the Joint Agreement also visualized briefing jointly by the patrol commanders of the composite patrol consisting of BSF and Pak Rangers. However, DDG Pak Rangers Col Mohd Akber stated that as the issue of composite patrol of Pak Rangers and BSF together in a body had not been resolved, the question of joint briefing at this stage did not arise.

Next meeting is proposed to be held on July 18, 1988.

Press Release issued by Embassy of Pakistan in India suggesting that the Indian allegations of Pakistan's involvement in Punjab's problem were unfounded.

No. 25/88 New Delhi, July 15, 1988

A section of the Press has recently published reports claiming that Pakistan is harbouring certain Sikh terrorists, "strengthening certain militant groups, training some fresh ones, and equipping them with arms and explosives to create troubles in Punjab.

As Pakistan has repeatedly stated, all these allegations are totally incorrect and have been fabricated by certain quarters with a view to externalizing what is essentially a domestic problem totally unconnected with Pakistan. Pakistan harbours no terrorist on its territory. It is not providing training to any individuals or groups. Nor is it providing arms or explosives to anyone to create problems in Punjab.

Pakistan has nothing to gain from turmoil in its neighbourhood. Pakistan indeed desires to forge the best of relations with India and would not do anything that would obstruct the achievement of that goal.

The need of the hour is to strengthen the bonds of goodwill and understanding between our two peoples, and not to spread suspicions and doubts among them through unfounded and tendentious reports. This Embassy hopes that the media in this country would play its vital role in this regard by objective reports and constructive views.

1187. Pakistan denial in the reported Pakistan involvement in an attempt to assassinate Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

Islamabad, August 9, 1988.

Pakistan Interior Minister Malik Nasim Ahmed Aheer described on August 9 as ‘irresponsible, malicious and reprehensible’ a statement by Indian Home Minister accusing Pakistan of involvement in the conspiracy to assassinate Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. Pakistan had never supported terrorist activities in any country nor would Pakistan ever do so in future, he declared while winding up a two-hour debate on the reported statement by India’s Home Minister in the two Houses of Indian Parliament. Mr. Nasim Aheer reiterated that Pakistan believed firmly in the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of other countries.

He said: “We do this not only because it is enjoined upon us a member of the world community, but also because we know it is in our national interest. We do not want anybody to interfere in our internal affairs. We know what this can lead to. Since we expect others to refrain, we fully realize that it is our obligation also to refrain.”

He added: “In this context we find it most reprehensible that India should have stepped up its interference in the internal affairs of Pakistan. I do not wish to emulate the Indian spokesman and go into hysterics about the growing Indian involvement in fanning secessionist sentiments in Sind and other parts of Pakistan. I only want to say that we want to live as good neighbours and expect an equal measure of reciprocity from India.”

The minister made this statement on identical adjournment motions moved by a number of Senators on allegations leveled against Pakistan for a conspiracy to assassinate the Indian Prime Minister and Indian Interior Minister.

He said: “I take this opportunity to renew Pakistan’s offer to join India in understanding solemn obligations in a binding treaty, against allowing the use of their respective territories for any activities directed against the internal peace and stability or territorial integrity of other countries. Pakistan is ready to join India in a declaration on a reciprocal basis to affirm respect for each other’s unity and territorial integrity and even to go beyond this by denouncing separatist and secessionist movements, generally or specifically. India is reluctant to pick up this very reasonable proposal. Why?” he remarked.

He said: “It is in the interest of good-neighbourly and cooperative relations that irresponsible rhetoric should be avoided. When this emanates from high government circles, it only serves to undermine the goodwill and the desire for peace which the people of both countries have.”

“We have always stressed the need for practical measures of cooperation on the ground. We have welcomed the reaction by India of barbed-wire fence and control towers on its side of the border,” he added.

According to him the most deplorable part of the statement made in Indian Parliament relates to the so-called Pakistani complicity in a plot to assassinate Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and Home Minister Buta Singh.

This, he pointed out, was an absurd and preposterous charge. “Pakistan, as a responsible member of the international community, fully respects the norms of civilized inter-state relations. It holds leaders of all countries in high esteem. It is inconceivable that we could ever think of anything which might cause harm to an Indian leader,” he maintained.

“The Government of Pakistan, therefore, contumuously rejects the allegation in the Indian Home Minister’s statements and hopes that responsible circles in India will desist from making such malicious and unfounded charges”, he added.

Mr. Nasim Aheer, at the very outset said the Pakistan Government had noted with great dismay the statement made by the Indian Minister in both Houses of Parliament on August 2.

He said these statements falsely accused Pakistan of complicity in an alleged plot by Indian nationals, hatched on Indian soil, to assassinate their Prime Minister and Home Minister. Some documents claimed to have been recovered from the Golden Temple during the recent ‘Operation Black Thunder’ had been taken as conclusive evidence of Pakistan’s involvement.

He said documents had surfaced nearly three months after their alleged recovery. The occasion had now been used for making totally unwarranted and highly intemperate statements.

According to him, the Indian leaders have resorted to this propaganda regardless of diplomatic norms.

“As a dignified, responsible nation we have refused to be provoked. We have not thought it either proper or necessary to resort to the same tactics. We hope the Indian leaders will take note of this and desist from continuing this unsavoury practice,” he maintained.

“The hollowness of the charges made in Indian Parliament,” he said, “becomes evident from the fact that the persons mentioned as the most important link i.e. Wassan Singh Zaffarwal and Gurbachan Singh Manochachal, have been blacklisted from entering Pakistan.” This, he pointed out, was done by Pakistan at the specific request of the Indian government and it knew it. “Rather than appreciate our gesture, the Indian leaders have chosen to repeat old allegations about these persons being in Pakistan when we had assured them to the contrary during the Interior Secretaries meeting in May 1988.”

He said in a spirit of cooperation the Pakistan government had at India’s request also blacklisted some other Sikhs residing abroad who were suspected by the Indian government of having criminal intent.

He added: “Our authorities have taken appropriate action to deny all of them entry into Pakistan. None of the persons mentioned in the Indian statements has entered Pakistan. A recent case in point is Talwinder Singh Parmar and his son, Narinder Singh. It is an act of sheer ungratefulness that instead of appreciating the cooperation extended by us the Indian government should continue vilifying Pakistan on this score”, the minister added.

He said the Indian side had not been able to substantiate the allegations about Pakistan’s aid to the Sikh militants, supply of arms to them or their training. The assertions were based on a unilateral interpretation of dubious evidence. The charges that Sikh extremists held meetings in Pakistan turned out to be false, he added.

1188. Minutes of the Meeting between BSF Officers and Pak Officers at Joint Check Post Wagha (Pak Side) on 10 August 1988 at 1030 Hrs (IST) and 1000 Hrs (PST)

PAKISTAN SIDE
1. Col Muhammad Arshad DDG Pakistan Rangers.
2. Lt Col Munir Akhtar Commandant Chenab Rangers
3. Lt Col Arshad Mehmud Ali Commandant Sutlej Rangers
4. Lt Col Shuja Ullah Tarar Staff Officer

INDIAN SIDE
1. Shri YS Jafa DIG BSF
2. Shri VK Rajagopalan DIG BSF
3. Shri AK Subhadhikari DIG BSF
4. Shri VS Sirohi DIG BSF

Col Arshad DDG Pak Rangers stated that their interpretation on joint patrolling was the same as stated earlier i.e. that the patrols of the BSF and Pak Rangers can move as close as possible to the zero line but each will remain on their side of the border and not as a body together. The BSF officers stated that the meaning of the joint press release was that the joint patrol consisting of BSF and Pak personal will move as a body together. However, the Pak officers stated that they did not accept this interpretation.

The BSF officers also stated that joint patrolling as mentioned in the joint Press Release would mean joint action on the border which was not acceptable to the Pak side. The Pak side stated that the joint patrolling visualized action by each side on its side of the border only.

The Pak officers further stated that this meeting should lay down the areas of agreement and spell out the areas of differences, so that further discussion can be confined to the areas of differences. They view of the BSF officers was that as the basic issue i.e. the meaning of the joint patrolling had not been resolved, discussion regarding further details of the joint patrolling would be infructuous.
The Pak side stated that joint patrolling should commence in the manner proposed by the Pakistan side earlier, namely each side moving on its side of the border, and the arrangement and modalities of the joint patrolling can be reviewed after a period of one month. The view of the Indian side was that as there was no agreement on the very meaning of joint patrolling, there was no question of starting patrolling in the manner as suggested by Pak side. BSF officers stated that if each side was to conduct the patrolling on its side of the border, which in any case was being done even before this agreement was made, there would have been no need to make the agreement regarding joint patrolling at the level of the Home Secretary of India and Interior Secretary of Pakistan.

Each side agreed to refer the matter to their respective headquarters.

The Prime Minister, Shri Rajiv Gandhi signed the condolence book in Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi on August 18, 1988. The Prime Minister wrote the following:

In this hour of sorrow my heart goes out to Begum Zia and the other members of the family. May God give her the strength to bear this tragic loss with fortitude. My deepest sympathies are with the people of Pakistan. I wish them well.

India and Pakistan are bound by innumerable ties of history and culture. India looks forward to building healthy and friendly relationship with Pakistan. We will strive for it.

Union Cabinet Adopts Condolence Resolution on Demise of President Zia
The Union Cabinet met in New Delhi on August 18, 1988 and passed a condolence resolution on the demise of President M. Zia-ul-Haq of Pakistan in a tragic air crash on August 17, 1988. The following is the text of the condolence resolution:

The Government and people of India are shocked and grieved by the sudden and untimely demise of President M. Zia-ul-Haq. They share in the deep sorrow of the Government and people of Pakistan. In this hour of tragedy, India’s profound sympathy goes out to the Government and people of Pakistan and, particularly, to Begum Zia and other members of the bereaved family.
Press Release issued by the Embassy of India in Pakistan refuting allegation of celebrations in the Embassy on the demise of President Zia-ul-Haq.

September 6, 1988.

Our attention has been drawn to a story in the Urdu weekly HURMAT (1-7 September) published from Islamabad. The title of the story is “Celebrations in the Indian Embassy”. This story alleges that on 17 August, the day on which His Excellency Gen. Ziaul Haq was killed in an air crash near Bahawalpur, there was celebration and general merriment in the Indian Embassy.

The editors of the weekly HURMAT must recognize that this story is a vicious, virulent, and contemptible lie.

It is well-known and was appreciated at the highest level in Pakistan that the Government of India immediately on learning of the death of the President of Pakistan declared 3-day official mourning. The President of India Shri R. Venkataraman, the Foreign Minister of India, other Ministers, high officials and dignitaries as also a large All-party delegation of members of Parliament, totaling about forty persons came to Islamabad for attending the funeral of the late President General Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq. Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi cancelled his birthday celebrations. These facts were all recalled by His Excellency Mr. Ghulam Ishaq Khan, President of Pakistan, at a press conference, in Islamabad, on 20 August 1988.

Baseless and malicious allegations of the sort made by ‘HURMAT’ are one more example of the systematic and continuous process of disinformation and propaganda against India. It would be recalled that we had documented a number of other such instances from the Pakistan press in our Press Release NO. 24/88. dated June 27, 1988.

We believe that newspapers have an important role to play in a democratic society. We also believe that the Pakistan press has an important role to play in promoting good neighbourly and friendly relations between India and Pakistan. We are, therefore, constrained to point out that lies of this sort printed in this instance by HURMAT are a dis-service to the people of Pakistan and to the cause of friendship between India and Pakistan.
Press Release issued by Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi clarifying Pakistan's ban on the entry of "Sikh Extremists" to enter Pakistan.

New Delhi, September 16, 1988.

PRESS RELEASE

No. 32/88 New Delhi, September 16, 1988

Reports and comments have recently appeared in a section of the Indian Press, containing differing interpretations of the measures adopted by the Pakistan Government to ban the entry of certain persons into Pakistan. An impression has sought to be created as if this action was taken after the sad demise of the late president General Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq, and amounts to an implicit admission by Pakistan that it has been harbouring "Sikh terrorists".

The factual position is that the action has been taken at the specific request of the Government of India that certain India nationals should not be permitted to visit Pakistan. In deference to their wishes all Pakistan Missions abroad were instructed not to give visas to those persons. All concerned agencies within Pakistan were asked to prevent their entry into the country. The first list of these individuals was communicated to these agencies in June and the Second list in July. The action, as such, was completed several weeks before the death of President Zia-ul-Haq.

The Government of Pakistan's positive response to the Indian Government's request cannot be construed as proof of the visits of these persons to Pakistan or as an admission, implicit or otherwise, by Pakistan of harbouring the "Sikh terrorists" on its soil. It has been the consistent policy of the Government of Pakistan not to interfere in the internal affairs of other countries including India. Pakistan is willing to adopt all necessary measures in cooperation with the Indian Government to prevent all sorts of illegal trans-border crossings.

AIDE MEMOIRE

There have been reports, from time to time, about the convening of an international conference on Punjab by an organization called the Research Committee on Punjab which is based in U.S.A. An announcement was made in the academic circles in the U.S. in April 1988, suggesting that the Research Committee on the Punjab plans to hold this Conference in Lahore from January 7 - 9, 1989. It is to be coordinated by Prof. Craig Baxter, Department of Political Science, Juniata College, Huntington. Pennsylvania 16652, U.S.A.

It would be recalled that on December 2, 1987, Ambassador S.K. Singh had discussed this matter with the late President General Mohammad Zia-ul Haq. The late President had then assured Ambassador S.K. Singh that permission would not be granted for the holding of such a conference in Pakistan.

The convening of this Conference in Pakistan, in our view, would not be advisable. It could have repercussions on India-Pakistan bilateral relations.

Embassy of India would appreciate receiving from the Government of Pakistan an early confirmation in this regard.

New Delhi, December 2, 1988.

India’s Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi congratulated Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto on December 2 and called on her to join him in trying to create lasting peace between their countries.

“You and I are both children of the same era... I would wish to work closely with you for removing the irritants which have needlessly strained relations between our countries in the past,” Mr. Gandhi said in a lengthy personal letter telexed to Ms. Bhutto.

“The Simla Agreement, signed by your father and my mother, provides the basis for our building together a relationship of mutual trust and friendship, which promotes peace and cooperation between our countries in our time and in generations to come,” Mr. Gandhi said, referring to the peace accord signed after the 1971 war.

“I look forward to working with you in every possible way to ensure that the people of India and Pakistan live together, strive together, build together to ensure peace,” Mr. Gandhi said.

He added that he looked forward to meet Ms. Bhutto at the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation meeting in Islamabad on December 29. “The news of your assumption of office as Prime Minister of Pakistan has been warmly greeted and widely welcomed throughout India,” Mr. Gandhi said.

Out rightly rejecting the idea of no-war pact, proposed by the Zia regime to India, Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto said on December 3 that relations with India would be maintained on equal basis. “I don’t believe in such things as a no-war pact”, she said and added: “My father, the late Prime Minister Zulfiquar Ali Bhutto, opposed this idea in 1960.”

Addressing her first Press conference in Islamabad after assuming the office of Prime Minister and also her first Press conference at the Prime Minister’s House, she ridiculed the theory of treating India as an elder brother as was done by the previous regime. She said the Simla Agreement provided an excellent framework for solving problems between the two countries and her government would like its spirit to be adhered to by the two parties. “A step-by-step” approach had been provided in this accord and that is best suited to the parties to solve the difficult and complex problems that have marred relations of the two countries,” she added.

Ms. Bhutto said since the signing of the Simla Agreement in 1972, the two countries have fought no more wars. “It has been a longest spell of peace and harmony between the two countries.”

The Simla Agreement also provided a base for the solution of the Kashmir issue and the positions of the two sides on the issue were fully recognized in the accord, she added.

Ms. Bhutto said she was confident that her forthcoming meeting with Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, who will be visiting Pakistan towards the end of the month to participate in he SAARC summit, would provide positive results. She thanked him for sending a message of greetings on her assumption of office. She also thanked that Indian Parliament for passing a resolution in this regard.

Regretting the recent incident in which India expelled two Pakistan diplomats, and a similar action taken by the Pakistan government, she hoped irritants would not take place again. “Let this be an event of the past and let it not influence future relations between the two sides.”

AIDE MEMOIRE

We have from time to time drawn the attention of the Government of Pakistan to our concern about Sikh extremist elements constituting a threat to Indian VVIPs who come to Islamabad to attend the SAARC Summit.

Annexed is list of Sikh extremists, who according to recent information continue to be in Pakistan. 20 of these are Indian nationals, including 14 hijackers of IAC aircraft; 4 are Canadian nationals; and one is a British national. We would appreciate receiving information about the action proposed to be taken by the Government of Pakistan to neutralize any prospect of a security threat to Indian VVIPs from any of these persons.

We have reason to believe that 4 Sikh soldiers -- Nk. BILKHAR SINGH SANDHU, Nk. JASWANT SINGH, Nk. BALWINDER SINGH and Sepoy BALWINDER SINGH, belonging to the Indian Army have deserted and crossed over into Pakistan through the LAC in Kashmir Sector on October 31, 1988. Efforts may be made to trace them and hand them over to Indian authorities.

We are given to understand that some pro Khalistani elements including SHYAM SINGH SINDHI, KULBIR SINGH, SATNAM, all from Sind, and Bhai LAKHBIR SINGH (ISYF) Canada, are contemplating staging black flag demonstrations during the SAARC Summit. Appropriate action would no doubt, be taken to ensure that such activities which would inevitably mar the Summit, do not take place.

We would appreciate a feedback on the action taken by the Government of Pakistan in respect of information given above.

Record of the plenary meeting between Indian Delegation led by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and Pakistani Delegation led by Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto.

After the signing of the three Agreements (on Prohibition of Attack Against Nuclear Installations and Facilities, Avoidance of Double Taxation on Income from International Air Transport and on Cultural Cooperation) in the presence of the 2 Prime Ministers, a plenary meeting was held between the Indian delegation led by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and the Pakistani delegation led by Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto.

2. The meeting commenced at 3.55 p.m*. The list of participants is given at -Appendix I.

3. Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, at the outset, thanked Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto for the gracious hospitality extended by her and the Pakistan Government. He congratulated her for the manner in which she had handled the SAARC Summit. He added that this SAARC Summit marked a shift from the earlier summits as, for the first time the leaders had dealt with concrete issues which were relatively difficult to tackle. He also congratulated Ms Benazir Bhutto for her election victory which was a testimony to her popularity. It was also a vindication of her long struggle for the establishment of democracy in Pakistan and for the values she stood for. The emergence of a democratic Pakistan had been seen very positively in India. There was now a groundswell of goodwill and unprecedented hope in both countries for an improvement in the relationship.

4. PM mentioned that both sides had just signed three agreements. It was after many years that such major agreements had been concluded between the two countries; the last such occasion being at Simla in 1972. It was indeed propitious that these agreements were being concluded in a democratic Pakistan under Ms Bhutto as the last occasion when such agreements were concluded was also under a democratic Pakistan led by her late father.

5. PM stated that this meeting between the two sides afforded an opportunity to try to resolve the problems and mutual suspicions between the two countries which had built up over the years. It was important to break the old mindset and the time was now ripe for a new beginning and a look to the future. India would like to build a relationship of equality and mutual respect and for mutual benefit. As far as India was concerned, it was in its own interest to have a strong, stable, self-reliant and confident Pakistan. India was firmly committed to Pakistan's territorial integrity and sovereignty. India was in favour of non-interference in each other's internal affairs. Peace was an abiding parameter for progress and development and, therefore, the two sides must work for peace and goodwill and the welfare of their peoples.

6. PM extended an invitation to Ms Benazir Bhutto to visit India, assuring her that both the people and the Government of India would give her a very warm welcome. He added that 1988 was ending on a happy note and there was hope for a new dawn in 1989.

7. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto stated that it was indeed a great pleasure to welcome Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and his delegation to Pakistan. The visit of an Indian Prime Minister to Pakistan was taking place after some 30 to 36 years. This is, strictly speaking, inaccurate as the last occasion on which an Indian Prime Minister visited Pakistan, even if one were to discount PM's visit to Pakistan on 20th January 1988, for Badshah Khan's funeral, was on October 12, 1964, when Prime Minister Shastri made a stopover visit for a few hours in Karachi. This visit was, therefore, of great significance and held out the possibility of building better relations. The SAARC Summit provided the forum for this visit and she welcomed this opportunity for bilateral discussions. The visit was particularly well timed, even though it was not consciously planned in this manner, since it coincided with the induction of a new democratic government in Pakistan. Her government was committed to democracy, freedom and ending of exploitation as also to peace, progress and prosperity. She hoped that with Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's Govt. in India and a democratically elected Govt. in Pakistan a new beginning could be made.

8. There were many challenges in the past. One of the greatest challenges faced was in 1971-72 when Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and President Bhutto had met at Simla. A breakthrough had been achieved when the Simla Agreement was signed at the very last minute. This agreement formed the basis of the longest lasting peace between the two countries. India and Pakistan were not just neighbours but they had the responsibility to work for better relations not only between the two countries but also in the region as a whole.

9. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto also commented upon the fact that the last time when a major agreement had been signed was in June 1972 and that it was significant that the three agreements just signed were being concluded by a democratic government in Pakistan; She lamented the fact that too many years had passed by without any further break through. She added that more than any other leaders, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi as the son of Indira Gandhi, and she herself, as the daughter of Shaheed Bhutto, had a commitment to carry forward the process initiated at Simla. She was confident that both she and Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi would give of their best and historians when writing of their period would note that it heralded the dawn of a new era. (At this stage the TV cameras and press left the room.)

10. Thereafter, PM introduced the Indian delegation and Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto introduced the Pakistani delegation. While introducing her delegation she expressed the hope that Ambassador Niaz Naik would be more accurate in projecting developments in India than he had been in forecasting the outcome of the elections in Pakistan when he had discounted a PPP victory! She also remarked that she did not know what she would do without the advice of Mr. V.A. Jaffrey, the Adviser on Finance, Planning and Economic Affairs (inducted in lieu of Mahbubal Haq on American advice).

11. Prime Minister mentioned that he had had three sessions of intensive one-to-one talks with Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto which had been held in a warm, cordial and positive atmosphere. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto's attitude had been very constructive. The talks had been wide ranging extending to bilateral, regional and other issues, including disarmament. This visit was a good opportunity to start a new relationship. Above all, it signaled to the people and more so, to the bureaucrats of the two sides that they needed to react in a more positive manner. PM mentioned that there were issues which were relatively easy to resolve and others which were more complex. He suggested that both sides should seek to settle the former immediately while working simultaneously towards resolution of the latter.

12. In SAARC a first tentative step had been taken for promoting easier travel by allowing Parliamentarians and Supreme Court Judges to visit the SAARC countries without visas. If both sides could similarly open out to each other in other areas, it would prove to be most helpful. PM underlined the importance of easing travel restrictions particularly in respect of relatives on both sides of the border. The walls that had been built up both for grant of visas and over the procedural requirements in both countries after the grant of visas, should be relaxed. This relaxation should be extended to other categories of persons with a view to encouraging travel.

13. PM also advocated an easing up in the field of media. Both countries had very "tough" regimes in this respect. In India the print media was entirely private and the governments could create an atmosphere conducive to the free exchange of newspapers, magazines and periodicals. The electronic media was government owned and the two sides should see how to make it easier to watch each other's programmes. Perhaps programmes could be exchanged. There should also be broader coverage about the other country. Again, on the cultural side, nothing much was happening. Something should be done to promote cultural tourism. Partition did not really divide our cultural heritage. Cultural exchanges would help ease tensions. There could be exchanges of classical dance and music groups, qawals and gazals, mushairas, films, plays, workshops and seminars. There could also be very useful cooperation on preserving the cultural heritage of both countries.

14. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto indicated that the extensive bilateral exchanges she had had with Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi had been extremely useful and cordial. Both leaders were imbued with the common purpose of lifting relations out of the mire of stagnation. The People in both countries wanted peace. There were high expectations not only in India and Pakistan but throughout the world about her meetings with the Indian Prime Minister. The PPP Government attached the highest importance to relations between the two countries. Pakistan believed that Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi’s visit had made it possible to make a fresh beginning in the relationship and enabled the two sides to pick up the threads after Simla. She was confident that the momentum would be maintained and that the understandings reached would be followed up with concrete steps. She fully endorsed Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi’s view that the peoples of the two countries should get to know each other through increased exchanges. Popular participation helped in making decisions durable. She also agreed that a step by step approach was appropriate with movement first in areas which were relatively easier to resolve.

15. She remarked that the SAARC Summit had taken a small but significant step in allowing Parliamentarians and Supreme Court Judges to travel through the region without visas. She expressed the hope that in the bilateral context, as well, the two sides would facilitate travel and complement interaction through the easing of restrictions in the media. She said that the political will was there in Pakistan to improve the relationship. The compelling logic of reason dictated that the two countries should dispel the dark clouds of mistrust and suspicion and live together as good neighbours.

16. PM indicated that the three major problem areas were Pakistan’s weapons-oriented nuclear policy, terrorism and Siachen. As regards the nuclear issue, he had already had detailed discussions with Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto and she had reiterated Pakistan’s position. The Agreement on Prohibition of Attack on each other’s Nuclear Installations and Facilities was an important confidence building measure. However, the basic difference of approach between the two countries was that while India saw nuclear disarmament as a global process which could not be dealt with at a regional level, Pakistan wanted to resolve it on a bilateral or regional basis. In our view this could not be done; Chernobyl was a classic example. He suggested that both sides should remain in touch and see how they could make progress. PM drew attention to India’s proposals at the recent UN Special Session on Disarmament on an Action Plan for nuclear disarmament and reduction in conventional forces to the minimum levels required for defence. The question of reducing conventional forces had also been discussed with Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto. It was important to reduce conventional forces as both sides were spending huge amounts on defence. This could be achieved by a lowering of tensions.

17. PM expressed appreciation for Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto’s stand on terrorism and suggested that the Home Secretaries could remain in touch. On Siachen the Defence Secretaries had had talks and some ground had been covered. This could be followed up by talks in the first half of 1989. The Foreign Secretaries could also meet to discuss various bilateral issues. Similarly, the Joint Commission could meet coterminously with its sub-commissions in this time frame.

18. Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan replied to PM remarking that the nuclear issue, which was a matter of concern for India was, for the same reason of concern to Pakistan. While Pakistan could not meet all of India’s apprehensions it could at least meet some of them. Pakistan’s stance was well known. Pakistan did not intend to manufacture nuclear weapons - it did not make sense in military terms. He was aware that these protestations had been regarded in India with scepticism. Pakistan was prepared to take six or seven steps on the basis of reciprocity and equity to help alleviate India’s fears. These steps were well known to India and one of these was, for instance, the simultaneous signing of the NPT. He expressed the hope that these ideas would engage India’s attention. Pakistan, on its part, would closely study the Plan of Action presented by India at the UN. He expressed the hope that there would be a continued dialogue between the two countries on this issue as this would help defuse tensions. He agreed that the recently concluded Agreement on Prohibition of Attack against Nuclear Installations and Facilities would go a long way in easing fears and apprehensions.

19. The Pakistan Foreign Minister also referring to Jammu & Kashmir, stating that Pakistan took the position that the issue remained unresolved and this had been stated in the Simla Agreement. When Pakistan said that this was an outstanding issue it was only reiterating what was contained in the Simla Agreement.

20. He also referred to the question of Jinnah House and made the point that this issue had great emotional significance for Pakistan. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto interjected to say that she had already taken up this matter with Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and it was receiving his attention.

21. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto referring to terrorism stated that it was a global concern and not just the concern of any individual country. She was fully aware of India’s apprehensions in this regard and felt that relations between the two countries could best be served by strictly adhering to the principle of non-interference. There were two possible approaches in this matter. One was to cooperate fully with each other in a spirit of friendship and the other was to take advantage of each other’s momentary weaknesses. Pakistan would adhere to the first approach and it was her hope that there would be no cause for any apprehensions in future.

22. On Siachen, she expressed the hope that the Defence Secretaries would be able to resolve this issue at their forthcoming meeting. As regards reduction in conventional forces she would like to discuss this matter in greater detail. She agreed that scarce resources should be used for development rather than for defence. In this context, she remarked that just as Partition had not divided the cultural heritage it did not divide the heritage of poverty either.

23. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto added that the two countries should resolve all their differences. In this context, she mentioned that for Pakistan, Kashmir was the oldest and the most difficult bilateral problem. However, the two countries could indeed learn to live in peace and cooperate with each other.

24. While briefing Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto on regional and international issues, PM indicated that India had considerably improved its relationship with the United States. The latter was India’s largest trading partner and science and technology transfers from the USA to India had reached a significantly higher level. Similarly, with the USSR, there had also been a qualitative upgradation of India’s relations. In their recent exchanges, both countries not only reviewed the existing relationship but looked beyond to issues in the future. President Gorbachev had visited India twice. On the first occasion, the Delhi Declaration was signed and on the second occasion, he had been presented with the Indira Gandhi Peace Prize. Referring to his recent visit to China PM stated that it was in response to a very long standing invitation. The two sides exchanged their respective views and visions of Asia and the world both in the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. There was a remarkable similarity of views. On the border issue, a Joint Working Group had been established to recommend measures for a fair and reasonable settlement of the boundary question and for maintenance of peace and tranquility in the border areas. A Joint Ministerial Group had also been set up for promoting exchanges in the fields of Economic Cooperation and Science and Technology. It was further decided that regular consultations would be held between the two sides at the Foreign Secretary-level. Three agreements had been concluded between the two countries on Cooperation in the fields of Science and Technology, Commencement of Air Services and a Cultural Exchange Protocol. The Chinese leadership had greatly welcomed Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto’s election victory, particularly as they had been slightly uncomfortable with the previous government on issues like Afghanistan. PM requested that when Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto visited China she might convey his greetings and regard to the Chinese leaders.

25. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto noted the improvement in relations between the Superpowers and added that Pakistan had welcomed the INF Treaty and the Geneva Agreement. There was a general trend towards peace and relaxation of tensions. In the 1960s, there had been a move towards urban unrest which had manifested itself in many countries. Currently, there was a trend towards peace which was similarly manifesting itself in Iran/Iraq, Afghanistan, Kampuchea, Namibia and West Asia. Pakistan welcomed the improvement in Sino-Soviet and Sino-Indian relations. This would facilitate an improvement in relations between India and Pakistan. She would certainly convey Prime Ministers greetings to the Chinese leaders.

26. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto then requested Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan to make a presentation on Afghanistan. The Pakistan Foreign Minister, while referring to Afghanistan, indicated that India being a country in the region had a right to take a close interest in Afghanistan. The Geneva Accords envisaged a comprehensive settlement of the Afghan problem involving withdrawal of Soviet troops, return of refugees and the establishment of a broad based government. Pakistan felt that the Afghans had a right to determine their own destiny. Pakistan was, however, at the same time interested that the Mujahideen cause should not fail and a vacuum should not prevail following the Soviet troop withdrawal. If this happened Afghanistan would bleed in its hour of triumph. The IUAM leadership wanted a broad-based government for transfer of power rather than for sharing power with the PDPA regime. Pakistan shared their view. The IUAM leadership had rejected a power sharing arrangement, and rightly so. The IUAM were, however, prepared to consider accommodating in their individual capacity “good Muslims” from within the existing PDPA government. The IUAM favoured the emergence of a broad based government in Afghanistan. They were making efforts to get 50 to 100 representatives from Afghanistan to form a Consultative Group. This Group, representing a wide spectrum of opinion, would be able to give a mandate for an interim regime in Afghanistan. However, this process had not gone as smoothly as expected initially. If this Consultative Group could be formed and it could give its mandate to an interim government which could be accepted by the USSR among others, an important step would have been taken towards restoration of peace in Afghanistan. Mr. Vorontsov would come to Pakistan on 4th and 5th January, 1989 and would have discussions both with the IUAM and the Pakistan Government. The idea had been mooted in some quarters that Pakistan was interested in a “fundamentalist regime”. Pakistan had no such predilections and, apart from everything else, such a regime would be divisive for the Afghans. It would amount to imposing an unpopular regime on Afghanistan. Pakistan wanted a peaceful solution to the Afghan problem so that the refugees could return to their homes.

27. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto said that she looked forward to returning to India. She had very warm memories of her visit to Simla as a teenager. She had also extended an invitation to Prime that he would come to Pakistan.

28. The Prime Minister accepted her invitation and stated that the two Foreign Offices could work out dates.

29. The meeting terminated at 4.40 p.m.

3182 INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS

1197. Press Conference of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi on return from Pakistan after attending the SAARC Summit.

QUESTION: Sir, you have had three encounters – more than three encounters—with Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto. I hope they were not encounters of the third kind. We are also happy that three Agreements were signed. But, Sir, were you able to convince the Prime Minister of Pakistan that her policies of “military-nuclear” programme and support to terrorists are to be given up?

PRIME MINISTER: I had very useful talks with Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto. We had quite a long talk; we talked about a number of subjects. We highlighted the major problems, the difficult areas and about less difficult areas where it could be easier to work. I felt that there is definitely a mood on both sides to try and get things back on the track and normalize the situation between our two countries. I can also say with confidence that we believe that the PPP policies will be much better than the earlier policies, essentially on the more difficult areas.

QUESTION: Sir, what was India’s response to Mrs. Benazir’s proposal of a cut in military expenditure, particularly by India and Pakistan?

PRIME MINISTER: Well, we are willing to cut our expenditure provided other tensions come down. We spoke about this.

QUESTION: Sir, what was the outcome of your talks?

PRIME MINISTER: Like I said, there are some area which are harder to tackle, some areas which are easier. There is a process which is already looking at the more difficult areas and we are letting that process continue, but with a more positive indication from the higher levels, I think it will move better.

QUESTION: Would you like to deal with two specific questions namely, the support from Pakistan, so far, to the terrorism in Punjab, and secondly, Kashmir, in the sense that under Simla Agreement the issue is to be settled bilaterally or by a procedure settled bilaterally, but they (Pakistan) have been raising it at the United Nations and other forums and insisting on the right to do so.?

PRIME MINISTER: Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto said very clearly that she would like the Kashmir issue to be settled on the basis of the Simla Agreement.

QUESTION: But, Prime Minister, their Foreign Minister has been raising it recently and talking differently?

PRIME MINISTER: I talked with the Prime Minister on that.
QUESTION: Mr. Prime Minister, you have achieved spectacular progress in improving relations between China and India, and India and Pakistan. It must have caused a lot of strain on you physically and mentally also. Would you propose to go on a holiday, immediately?

PRIME MINISTER: You want me to go on a holiday now, before the next question, or after the next question?

QUESTION: In view of the changed circumstances, do you think there is going to be a change in India’s stand on issue like Afghanistan and Kashmir, Sir?

PRIME MINISTER: On Afghanistan, we have a very clear stand. We want the Geneva Agreements to be honoured.

QUESTION (in Hindi): Mr. Prime Minister, in the light of your talks with Benazir Bhutto you have said that you are confident that the policy of PPP in future will not be as it had been before. However, you are already aware of PPP’s and her father’s policies. What new change have you now found in her that you have the confidence that her future policy will considerably improve relations between India and Pakistan?

PRIME MINISTER: (in Hindi): These are words, not mine.

QUESTION: Sir, what was the specific assurance she gave over training the terrorist in Pakistan?

PRIME MINISTER: She said very clearly that they (Pakistan) are not for interfering in our internal affairs, and I believe she means it.

QUESTION: Sir, what is the reaction of the SAARC countries to your three-point charter for South Asia?

PRIME MINISTER: General agreement; worried in certain areas because of our size and our economic strength, but I reassured them that we don’t want to be overbearing. Much of it has been included in our declaration and the press release.

QUESTION: Mr. Prime Minister, it has been suggested by the Opposition parties that while you were in China you entered into a secret agreement about Siachen and other things. Would you like to clarify?

PRIME MINISTER: Well, let me say very clearly that we entered into nothing of that sort at all. There is no secret agreement. I think the particular party that you are talking of neither knows anything about foreign policy nor has a foreign policy.

QUESTION: Sir, have you set up any agreement for follow-up action in regard to your dialogue with Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto?
PRIME MINISTER: Yes.

QUESTION: Can you elaborate, Sir, a little bit?

PRIME MINISTER: No. when I want to set up an arrangement with you, I will elaborate to you.

QUESTION: Did the question of release of 43 POWs of the 1971 war figure in your talks with Prime Minister Bhutto?

PRIME MINISTER: Yes, except that the number they gave me was, I think 41. She is going to look into it seriously, yes.

QUESTION: Sir, are you going to hand over Jinnah House in Bombay to Pakistan?

PRIME MINISTER: I don’t know what is the situation with it at the moment. Prime Minister Bhutto did raise the point and I told her that I would find out what the exact position is.

1198. Letter from Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi to the United States President Ronald Reagan.

New Delhi, January 8, 1989.

Prime Minister
New Delhi

January 8, 1989

Dear Ron,

Thank you for your letter of January 2, on my recent visit to Pakistan.

My talks with Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto were most timely and constructive. Our consultations and the agreements that were signed during my visit have given a positive thrust towards the normalization of our relations with Pakistan.

The restoration of democracy in Pakistan has created the right climate in both countries for the improvement of our relationship. We decided to build on the good beginning made during my visit and maintain the momentum towards normalization, through a series of official level talks, culminating in a meeting of the Joint Commission at the Foreign Ministerial level. We hope to consolidate advances and move forward in a manner which would ensure that the process is an irreversible one.

Prime Minister Bhutto strongly reaffirmed her Government’s commitment to resolve all issues bilaterally in accordance with the Shimla Agreement. I was particularly heartened by her positive response to my suggestion that we need to break governmental barriers which hamper people to people interaction at all levels, including information, cultural, commercial and economic. I am convinced that this alone, in the longer run, will wipe out the recent legacy of lack of confidence and mistrust that has unfortunately characterized our relations.

A small beginning on promoting freer people to people access was made, in the SAARC context, with the decision on visa free travel in our region of legislators and Supreme Court Judges. We hope to extend this to other categories like journalists and businessmen. Among other steps that we took, was the decision to designate 1989 as the SAARC Year for combating drug abuse and drug trafficking and to examine the possibility of a Regional Convention on Drugs Control.

I found Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto receptive to our concerns on Pakistani aid to terrorism in India. We will have to wait and see how far this is translated into practice. On the nuclear issue, the basic differences in our approach remain. However, the Agreement on Prohibition of Attack on Nuclear Installations and Facilities is a useful confidence building measure. We have agreed to keep in touch. I hope that your efforts to persuade Pakistan to reverse its nuclear weapons programme will be successful, now that they are fully reassured that there never was and never will be any coercive intentions on our part.

I greatly value your good wishes and your wholehearted support to our endeavours to normalize our relations with Pakistan. I believe that, with some more time and patient effort, we should be able to convince Pakistan that it is very much in our interest to have a Pakistan that is stable and strong and confident enough to have friendly cooperation with India.

Sonia joins me in sending Nancy and you our warmest regards and best wishes for 1989.

Sincerely

R.

The Honourable Ronald Reagan,
President of the United States of America,
Washington D.C.

Pakistan would never resile from its stand that Kashmir dispute remained unsettled and unresolved, Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said on January 19, 1989.

“We have always maintained this and would never retract from this position,” he told the Senate while making a statement on recent developments in the field of foreign affairs.

He said Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto during her exchange of views with Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi on the occasion of the SAARC summit, clearly set forth Pakistan’s principled position on Jammu & Kashmir and emphasized that the Simla Agreement recognized this as an outstanding dispute which remained to be settled.

The Foreign Minister said Mr. Gandhi’s visit – the first official visit by an Indian Prime Minister to Pakistan since 1960 – provided a valuable opportunity to hold discussions between the two leaders about the state of their bilateral relations. The talks were held in an atmosphere of expectancy on both sides that the summit level meeting should yield some concrete results, contributing towards reducing tensions and promoting good neighbourly and cooperative relations. “The advent of our popularly elected government and parallel democratic system in the two countries provided a propitious opportunity to reinvigorate the process of normalization of relations and to create a climate of greater mutual trust and confidence,” he added.

He described the talks as most cordial and said that both sides candidly stated their respective positions on various issues with the common purpose of trying to lift bilateral relations out of the morass of mistrust and suspicion.

“Our well-known position on the peaceful nature of Pakistan’s nuclear programme was restated. We also reiterated the various proposals to India for a regional solution, which we had put forward publicly on several occasions to keep South Asia free of nuclear weapons,” he said and added: “We reaffirmed our non-involvement in India’s internal affairs. Pakistan’s opposition to all forms of interference in the internal affairs of other countries was stressed, as was our expectation that this principle would be adhered to by all states. It was agreed that another meeting of Interior Secretaries would be convened to continue efforts to adopt measures to control illegal trans-border activities from either side,”

The Foreign Minister said: “We expressed our willingness for a meaningful expansion in people-to-people contacts as a part of the process of normalization of our bilateral relations. Both sides also agreed to consider confidence building measures to generate a climate of greater trust between the two countries. These ideas will be further explored at the meeting of Foreign Secretaries, to be followed by the meeting of the Pakistan-India Joint Commission at the Foreign Minister level which is expected to be held by the middle of 1989.

He said: “As honourable members are aware, the concrete outcome of the discussions was the conclusion of three agreements signed in the presence of the two Prime Ministers: (a) Agreement on the prohibition of attack against nuclear installations and facilities; (b) agreement on cultural cooperation; and (c) agreement for the avoidance of double taxation on income derived from international air transport.

On Siachen Glacier Dispute

On the Siachen Glacier, he said Pakistan pointed out that the dispute had resulted from India’s violation of the Simla Agreement which had otherwise worked well in maintaining peace over the past 16 years. Both sides felt that the last round of Defence Secretaries talks held in September last had been useful and agreed to convene the next meeting of the same level at an early date to explore ways and means of reaching a just settlement.

Sahabzada Yaqub said by hosting the SAARC summit and by successfully chairing its proceedings, Pakistan was able to demonstrate its commitment to cooperate purposefully and constructively with the countries of the region. Each member state stood to benefit from an organization that had begun to mature and assume importance. It had gained recognition and approbation regionally and internationally the sovereign equality of all members-state-big or small – was assured by the rule that all decisions would be based on unanimity, he added.

He said the bilateral dialogue with India at the highest level, seeking tension-free and good neighbourly relations consistent with Pakistan’s traditional stand and compatible with internationally recognized principles, served the country’s national interests and the cause of peace in the region.

On Afghanistan Issue

On the question of Afghanistan, the Foreign Minister said Pakistan had never wavered from the aim it had set for itself in seeking a principled negotiated settlement. “We were successful in securing overwhelming international support in the OIC, the NAM and the UN,” he said.

He said the support of Parliament on the issue would always be an invaluable source of strength for the conduct of country’s policy on Afghanistan. We have maintained with tenacity and determination our support for the titanic struggle of the Afghan people. “We have insisted on the withdrawal of foreign troops in conformity with the provisions of Geneva Accord. We have rejected the claims of legitimacy of the puppet regime of Kabul and we have encouraged the formation of a broad-based government to replace the Kabul regime so that peace could return and the Afghan refugees could go back safety to their homes,” he added.

New Delhi, January 25, 1989.

In reply to a question about news item in today’s newspapers about Pakistan’s re-entry* into the Commonwealth, the Official Spokesman said that after the restoration of democracy in Pakistan as a result of the November 1988 elections, the question of India objecting to Pakistan’s re-entry into the Commonwealth does not arise. In fact, India would gladly take the lead in sponsoring the re-entry of Pakistan led by the democratic government.

* The Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office said in Islamabad on January 26 that Pakistan was considering its re-entry into the Commonwealth fold and a decision to this affect would be taken in due course.

Briefing media-men, he said the concerned quarters were finalizing the modalities for Pakistan’s re-entry into the Commonwealth community.

Replying to a question, Pakistani Spokesman said a final decision in this connection would be taken before the Commonwealth Summit in Malaysia towards the end of the current year.

Interview of the Indian News agency United News of India (UNI) with Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto.

Islamabad, February 6, 1989.

Question: The people of India and Pakistan continue to have a feeling of kinship because of historical ties, particularly after the induction of a democratic and representative Government in Pakistan. They are keen to have greater exchange of visits. Do you agree with these views? If so, do you favour visa liberalization to help such visits?
Answer: We have never hesitated to expand people-people contacts. We would welcome further expansion of such contacts. These create a fund of goodwill which is essential for the promotion of closer and friendly relations between the two countries.

The Cultural Cooperation Agreement, we have signed with India will enable the two countries to increase exchange in the fields of art, culture, education, mass media and sports and contribute towards a better mutual understanding.

The number of Zaireens (pilgrims) visiting religious shrines in each other's country has also been on the increase. Further visa liberation could be considered in the meeting of the Indo-Pak Joint Commission expected in a few months time.

In the context of SAARC we have also agreed to withdraw visa restrictions to enable our parliamentarians and judges to visit each other’s countries. This is a significant first step and we hope it would lead to further expansion of such contacts between the peoples of the SAARC member countries including Pakistan and India.

Question: Do you favour a Summit meeting with Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi apart from your meeting him during the SAARC Summit?

Answer: Yes, I do favour meetings with the Indian Prime Minister. As neighbours we should have frequent meetings of mutual consultations. This would help remove misperceptions and speed up the process of normalization. We had an opportunity to discuss this subject during Mr. Rajiv Gandhi’s visit to Islamabad for the SAARC Summit. We agreed to hold Summit level meetings on a regular basis. He kindly invited me to pay a visit to India. I also reiterated the standing invitation to him to visit Pakistan. I look forward to continuing our discussions to improve bilateral relations.

Question: There has been an international controversy whether or not Pakistan has a nuclear weapon-oriented programme. What is Pakistan’s position?

Answer: We have given repeated assurances about the peaceful nature of our nuclear programme. We have clearly stated that Pakistan does not intend to manufacture or acquire weapons. To allay apprehensions and suspicions we have proposed a series of equitable and non-discriminatory measure at the bilateral, regional and global level by which both Pakistan and India can assure each other and the world that they will not acquire or develop nuclear weapons. The singing of the Agreement against attack on each other’s nuclear installations and facilities is a good step in that direction. If our other confidence building measures do not commend themselves to India, we are prepared to consider positively any proposals that India may wish to propose.
Question: India has accused Pakistan of its involvement in the Punjab problem in India. Pakistan has denied the charge. Do you have any comments on it?

Answer: We have repeatedly and at all levels given assurances of our non-involvement in East Punjab. It is not in our interest to have instability across our borders. Such allegations are baseless and unfounded. To involve ourselves in any way in the problem across border would be against the spirit of our desire to establish good-neighbourly relations with India. We have extended maximum cooperation to India to curb various forms of illegal activities that take place across the border.

The Interior Secretaries of the two countries have been holding discussions to devise appropriate measures to check all illegal trans-border activities. We have agreed to schedule another meeting of the Interior Secretaries to continue their dialogue.

Question: Siachen has become a major irritant between the two countries. How do you think this problem can be settled?

Answer: The Siachen Glacier issue has become an un-necessary irritant in our bilateral relations. For peace in the region and establishment of good-neighbourly relations it is essential to settle this issue soon.

We seek a peaceful and negotiated settlement of the Siachen Glacier dispute in accordance with the Simla Agreement in which both sides are committed (not) to alter the situation unilaterally. This was the first and only instance of violation of the Simla Agreement. We therefore expect India to withdraw its forces to pre-Simla positions.

The Defence Secretaries of the two countries who have already held four rounds of talks shall be meeting again to find a solution compatible with the Simla Agreement.

Question: In your first Press Conference as Prime Minister, you affirmed Pakistan’s adherence to the Simla Agreement envisaging settlement of all bilateral problems through discussions. But your Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan recently said that Pakistan would continue to raise the Kashmir issue in international forums. How do you reconcile this with the Simla Accord?

Answer: The Simla Agreement provides an excellent framework for solving problems between the two countries. We would like the spirit of the Simla Agreement to be adhered to by the two governments. The Simla Agreement provides for a “step by step” approach that is best suited to solve the problems that have marred the relations between the two countries.

The Simla Agreement also provides a basis for the solution of the Kashmir issue. The positions of the two sides have been fully recognized in the accord which provides for “a final settlement of Jammu and Kashmir” in the context of the establishment of durable peace between the two countries. Both sides agreed to respect the Line of Control “without prejudice to the recognized position on either side”. On the Kashmir issue our position is based on the resolution of the United Nations according to which the question of the accession of the State of Jammu & Kashmir to Pakistan or India is to be decided through the democratic method of a free and impartial plebiscite.

In the Simla Agreement when we say that we have agreed to have bilateral negotiations with India, it is on the basis of United Nations resolutions. This does not in any way compromise our position. Also there is nothing in the Simla Agreement which completely rules out the role of the United Nations or other international forums. It is true the emphasis is on bilateral efforts but it does not mean that we cannot resort to any other forum. Thus the statement made by our Foreign Minister does not in anyway contradict the Simla Agreement.

Question: During General Zia’s rule, this accord suffered as many of its provisions were not allowed to be implemented. They related to trade and cultural exchanges. Is your Government willing to pick up the thread from 1977 and implement these provisions?

Answer: The Simla Agreement provides a firm basis to increase confidence and trust between the two countries. We favour expansion in trade with India on a step-by-step basis as provided in the Simla Agreement. Similarly we are prepared for meaningful expansion in non-official contacts as part of comprehensive normalization of our bilateral relations with India. We have signed the Cultural Cooperation Agreement which will be a useful framework to gradually promote people-to-people contacts in various spheres of activities.

Question: Indian and Pakistani films enjoy great patronage in each other’s country. Do you suggest lifting of restrictions on film import and export between the two countries? Do you also favour free exchange of books, journals, newspapers and scholars so as to remove the communication gap between the two countries?

Answer: Pakistan welcome further increase in people-to-people contacts. The Cultural Cooperation Agreement signed with India on December 31, 1988 provides for exchanges in the fields of arts, culture, media, music, films, periodicals, newspapers as well as exchange of scholars and writers. We hope these exchanges would lead to a meaningful expansion in cooperation as part of comprehensive normalization of our bilateral relations with India.
1202. Pakistan Rejects proposal for joint border patrol between India and Pakistan.

Lahore, February 7, 1989.

Pakistan has rejected an Indian proposal that joint border patrols be led by a commander who could alternately be from either country, operate on both sides of the border and take action on either side.

A spokesman for the Pakistan Rangers told a Press conference in Lahore that the proposal was rejected because it went against agreement made at the New Delhi meeting in May 1988 between the Home Secretaries of the two countries.

Officials of the Border Security Force and the Pakistan Rangers met at the Wegha border check point on February 6.

The spokesman said Pakistan had proposed the joint patrols at the New Delhi meeting in response to Indian allegations that Pakistan was helping Sikh terrorists.

The spokesman said: “Indian allegations had proved unfounded, baseless and mere propaganda as India changed its stand on the previously agreed points after dragging the issue”.

He said at the first meeting between officials of the two security agencies, modalities on joint patrolling, as visualized in the Home Secretaries’ meeting, were finalized, but no agreement was signed because both Governments had to approve the pact.

The spokesman alleged that the “Indians were never sincere in undertaking joint patrolling of the border since this would have proved their allegations baseless and unfounded and vindicated Pakistan’s position regarding her non-involvement in Indian Punjab”.

Assessment by Embassy of India in Beijing on the visit of Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto to China.

Beijing, February 16, 1989.

Note by Counsellor (Political)

Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto visited China from February 11 to 13, 1989. The visit received very high protocol and publicity treatment from the Chinese. Prime Minister Bhutto met with Chairman Deng, President Yang Shangkun, CPPCC Chairman (and ex-President) Li Xiannian, Party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang and with Zhou Enlai’s widow Madame Deng Yingchao. In addition, she held 3½ - hour of talks with Premier Li Peng in Beijing. It is, however, difficult to be certain that this intense schedule of meetings in the space of two days and two cities, and the high level of protocol treatment, was matched by the substantive outcome of the visit. We have been promised briefings by the Chinese Foreign Office and Pak diplomats here. Pending that, a summary of the public record and what we have gathered so far might be of interest, to catch that bag leaving tomorrow.

2. The backdrop to the visit was set by a profile of Benazir Bhutto in “Outlook weekly” of 6th February which said that “most observers say that Pakistan is presently at a turning point. The road ahead is far from even and she could meet several dangers and obstacles”. This kind of frankness is rare on the Chinese part, particularly on the eve of a high level visit from what has been China’s closet ally. At the same time, her domestic preoccupations presumably explain Prime Minister Bhutto’s desire to undertake the visit to China, seeking to utilize public expressions of Chinese support to consolidate her domestic position. She also revealed another concern in a pre-visit interview published on February 10th in the major Chinese newspapers, when she said that “the Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan will not change the fundamental regional geo-strategic situation”.

3. The third, and from our point of view the most significant area of interest, was the reflection of India-China and India-Pakistan relations during the visit. Here again, it could be argued that (Indian) PM’s visit to China last year and the December developments in India-Pakistan relations had resulted in a lessening of the relative prominence of these issues. In both her banquet speech and at her press conference, Prime Minister Bhutto welcomed the thaw or improvement in India-China relations. At the same time, she spoke of the impetus given by her meetings with PM to the process of India-Pakistan normalization. We are told by Pakistani diplomats that in return, both President
Yang Shangkun and Premier Li Peng mentioned PM’s visit to China. President Yang Shangkun reportedly said that as a result of PM’s visit there had been some improvement in the climate of Sino-Indian relations but no substantive progress on the boundary dispute. While this may have been the private briefing, the public Chinese presentation was to say that “China wishes to expand good neighbourly and friendly cooperation with all the countries in the region.....”

4. Developments in India-Pak relations, however, did not prevent Bhutto from mentioning the Kashmir issue and from claiming Chinese support when she said in her banquet speech:

“Our talks with the Indian Prime Minister helped to remove some of the mistrust that had bedeviled Pak-India relationship. We assured the Indian Prime Minister of Pakistan’s earnest desire to establish friendly and equitable relations with India on the basis of the Simla Agreement which, among other things, envisages the settlement of the Kashmir dispute on which we have always received your support”.

Interestingly, the reference to Kashmir provoked no public Chinese response or echo, and the English language Chinese media, while noting that Bhutto had mentioned Kashmir, omitted the mention of Chinese support to Pakistan. The Chinese language media omitted all mention of a reference to Kashmir. Subsequently, after her return to Pakistan Prime Minister Bhutto has claimed Chinese support on the Siachen issue as well. This again was not reflected in any public way during the visit.

5. The other expression of Pakistani concern about India was in Prime Minister Bhutto’s banquet speech reference to “unchecked militarization” of the Indian Ocean, when she called for “great powers and the littoral and hinterland states” to workout “a regime to limit the scope of militarization”. Subsequently, in her press conference, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan was even clearer in his explicit references to India having introduced a nuclear submarine. Yaqub Khan said that these concerns had been conveyed to the Chinese, and that the Chinese were deeply interested in Pakistan’s security etc. He, however, stopped short of saying that Pakistan had secured any Chinese assurances of joint action or countervailing military supplies.

6. There is natural speculation in Beijing as to whether any such private commitments were made by the Chinese to Pakistan. One possibility would be a Chinese commitment to lease a nuclear powered submarine to Pakistan. This, however, would be physically difficult for China at a time when she herself had only three such units, not always fully operational, and when the credibility of her own deterrent depends largely upon the uncertainty created by her nuclear submarines.
7. If anything, public treatment of the visit by the Chinese would suggest a marked Chinese reluctance to become involved in contentious India-Pak issues such as Kashmir or the Indian naval presence in the Indian Ocean. In one of her last meetings in Beijing, Prime Minister Bhutto was told by General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, in remarks quoted in the Chinese press, that “China hope the South Asian countries will seek common ground while reserving differences and strengthen cooperation between themselves”. This explicit statement coming on top of the evident Chinese unwillingness to be seen publicly choosing sides on issues such as Kashmir, no matter what their private sympathies might be, suggests that Pakistani hard-liners such as Yaqub Khan were not able to achieve very much in India related aspects of the visit. This is not to suggest that China is either changing or even adjusting her stand on divisive issues in South Asia, but only that the Chinese find it tactically useful at present to moderate their public posture. That there is no lessening of the Chinese interest in South Asia, or of Chinese intent to play a role in South Asia was made very clear in Li Peng’s speech where immediately after speaking of China’s desire for good relations with all South Asian countries, he said that “China wishes ……… to do its part in guarding peace and stability in this (South Asian) region and the whole of Asia”.

8. The other Pakistani concern was no doubt the evolving regional situation, the impact of Sino-Soviet normalization on Chinese support to Pakistan on the Afghanistan issue, and the post-Soviet withdrawal situation in Afghanistan. In her pre-visit interview, Prime Minister Bhutto had attempted to hold the line saying that “the Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan would not change the fundamental regional geo-strategic situation”. While this might be the Pakistani preference, it is a rather sweeping and categoric statement which seems to fly in the face of facts. Clearly there is a strong Pakistani interest in preventing any attenuation of Sino-Pakistan coordination on the Afghan issue. Hence the statement. The Chinese were careful not to give any public indication during the visit of any China-Pakistan differences on the Afghanistan issue. There was, however, possibly a difference in nuance. Li Peng in the talks stressed the Chinese concern about the “current trend of an internal war in Afghanistan” and said that China does not want to see any deterioration in that situation. Pakistani statements instead focused upon the right of Afghans to make their own choices. Both the Chinese and the Pakistanis spoke in public of the need for a broad-based coalition government to be set up in Afghanistan. The Chinese added, in what could be seen as a reference to PDPA participation, that it should be acceptable to all parties. It is difficult for us here to comment on the precise implications of these positions taken by the Chinese and the Pakistanis on the future regime in Afghanistan. For example, while the Pakistanis spoke of an interim government in Afghanistan, the Chinese didn’t. In any case, it would seem that events in Afghanistan have acquired a momentum of their own regardless of formal statements of position by outside governments. Perhaps, one can only conclude that the Chinese did not show any willingness to introduce a discordant note in the build up to the May Deng-Gorbachev summit and therefore avoided any specific position on the Afghanistan issue.

9. On China-Pakistan relations, the visit saw a reaffirmation of China's support to Pakistan's efforts to safeguard national independence and sovereignty. Li Peng reaffirmed that the “Chinese government and people will forever stay trustworthily friends of the Pakistani people in their just cause of safeguarding state independence and sovereignty............". These are not, however the full-throated commitments of support that we have heard during past such visits. When Zhao Ziyang made a similar statement of support, it was immediately followed by advice that South Asian countries should seek common ground and reserve differences and cooperation. Zhao thus seemed to be saying that China did not want to be publicly seen as involved in intra-South Asian disputes. Similarly, Li Peng’s commitment is to the Pakistani people and not to the Pakistani government. This is significant when seen along with the unprecedented public advice by Deng to Bhutto. Deng said that “the various political parties of Pakistan and the Pakistani people are all our friends. I hope they get united to develop Pakistan instead of haggling over past resentments”. Deng also said that “we understand each other even if any difference of views arises”. These are not the words that China normally addresses to an ally as close and as mindful of Chinese sensitivities as Pakistan has been. It is therefore difficult to avoid the impression that China is today more important to Pakistan than vice versa.

10. There has naturally been considerable speculation about whether the visit resulted in any further steps on China-Pak nuclear cooperation. We have no information yet to suggest this. Pakistani diplomats speak of future Sino-Pak cooperation as being in the areas of power development, energy and mineral development. These could theoretically, include cooperation in nuclear power. We would have to look out for information on this. China’s capabilities here must however be suspect since she is about to import nuclear power stations from the Soviet Union and over 85% of her only “indigenous” nuclear power situation under construction is imported. Form what we were told Chinese commitments to Prime Minister Bhutto are to assist in the construction of coal fired thermal power plants.

11. The other area where cooperation appears likely is in space technology. The Pakistanis have been discussing the use of Chinese launch facilities and even the possible purchase of a Chinese satellite by Pakistan. The Chinese Minister of Aeronautics and Astronautics was among those present at the welcome banquet, and the Pakistan Ambassador was at the Xichang launch site with a Pak delegation on December 24, 1988 to witness a launch.
12. On arms sales, Prime Minister Bhutto was careful to deny reports that she had purchased 75 fighter planes from China during the visit. We are, however, told by other diplomats that the delegation included several members of the Pakistani armed forces and it is difficult to believe that this subject was not discussed at all at such an opportunity.

13. The more general questions of civilian trade are to be discussed again at the Joint Ministerial Commission, which will hold its 5th session in late February. The Pakistani worry continues about the trade imbalances which have existed now for several years. Roughly 84% of total two way trade is accounted for by Chinese exports. According to Pakistani figures (but not according to the Chinese), trade in 1988 was in fact less than trade in 1987 when it amounted to approximately US$360 million. The visit saw the singing of an agreement on reciprocal encouragement and protection of investments and a trade MOU.

14. Interestingly, during her meeting with General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, both sides also stressed their intent to establish party relations between the PPP and the CPC. The precise modalities of this are yet to be worked out.

Conclusion

15. All in all, the visit seems to have provided a suitable and useful vehicle for Prime Minister Bhutto to stress her family’s special links with China (including a one month stay in China, as Premier Zhou Enlai’s guest when she was only 19 years old in 1972), and to use this for her domestic political purposes. Despite considerable rhetoric, however, the visit did show that China’s need for Pakistan today is not such as to necessitate her publicly choosing sides with her on every sensitive issue. All the indications are that the Pakistan side raised their concerns about Siachen, Kashmir, the Indian navy, Afghanistan etc. On none of these, was there any strong public Chinese echo or support, this will be contradicted by China. One major reason for this Chinese reticence is presumably their uncertainly about the future course of domestic politics in Pakistan evident both in Deng’s public remarks and in printed assessments in Chinese journals.

16. What does this mean for the future of Sino-Pak relations? It would seem that while continuing to make her considerable investment in Pakistan and while seeking to create long-term dependencies in sectors such as energy, the armed forces, etc., China is still unwilling to make an outright commitment to the PPP alone. In other words, one can expect a continuation of previous Chinese policies which have so far successfully insulated Sino-Pak relations from the storms of Pakistani domestic policies. Li Peng has accepted an invitation to visit Pakistan during the second half of this year and that will no doubt provide another opportunity to measure the evolution of the relationship.

Note by the Ambassador

Discussed with C (P).

2. While protocol reception at airport was as per the norms standardized by the Chinese on occasions of VVIP visits, the “special” nature of Sino-Pakistan relations which was mentioned by Deng Xiaoping, found expression at the unusually high level of attendance at the official Banquet by Premier Li Peng for Prime Minister Benazir.

3. In an era where the Chinese stress their independent foreign policy of peace, it is unusual to talk of “special” relationship. We should observe if this phrase is used in the case of other good friends of China such as Yugoslavia etc. Its use, however, does underline Chinese sensitivity to Pakistani feelings at a time when prospects for India-China relations show promise of substantive improvements.

4. Deng’s lecture to Bhutto on need to follow consensus politics with a view of uniting different factions, eschewing revenge, consolidating stability within Pakistan etc. is to say the least strange, (and) stranger still, is the wide publicity given to these remarks. Read together with what appears to be a difference of nuance over a future set up in Afghanistan, one wonders whether there is a moral for Pakistan’s Afghanistan policy in all that Deng said.

5. Hitherto all our analyses are based on public record, pending our own direct talks with the Chinese Foreign Office and with local Pakistani and other Diplomats. The lines of further enquiry by us suggest themselves. They have been referred to in the first CCB telegrams on this subject as well as in C (P)’s note. Indian navel situation, Afghanistan, how Pakistanis view Deng’s statement, Kashmir, how India-China relations as well as India-Pakistan relations figured in the private talks particularly with Li Peng, which lasted for such a long time need to be the subjects of further intensive discussions and future reports over the next few weeks.

New Delhi, March 30, 1989.

Ministry of External Affairs
(AP Division)

Secretary, Water and Power of the Pakistan called on FS at 1230 hrs on March 30, 1989. He was accompanied by Aziz Khan, DG (SA) in the Pakistan Foreign Office our side, Shri T.C.A. Rangachari, CDA in Islamabad and the undersigned were also present.

2. A summary of main points discussed at the meeting are as follows:

i) There was a discussion on the recent Cabinet reshuffle in Pakistan. Mr. Mahsud said that this was the largest Cabinet ever in Pakistan. Aziz Khan said humourously that half of the PPP were in the Cabinet either as Ministers or Advisers. He said that there was a lot of comment in the Pakistani press on this. Mr. Mahsud said that there was a fresh breeze of freedom in Pakistan which was reflected in the press.

ii) FS then steered the discussion towards Afghanistan. He said that civil war in Afghanistan was causing untold destruction. As one closely associated for 6½ years with Afghanistan and Pakistan, he could not but feel deeply on this issue. FS said it was important for Pakistan to speak to all the parties concerned and to tell the US to let things be. Mr. Mahsud asked how this could be done since USSR would continue to arm the Najib Government. FS said that as is evident from the Soviet press, the USSR had learnt a bitter lesson in Afghanistan. He said it was necessary for Afghans on both sides to talk to each other. For this the good offices of someone like Wali Khan could be used. Mr. Mahsud said that Wali Khan would not be acceptable to the IUML. He asked whether the Soviet Union could prevail upon Najib to step down. He felt that two sides may come down to an understanding after Mujahadeen realised that they were suffering heavy reverses in their efforts at pitched warfare. He further said that massacre of 86 Afghan soldiers who had surrendered to the Mujahideen, was a mistake which pre-empted large scale defections which was expected from the Afghan army. He said that the leaders of each of the seven factions have their own point of view and it was not sure that even after achieving victory they would be able to forge a Government. He said that he was not hopeful of the fall of Jalalabad since the Mujahideen were used to guerrilla warfare could not confront aerial bombardment. Even if the cities fell, the problem would be how to maintain and consolidate their hold.

iii) FS then enquired about the ongoing talks between the Secretaries of Water Resources of India and Pakistan. Mr. Mahsud said that there had been no progress on the talks in the past since the Pakistani side was handicapped by the attitude of the previous Government. The present Government was committed to resolve the issues and maintain a good atmosphere. He said he was hopeful of results.

iv) FS then spoke to Aziz Khan on the schedule of the forthcoming bilateral talks between India and Pakistan. He suggested that one or two of the proposed meetings could be held during the month of Ramzan. Aziz Khan said that Foreign Secretary level talks could be postponed till after the Joint Commission or be held at the same time. Shri Rangachari said that JS(AP) had suggested that the Home Secretary level talks could be held in India rather than in Pakistan though it was the turn of the Pakistan side to host the talks. FS said that the problem was that the Home Secretary, Defence Secretary, and Foreign Secretary would be free only after the Demands for Grants was over in Parliament. Aziz Khan agreed that Pakistan Interior Secretary Mr. S.K. Mehmood could come to India for the Home Secretary level talks. He said that Defence Secretary level talks could then be held in the later half of May; the Foreign Secretary level talks be on May 30-31, 1989 to be followed by the Joint Commission meeting on June 1-2, 1989. FS said that the schedule for the Joint Commission may not suit EAM. Shri Rangachari said that the Pakistan Foreign Minister and the Prime Minister would be busy during the month of June since there were many foreign visits in the pipeline.

v) FS then queried Aziz Khan on the reports regarding Benazir Bhutto’s pregnancy. Aziz Khan said that these rumours have not been confirmed.

vi) There was then discussion on the North West Frontier Province and recent moves to appoint a new Governor there. Mr. Mahsud said that name of Khaliq Khan had been proposed by the ANP. The choice of Governor was of great importance in the Frontier since he had direct control over the tribal belt. Aziz Khan said that there were moves afoot to amend the Constitution to take away these powers from the Governor and give it to the Chief Minister. FS asked why it was not possible to amalgamate the Frontier Province with FATA. Mr. Mahsud said that this status had prevailed from the British times. On getting Independence, Pakistan had accepted all treaties entered into by the British with the tribal chiefs. Once they were amalgamated with the Provinces and granted adult franchise, the Maliks “would stand to lose their authority in the area”.

vii) The meeting ended with usual exchange of pleasantries.

1205. SECRET

Record of the meeting between former External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh and Foreign Secretary S. K. Singh on the former’s visit to Pakistan from March 31 to April 4, 1989.

New Delhi, April 6, 1989.

Ministry of External Affairs
(AP Division)

Sardar Swaran Singh called on FS at 4-00 p.m. on Thursday, 6th April and made the following points regarding his visit to Pakistan for the Seminar on Bhutto.

(I) Meeting with Ms. Benazir Bhutto

(a) The Pakistanis themselves arranged the meeting. There was no request from Sardar Swaran Singh. He had earlier indicated his inability to go to Larkana for the meeting and had subsequently refused to accept a sudden pre-ponement proposed by the Pakistanis. Nevertheless, the meeting was held.

(b) The only person present during the meeting was Akhund. (Advisor on Foreign Affairs, National Coordination and Security)

(c) During the meeting Sardar Swaran Singh mentioned that the India-Pakistan summit had created a good impression in both the countries. On our part there was certainly a genuine desire to resolve differences. Ms. Benazir Bhutto agreed.

Ms. Benazir Bhutto indicated that she was facing problems in the working of democracy in Pakistan on account of a non-PPP Government in Punjab. In the past, the governments in the provinces had been the same as at the Centre and hence the problems being faced by her were a new experience. Sardar Swaran Singh indicated that we had been grappling with such problems for the last 30 years and had worked out appropriate arrangements for differing party governments to co-exist with each other. To this Ms. Benazir Bhutto responded that “but he (Nawaz Shariff) thinks he can replace me”. To this Sardar Swaran Singh stated that any Pakistani could aspire to this office.

Ms. Benazir Bhutto then sought Sardar Swaran Singh’s advice on how to manage the new democratic system in Pakistan. Sardar Swaran Singh indicated that there is no other option but to learn on the job and one must sink or swim.

In regard to India-Pakistan relations Sardar Swaran Singh indicated that there were any number of problems and the proper approach was to try resolving the easier issues first. He told her that being a non-official he could advise both the Prime Ministers. He felt that there was no need for any great hurry on the two sides to tackle the major problems but neither country should alter the status quo.

Ms. Benazir Bhutto expressed the hope that PM would visit Pakistan to which Sardar Swaran Singh responded that we were looking forward to her visit. At this point Akhund explained that the climate of opinion in Pakistan was such that they would want our PM to visit Pakistan before Ms. Benazir Bhutto’s visit to India. He wanted Sardar Swaran Singh to convey this to PM.

Ms. Benazir Bhutto had indicated that the Defence Secretaries’ talks were expected to have been held in February but were now being scheduled for May 1989. Sardar Swaran Singh indicated that this was perhaps due to change of personnel.

Ms. Benazir Bhutto stated that their Naval Chief was worried about India’s increased naval strength. Sardar Swaran Singh indicated that he told her that he had been Defence Minister twice and it was his view that no one could ever satisfy the Army, Air Force or Naval Chief with the money allocated to them for defence purposes.

(d) His impression was that Ms. Benazir Bhutto was running a very disorganized office and she did not have good professional help. All sorts of people were simply lounging around in her office premises.

II. Seminar on Bhutto

The Seminar on Bhutto did not involve any exchanges between the speakers and the audience. The Pakistanis had deliberately arranged it in this manner as in organizing this function they were under great strain and wished to avoid any attacks by the representatives of ‘Mullahdom’. They were genuinely worried that someone would disrupt the Seminar. While there was no security for him as such, otherwise the security build-up was considerable.

The Seminar was inaugurated by Nusrat Bhutto and was also attended by Ms. Benazir Bhutto for an hour and a half on the second day. At the inaugural session, messages were read out from the President of France, Yasser Arafat and the Syrian President. At the first session there were three speakers, David Owen of UK, Sardar Swaran Singh, and Air Vice Marshal Zulfiqar Ali Khan, in that order. David Owen made two mischievous remarks which Sardar Swaran Singh indicated that he had to refute. One of the remarks was that India had decided as early as June 1971 to settle scores with Pakistan and the other remark was that there was no doubt that India was a big military power. The latter remark was made with a sinister motive. In refuting the above remarks, Sardar Swaran Singh indicated that he made the following points:-

(i) There was no question of any intention on our part to settle scores with Pakistan. India had a serious problem on its hands because of the refugee influx of over 10 million from East Pakistan. Mrs. Gandhi herself had gone all over the world including the USA to persuade these countries to take measures to rectify the situation. This was not done and moreover it was Pakistan which started the conflict on our Western front. We had ourselves no intention of continuing the fight unnecessarily. India unilaterally declared a cease fire and this was not due to the entry of US warships in the Bay of Bengal.

(ii) As regards the nuclear issue, he was in government at the time of our peaceful nuclear explosion in 1974. If we had any desire, we could in the last 15 years have made nuclear weapons. However, we had not secured the same and it was his advice to both the countries to desist from a weapons oriented nuclear policy.

Apart from these two clarifications, Sardar Swaran Singh indicated that he more or less stuck in his presentation to the text which had been prepared earlier in the Ministry.

Sardar Swaran Singh further indicated that throughout his stay in Pakistan he was showered with considerable affection and the audience was extremely appreciative of the points made by him. Whenever he entered the hall at the Seminar there was always applause. It was his clear impression that Pakistanis no longer were eager for war, hostilities, trouble or tension with India. In this context he described the attention, respect and applause he received all the time in Pakistan and especially in the Seminar.

Sardar Swaran Singh indicated that he was interviewed by Pak. TV as well as by Jung. In regard to the TV interview, he was asked as to how he assessed
Mr. Bhutto who had always been his adversary. Sardar Swaran Singh in response stated that he had never regarded Mr. Bhutto as his adversary. Both were spokesmen of their respective countries at a time when their perceptions were not coinciding. As regards Mr. Bhutto's stature, this was something best left for historians to decide.

SECRET

Summary record of the meeting between External Affairs Minister and Pakistan Interior Minister Aitzaz Ahsan.

New Delhi, April 10, 1989.

Ministry of External Affairs
(AP Division)

Mr. Aitzaz Ahsan, Pakistan Minister for Interior called on EAM at 11 a.m. on Monday the 10th April 1989 in his capacity as the Special Envoy of Prime Minister Ms. Benazir Bhutto.

2. A list of the officials present is appended (not included here).

3. After an exchange of courtesies, EAM stated that he knew Pakistan's case on the question of Mr. Dorab Patel's candidature for the ICJ. The present situation when both India and Pakistan had a candidate for the ICJ was reflective of the communication gap between the two countries. The international community was only too happy to see these differences between the two countries and indeed often provoked them. India had, in the past tried to avoid such a situation by voluntarily not standing for elections. Yet another example was the gesture made by India on the question of Pakistan's entry to the Commonwealth. It was necessary for India and Pakistan to in future ensure that such a situation did not arise and to have prior consultations purely in the India-Pakistan context rather than in the SAARC context while putting up candidates. The two countries must work together in this area in the future. As regards Justice Pathak's candidature, the day on which we determined to field him, there was another candidate in the field. In these circumstances he was in no position to go to Justice Pathak to request him to step down particularly as justice Pathak had made it known that he would not feel embarrassed if he was not elected. Moreover, the nature of the ICJ election was such that the Indian candidate was not really a government candidate. It was, of course, desirable that a solution be found out of the impasse in the present case but he could not ask Justice Pathak to step down. Similarly, in all fairness, he could not ask Mr. Ahsan to ask his Prime Minister that the Pakistani candidate should step down. However, if Pakistan could do something it would be very useful.

4. Mr. Aitzaz Ahsan strongly commended the suggestion made by EAM for consultations between India and Pakistan on future candidatures in international fora. He, however, felt that it would be eminently desirable for India to reconsider the matter for the following reasons:

(a) Justice Dorab Patel was popularly admired in Pakistan in the context of his refusal to take the oath of office in 1981 to the Martial Law Regime. Moreover, Ms. Benazir Bhutto had a great personal admiration for him in view of the fact that he was one of the dissenting judges in the Bhutto murder case.

(b) The question of consultations between India and Pakistan on candidates in international fora had to be started at some point in time. It would be appropriate to do so now and would go down as a very gracious gesture by India.

(c) ‘The PPP regime was being whipped domestically for being pro-India. It did not for a moment regret the positive steps taken by it in this context which were in any case by and large popular amongst the people of Pakistan. However, there were lobbies which were putting pressure on PPP against India and it was important that the PPP should be adequately equipped to face this pressure and take forward the idea of India-Pakistan cooperation. If India continued with its candidature, lobbies opposed to India-Pakistan good relations would get the whip hand. They would argue that although the Pakistani candidature was impeccable, India was a ‘spoiler’. India-Pak relations could, therefore, get a setback though it would not be a personal embarrassment for him.

(d) If there were two candidates, it was conceivable that both could lose. This would be embarrassing for both India and Pakistan.

(e) A gesture from India on this issue would be extremely useful as Pakistan was desperate to show a victory in this matter for its own future in Pakistan.

(f) Justice Dorab Patel, being a Parsi was a secular candidate who had many admirers even in modern India. He was noted for his fairness and even on India-Pakistan disputes, if any went to the ICJ, he could be relied upon to deal with equity. His personal mind-set was anti-military and in the event of the emergence of a military regime in Pakistan he should certainly be counted on to rule against them.

5. E.AM indicated that the Pakistani case was well known to him. However, it was just not possible for him to go back in the matter to Justice Pathak who was not at all tense about the elections. We also did not feel that there would be any cause for embarrassment to us in the event Justice Pathak was not elected. In the present situation it appeared that neither side could back down.
However, the Special Envoy would be meeting the Prime Minister. Whatever was decided by the Prime Minister would be implemented effectively. He took the point made by the Special Envoy that we should try and build upon India-Pakistan cooperation by finding a solution to the present impasse and making a gesture. However India had taken an initiative on the Commonwealth issue and we had to see how this should be best built upon. He indicated that he was not saying “No” to the Pakistani proposal. If the matter could be resolved, well and good, and, if not, it should not be allowed to become a hurdle.

6. After a further, exchange of courtesies, the meeting terminated at 12.30 countries. It was now possible for India and Pakistan, both of which enjoyed democratic systems, to make progress together.

The Pakistan Interior Minister agreed with the sentiments expressed by the Home Minister. He mentioned that both the countries shared similar problems and could learn from each other in solving them. He pointed out that there was a great commitment by leaders of both the countries for friendship with each other. Pakistan looked to other democratic systems particularly that in India for support and sustenance for their own democracy.

The Home Minister went on to point out the problems faced by Congress (I) following the 1977 elections. He mentioned that few thought that Congress (I) would return to office, but the faith of the people in Congress (I) was unshakable and as a result of it the Congress came back to office.

In this context, the Home Minister pointed out that some of the responsibility for the loss of Congress (I) in the elections must be placed on Western agencies which had spread false propaganda about policies followed by Congress (I), like the family planning.

The Home Minister went on to add that the suffering of Congress (I) and the humanitarian values to which it had adhered to finally triumphed.

The Pakistan Interior Minister indicated that the PPP had also similarly suffered under the Military regime in the late 70s and 80s, but finally the people's faith in democracy was responsible for the PPP's return to power. The value of truth and democracy triumphed. He pointed out that not only he but his wife and grandmother also had to go to jail. This was an occupational hazard. India was, however, fortunate in having firm democratic foundations and great internal strength.

The Home Minister responded that it was indeed a fact that India had decided earlier on that it must resolve its internal problems itself and must preserve humanitarian values. It was fortunate that the leadership in both the countries had gone to a new generation which was forward looking and not based on suspicions which the older generation may have harboured. The two young leaders of India and Pakistan who had so much in common would work to develop cooperation between the two countries. The common enemy of the two countries was poverty. There was much that could be shared between the two countries in the area of economic development. The Home Minister went on to give an expose of India's march towards self-sufficiency in science and technology and particularly in agriculture.

The Pakistan Interior Minister echoed complete agreement with the views expressed by the Home Minister in regard to the need and the potential for cooperation between the two countries.
In response to the Pakistan Interior Minister’s complaint about Indian allegations of Pakistan’s involvement with terrorist activities directed against us, particularly in the Punjab, the Home Minister stated that while we were heartened by the assurances given by Ms. Benazir Bhutto on this issue to the Prime Minister, weapons from Pakistan continued to flow into Punjab at the same rate as in the past. This was causing serious problems for us.

The Pakistan Interior Minister in response indicated that such allegations from India on this issue caused problems for them. On the weapons issue Pakistan was overflowing with them not just in the frontier but even in the east in Lahore. There was indeed not only a heroin, but also a Kalashnikov culture in Pakistan. In the frontier such weapons were even now being manufactured as it was a part of the tradition of that area. If the Americans could not stop the influx of heroin, into that country it was understandable that India would not be able to stop the influx of arms. Arms flowed like water in the reverse direction to whichever place where the price commanded by them was the highest. Pakistan was sincerely sorry about the situation in Punjab. It was most desirable for the two countries to decrease allegations and counter allegations against each other and move towards cooperation. Pakistan took no pleasure in the difficulties of a neighbour. Pakistan, for instance, was not interfering in Afghanistan as was being made out by others. It made sense for a civilian government which wanted to have civilian restructuring of its administrative system to have good relations with its neighbours so that the process of restructuring could be facilitated. Indeed the intensive talks which PM Ms. Benazir Bhutto had with Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi in Pakistan in its quest for good relations had opened the PPP to become a whipping boy in Pakistan.

Home Minister indicated that from the person of a terrorists who had been killed recently some letters had fallen into our hands which indicated that these terrorists regarded both Rajiv Gandhi and Ms. Benazir Bhutto as their enemies.

The Pakistan Interior Minister stated that this was precisely the point he was trying to make. If Pakistan’s words did not reach out to its neighbour sometimes, its actions spoke even louder.

The Interior Minister went on to plead for India’s support to their candidate Justice Dorab Patel for the ICJ. In this context, he made the following points:-

1) Justice Dorab Patel was a Parsee and thus a secular candidate.

2) He commanded wide respect not only in Pakistan but also in India for his judicial eminence.

3) He was immensely popular in Pakistan for his dissenting vote in the Bhutto murder case and for his refusal to take his oath of office under the Martial Law regime. Because of these decisions Ms. Benazir Bhutto was emotionally committed to him.

(4) India’s announcement of their candidate followed the Pakistani announcement.

(5) Indian support for Justice Dorab Patel would open up for India a tremendous goodwill in Pakistan and would increase the scope for widening goodwill and cooperation in the two countries.

The Home Minister responded that this was an issue which he would be raising with the Prime Minister who would no doubt give him an appropriate response.

The Pakistan Interior Minister sought Home Secretary’s confirmation as to whether he would be visiting Pakistan in May. Home Secretary responded in the affirmative. The Interior Minister indicated that he hoped that the environment would be even better at that time. The Interior Minister went on to add that there was a great deal of admiration in Pakistan for Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and it was inevitable that he stole the limelight during the SAARC meeting. He would have done so wherever such a meeting was held. His press conference in Pakistan was lively and his one-liners had gone down extremely well.

The meeting concluded with Mr. Aitzaz Ahsan’s reminiscences of his earlier visit to India when he had really enjoyed himself. The Meeting terminated at 7.10 p.m.

Summary Record of the discussions during the Call by the Chairman of the Water and Power Development Authority (WAPDA) of Pakistan on Foreign Secretary S. K. Singh.

New Delhi, April 13, 1989.

Lt. Gen. (Retd) Zahid All Akbar Khan, Chairman of the Water & Power Development Authority (WAPDA) of Pakistan who is visiting India at the invitation of the Ministry of Water Resources called on F. S. on April 13, 1989 at 5.00 pm. Shri K.S. Sharma, Joint Commissioner(I), Ministry of Water Resources was also present.

2. After the initial exchange of greetings, FS enquired about the programme of Lt. Gen Khan.

3. Shri Sharma said that Lt. Gen. Khan had been to Aurangabad, Hyderabad and Bombay. In Hyderabad he attended the inaugural ceremony of the Ramganga Project. In response to a query by F.S. Lt. Gen. Khan said that he could not visit the atomic power station during his stay in Bombay due to time constraints.

4. Lt. Gen. Khan thanked FS as he believed that his visit must have been at the Initiative of FS.

5. FS said that he was advised by our Cd’A in Islamabad that the WAPDA Chairman should be invited to India so that he could acquaint himself with water resources and electricity generation projects in India. FS then proceeded to describe the major complexities in India. He emphasized that our democratic functioning has sustained us, despite the complexities, by providing a safety valve through a network of democratic institutions at various levels.

6. FS said that our policies to control the population growth have not been successful, but on the positive side education has caught on and literacy rates have increased with certain areas doing particularly well. The scientific and technological educational levels have gone up. The impact of the rise of middle class and increase in the number of scientific and technological personnel has been to build up a productive group of people who are innovative. This innovativeness needs to be encouraged.

7. FS said that our mistakes in the power sector should also be shown to the WAPDA Chairman.

8. Lt. Gen. Khan responded by saying that he is being shown everything despite the time constraints. He said that he was impressed by the warmth of the people and by the level of our self-sufficiency.
9. FS then steered the conversation towards the possibility of Indian participation in Pakistani projects. Referring to the dealings of the World Bank with Pakistan, he felt that the World Bank was making excessive demands from Pakistan. He then said that as Ambassador in Pakistan he faced difficulty in even obtaining tender documents.

10. Lt. Gen. Khan said that Indian firm such as BHEL could compete for jobs in Pakistan for which tenders are floated. He felt that Indian firms could do well in the areas of Water & Power.

11. FS said that the WAPDA Chairman should encourage this. FS felt that the barrier in dealings with India has been perhaps at lower bureaucratic levels in Pakistan and not as much at the top levels. He said these inhibitions should be removed.

12. Shri Sharma pointed out that Pakistani students have not been coming to India under the exchange of Scholars scheme. Lt. Gen. Khan said that he would send his people from the next year. FS said that 6-8 people could come from his organization.

13. FS said that Suzuki had given Pakistan a far worse deal as compared to India. Lt Gen. Khan said that Pakistan is only assembling the car.

14. Turning to politics in Pakistan, FS enquired whether there was any agreement now between PM Ms. Bhutto and Nawaz Sharif.

15. Lt. Gen. Khan said that there was some sort of an agreement but it was not enough. This was harming Punjab. The new government perhaps needs time to settle down. He felt that if army comes again the country would be finished.

17. Lt. Gen. Khan said that even now the members of National Assembly etc. want maximum returns in shortest possible time. They came to him for relatively small things — placing people in jobs or getting things done out of turn.

18. The meeting ended with the usual exchange of pleasantries.

(VINOD KUMAR)
Under Secretary (Pak-P)
Extract from the Record of discussions between Ambassador T. N. Kaul and Soviet Chief of the International Department, Central Committtee V. M. Falin.

Moscow, May 6, 1989.

Embassy of India

After exchange of pleasantries Ambassador mentioned that he would be leaving for Armenia to hand over a cheque for Rs.47 million collected by the Prime Minister’s Armenia Earthquake Relief Fund. Ambassador mentioned that this reflected the sympathy of Indians, thousands, of whom had contributed to their maximum ability for the victims of the earthquake.

Ambassador then requested Mr. Falin for his assessment of the situation in Pakistan. We had welcomed the advent of democracy in Pakistan and the two Prime Ministers had had a fruitful meeting in Islamabad at the end of last year during the SAARC summit. We would like to see Ms. Bhutto in a stronger position but this does not seem to be happening so far.

Mr. Falin replied that Ms. Bhutto must in a fairly short period of time assert herself and find the means to reduce sharply the influence of the military and the intelligence services. Otherwise her future in Pakistan is bleak. In the final analysis she will be removed from power, either de facto or de jure - it does not matter much - and may even be forced to leave Pakistan and settle abroad. The present situation is also unnatural because a political opponent of Zia, Ms. Bhutto, is continuing his foreign policy in full. There are three sources of power in Pakistan today: Ms. Bhutto is only a symbol; real power is with the military, particularly with ISI and the third factor is the USA with its system of military, political and financial connections. This last should not be under-estimated and it would be extremely difficult to break it. The USA is supplying $ 700 million as official assistance and $ 400 million through CIA and other covert sources. The Arab countries, first of all Saudi Arabia, have also provided generous financial assistance adding up to over $ 1 billion in direct assistance. All this is militarizing Pakistani politics to such an extent that it is becoming “a centre of regional instability” in the region. India has first hand experience of this, so does Afghanistan, and the Americans are also using it to project their power in the Persian Gulf and elsewhere. It is important therefore to force the Pakistani leadership to ponder the consequences of its policies. In particular thousands of Pakistanis, dressed up as volunteers, are participating in fighting around Jalalabad. The Soviet Ambassador in Islamabad had confronted Pakistani Foreign Minister Yakub Khan with evidence of this and the latter had been forced to acknowledge that he could not refute the evidence. The Eleventh and Seventeenth Pakistani Artillery Divisions are also involved in shelling Jalalabad. They are planning to launch a night attack on Jalalabad in order to capture it and hand it over to the so-called interim-government. Mr. Falin vehemently stated that there has to be a limit to everything and calling them volunteers does not change the nature of Pakistani involvement. Afghanistan has every right to raise the question of hot pursuit in case such interference continues. Missiles are another response available to the Afghans. These could completely destroy Pakistani towns in case they are used.

Mr. Falin said that the Pakistanis had put out a declaration denying the charges made in the Soviet statement. However, even for Prime Minister Bhutto it was no secret that the charges were true and that Soviet-Pakistani relations were at their worst entirely because of Pakistani policies.

Ambassador agreed with Mr. Falin and said that we have our own experience of similar Pakistani activity in 1947 when they sent so-called volunteers into Kashmir. This however had ended up in complete failure as had subsequent Pakistani aggressive plans in 1965 and 1971. Their build up in Siachen continues as does their help to terrorists in Punjab in spite of Ms. Bhutto’s assurances to our Prime Minister. Their nuclear weapons programme is also a serious threat. In addition, there is a growing threat of Islamic fundamentalism which can destabilize not only our own region but large parts of China and Soviet Central Asia. There was also a danger of the fighting in Afghanistan spilling over into the Pakistani tribal zones. All this should be discussed at the forthcoming summit.

Mr. Falin then turned to Afghanistan. He said that attacks in various parts of Afghanistan have been stepped up in recent days with the aim of diverting resources from the defence of Jalalabad to other places, such as Khost, Herat and Khandhar. However Jalalabad remains the primary target. The Mujahideen were also trying to subvert, and bribe members of the armed forces and the PDPA in Kabul and elsewhere. However, this had not succeeded. The Field Commanders were ignoring the orders being issued from Peshawar and were not taking part in the fighting. The second half of May will be a critical time. The Americans are insisting that the rebels capture some important town regardless of the bloodshed involved and are threatening to re-examine their commitment to the present Mujahideen leadership if it fails. Arms supplies to the rebels are increasing rapidly and all forecasts are unreliable as to the final outcome. The garrison in Jalalabad is tired and has not received fresh forces since the fighting began. The rebels have been replaced 4 or 5 times over the same period.
Although occasional supplies do get through to the defenders of Jalalabad, they are unable to get any rest, even at night, because of the night shelling. The situation is therefore complicated and attempts at establishing a political dialogue have not succeeded because the Mujahideen are refusing to give up military means to settle the issue.

Ambassador thanked Mr. Falin and said that we were equally concerned about the situation in Afghanistan. Efforts must continue to find a reasonable solution to the problem.

The meeting ended with usual courtesies. This issue with Ambassador’s approval.

1210. Agreed Minutes of the Third meeting of the India - Pakistan Committee to Combat Drug Trafficking and Smuggling.

AGREED MINUTES

The third meeting of the India-Pakistan Committee to combat drug trafficking and smuggling was held at New Delhi on May 10 -- 11, 1989. The India delegation was led by Shri M.M. Bhatnagar, Director General, Narcotics Control Bureau and the delegation from Pakistan was led by Mr. Kalim Dil Khan, Officer on Special Duty (Narcotics), Prime Minister’s Secretariat……

2. The talks were held in a cordial and frank atmosphere with both sides reiterating the resolve of their respective Government to combat drug trafficking and smuggling between the two countries. The Pakistan delegation stated that a Narcotics Control Division has been set up under a Minister of State by the Federal Government. The Division will be responsible for the formulation and implementation of Government policies on all narcotics matters. The Indian delegation explained that the problems of illicit traffic and drug abuse work were receiving attention at the highest level of Government and various countermeasures were taken to effectively combat the same. In this connection mention was also made by the Indian side regarding the enactment of Prevention of Illicit Traffic in Narcotics Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1988 which provides for preventive detention of drug traffickers. The Indian side also informed regarding the recent enactment of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances (Amendment) Act, 1989 which, inter-alia, provides for death punishment for trafficking offences in certain cases and also for tracing, freezing and forfeiture of the assets of traffickers and their associates etc.

3. The two sides expressed satisfaction on the progress made so far in the exchange of information between the two nodal agencies. The Indian side, however, felt that considering the smuggling of arms from across the India--Pakistan border, it would be beneficial if a separate nodal agency was created to enable exchange of information regarding the smuggling of arms between the Director General, Border Security Force in India and the Director General, Pakistan Rangers. The Pakistan delegation stated that this matter fell within the purview of the Border Ground Rules Committee already in existence. It was, therefore, felt that this subject could be left to be considered by the Home and Interior Secretaries of India and Pakistan, if they so desire.

4. The drug trafficking and smuggling situation in both the countries was reviewed. The Indian delegation informed the Committee that India was a transit country in respect of heroin and hashish coming mainly from across India--Pakistan border and destined to western countries and expressed concern over the escalation of such traffic as indicated by the increasing seizures made by the India enforcement agencies close to the India--Pakistan border areas. Mention was also made of spurt in gold smuggling from across India--Pakistan border. The Pakistan delegation stated that Pakistan was also a transit country both in respect of smuggling of narcotics and gold from third countries. Particular mention was also made by Pakistan delegation of smuggling of methaqualone and alcoholic liquors from across Pakistan--India border. The two sides agreed that information on these aspects of drug trafficking and smuggling which was of crucial importance should be exchanged through the existing nodal agencies as quickly as possible and preferably through modern communication systems like telephone, telex, and fax wherever available. Such information should not be merely of a general nature but should also give specific details about the modus operandi, identification of smugglers/traffickers and their associate operators in the other country preferably with Photographs, markings on seized packages, etc. to enable quick follow-up action being taken. It was also agreed that lists that have already been exchanged indicating important smugglers/drug traffickers and their counterparts operating across the border be updated and exchanged as early as possible. Simultaneously, in accordance with the decision taken in the last meeting, information in agreed formats in respect of all cases in which contraband goods (excluding drugs) of a value exceeding Rs. 40 lakhs are seized should also be exchanged expeditiously after a seizure is effected. It was decided to exchange information about new equipments being used or proposed to be used as door frame metal detectors for detection of gold and other gadgets in use and also about the use of dogs for detection of narcotic drugs. The two sides also agreed that training materials and legislations enacted in the two countries be exchanged through the nodal agencies.

5. The two sides agreed that the quality and content of information being exchanged needs improvement. Both sides agreed to take effective steps to reduce the response time in exchange of information by further activating the two nodal agencies. It was felt that the need to have periodical meetings at other operational levels should also be examined.

6. It was noted by the Committee that the nationals of certain third countries outside the region were found to be involved in the trafficking of drugs in the region. The need to keep a special watch on the movement of such persons between India and Pakistan was emphasized and it was agreed that relevant information regarding such persons should be exchanged between the nodal agencies of the two countries.

7. It was agreed to hold the next meeting of the Committee in Pakistan in December, 1989. The exact dates and venue for the meeting will be intimated by the Pakistan authorities.

Islamabad, May 21, 1989

The meeting took place at 12.35 PM on 21.5.1989 at the office of the Minister of Interior of Pakistan. The following were present:

Pakistani side:

i) Mr. Aitzaz Ahsan, Minister of Interior.

ii) Mr. S.K. Mahmud, Secretary, Interior

iii) Mr. Diljan Khan, Additional Secretary, Ministry of Interior.

Indian side:

i) Mr. J.A. Kalyanakrishnan, Home Secretary

ii) Mr. J.N. Dixit, Ambassador of India.

2. Our Home Secretary conveyed greetings from the Home Minister, Shri Bhuta Singh. Mr. Aitzaz Ahsan recalled that he had very useful discussions in Delhi during his visit in April, 89.

3. Home Secretary briefly summarized the trend of discussions held in the full session of the Indian and Pakistani delegations earlier in the morning. He expressed the view that tangible results are on the cards as far as subjects like narcotics, trans-border smuggling etc. are concerned. Touching upon the issue of finalizing “border ground rules”, Home Secretary explained in detail the differences of approach between Indian and Pakistani delegations on the subject as a result of which these rules could not be finalized in the previous rounds. Home Secretary said that it would be more practicable if the military and defence elements of border ground rules are left to the Defence and Foreign Secretaries of the two countries to finalize, while the Home Secretaries finalize arrangements for mutual cooperation in the civil and policing aspects; aspects which fall within their jurisdiction. He said that the delegations should not be tied down to dates or nomenclatures (of 1961) the arrangements being called Border Ground Rules etc., the arrangements can be called “arrangements” or “Procedures for cooperation” between the Border Security Forces of the two countries.

2. Home Secretary said that he has come with a brief to give positive content to Indo-Pak relations and that he will endeavour to the best of his abilities to fulfill this brief. He added that he had perceived a cooperative approach on the part of the Pakistani delegation. He also recalled Prime Minister Ms. Benazir Bhutto’s overall approach that difficult problems have to be resolved step by step instead of the effort being given up because of difficulties; nor should one rush into ill prepared solutions which may not be implementable.

3. Minister for Interior Mr. Aitzalz Ahsan made the following points:

i) There is a quantitative and qualitative change in attitudes in Pakistan about Indo-Pak relations with the advent of PMBB to power.

ii) The meeting between Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and Prime Minister Ms. Bhutto in December 1988 has laid the foundation for developing “positive relations.” These relations should now be developed at all levels through meetings of the officials which are taking place.

iii) The revival of democracy in Pakistan is not only good for Pakistan, but should be welcomed by India as it is good for Indo-Pak relations.

iv) He said that he would be supportive of the approach outlined by our Home Secretary subject to the consideration that all arrangements arrived at should be based on sincerity, mutual trust and they should respect mutual concerns.

v) He said that the arrangements arrived at should also ensure that they do not impinge on the sovereignty and national interests of either India or Pakistan. He said that as far as finalization of the border ground rules are concerned, if the Interior Secretary of Pakistan can find a via media by remitting the defence aspects of the rules to be dealt with by the Defence authorities or the Foreign Secretaries, he would have no objection. But the arrangements should be carefully worked out so that there are no problems or contradictions later.

4. Home Secretary spent another 15 minutes alone with the Minister of Interior at the end of the meeting during which he requested the Minister of Interior to ensure that highest political direction is available to the Pakistani delegation to ensure tangible results at the current round of talks.

Summary Record of the call made by Home Secretary J. A. Kalyanakrishnan on Pakistan President Ghulam Ishaq Khan.

The meeting took place at Aiwan-e-Sadr (President’s official residence) at 3.45 P.M. The following were present:

Pakistani side:

i) President Ghulam Ishaq Khan.

ii) Secretary to the President, Mr. Fazlur Rahman.

iii) Secretary of Interior, Mr. S.K. Mahmud.

iv) Ambassador Niaz Naik.

v) Director General (SA), Ministry of Foreign Affairs Mr. Aziz Ahmad Khan.

Indian side:

i) Home Secretary, Mr. J.A. Kalyanakrishnan.

ii) Ambassador J.N. Dixit.

2. After the exchange of initial courtesies, President Ghulam Ishaq Khan made the following points:

(i) He welcomed the Home Secretary and expressed satisfaction about the tenor of talks between the Home Secretary and the Pakistani Secretary for Interior. He hoped that despite some issues being difficult to resolve the spirit of cooperation and a step by step approach will resolve pending issues being dealt with by the two delegations. He asserted that the revival of democracy in Pakistan provides India and Pakistan with a new opportunity to restructure their relations on positive lines restoring normalcy and friendship. He stated that in his opinion the meeting between Prime Ministers Rajiv Gandhi and Bhutto in December 1988 and the resulting agreements had made a good beginning regarding the reorientation of Indo-Pak relations on the right lines.

(ii) He said that Indo-Pak relations can be developed on positive and friendly lines if both sides adhere to the principles of respect for each other’s sovereignty, treating each other with equality and work for mutual benefit, respecting the sensitivities and concerns of each other. He said that if these principles are adhered to there is no reason why India and Pakistan cannot live as good neighbours.

(iii) President G(hulam) I (Ishaq) K(han) felt that both countries should give up their traditional inclination of blaming each other for any problem or difficulty which they respectively face. The leaders of both countries should undertake some serious introspection to remove suspicion and build up mutual trust. Both countries should give up their habit of externalizing their internal problems.

3. In his opinion Indo-Pak relations are now showing good prospects for improvement.

4. Talking about the role of permanent civil service in societies, the President said that though bureaucracy is a much maligned phenomena by laymen, it is a patriotic, impartial and efficient bureaucracy which ensures the unity and strength of any country apart from ensuring the stability and economic progress of countries. Countries which do not have a permanent and independent bureaucracy have tended to disintegrate.

5. He wished the Home Secretaries’ talks every success.

6. Home Secretary, Shri Kalyanakrishnan, made the following points in response:

(i) He conveyed greetings from the President and the Prime Minister of India to G (hulam) I(shaq) K(han).

(ii) He gave a detailed briefing to the President on the progress made in the discussions in the current round of talks between Home Secretaries of the two countries.

(iii) He said that the talks being held with Interior Secretary are part of the mission stipulated by the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan to build bridges between the two countries and forge arrangements which will ensure stability, peace and increasing contacts between the peoples of India and Pakistan. Mr. Kalyanakrishnan said that though this is his first visit to Islamabad, he has been told about the tremendous transformation that the city of Islamabad has undergone in terms of environmental preservation afforestation and beautification under the guidance of the Pakistani leadership. He said that if in 10 years the physical landscape of Islamabad could be made so beautiful and harmonious, if the same will could animate the government and people of Pakistan such positive changes can also be brought about in Indo-Pak relations.

7. Mr. Kalyanakrishnan presented GIK with a 3-volume set of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru’s books. The meeting lasted for 20 minutes.

Report of the Working Group on “Fugitives from Law” appointed by the India-Pakistan Home/Interior Secretary-level Talks.

Subject: India-Pakistan Home/Interior Secretary Level Meeting at Islamabad (21-23 May, 1989)-Report of the Working Group on “Fugitives From Law” etc.

The Director General, FIA (Pakistan) and the Additional Director, CBI (India) met and discussed areas of mutual and co-operation in the light of the plenary Session of 21st May, 1989.

2. The FIA and the CBI representatives recommend the following measures for the consideration of the Interior/Home Secretaries of Pakistan and India:

i) Responses from both countries through Interpol channels, represented by these two organizations in their respective countries, were reviewed and found to have been generally satisfactory. But there are areas in which more expeditious actions would be desirable. To ensure this, the Interpol chiefs and their representative in both countries may have greater interaction at personal level by periodically writing to one another semi-officially, drawing attention to specific INTERPOL references requiring urgent response. In addition, it would be desirable if the INTERPOL Chiefs and their representatives of these two countries meet twice a year or as may be needed to sort out mutual problems.

ii) FIA in Pakistan and CBI in India may act as the nodal agency in their respective countries in locating and tracing out fugitives from the law (i.e. persons wanted in specific criminal case/cases) and arranging to hand over such wanted and absconding criminals to its counterpart in the other country without going through cumbersome and time-consuming procedures. In regard the Pakistan Rangers and the Border Security Force will render necessary support and assistance in the matter of handing over of fugitives from the law. The modalities of actions would be worked out by the FIA and CBI representatives through joint discussion within the next three months.

iii) The FIA and the CBI will act in close cooperation with the Pakistan Rangers, the Border Security Force and State Police agencies in neutralization organized gangs and touts indulging in infiltration of large groups of people in pursuit of employment etc in each other’s country.

They feel that the success of such efforts will also depend on the co-operative assistance of the appropriate authority of other country/countries of origin of these persons. For ensuring this, they suggest that the Interior Secretary of Pakistan and the Home Secretary of India may consider appropriate measures for enlisting the active assistance and participation of the authorities of such other country/countries in this co-operative effort. Additionally it is recommended that greater vigilance and alertness at Railway stations and Bus stands suspected to be the transit point of illegal infiltrants should be ensured as a preventive measure.

Summary Record of decisions taken at the third round of India-Pakistan Home Secretary Level Talks (20-24 MAY 1989).

The third round of India-Pakistan Home Secretary level talks was held in Islamabad from 20-24 May, 1989. The Indian delegation was led by Mr. J. A. Kalyanakrishnan, Home Secretary and the Pakistan Delegation was led by Interior Secretary Mr. S. K. Mahmud.

During the course of his visit to Islamabad, the leader of the Indian delegation called on His Excellency Mr. Ghulam Ishaq Khan, President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, Her Excellency Mohtarma Benazir Bhutto, Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and His Excellency Mr. Aitzaz Ahsan, Minister of Interior and Narcotics Control.

The talks were held in a friendly and constructive atmosphere. Both sides recalled the resolve of their respective governments to establish good neighbourly and cooperative relations between the two countries in accordance with the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement. They agreed that, the problems discussed could find a solution on the basis of good faith and mutual trust.

Both sides expressed their serious concern at the continuing problem of terrorism, illicit border crossing, drug trafficking and smuggling. While generally expressing satisfaction at the evolving cooperative relationship between the two countries in their efforts to jointly tackle these problems, they recognized the importance of further intensifying and tightening up the working arrangements between the various agencies of the two countries in these areas. In this context, they undertook a review of the implementation of the decisions taken at the last Home Secretary level talks in May 1988 as well as the outcome of the subsequent meeting of the Committee on Combat Drug Trafficking and Smuggling and the meetings between the border security forces of the two countries.

(a) Cooperative Arrangements between the two Border Security Forces:

i) The Director General, Pakistan Rangers, and the Inspectors’ General, BSF, Punjab and Rajasthan, shall biannually review the implementation of the agreed measures of cooperation with special focus on their efficacy in regard to combating trans-border crimes, in addition to the work relating to the maintenance of boundary pillars. During their meetings they may also agree on such measures including meetings at intermediary level, as may be conducive to improve cooperation between the two Border Security Forces.

ii) The Border Security Forces shall undertake simultaneous coordinated patrolling along the India-Pakistan Border and the patrols shall be briefed and debriefed jointly. The concerned officials from the two Border Security Forces will meet in June 1989 to finalize the modalities and implementation of this Arrangement.

iii) Early finalization of Border Guidelines/Border Ground Rules for a comprehensive cooperative arrangement between the two Security Forces.

(b) Cooperative Arrangements for Combating Trafficking in Narcotic Drugs.

The two Secretaries reviewed the escalating drug trafficking situation with particular reference to trans-border movement of drugs between the two countries and emphasized the irresolute commitment of the two governments to wage a total war on drug trafficking and smuggling. They noted with satisfaction the work being done in this area by the Indo-Pak Committee to combat Drug Trafficking and Smuggling, which was constituted in pursuance of the decision taken by the Home Secretary level meeting in 1986. This Indo-Pak Committee has so far held three meetings, the last one was held in New Delhi on 10/11.5.1989.

The two Secretaries endorsed the recommendations/decisions of the third meeting of the Indo-Pak Committee in regard to the measures to be taken on both sides as reflected in their agreed minutes. They felt that, since the goals and objectives in this field are common and the governments of the two countries are determined to eliminate the scourge of drug trafficking and abuse, there was need for further enhancing and intensifying cooperation between the two countries in this area.

It was noted that although the present arrangements laid down by the Indo-Pak Committee to combat Drug Trafficking and Smuggling envisage exchange of information between the nodal agencies of the two countries in an agreed format in respect of seizure cases and traffickers, the information actually exchanged very often did not contain all the required details. They directed the concerned agencies to ensure that the information exchanged was comprehensive and such information should be exchanged in respect of all cases of trans-border movement of drugs and contraband and where the drugs/contraband are believed to have come from the other country—whether by land, sea or air. The time lag in responding to such communications should be reduced to the minimum.

They directed also that coverage of information to be exchanged between the two countries should be widened to include organization, powers, functions and addresses of different enforcement agencies, training material, equipments, legislation, data regarding seizures and other related matters, including modus operandi, routes followed etc.

Having regard to the escalating drug trafficking scenario in the region, the two Secretaries saw merit in the need for harmonization of laws against drug trafficking so that drug traffickers, in order to avoid harsher punishment in one country, do not flee to or operate from the other country.

The two Secretaries further emphasized the need for intensifying the enforcement of drug laws for interception/interdiction of the drug traffic on both sides and for mounting a special vigil against their trans-border movement.

(c) Cooperative Arrangements between FIA and CBI

i) Both sides recognized the importance of apprehending fugitives from law of either country expeditiously. Responses from both countries through INTERPOL channels, represented by these two organizations in their respective countries were reviewed and found to have been generally satisfactory. But there are areas in which more expeditious actions would be desirable. To ensure this, the CBI and the FIA representing the INTERPOL in their respective countries may have greater interaction at personal level by periodically writing to one another demi-officially drawing attention to specific INTERPOL references requiring urgent response. In addition, it would be desirable if the INTERPOL Chiefs and their representatives of these two countries meet twice a year or as may be needed to sort out mutual problems.

ii) FIA in Pakistan and CBI in India may act as the nodal agency in their respective countries in locating and tracing out fugitives from the law (i.e. persons wanted in specific criminal case/cases) and arranging to hand over such wanted and absconding criminals to its counterpart in the other country without going through cumbersome and time-consuming procedure. In this regard the Pakistan Rangers and the Border Security Force will render necessary support and assistance in the matter of handing over of fugitives from the law. The modalities of actions would be worked out by the FIA and CBI representatives through joint discussion within the next three months.

iii) The FIA and the CBI will act in close cooperation with the Pakistan Rangers, the Border Security Force and State Police agencies in neutralizing organized gangs and touts indulging in infiltration of large groups of people in pursuit of employment etc. in each other’s country. They feel that the success of such efforts will also depend on the cooperative assistance of the appropriate authority of other country/countries of origin of these persons. For providing this cooperative effort appropriate measures will be taken for enlisting the active assistance and participation of the authorities of such other country/countries.

It was agreed that the Home Secretary of India and the Interior Secretary of Pakistan shall remain in touch with each other and meet again before the end of 1989 in New Delhi.

1215. Joint Press Release issued on Indo-Pak Talks held between the Indian Home Secretary and the Pakistani Interior Secretary.

Following their meetings in Lahore (20-21 December, 1986) and in New Delhi (14-16 May, 1989), the Home Secretary of India and the Interior Secretary of Pakistan held a third meeting in Islamabad from 20-24 May, 1989.

The Indian delegation was headed by Mr. J.A. Kalyanakrishnan, Home Secretary and comprised the following officials:

1) H.E. Mr. J.N. Dixit, Ambassador of India.
2) Mr. H.P. Bhatnager, Director General, Border Security Force.
3) Dr. A.P. Mukherjee, Additional Secretary, Ministry of Home Affairs.
4) Mr. M.M. Bhatnagar, Director-General, Narcotics.
5) Mr. V.K. Jain, Additional Secretary, Ministry of Home Affairs.
6) Mr. Sauresh Chandra, Additional Secretary, Ministry of Home Affairs.
7) Mr. Satish Chandra, Joint Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs.
8) Mr. C.T. Benjamin, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Home Affairs.
10) Mr. T.C.A. Rangachari, Deputy Chief of Mission, Embassy of India.

The Pakistan delegation was headed by Mr. S.K. Mahmud, Interior Secretary and comprised the following officials:

1) H.E. Mr. Niaz A Naik, Pakistan Ambassador to New Delhi.
3) Mr. Dilshad Najamuddin, Chairman, Pakistan Narcotics Control Board.
4) Mr. Salman Khaliq, Director General, Federal Investigation Agency.
5) Mr. Aziz Ahmed Khan, Director General (SA), Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
6) Mr. Hasan Raza Pasha, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Interior & Narcotics Control, (Interior Division).
The leader of the Indian delegation called on H.E. Mr. Ghulam Ishaq Khan, President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, H.E. Mohtarma Benazir Bhutto, Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and H.E. Mr. Aitzaz Ahsan, Minister for Interior and Narcotics Control.

The talks were held in a friendly and constructive atmosphere. Both sides recalled the resolve of their respective Governments to establish good neighbourly and cooperative relations between the two countries in accordance with the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement. They agreed that the problems discussed could find a resolution on the basis of good faith and mutual trust.

Both sides agreed to take the following concrete measures to contain terrorism, drug trafficking and smuggling, and illicit border crossing along the India-Pakistan border.

(i) Cooperative arrangements between the two Border Security Forces:

Both sides reviewed the interim measure agreed upon during the last round of Home Secretary level talks. While the working arrangements already agreed upon represented a step forward, it was felt that more could be done and the following additional measures were decided upon:

(a) The Director General Pakistan Rangers and the Inspectors General, BSF, Punjab and Rajasthan shall biannually review the implementation of the agreed measures of cooperation with special focus on their efficacy in regard to combating trans-border crimes, in addition to the work relating to the maintenance of boundary pillars. During their meetings, they may also agree on such measures including meetings at intermediary level, as may be conducive to improve cooperation between the two Border Security Forces.

(b) The Border Security Forces shall undertake simultaneous coordinated patrolling along the India-Pakistan border and the patrols shall be briefed and de-briefed jointly. The concerned officials from the two Border Security Forces will meet in June 1989 to finalize the modalities and implementation of this arrangement.

(ii) Cooperative Arrangement to combat Drug trafficking and Smuggling:

The two sides reviewed the escalating drug trafficking situation with particular reference to trans-border movement of drugs between the two countries and emphasized the resolute commitment of the two governments to wage a total war on drug trafficking and smuggling. They noted with satisfaction the work being done in this area by the Indo-Pak Committee to combat drug trafficking and smuggling, which was constituted in pursuance of the decision taken by the Home Secretary level meeting in 1986. The Indo-Pak Committee has already held three meetings so far, the last one was held in New Delhi on 10/11.5.1989.
The two sides fully endorsed the decisions taken at the third meeting of the Indo-Pak Committee. With a view to further enhancing and intensifying cooperation between the two countries, it was agreed that:

(a) Coverage of information to be exchanged between the two countries should be widened to include organization, powers, functions and addresses of different enforcement agencies, training material, equipment, legislation, data regarding seizures and other related matters, including modus operandi, routes followed etc.

(b) There was merit in taking steps for harmonization of laws against drug traffickers, so that drug traffickers, in order to avoid harsher punishment in one country, do not flee to or operate from the other country.

(c) There was need for intensifying enforcement of drug laws for interception/interdiction of the drug traffic on both sides and for mounting a special vigil against their trans-border movement.

The above arrangement were designed to give a clear message to drug traffickers that the two Governments are determined to take all measures to effectively eliminate drug trafficking. To this end the drug law enforcement agencies in the two countries should gear themselves for taking effective action for accomplishing this task in a spirit of total cooperation.

(iii) Cooperative arrangements to deal with fugitives from law etc: Both sides recognizing the importance of speedy apprehension of fugitives from law of either country in the other, reviewed the response received from the concerned agencies of the two countries through Interpol channels with a view to ensuring more expeditious action in this area. They agreed that:

(a) The Interpol Chiefs and their representatives in both countries should have greater interaction at personal level including fresh periodic meetings.

(b) The FIA in Pakistan and CBI in India, acting as the nodal agencies and in concert with other appropriate agencies in their respective countries, should take appropriate action in tracing out and arranging to hand over to the other countries wanted and absconding criminals. The modalities of actions in this regard is to be worked out by the FIA and the CBI representatives through discussion within the next three months.
India – Pakistan agree to the proposal for joint patrolling along the India – Pakistan border.

Lahore, June 7, 1989.

Pakistan and India have decided to patrol the India-Pakistan border jointly by their security forces from July 1.

The decisions was taken at a biannual meeting between the Director-General, Pakistan Rangers, and Inspectors-General, Border Security Force (BSF), of Punjab, Rajasthan and Gujarat, held at Wagha on the Pakistan side.

The joint patrolling by the troops of the security forces of the two countries will also include the border areas of Sindh. The meeting decided that joint patrol would remain confined to their respective territories and under no circumstances, will violate territorial integrity of the other country. The respective patrols will also restrict their fire to their respective areas and apprehended persons will be dealt under the law of the respective countries.

Both sides generally expressed satisfaction over the cooperative arrangements between the two security forces.

SECRET

Summary record note of meeting between Foreign Secretary S. K. Singh and Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahibzada Yaqub Khan.

Islamabad, June 17, 1989.

Foreign Secretary called on Sahibzada Yaqub Khan on Saturday, 17th June 1989, at the former’s (latter) office in Islamabad at 3.00 p.m.

2. A list of those present is appended. (not included here)

3. Sahibzada Yaqub Khan, after warmly welcoming the Foreign Secretary, stated that he regarded his mission as extremely important. The visit was taking place at a very propitious moment. A good understanding had developed between the two Prime Ministers who had displayed the breadth of vision to improve ties between the two countries. Both sides should now move to expand linkages and build up confidence with each other.

4. Sahibzada Yaqub Khan indicated that he regarded the outcome of the recently concluded Defence Secretary level talks on Siachen with optimism. Both sides were on the threshold of an understanding. It was in the mutual interest to lessen the burden of military conflict and to work for a resolution of the issue. The chances of success were good. The leaders of the two countries must be congratulated on their boldness to grapple with and resolve this issue. They had taken the first step in unscrambling the situation in Siachen, which did not benefit either side. While the elements of a settlement of the Siachen issue should be agreed upon now, they could be further refined in generalities when he meets with the Indian External Affairs Minister in the next few weeks.

5. Foreign Secretary indicated that the outcome of the talks on Siachen had become uncertain the previous evening and that he was grateful to the Pakistan Foreign Secretary for having interceded with the Pakistan Prime Minister in the matter. He had played a minor role in the happy outcome of these talks by encouraging the Pakistan Foreign Secretary to work for a more positive approach in the matter. Sahibzada Yaqub khan indicated that he had played a major role in this regard. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary indicated that the Foreign Minister had, in fact, telephoned him at midnight in this matter and instructed him to ensure that a more positive press release was produced.

6. Foreign Secretary indicated that for him personally, his three and a half years stay in Pakistan had been an education in diplomacy – both from the masses and from the leaders. He had been accosted with the utmost love and affection all over Pakistan in places like Karachi, Multan, Lahore etc. He had learnt a great deal from President Zia and Prime Minister Bhutto. His personal gift to India was a smooth and painless transition in Pakistan.

7. Foreign Secretary went out to state that it would be a good thing if leaders of the two countries kept meeting each other on several occasions as a matter of routine – either in Islamabad or in New Delhi, even for a few hours, whenever they happen to be going elsewhere.

8. Foreign Secretary conveyed to Sahibzada Yaqub Khan External Affairs Minister’s greetings and personal regards. He referred to External Affairs Minister’s particular interest that the cultural exchange programme, which was being worked out, should contain forward-looking ideas in the realm of exchange of scholars and books as also in the fields of archaeology, education etc. We, on our part, were prepared to go as far as possible in these areas as well as in those relating to people-to-people exchanges. Similarly, we should consider possibilities of greater cooperation in the economic and commercial fields.

9. Foreign Secretary went on to highlight the importance about the common dangers being faced by the two countries in the emerging international economic scene. India, along with Brazil and Japan, was facing the threat of U.S. sanctions under Super and Special–301. It was some times argued that Brazil and India were being faced with US sanctions in order to save Japan from the loneliness of isolation. In this context, Foreign Secretary indicated that unless the developing countries stand together, they would find themselves in a strait jacket. Apart from the areas of trade-related investment measures and trade related actions pertaining to intellectual property rights, India was also being threatened because of positions it was taking in the field of environment. Specifically, India was resisting the efforts by developed countries to perpetuate the gap between them and developing countries under the garb of protecting the environment. All this along with the missile technology control legume were legs of the same table designed by the developed countries to maintain their dominance over the developing world. It was, therefore, imperative that India and Pakistan should do some joint thinking on this issue. Sahibzada Yaqub Khan fully agreed with this sentiment and indicated that the two countries should work together in this area. They had so far done nothing in this area.

10. In response to Foreign Secretary’s query regarding Pakistan’s assessment of China, Sahibzada Yaqub stated the China was going through a period of uncertainty. It was not so much a question of whether the Chinese government could establish control, but how they could bring order back to China in the areas of philosophy and thought without a revolution. Pakistan hoped that stability would return to China. However, Chinese energies would be occupied with the internal situation and, therefore, in the global equation, there could be certain changes. Pakistan had always held the view that no matter what governments were there in the two countries, the relationship between them would be retained. The effects of the internal turmoil in China needed to be measured in terms of the global events and one need to watch as to how the various initiatives relating to China would be affected.

11. It was important to note as to what lessons the Soviets would draw from the developments in China. It remained to be seen whether the Marxist system interpreted in the most liberal way could stand elasticity or was so rigid that faced with the present challenges, it would like metal fatigue collapse. Gorbachev felt that he would be able to meet these challenges, but he was brought up in the system and believed in it. One could, however, entertain serious doubts about this approach.

12. Sahibzada Yaqub Khan, in response to a further query on Sino-U.S. relations, stated that U.S. policy was traditionally dominated by ideological and strategic considerations. These were frequently contradictory. By and large, the former coloured the views of the people and the later those of the State Department. In this particular case, ideological considerations had forced USA to put a stop on all transfers of technology to China as well as all economic and military assistance. USA, no doubt, realized China’s importance. However, the coordinates of equilibrium had changed with improvement in US-Soviet ties. If the West continued to deny China assistance, Japan might fill the gap.

13. Foreign Secretary indicated that disturbances similar to the recent one had taken place in the past in China, notably in 1976, 1979 and 1984, involving efforts at restructuring the distribution of power. This was the second time that Deng’s heir-apparent was set aside by him, The Soviet thrust was on polity, while that of China was on the economy. Whichever faction came up in China, would plead for a relaxation and the demands being voiced by the people would be taken over by the party. Meanwhile, there was a question mark about the next ruling group in China. Foreign Secretary further indicated that he had been scheduled to leave for Beijing on 30th June. He had received a warm personal message recently that the Chinese expected him to come. This was a good sign.

14. Sahibzada Yaqub Khan, in response to queries, stated that there were the following two sets of questions about Iran:

(a) Succession.
(b) Internal contradictions in the Revolution.

15. As regards succession, it had gone off much better and smoother than may have been expected. However, as regards the internal contradictions in the Revolution, they still remained to be reconciled. Sahibzada Yaqub Khan went on to state that Iran was indeed turning somewhat to USSR because of the Rushdie affair and hope for arms from the Soviets. Moreover, the Imam had instructions for better relations with the Soviets. He, however, felt that in the new scenario, Iran's isolation from the West would decline and they would want certain equilibrium.

16. Sahibzada Yaqub Khan went on to state that while on Afghanistan the Soviets might have expected a deal, the Iranians had not resiled from the strong anti-Najib position. Though the two alliances had not been able to get together, Pakistan’s attempt would be to get the Afghan interim government to expand its base, particularly through inclusion of the 8-Party alliance and Shia groups as well as local commanders. It would be fair to say that while Soviet aims had not been totally realized on this issue, there was, no doubt, some change in the Iranian position.

17. In the new dispensation in Iran, there would be some improvement in Soviet relations, but an effort could be made to maintain some equilibrium. Improvement of relations with Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Jordan would be more difficult than with countries like Kuwait. Both China and Japan were passing through a period of flux and with both these countries, Pakistan had close relations.

18. In response to queries regarding Afghanistan, Sahibzada Yaqub Khan recognized that India had a right to know Pakistan's views. This subject merited a separate session. He was hopeful of some kind of settlement. While a military solution may not be possible, a solution on the basis of the Afghan interim government could be evolved. The latter wanted no truck with Najib and Pakistan supported this view and would have discussions on this with the Soviets.

19. Foreign Secretary recalled that he had stated during the former Foreign Secretary’s visit to Pakistan in May, 1988 to the then President that the Mujahideen had neither the training nor the grit and capability to either oust the PDPA militarily or to insinuate themselves in Afghanistan. India could, however, help Pakistan in trying to achieve a peacefully negotiated settlement in Afghanistan. Sahibzada Yaqub Khan, while recalling this suggestion, jocularly remarked that Indian help always caused problems.

20. The meeting terminated at 3.50 P.M.

21. It may be mentioned that at 3.30 p.m., Ambassador J.N. Dixit and Ambassador Niaz Naik joined the meeting, indicating that the Indian and Pakistani defence delegations had reached agreement with the intervention of the Pakistani Prime Minister on a positively worded joint press release. Sahibzada Yaqub Khan expressed satisfaction and happiness at this development, which he had forecast earlier.
Summary Record Note of First session of India-Pakistan Foreign Secretary level talks.

Islamabad, June 17, 1989.

Ministry of External Affairs
(AP Division)

The first session of the India-Pakistan Foreign Secretary level talks commenced at 10.30 AM on 17th June, 1989.

After welcoming the Foreign Secretary, the Pakistan Foreign Secretary Dr. Humayun Khan stated that he (the Indian Foreign Secretary) was returning to familiar surroundings. He was glad that most of the meetings had taken place within the time frame set in December by the two Prime Ministers. The momentum generated at that time, had been maintained. Of course, this had resulted in some meetings being cramped together, but that did not really matter since the spirit in which the two Prime Ministers had held their talks had pervaded the subsequent meetings. Our approach, at the present time, was entirely positive. Pakistan would like to move ahead in a broad spectrum of areas.

The Indian Foreign Secretary’s meeting with Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto had been fixed for 12.00 PM today. Since there was very little time before one left for that meeting, he felt that the two should have a one-to-one discussion for the next half an hour or so accompanied by the two Ambassadors. The plenary meeting could take place in the afternoon when bilateral issues could be discussed. International and regional issues could be discussed the following day. While the one-to-one meeting was taking place the other members of the delegation could carry on with their structured dialogue.

Foreign Secretary responded that it was a moment of emotion for him. It had been 122 days since he left Islamabad and he would be back within a week for the SAARC Standing Committee meeting. In more ways than one, it was a home coming to him both to Islamabad and to the Foreign Office. He had received considerable warmth, assistance and friendship during his stay in Pakistan. A number of meetings had taken place, including that of Home Secretaries, Secretary Water Resources, Surveyors General and Defence Secretaries. This had done a world of good. People in the two countries had been able to see that somehow the spirit now was different. We owed this to our leaders who had set a new framework for us. They were likely to meet several times in the course of the next few months. Our Foreign Minister was also thinking of dropping in. If the leaders build up this habit of exchanging visits and carrying on a dialogue and briefing each other regularly, it would establish a psychology of cooperation and collaboration rather than competition.

At this stage (10.45 AM), the plenary session broke up with the two Foreign Secretaries along with the two Ambassadors carrying on their exchanges and the two Division Heads along with Mr. Khalid Mahmood, the Pak Additional Foreign Secretary and desk officers leaving the room for separate talks.

1219. Summary Record Note of Foreign Secretary-level Talks.
Islamabad, June 17, 1989.
Ministry of External Affairs
(AP Division)

The second plenary session commenced at 1600 hrs. It lasted till 1815 hrs.

2. Pak FS, at the outset, referred to the meeting with PM BB (Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto) in the morning on Siachen, at which Defence Secretary and Foreign Secretary had both been present. He stated that he was glad that the two Foreign Offices were able to make an input. The Pakistan Prime Minister reciprocated the Indian Prime Minister's desire to move forward on Siachen. There had been a distinct change in the environment of Indo-Pak relations since the meeting between the two leaders in December 1988. The traditional lurking sense of suspicion had abated. This was the contribution of our two leaders. Siachen was one of the very few pending substantive disputes between the two countries. It entailed unnecessary costs for both sides. Situation was also fraught with risks, and although there was no immediate threat, it always held the possibility of a larger fall-out. Then there was the humanitarian aspect. Efforts should, therefore, be made to work out a solution acceptable to both sides. One could not, however, afford to be sanguine. There were so many intricacies involved. The agreement that had been reached this morning, therefore, was very useful. It is a declaration of intent. There was hope as long as there was a commonality of desire to accommodate each other. FS interjected at this point to say that the contribution of COAS Aslam Beg had been extremely positive, who was present during the meeting with PM BB. Pak FS agreed. He added he was sure that the Indian COAS would also not like to see his soldiers continuing to suffer hardships and danger in that inhospitable terrain.

3. FS said that we should consider media aspects and press coverage. We should, if possible, discourage great deal of learned analysis taking place in the media at this stage.

4. Thereafter, there was a brief discussion on the issue of whether a joint statement following Foreign Secretaries’ statement was necessary. It was agreed, going by past practice, that there would be no joint statement, but the two Foreign Secretaries would meet the press.

5. Pak FS then invited Additional Foreign Secretary Khalid Mehmood to brief the plenary about the discussions that had taken place between the two delegations in the morning when the two Foreign Secretaries were away. The record of that discussion is appended (Annexure II—not available here). During the course of going through this record, comments and discussion on individual points were made;-

(i) Capture of fishermen and fishing vessels: No further discussion.

(ii) Civilian prisoners: After the presentation by Additional Foreign Secretary, Pak FS referred to humanitarian problems which had been raised in some sections of Pakistani press regarding Pakistani children being detained in jails in India. In this context, he also referred to the advocacy by Ansar Burney, Karachi Advocate, and his suggestion that he be permitted to visit Indian jails for this purpose. He felt that it would be a good idea for the Indian side to consider this. FS recalled that he himself had met Ansar Burney. It seemed that he was more interested in publicity and publicizing himself. Also, sources of his information were somewhat suspect and, on his own admission, he did not have even a single Indian source for his information. JS (AP) added that the two specific cases of children that had been referred to by him had been resolved. One of the children was an Indian national. The other one had been repatriated to Pakistan.

Pak FS also stated that so far consular access was given only to those who had completed their sentences. Perhaps one could work towards doing this at an earlier stage along with providing early information on holding civilian prisoners. They had no particularly strong feelings against this. JS (AP) indicated that this is exactly what we had in mind. It was agreed as proposed by FS that in Sub-Commission IV we should consider tightening up our Protocol on Consular Access.

(iii) Missing defence personnel: On missing Indian defence personnel, Pak FS said that there was no reason or desire on the part of Pakistan to detain such persons. They are supposed to have been captured in 1971. Eighteen years have already passed. None have been traced. Perhaps there was an element of poor record-keeping on their part. Pak side was aware of the sensitivities of their families and the repeated demarches at various levels in GOI, including to EAM and PM. Pak side would be willing to help reassure relatives that none of these persons were in detention in Pakistan. They had done a complete examination based on data provided earlier by India. Now, there was a concrete reference to the Kot Lakhpat Jail.

One more search could be done starting with records of this jail of the 1978-79 periods.

(iv) MOU on Airspace Violations: No further discussion.

(v) Opening of Khokrapar - Munabao Route: No further discussion.

(vi) Hyderabad Funds: Pak FS said that India and Pakistan had both been cheated by the Bank. There was considerable loss of interest earnings also. Their Embassy in London and India High Commission had been in touch with each other. Meetings had taken place between High Commissioner/DHC with Pak Ambassador. It had now been suggested to the Pak Embassy by their solicitors that it may be desirable to reach an out-of-court settlement. This would avoid lengthy litigation. It was also felt by them that a payment offer of Pound 750,000 and pound 1.5 million may persuade the trustees to settle the case quickly. FS recalled that there was a statute of limitations. Under that, our claims might become time-barred after November 1989. It was thus necessary to act speedily. He agreed that out-of-court settlement may be preferable. It was decided that the two Missions in London should keep in touch with each other. He asked JS (AP) to obtain due orders to go in for an out-of-court settlement.

(vii) Border Ground Rules: There was a brief discussion in regard to the agreement during the morning session to try and convene the next meeting of the Border Ground Rules Committee in September this Year. JS (AP) provided some clarifications and mentioned that there were some issues on which further negotiations would be required. The new ground rules would relate only to the border security forces of the two countries. It would not have a bearing on the defence services that would be free to do what they liked. We should also not reduce the capabilities of the two border security agencies. They needed some structures to help deal with the problems under their mandate. As to the type of structures which were required by them this could be discussed. Negotiations were therefore necessary on the proposals made by Pakistan.

(viii) Meeting of the Railway and Civil Aviation Authorities: No further discussion.

(ix) Joint Commission: No further discussion.

6. Pak FS stated that they derived considerable satisfaction from the last meeting of Interior Secretaries. There was agreement on simultaneous and coordinated patrolling. The one single issue that had plagued us earlier seemed to be abating. Pak side hoped that there was no doubt in India’s mind that as a matter of government policy, Pakistan had no intention and no interest in getting involved in the Punjab. Indian side would have statistics to confirm this. It was, regrettably, a habit with the media to also play up stories on alleged Pak intruders. Whenever Pak Embassy had checked with these media sources, they were told that this was provided by security agencies. He himself had raised this issue with former Foreign Secretary Menon, who had, in turn, spoken to former Home Secretary Somiah in his presence. Mr. Somiah had assured that necessary instructions would be issued. Pak side would like to use good offices of Indian Foreign Secretary to see that in the Indian media also, such reports go down. Could Pakistan take it that GOI is finally convinced of the sincerity of GOP in that it does not want to get involved in the Punjab? Pakistan too would like confirmation that India does not want to get involved in the internal affairs of Pakistan.

7. FS said that at the very first meeting of the Home Secretaries, Mr. Somiah had pointed out that policy or intention was not enough, but the functioning of agencies on the ground in a suitable way had to be ensured. He had been asked how India could be reassured on this score and had stated that the day these activities stopped, within a week we will know. After the new government took over, indeed there had been some decline, but it has again picked up. Details had been given during last Home Secretaries’ meeting. It does seem that there is some sort of dichotomy between GOP wishes/ intentions and functioning of agencies. He had not intended to raise this issue but since this has been raised he wanted to point out that we are still getting reports that known terrorist and extremists are being given sanctuaries in Pakistan and are operating from Pakistani soil. Second, there has been no meaningful progress in the trial of hijackers. There was also perhaps a nexus of smugglers, narcotics dealers, peddlers of arms, etc. We take assurances given by Pak leaders seriously but there has to be some movement on the ground. Ambassador Dixit added that in the folder presented during the Home Secretary’s visit, apart from the factual information regarding Sikh extremists, there were details about infiltration and terrorist activity in Jammu & Kashmir. Pak side had agreed to study the evidence provided. Perhaps, the concerned agencies could be persuaded to hasten the process.

8. Pak FS said that there was certain collusion between smugglers, etc. on both sides. This needs to be looked into. On their part, they had sent their Interior Secretary to Washington, Ottawa and London to discuss with the respective governments the steps that they had taken to satisfy GOI so that GOP could, similarly, take some appropriate steps. He had himself visited London where he had been told by Pak Ambassador that PM BB faced threats from Sikh extremists. In regard to other steps, he referred to deportation from Pakistan of the two Canadian Sikhs. As regards trial of the hijackers, efforts were being made to expedite the trial but, as in India the courts were blocked and there were delays. FS requested Pak FS to agree to periodically provide an update to the Indian Embassy regarding the trial and other related issues.

Visa and Travel Facilities

9. Pak FS stated that one should go at a pace which would reduce possibility of reversal. JS (AP) stated that we were willing to go at the pace acceptable to Pakistan. Reference was made by Pak FS to the need to increase visa fees. JS (AP) said that psychologically the impact of raising of visa fee would not be good. Pak FS pointed out that the present visa fee of Rs.15/- was very low; it had been fixed in 1974 and people could afford to pay more. Rs.50/- as visa fee was not much. FS enquired from CG (Council General) what the reaction from applicants in Karachi would be. CG Karachi mentioned that a very large majority would feel the pinch since they were poor. However, since Pak side persisted it was agreed that the matter would be examined in Sub-Commission IV since there was already agreement in the earlier meeting of that forum to raise it to Rs.25/-.

Tulbal Project

10. Pak FS said that despite great pressure to go in for arbitration they had preferred bilateral negotiations. They had left a proposal with GOI during the last Secretary-level talks. Pakistan felt that negotiated settlement would strengthen the treaty rather than going in for arbitration. Pakistan was awaiting the Indian response. FS said that we appreciated the gesture and hoped that the same spirit would permeate the discussions when they take place.

Sir Creek / Maritime Boundary

11. Pak FS stated that he would like to feel that the two positions were not irreconcilable. The Pakistan stand was based on the Kutch Tribunal Award and some maps revalidated by them. Another meeting should be held soon.
Ambassador Dixit pointed out that agreements had been reached on a number of points; there were some differences on the boundary in the Sir Creek and on the drawing of the Maritime Boundary. There was agreement to do a strip survey but the Pakistan side insisted that it should be done only with reference to the Resolution Map. FS mentioned that the Pak side had appeared rigid, unreasonable and not well prepared. JS (AP) pointed out that Pakistan in referring to the Resolution Map ignored totally the descriptive text. This was unusual. Accordingly the strip survey should be undertaken without pre-conditions. He further mentioned that he had requested DG (SA) Aziz Khan to indicate the Pak claim line on the maritime boundary so that this could be an input in our own preparations. There was a brief discussion between JS (AP) and DG (SA) on principles of equal distance and equitability. DG (SA) pointed out that more than 90 per cent of the maritime point as envisaged by the Pak side would be on the basis of equal distance. But there were areas where the EEZ of Iran, Oman and India and Pakistan met and Pakistan got shelf locked. There the equitable principle would have to be considered. FS said that he would write to Surveyor General on his return and enquire the earliest convenience when the next meeting could take place. JS (AP) stated that we could write to our Surveyor General after getting a presentation from Pakistan side regarding their perception on the maritime boundary.

Jinnah House

12. Pak FS said that this had been raised by PM BB with Indian PM who had very kindly promised to consider the matter. Pak side had heard reports about high rise apartments being constructed or a cultural centre being set up by ICCR in the premises of Jinnah House. They hoped that India would pay heed to Pak sensitivity in regard to Jinnah House. It would be a good gesture if the State Government could be requested to lease the building to Pakistan to accommodate the Consul General. Otherwise, it was virtually impossible for Pakistan to obtain property in Bombay on commercial terms. FS pointed out that he had personally been making efforts with the State Government. While he could not hold out any assurance, he would continue to make efforts.

Confidence Building Measures

13. Pak FS referred to experience of 1987 and said that while the DGMOs had developed good cooperation, it should be our effort to develop some measures so that past mistakes could be avoided. FS said that we were in agreement on gradually evolving and later restructuring CBMs. We hoped we could begin this year. It had been reported that Pakistan is planning the largest ever exercise this winter. It could be useful to commence with this event. In regard to defence budget, FS mentioned that as compared to the 13,200 crore allocated for defence in 1988-89, the allocation in 1989-90 was Rs.13,000 crore. Taking into account double digit inflation, this amounted to reduction of 16-18 per cent in our defence budget. This we had done keeping in view our own developmental requirements. Pak FS responded that they had indeed noted this freeze in defence expenditure. There is defence allocation increase of only 1.3 per cent in Pak defence budget. If we took into account the Dollar-Rupee rate, items like increase in pensions, etc. then there would be reduction. The Prime Minister was herself keen to do this even though the defence services were not pleased.

Pak Re-Entry into Commonwealth

14. Pak FS said that Pakistan appreciated GOI’s gesture in supporting our entry into Commonwealth. They had entered into consultations with Secretary General on the modalities. Their case was sui generis. They had been advised that they should not seek sponsorship from countries, instead the Secretary General and Malaysia, as the next host of CHOGM, should be given a role. They had discussed procedure in London with the SG and Ambassador had written to the SG. SG would send out letters to member countries. He did not intend to wait for a response, he would make an announcement. This would be in advance of CHOGM. PM BB would then announce Pakistan’s acceptance. They would be required to pay some contribution which they would do. They intended to keep in touch with India. They would like India to know that the gesture of Indian Prime Minister had a psychological impact; it was effective manifestation of the new spirit in Indo-Pak relations. FS enquired about the NA resolution which had been passed when Pakistan walked out of the Commonwealth. Pak FS responded that they proposed to get a Cabinet decision and it was their impression that this would be enough. FS referred also to the problem posed by Fiji and South Africa in this regard. He referred also to concerns of Cyprus. Pak FS was thankful that these concerns had been brought to their notice. He said they intended to invite the FM of Cyprus to visit Pakistan well before CHCGM. FS also pointed out concurrent accreditation of a Pakistani Mission to Cyprus might be considered. Pak FS stated that this too was under consideration.

Surveillance

15. Pak FS raised the problem of surveillance on diplomats in Islamabad and New Delhi. He referred to the informal understanding that the Ambassadors of the two countries would not be kept under surveillance. He suggested that we should reach some basic understanding which would make life easier for our diplomats. He said that both sides should take up the matter with the concerned agencies.
Anti-India Propaganda

16. FS stated that time was ripe to ensure better, friendlier press guidance regarding India-Pakistan relations. He had already started doing it on an informal basis in India. Perhaps the Pak FS could meet some editors regularly to provide suitable briefings. Pak FS welcomed the suggestion.

Nuclear

17. FS raised the issue of discussion on Pakistan’s nuclear programme during PM BB’s US visit with Webster and Bush. Pak FS said that annual certification in October under the Pressler amendment was required. Ms. Bhutto had stated in January that it was her hope that US would be able to provide required certification based on their own information. It was in this context that there was a dialogue on this issue with Webster and Bush. Pak FS was not present and there was no record available with him on the briefing.

18. He suggested that there should be some kind of a dialogue in whatever form India considered appropriate, confidentially or otherwise, at a technical or political level, on the nuclear issue between India and Pakistan. This would be without prejudice to India’s global positions. FS recalled how PAEC Chairman Munir Ahmed Khan had been invited to visit Kalpakkam. That gesture should have been reciprocated. FS mentioned that he was making this suggestion totally informally. Confidence building in this area would have to be a process.

Cultural

19. Pak FS referred to the meeting next week prior to Joint Commission meeting on cultural exchanges, etc. The Pak delegation had been given the mandate to work out a protocol and India would find them forthcoming. FS mentioned that EAM was personally interested that there should be an exchange of publications, books, etc. and had asked him to convey this to Pak FM. Pak FS mentioned that they would be responsive.

Consultations on Election to UN Bodies

20. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary indicated that Pakistan greatly appreciated PM’s reply to Ms. Benazir Bhutto and the suggestion made therein that India and Pakistan ought to have prior consultations on elections to various international bodies. There were already consultations at the Asian Group in New York for certain UN technical bodies. In addition, it was desirable that in the case of elections to major UN bodies the two PRs (permanent representatives at UN) should be instructed to keep in touch in New York and consult well in advance. In case of some very important candidatures this consultation could take place at FS-level. While agreeing to this idea, FS suggested that the PRs should consult rather than merely inform each other. In addition, our UN Divisions should be in frequent telephonic contact in this matter. It would also help if annual calendar of elections and candidatures of interest could be exchanged regularly.

Visit of Prime Minister

21. Pak FS mentioned that they were looking forward to visit of PM Rajiv Gandhi to Pakistan. PM B8 was planning to visit Delhi in end August. 30 - 31 August were being considered as possible dates. FS said that he would convey this to PM.

SUMMARY

The third plenary session commenced at 1015 hours on 18.6.1989. It lasted till 1.30 PM with a break between 11.55 and 12.40 when FS called on the President of Pakistan. For this session, the following were also present on the Pakistan side:

i) H.E. Tanvir Ahmad Khan, Pakistan Ambassador to Iran;
ii) Ashraf Jehangir Qazi, Additional Secretary (Afghanistan), Ministry of Foreign Affairs;
iii) Mr. Inamul Haque, Additional Secretary (UN), Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

The session was focused on a review of the international situation.

FS stated that today we were witness to the beginnings of a new detente, the coverage of which was wider than in the Brezhnev era. It now encompassed elements like reduction in defence expenditure, slowing the pace of nuclear arms production, an opening up as laid down in Gorbachev's Vladivostok speech, going slow in Cuba, Nicaragua etc. This was taking place in an environment characterized by a change in attitude towards developing countries, heightened economic and social tensions within and among developed countries. While difference in other ideologies are getting blurred, the ideology of sheer power is gaining ground as the determinant of solution to issues. There is now talk of compulsory recourse to the International Court, a standing peacekeeping force, surveillance mechanism but issues like Apartheid, Middle East etc. are not being addressed. There is now talk of weighted voting, compulsory arbitration, access to technology to be governed by free market forces (thus negating the work done so far on the Code of Conduct for TNCs), while in the guise of trying to preserve environment an attempt is being made to freeze the development of the developing countries.

There is need for greater coordination among like-minded developing countries. We would also seed to develop our bargaining position by expanding markets among ourselves, attain higher rates of growth, generate technology.

Pak FS referred to the Hague declaration, and stated that despite the French PM Rocard’s telephonic request PM BB had not been able to go but had sent a message highlighting the exclusive relevance of the references to environment to the developed countries. She had now been approached to sign the declaration adopted at the meeting and had agreed to do so. The Indian EAM was present at the meeting and he presumed that the declaration was a consensus position, so that India and Pakistan would not be at odds on this issue. FS stated that the resolution was not to our liking but it was a good deal better than what had been earlier proposed. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary expressed the hope that their signing the Hague Declaration would not be at cross purposes with the Indian actions. It was agreed that we would revert on this point.

Pak FS suggested that we could consider exchanging views before the Paris North-South meeting. FS invited him to send some people to New Delhi for consultations for 4-5 days before the meeting.

Ambassador Niaz Naik stated that there was a mandate within SAARC on such consultations. Pak FS suggested that perhaps the Foreign Ministers could have a discussion on this in the forthcoming July meeting. The Indian PM had issued a letter to some world leaders on similar issues after the Bangalore summit. FS suggested that perhaps PM BB could consider some such step, after her visit to the various SAARC capitals.

Pak FS stated that there were very few international economic issues on which our attitudes differed. So he welcomed the idea of cooperation/consultations. SAARC could also be a promising avenue in this regard. It was important that India and Pakistan coordinated their positions. The agreed principles of GATT should be adhered to and the effort to substitute these through bilateral approaches was not appropriate. Similarly, he agreed that the move to place a ceiling on developing countries in respect of technologies acquired by them was unjust. Of course, it was also important that developing countries should get their priorities right and not go in for importing technologies which were harmful.

FS suggested that there could be an exchange of views between the UN division officials of our two countries before the next General Assembly session on issues, agenda etc. Mr. Inamul Haq, the Pakistan Additional Foreign Secretary (UN) highlighted the importance of taking along all developing countries in the common approaches being developed by the select group of developing countries like India and Pakistan.

Pak FS then requested for a briefing on Nepal and Sri Lanka.

FS stated that India-Nepal relations were governed by the 1950 Treaty, the Trade and Transit Treaties. Subsumed, in these were agreements on quota items (steel, coal, POL, aluminum, pharmaceuticals, medicines, sugar, salt, milk and milk products: to be allowed in quantities indicated as requirement by Nepalese government and at the subsidized prices prevalent in India), restrictions and restraint on smuggling, freedom of citizens of either country to work, travel, acquire property in the other country. There are at present 4.3 to 4.7 million Nepalese citizens living and working in India. Except for the higher civil services, all other avenues of employment including the army are open to them. In UP and Bihar there are some 8,000 Nepalese doctors and engineers working for the State governments. The Nepalese government on the other hand has been attempting to introduce work permits for Indians (there are at present 150,000 workers and a few thousand teachers). There is no effort to control smuggling of third country production into India, arms were imported from third countries without prior consultations as mandated in an earlier agreement, tariff concessions for Indian products were removed.

We were now getting some signals, especially after the internal problems in China, that they now may be interested in a discussion across the board - on all points of mutual complaints.

Pak FS stated that there was some pressure on them to issue a statement as Chairman SAARC. But they were aware of the limitations of the SAARC mandate. Their Foreign Minister was going to Nepal for one day — on 23rd June. It was their hope that the issue would be settled amicably. In other bilateral consultations also, they found most countries of the view that India as the stronger, bigger neighbour should have shown magnanimity. Pakistan was ready to assist Nepal should there be any request for any commodity in which they had a surplus. But more than anything else they would like to see an amicable solution.

To Ambassador Dixit’s query he replied that they had not received any Nepalese request to open a route through the Karakoram highway.

FS then referred to the Indo-Sri Lanka accord which was predicated on devolution to the North East Council. On account of IPKF’s presence, 3 sets of elections had been possible. Violence had been controlled - which would have destabilized Sri Lanka. The new President had posited the slogan of “tolerance, compromise, consensus”, and indicated a willingness to talk to anyone on this basis. JVP did not respond. The LTTE did. Possibly because under IPKF pressure they were holed up in the VAVONIA forests, from which they did make forays but could, not reach Jaffna or Trincomalee.

We are committed to the unity and integrity of Sri Lanka. We suggested to the Government that they could talk to LTTE if they avowed a commitment to the unity of the country and did not start an internecine warfare. We have to also take into account the interests of other groups like TELO, EROS, EPRLF who fared better in the elections than the LTTE.

Ambassador Dixit stated that the Sri Lanka government hopes to neutralize/co-opt the JVP by the return of IPKF. Many politicians, even including Dissanaike and Athulathmudali, feel it to be an unreal dream. The Government calculates that subsequent to co-opting of JVP they would be able to present a united Sinhala front and contain/wipe out LTTE. The latter calculates that after the removal of IPKF they would be able to take on the Sinhalas and other Tamil groups.

FS stated that delicate and complicated manoeuvrings are going on; there is a dichotomy between public pronouncements and private messages. We hope matters would not be precipitated.

Pak FS stated as far as the perceptions of the smaller countries of South Asia were concerned, there was criticism when the IPKF had an invited presence, and there would certainly be more so if it were to be a dis-invited presence.

Ambassador Tanvir Ahmad was then requested to give a briefing on the present situation in Iran. He stated that in the last few months of his life Imam Khomeini had unleashed another one of his “revolutions within the revolution”. This was directed against liberals, moderates. There was a tremendous outpouring of grief on his death: in a manner that perhaps only an Islamic Shia society was capable of. There was a resort to virtually 7th century practices in selecting his successor. The issue of single leader or collegiate leadership was settled by Ayatollah Michkini reading out a letter he claimed to have received from Khomeini a few months ago which called for a Supreme Guardian. In subsequent voting 44/74 voted accordingly. Similarly, 60/74 votes went to Khamanei as the Guardian only after Rafsanjani and Ardebeli claimed that before his death Imam had indicated this preference. Khamanei, however, had been fairly low in the clerical order, though he has obtained some experience in matters of State. His lack of spiritual authority led the leaders to select a very old (100 years) Ayatollah as the “model for imitation”. This could be a temporary feature: till Khamanei’s stature grows. Or it could be the first stirrings of some separation between “Church and State”. Khamanei and Rafsanjani are unlikely to go in for purges, so Musavi would be accommodated: either as PM, and if the new Constitution abolishes this post, then as Vice President or Speaker. Khomeini’s son, too, would be relevant as the “most authentic interpreter” of Imam’s Will which was written in February 1983, and a 2 page addendum was attached in 1987.

The Iranian habit of mind was to look westwards. Or to the Socialist bloc. Asian countries like India and Pakistan did not figure prominently. May be we could try and harmonise our thinking/perceptions about Iran.

Regarding Afghanistan, Pak FS stated that the situation was complex. PM BB had stated that we would opt for a political solution. The exact internal dispensation is to be left to the Afghans themselves. She would like to distance herself from any effort to install any particular kind of regime. She would also prefer a moderate regime: as against the earlier fears of India, USSR and even the West that Pakistan would work towards installing a fundamentalist regime. However, in the process of the Afghan struggle, many fundamentalists had come in the forefront and they could not be sidelined. The Shoura held in Pakistan had been representative of a large section of Afghan thought—though they would have liked to see better representation from the Iran based Mujaheedin, and the émigrés including the Zahir Shah faction. Based on their soundings from all shades of Afghan opinion, they had come to the conclusion that the present Afghan regime was unacceptable. They had supported the interim government, including their seating in OIC, but had impressed upon them that the following would be necessary for earning recognition - (a) broadening of base (b) obtaining expressions of support from within Afghanistan and (c) functioning more like a government, by operating within Afghanistan and showing a capability to administer.

Given the rigidity of all shades of opinion in not accepting Najibullah, Pakistan felt that he was an obstacle to a political settlement and could not be a part of it. At one stage they got the impression that USSR was also willing to keep him out of a settlement. However, since February 15, events had belied this and Soviet support had grown. This was also encouraged by the showing put up by the Najibullah regime in the military sense in Jalalabad.
The Mujaheedin would continue with military pressure to the extent that it acted as a catalyst to a political solution. The elements of a political solution could have the following possible forms: (i) an assessment to be made by UN Secretary General (who had a role in the terms of the Geneva Agreement) of a possible acceptable solution, and his conveying to USSR the unacceptability of the Najibullah regime; and their agreeing on a different interlocutor from Kabul (ii) expansion of support base by Mujaheedin, holding of Jirgas pledging allegiance to them, pledge of support from field commanders.

Pakistan’s earlier perception of a weak and crumbling regime in Kabul had been belied by subsequent events. However, they still believed that the Kabul regime was surviving on external rather than internal support.

FS enquired if PM BB and Pakistan were willing to accept PDPA, though not Najib. And what was the factual position on the return of refugees?

Pak FS stated that PM BB’s statements do not reflect Pak position as such, but the Mujaheedin position. The Mujaheedin do not want the PDPA, but there must be some interlocutors from the Kabul side. So they may be willing to talk to people associated with the present government but who were not a part of the core.

Pakistan’s primary concern was the return of refugees. So, any talk of their preventing the return of refugees was wrong. There had been some return recently. But this was reflective more of divisions within the Mujaheedin groups. The pro Zahir Shah elements in the Baluchistan area had been encouraging refugees to return. But there was still no substantial trend. However, if it is reflective of divisions within interim government, and would tend to weaken it, then it had some implications which had to be kept in mind.

FS stated that those who had acquired leadership roles among the Mujaheedin had not come out as a result of the Saur revolution, but at an earlier period and for mercenary reasons. The influx of refugees had resulted in narcotics and gun running becoming a major problem for Pak society. In case Pakistan wanted to use India, for back channels of communication to help evolve a political solution, we would be willing. This had also been mentioned by the former FS Mr. Menon to President Zia. We were now planning to expand our economic and technical cooperation to Afghanistan. It had been reduced somewhat, though never eliminated altogether. We were now thinking of reviving it. It would be good to keep in mind that out of 30 provinces, war had touched intensely only 9 and less intensely 7. The other 14 were untouched.

Pak FS stated that regardless of the origins of the resistance leaders, over the past 9 years of the Afghan struggle these people had become a factor in the Afghan power equation. They also had the allegiance of many field commanders. Pakistan would like to see contributions from all sources to the reconstruction of Afghanistan after the attainment of a political solution. Assistance to the present regime would be counterproductive to a political solution. So, India should bear in mind and examine whether the timing of the assistance would contribute to the emergence of a non-aligned and independent Afghanistan.

JS (AP) stated that our assistance was directed towards meeting basic requirements of the people like health care etc. He also enquired about PM BB’s references after her meeting with UNSG, to UN zones for refugees and supplies to them being set up within Afghanistan.

Pak FS stated that nobody was quite clear about what was meant by these special zones. The Coordinator for relief supplies has been somewhat impatient with the present position. Perhaps the idea was floated by him.

1221. Summary Record of the call by Foreign Secretary S. K. Singh on Pakistan President Ghulam Ishaq Khan.
Islamabad, June 18, 1989.

Foreign Secretary called on President Ghulam Ishaq Khan at noon on Sunday 18th June at Aiwan-1- Sadr in Islamabad.

2. A list of those present is appended. (not included here)

3. The President warmly greeted the Foreign Secretary on his return back to Islamabad which was his second home. He enquired as to whether the Foreign Secretary had found a house in New Delhi. The Foreign Secretary responded that we had a system of designated houses for the Foreign Secretary and accordingly he had had no problems in settling down.

4. The President indicated that Pakistan too had been thinking of having some designated houses for ministers but shortage of funds had prevented this. He, of course, admitted that one could argue that expenses on such constructions were in the nature of internal transfers and hence had no budgetary impact. Nevertheless, they did represent much expense and one could not find the amount of Rs.10 to 12 crores required for this in one go.
5. Foreign Secretary indicated that during his days as Additional Secretary (Administration), he had been able to persuade the then Finance Minister, who was now the President, to give to the Ministry of External Affairs a revolving fund of Rs. 10 crores for purchase and construction of properties abroad. As a result of this, we owned nearly 60% of the properties occupied by us abroad for our missions.

6. In response to the President's queries regarding the progress of the talks, the Ambassador stated that these had been very productive. In conceptual terms, the Foreign Secretaries' meetings could lay foundations of major and across the board cooperation both in the bilateral and international spheres. The President expressed his happiness at this and stated that the result of the Siachen talks was most encouraging. Indeed, all problems could be resolved if we went into their genesis. We should now look for a final solution and for durable peace. The momentum must be maintained through a continued dialogue.

7. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary indicated that there would be a further India-Pakistan dialogue during the upcoming SAARC Ministerial meeting. Ambassador Dixit added that the SAARC Ministerial meeting would be followed by a Ministerial India-Pakistan Joint Commission in the third week of July.

8. The President recalled that the Joint Commission had not met for quite some time though it had been set up a very long time ago. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary stated that if it had met as scheduled it would have had at least 5 or 6 meetings by now. The Foreign Secretary pointed out that after the next meeting we may consider holding the Joint Commission meetings every two years instead of annually and stipulate that the respective sub commissions should meet on an annual basis. The President agreed with this suggestion pointing out that at times Joint Commissions had hardly any business to transact.

9. The Foreign Secretary stated that while this was true in many cases it was not so in the case of our major economic partners. In this context, the Foreign Secretary mentioned that our joint commissions were very active in the case of countries like Mauritius, Fiji, Uganda and those in East Europe. There were also enormous possibilities with countries like Iran and Iraq. The President wondered whether one could have much to do in matters of trade with East Europe. The problem arose because one had to pay much higher for imports from East Europe than in the international market. The Foreign Secretary pointed out that our experience had been much happier because of the rupee payment arrangements. We were importing sufficient items from these countries and also exporting to them many goods in various fields including manufactured products like the Suzuki. The President lauded the idea of India being able to export manufactured goods. In Pakistan regrettably they had not been able to do so except perhaps in the area of tractor exports.

10. Foreign Secretary stated that Pakistan had a great future because of the enormous talent and hard working nature of the people of the country. The President responded that what was needed for countries like Pakistan was internal and external peace and stability. The Foreign Secretary agreed with this sentiment and stated that he had seen the full impact of war and civil strife in Lebanon and Afghanistan. He for one was totally devoted to the cause of peace and stability.

11. The President stated that the same spirit pervaded the Pakistan Government and their approach particularly in regard to India-Pakistan relations would be forthcoming and positive even if there were intractable problems, these could be put aside and progress could be made on a step by step basis.

12. The Foreign Secretary stated that in the last 6 months under the President’s guidance and that of the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan, much more had been achieved in the normalisation process than in the preceding 7 to 8 years. We were working for an improvement in India-Pakistan ties in a steady, quiet and non-fussy manner.

13. The Foreign Secretary apprised the President of Mr. Md. Yunus’s nomination to the Rajya Sabha. The president was happy to learn of this and enquired about Mr. Md. Yunus’ son Adil Sharia who had visited Pakistan last year and had wanted to develop a Urdu computer.

The meeting terminated at 12.30 P.M.

There was a lapse of over ten thousands days between the last visit of a Prime Minister of India to Pakistan and my visit here last December. Within two hundred days, I have come back to Islamabad. This is a measure of the promise of enduring friendship that has been heralded by the democratic decision of the people of Pakistan to place you, Madam Prime Minister, at the helm of affairs.

The restoration of democracy in Pakistan has been greatly welcomed by the people of India. There is deep admiration, Madam Prime Minister, for the courage with which you have overcome your travails. By the same token, there is deep sincerity in our congratulation on your accession to the leadership of your country.

It is given to all of us to be the creature of history. Let us, for our part, try to create history.

We hear around us voices that counsel caution. Accepting the status quo is always easier then changes. Change means uncertainty. It frightens all but those with a vision for the future and the courage to shape the future. You, Madam Prime Minister, are endowed with both, vision and courage. Let us have the vision and courage not to be too constrained by counsels of caution.

When our two countries attained independence, I was a child, almost an infant, and you, Madam Prime Minister, were yet to be born. You and I have grown, as the majority of our peoples have grown, in a world in which India, as she is now and Pakistan, as a sovereign, independent entity, are established realities.

It falls upon our generation to safeguard our sovereignties not through the illusory pursuit of military strength but through the conscious pursuit of friendship between ourselves. It falls upon us to silence the guns that have given no peace and to seek the enduring solutions that only peaceful co-existence can ensure. It falls upon us to work together in the great struggle that lies ahead. Ours is a shared mission to end the injustice and oppression inflicted upon our countries and other developing countries by the inequities and irrationalities, the exploration, the cruelty and the violence of the present international order. We are summoned to greater tasks than assiduously aggravating the scars of history. In the larger global context, we must rise above the stoking of petty problems, unworthy of our larger destiny. There is a great destiny that lies before India and Pakistan. It is a destiny we can achieve together, as friends and good neighbours.
India and Pakistan are heirs to a great civilization that transcends the borders which now separate us. Mehrgarh and Mohenjodaro, Kolidihawa and Kalibangan, take us back to the very beginning of organized human settlements, villages whose antiquity matches Jericho and Jarmo. We are the proud inheritors of the most ancient and most unbroken civilization known to human history. Our shared heritage is woven into the warp and woof of our being. Ajmer Sharif and the Taj Mahal are part of what you are, even as Taxila and Nankana Sahib are inseparable from what we are. We are united by the cultural history of the last five thousand years or, indeed, the last eight thousand years, as Mehrgarh indicates.

That said, we are realists. We recognize that, notwithstanding all the goodwill in the world, there are between us real problems on the ground and real differences in perception. These have to be resolved before we can definitely move together forward.

Your father and my mother showed at Simla seventeen years ago this month how this might be done. We started down the path. It was possible because the will of the people of Pakistan determined the will of the Government of Pakistan. Then, the movement forward stalled. Now that the will of your people is once again sovereign, the processes of progress have been resumed.

We seek an end to actions aimed at infringing our integrity. We believe you have the will and the strength to stop it.

We seek end to the clashes and conflicts that have led to the loss of so many precious lives in the forbidding, icebound terrain of the north. The constructive discussions held on the subject contain encouraging pointers to a possible settlement.

We seek an end to disputation between our representatives on problems which are ours alone, in forums where other interests prevail. Our two countries are wise enough and mature enough as find solutions to bilateral issues strictly within the framework of mutual respect for our independence, sovereignty and integrity. We do not need the intervention of others. The Simla Agreement lights our path.

Friendship between neighbours such as ourselves cannot be built by governments alone or even primarily by governments. Our friendship had to be built, most of all, by our peoples, among themselves. Nothing is more important than removing the road blocks that have been placed in the way of peoples getting to know each other. Travel is almost entirely confined to relatives on either side of the border and hampered by needless harassment. Trade between our countries is derisory, economic co-operation non-existent.
Newspapers and magazines are stopped at the frontier. The flow of thought and information is staunched or filtered. Films are seen clandestinely or through mounting taller and taller antennae! Cultural exchanges are highly treasured but have been rendered a rarity.

We cannot build trust between our countries unless we trust our peoples. There was a time when many of the men and women of India and Pakistan shared common memories that ante-dated the political divide. The present generation had grown up looking not to each other but elsewhere. Yet, as anyone who has been to the Gulf or West Asia, Europe or North America will testify, when an Indian and a Pakistani meet, as human beings in a human encounter there is an instant mutual recognition, an affection that swells from some inner core of our existence, as human beings embrace that transcends the passing passions of politics. Why must we go abroad to meet each other? Why can we not meet in each other’s hearths and homes? It is incumbent on us to give joyful expression to the natural affinities that bind our peoples.

The greatest Indian of our century taught us to rise above the two greatest weaknesses that beset humankind – fear and hatred. Let us remove the fear that had permeated our relationship. Let us remove all hatred. Let us work together in peace and friendship.

Islamabad July 16, 1989.

At the banquet, Ms. Bhutto expressed the hope that Pakistan and India would move towards a more meaningful relationship based one equality and mutual benefit.

“At a time like this when nations with traditional hostilities are moving towards peace and friendship, we must ensure that in our region peace and amity do not become hostage to narrow national considerations”. She said.

Ms. Bhutto said: “We owe it to our masses to safeguard peace and security so that they can devote their energies and resources towards development. We should ensure that South Asia remains free of nuclear weapons.”
Pakistan, she said, was ready to join any arrangement which could guarantee non-proliferation of nuclear weapons in South Asia. “We would also like to prevent arms race in our region and would like to see arms control talks take place”, she added.

Ms. Bhutto said Pakistan and India have a shared history and the people of both the countries face similar problems and have same aspirations. “They want friendship and not hostility”, she added.

“We in Pakistan have waged a long struggle against the dark night of dictatorship to restore our democratic rights. We, therefore, have a deep commitment to freedom, to democracy and to peace. We are committed to abide by the Simla Agreement and we wish to conduct our bilateral relations in accordance with the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement”, she asserted.

The two countries, initiated in December last, a new phase in relations to get out of the mire of mutual suspicion and mistrust, a phase in which to build relations based on the principles of equality and respect for each other’s internal affairs. “We should like to renew our commitment to these principles”, she said.

Ms. Bhutto referred to the several exchanges at official level since last December, at which she said, good progress has been made. She said the Pakistan-India Joint Commission was to meet on July 18 and finalize proposals which would go a long way to increase people-to-people contacts and cooperation in the cultural, commercial and other fields. She hopes these efforts will contribute to a more meaningful relationship between the two countries based on equality and mutual benefit.

“We can proudly claim that in our own region we have taken some significant steps for the establishment of peace and the promotion of cooperation”. She said. The SAARC was one such step. In the last four years, SAARC had made more progress than any other comparable regional organization, she observed and urged: “We have to conserve and consolidate our gains.”

One-fifth of humanity, which was amongst the poorest in the world, lived in the South Asian subcontinent, she pointed out. “Our people want progress, development and a better quality of life and through SAARC we can provide it to them”, she added.

She said: “Individual and joint efforts should be made to avoid any harm coming to SAARC in view of the crisis it is faced with today.”

Ms. Bhutto observed that cooperation was replacing confrontation in the wake of the ‘winds of change’ blowing across the globe. The superpowers have agreed to cut down their nuclear arsenals. The establishment of a broad-based government acceptable to the Afghan people was hoped, while China and the Soviet Union had taken significant steps towards improvement of relations.

Referring to the visit of Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru in 1960, she said the complex and volatile issue of the sharing of river waters of the Indus Basin was equitably settled with the signing of the Indus Waters Treaty. “That treaty has stood us in good stead over the past 29 years and we should preserve its sanctity and validity at all costs”. She added.

She mentioned the last bilateral visit to India by Pakistani Prime Minister Shaheed (martyr) Zulfiakar Ali Bhutto in 1972 to sign the Simla Agreement, when she accompanied him. The Signing of the Simla Agreement, she said, had been made possible because both Pakistan and India had resolved to put an end to conflict and confrontation, to promote friendly and harmonious relations and to work for the establishment of a durable peace in the sub-continent. The agreement, she said, ensured peace between the two nations over the last 17 years. “We should ensure that the Simla Agreement is implemented, in letter and spirit”, she said.

SECRET

Record Note of discussions between the Indian delegation led by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and Pakistani delegation led by Ms. Benazir Bhutto.

Islamabad, July 16, 1989.

After about 100 minutes of one-to-one talks between Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and Prime Minister Ms. BB at Sind House, Islamabad, India-Pakistan delegation level talks were held on 16 July 1989. The delegation level talks commenced at 1935 hours and concluded at 2030 hours.

2. The list of the two delegations is appended. (not included here)

3. After introducing the respective delegations Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi thanked PM BB for agreeing to receive him and for the hospitality extended. He said that the visit was short but more time was just not available. He could not resist the opportunity of stopping over in Islamabad. He said that most of the bilateral items have been covered in one-to-one talks. He enquired if the two delegations had anything to report about their discussions while the two Prime Ministers were having their discussions.

4. PM R (ajiv) G(andhi) then referred to the concern expressed by PM BB in regard to the future of SAARC and the course of action open to us.

5. PM BB responded by saying that Pakistan’s reasons for worrying about the future of SAARC was that it was one forum which was created on a basis other than bilateral. It provided a forum and an opportunity of high level discussions. During the Foreign Secretary level meeting in Islamabad in June, Sri Lanka had conveyed to Pakistan President that they were thinking of leaving SAARC. During her recent visit to France, Bangladesh, had informed Pakistan that they too had received a similar communication from Sri Lanka. This would mean the collapse of SAARC. It was not Pakistan’s wish that India-Sri Lanka bilateral issues should get enmeshed into the SAARC perspective. Therefore, it was necessary to make efforts to save the organization. Sahabzada Yaqub Khan added that Pakistan was expecting a Sri Lankan Special Envoy on 20 or 21 July. Also, Secretary General of SAARC would be visiting Sri Lanka. It was their hope that they would not be bringing messages of despondency. Principal Secretary to Prime Minister Mr. Deshmukh had visited Sri Lanka. He himself, as Chairman of the SAARC Council of Ministers would be willing to pay a visit to Sri Lanka. It was in our interest to persuade Sri Lanka to stay in SAARC framework which had made much progress. It would be thousand pities if SAARC comes to grief in unfortunate circumstances. Pakistan would seek the counsel and guidance of the Indian side.

6. EAM said that Bangladesh Foreign Minister had come to India after visiting Sri Lanka. He had expressed similar worries. He gave us to understand that the Sri Lankan President was still adamant. He did not bring a message of hope. But it was our duty to continue our efforts. Pak FM confirmed that Bangladesh FM had said much the same thing to him. EAM mentioned that SAARC functioned on the basis of some guidelines. These guidelines had been laid down with great foresight. Even at the inception of SAARC bilateral issues were there. But they cannot be allowed to come into SAARC. We have prepared the ground rules meticulously. We cannot allow one side to negate all this. We have agreed that bilateral issues are not to be taken in SAARC. We have made every effort to persuade Sri Lanka. Most recently Principal Secretary to PM, Mr. Deshmukh visited Sri Lanka. We will continue to make efforts.

7. PM RG referred to problems in earlier meetings. But we had succeeded in keeping them separate from SAARC.

8. PM BB said that if there is a possibility to save SAARC, we must do whatever is necessary. Pakistan appreciates that there are ground rules. But as Chairman of SAARC, currently, it had become an embarrassment. She said that we should continue to exchange views on this issue and that she would leave this thought with Indian PM. EAM then said that we will try.

9. PM BB stated that she was very happy that PM RG could make this visit. This was his second visit to Pakistan and indicated that he attached importance to improving bilateral relations. During PM RG’s last visit in December 1988 three agreements had been signed. Decisions had also been taken to hold several high level meetings and to activate the Joint Commission. The recent series of official level meetings held in pursuance of that decision particularly the meeting of Secretaries of Interior, Water and Power, Defence and Foreign Secretaries had shown good results. The Joint Commission would be meeting from 18 July. It would give further impetus to cooperation in areas like trade, culture, travel, tourism and in various sectors of people-to-people contacts. Pakistan attached the highest importance to the improvement of relations with India on the basis of sovereign equality and mutual benefit. Pakistan believes that Simla provides the basis for progressive development of relations and for resolutions of outstanding issues, including Kashmir, on a step by step basis. We must remove the irritants, mistrust and suspicion. People on both sides want peace. We can make a significant contribution to instill stability and progress in the region by improving our relations. It is the common commitment of the leadership in both countries to improve the living standards of their peoples. It is the expectation of the people of both countries that their leaders would do so. We cannot fail them. The recent developments in international environment have been positive. Detente should embrace the whole region. Confrontation is giving way to cooperation. The world is making fresh and promising beginning. We must maintain the momentum by measured steps. The Soviet Union and China are improving relations. Improvement in the situation in Afghanistan has taken place. India and Pakistan should also work together and build better relations.

10. PM RG thanked by PM BB. He said we do believe that problems in our relations have been going on far too long. The international environment is favourable. It would be to our mutual benefit to go to the roots of our problems and sort them out. We can draw satisfaction from the progress achieved during the recent meetings in this direction. India is serious about improving relations with Pakistan. The next step would be the convening of the Joint Commission. We can perhaps make some progress on sectors like trade, tourism culture, people-to-people contact, etc. It is imperative to sort out our differences. New global relationships are developing. The more powerful and the rich have their own groupings. If countries like India and Pakistan cannot make arrangements to cope with the evolving situation, we could lose out. We cannot even pretend to be economically strong if we are tied down in knots to our local problems. In the international arena, we should work together. A new picture of relations is emerging. We talked about it in Paris amongst the developing countries and with the G-7. For the first time; we get the feeling that even countries which were usually recalcitrant were now sympathetic. They have, of course, their own problems. But if they are willing to move and we are not ready, it would be unfortunate. India and Pakistan must cooperate with each other. Our development is roughly similar as are our capabilities. Our global approach has to be similar. There are issues in GATT. We must establish some sort of linkages. The two Foreign Ministers could talk about this. They could discuss how such linkages could be developed. EAM said this could be discussed in a general way. PM RG agreed that the intention was not to come to decisions but to explore possibilities and exchange ideas. Adviser Iqbal Akhund intervened to say a common strategy in international forums could be evolved. PM RG agreed and said that different countries had different problems. Latin Americans, for example, had the debt problem and wished to talk about nothing else.

11. Foreign Secretary Shri S.K. Singh referred to the Foreign Secretary level talks last month and mentioned that as directed by PM, he had suggested to Pakistan side that we would send our Secretary in charge of Economic Relations to Pakistan or would be willing to receive a delegation from Pakistan, as soon as possible, to discuss the issues and the modalities of cooperation between India and Pakistan in international forums. He said also that EAM too, had mentioned this to the Pakistan Foreign Minister. EAM added that we could have general discussions and follow it up with substantive discussions at technical levels. PM RG added that there were different aspects on the substantive side. There were, for example, issues relating to banking, trade, G-77 etc. we must think these issues through at the political level and give directions to the technical level.

12. PM BB said that India, Pakistan and Bangladesh constituted a large market if they were to come together. We would be sought out by foreign companies. This would strengthen our bargaining position. PM RG agreed. He referred to his own discussions with the President of Brazil in Paris, He had asked the Brazilian President what it was that Brazil had to offer in return for the western help in resolving the issue of debt. The Brazilian President had replied that Brazil would protect its environment. He said that the western nations were keen on the environmental issue and this is all that Brazil had to offer.
Similarly, on other issues, there can be pay-off of one kind or another. Nothing comes free. But then, one need also not get cheated.

13. PM RG then congratulated PM BB on Pakistan’s re-entry into Commonwealth. PM BB thanked PM RG for India’s support and help in facilitating Pakistan’s entry. It was their expectation that all necessary formalities would be completed by mid-September. There were many meetings before that. PM RG enquired if there was anything that India could do. He added that the Commonwealth was well organized and remarked, in a lighter vein that all of us were on one side and Mrs. Thatcher was on the other. General Naseerullah Babr interjected to say that perhaps at the next meeting, the two ladies would be on the same side. PM BB disagreed and said that the differences in the Commonwealth were mostly on the issue of South Africa and Pakistan would side with the rest of the Commonwealth.

14. PM RG then referred to Afghanistan. He referred to his own meetings with U.N.S.G. and President Gorbachev. Their responses to ideas that PM BB had mentioned were roughly in line with our anticipation. President Gorbachev had said that the ideas were much too raw and needed to be cooked up. These would have to be firmed up in terms of specific before the Soviet Union could react. We could follow it up. If Pakistan wished they could send a message to Gorbachev through us or through the UN SG. Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan intervened to say that it would be a mistake to think that Pakistan was seeking a military solution. Equally, it would be a mistake to think that there would be no military action against Najibullah by the Mujahideen in Afghanistan. If the aim of the Mujahideen was to be defined, it was to gain power through military means. Hence, it was necessary to work for a political solution. Afghan problem had two aspects. One was that Najib had been rejected by most sections of Afghanistan, including the Mujahideen based in Pakistan and Iran, émigrés, local commanders, Zahir Shah, divines etc. PM BB added that everyone has agreed that Najib and PDPA must go. They were a symbol of the atrocities that had been committed on the Afghan people. Then the way would have been paved for a political solution. We assume that Gorbachev must also know this. PM RG enquired as to what would come once Najib and PDPA were no longer on the scene. FM Yaqub Khan said that elections could be held. PM BB responded that the Soviets felt confident about Najib and they believed that nothing could dislodge him. FM Yaqub Khan said that that was perhaps because of the vast quantities of arms available to Najib. PM RG said that Soviets also felt that politically too, Najib was stable. A large number of field commanders were joining him. He was not isolated. PM BB said that this would be paving the way for continuing military pressure on the Najib government to seek a political solution. PM RG disagreed and said that it was not that. There was a feeling that the Mujahideen themselves were not cohesive. They have not displayed any military strength. FM Yaqub Khan agreed and said that it was true that there were differences within the Mujahideen groups. But, in the Afghan set-up, it was inconceivable that these differences would not be there. The impression that the Mujahideen were not militarily strong had developed after Jalalabad. But since then, the resistance was picking up. The disparity in the arms available to the Najib Government and the Mujahideen had been overcome. Earlier, there was the common opposition to the Mujahideen government. It is Pakistan’s view that the opposition is very wide and pervades all sections. Najib has played an astute game. He has been driving wedges between Shiias and Sunnis, Pushtoons and non-Pushtoons etc. But the total picture is that he has a very narrow base. PM RG enquired as to how one moves forward. Najib could not be expected to pack his bags and leave. General Naseerullah Babar responded that the Soviets could play a role. PM RG enquired if that would not be asking too much of the Soviets. FM Yaqub Khan said that one possibility could, be to have elections as sought by the Mujahideen. These elections would be under Najib. It is true that the situation for elections was not yet ripe. There was the question of what dispensation there should be for an election. It could not be under Najib; it had to be under someone else. It could perhaps be under UN auspices. Adviser Iqbal Akhund added that Najib was being maintained by the Soviets. But there could be no permanent solution built around Najib. If he could be persuaded to go, it may be possible to whip together a broad-based Government.

15. PM RG then referred to the situation as it evolved in Namibia, where elections were supposed to be held under UN auspices, but things had gone askew. Adviser Iqbal Akhund responded that perhaps UN SG could come in. He or his representative could talk to people. That perhaps may be more widely acceptable now. PM RG enquired if there was any reference point or previous such incidents. FM Yaqub Khan responded that the Najib government was a legacy of an occupying power. It was an instrument of that power. The Afghan Qribal structure was unique. It was difficult to find parallels. Foreign Secretary S. K. Singh added that never had elections been held in Afghanistan in the manner in which elections were held in India and Pakistan. There was no voter list. It was not easy to organize an election. He narrated his own experience of election campaigning and processes which he had observed during his stay in Afghanistan as Ambassador. General Babar disagreed and said that Afghans were much better organized now and things were much different. PM BB added that Pakistan sincerely wanted a resolution. This would remove a sore point in relations with Soviet Union and also an internal problem. It was difficult to see a political solution which would mean recognising the Najib government. His base was narrow. He had, indeed united the ‘khalq’ and ‘parcham’. But the émigrés, Zahir Shah and others were all opposed to him. Iran’s assessment was similar to Pakistan. They too were opposed to Najib. One should not think in terms of personalities but in terms of scoring some gains. The Soviets had withdrawn. The Najib government had the task not merely of governing but of re-conquering the people. There will be continuing violence and siege. If the Afghans themselves were not prepared to join, how could a resolution be brought about? During the Soviet withdrawal, Pakistan had held the Mujahideen back. It was to ensure that a face-saving device existed for the Soviets. But, it was equally necessary for a face-saving device for others. How would Soviet Union, India, Pakistan, Iran and others benefit from continuing bloodshed? Najib could perhaps continue to hold Kabul, but that would not resolve the problem. Ambassador J.N. Dixit enquired if Pakistan drew a distinction between the PDPA and Najib. He added that the PDPA had a following within Afghanistan and their policies had an impact. PM BB indicated that Pakistan did draw a distinction between PDPA and those visibly identified with the atrocities in Afghanistan. A process of transformation was underway. PDPA had changed its name (sic). PM RG enquired how one should proceed further. FM Yakub Khan said that they would think about it. PM RG said that we must think of practical steps. Najib is in Kabul. PM BB responded that Najib, having been the Intelligence Chief, had succeeded in dividing people, but could not be always successful. May be the Soviets want to give him some more time. They are hopeful of swinging a deal and then move on to a resolution. It was not Pakistan's intention to foist any government which was neither hostile to it nor to Soviets. Pakistan could not understand why Soviets were so strong on Najib and supporting him. He was not even professing communism. To illustrate Soviet support to Najib, she said that from 15th February to June, Afghans had received 400 Scud missiles, each of which was worth one million Dollars, i.e. 400 million Dollars worth of missiles. PM RG stated that there was real danger of escalation and of conflict getting out of hand. There could be an unleashing of a fresh cycle of escalation. Both sides had very sophisticated weaponry. PM BB agreed and said that hence, a resolution was necessary. The potential for violence was there irrespective of restraint. It was necessary to find a way out. Recognition of Najib was impossible. Before Jalalabad, we received clear signals that the Soviets considered Najib to be dispensable. Pakistan had received similar signals over the last fortnight that they were not as firm. Perhaps the Soviets feel that Karmal went and, nothing happened. Similarly, Najib would go and nothing would happen. They were, thus wanting the fleshing out of ideas. General Naseerullah Babar asked what would happen if Najib went by other means. He recalled that Najib had come in 1980 and sought assistance. He had been educated in Peshawar. PM RG enquired as to what the strength of the Mujahideen was. PM BB responded that the seven groups in Peshawar were together and had formed the IUAM. The Iran-based 8-Party Alliance, had agreed to the seating of the IUAM in the OIC. Zahir Shah had also welcomed the IUAM, but had not extended recognition. IUAM was a grand (grand ?) coalition. Iran was waiting and watching. Despite its recent talks with the Soviet Union, there had been no movement and Iran had told the Soviets that it would... not deal with Najib. FM Yakub Khan confirmed that Iran was quite firm on that.

16. PM RG then referred to China. Since December much had happened. His own visit had been good. On the border issue, we had found a way of moving forward. The formation of JWG indicated progress. Both sides had committed themselves to maintaining peace and tranquility. China had moved forward with a new formulation. The earlier formulation of MUMA had been changed to “fair and mutually acceptable” solution. The JWG had met last week or 10 days ago. We had sent our delegation and not wavered. JWG had drawn up a tentative schedule. We were fairly optimistic. Recently, Congress (I) leader Ghulam Nabi Azad had gone to DPRK. He returned via Peking. He met the new General Secretary. He was very happy with the meeting. He praised the new General Secretary and said that he seemed confident that he could cope with the difficult situation in China. He was confident that a solution would be found. PM BB expressed happiness and said that this would contribute to reducing tensions in the region. PM RG added that China’s internal problems were their own and India had no intentions of fishing in difficult waters. FS added that there was a symbolism in the reception accorded to Ghulam Nabi Azad. He was the first foreign political leader received by the new General Secretary.

17. PM RG mentioned Shri Lanka and Nepal and said that the two Foreign Ministers could discuss this.

18. PM RG then said that he wished to extend an invitation to PM BB to visit India. PM BB said that she looked forward to visiting India. The dates could be worked out.

19. The meeting ended, thereafter, after exchange of pleasantries.
Joint Press Release issued at the end of the visit of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi to Islamabad.

Islamabad, July 17, 1989.

His Excellency Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, Prime Minister of the Republic of India paid an official visit to Pakistan from the 16th to 17th July, 1989, at the invitation of Her Excellency Mumtaz Benazir Bhutto, Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan.

2. Accompanying His Excellency Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi on this visit to Islamabad were Mrs. Sonia Gandhi, Mr. P.V. Narasimha Rao, Minister of External Affairs, and senior officials of the Government of India.

3. Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, Mrs. Sonia Gandhi and the Minister of External Affairs, Mr. P.V. Narasimha Rao, called on His Excellency the President of Islamic Republic of Pakistan, Mr. Ghulam Ishaq Khan and Begum Ghulam Ishaq Khan and exchanged views with him on matters of mutual interest.

4. Prime Minister Mumtaz Benazir and Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi had detailed and cordial discussions in an atmosphere of mutual trust.

5. The two Prime Ministers had an extensive exchange of views on the developing international situation and on the manner in which further progress could be ensured in the normalization of India-Pakistan relations and strengthening co-operations between Pakistan and India.

6. The two leaders took note of recent positive developments on the international situation aimed at defusing tensions and confrontation and furthering the cause of international stability, disarmament and equitable economic development. They agreed to encourage and support these processes through mutual cooperation bilaterally as well as in multilateral fora. They discussed the situation relating to SAARC and expressed the hope that SAARC activities will be resumed at the earliest.

7. Both sides reviewed developments in bilateral relations since the last meeting of the two Prime Ministers in Islamabad in December 1988. The Prime Ministers expressed satisfaction about agreements reached between the two sides on cooperation in the fields of railway communications, civil aviation, border security arrangements and controlling illegal trans-border activities. They agreed that Indo-Pakistan consultations at appropriate levels should continue on a regular basis for devising further measures to improve cooperation in all these spheres. In this context, the Prime Ministers agreed that the Surveyors General of India and Pakistan will reconvene their discussions on the Sir Creek and maritime boundary between Pakistan and India.
8. The two leaders expressed satisfaction at all procedural measure having been completed on the agreements signed between the Government Pakistan and the Government of India on the avoidance of double taxation on air transport income and bilateral cultural relations. It was also agreed that remaining procedural requirements for implementing the agreement on non-attack on nuclear installations in each other’s countries should be completed in the near future. The Prime Minister of India informed the Prime Minister of Pakistan that India has finalized arrangements in this regard and was willing to ratify the agreement as early as feasible.

9. The two Prime Ministers reviewed the discussions held on the Siachen issue at the levels of Defence Secretaries and the army authorities of Pakistan and India in June and July 1989 respectively. In this context, they approved the joint statement issued at the end of the Defence Secretaries talks on the 17th of June, 1989.

10. Taking note of these discussions, the two Prime Ministers directed that the Defence Secretaries of India and Pakistan, should in their future meetings work towards a comprehensive settlement in accordance with the Simla Agreement and that this settlement should be based on the re-deployment of forces to reduce the chances of conflict and avoidance of the use of force, and further directed that the army authorities should continue discussions to determine future positions on the ground to which re-deployment would take place so as to conform to the Simla Agreement and ensure durable peace in the area. The next meeting of the Army authorities is being scheduled during August, 1989.

11. The two Prime Ministers emphasized that India-Pakistan relations, in all respects, will be structured and strengthened on the basis of the principles of mutual respect for the sovereignty territorial integrity, non-aggression, non-interference in internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit, within the framework, content and spirit of the Simla Agreement. The Simla Agreement provided a firm basis for the progressive development of bilateral relations between Pakistan and India and for the resolution of all outstanding differences including the Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

12. The in depth discussions between the two Prime Ministers were animated by their earnest desire to chart out a new and meaningful path of friendship and mutual cooperation transcending historical inhibitions and doubts which have affected relations between India and Pakistan.

13. His Excellency Mr. Rajiv Gandhi and Mrs. Sonia Gandhi expressed deep appreciation and thanks to the Prime Minister, the Government and the people of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan for the warm and friendly hospitality accorded to them during the visit.

14. Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi extended an invitation of Her Excellency Mohtarma Benazir Bhutto, the Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and to Mr. Asif Zardari to visit the Republic of India at their earliest convenience. The invitation was accepted with pleasure. The dates for the visit will be decided through diplomatic channels.

1226. Press Conference taken by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto.

Islamabad, July 17, 1989.

Dalip Padgaonkar, Times of India’s first question was on whether Prime Minister Bhutto had seen President Gulam Isaq Khan’ reported remarks to Prime Minister when he called on him on the 16th, that India should eschew a policy of hegemony.

Benazir Bhutto answered that she had not seen the newspaper story and that, therefore, she could not comment.

Saleh Zaafar of Nawa-e-Waqt’s second question concerned PM’s banquet speech in which he had said that small disputes should not come in the way of friendship. Zaafar enquired whether Siachen and Kashmir were included in PM’s list of small disputes.

PM’s reply was in the negative. He said these were “serious disputes”.

Q. by Ashwini Kumar of Punjab Kesari. He said that AK 475 and other weaponry had been found in Punjab and Kashmir and that these were allegedly being supplied by Pakistan. Now that India and Pakistan were heading towards friendship what did the Pakistan PM propose to do?

Benazir Bhutto: It is not our principle to interfere in internal affairs of other countries. We have assured the Government of India that we are not concerned with weapons. The matter was discussed at the Home Secretary level and ground rules have been laid down. We hope that in view of the new atmosphere such things will not happen.
Q. Voice of America: What was the nature of your talks with Gorbachev in Moscow on the Afghan issue?

PM: While we did talk about this issue, I did not bring any proposals; that was not my intention. The Geneva Accords provide the only way out. All parties should adhere to them.

Q. by Swaroop PTI. A section of people in Pakistan is opposed to normalization of ties with India. They are the same people who opposed your Prime Ministership. How will you counter them?

Benazir Bhutto: Every government will acknowledge that they have an opposition. This is part of political life. Each government will be judged not on what the opposition says, but by the people on the basis of its performance.

Q. by a British journalist: Now that democracy has returned in Pakistan, what prevents you from holding a plebiscite in Kashmir?

PM: There is no question of plebiscite from our point of view. The Simla Agreement replaces all other earlier agreements. In any case, we have had several general elections and local elections in Jammu and Kashmir over the last 40 years.

Benazir Bhutto: We have differing positions on Kashmir. The Simla agreement spells this out. We will work it out together.

Q. by Inderjit of INFA: Your accession to power and your rapport with Rajiv Gandhi raised hopes. What will you do about mutual arms limitations?

Benazir Bhutto: Both countries face tremendous problems with slums, poverty, etc. we would like to improve the security environment. We feel that if the super powers can talk about arms reduction and control, we should be able to do the same.

DAWN: What is the hitch in arriving at a solution in Siachen?

PM: Newspapers tend to believe that there are simple solutions available to such issues. There are no simple solutions as this is a complex problem. There are a number of steps which have to be taken regarding military disengagements and other measures. The progress had been good so far. We will speed it up.

Q. by Ashif In Dino: What are the prospects for further improvement of relations with India?

Benazir Bhutto: Since December when we signed three agreements, several Secretary level talks have taken place and there has been progress on travel, etc. more can be done and the Joint Commission should examine these aspects.

Q. by M J Akbar of Telegraph: The unusual delay in commencing the press conference has led to speculation that your last minute talks were indicative of agreement of disagreement. Have you both agreed on India’s Sri Lanka policy?

Benazir Bhutto: We revived the talks of our aides last night. It was a productive meeting. We discussed Sri Lanka with the Indian Prime Minister. India has its own position. We have expressed our concern.

Q. by a Pakistani journalist: In the Le Point interview you have stated that the nuclear problem is the biggest one for India.

PM: I feel it is one of the biggest problems because the Pakistani nuclear establishment is not open like ours. It is entirely under military control. Our nuclear institutions are open. Our whole policy is discussed in Parliament. We have, nevertheless, started talks on nuclear non-attack. We are waiting for the ratification of the agreement which we signed in December. We should take further steps in this direction to reduce tension.

Benazir Bhutto: I would take this opportunity to assure India’s Prime Minister that our nuclear establishment is not under military control. We do not believe in nuclear proliferation. I have discussed ways and means with him to resolve this issue. There are different pressures on each country. We must ensure that there is no arms race especially a nuclear one, as nuclear weapons are a threat to mankind.

PM: We believe that nuclear issues cannot be seen in isolated regional perspectives. We have presented a comprehensive action plan on nuclear disarmament in June’88. This is the only way.

Venkatnarayan from India: Are you worried about the future of SAARC because of Sri Lanka? How are you going to put it back on the rails? They have refused to hold the Summit. What will you do?

Benazir Bhutto: We discussed the Sri Lanka situation and its bearing on SAARC. Our Foreign Ministers have talked about the issue. I am sending my Foreign Minister to Sri Lanka. We hope that there will be mutual consultations.

Q. by Mushadid Hussain: Despite India’s massive military build-up why do you perceive Pakistan as a military threat? Why do you ask United States to apply pressure on Pakistan? Is not this inviting super power interference in our region and is it not a violation of non-alignment principles?

PM: As far as our defence is concerned, I would like to bring to your notice some important facts. Pakistan spends 8 per cent of GNP on defence, while we spend only 4 per cent. If you take into account the length of our border and the size of our exclusive economic zone and certain other details, which I would not want to go into, you will see that our military spending and our military establishment is proportionately much less than Pakistan’s. On the nuclear issue, we have talked to the United States. We have made known our fears.

Navjyoti Ajmer: Why don’t we spend more on development projects instead of on the military ones?

Benazir Bhutto: We hope to be able to do this.

PM: I share that hope.

Pakistan Times: We want peace with India. However, we find that in its relations with Nepal, Sri Lanka and Bangladesh, India had adopted a policy of confrontation. You have the image of a regional bully. How do you react to that?

PM: There is no question of our being a regional or any other kind of bully. As far as Nepal is concerned, they did not want to renew the trade treaty. We had been giving them far better facilities than they are able to get now the most favoured nation arrangements. We are not sure what they want. If they want most favoured nation treatment, we are willing to give it to them.

As far as Sri Lanka is concerned, it is only Indian troops which had ensured the unity and integrity of Sri Lanka. Had they not been there, Sri Lanka would have disintegrated. The only peaceful place in the whole country is the north, where our army is present. They have been responsible for the conduct of three elections, Presidential, parliamentary and provincial. We do not believe in hegemony. We do not believe in bullying. We have acted to stabilize the region and to bring under control disintegrating forces.

Sanjoy Hazarika, New York Times: Do you feel that your talks have given a momentum to the Siachen discussion?

PM: I feel that they have.

Benazir Bhutto: Our discussions have helped to clarify different issues.

K.K. Katyal, Hindu: What have you achieved in concrete terms and do you have your domestic compulsions?

Benazir Bhutto: There is a backlog of problems. Both of us need to chip away at this backlog. It is not fair to expect all problems to be solved overnight. There is no quick fix answer. The progress made by us since December has been laudable. We are both determined to search for peace, to lower tensions and solve problems. I believe high-level contacts are necessary to review the progress of subordinates. While welcoming Rajiv Gandhi and his delegation, I would also like to add that I look forward to accepting his kind invitation to visit India. I would like to emphasize that each country has an opposition. No country can be a hostage to partisan considerations. If we were to do so, we would become hostage to history and the judgment of history.

2. After the exchange of pleasantries, President GIK enquired about the progress made in discussions at the Indo-Pak Joint Commission. EAM and Sahabzada Yaqub Khan informed President GIK of the details of discussions held by the four Sub Commissions on the 17th of July and of the morning discussions held at the full Joint Commission.

3. Both the Foreign Ministers conveyed that the proceedings were smooth and concrete results are expected to be achieved. President GIK referred to our PM’s visit to Islamabad and said that such high level interactions are useful. Encouraging people to people contact would be even more useful.

President GIK added that while there are problems between the two countries, the best way to solve them is first to go to the genesis and the original causes of the problem and then to devise measures to resolve these problems in a manner which will remove mutual suspicions and apprehensions. Creating mutual trust and confidence is most important.

6. EAM said that on India’s part, the approach has always been for normalisation and the removal of misunderstandings. EAM recalled his association and interaction with President GIK over the last nine years and pointed out that in objective terms, the suspicions and apprehensions which President GIK mentions are more a historical legacy than based on any rational understanding of India’s policies and attitudes. The political leaders and decision making elite in Pakistan has an important role to play in educating public opinion in Pakistan to overcome doubts and apprehensions which are based on old attitudes rather than facts and existing attitudes in India.

7. There was a general exchange of views between President GIK, EAM and Sahabzada Yaqub Khan on the regional situation, on bilateral issues like cultural exchanges, trade, travel facilities, economic cooperation etc. President GIK said that the present atmosphere in Pakistan and India is most conducive to structure Indo-Pak relations on positive lines and expressed the hope that India would be responsive. EAM pointed out that there is ample evidence in the interaction between India and Pakistan at the governmental and political level to prove that India’s attitude has been positive and responsive. President GIK expressed the hope that the more difficult issues like Siachen would be resolved amicably in a practical manner. EAM said that India shares this hope and what is necessary is to show the necessary political will despite domestic political pressures in both countries to take bold decisions. EAM pointed out that this was the approach defined and articulated by our PM during his discussions on the 16th and 17th July.

8. The meeting lasted for approximately 35 minutes.

2. After the exchange of pleasantries, PMBB enquired how the Joint Commission meetings had progressed. EAM expressed satisfaction at progress made in discussions in all the four Sub-Commissions. Pak FM conveyed the details of decisions taken and informed PMBB that apart from the signing of the Cultural Protocol, Minutes would be signed on important subjects like liberalization of the visa regime, increasing the number of religious places which can be visited, expansion of trade etc.

3. PMBB mentioned to EAM that she had hoped very much that during our PM’s visit to Islamabad, some concrete steps would be announced to resolve the Siachen issue. She then enquired how EAM visualizes prospects regarding the resolution of the Siachen problem.

4. EAM said that he was not kept informed of the latest details, specially the exchanges between Mr. Iqbal Akhund and Mr. Ronen Sen, based on Prime Ministerial instructions from both sides which were held on the night of the 16th of July. EAM then asked Ambassador Dixit to summarize latest developments.

5. Ambassador Dixit made the following points in response:

(a) Army authorities on both sides have worked out concrete alternative options about positions to which re-deployment can take place.

(b) There was unwillingness on the part of Pak army authorities to formally confirm positions from which re-deployment would take place.

(c) The drawing of the notional line of control or ceasefire line north of NJ9482 is a matter still to be resolved at the higher political level.

(d) The manner in which the areas vacated by both the armies would be managed has also to be worked out.

(e) Re-deployment and withdrawal cannot take place in a vacuum. It is subject to agreement on these important pending issues.

6. EAM said that India has a practical, constructive and flexible approach, but it should be conducive to durable peace. PMBB and Iqbal Akhund said that whatever solution is devised should also take care of Pakistan's concerns and political criticism which can be leveled by opposition groups against any compromise. PMBB enquired what mechanisms could be devised to determine the future line of control north of NJ 9482 redeployments are successfully achieved. Ambassador Dixit and Mr. Iqbal Akhund clarified that several ideas are floating around about creating a joint monitoring group and also a joint survey group to deal with the problem mentioned by PMBB.

7. Foreign Secretary Shri S.K. Singh suggested to PMBB that during the next round of talks between the army authorities scheduled for August, 1989, the Pak army authorities should be given more flexible briefing so that discussions do not bog down in purely technical details. PMBB and EAM agreed that in any case the next immediate operational step to move forward to solve the Siachen issue has already been decided upon, namely, holding the meeting of the army authorities in August in Islamabad. EAM said that this could be followed up.

8. PMBB recalled her discussions about difficulties being faced by the SAARC with our PM, Shri Rajiv Gandhi and enquired from EAM as to how the crisis of the SAARC could be resolved.

9. PMBB stated that Sri Lanka's refusal to come to the SAARC Foreign Ministers Conference was a serious embarrassment to Pakistan. It is a matter of concern to Pakistan. However Pakistan does not wish to interfere in bilateral matters between India and Pakistan (Sri Lanka?).

10. Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan said that though it is a bilateral matter with Sri Lanka which is being discussed, it would be inaccurate to say that Pakistan is not concerned. Pakistan would like an amicable solution to the present impasse between India and Sri Lanka on the issue of the withdrawal of the IPKF. His understanding was that there were two issues to be resolved. First a point of time or time frame within which IPKF should withdraw. Secondly, whether this withdrawal should be linked to fulfillment of certain conditions or whether the conditions could be met separately without linkage.

11. A fairly long discussion of about twenty minutes followed in which EAM, Foreign Secretary, Shri S.K. Singh, Ambassador J.N. Dixit, explained in detail the background of the present difficulties with Sri Lanka and the repeated efforts made by India over the last three month to persuade Premdasa to more reasonable ways. EAM informed PMBB that it was precisely to give a face saving opportunity to Premdasa that our PM had sent his Principal Secretary, Shri Deshmuk as a Special Emissary with a letter suggesting that India and Sri Lanka should again resume bilateral discussions to work out the modalities for the withdrawal of the IPKF and the measures by which power can be devolved to Tamils giving them a sense of security. EAM and Foreign Secretary, Shri Singh underlined that the withdrawal of the IPKF cannot take place in isolation. It is linked with the fulfillment of certain specific conditions and obligations which Sri Lanka had agreed to under the Indo-Sri Lanka Agreement and in discussions following the signing, of the Agreement. EAM added that India is clear about IPKF’s withdrawal and that there is no desire on the part of India to keep its troops abroad in any foreign country indefinitely or permanently. India is willing to provide face saving devices and willing to have discussions with Sri Lankan authorities about the withdrawal of the IPKF and all related matters, but Premdasa’s approach has been consistently obstinate and obstructive. EAM said that he would encourage Yaqub Khan to persuade Sri Lanka to be reasonable as far as Pakistan keeps the Indian position explained as above in mind.

12. Yaqub Khan informed EAM that he was proceeding to Colombo on the 21st of July for discussions. He (Yaqub Khan) enquired whether he could convey to Premdasa and the Sri Lankan authorities that India is willing to have discussions about the withdrawal of the IPKF and related issues.

13. EAM and FS again emphasized that while Yaqub Khan should persuade Sri Lanka to be reasonable and while he can convey that India is willing to have bilateral discussions, he should make it clear that the discussions would have to be within the framework of the Indo-Sri Lanka Agreement. India is not in a position to accept any unilateral demands and deadlines. Foreign Secretary Shri S.K. Singh informed PMBB that during the informal SAARC meeting held in Islamabad last month (June), he had indicated that though the principle of unanimity should be retained for SAARC deliberations, some thought should be given to evolve procedures by which no single country can sabotage the very existence of the Organization.

14. PMBB said that it would be a very difficult and tragic development for Pakistan if SAARC disintegrates when Pakistan is the Chairman of the Organization. She urged that India should do everything possible to come to a reasonable settlement with Sri Lanka on the SAARC issue so that the activities of the SAARC could be resumed.

15. The meeting lasted for about an hour.

SECRET

New Delhi, July 24, 1989.

Ministry of External Affairs
(AP Division)

Following in the summary record of discussions between EAM and Pakistan FM on 24 July 1989. The lasted for about one hour.

After exchange of pleasantries, EAM recalled that Pakistan’s Prime Minister had informed our Prime Minister in Islamabad, during his visit, that she would be sending Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan as her Special Envoy to Sri Lanka. She had also said that he would discuss Sri Lankan participation and the future of SAARC. We were looking forward to hearing the results of his visit.

It was our view that on no account should SAARC activities be held up. SAARC should not be affected by bilateral or, for that matter, trilateral issues. SAARC had developed certain very fool proof guidelines. Even if all members of SAARC agreed on any particular issue, it could only be taken up if it was part of the agreed SAARC agenda. EAM then recalled that Sahebzada Yaqub Khan had promised to brief EAM at the earliest opportunity and welcomed Sehezbada Yakub Khan’s visit for this purpose to New Delhi.

Pakistan FM thanked EAM for receiving him at short notice. He then stated that the object of his visit to Sri Lanka was to put SAARC back on the rails. His effort was to secure Sri Lanka’s agreement to join the Ministerial meeting which had been aborted last month. He met Sri Lankan President and FM. He conveyed to them the disappointment and regret of Pakistan that the Ministerial Meeting could not take place as scheduled in Islamabad last month due to Sri Lankan inability join the meeting. He had carried a letter from PM BB conveying similar sentiments. The Sri Lankan President expressed his regrets that this should have happened particularly so when Pakistan with whom Sri Lanka had good relations was the Chairman of the SAARC. He then explained, at great length, the reasons for Sri Lankan action. Pakistan FM stated that he had tried to impress upon Sri Lanka the need to take certain policy and practical decisions in the immediate future. One such decision, the extension of the tenure of the Secretary General, had been taken by correspondence. There were other pressing issues e.g. calendar of activities, budget, venue and date of the Summit; and appointment of new Secretary General. Therefore, it was essential to keep SAARC going. Pakistan FM expressed the hope to his Sri Lankan counterpart that political situation would evolve in a manner which would permit the early convening of the Ministerial Meeting. In the meantime, it was his strong hope that the issues mentioned by him, would be settled through correspondence. Pakistan FM indicated that Sri Lanka was agreeable to this course of action and to deal with these issues by correspondence provided other SAARC members agreed. In regard to the meeting of the Council of Minister, no agreement could be reached in regard to dates. But, Pakistan FM had come away with the impression that dates in August could very possibly be acceptable to Sri Lanka. He had suggested August since thereafter everyone would get busy with NAM Summit, UNGA, CHOGM, etc. He proposed to ask the Secretary General to ascertain by correspondence, Sri Lanka’s view formally. He added that Sri Lanka had reiterated its commitment to SAARC and had stated that there was no loss of interest in the organization.

EAM stated that Sri Lanka could not be expected to say anything else in public. MOS (EA) enquired if Sri Lanka’s commitment to SAARC had been expressed by the President or FM of Sri Lanka. Pakistan FM responded that the President of Sri Lanka had expressed these sentiments and that too, repeatedly.

EAM then enquired whether Pakistan intended to send out invitations to SAARC countries for the Ministerial Meeting. He enquired also whether it was the impression of Pakistan FM that the Ministerial meeting could not take place without the settlement of the bilateral issue. Pakistan FM responded that he had not put this issue as sharply or in that manner to Sri Lanka. But he hoped to be able to revert in the matter. EAM said that having gone to Sri Lanka and convinced them the question should be finally resolved. The great importance of visit of Pakistan FM lay in that it should put an end to the need for any similar visit in the future. This sort of thing should not happen ever again in SAARC. It was the first time that such a thing had happened. It was the mission of Pakistan FM to save SAARC that had taken him to Sri Lanka. Were SAARC to collapse, it would be a great embarrassment to Pakistan as Chairman as also to the SAARC as an organization. We should not be put in the position of having to review SAARC at every stage.

Pakistan FM expressed his agreement. He said that Sri Lanka had expressed regrets and had stated their own reasons and pleaded the compulsions of circumstances for their inability to attend the Council of Ministers Meeting last month. They had said that, given the circumstances, it would have been incongruous for them to have attended the meeting.

EAM said that, as a next step after the Pakistan FM's visit to Sri Lanka, on behalf of the SAARC Chairman, we would like to clinch the issue. We would like to know precisely where we stand in regard to future meetings. Secretary (ER) enquired if technical meetings could go on. Pakistan FM confirmed that there could be no objection to the normal convening of the SAARC Technical Committees. Secretary (ER) mentioned the meeting of the Technical Committee on Education which had been set up at the Islamabad Summit. Bangladesh was to convene this Technical Committee. Pakistan FM responded that even in the ordinary course, the meeting could be held in the absence of one or two members and, therefore, he did not feel that there should be any objection to going ahead with the meeting of this Technical Committee also. Secretary (ER) then mentioned that it was the understanding within SAARC that despite the absence of one or two countries, the decisions taken at the Technical Committee meeting would be endorsed by everyone. But at the Council of Ministers meeting at Islamabad, Sri Lanka had said that they would not be willing to do so. EAM then said that we should proceed on the basis that if they had conveyed their no objection then they were willing to abide by the understanding evolved till now.

Additional Foreign Secretary Khalid Mehmood stated that Sri Lanka had told Pakistan that they (Sri Lanka) had been informed by India that the Summit Meeting was not convenient for India till March 1990 and that India proposed to inform Pakistan of its views in the matter. Pakistan FM enquired whether, indeed, it was India's preference to have the Summit in March. He said Pakistan had not heard this so far. EAM responded that Summit meeting was part of the process which had got disrupted. There were certain internal scheduling provisions. He recalled that even last year it was with some difficulty that necessary adjustments could be made for the Summit to be held when it was. In any case, India would communicate its views at an appropriate time to Pakistan, as necessary. Pakistan FM stated that in case the Summit was not held in this calendar year, SAARC charter may have to be amended. Khalid Mehmood added that if Summit was to be put off till March, pressures for the convening of the Council of Ministers Meeting in the near future would not be there. EAM stated that it was not our intention to allow any easing of pressure for the early convening of the meeting of Council of Ministers.

The discussions then turned to bilateral issues. Pakistan FM expressed his happiness at the progress made at the Joint Commission. He mentioned, specifically, various steps to promote people-to-people exchanges. The liberalization of visa procedures would be very helpful. It was his understanding that the facility for grant of visa with exemption from police reporting would be of great help. He enquired about dates from which these decisions could be implemented. Ambassador Niaz Naik mentioned that he had consulted the Interior Minister of Pakistan who had agreed that the decisions could be implemented with immediate effect. However, there were certain practical measures that had to be taken e.g. informing border check posts of the revised procedures etc. He intended to consult FS and the Pak Division so that we could simultaneously implement these decisions. EAM stated that implementation must be quick. We should not permit any delay. He intended to make a statement in Parliament and table the report of the Joint Commission. The decisions taken at the Joint Commission would be of real benefit to people on both sides.

EAM then enquired about the reopening of the Khokrapar-Munabao rail route. He recalled that this subject had been under discussion for a fairly long time. On each occasion we were told that the matter was under examination. We hope that time in not far off when Pakistan would see its way to going beyond repeating that the matter was under examination. We received a lot of complaints from people who are forced to travel all the way through Punjab in order to get to various parts of Pakistan. Pakistan FM mentioned that there had been many ups and downs on this issue. As of now, no decision had been reached on the reopening of the Khokrapar-Munabao route.

Pakistan FM enquired about the Jinnah House. He also mentioned that the next meeting of the military authorities on Siachen issue would be held on 10-11 August, 1989. Ambassador Niaz Naik said that he would be conveying dates to the Indian side. Pakistan side felt that meeting could be held in the first half of August. They were able to suggest 9-10-11 August as possible dates. Pakistan FM expressed the hope that some movement would take place during this meeting. They were briefing their military people on that basis. They intended to give them a wider brief. He then jokingly remarked that they would, however, not like to give too much latitude to the military people. He said that he was hopeful that an arrangement on the Siachen issue would be arrived at. It would have a positive impact on the totality of our bilateral relations.

EAM enquired about CHOGM. MOS (EA) stated that the procedures had been explained to the Pakistan side. Pakistan FM said that the understanding was that they would joint as member prior to the Kuala Lumpur Summit. It would be yet another forum in which India and Pakistan could meet.

Pakistan FM referred to the economic issues which had been raised by Foreign Secretary during his visit to Pakistan in June. Pakistan intending to pursue these. They would like to benefit from the seminal work done in Delhi. They agreed that if countries like India and Pakistan did not get together, they would be left behind.

EAM enquired about the progress on grant of SAARC visas. Additional Foreign Secretary Khalid Mehmood mentioned that they had received responses from Bangladesh, Bhutan and Nepal. They had not received replies form other countries. EAM enquired about our own response and JS (SAARC) clarified that some internal consultations were still going on and the process had not been completed. EAM mentioned that the issue could be settled through circulation among member countries. We should also make efforts to extend the categories for which such visas could be granted. For example, Vice-Chancellor of Universities could be granted visas on this basis. EAM also suggested that pending the SAARC decision, India and Pakistan could even consider granting visas on this basis, bilaterally.

Referring back to the SAARC meeting, EAM said that the information and impressions that Pakistan’s Foreign Minister had brought with him following his visit to Sri Lanka were good but not complete. It should be our effort to detach the two issues, i.e. participation in SAARC meetings and bilateral issues. This should be done once and for all. This is what we expect of the Chairman of the SAARC. Pakistan FM said that they would do their best in the matter. He hoped that a solution would be found before long.

The meeting concluded of the exchange of Pleasantries.

Statement by the Pakistani Minister of State for Information and Broadcasting Javed Jabbar on behalf of the Government of Pakistan initiating the debate in the Senate on the visit of Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi to Pakistan.

The Prime Minister of India Mr. Rajiv Gandhi paid an official visit to Pakistan on 16-17 July, 1989. This was the first official bilateral visit by an Indian Prime Minister to Pakistan since 1960 when Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru visited us to sign the Indus Water Treaty. The discussion between our Prime Minister and the Indian Prime Minister in Islamabad laid the ground work for a fresh beginning in improving our relations with India. Both leaders stressed the need to revitalise the process of normalization of relations. Three agreements were signed and both sides agreed to resume various high level bilateral meetings including convening the Joint Commission which had not met since 1985.

2. The recent series of high levels official meetings between the Water and Power, Interior, Defence and Foreign Secretaries of the two countries on various aspects of bilateral relations have yielded hopeful possibilities.

3. The just concluded visit of the Indian Prime Minister to Pakistan demonstrates the desire of both sides to improve bilateral relations on the basis of equality and mutual benefit.

4. The Government attaches importance to the establishment of good neighbouring, co-operative and tension free relations with India. We seek to resolve our outstanding differences with India including Kashmir disputes on a step-by-step basis in order to build a constructive and durable relationship. We believe that the irritants which continue to vitiate the relations between the two countries can be removed through developing better understanding and greater mutual trust.

5. The progress and security of both countries is linked to the maintenance of a climate of peace and stability in the South Asian region. The requirement of regional peace and stability make it imperative for Pakistan and India to work towards gradually reducing tensions and striving for peace and cooperation.

6. Let me assure the House that improvement in the climate of relations with India shall never take place at the cost of our national interest, national dignity and honour. Nor will our well known and principled position on Jammu and Kashmir dispute be compromised. We remain steadfastly wedded to the position that the solution of the Kashmir problem lies in the exercise by the people of Jammu and Kashmir of their right of self-determination through a free and impartial plebiscite. This is what was affirmed by the UN resolution which is binding on both Pakistan and India and is the recognized position embodied in the Simla Agreement. We have not stopped pursuing the solution of the Kashmir dispute. As a matter of fact Kashmir dispute has been reactivated since the installation of the democratically elected Government in Pakistan. Our Prime Minister raised the Kashmir issue during the meeting with the Indian Prime Minister in Islamabad last December during the 4th SAARC Summit. The Kashmir dispute was again taken up with the Indian Prime Minister during his visit to Islamabad three days back. Every year in the United Nations, at the meeting of the Non-Aligned Conference we have reiterated our principled position that the problem of Jammu and Kashmir should be solved in accordance with the UN resolutions and the spirit of the Simla Agreement.

7. The establishment of good-neighbouring relations with India based on the principle of mutual equality and benefit would only be possible if differences between the two courtiers are resolved by peaceful means. This includes the Kashmir dispute also. We have to resolve the dispute so that our two neighbouring countries can live in peace with each other. We must resolve this dispute so that the people of Kashmir can also live in peace and tranquility and we have to settle this dispute to eliminate the threat to regional and international peace and stability.

8. On the Siachen Glacier dispute the honourable members are already aware that the last meeting of the Defence Secretaries of Pakistan and India which was held on 15-17 June 1989 in Rawalpindi, both sides discussed proposals for an early settlement of the Siachen issue in accordance with the Simla Agreement. For the first time both countries were able to agree on a formula for a comprehensive settlement of the Siachen dispute based on the redeployment of forces to reduce the chances of conflict, avoidance of use of force and determination of future positions of the ground so as to conform with the Simla agreement. The Army authorities of both countries are to determine these positions. The Pakistan military delegation visited India from 11-13 July 1989 and had preliminary exchange of views with the Indian military authorities. As a follow up of the military level talks an Indian military delegation is expected to visit Pakistan next month to resume the discussion on the determination of positions on the ground. Pakistan has always maintained that the Siachen dispute should be resolved peacefully in accordance with the Simla Agreement. The honourable members will recall that the Simla Agreement clearly stipulates that “pending the final settlement of any of the problems between the two countries neither side shall unilaterally alter the situation.” We have already stated that Siachen dispute is a continuing irritant in our bilateral relations with India. Furthermore the conflict on the Siachen glacier is causing unnecessary and heavy human and material losses to both sides. We therefore, believe that for peace in the region and improvement of bilateral relations it is essential to settle this issue soon. Let me affirm once again that in seeking the negotiated settlement of the Siachen dispute we will safeguard our national dignity and honour. We shall protect our national interests and principles.

9. In conducting our relations with India which have traditionally been a complex and difficult relationship and which have also seen with many upheavals we shall be governed by conviction that the foundation of durable peace and co-operation can only be established on the accepted principles of inter-state relations which call for mutual respect, sovereign equality, territorial integrity and mutual benefit.

10. We hope that with the constructive approach that the two countries have adopted in resolving this issue, we will be able to continue negotiations in a spirit of mutual understanding and trust and on the basis of accepted norms and principles.

11. Let me know try to explain the thrust of the Simla Agreement in the context of our relations with India. Despite the difficult circumstances under which the Simla Agreement was signed, we negotiated with India as an equal. We did not compromise our position on any of our bilateral issues. Simla Agreement was an honourable settlement of our problems with India based on the principles of the Charter of the United Nations. Both countries agreed that their relations be governed by the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations and that their difference will be settled by peaceful means. Both sides also declared the commitment to peaceful co-existence, respect for each other territorial integrity, sovereignty and non interference in each others internal affairs as a pre-requisite for durable peace. Furthermore the two countries agreed that they shall always respect each others national unity, territorial integrity, political independence and sovereign equality in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations. In so far as the Kashmir dispute is concerned we believe that in the Simla Agreement the two countries recognized that in the context of durable peace and complete normalization of relations and final settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute was an essential pre-requisite. The Simla Agreement clearly protects the recognized position of the either side.

12. What is the recognized position? The recognized position means the position which is internationally accepted. The recognized position on Jammu and Kashmir dispute lies in UN resolutions. Whether they have been implemented or not. These resolutions have been endorsed by the world community. Recognized position lies in the principles of self determination and in the holding of a free and impartial plebiscite under the auspices of the

13. What kind of future do we want for our region? Today conflicts and confrontations are being substituted by peace and cooperation in many parts of the world. A wave of peace is moving across the globe. A decade marked by strife and turmoil is ending. It is equally important that we strive for peace in our region. We must make a constructive contribution to the realization of economic and social aspirations of our people. Pakistan and India belong to a common region. We have an opportunity to advance prospects of détente in our region. We believe that it is in the common interest of both countries to improve the living conditions of our people who have high expectations from their leaders for a better and more promising future. During the talks with the Indian Prime Minister the situation prevailing in our region was also discussed. We emphasized the need to defuse current tensions and to promote amicable relations among the nations of the region on the basis of universally recognized principles of inter-state relations as enshrined in the UN Charter. We believe that such an approach will ensure regional peace and security.

14. In conclusion let me reassure the honourable members that in seeking better relations with India, we are conscious of the difficulties which are likely to emerge. We do not entertain false expectations. Our policy which has won the support and endorsement at home and abroad of seeking good neighbourly and tension free relations does not and will not imply a false sense of complacency on our part, or a lessening of vigilance or a lowering of our guard.

Verbatim record of call on Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi by Begum Nusrat Bhutto in Belgrade on September 4, 1989 at 5.30 PM.

Prime Minister I apologize for being late. My discussions with Prime Minister Markovich were carried on longer than scheduled.

Nusrat Bhutto: (graciously) I understand. I know how difficult it is to keep the schedule in these conferences. How are your elections coming along? I wish you all the best.

PM: The situation is fine. There is, of course, the usual pre-elections haranguing. How are things with you?

NB: We are having a lot of problems, particularly, in Sind. But now the situation is improving and coming under control. Action is being taken against the Drug Mafia. Severe action has been taken against Drug dealers. Old officials who have developed vested interests and links with Drug syndicates have been changed and this is beginning to have an effect.

PM: Once you get on a tiger, there is no jumping off. There cannot be any softening. Are you getting international support for your crack down on drug trafficking?

NB: We have been getting support. The trouble is that the drug mafia has virtually been running a parallel government. Another area in which we have been able to make a dent is inflation which is now down to 8%.

PM: I was worried about our inflation till I came here.

NB: I am glad to have this opportunity to meet you once more. It is also good that you and Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto will be meeting again in Kuala Lumpur.

PM: We are in touch on some bilateral issues, (turning to Iqbal Akhund) Has there been any progress in your talks with Ronen? (joint secretary in PM’s office)

Iqbal Akhund: At our level we always make good progress but thereafter there are problems!

NB: Are you going to the UN Session this year?

PM No I do not normally go for the UN Session. The Foreign Minister represents us. I only go if there is a Special Session.
NB: We will be going to the UNGA this year.

PM: It is important for you. This would be the first UNGA Session after the elections.

Yakub Khan: Things are going well on the Commonwealth front. The Secretary General of the Commonwealth has informed us about Pakistan's admission. Is there any positive development with regard to the next Secretary General of the Commonwealth?

PM: I get the feeling that a clearer picture is emerging. But there are still contending claims of support from both candidates. We have no preference and would be prepared to go along with either. We are keen, however, to avoid a divisive battle on this issue and feel that the matter should be sorted out by consensus preferably before the Summit.

YK: We also feel the same way. We are looking at dates for our Prime Minister's visit. One possibility is that this could take place after the Commonwealth Summit.

PM: We are looking forward to the visit. We have heard that there is good news on the SAARC front and the Foreign Ministers meeting is now back on the rails.

YK: The Sri Lankans have agreed that the Foreign Ministers meeting could now take place in November.

PM: Congratulations at having brought Sri Lanka around. However, the internal situation in Sri Lanka is not good and we hope that it will be possible to hold a Summit in Sri Lanka. Maldives, in particular, is very worried about going to Sri Lanka and they have spoken to us about this. They apprehend retaliatory action by PLOTE cadres in the wake of the sentences recently passed in Maldives on members of PLOTE who had participated in the coup attempt.

YK: We may have to go beyond this year for the Summit and create new rules to enable us to do so. When are your elections?

PM: Technically the last date for holding the elections is February but going by precedent we should have a new Parliament in place by the second week of January at the latest. So the Summit may not be convenient before February. We will be having a small Parliament session of 3 to 4 days to pass the Nagar Palika and Panchayati Raj (town councils and village councils) Bills. Unfortunately, we don't have the requisite majority in the Rajya Sabha to do so. Our situation is a bit like that in Pakistan! We would have a clearer idea of the likely timing of the election after this Parliament session.
Iqbal Akhund: We can also adjust the dates of our military maneuvers to ensure that they do not coincide with your elections and avoid unintended tension.

YK: (Interjecting) I must thank you for your prompt action for our missing aircraft.

PM: Has the aircraft been traced?

NB: Nothing has been found. A bang was heard by a British mountaineer on the other side of Nanga Parbat. The Pilot was experienced but the Co-Pilot was new. He must have lost his way and probably crashed suddenly into the mountain wall because there was no SOS.

PM: This happens. The Air India plane which had crashed in the Swiss mountains in the sixties has just been discovered. It probably got buried in a glacier and the remains have become visible now after the glacier moved.

YK: The lesson is not to use Fokker aircraft in difficult terrain.

PM: We have found 737s very good for the mountains.

NB: Yes. But they need a longer and harder runway and then there is the problem of money.

PM: How are things on Afghanistan? Has the situation improved or are we heading for a hot winter?

NB: Gesturing dismissively towards Yakub Khan to reply.

YK: The situation is critical. There are differences within the interim government. What is required is a political solution. But this must be one which satisfies the Afghans otherwise nothing will be achieved. The main problem is to persuade the Interim Govt. of the need to broaden their base in order to step up political pressure on Najib. Najib has got full Soviet support. The Soviets have given him massive arms and ammunition as can be seen by the fact that they have in recent months fired 750 Scud missiles.

PM: That is a large number. Where were they used?

YK: The Scud missiles have not been used against specific targets but as weapons of terror. Soviet aircraft have carried out 2700 sorties since the Soviets left. If we agree to negative symmetry in arms supplies now it would mean that the Kabul regime would have much more weapons. We had suggested this to the Soviets earlier but they had turned it down. We are hoping to arrive at a consensus with the Soviet Union in the UN on a resolution on Afghanistan. We are also trying to get the interim government to bring in the Iran-based Mujahideen.
PM: Would this be easier now under Rafsanjani?

YK: Yes. Rafsanjani is a pragmatist. It should now be possible to arrive at a compromise and draw the Iran based Mujahideen in. Rafsanjani’s internal position is quite strong and he has managed to get a Cabinet of his choosing. I wish I could give you something more definite than this but the whole situation is nebulous and it is difficult to say how it will evolve.

NB: We are very keen that the Afghan refugees go back but we want them to go back with honour.

PM: It may be difficult to get them to go back now that many of them have got used to a certain level of affluence in Pakistan.

NB: We know it that is why we are worried.

That you so much for the meeting. I will excuse myself since I have to make my statement.

1232. Resolution adopted by the Pakistani Senate on India – Pakistan Relations.

Islamabad, September 18, 1989.

The resolution said it affirm that peace and tranquility in the region depend on sincere and scrupulous adherence to and observance of the principles and values enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations.

Further affirms that the people of Pakistan want to live in peace and friendship with honour with all the countries of the world in general and with their neighbours .... Including India in particular.

Declares that friendship, cooperation and good neighbourly relations with India can be strengthened and consolidated by preserving Pakistan’s ideological and cultural values, safeguarding economic interests in view of differing levels of development and by resolving those disputes and problems which have plagued Pak-India relations for the last four decades and have aggravated over the years primarily because of the absence of a positive attitude from India:
Resolves that lasting peace and sustainable friendship with India can be built only on the following principles:

(a) Acceptance of all countries of the region, irrespective of their size or military strength, as equal participants in the region, shunning all signs of hegemonistic attitude and behaviour;

(b) Immediate withdrawal of Indian troops from the Siachen Glacier, occupied by India in violation of all norms of international law, including the Simla Agreement in which India committed itself to the control Line as at 1972;

(c) Resolution of the problem of Kashmir, through a plebiscite held under UN auspices in accordance with the resolutions of the Security Council and demand of people of the State of Jammu and Kashmir for their right to self-determination;

(d) Respect for the sovereignty, integrity, independence and ideologies of the countries of the region and their right to decide for themselves what type of security arrangements they require for their defence;

(e) Affirmation of the right of these countries to develop all forms of technology to meet their economic, energy and other needs;

(f) Respect for the right of minorities, as Muslim Ummah cannot be insensitive to what happens to the Muslims in India and elsewhere;

(g) Non-interference in the domestic affairs of other countries and stopping all overt and covert activities.

Further resolves that

(I) the complex problem of Pak-Indian relations needs to be handled with vision, realism and caution;

(II) while pursuing contact and dialogue with India, the government should seek an early solution of fundamental problems;

(III) the government should pursue with even greater vigour a policy, along with negotiations, to mobilize support for the objective and the principled position of Pakistan from the countries of the region and the world by imaginative policies at national and international levels;

(IV) Pakistan should continue to express solidarity with the Muslims of Jammu and Kashmir in their struggle for self-determination, and

(V) the government should inform and discuss in the two Houses in Parliament important developments in relation to foreign policy.
Assures the government of all possible cooperation in maintaining a foreign policy, in keeping with Islamic ideals and aspirations of the people of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, safeguarding the sovereignty, integrity and unity of the country and in keeping with its role in world affairs.

1233. CONFIDENTIAL

Letter from the Ambassador of India in Pakistan to the Ministry of External Affairs Commenting on the Resolution passed by the Pakistani Senate on September 18, 1989.

Ambassador of India
Islamabad.

No. ISL/AMB/397/89 30 September 1989

My dear Naresh,

The mission had faxed to you the text of the resolution passed by the Pakistani Senate on Indo-Pak relations on the 18th of September 1989, on September 21.

2. The resolution was moved by Prof. Khurshid Ahmed of the IJI.

3. Our spokesman has already reacted to this resolution. The points of interest in that resolution which we should keep at the back of our mind in terms of IJI’s thinking on relations with India are the following. I quote extracts from the resolution which are relevant:

(i) The resolution affirms that Pakistani people wish to live in peace and friendship, but with honour, with all their neighbours but with India in particular.

(ii) Friendship and cooperation with India is only possible if Pakistan preserves its ideology, cultural values and safeguards its economic interests in the light of the differing stages of development between India and Pakistan.

(iii) Indo-Pak relations have been primarily aggravated because of the absence of a more positive attitude from India.
POLITICAL RELATIONS:1975-1989

(iv) India should shun all signs of hegemonistic attitude and behaviour. India should immediately withdraw its troops from the Siachen Glacier. India’s presence in the Siachen Glacier is violation of international law and the Simla Agreement and in particular Indian presence in Siachen violates the Line of Control determined in 1972.

(Prof. Khurshid Ahmed has obviously not read the Simla Agreement or studied the point up to which the line of control was determined).

(v) The Kashmir problem can be solved only through a plebiscite under the UN auspices in accordance with the resolutions of the Security Council.

(vi) India should not object to any country in the region deciding for itself the type of security arrangements which they would require for their defence.

(vii) Countries in this region should be allowed to develop all forms of technology to meet their economic, energy and other needs. Pakistan cannot be indifferent to or incentive to what happens to Muslims in India or elsewhere.

(viii) Good relations with India can only be achieved through early solution of fundamental problems mentioned earlier in this resolution in the manner in which they have been mentioned.

4. The resolution also calls on the Government of Pakistan to seek support from other countries of the region to fulfill its interests as outlined in the resolution.

5. I thought this brief analysis when read with the text of the resolution available with you would be useful reference material in case the matter comes up in the media or in the Parliament in future.

With warm regards,

Yours sincerely,

( J.N. Dixit )

Shri Nareshwar Dayal,
Joint Secretary (AP),
Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi.

SECRET

Record of discussion between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan.

Islamabad, November 6, 1989.

After an exchange of pleasantries discussion on the following issues took place:

I. SAARC Summit:

Pak FS: Sri Lanka is very keen to host the Summit, but they cannot host it before March 1990. Sri Lankan Foreign Minister is expected to give a specific date. We should go along with the Sri Lanka.

FS: India is prepared to participate in a brief summit in this Calendar Year. There is no guarantee that the security situation in Sri Lanka will permit the holding of the Summit. At least two countries were willing to substitute for Sri Lanka as host. Sri Lanka could host a summit in 1990. High Commissioner added that at least two heads of Government would have difficulties in participating in a summit in Sri Lanka, i.e. Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and President Gayoom.

Pak FS: Maldives was keen to host the summit in 1990 since it was the 25th anniversary of their independence. Furthermore, Maldives had not conveyed any difficulty to Pakistan about President Gayoom attending the summit in Sri Lanka. He also felt that the host country should be given the right to judge its capability in regards to holding the summit and that others should be flexible.

FS: Mr. Humayun Khan could meet with and sound out other delegations. Thereafter this matter could once again be reviewed.

II. Bilateral issues.

Zarb -e-Momin:

FS: As the date for the exercises drew nearer it was important to increase the frequency of contacts between the military authorities on the two sides.

Pak FS: The exercise was being conducted on the North-South axis and 200 kms away from the border. This was done specifically in order to avoid repetition of the 1987 situation. Now the exercise was not clashing with Indian elections.

Both Foreign Secretaries agreed that though there was presently a lull in formal bilateral contacts, there had been a discernible decline in tensions.

FS then raised a number of issues with his counterpart:
1) Sir Creek: India was awaiting a reply from Pakistan. Shri Aziz Khan, DG said that Pakistan was waiting for fresh dates from India for the next Surveyors General meeting.

2) VISA/Consular Decisions: Mr. Humayun Khan said that decisions were being implemented. The delay on the part of Pakistan was due to some misunderstanding between the Pakistan Foreign Office and Pakistan Ministry of Internal Affairs.

3) VISAS For Indian Journalists: Mr. Humayun Khan said that the question of grant of visas to the Times of India journalist and those to journalists of Hindustan Times and the Hindu would be looked into.

4) Purchase of Property: High Commissioner requested for an expeditious decision on this matter.

5) Security Prisoners: The case of Shri Ravinder Kaushik was again taken up. Foreign Secretary suggested that we should perhaps start once again with a clean slate.

III. Multilateral Issues

1) Cooperation in international forums:

   FS indicated that there was good cooperation between our two delegations at the Belgrade and Kuala Lumpur Summits.

2) Fiji: FS briefly referred to President Ganilau's visit to Pakistan. FS informed his counterpart about the high-level attendance expected at Bavadra's funeral, from Australia and New Zealand. India had sent the Deputy Chairman Rajya Sabha Dr. Najma Heptullah.

3) Evolving international economic situation:

   FS: made a presentation on evolving world economic scenario. He referred to the Asia Pacific Rim cooperation; the moves towards Europe-1992; the remarkable developments in East Europe and the strong possibilities of this region emerging as our competitor for Western foreign investment and capital. He felt that the sub-continent, particularly India and Pakistan, should not lose out or suffer as a result of these developments. He called for a visionary, forward looking approach on global economic issues. He emphasized the significance of the growing middle class in India which today was 150 million strong. He urged that bilateral political issues between our two countries be set aside and economic cooperation started in right earnest. “We should come together and think aggressively” on these issues.
Pak FS: Interpreted this presentation to imply a call for greater bilateral trade on which he felt there had been progress. He, however, said that they would think about and cogitate upon FS’s presentation.

IV. High Commissioner requested for a clarification on the alleged remarks of Pakistani Foreign Minister to the effect that India should not construct Wullar Barrage at all. Pakistan Foreign Secretary said that this had become an internal political issue in Pakistan; that Pakistan’s position on this remained unchanged; that they would seek a negotiated settlement of this issue; that they were finalizing their response to our draft. He hoped that this would not become a domestic political issue in India.

High Commissioner indicated that beyond a time limit, pressure in India to resume construction would build.

V. Pak FS at the prodding of his aides took up the question of the candidature of Mr. Justice Dorab Patel for the I.C.J, following the completion of tenure of Mr. Justice Pathak. He pointedly referred to our position at the time of election of Mr. Justice Pathak, that we were merely seeking to fill the vacancy caused by Justice Nagendra Singh’s demise and only for the remainder of his term and that we would not seek re-election. FS indicated that this matter would be looked into.

The meeting lasted for one hour. It was attended by FS, H.C., JS (IPA) and the undersigned on our side. On the Pakistan side, their FS, DG Mr. Aziz Ahmad Khan, Director Foreign Secretary’s Office and Director (Asia) were present.

(Ranjit Rae)
Under Secretary (FSO)

1235. Statement of Pakistan Prime Minister Ms. Benazir Bhutto on the demolition of Babri Mosque in India,

The Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto in a statement expressed deep concern of the government and the people of Pakistan at “the reprehensible plan of extremist Hindu elements in India to construct a mandir on the site of the Babri Mosque in Ayodhya”.

“This step is willful desecration of an Islamic holy place and arouses the deepest resentment among Muslims all over the world,” she said and added:

That the Government of Pakistan had repeatedly expressed its deep concern at the spurt in the killing of innocent Muslims in various parts of India as the people of Pakistan share kinship, culture and history with the Muslim community of India.

She claimed it had been the consistent policy of Pakistan not to interfere in the internal affairs of other states. However, the development in the Babri Masjid issue was a matter of the deepest concern for Muslims both inside and outside India, she added.

She said the people of Pakistan shared the anguish which these developments had caused to their brethren worldwide.

The government of Pakistan, she said, reiterates that it is the responsibility of the Government of India to take effective steps to put an end to communal killings and to ensure that the Muslims in India are provided full security of life.”

The Indian High Commissioner was called to the Foreign Office on November 13 and conveyed ‘deep concern’ of the Prime Minister, the government and the people of Pakistan over the Babri mosque issue. Pakistani media reports said that the Indian High Commissioner gave the assurance that the Government of India had taken steps to ensure that the sanctity of the mosque is not violated. However, a Press release issued by the High Commission for India said that Mr. J. N. Dixit had sought an appointment with Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan with the objective of conveying to Pakistan India’s reactions to the November 10 statement of Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto on developments relating to the Babri Masjid.

The release said that Mr. Dixit could not be received by Sahabzada Yaqub Khan owing to important preoccupation and was given an appointment with Dr. Humayun Khan on November 13. Mr. Dixit formally handed the statement of the official spokesman of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs.
The Punjab Assembly on November 11 condemned the demolition of the mosque and called upon the Federal Government to organize a meeting of the Muslim countries on this issue. It also passed a resolution. In Rawalpindi also protest processions were taken out. Former Punjab Chief Minister Hanif Ramay accused as a vote catching device, as Rajiv Gandhi had done by organizing the massacre of Sikhs in 1984. He added that as long as “Pakistan is not strong and does not make atom bomb, the Indian Muslims would remain unsafe”. The Jamaat Islami organized a three-day conference in Lahore, claimed to have been attended by one lakh people, which adopted a 20-point declaration stressing the need for making concerted efforts for the establishment of a commonwealth of Muslim countries. It denounced the Pakistan Government’s submissive attitude towards India and inter alia denounced the genocide of Muslims in India and Kashmir.

Meanwhile it was reported in the Pakistani media that a number of temples in Sind were damaged by the demonstrators protesting the demolition of the Babri Mosque. The District Magistrate Sukkur in Sind in a press release admitted that some temples and some shops of the Hindus were damaged but he said that the Police had set up pickets and the police is patrolling the area to maintain law and order.
Response of the Spokesperson of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs to the reaction of Pakistan on Babri Mosque.

New Delhi, November 11, 1989.

We have seen, with regret, the Pakistan Government's statement about Ayodhya.

We reject unwarranted interference in our internal affairs by outsiders. Those who have "solved" their own "minority problem" by virtually eliminating the minorities in their own country would be well advised not to indulge in hypocritical platitudes about the treatment of minorities who enjoy full religious and other freedoms as proud citizens of India. Rather than misleading their own people with false propaganda, the Pakistani establishment should concentrate violence and killing of Muslims in their own country.*

Their statement is a biased distortion of facts and betrays a total ignorance of the complexities of this issue.

The Government and people of India are fully of handling their own internal affairs without motivated and malicious meddling from outside.

* Talking specifically about the reaction of Prime Minister Bhutto herself the Indian Spokesperson said her statement was a "biased distortion of facts and betrayed total ignorance of the complexities of the issue."

NO WAR DECLARATION
1237. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on Call by Special Envoy of Pakistan Prime Minister on Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh.

New Delhi, January 10, 1990.

The Pakistan Prime Minister's Special Envoy, Mr. Abdul Sattar paid a courtesy call on the Prime Minister, Shri Vishwanath Pratap Singh this morning, which lasted for about half-an-hour. He was accompanied by Mr. Bashir Babbar, the Pakistan High Commissioner in India, and Mr. Aziz Khan, Director General in the Pakistan Foreign Office. Prime Minister was assisted by the Foreign Secretary Shri S. K. Singh; Shri Naresh Dayal, Joint Secretary (IPA) in the Ministry of External Affairs, and Shri Ronen Sen, Joint Secretary in the Prime Minister's Office.

The Special Envoy handed over a letter from Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto which expressed a desire to normalize relations between the two countries. The Pakistan Prime Minister's Special Envoy while underlining this desire explained the political and other constraints in Pakistan adding that greater interaction is desirable. He specially emphasized the need to enhance economic cooperation.

The Indian Prime Minister responded favourably and positively and asked that his best wishes be conveyed to Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto for her personal health and well-being. The Prime Minister also emphasized the need for joint effort to build-up an atmosphere of mutual trust and greater contacts so as to generate a better appreciation of each other's perceptions. The Prime Minister also indicated our concerns at certain developments that have come to our knowledge regarding Jammu and Kashmir. The Prime Minister indicated that India would appreciate if these concerns are addressed as such things can become difficult to manage if allowed to grow* Question: What was the Special Envoy's reply to these concerns?

Spokesman: I have no further information on that.

* On January 11 Pakistani paper The Nation quoting All India Radio said that Prime Minister Singh while expressing deep concern over the worsening situation in Kashmir warned Pakistan of serious consequences if things do not improve. He further added that “if Pakistan wants to improve ties with the neighbours, it should join hands in the efforts to keep peace and refrain from violence” and therefore desired that some active response should come from Pakistan if it wanted to improve ties. Mr. Sattar however, after his meeting said that his mission had been successful and described his meeting as “inspiring”. Mr. Sattar also clarified that the situation in Kashmir and Punjab figured in his talks with the Indian Foreign Minister Inder Kumar Gujral. Giving an indication of Ms. Bhutto’s message delivered to the Indian Prime Minister Mr. Sattar said “it was one of Question: Was the situation in Punjab discussed?

Spokesman: Punjab did not come up during discussions.

Question: Prime Minister Bhutto was to come here last year in her capacity as Chairperson of SAARC. Was there any discussion about her visit?

Spokesman: Both sides agreed that a greater contacts and a high-level dialogue between the two countries should be maintained.

goodwill, expressing a very sincere desire for development of better and good neighbourly relations”. Earlier on arrival in New Delhi, Mr. Sattar had in a statement said that “the government and the people of Pakistan respect Raja Sahib (V.P. Singh) for his inspiring leadership,” and added “we sincerely believe that his approach of friendship … not arm-twisting or bullying towards neighbours will provide a sound basis for a qualitative new atmosphere in South Asia conducive to the strengthening of mutual trust and confidence and genuine good-neighbourly relations.” The spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs said on January 11 after Sattar’s talks with External Affairs Minister that agreement had been reached during the talks that the two countries should start series of confidence-building dialogues between senior officials to remove bilateral tensions. Such meetings would pave the way for a full meeting of the India-Pakistan Joint Ministerial Commission to accelerate the process of normalization. On return from New Delhi Mr Sattar told the media in Karachi that contrary to press reports Mr. Singh had not issued any threat on the situation in Kashmir. Praising VP Singh as an enlightened and seasoned leader, he said he told him that his approach was based on friendship and not on conflict and there was no question of any conflict. A Spokesman of the Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi said that Kashmir where ‘Muslim militants are campaigning violently for a plebiscite, was an important topic at the talks’. He added that while India expressed concern at the escalating violence and was told that Islamabad saw the problem as essentially rooted in the situation on the Indian side of the frontier, he added “we feel that India’s concern on Kashmir does not dilute the message that our desire for good neighbourly relations was reciprocated in full measure”. The Pakistan High Commission spokesman added Mr. Sattar’s discussions with Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh, Foreign Minister Inder K. Gujral and Foreign Secretary S. K. Singh were “extremely useful, positive and constructive. We could not have hoped for anything better”. But he added he had one gripe—Indian newspapers had projected a negative picture of the talks by laying emphasis on New Delhi’s concern over Kashmir, causing tremendous dichotomy between fact and fiction.
1238. Media briefing by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office on the situation in Kashmir.

Islamabad, January 14, 1990.

The foreign office spokesman said in Islamabad on January 14 that Pakistan was deeply concerned over the fast deteriorating situation in Kashmir and increasing use of force against the people who were agitating against the denial of their basic rights, including the right of self-determination.

Briefing newsmen on the results of the just concluded visit to India by Mr. Abdul Sattar, Prime Minister Bhutto's special envoy to India, the spokesman described the visit as highly successful which he hoped would lead to a meeting between the Prime Ministers of Pakistan and India.

The spokesman said being a party to the Kashmir dispute, Pakistan was deeply concerned over the situation in Kashmir which, he said, was fraught with danger. Denying any Pakistani hand in the prevailing situation in the state, he said it was an indigenous protest and was not being instigated from the Pakistani soil.

The Line of Actual Control in Kashmir, he said, was a heavily guarded border, as such there was no question of any infiltration from across the border. But even if in the presence of a number of Indian army divisions on the border some individuals were able to cross the border, Pakistan could not be held responsible for that.

Asked if the situation further aggravates in Kashmir and leads to a massive exodus of people like from Afghanistan what would be the reaction of the Pakistan government, the spokesman said Pakistan was very much a party to the dispute and as such all aspects of the situation were under review.

In his statement, the spokesman expressed the hope that the Prime Ministers of Pakistan and India would meet to establish personal contacts leading to further improvement in bilateral relations. He, however, said such a meeting was still at a conceptual stage and proper modalities for it have to be worked out. He said though both the Prime Ministers were looking forward to establish personal contacts, no specific timeframe has been worked out so far.

Mr. Sattar, he said, met Mr. V.P. Singh and Foreign Minister I.K. Gujral in Delhi and delivered a personal message of Ms Bhutto to Mr. Singh. The spokesman conceded that the situation in Kashmir was also focused in Mr. Sattar's meeting in Delhi but regretted that the issue was blown out of proportion by Indian newspapers.
Mr. Sattar, he said had presented a written report of his visit to Ms Bhutto on January 13 before he left for Moscow. Asked about the contents of Ms Bhutto’s message to Mr. Singh, the spokesman said it was a message of goodwill.

Mr. Sattar’s mission, he said, was limited. Mr. V.P. Singh, he said, warmly reciprocated the message and expressed his desire to build an atmosphere of trust between the two countries. Mr. Singh shared the desire of Ms Bhutto for the promotion of good-neighbourly relations between the two nations.

Mr. Singh also made it clear that his government did not believe in bullying its neighbours. It was only through friendly cooperation that the two countries could win over each other’s respect.

Mr. Singh, the spokesman said, also indicated that he was looking forward to personal contact with Ms Bhutto.

“We have no intention of pumping arms into Kashmir,” the spokesman told a correspondent. He said: “such a line of thinking is tendentious.”

He said Pakistan is “absolutely certain that no hostile activities have taken place on the Line of Actual Control.” “Whatever is happening in Kashmir is internally based and indigenous,” he added.

He said the governing document on Jammu and Kashmir ‘is the Simla Agreement which lays down that neither side will try to change the situation in the territory, except through peaceful means’.

Asked whether the two countries will like to send more troops to the Line of Actual Control to make it “less porous,” the spokesman said: “We are prepared to discuss any issue under the sky, but such a situation does not exist in Kashmir.”

New Delhi, January 15, 1990.

It was with regret that we saw the Pakistan official Spokesman’s statement on Jammu and Kashmir, made on 14th January. We view this statement as wanton, unwarranted and unacceptable interference in our internal affairs. Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India and the only issue that remains to be resolved is vacation of those areas of the State which are illegally occupied by Pakistan.

2. Pakistan’s claim of concern about the situation in J&K is gratuitous and hollow. Their Official Spokesman’s remarks regarding self-determination are a travesty of facts. The people of Jammu and Kashmir as indeed the people of the rest of India have, on several occasions, exercised their political rights through free and fair elections. The Pakistan Spokesman’s claim that there is no hostile activity across the line of control does not stand scrutiny. There is overwhelming evidence of terrorists receiving support from Pakistan. Leaders of the so-called JKLF are routinely being allowed to make statements, even direct threats, against India from Pakistani soil. Vicious propaganda is being disseminated by Pakistan’s official, electronic media.

3. Despite repeated provocations, India has refrained from commenting on the law and order problems in various parts of Pakistan.

4. It is our hope that Pakistan will exercise similar restraint* and desist from giving encouragement to terrorism directed against India. Such action violates bilateral, regional and international obligations, including the terms of the Simla Agreement, and it is not conducive to peace and stability in the region.

* The Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman commenting on the above statement of India said on January 16 that it was ‘unfortunate the Indian Foreign Office, while commenting on the Pakistan Foreign Office statement of January 14 had completely ignored the positive framework in which reference to India-Pakistan relations was made, particularly the unambiguous emphasis on the provisions of the Simla Agreement’. He reiterated that J & K was a disputed territory whose final settlement was outstanding. He reaffirmed that pending the settlement of the Kashmir dispute Pakistan fully respected the Line of Actual Control. He expressed the hope that India will not try to shift the blame to Pakistan for its problems in Kashmir which are completely indigenous and have resulted from the denial of the right of self-determination to the people of Kashmir.
1240. Interview of the Indian External Affairs Minister Inder Kumar Gujral with the Pakistan daily Dawn.

[The Interview took place in Male where Mr. Gujral was on official tour and was published in the Dawn on January 18, 1990]

Question: Minister, you were born in Jhelum, studied in Lahore and lived and worked in Karachi. In fact, your father was a member of the first Pakistan Constituent Assembly in 1947-48. How important a factor is your personal association with this region in your policy initiatives regarding Pakistan?

Answer: A very rewarding experience was when my wife and I visited Pakistan in 1982. We travelled for three months from Karachi to Peshawar, and everywhere we were received with warmth and friendliness. Some incidents have left an indelible impression on my memory. When we went to Jhelum, the whole town came out to receive us. It was a very touching experience. And throughout our travels we had similar heart-warming experiences. So, therefore, when you ask me what I feel toward Pakistan, my policy is basically that the division of India is a political reality. India’s basic national interest is that Pakistan’s integrity and sovereignty must be sustained. And believe me, this subcontinent must live in harmony and friendship.

I particularly want to emphasize the fact that the world situation has undergone a sea change. If all the adversaries of yesterday (if they) can forgive and forget the past, there is no reason why we cannot do it. In that lies the interest of us all.

My main objective, you could say my mission in life, is to help in creating cooperation and friendship between the two countries. And in our government the political will is there too. In our party manifesto in the foreign policy sector, we have spelt out very clearly that the highest priority would be assigned to the creation of friendly, cooperative relations with all our neighbouring countries. And the people have voted for it.

Q: In what ways will your government’s position differ from that of the previous administration with respect to the current bones of contention between the countries, e.g., Kashmir, Siachen, Wullar Barrage?

A: I’m not commenting on the past that leads to nothing; I look to the future. I think you will see the difference in terms of the style, the commitment, the wish and the desire for friendship which represents the will of the people of India. There is no problem which cannot be sorted out by talks and negotiations and discussions based on the presumption that there should be peace and understanding between the two countries.
Q: In both countries there is a tendency to blame a foreign hand in domestic disturbances. Do you believe that Pakistan is involved in the Punjab and Kashmiri troubles?

A: I say this with great sadness—yes. Some hawkish groups think the pinpricks can solve problems. You yourself mentioned. Kashmir and Punjab, Indian unity, Indian statehood, Indian strength cannot be disturbed by pinpricks—it only harms our relations. There are no other barriers to our friendship. The barriers are created by those who want to sometimes externalize the internal crises by embarrassing the people and the powers in Pakistan who want to create an area of friendship.

But everything is possible given an era of friendship and cooperation. There is nothing that cannot be done. Travel can be made freer. Newspapers and books can be exchanged. Visas should be abolished. I’m prepared to take every unilateral decision in this regard provided the pinpricks—and here I’m referring to encouraging terrorism—stop.

Q: What is your government’s position on nuclear proliferation in the subcontinent?

A: Nuclear arms are outmoded things. Those who had it are now giving it up, and it is foolishness on the part of any policy maker in any country today to think that we should go on making it when others are giving it up. Neither of the economies of India or Pakistan has the capacity or the inbuilt structure to bear such massive expenditures. India is committed, and I’m equally committed, more firmly than ever before, that we shall never make a bomb unless we have no option—I mean that we will not be the first.

Q: The Rajiv administration had succeeded in establishing quite a rapport with the Benazir government so that the prospects for closer friendship between the two nations had looked brighter than ever before. Do you believe your administration can achieve a similar degree of understanding?

A: In India, Benazir is a highly respected personality. I’m glad she didn’t contest the elections from Delhi because she would have won. We all feel reverence and respect for what she symbolizes: the democratic urge of the Pakistani people. Therefore, I’m certain with her being in power there are better prospects for Indo-Pak relations. I think our government’s rapport with her will be far better because of our commitment to friendship. Secondly, relations between countries are never static; they either move backward or forward. I’m committed to taking them forward.

Q: What about the hawks in India?
A: In democracy, the test is in the election. What have the people voted for? The people have overwhelmingly voted for friendship, not for reactionary forces and narrow minds. All the parties that are supporting us are of the same view. We know tensions are expensive. We know tensions take us nowhere.

I’m reminded of when Mr. Yaqub Khan and I were colleagues in Moscow when I was Ambassador there (1976-1980). He made a very remarkable observation. He said: “when I go back I’m going to tell my people: We have quarreled for 40 years, let us try peace for 40 years”… What have we earned in 40 years? How has it helped Pakistan? How has it helped India? What have we done for our people? Therefore, I say, let us give peace a chance. And I’m sure both the peoples want it. That was my observation during my travels in Pakistan. And I’m sure all the Pakistani friends who’ve travelled in India have made a similar observation. People in India and Pakistan are overwhelmingly in favour of peaceful relations.

Let us remove the barriers of travel, of the media, of intellectual interaction. Let us meet each other. Let us realize how much we have in common and I think commonality can help us become very strong. Therefore, let us shake hands with confidence and faith.

New Delhi, January 22, 1990.

The Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yakub Khan had discussions this morning starting from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. He first met the External Affairs Minister, Shri I.K. Gujral. He then led rest of his delegation in discussions with the External Affairs Minister and his delegation. Accompanying the Pakistan Foreign Minister were Mr. Bashir Babbar, Pakistan High Commissioner in India; Mr. Khalid Mahmood, Additional Secretary; Haji Raza Ali, Director General, Foreign Minister’s Office; Mr. Shafaqat Kakakhel, Pakistan Deputy High Commissioner in India and Mr. Zamir Akram from Pakistan High Commission. On the Indian side, were Shri S. K. Singh, Foreign Secretary; Shri J. N. Dixit, Indian High Commissioner in Pakistan; Shri Naresh Dayal, Joint Secretary (IPA); Smt. Lila Ponappa, Joint Secretary (SAARC); and Shri Arun Singh, Deputy Secretary (Pak).
The delegation-level meeting was followed by a meeting with the Prime Minister. Those who assisted from the Indian side were the Foreign Secretary, Indian High Commissioner in Islamabad, Joint Secretary (IPA), and Shri Ronen Sen, Joint Secretary (PMO). On the Pakistan side those assisting the Pakistan Foreign Minister were Mr. Khalid Mahmood, Additional Secretary and Mr. Bashir Babbar, High Commissioner.

One-to-one meeting with External Affairs Minister lasted for a little over one-and-half hours and the delegation-level talks lasted just under an hour. The call on the Prime Minister was for half an hour.

During these various meetings, the entire gamut of Indo-Pakistan relations came up for discussions. The Pakistan Foreign Minister also briefed the Indian side about the consultations he has been having with other SAARC countries on the question of the next summit meeting. The discussions will continue tomorrow.

Question: Were the talks friendly?

Spokesman: The talks were friendly and cordial.

Question: What are your comments on press reports on Benazir Bhutto’s statement on J&K?

Spokesman: When their Foreign Minister is in town and the whole range of Indo Pakistan issues in under discussion, it will not be proper for me to comment on such reports while discussions are under way.

Question: In which capacity has Yakub Khan come?

Spokesman: He has come here in two capacities—Foreign Minister of Pakistan and representatives of the Chairperson of SAARC.
1242. Press release issued by the Official Spokesperson in the Ministry of External Affairs on the Pakistan Foreign Minister’s visit to India.

New Delhi, January 23, 1990.

Sahabzada Yakub Khan, the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, visited India from the 21st to 23rd January, as the Special Envoy of Prime Minister of Pakistan, in her capacity as Chairperson of SAARC. He had two rounds of discussions with Shri Inder Kumar Gujral, External Affairs Minister, on January 22nd. The Pakistan Foreign Minister called on the Indian Prime Minister, Shri V.P. Singh, on January 22nd. There were also brief discussions with External Affairs Minister and the Indian delegation today, 23.1.1990. Mr. Yakub Khan, informed the External Affairs Minister about his discussions in the Maldives and Sri Lanka, about the dates and the venue of the 5th SAARC Summit. It was agreed that the two governments would remain in touch with each other following further consultations, which Pakistan would be holding with the other SAARC member countries on the subject of the Summit and related meetings.

The opportunity of the visit was also utilized to have comprehensive review of bilateral relations. Our concern at the evidence of Pakistan’s involvement in terrorist activities directed against India, in Jammu and Kashmir was suitably conveyed. It was reiterated that Jammu & Kashmir is an integral part of India, and any interference in our internal affairs would be unacceptable. The Simla Agreement, which is the bedrock of relations between the two countries expressly forbids the organization, assistance or encouragement of any acts detrimental to the maintenance of peaceful and harmonious relations.

It was agreed that discussions would continue at all levels including the Defence, Home and Water Resources Secretaries to tackle pending problems. An early meeting of the Secretaries of Water Resources would be convened. The India-Pakistan Joint Commission would also meet in the first half of this year after the four constituent special commissions have met to review progress since the last meeting in July 1989. Bilateral talks would also take place at the end of this month regarding the issue of captured fishermen and fishing vessels.

Pakistan was requested to intensify its search for missing Indian Defence personnel believed to be in its custody.

The Surveyors General of the two countries would also meet to resume discussions regarding the boundary in the Sir Creek area and maritime boundary.
Statement of Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahibzada Yakub Khan delivered on TV/Radio on the situation in Kashmir.

Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan has declared that Pakistan “cannot forsake its principled stand on Kashmir” and would never compromise on the basic rights of Kashmiris, particularly their right to self-determination.

Giving a policy statement on the uprising in Jammu and Kashmir over radio and TV on the night of January 30, he said Pakistan would never accept pressure or threats coming from any quarter in this context. He hoped that the Kashmir issue would be amicably resolved through negotiations and that Pakistan would concentrate on this direction in the best interest of peace in the region.

It was imperative for all the neighbouring countries to maintain peace and tranquility so that “our respective nations could continue marching towards socio-economic uplift and all round development”, he added.

Sahabzada Yaqub Khan reiterated that Jammu and Kashmir is disputed. It is an outstanding issue which is to be resolved through plebiscite under UN supervision and in accordance with Security Council resolutions.

He refuted the allegations leveled by the Indian government and its media about involvement of Pakistan in the internal affairs of India by helping the Kashmiris.

The Foreign Minister said the Cabinet meeting held on January 30 considered the Kashmir situation and Parliament would soon deliberate on the issue, while on diplomatic levels Pakistan has informed its embassies about the deteriorating situation in Kashmir. They have been directed to apprise the respective host countries of the correct perspective and facts of the issue, and to categorically refute the baseless allegation being leveled by India. Meanwhile, the ambassadors, stationed at Islamabad, had been informed of the latest situation in the state, he added.

Sahabzada Yaqub said that the recent developments in Kashmir have aroused a wave of deep resentment and anguish all over Pakistan and the struggle of the Kashmiri people has assumed a new direction with a fundamental change. Freedom fighters there have offered sacrifices of their lives by staging civil disobedience and strikes to prove to India and the rest of the world that “Kashmiri people could not be deprived of their basic right of self-determination by resorting to subjugation and perpetration of repressive policies”.

The Foreign Minister said that the Indian government has tried to suppress the movement through atrocities which resulted in death of hundreds of Kashmiris and injuries to many more. Besides, thousands are being put behind bars.
However, resort to these repressive measures has resulted in an increase in the intensity and spirit of the Kashmiris to continue their struggle for plebiscite. The situation reached such a stage that Dr. Farooq Abdullah was forced to resign as Chief Minister and Governor’s rule was imposed in the state. To quell the popular freedom movement, the Indian armed forces were called in and curfew remains imposed in many areas, he added.

He said the Indian government, in a bid to hide the actual reasons for the freedom movement, was leveling baseless allegations of Pakistani involvement in the matter. And in a bid to distract the world’s attention from its armed action in Kashmir, it had started a campaign of baseless allegations against Pakistan through its diplomatic channels. In the same context, the world is being given the impression that Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India and that Pakistan is interfering in its internal affairs. Indian newspapers, radio and television have unleashed the same propaganda, he added.

He said that the Indian attitude in this behalf and accusations against Pakistan, are in conflict with the realities. This peculiar situation warranted that Pakistan once again elaborate its clear cut policy on the issue.

The Foreign Minister said that during his recent visit to India and at meetings with the Indian leaders he had made it clear that Jammu and Kashmir was a disputed area and a resolution of the problem was possible only through holding of a plebiscite under UN supervision in the light of the resolutions adopted by the Security Council. He had very clearly stated that the freedom movement in Kashmir portrayed the natural urge of the people there and it had erupted of the domestic circumstances, he added.

He said by leveling wild accusations against Pakistan, the facts could neither be changed nor a befitting solution could be found to the Kashmir problem. He said the only solution of the issue was to accept the Kashmiris basic right of self-determination and grant them the opportunity to determine their own fate.

Sahabzada Ya'qub said while in Delhi, he had stressed the point that Pakistan was a party to the Kashmir dispute and this was also supported by the UN resolutions on the record at the world body as well as the Simla Agreement arrived at during the government of late Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

"It is universally known that the Pakistanis and the Kashmiri people have deep spiritual and cultural affinities and relationship with Pakistan. For these reasons, it is impossible for us not to raise our voice against the repression being repeated against the Kashmiris," he added.

He said he had assured the Indian Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister that Pakistan was committed to the Simla Agreement and had reaffirmed Pakistan's Stand for resolution of the Kashmir dispute through peaceful means. It was the need of the hour that the course of bilateral negotiations should continue so that no wrong decisions were taken merely on the basis of any misconception or apprehensions.

Sahabzada Yaqub said that Pakistan was a peace-loving country. It did not want confrontation with any country. Pakistan's foreign policy had always been based on principles. Pakistan could not forgo its principles and would never bargain over the basic rights of the Kashmiri people, including their right to self-determination. Pakistan would pursue its principled stand and could not be deterred by any pressure tactics or threats, and would continue to support the Kashmiri people on the demand for a plebiscite.

He said the Pakistan government was fully aware of the sensitivity of the situation. "The problems confronting us were very complicated and we have to take decisions very carefully and after a lot of thinking. We would not take any step which could endanger peace in the region. However, it is not only our right but duty to befittingly rebut the baseless accusations and incorrect stand of the Indian government," he added.

Sahabzada Yaqub said during his meetings recently with President Ghulam Ishaq Khan and Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, they had reviewed the latest situation in Kashmir. The Federal cabinet had considered the matter at its meeting on January 29 and very soon Parliament is expected to deliberate on the issue.

He said the people of Pakistan had one stand in respect of the Kashmir issue. They unitedly supported the rights of the people of Jammu and Kashmir. It was a matter of principle transcending political considerations. It was necessary not only to maintain but also consolidate this unity, he added.

The Foreign Minister expressed confidence that the Pakistan government would continue to get the fullest support from all quarters in the country in the matter, so that it could continue its endeavour to find a befitting solution through commitment and confidence. He hoped that, God willing, "our efforts would not go waste."

Pakistan, he said, was passing through a critical juncture of its history which had put a heavy responsibility on its shoulders. "We would, Inshallah, accomplish our responsibilities in accordance with the aspirations of the people and with their fullest cooperation. We will have to exercise restraint, sobriety, farsightedness and dignity in our conduct while performing our duty. The present difficulties are short-lived and the nation will come out successful because our stand is based on principles and we are following a sagacious policy," he added.
1244. Remarks by Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto on Kashmir.

Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto reiterated on February 10 Pakistan's principled position on the Jammu and Kashmir dispute and said that the present upheaval in Kashmir was the natural consequence of the persistent Indian repression over the last 42 years.

Initiating the debate on the evolving situation in Kashmir, in the joint sitting of Parliament, she regretted Indian attempts to externalize the Kashmiris struggle for independence, and repudiated Indian charges of Pakistan's involvement in the developments in Kashmir. She said it was the Kashmiris’ will for independence. It was the fire smouldering for the last 42 years inside Kashmir. It was a revolution which had been passed on from one generation to the other.

1245. Statement by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs at the summoning of the Pakistan High Commissioner to the Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, February 12, 1990.

The Foreign Secretary summoned the Pakistan High Commissioner just before midnight on the 11th of February, to convey Government of India’s concern about the attempted border crossing which had taken place in Uri earlier in the evening. The Foreign Secretary told the High Commissioner that ever since the Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yakub Khan’s visit in January, we have been cautioning Pakistan about the dangers inherent in inciting people and in inflaming passions. The Foreign Secretary drew the High Commissioner’s attention to the seriousness with which we viewed this emerging pattern of incitement followed by rash and dangerous action on the border. The High Commissioner was told that this can serve no useful purpose. The provocative action which took place in the Uri sector yesterday was yet another example of the ease with which passions could be inflamed and the difficulty that is faced in quenching such passions. The Foreign Secretary also drew the attention of the High Commissioner to the regrettable proclivity to exaggerate, which we have observed in the reports emanating from Pakistan, and also the strong element of inaccuracy in such reports.
The High Commissioner was asked by the Foreign Secretary to convey to the Government of Pakistan our deep concern at the continuing attempts to cross our borders and to remind them of India's oft-repeated urging to adhere to the path of peace as enshrined in the Simla Agreement.

The High Commissioner of Pakistan was summoned again by the Foreign Secretary to his office this morning to convey that while very credible evidence of Pakistan's intervention had been given to the Pakistan authorities, we observed that even at the highest level there was insistence that no such evidence had been made available to them. In view of the fact that the same baseless allegations of absence of proof are being made, we have decided to give updated detailed documentary evidence of Pakistani interference in both Jammu and Kashmir and Punjab.

The following are the details of weapons of Pakistani origin, recovered in Punjab in 1989:

- Rocket Launchers : 28
- Rockets and missiles : 229
- AK-47 rifles : 276
- Rifles : 83
- Guns, double-barrelled (SBBL) : 184
- Pistols : 469
- Revolvers : 160
- Hand-grenades : 300
- Bombs : 103
- Detonators : 55
- Explosive Materials : 100Kgs
- Cartridges : 67331

Question: Has this information been made available to Pakistan?

Spokesman: Yes

Question: On what basis can it be presumed that these weapons have come from Pakistan?

Spokesman: We have sufficient evidence to say that they have come from Pakistan. If you read the documentary evidence that I have given out, you will see that it is quite clear where these weapons have come from.

1246. Media briefing by Pakistani Foreign Secretary Tanvir Ahmad Khan on Kashmir.

Pakistan is keeping all options open to settle the Jammu and Kashmir dispute through negotiations, but it also hopes that the situation will not unnecessarily heat up, observed the Pakistani Foreign Secretary. Addressing newsmen in Islamabad on February 15, Foreign Secretary Dr. Tanvir Ahmad Khan said the government had to decide through deliberation whether to take up the issue under the United Nations resolutions or the Simla Agreement.

“We are keeping all options open. We are daily reviewing the Kashmir situation. We hope the situation will not unnecessarily heat up because it will be incongruous to start fighting over the dispute. At a time when a number of countries are settling their age-old disputes through negotiations, it will be incongruous for India and Pakistan to start fighting over Kashmir,” he added.

Asked whether the Indian army was on a high alert, the Foreign Secretary said given the situation created by the freedom fighters in Jammu and Kashmir, “it must be”.

Asked how far away India and Pakistan are from a war, he said: “Frankly, I don’t see a war scenario at all. But the Indian threat is being continuously examined. We don’t want to escalate the situation by adopting the same language as India is using. But we keep our eyes and ears open. We know how to defend ourselves.

Dr. Khan, who devoted a considerable part of the news conference reading from a 26-page ‘dossier’ alleging Pakistan’s involvement in aiding the Kashmiri freedom-fighters, said the dossier was handed over to Mr. Bashir Khan Babar, Pakistan’s High Commissioner at New Delhi, on February 13 and violating all diplomatic norms, India immediately released its major parts to the Indian press. He would seek the permission of the Government of Pakistan to release to the press the entire dossier. Its reading would itself contradict all Indian allegations. “Its contents are preposterous, ridiculous and groundless”, he added.

Dr. Khan said: We reject these groundless allegations completely, entirely and thoroughly. It is a tissue of lies and its reading will amuse its readers.”

Asked whether there was anything in the dossier embarrassing for Pakistan: “Not a word”, he said.

Asked whether India and Pakistan have evolved an early warning system to prevent incidents like those which occurred at Suchetagarh, near Sialkot, and at Chikothi, in Azad Kashmir, leading to death and injuries of innocent civilians, the Foreign Secretary said: “Our policy certainly is not to encourage crossing of the Line of Actual Control in Kashmir.”

He said the people on both sides of Jammu and Kashmir felt greatly tormented because “a large-scale and unceasing repression of the Muslims is going on in Kashmir. “We will continue to prevent people from crossing the control line but no one wants to go into the jaws of death, except when one’s kith and kin are being killed on the other side”, he said and added that there were fairly detailed rules to maintain peace over the control line.

Dr. Khan said Pakistan had also sent to New Delhi numerous proposals to promote peace and avoid misunderstanding. In this connection, he also referred to Islamabad’s proposals sent to New Delhi during the winter of 1986-87 when India was planning to stage ‘Operation Brass tacks’. The key proposal was that both countries send information in advance to each other at the time of troop movements in any significant number. India had not responded to it, he added.

He said the civil and army authorities tried their utmost to prevent protestors from crossing the control line near Chikothi on February 10 but about 30 to 50 young men did do it. He said Indian Foreign Secretary S. K. Singh confirmed to him that the Indian troops fired two sten-gun bursts at the protestors, which led to the death and the injuries.

“Someone on the Indian side panicked; otherwise the incident could have ended peacefully. The protestors were not carrying weapons. Holding placards, they had their hands up in the air. The Indians could have arrested them and the matter would have ended peacefully," he added.

The Foreign Secretary confirmed the original spirit of the UN resolutions was to permit movement of the people of Jammu and Kashmir on both sides of the control line because families were divided across the line. “We are doing our best to keep emotions in check but when repression and terrors is being perpetrated on kith and kin in Kashmir, the people naturally do get emotional.
They do get carried away”, he said.

He said the government of Azad Kashmir and the troops would persuade people in future not to cross the control lines in order to prevent violence as it happened recently.

He said Mr. Singh had confirmed that India had no bodies of the people killed in the Chikothi incident nor it had anyone under detention. The Indian High Commission in Islamabad had also issued a Press statement on February 14 to this effect. The statement was conveyed to the Foreign Office before it was released to the Press.

He said India was controlling Kashmir with the help of army, border security forces, special police reserves and the regular police. At least 24 cities and towns were under curfew on February 11 and the house-to-house searches were being held. People were being arrested. Many of them were being tortured in torture cells. A number of them were dying of this torture. The number of deaths in Kashmir in recent weeks ranged from 289 to 1,500, he added.

Dr. Khan said shooting of people fleeing East Germany had stopped and the Berlin Wall had fallen apart. But shooting was continuing at the control line in Jammu and Kashmir.

New Delhi, February 23, 1990.

India has told Pakistan that a purposeful and helpful dialogue on the Kashmir issue was possible only if it desisted from blatant interference and refrained from vitiating the atmosphere.

In a statement in response to Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto’s remarks at a Press conference at Islamabad earlier in the week, the official spokesman said: “It is imperative that a proper climate be created in which meaningful discussions can be held.”

The spokesman said India remained committed to resorting dialogue with Pakistan “so that we can build a friendly and co-operative relationship with this important neighbor.”
[Ms. Bhutto had indicated that Pakistan was prepared for a dialogue to resolve the question of Jammu and Kashmir on the basis of the Simla Agreement.]

The spokesman said that “New Delhi had always believed that all differences between India and Pakistan can and should be settled peacefully through bilateral discussion in accordance with the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement.”

He said Pakistan had “unfortunately been showing diminishing commitment to this while stepping up support to terrorism and intervention in our internal affairs.” “Regrettably we continue to hear different voices from Pakistan”, he added.

He said India had noticed Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan’s statement in which he had said Islamabad was keeping “all options open.”

Islamabad, April 11, 1990.

Pakistan deeply regretted on April 11 another threat of war by India at a time when Pakistan is seeking a peaceful settlement of the Kashmir problem.

The Foreign Office spokesman expressed “deep regret and disappointment” over “yet another threat of war by the top leadership of India. He said this when asked to comment on a statement* by Indian Prime Minister V.P. Singh, who threatened Pakistan with war while speaking in the Lok Sabha on April 10.

* The Indian Prime Minister VP Singh had warned Pakistan on April 10 that if it forced a conflict on India “we are not going to stop till we have achieved our objectives” and that “we have the capability to inflict a very heavy cost on Pakistan for its territorial goals against India”. He said this while intervening in the debate on Defence Ministry’s budget in the Lok Sabha. Criticizing Ms. Bhutto talk of a thousand-year war for Kashmir he said Pakistan had to see whether it could fight for even 1000 hours. Regarding Pakistan’s nuclear programme, Prime Minister Singh said Pakistan possessed a near-nuclear capability and in case it went nuclear, “we will have to take a second look at our policy. I think we will have no option but to match it. Our scientists have the capability to match it”. He said his perception was that Pakistan’s strategy was to avoid an armed conflict with India, yet to continue to foment insurgency inside the country and if that worked out then that was the best option. He unequivocally told Pakistan “you cannot get away with that. You will have to pay a heavy cost. We have the capability to inflict that cost.”
The spokesman said: “It is unfortunate that Pakistani statements urging a peaceful solution of the Kashmir problem have brought such bellicose responses from the Indian government as can only add to tension between the two countries and thus cause deep apprehensions in a region of the world where one-fifth of mankind lives.”

“After maintaining for years that the Simla Agreement provides the framework of Indo-Pak relations and that this agreement is virtually tantamount to a no-war pact between the two countries, the Indian leaders now repeatedly hold out threats of imposing a destructive war on Pakistan,” he added.

The spokesman said the Indian statements, including the one delivered by Mr. Singh on April 10, are “an index of the mounting desperation of the Indian government in dealing with the situation in Kashmir.” A major source of this desperation is India’s manifest failure to convince the world that the struggle of the people of Kashmir was in any way related to external factors. They have proved through massive demonstrations that the uprising is entirely indigenous and is a total rejection of India, which has denied their right to self-determination for over four decades.

The Indian government has been further unnerved by disclosures by Indian journalists and other men of conscience in India, such as the members of the Committee for Initiative on Kashmir, of terrible atrocities committed by the Indian security forces on Kashmiris. The Indian government knows that it has lost all moral claim to the loyalty of the people of Kashmir, he added.

The spokesman categorically rejected the allegation that Pakistan was in any way fomenting insurgency in any part of India or in the disputed territory of Kashmir, the future of which has to be decided according to the UN resolutions and the Simla Agreement as pledged to the people of that territory by both India and Pakistan. The need of the hour was for the government of India to come forward and honour this pledge.

He also reaffirmed Pakistan’s adherence to its policy to work for a durable and honourable peace with India. This policy included the search for a peaceful solution of the Kashmir dispute. It was nothing short of a tragedy that at a time when the entire world was moving towards a new era of peace and prosperity, India was still threatening to plunge South Asia into a conflict which can only bring untold sufferings to the peoples of this region, he added.
1249. Statement issued at the end of the meeting between the Foreign Ministers of India and Pakistan.

The Foreign Ministers of Pakistan and India agreed on April 25 to reduce tension and avoid confrontation between the two countries at a two-hour meeting that centered on the deteriorating situation in Kashmir.

A statement, issued after “frank, business like and useful” talks at New York said that for this purpose senior military officials of the two countries should remain in touch with each other. “Both sides should exercise restraint and channels of communications should be widened,” said the statement read out to a battery of reporters and televisions crews.

Elaborating, Foreign Minister Sahabazada Yaqub Khan said the main objective was to seek a peaceful settlement of the Kashmir dispute and avoid confrontation and “this thought pervaded our meeting.”

He said each side stated its well-known position. But he made it clear that Pakistan does not regard Kashmir as an integral part of India. “We feel that the people of Kashmir have to exercise their right of self-determination, which is rooted in the UN Security Council resolutions and that the repression in Kashmir should be stopped,” he added.

Mr. Yaqub Khan said that Indian Foreign Minister Gujral repeated the allegations and accusations of interference and intervention which he totally rejected. But the main point that emerged was that despite these two different positions, it was nevertheless important to avoid escalation that might lead to a conflict or confrontation which obviously was not desirable, he said.

Asked when they were likely to meet again, he said that channels of communications would be left open at all levels. No time and date for a fresh meeting has been fixed, which would be worked out through diplomatic channels.

Asked whether the possibility of a conflict between India and Pakistan had been reduced as a result of the meeting, he said: “We hope that tensions would be diminished as a result of the meeting.”

Mr. Yaqub Khan referred to the agreement at the meeting that the Directors-General of Military Operations of India and Pakistan should remain in touch and said the channels of communications be left open.

Mr. Gujral however maintained that Pakistan supported terrorism in Kashmir. “They (the Pakistanis) must do something and be seen as withdrawing their support to terrorism,” he added.
Asked whether the possibility of a conflict between India and Pakistan had been reduced as a result of meeting, he said: “so far as India is concerned, we are ready for peace and we want to avoid a war.”

About UN resolutions for a plebiscite in Kashmir, the Indian Foreign Minister said that those resolutions “died after the Simla Agreement was signed.”

Asked whether the meeting was successful, Mr. Gujral said the talks were useful because he was able to put forward to his Pakistani counterpart “our point of view in details.”

A day earlier on April 24 Indian and Pakistani representatives at the Special Ministerial meeting of the Non-aligned countries in New York had stuck to their different perceptions of the problem of Kashmir. While the Indian representative maintained that Kashmir was an integral part of Indian Union and Pakistani demand a dangerous and Pakistan’s attempt to compare the Kashmir issue to that of the struggle of the Palestinian for a homeland and that of the South African majority’s against apartheid as “outrageous”. He charged Pakistan with encouraging, sustaining and training terrorists for Indian Punjab and J & K.
Note from High Commission of India in Pakistan to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Islamabad, May 2, 1990.

High Commission of India
G-5 Diplomatic Enclave
Islamabad

No.ISL/162/12/87, 2 May 1990

The High Commission of India presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and with reference to its Note No. Ind /Pl)/190, dated 8.2.1990, the honour to draw attention to the Aide Memoire handed over by the Government of India on 4th June, 1978, as well as the reply through Note verbale No.ISL/108/4/78, dated 15 July 1982, on a similar representation by the Government of Pakistan. It has been stated time and again by the Government of India, including in the communications referred to above, that the Ground Rules of 1960-61 are invalid and inoperative after the events in 1971.

2. The Government of India, however, remains ready to cooperate with the Government of Pakistan in drawing up a framework for dealing with cross-border crimes and trafficking, the smuggling of weapons and the movement of terrorists.

The High Commission of India avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs the assurances of its high consideration.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs,
(Kind Attention: Mr. Shahid Kamal,
Director (India-P)
Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan,
Islamabad.)
Pakistan Prime Minister Ms. Benazir Bhutto’s offer of talks on Kashmir.

Islamabad, May 2, 1990.

Addressing a joint Press conference with the visiting Japanese Prime Minister, Mr. Toshiki Kaifu, Ms. Benazir Bhutto said Pakistan had always been willing to discuss the Kashmir issue in accordance with the Simla Agreement and in the spirit of the UN resolutions, so that the Kashmir issue could be solved with the wishes of the people of Kashmir and on the basis of the UN resolutions. The process of normalization of relations with India was shadowed by the Kashmir dispute and, therefore, it had to be resolved, she added.

She insisted that the ‘uprising in Kashmir was totally indigenous, popular and without any assistance from Pakistan’. The Kashmir problem was rooted in history and went back to the division of India and the UN resolutions, recognizing the right to self-determination for the people of Kashmir. ‘The current uprising had come up because the people of Kashmir were denied the right to self-determination through an impartial plebiscite’, she added.

Ms. Bhutto said this denial of the right to self-determination had not come from Pakistan; it had come from the Indian side. This had led to the uprising and the consequent tension in relations between India and Pakistan. The winds of freedom were blowing in the world and this had to influence the Kashmiris too, she added.

She drew the attention of the world to reign of terror unleashed in Kashmir against the innocent people, including women and children, and asked India to allow foreigners to visit Kashmir so that they could themselves see what was happening there. Although Lithuania had declared independence, Moscow had not resorted to repression, she added.

* Given the conditional offer of talks New Delhi turned down on May 3 Pakistan’s latest offer of talks over Kashmir, where tension has raised fears of a war, saying Islamabad had imposed conditions already rejected. India’s Foreign Minister I.K. Gujral told Parliament that India was ready for unconditional talks, but not the sort offered by Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto on May 2.

“The difficulty arises due to the conditions which the Pakistani Prime Minister has once again applied to such a dialogue and to Pakistan’s continued support for subversion and terrorism in Punjab and Jammu and Kashmir,” he said and added: “We always welcome bilateral discussions at all levels to sort outstanding issues between our two countries.” But on Kashmir such talks “must be without any condition,” he added. The Indian Prime Minister VP Singh had told the Japanese Prime Minister Mr. Kaifu during his New Delhi visit that India would respond to any “sincere” Pakistani step to resolve the row by taking to steps of its own.

Mr. Gujral said Ms Bhutto wanted talks about UN resolutions which more than 40 years ago supported a plebiscite to allow Kashmiris to determine their own future and spoke of a “neutral mechanism” to investigate the Indian charges. “Those were the same proposals I had turned down in talks last week with Pakistani Foreign Minister Sahabzada
Commenting on Mr. Singh’s remarks that if Pakistan took one step, India would take two steps for the normalization of relations, she said: “I appreciate this statement and reciprocate it,” and added: “We have put forward some positive proposals, including redeployment of the troops to the peace time locations, evolving a mechanism for verifying allegations and entering into a dialogue in accordance with the Simla Agreement and UN resolutions.”

Yaqub Khan in New York,” he added. He argued that the Simla Agreement of 1972, in which the two countries agreed to settle the Kashmir dispute through negotiation, superseded the UN plebiscite resolutions. Ms. Bhutto again said in Islamabad on May 3 that she is prepared to meet Mr. Singh at any time to enter into a dialogue on the Kashmir dispute.

Meanwhile, Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said that the spate of terrorism in Kashmir was attracting increased attention and concern of the comity of nations, and the principled stand of Pakistan vis-à-vis the Kashmiris’, right of self-determination was being rightly appreciated and supported the world over. Referring to his meeting with his Indian counterpart in New York, he said: “I had a comprehensive meeting with Mr. Gujral, with whom I discussed the situation in Kashmir and Indo-Pak relations. We discussed ways and means to defuse tensions that have regrettably marred the relations between the two countries in recent weeks”. He said an agreed statement was issued after his meeting with Mr. Gujral, underlying the need for defusing tensions and outlining steps to be taken in that direction. In his post-meeting Press conference, Mr. Gujral, however, repeated the false accusations against Pakistan, he added. Mr. Yaqub Khan said that during his stay in New York, he availed the opportunity of the presence of a large numbers of foreign ministers from Islamic and other countries and the UN Secretary-General and briefed them comprehensively on the situation in the region, particularly the indigenous uprising of the people of Jammu and Kashmir to demand their right to self-determination, the Indian repression in the valley and the resultant tensions in Pakistan-India relations. Following the meetings, he addressed a Press conference which provided an opportunity for an in depth question-and-answer session on Kashmir and the regional situation with journalists. He said during his visit to Washington, he met Vice-President Dan Quayle, Secretary of State Baker and National Security Adviser-Gen. Snowcraft, and held detailed exchange of views with them on the present strains in Pakistan’s relations with India, with special focus on the situation in Kashmir. About his address to the non-aligned ministerial meeting, he said he highlighted the fact that the recent developments in the world constituted a reaffirmation of the role, relevance and validity of the Non-Aligned Movement. “I laid particular emphasis on the fundamental right of people to self-determination and called for the need to redress the situation in Kashmir, South Africa, Palestine, Afghanistan and Kampuchea,” he said. He told a questioner that the specific Security Council resolutions on Kashmir were intact and valid and non-implementation of them did not invalidate them in any manner whatsoever.
1252. Proposal for talks between India and Pakistan at Foreign Secretary level.

Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto said in Islamabad that the forthcoming meeting between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan was a positive development in efforts to reduce tension though one should not expect miracles in the first exchanges. Talking to newsmen at Ormara on June 28 after inaugurating the airport there, she said differences existed between the two countries on various issues but it was important that these be resolved through a dialogue*. The fact that India had accepted Pakistan’s invitation for talks at the foreign secretaries level showed that the two sides were positive in their approach, and that the answer to problems and differences is that there should be a dialogue over them.

* New Delhi, meanwhile announced on June 28 that the two-day talks in Islamabad would begin on July 18, 1990. Mr. Muchkund Dubey the Indian Foreign Secretary was nominated to lead the Indian delegation. Earlier on June 5 Indian External Affairs Ministry Spokesperson had said: “The Government of India in view of its willingness to carry on a purposeful dialogue agreed to a meeting between the two Foreign Secretaries at the earliest mutually convenient date in the first half of July”. Islamabad had suggested end of June as the possible date for talks. On June 24 the Pakistan Foreign Secretary Tanveer Ahmad Khan had said while date and venue for the talks had not yet been finalized and India had left it to Pakistan to suggest the same. After talking to the Indian Foreign Secretary Mr. Khan said the talks were likely to be in New Delhi during the second week of July. He said while there was no agenda for the talks, the two sides would discuss the present state of India-Pakistan relations. Speaking to the newspaper Nation, Mr. Khan said after the Yaqub – Gujral talks in New York during the extraordinary session of the UN General Assembly, India came out with a package proposal in the last week of May for normalization of relations. But Pakistan told India that its package did not mention central issues of Kashmir and withdrawal of Indian troops from the border. Instead Pakistan sent its own proposals to New Delhi on June 5 which included the suggestion that the Foreign Secretaries meet at an early date to set the process of normalization in motion. A few days back India expressed its willingness to hold talks with Pakistan. Like Pakistan, India has reportedly pointed out that the Pakistani proposals were not comprehensive as according to them the main cause of their concern i. e. Pakistan’s help to Kashmiris had not been mentioned. The talks would perhaps take place on an open agenda.
The Foreign Office spokesman said in Islamabad on July 19, 1990 the two-day talks were “very comprehensive and very candid”.

He said the “greatest progress” was that “we sat together and were able to understand each others position in detail, brushing aside cobwebs”.

The spokesman said Pakistan had made it clear that while it was ready for and had already proposed installation of neutral mechanism to verify Indian allegations, in no case would Pakistan abandon its moral and political support to the right of self-determination of Kashmiris. Pakistan had renewed its proposal for verification arrangement but the Indian side had again responded negatively.

Reiterating denial of the Indian charges, he said Pakistan would welcome any evidence that the Indians might have about the alleged involvement in the indigenous Kashmiri uprising.

Replying to a question, the spokesman said the Indian side did not appear ready as yet to address the substance of the Kashmir problem. “We cannot say they are ready to come to grips with the political factors involved in the Kashmir situation and the heart of the problem which is the aspirations of the Kashmiris.”

He underscored the fact that withdrawal of troops to peacetime locations was the foremost requirement for confidence building. The exercise could be meaningful only if the two countries took steps to prevent eyeball-to-eyeball military confrontation.

“In all sincerity we do not feel that this exercise of confidence-building can go far if the situation on the border is not substantially altered and eased. We regret to say that at least so far at the end of the first round, we have not been able to reach any firm conclusions on redeployment of forces,” he added.

Confirming a substantial withdrawal of Indian troops and armour in the southern sector along the Sindh border, the spokesman said, “we would have been happier” if this process was extended to Kashmir and northern Punjab. It was essential that the confidence building should begin with the withdrawal or at least a substantial draw-down on concentration of forces as was suggested by Washington also. It was agreed to continue discussion on this matter, he added.

He said in addition to essential concerns, the delegations had discussed the seven Indian proposals for promotions of mutual trust and confidence. In the case of some, agreement has been reached paving the way for drawing up texts. The two sides agreed on the need of prior notification of military exercises or troop movements, particularly along the international borders.

The spokesman said it was Pakistan’s assessment that the discussions had reached a point from where they could be taken to the conclusion of a formal agreement. Similarly, there was convergence of views on the proposals regarding air violations and an agreement could now be signed.

Referring to existing procedure of consultations between military commanders, he said “its efficiency should be increased and we should further discuss and adopt measures to make this channel work better.”

About the Indian proposal of joint patrolling on the borders, the spokesman said no conclusions could be reached in this regard, as the idea needed further elaboration, particularly on the scope of patrolling.

* Indian Foreign Secretary Muchkund Dubey while still in Islamabad said on July 19 that he was satisfied with the Indo-Pak talks which concluded in Islamabad earlier in the day. Talking to APP in Islamabad he said: “We mainly discussed. Confidence-building measures”. Describing the talks as ‘useful’ he said there was good beginning towards the improvement of the bilateral relations. Asked if there was any possibility of war between the two countries over Kashmir, Mr. Dubey said, “not at all”, adding war would be the last thing India could think about.

Asked, if the Kashmir issue was discussed, Mr. Dubey said: “Matters of bilateral relations figured at the talks. No particular issue could be singled out in this connection. There was no fixed agenda and both sides discussed all issues of bilateral relations”.

The Indian Foreign Secretary said that he considered the talks as a good beginning towards confidence building. “We have contact for the last six months,” he added. Mr. Dubey described his meeting with President Ghulam Ishaq Khan and Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto as ‘good’. Both the leaders explained their views on issues concerning Indo-Pak relations.

On the same day Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto speaking in Lahore said that Pakistan did not want war with India. Instead, it wanted to resolve the outstanding Kashmir issue through negotiations and in accordance with the international law. But at the same time, she made it clear that if Pakistan was subjected to aggression, the armed forces would repel it with full force. She said both India and Pakistan were equipped with sophisticated weapons, and going to war would not be advisable. Wars were always horrible and solved no problems. Kashmir was the basic cause of tension between Pakistan and India, and Islamabad wanted to resolve this question through peaceful means, and not through military confrontation, she added. Ms. Bhutto told a questioner that Pakistan fully knew the military capability of India and the weapons it could get from the Soviet Union and others sources. Commenting on the proposed visit of the Indian Prime Minister to the Soviet Union, Ms Bhutto said it was good that Mr. Singh was undertaking the visit at a time when changes were taking place there and its (Soviet) republics were declaring independence. The Soviet Union, she pointed out, was not using force against these republics and this way the Indian Premier’s visit would help him see the whole issue in the historical perspective.
The spokesman said Pakistan had also called for implementation of a bilateral or regional nuclear non-proliferation to safeguard the region and South Asia against production and use of nuclear weapons. Such an agreement, he emphasized, would go a long way towards securing the Indian objective in tabling confidence-building measures, he added.

About New Delhi’s proposal for reaffirmation of 1972 Simla Agreement, the spokesman said Pakistan stood for reaffirmation of the agreement in its totality.

Replying to a question about the possibility of upgrading the level of bilateral talks, the spokesman said he had been hopeful before the Islamabad session that the two sides would be able to recommend raising of level to Foreign Ministers. However, he hoped that the two sides would be able to do so at New Delhi.

Cairo, August 4, 1990.

The 19th Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers held in Cairo, Egypt, from 9 – 13 Moharram 1411 (31 July – 4 August, 1990)

Reaffirming the principles and objectives of the Organisation of Islamic Conference which emphasise the common goals and destiny of the peoples of the Islamic Ummah;

Emphasising the purposes and principles of the UN Charter and recalling the UN resolutions relevant to the Jammu and Kashmir issue;

Recalling also that the Simla Agreement signed between the Governments of India and Pakistan calls for a final settlement of Jammu and Kashmir;

* The Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office while welcoming the adoption of the resolution regretted that “one country known to be Iraq opposed inclusion of the Kashmir question in the agenda. This, however invoked aggressive retaliation from Muslim countries representing various shades of opinion.” He said the Saudi delegation delivered a “trend setting” speech for which Pakistan had conveyed special thanks. He believed the adoption of the resolution vindicated the Pakistani position on the issue and proved that the disinformation campaign launched by India portraying dismal chance of OIC support to Kashmiris after being dubbed as “fanatics, terrorists, and fundamentalists” by New Delhi fell on deaf ears.
Calls for a peaceful settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir issue in accordance with the relevant UN resolutions and as agreed upon in the Simla Agreement;

Welcomes the commencement of dialogue between India and Pakistan, encourages further negotiations with a view to resolving their outstanding differences through peaceful means and affirms that a sustained dialogue is essential to address the core of the problems and to remove the basic causes of tension between India and Pakistan;

Calls upon India and Pakistan to redeploy their forces to peace time locations;

Expresses its deep concern at the prevailing tension which threatens peace and security in the region;

Expresses its deep concern at the violation of human rights and violence against the people of Jammu and Kashmir and calls for the respect of their human rights;

Expresses its willingness to send a good offices mission under the Chairman of the Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers with a view to easing the tension between the two countries and to promote a peaceful settlement.

1255. Statement made by Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding Indo – Pak relations.

New Delhi, November 28, 1990.

“The Indian High Commissioner in Islamabad Shri J. N. Dixit, who is currently in Delhi on consultations, had a meeting with Prime Minister Chandra Shekhar today. He reported to the Prime Minister on various issues concerning Indo-Pak relations in the context of the recent meeting between the Indian and Pakistani Prime Ministers at Male during the SAARC Summit and with regard to the forthcoming bilateral meetings which had been decided upon. The Foreign Secretaries will fix the timing for the Joint Commission.”

When questioned about the veracity of reports in today’s papers that some family members of the staff in Indian Missions in Pakistan have been harassed, Spokesperson said, that the report is correct. The matter has been taken up strongly with the Government of Pakistan. The Acting High Commissioner of India in Islamabad Mr. T.C.A. Rangachari met the Pakistan Foreign Secretary Mr. Shahryar Khan on 25th November, when the incident took place and the Pakistan High Commissioner in India was summoned to the Foreign Office on 26th November by Secretary (East), Shri L. L. Mehrotra, since the Foreign Secretary was unwell. Protests have been lodged both at Islamabad and New Delhi.

The Government of Pakistan has been told that the Government of India view such incidents with great seriousness. We also draw attention to the fact that under the Vienna Convention, the host government is obliged to ensure the security and safety of the personnel of diplomatic missions. Such blatant violations of universally accepted norms of behavior towards diplomatic personnel are not conducive to the building or the maintenance of friendly and cooperative relations. These incidents are particularly regrettable, as they have come so soon after the constructive exchange of views between the leaders of the two countries at the SAARC Summit at the Maldives.

The Government of Pakistan has promised to have the matter fully investigated. The Government of India expects that necessary action will be taken to identify the culprits concerned and to punish them and also that due steps will be taken to prevent the recurrence of such incidents in the future*.

* As a cover up to the happenings in Islamabad involving the Indian diplomats, the Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi lodged a strong protest with the Indian External Affairs Ministry on December, 1 against what it described “continued harassment, intimidation and provocation of senior officers of the mission”.

In a protest note to the Indian Ministry of External Affairs, the second in 48 hours, the Pakistan High Commission said: “Such deliberate intimidation has not only obstructed these officers from performing their duties and functions but also threatened them and their families with physical harm”.

In a language reminiscent of the one used by the Indian Spokesperson on November 28, the Pakistan High Commission reminded New Delhi of the requirements of the Vienna Convention on the treatment of diplomatic personnel and their families.

Pakistan alleged that five diplomatic officers of the Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi were subjected to dangerously close car chase, obstruction and indecent and vulgar treatment on November 29 and again on November 30 by Indian plain clothes police in an obviously concerted move to harass, provoke and intimidate them and to disrupt the normal functioning of the High Commission.

A Pakistan High Commission’s Press release said “As, Pakistani diplomats left the office on November 29, their cars were preceded and followed closely by Indian cars with up to eight persons, obstructing their movement and exposing them to danger. The Indian personnel stopped and abused them on the way. After the Pakistani diplomats reached their residences, their Indian pursuers hurled threats, insults and foul abuses at Pakistanis

Pakistan and India have agreed to formally exchange the agreements, already signed and ratified regarding not attacking each other’s nuclear installations, in January. The place for the exchange of agreements will, however, be finalized later. This was stated by the Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India, Mr. Shaharyar Khan and Mr. Muchkund Dubey, while talking to newsmen at Islamabad International Airport on December 20 before the departure of the Indian Foreign Secretary for New Delhi at the conclusion of the four-day visit.

Citing the specific issues on which India and Pakistan have reached an agreement, Mr. Shaharyar Khan said Pakistan and India have also agreed to ask their respective Surveyors-General to meet in early February to discuss the Sir Creek issue (Territorial waters). It is important that Indo-Pak borders should be absolutely clear and well-defined to avoid any kind of misunderstanding, he added.

“We have also agreed to meet towards the end of February next year for the fourth round of talks in New Delhi. A meeting of experts will be held a week before to finalise two agreements regarding advance notice of military exercises by the two sides and the question of the violation of airspace.

Mr. Shaharyar said it has been agreed by the two countries that the army officials of India and Pakistan dealing with operations will contact each other... every week alternately. This agreement is aimed at reducing tension between the two countries.

He said: “We have also agreed during the talks to take up the Wullar Barrage issue soon after the dates are fixed in the context of the Indus Water Treaty which has been a success in resolving differences in the past.”

Responding to a question, he said the talks were held in a frank and friendly atmosphere and “we took our cue from the excellent start made in this regard by the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan at the time of SAARC summit at Male (Maldives). The two sides discussed all the differences on various issues frankly.” He added.

The Pak Foreign Secretary said Pakistan wants to reduce the tension. Nothing can be achieved by the two countries from a “near conflict situation” and sooner it is realized better it would be. He expressed the hope that his visit to New Delhi in February next year for the fourth round of talks will greatly help reduce tension through further fruitful discussion.

The Indian Foreign Secretary Mr. Dubey described the talks “very cordial” and endorsed the viewpoint of Mr. Shaharyar that as they were helped in reaching understanding by the guidelines given to them by the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan from their meeting held at Male.

“We have managed this time to agree on a number of specific agreements which will have many positive implications in the realization of our objectives to reduce tension between the two countries and in normalization of relations.” He added.

Mr. Shaharyar said that Pakistan reiterated its principled commitment for the Kashmir cause and its continued moral and political support to the indigenous Kashmiri uprising for the just cause of right of self-determination. He said Pakistan made it clear that Kashmir was the key issue which needed to be resolved under the UN resolutions. This will usher in a new era of peaceful relations between India and Pakistan, he added.

He said the struggle for the right of self-determination by the Kashmiris was strictly their indigenous matter and Pakistan was not giving any military and material support, whatsoever.

Mr. Shaharyar termed his talks “frank and friendly”. There were some disagreements as well, but “we were also a step forward and a step away from the hostilities”. “The area of disagreement was Kashmir. However, it is a positive progress that we discussed the issue in the spirit of the environment created after the two prime ministers met at Male”, he said.
He said Pakistan asked for reversing forces to their peacetime locations. However, the Indian point of view on the issue was that it has kept these forces to help their police and other law-enforcing agencies in Kashmir and Punjab. But Pakistan believed that the number of troops was excessive as these were equipped with the capability required to cross rivers, etc.

Tension on the borders was due to presence of troops, reversal of which could defuse the situation, he added.

About Siachin, he said the issue would be taken up in the next round of talks in February and hoped it would lead to some progress on easing of tension.

Islamabad, December 20, 1990.

The Third round of talks between the Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India took place in Islamabad from 18 to 20 December 1990.

During his stay in Islamabad, the Indian Foreign Secretary was received by the President and the Prime Minister of Pakistan. He also called on the Foreign Minister.

The talks were guided by the directives of the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan, following their meeting in Male on 22 November 1990. The discussions covered the whole range of bilateral issues and were held in a frank and friendly atmosphere. It was decided to pursue all these issues further.

It was decided to exchange, in January 1991, the Instruments of Ratification of the Agreement on Prohibition of Attack against Nuclear Installations and Facilities which was signed on 31st December 1988 and subsequently ratified by both governments.

The next meeting between the Surveyors general on the demarcation of the land boundary in Sir Creek would be held in New Delhi by early February 1991. It was agreed that discussions on the Wullar Barrage/ Tulbul Navigation Project would be resumed thereafter.

As a means of reducing tension between the two countries, it was agreed that the Directors General Military Operations of Pakistan and India will keep in telephonic touch with each other on a weekly basis.
It was agreed that the meetings of the sub-Commissions would be resumed at an appropriate time.

The next meeting of the Foreign Secretaries would be held in New Delhi towards the end of February 1991. This would be preceded by a meeting of the experts to finalise the pending drafts of (i) the Agreement on Advance Notice of Military Exercises and Manoeuvres and (ii) the Agreement on Prevention of Air Space Violation by Military Aircraft.

1258. Agreement between Pakistan and India on Prevention of Air Space Violations and for Permitting Over Flights and Landings by Military Aircraft.

New Delhi, April 6, 1991.

Preamble

States parties to the present Air Agreement, Recognizing the fact that both the Pakistan Air Force (PAF) and the Indian Air Force (IAF) aircraft operate near each other’s air space.

Aware that despite best efforts by both sides, violations of each other’s airspace have occurred from time to time.

Desirous of promoting good neighbourly relations between the two countries.

Conscious of the fact that renewed efforts should be made to avoid unnecessary alarm.

Have agreed to enter into the following Air Agreement:

Air Violations

Article 1

Henceforth, both sides will take adequate measures to ensure, that air violations of each other’s airspace do not take place. However, if any inadvertent violation does take place, the incident will be promptly investigated and the Headquarters (HQ) of other Air Force informed of the results without delay, through diplomatic channels.

Article 2

Subject to Articles, 3, 4 and 6, the following restrictions are to be observed by military aircraft of both the forces.
(a) Combat aircraft (to include fighter, bomber, reconnaissance, jet military trainer and armed helicopter aircraft) will not fly within 10 kms of each other’s airspace including ADIZ. No aircraft of any side will enter the airspace over the territorial waters of the other country, except by prior permission.

(b) Unarmed transport and logistics aircraft including unarmed helicopters, and Air Observation Post (AOP) aircraft, will be permitted up to 1000 meters from each other’s airspace including ADIZ.

Aerial Survey, Supply Dropping, Mercy and Rescue Missions

Article 3

In the event of a country having to undertake flights less than 1000 meters from the other’s airspace including ADIZ, for purposes such as aerial survey, supply dropping for mercy missions and aerial rescue Missions, the country concerned will give the following information in advance to their own Air Advisors for notification to the Air HQ of the other country:

(a) Type of aircraft/helicopter.
(b) Height of flight within Plus/Minus 1000 ft.
(c) Block number of days (normally not to exceed seven days) when flights are proposed to be undertaken.
(d) Proposed timing of flight, where possible.
(e) Area involved (in latitude and longitude).

No formal clearance would be required as the flights are being undertaken within own territory.

Air Exercises Near Border

Article 4

In order to avoid any tension being created, prior notice be given with regard to air exercises, or any special air activity proposed to be undertaken close the each other’s airspace including ADIZ, even through the limits as laid down in Article 2 are not likely to be infringed.

Communication Between PAF and IAF

Article 5

In matters of safety and any air operations in emergency situations, the authorities designated by the respective governments should contact each other by the quickest means of communications available. The Air Advisor shall be kept informed of such contacts. Matters of flight safety and urgent air operations should promptly be brought to the notice of the other side through the authorities designated by using the telephone line established between the Army Headquarters of the two countries.

Operations from Air Fields Close to the Borders

Article 6

Combat aircraft (as defined in Article 2A above) operating from the air bases specified below will maintain a distance of 5 kms from each other’s airspace:

1. Indian Side
   1. Jammu
2. Pathankot
3. Amritsar
4. Suratgarh

(b) Pakistan side
1. Pasrur
2. Lahore
3. Vehari
4. Rahim Yar Khan

Flights of Military Aircraft through each other’s Air Space

Article 7

Military aircraft may fly through each other’s airspace with the prior permission of the other country and subject to conditions specified in Appendix A to this Agreement.

Notwithstanding paragraph 1 of this Article, each country has the sovereign right to specify further conditions, at short notice, for flights of military aircraft through its airspace.

Validity of Agreement

Article 8

This Agreement supersedes all previous understandings in so far as air space violations and over flights and landings by military aircraft are concerned.

Article 9

This Agreement is subject to ratification. It shall come into force with effect from the date on which the Instruments of Ratification are exchanged.

1259. Agreement between Pakistan and India on Advance Notice on Military Exercises, Manoeuvres and Troop Movements.

New Delhi, April 6, 1991.

Whereas Pakistan and India recognize the need to jointly formulate an agreement at the Government level on giving advance notice on exercises, manoeuvres and troop movements in order to prevent any crisis situation arising due to misreading of the other side’s intentions.

Therefore, the Governments of Pakistan and India jointly decide that:

1. Their Land, Naval and Air Forces will avoid holding major military manoeuvres and exercises in close proximity to each other. However, if such exercises are held within distances as prescribed in this Agreement, the strategic direction of the main force being exercised will not be towards the other side, nor will any logistics build up be carried out close to it. The following will constitute a major military manoeuvre/exercise for the purposes of this Agreement:

(a) Land Forces:

1. India-Pakistan International Border
   Concentrations of Corps level (comprising two or more divisions) and above.

2. Line of Control and the area between the Manawar Tawi and Ravi Rivers.
   Division level and above.

(b) Naval Forces:

Any exercise involving six or more ships of destroyer/frigate size and above, exercising in company and crossing into the other’s Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ).
(c) Air Force:

Regional Command level and above.

2. Both sides may not conduct exercises of Land Forces at Divisional level and above within five kilometers (kms) of the areas specified at Paragraph (1).a, (1) and (2).

3. Both sides will provide notice regarding exercises of Land Forces as follows:

   (a) All exercises/concentrations at Divisional level in areas specified at Paragraph (1).a, (1) and (2).

   (b) All exercises/concentrations at Corps level within a distance of seventy-five kms in areas specified at Paragraph (1).a (1) and (2).

   (c) All exercises above Corps level irrespective of the distance.

4. Both sides will give fifteen days prior notice when formations with defensive roles are moved to their operational locations for periodic maintenance of defences.

5. The schedule of major exercises with troops will be transmitted in writing to the other side through diplomatic channels in advance as follows:

   (b) Divisional level exercise, and major Naval exercises involving six or more ships of destroyer/frigate size and above, exercising in company and crossing into the other’s EEZ.

   (c) Corps level exercises—Sixty Days.

   (d) Army level exercises—Ninety days.

Provided that the above provision relate to the commencement of moves of formations and units from their permanent locations for the proposed exercise.

6. Information on the following aspects of major exercises will be intimated

   (a) Type and level of exercises.

   (b) General area of the exercise on land, air and sea. In respect of air and sea exercises, these will be defined in latitude and longitude.

   (c) Planned duration of the activity.

   (d) Number and type of formations participating.
(e) Any shifting of forces from other Commands/ Corps/Strategic Formations envisaged.

(f) The move of strategic formations, particularly armored division, mechanized divisions, air assault divisions/reserve infantry formations and artillery divisions/air defence artillery divisions.

Provided that in respect of major Air and Naval exercises, only the information at Paragraphs (a) to (c) need to be intimated.

7. In case some change in exercise area/grouping of participating formations from the previously notified composition is necessitated, the country carrying out the exercise will intimate the details of changes so as to reach the other country at least thirty days in advance in respect of Corps level exercises and above, and fifteen days in advance in respect of divisional level exercises and Naval exercises. In respect of Air exercises, if minor changes to the previously notified details are necessitated, an advance notice of seven days will be provided.

8. Any induction/concentration of additional troops of a division size force and above, within one hundred and fifty kms of areas specified at Paragraph 1.a.(1) and (2), for internal security duties and/or in aid of civil power will be notified to the other side at least two days before the start of their movements, whenever possible. In case of immediate movements, information may be passed on Hot Line to the Army Headquarters of the other country. The force so employed will not move forward their logistic bases/installations and armor/artillery.

9. Each country will be entitled to obtain timely clarification from the country undertaking military manoeuvres/ exercises concerning the assembly of formations, the extent, direction of the exercise and the duration.

10. The Naval ships and submarines belonging to the other country are not to close less than three Nautical Miles (NMs) from each other so as to avoid any accident while operating in international waters.

11. Combat aircraft including fighter bomber reconnaissance, jet military trainer and armed helicopter aircraft will not fly within ten kms of each other’s airspace, including the Air Defence Identification Zones (ADIZ), except when such aircraft are operating from Jammu, Pathankot, Amritsar and Suratgarh air bases on the Indian side, as well as Pasrur, Lahore, Vehari and Rahimyar Khan air bases on the Pakistan side, in which case they will maintain a distance of five kms from each other’s airspace including the ADIZ.

12. Aircraft of either country will refrain from buzzing surface units and platforms of the other country in international waters.
13. This Agreement supersedes all previous understandings in so far as the above points are concerned.

14. This Agreement is subject to ratification. It shall come into force with effect from the date on which the Instruments of Ratification are exchanged.

New Delhi, April 7, 1991.

The fourth round of talks between the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan, Mr. Shaharyar Khan, and Foreign Secretary of India, Mr. Muchkund Dubey took place in New Delhi from the 4 to 6 April 1991.

During his stay in Delhi the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan called on Prime Minister Shri Chandra Shekhar.

The talks were held in a cordial and frank atmosphere. The two sides covered the entire range of bilateral issues. They also exchanged views on international issues of mutual interest.

At the end of the talks, the two Foreign Secretaries signed Agreements on:

(i) Advance Notice on Military Exercises, Manoeuvres and Troop Movements and

(ii) Prevention of Air Space Violation and for Permitting Over-flight and Landings of Military Aircraft.

In this connection, the two sides expressed satisfaction at the outcome of the meeting of military experts held in New Delhi from 1 to 4 April 1991.

During the talks, the Foreign Secretaries reached agreement on the following schedule of meetings:

(ii) India-Pakistan Committee to Combat Drug Trafficking and Smuggling—July 1991.

(iii) Delimitation of the Boundary in Sir Creek area at the Secretaries level—early August 1991.

The two Foreign Secretaries also agreed in principle on the resumption of the dialogue on Siachen at the appropriate time.

There is already an agreement in principle to convene the Sub-Commissions of the Joint Commission. These will meet on mutually convenient dates.

The Foreign Secretaries agreed to hold their next round of discussions at Islamabad towards the end of August-early September 1991.

Islamabad, April 8, 1991.

During the fourth round of Foreign Secretaries-level talks held in New Delhi on April 5 and 6 Pakistan continued to insist that relations between the two countries would never be normalized till the Kashmir issue was finally resolved in accordance with the UN resolutions. Pakistani Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan told newsmen in Islamabad on April 8 on his return from New Delhi that he had told his Indian counterpart Muchkund Dubey that Kashmir remained the fundamental obstacle in normalization of relations between the two countries. Both India and Pakistan were committed to hold a free, fair and impartial plebiscite in Kashmir under the UN supervision and the people of Kashmir had now risen to achieve their rights, he added.

“We did not accept the Indian contention that Kashmir was its integral part and the issue since has been resolved”, he said, and added that he told the Indians that the issue continued to be on the UN agenda and both the countries had agreed to resolve the issue through bilateral negotiations under the Simla Agreement. The mere fact that both India and Pakistan had agreed under the Simla Agreement to enter into meaningful negotiations to resolve the issue was sufficient to dispel the Indian claims that Kashmir was a settled question, he added.

During the talks, he said, he expressed Pakistan’s deep concern over the violation of human rights in Kashmir and ruthless repression being committed by the Indian forces to crush the freedom movement in the area.

The Pak Foreign Secretary said the two sides also discussed troop deployment. Pakistan, he said, pointed out the heavy concentration of Indian troops on the Punjab borders and along the line of control in Kashmir. This concentration has been stepped up since the last secretaries-level talks in December 1990. The number of Indian troops on these borders has increased to 600,000 which was far more than what the Indians claim they required for internal security.

He said the third issue which was discussed at the talks related to the Siachen Glacier. Siachen figured on the agenda for the first time and it was emphasized that the two countries should take firm steps to implement the agreement which they had reached in principle in 1989 at the Defence Secretaries-level talks that forces from this area should go back to their pre-Simla Agreement locations. The two sides have agreed to discuss the issue at the next meeting, he added.

On Siachen and Kashmir, Pakistan is on the path of justice, equity and fair play and so it was ready to take these issues to any court, any third party or to the UN. Pakistan’s principled stand on these issues, he said, was being appreciated in India itself.

The Pak Foreign Secretary also referred to the signing of two agreements by the two Foreign Secretaries on non-violation of each other’s airspace and advance information regarding movement of troops and military exercises near the borders. He said the two sides had also agreed to hold talks on Wullar Barrage and delimitation of boundary in Sir Creek. They also agreed to hold the next round of talks in July and August after the general elections in India.

Mr. Shaharyar Khan said that Indian authorities have informed him that the Indian troops on Punjab and Kashmir borders were not “outward looking” and were there for internal security as was evident from arms and equipment provided to them. In other areas bordering Pakistan, they said, the Indian forces have “thinned out” though not actually withdrawn to peacetime positions, he added.

Asked whether there was a danger of armed conflict because of the increasing number of Indian troops on Pakistan borders, he asserted: “The specter of war has receded because of the current talks”.

Replying to a question, he said the Indian government was of the view that Pakistan was interfering in Kashmir and sponsoring the uprising. “We have denied our involvement in the current Kashmir uprising,” he said. However, he pointed out that he has told the Indian leaders that Pakistan was not responsible for any independent camp which might be working for freedom fighters.
He said he made clear to India that without free and fair plebiscite in Kashmir under UN auspices, there could not be any hope for the settlement of the problem. “I have also conveyed my profound concern on censorship, human rights violations and ban on journalists visiting occupied territories,” he added.

 Asked about the outcome of his talks with the Indian leaders, he conceded that nothing substantial could be achieved, and that until the new government was installed in India after general elections, it would be difficult to have any breakthrough for normalizing relations between the two countries.

 Asked how did he take the threat given by Prime Minister Chandra Shekhar on April 7, he said, “When I met the Indian Prime Minister, he had not given me any such impression”.

 Mr. Chandra Shekhar believed that Pakistan and India had a number of pressing problems, and, therefore, they should sit and sort out their differences so that their people could live in peace, he added.

 The Foreign Secretary said that Pakistan also accused India of government-sponsored interference in Sindh, of which, he said, “we have very clear, open evidence”. This accusation came when the Indian Foreign Secretary charged Pakistan of “gross interference” in Kashmir.

 “I told them, emphatically, that as far as Pakistan is concerned, the Kashmiri uprising is entirely indigenous. Indians should differentiate between government-sponsored and other interferences, as in a situation of tension-like in Peru and Bolivia—there could be cases of ‘money for guns’”, he added.

 In fact, Pakistan is trying to block some interference that is there, for instance from the people who have come over from Kashmir to escape Indian atrocities and are extremely restless, he explained.
Death of Rajiv Gandhi and Pakistan’s reaction thereto.

The following is the text of Pakistan President Ghulam Ishaq Khan’s message on the death of Rajiv Gandhi 22.5.1991.

“It is with a profound sense of shock and grief that I learnt of the tragic death of Rajiv Gandhi in a bomb blast. With his untimely demise, India has lost an illustrious son and a distinguished leader. The people and the Government of Pakistan share the sorrow of the people of India at this tragic loss. We also condemn the cowardly act of terrorism that led to Mr. Gandhi’s death.

This tragedy places an enormous responsibility on the shoulders of the government and the people of India. I am confident that under your wise leadership, India would be able to successfully surmount this crisis. Our deepest sympathies go to the family of the departed leader. No words can mitigate their pain and suffering. We pray that they will be able to face this bereavement with courage and fortitude. Please accept, Excellency, my sincere condolences as well as those of the people and the Government of Pakistan.”

Text of Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif’s message:

“I was deeply shocked and grieved to learn of the tragic death of Rajiv Gandhi in a bomb attack. On behalf of the Government and the people of Pakistan, as well as on my own behalf, I wish to convey to you and to the family of the deceased leader our profound condolences.

We in Pakistan deeply mourn the untimely passing away, in such tragic circumstances, of an important and distinguished leader of the South Asian region. We condemn in the strongest terms the perpetrators of this dastardly act of terrorism.

The tragedy has placed a great responsibility on you at a very difficult time. As you set about to deal with the aftermath of this tragic event, you have the best wishes of the people and the Government of Pakistan with you.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurance of my highest consideration.”

Senate Condoles Rajiv’s Death.

At the outset of its proceedings on May 22, the Senate chaired by Mr. Washim Sajjad expressed profound shock and deep grief over the tragic death of Rajiv Gandhi.

A resolution moved by Leader of the House Mohammad Ali and endorsed by the entire House was adopted by the Senate.
The resolution said Rajiv Gandhi was a distinguished politician who belonged to an eminent political family of India, Rajiv Gandhi's death, it said, would create a void in the political life of India. The resolution expressed sympathies with the bereaved family and the people and the Government of India.

Benazir Bhutto Grieved

Expressing grief on the assassination of Rajiv Gandhi, MS. Benazir Bhutto, leader of the Opposition in the national Assembly, has termed it as "a very serious incident that could become a factor of instability for India as well as for the sub-continent".

Talking to newsmen on May 22, she said she was shocked to learn about the assassination of Rajiv Gandhi and condemned the incident strongly on behalf of the PPP.

She expressed heart-felt condolences to Sonia, widow of Rajiv Gandhi, and his children and prayed to God to grant to the bereaved family courage to bear the loss.

Political Leaders Express Grief Over Rajiv’s Death

Reactions on the assassination of Rajiv Gandhi from various political leaders continue to pour in, expressing deep shock and grief over Mr. Rajiv's tragic death and condemning the acts of terrorism which deprived the region of a distinguished political leader.

Former Prime Minister and President of the National People’s Party Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi, while expressing his shock over the death of Mr. Gandhi in the bomb explosion, termed the act of terrorism as cowardly. It should be condemned by the world.

Chief of the Jiye Sindh Tehrik G.M. Syed while expressing his sense of deep shock over the tragic death of Mr. Gandhi, said that in fact the people of the region are thankless people and in this regard, he recalled the assassination of Mahatma Gandhi, Indira Gandhi, Mujibur Rehman and Rajiv Gandhi.

Secretary-General Islami Jamhoori Ittehad and Naib Amir of Jamaat Islami Prof Ghafoor Ahmed expressed his grief over the death of Mr. Rajiv and added that the rising trend of violence in politics is a great threat and danger for solidarity and independence.

Veteran politician and PDP Chief Nawabzada Nasrullah Khan has expressed deep sorrow over the assassination of Rajiv Gandhi and termed this incident a bad omen for Pakistan.

He said in Lahore on May 22 that Rajiv Gandhi believed in secular politics like his late mother and grandfather and thus was a source of comfort for the Indian Muslims facing religious violence time and again at the hands of fundamentalist Hindus. He regretted that at this critical juncture, some government circles were managing the publication of articles in a section of the Press suggesting one-fifth reduction in Pakistan army and bringing down the expenditure of defence to a large extent.

The Federal Cabinet gave on May 23 its approval for the visit of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to India and for condemning terrorism in the region, defusing tension and bringing the people of two neighbouring countries closer.

Briefing newsman about the cabinet meeting held at the Governor’s House with Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif in the Chair, Information Adviser to the Prime Minister Rashid Ahmad said the cabinet had given approval for the proposed visit of Mr. Nawaz Sharif to India for participation in the final rituals of Rajiv Gandhi after a three-hour discussion on the situation prevailing in India and the region and within the country.

He said the cabinet had expressed grief over the tragic death of Rajiv Gandhi in a bomb blast and condemned the growing terrorism in the region. The cabinet had adopted a condolence resolution expressing sorrow over the death of the young Indian leader and expressed good wishes about the future of India and its democratic system.

Sheikh Rashid Ahmad said the cabinet had made it clear that it wanted a peaceful settlement of the Kashmir issue and to develop friendly relations with India by defusing tension and settlement of disputes between the two neighbouring countries without compromising on principles.

He said the cabinet had given approval for the visit of Mr. Nawaz Sharif to India as it could provide him a chance to talk to the Indian leaders and leaders of other countries attending the last rituals of Mr. Rajiv Gandhi. The cabinet declared the death of Rajiv Gandhi as the death of a democratic personality.

He said the cabinet was of the view that the Prime Minister could also meet the American Vice-President during his visit to India and talk about resumption of aid to Pakistan.

President Ghulam Ishaq Khan visited on May 23 the Indian High Commission to express his condolences over the assassination of Rajiv Gandhi.

He recorded his sentiments in the visitors’ book and also remained with the Indian High Commissioner for some time to mourn Rajiv Gandhi’s demise. He asked Mr. Dixit to convey his condolences to Indian President Venkatraman, Mrs. Sonia Gandhi and other members of the bereaved family.
The President in his remarks wrote: “It is with deep sense of anguish and sorrow that I came to offer on behalf of the people and government of Pakistan and on my own behalf our heart-felt sympathies and sincere condolences on the tragic death of Rajiv Gandhi.

“In his sad demise, in the prime of his life, India has lost an illustrious son and a leader of great potential and vision. We in Pakistan share the grief and sorrow of the people of India.

“The dastardly act in which he lost his life at a time when a new political chapter was about to open in India, must be universally condemned. My heart goes out in particular to the family of the departed leader. No words of sympathy and solace can mitigate their suffering but I wish and pray that they are able to face the tragedy that has befallen on them with courage and fortitude.”

On Indian Military Threat

India’s military build-up, development of medium-range missiles and the military potential of its unsafeguarded nuclear programme pose a serious threat to Pakistan’s security. The threat is accentuated by India’s refusal to resolve the Kashmir dispute peacefully and its attempt to suppress the indigenous uprising in Kashmir through massive and brutal use of force. India has concentrated over 400,000 military and para-military forces in Kashmir for this purpose. The heavy deployment of its forces along Pakistan-India border also serves to heighten tension. This cannot, however, prevent us from offering moral and political support to the struggle of the Kashmiri people for the exercise of their right to self-determination, as recognized by the relevant UN Security Council resolutions.

In the face of this serious situation, Pakistan cannot be oblivious of the requirements of its security. Nevertheless, we will continue our efforts for establishing good neighbourly relations with India. A beginning was made at Male during the SAARC Summit last November. My recent visit to New Delhi to attend the funeral of Mr. Rajiv Gandhi enabled me to establish personal contacts with leaders of India’s main political parties. I was encouraged by the positive response to our desire to improve bilateral relations. We hope that once the new government has assumed power in New Delhi after the elections, it will be possible for us to move forward towards the establishment of tension-free relations and the settlement of the Kashmir dispute in accordance with the relevant UN resolutions. That would be in the spirit of Male and that of the Simla Agreement, and would enable the two countries to devote their scarce resources to the improvement of the quality of life of their peoples.

Nuclear Non-Proliferation Issue

The issue of nuclear non-proliferation in South Asia is another complicating factor in Pakistan-India relations. It is, therefore, necessary to place the issue in its proper perspective.

We suffer from a serious energy shortage which not only hampers economic and industrial growth, but causes hardship to our people. In view of our ever-growing energy requirements, we have no option but to rely on the generation of nuclear power for meeting the needs of our expanding economy.

Unfortunately, our efforts to develop nuclear energy and technology for peaceful purposes have been subjected to unfair criticism and discriminatory pressures. We have repeatedly asserted that our nuclear programme is devoted to peaceful purposes. In pursuance of our regional approach to nuclear non-proliferation, we have expressed our willingness to accept any equitable and non-discriminatory regime for keeping South Asia free of nuclear weapons.

Seven-Point Proposal

We have made the following seven-point proposal to prevent nuclear proliferation in South Asia.

(a) Establishment of a nuclear weapon-free zone in South Asia, a proposal which has been endorsed repeatedly by the UN General Assembly since 1974.

(b) In view of India’s opposition to the establishment of a nuclear weapon-free zone in South Asia, We proposed in 1978 that, as a first step, Pakistan and India should issue a joint declaration renouncing the acquisition or manufacture of nuclear weapons.

(c) In 1979, Pakistan proposed an agreement with India on a system of bilateral inspection of all nuclear facilities on reciprocal basis.
(d) We also proposed in 1979 simultaneous acceptance of IAEA safeguards by Pakistan and India on all nuclear facilities.

(e) Pakistan expressed its readiness in 1979 to accede to Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty (NPT) simultaneously with India.

(f) Later in 1987, Pakistan proposed the conclusion of a bilateral or regional nuclear test ban treaty.

(g) In 1987, Pakistan also proposed convening of a conference on nuclear non-proliferation in South Asia under the auspices of the United Nations with the participation of regional and other interested states.

The above proposals have been reiterated by us from time to time. Pakistan’s commitment to nuclear non-proliferation, both at global and regional levels, is, thus, clear and unwavering. It is not fair, therefore, to caste doubts on Pakistan’s intentions and to subject Pakistan to discriminatory treatment. No self-respecting nation can accept that.

On Regional Approach to Disarmament

We are gratified to note that the regional approach to disarmament is steadily gaining ground in international circles. Our resolution calling for initiatives for confidence building measures, nuclear non-proliferation and conventional disarmament at regional and sub-regional levels was adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1990 by an overwhelming majority of 142 votes in favour, none against and 10 abstentions.

Nuclear weapon-free zones have already been established in Latin America and the South Pacific region with the endorsement of the five nuclear-weapon states. Similar proposals have been advanced concerning other regions. Last year, Argentina and Brazil signed an agreement to use nuclear energy exclusively for peaceful purposes. They also agreed to submit their nuclear programmes to bilateral inspection and, later, to IAEA safeguards to ensure the peaceful character of their nuclear programmes.

More recently, President Bush has announced a major initiative for arms control on a regional basis in the Middle East. Among other things, the initiative calls for steps by all the regional states to prevent nuclear proliferation in the Middle East. France has also in its recently announced disarmament proposals, called for regional regimes for the prohibition of weapons of mass destruction.

We firmly believe that nuclear non-proliferation in South Asia is a sine qua non for regional peace and progress. We are willing to enter into a bilateral arrangement with India for a regional regime for ensuring that South Asia remains free of All Weapons of Mass Destruction. We are prepared to adopt measures aimed at mutual and balanced reduction of forces consistent with the principle of equal and undiminished security at the lowest level of armaments. However, we cannot and will not take unilateral steps which endanger our national security.

Common Commitments of USA, Pakistan

Pakistan and the United States have a History of friendship going back to the 50s. The friendship is solidly based on our shared beliefs in principles and human values, our common commitment to democratic institutions, the respect we attach to individual liberty and sustained cooperation stretching over several decades. There is a close convergence of views on such issues as Afghanistan and regional peace and stability. Therefore, despite the occasional ups and downs, the friendship between Pakistan and USA had continued with the passage of time and manifested itself in the expansion of mutual cooperation in diverse fields.

Current Difficulties Regrettable

Against this background, the current difficulties in Pakistan-US relations are particularly regrettable. This relationship, which has served the interests of the two countries so well in the past and has so much potential for the future, should not be allowed to be impaired.

Difference Only As Regards Approach To NPT

It is an irony that the current difficulties in Pakistan—US relations stem from differences of approach to the objective of nuclear non-proliferation, to which both are deeply committed. The United States has focused almost exclusively on Pakistan's nuclear programme.

Threat to National Security Cannot be Ignored

The fact is that India exploded a nuclear device in 1974. It has a number of nuclear enrichment and re-processing facilities outside the framework of IAEA safeguards. It is also reported to have unsafeguarded plutonium sufficient for producing over 100 Hiroshima-size nuclear bombs. We cannot, therefore, ignore India's fast-growing nuclear programme and jeopardize our national security.

Pakistan is ready to enter into multilateral consultations for promoting the cause of nuclear non-proliferation in South Asia. There are indications that the United States, the Soviet Union and China might be inclined to support a regional approach. I hope that they would be willing to move together with Pakistan and India to achieve the objective of keeping our region free of nuclear weapons.
5-Nation Moot On NPT Proposed

I would like to propose specifically that the United States, the Soviet Union and China consult and meet with India and Pakistan to discuss and resolve the issue of nuclear proliferation in South Asia. The aim of the meeting should be to arrive at an agreement for keeping this region free of nuclear weapons on the basis of proposals already made or of new ideas that may emerge. The nuclear non-proliferation regime to be negotiated during the proposed multilateral consultations should be equitable and non-discriminatory. We hope that the proposal would receive an early response from the countries concerned so that arrangements can be finalized and the conference held as quickly as possible. A regional non-proliferation regime, containing guarantees for non-nuclear-weapon states and agreed to by all the regional countries is a practical method of resolving the problem in all its dimensions. Such a regime would help usher in a climate of mutual trust, peace and security in South Asia, enabling the states of the region to concentrate their energies and efforts on accelerating economic development and promoting the well-being of their peoples.

I have decided to send to the United States a high-level delegation led by Mr. Wasim Sajjad, Senate Chairman and including Mr. Akram Zaki, Secretary-General, Foreign Affairs and other senior officials to exchange views on the whole of Pakistan-US relations. We must acquire a better understanding of each other’s point of view on various issues such as Afghanistan, regional peace and security, human rights, narcotics control, armaments, nuclear non-proliferation and cooperation in various fields.

Given sincerity of purpose and goodwill, I am confident that we will, ultimately succeed in resolving our current difficulties on the basis of mutual understanding and accommodation. Our search for a way out of the current impasse will be facilitated if each side tries to understand the compulsions of each other and focuses on ultimate objectives rather than the means for serving them.

Let me conclude by reiterating the desire to develop friendly relations and mutually beneficial action on the basis of equality with all countries, big and small, and serve the interest of international peace and development. We particularly strive to create a tension-free and peaceful environment in South Asia to usher in an era of progress and prosperity in the region.
Responding to questions on reports of External Affairs Minister’s statement on upgrading the level Indo-Pak talks, the official Spokesman stated.

India’s Foreign Secretary met the Pak Foreign Secretary Mr. Shehryar Khan for about an hour. One of the things discussed was the schedule of bilateral meetings between now and the beginning of September because they expect the fifth round of Foreign Secretary level talks in July/August. They also agreed to hold meetings on the land boundary which is the terminal point on the sea and thereafter on the maritime boundary. Pakistan has also agreed to discuss the Tulbal Navigation Project (which Pakistan calls the Wullar barrage).

They also discussed the prevention of drug trafficking and briefly the question of non-attack on nuclear facilities. Discussions on the latter subject could not be meaningful as Pakistan has still to give a list of nuclear facilities, without which the agreement could not come into full force.

India’s Foreign Secretary also took up Pakistan’s propaganda on the Kashmir issue and its efforts to internationalise it and the fact that at every possible forum Kashmir issue is being brought up. Foreign Secretary expressed concern that even though discussions about normalisation of relations are taking place, Pakistan’s assistance to terrorism continues unabated. This assistance and abetment of terrorism and the large scale propaganda offensive on Kashmir cannot be reconciled with Pakistan’s publicly declared objective of normalization of relations.

*On July 8 the Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman rejected the Indian claim that Jammu and Kashmir was an integral part of India and said the Indian assertion “lacks any legal, political or moral justification.” India, he said, had occupied Kashmir by force against the wishes of the Kashmiri people and added that to deny the people of Kashmir their just right to self-determination, the Indian forces had been suppressing the freedom movement “by brutal means”.

He accused the Indian forces of having unleashed a wave of atrocities on Kashmiris, marked by indiscriminate murders, torture, arson and rape. Only a free, fair and impartial plebiscite under UN auspices, he said, could solve the Kashmir issue. He reminded that the issue still figured on the UNSC agenda.

In this context on the same day the Indian Spokesperson referred to the U. K. leader George Kaufmann’s statement on the Commonwealth bringing about talks between India and Pakistan on Kashmir, he ruled out any such effort saying:“There have been other efforts by organizations such as OIC to try and promote the use of their good offices to deal with the situation in Jammu and Kashmir. Government of India’s position is consistent and quite clear. The J & K problem is outside the purview of mediators and international organizations. The question is to be settled only through bilateral discussions.”

1265. Extract from the speech of Prime Minister P. V. Narashimha Rao in Lok Sabha replying to the Debate on the International Situation.

New Delhi, September 18, 1991.

About neighbours, I am sure, the details will be given by my colleague, Shri Eduardo Faleiro (Minister of State). But what I would like to say is that we have not been quite successful in persuading Pakistan to improve relations with India. Every time there is a change either in Pakistan or in India, there is a sense of euphoria created, some new hopes are aroused. But subsequently these hopes are dashed to the ground. My own experience during the last three months has been more or less the same. I was told by the Prime Minister of Pakistan that the would like to send a special envoy here. In fact, he was so insistent that I thought that something new was going to happen, something very hopeful was going to emerge. I agreed. The special envoy came. After talking to him, again he tried to create an impression that this is a new situation and a new leaf is being turned between the two countries. Since I was only at the listening end, I was not in a position to respond one way or the other. He told me in so many words, when I raised the question of their helping, training and assisting the terrorists. He told me in so many words that “You will see a definite improvement on the ground.” These were his words. So, I told him, “I will wait for the improvement.” We have been waiting. I am told that “improvement” has been on the reverse. So, where do we stand? What do we do? We stand exactly where we stood always. We have to be ready for any eventuality but at the same time, we have to persist in our efforts to improve relations to the extent we can. They are raising Kashmir in more forums today than they ever did before. That seems to be the “improvement”. So what do we do? I really do not understand, except to come to the conclusion that we have to live with this. I do not have any other conclusion to arrive at. Still let us hope that in the big changes that are coming all over the world where the volition of one country or the motivation of one country does not really mean anything, where all countries are being forced into certain position by circumstances, if this would bring Pakistan to a position more friendly to India, more neighbourly relations, desiring better neighbourly relations with India, then we would be happy. So far as we are concerned, we are very clear in our mind. Our intention is to have the best of relations with Pakistan and this intention will continue and will have to live with whatever uncertainties we have with Pakistan, still hoping that at some point of time, relations will really improve.

1266. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding the visit of a Defence Delegation to Pakistan.

New Delhi, September 27, 1991.

2. During its stay in Pakistan, the delegation called on Chairman of the Joints Chiefs of Staff Committee, Chairman-designate JCSC, Chief of Army Staff, Chief of Air Staff, Vice Chief of Naval Staff, Foreign Secretary of the Government of Pakistan.

3. The delegation level talks between the two sides were held on 26 September, 1991. The Pakistan delegation was led by LT. Gen. Pir Dad Khan, Director General, Staff Headquarters while the Indian delegation was led by Lt. Gen. Satish Nambiar, Director General Military Operations.

4. Both the sides discussed matters of mutual concern and interest to them. The incidents of firing along the Line of Control were also taken up and measures to prevent their recurrence and to improve the situation in a meaningful manner was discussed. Both sides also agreed to establish further arrangements for contacts between specified sector commanders of the armed forces of the two countries. Agreement was reached in principle on some other confidence building measures. These are expected to be discussed further and finalized during the forthcoming meeting of the Foreign Secretaries.

5. The talks were held in an atmosphere of cordiality and frankness.

6. It was agreed that exchange of military delegations between the two countries was in itself a useful confidence building measure. It was also felt that such exchanges should continue as they constituted an important contributive factor to the overall efforts being undertaken by Governments of Pakistan and India, to defuse tension and to establish good neighbourly relations between the two countries.

1267. Meeting between Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan at Harare on the sidelines of the Commonwealth Summit.

October 17, 1991.

Pakistan and India have decided to redouble their efforts to resolve all outstanding issues by peaceful negotiations. This was stated by Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and his Indian counterpart Mr. Narasimha Rao while talking to newsmen after their formal talks in Harare on October 17.

The meeting, which took place at breakfast at the Indian Prime Minister’s suite at Hotel Sheraton, lasted about 50 minutes. It was a one-to-one meeting between them.

Answering a question as to the issues discussed, the Pakistan Prime Minister said “we discussed all the issues which have been there and are still there”. He said as the Prime Minister of India had said, at least a beginning had been made and “We would be able to resolve the issues through bilateral negotiations” in due course of time.

Asked if the question of Kashmir was also discussed, Mr. Nawaz Sharif said all the matters had been discussed. He said “Our understanding is that we would continue our efforts; rather we shall redouble our efforts to find a solution to all outstanding disputes.”

Asked if tension between the two countries had been reduced, the Indian Prime Minister said tension had to be eased. “Both of us recognize that there should be less tension between the two countries,” he said and added that removal of tension would pave the way for the meaningful effort to resolve the outstanding issues.

Mr. Nawaz Sharif said both sides had agreed to continue dialogue. He said the meeting was held in a very good atmosphere. It was a successful meeting and “we would continue the spirit of dialogue that started today.”
Mr. Rao, while replying to a question, said: “we had very friendly discussions on all bilateral issues. This was a get-acquainted meeting. It was very successful. We have developed much better understanding than we had before. From now onwards, it will be easier for us to continue our discussions. We have renewed our intensions to resolve the outstanding issues.”

Mr. Rao, on a question, said that “when the talks are to be resumed, both of us believe that there should be less tension. It will help to resolve the outstanding issues. How can we proceed towards a settlement if tension is prevalent.

The atmosphere in the Indo-Pak summit was extremely cordial and pleasant, according to an insider who also attended the meeting in the first round of talks.

After return to New Delhi, Indian Prime Minister Mr. Rao said that India and Pakistan had rejected mediation efforts by “friendly countries” to help them resolve their differences. He told a news conference that the two South Asian nations would like to overcome their differences bilaterally. “Some friendly countries had offered to mediate but we politely told them we do not need mediation and we will sit together to sort out differences.”

He did not disclose the names of the countries which had offered mediation and on what issue. He also did not clarify if the offer was made at Harare or earlier. “We decided to remain in touch and continue the dialogue. I found there was a determination on both sides to resolve the outstanding problems,” Mr. Rao added.

On October 19 Pakistan’s Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Siddique Kanju said also in Harare that Pakistan wishes to resolve Kashmir issue through peaceful means for which “we are making dauntless efforts”. He said the Prime Minister discussed the issue at Harare at length with Commonwealth leaders and the Indian Prime Minister. Pakistan wants to resolve the issue in accordance with the UN Resolutions and in the light of the Simla Agreement. “We will seek help of our friends as well to resolve the issue peacefully,” Mr. Siddique said. Clarifying on the subjects discussed between the two prime minister Siddique said they talked about particularly Kashmir. Other issues discussed were Siachen, Wullar barrage and Sir Creek. Nawaz Sharif in an Interview with the Pakistan TV in Harare said that normalization of relations with India could not be achieved unless the Kashmir issue was resolved peacefully. He termed the Kashmir issue as one of the major irritants in the close Indo-Pak relations.

1268. Record of discussions of the fifth round of FS level talks

(first plenary session: Islamabad 1000 hours, 30 October 1991)

Ministry of External Affairs

(IPA Division)

Pak Foreign Secretary: I would like to extend a warm welcome to you. Through your personal example, and the relationship that you have established, it was made easier for me and my delegation over the past several rounds of discussions to handle difficulties that arose from time to time. I hope your stay in Islamabad will not only be comfortable but also productive as a result of our talks.

Foreign Secretary: As a result of the dialogue that has been initiated between the Foreign Secretaries and several rounds of which have already taken place, the climate of relations between our two countries has remained on an even keel despite the difficult environment. In fact we have even made some progress. We approach the current talks with the same spirit.

Before I begin discussions on specific issues, perhaps we should take stock of the current situation and the developments in our relationship in the recent past. I would like to go back to December 1988, when I had also visited Islamabad, along with the Indian Prime Minister on the occasion of the SAARC Summit. Before that, our relations have gone through a difficult period, mainly on account of the Punjab situation. The Kashmir issue had not taken on its present dimensions. Even at that time there has been statements by Pakistani leaders stating that the two countries should tackle the easier and more urgent issues first. It was felt by both sides that Kashmir had to be kept on the back burner. In December 1988, a new effort was made to normalize relations, certain understandings were reached between the two Prime Ministers including on the Punjab situation. This process continued till the middle of 1989 and then there was a sharp decline. If we go into the reasons for this, perhaps we would be repeating what we have been saying time and again. We must still mention the assistance provided by Pakistan to terrorists, the virulent statements made by Pakistani leaders, revival of the talk of a 1000 years’ war, organizing of rallies, etc. Then the series of FS level talks was started in July 1990. You also visited India as the Special Envoy of the Pakistan PM. The Foreign Secretary-level dialogue has several achievements to its credit. The temperature of the relationship has been kept even. The outside world was also able to realize that we were talking, working out agreements, making efforts to contain tension. The talks also led to the resumption of dialogue on various bilateral issues, such as the Tulbul Navigation Project, boundary in the Sir Creek area, trafficking in drugs, etc.
However not much progress has been achieved on the essential basis for establishing confidence, which is also really a pre-requisite for full normalization. I had also pointed out to the former Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, when I met her in July 1996 that the fundamental bases and principle for conduct of bilateral relations must be observed. Pakistan was violating these principles by inciting violence, terrorism and secessionism and trying to tarnish India’s image in international fora. The principles to be observed were already enshrined in the Simla Agreement and in various other agreements. All that was needed was an assurance that Pakistan intended to observe these norms. We have now reached the stage where this point must be addressed fully and squarely on the political level. This would be the sine-qua non of normalization of our relations. Through our talks, we are trying to create a climate in which such steps can be possible. The Foreign Secretary level talks perhaps provide the opportunity or framework for such steps to be taken. But the issue must be faced squarely.

Our Prime Ministers also met recently. The meeting went off well. We must capitalize on this and see where and how we can go further.

Pak Foreign Secretary: Our talks have indeed helped to reduce tensions and did indicate to the world that we are addressing the issues in a peaceful manner. They were also aimed at preventing confrontationist rhetoric from taking over. A measure of progress has indeed been achieved. I have now been mandated by our PM to refer to the spirit of Harare. Earlier we used to talk about Male spirit. We may claim that the winds from Harare and Male appear to be blowing in the same direction. Our task now is to move forward and to provide a platform for the Colombo meeting.

As our Minister of State just stated in his meeting with you, we are engaged very deliberately as a government in the task of changing the course of our relations away from the past tit for tat attitude.

Earlier statements from either side were always responded to. An attempt was inevitably made to ‘set the record straight’ as it were. We are now trying to move away from this. For example, your PM recently made a statement suggesting that Pakistan had ruled out any form of mediation. In response we gave a measured statement. Our basic approach is to move forward all substantive issues and not allow rhetoric to take over. To enable this process to continue, we must also understand the compulsions on both sides. You have your elections coming up. We have our compulsions to raise the issue in international fora.

There are also some differences in perception. In your view, unless the question of terrorism is tackled, relations cannot improve.
In our view unless the core issue is addressed, normalization would be difficult. We must, therefore, address Kashmir issue. It has been like a cancer affecting our relations. It must be resolved on the basis of the commitments made to the people of Kashmir, and the UN resolutions. The Simla Agreement also requires us to engage in a bilateral dialogue to resolve the issue. No final peace is possible without resolving this issue.

The decline in our relations since 1988 was due to the wide-spread indigenous uprising in the Indian part of Kashmir. This has now gone on for more than two years. The alienation of the people is reflected in the fact that there has been very little participation in elections that have been held there. The Government of India has also not been able to find any interlocutors. We regard Kashmir as an international issue or at least as a bilateral issue. It is qualitatively different from Punjab, Assam or any other part of India. We need to address the various aspects of this issue, including the concern on the human rights question. Pakistan regards this as the core issue, the fundamental issue.

Another matter which is a source of deep concern to us is the nuclear issue. You are aware of our PM’s proposal made on 6 June. The proposal was made in complete sincerity and not for international posturing or to place India in a difficult situation. We would like you to reconsider your stand on this issue. We believe that regional efforts strengthen and not hinder global approach to find a solution to the non-proliferation question. The examples we find in the Pacific or in Latin America further support this view.

We would like to take up the question of all items of mass-destruction; including chemical, biological, conventional, missiles. We could take them up as a package, if we can. If that is not acceptable to India, then Pakistan is prepared to discuss the question of prevention of proliferation of chemical weapons as a prelude to discussion on the other issues.

Our government is ready to engage in a dialogue immediately with your government on this issue. Civil and military experts from both countries could meet to begin discussions on a possible bilateral agreement. Prior to that, the two of us could issue a declaration, pending finalization of the international convention. This would convey to the world and to our people that we mean business.

We would also be glad to engage in discussions to jointly update the biological weapons convention. These discussions need not be at the expert level but could be carried out at the diplomatic level. If there are any specific suggestions that you have in this regard, we could even try to respond before you leave for Delhi.

I would now ask the Additional Secretary Inamul Haq to give you a broader idea of the principles we can incorporate in the Declaration.
Inamul Haq, Addl.Secy. the Declaration of intent could refer to

(a) our decision to ban chemical weapons development, production, deployment or use.

(b) Our commitment to a comprehensive chemical weapons convention.

(c) Willingness to work to ensure that chemical weapons do not spread to other regions and that our own region is free of them.

The Declaration of intent could be issued before experts meet to finalize a detailed agreement.

Pak Foreign Secretary: The Instruments of Ratification of the Agreement on prohibition of attack against nuclear installations and facilities were exchanged on 27 Jan 1991. There was a strictly legal view that the lists of installations and facilities to be protected under the agreement needed be exchanged only on January 1, 1992. However, in some quarters, this raised doubt about the applicability of the Agreement signed between us in the interim period.

We are now prepared to exchange these lists with you before June 1992. We are ready to do this both to make a point and to establish that we are prepared to move forward. We should fix a date and then exchange the lists.

You had earlier spoken about what you saw as major reason for deterioration in our relations. When I came as a Special Envoy of my PM in August 1991, I brought a message of goodwill, seeking to convey our willingness to open a new chapter in our relations and asserted that our commitments in this regard will be fulfilled on the ground. The purport of the message I carried was that this new attitude would be reflected on all fronts. It was a little disappointing that the Indian press interpreted this to mean that progress first be shown on the question of terrorism.

While I agree that interference is an issue that needs to be addressed, this cannot be made a pre-condition for progress in other areas. We also have a similar litany of reports of Indian involvement in our Punjab and Sindh.

When I had called on the Indian Defence Minister during my August visit, he had told me that these issues could only be addressed meaningfully at the political level. Intelligence agencies of both the countries are operating. Interference is taking place. My government is prepared to sit with you at the political level to address this issue.

It is not the policy of the Government of Pakistan to provide support to terrorism. But given the nature of our borders, disaffected people can move across these virtually open borders, get access to the arms bazars and to opposition politicians. If we are able to jointly tackle the question of terrorism, much can be addressed in confidence-building.

Siachen reflects both the high profile and a futile exercise in confrontation. If it could be resolved at low cost and with prestige to both sides, it would really have high returns. Progress would be facilitated in other areas. Pakistan would like to revive the June 1989 Agreement reached on this issue. We could perhaps begin with an expert level meeting to see how that agreement could be implemented.

The visit of your military delegation last month went off well, even though there had been a few hiccups before the visit began. The military level exchanges have helped to build confidence. The interaction and meeting at that level and the personal relationship that was established are useful and we feel that such visits should be repeated.

In my presentation, this time I am not referring to the building up of Indian troops on the border. This has resulted in a military level interaction. The number of Indian troops deployed on the borders remains the same. Since the visit of the military delegation we have taken stock of the situation, and believe that the confrontation is not for purpose of offence.

On the Wullar issue, positive progress was made particularly with regard to provision of data, which was necessary for confidence building in this regard. I am convinced that if we continue on this path, then before long an accord would be reached to mutual advantage. We must schedule another meeting in New Delhi.

On the boundary in the Sir Creek area, the just concluded Secretary level talks showed a strong movement towards a resolution of this issue. This again is a low cost high return issue. I look forward towards a solution.

On the question of missing Defence personnel, you could consider sending a delegation comprising representatives of such personnel as a one-time exercise. It would not be possible to give them records of all Pakistani jails for the last 20 years as they have demanded. It is virtually impossible to tabulate such records. However they could visit any prisons they like at short notice. We have absolutely no interest in keeping defence prisoners here endlessly.

Foreign Secretary: I would now like to refer to some serious incidents that took place on the border, in the Keran and Kirni sectors. These clearly demonstrated that armed militants were getting support to infiltrate. Pakistani troops and the militants were found together.

In one of the incidents, there was an actual infiltration of persons in uniform along with some in civilian dress who attacked one of our posts from the flank.

In fact, one could call it a semi-war like situation on the border. Some call it a proxy war, though I do not share this view, or a low intensity conflict.

Even in respect of Punjab we have reports of strategy meetings being held in Pakistan. Terrorists roam around in this country. It is not really easy to differentiate between what Pakistan is doing in Punjab and Kashmir.

Pakistan’s efforts at internationalization do not really end up in projecting a favourable image of either country. It also has the effect of sapping mutual confidence.

On the question of defence related confidence building measures, I was glad to have your response. On the question of exchange of lists of nuclear installations and facilities, we will finalize dates after going back and the lists could be exchanged.

On chemical weapons the idea of a declaration deserves attention. My initial reaction is positive. I will, however, have to get the final clearance of my Government. My own idea was that we could work out a bilateral agreement, even while the International Chemical Weapons Agreement was being finalized. In Delhi 5-6 months ago I had an exercise completed in this regard. In case we decide to go in for a declaration, the following should also be added:

(1) A statement that we could be among the first to sign a Convention once it is adopted, and

(2) Resolve of the two countries to act in cooperation to see that the deadline set for finalizing various steps of the Chemical Weapons Convention are adhered to.

In the field of conventional armaments, there is a need for discussion on relevant concepts of reduction of expenditure, deployments so as to make them non-provocative. This could lead on to discussions on military strategy, non-provocative defence. This could provide the basis for further discussion.

On the nuclear non-proliferation issue we are prepared to discuss the subject in the bilateral and regional context.

We are also aware of the changes that are taking place in the world. But, at the same time, we will have to take into account some of the general principles of our nuclear policy. We cannot accept the NPT, or the concept of nuclear-free zones. In fact, we have been able to contribute tremendously to the international disarmament debate by sticking to these principles. The issue that may need to be addressed in such a dialogue could for example, be as to how Pakistan, which is virtually a nuclear weapon power, will join the NPT. The IAEA has, for example, had long secret negotiations with South Africa. It is possible that there would be a secret understanding between the IAEA and South Africa regarding certain capabilities, and after that it can join the NPT. Will Pakistan make such agreement? We would like to know so that we could even structure our response accordingly.

On the question of biological weapons, we could make a declaration giving the objectives that we regard as relevant in this area. Most of the major powers do not wish to revise the existing Convention, so we may not be able to proceed successfully along this route.

Additional Secretary (Mr. Inamul Haq): We could ask our delegations in Geneva to cooperate whenever the subject comes up.

Foreign Secretary: We also felt that the visit of the military delegation had a positive impact. Some agreements were reached in principle on exchanges and establishing communications between specified sector commanders. We should try and formalize them at an early date.

On Tulbal, we had a very good meeting. A draft agreement was worked out. I understand this now needs to be approved at the political level in Pakistan. I hope this can be done soon and the agreement finally signed.

On sir Creek, there was a movement forward. Discussions should be continued further.

On the question of missing defence personnel, the relatives were somewhat frustrated with the experience of their first visit. Before another visit takes place, it may be necessary to agree on the parameters in advance. I would reiterate once again the importance of convening the next meeting of the Joint Commission. It is virtually a litmus test of any genuine desire to move forward in bilateral relations.

There is also a need to think of trade meaningfully within the ambit of discussions in SAARC. Progress has not been possible mainly because of Pakistan’s stand. I would urge you to review your position. In our own country we had opposition from the Ministries of Commerce and Finance in freeing of trade in the region. But, public opinion, and large sections of the political leadership has responded positively to this idea. One of the main goals for the next SAARC Summit should be to set a specific time-frame 5, 7 or 10 years, for free trade to be established in the region. Instructions should be issued for the parties to negotiate an Accord in this regard.

Pak FS: I would like to once again raise the question of giving us Jinnah House for the Pakistani Consul General to function in Bombay.

On the question of Hyderabad funds, the latest information that we have received from our honorary Consul in Perth, who is in touch with the Nizam's grandson living there, is that the latter wants the entire money.

There is, therefore, nothing left except for India and Pakistan to join together, go to court jointly and say that the case of Nizam's grandson is spurious and the money should be handed over to us. Their case is actually on legally very weak grounds. On Siachen in order to enable movement forward perhaps the following could be considered:

(a) We should avoid defining where the line should go from NJ 9842;
(b) Pakistan should avoid insisting on India going back to a pre-Simla line;
(c) The question of civilian posts could be examined;
(d) In your maps you could put down the positions from which you would withdraw, but Pakistan should not be asked to sign these maps.

The emphasis should really be on disengagement. Once there is agreement on these points, we could tell our military experts to meet and finalize points to which deployment will take place.

1269. Record of discussions of the Fifth Round of Foreign Secretary level talks between India and Pakistan (second plenary session, 2.45 p.m. Islamabad, 30 October 1991)

Ministry of External Affairs (IPA Division)

Pakistan Foreign Secretary: We have also agreed in principle on the need to convene the next meeting of the Joint Commission. The difference is only regarding the timing. We feel that it is still a bit early to hold this meeting. There is a need to show some more progress on other issues before this can be taken up. However, if on any substantive issues, meetings are considered necessary between concerned Ministries/Departments of our Governments, these could be organised.

2. On the question of trade in the SAARC region, we will be making a carefully formulated statement at Colombo. Our statement would be in keeping with the spirit of the process of liberalisation that is being introduced in the Pakistan economy. Even while restrictions are being removed, certain checks and balances are necessary. Overall trade balance, the need to protect nascent industry, etc. are important.

3. On chemical weapons, draft declarations could be exchanged at the diplomatic level and experts could then meet to pursue discussions on a bilateral agreement.

4. We were glad to hear that India would look at the nuclear issue somewhat differently from the past. We will now need to examine as to how we could carry the dialogue further, and if further discussions need to be pursued at the Foreign Office level or at some other level. We will also need to coordinate the public projection. We are bound to be asked if the question was raised and what India’s response was, and if it was the same as before.

5. We should also initiate discussions on conventional arms and missiles.

6. On the question of armed infiltration I would like to reiterate Pakistan’s suggestion regarding the need to have a neutral surveillance mechanism.

7. The Government of Pakistan does not support sabotage or terrorism. In fact, we have welcomed the fencing that you are doing in Punjab. If we could afford it we may even have considered something similar. There is also an illegal immigration taking place into Pakistan from Bangladesh via India. This issue needs to be looked at in a more detailed manner. When these people are caught and turned back, then in India they are often considered as terrorists and killed in the process of crossing the border.

8. The Babri Masjid issue is an internal matter for India. But it does tend to have an emotional fall out here. I hope, therefore, that your Government will be able to maintain restraint on this issue.

9. The dialogue at the Foreign Secretary level must be continued. The sixth round could be projected for early next year.

Foreign Secretary:

10. I welcome your statement that in the forthcoming SAARC meeting, your stand would be in the spirit of the process of liberalisation set in motion here. In any free trade arrangements, safeguards are always provided.

11. On chemical weapons we will formulate our response and get back to you very soon.

12. We do not agree that fencing is a good thing. It is a sad reflection on the state of affairs between the two countries. On the question of neutral surveillance mechanism, I need not repeat our position. There is no doubt in any body’s mind about what is going on.

13. We accept your suggestion regarding the sixth round. Despite oft-repeated scepticism the utility of these talks is well demonstrated.

14. I would like to draw your attention to the proposal made by us in October 1989 for a clean slate exchange of security prisoners. This issue had also been raised with PM NS when our then Prime Minister had met him in Male. He had stated that he would have the matter expedited. Pending a clean slate exchange certain individual exchanges could be worked out. The relatives of Ravinder Kaushik and Roop Lal Saharia have been pressing their cases. Apparently, the families are in dire state.

15. The harassment of our diplomats in Islamabad and Karachi continues. During our last round of talks you had indicated that Pakistan might give us a Non-Paper on the subject. This should be worked out at an early date. Otherwise they tend to take a wrong turn and there is pressure for us to retaliate. One can understand the purpose for surveillance. But the method adopted should not leave any trace of bitterness.

16. We also understand that the Government of Pakistan has become very restrictive on the grant of EPR visas even to those visiting for less than 14 days. This is a retrogressive step, not in keeping with the decision taken at the 1989 meeting of the Joint Commission.
17. Pakistan has also imposed the requirement that passports of Indian nationals should be valid for one year, before they can be considered for grant of visa. We have not imposed any such requirement. In fact, we have even removed the earlier requirement of six months validity.

18. Over the past two years, we have had recurrent problems with the visit of Hindu pilgrims. On three occasions these visits have been postponed very often permission is granted at the last moment inconveniencing the pilgrims. In the recent visit to Shadani Darbar, the number of pilgrims allowed was arbitrarily reduced from 400 to 200. The leader, Sant Govind Ram, was also denied visa.

19. On controlling drug trafficking and smuggling we find that the information coming in from Pakistan is inadequate and delayed. This mechanism for exchange of information should be made more effective.

High Commissioner Dixit:

20. In a situation where Sikh pilgrims face no problems, but the Hindu pilgrims run into difficulties, the situation tends to take on a serious political colour. This aspect should be kept in mind.

J.S (IPA):

21. There is also a feeling that several of the missing defence personnel could have been listed as prisoners.

Pak Foreign Secretary:

22. We will have the question of exchange of security prisoners examined.

23. I will work on the Non-Paper, on the question of harassment. In fact, it is not only your diplomats, but visa seekers at the High Commission, and visitors to your houses who are also getting harassed.

24. On the question of restrictive grant of visas by Pakistan, we feel it may be useful for our Interior Secretary to have discussions in India. We consider the bilateral agreement to be sacrosanct. If there is a need to change some of the provisions, and I believe there is, then we should sit down and work them out together. In case there are any difficulties for you to have formal talks with the Interior Secretary, he could even go to India, for instance, to inspect our consular facilities. The subject could then be discussed with him by (y)our officials at an informal level.

25. We had to postpone the visit of the Cricket Team because we did not want to risk derailing the process in which we are engaged. This could get complicated if any incident took place.
26. We should exchange the Instruments of Ratification of the Agreements on Advance Notification of Military Exercises and Prevention of Air Space Violations at an early date. We are ready with our Instruments.

27. The Pakistan Cabinet has approved the agreement. It is awaiting President's signature. With one of the agreements there is some difficulty here regarding the manner in which the border has been described.

1270. Record of Foreign Secretary’s Call on the Prime Minister of Pakistan Nawaz Sharif.

FOREIGN SECRETARY: Sir, the two delegations have held a whole day of discussions. Out of the five rounds of Foreign Secretary level talks held so far, this has been the round which covered the maximum number of subjects. This shows that the level of the bilateral dialogue has enhanced. The scope of the talks has also widened. Issues which were previously considered to be taboo have been discussed. Certain other issues which may appear to be routine but which can make a perceptible impact on the climate of relations have also figured in the discussions. The discussions so far have been particularly successful since an agreement is now available on Wullur. What remains is a political decision to conclude a formal agreement. On the issue of Sir Creek also, the two sides have had a detailed exchange of views on the principles which are to govern the delimitation of the maritime boundary. The Indian position has shifted away towards the Pakistani position. This reflects the mood that the two Prime Ministers have created. The Indian Cabinet has approved a brief for this shift in our position. No agreement has been reached so far but significant progress has been made towards solving the issue.

2. We have also discussed in quite some detail various issues of disarmament. Some tentative understanding has been reached on some of these issues, especially on chemical weapons. We have discussed the possibility of concluding a bilateral declaration on the manufacture, deployment and use of chemical weapons by the two countries which would perhaps also include a declaration committing the two countries to sign the International Convention on chemical weapons. Similarly, on biological weapons also, the two sides have discussed the possibility of a declaration on common perceptions in this area in respect of development and use of biological weapons. We have also made some proposals on conventional weapons. Our proposal is basically as to how to define non-provocative defence posture, and how such a doctrine is to be mutually perceived. The response from the Pakistani side is awaited. We have also discussed the disarmament issues with regard to nuclear weapons. We hope we would very soon respond to the Pak proposals.

3. The discussions have been imbued with the ‘Harare Spirit’ generated by the meeting between the two Prime Ministers. The ‘Harare Spirit’ has guided the talks and will continue to do so.

4. We have also discussed Siachen. We have informally exchanged views on this subject and have come to some understanding which can provide a very good basis to move forward. Obstacles are there and continued political signals will be useful and necessary.

5. Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif: I deeply appreciate the fact that the discussions have proceeded satisfactorily.

6. In Harare, I was deeply impressed by Prime Minister Rao’s sincerity to resolve all outstanding issues through bilateral discussions. I wish this process between our two countries had begun earlier. But it is never too late to begin. We also decided at Harare to resolve all outstanding issues as quickly as possible.

7. I have just discussed with Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan and High Commissioner Sattar the prospects of the bilateral talks. Now is the time to take up seriously and resolve once and for all these outstanding issues. Since partition our two countries have made efforts now and then to resolve the issues. They have gone to war and they have tried to resolve at the same time some of the issues. Now we realise how important and serious the quick resolution of these issues has become. Prime Minister Rao is seriously interested in resolving these issues.

8. I am happy that progress has been made on Wullur, Sir Creek, Siachen and chemical and biological weapons. Similar progress should also be made on Kashmir and nuclear weapons. We should pursue the effort and see if we can have some understanding. This can lead to a cut in the defence budget and a diversion of much-needed resources for the social sectors. It is senseless to keep on increasing the military budget. We can put an end to this cycle provided we have bilateral agreement and we are mutually confident of each other.

9. The ‘Harare Spirit’ must be kept up and maintained. I have had good discussions with Prime Minister Rao in Harare. I look forward to meeting him in Colombo. Between these two meetings efforts should continue to pave the way for finally solving these outstanding problems. I am aware that some of issues are complicated and may take time to solve. But the effort should be to pave the way for a meaningful meeting in Colombo.

10. Each time we meet we should not repeat the same things. We should concentrate on solving problems and moving forward.

11. When I came back from Harare, people asked me what was discussed. Our papers have recently reported Prime Minister Rao as saying that no discussion on Kashmir had taken place at all. I am facing criticism that I am selling out on Kashmir. Some days ago, Benazir Bhutto also attacked me in this regard. It is surprising that even leaders of that stature are not being politically responsible. I can understand if ignorant people say such things. My reply to our press reports has been that Prime Minister Rao could not have said this (on Kashmir not figuring at the Harare meet).

12. If the Americans and the Soviets can improve their relations, if China and Soviet Union can normalise their relations, if Israel and the Arab countries can sit together, why not India and Pakistan? Both our countries will be losers unless they sit together and resolve the outstanding issues between them.

13. FS: The compulsions facing our two countries are even greater in this respect.

14. PM NS: I agree. If these countries could do it, we could also make serious efforts to resolve our problems once and for all. I am particularly glad about what you have said on the nuclear issue. If the understanding of our two countries is to talk to each other, this is excellent, honourable and dignified rather than going to another country. Once we resolve this issue, we can consider a No-War-Pact between two countries. We can move forward on many of these issues which will enable our two countries to reduce our military expenditure and to productively use scarce resources. The present day climate in the international scene is for peaceful resolution of issues and to concentrate on the priority tasks of economic development and progress.

15. [The meeting lasted for 20 minutes. From the Indian side, High Commissioner Dixit and JS(IPA) were present. On the Pakistan side, Foreign Secretary, Mr. Shaharyar Khan, Additional Secretaries, Mr. Inamul Haq and Mr. Tayyab Siddiqui and High Commissioner Mr. Abdul Sattar were present.]
16. [Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and Foreign Secretary held a one-to-one meeting which lasted for 35 minutes.]

1271. Call by the Indian Foreign Secretary on Mohammed Siddique Khan Kanju, Minister of State, Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Kanju: It is our earnest desire to live in peace and to settle all differences with you. In earlier years, we have headed towards confrontation. Fortunately, the trend is now changing. Winds of change have affected countries all around us. Some of them have progressed faster than us, even though their developmental processes began later than ours.

I have been following very closely your dialogue with Shaharyar Khan. I am glad to note that some progress has been achieved. My Prime Minister is very keen to move forward. I can assure you he is very sincere. He does not say too much, but he means what he says. I am personally very encouraged and satisfied with the meeting he had with your Prime Minister at Harare. There were differences in perception but there was a clear realization that we have to live together.

Foreign Secretary: We have been engaging in this dialogue in the midst of great controversies. Political statements and positions have made our task difficult. We have not really been able to achieve a major breakthrough. But we feel satisfied that we have been able to maintain a climate of restraint in our relationship.

We have also unfrozen the dialogue on some issues. Of course, bigger issues can be resolved only at the political level. Our perceptions on some of the major issues have been different, but I would like to mention one thing which our public opinion feels very strongly: there is a widespread feeling that there is no point in our carrying on these bilateral discussions unless the basic, minimum norms of conducting bilateral relations are maintained. There is strong national sentiment against Pakistan’s active involvement in supporting terrorism and subversion in India. Very recently, our EAM met a group of five or six leftists. The latter came up with the extraordinary suggestion that given this support to terrorism, a bilateral dialogue would only encourage communalism in the country. We have not accepted this suggestion. I am an incorrigible optimist and am firmly convinced that we need to keep the dialogue going.

Kanju: You talk about our interference in India’s affairs. But you must realize that there is a very considerable and lengthy background. Our relations have not been what they ought to have been. But whatever the historical antecedents, we must try to work for overcoming the more than four decades of hostility. I am especially keen that we should prepare the ground for the forthcoming meeting between our two Prime Ministers.

You have mentioned some grievances India had with our policy. On our side also we have a very long list of complaints. We have to overcome these problems and leave them behind. We must sit together and resolve all issues - on the basis of principles which we can project to the public in both our countries. I realize that this will not be an easy task. But big and difficult issues have been resolved in the past and by men such as you.

Sattar: I have a thought. If we calculate the costs incurred by India and Pakistan over all the years of confrontation, I am sure that they would be more than the combined total of our external debt. This needs to be researched.

High Commissioner—Shri Dixit: Everyone realize that confrontation has involved wasteful expenditure and so also our need to utilize our scarce resources for more productive purposes. But this realization is at the normative level and our task is to translate it into action. For this, Sir, we need political will and direction. We should also try and get small irritants out of the way.

Kanju: I agree.

FS: The loss of economic opportunity as a result of confrontation policies can be calculated at three levels:

(a) the effect of being in a state of actual conflict;
(b) incurring of the high military expenditures and, most important,
(c) lost economic opportunities. I refer specifically to the creation of economic structures in the adversary that would have resulted in complementary, not competitive economic interaction.
Kanju: We have defined the task before us. You gentlemen have to find the way.

FS was accompanied to the meeting by the High Commissioner and JS (IPA). Pakistan MOS was assisted by Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan, High Commissioner Sattar and Additional Secretary Inam-ul-Haq.

1272. Record of the Foreign Secretary’s Call on Pakistan Secretary General of Foreign Affairs Akram Zaki.

FOREIGN SECRETARY: We are meeting in the fifth round of talks. The talks so far have gone off very well. An interesting feature of the talks this time is that the two sides are talking on a whole series of bilateral issues which have either been deadlocked or been frozen for a long time. The talks have made distinct progress. Even on complicated issues such as Tulbal, Sir Creek, etc. some guarded optimism can be expressed about the prospects of resolving them.

2. We discussed the issue of Siachen thoroughly. This is an issue where several levels of Government are involved - civilian as well as military. In the talks, we have come to a conclusion that if what I may call the philosophical and the political and juridical aspects could be kept out, and if the two sides could concentrate on the disengagement of forces without either side taking advantages, we are probably not too far apart. It is important to put behind sticking points such as whether there should be a record in respect of the points from where we are to withdraw or as to whether we are indeed withdrawing to the 1972 point, etc. If the political leadership could be convinced about the need for a pragmatic approach, experts of the two sides could meet for a final look at the issue. There is no doubt that Siachen is a tragic issue involving heavy loss of life and crores and crores of rupees of infructuous expenditure.

3. As regards the crux of the issues (as far as normalisation of relations is concerned) we have reiterated our respective positions. But the main thing is that this has to be tackled at a political level. The officials of the two sides can at best clarify points and remove the emotional overtones but the tackling of the issue substantially has to be at the political level.
4. AKRAM ZAKI: You have given a hopeful scenario for the future. I agree that what is needed at the political level is that the old thinking is no longer valid. Fresh thinking is the order of the day everywhere in the world, as manifest in the dramatic changes in Soviet-American relations, the Sino-Soviet disengagement and the new beginning in their relations as well as in the process of the Middle East Conference.

5. In both our countries a new leadership has emerged. They have several advantages which can help the future of relations. Firstly, in Pakistan a leadership has emerged after a long time from Punjab, the central part of Pakistan. Punjab is the bastion of a certain attitude of inflexibility. Secondly, the present leadership has a substantial mandate and this mandate is not restricted to Punjab alone but is derived on the basis of a broad national consensus. Thirdly, this is a Government that has taken political risks and has not marked time. The agreement on the sharing of Indus waters and the division of resources between Centre and provinces are examples of this. If Nixon could visit China and normalise relations, the Punjab leadership can also negotiate improvement of relations with India and convince the people of Pakistan.

6. I should not perhaps say it but in India also, there has been a shift in the regional aspect of the leadership and this has diminished the personal aspects of the leadership as regards relations with Pakistan.

7. Thus, a favourable climate is today obtaining for the improvement of Indo-Pak relations. The leadership of both the countries is now seriously committed to social and economic advancement of the people. Our Prime Minister is committed to a relaxation of tensions with India as well as to proceed with cooperation within the framework of SAARC so that the tackling of the priority task of achieving economic progress becomes possible.

8. The core issue in the relations is Kashmir. If a dialogue commences on this issue, something can emerge. The dialogue must commence and should be with a sense of realism and understanding. There is a permanent need for peace and security in the region. Kashmir is an important issue to be tackled at the political level but the officials between the two countries should recommend this to the political leadership.

9. FOREIGN SECRETARY: The process has already started in Harare. We look forward to Colombo. We are vehicle to convey the message. And we will certainly do that.

10. AKRAM ZAKI: If the legacy of tension can be put behind and if freer relations will be available for our countries to move into the 21st Century, that will be achievement enough.
11. The meeting lasted for 25 minutes. From the Indian side High Commissioner and JS(IPA) were present. From the Pakistan side Foreign Secretary, Mr. Shaharyar Khan, Additional Secretary, Mr. Inamul Haq, and Director (India-P), Mr. M.S. Bhatti, were present.

(M.K. Bhadra Kumar)

1273. Record of Foreign Secretary’s Call on Pakistan President Ghulam Ishaq Khan.

FOREIGN SECRETARY: I am grateful, Sir, for finding time to receive me amidst your preoccupations with the visit of the Chinese President. I understand that till late last night you were away in Lahore.

2. I convey the greetings of our President and Prime Minister.

3. Our two delegations are now meeting for the fifth time. Looking back, one does derive some sense of satisfaction, however limited, at the progress that has been made in these rounds. We have been able to put in place a framework for the military of the two countries to consult each other and to defuse tensions on the border. At the current round, we have also begun to unfreeze some bilateral issues that have not been discussed for a long time. In this round, we have also been able to discuss various disarmament issues.

4. India’s stand on the disarmament issues is influenced by global considerations. On moral grounds and in terms of the realities of nuclear weapons, India’s stand rests on strong principles. But we realise that there are regional impulses in the context of the recent international changes.

5. Some understanding has been possible on Wullur after years of negotiations. The discussions in the current round have been in-depth and substantial. Our side has clarified several technical details for the benefit of the Pakistani side. And we have reached an understanding on the subject. We hope that in the next six months to one year, if these discussions are sustained and political guidance is available, there is no reason why we cannot reach an agreement. We look forward to your guidance, blessings and political signals.
6. GHULAM ISHAQ KHAN: We desire not only to mend fences with India but also to extend cooperation with India. We must realise that we have many points of common interest. We look at the meetings as something positive. They bring our two countries closer and enable the two sides to understand each others’ positions and to join a dialogue. If Shaharyar Khan says that these talks are an excuse to meet, that is also good enough. But there must be some progress, however small such progress may be. Our people should also feel so.

7. On the nuclear issue, we know India’s position. NPT is discriminatory. However, there are growing global concerns on this issue. I personally consider that instead of major powers pressurizing us in this regard, they should make access to technology for peaceful purposes easier for third world countries whether it is for nuclear technology or for technology to protect the ozone layer. We must realise that the global problem differs from the regional problem as far as disarmament is concerned. Big changes are also taking place in the world, which were not previously imaginable. The changes in the Soviet Union, Soviet-American relations, etc. are examples. Bilaterally, the problem is much less serious. The major powers cannot impose a solution unless the two of us agree. But as well wishers they can guide us and thereby satisfy global concerns. With this in view we have made our proposal for the five countries (USA, USSR, China, Pakistan and India) to discuss this matter regionally. It is good that you have agreed to starting a dialogue on this subject.

8. When Ambassador Robert Oakley returned to Islamabad after his holiday in Kathmandu in the middle of this year, he said that he had met you and you had expressed a desire for some sort of India-Pakistan agreement on chemical weapons. I asked Oakley why this should only be for chemical weapons. Our concern should be in respect of all weapons which generically can be described as weapons of mass destruction, including biological and nuclear weapons. Later when Shaharyar Khan visited Delhi as the Special Envoy he received a similar signal from you. My own personal reaction continues to be that we should address this issue generically. If there are difficulties in proceeding like this, if all the issues cannot be taken up together, we should discuss them one by one. This is a practical aspect. The important thing is that we should cover all weapons. Any progress in this area will be of great help.

9. As for other outstanding problems, there are difficult problems and less difficult problems. As for Wuller barrage, there are technical difficulties which could be solved. I have been associated with this issue for quite some time. I recently read that the ‘Hindu’ of Madras had reported that there has been some positive agreement on Wuller. This is good. But does the fundamental issue been resolved? The point is that irrespective of Wuller being a barrage or a navigation project, Pakistan should have been informed about India’s intention to undertake the project. We knew about it 18 months after India had begun the project and after India had spent Rs. 18 crores on the project. On Siachen also instead of your troops moving into positions, we should have been informed that the troops have reached a particular point. Your actions created difficulties. On Wuller, the Indus Water Treaty provides for storage of a certain quantity of water but the barrage under construction involves larger quantities of water. Therefore, it is not a navigational channel. India should have consulted us. Through discussions, the design of the project could have been changed to allay our fears. We have the example of Salal Project.

10. FS: Sir, you are very much knowledgeable about these subjects. Our own memory is only of a year or so.

11. We have amended the data on Wuller project. We have also given clarifications on all technical issues to the Pakistani side.

12. Sir, on the issue of Sir Creek, for the first time, we have indicated a movement from our stand. The Pakistani response is awaited. There has been progress on this issue also.

13. As for Siachen, we have had very detailed discussions. We have some level of understanding of the elements that can go into a package of agreement regarding keeping men at such a high altitude. If we set aside the philosophical and what I may call the juridical aspects, and if the two sides can concentrate instead on the disengagement of forces without either side taking advantages, we can resolve the issue.

14. I may clarify that our proposal on chemical weapons is not intended as a substitute for general disarmament but because publicly both India and Pakistan have been proceeding on the basis that we do not have and we do not intend to have chemical weapon programmes. We have been putting pressure on our armed forces to abide by our position not to develop chemical weapons. But recently the US Naval Intelligence reported that Pakistan is developing capability in chemical weapons. We are again facing pressure from our armed forces. Therefore we have said that incorporating the elements of the International Convention we should arrive at a bilateral agreement which ensures that neither side slides into a chemical weapon programme in the interim prior to the conclusion of the International Convention.

15. GIK: I agree that is a good thing. But we should also include nuclear weapons which are much more dangerous. At any rate it is a good thing that we are discussing these issues. But I must mention that with all the paraphernalia that the US has, its Intelligence had propagated about Iraq’s nuclear weapon programme. In the end, the actual situation has shown to be that Saddam has been having some experiments. The rest has been US propaganda. The point is that chemical weapons are not new to modern warfare. I was a student of Chemistry. In World War I chemical weapons were used mustard gas etc.
Laboratory experiments are one thing but it is extremely expensive to develop a delivery system. India may be richer (to develop such delivery systems etc.). Pakistan is not. The US Intelligence had mentioned so much about Iraq’s chemical weapon programme to the extent of maligning it. It is not that I have much love for Saddam but all that is proven is that Iraq has some projects to manufacture chlorine. Therefore, we should not regard US Intelligence pronouncements to be unduly important. If the two of us can agree on the disarmament issues, that is enough.

16. FS: We have also come to an understanding on the exchange of lists relating to the agreement on non-attack on the nuclear installations of the two countries. Sir, we are prepared to discuss with the five countries the issue of nuclear weapons in the region. But we are not aware as to what to discuss. If it is NPT that is to be discussed, we cannot do so.

If through bilateral discussions we can get to know what is to be discussed it will help us to prepare for the future.

17. GIK: I agree. Your position is understandable. It is perfectly justifiable if you need more time. Recently Argentina and Brazil renounced the use of nuclear weapons. We should also have a similar agreement. God forbid if either India or Pakistan is forced to use nuclear weapons against a third country that is another thing, but bilaterally we should renounce the use of nuclear weapons.

18. Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif said that he had a very good meeting at Harare with your Prime Minister. I am glad about the steps that have been taken.

19. FS: The spirit generated in Harare has indeed guided us in our current discussions.

Press Statement issued on the 5th Round of Foreign Secretary level talks.

The fifth round of talks between the Foreign Secretary of India, Mr. Muchkund Dubey, and the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan, Mr. Shaharyar Khan, took place in Islamabad on 30-31 October, 1991.

During his stay in Islamabad, the Foreign Secretary of India was received by the President and the Prime Minister of Pakistan. He also called on the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs and the Foreign Affairs Secretary-General.

The talks were held in a cordial and frank atmosphere. The two sides covered the entire range of bilateral issues and also exchanged view on international issues of mutual interest.

The two sides expressed satisfaction at the outcome of the meetings on Wullar barrage and on the Sir Creek.

They discussed issues relating to disarmament and the banning of weapons of mass destruction. They agreed to consider issuing a joint declaration on chemical weapons. They also agreed to convene a meeting of experts of the two sides at mutually convenient dates to exchange views on a bilateral agreement to ban the development, production, deployment and use of chemical weapons.

The two sides agreed to exchange the coordinates of their nuclear installations and facilities in pursuance of the agreement on the prohibition of attack against nuclear installations and facilities between Pakistan and India on a date to be mutually agreed upon before the 1st of January, 1992.

The two sides discussed the Siachen issue and agreed that the dialogue on Siachen should be resumed at an early date.

The two sides recalled their agreement in principle, arrived at the fourth round of talks, regarding the convening of the sub-commissions of the Joint Commission and agreed that the sub-commissions would meet at an appropriate time on mutually convenient dates.

They agreed that the following meetings may be held prior to the next round of the meeting of Foreign Secretaries:

The Wullar project; the Sir Creek; and Chemical weapons.

The two Foreign Secretaries agreed to hold the sixth round of talks in New Delhi in early 1992.
Media Briefing by the Pakistan Foreign Office Official Spokesman on the 5th Round of Foreign Secretary level talks.

Islamabad, November 1, 1991.

"Some unfreezing of the situation has taken place on the issues of Wullar Barrage and Sir Creek during the recent contacts at the official levels," said the foreign office spokesman, briefing newsmen in Islamabad on November 1. The spokesman said that in view of this unfreezing and "some progress made, it was expected that advance could be made towards the settlement of these two outstanding issues in future meetings."

"I think at this stage, perhaps it may not be appropriate to go into details of the discussion," he added.

To a question if he was aware of a summary put up to the Cabinet by the Ministry of Water and Power which reportedly tended to accept the Indian position, the spokesman said: "Your information seems to be more up-to-date than mine."

He also referred to the discussion on Siachen conflict during the meeting of the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan and said the two sides had agreed that the dialogue on this issue needed to be resumed. They agreed that the dialogue would be resumed at an early date with the view to implementing the June 1989 agreement.

According to the spokesman, Pakistan Foreign Secretary Sharyar Khan recalled during the meeting with his Indian counterpart that in June 1989 meeting of the Defence Secretaries, an agreement had been reached which remained to be implemented and that two meetings at the military-level had taken place without any forward movement.

The spokesman clarified that some differences had cropped up during the two military-level meetings which were resolved at the Foreign Secretary-level meeting and now the dialogue on Siachen would be resumed.

Answering a question, he said while there had not been a major thinning out from the previous position of Indian troops deployment "they are no more in an 'offensive position' on the borders."
On the Kashmir issue, he said the Foreign Secretary pointed out to his Indian counterpart that the right to self-determination promised to the people of Jammu and Kashmir by the UN and by both India and Pakistan had not been exercised by them.

1276. Text of Resolution on Kashmir Issue adopted by the Organisation of Islamic Conference.

Dakar (Senegal) 9-12 December, 1991.

The sixth Islamic Summit Conference held in Dakar, Republic of Senegal, from December 9 to December 12

Reaffirming the principles and objectives of the Organisation of Islamic Conference which emphasizes the common goals and destiny of the peoples of the Islamic ‘Ummah’:

Emphasising the purposes and principles of the UN Charter and recalling the UN resolutions relevant to Jammu and Kashmir

Recalling that the Simla agreement signed between the Governments of India and Pakistan calls for a final settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir issue:

Reaffirming also the importance of the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination enshrined in the Charters of the organization of the Islamic Conference and the UN:

Expressing concern at the alarming increase in the indiscriminate use of force and gross violations of human rights committed against innocent Kashmiris:

1. Calls for a peaceful settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir issue in accordance with the relevant UN resolutions and as agreed upon in the Simla agreement.

Violation of Human Rights Condemned

2. Condemns the massive violation of human rights of the Kashmiri people and calls for the respect of human rights, including the right to self-determination.

3. Calls upon India to allow international human rights groups and humanitarian organizations to visit Jammu and Kashmir.
4. Notes the continuation of dialogue between India and Pakistan and encourages further negotiations with a view to resolving their outstanding differences through peaceful means and affirms that a sustained dialogue is essential to address the core of the problems and to remove the basic causes of tension between India and Pakistan.

5. Expresses its deep concern at the prevailing tension that threatens security and peace in the region.

6. Calls upon India and Pakistan to redeploy their forces to peace-time locations.

Good Offices Mission

7. Endorses the decision of the twentieth Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers to send a good offices mission under the chairman of the Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers with a view to easing the tension between the two countries and to promoting a peaceful settlement.

8. Requests the Secretary-General to send a three-member fact-finding mission to visit Jammu and Kashmir as decided by the 20th Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers, and submit a report to the Secretary-General.

9. Also requests the Secretary-General to present his report on the implementation of the provisions of this resolution at the 21st Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers and at the 7th Islamic Summit.

10. Decides to consider the Jammu and Kashmir dispute at the 21st Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers and at the 7th Islamic Summit.

1277. India’s asked to accept Pakistan’s demand to reduce the staff strength of Indian Consulate General in Karachi from 64 to 20.

India rejected on December 31 1991 as ‘unacceptable’ the Pakistan demand to drastically slash the staff at the Indian Consulate-General in Karachi, an Indian government spokesman said in Delhi.

Foreign Secretary J. N. Dixit told Pakistan High Commissioner Riaz Khokar that because of the heavy consular work load in Karachi, it would be “illogical” to reduce the staff strength from 64 to 20.

“Mr. Dixit and I just discussed the issue and I was asked to convey certain decisions of the Indian government to mine,” the Pakistani High Commissioner said.

The Spokesperson of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs said “We have conveyed that the Pakistani decision is not acceptable, as it is not in consonance with the spirit of the code of conduct regarding the functioning of the diplomatic establishments of the two countries,” and added that “now the ball is in their court”.

He said the Indian rejection of the Pakistani demand also stemmed from the fact that it was “unilateral”. “We issue 700 visas daily from Karachi, and despite the recent Pakistani advisory to its people (to avoid travel to India), we have given out 8,000(sic) visas,” the spokesman said.

[The Pakistani warning came in the wake of the razing of Babri Masjid in Ayodhya.]

Mr. Dixit told Mr. Khokar that statements by Pakistani officials about the mosque’s destruction “only served to heighten tensions and generate extremist communal sentiments both in India and Pakistan.”

In Islamabad Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan said also on December 31 that it had the right to ask India to slash its consular staff in Karachi.

“A receiving state can decide how many diplomats and staff members a guest country should have. The right is given under the Geneva Convention for diplomatic relations,” he said, and added that in a recent bilateral agreement signed in October 1992 it was agreed that there should be a balance in diplomatic staff between the two countries.
“The number in Karachi is too many. They have 64 and we have only two diplomats and one official in Bombay,” he said.

“We have received the text of the Indian refusal from our ambassador and we are studying it,” he added while declining to make any more comment.

[Meanwhile, diplomatic sources in Islamabad said that India has hinted to Pakistan that if it insists on India reducing its staff in Karachi, India may ask Islamabad to reduce its staff at the embassy in New Delhi. The refusal and Pakistan’s insistence has worsened tension in the already strained diplomatic relations.]

Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan called the Indian High Commissioner, Mr. S. K. Lambah, to his office and reaffirmed the government’s decision to scale down the Indian Consulate-General office staff from 62 to 20, according to a statement issued on January 4 by the Foreign Office. The statement said Mr. Shaharyar conveyed to Mr. Lambah that the government’s decision was based on the need to maintain a balanced representation in accordance with the code of conduct signed between the two governments Meeting between Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao and Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on February 2, 1992 on the sidelines of the meeting of the World Economic Forum.

Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and Prime Minister, Mr. P.V. Narasimha Rao, reaffirmed their determination on February 2 that they will strive to bring peace, stability and progress to their two countries.

The two Prime Ministers expressed these views after 55 minutes of one-to-one talks at the World Economic Forum meeting in Switzerland.

Mr. Nawaz Sharif said: "We had very good talks. Mr. Rao is a good man; that's why our talks were also very good."

"We had talks in Zimbabwe in October last and had decided to solve all our issues peacefully and through negotiations. The talks at Sri Lanka, last year, also were imbued with the same spirit. I am sure that this series of talks will have positive results. We will meet again at Rio de Janerio in June this year during an international conference," he added.

He said the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan will continue their meetings to discuss the details of all issues and the mechanism of solving them, "I am sure that the two Foreign Secretaries will make further progress in a positive manner," he added.

Asked whether the two leaders discussed improvement and expansion of economic relations, Mr. Sharif said: "I suggested to Mr. Rao that while we are busy in political negotiations, we also should discuss economic question. Both the countries are introducing economic reforms but these reforms will be rendered useless if the political relations between the two countries go on deteriorating." “Because of this, it is all the more essential that we improve our relations quickly”, he added.

He said: “Let 1992 be the year of reconciliation between Pakistan and India. Mr. Rao also expects that relations will improve. We will keep talking to each other as this is the way to solve all issues and problems”.

Asked whether they have moved from generalities to specifics of the issues involved, he said the issues stand identified. “We now hope to make progress for their settlement”, he added.

The Indian Prime Minister was asked what specific progress has been made in the talks since the two Prime Ministers met in Harare in October last. He replied “Our talks are not in the nature that we should be regularly reporting progress in the discussions. When talks are held at our level, then the effort is to understand and know each other. We also are trying to understand each other’s apprehensions, problems and constraints so that steps to promote friendship and good relations can be undertaken. We cannot report each time we meet that we have moved so many steps forward. We take an overall view of all the issues while the Foreign Secretaries handle the nitty gritty part of the issues”. He said the two Foreign Secretaries meet in March and “they will examine as to how far we have moved ahead in solving the specific problems”.

Asked whether the Kashmir dispute came up during talks, Mr. Rao said Kashmir is always covered in the talks. Kashmir is part of the problem of issues between the two countries. “We discuss the entire gamut of issues. It (Kashmir) is a part of the issues,” he added.

He said “It is good to talk but there is no secrecy about our talks. We have nothing to hide from our Foreign Secretaries. We have created a good atmosphere. We should take advantage of this situation. We have been meeting each other at international conferences but the Foreign Secretaries meet more often. We wish that we could meet more often.”

Asked what is the difficulty in holding more one-to-one meetings between the two Prime Ministers, he said: “Wish you know how a Prime Minister functions and how busy he remains always.”

Asked whether the two Prime Minister discussed the nuclear issue, he said: “We discussed all issues that are outstanding.”

Asked whether he will visit Pakistan, Mr. Rao said: “I will like it very much but no date has been set. Similarly, Mr. Nawaz Sharif wishes to visit India.” he added. Mr. Nawaz Sharif interjected: “I have invited Mr. Rao to visit Pakistan but when.. he will make the visit only Mr. Rao will tell you.”
1279. Briefing by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs declining to clarify Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif’s remarks that Kashmir could choose to be independent.

The foreign Office declined on February 19 to comment on the reported remarks of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif made in Tehran that the Kashmiris in their right for self-determination could choose to become an independent nation. Mr. Sharif had said in a BBC interview that if the right to self-determination was exercised by the Kashmiris, of course, they would have a right to decide whether they wanted to be independent*.

The spokesman of the Foreign Office told the media at the weekly news briefing that he himself had read these reports but if there were any comments to be offered, then the Prime Minister himself would speak. He reiterated that Pakistan always maintained that the Kashmir dispute ought to be resolved peacefully according to the wishes of the Kashmiris in accordance with the UN resolution in the spirit of the Simla Agreement.

Asked to give a categorical reply whether this third option of an independent Kashmir had ever been considered in the Foreign Office, he did not contradict this assumption but added that the Foreign Office deliberates continuously on Kashmir with a view to expediting a political and peaceful settlement of the Kashmir issue under UN resolutions. Pakistan had raised the issue at several international forums and would continue to do so, he added.

Asked if the march to the LOC by the JKLF had changed the views of the government, the spokesman said that the march had brought the issue to the notice of the international community as also the desperation of the people of Kashmir on both sides because of their denial of self-determination by the Indians.

He said, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Siddique Kunju wrote to the UN Secretary-General on February 13 and drew his attention to the grave situation

* The Pakistan Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Siddique Kanju while addressing a press conference in Islamabad on February 20 clarified that "Pakistan is not pursuing any option for independent Kashmir and is committed to the right of self-determination for the people of Kashmir in accordance with the UN Security Council resolutions. He said that the remarks of the Prime Minister in Tehran to the BBC were misinterpreted. Nawaz Sharif in his remarks to the daily NEWS on February 21 said ‘the proposition of an independent Kashmir is being put forward by the enemies of Pakistan.’ He said the people of Kashmir always sided with Pakistan and wanted to become part of the country. He said there was a conspiracy in attributing the concept of independent Kashmir to him."
in Kashmir. The brutalities of the Indian forces perpetrated on the Kashmiris were also highlighted. The letter, the spokesman said, gave details of massive violation of human rights inside Kashmir and called upon the UN Secretary-General to investigate the gravity of the situation in Kashmir through the dispatch of a fact-finding mission or some other mission.

1280. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on the Abduction of Indian Diplomat in Pakistan.

New Delhi, May 26, 1992.

The Spokesman, while briefing newsmen, stated that the incident of forcible abduction of a senior diplomat in Islamabad outside his residence, is viewed by the Government of India with the utmost seriousness and concern. We find it extraordinary that such crude attempts have indulged in, by way of what may be a response to the Indian authorities, having apprehended about eight weeks ago, several Pakistani Intelligence operatives in Delhi and Punjab. These operatives were caught red-handed. We find it a curious coincidence that such patently unacceptable behavior which seeks to create an incident, takes place

On May 24 Pakistan had declared Mr. Rajesh Mittal an official of the Indian High Commission persona non grata and ordered him to leave the country within 24 hours. He was a Political Counsellor in the High Commission looking after SAARC affairs. Pakistan Foreign Office claimed that he was indulging in undesirable activities and that a FIR No 158 had been registered against him and a case under Section 12-5 of Official Secrets Act No 1923 had been filed. It may be recalled that a Pakistani diplomat Arshad Ali was last month was declared persona non grata and expelled from India. Talking to the BBC after his release he said he was severely beaten and tortured by the security personnel. He showed his swollen face with scares on his body to the journalists to leave no body in doubt about the manner in which he was manhandled by the Pakistan police. In Islamabad on May 25 Pakistani Foreign Secretary expressed the confidence that the scheduled Foreign Secretary level talks would not be affected by this incident. He denied the expulsion of Mr. Mittal was in retaliation to the expulsion of Pakistani diplomat by New Delhi last month. Meanwhile Pakistan announced that Mohammad Khan, Mr. Mittal’s Pakistani contact now under arrest had made significant revelations and had confessed to his relations with the Indian diplomat "in no uncertain terms". Pakistan on May 27 rejected Indian request to land a special military aircraft to pickup Mr. Mittal who had been badly beaten by the Pakistan security authorities. A Pakistani Foreign Office Spokesman said that there would be no objection if a civilian aircraft was sent for the same purpose.
with uncanny regularity, just before meaningful dialogues are scheduled to be held, on matters of bilateral interest and concern.

In the face of the unthinkably violent, inhuman and brutal treatment meted out to a senior Indian diplomat, we have, this afternoon, summoned the Pakistani Acting High Commissioner, Mr. Shahid Malik, and have told him that we have identified two Pakistani Counsellors, who have been acting in violation of the accepted norms of diplomatic functioning, and who have been indulging in activities which are clearly prejudicial to the security of India.

While lodging a strong protest about these two individuals, we have asked that they be withdrawn from India within 48 hours as they have been declared persona non grata. These two Pakistani Counsellors are Syed Fayaz Mahmud Endrabi and Zafr-ul-Hassan.

In response to a question as to whether India had also “interrogated” the Pakistani diplomat in a manner similar to the handling of Mr. Rajesh Mittal, the Spokesman replied that India believed in abiding by the stipulations of the Vienna Convention and did not believe in stooping to the levels of others.

Replying to a question as to whether the Foreign Secretary level talks would be held as scheduled even after this incident or if there is any change in the schedule, the Spokesman stated that as far as the schedule of the Foreign Secretary level talks is concerned, we have no information about any change in the programme. The Spokesman added that we have conveyed to the Pakistanis that such incidents are not conducive to building an atmosphere where constructive dialogue can take place, and that they do not help towards building a friendly environment.

Responding to another question as to whether India had not indulged in the behaviour similar to the Pakistanis, in the past, contrary to the Vienna Convention, the Spokesman stated that we have invariably abided by the Vienna Convention, and we have never stooped to the levels of others.

Replying to another query as to whether the question of treatment of diplomats is not discussed during the Foreign Secretary level talks, the Spokesman stated that the question of treatment to each other’s diplomats is discussed. But, there is a basic asymmetry. In India, the Pakistani diplomats are treated like diplomats of any other country; while in Pakistan, Indian diplomats are treated differently from other diplomats. There is a total asymmetry in the way the diplomats are treated between the two countries.

Responding to another question as to whether Mr. Mittal was a member of the Indian Intelligence Service, the Spokesman stated that all members of Indian Mission are a part of the Ministry of External Affairs establishment. We do not differentiate between members of the IFS or of any other service; military or civilian; they are all members of the Ministry of External Affairs establishment.

In response to another question as to whether India has sought that punishment of the persons responsible for torturing Mr. Mittal, the Spokesman stated that we have demanded yesterday, in our demarche to the Pakistanis, and we have told the Pakistani CDA yesterday, that we would expect that the criminals who conducted this operation would be punished in order to deter their peers from repeating such violent and inhuman behavior.

In response to a question as to why the two Pakistani diplomats who indulged in these activities were not expelled earlier, the Spokesman stated that these decisions are taken by the Government and we have no comments on this matter.

While briefing newsmen, the Spokesman stated that the Government of India have decided to call for a postponement of the Foreign Secretary level talks with Pakistan, which were scheduled from 1-3 of June, 1992. He said that we had waited for over 36-hours to see if there was any rational reaction to the blatant violation of international law and diplomatic conduct that has taken place in Islamabad. Regrettably, the statements emanating from various sources in the Pakistan Government show no sense of regret nor any remorse for the brutal treatment meted out to a senior Indian diplomat; on the contrary, the Pakistan Government have continued to indulge in the making of wild and unfounded allegations about the conduct of a senior member of the Indian High Commission in Islamabad. In these circumstances, the Government of India could not but take into account the unreasonable attitude of the Pakistan Government which betrayed no desire to move forward, in building our bilateral relationship in a meaningful manner. We also had to respect outraged public sentiment in India. This unfortunate incident has vitiated the atmosphere. We hope to be able to reschedule the talks when the climate improves and some semblance of normalcy is restored.
We have been monitoring the medical reports coming in from Islamabad about the condition of our senior Indian diplomat who was tortured and brutally treated by the authorities in Islamabad, ever since he returned home from the police station. We are concerned that Mr. Mittal’s condition remains serious. Government of India have, therefore, decided to make special arrangements to evacuate our official from Islamabad. The special arrangements included a special aircraft with a full medical team on board including a Cardiologist and a Physiotherapist. As a step towards finalizing these arrangements, we have asked, through our Mission in Islamabad, for special flight clearance for this aircraft.

* Reacting to the Indian statement the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office expressed surprise in Islamabad on May 26. He regretted that India had not taken the opportunity to discuss substantive issues at talks which were to precede the meeting between Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and Indian Prime Minister Narasimha Rao at Rio de Janeiro (Brazil) on June 13. Referring to the Indian government’s decision to expel two senior Pakistani diplomats from India, the spokesman stated that the decision was “an obvious case of retaliation which was unjustified, excessive and highly regrettable,” Mr. Rajesh Mittal, senior diplomat in Indian High Commission, Islamabad, who had been expelled from Pakistan recently, had been involved in objectionable activities in violation of accepted norms of diplomatic conduct “for which irrefutable evidence is available”. The spokesman said that the Foreign Secretary-level talks would have helped to mitigate the adverse impact of the recent incident involving the diplomats of the two countries. He expressed the hope that the talks would be rescheduled at the earliest opportunity. The spokesman told newsmen he hoped that the forthcoming meeting between the two Prime Ministers in Rio de Janeiro (Brazil) by the middle of the next month on the occasion of the global environment conference will help iron out various differences and disputes, particularly the Kashmir issue— the most crucial dispute— between the two countries.
Pakistan Prime Minister has offered the Indian Prime Minister a summit meeting on Kashmir. A proposal to this effect was made in a letter delivered to Mr. Rao on Mr. Sharif’s behalf by Pak Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan on August 17 in New Delhi.

Mr. Shaharyar Khan who had a 30-minute meeting with Mr. Rao described it as “very cordial.” He said the Indian Prime Minister was courteous and expressed willingness to consider Mr. Nawaz Sharif’s offer to discuss the Kashmir issue under Article 6 of the Simla Agreement.

Mr. Rao told Mr. Khan that India would convey an appropriate response to the proposal. However, in the sixth round of Foreign Secretary-level talks, Indian Foreign Secretary J.N. Dixit in his interaction with the Pakistani counterpart emphasized that the Simla Agreement had to be taken in its totality. “It is not possible to isolate individual articles of the agreement,” said Mr. Dixit.

The Article 6 invoked by Pakistan relates to a meeting of Heads of State at a convenient date and meetings of representatives to find, among other things, a “final settlement of Jammu and Kashmir.” Mr. Nawaz Sharif’s proposal came within three days of his invitation to Mr. Rao to visit Islamabad for a summit meeting.

Briefing newsmen, Mr. Shaharyar Khan said confusion had been created by a Press Trust of India report which said that Pakistan had agreed to give up its emphasis on the UN resolution and instead wants to solve the Kashmir issue under the purview of the Simla Agreement. In a statement, he said: “It is Pakistan’s considered view that the UN Security Council resolutions calling for a plebiscite in Kashmir remain valid. While in our view the Simla Agreement provides the means to negotiate and resolve the dispute, the UN Security Council resolutions provide the framework for a settlement.”

Clarifying his statement which was misinterpreted by this Indian Press on August 16, he said in fact Article 1 of the Simla Agreement recognized the overriding importance of the UN Charter as means towards a peaceful settlement of disputes. “It is, therefore, erroneous to interpret our desire for a dialogue on the Kashmir issue within the framework of the Simla Agreement as a renunciation of the relevant UN resolutions in this regards” he said.
He added that Pakistan had proposed bilateral discussions under the Simla Agreement as it was Pakistan’s considered view that the UN Security Council resolutions calling for a plebiscite remained valid. Pakistan, he said, proposed the holding of bilateral discussions with India on the Kashmir issue under Article 5 of the Simla Agreement which stated that a final settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir issue needed to be discussed between the two sides. “We hope that India will respond positively to our proposal,” he said.

Mr. Shaharyar Khan said that Pakistan believed that Kashmir was the core issue which had bedeviled relations between the two countries for the past four decades and that its settlement would lead to the early resolution of all other issues between the two countries. There was no deviation in Pakistan’s known stance on the Kashmir issue and it was “erroneous” to interpret Pakistan’s desire to initiate a dialogue on the Kashmir issue as a renunciation of its earlier adherence to the UN resolution. However, he said that the process of normalization of relations would be carried out as envisaged in the agreement. But, he pointed out, it appeared that while Pakistan wanted the question of Kashmir—the core issue—to be resolved before progressing to other matters, India wished other problems to be attended to before approaching the Kashmir dispute.

Mr. Shaharyar Khan and Mr. J.N. Dixit had a significantly long talk prior to the official round of discussions. While they were scheduled to hold talks without aides for 10 minutes, the two Foreign Secretaries were closeted together for almost 45 minutes. An Indian External Affairs Ministry spokesman later said that the talks were progressing. He, however, added: “We will take up the entire gamut of Indo-Pak relations without isolating the Kashmir issue. Since the signing of the Simla Agreement in 1972, India and Pakistan have not had formal talks on the Kashmir issue though it had figured in discussions as part of the entire gamut of bilateral relations,” he added.

The spokesman said all other bilateral matters came up for discussion in the first round of the present talks, which lasted for two hours. Subjects discussed included Sir Creek, the Tulbul navigation project, and confidence building measures.

An agreement on banning the use of chemical weapons and on a code of conduct for diplomats will be signed on August 19, he said.

Mr. Shaharyar Khan was in New Delhi to participate in the Foreign Secretary level talks with his Indian counterpart J.N. Dixit.

New Delhi, August 19, 1992.

The Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan are sincerely desirous of facilitating, on a reciprocal basis, the smooth and unhindered functioning of their diplomatic and consular officials in conformity with recognized norms of international law and practice. Both Government are of the view that there should be no violation of the privileges and immunities of their diplomatic and consular officials. There should be no interference in the conduct of their legitimate activities and no offence against their dignity and person.

Motivated by their commitment to the recognized norms of international law and particularly keeping in view the facilities, privileges and immunities ensured to the diplomatic and consular agents of the state in the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations of 1961, the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations of 1963 and the UN convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents, 1973, the Governments of the Republic of India and the Islamic Republic of Pakistan have agreed to take additional appropriate measures to ensure compliance with the Laws and Conventions. The two Governments agree to strictly observe the principles and provisions of the Vienna Convention.

Without detracting from their rights and obligations as Sending/Receiving states and from the privileges, immunities of Diplomatic/consular personnel admissible under international law and their obligations to respect the laws of the Receiving State, the two Governments have agreed to the following code in respect of the conduct of their diplomatic missions:

(i) The dignity and personal inviolability of diplomatic/consular personnel of the Sending State and their families shall be guaranteed and fully respected by the Receiving State. In particular, threat or recourse to physical violence against an official of the mission and his family shall not be resorted to under any pretext or circumstances. The Receiving State would on an urgent basis, provide police protection for both official premises and residences of diplomatic and consular officials when a request is made.

(ii) Intrusive and aggressive surveillance and actions such as verbal and physical harassment, disconnecting of telephone lines threatening telephone calls, pursuit in cars and unauthorized entry into residences shall not be resorted to. There shall be no surveillance of members of families of diplomatic/consular personnel to the Sending State. Strict reciprocity shall be maintained in this respect.

(iii) The safety and security of the premises of diplomatic/consular personnel and inviolability of their person and of their families and official/residential premises shall be respected and protected. Families and house guests must not be subjected to aggressive or intrusive behaviour. Locally recruited domestic staff would be allowed to work freely at the residence.

(iv) The authorities of the Receiving State shall avoid harassment and questioning of visitors to the High Commissions/Consulates and to the residences of their officials.

(v) The inviolability of the official/private vehicles, duly registered in the name of the mission and diplomatic/consular personnel shall be respected. Diplomatic officials should register their cars promptly. Use of public/hired transport when necessary will not be interfered with.

(vi) In the event of a breach of the diplomatic code of conduct, the complaining party may bring the matter to the attention of the Foreign Office/High Commission. The Foreign Office/Head of the Diplomatic Mission would in the first instance, look into the circumstances of the complaint before lodging a formal protest. Once a protest is lodged, the Receiving State/High Commission shall take prompt measures to investigate and take steps to rectify the situation. Both sides shall exercise restraint to avoid unnecessary escalation.

(vii) If the breach requires a diplomatic official to be declared Persona non grata (PNG), the official should be given at least a week’s notice before leaving the country.

(viii) The diplomatic/consular officials shall strictly respect the laws and norms of the Receiving State. In particular, they shall, as applicable to diplomats of other countries:

(a) abide by regulations regarding prohibited and restricted areas and obtain formal permission where necessary; and

(b) respect the religious, social and cultural sensitivities of the Receiving State.

(ix) Strength of the missions in either country should be maintained at a balance level between the High Commissions of the two countries in respect of capitals and between their Deputy High Commissions/Consulates in other cities. Replacement visas would be given to officials posted to diplomatic missions in each other’s country within 30 days of application. Replies to all other visa requests would be furnished within 45 days.

(x) Media representatives and employees of airlines posted in both countries will be extended all facilities available to them under the law and bilateral understandings.

(xi) Both countries shall ensure that information provided to the media pertaining to treatment of diplomatic/consular officials is factual and unbiased and does not exacerbate tension.

(xii) The implementation of the Code of Conduct shall be reviewed from time to time through diplomatic channels.

The present Code of Conduct shall enter force on the date of its signing and remain valid for indefinite period unless either party gives to the other the written notice three months in advance of its intention to terminate the Code of Conduct.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the duly authorized representatives of the two Governments have hereto signed this Code of Conduct and affix thereto their seals.

1284. Press Statement issued at the end of Foreign Secretary level talks.

New Delhi, August 19, 1992.

The sixth round of talks between the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan, Mr. Shaharyar M. Khan and Foreign Secretary of India, Mr. J.N. Dixit, took place in New Delhi from 16 to 19 August 1992.

During his stay in Delhi, the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan called on President Dr. Shankar Dayal Sharma, Prime Minister Shri Narasimha Rao and Minister of State for External Affairs, Shri R. L. Bhatia.

The Foreign Secretary of Pakistan handed over a letter from Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif addressed to Prime Minister Narasimha Rao. The letter related to a solution of the Jammu and Kashmir problem. The Prime Minister of India indicated that after considering the proposal in Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif’s letter a reply will be sent*.

The talks were held in a cordial and friendly atmosphere. The discussion covered the whole range of bilateral issues. The two sides also exchanged views on regional and international issues of mutual interest. The two Foreign Secretaries exchanged the Instruments of Ratification of the Agreement on Prevention of Air Space Violations by Military Aircraft and the Agreement on Advance Notice of Military Exercises. Manoeuvres and Troop Movements which were signed in New Delhi in April 1991 and subsequently ratified by both Governments.

* At the end of his visit to New Delhi Pakistan’s Foreign Secretary told the media that “I derive satisfaction from the fact that we agreed that the issue of Jammu and Kashmir has to be addressed. Though our perceptions differ widely, the fact that we have agreed on the need to address this issue is in itself a step forward. We shall carry forward our discussions in the next round.” He indicated that the two prime ministers would carry forward the process when they meet on September 3 at Jakarta during the summit meeting of the non-aligned nations. A Pakistan foreign office spokesman said in Islamabad also on August 19 that the two foreign secretaries have discussed the whole spectrum of relations between the two countries including Kashmir, nuclear non-proliferation, Siachen and prohibition of all weapons of mass destruction. The Spokesman confirmed that the Pakistani Consulate General in Bombay had started working as from August 14, 1992. Also on the same day Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif said in Islamabad that the settlement of Kashmir issue was vital for restoration of normal relations with India. Kashmir was at the top of “our agenda” as special relations between India and Pakistan depended on it.

Meanwhile Pakistan again raked up the question of protection of the Babri Mosque when the Minister of State Siddique Kanju speaking on an adjournment motion in the National Assembly urged India as well the Indian leadership on August 18 to take appropriate precautionary measures for the protection and restitution of the Babri Masjid. He said dangers facing the mosque were a matter of deep concern for the Muslims not only in Pakistan but through out the world. Assaults of Hindu extremists organizations on the sacred monument had offended the sentiments of the Muslims all over the world.
The two sides also signed a Joint Declaration on the Complete Prohibition of Chemical Weapons and the Code of Conduct for Treatment of Diplomatic/Consular Personnel in India and Pakistan.

During the talks, the Foreign Secretaries reached agreement on the following schedule of meetings:

(i) Siachen—October/November 1992.
(iii) Technical discussions on the issue of missing defence personnel and civilian prisoners—September/October 1992.
(iv) India-Pakistan Committee to Combat Drug Trafficking and Smuggling..

The two sides agreed to discuss additional confidence-Building Measures.

The Indian side formally handed over a letter of invitation to the Chief of Army Staff of Pakistan to visit India.

Both sides reviewed the on-going Secretary-level discussions on Tulbal/Wullar Project.

The Foreign Secretaries discussed issues relating to disarmament and the banning of weapons of mass destruction. They agreed to consider issuing a Joint Declaration on Biological Weapons.

The two sides reaffirmed their agreement, in principle, to convene the Sub-Commissions of the Joint Commission at an appropriate time on mutually convenient dates. Both sides agreed that, in the meanwhile, senior officials of the concerned Ministries would meet.

The Foreign Secretaries agreed to hold their next round of discussions at Islamabad.

This House.

— Noting that the Babari Masjid is an historic Islamic monument revered by the masses throughout the Muslim world.

— Recognising that neither the historical documents nor archeological evidence support the contention regarding the presence of Ram Mandir at the sight of Babri Masjid, — Distressed that this historic Babri Msjid which is part of the Muslim heritage in the subcontinent is in imminent danger of desecration and demolition,

— Cognizant of the fact that the desecration of the historic Masjid offends the religious sensibility of all Muslims,

— Realising that the respect and sanctity of the places of worship is a recognized international norm, — Concerned over the plans to construct a Ram Mandir at the sight of the Babri Masjid,

— Taking note of the efforts of the Indian Government to persuade the Hindu extremist leaders to temporarily suspend the construction work on the controversial temple,

(i) Expresses deep distress and anguish to desecrate and demolish the historic Babari Masjid,

(ii) Urges the Government of India to take appropriate remedial measures to ensure protection and preservation of the Sanctity of Babri Masjid,

(iii) Trusts that the Government of India would fulfill its moral and constitutional responsibility to ensure full protection of this historic and revered place of worship.

Statement by the Government of India in response to a resolution passed by Pakistan National Assembly on Ramjanam Bhoomi - Babri Masjid issue.

New Delhi, August 28, 1992.

We have seen the resolution adopted by Pakistan National Assembly on August 27 about Ramjanam Bhoomi-Babri Masjid issue. The resolution constitutes a blatant interference in our internal affairs and is totally unacceptable. Pakistan has no locus standi on the Ramjanam Bhoomi - Babri Masjid issue and, consequently, the nature and contents of the resolution by its National Assembly is rejected by us in its entirety.

We are not surprised that Pakistan which is a theocratic State is unable to even comprehend the secular and democratic principles of our constitution and polity.

This resolution which was sponsored by the Government of Pakistan belies the expectations raised by recent meeting of Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan that there would be a greater degree of understanding, non-interference and cooperation shown by Pakistan in the conduct of its relations with India.

So enraged was the Government of India at the national Assembly resolution that next day on August 29 it issued another statement which said: “The Pakistan National Assembly has passed a consensus resolution, moved by Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Siddique Khan Kanju, urging India to take appropriate measures to ensure protection and preservation of the sanctity of the Babri Masjid in Ayodhya. India totally rejected this blatant and unwarranted interference in its internal affairs. Pakistan has no locus standi whatsoever on the Ram Janam Bhoomi-Babri Masjid Issue. With a view to conveying India’s strong sentiments and deep concern over Pakistan’s latest act of hostility and undue interference, at the highest level, PM has directed our High Commissioner in Islamabad to meet Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif. The meeting is scheduled to take place at 11.00hrs today.”

Foreign Secretary from Lambah.

As directed by the Prime Minister, I met PM NS (Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif) at 11 A.M. today and conveyed to him our grave concern at the resolution adopted by the National Assembly of Pakistan on Babri Mosque. I told PM NS:

(i) I have been personally instructed by PM to meet PM NS and convey the strong feelings of the Government and the people of India on this issue.

(ii) I told him that timing was unfortunate and the wording of the resolution unacceptable as it was a blatant interference in India’s internal affairs.

(iii) As regards timing, I mentioned:

(a) That it should have happened after the successful round of Foreign Secretary-level meeting perplexed us.

(b) There was no imaginable reason for a resolution to be moved or passed. In this connection I mentioned to him that even Western newspapers have been praising the Government the way it has handled the issue and referred to the cover story on PM in the current issue of Time magazine which referred to the fact that the efforts of PM had resulted to “defuse the crisis”.

(iv) To our mind the resolution passed by the National Assembly at the instigation of the Government certainly appears to be an attempt to hinder the efforts of the Government of India instead of helping it.

2. I told PM NS that we were surprised that this should have happened when Pakistan had proposed talks with India under Simla Agreement in terms of the letter which PM NS had sent to PM. The passage of resolution was completely contrary to the spirit and wording of the Simla Agreement. I drew a comparison of what had happened in the National Assembly of Pakistan on July 25, 1974 when the then Pak Minister for Foreign Affairs, the late Mr. Aziz Ahmad refused to comment on the Sadar Bazar riots in Delhi saying that under the Shimla Agreement it was an internal matter of India. I also reminded PM NS that when the Jamaat leader Gafoor Ahmed insisted, GOP through Swiss Embassy sent an apologetic note on August 8, 1974 conveying the feelings of the House. We had sent a reply on August 16, 1974 rejecting the note. This time, I told PM NS, we have the reverse situation The MOS for Foreign Affairs Kanju himself moves resolution. I said I had drawn this comparison to bring to his notice the completely contrary fashion in which situations had been handled in the National Assembly of Pakistan in July 1974 and August 1992.

3. PM NS has been away to Karachi and Lahore for the last few days and returned only last night. He asked Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan as to who had moved the resolution. He gave the impression that he was not aware of the fact that MOS for Foreign Affairs Kanju had moved the resolution. Shaharyar Khan tried to explain that the resolution had been moved by his Minister to defuse the situation and to prevent any further build up in the National Assembly. PM NS told him that he took note of what I have said.

4. I might mention that Pakistan has been raising the Babri Mosque issue on different occasions since October 1990. On October 26, 1990 Pak Foreign Office even while acknowledging issue was an internal matter of India issued statement “expressing concern and anxiety over communal tension in India created over Babri Mosque issue.” On November 1, 1990, Pakistan’s caretaker Prime Minister JATOI condemned desecration of the Babri Mosque and said it was the moral duty of the Indian Government to protect the places of worship of Muslims. On November 14, 1990, Standing Committee of Pakistan Senate on Religious and Minorities Affairs said it has “taken serious note of desecration of Babri Mosque and firm stand on the issue”. On July 15, 1992, Pak Foreign Office spokesman again said that “GOP expressed the hope that GOI will fulfill its constitutional obligation to protect the Babri Mosque as well as rights of the Muslim minority of India.” And now, on August 27, 1992 the National Assembly passed the above resolution.

5. Press coverage here on National Assembly resolution has been on a low key.

6. I also handed over PM’s letter dated August 24 to PM NS.

JS (IPA) from LAMBAH

As a follow up of my meeting with PM NS at 11.A.M. today, I met Pak Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan at 3.15 p.m. today and emphasized upon him again the Public Feelings in India against the resolution passed in the Pak National Assembly on Babri Mosque which was an interference in our internal affairs.

2. Shaharyar Khan tried to explain the circumstances in which the resolution was passed. He said that over a period of time emotions have been built up on this issue and when he was in Delhi Liaqat Baluch of Jammat-i-Islami had moved an adjournment motion in Pak National Assembly which he was persuaded at that time not to press. (I understand Press report on this aspect had been faxed to the Ministry). He said that under the circumstances the motive of the resolution was to kill the discussion.

3. Shaharyar Khan said that he wanted us to know that at the Foreign Secretary-level talks, references to Babri Mosque have been on the decline. He said that former Foreign Secretary Tanvir Ahmad Khan had raised it in the earlier rounds and he himself had been mentioning it on a sliding scale in the subsequent two rounds. In the just concluded FS-level talks, this issue was not at all raised by Pak side. He said the manner in which our PM handled the issue was perceived by both official and non-official circles in Pakistan as "very moderate, wise and cooling the temperature" which would hopefully result in the resolution of the problem. He added that subsequent to my discussions this morning, MP NS would be conveying these sentiments personally to PM.

4. I also drew the attention of Shaharyar Khan to the discussions which have been taking place in the senate and the useful statements made by Health Minister Gardezi who was replying on behalf of MOS for Foreign Affairs. I told him that GOP must take all measures to ensure that a resolution of this kind is not passed in the senate. He took note of what I said.

1289. Statement made by the Indian Delegation to the NAM Summit on the reference made by Pakistan to Kashmir at the Non-aligned Summit.

Jakarta, September 1, 1992.

"It is with very considerable regret that the Indian Delegation is constrained to take the floor at this stage of the proceedings. We are obliged to set the record straight, following the unfortunate references by the distinguished Prime Minister of Pakistan to an (purely) internal matter of India or, what is at most, a bilateral issue between India and Pakistan.

His references to the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir are unwarranted interference in the internal affairs of India. There should not be any doubt in any body’s mind that the State of Jammu and Kashmir is, and shall forever remain an integral and inseparable part of the Republic of India.

If there are any issues related to this matter which Pakistan wishes to discuss with India, the framework for it is provided in the Simla Agreement—an agreement based on thoughtful and thorough deliberations between the Prime Ministers of the two countries, an agreement to which the Government of Pakistan has given commitments in solemn obligation.

Pakistan delegation’s attempt to raise this extraneous issue in our forum was all the more regrettable in view of the pressing appeal from the Chairman of the Movement and host country of this summit meeting, at the Ministerial Meeting on 29th August, that all members should adhere to the original terms of reference and traditions of NAM Meetings and that they should refrain from referring to bilateral issues so that the Summit could concentrate on the more relevant and more important issues of common concern to all members of the Movement.
It is our abiding perception and conviction that issues related to Kashmir can never be resolved by raising them in international forums”.

1290. Meeting between Prime Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao and Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on the sidelines of the NAM Summit.

Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan met in Jakarta for a 75-minute meeting for the fifth time since they assumed power. Describing the meeting as ‘meaningful and constructive”Nawaz Sharif later told the journalists “I told the Indian Prime Minister clearly that calling Kashmir an integral part of India would not serve the cause of Indian people. Both the countries should adopt a logical way to overcome the problem”. He said that he told Mr. Rao that “all bilateral problems could be solved and the setback in Indo-Pak relations could be overcome only with the resolution of the Kashmir dispute”.

* On September 9 Pakistan Foreign office spokesman said that both Pakistan and India “have a desire to continue mutual dialogue to find out a peaceful settlement of the Kashmir dispute”. Briefing newsmen he said the importance of the meeting between the two Prime Ministers should not be under-estimated as every meeting which takes place on such levels always contributes-positively to achieve desired results for solution of various issues. He reiterated that the Kashmir issue had figured prominently during the meeting. He did not agree with a questioner that the window for making further progress for securing peaceful solution of the issue had been closed. Asked if Indian Prime Minister Rao had boycotted Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif’s speech or if it was a walkout, he recalled that Nawaz Sharif’s speech had a number of paragraphs and some of them had clearly spelt out Pakistan’s position on the Kashmir issue. Besides emphasizing the need for a peaceful settlement of the dispute, he had also appealed to his Indian counterpart to enter into substantive dialogue on the issue. Clarifying, the spokesman said that when Mr. Nawaz Sharif delivered his address at the summit, Mr. Rao was not in his seat. However, the Indian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs remained present during Mr. Sharif’s speech, he added. Asked as to what precisely were the contents of Mr. Rao’s letter which he has sent to Mr. Nawaz Sharif’s latter, he refused to disclose the contents of the letter, but said that it was being studied carefully. Replying to another question about the invitation extended to COAS Gen Asif Nawaz by the Indian government to visit India, he said he is not aware of any decision of the Government of Pakistan in this regard. The invitation had, however, been received and is presently under consideration of the government, he added.
The Indian delegation boycotted the speech of Nawaz Sharif at the plenary session. India had in advance conveyed to Pakistan that if the speech of Pak Prime Minister contained any reference to Kashmir it would be boycotted. Mr. Rao had left the conference hall before the start of Nawaz Speech and returned only when it was over. Indonesian Secretary General of the Conference Nana Sustresna said “we appeal to India and Pakistan to restrain themselves in their statements because this is not meant as a bilateral forum; and if they keep exchanging their statements, it could only aggravate the problems”. New Delhi rejected the charge at the conference that it was denying the Kashmiris the right of self-determination. In response to Mr. Nawaz Sharif’s address Indian Official Prabhakar Menon said bilateral issues should be kept out of the summit. “Issues related to Kashmir can never be resolved by raising them in international forums.” In a tough reply to Prime Minister Nawaz Shairf’s letter, Indian Prime Minister Narasimha Rao ruled out the possibility of holding talks on Kashmir issue under a specified provision— Article 6 of the Simla Agreement. Mr. Rao, in his reply to Nawaz’s letter referred to above, said: “I see a contradiction between Pakistan’s commitment to the Simla Agreement on the one hand, and the oft-repeated statements reserving the right to raise the Kashmir issue at international fora, on the other.” According to Mr. Rao, Pakistan’s continuing and active support to secessionism in Kashmir is a crucial issue for India and the prospects for improved relations can brighten only when it stops. Mr. Rao also rejected Pakistan’s claim that it made consistent efforts to resolve the Kashmir issue through negotiations. Mr. Rao maintained that it was because of Pakistan’s conduct in consistently distancing itself from the Simla Agreement that it had not been possible to find a solution to the Kashmir issue.

3. OIC Chairman Turkish PR and Pakistani PR released the text of the statement at a press conference at the UN soon after the meeting. Asked as to what would satisfy the OIC, Pakistan PR said that the rebuilding of the Mosque would be necessary.

4. Turkish and Pakistan PRs, who happened to meet me in the lounge soon after the press conference, said that their effort was not to inflame passions or to exacerbate communal tensions. They said that OIC wanted to strengthen the hands of the Government of India in dealing with the situation rather than create complications.

Statement by the Chairman of the OIC Group in New York on the destruction of the Babri Mosque in Ayodhy, India, on December 6, 1992

1. A special meeting of the member states of the Organization of Islamic conference was convened in New York on December 8, 1992, to discuss the destruction and demolition of the Babri Mosque by Hindu Militants on Sunday, December 6, 1992, in the town of Ayodhya, India.

2. The Meeting expressed its outrage and profound anguish at the destruction of a centuries old mosque by a frenzied crowed of Hindu militants and expressed regret over the failure of the Indian Authorities (Government) to take appropriate measures to protect this important Muslim holy site.

3. The meeting condemned the killing of hundreds of innocent and defenseless people, mostly Muslims in other parts of India in the rampage following the incident. It also expressed deep concern over the safety and security of the Muslim minority in India.

4. The meeting called upon the Indian government to ensure the safety and protection of Muslims and also of all Islamic holy sites throughout India in accordance with its responsibilities and obligations under the Universal Declaration of Human Rights as well other relevant international instruments. Bearing in mind that tolerance and respect for all religious beliefs is the salient feature of Islam, the meeting urged all concerned to exercise restraint to avoid further deterioration of the situation.

5. The meeting took note of the decision of the Indian Government to reconstruct the Mosque and to punish those guilty of this dishonourable act and called upon the Indian Government to take immediate steps to implement these decisions in order to ensure the safety and security of all irrespective of their religious beliefs.

6. The meeting also decided that the Chairman of the Islamic Group at the United Nations accompanied by a representative group of Islamic Ambassador would call on the Secretary General of the United Nations to convey to him the profound feeling of indignation over the destruction of the Babri mosque and to request him to use his moral and political authority to ensure the safety of the Muslims in India and the protection of their holy sites.

1292. Statement by Leader of the Pakistan Delegation Syed Sharifuddin Pirzada at the Meeting of the OIC Group.

Mr. Chairman,

My delegation is extremely grateful to you for having convened the OIC Group today. Indeed, we are meeting at a time of immense grief and anguish for the entire Muslim Ummah.

Mr. Chairman,

On Saturday 6th December, 1992, a frenzied crowd of Hindu extremists desecrated and destroyed the Babri Mosque in Ayodhya, India. As the state security forces stood by, a revered place of worship for the Muslims was razed to the ground. The forces of bigotry and intolerance, with the tacit support of state power, were allowed to eliminate a cherished symbol of Islamic culture and religion.

The Ayodhya Mosque was built in the early 16th Century by the Mughal Emperor Babar and had ever since acquired a special place in the Islamic heritage of India.
In the 19th Century, some Hindu extremists laid claim to the site of the mosque on the pretext that it had been built at the site of the birth place of the mythical Hindu God ‘Ram’ and that originally a Hindu temple was situated there.

The Muslims of India had challenged these baseless militant Hindu assertions and had demanded evidence from the proponents of this claim. It is instructive that, so far, not even a shred of evidence has been put forward in its defence. In fact, in their report submitted to the Government of India on 13 May 1991, eminent historians, among others Prof. R. S. Sharma and Prof. D.N. Jha, after consideration of available material concluded that no evidence exists in the texts that before the 16th century any veneration was attached to any spot in Ayodhya for being the birth-site of Rama.

In December 1949, the Hindus surreptitiously placed, inside the mosque, idols of Ram and his consort Sita and asserted that these had miraculously appeared, proving thereby that Ram was born there. As a result, the local authorities took legal control of the premises and barred both Muslims and Hindus from entering it. However, the Hindu priests were allowed to enter the mosque in order to feed the deities placed inside and to pray to them. In November, 1986, the Hindu extremists laid the foundation stone of the Ram temple. It was then quite obvious that the mosque was under imminent threat:

As the final tragedy of 6th December, 1992, proves the Order of Injunction of the Supreme Court of India prohibiting any action to change the status of the mosque, appeals by the Muslims of India and the Secretary General of the OIC were disregarded and a historic symbol of Islamic culture in India brought down in a senseless orgy of blind hatred.

According to press reports, tens of thousands of Hindus had recently been streaming into Ayodhya from all over India with the intent to start work on the construction of the Hindu temple. The whole endeavor was being organized by Bharatia Janata Party a fundamentalist Hindu political party, the world Hindu Council, and other extremist Hindu outfits. The Hindu priests had announced quite sometimes ago that 12.26. p.m. on 6th December, 1992 was the target time for launching the final assault on the Mosque.

Despite adequate warning time, no pre-emptive action was taken by the Indian authorities to restrain the rising crescendo of Hindu Militancy. According to the New York Times of December 7, 1992, “Roughly 15,000 Government paramilitary troops had been sent to the area during the week, but none were evidenced today. About 200 police officers who had been carrying rifles and stenguns behind sandbags and fences melted away, leaving the mosque undefended. When it became clear that the police would not resist the assault, the trickle of Hindu militants over the fences became a flood.
While Muslim holy places have often been subjected to desecration by Hindu militants, the destruction of the Babri Mosque is believed to be the first incident involving the complete demolition of a holy site. This incident, Mr. Chairman, is not only a matter of great grief but has also raised the specter of renewed Hindu-Muslim clashes in India and perhaps elsewhere in the world. The incident also presents before the world the true and ugly face of Indian secularism. The Hindu chauvinists cannot be expected to rest with this odious act. Indeed they have at least another three thousand mosque on their hit list which they claim had been built over sites of Hindu temples.

Though the Indian Prime Minister has apparently described the destruction of the mosque as horrendous it has whetted the deep seated Hindu antagonism against the Muslims. To celebrate the triumph of bigotry and encouraged by their success Hindu mobs attacked Muslim households in many Indian cities killing about 300 and causing injury to many more within a matter of hours.

Mr. Chairman

The desecration and destruction of the Babri Mosque has shocked and infuriated Muslims all over the world. The OIC has been closely following the events in Ayodhya in recent years. On several occasions, the Secretary General of the OIC had expressed the Organization’s concern over the threat to the mosque from Hindu fundamentalists and had called upon the Indian Government to ensure its protection. Unfortunately the mosque was left unguarded to become an easy prey to the forces of bigotry and hate.

The Organization of the Islamic Conference should take a firm and forthright position on this issue. The destruction of the mosque is not an isolated event but part of a dark and sinister design to eliminate Muslim culture in India. If the rising tide of Hindu chauvinism is not checked now it would cause incalculable damage to the status of Muslims in India. It is therefore imperative that this meeting should take credible steps to ensure the preservation of Islamic traditions and culture and the rights of the Muslim minority in India and the Muslim holy sites. In this connection I would like to present the following proposals for consideration:

(a) The Chairman of the OIC, in New York, should issue a strong statement, condemning the destruction of the Babri Mosque. In the statement the Chairman should express the shock of the Muslim Ummah, call upon the Indian Government to offer full protection to the Muslim minority and take immediate action to rebuild the Babri Mosque. It should also call upon the Indian Government to institute an independent, impartial judicial inquiry into the incident and to take exemplary punitive action against those responsible for this heinous act.
(b) A Group of Islamic Ambassadors led by the Chairman may immediately call on the UN Secretary-General, to apprise him of the details of the tragic incident and to request him to intervene in the matter with the Government of India.

(c) OIC member states may make suitable statements on this subject when the reports of the Third Committee are considered in the plenary of the General Assembly on December 14, 1992.

(d) The OIC countries should raise this issue at the forthcoming session of the Commission on Human Rights in Geneva.

(e) Any proposals for summoning an extraordinary session of the Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers should be fully supported by all Islamic countries.

(f) OIC member states may summon the Indian representatives accredited to them and lodge a strong protest with them.

(g) The OIC Group in New York should explore the possibility of tabling a joint resolution in the General Assembly at its current session.

Mr. Chairman

The forces of evil, bigotry and suppression have to be confronted boldly. This is not an occasion to mince words. If a strong and clear message is not conveyed to the Government of India, the Muslims in that country, their houses, their businesses and their mosques and shrines would be placed under ever greater danger. It is, therefore, essential that the Islamic world should take a principled and clear position against this premeditated act of bigotry and spare no effort to ensure that such crimes are never repeated.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

1293. Demolition of Babri Mosque and reaction in Pakistan.
Islamabad, December 6, 1992.

The Foreign Office Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs has expressed extreme indignation and sorrow at the demolition and desecration of the Babri Mosque in Ayodhya in India. He said that on the evening of December 6 “this despicable act of the extremists must be severely condemned by all civilized nations, particularly those which stand for human rights and oppose religious narrow-mindedness and extremism. We demand proper protection of all sacred places of the Muslims and all possible measures should be taken to protect the life and property of the Muslims minority in India”.

Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif expressed a deep sense of shock and horror at the desecration and destruction of Babri Masjid in India and said “This abhorrent act of extreme fanaticism deserves to be strongly condemned by all civilized countries and especially those which oppose religious intolerance and extremism and uphold human rights.”

Mr. Nawaz said Pakistan believes that the international community should call upon India to extend full and adequate protection to Muslim holy places and the lives and property of the Muslim minority in India against resurgent Hindu fanaticism.

He said that it will be recalled that India had pledged to Pakistan, under the Liaquat-Nehru Pact, the protection of the holy places of the minorities and Pakistan intends to take up this matter directly with India.

Pakistan People’s Party’s Co-Chairperson Benazir Bhutto condemned the demolition of the mosque and said no religion allows its followers to cause harm to places of worship of believers of a different faith.

She said both the national and international Press have been carrying news about the plan of the demolition of the mosque but the Nawaz government maintained a criminal silence and remained indifferent. The government, which is wholly occupied with saving its own rule, did nothing to avert the tragic incident, she added. Had there been a strong government which cared for Islamic traditions and heritage, the fundamentalist Hindus would never have dared to destroy the historic mosque. The present government is following in the footsteps Gen Zia who too displayed cowardice by keeping quiet when India annexed Siachen, she said.

Registering her strong protest with the Indian government, she said it should have stopped the extremist Hindus from carrying out their plan and shown respect for the religious feelings of Indian Muslims as it is the duty of the government to protect the rights and places of worship of minorities.

The Pakistan Democratic Alliance (PDA) Secretary General Khurshid Mehmood
Kasuri condemned the insensitivity displayed by the government over the issue.
He said by not sending timely warning to India, Pakistan has once again proved its inefficiency at all fronts. He deplored the Indian government’s lenient attitude for the kar sewaks (volunteers).

Pakistan Muslim League Secretary General Iqbal Ahmad said that this act of the Hindus has sent the entire Pakistani nation in a state of shock and said that strongest protest should be lodged with the Indian Government on this tragic incident and sacrilegious act. Mohammad Khan Junejo former Prime Minister and President of Muslim League terms the incident as a violation of the Nehru– Liaquat Pact, Indian Constitution and orders of the Supreme Court while Mian Mumtaz Daultana a former Chief Minister of Punjab said this act of the Hindu revivalists should be condemned in the strongest words by the world community and organizations and particularly the Muslim Ummah.

Chaudhry Mohammad Aslam Saleemi, Secretary General of the Jamaat Islami Pakistan said the prejudiced Hindus have badly hurt the religious sentiments of the Muslims by demolishing Babri Mosque. He asked Pakistan to mobilize world opinion against what India had been doing with its biggest minority and its places of worship.

1294. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on the Espionage Activities of an official of Pakistan High Commission in India.

New Delhi, December 8, 1992.

While briefing newsmen, the Spokesman stated that on December 5, 1992 at approximately 1540 hrs. an official of the Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi, Mr. Mohd. Ashfaq was apprehended at Brig. Hoshiyar Singh Road, New Delhi. Mr. Ashfaq was procuring certain highly sensitive documents from an Indian contact, Mr. Mustaq Ahmed. On being asked about the Indian-contact Mr. Mustaq Ahmed, the Spokesman gave brief details about Mr. Mustaq Ahmed.

Ashfaq had collected these documents and was in the process of making a cash payment of Rs.2000/- to the Indian-contact for providing the documents. ON queries about the documents, the Spokesman added that one of the documents was handwritten while the other was typed-written photocopy containing details about the Army locations and movements in Northern and Western sectors.

The Delhi police took Ashfaq and his Indian contact into custody. After duly checking the identity of Mr. Ashfaq from his Identity Card and Driving Licence, the Indian authorities contacted the High Commission of Pakistan in New Delhi at 1845 hours to take possession of Ashfaq. Subsequently, Mr. Ashfaq was handed over to the Head of Chancery of the Pakistani High Commission. The handing over was done in the presence of the officials of the Ministry of External Affairs.

Spokesman was further queried about the Indian contact. The Spokesman stated that Havildar Mustaq Ahmed belonged to 7 J&K Rifles and joined the Army in 1979. He first came in contact with Pak officials in 1981 but, preliminary interrogations revealed, he was being exploited by Pak Embassy officials from January 1989 onwards. The first handling official of Pak-Embassy was Munsif Khan. After the transfer of Munsif Khan, he was handed over to Arshad Ali. Mustaq had 11 meetings with Munsif Khan and 10 meetings with Arshad Ali. On each meeting he passed on written and verbal intelligence about the Indian Army deployment for monetary consideration of Rs.3000/-. Total number of meetings with Mohd. Ashfaq were about 6, including the one on December 5.

The newsmen raised a number of queries on the issue throughout the briefing session. The newsmen were also shown a film on confessions of Mustaq Ahmed.

Government of India views this incident with profound regret. Mohd. Ashfaq has violated the accepted norms of functioning of the personnel of Diplomatic 1295. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on India’s concern over communal incidents affecting Indians in Pakistan and Bangladesh:

The Spokesman said that, as they were already aware, the Government of India has taken firm and immediate steps in the wake of the developments in Ayodhya. These include assurance on restoration of the Masjid structure, reiteration of determination to maintain the secular and democratic polity, banning of communal organisations in respect of which legal action is already underway and arresting the leaders of the Parties which violated the law. Further, a white paper has been promised to provide full and objective information. The government has also taken steps to restore peace, law and order. Normalcy has been restored. Other political parties believing in secularism and democracy have been called to join hands in resisting communalism and extremism.

There have been attempts in certain countries especially Pakistan and, to some extent, Bangladesh to portray the demolition of the mosque as affecting the safety of minorities in India. This is wrong and motivated. The minorities enjoy Constitutional guarantees in India and the Government is committed to meet in full and effectively its constitutional obligations which include providing full protection to all minorities. The recent steps have been taken by the Government in the same spirit. The nation at large, including political parties and opinions of people as reflected in the press, has highlighted India’s secular and democratic reality.

In contrast, in Pakistan inflammatory statements have been made by some of its leaders. In Pakistan, according to reports received by our missions there as well as their own media reports, upto December 12, 1992, 124 temples, 2 Gurdwaras and 1 church were destroyed. Similarly, in Bangladesh, 97 temples were destroyed and the Indian High Commission and the Indian Airlines offices came under attack. 340 houses and 100 shops belonging to Indians were burnt. In previous briefings, details have already been provided of Governmental encouragement and participation by some of the Government leaders in the mob attacks. These events and actions can only result in a backlash from the extremist forces here instead of cooling the temperature down.

Press release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on a statement issued by Shri R.L. Bhatia, Minister of State for External Affairs regarding acts of terrorism and arson being inflicted on the minority communities in Pakistan.

It is with the greatest concern that we continue to hear about the acts of terrorism and arson being inflicted on the minority communities in Pakistan. In the course of the last week, reports, supported by accounts in the Press in Pakistan indicate that 124 Temples, 2 Gurdwara and 5 churches were destroyed in Pakistan.

I have already expressed our deep concern on this matter on December 7, where I also referred to the cowardly attack by a mob on our Consul General’s residence in Karachi and acts of intimidation and violence against our diplomatic officials. I had hoped this would have some impact. But this hope has been belied.

The moral posturing by political and other leaders in Pakistan stands exposed through the acts of vandalism and sacrilege, recorded by their own media. While we on our part have moved swiftly to ban communal organisations, restore law and order, assuage the feelings of our people, arrested those who are inflaming communal passions and gone to the extent of dismissing all BJP-led governments in the States, the Government of Pakistan has not only taken no effective steps to protect the minority communities but continues to fan the flames of extremism by their words and actions.

This is a time for healing and not for re-opening of wounds, a time to act responsibly as we are doing and not for injecting more poison in people’s minds, as Pakistan continues to do.

We condemn these acts of violence in Pakistan which are nothing but state terrorism unleashed on the minority communities. We expect the Government Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on reports of Pakistani National Assembly discussing the Ayodhya issue:

While briefing newsmen, the spokesman stated that the Government's attention has been drawn to reports that the Pakistani National Assembly convening today is going to spend two days discussing the Ayodhya incidents and related matters. The Government of India strongly objects to the Legislature of a foreign country discussing a matter lying entirely within domestic jurisdiction of India. The National Assembly of Pakistan or any other country has no locus standi to discuss or sit in judgement on Ayodhya or any other internal matter of India. This is a gross interference in India's internal affairs. That the Government of Pakistan is participating in this process confirms the impression that they are not interested in reducing tension or in normalizing relations with India, despite India's commitment to promote good neighbourly relations with Pakistan regardless of the ups and downs that may occur occasionally.

On December 22 a Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office expressed deep regrets on the remarks of Mr RL Bhatia. He described Mr. Bhatia's remarks as totally uncalled for, adding that instead of taking practical steps to reconstruct the masjid as committed by the Indian Prime Minister himself and providing effective safeguards for the life, property and religious places of the Muslim community, the Indian government had chosen to direct its energies to maligning Pakistan.

It may be recalled immediately after the Babri Mosque incident the Indian Consulate General in Karachi was ransacked and burnt by an unruly mob, the High Commissioner of Pakistan in India Riaz Hussain Khokhar was summoned by the Foreign Secretary and a strong protest was lodged against this vandalism. The High Commissioner had expressed his regrets at the incident and promised that the case for compensation for the loss would be examined by his government.

New Delhi, December 24, 1992.

While briefing newsmen, the spokesman stated that Minister of State for External Affairs Shri Bhatia met Ambassadors of countries belonging to the Organisation of Islamic Conference, except for the Ambassadors of the Gulf countries (whom he had met earlier). The meeting was at 2 PM today. Minister of State Bhatia informed the Ambassadors about the background to the Ayodhya incident and also the action taken by the government to tackle the situation. He underlined the fact that the Central Government’s actions made it very clear that government was committed to meeting the challenge of communal elements, which were threatening secularism and even our judiciary and parliamentary system. He said that government was ready to meet this challenge.

Shri Bhatia mentioned that the law and order situation had been brought under control everywhere. However, for the peaceful situation to prevail, it was necessary to have a similarly peaceful situation in our neighbouring countries also. He noted that the outbreak of violence in Pakistan and Bangladesh resulting in the damaging and destruction of a large number of temples, gurudwaras and churches would not help the process of return to normalcy and, instead, would fuel communal feelings.

Shri Bhatia noted that while it was an internal problem of India, he looked to the international community to create a conducive atmosphere to enable the government to address its task of preserving and even strengthening India’s secular and democratic polity. Where there were sweeping generalizations, abrasively critical formulations in resolutions passed in a forum such as the OIC, this would not only impinge on India’s sovereignty but encourage reverse communalism.

Those of the Ambassadors who spoke at the meeting in response to Shri Bhatia’s briefing, in general stated that while the incident itself had been condemned worldwide and throughout India itself, they appreciated the quick and strong action of the Indian government in remedying the situation.

1299. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on the Government of India’s reaction to the references to the Babri Mosque in the Joint Communiqué of the Gulf Cooperation Council Summit.

New Delhi, December 24, 1992.

While briefing newsmen, the Spokesman stated that Government has seen the paragraph in the Joint Communiqué of the Gulf Cooperation Council Summit in Abu Dhabi on December 23 pertaining to the Babri Masjid. The Government of India is fully conscious of its responsibilities in the protection of holy places of all faiths as also the rights of all peoples in India irrespective of their ethnic, linguistic and religious backgrounds and convictions. It needs no re-emphasizing and no appeals in this respect as is evidenced by the action already taken by the Government of India to remedy the situation. These matters pertain to internal affairs of India and the concerns expressed from abroad in this context, however well meaning they may be, are not helpful in meeting the challenge posed by extremists communal elements.

Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on a speech in the Pakistan National Assembly by the President of Pakistan.

New Delhi, December 25, 1992.

We note with serious objection and concern that the President of Pakistan has, in the Pakistan National Assembly on December 22, 1992 made completely unacceptable and negatively motivated remarks on India.

It has, indeed, been habitual for this President* of Pakistan to indulge in vituperative rhetoric over India with total disregard of the norms and conventions of good-neighbourly relations. But in the speech in the National Assembly, he has crossed all previous limits.

We have stated, on numerous occasions in the past, that Kashmir is an integral part of India. The only unresolved issue remains to be the vacation by Pakistan of territories occupied by it through aggression.

The question of taking any note of President Ghulam Ishaq Khan’s remarks over Babri Masjid, which are highly provocative, malicious and intended to inflame public opinion, does not arise. We can certainly do without hectoring by President Ishaq Khan on the tenets of Hinduism, the essence of India’s secularism and the working of its democratic system. He would do well to concentrate on the amelioration of the human rights situation in his own country, which has a lamentable record of treatment of its minorities, including coreligionists, rather than proffering unsolicited words of personal opinion on India’s internal affairs.

On December 30, Pakistan protested to India over what it described “the highly objectionable” remarks by an official spokesman of the Indian government on December 25 about the references to Babri Masjid in the address of President Ghulam Ishaq Khan to the joint session of Parliament on December 22, 1992. Acting Foreign Secretary Khalid Saleem called Indian High Commissioner in Pakistan S.K. Lambah to the Foreign Office on December 28 and conveyed to him the shock and disappointment of the Government of Pakistan over the “intermate language” employed by the Indian Foreign Ministry official in referring to the President’s speech. The Indian High Commissioner was reminded that the Government of Pakistan had all along scrupulously avoided derogatory remarks about the Indian President and the Prime Minister in its official pronouncements. Pakistan hoped the Indian side would show a similar regard for the Pakistan head of state/government.
1301. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistan’s request to reduce the strength of the Consulate General of India in Karachi.

New Delhi, December 29, 1992.

While briefing the newsmen the Spokesman stated that the Government of Pakistan has today conveyed request to the Government of India which expresses its unilateral decision to reduce the strength of the Consulate General of India in Karachi from the present strength of 64 (which includes 8 diplomats) to 20 (including 4 diplomats).

The Government of India has noted this request and is examining the implications. This move will primarily affect people to people contacts especially between the families of the Mohajir Community in Pakistan and their Muslim relatives in India. It is a measure that is really aimed against the Community. This is the culmination of a process of harassment aimed at the functioning of our Consul General office over the past few years, reaching recently its most violent heights with the ransacking and destruction carried out at the residence of our Consul General in Karachi Mr. Rajiv Dogra. It is now open to us to consider whatever response we feel is indicated in this situation.

1302. Media Briefing by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on recent developments on Babri Mosque.

Islamabad, December 30, 1992.

The Foreign Office spokesman has said that Pakistan has expressed its deep concern over reports that local authorities in India had allowed Hindus to undertake the darshan (viewing) at the makeshift temple erected by Hindu fundamentalist elements on the site of Babri Masjid after it was demolished. Any such activity was tantamount to legitimizing the demolition of the mosque and was thus unacceptable.

He told newsmen in Islamabad on December 30 that Pakistan was constantly monitoring developments pertaining to the destruction of Babri Masjid and had noted that the Government of India intended to launch a so-called ‘Ayodhya package’. The package had been rejected by all major Indian parties, but for varying reasons, leaders of the Muslim community saw the package as being in contravention of the government’s assurance that the demolished mosque would be rebuilt.

“The position of Pakistan, and, indeed, that of the entire Islamic Ummah is that the martyred Babri Masjid must be reconstructed exactly on the site on which it had stood for over 400 years. Any other solution would not be acceptable,” he added.

The Package included acquisition of land, including the site on which the mosque stood until December 6. It proposed that a reference be made to the Supreme Court seeking verdict on whether Babari Masjid had been constructed after the demolition of a Hindu temple. It also envisaged the creation of two non-government trusts for the construction of a mosque and a temple.

He said Pakistan was firmly resolved to exert “relentless efforts” in coordination with other Islamic countries and with the support of the international community to ensure that the colossal injustice represented by the demolition of the mosque was rectified by the rebuilding of it exactly and precisely on its original site.

1303. Statement issued by the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs on the meeting between India’s Foreign Secretary and Pakistan’s High Commissioner in New Delhi.

New Delhi, December 31, 1992.

Briefing the newsmen, the Official spokesman stated that the Foreign Secretary Shri J. N. Dixit met Pakistan’s High Commissioner Mr. Riyaz Khokhar today.

Foreign Secretary conveyed to the High Commissioner our reaction to Pakistan’s decision to scale down the staff strength of the Indian Consulate in Karachi.

Foreign Secretary said that the Pakistani decision was not acceptable being unilateral and not in consonance with the spirit of the code of conduct regarding the functioning of the diplomatic establishments of the two countries, apart from being illogical given the heavy work-load handled by the Indian Consulate in Karachi, included the issue of around 700 visas per day. The spokesman added that 8000 visas had been issued by our Consulate in Karachi since the Government of Pakistan issued travel advisory advising its citizens not to travel to India.
Foreign Secretary also referred to the recent statements emanating from Pakistan regarding the Babri Masjid issue. He emphasized that such statements only serve to heighten tensions and generate extremist communal sentiments in both Pakistan and in India.

Press release issued by Ministry of External Affairs on the meeting between M. K. Bhadrakumar, Joint Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs and Acting High Commissioner of Pakistan, Mr. Shahid Malik regarding the Office of the Pakistan Consulate General in Bombay.

New Delhi, January 10, 1993.

The Acting High Commissioner was informed about the decision of the Government of India not to accede to Pakistan’s request for making available the property at Mount Pleasant Road, Malabar Hill, Bombay (which Pakistan refers to as Jinnah House) for use of their Consulate General in Bombay or as the official residence of their Consul General.

It was further intimated to the Acting High Commissioner that the Government of India will not allow henceforth any Temporary Visa Offices by Pakistan in places outside of Delhi and Bombay. The Acting High Commissioner was told that they should handle their visa work through their High Commission in Delhi and their Consulate General in Bombay.

Government of India have decided that the total strength of the home-based personnel of the Pakistan High Commission* in Delhi should (not), at any time, exceed a maximum of 110 personnel. The Acting High Commissioner was informed that Pakistan should take immediate steps to bring down the

Regarding visa facilities he said: “We are disappointed that the Indian government had also not allowed Pakistan to set up visa camps in Bombay and Hyderabad” which, he added, would “cause difficulties for Indian citizens, especially, members of divided families who are unable to travel all the way to New Delhi for visas.”

1305. Indian Statements on the Meeting of the Organization of Islamic Conference being held in Dakar.

New Delhi, January 11, 1993.

Government has noted that the OIC Bureau Meeting is beginning today in Dakar. We have been in touch with the Governments represented in the Bureau and other governments who are members of the OIC to caution them against falling in with any move by Pakistan to issue a provocative resolution as it only creates more tension. Most governments agreed on the need for moderation in dealing with this issue.

India’s Reaction to OIC’s Announcement

New Delhi, January 13, 1993.

While briefing the newsmen the Official Spokesman stated that: We have seen with regret the pronouncement by the OIC Bureau in Dakar (Senegal) on January 11 on the Ayodhya events. These events, unfortunate and regrettable as they were are exclusively in the internal jurisdiction of India and the Government of India needs neither advice nor exhortations in regard to the protection of the human and religious rights of its Muslim minority numbering over hundred million.

By way of background, the Official Spokesman added that the Bureau Meeting was attended by Senegal, Indonesia, Kuwait, Morocco, Pakistan, Palestine, Saudi Arabia, Syria and Turkey.

1306. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

In his weekly Press briefing in Islamabad, the Foreign Office spokesman said that Pakistan hoped India would respond positively to British Prime Minister John Major’s proposal for resolving the Kashmir issue and initiate negotiations with it under the Simla Agreement. He said on January 27 that a similar call by Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif was already on record in which he had stated that Pakistan was ready for a sincere and serious bilateral dialogue with India on this issue under Article 6 of the agreement.

He said at the same time India should stop its baseless propaganda against Pakistan of interfering in its internal affairs. Such allegations were contrary to normal protocol and proved deeply embarrassing for India’s distinguished guest from Britain. “Pakistan rejects these false and mischievous allegations with complete contempt which these deserve,” he added.

The spokesman said that Pakistan had no role whatsoever in the insurgency in Indian Punjab or in any other part of India. Pakistan supported the heroic struggle of the people of Jammu and Kashmir for self-determination and liberation from India’s brutal occupation.

He said Pakistan extended diplomatic, political and moral support to the just and legitimate struggle of the Kashmiri people. “We do not provide them with military assistance,” he added.

He said no one could fail to note that on January 26, which was India’s Republic Day, a total strike was observed by the people throughout the state. Indian authorities imposed a curfew on a large number of towns, while celebrating its Republic Day, he added.

The Spokesman recalled that on India’s Republic Day on January 26, India’s highest gallantry award was given to one army officer. According to the citation for the award, “the officer was killed in an encounter with so-called Kashmiri militants who were allegedly trained by Pakistan and worked on an assignment given to them by ISI”. This followed Press reports that four Sikhs were allegedly trained by Pakistani agencies had confessed to be seeking to disrupt national day celebrations.

He said it is not accident that these false assertions have been made to denigrate Pakistan during the visit of the British Prime Minister to India.
The spokesman said Pakistan has expressed the hope that with the appointment of a veteran politician like Mr. Dinesh Singh as Minister for External Affairs India would adopt a more positive approach towards relations with Pakistan and other neighbouring countries.

1307. Statement issued by the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs on the statement by Pakistan Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Mohammad Siddique Khan Kanju, in their National Assembly on February 17, 1993, making references to India.

New Delhi, February 18, 1993.

While briefing the newsmen, the Official Spokesman stated that we have taken note of the Statement by Pakistan Minister of State for Foreign Affairs H.H. Mohammad Siddique Khan Kanju, in their National Assembly on February 17, 1993. We deeply regret that Mr. Kanju, in his statement while articulating his world view, has chosen to make references to India and India’s internal affairs in a manner which is violative of all recognised norms of inter-state conduct and good-neighbourly relations. Both in language and in content, Mr. Kanju’s references are gratuitous, totally unwarranted and unacceptable. Pakistan, which for all its troubled history, has been ruled by successive military dictatorships, is hardly a shining example of democracy for the people of the region. Though, we sincerely hope that nascent process of democratization in Pakistan might some day strike roots in that country, Pakistan, which has adopted the state ideology of a single religion naturally cannot comprehend our tenets of secularism. Rather than, concentrate on exorcising its own bigotry and religious apartheid, it is regretted that Pakistan is consistently indulging in inflammatory rhetoric and provocative actions intended to raise public passions.

We have, time and again, emphasized that we are ready to resolve all outstanding issues including intractable issues with Pakistan, within the framework of the Simla Agreement. But for a conducive atmosphere, in which any meaningful discussions are to take place, Pakistan must cease its active and sustained support to terrorism and subversion directed against India. We would once again urge Pakistan to give up its State-supported terrorism. Pakistan should eschew its path of confrontation and the adversarial frames of its mind-set which is hardly conducive to peace and harmony in the region. There should be no illusions in any quarter about India’s firm resolve to counter Pakistan’s challenges to its territorial integrity and sovereignty.

New Delhi, March 2, 1993.

We have received reports that Pakistan is trying to interfere in Jammu and Kashmir by raking up alleged human rights issues in the Commission for Human Rights, which is currently in session in Geneva. They are attempting to introduce a resolution which, apart from recalling previous resolutions of the UN Security Council, recommends a fact-finding Mission to visit Jammu & Kashmir to investigate and report on the human rights situation there. It also attempts to place the situation in Jammu and Kashmir on the agenda of the Commission at its next session.

India has taken a firm stand and informed all member countries of the Commission that this is totally unacceptable to us and we are opposing introduction of the resolution. We are also pointing out Pakistan’s own track record in aiding and abetting violence and terrorism in Jammu and Kashmir and Punjab. In the event of the remote possibility that such a resolution is tabled and voted in favour, India would not accept it. Pakistan’s action in trying to introduce such a resolution will now serve to distance the prospects of a fruitful bilateral dialogue between our countries.

Interview of External Affairs Minister Dinesh Singh with the Pakistani daily Muslim on relations with Pakistan.

New Delhi, February 26, 1993 and carried by the paper on March 4, 1993.

Question: The five summit meetings Mr. Rao had with Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif so far have not yielded much and tension persists between the two countries. Would you consider breaking the ice by going to Pakistan?

Answer: I have no objection in going to Pakistan any time if it could lead to a better understanding. Regarding a possible visit by Mr. Rao to Islamabad in deference to Mr. Nawaz Sharif’s desire that the two leaders should meet in each other’s capitals instead of third country capitals, unless such a visit is preceded by adequate preparations you get into a position where everybody will say that nothing has come out of it, that India is unreasonable, or that Pakistan is unreasonable. This does not lead to our coming any closer.

The last time a prominent Indian leader visited Pakistan was nearly four years ago. It was in July 1989 that the then Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and External Affairs Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao paid a formal visit to Islamabad.

Mr. Nawaz Sharif did come to India in May 1991 to condole Mr. Gandhi’s death. Thereafter, Mr. Nawaz and Mr. Rao held summit meetings at international gatherings in Harare, Colombo, Davos, Rio de Janeiro and Jakarta to discuss bilateral relations but not on Indian or Pakistani soil. They will now meet during the seventh SAAC summit at Dhaka in Bangladesh next month.

Much depends on what Mr. Nawaz also has in mind, whether he would like to have a dialogue. If there is an indication that he wants a dialogue, and if there is a climate for such a dialogue, I am sure our Prime Minister will respond to it.

Q: Pakistan insists that Kashmir is the root cause of all Indo-Pak troubles. What are India’s minimum pre conditions for starting a dialogue on Kashmir with Pakistan?

A: India and Pakistan have committed themselves to resolving all differences bilaterally and peacefully under the Simla Agreement. However, it should be appreciated that the more complex and intractable issues can only be resolved once there exists an assured atmosphere of mutual trust and confidence. We have an on-going dialogue on confidence-building measures between the two countries, and we urge Pakistan to join us in carrying this process forward on a step-by-step basis. Pakistan must stop its support to terrorism directed against India and thereby create a climate conducive to meaningful negotiations.

Regarding Mr. Nawaz Sharif’s view that Kashmiris too should be involved along with India and Pakistan in discussions on Kashmir, I say that Kashmir is our internal matter. The present situation in that state would be resolved... by India through restoration of the democratic process once the problem of terrorism has been tackled. Pakistan has no locus standi. We only hope and have urged Pakistan that it should stop its involvement with terrorism and not seek to exacerbate the situation.

Kashmir is the main problem because Pakistan does not want to look at the reality. By keeping up this question on Kashmir, they do not permit the people of the two countries to get together.

They never talk about the portion of Kashmir that they occupy. They talk of UN resolutions. The first condition in the UN resolutions was that they would withdraw from that part of Kashmir which they have occupied and that it will come under our control and then the plebiscite. The first condition they never fulfilled, and they still talk of that resolution.

Pakistan keeps talking about Kashmir because it wants to keep alive the two-nation theory, which is based on the premise that Hindus and Muslims cannot live together and, therefore, they must separate.

Despite being a Hindu-majority state, India gives equal rights to all its citizens and does not differentiate between them on the basis of religion. We talk of secularism. They do not talk of any of these. Their own record of handling their own minorities is appalling. And yet they talk about the minorities in India. They want to keep the conflict alive. They want a dialogue with India, on the one hand, and support terrorism in India, on the other. You see, this is the whole problem.

Q: What do you think should be done to improve relations between the two countries? What is India prepared to do and what do you want Pakistan to do so that the two can live like ideal neighbours?

A: My feeling is that, as more and more Indians and Pakistanis get to meet one another, confidence will grow. Once confidence grows, dialogue becomes easier. It is fear and suspicion that create disputes and confrontations. This is why I have been saying that economic cooperation should increase between India and Pakistan. If our people go to Pakistan, they will see what is Pakistan. Maybe, they will go into joint collaborations both in India and Pakistan.

If Indians go to Pakistan, live there and work there, and if Pakistanis come to India, live and work here, then there will be an interest in each other’s welfare. Then the differences become very much easier to resolve. If we make differences, put pre-conditions, then there is no meeting point.

India and Pakistan have been living with problems for over 40 years, and at this rate, they could live the same way for another 40 years. But this is not what we want. What we want is to have rapid development in this area so that we are able to overcome poverty and are able to give our people a better life. There is much that we can do in cooperation. Why Pakistan does not realize this I do not understand. They have never given us a cogent reason for not working together.

1310. Suo Moto Statement by External Affairs Minister Dinesh Singh in the Lok Sabha on the dismissal of the Nawaz Sharif Government

New Delhi, April 19, 1993.

Honourable members are no doubt, aware of the political events evolving in Pakistan in recent weeks. On 18 April 1993, the President of Pakistan Mr. Ghulam Ishaq Khan, dismissed the Government of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif, dissolved the National Assembly and inducted a caretaker Government with Mr. Balakh Sher Mazari as the caretaker Prime Minister. The other two Ministers sworn in are Mr. Farooq Leghari of the Pakistan Peoples Party and Mr. Hamid Nasir Chatta of the Pakistan Muslim League. There have been general indications from the office of the President of Pakistan that elections will be held around the middle of July, after a gap of nearly two and a half months. From the remarks made by the Chief of Army Staff, the view of the armed forces is that the processes generated by the decisions of the President of Pakistan on the 18th of April should be finally resolved either by the courts or by the people of Pakistan.

2. Developments in Pakistan are basically that country’s internal affair. But there is no gainsaying the fact that events in this important neighbouring country always have implications for us both in general and in terms of our security. We cannot thus remain indifferent towards the situation in Pakistan. Being a democracy ourselves, we would wish to see democracy flourish in Pakistan. In the prevailing situation where elected Governments have been repeatedly impeded from striking roots and gaining continuity in their policies, a phase of uncertainty in our relations with Pakistan cannot be ruled out. Government will be closely following further developments.

3. It is, however, our hope that whichever Government is in power in Pakistan, the attitude of reason and moderation will animate their Policies towards us, as having a good neighbourly, working relationship with Pakistan remains a continuing objective in our policies towards that country.

1311. Statement of the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs, on the OIC Resolutions on Kashmir — at the conclusion of the 21st meeting of the OIC Foreign Ministers.

New Delhi, April 30, 1993.

Government has seen press reports of the Communiqué and Resolutions adopted by the 21st Meeting of the OIC Foreign Ministers at Karachi on April 29, 1993. The Communiqué and Resolutions adopted at Karachi make it obvious that the OIC Foreign Ministers Meeting has been misled by certain elements within the OIC Secretariat and the host county. In the circumstances, the views expressed in the Communiqué and the Resolutions do not come as a surprise to Government of India. At the same time, the Government of India categorically questions the assessments and recommendations endorsed by the OIC Foreign Ministers Meeting at Karachi. We consider them totally unacceptable.

Kashmir is an integral part of India, and the enduring issue is for Pakistan to come to terms with realities and to cooperate with India to serve the larger objectives of peace and stability in the sub-continent. The OIC Resolution will serve no purpose other than encouraging Pakistan to persist with its support and sponsorship of terrorism and subversion directed against India.

The OIC has presumed further to take on a role in safeguarding the interests of over 100 million Indian citizens who happen to be Muslims. It is ironic that an organization which refuses India participation in its activities despite India being endowed with one of the largest Muslim populations in the world, now pretends to arrogate to itself a role to protect their interests. The political gimmicking inherent in this futile gesture is obvious. The interests of stability and protection of minorities in the Indian sub-continent are not served by such tendentious statements by the Organisation of Islamic Conference*

* Minister of State for External Affairs Salman Khurshid on April 29 in a statement had said that it was surprising that Prime Minister Mr. Mazar of Pakistan should be using the OIC forum to seek so called “Safeguards for rights and welfare” of Muslims in India. India is perfectly capable of looking after all its citizens without exception. Muslims, Sikhs, Buddhists, Parsis, Christians and all other minorities have both a say and a stake in our collective national future and aspirations. Kashmir’s welfare is intrinsically linked with the welfare of the rest of India. We are confident that we are secure in our future without the false tears, indeed despite the false tears, of Mr. Mazar and his colleagues. If he is concerned he should exert himself to apprehend the culprits of the Bombay carnage. Instead of casting his eyes across the border he should heed good advice—“Physician heal thyself”.
The situation in Kashmir has not improved as yet. There is only a marginal improvement but we still have to do a lot. In Kashmir, the incitement, money and weapons and trained people come from Pakistan. The trouble is not from within Kashmir but it comes from across the border. People of Kashmir are against terrorism. This, I can state with full confidence. But when they face bullets, they are naturally scared. Though people do not say it, but if terrorism comes to an end, they will be very happy and heave a sigh of relief. There is no doubt about it. While Pakistan is carrying out false propaganda about human rights violation in J&K. only two days ago the terrorists from that country stopped a bus midway and pulled out 16 or 17 people and shot them dead. Do they mean that those who have been the victims of their bullets have no human rights? Have they no right to live? Only when the terrorist get killed in encounters, why do these people get perturbed, why do they campaign for upholding the human rights? Do only the terrorists have human rights? They have a right to kill others and they also have human rights to the effect that nobody should Kill them. This is a warped logic beyond comprehension and we are not prepared to accept it. I would like to congratulate those who fought against terrorism and caught many terrorists and have tried to bring the situation somewhat under control. This process will continue. Pakistan may do whatever it wants, but Kashmir is an inalienable part of India. Nobody can separate it from India, whatever means they may use. Recently Pakistan had reached where it would have been declared a terrorist state. Now when they provide weapons and other material for promoting terrorism, whom they are harming? I would like to appeal to them and also warn them that this plan will benefit no one of them. In any case, India will remain unmoved from its position that Kashmir will remain an integral part of India and we will always serve the people of Kashmir in every possible manner and solve their problems. Nothing can be achieved from this bloodshed.

Our relations with the neighbouring countries, except Pakistan, are good. We can have good relations with Pakistan too. I have met the Pakistan Prime Minister about half a dozen times. Our personal relations are very cordial but when it comes to matters of policy, it is difficult to say anything. Elections are going to be held shortly in Pakistan and a new leadership will take over. I hope the new leadership will come with greater sense of realism and will have the courage to accept the reality and then alone could there be further and meaningful dialogue between us.
There need be no doubt on this. We are ready for talks, but one thing is clear, Kashmir is an indivisible part of India. It has been and will remain so. If this reality is accepted, there will be friendship and cooperation. I want to give this assurance. I want to give the same assurance to Pakistan, our neighbour and that it should forget about making efforts to separate Kashmir from India. That efforts have been made time and again and campaigning and spending have been going on. But now Pakistan must forget this. We can remain good friends for ever on this basis and our friendship will serve as a model to the world.

Islamabad, August 15, 1993.

Pakistan reacted strongly on August 15 to the remarks by the India Prime Minister that Pakistan was “fuelling Muslim militancy and a guerilla campaign in an integral and inalienable part of India (Kashmir)’”.

The Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman in response to the Indian Prime Minister’s speech said: “All these accusations are baseless and there is certainly no question of Pakistan being on the terrorist list. We have absolutely no interest in fuelling the so-called Muslim militancy. On the contrary we are worried about the treatment meted out to the Muslims there.”

Taking note of Mr. Rao’s remarks the Spokesman termed them uncalled for accusations; and said “Maybe the Indian Prime Minister views Kashmir as an integral part of India, but these are certainly not the views of the rest of the world. Even the United Nations has called it a disputed area.” He further said that the “Indian government knows very well that the uprising in Kashmir is indigenous and spontaneous and has nothing to do with cross-border activities. In fact, Mr. Rao should read the editorial of London Times on May 12.”

Pakistan Prime Minister Moeen Qureshi had in his Independence Day speech reiterated Pakistan’s resolve to continue concerted efforts at the international level to stop ‘atrocities in Jammu and Kashmir’. He said that the importance being attached to Kashmir by his government could be well gauged from the fact that he visited Azad Jammu and Kashmir on a priority basis after assuming office.
The government and the people of Pakistan will not allow India to forget its obligations (of holding plebiscite in Kashmir)." Foreign Minister Abdus Sattar told the Senate on August 26. Responding to an adjournment motion sought to be moved by Prof Khursheed Ahmad to discuss the recent statement of Indian Prime Minister Narasimha Rao in which he had told Pakistan to forget about Kashmir, he said: “India should know that the people of Kashmir will not forget their rights and they will not let India forget its pledges. As in the past, Pakistan would continue to give full support to the inalienable right of the Kashmiri people. We will oppose the perverse Indian attempt to impose its will on the Kashmiri people.”

Referring to Mr. Rao’s references to Pakistan and Kashmir in his August 15 speech, Mr. Sattar said the references were extraordinary “for their lack of logic and exceptionable for the false allegations he made. While we are used to India’s hostility, the stridency of Mr. Rao’s remarks was uncharacteristic of a leader of his experience and reputation for restraint.”

He said the Indian Prime Minister’s claim that Kashmir was part and parcel of India was comparable to some claiming ownership of robbed goods. “No civilized society can accept such a blatant assertion,” he said and added: “India cannot claim a legal title because it has occupied a part of Jammu and Kashmir through aggression. International law rejected the acquisition of a territory by use of force. The Kashmir issue was not a question of territory but an issue of the right of the people. The territory itself belongs to the people of the state.”

Mr. Sattar said that even the slogan of “Kashmir is our” was a “stolen slogan”, which the Indian Prime Minister had stolen from the Kashmiris and this slogan had been reverberating in the valley for years. “It is the Kashmiri people who had been telling India that Kashmir belongs to Kashmiris.” He pointed out and recalled that Kashmiri people had been demanding the withdrawal of Indian forces so that they could exercise their right of self-determination in a free and unfettered plebiscite.

He said the right of self-determination was recognized by the UJN and re-affirmed time and again in international covenants on civil, political, economic social and cultural rights. Particularly in the case of Kashmir, he said, this right was guaranteed to the Kashmiri people by the UN Security Council through a number of resolutions.
The Foreign Minister said Pakistan would oppose the perverse Indian attempt to impose its will on the people of Kashmir and continue to condemn the barbarous repression India was carrying out in Kashmir.

Accusing India of indulging in “state terrorism” he said that over half a million Indian military and paramilitary forces had been let loose in Kashmir who were resorting to large-scale human rights violations in a desperate hope of bludgeoning Kashmiris into submission. He said the crimes being committed by the Indian forces against Kashmiri Muslims were “unspeakable and reprehensible.”

Mr. Sattar said tens of thousands of Kashmiris had been killed by Indian forces. But, he said, all such atrocities had failed to break the morale of the people. He said the crimes being committed by Indian forces in Kashmir were being depicted in despatches of objective correspondents, eyewitness accounts and reports of impartial human rights organizations. “Not only decent opinion in the world at large but even a civilized Indian who reads the accounts of the atrocities should surely feel outraged by the conduct of the Indian forces and raise his voice in protest and condemnation against the policy of the Indian government.” He added.

He said Pakistan was fully in agreement with Mr. Rao that relations between the two countries could improve and peaceful and cooperative relations between the two countries would benefit the people. However, he observed that this vista could be achieved only on a basis of law and justice and on a basis of respect for the pledged word. “If India does not implement solemn agreements, what is the value of its rhetorical statements?” he asked.

He called upon India to abandon violence and the use of brute force and to return to the path of peace to adopt reason, to respect norms of law and civilization and to resolve the Kashmir question in accordance with the accepted principles.
Statement of the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs reacting to the statement of Pakistan’s Acting Foreign Minister Mr. Abdus Sattar in the Pakistan Senate on August 26, 1993.

New Delhi, August 27, 1993.

We have taken note of the statement made by the Acting Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Abdul Sattar, in the Pakistan Senate on August 26, 1993. Whatever might have been the compulsions of Mr. Abdul Sattar to indulge in such strident rhetoric on Indo-Pak relations, we would have hoped that these were issues best left to the elected representatives of people of Pakistan to reflect on. We find it both ridiculous and unacceptable that Mr. Abdul Sattar, who is recognized for his incorrigibly negative stance towards India has misused the high office that he is holding ad interim to make such personal attack on our Prime Minister. It is ironic, to say the least, that Mr. Abdul Sattar who was the Pakistan Foreign Office’s instrumentality in carrying out horrendous brutalities on the people of the former East Pakistan, is waxing so eloquently about human rights.

The only remaining issue pertaining to Kashmir is the vacation of the territory illegally occupied by Pakistan through force and aggression. The present situation in J&K is none other than the direct consequence of Pakistan’s sustained and extensive support to terrorism and subversion. Pakistan has become a sanctuary and springboard for terrorists, subversives and armed mercenaries.

If Mr. Abdul Sattar’s statement is an example of the public statements through which Pakistan wishes to convey its professed desire for normalization of relations with India, it will be pointless to expect Pakistan to abandon its habitually negative approach and to cooperate in working towards tension-free and good neighbourly relations between the two countries.
1316. Message of felicitation from Prime Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao to the newly elected Prime Minister of Pakistan Ms. Benazir Bhutto and the latter’s reply.

New Delhi, October 19, 1993 and Islamabad October 20, 1993.

Greeting the new Pakistan Prime Minister, Prime Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao said: “I would like to convey on behalf of my government, and on my own behalf, our felicitations to you on your assumption of office as Prime Minister and wish you success in your important responsibility.”

In his message of felicitation Mr. Rao, suggested to her that bilateral discussions should be started in the light of the Simla Agreement for normalising relations between the two countries. “Taking into account the mutual commitment of our two governments to the Simla Agreement, I would like to suggest that wide-ranging and sustained bilateral discussions commence between India and Pakistan as early as possible, the objective being to progressively normalize relations between our two countries,” he said.

He said: “We look forward to such a comprehensive dialogue with Pakistan to discuss all matters of mutual concern, including issues related to Jammu and Kashmir.” He added: “At this juncture, when Your Excellency assumes office in Pakistan, we look forward to working with Pakistan to promote peace and stability in South Asia and in building up harmonious relations among the nations of the region.”

In her reply Pakistani Prime Minister Bhutto said:

* Within a few days of the exchange of messages, the Indian and Pakistani Foreign Secretaries met in Limasol (Cyprus) on the sidelines of the CHOGM Summit. After their meeting the Indian Foreign Secretary J. N. Dixit said the meeting discussed inter alia the Kashmir issue and “I reiterated my offer for bilateral talks as soon as possible” in the context of the exchange of messages between the two prime ministers. “We will work out the details. We are working on the modalities but we have not discussed the dates. There are preoccupations in Pakistan. It will take some time”. Though the Pakistan delegation did not comment on this statement on that day, the Pakistani Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan on November 10 clarified that his Indian counterpart, Mr. J. N. Dixit had indeed suggested to him in Cyprus that the two countries should re-engage in talks on Kashmir and he had responded saying: “We are in favour of holding talks but the present circumstances are not conducive to hold such talks unless the Kashmir issue is also discussed in its entirety as a separate agenda.” He said: “we have conveyed (to New Delhi) very clearly that unless there is a serious and meaningful discussion on Kashmir in its entirety as a separate agenda item and unless we see an improvement of the climate in Kashmir, it would be futile to schedule the talks”, he added. He also added the Kashmir and Siachen disputes were linked and cannot be discussed and negotiated separately, he added.

Briefing newsmen at the Foreign Office on November 10, he clarified that no accord had been reached between Pakistan and India on the Siachen dispute though both had “Excellency, thank you for your message of felicitations on my assumption of the office of Prime Minister of Pakistan. I would like to assure you that my democratic government attaches the highest priority to the establishment of normal, tension-free relations with India. I am sure that progress towards this objective would contribute to strengthening peace and stability in South Asia.

“I believe that the Jammu and Kashmir issue is the main obstacle in the way of better relations between our two countries and that its solution must be based on the aspirations and legitimate rights of the Kashmiri people. My government is prepared to engage in serious and purposeful discussions in order to resolve this issue as well as other problems between our two countries through peaceful negotiations. Please accept, Excellency, the assurance of my highest consideration.”

come very close to an agreement after the two meetings held on the issue. However, India had backed out of signing. There was practically nothing left that was contentious except the signing of the agreement, he added.

About the resolution against Indian human rights violations in Kashmir being lobbied for by Pakistan at the UN he said the resolution was gaining ground and so far Pakistan had found nine co-sponsors. “We are being kept informed about development,” he said. On November 24 Pakistan Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali told journalists in Islamabad that Pakistan had decided to withdraw the proposed resolution from the UNGA. While he claimed that a large number of friendly and Islamic countries had given a positive response, he did not give any reasons for the withdrawal of the resolution. He however added that he expected friendly countries “to closely monitor the human rights situation in Kashmir and to persuade India to allow international human rights organizations and the international media to have free access to the state.”
1317. Speech of Pakistani Foreign Minister Farooq Leghari in Parliament setting out pre-conditions for talks with India.

Foreign Minister Farooq Leghari said on October, 28 that lifting of the siege of Hazaratbal shrine, reduction of Indian forces in Kashmir and an end to repression against Kashmiri Muslims were the prequisites* for holding talks with India on the Kashmir issue. “We have conveyed to India that it is imperative that atrocities against Kashmiris be stopped, siege of Hazaratbal shrine be lifted and troops in Kashmir be reduced, otherwise talks will not be meaningful.”

The Foreign Minister told the special meeting of the two Houses of Parliament currently in session to discuss the situation in Kashmir with particular reference to the siege of Hazratbal shrine.

Mr. Leghari referred to the congratulatory letter written by Indian Prime Minister Narashimha Rao to Ms Benazir Bhutto on her assumption of office. In that he had offered talks on the Kashmir issue. He said Pakistan has responded to that letter “positively”, “Our objective remains the same—the settlement of the Kashmir issue according to UN resolutions and in the spirit of the Simla Agreement,” he said. “Under the Simla Agreement, Kashmir is a disputed territory and the issue has to be resolved bilaterally.”

He said Pakistan had consistently maintained that the Kashmir issue should be resolved by implementing the UN resolutions but regretted that India had continuously been refusing to pay heed to it.

“The way the freedom struggle is going on in Kashmir, it is imperative that a political solution is sought,” he said. “We feel the struggle has reached a stage when India will be obliged to hold talks.”

The resolution seeking a debate on the situation arising out of massive human rights violations in Kashmir and the siege of Hazratbal shrine was moved by Mr. Leghari and was not opposed by the Opposition. Initiating the debate, he regretted that India was treating the Kashmir issue as a law and order problem.

“It’s not a law and order problem. It’s a struggle for independence and against

* On the same day the Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office besides repeating the pre-conditions articulated by Leghari also spoke of continued and intensified firing by the Indian forces at the Line of Control. Referring to reports of skirmishes along the Line of Control between Pakistani and Indian troops, he said the Indian troops movement on the borders and the LoC has always been a cause of concern. But for the last few months, India has been firing from across the border at the civilian population. The Pakistan government said it is willing to talk to India on the Kashmir issue on the condition that India lifts siege of the holy shrine of Hazratbal, reduces significantly its forces in Kashmir and agrees to discuss the issue in its entirety. repression which cannot be curbed by force. The more force you will apply.... the more strong the struggle would become.” He said.

He said India even tried to mislead the world opinion by first accusing Pakistan of abetting fundamentalism in Kashmir but failed in its designs because the world came to know very soon that it was an independence movement launched by the Kashmiri people against India.

He said Pakistan had nothing to do with what was happening in Kashmir as it was an indigenous movement. He said Pakistan had been offering moral, political and diplomatic support to Kashmiris, which was in accordance with the UN resolutions. “We will continue to provide moral, political and diplomatic support to them”, he added.

Referring to the repression being perpetuated against the Muslims in Kashmir, he said: “We are witnessing a catastrophe never witnessed before in Kashmir.”

He said the claims of the Indian government that it was making political moves to tackle the situation have been belied by the recent crackdown. The people of Kashmir, he said, had come out for their right to self-determination.

He said Pakistan was committed to a negotiated settlement of the Kashmir issue. “A peaceful way must be found to resolve the issue.” He said, asserting that it was a longstanding issue which has to be resolved for permanent peace in the region.

He told the members about the efforts made by Pakistan during the recently concluded Commonwealth Conference held in Cyprus to highlight the Kashmir issue.

1318. Briefing by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office denying the existence of any secret deal at Simla in 1972 on Kashmir.

Islamabad, November 24, 1993.

The Foreign Office spokesman contradicted reports of the existence of any secret agreement between the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan during the Simla Conference in July 1972 and termed them as “baseless and malicious allegations.” Briefing newsmen in Islamabad on November 24, he referred to reports recently published in some Indian newspapers, alleging that during the Simla Conference in July 1972, the two Prime Ministers had reached a secret agreement on “converting the Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir into an international boundary” and said no secret pact or understanding existed as was being claimed by the Indian media.

Recalling a protracted controversy on this issue in India in April 1978 during the tenure of the Janata Party, the spokesman said that at that time the then Foreign Minister of India, Mr. Atal Behari Vajpayee, had been quoted as saying that some sort of a secret understanding was reached by Mrs. Indira Gandhi in her confidential conversation with Mr. Z.A. Bhutto. Mr. Vajpayee had, however, clarified that he was not quoting from any official Indian documents.

He said the late Mrs. Gandhi, who as Prime Minister had negotiated with the late Prime Minister, Mr. Bhutto, and signed the Simla Agreement, had categorically denied that any secret agreement had been reached. And in a statement on April 23, 1978, Mrs. Gandhi had described the references to the secret agreement as “absolutely ridiculous”.

“We would like to reiterate that no secret agreement or pact or an understanding exists in order to set aside any lingering doubt on the subject,” he added.

Press Conference of Pakistan Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali on return from Dhaka after attending the Ministerial Meeting of the SAARC Countries.

Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali said at Karachi on December 6 that so far India had neither improved ground situation nor met other agreed conditions necessary for making talks on Kashmir meaningful and fruitful. Addressing a news conference on his return from the ministerial meeting of SAARC in Dhaka, Sardar Assef said he had very important discussions on the Kashmir issue with his Indian counterpart Mr. Dinesh Singh, and hoped that New Delhi would take necessary steps in this regard.

He emphasized that “Pakistan seeks solution to the Kashmir issue in accordance with the UN resolutions which envisage a plebiscite” and added that the “Simla Agreement is only a good instrument for furthering such negotiations.”

Giving a resume of his bilateral meeting with the Indian External Affairs Minister, Sardar Assef said he had pointed out to Mr. Dinesh Singh that “when Pakistan agreed to have talks on finding a solution to the Kashmir issue, it was also agreed by the Indian side that they will lift the siege of Hazratbal shrine, improve ground situation, release detained Kashmiri leaders, reduce repression on the Kashmiri people and allow international media and human rights NGOs to enter Kashmir.

“It was a clear understanding that India will move forward in all areas for the talks to be meaningful and fruitful,” said Mr. Assef. But he regretted that “India has not been able to fulfill these commitments”.

During the exchanges with Mr. Dinesh Singh, Sardar Assef said, he had drawn his attention towards this situation, and the latter had agreed on most of the points “raised by us and promised that the ground situation in Kashmir will improve.”

Sardar Assef pointed out that the number of deaths as a result of Indian repression in Kashmir “has gone up dramatically, especially in Sopore where a large part of the city was torched, resulting in the death of many innocent people, including women and children.”

“If this kind of repression continues, then surely India is not ready for a settlement of the Kashmir dispute and it will be very difficult to talk on Kashmir,” he said, adding that Pakistan hoped that India would release detained leaders and lift the curtain on Kashmir by allowing foreign human rights NGOs.

During the Dhaka meeting, Mr. Dinesh Singh reiterated his country’s desire to improve cross-border trade to give a boost to economic cooperation. “If it is within the framework of SAARC, then there will be problem” but otherwise improvement of bilateral relations hinged on the resolution of the Kashmir issue.” He said.

“India has to resolve the Kashmir issue before any meaningful talks can take place in trade, commerce and other spheres,” said Sardar Assef, and hoped that before the Foreign Secretary-level talks, the Indian government will make suitable improvements in Kashmir for the talks to be successful.

He said no compromise formula was presented or discussed when the Foreign Secretaries met in Dhaka, though before the ministerial meeting the Indian Foreign Secretary had said he would discuss a compromise formula with Pakistan officials.

“We don’t know what is in their mind but any solution has to be in accordance with the UN resolutions. There is not much change in our policy on Kashmir.”

Asked whether the Foreign Secretary-level talks would be cancelled if the Indians did not fulfil the conditions agreed upon, Sardar Assef said: “It will vitiate the atmosphere and will not lead to a meaningful conclusion.”

Replying to a question, he said: “Siachen is a part of Kashmir and I see no reason why it should be discussed separately. “These issue of Jammu and Kashmir will be discussed in its entirety.”

Asked whether he considered Indian offer of talks as a ploy to defuse the situation, he said: “We have accepted the offer in good faith because we want a peaceful and negotiated settlement of the problem.” He, however, did not rule out the possibility that the offer could be a ploy.

Asked why Pakistan had decided to withhold the UN the resolution on Kashmir. Sardar Assef said: “It was dictated by diplomacy.”

Indirectly rebutting the opposition’s charge on this issue, the Foreign Minister said that the opposition had no understanding of how foreign policy is conducted. Pakistan’s decision was dictated by the wise counsel of co-sponsoring friendly countries, “which advised us to take advantage of the offer for negotiations.”

But he stressed that if and when necessary Pakistan would move such a resolution in a much vigorous manner. “We cannot compromise our stand on Kashmir”, he concluded.

New Delhi, December 7, 1993.

Shri R. L. Bhatia, Minister of State for External Affairs, left by a special aircraft for Islamabad today, as special envoy of the Prime Minister. Later this evening, he is expected to meet the Pakistan Prime Minister, Mrs. Benazir Bhutto and deliver to her an invitation from our Prime Minister to attend the ‘Education For All’ summit, which is to be shortly held in New Delhi.

The Government of India had advance intimation that owing to certain preoccupations, the Prime Minister of Pakistan would not be able to attend this Summit but as a special gesture and to contribute to the atmosphere of normalization, the Prime Minister had decided to nevertheless send a special envoy to Islamabad to personally deliver his invitation to her.

The Prime Minister, it will be recalled, had earlier sent a special envoy to Bangladesh, although the Bangladesh Prime Minister, Begum Khaleda Zia, had stated that she could not come for the summit owning to domestic preoccupations. Kumari Selja, Deputy Minister in the Ministry of Human Resource Development, had been sent to Bangladesh to deliver Prime Minister's invitation personally. This is in accordance with Prime Minister's wishes that special courtesies should be extended to the heads of government of our neighbouring countries.

1321. Adoption of a Resolution by the Pakistani Senate on Kashmir.

Islamabad, December 30, 1993.

The Pakistan Senate adopted on December 30 a Resolution on Kashmir affirming that a political solution to the Kashmir problem is imperative and without the involvement of the leadership of the Kashmir liberation movement India–Pakistan talks on the negotiations would be fruitless. The resolution moved by Senator Khurshid Ahmad and Senator Mohammad Ali Khan Hoti contained five conditions which needed to be fulfilled if the forthcoming negotiations between India and Pakistan are to be made fruitful.

The conditions laid down were:

2. Withdrawal of Indian forces be started in such a manner that there is a visible reduction leading to a total withdrawal of forces.
3. Political leadership of the resistance movement be released and a congenial climate created in Kashmir.
4. Negotiations should be directed towards a final solution to the Kashmir dispute in accordance with the UN resolutions and commitments of the Governments of India and Pakistan.
5. As the future of Kashmir is to be decided in accordance with the will of the people of Kashmir, leadership of the resistance movement in Kashmir must be involved in these negotiations.

The Resolution said that the instruments of negotiations had been used by India as a trap in the past particularly after 1962 and also in late 1980s. It said the main issue between India and Pakistan is the future of Jammu and Kashmir. Unless this issue is resolved, negotiations on other subjects like the so-called normalization of relations, economic cooperation, Siachen and the Wullar Barrage would be tantamount to side-tracking the real issue and an exercise in futility. The Senate also expressed its solidarity with the Kashmir freedom movement and urged the government to take immediate steps to implement effectively the resolution of the joint sitting of the parliament adopted in November 1993*.

* In view of the impending India-Pakistan talks at Foreign Secretary level starting from January 2, 1994 and in the light of the Senate Resolution the Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office on the same date December 30 termed the forthcoming talks on Kashmir as “decisive” and threatened that it would not hold further negotiations if they proved unproductive. He said: “We will find it domestically extremely difficult to continue the
During the three-day meeting due to begin in Islamabad on January 2, Pakistan would ascertain whether India wanted “mere talks” or was genuinely interested in a settlement of the “core issue”, he said. If there was no progress, Pakistan would take the matter to the international community and “tell the world to resolve the explosive situation.” Pakistan would like India to make “some commitment” to improving the human rights situation in Kashmir by ending its “repression” in the disputed northern state, the Spokesman added. He also said that Pakistan would neither accept any division of the state or any Indian suggestion of recognizing “with some adjustments” the preset ceasefire line as a permanent border in the territory.

The Foreign Office spokesman said since the participation of the Kashmiri representative was essential “We are in contact with all Kashmiri representatives available to us and if the leadership in Kashmir is available to us, we will certainly also consult them.” “we had read the statement of All Parties Hurriyat Conference and we would certainly take into account their views during the talks,” he added. “Our position calls for the implementation of the Security Council resolution which requires expression of the wishes of the Kashmiri people,” he said, adding that if the procedure for the implementation of the Security Council resolution demands “consultation with the Kashmiri people, and we most certainly believe that it is essential to do so”, then Pakistan would definitely consult them. The spokesman hoped that the talks, would be “serious, constructive and meaningful but at the same time Pakistan wishes to reiterate continuing escalation of repression by Indian military and paramilitary forces in Jammu and Kashmir is a source of most serious concern and anguish for the people of and the government of Pakistan.”

The spokesman said there would be a comprehensive discussion on all aspects of the Jammu and Kashmir issue besides all other related issues. He said Pakistan would focus on the core issue of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute. He hoped the talks would lead to a just and lasting settlement of the dispute. This solution, he reiterated, should be based on the right of self-determination of the People of Kashmir, exercised in accordance with the relevant Security Council resolutions and in the framework of the Simla Agreement.

The seventh round of talks between the Foreign Secretary of India, Mr. J. N. Dixit, and the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan, Mr. Shaharyar M. Khan, took place in Islamabad on 1 to 3 January 1994.

During his stay in Islamabad, the Foreign Secretary of India was received by the President of Pakistan, Sardar Farooq Ahmed Khan Leghari, the Prime Minister, Mohtarma Benazir Bhuto, and the Foreign Minister Sardar Aseff Ahmed Ali.

Both sides reiterated the need to engage in a meaningful dialogue with a view to addressing all outstanding problems.

The talks addressed all aspects of the Jammu and Kashmir problem. Both sides recognized that there are basic divergences. It was agreed that sincere efforts would be made to resolve the problem.

The two sides will consult each other on the question of further talks on the Foreign Secretary or other level*.

* At the end of the first day of talks Pakistan Foreign Secretary said “in diplomacy things move forward in small steps but this is a fact that Kashmir has been discussed as a dispute between the two countries for the first time in decades” while Mr. Dixit quoted Plato and said “it is not a sign of wisdom to be desperate about things”. “We have discussed Kashmir this morning and are open to dialogue from the Pakistani side”, Mr. Dixit said at the reception hosted by the Indian High Commissioner. Media reports said that the two sides were poles apart in their perception of the dispute but Mr. Dixit said that he was “satisfied” with the initial round. Pakistani officials continued to maintain that nothing substantive had happened. Mr. Dixit told Indian newsmen that “we have to find areas of agreement although the gap in the perceptions is very large”.

At the end of the second round of talks and before the departure of the Indian delegation for New Delhi, both the foreign secretaries conceded that the talks had failed. Mr. Dixit when asked whether India would implement the UN resolutions on Kashmir, he said “This is irrelevant, provocative and controversial” and added “more than once, the Indian position has been articulated on the irrelevance of UN resolutions”. When Mr. Shaharyar Khan was asked whether Pakistan would now move the resolution at the UN against Indian violation of human rights, he said the option was open and might be considered. But Mr. Dixit intervened and said that India was capable of “living with resolutions whether they are moved or not”. Mr. Shaharyar after the Indian delegation had left said that Pakistan had reiterated four conditions for resumption of talks. These included withdrawal of Indian troops from Kashmir, end to human rights violations, opening up Kashmir to international organizations and release of all political prisoners in Kashmir.

Islamabad, January 5, 1994.

The Foreign Office spokesman said on January 5, 1994 that the latest statements emanating from New Delhi confirmed Islamabad’s assessment of India’s basic intransigence to resolve disputes, particularly the core issue of Kashmir. Commenting on the Indo-Pak Foreign Secretary-level talks, he quoted the Indian and international media, which said: “India may delay the transmission of its promised proposals if Islamabad links the holding of talks to a change in New Delhi’s stand on Kashmir.”

The spokesman said Indian Foreign Secretary J.N. Dixit had “promised to send specific proposals on Siachen, Wullar Barrage, Sir Creek, non-proliferation, peace and tranquility on the Line of Control in six weeks’ time for Islamabad’s consideration.”

However, he pointed out that besides reneging on his promise to send these proposals within the agreed time-frame, Mr. Dixit before his departure for New Delhi on January 3, “publicly repudiated the sanctity and validity” of the UN Security Council resolutions on Kashmir.

According to him, Mr. Dixit in blatant defiance of the wishes of the UN, had reportedly said: “India could live with UN resolutions whether adopted, tabled or not tabled.”

He said in New Delhi Mr. Dixit issued on January 4 another statement on the subject of India presenting its proposals to Pakistan. Mr. Dixit had said: “It all depends on how Islamabad responds to the Indian proposal to have the next round of foreign secretary-level talks in four months time”

Commenting on these statements, the Spokesman said that if India was to present proposals to resolve the problems which India itself has created, it can hardly be portrayed as concessions to Pakistan.

Listing the problems, the Spokesman pointed out to Siachen Glacier, Wullar Barrage, Sir Creek and nuclear proliferation, as well as Kashmir which “have all been created and perpetuated by India.”

He said: “It is India which unilaterally encroached into Siachen occupying the areas in this disputed territory of Jammu and Kashmir. It is India which began the construction of the Wullar Barage in contravention of the Indus Water Treaty of 1960. It is India which has repudiated accepted maps for the demarcation of the land boundary in Sir Creek. It is also India which carried out a nuclear explosion in 1974 bringing the specter of proliferation to South Asia. And it is India which has embarked since then on a massive effort to manufacture short-range, medium-range and inter-continental ballistic missiles.”

The spokesman, while referring to Mr. Dixit’s public repudiation of the validity of UN Security Council resolutions, urged the world community to take note of India’s latest defiance of the wishes of the UN and the sanctity of the UN.

“It is strange that this defiance emanated from a country which aspires for a permanent membership to the UN Security Council,” said the spokesman.

Voicing his deep disappointment at the failure of the talks, he said: “The Indian side had proposed the talks. India had gone round the world expressing the fact that it was so reasonable in agreeing to discuss all aspects of the Kashmir issue. Pakistan naturally had a right to expect that India’s position would be more flexible and forthcoming for Islamabad to have a reason for the continuation of the dialogue.”

Commenting on a BBC’s report blaming China to the failure of the talks because China feared that an independent Kashmir would be harmful for its political interests, the spokesman said: “BBC must have very intelligent analysts sitting in London who can concoct the most bizarre reasons for the most obvious outcomes.”

Not wishing to comment further, he said that there were many “aspects of BBC analyses with which we disagree, and this is one of them”.

Asked about the international pressure on Pakistan and India for continuing the talks, he said: “It is the desire of the world community to avoid a conflict in order to avert the danger of war between the two countries*.”

* Media reports said In the backdrop of the Indo-Pak dialogue, the Pakistan Foreign Office took on January 4 into confidence the foreign envoys based in Islamabad and Kashmiri leaders as a part of the plan to step up Pakistan’s efforts to move the UN Human Rights Commission, which is scheduled to meet in Geneva from January 31 on the atrocities being committed on the Kashmiris. Two special briefings were held on January 4 at the Foreign Office for the foreign envoys based at Islamabad to inform them about Pakistan’s initiatives on the Kashmir issue and India’s stubborn and indifferent response to these initiatives. The first briefing was held for the envoys of Asian and African countries while the second briefing was for the envoys from European and American countries. Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan gave the briefing to these groups for one hour in each case. Official sources said the world community was informed that Pakistan had agreed to reopen dialogue with India with sincerity but India showed no flexibility in its attitude towards the core issue of Kashmir.

The envoys were also informed that since India showed no consideration to ease the human rights situation in Jammu and Kashmir, therefore, it was not possible for Pakistan to schedule another round of talks with India. They were told that during the talks with India, Pakistan laid stress on the holding of plebiscite under the UN resolutions to decide the future of Kashmir. Pakistan demanded that the Kashmiri leaders be released, troop presence in the valley be reduced and impartial observers should be stationed at the Line of Control to monitor the movement in and outside the valley. According to the media reports, the envoys were told that Pakistan had also asked India to improve the human rights conditions in the valley but India rejected all these proposals. Pakistan was left with no option but to mobilize world opinion on the gross and massive human rights violations being committed in the valley.

Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali briefed the Kashmiri leaders on the political aspects of the dialogue. Media quoted official sources to say that the Kashmiri leaders were informed that both Pakistan and India fully realized that for any political solution, the people of Jammu and Kashmir would be taken into confidence. The Kashmiri leaders were apprised of the entire gamut of talks and of the possible future course of action to be adopted by the Pakistan government to keep pressure on India. The Foreign Office ascertained views of the Kashmiri leaders on the current situation and also elicited proposals from them.
Measures required to create a propitious climate for peaceful resolution of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute and other Issues.

India and Pakistan have acknowledged that Jammu and Kashmir is the central issue which bedevils their relations. Both countries are committed under the UN Charter, the resolutions of the Security Council and the Simla Agreement to promote a peaceful solution of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

2. The Government of Pakistan believes that the repression by nearly 500,000 Indian military and para-military forces in Indian-held Kashmir militates against the stated commitments of the Indian Government to seek a peaceful solution of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute. India’s actions in Jammu and Kashmir are also violative of the UN Charter, the international human rights standards and of the humanitarian norms applicable in armed conflicts.

4. During the Seventh round of Foreign Secretaries’ level talks in Islamabad (January 1-3, 1994) Pakistan expressed its view that this continuing repression is vitiating the climate for the talks and adversely affecting the prospects of peaceful resolution of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute. Pakistan urged India to take steps to reduce the repression and to bring to an end the violations of human rights against the people of Indian-held Kashmir. Pakistan had indicated that India should take the following measures:

(a) Withdrawal of additional forces deployed in Jammu and Kashmir since January 1990;

(b) Removal of military bunkers, watch towers and other symbols of the military and para-military presence in Kashmiri towns and villages and specially the bunkers outside and around the Hazratbal Mosque;

(c) Withdrawal of Terrorist and Disruptive Activities Act (TADA) and other draconian laws;

(d) End of arbitrary arrests and detention of Kashmiris, torture, custodial murders, rape and arson by Indian security forces;

(e) Release of Kashmiri political, religious and militant leaders;
(f) Unhindered and unrestricted access to Jammu and Kashmir by representatives of international human rights bodies such as Amnesty International, Asia Watch. Physicians for Human Rights, the International Federation of Human Rights (FIDH), the International Commission of Jurists, the Congressional Human Rights Foundation, etc. as well as international humanitarian organizations such as the ICRC;

(g) Unlimited access to Indian Held Kashmir (IHK) for the media, especially the electronic media; and

(h) Removal of all restrictions on Kashmiris to travel out of India and to return to IHK.

5. To facilitate the continuation of a meaningful dialogue, Pakistan considers it essential that India should take the above mentioned measures with a view to reducing repression and bringing to an end human rights violations in Jammu and Kashmir.

6. We look forward to an early and positive response from India on this issue.

MODALITIES FOR THE HOLDING OF A PLEBISCITE IN JAMMU AND KASHMIR

1. During the seventh round of Foreign Secretary-level talks, Pakistan reiterated its principled position that the “core” problem of Jammu and Kashmir must be resolved on the basis of the relevant resolutions of UN Security Council and in the spirit of Simla Agreement,

2. UN Security Council Resolutions No.47 (1948) of 21 April 1948, 51 (1948) of 3 June 1948 and 80 (1950) of 14 March 1950 and United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan resolutions of 13 August 1948 and 5 January 1949, embodied the principle that the final disposition of the State of Jammu and Kashmir to India or Pakistan will be made through the democratic method of a free and impartial plebiscite conducted under the auspices of the United Nations.

3. The United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan (UNCIP) resolution adopted on 13 August 1948 stated that “the Governments of India and Pakistan reaffirmed their wish that the future status of the State of Jammu and Kashmir shall be determined in accordance with the will of the people and to that end, upon acceptance of the truce agreement, both governments agree to enter into consultations with the Commission (UNCIP) to determine the fair and equitable conditions whereby such free expression will be assured. The second UNCIP resolution, adopted on 5 January 1949, reiterated that the “question of the accession of the State of Jammu and Kashmir to India or Pakistan will be decided through the democratic method of a free and impartial plebiscite”.

4. Both India and Pakistan had accepted the UN Security Council resolutions and the UNCIP proposals regarding a ceasefire, troop withdrawal and a plebiscite.

5. Despite various obstacles to the holding of a free and impartial plebiscite, the UN Security Council continued its efforts to resolve the issue. Subsequent resolutions of the Security Council, the reports of the UNCIP and the proposals of various United Nations representatives including Mr. McNaughton, Mr. Dixon, Dr. Frank Graham and Mr. Jarring, envisaged various possible modalities for the holding of a UN supervised plebiscite in Jammu and Kashmir.

6. UN Security Council resolution 91 (1951) of 30 March 1951 and resolution 127 (1957) of 24 January 1957 affirmed that no unilateral action such as the so-called “Constituent Assembly” created by India, would constitute a disposition of the State of Jammu and Kashmir in accordance with the principle of a final determination by a reference to the freely expressed wishes of its people through a plebiscite held under UN supervision.

7. The above resolutions provide the basis for a peaceful resolution of Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

8. Pakistan proposes that in the next round of talks between the two countries consideration may be given to reaching agreement on the modalities for the holding of a free and impartial plebiscite in accordance with the above-mentioned resolutions of the UN Security Council.

9. These discussions could take up consideration of the various options for the conduct of a plebiscite proposed or discussed previously. New and innovative approaches to the conduct of a free and fair plebiscite could also be examined.

10. Mutual troop reductions, measures to ease tension along the Line of Control and arrangements for neutral monitoring of movements of persons and goods across the L.O.C. might also be discussed.

11. In the discussions of these modalities for the holding of a plebiscite, the two sides would greatly benefit from the good offices or mediatory participation of the UN Secretary-General or his representative or of any other third party mutually acceptable to Pakistan and India.
12. Pakistan will await India's response to the above mentioned proposals which should constitute the basis of future talks between the two countries to resolve the Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

Suggestions and Confidence-Building Measures sent by the Government of India to the Government of Pakistan on 24 January 1994

AGREEMENT ON THE MAINTENANCE OF PEACE AND TRANQUILITY ALONG THE LINE OF CONTROL

The Government of the Republic of India and the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan (hereinafter referred to as the two sides), have entered into the present Agreement in accordance with the principles of mutual respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity, non-interference in each other's internal affairs, on the basis of equality and mutual benefit and peaceful coexistence and with a view to maintaining peace and tranquility in areas along the Line of Control in the India-Pakistan border areas and promoting a friendly and harmonious relationship between the two countries.

ARTICLE I

The two sides are of the view that the issues relating to Jammu and Kashmir shall be resolved through peaceful and friendly negotiations. Neither side shall use or threaten to use force against the other by any means. Pending an ultimate solution to differences between the two countries, the two sides shall strictly respect and observe the Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir. Neither side shall undertake, assist or encourage activities detrimental to the interests of the other side.

ARTICLE II

Each side will keep its military forces in the areas along the Line of Control to a level compatible with the friendly and good neighbourly relations between the two countries.

ARTICLE III

Both sides shall work out through consultations effective confidence building measures in the areas along the Line of Control. Neither side will undertake specified levels of military exercises in mutually identified zones. Each side shall give the other prior notification of military exercises of specified levels near the Line of Control in terms of relevant bilateral agreements.

ARTICLE IV

In case of contingencies or other problems arising in the areas along the Line of Control, the two sides shall deal with them through meetings and friendly consultations between border personnel of the two countries. The form of such meetings and channels of communications between the border personnel shall be mutually agreed upon by the two sides.

ARTICLE V

The two sides agree to take adequate measures to ensure that air intrusions across the Line of Control do not take place and shall undertake mutual consultations should intrusions occur. Both sides shall also consult on possible restrictions on air exercises in areas to be mutually agreed near the Line of Control.

ARTICLE VI

The two sides shall desist from, and mutually co-operate in the prevention of organisation, assistance or encouragement of any acts detrimental to the maintenance of peaceful and harmonious relations.

ARTICLE VII

The two sides agreed that references to the Line of Control in this Agreement do not prejudice their respective positions on the Jammu and Kashmir issue.

ARTICLE VIII

The two sides shall agree through consultations on the form, method, scale and content of effective verification measures and supervision required for the maintenance of peace and tranquility in the area along the Line of Control under this Agreement.

ARTICLE IX

The two sides shall appoint diplomatic and military experts to formulate, through mutual consultations, implementation measures for the present Agreement. The experts shall meet at regular intervals and address issues relating to peace and tranquility along the Line of Control. The experts shall also assist in the supervision of the implementation of the Agreement, and settlement of differences that may arise in that process, based on the principle of good faith and mutual confidence.
ARTICLE X

The present Agreement shall come into effect as of the date of signature and is subject to amendment and addition by agreement of the two sides.

SIACHEN

During the discussions between India and Pakistan at the Sixth Round of Talks held at New Delhi, 1992 on Siachen, a broad understanding had been reached on disengagement and redeployment, monitoring, maintenance of peace and implementation schedule.

2. It was agreed that immediate focus should be on restoring peace and tranquility in Siachen. Towards this end, without prejudice to the positions taken by either side in the earlier rounds of talks (India's position: Point NJ 9842 should extend to Sia Kangri; Pakistan's Position: Point NJ 9842 should Join with Karakoram Pass), both sides agreed that the delineation of the LOC beyond NJ 9842 shall be examined by a Joint Commission later.

3. Both sides agreed that to reduce tension in Siachen, the two sides shall disengage from authenticated positions they are presently occupying and shall fall back to positions as under:-

(a) India to disengage from positions held on the Saltoro Ridge running along Indira Col - Sia Kangri—Sia La—Sherpi Kangri - Saltoro Kangri - Bilafonda La— Pt 7428 -- Pt 6754 - Pt 6510 - Pt 6389 - NJ 9842 to positions east and generally north of Zingrulma.

(b) Pakistan to disengage from existing positions to a line to the west and running generally along Gasherbrum I - Baltoro Kangri - Pt 3917 – Kurma Ding - Goma - NJ 984 2.

4. This disengagement and redeployment of forces, aimed at securing peace and tranquility in the area, is without prejudice to the known position of either side. Both sides agree that the positions/areas vacated will constitute a Zone of Complete Disengagement. Both sides commit:
(a) that they shall not seek to re-occupy the positions vacated by them or to occupy the positions vacated by either side or to establish new positions across the alignment determined by the vacated positions.

(b) That they shall not undertake any military, mountaineering or any other activity whatsoever in the Zone of Disengagement.

(c) That if either side violates the commitment in (a) and (b) above, the other shall be free to respond through any means, including military.

5. Both sides agreed to evolve monitoring measures to ensure against any violation, to maintain peace and tranquility in the area.

6. Both sides agree to disengage and redeploy as per time schedules to be worked out to mutual satisfaction.

7. An Indian delegation at Defence Secretary-level is willing to visit Islamabad in February 1994 with a view to negotiate a formal agreement on Siachen on the basis of the understanding reached.

SIR CREEK

India and Pakistan have held five rounds of discussions on the IBL in the Sir Creek area. During the last two rounds held at Islamabad on 26 October, 1991 and at New Delhi on 5-6 November, 1992, certain useful exchange of views also took place with regard to the guiding principles for the delineation of the India-Pakistan maritime boundary.

During these discussions, the Pakistani side had conveyed that the maritime boundary is directly linked to the resolution of the termination points of the land boundary in the Sir Creek area. The Indian side, in an earnest desire to move forward in the discussions with a view to conclude a mutually satisfactory agreement at an early date, is willing to enter into further discussions on the lines suggested by Pakistan.

India believes that given a realistic, practical and flexible approach by both sides, it is possible to conclude an early agreement on the issues involved which would eliminate a continuing source of friction in the Maritime Zone.

On the horizontal sector of the land boundary a consensus between the two sides is already available to the effect that the two sides could accept the boundary line defined by the existing boundary pillars along the horizontal line and fixing intermediary pillars on the same alignment if required.
In the Sir Creek itself, the Indian side is prepared to negotiate a fixed boundary around the middle of the Creek along the 1914 resolution map. At the same time, for delineation of the maritime boundary line, (a) in respect of the maritime boundary in territorial sea it is possible for the two sides to adopt the median/equidistance line method using the low water lines and low tide elevation of both countries, and (b) for maritime boundary beyond territorial sea to adopt the equidistance/equitable principles.

An Indian official/technical delegation is willing to visit Islamabad in the month of February 1994 for further discussions towards the conclusion of an agreement on the issues involved.

TULBAL NAVIGATION PROJECT

The Governments of India and Pakistan have since 1987 held eight rounds of Secretary level talks for resolving differences in the way of a bilateral settlement of the Tulbal (Wullar) Navigation Project. These discussions, apart from providing a useful opportunity for a detailed exchange of views, resolved all technical and legal aspects concerning the project. In October, 1991 at Islamabad, the two sides finalised a draft agreement on the Tulbal (Wullar) Navigation Project, which is attached at Annexure I.

An Indian delegation is willing to visit Islamabad in the month of February, 1994 for the conclusion of an agreement.

ANNEXURE I

The Government of Islamic Republic of Pakistan and the Government of Republic of India

Desirous of promoting and strengthening friendly relations between the two countries on the basis of sovereign equality and mutual benefit;

Reaffirming their continued commitment to the Indus Waters Treaty, 1960 (hereinafter referred to as the Treaty) and their sincere desire to maintain its sanctity; and Desirous of arriving at a negotiated settlement on the Wullar Navigation Project (hereinafter referred to as the Project) on the Jhelum Main,

Have in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty, agreed as follows-

Article 1

The salient features of the Project shall conform to the features as laid down in the Annexure to this Agreement.

Article 2

India agrees to keep 6.2 m of the structure as un-gated with a crest level at EL 1574.90 m (5167 ft).

Article 3

India shall not make any alteration in the salient features of the Project specified, in Article 1 and 2 above except by mutual agreement between India and Pakistan.

Article 4

India shall forego a General Storage Capacity of 0.30 million acre-feet out of the provision permitted to it on the Jhelum (excluding the Jhelum Main) under time (b) Paragraph 7 of Annexure E to the Treaty.

Article 5

In consideration of India foregoing a General Storage Capacity of 0.3 Maf in terms of Article 4 above, the Project shall be entitled to attain Full Operational Level of 5177.90 ft. each year. The annual filling of the lake up to the Full Operational Level and initial filling below the Dead Storage Level should be carried out at such times and in accordance with such rules as may be agreed upon between the Commissioners. In case the Commissioners are unable to reach agreement, India may carry out the filling during 21st June and 20th August.

Article 6

Except for the uses specified in Article III (2) of the Treaty and subject to the provisions of Article 5 of this Agreement, India shall be under an obligation to let flow all the waters entering Wullar Lake.

Article 7

Any question which arises between the Parties concerning the interpretation and application of this Agreement or the existence of any fact which, if established, might constitute a breach of this Agreement shall be dealt with under the provisions of Article IX of the Treaty.
Article 8
Matters not expressly provided for in the Agreement shall be governed by the provisions of the Treaty.

Article 9
The terms used in this Agreement shall have the same meanings as in the Treaty.

Article 10
The Agreement shall come into force upon signature.
Done in duplicate in the Hindi, Urdu and English languages at.....on this day of....All the texts will be equally authentic. However, in case of doubt, the English text shall prevail.

INDIA - PAKISTAN JOINT COMMISSION

Pursuant to the process of normalization initiated after the signing of the Simla Agreement in 1972, India and Pakistan signed an agreement on March 10, 1983 to establish a Joint Commission which would work towards strengthening understanding and promoting cooperation between the two countries for mutual benefit in economic, trade, industrial, education, health, cultural, consular, tourism, travel, information, scientific and technological fields. The Joint Commission which was to meet annually, last met in Islamabad on 18-19 July, 1989.

At the conclusion of sixth round of Foreign Secretary-level talks held in New Delhi in August, 1992 both sides reaffirmed their agreement, in principle, to convene the Sub Commissions of the Joint Commission at an appropriate time on mutually convenient dates and that in the meanwhile, senior officials of the concerned Ministries would meet.

India would propose that the next session of the Joint Commission could be held at New Delhi in the month of February/March, 1994 to hold serious and purposeful discussions on all issues in the areas covered under the Joint Commission.

CONFIDENCE BUILDING MEASURES

In accordance with the Simla Agreement India has expressed its resolve to work towards the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent and settle differences by peaceful means through bilateral negotiations.

2. With a view to improving the content of the bilateral relationship and providing means to prevent escalation of tensions while, enhancing mutual confidence, India has put forward a number of proposals for CBMs during the Foreign Secretary level talks which started in July 1990, some of which have since been agreed upon.

3. In January 1991, the Agreement on Prohibition of Attack on Nuclear Installations and Facilities entered into force. A year and a half later Instruments of Ratification relating to Agreement on Advanced Notice of Military Exercises, Manoeuvres and Troop Movements as well as an Agreement on Prevention of Airspace Violations and for Permitting Over-flights and Landings by Military Aircraft were exchanged in August 1992. A Joint Declaration on Prohibition of Chemical Weapons was also issued in August 1992.

4. As further demonstration of its commitment, the Government of India proposes additional steps for reducing mis-trust and enhancing confidence between the two countries. These CBMs relate to both the nuclear and the conventional fields.

i) India proposes that the Agreement on Prohibition of Attack on Nuclear Installations and Facilities be extended to include population centres and economic targets;

ii) India proposes its willingness to enter into an Agreement according to which both countries shall undertake not to be the first to use or threaten to use its nuclear capability against each other. India believes that such an Agreement is in keeping with its initiatives calling for the establishment of a nuclear weapon-free and non-violent world order.

iii) India proposes that the present communication link between the Director General (Military Operations) on both sides be upgraded into a permanent, secure and dedicated link. This should also be coupled with a fax link between the two officials. Such a communication link will enable both countries to put it to better use for exchanging information on existing and future Agreements.

iv) India proposes the setting up of an institutional mechanism to resolve ambiguities to enable a more effective implementation of the bilateral agreements relating to Agreement on Advanced Notice of Military Exercises, Manoeuvres and Troop Movements as well as an Agreement on Prevention of Airspace Violations and for Permitting Over-flights and Landings by Military Aircraft. Such an institutional mechanism will also enable both sides to undertake periodic reviews of these Agreements.

5. India remains ready to discuss these proposals for CBMs with a view to concluding Agreements at the next round of Foreign Secretary level talks.
of Jammu and Kashmir. The Non-papers were handed over to the Indian High Commissioner by the Pakistani Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan. Copies of the same papers were handed over by Pakistan High Commissioner Riaz H. Khokhar to Indian Foreign Secretary J.N. Dixit the same day in New Delhi. Meanwhile, the Foreign Office spokesman said in Islamabad on January 19 that sending informal proposals to India does not mean scheduling of the eighth round of talks but could be termed “some of the ideas on the future agenda” of negotiations between India and Pakistan.

Briefing newsmen, he said Pakistan had just sent two “non-papers” (informal) on two subjects, namely measures required for creating propitious climate for peaceful settlement of the Kashmir issue and modalities of holding plebiscite in Kashmir. “We have not made any proposals for rescheduling the talks,” he added. He clarified it had been the normal practice in diplomacy to convey ideas in an informal paper to obtain reaction from the other side. “We do not like to term these as preconditions: rather these are suggestions to create a propitious climate to carry forward our discussion on all aspects of Jammu and Kashmir. During the seventh round of talks in Islamabad from January 1 to 3 both sides had agreed to continue the negotiations without agreeing on the schedule of the next round, he said. Commenting on Mr. Lambah’s remarks describing Pakistan’s informal suggestions as “non starter”, the spokesman said the Indian High Commissioner should not have commented publicly on the proposals that had been given confidentially to his government. He made it clear that Pakistan had not released the text of the two informal papers, rather it had just given the information on their subject matter.

The Indian High Commission in a press release expressed surprise over the regret expressed by the Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman on Indian High Commissioner S.K. Lambah’s public comments on two informal papers confidentially handed over to India. The Indian High Commission, in its Press release, said: “The High Commission of India is surprised to note, in some sections of the Press, a statement attributed to the official spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office that it was a matter of regret that the Indian High Commissioner had commented publicly on proposals given to him confidentially.”

In the meantime Government of India noted through the media that Pakistan had rejected the Indian proposals contained in its non-papers. The Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on January 21 said that it was “the final proof if any were needed that there is no truth in Pakistan’s claim that it only provides moral, diplomatic and political support to separatists and terrorists in Kashmir. If Pakistan genuinely wanted peace and a dialogue, then there could be no objection to such a proposal which is also a proposal without prejudice to the claims of either side.” The Spokesperson adding said: “while we have not yet received any formal response from Pakistan to the six proposals sent by India, if the press reports are correct, then it is clear that Pakistan’s refusal to discuss this or other confidence building measures gives the lie to their claim that they are not supporting terrorists on Indian soil. Indeed, this is an acknowledgement by them that they would continue to try and send infiltrators and mercenaries in Kashmir and continue to support terrorist activities as they have been doing with finance, arms and training.”

On January 23 Pak Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto taking a hard line ‘categorically declared’ that Pakistan would not conduct further talks with India ‘unless it stopped repression in Kashmir and released the Kashmiri leaders’. She demanded that the Indian leadership “must give gestures for having any dialogue by releasing the Kashmiri leaders and lifting the siege of the Hazratbal shrine in a real sense, allowing free access to devotees there.”

While speaking to the members of the so-called Kashmir Committee she said “We cannot invite Indians just to know from them the weather of New Delhi or to make them roam in Islamabad. We do not want to give wrong signals to the Kashmiris by holding meaningless
Ms Bhutto said that the government would fully support the Kashmir Committee’s call for a general strike on February 5. She said she would also address the nation on January 24 to take her countrymen into confidence about many important issues, including Kashmir. She said the strike call had been given by Committee president Nawabzada Nasrullah Khan on behalf of all parties.

Asked whether Pakistan will again raise the Kashmir issue at the United Nations, she said it was being raised at the Human Rights Commission based at Geneva. She said the continued human rights violations in Kashmir could pose a potential threat to future global security. She warned that if India was not stopped from indulging in repression in the valley, it could lead to permanent tension in the region.
terrorism which contravenes the very basic norms of Inter-State conduct and good neighbourly relations.

Government have the will and a commitment to the people of Jammu and Kashmir to counter the violence generated by militants with external support. While the Government’s endeavour continues to be to provide full opportunities for the people of J&K to exercise their democratic rights and no efforts which could lead to this process is out of consideration, we will not spare any effort to oppose any moves directed against the country’s unity and territorial integrity.
Pakistan should not have any doubt whatsoever on this score.

The level of security forces deployed in J&K corresponds to the level of violence created by the militants. Cross border terrorism is a major concern of the Government and a hurdle in India-Pakistan relations.

While our reaction to the proposals contained in the Pakistani Non-Papers is as stated above, India reiterates its readiness to discuss with Pakistan all issues pertaining to the bilateral relations in accordance with the commitments and mutual obligations of the two countries envisaged under the Simla Agreement.

1326. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs giving a Summary of the Finance Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh’s Press Conference in Geneva after delivering his speech at the session of the Human Rights Commission

Dr. Manmohan Singh at the outset stated that the speech he had just delivered (3rd Feb.) at the 50th Session of the Commission on Human Rights highlighted India’s deep and abiding commitment to the protection and promotion of human rights. Today there was a great threat to the democratic and secular fabric of India as a result of terrorist activities aided and abetted from abroad. The world community should note that interference in the internal affairs of democratic states posed a serious danger to the peaceful evolution of the world. India was suffering from the onslaught of terrorism. In dealing with this phenomenon, there may be aberrations. India had no desire to put them under the carpet.
However, India’s democratic traditions and institutions provided a credible mechanism to deal with all such aberrations. India had set up a high powered human rights commission which was being presided over by the former Chief Justice of India and other legal luminaries. Moreover, there was an independent judiciary. Special measures had to be taken to cope with terrorist activities. However, it has been ensured that credible legal remedies are available to all, including the use of habeas corpus.

2. It was most unfortunate that the distinguished Prime Minister of Pakistan for whom we have great respect and regard had misused the august forum of the Human Rights Commission to convey a wholly erroneous view of the state of affairs in the Indian state of Jammu & Kashmir*. It was his hope that this forum would not be used to politicise Human Rights issues, but in utter violation of such norms the Pakistan Prime Minister had unleashed a totally unwarranted, one sided and false tirade against India. With a view to setting the record straight, he had been constrained to issue the press statement which had just been circulated.

3. In response to a question by Thomas Abraham of the Hindu whether Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto’s request for independent observers along the Line of Control was reasonable, Dr. Singh pointed out that terrorist activity in J&K was clearly aided and abetted from abroad. This was well documented in several reports including the one from the U.S. Congress that he quoted in his statement circulated at the Press Conference in the day. The request for independent observers did not make sense as a better course would be for both countries to enter into a bilateral dialogue to see that the Line of Control was not crossed by unauthorised persons. In fact, among the package of proposals, India had recently conveyed to Pakistan, one proposal related to maintenance of peace and tranquility along the Line of Control. Pakistan’s response to it was an indication of its lack of seriousness in the matter. The

* Pakistan Prime Minister Ms. Benazir Bhutto in her speech at the Commission on February 1 accused India of “gross human rights violations” against innocent and unarmed Kashmiris as “reminiscent of the darkest days of the Holocaust” and the situation in Bosnia as “grave and appalling”. Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto urged the community of nations to uphold the Universal Declaration of Human Rights “which is often extensively violated with impunity”. She urged the world community to act “to stop the massacre”. She pleaded for the inborn right to self-determination of the people of Kashmir and the preservation of sovereignty and territorial integrity of Bosnia. “The situation in Kashmir is intolerable as is the world’s silence,” she said and added, “We cannot celebrate the triumph of the Universal Declaration on Human Rights—these rights are being violated extensively, often with impunity, without compunction or conscience or remorse in almost every part of the world. The Prime Minister said the demand of the people of Jammu and Kashmir is simple—azadi (freedom). “People cannot be suppressed indefinitely—tyranny cannot endure long. This is the lesson of history,” she added. “Despite its repression, India has failed to impose its will on the indomitable people of Jammu and Kashmir. The intensity of the resistance has grown. The Kashmiri political leadership, representing over 30 parties and groups, has unanimously declared that it will not contemplate any solution which implies the continuation of Indian rule,” she declared.
Simla Agreement provided the ideal framework for peaceful resolution of all differences bilaterally. In violation of it, Pakistan was now using force and was also seeking to internationalise the problem. The issue can be resolved only through meaningful bilateral negotiations.

4. In response to a question relating to the further basis of negotiations in view of charges and counter-charges being traded between the two countries, Dr. Singh stated that there was already a basis in the Simla Agreement which both countries had signed, for dialogue and normalisation of relations. Pakistan in the last 45 years had thrice taken recourse to war. In last 4 years, it had used terrorism as a technique to fracture and damage India’s democratic set up. A meaningful and peaceful resolution of problems demanded the adoption of a step by step approach to build an atmosphere of mutual confidence and hope. Accordingly, India had recently conveyed six proposals relating to confidence-building measures which also included resolving the long standing Siachen Glacier dispute. Another proposal envisaged an agreement whereby both sides eschewed use of nuclear capability to attack each other’s economic and civilian centres. J&K was just a symptom. Normalisation could take place on the entire gamut of the economic, cultural and other relations between the two countries. A Joint Commission was established for this purpose for the first time in 1983 and the last time it met was in 1989. This process should be revived in order to expand people-to-people contacts. In this regard he mentioned that there was close affinity between the two peoples. India had no aggressive designs. In fact it wanted to normalise trade relations with Pakistan but it was Pakistan which in violation of GATT was placing restrictions on trade with India.

5. Chitra Subramaniam of Indian Express asked whether he agreed that the proposals, sent by India to Pakistan were a photocopy of the earlier proposals and whether the recent talks had failed. Dr. Singh replied that we recognise the domestic compulsions under which the Prime Minister of Pakistan had to operate but there was no alternative to negotiations. The problem could not be resolved by war as had been proved in 1947 and 1965. To negotiate was the only feasible option.

6. In response to a question whether India would accept a special rapporteur of the Human Rights Commission for J&K, Dr. Singh stated that we did not envisage a role for a special rapporteur in J&K. Recently there had been a visit by ICU to J & K and a visit by the ICRC was also being considered.

7. In response to a question about plebiscite in Kashmir, Dr. Singh stated that it was a well recognised fact that plebiscite could not be undertaken as the aggressor had still not withdrawn from an area of J&K which it had illegally occupied. Till today it had not done so. Moreover, a part of J&K illegally occupied by it is ruled directly by a resident commissioner from Islamabad and no elections have ever been held there.

8. In response to a question whether a new war between India and Pakistan was likely, Dr. Singh responded that he sincerely hoped that there would not be any further war. The wars in 1948 and 1965 did not settle the Kashmir issue. The right approach would be to resolve all differences bilaterally as envisaged in the Simla Agreement.

9. In response to another question whether India would permit international mediation in J & K, Dr. Singh pointed out that there was no role for international mediation on this issue. There was an agreed mechanism under the Simla Agreement which had not been exhausted. No outside mediation was therefore needed.

10. In response to a question whether television crews could be allowed in J & K as mentioned in the Pak Prime Minister’s statement, Dr. Singh stated that we had to proceed cautiously in this matter. Relating our own experience in Punjab, he pointed out that an obscure and lay preacher had become a big menace and the larger than life image that he had come to acquire was largely a creation of the media. As a result he developed illusions of grandeur and the prosperous state of Punjab went through a gruesome period of terrorism which now fortunately, was over. It was this aspect that worried us. India was, however, an open society and was waging a grim struggle against a group of terrorists aided and abetted from abroad.

11. In a response to a question by Chitra Subramaniam on his reaction about recent statements emanating from Washington, Dr. Singh stated that these were confusing. We hoped for a mature understanding of the problem of South Asia on the part of U.S. Administration and hopefully wiser counsels would prevail.

12. In response to a question whether India would accept an expanded UN Security Council without India’s membership, Dr. Singh stated that he hoped India would be there. It was premature to comment definitively on this issue at present and the matter would be dealt with appropriately when the occasion arose.

1327. India’s Stand on the Resolution to be tabled by Pakistan in the UN Human Rights Commission on Jammu & Kashmir.

New Delhi, February 16, 1994.

Minister of State for External Affairs Shri Salman Khurshid briefed the Ambassadors of member-countries of the UN Human Rights Commission in Geneva, who are based in Delhi, today in Vigyan Bhawan, on India’s stand on the Resolution sought to be tabled by Pakistan on the UN Human Rights Commission on Jammu & Kashmir.

The Minister stated that a country like Pakistan, with its own imperfect human rights record ably documented by the Pakistan Human Rights Commission, could have no locus standi on moving the Resolution.

The very fact that Jammu and Kashmir was being referred to in the Pakistani Draft Resolution as a separate entity clearly showed that Pakistan’s intention in moving the Resolution was not any genuine concern for human rights. Rather Pakistan was interested in creating the impression among the international community that Jammu and Kashmir was not an integral part of India. The Minister categorically rejected the Pakistan moves in this regard. He said that Jammu and Kashmir was an integral part of India. And also a symbol of India as a democratic, secular nation.

The Minister informed the Ambassadors that India was always ready to have a dialogue with Pakistan under the Shimla (Simla) Agreement. In this context, India had conveyed six proposals to Pakistan on outstanding issues, in the hope that agreement on these issues would create an atmosphere of confidence between the two counties. India had no intention to bypass discussing its dispute with Pakistan over Kashmir in the context of the Shimla Agreement. The Government of India was disappointed that there had been no formal response as yet from the Government of Pakistan to the Indian proposals.

The Minister informed the Ambassadors that India was committed to human rights, and that this is not a principle which the Government of India had ‘discovered’ in the, 1990s. The debates preceding the adoption of Constitution of India showed that India had a traditional commitment to human rights, which went back to the early years of its Independence and was rooted in its freedom struggle.

Referring to the situation in Jammu & Kashmir, the Minister conveyed to the Ambassadors that Government of India was committed to resolving the problems in the State through a revival of the political process. However, it was difficult for the political process to be revived unless the threat to public figures and normal life in Jammu and Kashmir from militants, aided and abetted by Pakistan was stopped. The peaceful resolution of the Hazratbal episode, where India’s judicial system had played a unique role in safeguarding human rights, had acted as an eye-opener to the people of Jammu and Kashmir. It established the bona fides of the Indian system in tackling such difficult issues while upholding human rights. Government of India had constituted a core-group of Ministers, chaired by the Home Minister, and established a Special Unit in the Ministry of External Affairs, to deal with the current situation in Jammu & Kashmir, where the unemployed youth had been malignantly and ruthlessly exploited by Pakistan to create violence and terror in the state. The Minister said that the effort of the Government of India was to create greater transparency regarding the actual situation in Jammu and Kashmir. Apart from the visit of the International Commission of Jurists and the Ambassadors of the European Union Troika, visits by a delegation of the International Red Cross and of other Ambassadors were also being processed. There were no restrictions on the visits of journalists and individuals to Jammu and Kashmir. Therefore, Government of India did not see any logic behind Pakistan’s efforts to ask the UNHRC to appoint a fact finding mission in Jammu and Kashmir.

The Ambassador of Germany, who visited Jammu and Kashmir as a Member of the European Troika, stated for the benefit of his colleagues present at the meeting that his delegation had been able to meet whoever they wanted in Jammu & Kashmir without restrictions.

The Minister thanked the Ambassador of Germany for confirming the fact that there were no restrictions on bona fides visitors interested in visiting to Jammu and Kashmir to see the situation there.

PAKISTAN’S COMMENTS ON INDIAN NON-PAPERS

The Government of Pakistan has carefully examined the six non-papers conveyed by the Government of India on 24 January 1994. Pakistan’s comments and counter proposals on the issues raised in the Indian non-papers are being forwarded for the consideration of the Government of India.

Pakistan believes, however, that the talks between India and Pakistan should focus on the Jammu and Kashmir dispute which is the central problem in the relations between the two countries. Pakistan is still awaiting India’s response to the two non-papers sent on the issue of Jammu and Kashmir i.e. (a) Modalities for the holding of a plebiscite in Jammu and Kashmir and (b) Measures required to create a propitious climate for talks on the Jammu and Kashmir dispute. The receipt of India’s response to those non-papers is essential to ensure that a substantive and meaningful dialogue will take place in the resumed talks on “all aspects of Jammu and Kashmir issue” as jointly announced by India and Pakistan on 24 November 1993.

Non-Paper No.1

PEACE AND TRANQUILITY ON THE LINE OF CONTROL

The Government of Pakistan has examined the Indian non-paper entitled “Agreement on the Maintenance of Peace and Tranquility along Line of Control”. Pakistan endorses the objective of promoting peace and tranquility in its entire relationship with India, not only along the Line of Control.

2. The tensions which exist along the Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir arise from the following causes:-

i) The complete opposition of the people of Indian-held Kashmir to continued Indian rule and the massive campaign of repression mounted by India to suppress the Kashmiri aspirations for freedom and self-determination, resulting in widespread and well documented violations of human rights;.

ii) The deployment of over half a million troops by India in the part of Jammu and Kashmir which it controls, especially the induction of military and para-military forces for the purpose of suppressing Kashmiri aspirations for liberation and self-determination;

iii) The consistent violations of the ceasefire by Indian troops stationed along the Line of Control, including sniper and small arms fire and shelling against civilians and villages on the Pakistani side of the Line of Control, leading to heavy civilians casualties, as well as at Pakistani forces,

3. The Indian proposal does not refer to any of these fundamental reasons for tensions along the Line of Control. The Indian non-paper deals only with the symptoms of tensions while ignoring the existing “ground realities” in Jammu and Kashmir. Moreover, the proposal forwarded by India seeks to compromise Pakistan’s internationally recognised position as regards the Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir by seeking to treat this as an international boundary.

4. Several of the proposals in the proposed “Agreement” address non-issues e.g. the proposal for prior notice of military exercises and the one regarding air intrusions. Pakistan has not conducted any “military exercises” on its side of the Line of Control. Whereas Pakistan has scrupulously adhered to the agreements and understandings concluded with India on confidence building measures, India has violated the airspace on the Pakistan side of the LOC 14 times in 1992-93.

5. The massive military force which India has deployed on the Line of Control and within Indian-held Kashmir, is engaged in a “live war” against the people of Jammu and Kashmir, not in “military exercises”. Confidence building measures will not be sufficient to address this problem. What is required is achievement of a balance of forces between Pakistan and India in Jammu and Kashmir, as envisaged in the ceasefire agreement of 1949 (also known as the Karachi Agreement), prior to the holding of a plebiscite in accordance with the UN Security Council resolutions. To this end, as a first step, India should de-induct the additional forces it has deployed in Jammu and Kashmir since January 1990.

6. Some of the proposals contained in India’s proposed “Agreement”, for example flag meetings, have already been institutionalized in the Karachi Agreement and are being implemented. Other proposals in the draft seek to secure acceptance of India’s untenable position on Kashmir and its unfounded allegations regarding Pakistan’s military assistance and encouragement to the Kashmiri freedom struggle. All such proposals are unacceptable to Pakistan.

7. Pakistan’s fundamental problem with the proposed Indian “Agreement” regarding the Line of Control in Kashmir is that it is incompatible with the UN Charter and UN Security Council resolutions on Jammu and Kashmir. Furthermore, the Indian proposals undermine both the 1949 Karachi Agreement as well as the 1972 Simla Accord.
8. Pakistan suggests that to achieve the stated objectives of the proposed Indian “Agreement” i.e. peace and tranquility, Pakistan and India should undertake the following measures:

(i) reaffirm their commitment to the UN Charter and to the United Nations Security Council Resolutions relating to Jammu and Kashmir,

(ii) open a dialogue for the implementation of the UN Security Council resolutions to enable the people of Jammu and Kashmir to exercise their right to self determination as proposed in Pakistan’s non-paper entitled “Modalities for the holding of a plebiscite in Jammu and Kashmir”;

(iii) achieve an early de-induction of Indian troops from Jammu and Kashmir so as to bring the level of forces between Pakistan and India in Jammu and Kashmir to a balanced level as envisaged in the Karachi Agreement.

(iv) strengthen the size and presence of the UNMOGIP to enable it to perform its mandate of monitoring the Line of Control, inter alia by (a) enabling the UN observers to patrol along the Line of Control on both sides and (b) authorising the UNMOGIP to also monitor the situation of “peace and tranquility” and the observance of human rights by military and paramilitary forces on both sides of the Line of Control. The two sides should provide full and free access to the United Nations, its agencies, humanitarian and human rights bodies to all areas of Jammu and Kashmir without any hindrance or intimidation, as a means of building confidence and achieving greater transparency and verifiability with regard to the situation in Jammu and Kashmir, specially as regards the observance of human rights.

(v) The two sides should undertake to scrupulously adhere to the Karachi Agreement in letter and spirit, including the removal of mines and other structures and emplacements disallowed by the Agreement.

1329. Pakistan's Comments on India's Non Paper No. 2 (Siachen), 3 (Sir Creek), 4 (Wullar Barrage), 5 (Joint Commission) and 6 (Confidence Building Measures and Arms Control and Non-Proliferation).

February 19, 1994.

SIACHEN

Pakistan's comments on the non-paper presented by India on Siachen are as follows:

i) There was no agreement or understanding in November 1992 between Pakistan and India on this issue as asserted in the Indian non-paper;

ii) There was an agreement on the principles for a settlement of Siachen in June 1989 based on the redeployment of forces in accordance with the Simla Agreement. These principles require that both sides should withdraw from their present positions to the positions which obtained in July 1972;

iii) Pakistan did not agree to any "authentication" of the positions presently held by the two sides since India's incursion into Siachen was a violation of the Simla Agreement which should be undone without any preconditions.

SIR CREEK

Pakistan's technical experts have examined the Indian non-paper on this issue. The Indian non-paper merely reiterates the positions of the two sides. India has not changed its position regarding the demarcation of the land boundary between the two countries. India's position is contrary to the historical determination of this boundary which is confirmed by the records and documents produced by Pakistan in the negotiations.

Since several rounds of bilateral talks have not been able to produce a settlement of this Issue, Pakistan would be prepared to refer this issue for international arbitration. The terms and conditions for such a reference to international arbitration can be discussed by the two sides.

WULLAR BARRAGE

The Indian non-paper on the Wullar Barrage, dubbed by India as the "Tulbul Navigation Project", claims that at the previous round of talks all technical and legal aspects of the issue were resolved. This is contrary to the factual position at the last round of talks held in New Delhi in 1990. All aspects of this issue need to be discussed comprehensively in accordance with the Indus Waters Treaty.

NON-PAPER NO.5

INDO-PAKISTAN JOINT COMMISSION

Pakistan is, in principle, committed to the operation of the Joint Commission established between the two countries as a mechanism to promote greater cooperation. Pakistan believes that, in addition to the programmes for cooperation agreed upon at the previous round (July 1989), the two sides should consider cooperation in several other areas, such as environmental protection, combating natural-disasters and ways and means of strengthening SAARC.

2. It is evident, however, that the meetings of the Joint Commission should be convened at a time that is propitious for the materialization of mutually beneficial cooperation. Its work should not be denigrated by allowing it to result in a stalemate or the consideration of meaningless symbolism, such as exchange of military bands.

NON - PAPER NO. 6

Confidence Building Measures, Arms control, and Non-proliferation

India's 'non-paper' on Confidence Building Measures addresses the problems of peace and security between Pakistan and India only in a partial and tenuous manner. Several CBMs have been agreed by the two sides. Additional CBMs can, no doubt, be elaborated. However, no amount of confidence building measures are likely to promote durable peace and security unless the 'core' problem of Jammu and Kashmir has been resolved in accordance with the UN Security Council Resolutions and the wishes of the people of Jammu and Kashmir. Indeed, it is widely acknowledged that the final settlement of Jammu and Kashmir and promotion of conventional arms control and non-proliferation in South Asia are inextricably linked.

2. India's proposals for additional confidence building measures have been examined carefully by Pakistan. The following comments are offered on these proposals:

(i) Pakistan is prepared to consider the elaboration of one or more agreements not to-attack population centres and economic targets in war and to protect other important cultural and religious sites against destruction and vandalism. The basic standards in this regard have already been elaborated in several existing international instruments e.g the 1975 Geneva Protocols. Pakistan would be prepared to submit proposals along these lines. If the commitments undertaken for non-attack against population centres are to be credible, they should require certain practical manifestations of good intentions, including in particular, the removal of troop concentrations deployed opposite major cities of the other side, withdrawal of deep penetration attack aircraft, missiles, long-range, artillery etc.

(ii) The Indian proposal that the two countries "undertake not to be the first to use or threaten to use its nuclear capability against each other" is incomprehensible. It is unclear how "nuclear capability" can be used by one country against another. India has constructed and exploded at least one nuclear explosive device (nuclear weapon). The Indian proposal seems to confirm that India possesses nuclear weapons. It also seeks to gain acceptance for a situation in which both India and Pakistan would deploy nuclear weapons. This Indian position is contrary to the goal of preventing the proliferation of nuclear weapons in South Asia. Pakistan does not possess nuclear weapons, nor does it intend to produce them. It is Pakistan's hope that neither India nor Pakistan will develop or deploy nuclear weapons. Pakistan is prepared to enter into one or more equitable and non-discriminatory agreements with India to prohibit the proliferation of nuclear weapons in South Asia. To this end Pakistan reiterates the following proposals which have been made to India to promote nuclear non-proliferation in South Asia:

a) Establishment of a Nuclear Weapon Free Zone in South Asia;
b) Simultaneous ratification of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty by India and Pakistan;
c) Simultaneous acceptance of IAEA "full scope" Safeguards;
d) Mutual inspection by India and Pakistan of each other's nuclear facilities;
e) An India-Pakistan bilateral Nuclear Test Ban Treaty;
f) A conference between India and Pakistan, Russia, China and the US to evolve arrangements for nuclear non-proliferation and security in South Asia;

Pakistan would be prepared to discuss the above mentioned proposals for nuclear non-proliferation in South Asia in any forum.

iii) Peace and security between Pakistan and India can be significantly enhanced through agreements for conventional arms control. Pakistan has proposed to India an agreement on a mutually agreed ratio of forces. The two sides should also adopt "principles" for the negotiation of conventional arms control. In this context, the following principles should be approved:

(a) The agreement should strengthen regional peace and security, preferably at a lower level of armaments;

(b) The State with a larger military capability has a special responsibility for promoting such an agreement on regional security;

(c) Neither India nor Pakistan should be capable of prevailing in a military attack launched by surprise;

(d) There should be rough parity in the defence capabilities of the two sides in qualitative and quantitative terms;

(e) There should be no significant disparity in any of the areas of conventional defence—land, air or naval forces, and

(f) If one side possesses an offensive capability, the other side should have the right to acquire an equivalent capability or a defensive capability to neutralize such offensive capability.

(iv) Although the importance of the proposal for a fax link between the two Directors-General of Military Operations is not fully appreciated, we would be prepared to discuss this at an appropriate time.

(v) Pakistan would also be prepared to discuss the Indian proposal for the establishment of an institutional mechanism for the supervision of the implementation of the bilateral CBM agreements concluded between India and Pakistan, although each of these agreements provides for a review mechanism to ensure the implementation of these agreements.

This House notes with deep concern Pakistan’s role in imparting training to the terrorists in camps located in Pakistan and Pakistan Occupied Kashmir, the supply of weapons and funds, assistance in infiltration of trained militants, including foreign mercenaries into Jammu and Kashmir with the avowed purpose of creating disorder, disharmony and subversion;

Reiterates that the militants trained in Pakistan are indulging in murder, loot and other heinous crimes against the people, taking them hostage and creating an atmosphere of terror;

Condemns strongly the continued support and encouragement Pakistan is extending to subversive and terrorist activities in the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir.

Calls upon Pakistan to stop forthwith its support to terrorism, which is in violation of the Simla Agreement and the internationally accepted norms of inter-State conduct and is the root cause of tension between the two countries;

reiterates that the Indian political and democratic structures and the Constitution provide for firm guarantees for the promotion and protection of human rights of all its citizens;

regards Pakistan’s anti-India campaign of calumny and falsehood as unacceptable and deplorable; notes with deep concern the highly provocative statements emanating from Pakistan and urges Pakistan to refrain from making statements which vitiate the atmosphere and incite public opinion;

expresses regret and concern at the pitiable conditions and violations of human rights and denial of democratic freedoms of the people in those areas of the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir, which are under the illegal occupation of Pakistan;

On behalf of the People of India,

Firmly declares that —

a) The State of Jammu and Kashmir has been, is and shall be an integral part of India and any attempts to separate it from the rest of the country will be resisted by all necessary means;
b) India has the will and capacity to firmly counter all designs against its unity, sovereignty and territorial integrity; And demands that-

c) Pakistan must vacate the areas of the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir, which they have occupied through aggression;

And resolves that-

d) all attempts to interfere in the internal affairs of India will be met resolutely.

1331. Excerpts from the Reply Speech of Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao in Lok Sabha to the debate on President’s Address.

New Delhi, March 8, 1994.

About Kashmir there are two or three complications which need to be disentangled. The first very clear thing, we know is that from Pakistan incessantly, endlessly, without intermission, terrorism being exported into the Valley. We have been dealing with this with utmost patience and firmness combined; where firmness is needed, firmness is being shown, but where patience could be better, we have also shown patience as was evident in the Hazarabatbhal matter. This has to be tackled on many fronts. The latest which, I think, we have thought of is, apart from what all is being done, there is a need to intensify the developmental effort in the State. I shall come back to the House with more details on some other occasion, but suffice it to say at this moment that the front, the developmental front has to be concentrated upon, we are doing a lot of developmental work there, but that needs to be augmented, to be given some concentrated attention. The aspect of involving the people is being looked into. The aspect of better coordination has been looked into and I am glad to say that the coordination today is much better and much more effective than it was a few months earlier.

We have a problem with Pakistan. The problem is that they have a compulsion, an internal compulsion to harp and keep on harping on the Kashmir question and on human rights. One fails to understand how of all the countries Pakistan is the champion of human rights and India, with all our traditions, our laws, our record in the human rights sphere, is being put in the dock.

This is absolutely incomprehensible. But this is what is happening. We have to face it. We have nothing to hide. Our record is clear. Wherever there are excesses, the President has very clearly stated that we will take action. But to say that we are only violating human rights all the time is an exaggeration which borders on untruth. We would like to refute it and we would like to say that we will deal with the Kashmir question both on the front of terrorists whose human rights are not sacrosanct if they really want to kill people right and left, it has to be firmness to put down terrorism, to preserve and protect the territorial integrity of the country and nothing is going to come in the way of the Government of India, of the people of India in achieving this. Subject to this, of course, we have nothing to hide.

Lots of people are coming into Kashmir. They are giving their recommendations; they are giving their suggestions; they are giving their opinions and we will continue to welcome people to come and see Kashmir. After all, Kashmir has been one of our best tourist areas. Today, because of what Pakistan has done, the situation has worsened to such an extent that the people of Kashmir are suffering. All the income of the people of Kashmir was mostly dependent on tourism. All that is no more now. This suffering has to be put an end to and this can happen only when, what is happening by way of export of terrorism from Pakistan, ceases. We are determined to see that it ceases.

Now something is being said about what is happening in Geneva, the Human Rights Commission is seized of the matter. I would not like to anticipate what is going to happen there. But we have convinced, we have tried to convince all our friends that Pakistan’s propaganda against India on human rights is totally uncalled for. In fact, one could ask what Pakistan’s locus standi is in respect of Kashmir, except that of an aggressor. That is the only locus standi. Beyond that, there is nothing. We have to tell the world many things that have been forgotten. The basic case on Kashmir has probably taken a back seat and all these peripheral issues, in fact, irrelevant issues like human right issues etc., are coming to the fore. It is time that we go into the basics, tell the world what exactly is the Kashmir question and how they have to look at it, if they have to do justice or if they have to take the right view.

This is what needs to be done now. Since we have passed a unanimous resolution rightly, validly as an act of patriotism in this House, I would like both the Houses of Parliament to go into this question in greater detail. Many of our Members could take part, they could study and the world should know—apart from the Resolution that we have passed—what the Parliament thinks about the Kashmir question in all its details. I think this is very necessary. I find when I go out, the real basis etc., of the Kashmir question has been totally sidelined, either forgotten or deliberately sidelined. Whichever is the case, we have to bring it back into focus. It is not in the focus, at the moment.

The determination of the nation has been fully reflected in the resolution of the Parliament. I have no need to add anything to that except to say that this Government will carry out the mandate of Parliament in letter and spirit and this is the undertaking of the Government of India to the Parliament.

1332. Media briefing by the Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan on the question of OIC naming an envoy for Kashmir Mission.

Islamabad, March 10, 1994.

Foreign Secretary Shaharyar Khan has said that Pakistan would like OIC Secretary-General Hamid Al Gabid to nominate Muslim envoys to be sent on a fact-finding mission to Kashmir.

Briefing newsmen in Islamabad on March 10, he said “Now that India has agreed to allow Muslim ambassadors to visit Srinagar, we feel that it is very important to work out the modalities—who and which ambassadors are going to be invited. In our view they should not be from the corps of ambassadors in Delhi. They are much influenced by the environment there”.

He said these ambassadors should be allowed to move around freely. “Let them visit any place they want to go. Let them travel freely and unrestricted to see towns subjected to massacres like Kupwara, Bijbehara and Sopore,” he added.

Dilating on the Pakistan-sponsored human rights violation resolution that was deferred at the UN Human Rights Commission in Geneva on March 9, Mr. Shaharyar Khan said that Pakistan was genuinely looking towards India for improvement of the situation in Kashmir “We have no other axe to grind but to see that the repression in Kashmir is brought to an end. If that is done, we feel our position on Kashmir will be vindicated.”

Asked whether Pakistan was satisfied with the role Iran and China had played in persuading Pakistan to defer the resolution, he answered in the affirmative.

Giving details of the compromise package agreed between Pakistan and India brokered by Iran and China, he said Pakistan was told by them that by deferring the resolution and not withdrawing it, Pakistan had achieved international focus on Kashmir. Iran and China advised Pakistan not to opt for a vote on its resolution because it would see about 80 per cent of the 52-member HRC abstaining, in which case Pakistan would be left with 10-12 votes and to have 6-6 or 7-5, it would be a technical vote, which will detract from the impact you have set out to achieve on Kashmir, he added.

BACKGROUND TO IRAN’S INITIATIVE

Providing further background to the Iranian initiative, Mr. Shaharyar Khan said that the Indian and Chinese foreign ministers met the Iranian Foreign Minister in Teheran last week, where they discussed how Pakistan could keep the resolution alive and pick it up any time of its choice. “But Pakistan is committed not to take its resolution back to the UNHRC for one full year,” he added.

Questioned why Pakistan had asked for envoys of Muslim countries only to form the fact-finding mission, he said. “This was what was agreed with the Indians by the Iranians, with the latter wanting to keep the focus on the Islamic ambassadors.”

To yet another question as to how he could explain 80 per cent of projected abstentions had Pakistan put its resolution to vote in the light of the fervour voiced in favour of human rights by the West, Mr. Shaharyar said that Pakistan had been sending envoys to all these countries.

Each one of them gave a rationalisation of its position, telling Pakistan that the resolution was not about human rights but was political in the garb of human rights. The second logical reason for their abstaining was that it was for the first time that a Third World country had tabled a resolution against a Third World country, he remarked.

FACT-FINDING MISSIONS

What normally happens is that the western countries bring such resolutions against the Third World countries and this has always been the case, whether it has been Indonesia, Cuba, Haiti, Tibet, China, Iran or Nicaragua. When the situation changes, a different atmosphere crops up. Also many of the countries affected are themselves subjected to fact-finding missions, he explained. “However, many countries assured us that while this time they were abstaining from voting, they are bound to vote against India in the next UN session if it continues with its repressive policies in Kashmir,” he added.

 Asked how Pakistan could expect to generate world support on its deferred resolution, when it had failed to mobilise votes in Geneva, the Foreign Secretary said that Pakistan focused on two separate issues—one is the human rights issue and the other is the totality of political differences which exist between India and Pakistan on Kashmir. Till now India had not come under pressure on Kashmir, both internally and internationally. But over the last few months, especially after Pakistan tabled the human rights violation resolution, we are conscious of the fact that these pressures have not only grown, not only are they visible and upfront, but also they are now beginning to have an effect on India and its attitude towards the Kashmiris”, he remarked.

1333. Note Verbale from the Ministry of External Affairs to the High Commission of Pakistan in India regarding the need to resume a dialogue between the two countries.

New Delhi, March 21, 1994.

No. J/103/1/94 21 March, 1994

Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan in New Delhi and has the honour to state that the Simla Agreement enunciates wide-ranging commitments and mutual obligations on the part of India and Pakistan within which it is envisaged that all issues pertaining to the bilateral relations can be resolved peacefully through negotiations and a process of normalization of relations between the two countries could be facilitated towards this end. India affirms its commitments and obligations within the framework of the Simla Agreement and conveys once again its readiness to discuss with Pakistan all outstanding issues including differences relating to J& K. The six Indian proposals conveyed to Pakistan on January 24, 1994 can form the basis of a comprehensive and meaningful dialogue. India urges, Pakistan to consider the Indian proposals with sincerity of purpose.

India in the spirit of developing good-neighbourly relations with Pakistan, suggests that the exchange of non-papers* cannot be a substitute for inter-governmental discussions. Accordingly, India proposes that the Eighth Round of Foreign Secretary level talks may be resumed either in New Delhi or in Islamabad. The Ministry looks forward to an early positive response from the Government of Pakistan.

* Pakistan Foreign Office official in an informal interview with the daily NEWS on March 22, 1994 said that Pakistan was in no hurry to reply to the Indian non-papers. He said “We are in no hurry as there is nothing new in those papers. But we will not reject them right away either”. Regarding offer of Talks by New Delhi, he said it was more for the consumption of the Western countries. He said ever since New Delhi was “bailed” out by the West at Geneva where Pakistan decided to defer its resolution on human rights, it wants to initiate a public exercise and send a signal “that it is business as usual between the two States”. Islamabad can ill afford such a dialogue at this stage.
The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of its highest consideration.

The High Commission for the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, New Delhi

Media briefing by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office announcing the closure of the Pakistani Consulate General in Bombay.

Pakistan said on March 20 that it was closing its Bombay consulate because the Indian authorities have been non-cooperative. The decision was conveyed to New Delhi through the Indian High Commissioner who was summoned to the Foreign Office earlier in the day.

The Foreign Office spokesman told newsman in Islamabad that the consulate "has been closed with immediate effect due to the negative and non-cooperative attitude of the Indian authorities". The decision was made because the consulate could not function effectively, he added.

He said Pakistan had asked India to lease Bombay’s Jinnah House, named after Quaide Azam Mohammad Ali Jinnah. The Indian authorities had taken over the house after the 1947 partition.

India first agreed to the Pakistani proposals but then had gone back on its commitment to lease the premises. Subsequently it refused to facilitate the acquisition of suitable premises for the consulate, he added.

The spokesman said that the Maharashtra government had in effect “acted in a manner that made it extremely difficult to carry out its assigned functions.”

Mr. Shaharyar Rashid, Pakistan’s Consul-General in Bombay, said that the reason to close the consulate is that “We have not received as much cooperation as was expected from the Indian government to set up this office.”

Taking to BBC, he said India had only provided the basic security but not the full security. “Under the Vienna Conventions, certain amount of assistance is due when such an office is established. But despite 19 long months, no such cooperation had been extended from India," he added.

He said India made only promises for cooperation but did not fulfill them. Therefore, Pakistan decided to close the consulate.

To a question, Mr. Shaharyar replied: “We have decided to close the office due to threats from certain quarters. We have received threats from different small groups and the Indian government did nothing to solve our problems but encouraged them.”

“I will leave Bombay within a few days because some days are needed to wind up the office. I am the only person in the consulate. A diplomat in the consulate was expelled by India on baseless allegations during the past few days.” He added.

1335. Media briefing by Indian Foreign Secretary on the restrictions imposed on the Indian Consulate in Karachi.

New Delhi, March 21, 1994.

Foreign Secretary Mr. K. Srinivasan took up today with the High commissioner of Pakistan the restrictions imposed on the Indian Consulate in Karachi in the nature of impeding access to the Consulate for the local public. He expressed the hope that the Pakistani authorities would allow the Indian Consulate to carry out its functions normally.

Referring to Pakistan’s decision to close down their Consulate in Bombay. Foreign Secretary expressed surprises and disappointment. He recalled that Government of India and Government of Maharashtra have consistently tried to create a congenial atmosphere for the Pakistani Consulate in Bombay to perform its official functions and drew attention to the assistance given by Maharashtra Government for the Pakistani Consulate to hold its National Day reception in Bombay on March 23. Foreign Secretary pointed out that it was always open to the Pakistani Consulate in Bombay to acquire property or rent premises as India had done in Karachi and Islamabad. In fact, Government have given necessary information to the Pakistani Consulate for renting or acquiring certain properties in Bombay but regrettably this has not been acted upon. Pakistan has no cause to blame India for the closure of their consulate in Bombay.

1336. Text of Resolution on Kashmir Adopted by the Pakistan National Assembly.

Islamabad, June 28, 1994.

[The following is the text of the resolution passed in the joint sitting of Parliament on June 28 moved by Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali]

Parliament of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan sitting in joint session, noting with admiration the courage and determination with which the valiant people of Kashmir are resisting Indian efforts to keep them under subjugation;

Deeply concerned at the recent intensification of repression in Kashmir including excessive use of force, tactics of intimidation and torture by the Indian armed forces and premeditated assassination of known Kashmiri political leaders;

Also noting with concern the unprovoked firing across the Line of Control by the Indian security forces which has resulted in the loss of a large number of innocent civilian lives as well as causing injuries to UN observers;

Recognising that tension and insecurity in the region will continue to prevail until a just and lasting settlement of the dispute;

Assures full moral, political diplomatic support to the heroic struggle of the Kashmiri people for their inalienable right to self-determination as pledged to them by the international community through the relevant resolutions of the UN Security Council;

Salutes the martyrs and the heroes of the just Kashmiri resistance against the forces of occupation;

Condemns the atrocities being committed by the Indian security forces against the Kashmiri people and the growing violations of their human rights;

Deplores India’s negative attitude towards the quest for a peaceful settlement of the dispute by its refusal to take a meaningful dialogue on the Kashmir dispute;

Calls upon the government of India to cease repression in Kashmir forthwith and to honour its solemn commitment to the UN to hold a free, fair and impartial plebiscite to decide the future of the State of Jammu and Kashmir, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the UN Security Council; and

Urges all peace-loving states to take steps to persuade India to put an end to the horrendous violations of the human rights of Kashmiri people and to create a propitious climate for the holding of a meaningful dialogue with Pakistan, Statement of the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistani allegation regarding Indian interference in Afghanistan.

New Delhi, July 7, 1994.

In response to a query on Pakistani press reports and a statement by the Pakistani Foreign Office Spokesman that India was interfering in Afghanistan, the Official Spokesman stated that we have come across reports or statements attributed to the Pakistan Foreign Office insinuating that India is providing military support to the Jamat-i-Islami of Afghanistan. We have noted that certain elements which are known to enjoy the patronage of Pakistan have also parroted the allegations. We categorically clarify that India has not provided any military support whatsoever to any of the Afghan groups. We regret that Pakistan is spreading such calumny with deliberation with a view to creating misunderstanding in the minds of friendly people of Afghanistan towards India and to divert attention from its own record of wanton interference in Afghanistan’s internal affairs which is widely recognized as a major contributory factor for the sad situation of conflict and destruction in that country.

On June 30th the Spokesperson of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs responding to queries on Pakistan passing the resolution on Kashmir said: "we had seen reports that the Pakistan Parliament had adopted a resolution in Islamabad on the J& K issue on June 28, 1994. We regret that the Government of Pakistan has taken an initiative in this direction. Such resolutions have been adopted by the Pakistan Parliament in the past also, which do not have any relations to the situation in J& K. We regard this as totally unacceptable. The resolution call for outside interference in India’s internal affairs."
1338. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on trilateral discussions on Kashmir problem said to have been proposed by the Chairman of the Iranian Foreign Relations Committee Dr. Hassan Rowhani.

New Delhi, August 8, 1994.

In response to a queries about the visiting Iranian Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Dr. Hassan Rowhani’s statement to the press that India, Pakistan and representatives of the Kashmiri people should have trilateral discussions on the Kashmir problem, the official spokesman replied that we had not gathered this impression during our discussions with the Iranian delegation. The Iranians had emphasized that the Kashmir problem should not be internationalized, which was our position also and that talks be held bilaterally with Pakistan as well as with the representatives of the Kashmir people. The Government of India was already talking to leaders of the Kashmiri people and was always ready to discuss the problem with Pakistan as envisaged under the Shimla Agreement. There was, thus, no difference between what Dr. Rowhani had stated to the press and Government of India’s discussions with the Iranian delegation.

In response to another query on Iran offering itself as a mediator for solving the Kashmir issue, the spokesman said that Kashmir was an issue that Pakistan had agreed to settle bilaterally with India. This was envisaged and agreed to under the Shimla Agreement which does not provide for any outside mediation. India would not accept any form of third party mediation. The important problem now was cross-border terrorism which continues to lead to violence in Kashmir and India has sought the support of the international community to prevail upon Pakistan to stop aiding and abetting terrorism in J&K.

1339. Excerpts from the Independence Day Speech of Prime Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao delivered from the ramparts of the Red Fort.

Delhi, August 15, 1994.

Now, let me speak about Kashmir which, for some time has been a problem for us. Though there has been considerable improvement in the situation, it has not reached the level of normalcy as yet. The reason is not very far to seek. Everybody knows, how Pakistan has been actively encouraging terrorism in the State from across the border, how it has been training the terrorists on its land and giving them financial help, how it has been arming and then sending them across the border into the State. There is no doubt about this. For so many years, we have been collecting evidence of the misdeeds of Pakistan, bringing that to the notice of the countries friendly to us and telling them what Pakistan has been doing all these years. Now, after 14th August, 1994, I think no further proof is required when they have themselves openly declared that they would continue their help to the terrorists in Kashmir, give them arms and send reinforcements. They have said that this would continue for ever.

I would like to ask these friendly countries, “Respected friends, what do you say now? Till yesterday, you believed us only partially. Sometimes you would tell us that perhaps Pakistan had earlier been doing it but not now?” Only recently, I had had occasions to listen to this kind of talk in some of the countries I visited. Now I want to ask them if they still have any doubt about it. So it is very obvious that Pakistan does not want to stop these activities. Instead, it has openly announced before the world that it would continue with them. Our reply can only be that we are also not going to sit back until we have completely rooted out this blatant interference in our internal affairs. It is our resolve and we want to make this clear to them.

Meanwhile, we have taken several steps in Kashmir to bring peace to the State and to identify the terrorists. I say ‘terrorists’, for no other word can befit them. They have been mercilessly killing people, especially opinion leaders of the State—lawyers, doctors and religious leaders. Recently they also killed the Assembly Speaker. Their victims include staff of media installations, like All India Radio and Doordarshan. They killed the Vice-Chancellor of a university. They have been killing government servants who are simply performing their duties and who have nothing to do with politics. And there is no count of innocent civilians being killed by them. How would you describe these heinous acts? What else is it, if not terrorism? I have no other word to describe this. But you can rest assured that we will completely wipe out terrorism.
Recently, we have taken several initiatives in J & K for accelerating the pace of development and boosting the morale of the civil administration terrorised by guns. I may tell you that we are going to take up the revision of electoral rolls shortly. We are also engaged in delimiting the constituencies for conducting elections. This clearly shows the direction in which we are moving. We are moving towards holding elections in the State. I don't want to give you any specific date because that might unduly provoke the terrorists to indulge in more violence. But there is no doubt about the direction in which we are moving. Now when we have been doing all this, we would expect the international community to take note of it and to see who is the one actually trampling the human rights. They will have an opportunity to judge this.

It is very unfortunate that not only something bad is done but it is openly declared that what they are doing is good and that they will continue to do the same in future also. This type of language does not behave friends. I want to appeal to Pakistan, please accept the hand of friendship we have extended. There can be several meeting grounds between us. Sometimes differences may crop up, but they can be resolved. I would however, like to make it clear to Pakistan, you may or may not cooperate with us, but, ‘with you, without you, in spite of you’ Kashmir will remain with us. It is an integral part of India. This will not change, never, not in the least. They say they are a nation of twelve crores. If they talk of crores, you can understand what my answer would be. However, it is not a question of crores; it is a question of justice, it is a question of law and the Constitution. You cannot negate all this and reverse the course of history. The sooner we all realise this, the better it is for us. This is what I want to convey.

There is a big hue and cry about our missiles and missile programme and a lot of propaganda is going on. It is very strange that though Pakistan has with it readymade bought off the shelf missiles, nobody talks about them. We only want to experiment in our laboratories, and conduct some tests and that causes a lot of hue and cry. What kind of justice is this, we fail to understand. We have not increased our expenditure on defence. India is not a small country. Do I have no right, is it not my duty to mobilise resources for the defence requirements of a country so vast, with such vast borders and coastlines? Let anybody say anything, I shall mobilise the resources. Our first priority is the security of the country. There is no scope for any compromise, any reduction in it. That is why: I want to tell my friends that they should not compare India with other countries. They should see the case of India according to its requirements, whether we have spent the same amount as countries of our size are spending. We are spending less than that. To compare our defence expenditure with a small country and to say that we should not spend this much is not just. All that is required to be done for our defence will be done. Let there be no doubt in that regard.

I want to tell you that the whole world is changing but there are some places where things do not change. Some people cannot change their mind-set. Today, I am ready to set aside politics and prepared to go beyond mere political and diplomatic relations. At present, we are expanding economic relations with all.
Why shouldn’t we expand these economic relations within the SAARC? Why does Pakistan feel so bad about it? Why is it so much hesitant? Let us cooperate in our SAARC network of seven nations. But even this is not acceptable to them. Wherever our Pakistani friends go, they raise the Kashmir issue. I have stopped talking about Kashmir in any forum, nor do I give any reply to any question on the issue. It is not necessary for us to tread the same path they are walking upon. It is not necessary for us to reply to all the questions they raise.
The world knows what they have to say and what we have to reply. People are aware of the conditions at the field level. Nothing is hidden from anybody. Only they go on unnecessarily repeating them. I understand Pakistan is going to raise the Kashmir issue in a conference of the Health Ministers. Now raising the issue in season and out of it will attract only the derision of the world. We want to tell our friends that we share a blood relationship. For God’s sake, please for the sake of our relationship, do not do this. We can solve these problems across the table. They talk of an unfinished task. What is this unfinished task? In my well-considered opinion, there is only one unfinished task from our point of view and that is the restoration of Pak-occupied part of Kashmir to India. This is the only unfinished task, nothing else remains.

If this is not acceptable to you, the Simla Agreement is there. Let us extend our hands of friendship to each other and move ahead shoulder to shoulder. Please do not spurn these possibilities and stand in the way of a bright future that looks ahead. But it is your sweet will if you are not prepared to meet half way; we are firm on our own position. I want to tell you that Kashmir is an integral part of India and will ever remain so. I am not using the language of threat.
Whatever I am saying, I am doing, is with a cool head, and with a full sense of responsibility. If language is not to change, let there be a change in intentions.
Sometimes, one is obliged to use such language. If one does not do so, people around get angry with that person. I know this sort of compulsions exist at times. We do not have any such constraint. It may, however exist for some people in some countries. Still at least their intentions can be positive and peaceful. We want peace but at the same time, we want to preserve our sovereignty. There can be no compromise on these two issues.

1340. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistan as terrorist state.

New Delhi, August 22, 1994.

In response to queries on the remarks made by Minister of State for External Affairs, Shri Salman Khurshid at a press conference in Lucknow on August 21, 1994, the Official Spokesman stated that while responding to a question on whether Pakistan would be declared a terrorist state, the Minister said that there was no international fora which could discuss such matters. However, he hoped that the US Administration would take into account details given by the Bombay blast accused Yakub Memon in the context of its earlier efforts to declare Pakistan a terrorist state.

In response to a question whether India would seek to internationalize the POK Issue, the Minister hoped that good sense would prevail among the Pakistani leadership and they would desist from raising Kashmir at international fora. The Minister reiterated that India was committed to maintaining peace in the sub-continent, would not fight a war against Pakistan unless war was forced upon India. He reiterated that Kashmir was an integral part of India and would remain so.

In response to a question on the reported seizure of Plutonium in Germany allegedly destined for Pakistan, the Minister said that he had conveyed Government of India’s apprehension to Germany during a meeting he had with the visiting Member of the German Parliament, Mr. Gerhard Baum on August 19, 1994. He hoped that Mr. Baum would convey India’s concern to the Government of Chancellor Kohl so that German authorities could keep India informed about the progress on investigations as well as steps taken to check the clandestine diversion of plutonium.
1341. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on the statement by External Affairs Minister regarding the Extraordinary Session of the Islamic Foreign Ministers meeting.

New Delhi, September 9, 1994.

The Government of India regrets that once again the OIC has chosen to take a partisan and prejudicial view of the situation in Jammu and Kashmir and its impact on bilateral relations between India and Pakistan. Pakistan has blatantly abused its position as the host country to mislead the member states of OIC and divert attention from Pakistan’s record of supporting terrorism and subversion directed against the political unity and territorial integrity of India.

Pakistan has used the OIC forum to generate false propaganda that a state of high tension exists between India and Pakistan and that the climate is therefore not conducive for peaceful bilateral negotiations. Pakistan has indulged in war mongering, nuclear adventurism and threats to give credibility to its claims. Pakistan must not delude itself into believing that many find this convincing.

Despite these provocations, we continue our offer to address bilateral issues, including issues relating to Jammu and Kashmir in a dialogue with Pakistan under the provisions of the Simla Agreement. The Simla Agreement remains the framework to redress and resolve all differences between the two countries.

We know that among the OIC member States who are present at Islamabad, there is a vast majority who respect India’s territorial integrity, reject terrorism, extremism, and interference in other nations internal affairs, treasure their good relations with India and set high score on developing those many sided relations further. India reciprocates such sentiments and looks forward to working with those nations to enhance our mutual cooperation in the following months and years.
1342. Remarks by Pakistan Leader of the Delegation holding Talks with Indian Delegation on Drug Trafficking and Narcotics Control.

New Delhi, September 23, 1994.

Following the last week's successful dialogue between Pakistan and India in New to combat drug trafficking in the region both sides have agreed to meet again in December to further strengthen cooperation in this regard. This time the venue of the meeting will be Islamabad, said Mr. Dil Jan Khan, leader of the Pakistani delegation Terming the New Delhi meeting a success, he said the India headed by Mr. M.R. Sivaraman, India's Revenue Secretary offered every assistance in narcotics-related matters for combating drug trafficking between the two countries he said the following decisions were taken:

a) The scope of the meeting held periodically between BSF and Pak Rangers at Commandant, DIG and IG levels will be amplified. A representative of India's Narcotics Control Bureau (NCB) and Pakistan's Anti-Narcotics Force (ANF) will be included. Narcotics trafficking will be a separate agenda item for discussion.

b) Enforcement agencies on both sides of the border will designate the contact points and their lists will be exchanged between the two countries.

c) Telephone with STD facilities and fax machines will be provided to contact officers to facilitate speedy communication. Addresses of officers who will be the contact points on drug smuggling matters will be exchanged.

d) Detailed particulars of traffickers apprehended on either side will be promptly exchanged between the designated contact points and their working will be closely monitored by NCB and ANF.

e) DG, Directorate of Revenue Intelligence, on the India side and DG, Customs Intelligence, on the Pakistani side will directly share information relating to the smuggling of other contraband goods.

f) Immediate steps will be considered by both sides to undertake controlled delivery operations to identify and neutralize major operators. After mutual consultations, respective High Commissions will be requested to issue visas expeditiously.

g) Both sides will assist each other in the financial investigation of drug cases having ramifications in the other country and also exchange information relating to assets acquired by drug traffickers apprehended in either country and their money laundering activities.

Mr. Dil Jan said the drug situation in both countries was reviewed in depth and deep concern was expressed over the serious proportion which the problem has assumed.
There was no dispute on the point that different drug trafficking groups in the two countries are interlinked, which enjoins upon the law-enforcing agencies of the two sides to exchange information of seizure of drugs and other contraband goods.

The Indian side highlighted the smuggling of gold and foreign currency through certain sectors of the border and of poppy seeds, whereas the Pakistani side highlighted the trafficking of acetic anhydride from India.

1343. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs quoting Extract on India and Pakistan from Memorandum on behalf of EU Circulated by German Presidency on September 28, 1994

New Delhi, September 30, 1994.

The EU attaches great value to its friendly relations with India and Pakistan. Trade cooperation agreements have been signed with both countries and EU political dialogue has been established. It is therefore concerned about the lack of progress in the bilateral discussions to improve relations between India and Pakistan and urges both countries to settle their differences peacefully, notably with regard to Kashmir. It encourages India and Pakistan to resume bilateral dialogue as soon as possible.

2. The EU deplores the continuing violence in Kashmir and reports of the seriousness of the human rights situation there. While terrorist violence must be firmly resisted, the Indian security forces must also respect the Rule of Law.

3. In this connection, the EU has urged the Indian Government to allow humanitarian and international human rights organizations free access to the region. It urges the Indian Government to redouble its efforts to establish a political process in Kashmir.

4. It welcomes steps taken by the Government of India leading to more transparency i.e. by inviting an EU ambassadorial delegation and other international observers to visit Kashmir.

5. It calls for the cessation of external support for militant violence.

THE RESOLUTION

The 22nd Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers held in Casablanca, from December 10 to 11, 1994 had adopted the following resolution on Jammu and Kashmir

Reaffirming the principles and objectives of the Charter of the Organisation of Islamic Conference which emphasise the common goals and destiny of the peoples of the Islamic Ummah;

Emphasising the purpose and principles of the UN Charter and recalling the UN resolutions relevant to Jammu and Kashmir dispute which remain unimplemented,

Recalling that the Simla Agreement signed between India and Pakistan calls for a final settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir issue;

Reaffirming the importance of the universal realisation of the right of the people to self-determination enshrined in the charters of the OIC and the UN;

Recalling all its previous resolutions on the Jammu and Kashmir dispute;

Expressing concern at the alarming increase in the indiscriminate use of force and gross violations of human rights committed against innocent Kashmiris;

Recalling the report of the OIC fact-finding mission on the situation in Kashmir following its visit to Azad Jammu and Kashmir in February 1993, and regretting that the human rights situation in Jammu and Kashmir remains grave;

Regretting that the Government of India has not responded favourably so far to the offer of the good offices mission made by Islamic Conference as Foreign Ministers and renewed by the Sixth Islamic Summit Conference;

Regretting also that the OIC fact-finding mission was not allowed to visit Jammu and Kashmir;

RECOMMENDATIONS ENDORSED

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the Jammu and Kashmir dispute and endorses the recommendations contained therein (Document No ICFM/22.94/PIL/D.3);

2. Calls for a peaceful settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir issue in accordance with the relevant UN resolutions and as agreed upon in the Simla Agreement;

3. Condemns the continuing massive violations of human rights of the Kashmiri people and calls for the respect of their human rights, including the right to self-determination;

4. Calls upon member-states to take all necessary steps to persuade India to cease forthwith the massive human rights violations of the Kashmiri people and to enable them to exercise their inalienable right to self-determination as mandated by the relevant resolutions of the Security Council;

5. Calls upon India to allow international human rights groups and humanitarian organisations to visit Jammu and Kashmir;

6. Supports the efforts of Pakistan to initiate a meaningful bilateral dialogue for resolving the Jammu and Kashmir dispute and calls upon India to respond positively to these efforts;

7. Affirms that a sustained dialogue is essential to address the core of the problems and to remove the basic causes of tension between India and Pakistan;

8. Expresses its deep concern at the prevailing tension that threatens security and peace in the region;

REDEPLOYMENT OF FORCES

9. Calls upon India and Pakistan to redeploy their forces to peace-time locations;

10. Appeals to member-states, OIC and Islamic Institutions, such as the Islamic Solidarity Fund, and philanthropists to mobilise funds and contribute generously towards providing humanitarian assistance to the Kashmiri people;

11. Requests India, in the interest of regional peace and security, to avail itself of the offer of good offices made by the 20th Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers and the Sixth Islamic Summit Conference;

It is a matter of the greatest regret that the Pakistan Government has decided to close down the Indian Consulate General in Karachi and asked its personnel to leave within 10 days.

The allegations made by the Pakistan Government of interference by our Consulate General in Pakistan's internal affairs are completely unfounded and are rejected in totality by India.

The Pakistan Government withdrew its consulate from Bombay earlier this year without justification, and have now decided to close the Indian Consulate General in Karachi also without justification. These unilateral decisions by Pakistan adversely impact on the lives of countless people in both countries.

* Indian compliance with the Pakistani request was immediate as it was on that day that Pakistan had asked New Delhi for Consulate's closure. India was stung that in asking for the closure Pakistani Foreign Secretary Najmuddin A Shaikh had said the government has been “constrained to take this decision because of clear and fresh evidence of India’s involvement in the planning, instigation and execution of acts of terrorism and violence in Karachi and of the propagation of disaffection and propaganda against the unity, territorial integrity and sovereignty of Pakistan.” He said that in view of “these activities” which “are a violation of international law the government of Pakistan has been left with no other option but to exercise the right to demand the closure of the Indian Consulate-General in Karachi.” He went on to say “Obviously, we cannot allow a center for sabotage, subversion and terrorism to continue to operate within Pakistan. We expect that the Indian government will close down the Consulate forthwith and withdraw it personnel within the next 10 days.” Mr. Shaikh said that Pakistan demanded of the international community to take cognizance of the state-sponsored terrorism by India. “They should be treated as a state that is sponsoring terrorism,” he added.

In a separate statement later, the Foreign Secretary Shaikh said “The promotion of subversion and terrorism in Karachi and other parts of Pakistan by Indian agencies is completely contrary to the principles of the UN Charter and the norms of the interstate relations. We hope that the world community will take serious note of India’s sponsorship of terrorism in Pakistan and adopt the necessary steps to prevent India from carrying out such blatant and criminal acts which are designed to destabilise and intimidated Pakistan.” Earlier on December 25, to justify the charge, Pakistan had declared Mr. Deepak Thakur, Assistant Visa Attach at the Indian High Commission in Islamabad, a persona non grata for activities “incompatible with his status as a member of the diplomatic mission” and had asked India to recall him within 10 days.

In a dignified response on December 28, to the charges leveled by Pakistan's Foreign Secretary, New Delhi simply said: “The text of the Pakistan Foreign Secretary’s Statement at a Press Conference in Islamabad on 26th December 1994 at which he announced Pakistan’s decision to close the Indian Consulate General in Karachi has been seen by the Ministry. The examples given by the Pakistani spokesman of alleged Indian interference in the internal affairs of Pakistan are totally concocted, absurd and do not merit any response or rebuttal. This whole exercise is another pathetic attempt on Pakistan’s part to seek excuses for its inability to handle its own domestic problems.”
While the Indian Government will perforce comply with the request of the Pakistan Government, the Ministry points out that the withdrawal of the 18 Indian nationals manning the Consulate General will inevitably lead to increased difficulties and hardships in the matter of grant of visas to Pakistani citizens, people to people contacts and consular, commercial and cultural relations between the two countries, and is yet another manifestation of Pakistan's consistently negative approach towards bilateral ties with India.
Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto rejected the third option of independent Kashmir and said it would mean the balkanization of both India and Pakistan, which was not in their interest.

In an interview with David Frost of Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) network telecast by PTV on January 8, she said that at the time of India's partition, there was only the question of accession to Pakistan or India and nobody was allowed to choose independence. "If we rewrite the rules of the game of partition, then many other states that were independent at the time in 1947 may turn to seek a third choice," she said.

When pointed out that the PLO and Israel were getting together as well as the people in South Africa, Northern Ireland and the Middle East, and it all happened through third party mediation, she said. "Pakistan is also asking for mediation. When India and Pakistan are unable to arrive at an agreement between themselves, what is really needed is the good offices of the third party that can help them draw closer."

She said every round of talks between the two countries has ended in a statement "because India comes with its set notions and Pakistan also comes with its set notions, and that is it."

About the threat of war on Kashmir, the Prime Minister said: "I hope that neither India nor Pakistan would be so foolish. We had three wars in the past and it didn't resolve the issue. So obviously a conflict is not going to resolve it. I believe that both countries are constrained by their own economic imperatives not to think in militaristic terms." She said about 40 to 50 people were being killed daily in Kashmir and an equal number being rounded up. Hence, it was difficult for any government of Pakistan to engage in talks. So, rather than calling them preconditions, India should describe them as measures to create a conducive atmosphere.

New Delhi, January 12, 1995.

As a consequence of the deplorable decision of the Government of Pakistan to close the Consulate General of India in Karachi this month, some delay in issuing visas has become unavoidable. The main sufferers will be the Pakistani nationals in the areas previously covered by our Consulate General in Karachi.

We are taking all possible measures to see that visas are issued by our High Commission in Islamabad as quickly as possible, especially in cases of proven emergency. In such cases, as a special measure, short term visas would be issued without pre-verification and on priority basis. It will also be our endeavour to see that members of divided families do not suffer unduly. We continue to be committed to promote people-to-people contacts despite the obvious negativism of the Pakistani authorities.

In accordance with the 1974 visa agreement, I would like to reiterate our readiness to discuss with Pakistan the reopening of the Khokharapar-Munabao check post so that people on both sides have this facility to travel more conveniently.

1348. Reaction of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to an article published in the Indian daily Times of India referring to the “Secret Understanding” between Late Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and Late President Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto at the Simla Conference in 1972.

Islamabad, April 5, 1995.

There was no “secret understanding” at the Simla meeting between the late Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and former President Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto on the Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir, said the Pakistan Foreign Office on April 5, 1995.

The Foreign Office said the claim made by Mr. P. N. Dhar, a former Secretary to Mrs. Indira Gandhi in an article in Times of India regarding a “secret understanding” at the Simla meeting between both leaders was baseless and unfounded.

The Foreign Office said the claim made by Mr. P. N. Dhar a former secretary to Mrs. Indira Gandhi in an article in Times of India (4/4) regarding a “secret understanding" at the Simla meeting between both leaders was baseless and unfounded.

The Foreign Office pointed out that Mrs. Gandhi herself, in a statement on April 23, 1978, dismissed as “absolutely ridiculous” talk of a secret understanding between her and Z.A. Bhutto at Simla. This statement was published in Indian Express (24/4/78).

The Foreign Office said: “Mr. Dhar has also made some assertions regarding sub-clause 4(ii) of the Simla Agreement. Under this clause it was agreed that the Line of Control resulting from the ceasefire of December 1971 would be respected by both sides without prejudice to the recognized position of either side."

"Pakistan’s recognized position, which is also the recognized position of UN, is that the future of Jammu and Kashmir is to be determined through democratic method of a free and impartial plebiscite. It should also be the recognized position of India because it was willing party to the relevant resolutions of the United Nations", the statement said.

Media briefing by Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto on return from her tour of the United States of America.

Islamabad, April 16, 1995.

Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto has said the ‘State of drift’ in the Pak-US relations had ended and the successful journey had vindicated Pakistan’s position on nuclear non-proliferation and Kashmir.

Addressing a Press conference at Islamabad airport on her arrival from the USA on April 16, 1995 she said: “This visit has proved to be a definite movement in the evolution of a new and more mature partnership in the post-cold war era. A great deal of ground needs to be covered. New areas of cooperation need to be explored. The impediments that continue to exist must be confronted and overcome. What is important is that new parameters have been defined and a new beginning made.”

To sum up, she said her visit has brought about “a significant change in the Pak-US relationship which has, since 1990, been in a state of drift.” She said: “Our commitment to global and regional security is fully appreciated. The value and importance of trade and investment in the new relationship has been recognized and encouraged by both sides," adding that President Clinton's remarks were a vindication of Pakistan's moral position and source of pride for all Pakistanis. Trade not aid, partnership not dependency and promoting stability through peace-keeping missions' were the subjects pressed and forcefully advocated by Pakistan, Ms Bhutto said.

It was the first visit by a Pakistani chief executive in six years, she added, and the first effort since 1990 to defreeze the relations between the two countries and begin a dialogue on important issues.

The Prime Minister said: “The first goal was to start a dialogue on whether the Pressler Amendment and sanctions against Pakistan have met the desired goals or not. It is our view that the Pressler Amendment is a discriminatory law that has undermined Pak-US relations and also defeated the goal of non-proliferation in South Asia.”

Second, there was no justification for the USA to withhold both the equipment which it had contracted to supply before the Pressler sanctions were imposed, and the money that Pakistan had paid for from its resources, she said.

Third, the Kashmir dispute lay at the heart of South Asia’s security problems and Americans mediation was needed to resolve the issue in accordance with UN resolutions and the wishes of the Kashmir people, Ms. Bhutto said.

“Fourth, we were seeking to deepen commercial ties between the two countries to broaden our bilateral relationship and to base this on trade not aid, and on partnership not dependency,” she added.

“These were the themes on which I dwelt in my meetings with the administration and Congressional leaders and in the series of media interviews, and public speeches,” she said, adding: “The response to our efforts can be gauged from what Mr. Clinton said at a Press conference we jointly addressed.” Mr. Clinton pointed to the “significant investments” being committed by US firms encouraged by economic opportunities offered by Pakistan, especially in the energy sector. He said: “I am convinced that in the coming years, the economic ties between our people will grow close.”

Ms Bhutto said she also held a series of meetings in Congress, with Senate majority leader Robert Dole, and members of the US International Relations Committee, the US Appropriation Committee and the US Armed Services Committee. “From those key leaders on the Hill, I received similar assurances of understanding on all issues of concern to the USA, especially on the Pressler Amendment,” she added.

“A special Senate resolution was unanimously adopted welcoming me to the USA and calling to strengthen bilateral relations. This was a particularly warm and considerate gesture, demonstrating bipartisan support for improvement in Pak-US relations,” Ms Bhutto said.

In another gesture of goodwill, she stated, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Jesse Helms took her to the floor of the Senate and asked for a short recess to mark his respect for Pakistan. “In the public fora that I addressed, at Princeton and John Hopkins universities and at World Affairs Council at Los Angeles, I found a uniformly favourable response to the message that I conveyed on both the Pressler Amendment and the Kashmir issue,” she added.

Ms Bhutto said: “What emerged from my meetings at the White House and the Hill was the clear understanding that Pakistan as an Islamic democratic and moderate country of 130 million people has a vital role to play as a bridge between these regions and in the promotion of peace and security at the global and regional levels.”

Pakistan has been praised for being the largest contributor to international peacekeeping efforts, she said, adding: “Our effort to combat the scourge of international terrorism and counter drug trafficking was appreciated.”

Also acknowledged was Pakistan’s commitment to democracy, to economic liberalisation and to full participation in the global economy. Administration officials and corporate America termed Pakistan the most attractive investment partner in the region, she added.

The Prime Minister said: “We were gratified by the fact that the USA recognises the disputed status of Jammu and Kashmir and agrees with us that a durable solution to this dispute will have to take into account the wishes of the Kashmiri people. Moreover, the USA fully appreciated that unless the core issue of Kashmir is resolved, other regional issues will remain frozen. The Clinton administration is prepared to respond positively to our proposal that the USA should mediate to find a solution of the Kashmir issue. It is now up to India to accept such mediation.”

She added: “In the economic sphere, we signed memoranda of understanding (MoUs) with several US corporations worth $6 billion. The MoUs signing ceremony held in Washington was attended by four cabinet members, Energy Secretary Hazel O’Leary, Commerce Secretary Ron Brown, US Trade Representative Mickey Kantor, Agriculture Secretary Dane Glickman, and President of Exim Bank Kenneth Brody. Their presence signified the Clinton administration’s endorsement of Pakistan’s economic policies. The MoUs signed in Washington increased US investment commitments to over $10 billion in a period of 17 months.”

1350. Statement issued by the Contact Group of the Organisation of Islamic Conference on the ‘desecration’ of the Charar-e-Sharif Shrine in Kashmir.

New York, May 16, 1995.

At a meeting held at the UN on May 15, the Contact Group on Jammu and Kashmir of the OIC considered the serious situation that has arisen because of the desecration and destruction of the shrine of Sheikh Nooruddin Noorani, the large mosque adjacent to it and a madrasa (institution of learning) by a large number of armed Indian military personnel.

The Contact Group stated that the wanton act of sacrilege of the 535-year-old holy shrine and a mosque adjacent to it, on the auspicious occasion of Eidul Azha, has profoundly shocked the Muslims all over the World.

The Contact Group condemns the brutal Indian military operation against the peaceful residents of Charar-e-Sharif which had resulted in killing of scores of innocent civilians, the burning down of about 1,000 houses, and attacks against their religious and cultural heritage.

Appeals Not Heeded

It regrets that the concern and alarm at the siege of the shrine expressed earlier and the OIC Secretary General’s appeals to lift the siege were not heeded by the Indian government. It expressed its deep anxiety that some Indian leaders, after the desecration of the mosque and the shrine by the Indian armed personnel, had threatened the use of force against Azad Kashmir.

The Contact Group deplored that the desecration of the holy places of Muslims in India had become a pattern over the years. It recalled that earlier in 1992, the Babri Masjid at Ayodhya was demolished and destroyed by Hindu fanatics.

It noted that the desecration of the Charar-e-Sharif mosque and the shrine had led to massive peaceful demonstrations throughout Jammu and Kashmir and that the Indian authorities had imposed curfew in Srinagar and several other towns in an effort to prevent the expression of protest against this latest assault on the religious sentiments of the Kashmiri people.

Withdrawal of Troops Urged

The members of the Contact Group urged the Indian government to withdraw its forces from Charar-e-Sharif and take other immediate steps to mitigate the effects of the desecration of the mosque and the shrine. They called upon the Indian government to desist from repeating such actions and to respond to the aspirations of the people of Kashmir in the interest of peace and security in the region.
The Contact Group, reaffirming the OIC resolution on Jammu and Kashmir adopted at the seventh Islamic Summit held in Casablanca, expressed total solidarity with the Kashmiri people. It urged the UN Secretary General to take due cognisance of the threat to the regional peace and security posed by desecration and destruction of the Charar Sharif mosque and the shrine. It also appealed to the President of the Security Council to take note of the situation and to bring the matter to the attention of members of the Council for appropriate action. The Contact Group has also decided to address letters to the UN Secretary General and the President of the Security Council.

The Contact Group meeting on Kashmir was convened by OIC Secretary General Hamid Algabid.

New Delhi, May 16, 1995.

We have read with surprise and regret the statement issued on behalf of the OIC Contact Group in New York on the destruction of the shrine at Charar-e-Sharief.

2. The burning of Charar-e-Sharief has destroyed part of the religious and cultural heritage of India, and is mourned by all Indians, as reflected in the debate in Parliament, comment in the press and spontaneous reactions of the common man.

3. The burning of Charar-e-Sharief during the holy days of the Haj was designed to cause the maximum possible tension. Nevertheless, despite the gravest provocation, there is no threat to the peace, either in India or in the region. The situation in Jammu & Kashmir is calming down, and Charar-e-Sharief has been returned to civilian control.

4. Charar-e-Sharief was occupied and burnt by foreign terrorists whose objective is to undermine the territorial integrity of India. This has been accepted even by responsible foreign media. The terrorist organization Harkat-ul-Ansar based in Pakistan has claimed “credit” for burning down the shrine. Earlier, a similar attempt had been made at the Hazratbal shrine, which proved unsuccessful. This time, the terrorists ensured that their work of destruction should be completed.
5. The burning of Chrar-e-Sharief is not a communal or a religious issue. It is an act of vandalism and destruction by militants. We therefore do not understand why the OIC Contact Group considers it necessary to comment on it.

6. International reaction on this incident has recognized where the responsibility lies for the outrage. Pakistan is trying to fan religious and international sentiment through the OIC. This is opportunistic, and motivated by the desire to deflect attention from its complicity in the desecration of the shrine. By provoking such incidents, Pakistan is trying to frustrate the political process in Jammu & Kashmir.

7. Prime Minister has announced in Parliament that the political process will continue on schedule. Terrorists will not be allowed to hold the population of Jammu & Kashmir hostage.

8. We trust that members of the OIC Contact Group will realize that their statements will only give encouragement to the terrorists responsible for this outrage, and can only disappoint the population of Jammu & Kashmir, who would like to see an early return to democratic governance.

1352. Briefing by the Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office rejecting Indian Charge of Chrar-e-Sharif desecration.
Islamabad, May 18, 1995.

The Pakistan government has outrightly rejected Indian accusations of Pakistan’s involvement in the desecration of the shrine of Sheikh Nooruddin Wali and the destruction of the adjacent mosque.

At the weekly Press briefing, the Foreign Office spokesman said that the government had taken strong exception to the baseless charges made by Indian External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee, who had accused Pakistan of “supplying narco-funds to the Kashmiri militants,” and holding it responsible for the Chrar Sharif calamity.

The Indian minister had made these remarks a day earlier in his speech in the Rajya Sabha. The spokesman also criticized Indian Minister of State for External Affairs Salman Khurshid who had claimed in a separate interview that “India had evidence of Pakistan’s involvement in Chrar Sharif’s destruction.”
The spokesman said if the Indians had any real evidence they would have brought it out in the open instead of withholding it under the week ruse of its disclosure affecting the Indian national security. “To begin with, their allegations are baseless. It is, therefore, only natural for their evidence to be concocted as well,” he added. He accused India of attempting to deflect the strong international condemnation of its atrocities in Chrar Sharif by trying to shift the blame on Pakistan.

Replying to a question, he said there were reports of Indian troop movement on the borders in the wake of war threats held out by certain Indian leaders. He added that the government was vigilant about the whole issue. He expressed ignorance about the Directors-General of Military Operations of the two countries having discussed these latest troop movements.

Using harsh words to denounce Indian actions in Kashmir, he said: “The Indian troops not only destroyed the shrine but also razed the whole town to the ground on the pretext of flushing out militants. The Indian government has yet to explain why it used such excessive force to flush out a handful of the so-called militants from the shrine while the leaders of the same group had given assurances to preserve the sanctity of the holy shrine.”

He went on to add that the reaction of the Kashmiri people was a vivid demonstration of their faith in Pakistan and an outright rejection of Indian claims of Pakistan’s involvement in the desecration of the holy places. Replying to a question, he said, that during the last elections in Kashmir, held before the ongoing militant insurgency, the turnout was a mere 3 per cent, observing: “Now you can imagine the turnout for yourself. It would be nothing but a farce.”

1353. Interview of Pakistan Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali to the Nation on India's threat of "hot pursuit".

Pakistan's Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali told the Nation that "India will certainly have a war on its hands if it translates its threat of "hot pursuit" into action. "Officially I cannot say anything on this but we cannot take these threats lightly". The signals are not very promising, he said. He noted these threats of "hot pursuit" have not been officially aired in New Delhi but by opposition parties and retired bureaucrats like former foreign secretary J. N. Dixit.

But what exactly is "hot pursuit" and in what context these have been raving about? But the Bhartiya Janata Party and JN Dixit who after retirement had become a columnist had been saying that if Pakistan "does not mend its ways and continue interfering in Kashmir" India should chase Kashmiri freedom fighters in hot pursuit into Azad Kashmir and destroy the training camps said to be based there. They also quote some international law to argue that the concept of hot pursuit can be given a legal covering even if it means stepping into another sovereign country's territory.

Given the high-strung tension between Pakistan and India, such rhetoric is very very dangerous. Although, as the Foreign Minister pointed out, such threats did not have an official stamp on them, officials in Islamabad believe that people like JN Dixit cannot fly off on their own tangent. In other words New Delhi in all likely hood has given a silent approval to these threats.

[The Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman, meanwhile said on June 28, Pakistan did not take these threats lightly. Other officials too took similar view. What is clear, however, is that on this matter there is complete unanimity that if India were to cross over into Azad Kashmir, it would be construed as an act of war by Pakistan. The Spokesman had said that any act of hot pursuit across the border by the Indian forces would endanger the security of the entire region. He said having failed to suppress the Kashmiri people, India now again wanted to raise the bogey of across-the-border military operations. "It is clear that India's 600, 000 fully armed troops have failed to crush the Kashmiri movement and the army was looking for fresh scapegoats to justify its continued repression of the Kashmiri people," the Spokesman said.]

Islamabad, July 12, 1995.

Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali said at Islamabad on July 12 that Indian authorities through their acts have created tension in the South Asian region to an alarming level.

"The military build-up in Kashmir, deployment of 100 Prithvi missiles' along Pakistan's border, recent public statements by Indian authorities calling for hot pursuit across the Line of Control and increased violations of the Line of Control by the Indian troops have mounted the tension between India and Pakistan to an alarming level," Said the Foreign Minister while addressing a Press conference.

Refuting the Indian claim that there were only 300,000 troops in Kashmir, Mr. Assef said that Pakistan had undeniable evidence that the number of Indian troops in the valley was well beyond 600,000. He gave full details of Indian troops deployed in Kashmir along with the break-up of military, paramilitary and state police forces.

"I would not say anything about the threat of war," said the Foreign Minister when asked about it in the backdrop of the above-mentioned developments. He said that Pakistan was justified in feeling threatened over these developments. "However, Pakistan is fully prepared to meet any eventuality," said Mr. Aseef.

The fact-sheet which he product at the Press conference contains all details about the Indian forces in Kashmir. According to the details provided by him, the total number of Indian army personnel developed in Kashmir is 317,800. The number of paramilitary forces is 203,000 and the state police's strength is 40,000. India has also deployed an additional force of 42,660 security personnel in the valley in the garb of the staff on election duty. The fact-sheet also contains the exact location of the troops.

"It is apprehended that the increase in troop deployment would be utilized for thrusting the military solution on the Kashmiris rather than the negotiated settlement," he said, adding that this military build-up would logically lead to escalation of the crackdown on the Kashmiris with even less regard for human rights of the people of Kashmir.

"In view of the internal political uncertainties in India, the growing success of the Kashmiris in their political struggle, rejection of elections under the Indian Constitution, the addition to the military machine in Kashmir is expected to lead to further oppression against the people of Kashmir," he added.
In response to a query regarding the strength of Pakistani troops in Azad Kashmir, he said it was in no way comparable to the heavy deployment of Indian troops in Kashmir.

The Pakistan Foreign Minister alleged that the Indians had also deployed 100 Prithvi Missiles along Pakistan’s border. “These missiles are a threat to the peace of not only the region but also the whole world,” Mr. Assef claimed. He said that Pakistan would develop its nuclear programme within the parameters of the Missile Technology Control Regime.

He said the option of hot pursuit from across the Line of Control was being contemplated by India “Recently, public statements by both serving and retired Indian leaders had called for hot pursuit across the Line of Control and held out threats of war against Pakistan,” said the Foreign Minister.

He said that the Indians have also increased the violations of the Line of Control. “One portion of Azad Kashmir has been cut off due to continuous shelling by Indian troops.” He added.

He hoped sanity would prevail in New Delhi and the Indians would not initiate hostilities.

Asked what Pakistan would do if the Indians carried out their threat of hot pursuit, he said: “Pakistan would defend its territory by whatever means at its disposal.”

When his attention was drawn to the visit of the US Ambassador in New Delhi to Srinagar, he said that some of the statements of the ambassador were highly contradictory and, therefore, Pakistan had contacted the US State Department for a clarification. The State Department had told Pakistan that there was no change in the US policy towards Kashmir.

Asked if China and Iran stood by Pakistan on the Kashmir issue, he said: “We have best of relations with Iran and China. Iran and Pakistan have always stood by each other in the past and we believe that Iran’s just policy remains unaltered on the issue.”

New Delhi, May 19, 1995.

The Joint Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs, Mr. M. K. Bhadrakumar today met the Acting High Commissioner of Pakistan, Mr. Shahid Malik and conveyed the Government’s deep regret and dismay over the Pakistani statements regarding the Charar-e-Sharief incident. The Acting High Commissioner was told that the Pakistani statements are baseless and tendentious and have no relation to the true facts of the incident of May 11 when a group of mercenaries, including Pakistani and Afghan nationals and their mentors from across the border burned down* the shrine and mosque in Charar-e-Sharief. It was conveyed that the Government takes serious exception to the Pakistani statements regarding the Indian Army which are provocative and should be avoided under whatever compulsions.

* However on May 23, a senior Indian Diplomat in Islamabad was summoned to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and told that India cannot escape the responsibility for the incident or shift the blame to others. He was told that ‘bellicose’ statements by Indian Ministers and their “threats of war and military action” were against the 1972 bilateral Simla Pact and aggravated the regional security situation. The Pakistani Foreign Office also rejected the Indian charge that Pakistan was materially aiding or abetting the so-called freedom fighters in Jammu and Kashmir. “Pakistan takes serious exception to the deliberate distortions contained in such ‘allegations’ about the facts of the assault on the holy town of Chrar Sharif by Indian forces” the Indian Diplomat was told. Pakistan alleged that the “Indian forces ransacked and torched the houses of innocent citizens of Sheikh Noor-ud-din Wali to the ground”.

Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding allegations by Pakistan Foreign Minister.

New Delhi, August 17, 1995.

We have seen reports of a press conference held by the Foreign Minister of Pakistan this morning. He has made totally unfounded charges against India and has tried to manufacture arguments for accusing India as being responsible for the hostages crisis in Kashmir. These are absurd allegations and will deceive nobody. It is widely recognized that the Al-Faran group, like other militant groups active in Jammu & Kashmir, is supported, armed and trained by Pakistan. The pro forma condemnation of hostage taking by Pakistani leaders can only be intended to obscure the abundant evidence of Pakistani complicity.

There has been an overwhelming international response against the Al-Faran group’s seizure of hostages in Kashmir. Countries from around the globe, including the OIC, have joined together in expressing their revulsion at this action. The brutal slaying of a Norwegian hostage has shocked the international community and brought out renewed denunciations of the hostage takers. The Pakistan Foreign Minister’s uncomfortable situation where Pakistan stands identified with the kidnappers.

The Pakistan Foreign Minister has produced a number of “reasons” in support of his accusations. He has also made unwarranted observations about India’s intention to violate the LOC, and has held out rash threats against India. We deeply deplore such attempts to create tension on the border, which is clearly an attempt to divert attention. We wish to make it clear that India will not be provoked by such methods. We will continue to confront the militants in Kashmir and will deal effectively with, those who engage in Kidnapping and hostage taking.

We stand ready to resume a dialogue with Pakistan, without any preconditions. Rather than trying to exacerbate the problem, Pakistan would do well to draw back from its discredited policy of support and promotion of terrorism and take up our repeated offer of dialogue.
1357. Statement by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs rejecting the Statement of OIC on J & K.

New Delhi, October 11, 1995.

The Government of India regrets and rejects the false and misleading statement on Jammu & Kashmir issued by the OIC Foreign Ministers at their annual coordination meeting in New York on October 2, 1995. It is particularly inappropriate to refer to one group as true representatives of the Kashmiri people when that group is not backed by any popular mandate. We also note that the section of the Communiqué on Jammu & Kashmir does not enjoy consensus among OIC countries. The resolution is clearly at the behest of one country.

The situation in Jammu & Kashmir which is an integral part of India is a direct consequence of the unabated terrorism being sponsored by Pakistan. The OIC would do well to address Pakistan, a member state of the OIC, to abjure from the sponsorship of terrorism and to refrain from interfering in the internal affairs of other countries.

The Government of India is committed to the normalization of the situation in Jammu & Kashmir. To that end Government is committed to the resumption of the normal political process and to the holding of elections in the state.

The Government of India would emphasise that there is no threat to peace and security in South Asia from India. India has time and again reiterated its willingness to hold talks with Pakistan. Our offer for talks without pre-conditions and on all aspects of Indo-Pak bilateral relations stands reconfirmed.

1358. Offer by a senior official of the Pakistan Foreign Office of the third option of independence for Kashmir.

Islamabad, November 8, 1995.

Mr. Shahryar Rashid, Director General on the South Asian Desk in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs said in Islamabad on November 15 that the pro-independence elements in Kashmir could also express themselves through plebiscite; Indirectly, "Well if during the plebiscite the Kashmiris do not turn up in greater number either in favour of joining India or Pakistan then it would obviously show their will to remain independent," said Mr. Shahryar Rashid.

He was replying to a question while delivering a candid talk on Indo-Pak relations at the Department of International Relations, Quaid Azam University, on November 5.

[Mr. Rashid's talk which mainly focused on the issue of Kashmir, traced back the genesis of the problem in the context of recent developments in Indo-Pak relations.]

He agreed that while the plebiscite under UN resolutions gave only two options to the people of Kashmir even then the people could speak out else. "If only 7 to 8 per cent of voters turn up during the plebiscite like they did during the rigged elections of 1987 in Kashmir, then the things are obvious, Mr. Rashid explained further.

Dwelling further on the subject, he said. "India and Pakistan have been condemned to live together as neighbours and there is nothing that two of us can do anything about it". The two sides, he said were very rigid on their respective positions on Kashmir. While India considers Kashmir as its integral part and always harps on the need to have a dialogue without Kashmir, Pakistan on the other side has made it clear that Kashmir is an international dispute which required implementation of the UN resolutions and also welcomes third party mediation. He recalled that the disputes like Indus water and the Rann of Kutch had been successfully solved through third party mediation.

He declared that India had only two options left with it about Kashmiris and these were that either India would suppress the people of Kashmir for long, which it cannot, or accept their wishes and there was no other option with India. He referred to the recent failure of the Indian government in holding elections in the territory. He said the Indian view that Pakistan fanned terrorism in Kashmir which hampered the elections was unfounded. He made it clear that the reason for India's failure to hold elections was because the Kashmiris felt alienated form Indian Society.
He also referred to the presence of about 600,000 troops in the valley due to which, he pointed out, there was no question of any free and fair elections there. “About half the Indian army was deployed there,” he claimed.

1359. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs rejecting the motivated and biased Resolution of the OIC on J & K.

Government of India categorically rejects the motivated and biased resolution on Jammu and Kashmir by the Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers (ICFM) that met in Conakry from 9-12th December, 1995. While we are aware that the Resolution does not reflect the views of many members of the OIC and is a creation of Pakistan through manipulation of OIC procedures, we are compelled to point out that the Resolution is inconsistent with OIC’s own professed objectives and is patently aimed at prolonging terrorism, militancy, and the killing of innocent people under external inspiration. In passing the Resolution, ICFM exposes its vulnerability for being easily misled by falsehood and suppression of truth.

Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India. ICFM’s reference to J&K as “under foreign occupation”, and describing the political process in J& K. “as fraudulent”, is objectionable. It is all the more reprehensible that OIC continues to refer to self-serving and marginal groups as “True Representatives” of the Kashmiri people. The ICFM’s blatantly partisan Resolution will only fuel terrorism further.

It is incredible with such a prejudiced framework, OIC still seeks to send a “Fact Finding Mission to J& K which in any case is not acceptable”.

While other inter-governmental organizations including NAM, Common-wealth, UN fora etc., have thought it fit not to pass judgement on what is purely a bilateral issue, ICFM chose to pass a tendentious Resolution. We hope that in future, in keeping with its own dignity and in accordance with international norms, OIC will refrain from such unwarranted and unacceptable references to a country which is proud of its Muslim population of over 130 million, and its rich heritage of Islamic culture, which is an integral part of India’s secular society.

1360. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office on India’s description of Pakistan as a “terrorist” State.

Islamabad, January 4, 1996.

The Foreign Office spokesman refuted on January 4 the assertion of Indian Minister of State for External Affairs RL Bhatia that Pakistan is a terrorist state and declared that if any state deserved to be called a terrorist State it is India.

In a statement at his weekly news briefing the Spokesman recalled the recent accusation against Pakistan and asserted “it is India which has used its military might across international frontiers repeatedly since 1947. Indian armed forces have been used against almost all small neighbours and were instrumental in the dismemberment of Pakistan.”

The spokesman said: “India has employed its intelligence agencies to destabilize Pakistan particularly the province of Sindh where a number of Indian agents have been caught red-handed.

He pointed out that Indian forces continued to be in Jammu and Kashmir, and India remained engaged in an arms buildup which includes nuclear and missile developments as well as extensive purchases from external sources of sophisticated arms and weapon systems beyond its legitimate defence needs.

Asked if Pakistan had attempted to get India declared a terrorist state by the USA, the Spokesman said Pakistan had remained in constant touch with all its friends including the USA to make it clear as to which country in the region was fomenting terrorism in South Asia. India had been campaigning for some time in vain to persuade Washington to place Pakistan on the list of "terrorist" States.
1361. Radio and TV address by Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto marking the so-called ‘Solidarity Day with Kashmiri People’.

Islamabad, February 4, 1996.

Terming Indian war hysteria as failure of its designs in Kashmir, Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto has given a ‘stern warning’ to New Delhi that in case of any eventuality Pakistan would come up with a matching response to any threat.

[She was addressing the nation over radio and television networks in Islamabad on February 4 on the eve of Day of Solidarity with Kashmiri people being observed on February 5 to protest against Indian repression and brutalities in Kashmir.]

Referring to India’s massive arms build-up, testing of Prithvi, rocket attack on Kahuta and Prime Minister Narasimha Rao’s declaration that India cannot give up its nuclear option, Ms. Bhutto said: “Pakistan is fully aware of India’s hegemonistic designs. In an obviously vague reference to India’s nuclear and missile programmes, the Prime Minister said India full well knew that Pakistan can counter any threat in all situations and in every field.”

While making it clear that Pakistan cannot be cowed down by Indian provocations and warning the international community that Indian missiles pose a threat to areas beyond this region, she said Indian missiles are capable of hitting Baghdad, Teheran, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Cairo. She said India’s hegemonistic designs have no bounds. None of its neighbours, including Bangladesh, Bhutan, Sri Lanka, Maldives and Nepal, has been spared from interference and now it is interfering in a region of Pakistan. (an obvious reference to Sindh) She said for this purposes, terrorists training camps have been set up in India.

The Prime Minister however told the nation that by the Grace of Allah Almighty people of Pakistan and their armed forces are fully capable of meeting any aggression. She categorically stated that Pakistan will never accept India’s hegemony.

Expressing full solidarity of Pakistan with the liberation struggle of Kashmiri brethren, the Prime Minister observed that just solution of the Kashmir problem is a test case for the new world order and a guarantee for peace and stability in the 21st century South Asia.

She called for establishment of the new world order based on the principle of justice and equity for all and selective treatment to some problems. She said peace and stability cannot be achieved in the region as long as there is reign of terror and repression.
Ms. Bhutto vowed to continue Pakistan’s support to the struggling people of Kashmir. She said Pakistan would support Kashmiris in realization of their right to self-determination which is vital for achieving lasting peace in South Asia. She said complete strike would be observed throughout Pakistan and Azad Kashmir to express solidarity with Kashmiris and expose Indian atrocities in Kashmir.

The Prime Minister said Pakistan and India fought three wars since 1947 and directly or indirectly the root cause has been the Kashmir dispute. She said Pakistan was dismembered with a view to undermining its support for Kashmir but Indian aggression could not weaken Pakistan’s resolve to stand by a right cause. She categorically stated that come what may Pakistan would never deter from supporting its Kashmiri brethren.

Rejecting holding of any elections in Kashmir, the Prime Minister said the solution lies in plebiscite alone. Kashmiri people want their right of self-determination and not elections. She said the Kashmiris want solution of the problem in accordance with international law.

Ms Bhutto reiterated Pakistan’s desire for talks to resolve the Kashmir problem in accordance with international law but regretted that New Delhi was not ready to discuss the issue. She said President Farooq Leghari had made it clear to India that Pakistan was willing for negotiations with India on the Kashmir issue when he visited India to attend the SAARC Summit. Unfortunately India declined the offer whereas it has no solution of its own. She said solution of the Kashmir problem lies with the Kashmiris alone.

The Prime Minister recalled that the world has witnessed some significant developments with regard to the Kashmir issue during the last two years. The conference of Islamic Foreign Ministers held in September, 1994, took a historic decision to form an OIC Contact Group on Kashmir. The Kashmiri leaders addressed the Contact Group at the OIC summit at Casablanca. The Summit declared, that the Kashmir issue be resolved in accordance with UN resolutions and this was for the first time since 1947 that Islamic states unanimously adopted a resolution of this kind at the summit level. Similarly, the then PPP government succeeded in getting a resolution passed by Islamic Conference Foreign Ministers in 1988 and 1989.

Ms. Bhutto eulogized the services rendered by veteran politician Nawabzada Nasrullah Khan for the cause of Kashmir, particularly signing of a joint declaration by heads of all political parties of the country including the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition. The declaration, she said, proved that the entire nation was united on the Kashmir issue.
Referring to massive Indian brutalities in Kashmir, she said Pakistan drew the attention of the world community towards the plight of Kashmiri people during the 50th anniversary of the UN. Pakistan told the world community that 48 years of brutalities on the Kashmiris have failed to break their will. Pakistan also highlighted the Kashmir issue at the NAM summit.

The Prime Minister observed that the people of Kashmir are passing through a difficult phase of their struggle. Over 40,000 people have been martyred, countless women raped and a large number of children kidnapped. She said despite this reign of terror the flame of freedom burns in the hearts of the Kashmiris and their struggle would soon be crowned with success.

She referred to the kidnapping of western tourists in Kashmir last year by the so-called Al-Faran Group. She said the incident has damaged the freedom struggle and was condemned by the All Parties Hurriyet Conference. She said Pakistan had also condemned the kidnapping but emphasized that during the holy month of Ramazan they would release the tourists who are innocent, if they have any love for Kashmir.

1362. Reported Declaration by Pakistan Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali that the Kashmiris can go ‘For Third Option of Independence’.

Huston, (USA), February 10, 1996.

Pakistan’s Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali has said that he wants the Kashmiris to have three choices: accession to India, accession to Pakistan or independence.

He told a meeting in Houston, Texas, “We believe the UN Security Council should implement its policies. We want to leave Kashmir and its people free to stay free, joint India or Pakistan.”

* The Pakistan Foreign Office clarified the reported statement regarding Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali’s address to Pakistanis in Houston on February 10. In a Press statement issued on February 24, the Foreign Office said the truth of the matter is that the Foreign Minister never endorsed the case for an independent Kashmir. The Federal Minister had stated that the Kashmiri people had the right to decide in accordance with UN resolutions whether they wish to join India or Pakistan. The Foreign Office termed the story as a shocking example of misleading and biased individual reporting.
Why Third Option

Mr. Assef went on to explain why he favoured the third option which finds no mention in the UNCIP resolutions. “Because of our stance on Kashmir and our moral support to the people of Kashmir, we are facing a security problem. India has spread lots of agents throughout Pakistan and I can quote dozens of examples of Indian involvement in many terrorist activities,” he said.

[It would appear that Mr. Assef is bracketing Kashmir with Karachi and implying that since Pakistan’s “moral” support for Kashmir has caused a “security problem” for the country due to the alleged infiltration of Indian agents if Pakistan scaled down or phased out its “moral” support for the Kashmiris, it would experience a lessening of Indian-based “terrorist” activity.]

1363. Aide Memoire from the Ministry of External Affairs handed over to Pakistan High Commission in India.

New Delhi, February 26, 1996.

AIDE MEMOIRE

The Government of India takes most serious note of the growing incidents of cross-border terrorism/Narco-terrorism being promoted by Pakistan against India, In addition to the infiltration of terrorists into India, providing shelter and training to Indian terrorists in Pakistan, Pakistan has sent arms, ammunition, explosives and narcotics into India The concerned Indian authorities have discerned an increase in the tempo of these activities over the last six months. Some recent cases of the methods and personnel employed by Pakistan are given below:

(a) The Indian authorities arrested at Amritsar a Pakistani national Akbar Ali s/o Rahmet Ali r/o Hadiara, Lahore on 4 October 1995. A consignment consisting of 50 pistols, two hand grenades, 1 AK-47 rifle, 5 pencil bombs, 7 Mousers, 2 mines and 50 kgs of heroin were recovered at his instance. An accomplice and he brought the consignment from Pakistan. Akbar Ali informed the Indian authorities that his activities were being guided by Taufiq Raza and H.C. Salauddin. He also informed the Indian authorities that he had, over the period of one year smuggled 60 AK-47 rifles, 307 pistols and ammunition into India. His smuggling activity was being controlled by Tariq who is an ISI agent. Tariq resides at 797, Ashraf Colony, Multan Road, Lahore.

(b) Four Pakistani nationals were arrested by the Indian authorities on 4 February 1996. These are: (i) Mohd. Taufique s/o Mohd. Sadique r/o H.No. 14, Gali No.82, Gala Mohalla under Police Station Muzang, Lahore; (ii) Amjad Shadid s/o Basheer Ahmad r/o H.No.1986, Gali No.14, Farukhabad, Faisalabad, (iii) Arif Butt s/o Mohd. Hussain r/o Chaman Park, Naya Pul, Fategarh, Lahore, and (iv) Rizwan @ Bokhy @ Anil Sharma s/o Munir r/o H. No.2, Gali No.31, Kucha Gulam Mohammad, Bhujang, Lahore. 39 pistols, ammunition and 6 kgs. of narcotics were apprehended from these Pakistani national. Mohd. Taufique, Amjad Shahid, Arif Butt and Rizwan informed the Indian authorities that the pistols were sent by Tariq a reference to whom has been made above.

(c) Shakar Jalil, a resident of V.P.O. Jaserwala, The. Daska, Distt. Sialkot was also apprehended by the Indian authorities on 8 February 1996. He was hiding below the floor of a goods bogie in the Samjhauta Express. Jalil revealed that he is a member of the Tanzeem "Lashkar-e-Toiba" and had been sent under the instructions of the ISI to organize terrorist activities in India.

(d) The Indian authorities arrested Christoph Martin Zellweger, a Swiss national and Sayed Majid Rafiei Pouralavi holder of an Iranian passport on 17February 1996. These persons had smuggled 361 pistols of .30 calibre, 728 magazines and 3,738 live rounds. The interrogation of these individuals revealed that the holder of Iranian passport was Mohammed Hassan Padar, an Iranian national who was residing at Flat No.703-G, Model Town Extension, Lahore. Padar has been in Pakistan since 1981 and is married to a Pakistani lady. The supply of the arms and ammunition smuggled by the Swiss and the Iranian national through the Wagah border in a luxury bus was made by the ISI agent, Tariq, details of whom have been given above. The arms were carefully wrapped in newspapers published in Lahore and concealed in a special cavity in the undercarriage of the Caravan to avoid detection. Some of the pistols are of Pakistani origin.

(e) The investigations conducted by the Indian authorities in the case of arms dropping by air at Purulia in West Bengal on 17 December 1995 have revealed that the aircraft had remained in Karachi from 13 to 17 of December, 1995. The staff of Shaheen International Airlines which has close links with the Pakistan Air Force gave active assistance to the crew of the aircraft in preparing for parachute dropping of the consignment. Pakistan immigration authorities also colluded with the crew of the aircraft.

2. The incidents given above reveal a pattern of activity which can lead only to the inevitable conclusion that Pakistan is actively fomenting terrorism and violence in India. The Government of India takes grave note of these activities. It is the hope of the Government of India that wiser counsels will prevail in Pakistan and such activities will cease immediately. The Government of India cannot remain unconcerned at these developments.

1364. Statement by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on the ‘OIC Contact Group Declaration on Jammu & Kashmir’.

New Delhi, April 18, 1996.

A declaration by the OIC Contact Group on Jammu & Kashmir, issued in Geneva on 15th April 1996, has come to our notice. As with OIC statements on Jammu & Kashmir in the past, this declaration too bears the stamp of Pakistan’s hostile and malicious propaganda against India. It is regrettable that OIC has once again allowed itself to be used by Pakistan to promote its anti-India tirade.

Government of India is committed to the resumption of the Political process in the State Jammu & Kashmir. Elections to the Lok Sabha (Lower House of the Indian Parliament) are to be held shortly, India’s tradition of holding free and fair election in universally acknowledged. The election process in Jammu & Kashmir will naturally be in keeping with this tradition. It is a complete travesty of the truth to allege otherwise.

The version given of the recent incidents in Hazratbal is a distortion of the facts. The security forces acted to prevent a desecration of the holy shrine. It is totally false to term Jalil Andrabi’s tragic death as custodial. Investigations in the matter are in progress under the directions of the High Court of Jammu & Kashmir.
The OIC should focus its attention on the proxy war being waged by Pakistan against India by fomenting violence and terrorism in Jammu & Kashmir and elsewhere. That would be the way to usher in peace and tranquility in the State of Jammu & Kashmir. Statements criticizing India’s policy only serve to encourage the terrorists.

1365. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs re:summoning of the Pakistan High Commissioner by Foreign Secretary.

New Delhi, April 29, 1996.

The Pakistan High Commissioner was summoned by the Foreign Secretary today in connection with the recent press interview given by the High Commissioner.

Government of India’s indignation at the reported remarks of the High Commissioner was conveyed to him. He was informed that Indian public opinion is outraged. His observations are unacceptable, provocative and amount to an interference in India’s internal affairs. We take the strongest exception to the substance and the tone of these remarks which are not in keeping with the status of foreign representatives in India.

The problem in J&K, it was reiterated to the High Commissioner, is that of interference and armed intervention from Pakistan. Despite the constant and increasing intimidation, a large number of candidates have come forward to contest the elections, and there is total popular support for the democratic process. We are in no need of advice from outside, least of all from Pakistan, on how to conduct elections. Pakistan charges that the elections will be rigged were dismissed. International opinion will not be deceived by such propaganda. Pakistan’s own strategy of fomenting violence and strife in the Valley is fully exposed, and India’s policy of complete transparency, which is well known, needs no reiteration.

The High Commissioner was reminded that India had made repeated efforts to resume dialogue with Pakistan without any preconditions. There is no progress because Pakistan has refused to respond, despite its professed adherence to the Shimla Agreement. Pakistan’s refusal has led to lack of meaningful diplomatic exchanges in recent years.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Reaction by the Pakistan Foreign Office to the demarche made by the Indian Foreign Secretary to the Pakistan High Commissioner in India.

Islamabad, May 1, 1996.

The Foreign Office has termed as unacceptable the assertion that the remarks of Pakistan's High Commissioner to India about the so-called elections in Kashmir were an interference in the internal affairs of India.

Its spokesman was commenting on the demarche made to the Pakistan High Commissioner by the Indian Foreign Secretary, protesting against the interview given by the High Commissioner to an expatriate Indian news agency.

The entire international community and not just Pakistan recognizes Jammu and Kashmir as a disputed territory the final disposition of which is yet to be decided through the exercise of right to self-determination by the people of the state in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the UN Security Council. There was no question, therefore, of interfering in the internal affairs of India, the spokesman asserted.

Pakistan, as a party to the dispute, had every right to recall the UN Security Council Resolution 122 (1957) which reiterates that the final disposition of the state of Jammu and Kashmir will be made in accordance with the will of the people expressed through the democratic method of a free and impartial plebiscite conducted under the auspices of the UN, he added.

The spokesman said that the bulk of the over 600,000-strong Indian armed forces was stationed in the Valley where the total electorate is less than two million. Such a heavy concentration of the instruments of repression and coercion during the so-called elections could only lead to one inescapable conclusion, particularly when, to ensure the complete absence of impartial observers, the Indian authorities have ordered even the ICRC to leave the disputed territory.

The spokesman said that there was a history of manipulated elections in Kashmir. In fact the present movement in Kashmir was triggered off by the rigged elections in 1989 in which, according to Indian observers, the turn-out was less than 3 per cent. Such elections can have no credibility.

The Spokesman recalled that Pakistan had made repeated offers of a structured and meaningful dialogue aimed at reaching a peaceful and lasting solution of the dispute. But India has shown no interest in coming to the negotiating table to address the core issue and had instead made vague public offers of unstructured and generalized talks.
We have seen a statement issued by the Pakistan Foreign Office regarding the forthcoming Lok Sabha elections in the State of Jammu and Kashmir. The statement is a part of Pakistan's crude and malicious propaganda against India.

The State of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of the Indian Union. The only issue concerning Pakistan, with regard to the State of Jammu & Kashmir, relates to the vacation of Pakistan from those areas of the State which are under its illegal and forcible occupation. India is committed to the resolution of this issue in accordance with the Simla Agreement.

The State of Jammu & Kashmir has been a victim of violence and terrorism perpetrated by groups which have been raised, trained, armed, guided and led by Pakistan. Pakistan's role as a promoter of international terrorism is well-recognised and well-documented. As public opinion within Kashmir is turning against the agents of Pakistan and as Pakistan’s role in international terrorism is getting more exposed, it is embarking upon a desperate attempt to prevent the return of peace and normalcy, through democratic processes, in Jammu & Kashmir. India will not be deterred from its commitment to hold elections in Jammu & Kashmir which will be free and fair. Pakistani observers themselves recognize, and are indeed envious of India’s democratic traditions of holding elections, which are in sharp contrast to the farcical electoral exercises which have only sporadically taken place in Pakistan’s history.

Pakistan’s claim that the ICRC has been asked to leave the State of J&K is false and untrue. India is strictly implementing the MOU signed with the ICRC.

India has time and again reiterated its willingness to hold unconditional discussions with Pakistan to resolve all Indo-Pak issues. It is Pakistan which must bear the responsibility of interrupting the bilateral dialogue by seeking of impose conditionalities.
1368. Statement issued by Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto’s allegations that India was responsible for the recent bomb blasts in the Punjab Province of Pakistan.

New Delhi, May 7, 1996.

We have seen reports regarding Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto’s baseless allegations that India is responsible for recent bomb blasts in the Punjab Province of Pakistan. The Pakistan Government’s blatant sponsorship of global terrorism, directed in particular against India, is well documented and widely recognized. The people of Pakistan are suffering the consequences of the culture of violence and terrorism actively developed and propagated over the years by Pakistan Government agencies. It behooves the Government of Pakistan that instead of persisting in false and absurd accusations against India it should make an honest reassessment of its own misguided policies and actions.

The Pakistan Government’s active role in sponsoring global terrorism is widely recognized and well documented. India has been major target of this unprincipled activity. Normal life and political process in the State of Jammu and Kashmir has been disrupted by the violence and terrorism perpetrated by groups which have been raised, trained, armed, guided and led by Pakistan. However, public opinion in Kashmir has seen through Pakistan’s designs and has turned against its hirelings. Pakistan’s active sponsorship of international terrorism has become increasingly well established. The Government of Pakistan is now, therefore, resorting to a desperate effort to thwart the return of peace and normalcy in Jammu and Kashmir through the democratic and electoral process. India is committed to holding free and fair elections in Jammu and Kashmir which will pave the way for restoration of normalcy in the State.

We also reiterate India’s longstanding offer to hold unconditional discussions with Pakistan to resolve all issues between our two countries.

1369. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on the Resolution Adopted by the Pakistan Assembly on their Perception of the Situation in Jammu & Kashmir.

New Delhi, May 7, 1996.

We have seen a report on a resolution adopted by the Pakistan National Assembly yesterday on their perceptions of the situation in the Indian State of Jammu & Kashmir. This resolution is a complete travesty of the facts regarding Jammu & Kashmir. Its total distortions of the truth, and its immoderate and virulent language makes it clear that, this is a continuation of Pakistan’s persistent and malicious propaganda exercise against India. The Pakistan National Assembly has no locus standi to pronounce on matters within the sovereign jurisdiction of India. The Government of India categorically rejects this blatant attempt at interference in the internal affairs of India.

The State of Jammu & Kashmir is an integral part of the Indian Union. The only issue concerning Pakistan, with regard to the State of Jammu & Kashmir, relates to the vacation of Pakistan, from those areas of the State which are under the illegal and forcible occupation. India is committed to the resolution of this issue in accordance with the Simla Agreement.

1370. Pakistan’s reaction to the formation of Bharatiya Janata Party Government in India.

Islamabad, May 9, 1996.

The Pakistan Government reiterated on May 9 its concern at any rise of Hindu fundamentalism in India, and said it hoped the next India government would address the key issue of Kashmir.

Asked about the possibility of the Hindu revivalist Bharatiya Janata party rising to power through India’s just completed elections, the Foreign Office spokesman expressed “misgivings and unhappiness” over the growth of Hindu fundamentalism.

He cited the demolition of the Babri Mosque at Ayodhya as an example.

Referring to statements of Indian leaders on exercising the nuclear option, the spokesman said Pakistan is also “sensitive” to the fact that missiles were being tested by India.

“We are not oblivious of threats to our security,” the spokesman said, adding Pakistan hoped the new Government in India would show “a clear-cut resolve” to address what he called the “core issue” of Kashmir.

However, he said, Pakistan considered elections as India’s internal affair, adding it would be “premature” to comment on the possible actions of a government which has not yet taken over.

Nevertheless, a government produced by a “hung Parliament” could find it “difficult” to tackle important issues, he said. But the spokesman dubbed elections being organized in Kashmir as farcical. He said the 1957 UN resolution repeated an earlier Security Council position that elections are no substitute for a plebiscite in Kashmir.

1371. Reaction of Pakistan Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali to the stand of new Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee on Kashmir.

Islamabad, May 17, 1996.

Foreign Minister Assef Ahmed Ali rejected on May 17 the claim to Kashmir state by India’s new Prime Minister and warned that Pakistan would respond to any provocation.

“We are capable of defending every inch of Pakistan,” he said in response to a statement by Mr. Atal Behari Vajpayee that Azad Kashmir “really and rightfully belongs to India.”

Mr. Vajpayee, who leads the BJP government that assumed power on May 16, claimed that Pakistan was fomenting insurgency in Kashmir. The Indian Prime Minister said: “Pakistan is seeking to sabotage polls in Kashmir and that parliamentary elections would go ahead as scheduled on May 23 and 30.”

Sardar Assef said that it was not Pakistan but certainly India which was maintaining unlawful control over Jammu and Kashmir.

The Foreign Minister said Pakistan would approach the UN Security Council if India tried to change the disputed status of Kashmir.
About the new government in New Delhi, he said it is not our concern as to who forms a government in India. However, he said “We hope that the new government will protect Muslims and resolve the Kashmir issue peacefully.”

Pakistan accused on May 16 Indian security forces of trying to eliminate top Kashmiri leaders in the State where mujahideen have been fighting for the liberation of the valley since 1989. It said Kashmiri leaders were being targeted because they “totally rejected” India’s plan of holding “farcical elections.” Mujahideen have vowed to sabotage the voting, saying a UN-sponsored referendum was the only way of resolving the Kashmir crisis.

New Delhi, May 24, 1996.

We have seen a report of a resolution adopted by the Pakistan National Assembly against the Lok Sabha elections in our State of Jammu & Kashmir. The resolution is a familiar piece of Pakistan's hate-filled and vitriolic propaganda against India. It is reflective of Pakistan's desperation in the face of the courage and patriotism which is being displayed by the people of Jammu & Kashmir who, despite the threats of the terrorists and their Pakistani mentors, have come out in large numbers to cast their votes.

The people of Jammu & Kashmir have been the victims of terrorism promoted, sponsored and led by Pakistan over the past seven years. Pakistan has inflicted violence and tragedy in the lives of the people of Jammu & Kashmir. Their response to Pakistan's venomous designs has been shown through their positive turn out in all the four constituencies of the State which have gone to the polls so far. We have every confidence that the voters in the remaining two constituencies in Jammu & Kashmir will also come out in large numbers to cast their votes on the 30th of this month to elect their representatives.

The State of Jammu & Kashmir is an integral part of the Indian Union. Nothing can ever change this historical fact. Pakistan's endeavours through open war against India were defeated in the past and its attempts through a proxy war will meet the same fate.
1373. Message of Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto to Prime Minister Deve Gowda.

Islamabad, June 3, 1996.

Excellency,

On behalf of my government and on my own behalf, I would like to convey our felicitations and best wishes on your assumption of the office of Prime Minister.

South Asian countries are heirs to many fine and magnificent civilizations. The cumulative wisdom of our two nations has much to offer to the world. As responsible leaders of South Asia, let us seize this opportunity by opening a new chapter in our relations, laying down the foundations of a peaceful South Asia based on equitable conflict-resolution and reconciliation: We need to engage ourselves, without further loss of time, in this process for peace. Let the world witness our two great countries putting their acrimonies behind them for the sake of their peoples. As civilized nations, let us sit across the table in a search for lasting peace.

The Government of Pakistan, therefore, looks forward to working with your government to create an environment which will be conducive to peace, security and development so that the vast potential of our two countries can be fully realized. This can only be done by reducing the disputes and tensions that have unfortunately vitiated relations between our two countries. Given mutual respect and a firm adherence to internationally established principles, there is no reason why we cannot resolve our differences justly.

We have been encouraged by the reference in the manifesto of the Janata Dal that “discussions with Pakistan will be held to resolve the (Jammu and Kashmir) dispute, keeping in view the sentiments of the people of the state”. I should like to reiterate our offer of talks aimed at the settlement of the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir and other outstanding matters between our two countries.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Pakistan rejected on June 6 an offer of greater autonomy for Kashmir made by new Indian Prime Minister Deve Gowda.

“There is really nothing new in the offer made by the Indian government,” the Foreign Office spokesman said at a weekly news briefing in Islamabad.

He said similar offer of greater autonomy were made by previous Indian governments which were “instantly rejected by the people of Jammu and Kashmir.

Mr. Gowda’s United Front government, in its policy document released in New Delhi on June 5, had said: “The problems of Jammu and Kashmir will be resolved through giving the people of that state the maximum degree of autonomy.

The spokesman said the Kashmir people had repeatedly made it clear that only a UN supervised plebiscite could offer a “viable solution to this longstanding dispute”.

The spokesman said: “Despite employing coercive methods and rigging tactics, including the herding of unwilling Kashmiris to polling stations at gunpoint, to give an impression of a good turnout, India failed to break the resolve of the Kashmiri people struggling for their right to self-determination.”

The spokesman avoided expressing any opinion on the prospects of an early reopening of the deadlocked dialogue between Islamabad and New Delhi in response to the recent invitation by Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto to Mr. Deve Gowda for talks. The spokesman said that a formal response to Ms. Bhutto’s letter from the Indian side was awaited.

Replying questions, the spokesman said the government would be able to give its views regarding Indian policies after studying the programme of the new United Front government.

He however, recalled parts of the Prime Minister’s letter to her Indian counterpart to emphasise that talks with India should include discussion on Kashmir.

The spokesman said the new Indian government had offered talks on the Kashmir issue contrary to the previous governments which brought to a halt political discussion at official level between the two countries.

The spokesman rejected as futile any Indian attempt to hold Assembly elections in Kashmir, saying it would meet the same fate as the recent Lok Sabha elections.
He said the people of Kashmir had rejected the Indian-sponsored parliamentary polls and would similarly refuse to take part in the proposed Assembly elections. The people of the disputed state had declared that only a plebiscite under the UN to determine the Kashmiris’ right to self-determination could resolve the Kashmir dispute. The elections would only further alienate the Kashmiris from India, he added.

1375. Letter from Prime Minister H. D. Deve Gowda to Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto.

New Delhi, June 9, 1996.

Excellency,

I thank you for your message of felicitations on my assuming the office of Prime Minister of India.

I share the sentiments you have expressed about the need for peaceful and constructive relations between our two countries. As we approach a new millennium, I believe there is a historic opportunity for us who are at the helm of affairs in our respective countries to give a lead in this direction. There is a vast reserve of goodwill among our peoples, and enduring links of history and culture, on which we can draw. We need to establish a firm relationship of trust, setting aside the difficulties that have impeded amity and cooperation. We are committed to this goal and I am confident you are too.

My Government stands ready to work together with your Government, to address all issues of mutual concern. The bilateral approaches and agreements which have been devised earlier can guide us in our future exchanges on all matters, including those on which we might have differing perceptions. I believe that our efforts should be directed towards pulling down the barriers which make people to people interaction difficult. We need to encourage the promotion of trade, economic and cultural contacts. These are the sure foundations on which the relationship between our countries can flourish.

We would like to see the two countries join in a wide-ranging and comprehensive dialogue. I suggest that as a step in this direction we could revive the Foreign Secretary-level dialogue so that these thoughts and ideas could be developed further.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurance of my highest consideration.

1376. Letter from External Affairs Minister Inder Kumar Gujral to Pakistan Foreign Minister Assef Ahmad Ali.

New Delhi, June 9, 1996.

Excellency,

I am thankful to you for your warm message of felicitations on my assuming office as Minister of External Affairs of India. I would also like to thank you for the very kind sentiments you have expressed about me. I continue to value my personal friendship with you.

It would be our constant endeavour to implement the desire of the people and Government of India to establish a relationship based on friendship and cooperation between our two countries. I believe these objectives are shared by you, and I am gratified that you are as committed as I am to transform the relationship between our countries in a positive direction.

I fully agree with your view that our two Ministries should take the lead in this endeavour. I feel that our officials should meet soon and engage themselves in the task of addressing our bilateral issues, including those in which we may not see eye to eye. The resolution of these issues will contribute substantially to improving our ties.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

Islamabad, August 13, 1996.

The ministerial meeting of the OIC Contact Group on Kashmir, reaffirming all OIC summit and ministerial resolutions on the Jammu and Kashmir dispute as well as the Special Declaration adopted by the seventh Islamic Summit Conference in Casablanca;

Having reviewed the deteriorating situation in Kashmir* and its implications for regional peace and security;

Concerned over the staging of fraudulent elections for the Lok Sabha in Kashmir, an outrage that was exposed and denounced by International media and human rights organizations;

Deeply concerned over announcement by the Indian Government of its intention to hold State Assembly elections in Kashmir in September 1996 and noting that the All Parties Hurriyet Conference has, in its capacity as true representative of the Kashmiri people, rejected the holding of Sham elections and the imposition under duress of the so-called political process in Kashmir.

Deeply alarmed by the subsequent sharp intensification of Indian repression of the Kashmiri people, especially the induction of additional troops, the use of renegades and mercenaries, armed, financed and trained by India for terrorizing and intimidating the Kashmiri people and their true representatives;

Taking note of the strong condemnation by Pakistan and the true representatives of the Kashmiri people, including the leadership of the All Parties Hurriyet Conference, of the deplorable act of hostage taking by Al-Faran;

Noting the memorandum submitted by the true representatives of Jammu and Kashmir, which inter alia, asserts that the people of Jammu and Kashmir will not accept the imposition of a fraudulent political process in Kashmir and that the so-called political process or elections could not be a substitute for a plebiscite as is affirmed in the Security Council Resolutions No.91(1951) and 122 (1957);

* The OIC Contact Group meeting which was held in Islamabad was addressed by Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto who said: “Not far from here would you hear the thunder of Indian guns as they violate the Line of Control despite the presence of UN Military Observers, targeting innocent civilians in Azad Kashmir.” “To divert attention from the Kashmiri freedom struggle a series of terrorist attacks” Ms. Bhutto said, “were launched against Pakistan earlier this year. These took the form of a series of bomb blasts and the killing of innocent civilians particularly in the Punjab Province of Pakistan. … This august assembly of the OIC Foreign Ministers”, she said “bears testimony that the world and all peace-loving countries value human rights and fundamental freedom, reject such actions and stand steadfast in solidarity with the Kashmiris.”
Convinced that the holding of fraudulent elections would further exacerbate the sufferings of the Kashmiri people and would seriously detract from efforts to seeking a just and peaceful solution to the Jammu and Kashmir dispute;

Welcoming the offer of the Prime Minister of Pakistan to have a substantive and meaningful dialogue with India with a view to finding a peaceful solution to the Jammu and Kashmir dispute;

Regretting that the Government of India has vitiated the atmosphere for the commencement of a meaningful dialogue with Pakistan for seeking a peaceful solution to the Kashmir dispute.

Recalling the relevant UN resolutions on Jammu and Kashmir which remain unimplemented reaffirming its solidarity with the suffering people of Kashmir.

Affirmation By Kashmiris

1) Reaffirms the right of the people of Jammu and Kashmir to self-determination in accordance with the relevant UN resolutions.

2) Calls for a peaceful settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir issue in accordance with the relevant UN resolutions and as agreed upon in the Simla Agreement.

3) Rejects India’s efforts to maintain its illegal occupation of Kashmir through the holding of sham elections and by initiating a fraudulent political process.

4) Reaffirms that any political process/elections held under foreign occupation cannot be a substitute to the exercise of the right of self-determination of people of Kashmir as is provided in the relevant Security Council resolutions.

5) Condemns the continued massive violations of human rights of the Kashmiri people and calls for respect of human rights.

6) Appeals for the immediate and safe release of all the hostages by Al-Faran.

7) Calls upon the Government of India to respect the human rights of the Kashmiri people, rescind forthwith all repressive measures and endeavour to improve the situation in Kashmir.

Pakistan Efforts Endorsed

8) Endorses the ongoing efforts of the Government of Pakistan to seek a peaceful solution to the Kashmir issue through all possible means including substantive bilateral talks with India.
9) Decides that the Contact Group meet at the United Nations in September 1996 to review the developments in Kashmir and to make recommendations to the meeting of the OIC Foreign Ministers.

10) Recommends that the OIC annual coordination meeting of Foreign Ministers in New York review the situation in Jammu and Kashmir with a view to adopting further appropriate measures.

11) Requests the Chairman to transmit this Declaration to the President of the Security Council and the UN Secretary-General for circulation as an official document of the Security Council under the item “Indo-Pak Question” and affirms that this item “Indo-Pak question” and affirms that this item be retained on the agenda of the Security Council and calls for swift implementation of UN resolutions on Jammu and Kashmir.

12) Requests the Secretary-General to bring the contents of the Declaration to the attention of the government of India, all OIC member-states, and take other appropriate steps for its widest possible dissemination.

1378. Reaction of Pakistan to the deletion of Kashmir issue from the Security Council Agenda.

Islamabad, August 22, 1996.

Taking “strong cognizance” of the deletion of the Kashmir dispute from the UN Security Council agenda, Pakistan expressed on August 22 optimism that the issue would be re-inserted as the Council had agreed to review its decision.

The Kashmir dispute, listed as an India-Pakistan question,” was deleted from the UN agenda last month along with 50 other items.

“Hopefully, no damage would be done to the Kashmir cause with the recent Security Council decision,” the Foreign Office spokesman said at the weekly news briefing on August 22, “Pakistan made strong and quick demarches when it came to know about the decision.”

He said Pakistan’s understanding was that if a certain item was deleted from the Security Council agenda, it could regain its position on it for one year if the concerned country objected to the deletion in the first place.

“Pakistan has made it clear to the Council that its decision will have serious repercussions on the future role of the Security Council,” he said.
The spokesman said that after the strong reaction from Pakistan and many Arab and African countries, the issue would regain its place on the Security Council agenda for at least one year, and hoped that it would be restored permanently on it.

He said Pakistan's view was shared by a large number of countries. Islamabad's optimism, he said, had substantive basis as it was not consulted when the deletion took place. "Kashmir has been a live issue since its inception, and cannot be termed as dead wood," he said.

The spokesman said the OIC Contact Group on Kashmir would also approach the Security Council, asking it to retain the Kashmir question on its agenda. He said Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto had written letters to permanent members of the Security Council seeking their cooperation to restore the issue on the council's agenda.

The Security Council decision, he said, was flawed and procedurally wrong. It was taken at a closed-door meeting and without consulting the concerned country. "The merits and demerits of the decision were not debated. The reasons for the deletion are frivolous. Apparently it was done because of the overcrowding of the agenda."

He did not agree with a reporter that the dropping of the Kashmir issue was a debacle for Pakistan's foreign policy. "We cannot assign the blame on anyone. When we learnt about the deletion, we vigorously reacted. It is not the time to find faults with anyone. We have no complaints against anybody, and Pakistan's Permanent Mission in New York only carries out instructions of the Foreign Office," he replied to repeated questions directed at the poor performance of the mission.
Note of the Ministry of External Affairs to the Pakistan High Commission in India regarding Pakistan’s continental Shelf.

New Delhi, November 27, 1996.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India presents its compliments to the High Commission for the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, New Delhi and has the honour to state that the attention of the Government of India has been drawn to press reports regarding Pakistan’s notification specifying baselines to measure Pakistan’s territorial waters, the contiguous zone, the EEZ and Continental Shelf in the Arabian Sea. While the Government of India reserves its right to seek suitable revision of the baselines as notified by Pakistan in so far as they impinge upon India’s sovereign jurisdiction, the Government of India unequivocally rejects as unacceptable the coordinate point (K) 23°33′.90 N…88°07′.80 E referred to in the notification as it encroaches upon the territorial waters of India which are within its sovereign jurisdiction.

2. The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, New Delhi the assurances of its highest consideration.

The High Commission For The Islamic Republic of Pakistan
New Delhi.
Statement by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on the visit of Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan.

New Delhi, December 18, 1996.

Sahabzada Yaqub-Khan, Foreign Minister of Pakistan who is in Delhi to participate in the SAARC Ministerial Meeting paid a courtesy call today on Shri I. K. Gujral, External Affairs Minister. Both Ministers discussed the progress achieved by SAARC and expressed satisfaction in this regard. External Affairs Minister felt the SAPTA process should be expedited in the interest of the entire region. External Affairs Minister further said that it was necessary to strengthen the SAARC Secretariat, External Affairs Minister expressed appreciation at the positive role being played by the SAARC Secretary General. It was felt that the SAARC Secretariat should be strengthened by inducting experts especially in the field of economic activity.

External Affairs Minister urged that both countries should work towards the urgent repatriation of fishermen, children and civilian prisoners in each other’s custody on a humanitarian basis. Pakistan Foreign Minister agreed and mentioned that data should be exchanged by both sides. It was felt that officials concerned meet as soon as possible to address this issue, preferably within a month.

Foreign Minister Yaqub-Khan broached the possibility of working towards Indo-Pak talks. External Affairs Minister referred to the letter sent by Prime Minister H.D. Deve Gowda to the former Prime Minister of Pakistan suggesting that the Foreign Secretary level dialogue between the two countries be revived. External Affairs Minister stressed that India stood committed to the letter and awaited a response from Pakistan.

External Affairs Minister emphasized that India was keen on increasing people to people contact and had unilaterally taken a number of steps in this direction. In this context, the visa regime should be relaxed and police restrictions minimized. External Affairs Minister said that it was necessary to put an end to the barbarous conduct in the treatment of the personnel in our Mission in Islamabad. In this context, it was agreed that the Code of Conduct governing behavior towards each other’s Mission personnel should be strictly observed.

The meeting was held in a warm and cordial atmosphere.
Indian Minister for External Affairs Inder Kumar Gujral has suggested that confidence-measures between Pakistan and India should be invigorated.

Mr. Gujral was being interviewed by Mr. Imtiaz Gul for the weekly. Mr. Gul asked the Indian Minister: India has made considerable headway in its confidence-building measures (CBMs) with China. Could that be replicated in the Indo-Pak context?

Mr. Gujral replied: Certainly. There should be confidence building measures (CBMs) between India and Pakistan. I had sent a draft to Islamabad when I was a minister in 1990. That draft is still alive and we would always welcome any talks based on it.

Other questions and answers of the interview are:

Q: Was your meeting with Sahabazada Yaqoob Khan at the SAARC ministerial conference significant?
A: Yes, he discussed the issue and I told him that we were awaiting a reply to Prime Minister Deve Gowda’s letter which he wrote to the then Prime Minister Benezir Bhutto. Whether the interim Government responds to it or leaves it to the next elected government I don’t know, but whenever Islamabad deems it proper the ball can be set rolling.

Q: What happens after the reply?
A: In the letter we had suggested secretary-level talks at the next step, but of course it all depends on the response. Hope for Break Through

Q: Do you think talks will matter now that both countries remain wedded to their respective stands on Kashmir?
A: Yes, and it’s realistic to hope for a breakthrough. But we have to keep talking. After all we are neighbours and have a common future. Pre-conditions for talks never bring parties to the negotiating table. That’s why we have said in the letter that we should start talking without any pre-conditionalties.

Q: But given your position, what can you discuss on Kashmir?
A: We cannot discuss Kashmir. It is an integral part of India. But if Pakistan wants to discuss the issue, we are ready to talk about it.
Q: You say Kashmir is India’s integral part. Pakistan disputes that claim. How can the two sides hold meaningful talks on the dispute in such conditions?

A: That would only lead to a continuation of the stalemate. We want to move forward, but unconditionally. We had a similar stalemate in our talks with China, but with the talks things started moving. In fact, if Press statements are to be believed, the Chinese President, during his visit to Pakistan, told his friends there to follow the Sino-Indian model.

Q: New Delhi is cozying up to both Beijing and Tel Aviv. Don’t you think that it would justifiably cause concern in Islamabad?

A: Bilateral relations should be no one’s business. China is a neighbor with which we have had certain differences for the past 30 to 35 years. Both India and China are focusing on how to avoid unintended hostilities on the line of control. This is a mutual problem and should pose no threat to a third country. It’s the same with Israel.

Q: What led India to change its China policy?

A: There’s been no sudden change. We have been talking since 1976 and we think we have evolved a model that makes us discuss contentious issues and simultaneously move in other directions. Our trade has improved, our visits have taken a positive turn, and the result is more tranquil circumstances, which in turn make us take a more positive attitude towards the contentious issues.

Q: Did Kashmir come up during President Jiang’s visit to India?

A: No Kashmir has nothing to do with China.

Q: Given the situation in Kashmir, how long can India afford to continue its heavy military presence there?

A: The situation in Kashmir has improved and the militants have been pushed back. We have had elections there and the people have elected their representatives. The one point the Kashmir Government and New Delhi are to discuss is the issue of greater autonomy for Kashmir. For that we will shortly begin the process. We do hope that all those who are encouraging terrorism will realize their folly.

Q: You still believe terrorism is sponsored from across the border?

A: It’s not a question of belief. It is a fact.

Q: But Islamabad believes the elections in the Valley were a farce?
A: If people don’t want to see the truth, we can’t do anything. It’s a fact that the elections were fair and the people accepted them.

Bilateral Trade

Q: What do you think about bilateral trade between the two countries. Some businessmen in Pakistan think that India will swamp the Pakistani Market with its goods. What could you do to allay such fears?

A: That’s not our responsibility. That’s up to Islamabad. It is free to do what it believes suits Pakistan and the Pakistani businessmen. We cannot even ask Islamabad to trade with us. If one can buy sugar at a competitive price in India they should buy it. The reverse is equally true.

If purchasing sugar from India affects someone in Pakistan they should not purchase it. That’s the essence of trade. For example, we don’t have rock salt. If we import it from Pakistan, it will only be in our interest. We will not be doing any favour to anyone. In fact, goods worth Rs.3 billion are annually exported to Pakistan from India via Dubai and Hong Kong. Why is it so? There is no compulsion. So if the businesses in Pakistan feel that import of certain items is against their interests, they should adopt protective measures against it. After all, an economic relationship is based on mutual interest. If importers in Pakistan think that some Indian raw materials will be cheaper compared to, let’s say, Australia, they should import them. It is Pakistan’s basic right to formulate its own economic policy. We do not have any right to demand or pressurize them on this account.

Q: Islamabad apprehends that India is attempting to isolate it by promoting the idea of sub-regional cooperation?

A: If Pakistan does not want to open trade with us, it is isolating itself. On the one hand you say you can’t buy because you fear it might harm domestic production and on the other hand you are concerned about being isolated. We are discussing sub-regional cooperation because Nepal, Bhutan, Bangladesh and India consider it mutually beneficial. Pakistan has nothing to do with it as it has no common borders with these nations. India does not demand that these countries should not trade with Pakistan. That is their sovereign right.

Kashmir is not core issue

Q: Pakistan thinks Kashmir is the core issue with India.

A: I do not think so. The core issue is wisdom. When wisdom dawned on us, we may realize that we have achieved nothing in 50 years by disputing Kashmir.
Q: What initiatives have you taken to overcome existing misgivings and misunderstandings?

A: In the recent SAARC summit all the countries, except Pakistan, expressed their desire for sub-regional cooperation. That was a positive reaction to India's initiative. We are unilaterally reducing all our duties for Bangladesh by 50 per cent. We have removed all our non-tariff barriers from January 1. For Nepal and Bhutan, we have already done it and we are examining our policy for Sri Lanka. We are doing this to remove the impression that India is a big neighbour and may exploits that position.

GAS Pipeline From IRAN

Q: What has become of the gas pipeline project from Iran?

A: It's yet to be decided. But I will prefer cooperation on such projects. About 40 percent of natural gas is located in Central Asia and in Iran. We want it and so do all the SAARC countries. If the pipeline from Iran is laid through Pakistan, it will only bring more taxes to Pakistan. If we cooperate on this project both Pakistan and India will benefit from it.

Q: Do you think the project could work as a deterrent to conflicts between the two countries?

A: Economic cooperation anywhere in the world is a major deterrent against war because vested interest grows through such cooperation.

Q: What did you discuss with the Israeli President?

A: We have old contacts with Israel. Their consulate in Bombay was established soon after independence. Bilateral trade is on the rise and we feel that Israel is a good market for India. Already, they buy a lot of goods from us. Similarly, they have many technologies which can benefit India, particularly in the agricultural sector. They have good electronics technology, which we can share with them. This should be of no concern to anyone. I must underline — our objective is economic cooperation, be it Israel or Pakistan.

Track II Talks

Q: What is the significance of the Track II dialogue in the Indo-Pak context?

A: Despite having fought three wars, people on both sides have a certain emotional rapport. It is only right that the people-to-people contacts should increase. In this regard India has taken some unilateral steps. For instance, we have relaxed our visa policy for Pakistan. We would like to issue more visas, but we do not have enough staff at the High Commission in Islamabad. Still, we are issuing 300 visas per day in fact, I have asked Yaqub Khan to allow us to reopen our consulate in Karachi so that we can at least double the number of visas. Secondly, in the last five to six months no provocative statement has been issued from our side. The aim is to establish ties and find areas of mutual interests. We must understand that we are two sovereign nations. India has a vested interest in Pakistan’s unity, integrity and durability.

No Backtracking

Q: Would you call yourself an optimist?

A: I have always lived with optimism. If you had asked me a year ago whether we would be able to settle our water dispute with Dhaka or talk out our differences with Nepal, I would have been at a loss. But, today, we have achieved that. I think that has been possible also because of my involvement with Track II. Now, being a part of Track I, I feel morally bound to implement whatever I pleaded as an intellectual during several rounds of non-official dialogue between the two countries. I can’t backtrack.

1382. Response by Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to the Indian Prime Minister's proposal for talks between India and Pakistan.

Islamabad, February 27, 1997.

Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif proposed on February 27 foreign secretary-level talks between India and Pakistan next month to pave the way for an early summit meeting.

Mr. Nawaz made the proposal in reply to a letter from his Indian counterpart, Mr. Deve Gowda, congratulating him on his assumption of office following the sweeping election victory of his party.

However, Mr. Nawaz underlined that the talks would have to tackle the thorny issue of Kashmir. He said he hoped Mr. Gowda would agree with him that “without some progress on the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir, it will be difficult to initiate cooperation in economic and cultural fields.”

He said that foreign secretaries of the two countries should hold talks before the end of March to “prepare ground for meaningful discussion at the prime Ministerial level as early as possible.”
“As we approach the 50th anniversary of our independence, there is a historic opportunity for the political leadership of both countries to deal with all outstanding disputes which bedevil our relations,” he said.

Pakistan’s new Foreign Minister, Mr. Gohar Ayub Khan, had said on February 26 that the two countries should work together to discourage an arms race in the subcontinent.

Mr. Nawaz said: “For too long South Asia has remained mired in hostilities and conflicts, dissipating its precious resources,” adding that he was deeply conscious of the need to free the region of tensions and conflicts “so that our people can participate on equal terms in the global march towards progress and prosperity.”

In this context, he said, he was encouraged by his Indian counterpart’s willingness for wide-ranging and comprehensive talks on all issues of mutual concern.

Mr. Nawaz said, “I am grateful for the kind of sentiments you have expressed in your message of felicitation on my assumption of office of the Prime Minister of Pakistan.”

Talking to Indian newspaper Tribune in Islamabad, Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif said that improved ties with India were only possible if a referendum was held in the disputed territory of Kashmir.

He said: “We surely want good relations with India and promotion of trade on a bilateral basis. All this is only possible, however, when the Kashmir issue is resolved as per the UN resolutions.”

Mr. Nawaz said the “resolution of the Kashmir issue….will contribute significantly to the resolution of the outstanding matters between our countries,” adding that it would remove “decades of misunderstanding and mistrust.”

1382A. Letter from External Affairs Minister Inder Kumar Gujral to Pakistan Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub Khan.

New Delhi, March 1, 1997

Excellency,

I have great pleasure in extending warm greetings and felicitations on your appointment as Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan. I look forward to working with Your Excellency in developing a relationship of trust, friendship and cooperation between our two countries. Prime Minister Shri H. D. Deve Gowda has conveyed in his message to H.E. Prime Minister Mian Nawaz Sharif Sahib our readiness to resume dialogue at an appropriate level and on all issues of mutual concern. We were glad to receive the reply of the 27th of February in which it is suggested that the two Foreign Secretaries may meet in the month of March. We agree to this suggestion and I am asking my officials to contact their counterparts to establish dates for the meeting.

I believe that we have a real opportunity to bring a new spirit into our relations and to create an environment for cooperation. I hope to meet Your Excellency shortly in New Delhi during the NAM Foreign Ministers’ Conference when we will have occasion to consider how we can advance along this path.

1383. Suo Moto Statement by External Affairs Minister I. K. Gujral on Improved People-to-People contacts with Pakistan in both Houses of Parliament.

New Delhi, March 20, 1997.

As honourable Members are aware, Indo-Pakistan official level talks at Foreign Secretary level are due to be held from March 28 to 31 in New Delhi. Talks at a higher level are also expected thereafter. We approach these talks in a positive and constructive spirit.

2. As honourable Members would have noticed, Pakistan has announced its decision to release 38 Indian children who have been under detention in Pakistan since 1994. We appreciate this gesture. These children were travelling on Indian fishing vessels which were apprehended by Pakistani authorities over two years ago. We have made many representations on their behalf and I had raised the issue with Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yakub Khan when I met him on December 18, 1996 in New Delhi. It is a matter of satisfaction that Pakistan has now responded positively, and steps have already been initiated by us to ensure that the children are brought from Pakistan to India at the earliest. May I also convey our deep gratitude to Maulana Abdul Sattar Edhi who has taken good care of them for over a year and a half while they were lodged in the Edhi Centre in Karachi?

3. As honourable Members are aware, travel by Pakistani nationals to India, under a reciprocal arrangement with Pakistan, is permitted only on the basis of visitors visa. These visas are meant essentially for visits to meet close relations. This is obviously very restrictive. In keeping with our policy to promote people-to-people relations, we have decided to permit Pakistani tourists to visit India in groups. This, as honourable Members will agree, is a major new unilateral step in the right direction. In addition, we have also decided to ease travel by Pakistani businessmen to India. They will now be eligible to one year multi-entry visa and, if travelling by air, they can exit and enter either through Mumbai or Delhi. The other measures we will implement are:

(i) Young and elderly Pakistani visitors will be exempt from police reporting. This will give them relief from what can be a troublesome requirement.

(ii) Visa fees for senior Pakistani citizens will be waived.

(iii) The number of religious shrines in India which can be visited by Pakistani pilgrims will be increased.

(iv) Expansion of cultural contacts between the two countries will be encouraged through exchanges of cultural groups, artistes, poets and writers. Visits by students and journalists will also be encouraged. All these categories will be exempt from visa fees.

(v) Free flow of books and periodicals establishes better appreciation of each other. Therefore, India will unilaterally permit their import in keeping with our general policies.

4. The measures that I announced today are designed to add to the goodwill between the peoples of the two countries. They are an emblem of our earnest desire to establish and maintain relations of friendship and cooperation with our neighbour Pakistan*. I am confident that this gesture on our part will have the support of Hon'ble Members.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

* As a prelude to the talks Pakistan had on March 19 said that it was going for talks with India in a sincere, open frame of mind and expected New Delhi to reciprocate in the same spirit. “We have always been desirous of cooperative, tension free and good neighbourly relations with India, and feel this is an historic opportunity to make a beginning towards this end.” Foreign Office spokesman Khalid Saleem had said answering questions from reporters at a special briefing in Islamabad.

But he added a note of gruffness when he stated in categorical terms that the change of government in Pakistan had not brought any change in Islamabad’s stand on the Kashmir issue. He said the talks “would be held on all outstanding matters, including the core issue of Kashmir, and the situation in the Valley will also come up for discussion. We do not expect an agreement at this time.” “I would not say yes”, he said when asked whether Pakistan felt any substantial reduction in India atrocities in Kashmir was possible. “We hope the beginning of the discussions will lead to positive developments in this regard.”

Asked about reports from India about the forthcoming dialogue, the spokesman said Pakistan regretted that things were said and done which could not contribute to creating a propitious atmosphere for the talks. “We, on our part, are very careful about making any statement and do not want to conduct diplomacy through the Press.” He told a reporter that he was neither optimistic nor pessimistic about the outcome of the talks. He said Pakistan has agreed to hold talks to establish its good intentions. “It was an expression of good intention when Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif said the Kashmir problem will be solved during his tenure.” Mr. Saleem said there was no compulsion on Pakistan to resume talks with India. “It is the decision of the government of Pakistan.” Referring to Mr. Nawaz’s letter to Indian Prime Minister Deve Gowda, Mr. Saleem said Pakistan wanted some progress on the Kashmir issue as a prerequisite for initiating talks on other matters. “The Prime Minister’s letter is very clear in this respect.” He said Islamabad welcomed good offices of friendly countries and international organizations for the Gowda’s public statement claiming Kashmir to be the integral part of India, the spokesman said: “We do not take these on their face value. Statements of Mr Gowda and his External Affairs Minister sometimes do not correspond with each other. If you read intentions in public statements, then you can never start negotiations, which are a way for settling issues.”

Bismillah Ar Rahman Ar Rahim

We, the Sovereigns, Heads of the States and Governments of the Members States of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, gathered in Islamabad, Islamic Republic of Pakistan for the Extraordinary Session of the Islamic Summit Conference on 14 Dhul Q’adah 1417H (23 March, 1997), Deeply concerned over the situation in Jammu and Kashmir, especially the suffering of the Kashmiri people and the consequent tensions in the region.

Reaffirming all OIC Summit and Ministerial resolutions on the Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

Declare:

1. Our commitment to promote a just and peaceful solution to the Jammu and Kashmir dispute in accordance with the United Nations resolutions;
2. Our support to the fundamental human rights of the Kashmiri people including their right of self-determination;
3. Our condemnation of the oppression and massive violations of the human rights of the Kashmiri people;
4. Our support for the efforts of the Government of Pakistan to resolve through a substantive and meaningful dialogue and Jammu and Kashmir dispute which is the basic cause of the tensions between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, March 31, 1997.

Pursuant to the exchange of messages between the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan, the Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India, His Excellency Mr. Shamshad Ahmad and His Excellency Shri Salman Haidar, met in New Delhi from 28 to 31 March, 1997.

2. During his stay in New Delhi, the Pakistan Foreign Secretary was received by the Prime Minister of India His Excellency Shri H.D. Deve Gowda. The Foreign Secretary of Pakistan also called on the Minister of External Affairs Shri I.K. Gujral.

3. The two Foreign Secretaries discussed all outstanding issues of concern to both sides in a frank, cordial and constructive manner.

4. The Foreign Secretaries decided to continue their discussions in Islamabad* on dates to be mutually decided.

New Delhi
31.3.1997

* While the talks were being held there was a political crisis in New Delhi on March 30, when the Congress (I) Party supporting the Government of Deve Gowda withdrew its support and the fall of the United Front Government appeared imminent. The talks however, continued between the two delegations until the 31st March. The message from the joint communiqué was clear that while there was no agreement on basic issues the breakdown of talks was averted, with the promise to continue with the talks in the next round. The communiqué made no mention of the Kashmir issue while there was enough evidence from the Pakistan side that it was discussed during the three-day talks. The Indian Foreign Secretary Salman Haider made a guarded statement on whether the Kashmir issue was discussed when he said: “We will continue our discussions but right now we cannot anticipate what we will do in the future. We will meet again and when we do so, you can ask that question.” He told reporters that the meeting had given a better understanding of each other’s position over particular issues, including that of Kashmir. “We believe we are much better equipped to meet”, he said. “There was a good deal of common ground that was identified. We looked at modalities and structures for future talks,” he said. He maintained that the talks had not been disrupted by India’s internal turmoil. “I must say that the dynamics of our discussions continued. We had got down to looking at issues in a detailed way and that continued despite political developments of March 30,” said Mr. Haider.

Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad said: “For us, it is important that we have started talking to each other. We have discussed intensely all issues and that very fact that these talks will continue is itself a positive development.” The Pakistan Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub Khan said in Islamabad that the political crisis in New Delhi would not affect the talks between Islamabad and New Delhi. He said India’s crisis might cause some setback in the talks but the crisis had nothing to do with the Indo - Pakistan talks. On return to Lahore, Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad stressed on March 31 that without progress on the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir, meaningful cooperation in the economic and cultural fields would be difficult. He said that “we emphasized that centrality of the J & K dispute in the context of Pakistan – India relations”.

Islamabad, April 2, 1997.

The Pakistan Foreign Office affirmed on April 2 its faith in the “positive” outcome of the recent meeting in New Delhi between the foreign secretaries of Pakistan and India and expressed the hope that their future rounds of talks will take forward the negotiation process which aims at preparing ground for talks between the Prime Minister of the two countries on all outstanding issues including Kashmir.

Briefing newsmen on the resumed talks at the secretary-level after a break of more than three years the Foreign Office spokesman denied that there was a breakdown in New Delhi talks and said that the two foreign secretaries might meet again even before the end of the month. He explained that Pakistan expected to make a move on all outstanding issues, and added, it was not disappointed in its immediate objective.

Apart from covering almost the entire gamut of the outstanding issues between the two countries, Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad brought to the notice of the Indian side the need for cessation of repression against the Kashmiris.

The spokesman said that as of now Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub, who was invited by Indian External Affairs minister I. K. Gujral for a meeting after the Non-Aligned Ministerial meeting next week in New Delhi, would hold talks there which would, however, not be part of the current secretary-level meetings. Similarly, the likely meeting of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif with his Indian counterpart in May at the sidelines of the SAARC summit in the Maldives capital would be different from the proposed meeting between the two to discuss substantive issues.

Pakistan would be willing to talk to any government which might be in office in Delhi, the spokesman said when asked whether Islamabad would continue the official-level talks even if the current political situation led to a change in the government.

Asked about the prospects to the secretaries talk, he said it was hoped that there would be forward movement enough at least to agree on an agenda and a mechanism for addressing mutual problems.

The spokesman continued: “We feel that the discussions in Delhi and the atmosphere there (during the talks) give us the hope that the negotiation can be continued in future and in the light of this the Foreign Ministers’ meeting also will be a part of that forward movement”. He refuted the suggestion that talks at the foreign secretary-level were meaningless.
The spokesman recalled the text of the joint statement and pointed out that the Delhi talks had clarified the issues, which was a positive development and gave opportunity for better understanding of each other’s point of views.

1387. Press Conference of Pakistan Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub Khan after attending the Non-aligned Foreign Ministers Meeting in New Delhi.

Karachi, April 9, 1997.

Mr. Gohar Ayub Khan told his press conference on return from New Delhi, where he attended the NAM foreign ministers’ meeting, that the UN Secretary General Kofi Annan had invited Pakistan and Indian Foreign Ministers to New York to hold bilateral talks on Kashmir and other outstanding issues between the two countries. The talks are to be held on the occasion of the UN General Assembly session. He said it would be his endeavour to promote step by step relations without overplaying the talks in the media because this creates many misunderstandings. Sometimes things are misrepresented. He said: “We will keep the media informed about the developments taking place but our policy will be to go step by step under a quiet diplomacy.” He recalled what he said in New Delhi that if India wished to give the signal for its seriousness in resolving the issues, it should reduce its seven lakh army-men in Kashmir and stop human rights violations and extra judicial killings there. India should stop the carnage of Muslims in villages and sending them to jails. He said he also held two hours of encouraging talks with the Hurriyat Conference leaders and had a briefing from them about the situation in Kashmir. He said Hurriyat Conference wanted participation in negotiations. But he told them that the talks were still in an initial stage and the agenda had not yet been finalized. He said that his contact with them was in that very regard and would continue.

Asked whether the opening of consulates in Bombay and Karachi came up under discussion with Mr. Gujral, Mr. Gohar said that although this issue did not come up for discussion directly, a delegation of Muslims in New Delhi and Jama Masjid Imam met him and told him that the Muslims were genuinely faced with problem in obtaining visa from Pakistan High Commission, particularly when they wanted to come to Pakistan in case of death or marriages. He said he was personally examining this and would also get this examined by the interior ministry and try to see that the problems faced by Indian Muslims were overcome. He conceded that mostly Muslims from India come to Pakistan to meet their relatives and sometimes a thousand people are seen lining up outside the Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi.

Asked about the withdrawal of forces from Siachen, Mr. Gohar said his statement was misreported. He said he had stated that Pakistan can consider the issue but any such withdrawal will be linked with the Kashmir issue. He said India had earlier agreed to withdraw troops from Siachen but when its officers went back they could not convince their government. He categorically stated: “We are taking up no issue in isolation.”

Asked whether there was any talk on trade, he said that trade did come up during discussions because India is laying more emphasis on trade. He said: “We do not have a level playing field as regards trade with India. Our import restrictions are on about 26 items whereas India has thousands of items having import restrictions and they enjoy protection.” He said if these restrictions are removed and a level field is available, then “we can have trade with India”. He said if India kept providing too much protection to its industries and products, it would go against Pakistani industries and business and this would not make for a level playing field.

Regarding trade expansion he pointed out that officially quantum of Pakistan’s trade with India was about $ 100 million but India says it is having an indirect trade of about $ one billion through Dubai and Singapore and wants regularization of the same. But for this, India will have to remove its restrictions. He said before leaving for New Delhi, he had written to the Commerce Ministry to let him know about Pakistan’s exportable surplus along with the countries to which these items are being exported and their quantity so that targets could be given to Pakistan’s High Commissions and embassies for an annual increase of 10 to 15 percent of Pakistan’s exportable items. But it is not as much as Pakistan could balance it with India. However, he said Pakistan is always in favour of trade with India.

To a question, the Foreign Minister said there is a feeling among the people in India and Pakistan that “we should have better relations and that was why there was not much reaction in India and here in Pakistan against talks between the two countries”.

1388. Extract from the Address of Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to the National Defence College.

Rawalpindi, April 15, 1997.

In the rapidly transforming world of today there is increasing focus on interstate relations on promoting economic cooperation through regional efforts. Peace and stability are fundamental to our regional cooperative endeavour like ECO and SAARC and to the creation of a climate which would enable us to concentrate our energies on nation building process. Unfortunately tensions are still prevalent in South Asia, because of longstanding disputes.

One such dispute relates to the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir whose people are waging a valiant struggle to achieve their right to self-determination. Pakistan wants an end to this bitter tragedy. We want a just political settlement, which is in accordance with the commitments pledged by the international community, India and Pakistan to the Kashmiri people. An equitable and just settlement of the Kashmir dispute can guarantee peace in South Asia.

Today, Pakistani is united under a popular government. It has the ability to defend itself and to defer aggression. However, desirous of peace we have taken the initiative and proposed to the Indian Prime Minster resumption of the foreign secretary–level talks between the two countries. The first round of the resumed talks has already been held.

Given political will on both sides, there is no reason why all outstanding issues cannot be addressed meaningfully and resolved. We nurture no illusions and have no unrealistic expectations. We fully realize that there is no short cut to the process of normalization of relations with India. An integrated structured approach has to be pursued for cooperative and good neighbourly relations.

Pakistan, being an Islamic Republic attaches special significance to its ties with the Muslim states, particularly in the Middle East and the Gulf region with whom we share the objective of regional peace and security as well as reinforcement of bilateral cooperation in various domains.

Afghan Conflict

The Afghan nation is yearning for peace and is no longer interested in the senseless intra-Afghan conflict. They are keen to see an early restoration of peace and stability, to actively participate in the rehabilitation and reconstruction of their country. We have faith in the wisdom of the Afghan people.
They would not accept any solution imposed on them from outside. This has to emerge from the Afghans themselves. Pakistan has been supporting an intra-Afghan dialogue to evolve consensus on the establishment of a broad based government representing all ethnic groups in Afghanistan. Pakistan would continue to extend full support to the ongoing efforts of the UN and the OIC for peace and reconciliation in Afghanistan.

Ties With Russia

Russia remains an important world power with the traditional relationship with India and strong links as well as a military presence in the Central Asian states. Our basic objective is to work toward improving relations with Russia so that it moves to a more even-handed approach in its policy in South Asia.

With the USA we share many common objectives—elimination of the nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction, establishment of durable peace and stability in South Asia, a concerted campaign against the scourge of narcotics and a forceful defence of human rights. Our effort has been to remain engaged in a meaningful dialogue to reconcile our viewpoints, to find common ground and to place our relations on a more even keel. We attach great importance to our relations with the USA and the European Community and technological cooperation.

Relations with China

The Chinese President’s recent visit to Pakistan further cemented the bonds of time-tested friendship between Pakistan and China. Maximising meaningful political and economic relations with China will remain a cornerstone of Pakistan’s foreign policy.

The Asia Pacific Region is an area of expanding economic progress and opportunity. It is vital that we learn from Japan and the Asian Tigers and the newly industrialized countries of South East Asia and mould our economic policies to enable us to participate as an important economic force within this region.

Pakistan’s Security

I would also like to make some remarks about the security and disarmament issues. Pakistan remains committed to the goal of nuclear disarmament. Pakistan’s commitment in this regard is manifest from its efforts at regional level and its role in the multilateral arms control talks at the global level. However, the security environment is South Asia has become precarious because of series of escalatory steps taken by India.

India has consistently expanded its nuclear and ballistic missile programme while spurning all non-proliferation initiatives at the bilateral, regional and global levels.
India’s Missile Programme

Pakistan is seriously concerned at India’s nuclear and ballistic missile programme. We understand that India, besides having developed two versions of Prithvi missiles, namely SS-150 and SS-250, is developing a third long range version of the SS-350.

This is India’s arrogant response to our proposal for a zero missile regime in South Asia. This together with India’s unbridled pursuit of its nuclear ambitions poses immediate and direct threat to our security. We earnestly hope that the international community would take serious note of these developments and exert its influence for the removal of this threat from our region.

Pakistan cannot ignore the threat to its security. It must have the capability to deter aggression. It is for these reasons that Pakistan has made it clear that it will not unilaterally sign any treaty which is discriminatory. However, we are interested in participating in the Preparatory Commission of the CTBT Organisation in a constructive and meaningful way.

Pakistan is a signatory to the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC) and is in the process of completing its national preparation to enable it to meet its obligations under the Convention. We are concerned at the possibility of the CWC coming into force without the USA and Russia — the only two declared Chemical Weapons Possessor States — ratifying it. In such a situation, the Convention’s disarmament provisions would become meaningless and it will merely become a non-proliferation initiative.

Proliferation of N-Weapons

We share the concern about the possibility of the proliferation of nuclear weapons in our region. This concern arises primarily from India’s proven capability to produce nuclear weapons and its massive nuclear programme. We believe that regional non-proliferation is the most feasible and effective way to resolve the nuclear issue in South Asia. Pakistan has made a number of proposals for non-proliferation in South Asia, which did not evoke a positive response from India.

We have not given up hope for solving the interlinked issues of peace, security and disarmament in South Asia. In June 1991, I had proposed convening of a Five Nations’ Conference.

Subsequently, the proposal was revised to involve all permanent members of the Security Council as well as Germany and Japan. This multilateral conference could cover three critical areas.

(i) The resolution of the Kashmir dispute and other bilateral problems between India and Pakistan.
(ii) The promotion of conventional arms control and confidence building measures.

(iii) Measures to promote nuclear restraint and arrest the danger of a nuclear arms race in South Asia.

I am confident and optimistic about Pakistan’s future. Given political stability and economic restructuring, which has already been set in motion, we have a fair-chance to move into the 21st century with some measure of pride and dignity.

1389. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on the telephonic talk between Prime Minister Inder Kumar Gujral and Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif.

New Delhi, May 2, 1997.

Prime Minister I. K. Gujral spoke to his Pakistani counterpart Mian Nawaz Sharif on telephone late this evening. The primary purpose of Mr. Gujral’s initiative was to set up a direct line of communication with Mr. Sharif.

The conversation between the two Prime Ministers was very warm and cordial. They exchanged good wishes and recalled with pleasure their past meetings when neither of them had been in office. They said they looked forward to their forthcoming meeting in Male during the SAARC Summit. They agreed to continue to maintain direct contacts to ensure that all distance between them was removed*.

The conversation lasted for about 10 minutes.

* * * *

* Earlier on April 22 Nawaz Sharif had sent a message of felicitations to Mr. Gujral on his elevation as Prime Minister of India and suggesting that his elevation has stimulated hope for a determined effort by both the countries to carry forward the recently resumed dialogue. He said that his government was committed to a genuine search for peace and added: “The success of our efforts will naturally depend on the seriousness of purpose and political will with which the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir is addressed”. Mr. Sharif said: “we have been encouraged by your statements underlying your commitment to the improvement of relations between the two countries.” In his message of felicitations he had said: “It gives me great pleasure to congratulate you on your assumption of office of Prime Minister of India. It is a befitting tribute to your long distinguished record of public service both as a politician and a diplomat commanding great respect at home and abroad”.

1390. Report on the meeting between Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and Prime Minister Inder Kumar Gujral.

Male, May 12, 1997.

In their 90-minute functional meeting at Male on May 12 on the occasion of the SAARC Summit, Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and his Indian counterpart Inder Kumar Gujral agreed to set up joint working groups for resolution of all issues outstanding between the two countries during the past 50 years, establish a hotline between them, release hundreds of each other’s civilian prisoners, and hold the next round of secretary-level talks by the end of the next month.

After the meeting at Kurumba island of Maldives, both the Prime Ministers told newsmen during a five-minute chat that the talks were held in a friendly atmosphere. The first-ever meeting between the two virtually overshadowed the two-day SAARC summit as far as the international media attention was concerned.

“Talks are being held to cooperate with each other and resolve outstanding issues”, Mr. Nawaz told the waiting newsmen before the meeting.

During the brief chat with the media persons, Mr. Nawaz said the talks were very constructive and meaningful. “We agreed to talk more on outstanding issues which remain unresolved during the past 50 years. We have decided to establish joint working groups. We intend to continue talks. These occasions do not come every day. I have developed a personal rapport with the Indian Prime Minister. I like the man.” Mr. Gujral confirming said: “We had a very good, warm and friendly meeting. Both of us tried to reiterate prospects and desirability of goods relations.”

He added: “We agreed to set up a hot-line (to have constant contact). A methodology will be decided to release 600/700 civilian prisoners so that we can start with a clean slate. We agreed to identify various subjects for talks”

Foreign Secretary Shamshed Ahmad told newsmen that the two Prime Ministers have given specific guidelines to their foreign secretaries for the second round of talks to be held in Islamabad which “would be devoted to the evolution of a comprehensive mechanism for resolution of all outstanding issues, and, I emphasise including the Kashmir issue.”

“The two leaders have agreed that some measures should be taken, including release of civilian prisoners on both sides. The two Foreign Ministers had already agreed to release fishermen of each other detained in the two countries,” he said fielding a volley of question from Indian journalists.

The Pakistan Foreign Secretary added that the hot-line between the two Prime Ministers had existed but was not functional “Now they will have a direct contact; it does mean a lot. They will remain in constant touch”
Asked to explain the “comprehensive mechanism”, he said, “You have to wait. We may have a separate working group on Kashmir.” He made it clear that no high expectation of a major breakthrough should be attached to the second round of foreign secretary-level talks. “There are no quick fixes,” Mr. Shamshad Ahmad said.

Asked to comment on the “step-by-step approach” for resolution of the Kashmir issues as stated by Foreign Minister Gohar, he said, “I would call it an integrated approach.”

When Mr. Shamshad’s attention was drawn to Mr. Gujral’s reported remarks that Kashmir is not an issue, he said, “Nobody can deny its existence. It is the issue of the destiny of people of Kashmir. Both sides are talking about Kashmir. The inclusion of Kashmir in the list of unresolved issues is a recognition by India that it is an issue.”

“During the meeting, Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif strongly emphasized the human rights violations, concentration of army in Kashmir, and withdrawal of cases against the Kashmiri freedom fighters,” stated Mr. Shamshad.

When an Indian journalist pointed out that the proposal of joint working groups, on the pattern of India-China, was put forward by the Indian side during the last round of foreign secretary talks, Mr. Shamshad said it was immaterial which side took credit for it. “Let us not confuse the issue. India and China have a territorial dispute, while in Pakistan and India it is the question of the destiny of people.”

The Foreign Secretary said both Prime ministers expressed satisfaction that outcome of the first round of foreign secretary-level talks in which a good beginning of each other’s position was made. He said, “There are no prisoners of war detained in the two countries. The civilians who will be released are those who crossed over to the other country. The foreign secretaries will also discuss other measures to improve the situation between the two countries.”

* The next day, May 13 Nawaz Sharif told the Reuter that while he was satisfied with the face to face talks with Mr. Gujral, he was also confident that India would agree to discuss the future of divided Kashmir in bilateral talks and urged India to withdraw troops from the Himalayan region. “I think the situation has taken a good turn. We held talks on May 12 after a deadlock of four years. The talks were constructive, very meaningful and we have agreed to talk more”, he said. When asked by Reuter if he agreed with the assessment of Foreign Minister Gohar that “Indian troops have more or less gone berserk in Jammu and Kashmir”, Mr. Sharif said that “I did mention this point to the Indian Prime Minister. I told him that the Indian Government must consider withdrawing the troops or the paramilitary troops from Kashmir, and also at the same time pave the way for a dialogue between India and Pakistan”. Asked if one of the working group would be devoted to the Kashmir issue, he said: “Certainly, because Kashmir is the core issue and we have to address this issue very seriously.”
Mr. Shamshad told an Indian journalist that easing of visa restrictions by Pakistan was not a big issue. “We have discussed it today, and more discussion on it will be held during the Foreign Secretaries’ talks”.

He said in emergencies, Pakistan has always been issuing visas to Indian journalists to visit Pakistan. He said it is premature to open the Pakistani consulate in Bombay. Asked about grant of the most favoured nation status to India by Pakistan, he said there has to be a level-playing field for Pakistan.

1391. Press Statement issued by Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Islamabad, June 13, 1997

We have repeatedly drawn the attention of the international community, over the years, to the threat posed to peace and security in South Asia by India’s nuclear and ballistic missiles programmes and ambitions. At the same time, we have made unremitting efforts to avert such a threat in the region.

2. Since 1974, when Pakistan first proposed in the UN General Assembly the Establishment of a Nuclear Weapons Free Zone in South Asia, we have followed up with a number of initiatives to address, on an equitable and non-discriminatory basis, at the bilateral, regional and global level, the issue of non-proliferation in South Asia. Similarly we also proposed a zero missile regime in South Asia to avert the threat of a ballistic missile race in the region.

3. Regrettably, none of these proposals has evoked a positive response. The deployment of Prithvi missiles across our borders entails a qualitative change in the security environment of South Asia. We feel that our region can ill-afford a missile race. At the same time, we have to address our legitimate security concerns and will take all necessary measures to meet any threat.

4. The Prime Minister of Pakistan has addressed letters to the leaders of the five permanent members of the Security Council, drawing their attention to the serious degradation in the security environment of our region, resulting from the deployment of Prithvi missiles by India. He has reminded them of their special responsibility for the preservation of international peace and security and urged them to call upon India to exercise restraint. The Foreign Minister had also addressed a letter on the same subject to the US Secretary of State.
5. The deployment of the Prithvi missile is symptomatic of larger problem. The absence of pressure from the international community leads to the temptation among the countries with huge indigenous military capability to indulge in provocative actions against smaller neighbours.

6. We have pointed out to the United States that India appears to have been encouraged by the discriminatory American legislation against Pakistan that has resulted in serious military imbalance in the region. We believe that the United States should reconsider the implications of continued imposition of such laws.

7. Pakistan is committed to strive for the normalization of its relations with India. At the initiative of the Prime Minister of Pakistan, the stalemated Foreign Secretary level talks were resumed between the two countries earlier this year. We have entered into the dialogue with seriousness of purpose. We are making all efforts to sustain this process so that all outstanding issues between India and Pakistan including the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir are meaningfully addressed. Any escalatory action or provocation which vitiates the atmosphere must be avoided.

8. The next round of Foreign Secretary’s level talks scheduled to be held in Islamabad from 19 to 23 June 1997, will provide us with an opportunity to initiate a process of comprehensive and sustained dialogue with India on all outstanding issues between the two countries.

1. The Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India, Mr. Shamshad Ahmad and Shri Salman Haidar met in Islamabad on 19-23 June 1997.

2. During his stay in Islamabad, the Indian Foreign Secretary was received by the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of Pakistan. The Indian Foreign Secretary also called on the Foreign Minister Mr. Gohar Ayub Khan.

3. As decided at their meeting in New Delhi in March 1997 and as directed by their respective Prime Ministers, the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan continued their wide-ranging and comprehensive dialogue on all outstanding issues between the two countries with each side elaborating its respective position. The discussions were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere. It was also agreed that both sides would take all possible steps to prevent hostile propaganda and provocative actions against each other.

4. With the objective of promoting a friendly and harmonious relationship between Pakistan and India, the Foreign Secretaries have agreed as follows:-

(i) to address all outstanding issues of concern to both sides including, inter alia:
   (a) Peace and security, including CBMs
   (b) Jammu and Kashmir
   (c) Siachen
   (d) Wullar Barrage Project/Tulbul Navigation Project
   (e) Sir Creek
   (f) Terrorism and drug-trafficking
   (g) Economic and Commercial Cooperation
   (h) Promotion of friendly exchanges in various fields.

(ii) to set up a mechanism, including working groups at appropriate levels, to address all these issues in an integrated manner. The issues at (a) and (b) above will be dealt with at the level of Foreign Secretaries who will also coordinate and monitor the progress of work of all the working groups.

5. The Foreign Secretaries also had a preliminary exchange of views on the composition of the working groups and their methodology. It was decided to continue the consideration of this matter through diplomatic channels.

6. The next round of Foreign Secretary level talks will take place in New Delhi in September, 1997.

Clarification provided by Pakistan Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub that there was no Secret deal with India on Kashmir.

Islamabad, June 27, 1997.

Dispelling the impression that Pakistan has signed a secret deal with India or it is sending weak signals to New Delhi, Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub Khan told the Senate on June 27 that it is a big diplomatic achievement for Pakistan that the Jammu and Kashmir dispute has been placed on the agenda of talks between India and Pakistan for the first time.

Responding to an adjournment motion moved by the PPP on the statement of Indian Foreign Secretary Salman Haider that India had agreed to discuss Azad Kashmir not Kashmir, Mr. Gohar ruled out the possibility of signing any Camp David-style agreement with India.

He said that the foreign secretary-level talks had been resumed at the initiative of the Prime Ministers of Pakistan and India. He said the two sides are keen on making the dialogue a success.

Referring to a newspaper report, Mr. Gohar said that India’s Ministry of External Affairs has already denied the statement attributed to Mr. Haider. It averred that Mr. Haider did not make any declaration “that in the next round of talks, only ‘Pakistan occupied Kashmir’ will figure.” He said the Foreign Ministry of Pakistan had asked for an official transcript of the statement.

Mr. Gohar said the visiting Indian Foreign Secretary could have made the statement on the issue at the joint Press conference held in Islamabad on June 23 if it had been the Indian stance that only the future of “Pakistan-occupied Kashmir” would be discussed.

He said Kashmir is the core issue while other issues are peripheral. He said the Indian External Affairs Ministry’s spokesman stated that India considers Jammu and Kashmir a dispute which the two countries have to resolve in a peaceful manner. On its part, he said, Pakistan has made it known to India that the two countries cannot succeed in resolving other outstanding issues unless Kashmir is discussed in an “integrated and structured manner.”

About the deployment of Prithvi missiles by India, violations of Pakistan’s airspace and killing of a Ranger major in Indian firing, the Foreign Minister said that Pakistan could have sent 10 aircraft deep into Indian territory but it did not do so as the action could have heightened tension.

Referring to the deployment of Prithvi missiles, he said Pakistan was capable of safeguarding its sovereignty and territorial integrity Statement made by the Minister of External Affairs in the Rajya Sabha in reply to a question Regarding “Indo-Pak Talks”.

New Delhi, July 24, 1997.

In keeping with our commitment to establish a relationship of trust, friendship and cooperation with Pakistan and to resolve issues through bilateral dialogue, the Prime Minister, in his letter to the Prime Minister of Pakistan, had suggested the resumption of talks at an appropriate level. The resumed Foreign Secretary-level dialogue between India and Pakistan flowed from the Prime Minister’s suggestion. The first round of the resumed talks was held in Delhi from 28-31 March, 1997 and the second round was held in Islamabad from 19-23 June, 1997. A joint Statement was issued on the conclusion of this round of discussions.

The two sides decided to address, inter alia, the following subjects: (a) Peace and security, including Confidence Building Measures (b) Jammu and Kashmir; (c) Siachen; (d) Tulfal Navigation project; (e) Sir Creek; (f) Terrorism and drug trafficking; (g) Economic and Commercial Cooperation; (h) Promotion of friendly exchanges in various fields. They also agreed to set up a mechanism, including working groups at appropriate levels, to address all these issues in an integrated manner; the issues at (a) and (b) above will be dealt at the level of the Foreign Secretaries, who will also coordinate and monitor the progress of all the working groups. Both sides further agreed to take all possible steps to prevent hostile propaganda and provocative actions against each other.

While the talks focused primarily on modalities and mechanism for future discussions, our position on Jammu & Kashmir was conveyed to Pakistan.

The Joint Statement provides the basis for a comprehensive, constructive and sustained dialogue between India and Pakistan. It is the framework under which substantive discussions would take place on various issues. We look upon it as a step forward in our efforts to engage Pakistan on a broad front with the objective of building a relationship of trust friendship and cooperation.
1395. Memorandum presented by the Special Committee of the National Assembly of Pakistan on Kashmir to the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

The principles embodied in the UN Security Council resolutions 47 (1948) of 21 April 1948, 41 (1948) of 3 June 1948, 80 (1950) of 14 March 1950 and 91 (1951) of 30 March 1951, and the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan resolutions of 13 August 1948 and 5 January 1949 expressly state that the final disposition of the State of Jammu and Kashmir will be made in accordance with the will of the people expressed through the democratic method of a free and impartial plebiscite conducted under the auspices of the United Nations.

The Prime Minister of India, Jawaharlal Nehru, reiterated before the Indian Parliament on 26 June 1952, “if after a proper plebiscite, the people of Kashmir said, We do not want to be with India, we are committed to accept that. We will accept it, though it might pain us. We will not send in any army against them. We will accept that, however hurt we might feel about it.”

The Special Committee of the National Assembly of Pakistan on Kashmir recall that tragically despite the passage of over four decades, the oppressed people of Indian Held Kashmir (IHK) continue to struggle for their very basic and fundamental right i.e., the right to self-determination. Instead of fulfilling its promises to the people of Kashmir and its obligations to the international community, India has reacted with violence to the legitimate demands of the Kashmiri people.

Over the past 8 years, 60,000 innocent Kashmiri men, women and children have perished at the hands of the 600,000 strong Indian security forces present in Kashmir. A reign of terror has been let loose, characterized by extra-judicial executions, indiscriminate killings, random and mass arrests for political reasons, forced relocation of population, gang rapes of women and systematic efforts to obliterate the ethnic, social and cultural identity of the Kashmiri people. Kashmir is in flames. A threat to regional and global peace looms large on the horizon.

The denial by India of the inalienable right of self-determination to the people of Kashmir cannot be permitted and the atrocities being perpetrated on them by the Indian security forces cannot be condoned. It is for all civilized and responsible member states of the international community of nations to send a loud and clear message to India condemnation of the grave human rights violations and the necessity of upholding the sanctity of UN resolutions.
To ensure peace and stability in South Asia in particular and the world in general, it is pertinent to stand by the Kashmiris in their just cause – their demand for the right of self-determination pledged to them by the international community and by India and Pakistan in the form of UN resolutions, and to support Pakistan in its moral and legal stand based on its commitment to peaceful settlement of the Kashmir dispute in accordance with UN resolutions.

Let the word go forth from the United Nations that:

(i) Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere.

(ii) Massive violations of the human rights of 'the Kashmiris including their right of self-determination in accordance with UN resolutions is flagrant transgression of Charter Principles and civilized Norms.

(iii) Indian repression of the Kashmiris must be stopped.

The Chairman and the Members of the Kashmir Committee urge the United Nations:

(a) To hold a plebiscite in Jammu and Kashmir, without further delay, in accordance with the Security Council resolutions.

(b) To demand that India withdraws its army of occupation from Jammu and Kashmir to end its repression of the Kashmiri people.

(c) To urge India to continue the dialogue with Pakistan with sincerity and seriousness and to peacefully resolve all outstanding issues between the two countries including the Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

To enhance the number and role of the United Nations Military Observer Group in India and Pakistan (UNMOGIP) for facilitating its crucial functions of guaranteeing the inviolability of the line of Control in Kashmir. Since the establishment of UNMOGIP in 1949 it has played, in your own words “a very useful role” and therefore needs the whole hearted support of the International community.

(d) To demand that international human rights organizations are given full access to Jammu and Kashmir.

We urge the Secretary General to actively encourage, facilitate and support efforts leading to a peaceful resolution of the Jammu and Kashmir issue in accordance with the relevant Security Council resolutions as well as to exercise the mandate entrusted to him by Charter of the United Nations and under relevant international instruments to safeguard the fundamental rights and freedoms of the oppressed Kashmiri people.

Ch. Muhammad Sarwar Khan, MNA, Chairman,
Pakistan’s National Assembly Special Committee on Kashmir.

1396. Briefing by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the forthcoming India-Pakistan talks at the foreign secretary level.

Islamabad, September 12, 1997.

The Pakistan Foreign Office announced on September 12 that the third round of foreign secretary-level talks between Pakistan and India would be held in New Delhi from September 15 to 18. Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmed and his team of officials will leave Islamabad for the Indian capital on September 15.

The Foreign Office spokesman confirmed that Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif would be in New York for the UN General Assembly meeting at the same time as Indian Prime Minister Inder Kumar Gujral. “I strongly hope that they would be meeting each other”, he said in reply to a newsman’s question.

[The announcement about the Foreign Secretary going to Delhi next week was made by the spokesman at an unscheduled news conference, ending growing doubts as to the holding of the third round of foreign secretary-level talks, in continuation of the dialogue between the two countries, which opened in March after a deadlock of three years. At the close of the second round in Islamabad in June, it was agreed in a joint statement that the two foreign secretaries would resume discussions in September.]

Answering questions, Foreign Office spokesman Tariq Altaf confirmed that “the clarifications” sought from the Indian External Affairs Ministry, which apparently stood in the way of fixing a date for the third round had been received from New Delhi, though he admitted that it was “partially satisfactory” and would require further discussions.
He said Pakistan looked at the talks in a “very positive manner” and felt that these should continue. In the coming discussions, he emphasized, Pakistan would like both sides to “operationalise the mechanism”, a key to continuing the dialogue, as was agreed upon in the joint statement in Islamabad.

Replying to another question, the spokesman recalled that the two sides had agreed on a comprehensive agenda (listing eight specific issues) in the Islamabad joint statement, which he pointed out, included peace and security and Kashmir, which were of “primary and major importance.”

There could not be any talks and agreement without taking them into account, he observed.

Pakistan would strive to seek “operationalisation of the mechanism” to deal with the eight agreed issues in the coming talks in Delhi and emphasized that “our focus would be on the primacy of these issues (peace and security and J&K).

About the reported Indian unwillingness to set up a joint working group under an agreement already reached to deal with the Jammu and Kashmir issue, the spokesman said Pakistan had in fact raised the status of J&K issues above the other listed items since it was decided that it would be discussed at the level of foreign secretaries themselves, while other issues could be discussed by the other officials.

The spokesman said Pakistan has taken a serious exception to the omission of a substantive reference to the India-Pakistan question in Report of the UN Secretary General on the Work of the Organisation for 1997.

The spokesman said Pakistan’s Permanent Representative at the UN has already conveyed to the Secretary General of “our deep disappointment on this omission which tends to erode the credibility of the organization and its efficacy in fulfilling its primary responsibilities on a global basis.” The Jammu and Kashmir issue is on the agenda of the Security Council, he said.

“A less than explicit reference in a bureaucratic report does not detract from the significance of this issue in the UN.

Pakistan, the spokesman said, will continue to strongly espouse the Kashmir cause at the UN and spare no effort in ensuring that the UN deliver on its solemn pledge to the Kashmiri people.
Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding the meeting between Prime Minister Inder Kumar Gujral and Pakistan Minister of State for Information and Media Development Mushahid Hussain Syed.

New Delhi, September 12, 1997.

Prime Minister Shri I.K. Gujral received Mr. Mushahid Hussain Syed, Minister of Information and Media Development of Pakistan this morning. The meeting was held in a warm and friendly atmosphere.

Mr. Mushahid Hussain conveyed warm greetings of Prime Minister Nawaz Shrif which were fully reciprocated by Prime Minister.

Prime Minister Gujral and Mr. Mushahid Hussain Syed expressed their desire for friendly and cooperative relations between Indian and Pakistan and for the continuation of the Foreign Secretary-level dialogue between the two countries. The two countries will adhere in letter and spirit to the Joint Statement which was issued on June 23, 1997 in Islamabad.

A meeting of Prime Minister Shri I. K. Gujral and Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif will take place in New York* when both leaders are there later this month for the UN General Assembly session.

* It may be recalled that on September 1 Mr. Gujral had told the Parliament that "if an opportunity comes (in New York) I will be happy to meet him (Mr. Sharif), adding that he had held a useful meeting with him" in Maldives. On August 30, Mr. Gujral had also said that he would meet Mr. Nawaz in New York in a bid to improve bilateral relations.
1398. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs
denying that the meeting between Prime Minister I. K. Gujral and Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif in New York was arranged through the good offices of a third country.

_New Delhi, September 15, 1997._

In the context of some press reports, the official spokesman denied that the forthcoming meeting between the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan in New York was arranged through the good offices of a third country. The official spokesman said that the Prime Minister will be visiting New York for the UNGA Session and it is customary during such visits for the visiting leaders to meet each other on a bilateral basis.

Prime Minister’s meeting with the Pakistan Prime Minister is scheduled to take place on 23rd September, 1997. The Spokesman recalled that the two Prime Ministers had a useful meeting in Male in May 1997 when they were both there for the SAARC summit. The forthcoming meeting, which was arranged bilaterally, will be part of the ongoing dialogue between the two countries.

The question of any third party mediation or intervention in India’s relations with any other country simply does not arise.

Statement by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs rejecting the Pakistani allegation that India had resiled from the Joint Statement of June 23, 1997.

New Delhi, September 19, 1997.

We have seen a statement* issued in Lahore yesterday following the return of the Pakistan delegation which was in New Delhi for the resumed Foreign Secretary level talks. We categorically reject the allegation contained in that statement that India has resiled from the Joint Statement of June 23, 1997, issued after the second round of talks held in Islamabad.

The Joint Statement of 23 June, 1997 identified subjects for future discussion. It also stated that the two sides had agreed to set up a mechanism for this purpose. The two Governments have since then been in touch to work out and give concrete shape to such a mechanism. Discussions on this subject continued during the third round of talks held in New Delhi between September 15-18. At these talks, the two sides agreed that there were some issues which required further consideration, and that they would meet again at a mutually convenient date for this purpose.

India adheres to the letter and spirit of the Joint Statement issued at the end of the Islamabad talks. Our commitment to dialogue is firm and unequivocal. We seek to build relationship of trust, friendship and cooperation and in this context we look forward to a sustained comprehensive and substantive dialogue.

* Shamshad Ahmad had said in Lahore on September 18 that the third round of talks had ended “inconclusively” because “the other side had resiled from the agreement as set out in the Islamabad Joint Statement”. He however added that he would not consider it “retardation” as every meeting was not supposed to lead to an agreement. He said “on our part we could not compromise on our principled position with regard to the Jammu and Kashmir issue which, in our view lies at the heart of all problems”. He however added that it would not be correct to say that India had refused to hold talks on the Kashmir issue. “There is no cause for despondency as the dialogue is not an event nor can results be expected from a single visit. It will take the dialogue some time before yielding results, especially on the issues which are complicated in nature and have their roots in history.” Mr. Shamshad said Pakistan had gone to India “despite an air of uncertainty as a result of negative signals from New Delhi and the repeated violations across the Line of Control. This indicated Pakistan’s serious approach and commitment to the process of dialogue”. He added that “the previous clarification provided by New Delhi on various issues was not entirely to our satisfaction”. Still he said Pakistan decided not to disrupt negotiations as it believed that dialogue must continue.
1400. Joint Statement issued at the end of the Foreign Secretary level talks between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, September 18, 1997.

The Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan, Shri K. Raghunath and Mr. Shamshad Ahmad, met in New Delhi from 15-18 September, 1997.

2. During his stay in New Delhi, the Pakistan Foreign Secretary was received by Prime Minister Shri I.K. Gujral and called on the Minister of State for External Affairs, Shri Saleem I. Shervani.

3. The discussions were held in a cordial atmosphere. Each side presented their views with regard to the operationalisation of the mechanism envisaged in para 4(ii) of the Joint Statement between India and Pakistan of June 23, 1997. It was felt that further consideration was required. The Foreign Secretaries, therefore, decided to adjourn now and reconvene their meeting at a mutually convenient date.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

At the end of the second session of the talks, the Pakistani Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad issued a statement which said: “today, we continued our discussions. But the substantive part of our discussions was at the level of the meeting which I had with Prime Minister I. K. Gujral and Minister of State Sherwani. During these meetings, I had the opportunity to present our viewpoint on the aspect of the dialogue that we are trying to pursue and as far as our own discussions are concerned, today we did not get sufficient time to conclude, so we will continue the talks on September 18. The substantive talks on September 17 were held between the Indian Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary who briefed Mr. Gujral about the talks and the way in which these were moving. New Delhi is not ready to form a working group on Kashmir as its officials think it is tantamount to conceding that Kashmir is a disputed territory. Pakistan seems to be basically interested in some kind of structured talks on Kashmir. However, Pakistan may not insist in the talks on calling mechanism “working group”. Nomenclature hardly matters if the Kashmir issue is on the agenda of the talks and there is structured mechanism to discuss the issue in a substantial way. The two sides would certainly not like to conclude the third round of talks on a negative note as it will not augur well for the meeting of the two prime ministers in New York.”

The Prime Minister Gujral on September 17 however, reaffirmed his commitment to peace talks with Pakistan and said he was keeping his agenda open for his meeting with his Pakistani counterpart. Pakistan foreign secretary told Reuter at the end of his meeting with Prime Minister Gujral: “We have got indications from the Prime Minister that he would like the talks to move forward”. While New Delhi was willing to discuss Kashmir as part of a wide ranging dialogue, Islamabad insisted that it should be locked in a separate working group for Kashmir.
Pakistan questioned on September 25 India’s candidature for a permanent seat in the UN Security Council, saying New Delhi has failed to implement UN resolutions on Kashmir.

[Indian Prime Minister Inder Kumar Gujral had said in a speech at the UN General Assembly on September 24 that New Delhi was prepared to accept a permanent seat in the planned expansion of the Security Council.]

“India has now formally announced its candidature and has presented it in the framework of a very universalist approach that it is taking,” the Foreign Ministry spokesman told reporters at a news briefing in Islamabad.

But, he said: “We all know that India has not implemented the UN resolutions… which both India and Pakistan had accepted”. He was referring to the longstanding Security Council resolutions calling for plebiscite in Jammu and Kashmir to decide its future.

“As is very well known, their (Indians’) record of human rights in Jammu and Kashmir is not very honourable,” the spokesman said.

“In the light of these facts, for India to seek permanent membership of the UN Charter, respect for UN resolutions… should be considered fundamental for those who seek such an important position as permanent members of the Security Council with a veto power,” he asserted.

The spokesman also expressed great surprise that Mr. Gujral totally ignored Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif’s “very constructive and positive proposals”, including a possible non-aggression pact between the two nations now acknowledged to have acquired nuclear and missile technologies.

He said Mr. Nawaz had made the proposals in his speech at the UN General Assembly meeting on September 22. “We are certainly very surprised that Mr. Gujral chose to ignore a host of very positive and important proposals even during the meeting between the two Prime Ministers in New York,” the spokesman observed.
1402. Summary Record of discussions between Foreign Secretary and Pakistan High Commissioner Ashraf Jahangir Qazi.

New Delhi, September 30, 1997.

(2155 HOURS ; 3 0.9.97 AT SOUTH BLOCK)

FS said that he had called in the Pakistan High Commissioner (PHC) to convey our very serious concerns at Pakistani firing from across the LoC in Kargil. Pakistani forces started firing at 1130 hours and initially the Indian forward defences were targeted by Pakistani artillery. Later at 1300 hours, there was heavy artillery firing by Pakistan on Kargil town and the Leh road. Consequently, there were civilian casualties and a mosque and a civil hospital had also been targeted. We took very serious note of this uncalled for and unprovoked firing and lodged a strong protest which should be conveyed to the Government of Pakistan.

2. FS recalled that during the meeting between PM and PMNS (Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif) in New York, our PM had suggested that the two sides should take joint steps to stop firing at the LoC. PM's suggestion was accepted by PMNS and it was agreed that this objective would be best accomplished by the DGMOs remaining in contact and working out the right modalities. It was also agreed that communication links would be established between sectoral commanders along the LoC. Political directions were to be given to the defence forces on this issue and we have given appropriate directions. Following these directions on our part, our DGMO spoke to his Pakistani counterpart who informed that he had received no instructions. Our High Commissioner had also taken up this issue with the Pakistan Foreign Office and was informed that no instructions were received from the political leadership. He was further told that enquiries would be made after the return of PMNS and Pak Foreign Secretary. FS said that in spite of the understanding reached nothing has happened on the Pakistani side. The firing incident was unnecessary and had resulted in civilian casualties. We did not understand the purpose behind this unprovoked firing. Our forces were exercising restraint. The incident could have serious implications. FS asked PHC to convey our views to Islamabad.

3. PHC said that he had noted what F.S had to say and would convey the message to Islamabad. He himself had no information on the incident. With regard to the previous developments of a similar nature, he said that Pakistan had not been responsible for causing any upsurge. PHC said that he was rejecting our protest at this stage even though he would convey our message to Islamabad. He would also enquire on the agreement between the two Prime Ministers to stop firing along the LoC.
4. FS said that it was really a question of straightforward implementation of a bilateral understanding. As for the firing, the facts were as he had stated. He recalled that in April there had been a similar incident and Kargil town had been targeted. He said that the situation was particularly bad now.

5. PHC enquired about the meeting of the two PMs in New York. FS said that various issues including the firing matter were discussed at some length. The meeting again renewed the spirit and personal rapport which exist between the two Prime Ministers and once again indicated their desire that steps be taken to improve the relationship. The two leaders agreed that the dialogue should continue. With regard to the dialogue, PHC said that we should prepare the ground so that the next meeting of the Foreign Secretaries does not end on an inconclusive note and between now and the next meeting, we could look into this matter.

6. FS said that we were happy that the Pakistani delegation visited India. We were now aware of the areas of disagreement and the issues which needed to be addressed. These were not questions of a substantive quality but were procedural. We now knew what Pakistan meant by equal treatment.

7. PHC said that while we were now conversant with the arguments of the both sides, we would not be able to make the leap which would bridge the gap on this matter. It was important that at this preliminary stage, we go on and do not meander. Substantive issues were to come later; these would be difficult. There would be slow progress and that progress would not be very visible too. As for the modalities, Pakistani side had the impression earlier that we had clinched it.

8. FS said that we were ready to move on these issues.

PHC was with FS for about 20 minutes. The undersigned was also present.

Handout issued by the Pakistan Information Department on the Reaction of Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to his meeting with Prime Minister Inder Kumar Gujral in New York.

Islamabad, October 1, 1997.

Hopes of Pakistan-India rapprochement were belied as Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif disclosed on October 1 at a cabinet meeting that his Indian counterpart I.K. Gujral had backtracked on his country’s commitment on the Kashmir dispute during their meeting in New York.

In the light of Mr. Nawaz’s disclosure, the cabinet decided to review Pakistan’s policy towards the ongoing foreign secretary-level talks between the two countries.

The talks were resumed in March this year, a month after he returned to power in the February 3 elections.

He described his New York meeting with the Indian counterpart as “disappointing” and said Mr. Gujral backtracked on the crucial and core issue of Jammu and Kashmir. “The meeting did not help address the issue of Kashmir”, he said. He was chairing the Federal cabinet meeting, held after his return from New York, where he attended the 52nd UN General Assembly’s session.

He said: “My government will now have to review its policy on the subject (Pakistan-India talks) in the background of the latest Indian attitude.” Both prime ministers met in New York for the second time as they had availed themselves of the opportunity of meeting at Male in May during the Ninth SAARC summit.

“The Nawaz-Gujral meeting in New York was expected to have good effect on the talks process between the two countries, like their first contact in Male. But it seems as if the fate of the talks process, resumed this year, would not be different from the earlier such process ended on May 1994,” media quoted an Islamabad-based western diplomat to say.

However, Mr. Nawaz termed his meeting with US President Bill Clinton “as pleasant, constructive and fruitful”. He said that these talks had facilitated a much understanding between the two countries, adding: “Mr. Clinton appreciated Pakistan’s point of view on important bilateral and regional issues.” He especially hailed Pakistan’s initiative in resuming Pakistan-India talks.

New York, October 2, 1997.

Recalling all OIC resolutions as well as Security Council Resolutions pertaining to Jammu and Kashmir;

 Seriously concerned over the intensification of repression and continued violations of the human rights of Kashmir people including the denial of their inalienable right to self determination;

 Noting the memorandum submitted by the True Representatives of the Kashmiri people;

 2. Calls for a peaceful settlement of the Jammu & Kashmir issue in accordance with relevant UN resolutions.

 3. Urges the international community to take effective steps for safeguarding the human rights of the Kashmiris including their right to self-determination.

 4. Supports the ongoing efforts of the Government of Pakistan to seek a peaceful solutions to the Kashmir issue through all possible means including substantive bilateral talks with India.

   ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Pakistan and India agreed on October 24 to resolve all procedural difficulties to resume a meaningful dialogue between the two countries. Directives have been issued to the foreign secretaries of the two countries to sort out matters during their stay in Edinburgh.

The decision was taken during a 75-minute breakfast meeting between Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and Indian Prime Minister Inder Kumar Gujral in Edinburgh.
The two leaders also held a 20-minute one-to-one meeting.

The breakfast meeting, hosted by Mr. Nawaz, was the third between the two during the last five months. The last meeting was held in New York in September when Mr. Nawaz and Mr. Gujral were there to attend the UN General Assembly session.

“They (the two Prime Ministers) have directed the (respective) foreign secretaries to meet in Edinburgh to resolve the procedural difficulties in the resumption of a meaningful dialogue.” Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad told newsmen after the meeting.

He said that the talks were held in a “candid and cordial” atmosphere.

“The Prime Minister emphasized the need for substantive and meaningful dialogue between the two countries to resolve all the outstanding issues, including Jammu and Kashmir,” he said.

He said the discussions between the two leaders focused on the need for “operationalising of mechanism which was agreed to at the level of foreign secretary talks in Islamabad in June this year.”

Mr. Shamshad said that the two leaders also reviewed the situation on the Line of Control and the working boundary. He said both the Prime Ministers agreed to meet again at Dhaka next month during the tripartite talks being held among Bangladesh, Pakistan and India.

Asked about the response of the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Shamshad said: “The response is evident in their decision to ask their foreign secretaries to have a meeting.”

Asked whether Pakistan considered this meeting as a step forward, he said: “Every meeting that takes place, consequently is a step forward and we hope that the next month’s meeting in Dhaka (between the two Prime Ministers) will be a one more step forward.” However, he cautioned that the people should not expect miracles. “The issues we are dealing with are complex. We will try to do everything to resolve these procedural difficulties that we face”.

Mr. Shamshad said that in the context of the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting, the two leaders agreed that their delegations should work closely to ensure that the interests of developing countries are reflected in these deliberations, particularly in the Edinburgh Declaration.

At the talks, the Pakistan Prime Minister was assisted by Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub, Deputy Foreign Minister Siddiq Kanju, Commerce Minister Ishaq Dar, Culture Minister Rashid Ahmad and Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad.
The Indian Prime Minister was assisted by Finance Minister P. Chidambaram and Foreign Secretary K. Raghunath.

Talking to newsmen before the breakfast meeting, Mr. Nawaz said the political leadership of India and Pakistan would have to take the people with them if the issues confronting the two countries are to be resolved.

“Public opinion is a must. If we have to resolve the issues (between India and Pakistan), we have to carry the people’s opinion with us,” he added.

Asked whether he had the support of political parties on issues concerning with India, Mr. Nawaz said his government would not do anything that would alienate it from the people.

He said the problems between the two countries were grave and cannot be solved in 24 hours. “It will take time, and I think we should continue talking and remain engaged in substantive and meaningful talks,” he added. Asked about his relationship with Mr. Gujral, Mr. Nawaz said: “We are known to each other, not when he or I became the Prime Minister but much earlier than that.”

1406. Statement in the Rajya Sabha on the third round of India – Pakistan talks in reply to a Question.

New Delhi, November 20, 1997.

The third round of the resumed Foreign Secretary level talk between India and Pakistan was held in New Delhi from 15-18 September, 1997.

The round was adjourned, with the two sides deciding to reconvene at mutually convenient dates.

At their meeting in Islamabad in June 1997, the Foreign Secretaries identified eight subjects, Viz (a) Peace and security, including CBMs; (b) Jammu and Kashmir; (c) Siachen; (d) Tulbul Navigation Project; (e) Sir Creek; (f) Terrorism and drug trafficking; (g) Economic and commercial cooperation; (h) Promotion of friendly exchanges in various fields, for discussions between the two countries. They had also decided that a mechanism would be set up to address these issues in an integrated manner and that the Foreign Secretaries would directly address the issues of peace & security including CBMs and Jammu and Kashmir, and coordinate and monitor discussions on other identified subjects. The discussions in the third round focused on these modalities of the dialogue.

During the discussions, our position on Jammu and Kashmir was reiterated in clear and categorical terms to Pakistan. Our serious concern about Pakistan’s support and promotion of cross-border terrorism in Jammu & Kashmir, and the need to put a total end to such hostile activity was also conveyed. It was also emphasized that Pakistan’s unprovoked firings in the border areas across the Line of Control and the International Boundary in Jammu and Kashmir, which have resulted in the loss of innocent civilian lives, must stop.

During the discussions, we reiterated our desire to establish a relationship of trust, friendship and cooperation; and to develop a wide ranging relationship covering economic, trade, cultural, people-to-people and other functional areas.

1407. Extracts from the Address by Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif at the Eighth Islamic Summit.

Mr. Chairman: We are grateful to the OIC member states for their principled position of support for the just Kashmir cause.

The Muslim people of Kashmir, who had for 50 years borne the yoke of Indian control occupation, have risen to demand the right to self-determination promised to them by the United Nations.

The valiant Kashmiri uprising throughout the length and breadth of Jammu and Kashmir for the past eight years is a testimony of their resolve not to submit to the indignities of occupation but to secure for themselves and for their succeeding generations their fundamental rights and freedoms.

Over 600,000 Indian troops, now deployed in Kashmir, have unleashed a reign of terror and repression against the Kashmiri people. Over 60,000 Kashmiris have fallen victim to the indiscriminate use of force by Indian security forces. Torture, rape, arbitrary arrests, illegal detentions, arson and loot have become the daily plight of the innocent Kashmiris.

Kashmir once regarded as a paradise on earth is today bunkered and barricaded.
India is using renegades and mercenaries to subvert and discredit the Kashmiri struggle for freedom.

The leadership of the All-parties Hurriyet Conference is being particularly targeted.

India’s attempts to foist on the Kashmiri people a puppet regime has failed miserably.

The Jammu and Kashmir dispute has also been the primary cause of conflict and tensions between Pakistan and India. It is today the hottest flashpoint threatening regional peace and security.

Pakistan seeks a peaceful solution to the Kashmir issue in accordance with the UN resolutions.

We took the initiative to resume talks earlier this year with India to resolve all outstanding issues, particularly the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir. As a result of the first two rounds of discussions held in March and June, Pakistan and India agreed to set up a mechanism for serious, substantive and structured negotiations.

Unfortunately, India has since reneged on the understandings reached and has sought to sidetrack negotiations on the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir.

The third round of foreign secretary-level talks and the meetings that I have held with the Indian Prime Minister have not yet resolved the present impasse.

We will persist in our efforts to engage India in serious and substantive discussions on all issues especially Jammu and Kashmir.

We hope that the new India government, after the forthcoming general elections there, will be able to advance these negotiations more meaningfully.

OIC CONTACT GROUP ON KASHMIR CONDEMN HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS

The OIC Contact Group on Kashmir expressed on December 9 concern at “gross and systematic human rights violations resulting in the suffering of the Kashmiri people and the consequent tension in the region.”

A statement issued by the group said: “The heads of state and Government (who took part in the meeting) reaffirmed all OIC summits and ministerial declarations and resolutions on the Jammu and Kashmir dispute and expressed encouragement and support for a Pakistan-India dialogue to promote peace, rapprochement and economic development in south Asia.”
[The Contact Group comprises Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, Niger, Turkey and Morocco. Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif addressed the group before it issued the statement.]

The statement called for an immediate end to the violation of human rights and reiterated the determination of OIC states to continue efforts for the protection of the fundamental rights of the people of Kashmir.

It said: “The heads of State and government affirmed once again the commitment of the OIC to promote a just and peaceful solution to the Jammu and Kashmir dispute in accordance with the UN resolutions, expressed their resolve to seek the effective realization of the rights of self-determination of the Kashmiri people and conveyed their support for the efforts of the Pakistan government to resolve through a serious, substantive and meaningful dialogue the Jammu and Kashmir disputes, which is the basic cause of tension between India and Pakistan.”

Text of Nawaz's Address To Contact Group

On behalf of the people and the Pakistan government, I would like to express our sincere appreciation for the valuable contribution made by the OIC Contact Group for promoting the just Kashmiri cause.

The Muslim people of Kashmir continue to bear the rigours of Indian hold in the valley.

The Jammu and Kashmir dispute has been on the agenda of the Security Council for almost 50 years.

The principled espousal of their cause by the OIC is an Islamic and international duty. By our principled support of their just cause, you have won the abiding gratitude of the people of Kashmir.

Kashmir is the hottest flashpoint in the world today. It is a core issue bedeviling relations between Pakistan and India and the primary source of tension and instability in our region.

In spite of a lapse of 50 years, Kashmiris have yet to realize their inalienable right to self-determination.

In the past eight years, death, destruction, and devastation have been inflicted by Indian security forces on almost every home and family in Kashmir.

The fundamental human rights of the Kashmiri people are being trampled upon with impunity by the Indians. The largest democracy in the world has given its state apparatus a licence to kill, rape, maim and torture the innocent Kashmiris.
The forcible prevention of Kashmiri leaders from coming to Tehran for the conference by India and the rejection of the appeal made by the OIC in this regard are an affront to the Islamic world.

It amply demonstrates India’s contemptuous disregard for norms of civilized conduct, human rights and international legitimacy.

The people of Pakistan, as indeed the Islamic Ummah, are incensed at the daily atrocities committed by Indian forces in Kashmir.

We should, once again, demand that India put an immediate end to its repression in Kashmir and fully respect the human rights of the Kashmiri people, including their right to self-determination.

We must express our full support for the process of peace and rapprochement in South Asia as is signified by the Pakistan-India dialogue that we have initiated.

A just solution of the Kashmir issue is an indispensable prerequisite for security and stability in South Asia.

We ask India not to resile from its solemn commitments and to engage in serious substantive and result-oriented negotiations to resolve the Kashmir issue.

I have now had three occasions to meet the Indian Prime Minister. I have conveyed to him our willingness to meaningfully address all outstanding issues between our two countries, including the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir. I have emphasized to him the centrality of Jammu and Kashmir dispute to any normalization of bilateral relationship.

From this forum I once again call on to him to reciprocate with full sincerity the constructive approach we have made for the resumption of Pakistan India dialogue.

The present stalemate in the talks cannot be allowed to continue indefinitely. To sustain this process mutual trust and confidence, based on the understanding between the two countries was necessary.

I am confident that the meeting will unanimously adopt the draft statement on Jammu and Kashmir that has been recommended by the ministers and I commend the adoption of the memorandum presented by the Kashmiri representatives. We must also condemn India’s dismissal of an appeal to let the Kashmir representatives participate in the conference.
1408. Record of discussion between the Indian Prime Minister Inder Kumar Gujral and Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif.

Prime Minister’s Office

Record of discussion between PM and Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif (PMNS) in Hotel Sonargaon, Dhaka at 1630 hours on 15 January 1998. Before the talks began, a CNN correspondent asked both Prime Ministers for statements. In reply, PMNS said that he was sincere about seeking understanding with India and hoped that the two sides would find a way to resolve their problems. PM added that he had complete trust in PMNS and in his intentions. The CNN correspondent asked PMNS whether relations were better now, to which PMNS said that they were much better than six months ago. After the photographers withdrew, the conversation proceeded as follows:

PMNS (to Principal Secretary): Twada ki hal hai ji? (In Punjabi—How are you?)

Principal Secretary (N. N. Vohra): Thank you Sir. I am doing all right.

PMNS (to PM): Very happy to meet you again. Through our dialogue, we have to find a solution.

PM: Congratulations on your having ended the crisis. We were holding our breaths and were happy that the crisis was over and the existing structure of Pakistan had been preserved and also happy personally for you. I hope you were not reading the newspapers during those days. There are a few things outstanding. In Edinburgh, we had thought that we could move forward and expand contacts to a large extent, this has been done. You and I have met groups of school children in our capitals. With regard to visas, we had agreed on a trebling and we are to increase the strength of the staff also.

PMNS: We have cleared that already. Our High Commission is issuing 1000 visas a day.

PM: We have agreed to increase the staff and can raise the strength if you agree.

PMNS: No objection in principle. We need to computerize and once that is done, the number of visas that we can issue will multiply.

PM: We had also agreed to expand the exempted category.

PMNS: This is very important. What are the categories?
FM Gohar Ayub: Politicians, doctors, other professionals, women...

PMNS: All women?

PM: Yes, let it be all women. We must also look into police reporting, this is a nuisance. We have humiliating procedures and we know what the police stations are like.

PMNS: Yes. In both countries, the police also take money from the people.

PM: I told you about my friend. A woman had come to India and had to face a humiliating experience at the police station. I was not the PM at that time but I did what I could. A scoundrel comes from Timbuktu and that is okay for us, but a lady or a gentleman from each other’s country must undergo humiliation.

On the economy, this is also being discussed here. Before you came, I was telling the Prime Minister of Bangladesh that we had sold you sugar last year. This year we have a shortage and would like to buy from you. We are also facing a shortage of onions and are in touch with your people, to see if we can buy any onions.

Our businessmen also keep telling us about their contacts. They tell us that if you had more handling facilities at Lahore... (to Principal Secretary) what was it?

Prl Secy: The capacity of the siding at Lahore needs to be suitably increased.

PMNS: Let us inform the rest about our talk about restarting the dialogue. Gujral sahib, there is no progress.

PM: I am asking Foreign Secretary to sit with your people and discuss. Basically, we are saying, let all the groups meet simultaneously.

PMNS: Let them meet today.

PM: Yes, today. Let the dialogue continue. Let all the working groups meet simultaneously.

PMNS: Modalities can be discussed and finalised.

FM Gohar Ayub: We are ready,

PMNS: We wish you well.

PM: Thank you, I need it.

PMNS: And good luck to the people of India. Let us do something about the issues facing us.
Present from Indian side: MOS (Commerce) Shri B.B. Ramaiah; Principal Secretary to PM, Shri N.N. Vohra; Foreign Secretary, Shri K. Raghunath; Joint Secretary (P) PMO, Shri P.P. Shukla, Joint Secretary (IPA) MEA, Shri Vivek Katju; Joint Secretary (A) PMO, Shri A.K. Pandey.

From Pakistani side: Foreign Minister Gohar Ayub Khan; Principal Secretary to Pakistan PM, AZK Sherdill; Foreign Secretary, Shamshad Ahmed; Additional Secretary, Foreign Ministry, Tariq Altaf.

1409. Trilateral Declaration between India, Bangladesh and Pakistan.

Dhaka, January 15, 1998.

Noting that Bangladesh, India and Pakistan together have a population of more than one billion, the heads of government recalled that the countries possessed vast human and natural resources which offered great opportunities for economic and social development for the benefit of their peoples. The pervasive poverty in these countries warranted urgent action for accelerating the growth process. It was felt that an environment of peace and security within the framework of the objectives, principles and provisions of the SAARC Charter were essential for rapid and sustained progress. The heads of government pledged their commitment for consolidating and strengthening the on-going efforts for achieving sustainable development.

The heads of government welcomed the opportunities presented by the globalisation of the world economy but expressed concern that this posed special difficulties for the developing countries. They emphasized that the continued positive participation of developing countries, particularly the LDCs in the global economy, required a fair and supportive international economic environment.

The heads of government noted that many developing countries are engaged in liberalizing their economies and have contributed significantly to the growth of world output and trade. They need greater access to markets in the developed countries and to capital and technology in this process.
Having noted that foreign direct investment has been growing rapidly over the last few years linking national economics and influencing the economic growth and welfare of developing countries, the heads of government observed that the flow of FDI has been uneven. They emphasized that the South Asian region was an attractive destination for foreign direct investment, with its abundant availability of natural resources, skilled labour at competitive rates and a combined market of over one billion people. The heads of government agreed on the need for harmonization of relevant laws, rules and regulations of the three countries for promoting foreign investment.

The heads of government noted that there was considerable scope for promoting investment through mutual cooperation. There were opportunities for setting up joint ventures for serving both domestic and export markets. They underscored the need for arrangements for investment promotion and protection, avoidance of double taxation and a mechanism for settlement of commercial disputes.

The heads of government noted that inadequate communication facilities were a major hindrance to closer economic cooperation. They stressed the importance of developing infrastructure and inadequate communication network for reinforcing and accelerating the process of economic cooperation. In this context, they emphasized the importance of strengthening of infrastructure such as transportation, communication and information for initiating expansion of trade and investment.

Recognising the importance of the private sector, the heads of government reaffirmed their determination to encourage the private sector to contribute increasingly in the areas of trade, investment and finance.

The heads of government underlined the importance of effective use of human resources and their continued upgradation and enrichment through education, skill foundation, improve health, sanitation and nutrition. There was a scope for cooperation through utilisation of institutional and training facilities.

Reiterating their commitment to liberalization of trade in the region, the heads of government reaffirmed the goal of achieving a free trade area in South Asia by 2001. They agreed on the need to progressively reduce tariffs and remove quantitative restrictions, non-tariff and para tariff barriers and other structural impediments to trade to achieve this goal.

Recognising the need to faster development of the least developed economies, they agreed to provide special trade concessions for the least Developed Countries of the region on a non-reciprocal basis for the development of equitable trade relations with these countries.

They also emphasized the need for harmonization of customs procedure, improvement of shipping and port facilities and simplification of visa procedure for rapid growth of trade. In this context, they reiterated their commitment to accelerate regional cooperation and underscored that regional cooperation was indispensable in an inter-dependent world.

Noting that cooperation in the field of science and technology was imperative in ensuring global competitiveness and acceleration of the process of development in the region and recognizing the progress made in the field, the heads of government emphasized the need to continue cooperation in this area, specially facilitating research and exchange of information in the fields of technology, energy, engineering and low cost housing.

The heads of government were of the view that greater consultations among the delegations of these countries in international fora on issues of common concern would be in the interest of all.

Adoption of a coordinated approach on the issue of investment and on labour standards, environment and other technical barriers to trade in the WTO would be particularly important.

The heads of government felt that the summit had been very constructive and useful. They expressed their desire to continue this kind of initiative and take follow up action.

The heads of government of India and Pakistan congratulated the Prime Minister of Bangladesh for taking the initiative to host a business summit. They were of the view that this summit would greatly contribute to strengthening mutual cooperation.

They expressed their sincere appreciation for the manner in which the Prime Minister of Bangladesh had conducted the meeting and guided the proceedings.

They also expressed their deep gratitude for the warm and generous hospitality extended to them by the government and people of Bangladesh.

Media Briefing by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the offer of mediation by USSR in the Kashmir dispute.

Pakistan welcomed on March 7 an “offer of mediation” between Pakistan and India on the Kashmir dispute, which was made by Russian Vice Foreign Minister G.B. Karasin during his visit to Islamabad this week.

Answering questions at his routine news briefing the Foreign Office spokesman said Pakistan regarded the Russian mediation offer significantly helpful as it indicated the success of Pakistan’s efforts to spotlight, at the international level, the existence of the Kashmir dispute, which needed to be resolved in the interest of regional peace and stability and prosperity of the people of South Asia.

He said that the Russian mediation offer was all the more welcome for Islamabad since it increased the number of world powers, such as the USA and the UK, which had expressed their willingness to mediate in the Kashmir dispute.

The spokesman, however, parried a question whether Mr. Karasin had made the offer on his own or in response to a request, and made no comment when asked whether there was a shift in Moscow’s stand on the Kashmir issue.

He said Mr. Karasin’s visit to Islamabad was significant and the wide-ranging discussions he had held here reflected Russia’s growing interest in developing ties with Pakistan in different fields.

Pakistan hoped that the relations between the two countries would assume greater dimensions in future, the spokesman said, and added that a high-level Russian delegation was expected in Islamabad in the middle of this year.

Replying to a question about Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif’s planned visit to Russia, he said preparations for it were under way, but denied that it would take place next month.

Mr. Karasin had also been briefed on Pakistan’s efforts for promoting a political settlement of the Afghan issue, he added.

He said that Pakistan wanted to develop “tension free and good relations” with India, and hoped New Delhi would reciprocate.

Asked if there would be any change in Pakistan’s policy after a new government is formed in India, the spokesman said: “We want to develop tension free and good relations with New Delhi and this policy continues. We look forward to reciprocity (from) whichever government comes to power in India.”
Asked whether there were differences between a section of the government in Islamabad and the defence forces in respect of the conduct of national foreign policy, he retorted with stern “No” and asserted that all divisions of the government worked with complete coordination and the authority rested completely with the Prime Minister. The question which was asked by a newsmen of a national Urdu language daily was described by the spokesman as “kite flying.”

He said that in relations with India, Pakistan hoped that “it (the new government in New Delhi) would join hands with us in seeking just and fair solutions of the problems that lie at the root of tension which is prevailing “ between the two countries.

Pakistan hoped that the government in Delhi would come and join hands with Pakistan in resolving the problems so that the ground could be prepared for an era of peace, prosperity and progress of the people of South Asia, he said.

1411. Statement issued by Official Spokesperson of Ministry of External Affairs regarding Pakistan’s malicious and false allegations of the involvement of Indian Agencies in acts of violence in Pakistan.

New Delhi, March 17, 1998.

It is reprehensible that Pakistan’s malicious and false allegations of the involvement of Indian agencies in acts of violence in that country have continued. These allegations were dismissed by us last week with the contempt they deserved. India is a responsible country and has never stooped to the level of sponsoring terrorism and its record speaks for itself.

2. Pakistan is an acknowledged sponsor of state terrorism and its terrorist activities have been consistently undertaken against India and the region and further afield. Its official agencies undertake terrorist acts directly and through harbouring, aiding and abetting fundamentalist groups who are provided sanctuary and operate from Pakistani territory. These have lately been stepped up, following the decisive failure of terrorist groups to disrupt the successful holding of elections in India, particularly in J & K. Recently Pakistan supplied shoulder-fired missiles to the terrorists in J&K, a fact which was brought to the attention of the Pakistani leaders who were advised against escalating the undeclared war in J&K.
3. The virulent propaganda campaign against India launched recently by Pakistan is directed at covering its own involvement in these heinous acts and blur its track-record. These attempts cannot succeed for Pakistan already stands exposed as a terrorist state. We have conclusive evidence of the involvement of the ISI in bombings in various parts of India over the years. The bombings in Mumbai in 1993 have been traced to Pakistan, as have the explosions in Delhi in 1996, 1997 and this year. Terrorist attacks have also taken place recently in Tamil Nadu, J&K and the North-East.

4. The serious and endemic ethnic and sectarian violence with which Pakistan itself is beset is the consequence of the encouragement which the Pakistan State has provided to fundamentalist and terrorist groups. Pakistan's attempts to divert the attention of its people from its own policies which are now recoiling on itself are pathetic and ridiculous.

1412. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Muhammad Nawaz Sharif to Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee.

PRIME MINISTER

Excellency,

On behalf of the Government of Pakistan, and on my own behalf, I extend to you our sincere felicitations on your election as the Prime Minister of India. Your assumption of this high office reflects the trust and confidence reposed in you by the people of your country.

Pakistan and India stand at the cross roads at a time of massive global transformations. We are the inheritors of proud civilizations but our rich potential for economic growth has remained subdued. We have a special responsibility to step out of the old mind set of confrontation and tension to a new outlook enthused by the ideals of peace and development. This is what we owe to our peoples.

I invite you to work closely with us for ushering in a new era of durable peace and stability in South Asia. The resumption of the dialogue between Pakistan and India for redressing all the outstanding issues between our two countries, including a peaceful settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute, will pave the way for such an outcome. We recall your contribution to the promotion of Pakistan-India relations during your tenure as the Minister for External Affairs of India.

We hope that the Bharatia Janata Party government under your leadership can bring forth a firm resolve to join us in building a happier, more prosperous future for our peoples. I assure you that we, in Pakistan, are ready to go the extra mile in journeying towards cooperative and good neighbourly relations with India. We earnestly hope that our sincerity will be reciprocated in removing the underlying causes of conflict and tension so that durable peace based on justice and equity can be brought to our region.

I convey my best wishes for your success in your endeavours for the progress and prosperity of the people of India.

Yours sincerely,

(Muhammad Nawaz Sharif)

His Excellency,
Mr. Atal Behari Vajpayee,
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi.

1413. Letter from Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee to Pakistan Prime Minister Muhammad Nawaz Sharif.

PRIME MINISTER

New Delhi, March 21, 1998

Excellency,

Thank you for your kind message of felicitations on my assuming the office of Prime Minister of India.

India and Pakistan must not remain mired in the past, the prisoners of old contentions. We must respond positively and with energy to the call of the future, and the aspirations of our peoples, specially the younger generation, for a more cooperative relationship.

We welcome your willingness to make the extra effort to give new content to our relations. I assure you that we will reciprocate in full measure and hope to establish a relationship based on mutual respect and regard for each others’ concerns.

The renewal of the dialogue process and interaction at high political levels between our two countries has reflected the consensus in India. My Government is committed to the continuation of this process on a constructive and sustained basis.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Yours sincerely,

(A.B. Vajpayee)

1414. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Muhammad Nawaz Sharif to Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee.

Islamabad, April 30, 1998.

PRIME MINISTER

Islamabad

30, April 1998

Excellency,

I have the pleasure of extending a most cordial invitation to you to participate in the Central Asia and South Asia Economic Summit which will be held in Islamabad from 13 to 15 September 1998.

Central Asia and South Asia have the undoubted potential of emerging as the major power houses of the world economy, to realize their immense potential, the two regions need to exploit their undeniable complementarities. They also need to harness the forces of globalization so as to unleash their latent productive capacities.

The Central Asia and South Asia Economic Summit will enable the regions' political and business leaders to interact with each other and with a galaxy of the world's business leaders. It will thus provide an invaluable opportunity to promote cooperation, identify investment opportunities, and apprise an international business audience of the potentials and promises of the individual economies of the Central and South Asian countries.

Your personal participation would ensure that India's vast economic potential is effectively communicated to all the eminent participants at the Economic Summit. It will also enable the political leaders of other Central and South Asian States to benefit from your views on ways to accelerate economic growth in our richly endowed, yet under-developed regions.

I greatly look forward to welcoming you in Islamabad on the occasion of the Central Asia and South Asia Economic Summit.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Muhammad Nawaz Sharif)

His Excellency, Mr. Atal Behari Vajpayee,
Prime Minister, The Republic of India,
New Delhi. India.

1415. Warning in a mid-night demarche by Pakistan to the Indian High Commissioner in Pakistan against any attack on Pakistan.

In a post-midnight demarche on March 28, Pakistan warned India that any attack on Pakistan “would warrant a swift and massive retaliation with unforeseen consequences”.

The Foreign Office summoned Indian High Commissioner Satish Chandra at 1:00 am and told him that Pakistan had “received credible information” on March 27 night that “an (Indian) attack was to be mounted before dawn” on Pakistan’s nuclear installations. The Indian envoy was asked to convey to New Delhi “that we expect the Indian government to desist from any irresponsible act. Any such act would warrant a swift and massive retaliation with unforeseen consequences.”

The Foreign Office stated that “in the wake of the Indian nuclear tests earlier this month, Pakistan has been receiving information of possible attack on our nuclear installations. The purpose behind this action would be to prevent us from taking an appropriate decision in our supreme national interest.”

“We are fully prepared to meet any eventuality in our defence,” the Foreign Office stated and asserted that “any attack on Pakistan’s nuclear facilities would be in violation of our existing agreement (with New Delhi) against attack on such facilities.”

The Foreign Office further stated that Pakistan had communicated its fears of possible Indian attack to the US government and to the governments of other four members of the Security Council.

The warning came in the wake of several reports in the Pakistani media of alleged atrocities by Indian security forces in Kashmir. On May 25 Nawaz Sharif described the situation in Kashmir as “arousing serious concerns” saying that Pakistan would not tolerate any Indian military action in the valley. Acknowledging that there was “patriotic fervour in favour of the (nuclear) bomb” he said that he had stayed in touch with world leaders including Bill Clinton, the US President and the British Prime Minister Tony Blair, keeping them posted that he was facing increasing pressure at home to test a nuclear device. On May 22 several opposition parties met in Lahore and threatened to launch a campaign from June 1 to force the government to explode a bomb. The same day the editors of several prominent newspapers and journalists met Nawaz Sharif and urged him to conduct a nuclear test. Pakistan believed that now that India had acquired nuclear muscles, it can force Pakistan to give up its “principled stand on Kashmir”.
Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif proposed on June 6 talks between Islamabad and New Delhi to halt the arms race in the sub-continent and urged the international community to help resolve the Kashmir issue. He said Pakistan had always wanted meaningful talks with India and was still ready for it. “Even today I say to Mr. Vajpayee to come forward to end the arms race in South Asia. Let us resolve the Kashmir dispute in accordance with the UN resolutions and redeem the pledge made to the Kashmiri people.”

Speaking at the joint session of Parliament Mr. Nawaz, pointed out that time has come when the world community should play its role to resolve the Kashmir dispute. He said Kashmir had become a flashpoint and a challenge for the international community.

He said the world was now realizing that peace in South Asia could not be achieved until a resolution of the Kashmir dispute, which has caused two of the three wars between Pakistan and India since their independence in 1947. “This is what we have been telling the world for the last 50 years and this is the message emanating from our nuclear explosions,” Mr. Nawaz said, warning that the “time is running out fast.”

Mr. Nawaz said India should forget that it would be able to keep the Kashmiris under subjugation by force and added that Pakistan would continue to raise its voice for the Kashmiris until the people living there were able to exercise their right to self-determination as promised under the UN Security Council resolutions. “The sooner India listens to us, the better it will be for the people of this region,” he said.

Mr. Nawaz said the country was faced with new challenges after it carried out the nuclear tests and urged the nation to brace for facing them. He said Pakistan was forced to conduct the nuclear tests to maintain strategic balance in the region which was disturbed by the Indian nuclear tests.

He said Indian leaders kept using provocative and threatening language after the tests which posed danger to the security of Pakistan. He said Pakistan exercised restraint and waited for the international community to play its role, but world reaction was very muted which left Pakistan with no option but to go nuclear.
Mr. Nawaz made it clear that Pakistan did not have aggressive designs against any county. He said Pakistan could not think of attacking any country. “Our message is peace and only peace.”

“The fate of Pakistan is now in the hands of its people,” he said, adding the future of every Pakistani “is now secure” and the country was now making all its decisions itself.

1417. Press Statement by Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs offering resumption of Pakistan – India dialogue.

Pakistan’s desire to engage constructively in a substantive and result oriented dialogue with India has repeatedly been affirmed by the Prime Minister. Accordingly, the Foreign Secretary today, officially conveyed to the Indian High Commissioner, Pakistan’s proposal for resumption of Pakistan-India dialogue on the basis of the agreement reached on 23 June, 1997 between the two sides.

Pakistan has proposed that in view of the current situation, the two sides should address, on a priority basis, the issues of peace and security and Jammu and Kashmir in the resumed talks.

Pakistan has also proposed that under the item pertaining to ‘Peace and Security’, special and urgent attention may be given to arriving at mutually agreed measures for the avoidance of conflict as well as promotion of nuclear and conventional restraint and stabilization measures.*

* A day earlier on June 10 the Foreign Office Spokesman had said that Pakistan “is always prepared to hold serious constructive and result oriented dialogue with India”. He added: “The P-5 foreign ministers and the UN Security Council consider it a root cause of tension in South Asia which must be addressed to reduce the risk of a conflagration. We agree with this approach.” He said the Indian nuclear test had destabilized the region, posed a grave security threat to Pakistan and dealt a deadly blow to the non-proliferation regime. Justifying Pakistan’s nuclear test he said ‘Pakistan’s response in defence of its vital national security interests has reestablished the strategic balance. Diplomatic steps now must be taken to promote peace and stability in the region’. He recalled the statement of Nawaz Sharif of May 28 which, he said, underlined Pakistan’s desire to hold a dialogue with India and renewed his offer for a non-aggression pact on the basis of a just settlement of the Kashmir dispute. Spokesman adding said: “We welcome the renewed interest of the international community in developments in our region and look forward to working in partnership to address and resolve all outstanding issues for a durable peace in South Asia”.
1418. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs regarding modalities of official dialogue between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 12, 1998.

We received yesterday, a response from Pakistan to our proposals, given to them in January this year*, regarding the modalities of the official dialogue between the two countries. We note that our view that the bilateral dialogue process should proceed ahead for mutual benefit is finding acceptance in Pakistan. We hope they will continue on this path.

* While Pakistan made out its offer of talks was an initiative from its side, the Indian Press Release made it clear that Pakistani offer was in response to the Indian offer of January 1998. In the weekly press briefing on January 25, 1998 the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office had conceded so much when he said “Pakistan will positively respond to the latest Indian offer for resumption of talks only if the new proposal can trigger operationalization of the mechanism agreed in June last.”

It is encouraging that Pakistan too has now announced a moratorium on further nuclear tests. It will be recalled, India had announced a moratorium on nuclear tests more than three weeks ago and, despite subsequent tests by Pakistan, took the responsible decision to continue its moratorium. There are also other suggestions in this context which are best discussed under the first agenda item of the Foreign Secretary talks—Peace and Security including CBMs. We have already invited the Pakistan Foreign Secretary to visit New Delhi on 22 June, 1998 to resume the adjourned dialogue, where these issues should be addressed constructively. In another press release issued on the same day (12 June) the Ministry of External Affairs welcomed Pakistan’s announcement of a moratorium on nuclear testing, while India had announced its moratorium three weeks earlier and had decided to continue it despite Pakistani nuclear test. The Indian Press release suggested that this item could be discussed at the proposed Foreign Secretary talks, for which India had invited Pakistan Foreign Secretary to New Delhi.

While proposing bilateral talks, India rejected any proposal of UN mediatory role in India’s relations with Pakistan. Pakistani media had carried reports that UN Secretary General was proposing to send a special envoy to the sub-continent to mediate between the two countries after they had exploded nuclear devices. The Spokesperson of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs K.C. Singh when questioned said on June 11: “We have not been approached in this regard”. He added for good measure “There is no place for third party involvement of any nature whatsoever in this matter……India remains committed to the path of direct bilateral dialogue with Pakistan….proposals for modalities for talks have been with Pakistan since January this year”.

Responding to the Indian statement, Pakistan said that Indian proposal for new talks were “not acceptable” and “totally unrealistic” and dubbed the offer as typical of “a traditional gimmick of Indian diplomacy”. The Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs said “Islamabad wanted urgently to address the issues of peace and security” but according to the agenda agreed at talks held in June 1997. He said that it implied working groups to tackle outstanding issues including on peace and security and Kashmir. He said that UN Security Council and Kofi Annan were leading international efforts to reduce tension on the sub-continent. “All these efforts are now being negated by India with its obstructionist policies in defiance of the will of the international community”. But the Indian Ministry of External Affairs Spokesperson K.C. Singh clarified “we have made an official invitation and it is for Pakistan to respond”. He pointed out that the first agenda item was “peace and security”. “We note that our view that the bilateral dialogue process should proceed ahead for mutual benefit is finding acceptance in Pakistan. We hope they will continue on this path.”
India is committed to fostering a relationship of trust and friendship with Pakistan, based on mutual respect and regard for each other’s concerns. This objective can only be achieved through a wide-ranging, comprehensive and sustained dialogue process which will build, as the Prime Minister said in Parliament, “a stable structure of cooperation”, and also resolve outstanding issues. The Joint Statement of June 23, 1997, identifies the subjects for discussions. These are (i) Peace and Security, including CBMs, (ii) Jammu & Kashmir, (iii) Siachen, (iv) Wullar Barrage Tulbul Navigation Project, (v) Sir Creek, (vi) Terrorism and Drug Trafficking, (vii) Economic and Commercial Cooperation, and (viii) Promotion of Friendly Exchanges in various fields.

We will be happy to resume, on the basis of the January, 1998 proposals, the round of Foreign Secretary talks which was adjourned in New Delhi last September. For this purpose we invite an official delegation led by the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan to visit New Delhi on June 22, 1998.

PRIME MINISTER

Islamabad
23 June 1998

Excellency,

I thank you for your letter of 14 June. Indeed we should hold bilateral discussions, during the SAARC Summit at Colombo, on all issues of concern particularly issues of peace and security in the nuclearized South Asia and the Jammu and Kashmir dispute which is the sole root-cause of our bilateral problems and tension in the region. In this context we had made a proposal on 11 June for the resumption of the dialogue.

I believe that it is incumbent upon both of us to launch a sincere search for an innovative and imaginative approach to overcome the obstacles in the way of genuine and secure peace in South Asia. Such a breakthrough would open a new chapter of cooperation and economic development in South Asia.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

PRIME MINISTER

New Delhi, 30 June, 1998

Excellency,

I recall our telephone conversation last month. Subsequently, my colleague, Mr. Jaswant Singh had also met you in New York during his visit to attend the Special Session of the General Assembly on the World Drug Problem. I have also received earlier you Letters of 14 and 29 May, 1998. We are also looking forward to your visit to India and to substantive talks on global issues.

We appreciate the independent role of the UN Secretary General under the Charter, and your personal contribution to the United Nations. We have taken particular note of your remarks on the need for global disarmament. Lack of meaningful progress in this field has been one of the major failings of the non-proliferation regime. Our nuclear tests were a response to proliferation of nuclear weapons and ballistic missiles in our immediate neighbourhood, which had already taken place. They were aimed at creating a deterrent to ensure our security.

Immediately after our tests, we introduced a number of proposals, including a moratorium on nuclear testing, which we are prepared to convert into a de jure, obligation. We are also willing to negotiate a Fissile Material Cut-off. You are aware of our regime of stringent export controls. We remain committed to the complete elimination of all nuclear weapons, on the lines of the Biological and Chemicals Weapon Conventions, of both of which we are a State Party. The essence of our position is that the regime must be global and non-discriminatory, and cannot arbitrarily be confined to limited geographic entities.

Recent years have witnessed significant improvement in our relations with all our neighbours, both within the framework of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation as well as in bilateral terms. We are committed to building on this process and are happy at the positive results that have been achieved so far. With Pakistan, too we have a structured process in place and intend to pursue our bilateral dialogue with them. Our experience demonstrates that outside involvement, no matter how well intentioned, is counter-productive. We will not be able to accept such involvement. Our position has been made clear in the recent official statements issued by us. These define the parameters within which we must operate. I know that I can count on your understanding.
We also have an ongoing dialogue with China where we are addressing questions of common concern, covering not only the boundary issue, but also matters relating to cooperation in the fields of trade and economics, science and culture. We aim to pursue these matters in the period ahead.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Yours sincerely,

(A.B. Vajpayee)

1422. Press Statement by Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee after his meeting with the Pakistani Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on the sidelines of the SAARC Summit in Colombo.

I was looking forward to meeting Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and we have made good meeting. Our discussions were wide ranging and covered many issues of mutual interest. We recognized the importance of building mutual trust and confidence and of establishing stable and friendly ties. There are vast opportunities of cooperation which would benefit the peoples of both countries. We would like to concretize all these opportunities so that a comprehensive and constructive structure of cooperation can come into being.

Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and I have agreed that the dialogue process should be resumed and we have directed our Foreign Secretaries to meet today and tomorrow to work out the modalities of the resumption of the dialogue.

1422A. Press Statement by Foreign Secretary K. Raghunath on the rationale for bilateral, composite and broad based dialogue to solve the outstanding issues between the two countries.

A stable, prosperous and secure Pakistan is in India's interest and we have always wanted peaceful and friendly ties with Pakistan and worked to develop a relationship based on trust and confidence. There are vast opportunities for cooperation in the economic, social and other sectors which can be utilized for the betterment of the lives of the two peoples. India strongly believes that for this purpose no time should be lost to put in place a stable structure of cooperation.

It may be recalled that the India-Pakistan dialogue process has traditionally been composite and broad-based. It was unfortunately interrupted in January 1994 at Pakistan behest. In spite of all our efforts, the hiatus continued for over three years. As a result of our consistent endeavours the official dialogue was resumed in March 1997.

During their meeting in June 1997, the Foreign Secretaries issued a Joint Statement identifying an agenda of 8 subjects for discussions between the two countries as well as a set of ideas regarding the modalities of these discussions. It may be noted that while the agenda was conclusively set out in the Joint Statement, the modalities had still to be finalized.

Our approach has all along been for a broad-based and composite dialogue which will move the relationship forward across a broad front. Such a comprehensive, constructive and sustained dialogue would build mutual trust and confidence, promote cooperation in areas of mutual benefit and address bilateral issues on which the two countries do not see eye to eye. This is in keeping with the usual pattern of inter-state relations and dialogue process which addresses the totality of the relationship. The validity of such approaches is borne out by historical experience and its rationale lies in the need to generate confidence through cooperative interaction and mechanisms such as augmenting people to people contact, encouraging trade flows and thereby helping create an environment in which the difficult and complex issues can be seriously addressed. It is also obvious that hostile and inimical activities such as the promotion and abetment of terrorism practiced by Pakistan against India erodes such an approach. Hence, it is imperative that Pakistan ceases these activities immediately.

It is our conviction that a narrow segmented approach is inherently flawed and would not sustain a dialogue process in which complex and intractable issues are to be discussed. Such an approach is therefore, counterproductive and would defeat the very purpose which a mature and balanced dialogue seeks to achieve i.e. the building of a wide-ranging and enduring relationship. An obsessive focus on a single issue or a one point agenda is as neurotic for individuals as for nation states.

During their meeting on 29-7-1998, Prime Minister of India Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee and Prime Minister of Pakistan Mian Muhammad Nawaz Sharif agreed that the dialogue process should move ahead and directed the Foreign secretaries to finalize the modalities. In keeping with directive, extensive discussions were held between the two sides. During these discussions, we emphasized that a composite dialogue process was essential in order to achieve appropriate results and establish good neighbourly and meaningful relations. We have stressed that a specific, substantive and broad-based dialogue will provide a timely opportunity for a meaningful discussions on confidence building measures and peace and security. We also stressed that India sincerely desired that all outstanding issues, including Jammu & Kashmir should be the subject of substantive and extensive discussions as part of a composite process. We once again pointed out the thrust and underpinnings of our composite and direct approach. We drew attention to the dangers inherent in a narrow and constricted approach which will only highlight differences and, vitiate the atmosphere and is, therefore, likely to disrupt and jeopardize the entire process. For us, the dialogue is a serious matter. It cannot be designed to pursue a limited agenda or promote a propagandist exercise.

As reiterated by our leaders on several occasions, we would like to commence the dialogue process with Pakistan on the basis of the broad-based and composite approach outlined above. Accordingly, we will continue our efforts to get this dialogue process underway at the earliest. In order to achieve the same, we will be in touch with Pakistan through diplomatic channels.

The statement was issued after the talks between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan in Colombo in an effort to resume the stalled dialogue process.
Joint Statement issued at the end of a Summit meeting between Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee and Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on the sidelines of the UN General Assembly session.

The Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan held a bilateral meeting on the sidelines of UN General Assembly in New York on 23rd September, 1998.

Their discussions covered the whole range of bilateral relations. The two Prime Ministers also carried out a detailed review of new developments in the region during the past few months.

They reaffirmed their common belief that an environment of durable peace and security was in the supreme interest of both India and Pakistan, and of the region as a whole. They expressed their determination to renew and reinvigorate efforts to secure such an environment. They agreed that the peaceful settlement of all outstanding issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, was essential for this purpose.

The two leaders reiterated their commitment to create conditions which would enable both countries to fully devote their resources, both human and material, to improving the lives of their people, particularly the poorest among them.

The two Prime Ministers noted with satisfaction the agreement reached between the Foreign Secretaries on operationalizing the mechanism to address all items in the agreed agenda of 23rd June, 1997 in a purposeful and composite manner. They directed the Foreign Secretaries, accordingly, to resume the dialogue on the agreed dates*.

The meeting between the two heads of government was preceded by a meeting of the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan, when they agreed to resume the bilateral dialogue based on the 23rd June 1997 joint statement. Prime Minister Vajpayee told the journalists accompanying him on board the special flight carrying the Prime Minister and Party to New York from New Delhi that he had instructed the officials to open the talks with Pakistan. These talks took place in New York and agreed to resume the stalled dialogue process based on the 23 June 1997 joint statement.

After the summit talks in New York, Mr. Vajpayee said “A new chapter in Indo-Pakistan cooperation is being opened.” He said they had agreed to reopen a hotline for communication during the crisis between the two prime ministers and to establish road and rail links between the two countries. “Firing along the border will be stopped”, he said referring to the repeated shelling across the Line of Control in Kashmir. He added that both governments have agreed to check hostile propaganda particularly in their official media. Asked whether the two countries had agreed to sign the nuclear test ban

The Foreign Secretary of India, Shri K. Raghunath, and the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan, Mr. Shamshad Ahmad, met in New York on 23rd September 1998.

Pursuant to the agreement set out in the para 4 of the Joint Statement issued at Islamabad on 23 June 1997, the Foreign Secretaries agreed as follows:

(i) The mechanism to address all the outstanding issues listed in para 4 (i) of the Joint Statement would now be made operational.

(ii) As stipulated in para 4 (ii) of the Joint Statement, all the issues shall be addressed substantively and specifically through the agreed mechanism in an integrated manner.

(iii) All outstanding issues shall be dealt with at the levels indicated below:

(a) Peace and Security including CBMs at the level of Foreign Secretaries.

(b) Jammu and Kashmir — Foreign Secretaries.

(c) Siachen — Defence Secretaries.

expressing satisfaction over the summit meeting both the Pakistan Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz and Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad said in separate briefings: “We are opening a fresh page on the bitter legacy of the past but sincerity and seriousness of purpose are required for the solution of the problem. We hope India will reciprocate the much needed sincerity of purpose and let us hope this would not be a dialogue of the dumb but will lead to concrete conclusions and substantive outcome.” Foreign Secretary Ahmad in his briefing said there were many opportunities between the two countries in the field of economics and the two could build cooperation in several other areas. He said the two prime ministers had agreed to open the road link between Lahore and Amritsar through Wagah border and a bus service would start soon. He did not agree with a questioner that discussion on the six out of eight points on the agenda would become possible only if there was at least some substantive progress on the first two points—peace and security and Kashmir. He said “these (the two points) are not inter-linked”, though he conceded that peace and security in the region are linked to the solution of the Kashmir issue. Nawaz Sharif in a TV interview in New York on September 24 said that the world community particularly UN and USA should not shy away from playing an active role for the resolution of the Kashmir dispute. He said “it will be a great service to humanity if the international community plays its part”, he said and added: “History shows that Pakistan and India have failed to resolve their disputes bilaterally and have always sought international intervention to get our disputes resolved” and referred to the World Bank mediation that helped to resolve the Indus waters issue.
(d) Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation—Secretaries, Water & Power Project

(e) Sir Creek—Additional Secretary (Defence)/Surveyors General.

(f) Terrorism and Drug Trafficking—Home/Interior Secretaries.

(g) Economic and Commercial Cooperation—Commerce Secretaries.

(h) Promotion of friendly exchanges—Secretaries, Culture in various fields.

(iv) The detailed composition of the official teams is left to the discretion of each side.

The above mentioned subjects of this composite dialogue process will be discussed at the indicated levels in separate meetings. The dates of these meetings will be determined by mutual consent. At each round, the Foreign Secretaries will hold separate meetings on:

(a) Peace and Security including CBMs and

(b) Jammu and Kashmir and review the progress of the dialogue process.

The Foreign Secretaries will commence the substantive dialogue with separate meetings on:

(a) Peace and Security including CBMs and

The remaining six subjects i.e.,

(c) Siachen,

(d) Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project,

(e) Sir Creek,

(f) Terrorism and Drug Trafficking,

(g) Economic and Commercial Cooperation and

(h) Promotion of friendly exchanges in various fields, shall be taken up in substantive and separate meetings in New Delhi in the first half of November 1998.

The cycle of meetings of the Foreign Secretaries will be continued on this pattern on agreed dates.

New York
Media Briefing by Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the Indian Military Exercises.

Islamabad, October 13, 1998.

Pakistan is “extremely disturbed” at the unusually large scale Indian Military exercises planned along the Sindh border, asserting that New Delhi’s advance information about it is deceptive.

The Indian High Commissioner was called to the Foreign Office on October 13 and conveyed Pakistan’s concern, Foreign Office spokesman Tariq Altaf said at a news briefing in Islamabad.

Commenting on reports about the military exercises India has planned to conduct during October and November which is expected to include aircraft, warships and an aircraft-carrier, he said that Pakistan was given “a routine information about a routine exercise, through a routine notification.”

“We are extremely disturbed by these reports, particularly by the reported nature, size and timing of the exercise. It appears to be on a completely different scale,” he said.

The spokesman felt that the timing of the exercise was perhaps in keeping with the New Delhi’s tradition of attempting to vitiate the atmosphere before every round of talks. “We wonder what is the purpose of these exercises, what message is sought to be conveyed and whom the Indians are trying to impress,” he said.

For the exercises the atmosphere could have been better.

The spokesman said that in the wake of the nuclear tests conducted first by India and then by Pakistan an inextricable link between the stability of the region and the issue of Jammu and Kashmir has been established.

He said the whole world is now looking at these negotiations with the expectation that India will finally abandon its intransigence… and agree that the Kashmiris should exercise their right to self-determination in accordance with the UN resolutions.

In line with its traditional approach, India has once again tried to vitiate the atmosphere of the talks by raising the ridiculous demand that Pakistan should not speak on behalf of the Kashmiris. If Pakistan is not to speak for the right of self-determination of the Kashmiris then what are talks all about? The spokesman asked.

He said that the recognition of the existence of the Kashmir dispute, the necessity for its resolution and the need for the realization of the Kashmiris’ right to self determination are the demands of the international community.
“India may choose to behave like a petulant errant, but the international community’s verdict is like an unmistakable writing on the wall,” he said. The P-5, the G-8, the UN Security Council, President Mandela, President Clinton, the US State Department’s spokesman, the US Ambassador to India, the Russians and even sane opinion in India itself are all now speaking on behalf of the Kashmiris just like Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad did last week. How many voices will India label as absurd? Where can India hide from international concern and censure?” asked the spokesman.

Mr. Tariq said that Pakistan believes that this post-nuclearisation phase of talks presents a historic opportunity for a positive new direction in the peaceful resolution of disputes, particularly the core issues of Kashmir, and will open unlimited possibilities for cooperation and normal good neighbourly relations.

Joint Statement issued at the end of India-Pakistan dialogue between the Foreign Secretaries of the two countries.

Islamabad, October 18, 1998.

Mr. Shamshad Ahmad, Foreign Secretary of Pakistan and Mr. K. Raghunath, Foreign Secretary of India, met in Islamabad on 15-18 October, 1998. They held separate meetings on agenda item (a) Peace and Security, including Confidence-building Measures, and (b) Jammu and Kashmir, on the basis of the 23rd June, 1997 Agreement. The talks were held in a cordial and frank atmosphere within the framework of the composite and integrated dialogue process.

The deliberations between the Foreign Secretaries were guided by the shared belief of their Prime Ministers as expressed in their joint Statement of 23 September, 1998 that an environment of durable peace and security was in the supreme interest of both countries, and the region as a whole, and that the peaceful settlement of all outstanding issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, was essential for this purpose.

The Foreign Secretary of India called on the Prime Minister of Pakistan Mr. Nawaz Sharif, and conveyed to him a message of goodwill from Prime Minister A.B. Vajpayee. The Prime Minister of Pakistan warmly reciprocated the Indian Prime Minister’s good wishes. The Indian Foreign Secretary also called on Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz.

The meeting on 16th October, 1998 discussed issues of peace and security, including Confidence Building Measures. Both sides underscored their commitment to reduce the risk of a conflict by building mutual confidence in the nuclear and conventional fields.

The meeting on 17th October discussed Jammu and Kashmir. The two sides reiterated their respective positions.

The two Foreign Secretaries agreed that the next round of talks on the issues of Peace and Security and Confidence Building Measures and Jammu and Kashmir, respectively, and a review of the round would be held in the first half of February, 1999 in New Delhi.

* When the Indian Foreign Secretary arrived in Islamabad on October 15, the Pakistani Foreign Secretary while receiving him said in this drastically changed environment it is more important “we joint together for durable peace, which requires durable solutions and durable solutions require bold decisions in accordance with our international and bilateral commitments.” Indian Foreign Secretary Raghunath however ruled out the possibility of third party involvement by saying “We believe there is no room for any third party involvement.” “The only way to discuss our relations and to discuss issues and also other aspects of these relations is through direct bilateral dialogue,” he said.
Mr. Shamshad said after the nuclearisation of South Asia the situation poses new challenges both to India and Pakistan — the challenges not only to avert the risk of conflict but also to prevent an arms race in nuclear and ballistic missiles fields. He regarded it a challenge to develop a “regime of mutual restraint and stabilization in nuclear and ballistic fields”. Mr. Raghunath said: “India is committed to fostering peaceful and friendly relations with Pakistan…. We come here in a spirit of friendship. We want to work with the government and the people of Pakistan to see a stable structured cooperation. We can build trust and confidence and address all outstanding issues …. We enter into this process with a constructive and positive frame of mind and ultimate goal is to improve relations between the two countries for the benefit of the peoples of the two countries.” Indian Foreign Secretary paying tribute to Pakistan Prime Minister said that Mr. Nawaz Sharif genuinely believes that both India and Pakistan have been left behind in the field of economic development and the time has come for both countries to overcome this problem. He said: “If we are able to overcome our problems, there is immense potential for both countries to cooperate in all areas.” Concluding his remarks he assured that “we will do everything that is required to fulfil the objective of dialogue and these objectives have already been spelled out”.

At the end of the two days of talks, the Spokesman for the Pakistan Foreign Office said: “The foreign secretaries discussed agenda item Kashmir”. They reiterated their respective positions and exchanged perceptions on the subject. Shamshad Ahmad said it would be unrealistic to expect outcome in this short session with any concrete progress on an issue which is most complex one. He said “though Pakistan is pursuing all options including third party mediation and bilateral talks with India, the issue of Kashmir is a cause for serious peace and security problems in this part of the world, no body should expect we will come out of these three hours talks with something concrete as an agreement or something that constitutes progress.” Mr. Raghunath said: “The talks are being held on the subject of Kashmir as a composite dialogue process. We should address this as well as other issues in a realistic and practical manner with a view to moving towards understanding for the solutions which are mutually acceptable.” He said “this is the substance on the basis of which we are holding dialogue. This process will continue and we will meet again.” Mr. Raghunath clarified that “he wanted to let Pakistan know Indian position on all matters which has been made clear, and all my colleagues shared this view.”

On the conclusion of the current dialogue process Mr. Raghunath said in relation to Kashmir: “We believe that a basic requirement is that we proceed in a realistic and pragmatic fashion and that we do so with proper assessment of our situation and also in a friendly manner…. We look at a problem in its totality, you take those aspects that are easier to handle, you move from easy to difficult matters and it does not generally help in international relations to front load a process with problems that are unduly complicated.” He however conceded that the Kashmir question needed to be addressed “substantively” with identification of “the basic cuases” and “the methods needed to tackle the problem.” Pakistan Foreign Secretary maintained that while Islamabad showed “utmost flexibility” and realism but emphasized “realism requires an acceptance of the objective realities as they exist; not as we chose to perceive these selectively”. But he added that in the name of realism “we cannot tread over the fundamental principles as well as the underlying causes of tension and conflict in our region” and added that “pragmatism presupposed a willingness to respond in reasonable manner to the requirements of any given situation”.

On his return to Delhi on October 19, Foreign Secretary K. Raghunath offered a down beat report and warned that “fundamental” differences remained over key issues like Kashmir. While stressing the importance of the fact that both sides had agreed to keep
I welcome all the members to this meeting of the Consultative Committee of the Ministry of External Affairs. This is the first meeting of the newly constituted Consultative Committee. I am sure that the Members would give valuable suggestions on the two agenda items before us today. India Pakistan relations and India’s nuclear policy. I assure you that your suggestion will receive full attention of the Government. I propose that we begin the discussions with the first item, India-Pakistan relations.

It has been my Government’s endeavour to improve relations with Pakistan. From the time we assumed office, we conveyed by word and by writing to the leadership of Pakistan that we were sincere in our desire to develop peaceful, friendly and cooperative ties. This is fully consistent with the thinking of our people and also in keeping with our country’s previous approaches and policies towards Pakistan.

As Hon’ble members are aware, I met Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif in Colombo on the sidelines of the SAARC summit in July and in New York in September this year. At these meetings, I urged that we should work together to develop trust and confidence, avail of the many opportunities for mutually beneficial cooperation in the economic, social and other fields and also address our problems in a realistic and practical manner. I also urged that our policy has to be to move our bilateral relationship forward across a broad specification that we can fully devote our resources to improving the lives of our people. At the same time, I also emphasized to Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif that instigation and support of terrorism was completely incompatible with our desire for friendly and peaceful relations and that these activities must cease immediately. We have made it clear to Pakistan that we will do everything necessary to defeat the proxy war in Jammu and Kashmir, and other hostile activities elsewhere in the country, and safeguard the sovereignty and territorial integrity of our nation.

Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan were engaged since March 1997 in working out the agenda and modalities of the official dialogue between the two countries. We wished to ensure that the agenda would be comprehensive and the modalities such that would enable a composite dialogue to proceed in a constructive and sustained fashion. After extensive discussions we were able to persuade Pakistan that this was the right approach. During my meeting in New York with Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on 23rd September 1998, the Foreign Secretaries reported to us that they had reached an understanding on the modalities of the dialogue. We welcomed this development. This composite dialogue has now begun. The Foreign Secretaries met in Islamabad from 15th to 18th October, 1998 to discuss the subjects of peace and security, including confidence building measures and Jammu & Kashmir. Hon'ble Members, would also be aware that Pakistan delegations are currently in New Delhi for talks on six subjects, namely, Tulbul Navigation project, Siachen, Sir Creek, economic and commercial cooperation, terrorism and drug trafficking, and promotion of friendly exchange in various fields. The first four of these subjects have already been discussed and the remaining two will be discussed over the coming few days.

I am satisfied that our dialogue is continuing. We would like this process to be sustained and comprehensive, and I have mentioned this to Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif during my telephonic conversation with him following the talks in Islamabad. It is only such a process that will contribute to building trust and confidence, promote mutually beneficial cooperation and address bilateral issues. My Government is committed to this dialogue which reflects the nation’s conviction and confidence that it is only through directly bilateral discussions that we can move ahead in our bilateral relationship with Pakistan. This is also what both countries have undertaken to do in the Simla Agreement of 1972.

Regarding the discussions in Islamabad during talks on Peace and Security including CBMs, we drew attention to our thinking on security concepts and our nuclear policy. We also emphasised that the practical approach would be to work out specific CBMs which would enable feasible and step-by-step understandings to be reached. In this context, we proposed a number of specific CBMs particularly on prevention of accidental or unauthorized use of nuclear weapons, up-gradation and greater interaction in multilateral fora, etc. The Pakistan side also put forward some proposals. We have agreed to continue discussions on this subject. There is also a possibility that experts from both sides could get together and carry forward these discussions.

Regarding discussions on J&K, we stated clearly that the entire state of J&K was an integral part of India, that a part of the state’s territory was under the illegal and forcible occupation of Pakistan, and that the legal and constitutional position in J&K did not admit of any change. In this we drew on the unanimous Resolution adopted in both House of Parliament in February 1994. We also drew Pakistan’s attentions to the fact that its sponsorship of terrorism in J&K constituted an attempt to alter the status quo established by the Simla Agreement, and that this was completely unacceptable. While emphasizing our belief in the principle that the issue needed to be resolved peacefully and through bilateral talks, we made it clear that proxy war through terrorism could never bring about a resolution of the issue, nor could it erode our resilience and resolve. We called upon Pakistan to come to terms with this reality and cease its sponsorship of terrorism.

I had mentioned earlier that discussions have also taken place during the current meetings in New Delhi on four out of six subjects. As far as the Tulbul Navigation Project is concerned, we have made it clear that the project is aimed at the welfare of the people of Jammu & Kashmir. It aims only to regulate the flow of water in the Jhelam river between the Wullar lake and Spore and is fully in keeping with the provisions of the Indus Waters Treaty. We had unilaterally suspended implementation of this in 1987 in the hope of being able to reach agreement with Pakistan. This continues to elude us. On Siachen, we have emphasized that the first requirement in any situation of confrontation is a ceasefire after which other issues can be discussed. We would like an early agreement, but are ready to remain deployed along the Saltoro Ridge as long as necessary. During discussions on the Sir Creek issue, we have underlined the fact that our claim is historically valid, and in keeping with international norms. In the field of economic and commercial cooperation we have urged Pakistan to join us in enhancing mutually beneficial cooperation in all possible areas, and to seek progress wherever possible. Pakistan can make a start by extending MFN treatment to Indian goods as they are required to do under WTO rules. In this context, I had also indicated to Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif during our meeting in New York that India was ready and willing to discuss the possibility of the purchase of power from Pakistan.

Following the discussions that took place between the Foreign Secretaries there has been agreement to hold the next round of Foreign Secretary level talks in the first half of February, 1999 in New Delhi. I would like to reiterate to the Hon'ble members that we have embarked on this process of holding a composite dialogue with Pakistan with sincerity and seriousness. However, we made it clear to Pakistan that, apart from being sincere and serious we also need to be realistic and pragmatic. There is no scope in this process for any third party intervention. Pakistan must also give up its policies of supporting terrorism against India. Our national interests and the welfare of our people will be the touchstone of our policies and there will be no compromise on these issues.

1430. Joint Statement issued at the end of talks on the promotion of friendly exchanges between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, November 13, 1998.

As part of the composite and integrated dialogue between India and Pakistan on the basis of the agreed agenda of 23rd June 1997. Promotion of Friendly Exchanges in Various Fields was discussed in New Delhi on the 13th November 1998. The Indian delegation was led by Dr. R.V. Vaidyanatha Ayyar, Secretary, Department of Culture, and the Pakistan delegation was led by Syed Roshan Zamir, Secretary of Culture, Sports and Youth Affairs of the Government of Pakistan.

Syed Roshan Zamir called on Dr. Murli Manohar Joshi, Minister for Human Resources Development.

The discussions were held in a frank, cordial and constructive atmosphere.

Both sides exchanged views on various aspects of Promotion of Friendly Exchanges between India and Pakistan and agreed to continue discussions at the next round of the dialogue process.

The Spokesman of the Pakistan delegation Tariq Altaf said in Islamabad on November 13 that “The series of talks as a whole have not been positive. We had come with high hopes which remained unfulfilled. We did not find any flexibility,” and added a caveat that the failure of the talks strengthened the case for third party mediation. Expressing pessimism about the future he said it would be “foolhardy to expect success at the next round of talks slated for February in Islamabad.” Vivek Katju a member of the Indian delegation however said; “Some beginning has been made to stop this vicious cycle of mistrust from continuing.” “From our side every step has been taken to make the talks a success and that efforts will continue in a serious and constructive manner.” The Pakistani spokesman said that the beginning of a bus service between the two countries which was likely to start soon, was a rare point of agreement from six-day talks.

The Pakistan Foreign Office Spokesman on November 13 noted with regret in Islamabad that extremist elements in India were again out to wreck the process of peace and rapprochement in South Asia. He was replying to a question drawing attention to a statement by the Indian Home Minister L. K. Advani alleging that Pakistan is a “terrorist State”. He said that Advani’s statement was contrary to the understanding reached between the two prime ministers in New York. He said that Pakistan’s positive position in opposing terrorism is well recognized in international community. Pakistan condemns all types of terrorist activities whether perpetrated by individuals, organizations, groups or states. “Terrorism cannot be equated with rights of the peoples to self-determination and freedom movements against foreign occupation or alien domination,” the Spokesman said.
Pakistan described talks with India as a “barren round” accusing the latter of adopting an intransigence attitude and showing lack of sincerity.

“We had gone to India with an open mind and a constructive attitude. But the Indian side was not willing to reciprocate. It was a barren round,” the Foreign Office spokesman said on November 14 on his return from New Delhi.

The spokesman said the talks on six subjects, Siachen, Sir Creek, Wullar Barrage, economic and commercial cooperation, terrorism and drug trafficking and friendly exchanges concluded in New Delhi without any progress.

He said that the Pakistan delegation had gone to New Delhi to participate in these talks after the resumption of the bilateral dialogue. The Prime Ministers of Pakistan and India had in a joint statement issued in New York on September 23 last agreed that an environment of durable peace and security was in the supreme national interest of both countries. They had also agreed that resolution of all outstanding issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, was essential for this purpose.

Siachen Issue

He, however said that at the Delhi talks the Indian side was not prepared to make any progress towards the settlement of these disputes.

On the Siachen issue, they (Indians) resiled from the agreement reached in 1989 to redeploy troops to positions in conformity with the Simla Agreement. “On the contrary they sought to legitimize their illegal occupation of the Siachen glacier by proposing a cease-fire without an effective and central monitoring mechanism,” he said.

The spokesman said on Wullar Barage the Indians sought to justify their violations of the Indus Water Treaty of 1960 and Pakistan’s attempt to move towards settlement of the dispute through arbitration, if necessary was rejected.

Sir Creek Issue

On the Sir Creek issue, the spokesman said, the Indians sought to reopen the Kutch Tribunal Award of 1966, accepted by both sides regarding demarcation of the land boundary in the Sir Creek area.
Terrorism And Drug Trafficking Issues

In the Meeting on terrorism and drug trafficking, the Indians reported their “baseless and unsubstantiated allegations.” “While categorically rejecting these charges, the Pakistan side produced detailed evidence of Indian sponsored terrorist activities, including bomb blasts, and random killings all over the country,” the spokesman maintained.

He said the Pakistan side handed a list of terrorist training camps in India and incidents of bomb blasts and killings in Pakistan, which the apprehended Indian agents had confessed to have committed.

The spokesman said that the Pakistan side stated that India was engaged in State terrorism against the innocent Kashmiris who were waging an indigenous struggle for their right of self-determination.

“We also categorically rejected the Indian attempt to describe the Kashmir liberation movement as terrorism, and pointed out that this was a legitimate struggle in accordance with the UN Charter and international principles,” he said.

The Pakistan delegation to all these six meetings was of the opinion that without resolution of the issues including the core dispute of Kashmir, the environment could not be conducive for promotion of economic cooperation and people-to-people contacts. An environment of peace and security is a prerequisite for real progress towards normalization of relations.

Note from the Ministry of External Affairs to the Pakistan High Commission in India regarding exercises to be conducted by the Indian Air Force.

New Delhi, January 13, 1999.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

The Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India presents its compliments to the High Commission for the Islamic Republic of Pakistan in New Delhi, and has the honour to state that the Indian Air Force is planning to conduct a Command Level Exercise in March-April 1999. As required under paras 5 & 6 of the Agreement between India and Pakistan on Advance Notice on Military Exercises, Manoeuvres and Troop Movements, the following information concerning the above-mentioned air exercise is communicated for the information of the Government of Pakistan.

(a) Type/Level of Exercise: Command Level Air Exercise

(b) Area of Exercise: The exercise area is within the air space over Indian territory bounded by 3120N to 7900 E to 2830 N to 7900 E to 2730 N to 7700 E to 2730 N to 7300 E to 2800 N to 7200 E extending to the border except for Jammu, Amritsar, Pathankot and Suratgarh where they will stay 5 kms short of the border.

(c) Period: 21 March 1999 to 14 April, 1999

The Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for the Islamic Republic of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

Statement by Pakistan Foreign Office Spokesman on allegations in the Indian press about Pakistan's complicity in a plot to blow up the US Consulates in India.

Islamabad, January 21, 1999.

The Foreign Office Spokesman described the allegations in the Indian press about Pakistani complicity in a plot to blow up US Consulates in India as most sinister fabrications designed solely to malign Pakistan by exploiting the international sentiment against terrorism. The spokesman said that such planted reports by Indian official agencies in their media were carried out almost every year on the eve of the Indian National Day. This time, the tendentious reports had been particularly reprehensible as they aimed at undermining our relations with the United State.

The spokesman said that the Indian Government had never officially raised the reported allegations with Pakistan. Also, the US State Department spokesman, in a Press briefing on January 20, denied any knowledge of the alleged Pakistan complicity.

The Indian press allegations were no more than vicious propaganda and a crude attempt to damage Pakistan's image and create misunderstanding in our relations with the United States. Such blatant propaganda will not cover up the Indian State sponsored terrorism in Kashmir nor the subversive activities of the agencies to destabilize neighboring countries. This would also not help India to divert international attention from persecution of Christian and Muslim Minorities and rising fanaticism inside India.

Pakistan condemned terrorism in all its from in the strongest terms, As a victim of terrorism, Pakistan was determined to fight this menace and its cooperation with international efforts including those of the United States, were well known, the spokesman added.

Record of discussions of Indian Foreign Secretary and Defence Secretary with Pakistani High Commissioner.

New Delhi, January 25, 1999.

The Pakistan High Commissioner had been summoned for the meeting.

The Defense Secretary stated that India was trying to maintain absolute calm and normalcy along the Line of Control. But information generated in the valley, and through POK radio indicated that an effort was being made from the Pakistan side to not only generate excitement but even incitement. Rallies were being held in POK and in some places in Pakistan. Volunteers were being called upon to congregate to march towards the Line of Control. Declarations were being made that a commando force would be raised. Once such activities begin, the Defense Ministry naturally gets concerned. If people turn up on a large scale, or even a medium scale, at the border, it puts strain on the troops along the border. The decision on the spot may have to be taken by lower level officials. This would not only lead to escalation but would also add a new dimension. If people in authority make pronouncements on radio, exhorting people to certain kinds of action, the consequences could be difficult. The discussions that the Pakistan Foreign Minister had in India do not square up with what is going on at the ground level.

The Defense Secretary wondered if everything that was happening at the ground level was not being fully reported or known in Islamabad. Or the lower level people were exceeding the brief. In any case the Government of India felt that its concerns should be shared with the authorities in Pakistan.

The Pakistan High commissioner stated that the two countries had their respective political positions. On the ground, however, Pakistan was fully committed to respecting the Line of Control. During the Pakistan Foreign Minister’s visit, his attention had been drawn by the Indian EAM to certain statements made by POK leaders. The High commissioner wondered if the Defense Secretary was referring to these very statements or some further information had come our way.

The Defense Secretary stated that repeated broadcasts and exhortations continued. Rallies were being held. Soon enough such activities could turn into an action programme. If they are repeated over and over again, people could consider them as an indication of Government policy. If feelings are aroused, they may become difficult to manage. The Indian Government wanted to be sure that the Federal Government in Pakistan was quite confident that it could prevent an escalation at the border.

Foreign Secretary stated that if passions are aroused things could get out of hand.

The High Commissioner stated that the dangers of a conflict were obvious to Pakistan. The Pakistan armed forces should be able to check any movement towards the border. Officially the Government of Pakistan is not involved in these activities. There could be some small scale local incitement. But he did not visualise any large scale incitement.

Foreign Secretary said that low scale incitement at different levels could turn into large scale activity. With the propaganda that is presently being carried out, minds are getting destabilised. Wars are often made in the minds of men. The Simla Agreement also states that hostile propaganda directed against each other would not be carried out. The Government of India would like to know if the Federal Government in Pakistan is fully aware of all that is going on. It is hoped that the Government of Pakistan realises the incalculable danger of what appears to be not so innocent activity.

The Defense Secretary said that so far we had disregarded these. But with so much publicity being generated, a pattern is developing, where as friends we must share this concern. On that very day, some Air Force personnel had been killed near Srinagar. Anger was being sought to be directed at uniformed personnel. This generates concern in the Ministry of Defense.

The Pakistan High Commissioner stated that Pakistan did not want war or conflict with India from which it would have nothing to gain. The Pakistan Armed Forces should be able to prevent an obvious and dangerous escalation through people marching to the Line of Control. As regards publicity, both sides should make efforts to tone it down,

The Foreign Secretary requested that as soon as the High Commissioner had any feedback regarding the demarche being made, the Government of India would be happy to know of it.

1435. Remarks of Pakistan Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz at the luncheon hosted by him in honour of 100 Indian and Pakistani parliamentarians.

Islamabad, February 12, 1999.

Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz said in Islamabad on February 12 that Pakistan-India relations will remain stunted unless India demonstrates willingness to work for the resolution of “fundamental differences” between the two countries.

He said India must go beyond its present emphasis on the peripheral areas of bilateral relations, adding “confidence building measures are not an end in itself”.

Mr. Sartaj was speaking at a luncheon he hosted in honour of over 100 Indian and Pakistani parliamentarians. Over 60 Indian MPs are in Islamabad to participate in an unofficial two-day Indo-Pak parliamentary conference which began on February 12.

Mr. Sartaj said sans progress on the core issue of Kashmir, Indo-Pak relations will continue to be plagued by mutual mistrust and suspicion. This will inhabit normalization and growth in their bilateral relations, he added. The complicated issue of Kashmir, if analysed dispassionately, can become a simple issue. The Kashmiris are waiting fulfillment of the unequivocal promises made to them by Indian leaders through UN resolutions to give them their right to self-determination.

Need For Peace

"Unless we can move towards a settlement of the Kashmir dispute on the basis of respect for the inherent right to self-determination of the Kashmiri people, peace will continue to elude South Asia. This is the obvious lesson of 50 years. There is no escape from this fact", he said.

He said apart from the relevant UN Security Council resolutions that provide the legal framework for a settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute, the Simla Agreement also obligates both countries to a final settlement of this issue.

Mr. Sartaj said there is a national consensus on the issue of Kashmir as Pakistanis consider it a just cause hence are committed to support it. He said the Kashmir dispute is a nuclear flashpoint and it must be settled in accordance with the wishes of the Kashmiris.

He said the international community recognizes the seriousness of the Kashmir dispute. He particularly referred to the concern expressed by NAM current Chairman and South African President Nelson Mandela on the issue. Besides Kashmir, there are other issues as well, he said.

Mr. Sartaj said India took over Siachen in April 1984 in violation of the Simla Agreement. The Simla Agreement did not allow any side to unilaterally change the ground situation either through use of force or threat of use of force. Prior to the Indian takeover these areas were administered by Pakistan. A fact that was not challenged for over 30 years.

He said after several years of negotiations, the two sides agreed in June, 1989 to troop withdrawals to positions on the ground to conform to the Simla Agreement, but since then India also reneged from that agreement as well. Referring to the Wullar Barrage, Mr. Sartaj said Pakistan discovered in April 1985 that India had started construction of the Wullar Barrage in contravention of the Indus Waters Treaty which clearly proscribes the erection by India of a man-made storage facility on the Jhelum main.

Under, the treaty, India cannot interfere with the flow of water in the Jhelum river. In negotiations with the Indian government, Pakistan had proposed alternative solutions which could just as well meet local navigational requirements. If the barrage is constructed, it will have a negative impact on the downstream uses of Jhelum waters in Pakistan, including power generation and irrigation.

Sir Creek Issue

He said the issue of boundary demarcation along Sir Creek was resurrected by India after the Rann of Kutch award. During the deliberations of the Kutch Tribunal, both sides had put forward maps to substantiate their claims. In the end, a 1914 map was accepted by the Tribunal for purposes of boundary demarcation. At the time of making the award, the tribunal noted that there was no need for delineation of the boundary along Sir Creek since that was already clearly demarcated on the map along the east bank of the Creek. India since claims that Sir Creek is a navigable water channel and, therefore, the boundary should be along the midstream, he said.

Sir Creek does not have year round or regular water flows for it to be even considered a navigable channel. He said these Indian actions and claims have given rise to serious misgivings among the Pakistan public whether India is actually willing and able to adopt an approach of good-neighbourliness. They need to be assured of Indian intentions towards Pakistan. Mr. Sartaj said to overcome 50 years of mistrust and suspicion, India would need to demonstrate a clear vision and the requisite political will to resolve outstanding issues between the two countries.
Arms Race

He said for too long the two countries have been engaged in an unproductive arms race at the cost of the economic prosperity and development of the common man in both countries. This cycle needs to be broken. He said the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan in their joint statement of September 23, 1998 agreed that an environment of durable peace and security is in the supreme national interest of the two countries as well as the region. They further agreed that resolution of all outstanding issues, including the Jammu and Kashmir dispute, is essential for this purpose. They unequivocally committed themselves to work for the attainment of these shared objectives. These high sentiments now need to be translated into reality. “If we do not progress beyond the conceptual articulation of our desired goals, then our effort would remain hollow and without purpose. Indeed, it can become a sterile exercise in self delusion.” He said.

He said Pakistan is committed to continue dialogue with India in its desire to find just solution to all outstanding problems between the two countries, including Jammu and Kashmir and the problem related to regional peace and security.

Nuclearised Environment

“Public opinion in Pakistan will not be able to sustain indefinitely a process that becomes an exercise in futility. In the present nuclearised environment, tensions and hostilities carry even greater risks both for our two countries as well as the region and beyond.” The current situation, if allowed to drift, is fraught with many dangers. Mr. Sartaj said Pakistan would like to see a vibrant India engaged in mutually beneficial cooperation with all its neighbours. “We would like to see a South Asia that is free of poverty and economic deprivation. We would like to see all our peoples prosper and progress. South Asia can become a major new destination for foreign investment in what observers called the fourth wave of the Asian miracle. But to take full advantage of these opportunities, we have to improve the security environment of the region,” said Mr. Sartaj. He urged Indian MPs that as leaders and opinion-makers in India, they could make important contributions to ensure that the present bilateral process does not relapse into a dialogue for the sake of dialogue. “You can reinforce the process of negotiations between the two governments to make it more meaningful. You can use your influence with the Indian government to find just resolutions to all the outstanding issues between the two countries. Including Jammu and Kashmir,” he said. The nuclearisation of the region in May last has given rise to new challenges for the two counties. The qualitatively changed geo-strategic environment in South Asia also imposes onerous responsibilities on both Pakistan and India.

POLITICAL RELATIONS: 1990-2007

1436. Media Briefing by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office on the visit of Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee.

Lahore, February 19, 1999.

The two-day Pakistan-India summit is “a historic opportunity” and Pakistan is looking forward to “a substantive and result-oriented dialogue” and hoped that “all issues including the central issue of Kashmir, will be discussed”

“Ours is an incremental approach and we believe that all issues facing the two countries will come up for discussion,” Mr. Tariq Altaf, Foreign Office spokesman, said in a briefing on February 19.

“All spectrums of the relations are expected to be discussed by the summit,” he added. He said that Pakistan will extend a warm welcome to Indian Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee on February 20.

“It is open to the Prime Ministers to talk about everything, take initiatives if they will, decisions if they will,” he told a questioner. The newsmen wanted to know what items on the agenda will be discussed.

Indian High Commissioner G. Parthasarthy confirmed in Lahore on the same day that there was no set agenda for the talks between the two Prime Ministers.

Talking to the daily Nation at the dinner the High Commissioner hosted for the advance party of the Indian delegation and members of the Indian media, he said that the matter was first aired at a meeting between Foreign Secretaries of two countries. It has since then been carried on by officials from both sides to prepare a common ground for the expected dialogue. He said Officials have been working hard to prepare the ground to enable negotiations to move forward. The climate in both countries, he felt was ripe for improving relations and ensuring increased cooperation. If countries in Europe and elsewhere can join hands to move ahead, there is no reason for India and Pakistan to continue unnecessary hostility and confrontation.

Both are now nuclear powers and it is time for them to forge a joint policy which could improve bilateral relations and improve the lot of people of both countries. He said that it will largely depend on the two leaders to determine the agenda and the scope of dialogue at their meeting.

Mr. Brajesh Mishra, the National Security Adviser and Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister, who was among the advance arrivals, told the same daily Nation that among the various proposed engagements of Mr. Vajpayee is his visit to Minar-e-Pakistan. This, he emphasized, is a clear indication by the Indian leader of his implicit faith and belief in existence of Pakistan as an independent State. Mr. Mishra said that essentially the dialogue between the two leaders was a continuation of their previous contacts. They had been in touch telephonically and also met at various places.

The Indian official said that although both leaders had some constraints, but he could say that the Indian Prime Minister was genuinely interested in carrying forward the forthcoming dialogue to improve relations between the two countries.

Asked about “some serious constraints” which have stood in the way of progress, he said: “The art of diplomacy is to avoid mine-fields and tread carefully forward” But he added that the Indian side is keen to move as much forward as its Pakistani counterpart wishes to. His optimism in the outcome of talks between the two leaders though "We are willing to resolve our problems on the basis of justice and equity, in a spirit of finding solution to issues. We have to take incremental approach to prove that we are there to solve the issues," Mr. Tariq said.

He said it is after a long time that on the initiative of the Indian Prime Minister formal one-to-one talks are to be held in Lahore. Pakistan expects the talks will be result-oriented and substantive.

He said the visit of the Indian Prime Minister has been welcomed by Pakistan and Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif. This historic opportunity is expected to produce results. "It must not pass without producing results." He said "Now is the time to resolve all outstanding disputes," he said.

The centrality of the Kashmir issue to the security of South Asia is well known. This is for the first time that the two heads of government will be talking after the two countries have become nuclear powers.

"Kashmir, restrained nuclear regime, end to arms race, end of war and conflicts etc. would be on the agenda."

He said it is at the initiative of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif that the stalled talks between India and Pakistan have been resumed and Pakistan wishes that cause of peace is promoted.

He said "the core issue of Kashmir is holding progress on talks, so some forward-looking measures are required to be taken."

 guarded came out quite loud and clear...

Pakistan's foreign minister Sartaj Aziz on February 18 had expressed similar sentiments in welcoming the visit of Prime Minister Vajpayee. He said it was "imperative that the two countries evolved a strategic restraint regime in South Asia covering both the nuclear and conventional fields. Sartaj Aziz welcomed Vajpayee's desire to discuss Kashmir issue with Nawaz and hoped that the talks would lead to "a solution of this bitter dispute". "But we also realize that it is a difficult issue which has not quick solution," he said and added: "Mr. Vajpayee was the first Prime Minister in decades to agree to discuss the Kashmir dispute with Pakistan. It is a positive sign and Pakistan has exhaust the bilateral process before seeking multilateral negotiations." He reiterated that since India opposed any mediation or any outside intervention in settling the Kashmir dispute, India must "seriously commit itself to a solution of the root cause of tension and hostilities between the two countries. Saying that the meeting was taking place at a defining moment in the history of South Asia, the nuclearization of the region has given rise to new challenges as well as many opportunities to the two countries. If we are able to seize the opportunities and establish a tension-free and stable environment it will permit our peoples to channelize their energies and resources to the more pressing requirements of nation-building and socio-economic development."

Listing the unilateral steps taken by Pakistan to ease tension between the two countries, Sartaj Aziz said they were: resumption of dialogue, unilateral release of Indian fishermen, New Delhi-Lahore Bus service, sale of electricity and enhanced sporting contacts. Adding he said the parliamentarians of the two countries had also met recently in Islamabad and familiarized themselves with each other's perspective.
1437. Statement of Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee on arrival in Lahore.

Lahore, February 20, 1999.

Your Excellency Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif,

Friends,

It gives me great pleasure to be here in Pakistan. Let me make no secret of the fact that I have looked forward to this day from the time I exchanged greetings and good wishes with Prime Minister Sharif following the swearing-in of my government last year. In response to his message of facilitations, I had said that India and Pakistan must not remain mired in the past, prisoners of old contentions. We must respond positively and with energy to the call of the future, and the aspirations of our peoples, specially the younger generation, for a more cooperative relationship. I wish to repeat this today, and say with great frankness, sincerity and candour that the people of India desire nothing but the friendliest of relations with the people of Pakistan. In this context, this bus on which I have arrived is not only a mode of physical transport, but also a symbol that carries on it the wishes, hopes and aspirations of the people of India for a better, shared future with the people of Pakistan. It is a symbol of what is possible between us and, if one reflects a little, also of what we have denied ourselves.

I recall once telling a friend from Pakistan that we can change history, but we cannot change geography. India and Pakistan are bound together by geography. Yet, geography is not the only thing that binds us. Our ties go beyond the physical to an emotional level, and the instances are there for all to see. Today, I come with only one message: the message of peace, brotherhood and friendship. I have had occasion to say that India is interested in a secure, stable and prosperous Pakistan. I wish to reiterate that and to say that this is the only logical course, not only for India, but also for Pakistan. One often hears from people who come back from a visit to Pakistan that there is a sense of insecurity that India has not accepted the existence of Pakistan. Let me say, with all sincerity, that this is a completely unfounded thought. There is no basis for this feeling. India wants Pakistan to prosper. We should work together to eliminate poverty, disease and illiteracy. Our security and our well-being are mutually reinforcing. How much longer will we remain prisoners of history, allowing others to divide us and use us? Again, let me say that we need to think of the future, of our children and grandchildren, coming generations that will judge us by our conduct alone, not by our compulsions or by our own sense of historical right or wrong. Let us look to those coming generations and try and make this world a better place to live in for them.
My delegation, as you can see, is drawn from all sections and all walks of life in India. We all come in a spirit of openness, of friendship and of camaraderie. There can be no greater testimonial than this to the acceptance of the idea of an abiding friendship between our peoples. I hardly need emphasize the ardent desire, indeed, the thirst, that exists on both sides for deeper cultural and sporting contact. The recent cricket and hockey series have proved that. These contacts should go on, without any hiatus.

Relations between India and Pakistan are also marked by certain outstanding issues. It is clear that these issues cannot be addressed without some sort of a mechanism designed for that purpose. The composite dialogue process, which began in October 98, was conceived for precisely such a purpose. It seeks to build trust and confidence, avail of the many opportunities for mutually beneficial cooperation, and address outstanding issues. The process may be slow, but it is sure, it is steady, and what is more, it is already producing results. There is, in fact, no other way to make progress. Let me add that, were it not for the trust generated through this process, and the momentum created by it, I would probably not be here speaking to you today. Therefore, this process needs time and patience. In the meanwhile, wherever progress is possible it should be clinched, and issues should not be tied to each other. We need to move forward, and this is an area where I am in complete agreement with Prime Minister Sharif with whom, let me add, it has been wonderful to talk these last few months and discuss various issues.

I am looking forward to meetings with Prime Minister Sharif and his colleagues. Most of all, I am looking forward to my stay in this beautiful and historic city of Lahore, one of the truly enchanting and historically rich cities of the world. It is my hope that the Delhi- Lahore - Delhi bus journey will not only be one that Indian and Pakistani passengers will make to each other’s countries, but also one that will enable both our peoples to journey into and explore each other’s hearts and minds, and discover therein the deep reservoirs of love and goodwill that, I am sure, exist on both sides.

Speech of Pakistan Prime Minister:

Mr. Prime Minister,
Distinguished Guests from India,
Ladies and Gentlemen.

It is springtime in Lahore. The chill of winter is fading away. We are delighted, Mr. Prime Minister, that you are here with us to share the bounties of this gentle season so full of fragrance and flowers.

Through the centuries this city of majestic monuments and exotic gardens has been witness to momentous events that have shaped the course of South Asian history. Not far from here lies buried the poet philosopher of Pakistan, Allama Iqbal, whose verses extolling the dignity of human race continue to inspire us. The legendary city of Lahore represents the glory of our culture, heritage and traditions. We welcome you to this city. We are delighted to extend to you hospitality in Pakistan in keeping with the best Islamic traditions. We are confident that your goodwill visit will, Inshallah, have a positive outcome. This is essential for the good of our people and their future. May your voyage from Delhi to Lahore be the precursor of happy times ahead.

Mr. Prime Minister

More than half-a-century has passed since independence yet Pakistan and India continue to be embroiled in the bitter legacy of unresolved disputes. This has taken a tragic toll. We have been left far behind in the global race for self-sustained growth and development.

The past fifty years have seen war-devastated societies transform themselves from poverty to prosperity. No such miracle has visited our region. Others have reached the Moon. We are still lost in the abyss of poverty.

In 1947, our two countries won freedom from colonial rule. That was our finest hour. But the glory was short-lived. We may have won our freedom but we remain mired by conflicts and tensions.

Why must South Asia bleed from its self-inflicted wounds? What is it that holds us back from the healing process? Why is it that we turn a blind eye to the cause of our anguish?
I am a Muslim. Yet I believe that we are first human beings and then Muslims, Hindus, Sikhs and Christians. Mr. Prime Minister, I am sure, you will agree with me that no one from our region whether living in Calcutta or Karachi, in Islamabad or Delhi should suffer the misery of poverty and deprivation. If we believe in the human cause, then we must address human problems on priority basis. For this purpose, we need resources which we have in abundance. We only need to channel them in the right direction.

It is our responsibility, the elected representatives of the people, to step back from the brink of disaster. It is up to us to resolve our differences. We owe it to our peoples as well as to our future generations. The future belongs to the makers of peace - not to those who stoke the fires of conflict. The flames of war must be extinguished forever. This is also the true spirit of Islam - the religion of peace.

Mr. Prime Minister,

I am a man of peace. This is what I have stated on numerous occasions from every forum. Let me reiterate yet again that I am committed to the promotion of peace and security in the region. Without peace, our peoples will remain deprived of progress and prosperity. It was for this reason that I launched the initiative for the resumption of the Pakistan-India dialogue soon after assuming office. I assure you, Mr. Prime Minister, of our commitment to this process. I hope that our sincerity will be reciprocated in full measure.

The problems that stand in our way are many but they are not insurmountable. The journey ahead of us is long. We, in Pakistan, are willing to move along this road. The ideal of peace can only be nurtured on justice and equity. The prospect of peace dies if it is not founded on fair play.

We must focus on the root cause of tensions in South Asia. It is the disease and not the symptom that we have to address. Only then can the healing process begin. Otherwise we will continue to remain trapped in this situation of conflict. It is with this realization that we have to resolve the Kashmir dispute which, since our emergence as independent states, has been at the core of our differences.

With the nuclear tests by India and Pakistan last year, the tensions between our two countries have assumed dangerous proportions. South Asia has become an even more volatile region. More than a billion people now confront the danger of a nuclear holocaust.

Mr. Prime Minister

As nuclear weapons states, Pakistan and India need to put in place credible confidence building measures for the avoidance of conflict. In this unstable environment, it is incumbent on both our countries to work towards restraint and stabilization in the spheres of nuclear and conventional armaments.

Only a few months ago in our meeting in New York, we had given expression to our shared belief that an environment of durable peace and security is in the supreme national interest of both Pakistan as well as India and that the resolution of all outstanding issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, is essential for this purpose. This solemn commitment obliges us to take concrete steps for its realization. In order to ensure progress, it is essential to engage in substantive, meaningful and result-oriented negotiations. An ancient proverb says: “Judge a tree from its fruit; not from the leaves”. May the dialogue between our two countries be fruitful.

We cannot afford to set aside any problem however complex. In particular the Jammu and Kashmir dispute, the root cause of tensions between us, cannot be wished away and has to be resolved consistent with our international obligations, justice and equity. The people of Kashmir must be allowed to exercise their right to self-determination as pledged to them by the international community.

Peace will bring its own dividends to our region. I have a vision for South Asia. I believe that countries, small and large, can live in harmony and work together for their common weal. In an environment of peace, our cooperative endeavours within SAARC will be greatly strengthened. It was in this spirit that at the last SAARC Summit in Colombo, I had proposed a Peace, Security and Development Initiative for South Asia to reinforce cooperation among our countries. I trust that in the same spirit India will join us in pursuing this initiative.

Mr. Prime Minister,

We are witnessing a new upsurge of freedom, democracy and unprecedented economic growth in many regions of the world. This is the age of free markets where nations compete not for power but for growth and development.

Our peoples share similar aspirations. We need to break out of the stranglehold of poverty, hunger and disease. Let us collectively take up the challenge to combat economic deprivation. Let us join to ensure the well-being of our peoples in an atmosphere of peace.

Mr. Prime Minister,

Let us enter a new race - not an arms race - but a race for the social and economic development of our region. We have the resources. We have the skills. We have the manpower and we constitute a market of more than a billion people. There is no reason for us to lag behind. It is for us to harness our enormous assets. With firm determination we should devote our energies for ensuring a better life for our people.

Let this be our agenda for the twenty-first century.

Speech of Indian Prime Minister:

Mr. Prime Minister,

Friends, sisters, and brothers,

As we break bread together, a new century and a new millennium knocks at our doors. Fifty years of our independence have gone by; on one side there is pride and on the other regret.

Pride because both the countries have been successful in retaining their independence; but regret because even after 50 years we have not liberated ourselves from the curse of poverty and unemployment.

I am grateful to you, Mr. Prime Minister, for hosting this banquet in such a historic location. It was in this magnificent fort that Shahjahan was born; it is here that Akbar lived for over a decade.

My delegation and I are overwhelmed by the warmth of your welcome, and gracious hospitality extended to us. Mr. Prime Minister, you have upheld the nobility of this fora and the tradition of the historic city of Lahore. On this occasion, I am reminded of the lines of the 11th century poet Mas'ud bin S’ad bin Salman.

“Shud dar gham “Lohur rawanam Yarab! Ki dar arzu anam Yarab!”

(My soul goes out, in longing for Lahore, O God! How I long for it)

Excellency, this is the first visit by an Indian Prime Minister to Pakistan in 10 years. I am delighted to be here.

When I inspected the guard of honour and saw the beautiful panorama of the setting sun, I was overwhelmed by mixed feelings.

It gave me joy that I was returning here after 21 years with the message of friendship. My regret is that we have spent so much time in mutual bitterness. It is unworthy of two nations the size of India and Pakistan to have wasted of much time in mutual ill-will.

Earlier, when I came to Pakistan. I was alone. This time we have representatives from every section of Indian society.
The bus service between Lahore and Delhi is not a means only to ease travel from one country to another. The running of the bus between the two countries symbolizes the desire of the people of improve relations and come together. Indeed, if this was only a bus made of metal, it would not have caused such excitement and expectation, not only in our two nations but all over the world.

It is our duty, Mr. Prime Minister, to pursue the desires and wishes of our people to develop, trust, confidence, amity and to create a solid structure for cooperation.

We have been encouraged that our interaction in recent months has focused on issues which directly benefit the lives of our people. Our two countries have engaged within the composite dialogue process to work out mechanisms to ensure that humanitarian concerns are addressed quickly; that possibilities of economic and commercial cooperation such as sale of power are identified and pursued; that confidence building measures are discussed and agreed upon. But this marks only a beginning. We will, together, give directions to our officials to accelerate what we have jointly set in motion.

We have also discussed those areas of relationship on which we do not see eye to eye. This is only inevitable. As we seek to resolve issues, we have to be conscious that there is nothing which cannot be solved through goodwill and direct dialogue. That is the only path.

I am convinced that there is nothing in our bilateral relations that can ever be resolved through violence. The solution of complex, outstanding issues can only be sought in an atmosphere free from prejudice and by adopting the path of balance, moderation and realism. To those who preach, practice or foment violence, I have only one message, understand the simple truth of the path of peace and amity. That is why as part of the composite dialogue process, we welcome sustained discussions on all outstanding issues including Jammu and Kashmir. As we approach a new millennium, the future beckons us. It calls upon us, indeed demands of us, to think of the welfare of our children and their children and of the generations that are yet to come.

I have brought but one message from India. There can be no greater legacy that we can leave behind than to do away with mistrust, to abjure and eliminate conflict, to erect an edifice of durable peace, amity, harmony and cooperation. I am confident that through our combined efforts we will succeed in doing so, no matter how hard we have to work in achieving it.

Permit me to extend to you, Mr. Prime Minister, and to Begum Sahiba a most cordial invitation to visit India. Let me assure you that you will find in India a very warm welcome. We look forward to receiving both of you soon in India.

I express my best wishes for your progress and prosperity, for the establishment of durable peace and cooperation between India and Pakistan.
Excellency, I can hardly find words to thank you for the very warm reception and hospitality that has been extended to us. I have invited along a small number of prominent persons from different walks of life and they are equally overwhelmed at the affection they have received. Excellent arrangements have been made for our stay and for the other elements of the programme in a comparatively short time, for which your officials deserve our commendation and thanks.

2. Our two countries are now engaged in the composite dialogue process on the basis of an agreed agenda. The subjects identified for discussions cover the entire range of bilateral relations. It is our conviction that we have to work to carry the relationship forward in a comprehensive and sustained manner. There is much that we can accomplish through a positive and constructive engagement on the issues and the areas which have been identified for discussions in the dialogue process. It is equally my conviction, and this convictions borne out by historical experience, that a narrow segmented approach does not yield results. I wish to assure your Excellency and the Government of Pakistan that we welcome, and would ourselves like to discuss issues on which we do not see eye to eye. There is no intention on our part to brush these issues aside for there is much we want to say on these matters.

3. The first round of discussions on the composite dialogue process enabled us to understand each other’s view points and also revealed areas of convergence. This has enabled the Foreign Secretaries to work out a Memorandum of Understanding so that agreements can be reached in these significant areas. Common points had also emerged during discussions on the subjects of Commercial and Economic Cooperation & Friendly Exchanges in various fields. I suggest that we direct our concerned officials to pursue these matters so that we can move ahead. There is a special need to address humanitarian issues concerning fishermen and civilian detainees and our prisoners of war. We have to put in place mechanisms which will ensure that no one remains in custody where such custody can be avoided.

4. Excellency, we have in our dialogue, generally taken realistic, pragmatic and forward looking approaches on all issues on which we are engaged. We are convinced that it is only on the basis of such approaches that we will be able to move ahead. We must, while focusing on the major areas of our relationship, not neglect to take small incremental steps. For instance, we would ease travel restrictions and provide more entry points. In particular I would think that a decision to open the Khokhrapar-Munabao rail link would ease matters considerably. This would enable them to avoid the trouble they have currently to take by travelling extensively in their country before being able to cross over to the other

5. There is also a need to increase personnel in our Missions, so that public dealings can be handled more efficiently on both sides.

6. We must also avoid propaganda. It serves no real purpose. On the contrary, it perpetuates the enemy image and so poisons our relations on a permanent basis.

7. Another issue which we have raised several times in the past is Indian Prisoners of War or those Missing in Action. I am familiar with your personal efforts in the past, and your correspondence with my predecessors on this subject. However, I believe that a good-faith effort to address our doubts will be a very welcome gesture on your part. Our External Affairs Ministries can look into the details, if you agree. I am open for discussion on all subjects.

Thank you, Excellency.

1440. Record of Talks between the Indian and Pakistan delegations led by their respective Prime Ministers.

Lahore, February 21, 1999 (11.00 hours) at Governor’s House).

After the two delegation were introduced, PMNS (Nawaz Sharif) again welcomed PM and said that he was surprised at the behavior of some people in Pakistan. Science had taken humans to the Moon, but here were people only interested in apna ullo seedha karma (in self motives). He said that he would like to invite PM to say a few words. PM delivered the prepared statement, which is placed below. At the end, he added that a group of MP’s had recently visited Pakistan. During their talks with Pakistani counterparts, one of the latter had said that J&K should belong to Pakistan as it was a Muslim-majority area. This line of thinking was unacceptable to us in India. PMNS seemed incredulous and asked which MNA had said this. PM said that did not matter, but we were ready for a frank discussion.

2. PMNS thanked PM for his kind words and his sentiments for improved relations with Pakistan. He agreed that it was time for both countries to put aside their past differences and seek a new relationship. He said that he also had a prepared statement and he would like quickly to go over it himself. The statement contained references to the ongoing dialogue and the agreements which were to be signed later in the day. There was also a clear-cut reference to J&K along standard Pakistani lines, although earlier and subsequently, PMNS was to call for moving away from stated positions on both sides.

3. EAM then said that he would like to suggest some additional areas for cooperation, including Information Technology, Y2K and WTO-related issues. PMNS agreed with this and said that, in his view, the issue of CTBT was the most important area for consultations and cooperation between the two. He said that the Americans were talking to both countries and were telling each side what they wanted to tell. Neither India nor Pakistan had any way of knowing whether they were being given the correct picture regarding the other side. For example, he said, the Americans had told them (Pakistanis) that India had agreed to sign CTBT in May this year. He wondered if this was correct.

4. EAM said that this was not correct and that all he had said was that India would not be able to consider signing CTBT while the Budget session was on and that the Budget Session itself ended in May. From this they had concluded that India would sign in May 1999. In fact, we had given them no such assurance. PMNS said that this was his own feeling as well which was why he had wanted to check directly with the Indian side. He had no doubt that the Americans were telling the Indian side similar things about Pakistani positions. In reality, Pakistan was quite clear that it would sign, but only in an atmosphere free from coercion. This had been stated several times and represented the real Pakistani position. They would like to keep in touch with India since this was an area where our interests coincided.

5. PM said that he had made our position clear during the UNGA Summit last September when we said that we would not stand in the way of the Treaty coming into force by September 1999. However, we had also stated that this would require that all those countries which were required to ratify under Article XIV of CTBT should also do so without conditions. It was not clear how American Senate would respond to the Administration’s moves on CTBT ratification. PM said that it would be useful for the two sides to keep in touch and this could be done at an appropriate level which suited the Pakistani side.

6. PMNS said that he would like to propose that the two Foreign Ministers should discuss this issue as well as meet once a year or so in order to review the overall relationship and the progress of the dialogue. PM agreed. PMNS said that we should also discuss matters related to security and defence expenditure. PM said that India’s concerns went beyond South Asia. PMNS said that our basic concerns were only with each other. PM politely disagreed.
FM Sartaj Aziz said that Chinese Defence Minister Chi Haotian (who had just completed his visit to Pakistan) had conveyed his surprise and unhappiness at India’s describing China as Enemy No.1. PM said that Raksha Mantri (Defence Minister) had clarified that he had never said so, but his clarification had not been given the same prominence as the earlier reports. In any case, we were talking directly to the Chinese also.

7. External Affairs Minster then said that there were few other issues which he wished to raise. The first concerned the Khokhrapar-Munabao crossing point, which would greatly facilitate travel between the Western parts of India and Pakistan. At present, people from this area had to travel all the way to Delhi to collect their visas and could then cross only at Attari-Wagah. PMNS asked EAM whether Sindhi was spoken in the border districts of Rajasthan. EAM said that it was a dialect akin to Sindhi but not Sindhi itself. PMNS agreed that this issue could be discussed further, adding that he had no difficulty with this proposal.

8. EAM then referred the problem of Indian Prisoners of War still held in the Pakistani custody. This was a humanitarian problem which was causing distress to the families of missing soldiers. PMNS agreed that this was a serious humanitarian problem and should be addressed immediately. All such prisoners should be released. High Commissioner Ashraf Jehangir Qazi said that this issue had been discussed on several occasions in the past, but the Pakistani side had been unable to locate any Indian POWs still in Pakistan. PM suggested that we could make one more good faith effort in order to address this issue. PMNS said that he was in complete agreement and both sides could nominate one person from each side and give them a 30-day limit in which to report back. He pointed to MOS Kanju (Pak MOS for foreign affairs) and said that he would be the nominee from the Pakistani side. PM said that MOS (EA), Smt VA sundhara Raje, would be the Indian nominee. It was generally felt that 30 days might be too short a time, but no final view was taken on this.

9. EAM then raised three requests conveyed by Shri Prakash Singh Badal regarding the SGPC’s role in the maintenance of Gurudwaras in Pakistan, the celebration of the 300th Anniversary of the Khalsa, and for groups of 10 or more persons to be allowed to visit historical Gurudwaras freely. PMNS said that CM Punjab had raised this with him the previous day and there was no difficulty on their side with this. There were some murmurs on the Pakistani side with regard to the role of SGPC in maintaining gurudwaras in Pakistan. It was agreed to examine these proposals further, although PMNS repeated that he had no difficulty with these issues. Information Minister Mushahid Hussain was instructed to examine the requests, and to send a formal reply at the earliest.

10. Principal Secretary then said that now that President Clinton was no longer distracted by the impeachment hearings, he would move rapidly on CTBT. We were being told that signature by India would make it easier to push ratification through the Senate. He added that, on the subject of CTBT, we were willing to go along with formalizing the unilateral moratorium which we had announced, but PM had also added that this would need to be done in a positive environment. This was our way of making the same point that the Pakistani side was also making. On the other questions, such as FMCT and export controls, our positions were still quite far apart from those of the Americans.

11. Principal Secretary also said that there was a pending question relating to increasing the staff in the two Missions. This would make it easier to handle all the visa requests that were being received.

12. PMNS said that CTBT was an important and urgent issue for both of us. He smiled and said that he was grateful to PM for having made Pakistan a Nuclear Weapon State. However, Indian had chosen a time when Pakistan was at its weakest economically. He did not wish to blame his predecessor Government, but they had looted the country and left bankrupt banks and a collapsing economic system. Therefore, Pakistan needed two or three years to set the situation right. On the question of visas, PMNS said that this was an important issue and should be taken up immediately, since both sides were facing constraints in the issue of visas.

13. The following issues were also discussed:

   (a) exchange of teams for the construction of Chancery building. Both sides agreed to facilitate visits from the other side;

   (b) release of all prisoners immediately on completion of sentences. In the case of fishermen, it was also agreed that those who strayed innocently would be released immediately.

1441. Joint Press Conference of Indian and Pakistani Prime Ministers.

Lahore, February 21, 1999.

Addressing a joint Press conference at Governor’s House prior to his return to New Delhi at the end of two-day visit to Pakistan, Mr. Vajpayee said India will “negotiate with sincerity” with Pakistan on resolving the issue of Jammu and Kashmir as well as all outstanding problems.

He said the two countries. “must now implement in good faith our various understandings” reached during the two-day visit.

Mr. Vajpayee said the areas of understanding are reflected in the Lahore Declaration and the Memorandum on confidence building measures signed by the two countries.

“Jammu and Kashmir is one of the issues we are discussing within the framework of our composite dialogue. We will negotiate with sincerity on this and on all other issues.” He said.

He said mutual signing of the CTBT was also discussed but “no decision was taken.”

Mr. Vajpayee said he had invited Mr. Nawaz and his wife to visit India to give us a chance to repay the many courtesies and kindness received by me and my delegation in Pakistan.”

Mr. Nawaz described the summit talks as “substantive, constructive and candid,” which went beyond the symbolism attached to Mr. Vajpayee’s arrival on the inaugural run of a new Lahore-Delhi bus service.

“We were able to undertake a comprehensive review of our bilateral relations. I underscored to Prime Minister Vajpayee the immense potential of building a mutually beneficial cooperative relationship once we achieve a final settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir issue.”

Mr. Nawaz said he had underlined “our earnest desire to avoid an arms race in our region” and reiterated Pakistan’s principled position on nuclear and conventional issues.

“Pakistan is interested in promoting confidence-building measures in the nuclear and conventional fields with a view to reducing the danger of conflict and leading to nuclear restraint and stabilization. Neither Pakistan nor India has “gained anything from the conflict and tensions of the past 50 years,” he added. “The peoples of the region risk losing out in the march to development if we remain caught in a vicious cycle of mistrust and suspicion.”
“If we look around us confrontation is giving way to cooperation, complex disputes are being resolved and nations increasingly become engaged in mutually beneficial interaction. There is no reason why these positive global trends should bypass South Asia.”

Mr. Nawaz said he desired a Pakistan-India relationship “that is free of tensions and based on mutual trust and confidence.” “Should we achieve this there is no limit to cooperation between our two countries?” he said, adding: “Let us dedicate our energies” to strengthening regional cooperation under SAARC (South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation).

“We must bring prosperity to our peoples. We owe this to ourselves and to our future generations. I am happy to note that Prime Minister Vajpayee shares with me the vision of a prosperous and progressive South Asia at peace with itself and contributing to global peace and prosperity.”

Replying to a question by a foreign correspondent, Mr. Nawaz said: “The ice has been broken. I believe we will make further progress.” He was asked, “Your statements make a lot of promise for consultations. Are you disappointed that you could not deliver more?”

An Indian newsman said that Vajpayee had stated that the distance between Delhi and Lahore has shortened, but 26 Hindus* had been murdered in Kashmir on February 21 and there has been exchange of fire at Siachen glacier between Indian and Pakistani troops. Mr. Nawaz replying said: “We are discussing these events and efforts are being made. I hope good results will emerge.”

Questioned about cross-border interference by the two countries, Mr. Nawaz said it is a tradition to blame each other. “We need to get out of this and take confidence-building measures.”

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

* Mr. Vajpayee on return to Delhi told the media that “I drew the attention of Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to the killings in the Rajouri region and said these must stop. If such killings of innocent civilians continue, it will be very difficult to normalize bilateral relations.” “The Pakistani Prime Minister promised to ascertain the facts about the incident,” said Mr. Vajpayee.
Joint Statement issued at the end of the visit of Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee to Lahore.

Lahore, February 21, 1999.

In response to an invitation by the Prime Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Muhammad Nawaz Sharif, the Prime Minister of India, Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee visited Pakistan from 20-21 February, 1999, on the inaugural run of the Delhi-Lahore bus service.

2. The Prime Minister of Pakistan received the Indian Prime Minister at the Wagah border on 20 February 1999. A banquet in honour of the Indian Prime Minister and his delegation was hosted by the Prime Minister of Pakistan at Lahore Fort. On the same evening Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee visited Minar-e-Pakistan, Mausoleum of Allama Iqbal, Gurudawara Dera Sahib and Samadhi of Maharaja Ranjeet Singh. On 21st February, a civic reception was held in honour of the visiting Prime Minister at the Governor’s House.

3. The two leaders held discussions on the entire range of bilateral relations, regional cooperation within SAARC, and issues of international concern. They decided that:

a) The two Foreign Ministers will meet periodically to discuss all issues of mutual concern, including nuclear related issues.

b) The two sides shall undertake consultations on WTO related issues with a view to coordinating their respective positions.

c) The two sides shall determine areas of cooperation in Information Technology, in particular for tackling the problems of Y2K.

d) The two sides will hold consultations with a view to further liberalizing the visa and travel regime.

e) The two sides shall appoint a 2 member committee at ministerial level to examine humanitarian issues relating to civilian detainees and missing POWs.

4. They expressed satisfaction on the commencement of a Bus Service between Lahore and New Delhi, the release of fishermen and civilian detainees and the renewal of contacts in the field of sports.

5. Pursuant to the directive given by the two Prime Ministers, the Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India signed a Memorandum of Understanding on 21 February 1999, identifying measures aimed at promoting an environment of peace and security between the two countries.
6. The two Prime Ministers signed the Lahore Declaration embodying their shared vision of peace and stability between their countries and of progress and prosperity for their peoples.

7. Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee extended an invitation to Prime Minister Muhammad Nawaz Sharif to visit India on mutually convenient dates.

8. Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee thanked Prime Minister Muhammad Nawaz Sharif for the warm welcome and gracious hospitality extended to him and members of his delegation and for the excellent arrangements made for his visit.

Lahore,
February 21, 1999.

1443. Lahore Declaration issued at the end of Summit level talks between the Prime Ministers of India and Pakistan.

Lahore, February 21, 1999.

The Prime Ministers of the Republic of India and the Islamic Republic of Pakistan:-

Sharing a vision of peace and stability between their countries, and of progress and prosperity for their peoples;

Convinced that durable peace and development of harmonious relations and friendly cooperation will serve the vital interests of the peoples of the two countries, enabling them to devote their energies for a better future;

Recognizing that the nuclear dimension of the security environment of the two countries adds to their responsibility for avoidance of conflict between the two countries;

Committed to the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations, and the universally accepted principles of peaceful co-existence;

Reiterating the determination of both countries to implementing the Simla Agreement in letter and spirit;

Committed to the objectives of universal nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation;
Convinced of the importance of mutually agreed confidence building measures for improving the security environment;

Recalling their agreement of 23 September, 1998, that an environment of peace and security is in the supreme national interest of both sides and that the resolution of all outstanding issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, is essential for this purpose;

Have agreed that their respective Governments:-

— shall intensify their efforts to resolve all issues, including the issue of Jammu and Kashmir.

— shall refrain from intervention and interference in each other’s internal affairs.

— shall intensify their composite and integrated dialogue process for an early and positive outcome of the agreed bilateral agenda.

— shall take immediate steps for reducing the risk of accidental or unauthorized use of nuclear weapons and discuss concepts and doctrines with a view to elaborating measures for confidence building in the nuclear and conventional fields, aimed at prevention of conflict.

— reaffirm their commitment to the goals and objectives of SAARC and to concert their efforts towards the realization of the SAARC vision for the year 2000 and beyond with a view to promoting the welfare of the peoples of South Asia and to improve their quality of life through accelerated economic growth, social progress and cultural development.

— reaffirm their condemnation of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and their determination to combat this menace.

— shall promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms.

Signed at Lahore on the 21st day of February 1999.

Muhammad Nawaz Sharif
Prime Minister
Of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan

Atal Bihari Vajpayee
Prime Minister of the Republic of India
Memorandum of Understanding signed by the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan at the end of the visit of Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee to Lahore.

Lahore, February 21, 1999.

The Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India:-

Reaffirming the continued commitment of their respective governments to the principles and purposes of the UN Charter;

Reiterating the determination of both countries to implementing the Simla Agreement in letter and spirit;

Guided by the agreement between their Prime Ministers of 23 September 1998 that an environment of peace and security is in the supreme national interest of both sides and that resolution of all outstanding issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, is essential for this purpose;

Pursuant to the directive given by their respective Prime Ministers in Lahore, to adopt measures for promoting a stable environment of peace, and security between the two countries;

Have on this day, agreed to the following:-

1. The two sides shall engage in bilateral consultations on security concepts, and nuclear doctrines, with a view to developing measures for confidence building in the nuclear and conventional fields, aimed at avoidance of conflict.

2. The two sides undertake to provide each other with advance notification in respect of ballistic missile flight tests, and shall conclude a bilateral agreement in this regard.

3. The two sides are fully committed to undertaking national measures to reducing the risks of accidental or unauthorized use of nuclear weapons under their respective control. The two sides further undertake to notify each other immediately in the event of any accidental, unauthorized or unexplained incident that could create the risk of a fallout with adverse consequences for both sides, or an outbreak of a nuclear war between the two countries, as well as to adopt measures aimed at diminishing the possibility of such actions, or such incidents being misinterpreted by the other. The two sides shall identify/establish the appropriate communication mechanism for this purpose.

4. The two sides shall continue to abide by their respective unilateral moratorium on conducting further nuclear test explosions unless either side, in exercise of its national sovereignty decides that extraordinary events have jeopardized its supreme interests.

5. The two sides shall conclude an agreement on prevention of incidents at sea in order to ensure safety of navigation by naval vessels, and aircraft belonging to the two sides.

6. The two sides shall periodically review the implementation of existing Confidence Building Measures (CBMs) and where necessary, set up appropriate consultative mechanisms to monitor and ensure effective implementation of these CBMs.

7. The two sides shall undertake a review of the existing communication links (e.g. between the respective Directors- General, Military Operations) with a view to upgrading and improving these links, and to provide for fail-safe and secure communications.

8. The two sides shall engage in bilateral consultations on security, disarmament and non-proliferation issues within the context of negotiations on these issues in multilateral fora.

Where required, the technical details of the above measures will be worked out by experts of the two sides in meetings to be held on mutually agreed dates, before mid 1999, with a view to reaching bilateral agreements.

Done at Lahore on 21 February 1999 in the presence of Prime Minister of India Mr. Atal Bihari Vajpayee and Prime Minister of Pakistan Mr. Muhammad Nawaz Sharif.

Prime Minister Vajpayee’s visit to Lahore was an important milestone in the bilateral relations of Pakistan and India.

By now it is well known to you that the focus throughout the visit was on promotion of stable environment of peace and security between the two countries.

The centrality of the Kashmir issue to peace and security is well recognized. Throughout the visit of Prime Minister Vajpayee this reality was underscored time and again. On almost every occasion he referred to the Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

Three documents have emerged from the visit. The Lahore Declaration, a Memorandum of Understanding and a Joint Statement. The most important document is the Lahore Declaration which was signed by the two Prime Ministers themselves. The last time the Prime Ministers of Pakistan and India signed a document was 27 years ago in the name of Simla Agreement which provided for the final settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

The Lahore Declaration contains the reiteration of the determination of both countries to implement the Simla Agreement in letter and spirit.

While this determination has been underscored once again by the Lahore Declaration, its most important clause contains an agreement between the two governments that they shall intensify their efforts to resolve all issues including the issue of Jammu and Kashmir.

Moreover, the Lahore Declaration also commits the two governments to intensify their composite and integrated dialogue process for an early and positive outcome of the agreed bilateral agenda. I hardly need remind you that the agreed bilateral agenda of the dialogue is topped by the issue of peace and security and Jammu and Kashmir.

We believe the Lahore Declaration is an important milestone on our path to promoting peace and security at the heart of which lies resolution of the Jammu and Kashmir issue. The Lahore Declaration bears the signatures of the Prime Minister of India testifying to the universally recognized fact that the Jammu and Kashmir is an issue between the two countries which needs to be resolved and thus it is obvious that Jammu and Kashmir is not repeat not an integral part of India as is sometimes propagated by the other side.
The Lahore Declaration also commits India to promote and protect all human rights and fundamental freedoms.

The continuation of the violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms of the Kashmiris will clearly not be in consonance with the Lahore Declaration.

Both the Lahore Declaration and the Memorandum of Understanding also contain the agreement of 23rd September, 1998 between the Prime Ministers of the two countries that an environment of peace and security is in the supreme national interest of both sides and that resolution of all outstanding issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, is essential for this purpose.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

After reading the statement, the Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office while answering questions clarified that while there was satisfaction at the outcome of the Nawaz – Vajpayee Summit, “there is no hidden content to their wide-ranging discussions”. “There should be no objective to assume things and to believe that concessions have been made. No concessions have been made. There was no question of that”, the Spokesman Tariq Altaf said at the media briefing in Islamabad. Altaf said the fundamental thing is that the Indian Prime Minister himself acknowledged that “Jammu and Kashmir is a dispute which needs to be resolved.” The Spokesman reminded when a question on Kashmir was posed to the then visiting Prime Minister a decade back, his answer was “There is no dispute”. The Summit is an important milestone on Indo-Pak bilateral relations. It is for the whole world to see that “advancement has been made. You can go on making commitments and signing the documents,” he said while referring to three documents signed. The Spokesman made it clear that whatever “we have agreed to is fully in consonance with our supreme national interests. Both sides have made commitments which are clearly stated in the three documents,” namely the Lahore Declaration, the Joint Statement and the Memorandum of Understanding. “There is no other agreement, no other understanding”, he affirmed.
1446. Statement by President Clinton on the India-Pakistan Summit.

Washington, February 22, 1999.

I welcome the successful meeting over the weekend between Indian Prime Minister Vajpayee and Pakistani Prime Minister Sharif. I commend the two Prime Ministers for demonstrating courage and leadership by coming together and addressing difficult issues that have long divided their countries.

The two leaders committed to intensifying their efforts on key matters, including: containing their competition in nuclear arms; preventing nuclear or conventional conflict between them; resolving territorial disputes including Jammu and Kashmir; refraining from interference in each-others internal affairs; fighting terrorism; promoting political freedom and human rights; and working together to improve the lives of their citizens through economic growth.

South Asia—and, indeed, the entire world—will benefit if India and Pakistan promptly turn these commitments into concrete progress. We will continue our own efforts to work with India and Pakistan to promote progress in the region.

1447. Statement issued by the Deputy Official Spokesman of the U.S. Department of State James B. Foley on the India–Pakistan Summit.

Washington, February 23, 1999.

The Department of State warmly welcomes the successful summit meeting of the Indian and Pakistani prime ministers on Saturday and Sunday in Lahore, Pakistan. Prime Ministers Vajpayee of India and Sharif of Pakistan have committed their governments to intensify efforts to resolve the issues that have divided their countries for too long, including Kashmir.

We are pleased that they have discussed steps to address nuclear concerns, including confidence building measures and methods to avoid accidental conflict. We also commend the attention paid in the Lahore declaration. issued at the end of the meeting, to improving the quality of life of the people of India and Pakistan. The two leaders clearly understand that economic growth and social progress are central to the futures of their countries, as they are to all countries around the world.
The success of the weekend’s meeting demonstrates the ability of Pakistan and India to work together to solve their differences and to look to the future, not to the past. While the United States and the international community have encouraged them to resolve their differences through face to face discussions at a senior level, the decisions to take this courageous step were made by the two prime ministers. They deserve the full credit for this successful meeting.

1448. Suo Motu Statement of the External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh in Parliament on the Lahore Summit.

_New Delhi, February 26, 1999._

The Hon’ble Prime Minister visited Pakistan on the inaugural run of the Delhi-Lahore-Delhi bus service on February 20-21, 1999. This historic visit was the most significant engagement between India and Pakistan in over a quarter of a century. It was also the first visit undertaken by the Prime Minister of India to Pakistan in a decade.

2. Prime Minister Shri A. B. Vajpayee, conveyed to the people of Pakistan India’s abiding desire for peace and amity with them. A group of eminent Indians from all walks of life, who accompanied the Prime Minister to Pakistan, conveyed by their very presence in Lahore that in the pursuit of its policy of promoting peace and friendship with Pakistan, the Government of India was acting in accord with the wishes of its people. This visit also provided the Prime Minister with an opportunity to emphasise that India and Pakistan must, together work to build a comprehensive structure of cooperation, resolve all outstanding issues through peaceful and direct bilateral discussions and negotiations, and, that the path of violence was futile and senseless. Let me emphasise the Government’s resolve to uphold the Constitution. The unity and territorial integrity of India will never be compromised. The perpetrators of violence must understand this simple truth.

3. The Prime Minister’s bus journey captured the imagination of the people of India, of Pakistan, indeed, of the world. I wish to state here that seldom has a leader embarked on a journey with such support from his people and such goodwill for his success. His arrival at Wagah, with the Indian delegation, to be warmly received by the Pakistan Prime Minister was a defining moment in India-Pakistan relations.
4. During his stay in Pakistan, Prime Minister held discussions with Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif; was accorded a civic reception by the people of Lahore; visited Gurudwara Dera Sahib; the Samadhi of Maharaja Ranjit Singh; the Mausoleum of Allama Iqbal and Minar-e-Pakistan. From the Minar-e-Pakistan he assured the Pakistani people that a secure, stable and prosperous Pakistan was in India’s interest.

5. Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif hosted a banquet for our Prime Minister at the historic Lahore Fort. The Prime Minister’s discussions with the Pakistan Prime Minister were wide-ranging, covering the entire range of bilateral relations, regional cooperation within SAARC and issues of international concern. Prime Minister Vajpayee emphasized that the peoples of the two countries desire lasting peace and an environment where their security, progress and prosperity can be assured. For this purpose, he conveyed that it was essential that the forces of violence and terrorism were combated, and the hands of the advocates of harmony, balance and realism strengthened for the development of good neighbourly relations between the two countries.

6. Prime Minister Vajpayee and Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif signed the Lahore Declaration. This declaration is a landmark for the peace and security of the two nations. The two Prime Ministers have in the Lahore Declaration agreed that the two countries will intensify efforts to resolve all issues, including the issue of Jammu and Kashmir, through the composite dialogue process; refrain from intervention and interference in each other’s internal affairs; combat the menace of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations; protect human rights; take immediate steps to reduce the risk of accidental or unauthorized use of nuclear weapons and to discuss security concepts and doctrines with a view to elaborating measures for confidence building in the nuclear and conventional fields aimed at prevention of conflict. The two Prime Ministers also reaffirmed in the Lahore Declaration their commitment to the objectives of SAARC and to work towards the realization of the SAARC vision for the year 2000 and beyond with a view to promoting the welfare of the peoples of their countries.

7. Pursuant to directives issued by the two Prime Ministers to identify measures aimed at promoting an environment of peace and security between the two countries, the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan signed a Memorandum of Understanding on 21 February, 1999. Under this Memorandum, the two countries have agreed to abide by their respective unilateral moratorium on conducting further nuclear test explosions unless either side, in exercise of its national sovereignty, decides that extraordinary events have jeopardized its supreme national interest. The Foreign Secretaries agreed that the two countries... would remain firmly committed to undertaking measures to reduce the risk of accidental or unauthorized use of nuclear weapons under their respective controls; India and Pakistan will provide each other with advance notification in respect of ballistic missile flight test and conclude a bilateral agreement in this regard. Similarly the two countries will engage in discussions to conclude an agreement on the prevention of incidents at sea, in order to ensure safety of navigation by naval vessels, and by aircraft belonging to the two sides. The two countries would also periodically review the implementation of existing CBMs as well as the existing communication links at operational levels like the hotline between the Directors General of Military Operations, with a view to making these links fail-safe and secure. Further, the two countries would hold bilateral discussions on security, disarmament and non-proliferation issues, within the context of negotiations on these issues in multilateral fora. In order to reach bilateral agreements, experts of the two countries would meet on mutually agreed dates before mid-1999.

8. The Prime Ministers also explored avenues and areas for meaningful cooperation. They agreed on the need to enhance people-to-people contact, address humanitarian issues and to cooperate in technological as well as in economic matters. They agreed that the two sides should undertake consultations on WTO issues with a view to coordinating respective positions, determine areas of cooperation in information technology, particularly for tackling problems of Y2K and also to hold discussions on the liberalization of visa and travel regime. Prime Minister Vajpayee proposed the re-opening of the check post on the Rajasthan-Sindh Border.

9. Given the urgent need to address humanitarian issues, the Prime Ministers agreed to appoint a two-member committee at the ministerial level to examine matters relating to civilian detainees and missing prisoners of War. An official level delegation will hold prior consultations and will meet very soon in this regard.

10. In order to undertake an overall review of the bilateral relationship, the Prime Ministers directed me and my Pakistan counterpart of meet periodically to discuss all issues of mutual concerns, including nuclear issues. We would like this meeting to be held soon.

11. Government’s approaches to Pakistan are rooted in our national consensus. They derive their strength from our confidence as a mature nation dedicated to peace, democracy and freedom. To those that preach, practice and foment violence I would reiterate our Prime Minister’s message: “Understand the simple truth of the path of peace and amity.”
12. It is our earnest hope to build on the opportunities that are now available on account of the Prime Minister's historic initiative and his commitment to put behind past contentions and think of the welfare of our children and their children. We trust Pakistan will walk with us down this path.

1449. Letter from the Deputy High Commissioner in Pakistan Sharat Sabharwal to the Ministry of External Affairs on visit of Chinese Defence Minister to Pakistan.

Islamabad, March 1, 1999.

Deputy High Commissioner

No. ISL/104/04/99 March 1, 1999

My dear Vivek,

The Chinese Defence Minister, Gen. Chi Haotian (CH) came on a 5-day official visit to Pakistan on February 19 at the head of a 16-member delegation. This was the first Cabinet level visit from China to the top military brass of Pakistan, visiting various military establishments and having talks with a delegation led by the Pak Defence Secretary. CH also called on President Tarar and PMNS, with the prime minister hosting a luncheon in his honour on February 20. The same evening, Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz hosted a banquet in his honour. During the last leg of his visit CH was in Karachi where he visited the Navy Defence Show and was the guest of honour at a banquet hosted by the Sindh Governor.

2. A day before commencement of CH’s visit, the Pak Government announced that the two sides would hold discussions on defence, political, regional and international issues. Special focus will be on security, peace and economic development in the region. The general projection by the Pak government and media was that because of its past friendly ties with Pakistan and strained relations with India because of our nuclear tests, China could be counted upon to back Pakistan at this juncture to beef up its defence. In an interview to PTV on February 19, Sartaj Aziz said that CH’s visit would “send a very strong signal, at the moment, of China’s time tested, strong and very close relationship with Pakistan”. He added that China had been extremely positive and constructive on Pakistan’s nuclear tests in that it had always maintained that it was India which tested first and Pakistan had no option but to respond. (With reference to the media projection mentioned above, I am enclosing herewith an article entitled Growing friendship with China that appeared in DAWN on 25.2.1999) (not included here).

3. On his arrival in Pakistan, CH said, “My current visit is aimed at enhancing mutual understanding and trust, promoting friendship and cooperation, and strengthening the comprehensive partnership of cooperation, towards the 21st Century between our two countries and two armed forces.” In a subsequent statement, he said that the Chinese people and armed forces cherish their all weather friendship and cooperation with Pakistan and China “will always be the most trustable friend of Pakistan”.

4. In regard to Indo-Pak relations, during his banquet speech on February 20, Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz made a long reference to Jammu & Kashmir saying that the international community, especially the major powers, had not seriously addressed this issue which is vital to peace and security in South Asia. He further stated that following nuclearisation of India and the changed regional security environment, there is an added urgency to address the “core issue of Jammu & Kashmir in the interest of peace and security in the region.”

Repeating Pakistan’s well-known rhetoric on Kashmir, Sartaj expressed the hope that the visit of the India Prime Minister would be a precursor to a substantive dialogue between India and Pakistan on all outstanding issues, in particular the “core issue of Jammu & Kashmir”. President Tarar and PMNS also made references to Kashmir during their meetings with CH. According to Pak media reports, in response to a question by a journalist at the time of his arrival in Pakistan, CH said that he was very glad to see that the leaders of Pakistan and India were to meet soon. He added, “I think that is very significant to the peace and stability of South Asia and the whole of Asia.” During his call on PMNS, CH reportedly appreciated Pakistan’s efforts to hold a substantive dialogue with India and, as per a report in The News, said that the resolution of disputes is essential for peace and stability in South Asia.

5. As per press reports based on Pak briefings, President Tarar assured the Chinese Minister of Pakistan’s support on Tibet and Taiwan. CH reportedly told Tarar that the Indian nuclear tests had unbalanced the power structure in the region and Pakistan was forced to go in for nuclear tests to meet its security needs.
6. PMNS told CH that Sino-Pak strategic cooperation was critical for preservation of peace and stability in South Asia. He explained the circumstances under which Pakistan was compelled to respond to India’s provocative nuclear tests and subsequent threats of nuclear blackmail. He also briefed CH the Pak-US dialogue on nuclear and security issues and the status of Pak –India talks. PMNS expressed strong support for building a multi polar world.

7. As for Sartaj Aziz, besides references to Kashmir in his banquet speech, mentioned above, he reiterated Pakistan’s unflinching support for China on all issues of interest to it, particularly the issues of Taiwan, human right and Tibet. He added that it was Pakistan’s firm belief that a strong and prosperous China would be a pillar of strength for promoting the interests of developing countries and safeguarding international peace and security.

8. A report in The News of 19.2.99 maintained that the two sides would discuss the projects concerning Super-7 fighter aircraft (reference Counselor –Pol’s dispatch No. ISL/ 104/4/99 dated 1.2.99) and Al-Khalid tank. The details of discussions regarding military cooperation are not known. We are trying to get some information on this aspect and shall pass it on to you as and when we are able to lay hands on it. However, in a conversation last evening, a Chinese diplomat mentioned the following to me:-

   a) A detailed agreement concerning joint development of Super-7 fighter aircraft is being negotiated and is likely to be signed during the visit to Pakistan of Li Peng, Chairman of National Peoples’ Congress, next month. The plane will have avionics of Italian or French firms. The Chinese Air Force is also likely to need some of these aircraft and would, therefore, most likely share the development costs.

   b) The Pak Chief of Army Staff would be visiting China next month. PMNS is likely to visit China later in the year to attend the celebrations connected with the 50th anniversary of the Chinese revolution.

   c) The Pak interlocutor told CH that Pakistan would adhere to CTBT before September 1999. However, they did not specify any particular point in time for such adherence.

9. While on the subject of China, I may add that the Chinese diplomat, mentioned above, also told me that they maintain regular contacts with the Taliban mission in Islamabad. They have been assured by the Taliban that the latter have no agenda outside Afghanistan and the Chinese should consequently have no apprehensions regarding export of subversion from the Taliban territories in Afghanistan to Xinjiang. The Chinese diplomat described as false a recent Jang report that had stated that China had decided to start trade relation with the Taliban.

New Delhi.

1450. Statement by Foreign Secretary on the Prime Minister’s visit to Pakistan at the meeting of the Standing Committee of the Parliament attached to the Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, March 5, 1999.

As Hon’ble Members are aware, Prime Minister visited Pakistan on the inaugural run of the Delhi-Lahore bus service on February 20-21 1999. The visit constituted a landmark in our relations with Pakistan. It was the most significant bilateral engagement in more than a quarter of a century. It was also for the first time in nearly a decade that the Prime Minister of India visited Pakistan. It would be appropriate to give a background of the circumstances leading to the visit. However, before doing so, let me state that all our approaches to Pakistan have been marked by consistency, clarity and realism and are rooted in a national consensus. Prime Minister’s visit to Pakistan was entirely in keeping with this national consensus.

We have always been in favour of continuing interaction between India and Pakistan at all levels including the highest political levels. Such interaction was, however, interrupted between 1994 and 1996 at the instance of Pakistan. However, in a departure from the policy of his predecessor, Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif agreed with our view and, with his resumption of office in February 1997, exchanges at political and official levels were resumed in March/April 1997 and have continued thereafter on a sustained basis. This interaction has included meetings at the level of Prime Minister and you Mr. Chairman, Sir, will recall your four meetings with Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif. At these meetings and in meetings at official levels, we had inter alia envisaged steps which would further people-to-people contacts and for this purpose we had taken several unilateral initiatives in easing the visa and travel regime for Pakistani nationals. A focus on these subjects continued during the meetings of Prime Minister Shri Atal Behari Vajpayee with the Pakistan Prime Minister last year in July, 1998 in Colombo and in September 1998 in New York. It was in New York that we proposed the commencement of a Delhi-Lahore-Delhi bus service to promote people-to-people contacts. Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif agreed with the idea. Both Prime Ministers instructed their respective officials to ensure that the bus service began as early as possible. Our Ministry of Surface Transport coordinated our preparations on the subject which included consultations with concerned State Governments; and led our team for expert level talks, with Pakistan in early December, 1998. Following these talks the two countries initialed an Agreement and a Protocol providing a framework and operational mechanism for the bus service. Trial runs were held by both sides during January 1999 and on our part we were working towards starting the bus service in February 1999.

A view had emerged in our government that Prime Minister should travel to Lahore on the inaugural run of the Delhi-Lahore bus. Meanwhile, in the course of a press interview, Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif mentioned that he would welcome a visit by PM to Lahore on board the bus. A positive response was conveyed to Pakistan and the dates of the visit were decided. I may also mention that the formal Agreement on the bus service was signed in Islamabad on 17 February 1999.

Prime Minister’s bus journey captured the imagination of our people, that of Pakistan and indeed of the world. It emphasized India’s continuing desire to build ties of peace, friendship and co-operation with Pakistan. In his interaction with Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and in his public engagements, Prime Minister conveyed India’s abiding desire to build confidence and trust, put in place a stable and comprehensive structure of co-operation and resolve all outstanding issues including Jammu and Kashmir through direct bilateral discussions and negotiations. During his visit, Prime Minister held discussions with Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif, visited Gurudwara Dera Sahib, the Samadhi of Maharaja Ranjit Singh, the Mausoleum of Allama Iqbal and the Minar-e-Pakistan. He was also accorded a civic reception by the people of Lahore. Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif hosted a banquet for Prime Minister at the historic Lahore Fort. The two Prime Ministers also addressed a Joint Press Conference.

Prime Minister addressed the people of Pakistan at the civic reception and at the banquet. In both speeches, Prime Minister conveyed to the people of Pakistan India’s enduring desire for good neighbourly relations with their country. He also underlined that the path of violence was futile and senseless and that it would never weaken our resolve or solve issues. Prime Minister’s visit to Minar-e-
Pakistan was also notable. Prime Minister wrote in the visitor’s book at the Minar that a secure, stable and prosperous Pakistan was in India’s interest. I wish to bring to the attention of the Hon’ble Members that this important and significant gesture of the Prime Minister has been appreciated in Pakistan. Senior Pakistani political leaders, including the Prime Minister, have referred to and welcomed PM’s visit to the Minar.

A triad of three documents emerged from the visit (these were the Lahore Declaration signed by the Prime Ministers, the MOU signed by me and my counterpart and a Joint Statement). In their totality, these documents set out our vision of the relationship and are in accordance with our composite approach of building trust and friendship, establishing a structure of co-operation and resolving outstanding issues.

The Lahore Declaration is a significant document in itself, being the first document to be signed at the Heads of Government level since the 1972 Simla Agreement. It is a landmark for the peace and security of India and Pakistan. The two governments have agreed that they shall intensify efforts to resolve all issues, including Jammu & Kashmir, through the composite dialogue process, refrain from intervention and interference in each other’s internal affairs, combat the menace of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, protect human rights, take immediate steps to reduce the risk of accidental or unauthorized use of nuclear weapons and discuss security concepts and doctrines with a view to elaborating measures for confidence building in the nuclear and conventional fields. The two Governments also reaffirmed their commitment to the objectives of SAARC and to work towards the realization of the SAARC vision for the year 2000 and beyond. Hon’ble Members would, in particular, note the reference in the preambular portion of the Lahore Declaration to the determination of both countries to implementing the Simla Agreement in letter and spirit. It goes without saying that the Simla Agreement remains the cornerstone for the conduct of bilateral relations between India and Pakistan.

The commitment of the two governments to take steps in confidence building is reflected in the Memorandum of Understanding. Apart from agreeing to engage in bilateral consultations on security concepts and nuclear doctrines and continue to abide by our respective unilateral moratorium on conducting further nuclear tests, the MoU also provides the basis for the conclusion of agreements on advance notification of ballistic missile flight tests and prevention of incidents at sea. There is also an agreement that the two sides would periodically review the implementation of existing CBMs and set up consultative mechanisms to monitor them and ensure their effective implementation. The two sides shall also review existing communication links with a view to upgrading and improving them. A significant aspect of the MoU is the commitment of the two sides to undertake measures to reduce the risks of accidental or unauthorized use of nuclear weapons and to undertake to notify each other immediately in the event of any accidental, unauthorized or unexplained incidents and also to adopt measures aimed at diminishing the possibility of any action or incidents being mis-interpreted by the other side. Appropriate communication mechanism for this purpose are to be established. India and Pakistan have also agreed that they will engage in bilateral consultations on security, disarmament and non-proliferation issues within the context of the negotiations on these issues in multilateral fora.

This MoU has far reaching significance for the peace and security of India and Pakistan. The agreements and institutional arrangements that will result from this MoU will go a long way to building security and confidence. Most importantly, the MoU and the agreements that it leads to will send a strong signal to the international community about our sense of responsibility and will dispel the self-serving thought promoted by some that South Asia is a nuclear flashpoint.

The Prime Ministers decided, as specified in the Joint Statement, that the Foreign Ministers would meet periodically to discuss all issues of mutual concern. It was also decided that the two sides would undertake consultations on WTO related issues, determine areas of co-operation in information technology, hold consultations with a view to further liberalizing the visa and travel regimes and appoint a two-member committee at the Ministerial level to examine humanitarian issues relating to civilian detainees and missing PoWs.

Prime Minister’s visit to Pakistan has also been an opportunity for us to restate our concerns about Pakistan’s sponsorship of and instigation to terrorism in Jammu and Kashmir and other parts of India. We will continue to emphasise these concerns with the Pakistan side and demand that these activities must end.

This visit has provided India with the occasion to reiterate at the highest level our basic approach towards Pakistan, i.e., that we seek a relationship of peace, friendship and co-operation with Pakistan. We wish to move relations with Pakistan ahead over a broad front through the composite dialogue process. The opportunities and the possibilities that are now available on account of the Prime Minister’s historic initiative provide the basis on which to build the edifice of India-Pakistan relations. We, on our part, will seriously pursue the action points that are identified in the various documents signed in Lahore. We will also earnestly pursue the composite dialogue with Pakistan. We have already started thinking about the follow-up action that is required to operationalise the understandings reached in Lahore. We hope that Pakistan will reciprocate our desire to put mistrust behind and move the relationship forward in full measure.

1451. Mechanism for Consular Access and Repatriation of Civilian Prisoners between Pakistan and India.

Islamabad, March 6, 1999.

Reiterating their commitment to the Protocol on Consular Access signed between the two countries in November, 1982;

Based on the experience of Pakistan and India with the existing consular access and repatriation modalities;

Taking into account the requirements of the legal and administrative systems of the two countries;

Recognising the need to streamline and improve the existing procedures related to consular access and repatriation, the following measures were agreed to:-

1. Whenever a national of either country is detained in the other and is covered under the bilateral Protocol on Consular Access, 1982, the detaining country will provide, within a period of four weeks from the date of detention, the following information through diplomatic channels to the other country in respect of the detained person:-

   (a) Name
   (b) Parentage
   (c) Address
   (d) Passport Particulars, if available, (with validity)
   (e) Four Photographs
   (f) Offence
   (g) Jail where interned

2. Consular Access, which is presently provided 3 times a year, would be increased to 4 times a year i.e. every quarter (January, April, July and October). If need be, additional consular access may also be provided at the request of either party with a minimum notice of 30 days.

3. Detaining authority would ensure that the detained person is made available for the earliest possible consular access.

4. The proforma for ascertaining personal particulars during the consular access should be comprehensive and care should be taken by the detaining authorities to provide all possible assistance during consular access for eliciting full information. Where primary details are not available, should be made to have all possible secondary/corroborative details.
5. Nationality verification would be completed by the country concerned within 75 days from the date of consular access.

6. Travel documents would be made available by the concerned country within 15 days from the confirmation of national status.

4. The competent authority of the detaining country would issue exit permit for repatriation of the detainee within 15 days of availability of travel documents and completion of sentence (whichever is later), provided no other proceedings are pending.

8. The release and repatriation of civilian prisoners would take place on an individual basis as and when their cases mature, irrespective of whether any repatriation is due from the other side.

9. In special cases involving compassionate and humanitarian considerations, either side may exercise its discretion, subject to its laws and regulations, to allow early release and repatriation of civilian prisoners in its custody.

In pursuance of the desire of the prime ministers of Pakistan and India that both sides release civilian prisoners and fishermen of the other side in their custody at the earliest possible, and as a follow up to the Agreement reached between the officials of the Ministry of Interior, Government of Pakistan and Ministry of Home Affairs, Government of India, in their meeting in New Delhi on 13th November, 1998, the delegations of Pakistan and India met in Islamabad on 5-6 March 1999 to discuss modalities for the early release of civilian prisoners and fishermen of the other side in their respective custody.

2. The Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Ahmed Jawed, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Interior, Government of Pakistan and the Indian delegation by Shri Gurcharan Singh, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Home Affairs, Government of India.

3. Discussions were held in a friendly and constructive manner. Shri Gurcharan Singh and the Indian delegation also called on Mr. Hafeezullah Ishaq, Secretary, Ministry of Interior, Government of Pakistan.

4. The two sides exchanged lists of civilian prisoners and held discussions to reconcile the numbers of prisoners indicated by each side. They came to the conclusion that the exact number of civilian prisoners of each side in the custody of the other can be determined only after further investigations in the light of the fresh information exchanged during the course of discussions. They also agreed that in keeping with humanitarian considerations as well as the legal and administrative requirements of the two sides, the civilian prisoners, whose national status has been confirmed, and who have already completed their prison sentence, should be released and repatriated expeditiously. Accordingly, the Pakistan side shall release 18 Indian civilian prisoners and the Indian side shall release 43 Pakistani civilian prisoners within three weeks. It was further agreed that the process of verification in respect of the remaining civilian prisoners would be completed in a period of two months, so that at the end of this period, no civilian prisoner, who has completed his prison sentence and whose national status has been confirmed, remains in the custody of the other county.

5. Reaffirming their commitment to the protocol on Consular Access of November, 1982, the two sides agreed to submit for consideration to the Ministerial Committee, set up by the two Prime Ministers, an improved mechanism to ensure release and repatriation of civilian prisoners on an individual basis following the completion of their prison sentence and availability of travel documents. This mechanism would involve, inter-alia, time bound action by both sides in completing procedures such as intimation of arrest, provision of consular access, verification of national status and provision of travel documents for repatriation on completion of prison sentence.

6. In the above context, a draft mechanism for submission to the Ministerial Committee for its consideration was finalized.

7. The two delegations also discussed the issue of fishermen of one country detained by the other. They reiterated their commitment that fishermen, who inadvertently stray into each other’s territorial waters, should be released expeditiously along with their boats after necessary investigations are completed and travel documents made available. The Indian side agreed to release 26 Pakistani fishermen/o3 boats and the Pakistani side to release 109 Indian fishermen/17 boats, on completion of procedures. It was further agreed that the procedures in this regard will be completed within a month. As regards unconfirmed claims by both sides concerning their boats and fishermen in the custody of the other, it was decided that both sides would conduct further investigations and inform the other side of the results thereof.

8. Pursuant to the discussion on the subject during the meeting of the two Prime Ministers in Lahore, the Indian side conveyed details regarding 54 Indian Prisoners of War believed to be in the custody of Pakistan. The Pakistan side responded that according to its information there were no Indian prisoners of War in its custody, but agreed to re-examine the matter afresh.

9. The two sides discussed the visa relaxation measures taken by India for reciprocal steps by Pakistan and the Pakistan side stated that several of these measures were already being implemented, while the remaining measures were under favorable consideration.

Islamabad,

Mr. Chairman,
Honourable Members

I welcome this opportunity to brief the Senate regarding the visit of the Prime Minister of India, Mr. Atal Bihari Vajpayee, to Pakistan on 20-21 February 1999.

This visit took place at a critical juncture in the history of Pakistan-India relations. Over the past fifty years, these relations have remained mired in wars, tensions and confrontation. The core dispute of Jammu and Kashmir has remained unresolved. Firing between our troops still continues along the LoC and on the Siachen glacier. Since May 1998, a more dangerous and volatile security environment has emerged following the nuclear tests by India and in response by Pakistan.

As the honourable members are fully aware, the Indian nuclear tests on 11 May, qualitatively changed the security environment in the region and posed a direct threat to Pakistan’s security. We were confronted by threats and intimidation, calling upon Pakistan to accept the changed strategic realities and especially to roll back its principled policy of supporting the just struggle of the Kashmiri people for self-determination.

Pakistan was therefore compelled to conduct its own nuclear tests in order to restore the strategic balance and demonstrate a credible nuclear deterrence. This historic decision marks a watershed in Pakistan-India relations. For the first time in 50 years, we have acquired an independent and indigenous defence capability which is the ultimate guarantee of our security.

The nuclearization of South Asia also underscored the urgent need for Pakistan and India to resolve all outstanding issues between them, in particular the central issue of Jammu and Kashmir. At the international level, the nuclear tests served to focus attention on the need for resolving this root cause of tensions between the two countries, since it has become a nuclear flashpoint.

Accordingly, the U.N. Security Council resolution 1172 calls for a dialogue between Pakistan and India to address the Kashmir issue. Similar views have been expressed in statements and communiqués of the Group of 8 Industrialized countries and Permanent Five members of the U.N. Security Council. Additionally, prominent world leaders such as South African President Nelson Mandela, President of the United States, Bill Clinton, and United Nations Secretary General, Kofi Annan, have echoed similar exhortations for a solution of the Kashmir dispute.

Pakistan has consistently sought a peaceful, negotiated, durable settlement of the Kashmir issue in accordance with the relevant U.N. Security Council resolutions, enabling the Kashmiri people to exercise their inalienable right of self-determination. Their struggle for obtaining this right, has been met, ironically with massive repression which has violated over the past 10 years, several other fundamental rights of Kashmiris including freedom of speech, movement or association. Experience of the last 50 years, characterized by three wars and continuing tensions, amply demonstrates that use of force cannot provide the solution to the problems between Pakistan and India. In the prevailing nuclear environment, war is no longer an option. The only avenue available to both countries is that of dialogue and negotiations.

Guided by this conviction, Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif launched his initiative for resuming the bilateral dialogue with India soon after assuming office in 1997. The strength of his argument was and continues to be that the people of both countries confront similar problems of poverty, hunger and disease. Both countries need economic development and social progress. However, as long as their relations continue to remain entangled in confrontation and tensions, they would be compelled to divert their resources away from developmental purposes towards continuing spirals of a wasteful arms race. In order to break out of this vicious circle, the Prime Minister repeatedly emphasized to his Indian interlocutors, that it is imperative to ensure peace and security in the region by resolving all outstanding issues, particularly the Kashmir dispute.

In June 1997, the Prime Minister’s efforts achieved significant success when the Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India reached an understanding on an agreed agenda for bilateral talks which included the Kashmir issue for the first time in several decades. More importantly, in their New York meeting on 23 September 1998, the Prime Ministers of Pakistan and India agreed that an environment of peace and security is in the supreme national interest of both countries and that resolution of all outstanding issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, is essential for this purpose. This historic agreement has become the framework and the touchstone for the bilateral dialogue process that commenced in October last year in Islamabad.

We also emphasized that normalization of our relations with India would not be possible unless there was concrete progress on the Kashmir issue. However, in order to improve the atmosphere for serious negotiations, the Prime Minister also took several initiatives such as starting a bus service between Lahore and New Delhi, ordering the unilateral release of Indian fishermen and civilian prisoners, offering to sell surplus electricity to India and resuming exchanges in the field of sports.

These developments set the stage for the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Vajpayee's visit to Pakistan on the inaugural run of the bus service between Delhi and Lahore.

In keeping with our established practice, a dignified welcome befitting a head of government was accorded to Prime Minister Vajpayee. Apart from the formal session of the bilateral dialogue, the two leaders held several rounds of informal talks. At the conclusion of the visit, three documents were adopted — the Lahore Declaration, the Memorandum of Understanding and the Joint Statement. I would like to place copies of these documents on the Senate record.

The Lahore Declaration is by far the most important outcome of the Summit meeting. It records the shared vision of the two leaders, not only about the future relationship between Pakistan and India but for the security and prosperity of the entire South Asian region.

The very first operative paragraph of the Declaration establishes the commitment of both sides to intensify their efforts to resolve the outstanding issue of Kashmir. Another paragraph calls for respecting human rights and fundamental freedoms among which is the fundamental freedom of self-determination.

The Lahore Declaration also underscores the commitment of both sides to the principles and purposes of the U.N. Charter as well as reiterating their determination to implement the Simla Agreement in letter and spirit. As you well know, the U.N. Charter clearly calls for the implementation of all decisions taken by the world body, including the relevant resolutions on Jammu and Kashmir. As regards the Simla Agreement, the only outstanding issue to be addressed is the final settlement of Jammu and Kashmir.

Moreover, it should be noted that in as many as three public pronouncements, Prime Minister Vajpayee confirmed the need to resolve the Kashmir issue through the integrated bilateral dialogue process.

The Memorandum of Understanding also established a clear linkage between an environment of regional peace and security and resolution of the Kashmir dispute.

Furthermore, the Memorandum identifies 8 concrete measures that are to be taken for ensuring peace and security as well as promoting stabilization and restraint in the nuclear and conventional fields. This is to be achieved through Confidence Building Measures, the details of which are to be worked out by the technical experts of the two sides.

Mr. Chairman,

Honourable Members,

From the floor of this august house, I want to state categorically that there is no question of the government having compromised Pakistan's principled position on the Jammu and Kashmir issue, as has been alleged by some quarters. There is no, repeat no, secret understanding or deal, nor is there any weakening of our position on the Kashmir dispute. The government remains committed as before to supporting the just cause of the Kashmiri people for self-determination, and we shall continue to provide them political, moral and diplomatic support towards this end.

Indeed, it is our conviction that the government's policy of engaging with India at the highest level has better served the Kashmir cause. Indeed, the most significant outcome of the Lahore Summit has been the agreement between the two leaders to intensify efforts for the resolution of the Kashmir issue.

In preparation for the Indian Prime Minister's visit, I briefed the Standing Committees of both the Houses. The Prime Minister also invited Kashmiris including representatives of APHC to take them into confidence.

It is also a matter of record that the Summit meeting has been welcomed and praised by virtually every country and world leader. The event has attracted widespread attention and commendation from the international media as well. Even within Pakistan many opposition leaders and newspapers comments have welcomed the initiative to raise the level of negotiations with India.

The most important aspect of the international reaction has been the unprecedented focus on the need to resolve the Kashmir issue. Our commitment of peace and security has also been lauded by the international community. We have clearly established that this can only be achieved through resolution of all outstanding issues, in particular the core dispute of Kashmir.

There is increasing appreciation in the world now that peace, progress and prosperity in South Asia are not possible without an environment of security and stability, for which purpose it is imperative to resolve the root cause of tensions - the Kashmir dispute. This fundamental reality has been repeatedly emphasized by the Prime Minister in his meetings with the Indian leader as well as to other world leaders.

He has also stressed at every opportunity that not only Pakistan and India, but the entire SAARC region would benefit tremendously from diversion of resources towards economic development, promotion of trade and regional cooperation. At the SAARC Summit in Colombo, he had put forward a proposal on peace, security and development, aimed at creating an enabling environment for progress, prosperity and regional cooperation.

In conclusion, I would like to emphasize that the outcome of Prime Minister Vajpayee’s visit has been positive. It is now time for both sides to convert their commitments into deeds, to translate words into action. We remain ready to do our part and to fulfil our obligations. It is our hope that the Indian side will reciprocate in equal measure.

1454. Joint Statement issued at the end of a meeting between External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh and Foreign Minister of Pakistan Sartaj Aziz on the sidelines of 21st session of the SAARC Council of Ministers.

Nuwara Eliya (Sri Lanka), March 19, 1999.

The Foreign Minister of Pakistan Mr. Sartaj Aziz and the Minister of External Affairs of India, Shri Jaswant Singh met today on the sidelines of the 21st Session of the SAARC Council of Ministers at Nuwara Eliya, Sri Lanka.

They reiterated the historic significance of the Lahore Declaration which embodies the vision of the Prime Ministers of the two countries for ending the legacy of tensions and conflicts of the past fifty years and for ushering a new era of peace, security and prosperity. They discussed ways and means to build on the Lahore Declaration which commits the two countries to build trust and confidence, develop mutually beneficial cooperation and intensify their efforts to resolve all outstanding issues including Jammu and Kashmir.

The two Foreign Ministers agreed on the urgency of taking concrete measures for implementation of the Lahore Declaration, the Memorandum of Understanding and the Joint Statement issued during the Lahore Summit. In this context, the Ministers agreed that the composite and integrated dialogue process must be intensified.

The Ministers agreed to the following:

(i) The meetings of Experts for implementation of the Memorandum of Understanding will be held over the next two months.
(ii) The next round of the composite and integrated dialogue process in accordance with the agreed agenda will commence in May 1999 in New Delhi and Islamabad and will be held over a period of six weeks.

(iii) They will meet shortly after the conclusion of the May - June Round of the composite and integrated dialogue process.

(iv) The Committee on humanitarian issues composed of Minister of State for Foreign Affairs of Pakistan and the Minister of State of External Affairs of India set up by the Prime Ministers at the Lahore Summit will meet in April 1999 to formalize the agreement on the issue of release of civilian prisoners as well as to discuss other humanitarian issues.

(v) That both sides have agreed to relax the visa regime for several categories of visitors. The specific visa relaxation measures shall be announced by the two Governments shortly.

(vi) Delegations of experts from India shall visit Pakistan during April 1999 for identifying areas of cooperation in information technology, Y2K and WTO-related issues.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Consistent with its policy to promote contacts between the people of India and Pakistan at all levels and in keeping with the understandings reached with Pakistan during the visit of Prime Minister, Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee to Pakistan on February 20-21, 1999 and in the meeting of the External Affairs Minister, Shri Jaswant Singh with the Pakistan Foreign Minister, Sartaj Aziz at Nuwara Eliya on March 19, 1999. The Government of India has decided to ease visa and travel restrictions for the following categories of Pakistan Nationals.

(I) Judges of the Supreme Court of Pakistan and of the various high courts.

(II) Attorney General, Solicitor General and Chairperson of the Supreme Court Bar Association.

(III) Editors-in-Chief of national newspapers, and owners/principal functionaries of national newspapers.

(IV) Members of national cricket and hockey teams during their tours of India.

(V) Members of the national assembly and the senate, leaders and deputy leaders of provincial assemblies and leaders and deputy leaders of opposition in provincial assemblies.

(VI) Vice chancellors of recognized approved universities.

(VII) Secretaries/secretary rank officers of the federal government of Pakistan.

(VIII) Spouse, dependent children, i.e sons up to 18 years of age and unmarried daughters of persons in above mentioned categories.

3. Visasholders in the above mentioned categories would be exempt from police reporting. They will be entitled to multiple entry visas of up to one year duration. They will also be exempt from the restrictions of city-specific visas and will be entitled to travel anywhere in India except certain specified areas for which prior permission would be required.

4. The relaxations would come into effect on April 2, 1999.

5. Some relaxations have also been made in the regime governing visits of tourist groups to India. Tour operators only will have to report the arrival of a group to the police at each destination within India. Individual members of a tourist group will not be required to do so. This relaxation will come into effect shortly.
Interview of External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh with the Pakistan daily THE NEWS.

March 30, 1999.

The following is the text of the interview

Question Are you optimistic about the future of Indo Pak ties?

Answer I am confident that India-Pakistan relations would move ahead in a positive direction. Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee’s historic initiative to visit Lahore on the inaugural run of the Delhi - Lahore bus service represents a path breaking and significant engagement between our two countries. The Lahore Declaration, the MOU and the joint statement are all landmarks in our bilateral relations and will move bilateral relations forward for the welfare of the peoples of India and Pakistan.

Q. The history of Indo-Pak dialogue shows that the moment the two countries manage to arrive at an agreement, they then proceed to interpret that to death. Does the already conflicting interpretations by the two sides of the Lahore Declaration suggest that this too will meet the same fate?

A: During our meeting at Nuwara Eliya in Sri Lanka on March 19, Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz and I agreed that the Lahore Declaration commits India and Pakistan to build trust and confidence, develop mutually beneficial cooperation and intensify their efforts to resolve all outstanding issues including Jammu and Kashmir. This is the common interpretation that we have of the Lahore Declaration. Hence there should be no apprehension of differing interpretations of the Lahore Declaration.

Mr. Sartaj and I also agreed on the steps which now need to be taken to implement the Lahore Declaration, the MOU and the joint Statement:

KASHMIR ISSUE AT UN

Q: In your view is Pakistan precluded by the Lahore Declaration from raising the Kashmir issue at the UN?

A: The Lahore Declaration is rooted in the proposition that the two countries will engage in direct bilateral dialogue to build trust and confidence, put in place a comprehensive and stable structure of cooperation and address outstanding issues. The composite dialogue process is also based on a direct bilateral engagement between the two countries. May I reiterate what I have said in the past? India and Pakistan speak the same language and do not require interpreters.

Q: India and Pakistan have agreed to open a dialogue on Kashmir. Will Delhi be prepared to discuss ways and means of eliciting the wishes of the Kashmir people about their political destiny?

A: As part of the composite dialogue process, India and Pakistan are discussing Jammu and Kashmir. This is a direct bilateral engagement. There is no other basis on which Jammu and Kashmir can be discussed between the two sides.

PROXY WAR

Q: It is difficult for us in Pakistan to envision how India and Pakistan can normalize relations so long as India’s Army is engaged in a massive operation against the Kashmiris. Is India prepared to take concrete steps to “humanize” the situation in Kashmir together with undertaking other Kashmir-specific confidence-building measures?

A: The people of our state of Jammu and Kashmir have been the victims of the violence perpetrated by foreign mercenaries who are recruited, indoctrinated, trained, armed, financed and infiltrated into India by extremist organizations and official agencies from beyond our borders. The people of Jammu and Kashmir have shown a heroic resilience in facing this terrorism. Our security forces are in Jammu and Kashmir in response to an unabated proxy war. Our forces have a proud tradition of discipline and valour. Our democratic institutions are vigilant in ensuring that human rights and fundamental freedoms are upheld.

Q: We see the growing involvement of the international community in resolving long-standing disputes such as Northern Ireland, East Timor etc Why should the international community or the UN not get actively engaged in the South Asian peace process?

A: India and Pakistan are committed to resolving all outstanding issues bilaterally under the Simla Agreement. There is no scope for third party mediation. Both sides have reaffirmed commitment to the Simla Agreement during Prime Minister Vajpayee’s recent visit to Lahore

NUCLEAR WEAPON STATE

Q: How do you see the manifest unwillingness of the P-5, especially the USA, to accept India and Pakistan as legitimate nuclear weapons states?

A: India is a nuclear weapon state. This is not a status for others to confer.

Q: Are international fears about the fragility of India-Pakistan nuclear stability justified?

A: No India is a responsible member of the international community.
Q: According to the MOU signed last month in Lahore, the two sides shall engage in bilateral consultations on security concepts and nuclear doctrines with a view to developing measures for confidence building in the nuclear and conventional fields, aimed at avoidance of conflict. Is India prepared to talk on mutual and balanced force reductions to ensure the implementation of this undertaking?

A: Let me first of all make it clear that India security concerns are not country-specific, these concerns are not limited to any one country but go beyond the region. We have made this known to Pakistan during the first round of the composite dialogue process. We are including confidence – building measures with Pakistan.

DETERRENCE STABILITY

Q: Pakistan has clearly expressed its position that nuclear stability in South Asia is related to conventional stability. It can be assumed that Pakistan’s nuclear doctrine will therefore be premised on its perception of India’s much larger conventional capacity, most of which is deployed against Pakistan. Could there be meaningful progress on deterrence stability and confidence-building measures. If the two sides cannot reach agreements which reduce not only the risk of conventional war but address Pakistan’s concerns vis-à-vis Indian conventional capabilities?

A: It has been India’s contention that nuclear weapons are not weapons for war fighting; these are weapons for deterrence. This is why India has voluntarily announced a policy of no-first-use. Pakistan’s doctrine in this regard is different. Nevertheless, we remain ready to engage in discussions with Pakistan on both nuclear and conventional CBMs. If Pakistan’s nuclear capability has provided it with a greater sense of security, it will facilitate these negotiations.

Q: Would not in that case consultations on security concepts and nuclear doctrines simply confirm that there cannot be certainty that nuclear weapons will not come into play as a result of a possible escalation in the conventional situation?

A: As I have already said, India does not consider nuclear weapons as weapons of war fighting. And therefore the perception that the link between conventional and nuclear weapons forms a continuum is entirely misplaced with regard to India. Additionally CBMs are intended to prevent any escalation in the conventional situation so that Pakistan can ensure its own defence in terms of its own requirements and resources without getting entangled in notions of parity.
INDIA AND CTBT

Q: India has said it will not impede the entry into force of the CTBT by September this year. Will India sign the Treaty by mid-1999 as US officials have indicated?

A: I have had the occasion to clarify this in Parliament. We stand by what the Prime Minister said in the UNGA and in Parliament in December 1998.

Q: Will India make its ratification of the CTBT conditional on simultaneous ratification by the nuclear weapons states, specially the USA?

A: We are not laying down preconditions. However, you know the history of negotiations of the entry into force Article and our position on this text. Therefore, it is our expectation that all countries mentioned in Article XIV of the CTBT should ratify the treaty without conditions.

Q: India has agreed to participate in the FMCT negotiations. Does India accept the basic premise of the Treaty i.e. that only future production of fissile material should be banned?

A: Since 1993, India has remained ready to participate in FMCT negotiations that would bring about cessation of future production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, backed by a non-discriminatory verification regime.

FMCT TALKS

Q: Does India support an immediate moratorium on fissile material production by the P-5 as well as India and Pakistan as has been proposed by the USA?

A: It is not possible for India to agree to such a suggestion at this stage. We will, of course, pay serious attention to any negotiated multilateral initiatives in the course of the FMCT negotiations.

Q: What in your judgment has been the impact of India’s nuclear tests on the structure of Sino-Indian ties?

A: Our nuclear tests were conducted on security considerations. They were not country-specific.

We remain committed to improving relations with all our neighbours, including China, on the basis of the five principles of peaceful co-existence. Both India and China considered the Foreign Office consultations, held recently in Beijing (February 25-26), to have been useful and agreed that dialogue, at various levels, should continue. We continue to have mutually beneficial cooperation in diverse fields. Bilateral trade increased to $1.92 billion during 1998. India, for the fourth year in succession, was China’s largest trading partner in South Asia.

As close neighbours engaged in the task of economic development, it is important for India and China to eliminate differences through dialogue and to enhance mutually beneficial cooperation. This would contribute to peace and stability in the region as well as in the world at large.

1457. Record of the Call by Pakistan High Commissioner Ashraf Jehangir Qazi on Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee.

New Delhi, April 12, 1999.

Prime Minister’s Office

PHC said that the bilateral dialogue was proceeding, and Foreign Secretary-level talks would take place in June. These would be followed by talks on the other six subjects at the level of Secretaries, to be followed by MOS level talks and then EAM-level talks. After that, perhaps PM Nawaz Sharif (PMNS) could visit India. The Pakistani side was happy that the dialogue had been resumed and the basis and framework were now in place. It was their hope that all items on the agenda would be implemented and none would be neglected. The talks should go on and this was the desire of the Pakistani side. He also commented on the Agni test and said that it demonstrated the technical competence of India but it would have security implications for Pakistan.

2. PM said that India’s security concerns were not limited to Pakistan and the Agni was not country-specific anyway. Principal Secretary added that they were also planning to test the naval version of Prithvi, but PM had stopped it. To the Pakistanis, we would like to convey the assurance that Agni had nothing to do with Pakistan. PHC said that nonetheless, it could also hit Pakistan. Principal Secretary said that if we chose to launch it from Chennai, then it would hit Pakistan. However, we would not risk a long flight over Indian territory itself. He added that the Agni test was scheduled originally in March but PM had postponed it since it came soon after the Lahore talks. He repeated that the short-range naval missile had not been tested because of Pakistani sensitivities. PHC said that he would convey this to Islamabad.
3. PM inquired whether the Pakistani business delegation had had a useful trip to India. PHC said that it had gone well. All of India’s neighbours wanted to expand their exports to India but the Indian market was very competitive. CII and FICCI were quite active in Pakistan also as were various other regional chambers. PHC said that he had recently visited Chandigarh and the local chamber had projected a target of Rs.10,000 crore turnover by 2003. Pakistan was willing for this, provided there was forward movement on all issues. There should be no issue on which there was no progress. PM observed that some issues were easy while others were difficult. PHC said that while this was true, the difficult issues could not be ignored. PM’s visit had raised expectations, specially his speech at Governor’s House in Lahore. People remembered PM’s role 20 years ago as Foreign Minister in improving Indo-Pakistan relations. They were looking to him for guidance this time too. This was the vision also of PMNS.

1458. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs regarding developments along the Line of Control in the Kargil Sector in Jammu and Kashmir.

New Delhi, May 21, 1999.

We have seen the statement made yesterday by an Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on recent developments along the Line of Control in the Kargil Sector in Jammu and Kashmir. We have also seen reports of comments made by a Pakistan Military Spokesman on these developments. These constitute a brazen attempt by the Pakistan government to obfuscate the truth and camouflage their true intentions, while projecting an air of injured innocence.

The facts are that Pakistan has, since early this month, under the cover of intense artillery shelling, pushed into Indian territory across the LOC in the Kargil sector, a large number of armed intruders. Evidently, Pakistan hoped that these armed intruders would succeed in consolidating their positions, so that they could pose a continuing threat to peace and security in Jammu and Kashmir. However, the Army has through effective and timely movement surrounded most of these infiltrating groups. All necessary action will be taken by the Armed Forces to complete their task of putting an end to this intrusion. Pakistan should be aware from its own experience that such foolhardy ventures against India can never succeed.

This is yet another instance of Pakistan’s persistent efforts to infiltrate terrorists across the LOC, in pursuit of its designs on Jammu & Kashmir. We call upon Pakistan to observe its obligations under the Simla Agreement, in particular, to desist from violating the international boundary and the Line of Control in Jammu & Kashmir. We reiterate that Pakistan must abandon its sponsorship of cross-border terrorism in Jammu & Kashmir, and elsewhere in India, its continuing firing, including artillery shelling across the international boundary and the LOC in Jammu & Kashmir, often targeting the civilian population, as well as its vicious propaganda against India. We must once again make it clear that there cannot be a resolution of complex issues or the building of a stable bilateral relationship as long as Pakistan continues to engage in these confrontational and hostile activities.

Our desire for good neighbourly relations with Pakistan was once again made amply clear in the historic initiative of Prime Minister Shri Atal Behari Vajpayee to visit Lahore in February this year. We call upon Pakistan to join us in following up on the Lahore Declaration, which commits the two countries to work purposefully in building confidence and trust, put in place a stable structure of cooperation and resolve all outstanding issues through peaceful bilateral discussions.

1459. Media Briefing by Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs regarding the situation in the Kargil Sector.

Warning India against further aggravating the already-tense situation in Kashmir, the Foreign Office spokesman urged the UN Secretary-General on May 26 to immediately send an envoy to the subcontinent to take stock of the situation in the valley and on the Line of Control (LoC).

The spokesman confirmed that the Indian Prime Minister had called Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on May 25 on the phone with regard to the Kashmir situation and said his understanding was that both Prime Ministers focused on the need for maintaining peace and security. The spokesman said the two Prime Ministers decided that the Directors-General of Military Operations (DGMO) on the two sides should speak to each other and try to settle the matters so as to help defuse the escalation.
He told reporters that the Indian air strikes against the so-called “infiltrators” with MI-17 gunship helicopters, backed by jet fighters earlier on May 26 in the Kargil sector, was “fraught with dangers”.

The spokesman stated that the use of Indian air power against Kashmiri freedom fighters was apparently done “to create conditions in which advantage may be taken on the ground (against Pakistani side) which will be a violation of the Simla Agreement”.

He categorically stated that Pakistan reserved the right to respond appropriately in such an event and asserted that the responsibility would be squarely on India.”

The spokesman called upon the UN Secretary-General to immediately send his special envoy to the subcontinent to take stock of the situation in Kashmir and along the Line of Control. Pakistan has also proposed that the UN Military Observers Group in Kashmir (UNMOGIP) be reinforced to prevent further escalation and its fallout, he said.

He further said that to counter the Indian allegation of sending trained guerillas into Kashmir by Pakistan, Kashmir would be welcomed to send a mutually-acceptable UN force.

The spokesman said that Indian air strikes in Kashmir also resulted in some bombs falling on the Pakistan side. Such escalation, he said, was unwarranted and should be avoided. He said that apparently the Indian air attack was not on targets in Pakistan. Basically, it was directed against the Kashmiri mujahideen in Kashmir, he said.
1460. Statement by Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs rejecting Pakistan’s protest on alleged violation of LoC by Indian aircraft.

New Delhi, May 27, 1999.

Our Acting High Commissioner in Islamabad has categorically rejected the “protest” and the untenable allegations made this evening by an official of the Pakistan Foreign Ministry. It was pointed out to the Pakistan Foreign Ministry that there has been no violation whatsoever of the LoC by India. Our aircraft were flying on our side of the LoC. The spokesman of our Ministry of Defence has already provided all the facts. Pakistan’s action is hostile and provocative, and represents an escalation. In this context it is we who lodge a strong protest.

It is shameless of Pakistan to speak of violation of the Simla Agreement, considering that Pakistan has been systematically flouting the Simla Agreement all these years, through its continuous and active sponsorship of cross-border terrorism and artillery shelling and vicious propaganda. Now, this has been compounded by Pakistan’s pushing across the LoC in the Kargil Sector, of a large number of armed intruders, fully supported by the Pakistan armed forces. These intrusions are qualitatively different from the earlier ones. As made clear in our statement of May 21, and by our Prime Minister in this talk with his Pakistan counterpart, such activity is totally unacceptable. All necessary action will be taken by our armed forces to put an end to this intrusion. We are resolute in our determination to complete this task. Pakistan will be responsible for any escalation. Pakistan should realize that such foolhardy ventures against India cannot succeed. Regarding the reference to the DGMO’s conversation, we are waiting for the Pakistan DGMO to respond to suggestions made by his Indian counterpart.

The present situation has been created entirely because of Pakistan’s provocative activities. It is Pakistan which needs to exercise restraint. We remain committed to the Lahore Declaration. Pakistan must realize that there cannot be stable relations in the face of its provocations.
1461. Pakistan Foreign Office summons Indian Charge d’ Affaires to Lodge Strong protest with India on the alleged air violation.

Islamabad, May 27, 1999.

Pakistan lodged a strong protest with India against violations of Line of Control on May 27.

The Indian Charged Affaires was called to the Foreign Office and Pakistan’s grave concern at repeated violations of the LoC by Indian aircraft was conveyed to him. Indian aircraft had on May 26 crossed the Loc and hit with rockets the area close to the Loc in the Indus sector. Indian aircraft had on May 27 again intruded into Pakistani territory. Two Indian aircraft were shot down and their wreckage lies well inside Pakistan.

The Indian Charged’ Affaires was told that Pakistan, in the past few days, and particularly on May 26, had expressed the hope that India would avoid provocative military action and that Pakistan reserved the right, in any such situation, to respond appropriately.

These provocations are clear violation of the Simla Agreement and the spirit of the Lahore Declaration and have created an extremely dangerous situation in the area. Pakistan has expressed the hope that India would avoid any further military escalation which could lead incalculable consequences.

Pakistan has apprised the UN about the dangerous situation created by India’s reckless actions across the LoC in Kashmir. The Prime Minister urgently addressed a communication to the UN Secretary General in this regard on May 27 calling for reinforcement of the strength and role of UNMOGIP and immediate dispatch of a Special UN envoy to the region for preservation of peace and security.
Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif had a telephonic talk with his Indian counterpart Atal Behari Vajpayee and impressed upon him not to allow situation on LOC towards a dangerous direction.

Nawaz Sharif offered Vajpayee to send Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz to New Delhi for talks with the Indian Foreign Minister to find ways for ending the tension, said a statement issued by the Foreign Office.

Nawaz Sharif told Vajpayee that Pakistan was not responsible for the present tension. The situation along LOC deteriorated, "on account of heavy artillery shelling in the Kargil sector across the Line of Control."

Indian Prime Minister had talked to Nawaz Sharif on telephone on Monday so the latter returned his call.

The Prime Minister told him that he could send Sartaj Aziz to have talks with his Indian counterpart "to defuse the current situation and pave the way for peaceful settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir issue".

The Prime Minister said he was disappointed over the situation because in less than three months of the Lahore Declaration, they were "facing a situation which is fraught with grave risks".

Nawaz Sharif emphasized that both, "the leaders owed it to their peoples not to allow the situation to drift towards a dangerous direction".

The Lahore Declaration, he said, had "created a positive atmosphere" and "commits both the countries to resolve their problems, particularly the Jammu and Kashmir issue".

He reiterated that Pakistan remained committed to the preservation of peace and promotion of dialogue in pursuance of the Lahore Declaration.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Record of Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee’s telephonic talk with Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif.

New Delhi, May 29, 1999 (23:30 hrs)

PMNS began by saying that he was ready to send Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz at any time convenient to India. He said that they were ready to discuss all issues and some way would need to be found to resolve our problems.

PM told PMNS that the latter should make up his mind what he wished to do. If the only purpose was to show to the world that they were talking, nothing would come out of it.

PMNS said that he had already made up his mind and wanted peace and friendship. PM said that we were unable to understand why the LoC had been violated with help from Pakistani Army regulars. PMNS said that there were no regulars and there was no involvement of the Army. These were freedom fighters who had been waging a campaign for freedom for the last 10-12 years. PM told PMNS that we had found the body of a regular soldier of Pak army. PM then asked why there had been no clashes in the Kargil sector for the last 20 years or more. He also said that the Pakistani side had shot at our Canberra and MIG aircraft. Where had the stinger missile come from? PM said that if he wanted to spoil relations he would not have taken the bus trip to Lahore. In fact, it was Pakistani action that was threatening to destroy everything that had been achieved in Lahore. He once again asked PMNS to think further, and make up his mind “because if we resumed talks and there was no result, that would make matters worse.” PMNS felt that there would be results and one should not be pessimistic.

PM replied that for talks to be meaningful Pakistan must call off the intruders, because we would not stop our operations as long as they were on our side of the LoC.

PMNS said that he would think further about what PM had said and speak again.

PM added that during the conversation, there was emphasis on the Lahore process and PMNS stated his desire to work in that direction.

The conversion lasted 20 minutes.

Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz may visit India next week in an effort to defuse tension along the LoC in the disputed Kashmir valley, Information Minister Mushahid Hussain said.

Asked how sure he was about Sartaj Aziz’s visit to New Delhi, Mushahid Hussain said: “Insha Allah the visit will take place next week. “But he said he would not like to give more information about behind the scene efforts to defuse tensions. “We would like to believe that our peace initiative has had a sedative affect on the situation,” he said.

Describing the downing of two Indian planes by Pakistani troops on Thursday as “a turning point,” the information minister said “since then saner elements in India have been urging their government to show restraint.” “We have taken the initiative and now we are waiting for their response,” said Foreign Office’s spokesman Tariq Altaf when asked for comments on the foreign minister’s proposed visit.

The prime minister, he said, took a major diplomatic initiative by proposing that Aziz may visit New Delhi to hold talks with his counterpart for defusing tensions and for seeking a peaceful solution to the Kashmir dispute.

“This initiative by the prime minister is a concrete manifestation of his firm commitment to the peace process as he had reiterated in his letter to the UN Secretary-General on May 27,” Altaf said. “Pakistan, as I have said repeatedly, is desirous of defusing the situation which has been escalated by India with military action against the Kashmiri Mujahideen inside occupied Kashmir and incursions and heavy shelling across the Line of Control.”

“Pakistan remains committed to the Lahore Declaration and to the entire peace process. We also remain entirely prepared and we would do everything possible to defend our security, sovereignty and territorial integrity.”

“Our preference, nevertheless, is for finding solutions through peaceful negotiations. While we call upon the international community, in the words of President Nelson Mandela, to tend all their strength to the resolution of the Kashmir problem, Pakistan will not be found wanting in making efforts herself and in taking bold and constructive initiatives to preserve peace and security, and to promote negotiated solutions to all issues.”
“I would also like to reiterate our serious concern, as I had done yesterday, at the perpetration of brutalities and intensified military action by the Indian forces against the Kashmiri Mujahideen, inside the Indian held Kashmir.”

The Information minister found the telephonic conversation of the two prime ministers very important and effective as it had brought down the political and military temperatures. “The conversation seems to have a salutary effect on the situation, which started with the downing of two Indian aircraft,” he said. But Mushahid Hussain felt that the international community needed not to just express concern over the escalation along the Line of Control but go beyond that. He said Pakistan had continuously brought the entire situation to the notice of the world.

The Information Minister said that last week’s escalation had convincingly demonstrated Pakistan’s capability to defend its airspace and protect the territorial integrity of the motherland from intruders and attacks. Also, he said, these events had once again heightened the fact that the key issue of Kashmir could not be brushed aside as on it rested peace and stability in South Asia.

He said that during the past week, Pakistan had clearly demonstrated that it was a responsible and mature member of the international community. He said the events unfolding after the border escalation had shown clearly how Indian military command had reacted in panic, desperation and confusion, sparked by their own military failure inside occupied Kashmir. Mushahid Hussain also cited contradictions among the statements issued by the Indian leaders on the situation.

Reiterating Pakistan’s stance, the information minister said: “We are consistent in promoting peace in the region and having a serious and substantive dialogue with India on all issues.” Mushahid Hussain once again stressed that Pakistan was not involved in supporting the freedom fighters as the Indians alleged. However, he said, Islamabad did show political, diplomatic and moral support to them.

Mushahid Hussain also ridiculed the Indian army claim about the presence of Mujahideen and recalled that the Indians gave them different identifications at different times. But the information minister said the Indian occupation forces had resorted to worst treatment to the freedom fighters. “Rape has been used as a war weapon against them and we have such an instance in Bosnia only,” he said. Pakistan has proposed dates for the visit of Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz to India for talks on finding way of defusing tension at the Line of Control (LoC).

“Pakistani High Commissioner in New Delhi is in touch with the Indian authorities to finalise the dates,” Foreign Minister, Sartaj Aziz told reporters. “My visit’s intention is to defuse the situation and try to find a solution to the (Kashmir) problem through dialogue,” he said and added he would emphasise that the local problems should be resolved at local level.

To a question he agreed that interim Indian government could not take major decisions, but a lot of technical issues could be discussed. Responding to another question he said: “We are doing our best to defuse the situation, but we cannot say with surely what will happen.” Sartaj said exchange of artillery fire is a common feature every Summer, but this year India escalated it qualitatively.

“It is for the first time since 1971, India has used jet fighters and gunship helicopters along the Line of Control, which tensed the situation.” Nevertheless, he said, both India and Pakistan are committed to the Lahore Declaration. To a query on Indian allegation that non-Kashmiris were fighting in the occupied valley the foreign minister said that Indian armed forces had killed 50,000 to 60,000 Kashmiri. “How many of them could be non-Kashmiris?” he asked.

1465. Rejection by Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee of the offer of UN Secretary General to send a Special Envoy to India to broker peace between India and Pakistan.

Indian Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee said on May 30 that he has rejected an offer by UN Secretary General Kofi Annan to send a special envoy to broker peace with Pakistan. Mr. Annan rang me up on May 29 to convey his proposal to send a special envoy to India and Pakistan to sort out the matter between the two countries Mr. Vajpayee said.

“I firmly told him that if at all an envoy has to be sent, he should go to Pakistan and not India. Mr. Vajpayee said in the context of worries in the UN that tensions between India and Pakistan over fighting in Kashmir could trigger a war.

Mr. Vajpayee said the military offensive to flush out the fighters in Kashmir’s Kargil sector would continue until the mission is accomplished. “We cannot tolerate their presence in our territory”, he said.

“It is Pakistan which has attacked us and violated our territory to capture our land,” he said and added that India will not accept a third-party mediation in resolving bilateral issues.
“India did not start the hostility In fact we have always been trying for peace between the two neighbours,” he said.

Mr. Vajpayee said “We are not shy of talks (with Pakistan) but we will not do so under fear.”

The Indian External Affairs Ministry spokesman, meanwhile, linked the proposed visit by Pakistan’s Foreign Minister to New Delhi to the occupation by Islamic fighters of pockets of Kashmir. The matter is under consideration. However our thinking has to be taken into account that the fact that an armed intrusion has taken place and it must be first reversed,” the spokesman said.

He also said British Foreign Secretary Robin Cook and US Secretary of State Madeleine Albright spoke to Indian External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh over the week-end. “There is however, a general recognition in the world of the problem that is: the armed intrusion in Kashmir and the military action taking place.”

Mr. Cook expressed his concern but Mr. Jaswant Singh told him that India had no alternative but to evict the intruders and that “we are tackling the situation,” the spokesman said.

1465A. Note from Pakistan High Commission in India to the Ministry of External Affairs regarding the proposal from Pakistan to send its Foreign Minister to India for talks.

High Commission for Pakistan
New Delhi

The High Commission for the Islamic Republic of Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Republic of India and has the honour to refer to the telephone call of May 28, 1999 from the Prime Minister of Pakistan to Prime Minister of India and his offer to send the Foreign Minister of Pakistan to India.

The esteemed Ministry may wish to suggest a convenient and early date for the proposed visit of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan.
Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee decided to accept an offer by Islamabad to send Pakistan's Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz to New Delhi for talks on the Kashmir crisis, an Indian Foreign Ministry spokesman said on May 31.

"The Prime Minister has considered and accepted the offer of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to send Mr. Sartaj Aziz to India" the spokesman told REUTERS. "The dates for his visit will be worked out through diplomatic channels."

But the spokesman made it clear India would not pause in its air and ground campaign, which entered its sixth day on May 31, to evict hundreds of Pakistan intruders holed up on high ground on the LoC.

"Our armed forces will continue with the operations that have been launched until their objective of putting an end to the armed intrusion in the entire Kargil sector (of Kashmir) and restoration of status quo ante is attained, the spokesman said.

In his most hard-hitting statement since Pakistan started intrusions, Mr. Vajpayee described the situation in Kashmir as dangerous and said: "This is not infiltration. But a kind of attack (by Pakistan) aimed at altering our borders."

Mr. Vajpayee described the clashes in Kashmir as a “warlike” situation. "A warlike situation has evolved", he said. “This is a kind of invasion, Aggression. An attempt to alter the frontier and to grab the land,” he said.

Mr. Vajpayee urged Pakistan to recall the mercenaries and “regular Army soldiers” from Kashmir.
“I want to make one thing clear to Pakistan: that for improving relations between the two countries it is imperative that the infiltrators, some of whom are foreign nationals, should leave our land”, he said.

He warned that otherwise India would give a “befitting reply.”

New Delhi said “a return to the status quo in Kashmir is necessary before further talks”.

Mr. Vajpayee reiterated that India alone cannot ensure peace in Kashmir. “One cannot clap by one hand alone”, he said. “India is committed to protecting the nation’s security.”

He accused Pakistan of pushing forward the ceasefire line. “We don’t want anybody’s land, but we won’t let anyone take our land,” he said. “We want peace but it cannot be one sided.”

“We are giving a befitting reply,” he said. “They are trying to push the Line of Control towards us.”

“Direct confrontation is on in some sectors,” Vajpayee said.

“We have told Pakistan clearly that to improve relations between the countries they should call back all the intruders otherwise we will force them to leave the country,” Mr. Vajpayee said.

He said that Pakistan was probably preparing to infiltrate hundreds of freedom fighters into Kashmir while discussing peace in Lahore on February 20-21 during the first India-Pakistan summit in 10 years.

“I told Pakistani leaders that probably while I was taking the bus to Lahore, preparations for infiltration were already underway,” he said, referring to the infiltration that had taken place.

1468. Statement issued by Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on the reported comments of Pakistan Foreign Minister Sartaz Aziz regarding the Line of Control in the state of Jammu & Kashmir.

New Delhi, June 4, 1999.

We have seen the reported comments of Pakistan Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz regarding the Line of Control* in the State of Jammu & Kashmir. These comments confirm Pakistan’s intention to justify its armed intrusion and aggression, thereby seeking to alter the well-defined Line of Control.

Pakistan Foreign Minister’s suggestion is untenable. It represents an irresponsible and dubious doctrine which undermines established principles and can have extremely dangerous repercussions on the maintenance of peace and security. India has scrupulously respected the Line of Control despite the continued forcible and illegal occupation of a large part of the state of Jammu & Kashmir which, in its entirety, is an integral part of India.

The delineation of the Line of Control, throughout its entire length, was undertaken by the military authorities of India and Pakistan in accordance with Paragraph 4(ii) of the Simla Agreement. The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan gave their approval to the delineation of 11th December, 1972. Adjustments of ground positions to conform to the Line of Control were also completed subsequently.

Neither the disposition of ground forces nor of control of territory flowing from the delineation of the Line of Control has ever been questioned by either country and the interpretation of the line of Control has never been an issue. It is significant that such fundamental issues are being raised in the wake of Pakistan’s armed intrusion and aggression in the Kargil Sector. The comments of the Pakistan Foreign Minister are evidently a demonstration of their designs to manufacture a rationale for aggression and to gain for it an ex-post facto respectability. This is a futile effort to obfuscate and to divert attention from the central issue which is Pakistan’s armed intrusion and aggression.

* Sartaj Aziz had said that the Line of Control in this segment was not clearly demarcated and that the militants had not transgressed into the Indian territory.

Meanwhile the Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs said on June 5 that “the armed forces of India are continuing with their successful operation in pushing back the intrusion that has taken place into our side of the Line of Control in the Kargil sector. These operations will continue until the aggression committed against India is vacated. It is an objective that we will pursue unwaveringly and with the fullest determination.” India also, as intimated earlier, agreed to a proposal to schedule the visit of Pakistan Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz to India on June 7, 1990. The Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on June 8 informed the High Commission of Pakistan in New Delhi that Pakistani Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz “may visit India on Saturday, June 12, 1999.”
The Line of Control is well-defined and fully settled. We would like to make it clear that the comments relating to the Line of Control made by Pakistan Foreign Minister cannot be the subject for discussion. We call upon Pakistan to respect the sanctity of the Line of Control, give up its desperate and foolhardy attempts to change it, and to stop its cross-border terrorism against India. A meaningful dialogue can only take place if Pakistan begins to act accordingly.

We reiterate that we are firmly resolved to evict Pakistan’s armed intrusion and to repel the aggression launched against us.

1469. Address to the Nation by Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee during the Kargil Crisis

New Delhi, June 7, 1999.

My dear Countrymen,

You are well aware of the situation which has developed in Kargil:

It is a serious situation;

It is a situation fraught with danger;

It is a situation that has arisen from one simple fact: the decision of Pakistan to cross the Line of Control, to send its men and materials to occupy our territory.

No government can tolerate such an incursion – our Government certainly will not.

Countries the world over have recognized that we have the full right to evict these intruders from our soil. But for me and for my Government this is not just a matter of our having a right. It is our duty to rid our sacred Motherland of every single intruder.

For this reason, as you have seen, our armed forces have launched a major operation to drive them back. No one should entertain the slightest doubt: they shall not stop till they have completely attained their objective. No one shall stop them till they have done so.

You know well that our relations with Pakistan, as with all our neighbours, were improving rapidly:
The Prime Ministers and other ministers of the two countries were in regular contact;

Dialogue among officials of the two countries was proceeding constructively, and satisfactorily;

Areas of co-operation had been identified, and at various levels were afoot to work together on each of them;

Most important, people-to-people contacts and exchanges had opened up as never before in fifty years — there had been an outpouring of goodwill on both sides.

In the midst of all this, regulars of the Pakistan Army and infiltrators have been sent across. Fomenting insurgency here was heinous enough. But this time Army regulars have been sent. They have been sent to occupy our territory. And having occupied it, to choke off our links with other parts of our country — in particular with Siachin and Ladakh.

This step has been taken after a great deal of preparation. It was a preplanned operation.

It is a repudiation of the letter and spirit of the Lahore Declaration. It is violation not just of one article of the Simla Agreement, but an eightfold violation of that solemn Agreement.

The Simla Agreement binds each side to respect the territorial integrity, sovereignty, and independence of the other. The clauses repeatedly enjoin that neither side shall use the threat of force or force to affect the territorial integrity of the other.

The Agreement deals specifically with the Line of Control. It lays down that the Line of Control resulting from the cease-fire of December 17, 1971 shall be respected by both sides. Further more, that “Neither side shall seek to alter it unilaterally”. The Agreement goes a step ahead and specifies, “Both sides further undertake to refrain from the threat or the use of force in violation of this Line.”

And yet that is exactly what Pakistan has done: it has used force in an attempt to unilaterally alter the Line of Control.

This having been done it has now been said that the Line of Control is vague. This is nothing but an ex-post artifice to justify aggression. After Agreement in Simla in 1972, the military authorities of the two sides went over the Line of Control — section by microscopic section. The salient, the locations, the co-ordinates were marked out on detailed maps. The exercise was done thoroughly: five months were expended on delineating the maps so that no ambiguity may remain.
Not just that, at no time in the last 27 years has the Line of Control been called in question—not once, not on a single occasion.

The new assertion, therefore is just a contrivance to explain away the aggression. It will fool no one. And I do want to make it plain: if the stratagem now is that, the intrusion should be used to alter the Line of Control through talks, the proposed talks will end before they have begun.

India is always open to talks. But the talks must have a definite, specific purpose. In the present instance, the subject is one and one alone: the intrusion, and how Pakistan proposes to undo it. To discuss this, our doors are always open, and all dates are convenient to us. India wants peace. We are at peace with all other neighbours of ours. We were taking major steps with Pakistan also—towards undoing the fifty-year history of bitterness. Our people desire it. Our Government is committed to it. We have travelled quite some distance for it.

I remain confident that the people of Pakistan too yearn for peace and harmony. They know the possible costs of hostilities—of how these will push economic gains even further beyond the horizon. They know that in today’s world whosoever launches aggression of any kind will get isolated in the international community. Moreover, both India and Pakistan are nuclear powers. Our responsibilities in this regard are all the greater. Therefore, I once again urge the Government of Pakistan: undo the armed intrusion.

We must hope, my countrymen that even now reason will prevail, that those within Pakistan who see the folly of aggression will have their way. But till that happens, we have a job on our hands.

Our first thought, and our last thought must be for our jawans, for our airmen and our officers who are fighting back the intruders. I want each one of them to know: the entire country stands with you, every Indian is grateful to you. The whole operation has been thrust upon us. To ensure victory, you would not be wanting in your requirements.

Our Jawans and officers are laying down their lives. Should we be continuing our petty squabbles at such a time? We should stand by them and avoid unnecessary debates.

Let us use this occasion to learn from our defence forces: let us translate into our own conduct some of the discipline for which they are renowned. The whole world is watching how our brave armed forces are defending the motherland in inhospitable hilly terrain and at grave risks to their lives. In this hour of crisis, we must maintain equanimity and act with confidence.

We should not be disheartened by some momentary mishap. We must realize the gravity of the situation and emulate the fortitude with which our fighting men take such events in their stride.
Have confidence in the ability of our armed forces.
The armed forces shall accomplish this task and ensure that no one dares to indulge in this kind of misadventure in future.

Jai Hind

1470. Press release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs regarding the Joint Meeting of the National Security Council, the Strategic Policy Group and the National Security Advisory Board.

New Delhi, June 8, 1999.

The Prime Minister chaired a joint meeting of the National Security Council, the Strategic Policy Group and the National Security Advisory Board earlier today. Home Minister, Raksha Mantri, External Affairs Minister, Finance Minister and Deputy Chairman, Planning Commission were present. The three Service Chiefs were in attendance as members of the Strategic Policy Group. The main focus of the discussion was the situation in Kargil, the broader question of India-Pakistan relations.

The meeting undertook an in-depth and wide-ranging analysis of the motivations and politico-strategic objectives of the current Pakistani intrusion, in both the short term and long term perspective. A clear understanding of Pakistan’s aims emerged from the discussions. Pakistan’s recent official pronouncements reveal an inclination towards adventurism, the consequences of which shall be entirely Pakistan’s responsibility.

The discussions revealed complete unanimity that the combined Army-Air Force operations in Kargil were the right response to the Pakistani armed incursion across the LoC. All necessary means required to reverse this should be used. There was also complete agreement that Pakistani attempts to question the Line of Control, and to violate the Shimla Agreement were completely unacceptable.

It was also agreed that India should remain committed to the composite dialogue with Pakistan on issues that have been agreed between the two sides. The Lahore process should be sustained in the search for a comprehensive improvement in relations with Pakistan. At the same time, India must be prepared for all eventualities in the fluid situation prevailing today. This requires a sustained effort based on national will and political consensus.

The meeting also noted that the international community had shown greater understanding of India’s concerns. The situation called for more intensive diplomacy so as to neutralize Pakistan’s efforts to mislead and dis-inform public opinion.

Special attention at the meeting was paid to information-related aspects. India has been the target of a ten year terrorist campaign in J&K and other parts of India. It should make more active efforts at educating public opinion both in India and abroad. It should also highlight the forbearance it has shown so far, in the face of grave provocation.

Prime Minister decided that this process of combined consultations will be continued.

1471. Media Briefing by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs regarding the visit of Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz to Beijing.

Islamabad, June 9, 1999.

In a major diplomatic development, Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz will dash to Beijing on June 10 before the June 12 Pakistan-India talks in New Delhi.

Foreign Office spokesman Tariq Altaf said that this visit, besides several other important engagements of the Foreign Minister had been rearranged.

Asked whether Mr. Sartaj’s immediate visit to China was already scheduled or finalized suddenly.

Mr. Sartaj will be back on June 11, a day before his departure for New Delhi to attend peace talks with India.

The Foreign Minister according to Foreign Office statement will hold talks with his counterpart Tang Jiaxuan and brief him on the current situation on the Line of Control in Kashmir.
The spokesman said that “Pakistan and China had always shown close coordination and cooperation* on all important issues. We have been consulting China on every important issue and will continue doing so.”

The Foreign Ministry said that both countries coordinated and consulted each other regularly and the Foreign Minister’s visit was part of this tradition.

* Sartaj Aziz before his departure for Beijing on June 10 said that China is a big regional power which has stakes in peace and stability of the region. “Any country which has stakes in peace and stability of the region should be concerned about the situation on the LoC,” he said. “The Kargil sector where all this is going on is not far away from Tibet and Sinkiang province of China,” he added. He said China has agreed with the USA to work for peace and security of the region. “So anything that threatens peace and security of the region is a cause of concern to Beijing.” He said he will hold talks with his counterpart and also with the Chairman of the Standing Committee of the People’s Congress. Asked whether China will play a mediatory role in deescalating the situation, Mr. Sartaj said Pakistan has always welcomed third party mediation but it is only India which has been consistently resisting this option. The Information Minister Mushahid Hussain said in Islamabad on June 10 that Pakistan is not using its close relationship with China as leverage in its dispute with India over Kashmir. Meanwhile the USA welcomed Sartaj’s visit to China and said “We feel it is useful for countries to consult other interested parties”.

On return from Beijing on June 11 Sartaj Aziz said that China “has assured its deep and abiding interest in and support for the sovereignty, territorial integrity, independence and security of Pakistan.” A statement issued on his behalf said that “during his brief stay in Beijing he called on Chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People’s Congress Li Peng and also held talks with his counterpart Tang Jiaxuan. These meetings were very fruitful and productive. The statement emphasized four points of his visit: (i) China as steadfast friend of Pakistan assured us of its deep and abiding interest in and support for the sovereignty, territorial integrity, independence and security of Pakistan; (ii) China indicated that the preservation of peace and security in the region is of great importance, (iii) Both China and Pakistan agreed on the need to de-escalate the dangerous situation that has developed on the LoC in Jammu and Kashmir; and (iv) China and Pakistan agreed for a peaceful negotiated and just settlement of the Kashmir dispute.” It added: “Pakistan and China enjoy bilateral relations and have a tradition of frequent high-level contacts to exchange views on matters of mutual interest. China is a time-tested and steadfast friend of Pakistan. As such it was only appropriate that I should visit China to brief the Chinese leadership regarding the situation on the LoC.”
Statement of the Pakistan Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz on return from a day-long visit to India.

Islamabad, June 12, 1999.

I visited New Delhi* pursuance of my Prime Minister’s proposal to the Indian Prime Minister to defuse the tense situation that has recently developed along the LoC.

I met with Foreign Minister Jaswant Sigh in the morning and over lunch, and later in the afternoon, I called on the Indian Prime Minister.

During these meetings we had a frank and useful discussion and exchanged views on how best to defuse the current situation and restore the spirit of the Lahore Declaration.

In this spirit, I suggested that despite our differences over the origin and nature of the present tension, we share an interest in defusing the situation and de-escalating tensions by bringing about an appropriate atmosphere in which we can effectively address each others concerns.

For this purpose, I have made some specific suggestions. I also undertook to convey India’s point of view, as conveyed to me by the Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister, to my Prime Minister.

Similarly, I am hopeful that the Indian government will give consideration to the suggestions I have conveyed to it so that the talks which we have had today with Mr. Jaswant Singh may be carried forward.

* While in New Delhi, Sartaj addressed a press conference at the High Commission and said “We had a frank and useful discussion and exchanged views.” Asked about the suggestion he made to New Delhi, he said it would be premature to make the suggestion public before the Indian Government considered them. “Despite differences it is my belief that they can be resolved through discussions based on respect for each other’s concerns. They cannot be resolved by unilateral demands, unfounded allegations or the escalation of tension,” he said.

Reacting to Aziz’s suggestion, the Indian External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh said Pakistan could not cast doubt on the LoC. “Questioning it now is an ingenious attempt to fix ex-post justification for the intrusions. This is unacceptable. There is no confusion on the Line of Control. It is clearly defined and delineated,” said Jaswant Singh. The purpose of the dialogue was the vacation of aggression and there was no luxury in engaging talks for the sake of talks, he added. The Indian External Affairs Minister said that only two issues were discussed during the talks. Besides the Kargil issue, he maintained that he put forth “India’s sense of outrage at the barbaric treatment meted out to captured Indian Army personnel by Pakistan in violation of international conventions and all norms of civilized behaviour.” Asked about the response of Pakistan Foreign Minister, Jaswant Singh said “he didn’t deny the episode.”
Despite our many differences, it is our belief that they can only be resolved through peaceful discussions based on mutual respect for each other's concerns. They cannot be resolved by unilateral demands, unfounded allegations or the escalation of tensions.

Both of us have a huge stake in restoring the Lahore Spirit and moving towards a new era in our relations in accordance with the wishes of our peoples. This cannot happen by whipping up war like hysteria and hatred against each other or through threats and coercion. Mutual trust must be based on mutual respect.

I had no illusions of resolving the current difficulties in a day's visit to New Delhi. But I refuse to be pessimistic. Our Prime Minister is a man of peace. I believe the suggestions I have conveyed today will be duly considered and will help to bring about an atmosphere conducive to the defusing of present tensions and the restoration of the dialogue process as envisaged by the Lahore Declaration.

We want to defuse the situation, de-escalate the crisis and pave the way towards the political solution of the larger issue which is central to peace and security of the region—the core dispute of Kashmir. In sum we want peace. But if war is imposed on us we have the capability to defend ourselves and our vital national interests.

The Foreign Minister said he also suggested to Indian side that despite differences over the origin and nature of the present tension, “We share an interest in defusing the situation and de-escalating tensions by bringing about an appropriate atmosphere in which we can effectively discuss our others concerns”.

He said he also undertook to convey India's point of view, as conveyed to him by the Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister, to Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif.

“I am hopeful that the Indian government will give consideration to the suggestions I have conveyed to it so that the talks which we have had today with Mr. Jaswant Singh may be carried forward”.

Despite many differences, he said, “it is our belief that they can only be resolved through peaceful discussions based on mutual respect for each others concerns.”

Replying to a question, the Foreign Minister expressed the hope that India would respond to Pakistan's proposals within a couple of days.

Referring to his meeting with Indian Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee, he said, “I reassured him of our commitment to Lahore Process.”

Sartaj said the problem along the line of control “is nothing new. It happens every year. It has been happening for the last ten years.”
He added: “the fact that, we started Lahore Process does not mean that everything in Kashmir has become normal and the problem along the line of control was finished.”

He said the Kashmiris freedom struggle has, “its own dynamics and it has been going all the time.”

In response to question, he ruled out possibility of a full-scale war. “I don’t think escalation of a full war is possible” and added that “I should say that the minimum the visit has achieved is that there will be no immediate further escalation in other sectors.”

Replying to another question, Aziz said the situation in India was, “fairly gloomy and tense as they have suffered a lot of casualties.” However, he said, the discussions were very, “frank, cordial and there was no acrimony in the talks.”

When asked about the prospects for future talks, Aziz said, “partly it depends on ground situation.” “If they are hopeful they can achieve something decisive on the ground in (Kargil) sector then they may not come to dialogue very quickly but if they can't make any progress on the ground then they will come to negotiating table.”
1473. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs regarding the summoning of the Deputy High Commissioner of Pakistan to the Ministry and conveying to him the breach of Geneva Conventions committed by the Pakistan armed forces.

New Delhi, June 15, 1999.

The Deputy High Commissioner of Pakistan was summoned to the Ministry of External Affairs today. The following was conveyed to him:

"Members of the Pakistan armed forces and armed personnel under Pakistani control have committed grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions of August 12, 1949 in the course of the military operations currently underway on the Indian side of the Line of Control (LoC). These included the torture, inhuman treatment, and willful killing of the Indian Air Force pilot at (i) below whose plane was shot down on 27th May, 1999 and the six officials of the Indian Army at (ii) to (vii) below who were captured while patrolling on the Indian side of the LoC on 14th May, 1999 and whose bodies were handed over by the Pakistan Army authorities on 9th June, 1999.

(i) Squadron Leader Ajay Ahuja
(ii) Lieutenant S. Kalia
(iii) Sepoy Mula Ram
(iv) Sepoy Banwari Lal

Instead of any remedial action Islamabad summoned the Indian Deputy High Commissioner Sharat Sabharwal to the Foreign Office on June 16 and accused New Delhi of building up "a war psychosis by drumming up the charge that Pakistan's armed forces mutilated the bodies of Indian soldiers in violation of Geneva conventions." He was told that Pakistan rejected "the absurd allegations" conveyed to its High Commission in New Delhi. "The spurious accusations were a bogey to malign Pakistan and its armed forces as well as a crude ploy to further vitiate the prevailing tense atmosphere to whip up war psychosis within India," India's Deputy High Commissioner Sabharwal was informed.

The Indian diplomat was reminded that the bodies of the Indian pilot and the Indian soldiers, who were killed "while intruding into Pakistan-controlled territory, were returned with full military honours." "No charges of torture or mutilation were leveled by the Indian side at the time of the flag meetings," the Pakistan Foreign Office said in a statement.

The Indian Deputy High Commissioner was told that "Pakistan was under no compulsion to return the bodies and it did not stand to reason why the Pakistani side would hand over self-incriminating evidence even if there was an iota of truth in the Indian allegations. On the contrary, Pakistan returned the bodies as well as the captured Indian pilot Flight Lieutenant K. Nachiketa in good health, as verified by the ICRC (International Committee of the Red Cross), which underscores Pakistan's commitment to restraint and defusing the prevailing tension."

"The vicious campaign is aimed at justifying the dangerous military escalation by India along the Line of Control," the statement added.
The captured members of the Indian armed forces were entitled to the full protection of the Geneva Conventions. Both India and Pakistan are contracting Parties to the Geneva Conventions.

In respect of grave breaches of the Geneva Conventions, the parties to the Convention are required to take effective penal sanctions against persons committing or ordering to have them committed grave breaches include: willful killing, torture, inhuman treatment, causing great suffering or serious injury to body or health, to which the captured members of the Indian armed forces were subjected. Each Contracting Party is also under the obligation to search for persons alleged to have committed, or to have ordered to have committed such grave breaches, and to bring such persons, regardless of their nationality, before their courts for prosecution. No High Contracting Party is allowed to absolve itself of any liability in respect of such grave breaches of the Convention.

The Government of India demands that the persons responsible for grave breach of the Geneva Conventions by torture, inhuman treatment and willful killing of the captured members of the Indian armed force personnel are identified and brought to justice without delay. It is further requested that a full account of the date, place and circumstance of capture, period of detention and particulars concerning the wounds and cause of death are communicated to the Government of India immediately."
1474. Statement issued by the G-8 Counties on the Kargil Crisis.
Cologne, June 20, 1999.

Kashmir

We* are deeply concerned about the continuing military confrontation in Kashmir following the infiltration of armed intruders which violated the line of control.

We regard any military action to change the status quo as irresponsible.

We, therefore, call for the immediate end of these actions, restoration of the line of control and for the parties to work for an immediate cession of the fighting, full respect in the future for the line of control and the resumption of the dialogue between India and Pakistan in the spirit of the Lahore Declaration.

Missile and Nuclear Tests by India and Pakistan

One year after the nuclear tests by India and Pakistan, we reiterate our concerns and reaffirm our statement from the Birmingham communiqué.

Recent missile tests have further increased tension in the region. We encourage both countries to follow first positive steps already undertaken by joining international non-proliferation and taking the steps set out in U.N. Security Council Resolution 1172.

* The G-8 member countries are: Britain, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Russia and the United States.

It may be recalled that on June 17 Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif had in a letter to the G-8 leaders meeting in the German city of Cologne urged them to play an effective role, collectively and individually, for the resolution of the Kashmir issue and for averting a conflict between Pakistan and India. Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman Tariq Altaf, had at a news briefing on June 18 confirmed this. The Foreign Office too briefed exhaustively the G-8 envoys in Islamabad on the Kargil situation and advised heads of Pakistani mission in the capitals of G-8 countries to meet Foreign Ministry officials and brief them on the crisis in South Asia. Writing to the G-8 leaders against the backdrop of the emphatic advice of major world powers to Pakistan to “withdraw from the Indian zone” in the Kargil-Drass sector and resume bilateral dialogue with India, Nawaz Sharif urged the G-8 “to adopt a constructive and solution-oriented approach” in dealing with South Asia’s most serious crisis in 28 years, recognizing in this context “the centrality” of the unresolved Kashmir dispute. According to the spokesman, the Pakistan Prime Minister stated: “Kargil cannot be viewed in isolation from the larger issue (of Kashmir) nor dissociated from the record of India’s past transgressions to alter the LoC to its advantage.” The spokesman said India had repeatedly violated the LoC, and pointed out that the occupation of about 2,500 square miles in Siachen, utterly disregarding the LoC, was “a standing example.” The Prime Minister asked the G-8 leaders to call upon both India and Pakistan “to restore respect for the sanctity of the LoC in Kashmir,” adding that “Pakistan has always respected the LoC. The Prime Minister further stated that “while addressing the current situation, the G-8 must support resumption of talks between India and Pakistan for a final settlement of the Kashmir issue.” The spokesman contested the view that the calls by major world powers, the USA and the Russian Federation, to Pakistan to pull out its forces from the battle zone in Kargil and Drass (without a similar advice to India) demonstrated “failure” of Pakistan’s foreign policy, and argued that such a perception was based on a narrow view of the present situation in the context of the larger issue of Kashmir on the part of the world powers.

Meanwhile media reported quoting the British High Commissioner in New Delhi Rob Young said that Britain and other countries had sent ‘some tough messages’ to the Pakistan government. But the Foreign office spokesman in London said Britain was urging restraint on both sides. Britain has repeatedly urged the two sides to settle their differences but has avoided any hint of mediation—something that would be seen as siding with Pakistan’s desires to internationalize the crisis. “We have sympathy for India’s position. The U.K. and other countries have given some tough messages to the Pakistan government and we will continue to do so, while calling upon India to exercise restraint,” the High Commissioner said. “India should not risk jeopardizing the international support it has won. India’s position is good and it should not jeopardize it,” Mr. Young added. “It will be a serious matter if India crosses the Line of Control.” “Any escalation by either government would have serious consequences and spread the conflict,” Mr. Young added. “It would be worrying both for regional security and for the international community,” he said.

On June 24 State Department Spokesman James Rubin told the media “We want to see withdrawal of forces supported by Pakistan from the Indian side of the Line of Control.” Mr. Rubin’s comments marked the first time Washington had publicly and directly attributed blame for the current fighting to Pakistan, and came as General Anthony Zinni, Commander-in-Chief of the US Central Command prepared to hold talks in Islamabad with the Prime Minister. Mr. Rubin added that the USA and the G8 group of seven leading industrialized nations plus Russia also wanted to see the reestablishment of the “Line of Control” in Kashmir, an end to the ongoing fighting, restraint from both sides and resumption of bilateral dialogue between India and Pakistan. US Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Gibson Lanpher, also held talks within Pakistani Army Chief General Pervez Musharraf in this regard. Mr. Rubin did not deny that General Zinni’s absence from the Delhi leg of the trip was an indication that Washington placed most of the blame on Islamabad for the crisis. “We want to see the withdrawal of forces supported by Pakistan from the Indian side of the Line of Control,” he repeated. The State Department cautioned that things could “get bad” for Pakistan. “That’s for sure,” a senior official said without denying that Gen Zinni had extended some kind of an implied “warning” to Pakistan to withdraw from Kargil.

The official was asked pointblank by DAWN whether any such warning had been given by the US General. The official was asked: “This (visit) is being interpreted in some circles as some kind of an implied warning that if Pakistani does not withdraw it will have to face all the consequences, whatever they may be. Is this a correct perception?” The senior official said: “We are very concerned about the course Pakistan has taken here. And I think in trying to defuse the situation we are pointing out what needs to be done. The reason we are concerned is that the situation could get worse and that would make things bad for Pakistan, that’s for sure.” He did not give any details about the talks Gen Zinni had with Pakistani military leaders.

The State Department official was asked to comment on the Pakistani statement after 1475. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding exchange of messages between Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee and Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on the Kargil situation.

New Delhi, June 28, 1999.

In response to a question, the Official Spokesman said that messages were exchanged between Prime Minister and Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on the Kargil situation. These messages were in continuation of their telephonic discussions of the past few weeks. In this context, Mr. Niaz Naik visited India.

In these exchanges, our Prime Minister has emphasized that Pakistan must withdraw its forces and extremist elements from our side of the Line of Control and reaffirm the sanctity of the Line of Control. Prime Minister also conveyed our continuing interest in resuming the Lahore process once this happens.

the first round of talks between Gen Zinni and Gen Mushrraf that the US general was “carrying a very narrow view of the situation.” He vehemently disagreed and said Gen Zinni’s carrying the view that the USA has been stating publicly for the last two weeks. “I talked to you yesterday about the supposed differences between the USA and the G-8 statement which are not there. We feel that the Pakistan supported forces need to be withdrawn back over the LoC. The LoC itself needs to be re-established and the fighting ended and both countries exercise restraint.”

However when Gen. Zinni called on Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on June 25, he was told that the current crisis requires a balanced and constructive approach if durable peace is to prevail in the region. General Zinni conveyed to the Prime Minister a message from President Clinton underscoring the need for de-escalation of the current situation in Kashmir and the importance of a peaceful resolution of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute. The Pakistan Prime Minister on his part regretted that for more than 50 years, the world had evaded resolving the Kashmir dispute in accordance with the UN resolutions. The Prime Minister stated that the confrontation in Kargil was symptomatic of the problems that bedeviled Pakistan-India relations over Kashmir. He emphasized that unless a peaceful solution of the dispute was reached in the shortest possible time, situations like Kargil would continue to erupt, threatening peace and endangering the stability of the region.
1476. Briefing by the Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the visit of Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to China.

Beijing, June 28, 1999.

Chinese Prime Minister Zhu Rongji strongly supported Pakistan’s position for the initiatives Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif took to defuse the Indo-Pak crisis and to reach a just settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir issue.

Briefing newsmen on the Nawaz - Zhu meetings on June 28, Foreign Office spokesman Tariq Altaf called the consultations a great success. He said China had always supported Pakistan on the Kashmir issue and it had reiterated its previous stance that Kashmir was a disputed territory and the Kashmiris be given their right to self-determination in the light of the UN resolutions, which India had also promised.

Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif was greeted by his Chinese counterpart Zhu Rongji on June 28 in Great Hall of the People.

Asked if Pakistan had proposed withdrawal from Kargil if India promised to resolve the Kashmir problem in a specific time-frame, Mr. Altaf said: “We have proposed to India, as you know we did that when Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz visited Delhi on June 12. We made specific proposals at that time and we stand by those proposals that there should be immediate cessation of hostilities and that we should work together for the de-escalation of the crisis and that we should hold talks to settle the entire issue, especially in the larger context of the Kashmir dispute.”

Asked if there was a proposal regarding the time-frame, he said: “It’s not a question of our withdrawal or anything. Kashmiri mujahideen are fighting in Kargil. They have been suppressed by Indians for so many years. They are actively engaged in an indigenous struggle. Our proposals related to dealing with the crisis so that loss of life could be averted.”

He denied rumours of Sino- US mediation to resolve the Kashmir issue. Asked if Mr. Nawaz had called on China to mediate in the dispute, and did Pakistan feel China had a role to play in resolving the conflict, the spokesman said Pakistan explained its point of view. He said Pakistan had pronounced earlier it would consult China on the hostility on the LoC. This was the process of consultation. Telling them how India had escalated military action and how Pakistan’s proposals for de-escalation and negotiations have been stonewalled by the Indians, who had shut their doors to dialogue on resolving the Kashmir issue.
He said Mr. Nawaz briefed his counterpart extensively in two separate sessions. The first one-to-one session was scheduled to last 30 minutes but it continued for 90 minutes. In the second session the Pakistani delegation held talks with the Chinese side.

Mr. Altaf said Pakistan had repeatedly maintained the crisis around the LoC could not be viewed in isolation. It was a manifestation of the larger issue of Kashmir and the Kashmiris were promised their right to self-determination by the Indians as well as the UN Security Council. This crisis also related to the violation of the LoC, which India began immediately after the Simla Agreement was signed.

He maintained India occupied Chorbat La along the LoC immediately after the agreement was signed.

Subsequently in 1984, he added, India militarily occupied Siachen in clear violation of the Simla Agreement, which said both the parties would refrain from using force or resort to threat of force to alter the ground situation. In 1988, India took over an area called Qamar and then from 1994-96 the Indians shelled Pakistani positions so as to block Pakistani supply lines to Northern Area, he said. Their aggression forced Pakistan to build bypasses, apart from bearing the loss of innocent civilians and property, he said.

Asked whom the Chinese held responsible for the hostility, the spokesman maintained the Chinese were supportive of Pakistan’s efforts. Asked why the Prime Minister’s visit to China had been cut short. Mr. Altaf said in fact Mr. Nawaz had decided that the visit would be of a shorter duration before leaving Islamabad. “We had informed the Chinese authorities that all official engagements would be completed, but leave out the Kunming visit in view of the present situation.”

He said Pakistani supported China on all major issues and favoured Taiwan’s accession to China.

Later, Pakistan’s Ambassador Inamul Haque said Pakistan had consistently supported China admission to World Trade Organisation (WTO). He said Pakistan also condemned allegations against China vis-à-vis human rights violations and Pakistan would continue to do that. On the Issue of Tibet, he said, Pakistan supported the Chinese standpoint.

The spokesman said the Prime Minister’s visit has strengthened Sino-Pak relationship. This was a longstanding tradition between Pakistan and China that contributed to the reaffirmation of the resolve to improve ties between the two countries and augment their cooperation in all fields.
Pakistan and China signed four agreements including co-production in development of Super-7 fighter aircraft, establishment of a Joint Business Council, the consular agreement on Macau and an agreement on media exchange.

“This is an issue left over from history concerning territory, ethnic nationalities and religion and can only be resolved through peaceful methods” Mr. Zhu told Mr. Nawaz. “We hope to see Pakistan and India quickly resolve the issue through dialogue to ease the current tense situation and return South Asia to peace and stability,” Mr. Zhu was quoted by China Central Television as saying.

On June 29 Nawaz Sharif called on Chairman of the Committee of the Chinese People’s Congress Li Peng at the Great Hall, when, according to the Pakistani Spokesman, “China called upon India and Pakistan to resolve all their disputes through dialogue.” Tariq Altaf said that the Chinese leader fully endorsed Pakistan’s proposals for de-escalation of the crisis on the Line of Control, cessation of hostilities and commencement of talks between India and Pakistan to resolve the long-standing issue of Kashmir.

There was a complete harmony in the views of both leaders on the Kargil situation. And Pakistan was fully satisfied with the current consultation process with the Chinese leaders. He said the signal has gone out to the entire world loud and clear that in “such situations” Pakistan and China consult each other and cooperate closely. Asked if the Chinese leaders accepted Pakistan’s position on the origins of the Kargil crisis and whether they also accepted that it were mujahideen and not the so-called intruders from Pakistan who were fighting the Indian troops, the spokesman said that the Chinese leaders had accepted Pakistan’s point of view in its entirety and did not do any hair-splitting. “They do not challenge our version and neither do they present any counter arguments in this matter,” he explained. Asked why China has not gone on record as to who did it think was fighting in the Kargil heights, the spokesman said that perhaps they wanted to highlight the positive aspects of the crisis. Perhaps they would give a policy statement on the whole issue at the end of the visit which is not yet over. He did not agree with the suggestion that perhaps China did not want to annoy India and that was why it was not taking a firm position on the matter.

Asked if the possibility of the LoC situation degenerating into a larger conflagration was discussed between the leaders of the two countries and, if so, what was the position taken by China, the spokesman preferred not to give a direct answer but insisted that China had given full assurance to Pakistan that it would be at its side through thick and thin.
The spokesman described the meeting between Mr. Li Peng and Mr. Nawaz Sharif as very warm and said that the Prime Minister had briefed the former on the developments taking place in the South Asian region in the recent weeks. The Chinese leader, on his part, reiterated that the relations between Pakistan and China were exemplary and described these relations as an “all-whether and time-tested friendship.” During the meeting the Chinese leader gave Pakistan “highly constructive and “good” advice the spokesman maintained. He told the Prime Minister that China would continue to support Pakistan in every possible way, the spokesman said. The Prime Minister on his part told the Chinese leader that he was a man of peace and had taken a number of initiatives to establish peace in the region.

The spokesman brushed aside the impression being created by circles hostile to Pakistan that the Chinese leadership by insisting of dialogue between India and Pakistan, had in fact, refused to endorse Islamabad’s position on the LoC crisis. “We also want a dialogue with India, that was why Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz went to India on June 12 and we have been asking India to send their External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh. It is India which does not want dialogue it has shut the door on any dialogue," the spokesman said.

“So when the Chinese leaders insist on establishing dialogue with Indians for resolving the bilateral issues, they are actually endorsing our proposals,” the spokesman maintained. About the visit of former Foreign Secretary Niaz A. Naik to India and his meeting with the Indian Prime Minister which the Indian media are playing up, the spokesman said that Mr. Naik had no official brief and he had undertaken the visit in his private capacity. “He keeps on visiting India and meets Indian leaders in connection with the Neemrana process.”

China Daily, reporting the meeting between Mr. Nawaz and Premier Zhu Rongji, said that China had sincerely hoped that Pakistan and India would alleviate tensions in Kashmir through talks and return stability to the region soon. “The Kashmir issue is a historical issue involving territorial, ethnic and religious elements. Mr. Zhu said it can thus be solved only through peaceful means” he was quoted as saying by the Chinese Foreign Office spokesman. “It is of special importance to further strengthen friendly and cooperative bilateral relations between China and Pakistan at a time when profound changes are taking place in the world,” Mr. Zhu was further quoted as saying.

Chinese President Jiang Zemin told Mr. Nawaz that he was “deeply concerned over tensions in Kashmir” and urged Pakistan and India to seek a peaceful resolution to the “bloody conflict.”
“As we are close neighbours to South Asia, we are deeply concerned with the conflict in Kashmir” Mr. Jiang was quoted by China Television as telling Mr. Nawaz. “Without real peace and development in South Asia there will be no real peace and prosperity in Asia.” Mr. Jiang called upon Pakistan and India to start from the fundamental interests of the people of South Asia and quickly ease tensions and seek to resolve the issue through dialogue, the report said. “China firmly maintains that the nuclear weapons and missile rivalry in South Asia and the tensions in Kashmir are not in the interest of the people of the region,” XINHUA quoted Mr. Li as telling Mr. Nawaz.

1477. Joint Statement issued at the end of the meeting between the U.S President Bill Clinton and Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif.

President Clinton and Prime Minister Nawaz share the view that the current fighting in the Kargil region of Kashmir is dangerous and contains the seeds of a wider conflict.

They also agreed that it was vital for the peace of South Asia that the Line of Control in Kashmir be respected by both parties, in accordance with their 1972 Simla Agreement.

It was agreed between the President and the Prime Minister that concrete steps will be taken for the restoration of the Line of Control in accordance with the Simla Agreement.

The President urged immediate cessation of the hostilities once these steps are taken. The Prime Minister and the President agreed that the bilateral dialogue begun in Lahore in February provides the best forum for resolving all issues dividing India and Pakistan, including Kashmir.

The President said he would take personal interest in encouraging expeditious resumption and intensification of those bilateral efforts once the sanctity of the Line of Control has been fully restored.

The President reaffirmed his intent to pay an early visit to South Asia.
1478. Briefing by the Spokesman of the US White House on Clinton-Nawaz Talks.

The USA has been given a clear understanding by Pakistan that there will be a withdrawal from Kargil only by those forces that had crossed the LoC from the Pakistani side and not by the Indians, two senior US officials said on July 4. At a White House briefing shortly after the three-hour talks between Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and President Clinton, the US side made it clear what they expected from Pakistan and what timeframe they had in mind

Asked whether the withdrawal of forces from Kargil also applied to the mujahideen, the US officials said “Those forces that have been involved have crossed over to the Indian side of the LoC. Those are the forces that are at issue.”

Asked whether both sides, India and Pakistan, had agreed to withdraw, he evaded with question saying “This is not between both sides. This is a US-Pakistani joint Press statement.”

Again asked whether only Pakistan will withdraw, the official repeated, “those forces that have been involved have crossed over to the Indian side of the LoC. Those are the forces that are at issue.”

“I think it is safe to say that the President and both the Prime Ministers have a great sense of urgency here. And that we expect - want to see positive steps taken in a very early time”, the official told the briefing.

The following are the main excerpts of the White House briefing by two senior US officials:

Spokesman P.J. Crawley “We have two senior administration officials to give you a little background on the three-hour meeting that took place at Blair House. I’ll give you a little bit, first of all, of the back-and-forth that happened at Blair House. Some of you were asking earlier, why Blair House? Well as it proved this afternoon, where you had various meetings at various times with small groups in different rooms, how valuable it was to have a resource like we have across the street.

“But in the three hours that the two delegations were together, they started off with about 40 minutes in small group delegations, three on the US side and two on the Pakistan side, plus the leaders. There was a point at which the two leaders, President Clinton and Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif, went into a one-to-one meeting with a note taker. They then took about a one-hour break, during which the two sides conferred on their discussions up to that point.
Clinton Phoned Vajpayee

“During that time, President Clinton did have a brief 10-minute conversation with Prime Minister Vajpayee of India to keep him fully apprised of the discussion. And then they finished up with, during the course of the last hour, some back-and-forth between the President, the Prime Minister and in various delegations of various sizes. Since that time of course, Sandy Berger has now telephoned his counterpart, Prime Minister Vajpayee’s National Security Adviser to bring him up to date on the results of the today’s activity. So at this point. I will introduce senior administration official No.1 who will go through some of the details of the meeting.”

Official No.1: “Let me add to what you’ve just heard by saying that the President and the Prime Minister had a positive meeting. They agreed upon the joint statement which you have. Let me just take a minute and read it to you for the record.”

Joint Statement (The Joint Statement was read)

“If I could take a minute just to give you some perspective on the President’s involvement in this. As you know, a series of military clashes began in this part of Kashmir last month. Almost from the beginning the President recognized that this was a very serious situation and one that had great danger for wider escalation. He began to have a series of contacts with both Prime Ministers.”

“Beginning in mid-June, he first called Prime Minister Vajpayee. I think on June 14 and then he called Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif on June 15. While he was in Europe on his trip with regard to Kosovo, the President also continued to have direct contacts with the two exchanging a series of messages and letters.”

“National Security Adviser Berger met his counterpart from India in Geneva on the margins of the European trip. I think we’ve briefed you in the past on the content of those message, but I think they amount to a clear call for restraint on both sides, a call for the restoration of the Line of Control, and in urging both parties to go back to the Lahore process, which we have seen as a very encouraging process that began in February, of direct dialogue between the two leaders. On July 3, Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif asked to call the President. The President took his call on July 4 morning. They spoke for a while. The Prime Minister asked the President if he could come to Washington on an urgent basis. The President proposed this afternoon I think many of you know the President is leaving on a domestic trip on July 5 so he said, come this afternoon (July 4.) The Prime Minister agreed. The President also called Prime Minister Vajpayee to brief him on these developments and to make sure he was fully informed as to what our intentions were.”
“The President, as my colleague has told you, met for almost three hours with the Prime Minister this afternoon (July 4). At one point during that process, they took a break and the President called Prime Minster Vajpayee in New Delhi and gave him an interim readout on where we were. Once we had reached agreement on the statement, National, Security Adviser Berger called his counterpart again in Delhi, just a few minutes ago, to brief him on the statement and give him a recap of what has happened today. I expect that we will have other communications with the Indians, probably through Deputy Secretary Talbott, calling the External Affairs Minster probably tomorrow morning (July 5).”

Prospective Steps

Q: What are the concrete steps that are going to be taken to restore this peace or dividing line, or whatever it is?
A: Well, as I think you know, our position has been that the forces that are across the Line of Control need to be returned to the Pakistani side.

Q: The statement says “will be taken.” What does that mean?
A: That is our understanding.

Q: You mean both sides have agreed?
A: This is a joint statement between the USA and Pakistan, and I think it speaks for itself. Our understanding is that there will be withdrawal of the forces now.

Q: So, what is the timeframe?
A: I think it is safe to say that the President and both the Prime Ministers have a great sense of urgency here, and that we expect- want to see positive steps taken in a very early time.

Q: Do you have any reactions from the Indian Prime Minister when he was told this?
A: I think I will let the Indian Prime Minister characterize his view himself.

Restoration of LoC

Q: What is the US understanding about the restoration of the Line of Control in accordance with the Simla Agreement? That means the day the Simla Agreement was signed, if there had been any alteration in the Line of Control after 1972 by use of force.
A: We have read the Simla Agreement; we have read the 43-page annex which delineates the Line of Control. But this meeting today was not about the history of that agreement, or, indeed, the history of the Kashmir crisis. It is about this particular situation in Kargil with those posts that have been overtaken, and dealing with that.

Q: My question is, President Clinton has promised to take “personal interest.” So there is no commitment on the part of the USA to continue to take interest in the solving of the Kashmir dispute. So, he goes out and the personal interest will refer him to his golf course, and say, okay, talks to him. Is that the meaning of personal interest? Or is there a commitment on the part of the USA to continue to be involved in solving the Kashmir dispute?

A: I think you’re parsing that sentence too narrowly. The President has had an interest in this. He has had Deputy Secretary Talbott and administration officials one and two engaged in an intense process for the last year on this. No, it does not mean that when January 2001 comes around, he takes this issue with him to whatever he goes on to.

Q: The statement emphasizes the Simla Agreement and the Lahore Declaration, in other words, bilateral dialogue. What about Security Council resolutions? President Clinton and every senior US official criticizes and condemns Iraq for not abiding by the approved Security Council resolutions. No one said a single word to India. Why the double standards?

A: Well, again, we are very much aware of the history of Kashmir. In fact, if any of you wish, you can go back to the book by Secretary Albright’s father, “Danger in Kashmir,” that he wrote after being on the first UN Commission. We’re very much aware of the history and what has been said and what has been done. Our focus now is on the present, and the most important recent event dealing with this history is Lahore, where the two Prime Ministers met and issued a joint declaration, which I think the entire world was very encouraged to see and hopeful that it would be pursued. What we’ve seen recently in the Kargil sector is a step backward. We’re hoping that what can be done by the President and others can get this back on track so diplomacy can be resumed. And I think that is why we’re trying to focus on this—not going through the historical record, but I think that the Prime Ministers themselves are best able to do this. And they will have the full support in that effort of the President and the US government.
1479. Media Briefing by the Spokesperson of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistan’s offer of talks.

New Delhi, July 4, 1999.

India rejected Pakistan’s renewed offer of talks to end the two-month conflict in Kashmir, External Affairs Ministry spokesman said on July 4. It is clear that what is required is not dialogue but complete withdrawal of Pakistan’s aggression, the spokesman told reporters at a daily briefing on the Kashmir dispute.

He also revealed that US President Bill Clinton had spoken on the telephone on July 3 night with Indian Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee and invited him for talks in Washington. The Prime Minister felt the time was not convenient at this stage for such a visit, the spokesman said.

India insists that any talks with Pakistan would be conditional on a complete withdrawals of Islamic guerrillas currently holding some strategic peaks on the Indian side of the Line of Control (Loc) dividing Indian and Pakistan controlled Kashmir.

Responding to a renewed appeal on July 3 by Pakistani Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz for both sides to talk, the External Affairs Ministry spokesman said Islamabad’s proposals were merely a smokescreen aimed at obscuring Pakistani aggression. The whole world has recognized this and has emphasized that to end the present tension and conflict, Pakistan must end its aggressive activity and withdraw its forces, the spokesman said.

Pakistan’s call for dialogue, he said, is a blatant attempt to obscure, conceal and divert attention from these facts and to buy time. He also stressed that there is not the slightest sign on the ground that Pakistan is seeking to bring an end to the fighting in Kashmir.

Mr. Speaker

It is indeed a privilege for me to brief this august house on the current escalation along the Line of Control in Kashmir (and) Pakistan's diplomatic initiatives for defusing the situation and revival of the Lahore process to address the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir. I may mention that the Foreign Minister and myself have been giving briefing about the situation and initiatives from time to time in order to keep honourable members fully informed about the fast moving developments.

I would like to begin by giving details of developments since early May when the Indian military actions in the Kargil sector against the Kashmiri Mujahideens who are controlling the Kargil heights, led to an unprecedented escalation by India all along LoC. Frustrated in their efforts to dislodge the Kashmiri Mujahideens from their high perch in the Kargil mountains, India heated up the entire Line of Control, mobilized its troops along the international border and even violated Pakistan controlled air space. Indian Air Force bases have been activated and, according to the latest reports, the Indian Navy had been conducting high alert exercises in the Arabian Sea.

In the face of these provocative actions, Pakistan has taken appropriate measures in self-defence. Our forces are fully prepared to safeguard the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the country. We have already demonstrated our determination to defend our boundaries and air space. You would recall that two Indian aircraft which had intruded 15Km within our air space were shot down on 27th May.

At the same time the Prime Minister took diplomatic initiatives for defusing the situation. Before giving details of these initiatives, I would like to touch upon the baseless Indian allegations leveled against us to justify India's military escalation and the facts about the Line of Control.

The Indian allegations of infiltrators from across the Pakistan side of the Line of Control are totally false. This is a familiar and frequent Indian ploy to cover up India’s repression of the Kashmiri people and mislead the international community. You would recall that Pakistan had repeatedly suggested the deployment of a neutral observer force or use of UNMOGIP to monitor the LoC. The rejection of these reasonable proposals exposes the falsehood of Indian claims.
What has to be borne in mind is the heroic struggle of the Kashmiri people and the brutalization that they have undergone for the past decade. The placing of landmines, the repression of the Kashmiri people by seven hundred thousand Indian troops, custodial killings, disappearances, and gang rapes all combined to give birth to the indigenous struggle. India must not point an accusing finger at Pakistan. What is happening in occupied Kashmir is the consequence of its own repressive policies.

India has also repeatedly violated the LoC and the Simla Agreement. In 1972, soon after signing the Simla Agreement India transgressed in the Chorbatla area. In 1984, it occupied the Siachen glacier in complete violation of the Simla Agreement which forbids both sides to unilaterally alter ground realities. In 1988, the Qamar sector was seized. Since 1996, India is using artillery fire to interdict the road running through the Neelam Valley. In May this year, Indian troop made an abortive attempt to occupy the Shyock sector on the Pakistan side of the LoC.

Mr. Speaker,

Pakistan’s position on the current situation and the larger issue of Kashmir has been clearly stated by the Government. Pakistan has always respected the LoC and we shall continue to do so. Pakistan has demonstrated utmost restraint and desire to defuse the current tense and dangerous situation. Pakistan believes that the two nuclear capable neighbours must do everything to avert a conflict. Pakistan also believes that Kargil situation is symptomatic of the larger malaise which is the continuing and long standing problem of Jammu and Kashmir. Today, the world recognizes, as we have always maintained, that this issue is the source of all tensions in South Asia, These parameters are the basis of the diplomatic initiatives taken by the Prime Minister.

In his telephone conversation with India Prime Minister, Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif has urged restraint and de-escalation and the need to revive the Lahore process to meaningfully address the issue of Jammu and Kashmir.

At the Prime Minister’s initiative, the Foreign Minister visited New Delhi and reiterated the same proposals. Specifically, he suggested immediate cessation of air and ground operations, mutual respect for LoC and talks between Directors General Military Operations to be followed by resumption of the dialogue process to intensify efforts for resolving the Jammu and Kashmir issue.

The Prime Minister has sent special envoys to the Islamic countries, several of the G-8 capitals and many others friendly countries to elicit understanding for our position which is based on our desire for peace and stability in our region. We urged these Governments to use their influence to persuade India to resort to the path of negotiations with Pakistan, instead of threats of war and escalating tension.

We have conveyed this message to India through every avenue of formal and even informal diplomacy. The former Foreign Secretary Mr. Niaz Naik who was known to be involved with the so-called track-II diplomacy conveyed the same message which had been earlier transmitted to the Indian leadership by the Foreign Minister. Mr. Naik has been visiting India, in the same way as some eminent Indian personalities have been visiting Pakistan, to supplement diplomatic efforts aimed at addressing all problems, specially Jammu and Kashmir, that have bedeviled relations between the two countries.

I am happy to report that our diplomatic efforts have elicited positive responses and an understanding of our approach. First and foremost, I would like to mention that the Islamic countries have strongly supported Pakistan’s position on the prevailing situation in Kashmir. The 26th session of OIC Foreign Ministers Conference which took place in Burkina Faso, strongly reaffirmed the right of the Kashmiri people to self-determination, condemned Indian repression and massive human right violations, called for a solution of the Kashmir dispute in accordance with the relevant UN resolutions, and recommended the appointment of OIC Secretary General’s special representative on Kashmir. In a separate resolution, the Conference expressed deep concern over the escalation along the LoC, urged India to respond to Pakistan’s diplomatic initiatives for defusing the situation and expressed complete solidarity with Pakistan’s efforts to safeguard its sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity.

During Prime Minister’s visit to China last week, our time-tested friend and great neighbour extended full support for Pakistan’s efforts to de-escalate the situation and underscored the need to resolve the Kashmir problem through negotiations. China expressed deep concern for the current situation and endorsed Pakistan’s proposals for cessation of hostilities, de-escalation and resumption of dialogue for a just settlement of Kashmir dispute.

Clearly, the international community feels deeply concerned about the escalation especially because it has the potential of involving two nuclear capable neighbours in a dangerous conflict. The international community has also appreciated Pakistan’s approach for de-escalation and negotiations which stands in sharp contrast to India’s war mongering and large-scale military operations.

Mr. Speaker,

In its frustration to counter Kashmiri Mujahideen action in the Kargil sector in the disputed territory of Kashmir, India has resorted to unprecedented deployment, hostilities along the Line of Control, mobilization of troops along the international borders and high alert naval exercises. It has caused deep international concern.
It raises the question whether India which has itself transgressed the Line of Control is justified in its military escalation, war hysteria and pushing the region to the brink of war.

The situation has caused deep anxiety among the G-8 countries including the United States. The G-8 statements have underscored the need for de-escalation, respect for the Line of Control and resumption of the Lahore process which is that Pakistan has been demanding. Regrettably, however, the G-8 statements also referred to the so-called intruders which has emboldened India in its belligerence and encouraged it to spurn our diplomatic initiatives.

In his earlier telephonic conversation with President Clinton and during his meeting with General Zinni Commander-in-Chief of the US Central Command who visited Pakistan on 24-25 June 1999, the Prime Minister emphasized that the US must take a broader view of the situation, urged India to de-escalate and return to the Lahore process to address all problems including the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir. We emphasized that Kargil was one aspect of the larger problem of Jammu and Kashmir where remains the root cause of tension between Pakistan and India. Unless peaceful and durable settlement of Kashmir problem, situations such as Kargil would continue to recur and threaten peace and stability of the region.

On 3 July, President Clinton spoke to the Prime Minister inviting him to visit Washington for a detailed discussion on the current situation and the broader issue of Kashmir. Consistent with our diplomatic approach and the repeatedly declared desire for defusing the situation, the Prime Minister welcomed the opportunity. The US offer had clearly underscored the strong interest of President Clinton to be helpful in resolving the present crisis and resumption of the Lahore process.

The honourable Members must have seen the joint press statement issued at the end of the successful and productive meeting that the Prime Minister had with the US President. The meeting which lasted for three hours was friendly and cordial. The outcome of the meeting has affirmed the correctness of our position. The Washington meeting has also averted a wider conflict in a nuclear environment.

The joint statement recognizes Kashmir’s centrality to peace and stability in South Asia and agreed to address the current volatile situation in Kargil within the context of the larger Kashmir situation. It recognizes and underscores the need for both India and Pakistan to respect the LoC in accordance with 1972 Simla Agreement. It also speaks about concrete steps to be taken for restoration of the LoC. As we have no presence across the LoC the only concrete step on our part can be to appeal to the Mujahideen. They have already achieved their objectives. Their valiant defiance of the massive Indian military might, their heroic sacrifices and their legendary courage have brought the Kashmir dispute to the centre of the international stage with the world attention focused on the urgency of its final settlement for establishing durable peace between India and Pakistan.

The President of the United States stands committed to his personal involvement to expedite and intensify the process for resolving the Kashmir dispute. This is the first time that United States, the leading world power, has agreed to play a direct role in the search for a final settlement of the Kashmir dispute.

As the honourable members are aware, the United States regards Kashmir as an unresolved dispute which must be settled in accordance with the wishes of the Kashmiri people. This position is in conformity with the pledge that the United Nations, India and Pakistan had made to the Kashmiris which must be redeemed.

This is a vindication of the just struggle of the Kashmiri people for their right to self-determination. Kashmir is now a moral challenge to international community which must intervene and exercise its influence for the resolution of this problem which has become a nuclear flashpoint.

The international community cannot turn its face away from the pain and suffering of the Kashmiri people. They are suffering massive repression and gross violation of their fundamental human rights only because they are fighting for their freedom and dignity. Pakistan remains committed to their just struggle. We will continue to extend all political, moral and diplomatic support to the Kashmiri people and their cause until their triumph.

1481. Media briefing by the Foreign Minister and Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs confirming withdrawal along the Line of Control.

Islamabad, July 11, 1999.

Pakistan announced on July 11 the beginning of the “disengagement” of mujahideen and their withdrawal, from the heights of Kaksar and Mushkoh in the Kargil sector following an agreement on the modalities of de-escalation and sector wise cessation of ground and air operations between Pakistani and Indian Directors-General of Military Operations (DGMOs).

Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz and Foreign Office spokesman Tariq Altaf told a news conference in Islamabad on July 11 that it was confirmed that the “dispersal” of the mujahideen from the Kaksar sector had begun while it would begin in the Mushkoh area from July 11 night.

ISPR DG Brigadier Rashid Qureshi, who also spoke at the news conference, said that Indian guns had stopped firing and air operations too had ceased for the last 48 hours to enable the mujahideen to withdraw from their positions on the mountains.

He, however, debunked all Indian claims of making additional military gains or capturing alleged Pakistan Army officers or personnel in the past 24 hours in Kargil.

The DMGOs had held their first contact on hotline on July 10, apparently after the Pakistan cabinet meeting, and met at Wagah on July 11 to decide the modalities for de-escalation.

Sartaj’s Statement

The Foreign Minister said “Following the Mujahideen’s positive response to our appeal to de-escalate in Kargil, the governments of Pakistan and India had been in contact on the issue of the Line of Control (LoC). De-escalation was taking place in the Kargil area where the latest military confrontation took place,” he pointed out.

Maintaining that there was “renewed worldwide realisation that a just and final settlement of the Kashmir dispute holds the key to durable peace and stability in South Asia,” Mr. Sartaj asserted “a consensus has emerged that immediately after the de-escalation in Kargil, the focus must shift to the expeditious solution of the Kashmir dispute so that the one billion people who inhabit South Asia can lead a life of peace and engage in endeavours for economic development and prosperity.”

Address by Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif to the nation on the Kargil Crisis.

Islamabad, July 12, 1999.

My dear countrymen, not everyone will know of the tensions that we have gone through and the circumstances we have braved during the last month and a half. It is a fact and no secret anyway that the deterioration in Pakistan-India relations brought our two countries to the brink of war. While there is no doubt that the Kashmiri Mujahideen through their sacrifices and battle successes wrote out a new chapter in their freedom struggle, the situation on the diplomatic front became so complicated that it was no easy task to straighten it out or control its adverse fallout.

Dear brothers and sisters, by the grace of God, Pakistan is not a wall of sand or a child’s plaything. We have the ability to deal befittingly with aggression. Had war been imposed on us, the invader would have lived to regret the day. However, we do not wish to make war, nor have we looked for it. We know that in a nuclear conflict there can be no victors.

It is my considered opinion that by going to war Pakistan and India can only multiply their problems without solving even one of them. I have repeatedly said that the Kashmir dispute should be resolved amicably. I am also aware of the record of those who vowed to fight for a thousand years. I know what their aims were. Their only gift to the nation was ignominy and lasting regret. After taking stock of past events and making an objective study of history, I have come to the conclusion that our principal national priority should be making Pakistan a great self-reliant economic power. Only then can we achieve our supreme national objectives.

After the Lahore Declaration in February this year, not only the people of Pakistan and India but the international community as well had begun to hope that after their long history of discord, our two countries had chosen the path of peace. Prime Minister Vajpayee of India visited the Minar-i-Pakistan in Lahore and what he said on the occasion was a good augury for the future since it showed that he wanted to begin a new chapter in our relations, with the bitterness of the past forgotten and old attitudes abandoned. I welcomed this. While we were preparing for negotiations in line with the Lahore Declaration, the Indian Lok Sabha was dissolved and fresh elections were announced. On the other hand, the Kashmir freedom struggle which has been underway for the last eleven years entered a new and intensified phase with the freedom fighters gaining control of the Kargil mountains.

Prime Minister Vajpayee phoned me, expressing his concern at these developments. I suggested a meeting between local commanders while pointing out that we should resolve this matter at a local level, as in the past so that there should be no escalation. He agreed with me and the next day the two local commanders met but, simultaneously, India turned its heavy guns on us, while the Indian air force began to pound the Mujahideen-held positions. This sudden escalation was unexpected. It is true that the Mujahideen were present on several Kargil heights but it was part of their long freedom struggle and inseparable from it. For example, you all know that the Mujahideen took control of the Hazratbal shrine in Srinagar once. Now there is no way in which Pakistan could have come to their aid there. The shrine was surrounded by Indian troops and yet Mujahideen took it over and held it for several days. Once the world took notice of their action and the unresolved question of Kashmir became duly highlighted, they vacated their occupation of the shrine. It is for the same reasons that the Mujahideen must have occupied those heights in Kargil. Once the Mujahideen had succeeded in drawing world attention to Kashmir, it is understandable that they would wish to disengage.

Had we tried, this matter could have been resolved peacefully; but India set the fires of war alight instead of dealing with the situation through negotiations. It also chose to engulf the entire country in a war frenzy. However, Pakistan remained unprovoked and we saw to it that there was no war hysteria in the country. We also ensured that there would be no break in mutual contacts. Since the start of the crisis in Kargil, up to this day, I have spoken to Prime Minister Vajpayee on the phone several times. I also sent my Foreign Minister over though his visit proved fruitless. Given all this, it is unfair to allege that we stabbed anyone in the back. It has been my constant effort that our countries be spared the horror of a nuclear war. Only a desire for collective suicide can prompt us to take such a step. I have no such intention. I believe Prime Minister Vajpayee has no such intention either. However, going by the attitude of India, it did seem to us that New Delhi was rapidly moving towards war. The use of air and land power in Kargil by India was on a scale associated with a large and regular war only. Pakistani positions were shelled from across the Line of Control resulting in the death of innocent civilians and armed forces personnel who were merely defending themselves.

The number of troops deployed by India on our borders was again warlike. Its naval power was moved close to our shores and its nuclear missiles turned towards us. The Indian Air Force was put on red alert. I salute the armed forces of Pakistan which took all necessary steps to deal with the expected Indian attack with exemplary efficiency and speed. I also wish to pay tribute to all those innocent citizens who fell victim to Indian shelling. Those who suffered material loss as a result of Indian actions have my full sympathy. The government will soon take steps to give them due compensation. I also salute those martyrs of the Pakistan army who fell while performing their duties on the Line of Control. Those who suffered injury also have my heartfelt sympathies. Their courage, valour and resoluteness will serve as an example to the world. They surprised a military power several times their size on the world’s most inhospitable and difficult front by dint of their grit and determination. They resisted the unrelenting attacks of the Indian air force and infantry in an admirable manner. They proved that they were prepared to go to any extent for the sake of their freedom. I take this occasion to pay tribute to the gallant freedom fighters of the All Parties Hurriyat Conference.

My dear Countrymen, we have decided to give diplomacy another chance. This decision is neither hasty nor has it been taken under pressure or out of nervousness. It has been said that it takes more courage to extricate oneself from war than to start one. For many years and with time it has gained in intensity and strength. Kargil has been a part of that struggle. We were constantly in consultation with our friends as the fighting continued. When the clouds of war began to draw closer, we intensified our contacts. At the same time, we did not snap contact with the Indian Government. I was busy trying to press every entity, every individual, in aid of our cause and its furtherance. I was in touch with President Clinton. When American representatives came to Pakistan, we made it clear to them that the problem would not be solved by putting out the fires in Kargil but to get to the heart of the problem. We argued that, the Kashmiri urge for freedom was like molten lava in the belly of the earth which would always find other points of eruption.

Even if we succeeded in capping the fire-spitting mountains of Kargil, unless the basic problem was addressed, there will be outbreaks elsewhere. If the Kashmiri people were not given their right of self-determination, there would be other Kargils. Neither we, nor India, would be able to stop that. The only way to stop more Kargils from happening was to do justice to the Kashmiris. The promises made to them had to be fulfilled. That was the message I carried to America and I am glad that President Clinton agreed that unless the basic issue of Kashmir was resolved, the clouds of war would continue to hover over the Subcontinent. This was the backdrop of the joint statement issued in Washington. The statement clearly stated that as soon as the situation on the line of Control returned to normal, negotiations between India and Pakistan would begin in order to resolve all outstanding issues, including Kashmir. President Clinton extended the assurance that the outstanding disputes should not only be settled through dialogue, but he would take a personal interest in these efforts in order to ensure that they were intensified.

This is assurance, coming from the head of a great power like the United States, is no ordinary matter. It is clear that after this unequivocal commitment from President Clinton in particular and the international community in general, the world will pay serious attention to Kashmir, being now aware of its importance and sensitivity. That is why we appealed to the Mujahideen to come down from the heights they were occupying in Kargil and give diplomacy a chance so that it could carry forward and complete the mission for which they had made so many sacrifices. I am grateful to the Mujahideen for having accepted our appeal. The outcome of every war leads to negotiated decisions which is the route we have also taken and I am sure that truth and justice will prevail in the end.

My dear Countrymen, true leadership is that which is not interested in merely staying in office but in ensuring national security and public welfare. True leadership does not hesitate from sacrificing office or popularity if it is the security of the country and the people which is at stake. You will recall that in my first term as Prime Minister, the shadows of the Gulf war lay across this region. Kuwait had been occupied and the Allied forces were preparing to invade Iraq, at the that time, many of our political parties, leaders and even individuals in the service of the state tried to gain cheap popularity by inciting the people and playing with their sentiments. They kept the facts hidden front the masses in order to advance their own political careers. They led processions and felt no hesitation in jeopardizing the national interest as long as it won them popular following. You know well that had I allowed myself to be swept away by emotion and begun to raise sentimental slogans to please the masses, the consequences for my country and its people would have been grave. Those who conspire to attain power and advance their political careers are the very same people who end up pushing their country and their nation over the precipice. Whatever decision I took, I took to protect the interest of my country and my people. During the Gulf war I chose what in my view was the right course. I was not swayed by considerations of personal power.

I did not follow the popular upsurge, if you recall. The results are there for everyone to see. If you have faith, you should only take those decisions which in your judgment are correct.

Dear Countrymen, I want to declare that the Kashmiri urge for freedom cannot be stifled by force. The Kashmiri people’s struggle will continue. Freedom is their fundamental right and unless they win that right, the people of Pakistan will continue to be with them, shoulder to shoulder. We will never abandon the Kashmiris.

My dear Countrymen, it has always been my dream to take Pakistan to the highest pinnacle of glory and in the pursuit of this dream, I have not been held back by fear or self-interest. You will recall that when India was firing off its missiles and the world instead of restraining that country was putting every possible pressure on Pakistan not to join the race, I resisted and went on to test the Ghauri and Shaheen missiles. There were many other pressures on us subsequently but I refused to buckle under them. Can anyone forget the crass Indian bid to establish its over-lordship over this region after detonating nuclear bombs on 11 and 13 May 1998! Highly provocative statements were issued and it was said that Pakistan would have to come to terms with its reduced status. While we were being subjected to intense external pressure and threats, inside the country there were some to whom the lure of dollars was more attractive than the attainment of self-sufficiency and freedom. They were terrified of sanctions but it was I who stood firm and went ahead to conduct our nuclear tests. Thereafter, sanctions were indeed imposed on us but I stood my ground. Such hard decisions can only be taken by a person who has the supreme interest of his people and the fear of God at heart. You know that whatever Nawaz Sharif does, he does in order that you and your children live in peace and security, enjoy prosperity and walk with honour. For me my country always comes first. Pakistan and Nawz Sharif are one. Pakistan is a part of my being and I am part of Pakistan. Each breath that I take is like a prayer for the security of Pakistan and the progress and well being of my people.

My dear Countrysmen, I want to thank you today because at this most delicate point in our history, you have not fallen into the emotional traps laid out for you and you have not allowed yourselves to be fooled by any political party. You have refused to hit the streets for the sake of those who have chosen the path of negativism. You have demonstrated that the Pakistani nation is not willing to act frivolously when the questions involved carry grave national consequences. You have shown that you have complete trust in your elected leadership. Let me assure you that given the help of God, I will never betray your trust.

My dear Countrysmen, during the Lahore summit, I told Indian Prime Minister Vajpayee that we had gained nothing by fighting wars. Every war had led to the next one. I say again today that in the last fifty years, Pakistan and India, despite having fought several wars, despite having put their armies in direct face-to-face confrontation with each another, despite spending billions of rupees on armaments, and despite having trained their nuclear weapons at each another, have failed to resolve any of their disputes through conflict. Is that not a pity! Because of the failure to resolve the Kashmir dispute, we have not been able to give the people of the Subcontinent a single day of peace. Can we not solve this problem and thereby guarantee a peaceful, tranquil and secure future to the one billion people who live here! How many more Kashmiris have to die at the hands of India before this reality dawns upon that country! How many more Kashmiri homes have to be laid waste! How many more Indian soldiers have to die pursuing an unjust war! How many more Kashmir youth have to perish! How many more Kashmiri women still need to be outraged! How many more mothers in Indian cities are fated to shed tears over the dead bodies of their sons!

My dear Countrymen, world opinion will have to decide how long this drama of blood and fire is to be played in Kashmir. Why the delay in resolving the Kashmir problem! The United Nations conferred the right of self-determination on the Kashmiris over fifty years ago. India promised to implement those resolutions. It was not Pakistan which passed those resolutions: it was the United Nations. India neither implements those resolutions nor does it enter into any meaningful or result-oriented discussions with Pakistan. Is this how problems are resolved in this world? Where lies the gain in sticking to a single recalcitrant position? How can anything be resolved amicably if such diehard attitudes are allowed to prevail? Because of its intransigence, India has suffered. It has been left behind, and so have we. It is in the interest of both India and Pakistan to give up the old, obstinate, unbending attitudes of the past and make an honest attempt to settle the Kashmir dispute amicably through negotiations.

How long can we snatch food from the mouths of our people to buy guns?

How long will we go on jeopardizing the future of our children by buying the shells that go into these guns?

How long will we allow our resources to go up in gun smoke and add to the number of our unemployed?

India should learn a lesson from history. No liberation movement has ever been crushed through the use of military force. Bullets do indeed draw blood but in the process become blood drenched themselves. How long will India continue to tell the world that it is Pakistan which is interfering in Kashmir! No outside power can sustain a movement for eleven years through the use of infiltrators.

My dear Countrymen, you will remember that during my election campaign I had promised to end all disputes with India and establish good relations with that country. I want that the mandate which the people have given me should be used for their welfare. I want to settle the long-standing question of Kashmir so that I can forever secure the future of my country and its people. The people of India also need peace. India too has to move ahead. I ask Prime Minister Vajpayee to step forward and talk to us. Let’s save our people from the scourge of war and give them peace and security. Let us sit across the negotiating table and begin our search for a better future for our people. A great deal of time has passed. Let no more time pass. In the end, I pray for the solidarity, strength and well-being of Pakistan and its people. May God be our strength and our support. Long live Pakistan

1483. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding the successful conclusion of operations along the line of Control.

New Delhi, July 12, 1999.

Operation Vijay has been a resounding success. Pakistani forces have been defeated on the ground and status quo ante on the Line of Control in the Kargil sector is being restored. Almost the entire sub-sector Batalik and the sub-sector Dras have been cleared of Pakistani aggression in the last 48 hours. Pakistani armed intruders comprising overwhelmingly of their regular troops and some extremist elements under their command and control have been evicted. The pressure of our decisive military action in the other two sub-sectors of Mushkoh valley and Kaksar was also proving unbearable for the Pakistani army.

Pakistan being faced with the inevitable, their DGMO called his Indian counterpart on the evening of 9th July. He sought an early meeting. Our DGMO suggested that the Meeting be held at the Border Security Force Reception Hall, on our side of the Joint Check Post, at Attari on Amritsar - Lahore Road on the 11th afternoon. Our DGMO also informed him that we expected Pakistan would begin withdrawing its troops from the Kaksar Sub-sector even before this meeting, and that this withdrawal will be completed by 12th morning.

During his meeting with the Pakistani DGMO yesterday our DGMO informed him that Pakistani forces must withdraw well north of the Line of Control by the morning of the 16th of July. The Pakistani DGMO said that Pakistan would comply with this schedule.

Our DGMO also informed the Pakistani DGMO that any Pakistani intruder, thereafter found within our side of the Line of Control, would be treated as hostile and would be dealt with.

The withdrawal of Pakistani forces from Kaksar appears to already have taken place. Our troops are proceeding to verify this withdrawal. We have information that the withdrawal of Pakistani forces in Mushkoh valley is also under way.

The withdrawal of Pakistani forces has been brought about by the skill, determination and valour of our armed forces, who rolled back Pakistan’s aggression from Kargil, even while conforming to government’s direction that the sanctity of the Line of Control be maintained.

Our forces have not de-escalated their action, nor has any disengagement taken place. The Indian army is not impeding by fire the retreat of Pakistani forces. After this withdrawal has been completed, we expect that Pakistan will reaffirm the inviolability and sanctity of the Line of Control. The continuance of cross border terrorism in the State of Jammu and Kashmir is a clear violation of the Line of Control and must be abandoned by Pakistan.

Pakistan has persisted with its claim that those who occupied the Kargil heights were Mujahideen. It is abundantly clear by now that the overwhelming majority of those who crossed over from Pakistan in the Kargil sector were Pakistani troops in pursuit of a misadventure, fully planned and conducted by the Pakistani authorities. The presence of Pakistani regulars is borne out by the evidence that our forces have collected in the form of identity cards of regular troops, official army documents, personal letters and photographs and the nature of Pakistani weaponry in the posts recaptured by our troops.

It is also tragic that the Pakistan army has refused to accept the bodies of their regular troops who died in action against our forces in the Kargil sector. Our forces have buried the Pakistani dead in accordance with military custom.

New Delhi.
July 12, 1999.

1484. Statement by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding the involvement of the Pakistan army in the Kargil operations.

New Delhi, July 15, 1999.

The Pakistan authorities have adamantly refused to acknowledge the involvement of Pakistan Army regulars in the misadventure in Kargil. The callousness and inhumanity with which they are persisting in this fiction is demonstrated in the current matter concerning the bodies of two officers of the Pakistan Army who had died in action on the Indian side of the Line of Control in Kargil. The body of Capt. Imtiaz Malik of 165 Mortar Regiment was found at Point 4875 in the Mushkohk sub-sector. The body of Capt. Karnal Sher of 12 Northern Light Infantry was found on Tiger Hill in the Drass sub-sector. The identities of these two officers were established by correspondence found on their person. Both bodies are in possession of the Indian Army authorities.

The above information was conveyed to the Pakistan government on July 12. We informed the Pakistani authorities that we would like to hand over the bodies to them. We did not receive any response. Subsequently, the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) approached Government of India on July 13, stating that Pakistan government had requested them to contact the Government of India for handing over the bodies of the two officers about which they had heard. The Pakistani request did not specify the names and identities of the two officers, despite the information being available to them. The reason is obvious. The Pakistan authorities realized that if they conceded the identities of these two officers, it would demolish the myth that Pak army was not involved in Kargil. We provided ICRC with this information, along with the photographs of the bodies and copies of correspondence found on their person which identify them as above.

The Pakistan Government conveyed through ICRC that the material we had furnished was “insufficient” to establish the identities of the officers, and that they would like the bodies to be handed over and taken to Islamabad for verification. It is clear that this was again an attempt to obscure and evade the fact that these were bodies of officers of the Pakistan Army involved in the Kargil operation. We offered to the Pakistan authorities through the ICRC that we would be ready to receive in India persons, including their family members, deputed by the Government of Pakistan to come to India and verify the identity of the officers and take over the bodies. We had pointed out that it is unprecedented and unheard of for bodies to be sent abroad in this fashion for the purpose of identification, even before their nationality and military identity are established. If Pakistan doubts them, it is for their representatives to come and see the bodies. We have not yet received a response from Pakistan through the ICRC.

It is clear that Pakistan is fully aware of the identities of these bodies but they do not wish to acknowledge this fact as it would immediately expose their army’s involvement in Kargil. Hence, their reluctance to have the bodies identified in the usual manner. In this persistent and callous refusal to do so, they are doing great dis-service to the families of their soldiers and to the traditions of armed forces everywhere.

The Government of India had conveyed to the ICRC that because of the weather conditions, the bodies are deteriorating and the ICRC should come back with the response from Pakistan by 1100 hrs. IST on July 15. Pakistan has not conveyed their response. In view of the humanitarian nature of the problem, the Indian Army authorities will wait as long as it is possible, to get a response from Pakistan authorities through the ICRC.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen,

It is now time to look ahead; to look beyond Kargil. But even charting our course for the future we have to assess what Kargil 1999 was all about? What were the challenges – military and diplomatic? What new facets of our total national commitment and endeavour emerged? What lessons for the years that lie ahead? ‘Operation Vijay’— as the Prime Minister said some days back - has resulted in Vijay for India. As we re-examine the military and diplomatic challenges that then confronted us, and which were successfully managed, we need to have a preliminary analysis, draw some first conclusions and above all, looking beyond Kargil, draw a route chart for the tomorrows to come.

First, the military dimension. Kargil was a military aggression by Pakistan, with Pak army regulars, across a stretch of the LoC, in four pockets, from the Mushkoh Valley in the west to Tartuk in the Yaldor-Batalik sector in the East. Initially, with the aggressor - as with all aggressors lay the element of surprise. This was soon countered locally. Initially, the terrain, too, conferred some advantage to the aggressor. They had intruded along ridgelines to occupy some key heights and features that dominated a vital road link, between Dras and Kargil. The depth of the ridgeline north of the LoC and their gradients, along with nullah approaches enabled the Pakistan army to provide crucial logistical and administrative support to their troops.

The Indian army’s response to the military challenge was measured yet swift, it was focused, thus effective. The first task was to contain the intrusion. For this an accurate assessment was necessary about the degree and extent of it. This involved, amongst other activities the drawing of fire. Simultaneously, a redeployment of troops took place. Through a successful containment of the aggressor’s intrusion was ensured the inevitable defeat of this misadventure by Pakistan. The element of surprise was countered by the Indian army through the speed and lethality of its response. On 26th May, the Air Force swung into action in support of the ground operations.

Our military objective had been clearly spelt out to the intruders - retreat or the Indian army shall evict you. In any event once the intruder’s aim of interfering with the Dras-Kargil Highway had been thwarted the whole rationale of this aggression had got defeated. A mere holding of heights was military purpose. For India, occupation of territory, south of the LoC, was simply not acceptable both physically and as a violation of a principle. Tactical surprise having been lost early by the aggressor, the military principles of superior force, concentration and firepower were bound to tell. And they did, decisively. This phase of eviction did not, indeed could not be a phase of battles of maneuver. The nature of the terrain, the adversary’s dispositions plus most importantly our self-imposed restraints about the LoC, precluded those options. The battles for the heights thus became classic infantry actions in high altitude, combining mountaineering and fighting, against fixed enemy positions at a higher elevation. They were actions that demanded grit, stamina and dauntless courage. Our troops displayed all these qualities in full measure.

Let us be clear about one other vital aspect. This aggression in Kargil sector was by the Pak regular army, it had the logistic and administrative support of not the Pakistani Army alone but of their total state machinery. Secondly, this misadventure was not aimed at infiltrating into the Srinagar Valley, it was to occupy territory in Kargil and in holding that. This purpose, too, was defeated.

The Kargil aggression is not an extension of the problem of externally aided and abetted cross border terrorism that we have combated up till now. It is an overspill of the ‘Afghanistan’ disorder syndrome’. That is also why it had to be defeated.

In parallel to the military, we also had major diplomatic challenges on our hands. A firm signal had to be conveyed to Pakistan, as also a clear and unambiguous message to the international community. Let us accept that in today’s age no conflict, least of all between two nuclear weapons possessing states can escape global media spotlight. This was an additional and a new factor. Managing all these required a qualitatively new level of coordination between the two wings of the South Block - the Ministries of Defence and External Affairs. This too was achieved to demonstrable effect.

Of course, Kargil posed a challenge both to the substance of our foreign policy as also to the conduct of our diplomacy. The Prime Minister had at the very beginning directed the MEA that the true challenge lay in turning back the aggressor, in defeating all his designs, in reversing the aggression but with the maximum of restraint. The MEA had, therefore, also placed before itself the objective of protecting the international flank of the Ministry of Defence; so that our operations on the ground and in the air could go on unhindered. This was also achieved in no insignificant measure. The first requirement, thus was establishing the fact of Pakistan’s intrusion and aggression. I would venture to claim that we succeeded in doing so. The next requirement was to spell our objectives with clarity, consistency and candour. This was done early, repeated whenever necessary and can be summed up, sequentially, as the following irreducible minimums. They were:

A) Pakistan’s armed intrusion in Kargil will be evicted and its aggression vacated. All Pakistan regular troops and extremist elements under its command and control will have to withdraw. For this purpose, our armed forces will take all necessary action on our side of the Line of Control.

B] Once this intrusion has been cleared, Pakistan would need to reaffirm the inviolability and sanctity of the Line of Control.

C] Dialogue, as part of the Lahore process, which after all, was initiated by us could only then be resumed.

Our diplomatic machinery was geared fully to convey these objectives to the international community, as being valid and worthy of support. Continuous interaction was maintained, with all the major powers, and the rest of the international community through our diplomatic missions abroad, the diplomatic community in New Delhi and through personal interaction. It is a measure of the justness of India’s cause that what I have cited above, as the irreducible minimums, found such a large community of countries standing up in support. Principally, let me repeat, it was because India’s stand was recognized as just, thus it was acted upon. I wish to also emphasize that the importance of the inviolability and sanctity of the Line of Control, for maintaining peace and tranquillity, was totally accepted by the international community, and Pakistan was held as having violated this Line. Its efforts at terming it as imprecise also failed. Even more, the international community accepted India’s view that Pakistan was guilty also of transgressing the territory of trust. The international community also concurred with our assertion that Kargil was a manifestation of this medieval malevolence spilling over from Afghanistan, that these were no freedom fighters, thus there was a need to confront such impulses; in the interest not just of our region but of the larger global community.

It is noteworthy that under the leadership of the Prime Minister the Ministries of External Affairs and Defence worked as one, the combined synergy of which demonstrated the true power and effectiveness of the Indian State. This is, of course, how it should be. But it is a matter of satisfaction nevertheless, that this was achieved at a time of trial, a time which tests the mettle of any Government’s machinery. In this is also a lesson for the future.

There was an added dimension to our total national endeavour. It was role of our media during Kargil operations. It was marked by exuberant enthusiasm bordering, at time, on the reckless. These young men and women of the media, who were in Kargil brought the valour of our troops, in the face of great odds, directly into the homes of our citizens. They touched our hearts and eyes with the tales of the bereaved and the families of the fallen. This was our first experience of conflict in the TV/information age. We learnt as we went along. It would be no exaggeration, therefore, to say that the role of the electronic and the print media, in fully informing and mobilizing public opinion, was an invaluable part of the total national effort to meet the challenge of Kargil.

Why did Pakistan undertake such an ill-conceived misadventure? Perhaps, they thought that they could translate the advantage of tactical surprise into a strategic gain by bringing about a de facto realignment of the LoC, in the region, thus rendering the Srinagar-Leh National Highway vulnerable. They were wrong. They miscalculated India’s resolve; they did not comprehend the sense of national outrage at this blatant breach of trust, the sheer motivation of the Indian soldiers and the leadership quality of the Indian Army officers who lead from the front.

Perhaps, Pakistan calculated on provoking India into an escalation. They were wrong again because the decision of not crossing the LoC was taken early and maintained scrupulously, in the face of high causalities and even when the decision to employ air power was taken. The area of conflict was not expanded. Pakistan having disowned its troops as “freedom fighters” could hardly thereafter have opened up a new front, to ease pressure in Kargil.

What of the future? Looking beyond Kargil provides us an opportunity to renew our faith in ourselves, our society, our polity and our nation. It compels us to look ahead in all fields of national endeavour but particularly, in the spheres of national security and foreign policy. One simple message emanating from Kargil is that adequate resources have to be made available for national defence, that the kind of relegation of defence needs that we witnessed in the late eighties and nineties is unsound policy, the technological up-gradation cannot be postponed, that the nation must always think of the welfare of those who are in the first rank of its defence.

Kargil has many pointers for our foreign policy and diplomacy too. As in the present instance, we should always be ready to engage with the world as full and responsible members of the international community, but, of course, keeping our national priorities and interests as the guiding principle; we ought to have no reluctance, leave alone fear, in engaging with the world on any issue. Indeed, we serve the national interest when we engage the world on the basis of equality and mutual respect. Such engagement is the very substance of diplomacy. That is not any internationalization of an issue. Nor does it imply mediation or any acceptance of intermediaries.

Issues have to be addressed bilaterally between concerned countries, and in the case of India and Pakistan, that is what the Lahore process is all about. We would like to renew that process and we would like Pakistan to facilitate a resumption of the process, by reaffirming the inviolability and sanctity of the Line of Control. Clearly, a sponsorship of terrorism across the Line of Control, or elsewhere is violation of the Line of Control, as indeed of Simla Agreement and Lahore Declaration. There is a need, for Pakistan, to abjure sponsoring, aiding or abetting cross-border terrorism. These are not any pre-conditions for dialogue. We are after all, the initiators of this dialogue process and our commitment to it is firm and abiding. But it is only right for our nation, at this juncture, to expect that Pakistan will repair the damage that it has done to trust, that it demonstrates this through concrete and tangible steps. Trust is not built by engaging in dialogue in winter and committing aggression in summer. Continuous calls for jihad can also hardly be read as message for dialogue and peace. And it is in this vein that I suggest that high pitched propaganda against India also does not inspire confidence in Pakistan’s interest in dialogue.

I would venture to suggest that Pakistan, too, has to come to terms with its history, as indeed with its geography. It has to realize that there simply is no military solution to what it presumes is its locus-standi in Jammu and Kashmir. It is, of course, for Pakistan to determine its priorities but fomenting religious fundamentalism can hardly be employed as a tool against want and poverty. India recognizes the permanence of the sovereign state of Pakistan and that is final. While India remains ready for dialogue, the pace at which it can move forward will depend entirely on when and how the state of Pakistan, and what it has now become, permits it to do so.

Our foreign policy has not been fixated on Pakistan, but that has been a significant preoccupation of it. We need to re-examine this in detail. Globally, India has to move purposefully towards realizing its true dimensions - as a major civilizational state, with its own strategic autonomy and strategic space, born out of its economic and political interaction with other countries particularly in the Asia-Pacific community. The real wealth of a nation is its people. History and paucity of appropriate resources prevented us from participating in the economic transformations brought about since the Industrial Revolution. In 1820, Asia contributed 58 per cent of the World GDP; today it is at 37 per cent; by 2020, expectations are that it could regain the level of 200 years ago. India has a signal role to play in the coming decades. With our democratic institutions, a large skilled manpower base, geographic location, we must ensure that India rides the crest of this wave.

Through the travail and fire of Kargil our nation has been renewed. The mood though somber, is confident. National will stands sharpened. The sacrifice of our youth has not and will not be in vain. That is the solemn message of Kargil to the nation and to the world. I close with the poignant words of the memorial at Kohima, that stands tall and proud on a hill, commemorating those who fell in another war

“When you go home, tell them of us.”
And say For your Tomorrow We gave our Today.”

Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmed urged India to avoid using dialogue as a tactical ploy and resume meaningful talks to resolve the core issue of Kashmir.

“It is time that India should avoid using name of dialogue as a tactical ploy”, he said in response to a question by newsmen.

He was commenting on India foreign minister Jaswant Singh’s statement in this behalf.

Shamshad Ahmed said, so far, it has been India’s policy to wriggle out of a serious dialogue to resolve issues.

“Kargil like situation erupts only due to non-resolution of the core issue of Kashmir,” he maintained.

He said the delay in resumption of talks haunts the world at large, as it poses a serious threat to regional peace and security.

On the matter of trust, he responded, “it (trust) does not grow in vacuum”, adding, there has been talk of trust but no environment of trust and confidence.

Even in talks, the Foreign Secretary said, India has never been serious.

Responding to another question, he disagreed with Jaswant Singh that India and Pakistan speak common language. “Yes, we do need no interpreter, as we speak different languages,”

He said, “India has been speaking the language of war, belligerence, hegemony and brutalities - while we talk with a commitment to peace, stability and resolution of disputes through peaceful means.”

“So, the difference is basic. Hence, it is all the more necessary to have an interpreter,” Shamshad said.

When asked to comment on the Indian National Security Adviser Brajesh Mishra’s assertion that India is to set priority:

“It is not for India to do so, world would force India to set priorities,” Shamshad asserted. It is because, it is the one-fifth of the world population who are at stake in a nuclear environment. The world cannot ignore the plight of Kashmiri people, he said. On Mishra’s view on military and diplomatic measures on LoC, Shamshad said, Pakistan has always respected LoC but it is India which has violated it repeatedly and at will. “We have already been making efforts for stationing of neutral observers at LoC,” he said. “It is imperative that the world should genuinely clarify and verify facts on alleged LoC, intrusions or violations”, leveled by India. “The world can no more remain a silent spectator to the fate of Kashmir,” he said, replying to question.

“We have wasted much of our time over the past fifty years in non-serious and meaningless bilateral talks, India uses these talks as a tactical measure,” he said. “It is time, both the countries resume meaningful dialogue to take interest and see resolve issue,” the foreign secretary said. The world fraternity, he said, has accepted the responsibility to take interest and see that a serious and meaningful dialogue takes place. On the Prime Minister’s four-day official visit to Saudi Arabia, he said, “it has been immensely successful.”

Saudi Council of Ministers has reiterated unequivocal support to Pakistan’s principled stand on Kashmir and Islamabad’s efforts to have peace and stability in the region. The Saudi Crown Prince, Abdullah Bin Abdul Aziz al-Saud has referred to the deep-rooted Saudi-Pak relations and said the visit has been in this framework and it will result in further strengthening bilateral relations. Saudi Arabia appreciated the “wise and principled stand of Pakistan as well as steps Pakistan has taken to de-escalate and reduce tension on LoC.” He said Saudi Arabia lauded the “positive initiatives which have been taken by Pakistan and are still being pursued by Islamabad to end the crisis in Kashmir region.” “This will serve the interest of peace” said the statement issued at the end of Saudi Council of ministers’ meeting in Jeddah.
Pakistan has been able to effectively put across the Kashmir issue on the world forum through Kargil conflict and the pressure is on India to resolve this question according to the wishes of the people of Occupied Kashmir. This was stated at a joint briefing by Federal Information and Culture Minister Mashahid Hussain Sayed, Tariq Altaf Additional Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Brig. Rashid Qureshi, DG, ISPR for the editors and columnists of the Lahore dailies.

Mushahid Hussain said sound and sensible policies of the Govt. have succeeded in ensuring the involvement of the United States for the solution of the Kashmir problem. “The Kargil conflict has now shifted the pressure from Pakistan to India following the Washington Agreement,” Mushahid said.

The military successes of Pak Army and the achievements of Mujahideen who occupied certain number of heights in Kargil sector greatly boosted political stance of both Pakistan and the Kashmiris, he said.

He said if today, it is Kargil then tomorrow it could be Baramula or Dodha day after and the situation will continue to simmer if the Kashmir dispute is not resolved amicably. “That is the basic message of Kargil,” said Mushahid adding that the issue had been effectively internationalized which is a great success of Pak’s foreign policy.

Information Minister said Pakistan succeeded in ensuring the involvement of USA while at the same time the Indian Army was given a severe battering. “It was a de facto, a fourth Indo-Pak war and the casualties suffered by the Indian Army were greater than those of the 1965 and 1971 wars,” he said.

India, he said created war hysteria to suit its own internal compulsions because of the upcoming national elections in that country whereas there was no such frenzy in Pakistan. Mushahid said the entire scenario has changed after July 4, meeting between President Clinton and PM Nawaz Sharif in Washington.

Before that, he said, Pakistan was being threatened from various quarters and there were suggestions and proposals to punish Pakistan for becoming a nuclear state, stoppage of monetary aid and loans. The Minister told the editors that as many as 20 US Senators have written to the US President to appoint as special envoy on Kashmir and ensure monitoring of the Line of Control by strengthening US military observers group for Pakistan and India. A similar call, he said, has also been made by the British Foreign Secretary Robin Cook.

He declared Pakistan will continue to extend moral and diplomatic support to the Mujahideen. The PML Govt. firmly believes that Kashmir is the missing ‘K’ of Pakistan and the country would not be complete without it. He said a human rights organization Asia Watch has urged the five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council to stop all kinds of aid to India because of its worst human rights violations in Occupied Kashmir.

He said the US Congress has also taken initiative and one Congressman Goodlink has presented resolution in this regard calling for the stoppage of US aid. Another Congressman Owen called for UN to take up Kashmir issue while Congressman Townsend stated that India has become ‘Yugoslavia’ in reference to the human rights violations.

The Europe Union, the Information Minister stated, has also come out with the clear cut statement calling for the peaceful settlement of the issue while the British House of Common has also debated the Kashmir question “The environment has now changed. The pressure is on India and now we have to pursue that pressure through all available means particularly diplomacy,” Mushahid said.

Mushahid Hussain also referred to the PTV programme Salute to the Kargil heroes and said sacrifices rendered by the Pakistan Army in the defence of the motherland showed the deep commitment of Pakistan towards the cause of Kashmir.

Responding to a question, he said, that there was complete harmony and coordination in various ministries of Pakistan Govt. as well as between the Govt. and Pak Army.

Mushahid in an answer to another question, said that his visit to Markaz Dawatul Irshad has no connection with reference to the Kashmiri Mujahideen. It is purely a religious education institution, he said and added that no military training center existed on Pakistani soil. He said that Indian media had tried to dub Kashmiri freedom fighters as terrorists in order to malign their strive for the right to self-determination.

Kashmiris are not involved in terrorist activities; it is a fact of history that India has occupied the valley and denied Kashmiris their right of self-determination, Mushahid said. He clarified that Mujahideen were not under the control of Pak Govt. which is providing only moral, political and diplomatic support to their cause.
The foreign Office Spokesman Tariq Altaf said the Pakistan’s case on Kashmir has been boosted and highlighted by the post July 4 developments and it received further support from ASEAN Conference being held in Singapore calling for the solution of Kashmir issue through dialogue. Altaf said the realistic analysis of the Kargil conflict shows that India has lost both on the political and military fronts while it may have achieved some success on the media forum.

He said wrong impression has been created that too, in local media, that Pakistan has failed to achieve its objectives. Altaf said the scanning of the international press through different resources have shown that Pakistan had succeeded in bringing the Kashmir issue on the world platform. We have achieved a great success on the political front and have also achieved our objective vis-à-vis Kashmir struggle.

He said the Indians are continuously meeting out brutalities to the Kashmiris yet the Kashmir struggle is alive and moving towards its purpose. The Foreign Office official said a few hundred Mujahideen occupying the heights in Kargil had been able to pin down thousands of Indian soldiers and scenes of conflict were brought to thousands of homes on television screens.

Tariq Altaf said the feedback Pakistan Foreign Office received through millions of dispatches from across the globe showed that the Kashmir issue has been internationalized. Referring to June 12 visit of Sartaj Aziz to New Delhi, he said Pakistan had suggested cease fire demanding the stoppage of ground and air operations by the Indian forces followed by the cessation of hostilities, de-escalation and dialogues.

Briefing ISPR: Brig Rashid Qureshi said that Pakistan is still dominating the heights in Kargil sector along the line of Control and can effectively tackle any Indian misadventure.

“Contrary to Indian claims, we hold strategic heights on our side of LoC and remain fully prepared to meet any Indian challenge”, he stated at a briefing organized for the editors of the local newspapers and columnists. He disclosed that a two and half month conflict in the Kargil sector resulted in the martyrdom of 267 Pakistani troops, 204 sustained injuries while 24 soldiers are still on the missing list.

Brig. Qureshi said that these casualties had resulted on the Pakistani side of LoC mainly due to artillery shelling by the Indian forces. In comparison, he said, Indian suffered a severe thrashing and lost close to 2000 troops and equal number of injured. There are no bed spaces in military hospitals in the occupied Kashmir towns of Leh, Kargil, Srinagar and Udhampur and the Indians are forced to send the injured to distant hospitals in India.

He further said that India lost five fighter aircraft including Mirage-2000 and five helicopters. ISPR Chief said, according to intelligence reports gathered from across the LoC the Indians suffered such heavy losses that they ran out of wood to make coffins. They had to make use of crates of artillery shells to send corpses, he disclosed.

Brig. Qureshi narrated in details the history of the military conflict in Kashmir in the post-Simla era which ultimately culminated in the form of Kargil fighting. He spoke of hostile weather, difficult terrain and inaccessible areas where Pakistan was forced to deploy her forces along the LoC in view of the threat from the Indian occupation forces in Kashmir.

He said despite the propaganda that Pakistani soldiers were in Kargil sector in the guise of Mujahideen, the Indians have not been able to produce even a single body of such person to justify their claims. ISPR Chief rebutted the Indian claims of having buried bodies of Pakistani soldiers on the hills of Kargil. He said that few of the bodies that Indian returned to Pak were of those soldiers who had fallen during an Indian ambush on the LoC.

New Delhi, August 3, 1999.

In response to a question, the official spokesman recalled recent statements of the Prime Minister and the Minister of External Affairs about bilateral dialogue between India and Pakistan. Reiterating Governments policy, the spokesman noted that we have always desired a relationship of good neighbourliness, friendship and cooperation with Pakistan and it was at India's initiative that a composite dialogue process was put in place last year. The composite dialogue process sought to move the bilateral relationship forward in a broad based manner by building trust and confidence, promoting mutually beneficial cooperation and addressing all outstanding issues through peaceful bilateral means. The first round of the composite dialogue was held in October and November, 1998. India had looked forward to it being continued in a constructive manner.
The official spokesman recalled the Prime Minister’s historic initiative to visit Lahore and the understandings that emerged from that visit. India had wished to proceed ahead on the path of amity with Pakistan and of carrying forward the dialogue process. This was in keeping with the expectations and aspirations of the peoples of the two countries.

Pakistan’s armed intrusion and aggression in Kargil was a blatant transgression of the Line of Control. It compounded Pakistan’s aiding and abetment, over the years, of cross-border terrorism in Jammu and Kashmir. It was also a betrayal of trust which has done great damage to the Lahore process. The aggression in Kargil, as also the sponsorship of terrorism make clear the lack of sincerity of Pakistan authorities in the matter of dialogue. Pakistan has thus continued on its path of confrontation and hostility against India.

The onus is now on Pakistan to repair the damage it has done to the Lahore process. The Indian armed forces have restored the sanctity of the Line of Control in the Kargil sector by evicting the armed intrusion and vacating the aggression. It is now expected that Pakistan will move towards restoring trust and confidence by reaffirming the sanctity and the inviolability of the entire Line of Control. The sponsorship and instigation of cross-border terrorism in other sectors of Jammu & Kashmir is also a violation of the Line of Control. It is, therefore, incumbent upon Pakistan to cease this activity. This will facilitate the creation of a conducive atmosphere for the implementation of the Lahore process and a resumption of the composite dialogue. We urge Pakistan to take necessary steps for this purpose. We look forward to a resumption of the composite dialogue process.

1489. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs regarding intrusion by a Pakistani Naval Anti Submarine Warfare and Maritime Reconnaissance aircraft into the Indian territory.

New Delhi, August 10, 1999.

1. At 1115 hours this morning, a Pakistani Naval Anti Submarine Warfare and maritime reconnaissance aircraft, called Atlantique intruded 10 Kms into Indian territory in the Area of KORI CREEK.

2. The intruding aircraft was detected by IAF ground radars and was intercepted 10 Kms south of the International Border. When the IAF fighters closed in to identify and signal the intruding Pakistani aircraft to force it to land at an Indian base, the Pakistani aircraft acted in a hostile manner by turning into our fighter. At that stage the Atlantique was shot down by a air-to-air missile from a MIG-21 of the IAF, which hit the aircraft on the port engine which caught fire.

3. The wreckage has been found by IAF helicopters, 2 Kms. On the Indian side of the International Border.

4. Pakistani aircraft have been intruding into Indian airspace in the same sector in the past. From May to July there have been 8 such intrusions.

1490. Press Statement issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the shooting down of Pakistan Naval aircraft.

Islamabad, August 10, 1999.

India has shot down an aircraft of the Pakistan Navy. The aircraft, an unarmed Atlantic, which was on a training mission in the Sir Creek area thirty to forty miles north of the coastline with a crew of five officers and eleven other ranks was reported missing this morning. After a search of several hours the wreckage of the aircraft was found two miles inside Pakistan territory. All sixteen crew members are believed dead.

The Flight information Center, Karachi, as well as the Karachi airport radar picked up Indian fighter planes on their screens. It is believed that the unarmed plane was shot down possibly by air-to-air missiles.
The Indian High Commissioner was summoned to the Foreign Office this afternoon and a strong protest was lodged with him over the unprovoked shooting down of the unarmed aircraft on a routine training flight. He was told that this blatant and unprovoked act of military aggression against an unarmed aircraft is a flagrant violation of international norms relating to inviolability of international frontiers as well as the bilateral Pakistan-India agreement on the Prevention of Airspace Violations, of 6 April 1991. Article 1 of the Agreement states that “if any inadvertent violation takes place, the incident will be promptly investigated and the Headquarters of the other air force informed of the results without delay through diplomatic channels.” According to Article 1 (a): “Combat aircraft will not fly within ten kilometers of each other’s airspace including ADIZ.” It is obvious that the Indian aircraft which shot down the unarmed Pakistan plane had violated this article of the Agreement. This aggression has resulted in the cold blooded murder of sixteen innocent persons which is reprehensible and deserves strong condemnation by the international community.

The responsibility for this wanton and cowardly act, as well as its consequences, rests squarely with India. Pakistan reserves the right to make an appropriate response in self defence.

Islamabad, 10 August 1999

* On the same day the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs also lodged an Aide Memoire with the Indian High Commission in Islamabad where the contents of this press note were repeated. Similarly on the same day Pakistani Foreign Minister in a letter to the President of the UN Security Council apprised him of this incident and suggesting that “the cold blooded murder deserves strong condemnation by the international community”. The Secretary General on August 10 itself in a statement regretted the loss of life “following the downing of a Pakistani Aircraft by the Indian Air Force” and added “He is increasingly concerned at repeated incidents between India and Pakistan and urges that the differences between them be resolved by peaceful means. He calls on both countries to exercise maximum restraint. The Secretary General looks forward to an early resumption of the bilateral dialogue between the two countries in the spirit of the Lahore Declaration”.
1491. Letter from Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee to Pakistan Prime Minister Muhammad Nawaz Sharif.

New Delhi, August 12, 1999.

PRIME MINISTER
New Delhi

August 12, 1999

Excellency,

I am writing to thank you for your message of condolence on the tram accident in West Bengal. Your sympathies have provided comfort to the bereaved families in their grief.

I would also like to take this opportunity to share a few thoughts with you on the state of relations between our two countries. The process we began at Lahore represented one more opportunity for us to put aside the bitterness of the past and make a new beginning. The peoples of India and Pakistan gave it their whole-hearted endorsement. You and I also share this vision of a more cooperative future. Our three meetings convinced me that we could together make the critical difference to break from the unhappy past.

Events since Kargil have been a serious setback not only to the prospects of better relations but also to the trust and confidence which was gradually being established. I take no comfort in this conclusion - quite the contrary. Nonetheless, I believe we must face the reality without rancour or recrimination, and then work together to change it.

Please accept, Excellency, my congratulations on the Independence Day of Pakistan and my best wishes for the people of Pakistan and your personal wellbeing.

Yours sincerely,

(A.B. Vajpayee)

His Excellency
Mr. Mohammad Nawaz Sharif
Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan
Islamabad

As you are all aware, yesterday at approximately 11:15 a.m. an Atlantique aircraft of the Pakistani Navy intruded into Indian airspace and was shot down by Indian MiG-21 Interceptors.

The Pakistani aircraft was first detected by our ground radars when it approached the border at approximately 10:50 a.m., after which it flew close to the border, eventually crossing the border at approximately 11:15 a.m. in this area. The Operational Readiness Platform at IAF Naliya (consisting of two MiG-21s) was scrambled well in time to intercept the intruder before he had penetrated more than 10 Kms into Indian territory. The interceptors closed in and visually identified the intruder as a PN Atlantique aircraft. In accordance with established procedures in such situations, the fighters attempted to signal the PN aircraft to follow them for a forced landing at the nearest IAF airbase. However, the PN Atlantique did not heed the instructions, and initiated evasive manoeuvring into the interceptors in an attempt to get away. The IAF fighters had no choice but to shoot down the intruder, using an air-to-air missile. The Atlantique was hit on the port engine and was seen descending while on fire turning towards the border, till it was lost to sight when it descended below cloud at an altitude of approximately 500 meters.

It was subsequently discovered that the Pakistani aircraft had crashed near the Indian side of the border.

Even though the intruder was seen to head back towards Pakistan after being shot by the missile, he apparently lost control of the aircraft as evident by the crash site. The wreckage was strewn over a wide area, as is to be expected from an aircraft breaking up in mid-air while still in flight. Some wreckage had been picked up by an IAF Mi-8 helicopter yesterday evening, but the second helicopter sent to bring some more of the wreckage was fired upon from the Pakistani side of the border, and had to return; in fact, after landing a bullet was found imbedded in the body of the helicopter! However, this morning a team of media persons escorted by BSF personnel have been taken to Naliya and further by boat up creek to the crash site. The BSF escorts have been instructed to respond appropriately to any opposition to their movements.

Since May this year, there have been 30 cases of air violations by Pakistan all along the border which were reported to the MOD, of which 26 have been taken up with the Govt. of Pakistan while four are being processed.

From beginning of the year, 52 cases have been reported to Pakistan by Government of India.
Statement by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on the shooting down of Pakistani naval aircraft.

New Delhi, August 11, 1999.

Group Capt. Ganesh has given you a detailed account of the acts and nature of the incident in which a Pakistani military combat aircraft had intruded deep into Indian airspace and had to be engaged. This provocative action by the Pakistani Military aircraft was in line with a pattern of such hostile surveillance activities in this sensitive area.

The Altantique aircraft had intruded 10 kms. into Indian airspace. As the Information Minister of Pakistan said this aircraft was on a surveillance mission. Surveillance activity by a military aircraft in another country’s airspace is a hostile activity. It is a well-known fact that apart from its primary capability of reconnaissance and surveillance, such an aircraft is capable of carrying an array of lethal weapons and stores including air to surface missiles and bombs. It clearly falls under the definition of combat aircraft in the context of the Indo-Pakistan agreement on prevention of airspace violations signed in 1991. According to the agreement such an aircraft is not to fly within 10 kms. of each other’s airspace. In a clear violation of this agreement and norms of conduct between sovereign countries, the Pakistani military aircraft had intruded deep into Indian airspace. Every opportunity was given to the intruding aircraft to correct its course and land. It disregarded all warnings and signals to land. Thereafter, the Indian Air Force, under well-known operating procedures, was constrained to engage this aircraft and shoot it down. The responsibility for what happened and any loss of life rests squarely with Pakistan. The aircraft was engaged 10 kms. inside Indian airspace and the wreckage is located in Indian territory clearly on our side of the international border.

India has been making consistent efforts to improve relations with Pakistan so that the two countries can live in amity and peace. Provocative activity of this kind is not conducive to the normalization and improvement of all-round relations between the two countries. We urge Pakistan to desist from such activities and to adhere in letter and spirit to all bilateral agreements with India and internationally-recognised norms of conduct in respect of relations between two sovereign countries.
1494. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs regarding protest lodged with Pakistan on the firing of missiles on Indian helicopters.

New Delhi, August 12, 1999.

The Government of India has lodged a strong protest with the Government of Pakistan against the totally unprovoked firing of missiles at 3 unarmed Indian Air Force (IAF) Mi-8 helicopters with civilians on board in the area west of Lakhpat in North Gujarat on 11 August, 1999. The passengers on board the helicopters were media persons being taken to visit the site of the wreckage of the Pakistan Navy combat aircraft that had been shot down the previous day. The helicopters were engaged in a legitimate activity and were flying 2 nautical miles from the international border, in Indian airspace, well within the limits defined by the India-Pakistan Agreement on Prevention of Airspace Violation (1991). It was conveyed that such an unprovoked attack was a flagrant violation of norms of international conduct and a matter of deep concern. The Government of Pakistan was urged to exercise due restraint and to take necessary measures to prevent any further incident, even as the IAF had exercised restraint in not taking action in defence against the Pakistan missile launch sites.

1495. Statement of Pakistan Information Minister Mushahid Hussain on the Indian ‘provocative acts’.

Islamabad, August 12, 1999.

Information Minister Mushahid Hussain Sayed has urged the international community to take cognizance of a situation which could potentially become very serious if India is allowed to continue with its provocative acts. “The ball is now in the court of international community to ensure that India falls in line in a very civilized manner”, he told BBC.

Mushahid said, “We have the right to protest and to put up the current issue before the international community to at least take a notice of this real Indian attitude which has taken the mask of Indian so called restraint which it talked about in the recent past.”

The Minister said, in the recent past also over the Kargil crisis, Pakistan went the extra mile for peace. Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif went to Washington to settle the whole issue. “But it seems that the Indian attitude is still very belligerent and provocative,” he regretted.

He said, Pakistan has written to the President of UN Security Council and has approached G-8 countries in this regard. “The European Union envoys in capital are also being briefed about the incident,” he added.

To a question the Minister said, Pakistan reserves the right to take all appropriate measures for its self-defence. “But we have also clearly stated that as we stand for peace, it is India which stands for provocation and conflict.”

When asked whether independent investigators will be allowed to go in, he said. “We can allow anyone and everyone to go there. We don’t mind anybody, let them have a look.”

1496. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Muhammad Nawaz Sharif to Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee.
Islamabad, August 13, 1999.

PRIME MINISTER
Islamabad

13 August, 1999

Excellency,

I thank you for your letter of August 12, and for the felicitations on our Independence Day.

Indeed, Lahore had offered us an opportunity to make a new beginning in our relations. Unfortunately, the burden of our past has not permitted us to do so. The Kargil events and the shooting down of our unmanned Navy aircraft have not helped the situation. We cannot, however, afford to turn our back on each other and remain prisoners of our unfortunate history.

Our commitment to the Lahore process remains undiminished. I am of the view that we must summon the political will to break from the bitter legacy of conflict and tensions, by resolving the Kashmir dispute on a just and fair basis. Committed as I am to peace and development, it remains my sincere desire to work with you for a harmonious and prosperous future for our peoples.

I avail myself of this opportunity to offer our congratulations on the Independence Day of India and our best wishes for the people of India and your personal well being and that of your family.

Yours sincerely

(Muhammad Nawaz Sharif)

Mr. A. B. Vajpayee
Prime Minister of the Republic of India

1497. Press Statement by Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad.

Islamabad, August 19, 1999.

The Indian assertion of capability for manufacturing the Neutron Bomb and “India’s Nuclear Doctrine” recommended by its National Security Board indicates that India is about to embark on a further and even more dangerous escalation in the nuclear and conventional arms build-up. The recommended “doctrine” confirms India’s craving to be recognized as a global power through nuclear and conventional militarization and aggressive actions.

This comes in the wake of India’s massive military operation against the Kashmiri freedom fighters and India’s naked military aggression in shooting down the unarmed Pakistan Navy plane and the cold blooded murder of 16 Pakistan Navy trainee personnel. Obviously we are seriously concerned at these developments, which if anything, pose an intensified threat to the peace and stability of the region. No doubt we will take into account all these factors to ensure our own defence.

India has declared that it will establish “sufficient, survivable and operationally prepared nuclear forces”. Thus, despite the best endeavours made by Pakistan for strategic restraint India is poised to go ahead with the deployment and operationalization of its nuclear weapons and delivery systems. It would frustrate the central purpose of the “Strategic Restraint Regime” proposed by Pakistan to India at the last round of talks under the items on “Peace and Security”.

The Indian Declaration of the proposed Doctrine also negates the acceptance of restraints by India indicated during the Jaswant Singh – Talbot (US Deputy Secretary of Stat) talks particularly with regard to the deployment and operationalization of nuclear weapons and their delivery systems. Pakistan will closely follow the reactions of the major powers to this latest intended escalation.

The proposed Indian “Doctrine” also makes it clear that India’s nuclear escalation will be accompanied by the further build-up of India’s conventional warfare capabilities. This is a matter of deep concern to Pakistan because the vast majority of India’s conventional “assets” are deployed against Pakistan. The growing imbalance in conventional military capabilities will intensify Pakistan’s reliance on its nuclear capabilities to deter the use or threat of aggression by India.

Pakistan does not want a nuclear arms race in South Asia. Our diplomatic initiatives spreading over a quarter century before May last year’s tests are on record and an evidence of our policy. After the tests, we offered to India a Strategic Restraint Regime to prevent nuclear arms race and maintain nuclear deterrence at the minimum levels. However, Pakistan cannot afford to ignore the security implications of India’s new doctrine and its ambitious plan of nuclear weapons development including Thermonuclear and Neutron bombs. The development of our nuclear programme will be determined solely by the requirements of our nuclear deterrence capability which is now an indispensible part of our security doctrine.

We are convinced that, following last year’s nuclearization, the best option for Pakistan and India is to promote a Strategic Restraint Regime envisaging mutual and reciprocal moderation in the nuclear, missile and conventional fields, and a serious endeavour to resolve underlying disputes, specially Jammu and Kashmir.

India’s No First Use Policy

India has been lately trumpeting its so-called no-first use policy. Obviously nobody has been impressed by this propaganda. No first-use has never been accepted as the basis for determining the deterrent postures of any of the Nuclear Weapon States. Indeed, India itself places no credibility in ‘no-first-use’. If it did, it should have accepted China’s assurance of ‘no-first-use’ and of non-use of nuclear weapons against non-nuclear weapons States. This would have obviated the need for India’s nuclear weapons acquisition, much less the operational deployment of nuclear weapons.

India’s ‘no-first-use’ declaration is, in fact, designed to secure for itself “recognition” as a nuclear weapon State which would flow from the “acceptance” of its no-first-use and non-use “assurances”. It is for this purpose that India has offered to ratify the non-use assurance Protocol to the Treaty establishing the South-East Asia Nuclear Weapon Free Zone, although this Protocol specifically identifies and invites the US, Russia, China, UK, and France only. Secondly, India will seek to justify the acquisition of a large nuclear arsenal by arguing that its nuclear forces should be large enough to sustain and retaliate against a nuclear first-strike.
Pakistan-India Relations

The Human Rights Watch report released last month has publicized graphic evidence of massive human rights violations by the Indian forces in IHK (Indian Held Kashmir). It says that “the Indian security forces engage in brutal forms of torture which have the sanction of senior officials.” Clearly this represents a severe indictment of Indian State terrorism perpetrated against the innocent and the helpless Kashmiris suffering under the yoke of Indian military occupation.

To cover up its State terrorism publicly castigated by the Human Rights Watch report the Indians are labeling the indigenous Kashmiri struggle for their rights of self-determination as “terrorism”. Besides, to frustrate the international community's desire that dialogue between Pakistan and India should resume, India is now posing a precondition for an end to the Kashmiri liberation struggle labeled, as I have said above, as terrorism. This amply betrays India's continued intention to deny the Kashmiris their fundamental rights and her determination to bludgeon them into submission. History shows that such designs never succeed.

Pakistan believes that our region, with all its tortured history of tensions and conflicts, deserves peace with justice. For this purpose the Prime Minister took a bold and difficult decision which averted a wider conflict. We remain firmly committed to peaceful resolution of all disputes including the core dispute of Kashmir. We will not shut the path of dialogue. But for dialogue to commence we need assurance of its serious and substantive nature and its result oriented direction. To revert in a meaningless dialogue is not desirable. Instead such an exercise will be counterproductive and a betrayal of the international community’s well motivated and sincere desire for peaceful resolution of the Kashmir dispute which today poses the greatest danger to international peace. Kargil has already demonstrated this stark reality.

I must also mention to you that after playing politics with two bodies of the Kargil martyrs, India is now playing politics with 8 Pakistani detainees. Having made the offer to return them to Pakistan India is now procrastinating. On our request that they should be handed over to the ICRC India is now posing obstacles clearly with a view to taking some kind of propaganda advantage out of the issue. This is reprehensible.

Letter from Pakistan Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz to Secretary General of the UN Kofi Annan suggesting dispatch of a “Fact Finding Mission” to ascertain facts about the shooting down of Pakistan naval aircraft.

Excellency,

On 10 August 1999, an unarmed aircraft of the Pakistan Navy, which was on a routine training flight inside Pakistani airspace, was shot down by Indian Air Force jets, killing all 16 personnel on board. This act of military aggression was unprovoked and in contravention of existing international norms relating to inviolability of national borders and in violation of the Pakistan-India bilateral agreement of 1991 regarding Prevention of Airspace Violations.

The incident occurring shortly after the Kargil crisis, has further increased tensions in the region. It has caused concern internationally as is reflected in the statements made by you and the President of the UN Security Council.

The false and misleading claims made by the Indian side regarding the shooting down of the unarmed Naval aircraft remain continuing source of aggravation in the already tense relations between Pakistan and India. I, therefore, request Your Excellency, to send a “Fact Finding Mission” to the region to ascertain facts about the incident.

I look forward to receiving your response at your earliest convenience.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

1499. Note from the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the High Commission of India in Pakistan regarding the shooting down of Pakistan naval aircraft and asking for compensation for the loss of aircraft and for the persons killed.

Islamabad, August 30, 1999.

Government of Pakistan

Ministry of Foreign Affairs

Islamabad

No.Ind.(P-I)VIII/9/99

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan presents its compliments to the High Commission for the Republic of India in Islamabad and has the honour to refer to the unprovoked act of military aggression in shooting down by the Indian Air Force jets of an unarmed Pakistan Navy Breguet Atlantic aircraft while on a routine training flight inside Pakistani airspace on 10 August 1999, killing all 16 personnel on board.

India's unprovoked and blatant use of force against an unarmed Pakistani aircraft over Pakistani territorial air space not only contravenes the basic purpose of the United Nations i.e. to maintain international peace and security but also constitutes the breach of the Charter of United Nations and violates its fundamental principles regarding respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of states and non-use of force in international relations.

India's action also constitutes serious violation of the provisions of the Agreement concluded on 6 April 1991 between Pakistan and India on Prevention of Air Space Violations. Article 1 of this Agreement enjoins both parties to ensure "that air violations of each other's air space do not take place." Moreover, the agreement clearly rules out the use of force even in case a violation is believed by either side to have taken place.

On the basis of the above facts, India has therefore, incurred legal responsibility for the breach of its fundamental obligations under the United Nations Charter, as well as those arising under bilateral treaties, apart from constituting a breach of well-established obligations under customary international law.

Accordingly, India has the obligation to make reparation to the Islamic Republic of Pakistan for the loss of the aircraft and to the heirs of those killed by the breaches of obligations committed by it under the relevant rules of customary International Law and Treaty provisions.
The Government of Pakistan demands that the Government of India pay an amount of US $60.2 millions as compensation for the loss of the Pakistani aircraft and for the loss of lives of the personnel on board.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan avails itself of the opportunity to renew to the High Commission of India in Islamabad the assurances of its highest consideration.

1500. Response of Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs to the claim made by Pakistan for the compensation for the naval aircraft and the persons killed in the incident.

New Delhi, August 31, 1999.

Pakistan's claim for compensation for the shooting down of the Pakistan Navy's Military combat-cum-surveillance aircraft on August 10, 1999 is totally untenable and absurd. The facts of this matter are clear and well known. The Pakistani military aircraft was on a hostile military mission and was involved in espionage activity. It had brazenly violated Indian air-space, as well as the 1991 agreement between India and Pakistan on prevention of air-space violations, as well as internationally accepted rules of engagement in such situations.

In keeping with these rules of engagement, intercepting Indian aircraft had conveyed clear signal to the intruding Pakistani military aircraft asking it to correct its course and land. The intruder disregarded all these signals and warnings. Subsequent actions taken by the Indian Air Force were in keeping with these internationally accepted as well as standard operating procedures. The Pakistani military aircraft was well within Indian air-space when it was shot down. Pakistan is fully responsible for the outcome and the consequence of its action in contravention of the norms of conduct of bilateral relations as well as a specific agreement and rules of engagement pertaining to air-space violations.

Pakistan's claims, which have already been rejected by the Acting High Commissioner for India in Islamabad, are meant only for propaganda purposes.
An internationally isolated Pakistan is desperately trying to divert attention from its irresponsible conduct, best illustrated by the failure of its armed intrusion and aggression in Kargil, and subsequently by its willful violation of Indian airspace.

1501. Letter from UN Secretary General Kofi Annan to Pakistan Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz in reply to his letter regarding the shooting down of Pakistan naval aircraft.

The Secretary General

3 September, 1999

Excellency,

Thank you for your letter of 25 August which was forwarded to me by your country’s new Permanent Representative to the United Nations, Ambassador Inam ul Haque.

I share the concern expressed in your letter that the downing on 10 August of the Pakistani naval aircraft has led to a further increase of tensions in the region. As you know, immediately after this regrettable incident, I publicly expressed my concern and urged both sides to resolve their differences by peaceful means. It is my sincere hope that the bilateral dialogue between India and Pakistan, which was reinvigorated six months ago at the Lahore summit, will be resumed without preconditions. You can count on me to do whatever I can to encourage the resumption of the Lahore process.

Regarding your request for a fact-finding mission, we have consulted the Indian authorities. However, I am informed that the Indian Government does not see the need for - and thus rejects – any kind of third party investigation into this incident. I regret to inform you that I am therefore unable to send a mission to the region, since this would only be possible with the full cooperation of all parties.
I look forward to conferring with you and Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif during the first week of the 54th session of the General Assembly.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Summary of Presentation

1. Foreign Secretary today briefed the EU HOMs on India’s approach to certain important issues for the 54th Session of the UNGA on the basis of an approach paper (not included here). In particular, in the context of disarmament, Foreign Secretary emphasized that India has articulated its position in the past one and a half years including its voluntary moratorium on testing, its commitment to Non-Proliferation, export controls as well as no-first-use and non-use of nuclear weapons against non-nuclear weapon states. While India is mindful of its security interests, it remains committed to strengthening the global security environment. We have engaged in bilateral discussions with several countries on this matter. We have always regarded disarmament and non-proliferation issues as a common cause, which must be taken up in good faith. Therefore, we have extended and expanded our dialogue on these issues with several countries. For instance, we will begin our security dialogue with China shortly.

2. Our security concerns cannot be seen in an artificial and restrictive framework. Although we share a common goal of building a global disarmament and Non-Proliferation order, we will establish a credible minimum nuclear deterrent. It is important to build a Non-Proliferation order which provides for equal security to all.

3. We have studied the SCR 1172 carefully and have made our dissatisfaction clear. We have addressed all these concerns through dialogue, which has been conducted in good faith. The prescriptive approach has been sought to be re-established by some moves such as the G-8 Task Force on South Asia. Statements have been placed in a very narrow India-Pakistan aspect and create an inter-linkage between regional security in South Asia and disarmament.

4. Our assessment of this approach has identified two elements. Firstly, the implication that the existence of nuclear weapons enhances the risk of nuclear conflict. Secondly, that Indo-Pakistani tensions enhance the risk of escalation.

5. We have taken these concerns on board. However, it is important to diagnose the reasons for the existence of these dangers. The danger of such escalation does not come from India’s policies and actions but from Pakistan. The Pakistani belief that its nuclear capacity would enable it to carry on a proxy war through terrorism in J&K has dictated its approach. It believed that its nuclear capability would constrain us and prevent us from taking strong action. This is evident in the proxy war it carried out and in the Kargil episode. It has indulged in nuclear brinkmanship and blackmail. Such irresponsible brinkmanship is behind the statement of Pakistan, in the context of Kargil, that nuclear weapons could be used by it. However, we were not provoked. Rather we achieved our objective and reaffirmed our principle of non-use of nuclear weapons. We were restrained in our approach and demonstrated that nuclear deterrence does work.

6. We sense that unlike India, which sees its nuclear capability as a deterrent and a defensive policy, Pakistan looks on it as an instrument of blackmail on India and the international community. This raises serious concerns on the structure of power and the structure of command and control in Pakistan. We feel that India deserves some credit and understanding in this context. Unthinking admonitions which do not take into account the differing approaches of India and Pakistan should be avoided.

7. The second concern often articulated by Western nations is that the tensions between India and Pakistan will escalate the danger in South Asia. It is necessary to diagnose the reason for these tensions and to find the remedy. A realistic approach must be adopted, not one based on fantasy. A dialogue in the present context of disarmament and non-proliferation should be looked at by analyzing Pakistan’s actions across the Line of Control. After Kargil, what saddens us is the renewed intensified terrorist action in J&K. We have seen, in the present process of elections, renewed sponsorship of terrorism. It must be understood that J&K is an issue of federal-state relations. The Pakistani factor is merely a distorting element.

8. We are committed to the process of dialogue. We look at Indo-Pakistani relations with a sense of vision. We must adopt the approach of moving from the easy to the difficult, with the aim of making progress wherever we can. Pakistan should take steps to facilitate this dialogue and enable whatever progress is possible. Pakistan’s credibility has already been damaged due to its own actions. Therefore, a special effort from Pakistan is required to resume the dialogue. Pakistan must completely cease terrorist activity across the Line of Control.

9. The international community has, during the Kargil episode, upheld the principle of sanctity of the LOC. It recognized that Pakistan’s activities were a gross violation of this sanctity. We hope that all future EU statements, would be based on the above aspects and facts. On Kargil, we have noted with appreciation that in the EU statements of June 25 and earlier, there was recognition of the essential element that the party responsible for the military action was that which armed and inducted these people across the LOC. This recognition reinforced our military action and ultimately convinced Pakistan to abort its military misadventure and withdraw.

10. After numerous denials, Pakistan has now acknowledged its direct involvement in the incursions. By its actions, it has demonstrated that its regular forces were involved.

11. Even handedness and balanced formulations can sometimes do more harm than good and encourage those who want to disturb stability. Issuing of realistic and judicious statements in this regard would send the right signals. Linkages can give the wrong impression to Pakistan which has always flogged the “nuclear flashpoint” theory, not in order to find a realistic solution to the problem but in order to embarrass us. There is a constant effort to needle and embarrass India and create a sense that something is wrong. This propagandist approach does not help. We hope that the EU would recognize this factor.

12. It is important to understand that the trend within India is towards strengthening the global disarmament and Non-Proliferation order, keeping in view our own security interests. We need to sensitize public opinion in India. One should be mindful of creating an atmosphere which would lead to difficulties for any Government in this context. A considered approach from the EU would be of great help.

Questions and Answers

13. Foreign Secretary then invited questions from the assembled diplomats.

The Finnish Ambassador in his capacity as representative of the EU Presidency, inquired about Pakistan related issues in the UNGA. Pakistan has stated that it would bring up the Kashmir issue in the forthcoming UNGA Session. This would be the first time since 1965 that this would happen. What does India anticipate? Secondly, Pakistan has been talking of compensation for the Atlantique aircraft which was shot down recently and of raising this in the UNGA. What does India expect? Thirdly, there is a crisis waiting to happen in Central Asia, in view of the rapidly deteriorating situation in Central Asia and militants moving from Kyrgyzstan to the Fargana valley. This is a very ominous development since it is linked to the Taliban phenomenon. How does India view these developments?

14. Foreign Secretary responded to the first question by saying that Pakistan has always raised this matter on every conceivable occasion in every possible fora. J&K is not formally inscribed in the agenda of the General Assembly. It was last discussed in the Security Council in November 1965. However, Pakistan regularly refers to it in every speech possible. Our position is transparent and we do not believe in a hyped up and polemical approach. The international community must take note of the distortions and intemperate language that Pakistan uses in its statements on this issue.

15. On the second question, FS said that we have given all the relevant facts and details. Pakistan has approached us bilaterally for compensation and has also addressed a letter to the UN Secretary General. We do not accept this claim, which is completely untenable and groundless, and that is the end of the matter. We urge understanding of our position. In every sector, it is important to respect the confidence building measures which are in place in order to avoid such incidents.

16. On the question relating to Central Asia, Foreign Secretary emphasised that this is a matter of great concern to us since Central Asia is our neighbourhood. Our EAM has written a letter to the Foreign Minister of Kyrgyzstan. The Uzbek Government, which is committed to secularism, is also deeply concerned.

17. These events underline the need for international consciousness of, and action to, address the root problem. There is evidence of a clear nexus with drug trafficking. It is evident that the bulk of drug production is in Afghanistan, the majority of which is under Taliban control. Pakistan’s role in this is also very clear. It has always fully backed the Taliban.

18. Additional Secretary (UN) added that there is a resolution on Afghanistan in the UNGA which refers to imposing sanctions. Germany is coordinating this resolution in the General Assembly.

19. Foreign Secretary mentioned that India had recently sent two officials to Washington to discuss Afghanistan. A US Assistant Secretary of State is coming to India shortly to discuss terrorism. We would like to discuss this with the EU as well.
20. The Finnish Ambassador asked whether the link between Pakistani actions and the developments in Central Asia is direct? FS responded that the link is direct. There are terrorist training camps in Afghanistan. Osama bin Laden has the support of the Taliban and the Taliban is linked with Pakistan. Within Pakistan itself, there is a definite concern about the Kalashkinov culture across the border. There has been the spawning and nurturing of terrorist groups which are funded by the Government. Most of this activity is directed at India but is also linked with the terrorist culture of Pakistan. Pakistan is the natural gateway for these activities. There is concern within Pakistan of the Talibanisation of Pakistan, which has implications for its own stability. We are concerned because we would be the first affected by any destabilization in Pakistan.

21. These Developments in Central Asia are not encouraged by Russia and China. At a recent five nation meeting, both countries were very emphatic about the dangers of terrorism. We are obviously concerned because Pakistan’s ultimate obsession is India. If this phenomenon is taken care of, we would be in a better position to handle the problem that we have.

22. The Finnish Ambassador thanked FS for his briefing and handed over a copy of the EU Statement on East Timor which was issued on September 8, 1999.

23. FS then conveyed India’s position and perspective on human rights. He said that we have a commitment to do our best to support the efforts to promote human rights world wide. We hope that in the EU formulations on human rights in J&K, a judicious approach would be adopted. As far as J&K is concerned, there is a situation of ruthless, well-armed and professional terrorists operating within the state. The strong nexus between human rights violations and terrorist activities is clear. Any statements about human rights violations must also give a clear call for the cessation of terrorist activity. Externally sponsored terrorism must be specifically condemned.

24. On the question of minorities, there should be an understanding of the situation. We have vibrant institutions to protect the rights of the minorities and a dynamic press. Sometimes, there is an indiscriminate linkage made with the state of minorities in Pakistan. Such comparisons are unfair. Unlike India, Pakistan does not have any real minorities. We hope that this would be taken into consideration in all future EU Statements.

25. The Finnish Ambassador again thanked FS for taking the time for this briefing and said that he had taken careful note of what had been said. These would be conveyed to the EU Governments. He asked for a clarification whether India is still a candidate for the Chairmanship of the UNHRC Executive Committee. Joint Secretary (UNE) stated that India is a candidate for the vice-chairmanship of the Committee. The Finnish Ambassador said that since there is an unwritten understanding that the vice-chairman of the Committee would eventually aim for the chairmanship of the Committee, this would imply that India would aspire for chairmanship in the not too distant future!

1503. Statement by Pakistan Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz in the Senate on failure of back-channel talks on Kashmir.

Islamabad, September 16, 1999.

The Government of Pakistan disclosed that it had conducted back channel diplomacy both before the Kargil operation and after it, but it was not blaming the army for sabotaging attempts to solve Kashmir issue.

"After the Lahore diplomacy, negotiations started and continued for at least two months till the time Prime Minister Vajpayee's government fell," Foreign Minister Sartaj Aziz told the Senate.

"When the Kargil operation started, India approached us to defuse the tension and this was a time when Mishra (Principal Secretary to P.M.) came here and we told him that they should hold serious negotiations on Kashmir," he added.

He recalled that there was emphasis on abiding by the Simla Agreement as far as the LoC was concerned and this package would culminate in a joint statement by the two prime minister after Nawaz Sharif's visit to China. "But India backed out of this package," he said.

The issue was raised in the Upper House by a Senator Dr. Abdul Hayee Baloch who pointed out the press reports based on Niaz A Naik's recent statement*

* In New Delhi, Ministry of External Affairs denied categorically the next day statements emanating from Pakistan that Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee and Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif had reached an agreement to resolve the Kashmir dispute within a stipulated time frame. Brajesh Mishra, principal secretary to the Prime Minister, told the Times of India that there was no "deal" whatsoever on resolving the Kashmir dispute and, consequently, there was no question of laying down a time frame to implement it. Moreover, there was no proposal from the Pakistani side that Nawaz Sharif should stop over in New Delhi during the Kargil conflict on his way home from a visit to China. All communications between India and Pakistan during the conflict, Mr. Mishra said, focused on a single issue: to get Pakistan to unconditionally withdraw its troops to its side of the Line of Control as swiftly as possible.

He said he had delivered this message in the clearest possible terms when Mr. Sharif's emissary and Pakistan's former foreign secretary, Niaz A. Naik, met him on June 26.
indicating that the army had sabotaged the peace process with India by starting the Kargil operation.

Another report in an English daily said that the army was waiting for some responsible government functionary to remove the impression created by Naik. Leader of Opposition Aitzaz Ahsan referred to this news item and accused the government of changing its stance on back channel diplomacy several times.

“The government first claimed that Nawaz Sharif did not know about the Kargil operation but later claimed that he was not told enough. How can you brush aside what army is saying? If you own the back channel diplomacy, how can you deny Naik’s statement? Are you now putting the blame on the army after having failed politically, economically and diplomatically,” he asked.

Sartaj reiterated that the Government was not blaming the army and the news report was mere speculation. “We do not know who is behind it,” he said. Maulana Fazal Mohammad reminded the government that Naik had gone to India on their instructions and now the same person was saying that the Lahore deal was nearing a solution but was sabotaged by the army.

“I strongly contradict the impressions if any, being given by anybody that army has sabotaged the Pak-India talks,” Sartaj said. Sartaj said he had deliberated in detail on the Kargil issue during the in–House discussion on it. “I have not yet seen Niaz Naik’s statement. He may have given his personal opinion,” Sartaj said. There was a timeframe of nine to 12 months to resolve the Kashmir issue, which India had agreed after Niaz Naik’s visit to India, he said.

He said there was a proposal that Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif would go to India on his return from China if India would be ready to agree to the conditionalities and a joint statement would be issued in this regard. But, he said, India backed out from the understanding on the plea that a caretaker government cannot undertake such an important commitment. The minister said, he had already

And so had Mr. Vajpayee when Mr. Naik, met him on June 26. The emissary was left in no doubt that the composite dialogue between the two countries, which would include Jammu and Kashmir, could resume only after the complete withdrawal of the intruders. “We told him that so long as Pakistan continued to perpetrate violence in Jammu and Kashmir, a discussion on any other subject was out of the question,” Mr. Mishra said. The media quoted unnamed sources to suggest that Mr. Naik no doubt thought that he would be doing Mr. Sharif a good turn by pointing that the army had sabotaged the so-called deal on Kashmir but little did he realize that the army would not allow his statement to go unchallenged. Asked to comment on Mr. Aziz’s statement that the two countries were close to four point agreement, the unnamed sources said these so-called four points had been canvassed by a private group which has been discussing ways and means to find a durable solution to the Jammu and Kashmir dispute. Funded by an American of Kashmiri origin, the group, consisting of former officials and scholars from India, Pakistan and the United States, has been meeting periodically to exchange ideas and insights. informed the House that India was doing aggressive patrolling alongside the LoC and it was feared that India might try to occupy the vacant places on LoC. Pakistan Army also started aggressive patrolling there so that India would not be able to do any incursion there, he said.

The minister said India’s efforts to normalize relations with Pakistan without settling Kashmir issue were obstructed after the latest developments on LoC. The international pressure has also increased on India, he said. He said neither the government nor the army had compromised on national security and interest at any moment. Earlier, Dr. Hayee Baloch said that Niaz Naik’s latest interview has given the impression that the prime minister was not aware of the Kargil operation and had it not happened, Pakistan and India would have reached an agreement regarding Kashmir in light of Lahore Declaration.

1504. Statement by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs regarding its approach to the International Court of Justice to claim compensation for the loss of naval aircraft and persons killed.

Islamabad, September 21, 1999.

Pakistan filed a case in the International Court of Justice (ICJ) to seek compensation from India for shooting down a navy plane last month, killing 16 persons on board, officials said.

Pakistan approached the ICJ arguing that “India is under an obligation to make reparations to Pakistan for the loss of the plane and compensation to the heirs of those killed”, a foreign office statement said.

It accused India of violating the United Nations charter and provisions of international treaties by shooting down an unarmed naval surveillance plane.

“This act of blatant military aggression was unprovoked and in contravention of all universally accepted international legal norms,” the statement said.

Officials said the plane was on a routine training flight inside Pakistani airspace when it was shot down.

The statement said Pakistan decided to seek legal recourse as India refused to accept a UN inquiry and also rejected the demand for damages.
In its case filed with the Hague-based ICJ, Pakistan said India was obliged to make reparations for the loss of the French-made Atlantic plane and compensation for the heirs of the 16 persons killed.

1505. Complaint filed by Pakistan at the International Court of Justice for compensation on the loss of its naval aircraft and persons killed in the incident.

Embassy of Pakistan
The Hague

21 September 1999

The Registrar,
International Court of Justice
The Hague

I, the undersigned, being duly authorized by the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, being the Ambassador of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan accredited at the Hague:

Have the honour to refer to the declarations, made by the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and by the Republic of India respectively, accepting the jurisdiction of the Court as provided for in Article 36, paragraphs 1 and 2 of the Statute of the International Court of Justice, and by virtue of the consent to the jurisdiction based upon those instruments and in accordance with Article 40 of the Statute and Article 38 of the Rules of the Court, make this application instituting proceedings in the name of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan against the Republic of India on the following grounds:

I. Statement of Facts

On the 10th day of August 1999 an unarmed Atlantique air craft of the Pakistan navy was on a routine training mission with sixteen personnel on board. While flying over Pakistan air space it was fired upon with air to air missiles by Indian air force planes, without warning. All sixteen personnel, mostly young naval trainees, on board the aircraft were killed. This act of blatant military aggression was unprovoked and in contravention of all universally accepted existing international norms relating to sovereignty and inviolability of national borders.
The Atlantique Aircraft was conducting scheduled instrument flight training. In accordance with the standard operating procedures the Karachi Civil Airport was informed of the flight plan of the aircraft. The plane took off at 09.15 hrs. (Pakistan time). Radar contact was maintained with the aircraft until it was lost at 10.55 hours. The general area of operation was approximately 70 to 90 miles east of Karachi. All through the one hundred minutes of flying time the Pakistan Naval Aircraft was visible on the radar within Pakistan air space. Moreover, since the aircraft was flying at a height of 7000-9000 feet, it was visible on the Pakistani radar in Karachi and should have been visible on Indian radar at Nalya Air Base, in Gujrat, throughout the flight time.

From 10.30 to 10.55 hours, when it was shot down, the aircraft was in the same area carrying out various training exercises and maneuvers of instrument flying within Pakistan air space. The flight pattern during such training activities is generally circular.

Once radar contact was lost with the aircraft an intensive search was undertaken by Pakistani aircraft and helicopters at about 12.06 hours. The wreckage of the Atlantique was discovered around 14.55 hrs scattered across the area of a radius of one square kilometer. The wreckage of the plane was about 2 Km inside Pakistani territory which is a clear proof that when the aircraft was shot it was well within Pakistan’s air space.

By the time the wreckage was found by Pakistan Navy’s Sea King Helicopters there was a gap of about 2 1/2 hours. The Indian Helicopters, knowing the actual position of the shooting down of Pakistan’s aircraft, sneaked into Pakistan’s territory to pick up a few items from the debris. By this criminal act India once again violated Pakistan’s airspace and territorial sovereignty, by sending helicopter into Pakistan territory to remove parts of the wreckage, before Pakistan’s search party discovered it, in order to produce “evidence” for its initial claim that the Atlantique had been shot down over Indian air space. Subsequently, because of the overwhelming evidence which left no shadow of doubt that the plane was well within Pakistan air space the Indian officials were obliged to admit that the Atlantique had indeed been shot down over Pakistan’s air space.

II. Legal Grounds on which the claim is based

On the basis of the above facts, Pakistan claims that India has incurred legal responsibility for the breach of its fundamental obligations under the United Nations Charter, as well as those arising under bilateral treaties, apart from constituting a breach under well established obligations of customary international law.

The particular legal grounds on which Pakistan bases its claim are as follows:
1) Breaches of the Charter of the United Nations

The facts on which Pakistan bases its complaint disclose serious violations of the various provisions of the United Nations Charter, particularly Article 2, paragraph 4, according to which all members of the United Nations are under an obligation to refrain in their International relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State or in any other manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations. India’s unprovoked and blatant use of force against an unarmed Pakistani aircraft over Pakistani territorial air space contravenes the basic purpose of the United Nations i.e. to maintain international peace and security and to develop friendly relations among nations.

2) Breaches of the Bilateral Agreement

India’s actions described above also constitute serious violations of the provisions of the Agreement concluded on 6 April 1991 between Pakistan and India on Prevention of Air Space Violations of which Article 1 enjoins both parties to ensure “that air violations of each other’s air space do not take place”. Moreover, the Agreement clearly rules out the use of force even in case a violation is believed by either side to have been taken place. Article I also stipulates that “if any inadvertent violation does take place, the incident will be promptly investigated” and the other side’s headquarters informed of the results” without delay”.

3) Breaches of the obligations of Customary International law not to violate the Sovereignty of another State

India committed breaches of the obligations imposed on States by customary International law not to use force against another State. By attacking and shooting down Pakistan’s unarmed aircraft inside Pakistan’s air space, without warning and without any provocation on its part, constitute serious breach of that obligation.

4) Breaches of the obligation of customary International law not to violate the Sovereignty of another State

The incursion into Pakistan’s air space by the Indian Air Force jet fighters and their attack on, and shooting down of, unarmed Pakistan’s Naval aircraft on routine training mission inside Pakistan air space constitutes violation of Pakistan’s sovereignty and breach by India of its obligation under customary International Law.

The Nature of the Claim
On the basis of the foregoing statement of facts and considerations of law, and while reserving its right to supplement and or to amend this application, and subject to the presentation to the court of the relevant evidence and legal argument, Pakistan requests the Court to judge and declare as follows:

a) that the acts of India (as stated above) constitute breaches of the various obligations under the Charter of the United Nations, Customary International Law and Treaties specified in the body of this application for which the Republic of India bears exclusive legal responsibility;

b) that India is under an obligation to make reparations to the Islamic Republic of Pakistan for the loss of the aircraft and as compensation to the heirs of those killed as a result of the breaches of the obligations committed by it under the Charter of the United Nations and relevant rules of customary International Law and Treaty provisions.

The Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan has designated the undersigned as its Agent for the purposes of these proceedings. All Communications relating to this case should be sent to the Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, Amaliastraat-B, 2514 JC, the Hague.

Respectfully Submitted

1506. Statement by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs responding to reports of Pakistan’s application to the International Court of Justice.

New Delhi, September 22, 1999.

In response to a question, the official spokesman said that Government have seen press reports about Pakistan filing a case with the International Court of Justice seeking compensation for the shooting down of its military combat-cum-surveillance Atlantique aircraft which had intruded into Indian air space on August 10, 1999.

The spokesman reiterated that the Pakistani military aircraft was on a hostile military mission and was engaged in espionage activity. It had committed a brazen violation of Indian air space. It had also violated the 1991 agreement between India and Pakistan on prevention of airspace violations as well as internationally accepted rules of engagement in such situations.

The spokesman reiterated that in keeping with these internationally accepted rules of engagement, intercepting Indian aircraft had conveyed a clear signal to the intruding Pakistani military aircraft asking it to correct its course and land. The Pakistani intruding aircraft had, however, disregarded all these warnings and signals. The actions taken subsequently by the Indian Air force were in keeping with internationally accepted as well as standard operating procedures. The Pakistani military aircraft was well within Indian air space when it was shot down. Pakistan is completely responsible for the outcome and consequences of its action which was in contravention of the norms of conduct of bilateral relations as well as the 1991 Agreement on prevention of air space violations as also the rules of engagement relating to air space violations.

The spokesman said that Pakistan’s move to raise this issue at the International Court of Justice is entirely untenable and India will deal with it as appropriate. It is a desperate propaganda gimmick timed to coincide with the opening of the UN General Assembly in New York. There is no doubt that the international community will see through Pakistan’s hostile and propagandist motivations in moving the ICJ on this issue.

1507. Press Interaction of Chairman of the Chiefs of Staff Committee and Chief of Army Staff General Pervez Musharraf on the Kargil operations.

Islamabad, September 30, 1999.

Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Committee and Chief of Army Staff General Pervaiz Musharraf refuted the impression that Kargil was a misadventure, and said: “I do not agree to it; rather in my view it was a great military success”.

The army chief was talking to newsmen at a reception at the Chinese embassy on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the founding of People’s Republic of China. He was asked whether Kargil was a misadventure.

Gen Musharraf was asked: “Are you comfortable with the prime minister? “he replied: “yes, very comfortable.”

Asked to comment on a government’s notification regarding his confirmation as Chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff Committee, Gen Musharraf, who was looking calm and confident, said it was the government’s decision.

To a question whether he was visiting garrisons to pacify the jawans over Kargil, the COAS said he had been visiting his troops and holding frank talks with them. “it is the moral duty of an army chief to visit troops to congratulate them on their performance and success”.

He agreed with a questioner that Kargil had helped project the Kashmir issue, and expressed the hope that “the Kashmir issue would be settled in near future”.

Asked whether the troops had been withdrawn during the Kargil crisis, “at your behest, for Pakistan troops were unable to fight”, he said: “If an army chief says like this about his troops then he should resign”.

Responding to a question, Gen Musharraf ruled out an inquiry into the Kargil issue. He said: “There is no need for any inquiry because it was not a failure, rather it was a great success and we have learnt from it.”

He hoped that the government would take a decision about signing of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty in the best national interest.

Asked if there was any pressure from the army on the Government not to sign the CTBT, Gen Musharraf said: “No, there is no such pressure. But the armed forces strongly believe that the government would take a decision about signing the treaty (CTBT) in the best national interest”.

When his attention was drawn to press reports the COAS had suggested to the government to withdraw Mujahideen from Kargil, he termed them incorrect.

1508. Statement of facts provided by the Ministry of Defence on the shooting down of the Pakistani naval aircraft.

New Delhi, September 30, 1999.

1.1 Brief facts of the incident are that on 10th Aug 1999 at the 1052 hrs the IAF Air Defence Radars at Naliyain Gujarat bordering Pakistan, picked up an unidentified tract 160 kms from Naliya on a bearing of 350 degrees, 42 kms from the International Border (IB), on a South-Easterly course. The aircraft continued to fly at about 370 kms per hour towards the IB. The aircraft was at the height of 3000-3500 feet. It crossed the IB and entered Indian airspace at a point 68 degrees 48 minutes East, 24 degrees 18 minutes North, at 1054 hrs. For the next 17-18 minutes it stayed within 10 kms of the IB and repeatedly intruded into Indian territory up to as deep as 5 kms and carried out a series of maneuvers in this area.

1.2 Two Mig-21 fighter interceptors at the IAF base at Naliya, were brought to a high State of alert as the track approached the IB on the radar. The interceptors were scrambled when the track crossed the international border for the first time. The ground fighter controller vectored the fighters on a Northerly direction towards the area of intrusion as shown in the attached map. The IAF interceptors were generally kept abreast of the intruder aircraft keeping on the Indian side of the IB. At 1112 hrs the intruder aircraft proceeded South till the IB (68 degrees 32 minutes East, 23 degrees 58 minutes North), turning right on a Westerly heading and then turning South crossing the IB at 1114 hrs. penetrating 10 kms inside Indian territory. This is the fourth time the aircraft had intruded into Indian airspace. At 1115 hrs the fighter controller had manoeuvred the IAF Mig-21s to place the leader between the IB and the intruder on an Easterly heading. The leader had made radar contact with the intruder at a range of 10 - 15 kms and on closing in, had visually identified it as an Atlantique aircraft and seen the Pakistan Navy marking on the aircraft. The leader thereafter took his aircraft abreast of the Atlantique to direct the intruding aircraft by the hand signal and radio communication to the nearest IAF base for landing. While the IAF fighter was in this process, the Atlantique aircraft turned towards the interceptor. As the aircraft then headed back towards the IB without heeding the signal of the interceptor, the fighter after due clearance from the ground radar controller, fired an air to air heat seeking infra red missile at the Atlantique at 1117 hrs. At this time the intruder was 8 kms inside Indian airspace.

1.3 The Atlantique was hit on its left engine which caught fire and started smoking. The Indian interceptors were ordered back by the controller as they were within 5 kms of the IB. The intruder was last seen on fire at 1117 hrs entering into a cloud layer well inside the Indian airspace, turning South Westward.
The aircraft continued to be tracked by our radar. It maintained a northerly direction until it was 10 kms inside Pakistan territory. Thereafter it turned left and approached the IB again on a South-Westerly heading. It was seen to be on fire and descending.

2. The following significant aspects of the incident need to be noted:

2.1. The Atlantique aircraft is a military combat aircraft used by Pakistan Navy for maritime reconnaissance and anti-submarine warfare operations. The aircraft is designed to carry air to surface weapons, sophisticated electronic surveillance and reconnaissance equipment including a sophisticated radar (as per Jane’s publication). As per the Agreement between India and Pakistan ‘on prevention of airspace violations and for permitting over flights and landing by military aircrafts’ of 1991, ‘combat aircraft’ has been defined in Article 2 to include the following:

“fighters, bombers, reconnaissance, jet military trainers and armed helicopter aircraft”. The Atlantique aircraft is clearly of this category.

2.2. The above Agreement, which is part of the confidence building measures between India and Pakistan, contains provisions which are designed to prevent use of the airspace near the IB which could lead to tension between the two countries. Thus Article 2 stipulates that combat aircraft will not fly within 10 kms of each others’ airspace. Article 7 of this Agreement stipulates that military aircrafts may fly through each others’ airspace only with prior permission of the other country. Even in cases of aerial survey, supply dropping on mercy missions and rescue operations, if either country’s aircraft are required to undertake flights within 1000 mtrs of the IB the country concerned is required under Article 3 to give prior intimation to the other country. In pursuance of this important provision it has been the practice of both countries to give prior intimation of such flights. However, in the present case no such intimation was given by the Pakistani authorities to the Indian Govt. and all the above provisions of the Agreement have been willfully violated.

2.3. Since the aircraft is designed to carry weapons and has a radar on board, its crossing the IB without prior intimation was a clandestine, willfully deliberate and a hostile act. The aircraft was proceeding in a hostile manner with deliberate and clandestine intention of reconnaissance. This is buttressed by the fact that the aircraft was carrying out loop movements continuously, which is a well known manoeuvre associated with carrying out border reconnaissance.

2.4. An aircraft like the Atlantique could not have intruded inadvertently into the Indian airspace because the present day GPS on board has an accuracy better than 50 mtrs, where as violations of Indian airspace involved were between 5 to 10 Kms.
2.5 The flight profile of the intruder for nearly 18 minutes while it was in close proximity and crossing the IB several times would clearly show that it was neither lost nor strayed across the border inadvertently. The possibility of its being on a training mission should be ruled out beyond all doubts by the profile it followed and the deliberate withholding of notice mandated in the 1991 agreement and violation of its other provisions.

2.6 From the above, the only conclusion could be that the Pakistan Navy Atlantique was on an operational mission without prior notice to India as required by the Indo-Pak Agreement of 1991. It deliberately and repeatedly violated Indian air space in a mission mode prejudicial to Indian security. When challenged, it turned towards the IAF interceptors in a deliberate and hostile act constituting an imminent threat. There was no alternative thereafter but to shoot down the aircraft.

3. There have been 29 air violations from January 99 and before 10th August 1999. A total of 26 airspace violation protests have been lodged by the MEA with Pakistan in this connection. Pakistan has been indulging in elint and photo reconnaissance missions close to our IB/LOC/AGPL continuously since 18 April 1999 by its Mirage III type of fighter aircraft clandestinely in the guise of pre notified survey missions. Under Article 2 of the Agreement of 1991 both sides are bound to keep such aircrafts at least 10 kms away from the IB.

4. Indian personnel at no stage crossed over to Pakistan side of the IB to collect the wreckage of this aircraft. Since the aircraft was close to the border and was heading towards Pakistan the wreckage was spread over a wide area as it disintegrated slowly and some of the wreckage fell on the Indian side of the IB. The list of the wreckage on the Indian side is attached (Not included here). As can be seen from the list, a sizeable part of the fuselage had fallen on the Indian side. In addition one part of the wing and one portion of the cockpit had also fallen on the Indian side. Pakistan’s contention that this wreckage was picked up by Indian helicopters crossing into Pakistan’s territory is absolutely baseless.

1509. Press release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs containing the Statement by the Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee regarding concern over developments in Pakistan.

New Delhi, October 13, 1999.

We are concerned about the developments in Pakistan.* We are monitoring the situation and keeping ourselves fully informed.

India’s policy towards Pakistan is consistent and principled. We wish the people of Pakistan well. We remain committed to developing friendly and cooperative ties with Pakistan based on mutual trust and confidence, for which the Government of Pakistan needs to create the right environment 1510. Excerpts from the speech by Chief Executive of Pakistan General Pervaz Musharraf.

Islamabad, October 17, 1999.

I wish to reassure the international community that there is no change in our foreign policy. We will continue to honour International obligations and commitments as in the past. It will remain our constant endeavour to promote peace and stability in our region. We would like to maintain our abiding policy of friendship and co-operation with all countries.

As for relations with India, let me at outset congratulate Mr. Atal Behari Vajpayee on assumption of office as Prime Minister of India. I welcome his offer for friendly relations and positively reciprocate. At the turn of the century, South Asia stands at a crucial juncture of its history. 20th century saw a transition to Independence but the region had unfortunately remained mired in conflicts and economic deprivation. Together, Pakistan and India can change the scenario. For this objective, both must sincerely work towards resolving their problems, especially the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir. The people of Kashmir have made great sacrifices for the achievement of their rights promised to them by the United Nations. We shall continue our unflinching moral, political and diplomatic support to our Kashmiri brethren in their struggle to achieve their right of self-determination. India must honour the UN resolutions and its own commitment to the people of Kashmir. It must also end its repression of Kashmiri people and respect their fundamental human rights. Pakistan would welcome unconditional, equitable and result oriented dialogue with India. While our armed forces are fully equipped and ready to defend our national sovereignty and territorial integrity, it is our desire that the situation on our border with India and on the Line of Control should remain calm and peaceful. I take this opportunity to announce a unilateral military de-escalation on our international borders with India and Initiate the return all forces moved to the borders in recent past. I hope this step would serve as a meaningful confidence building measure.

1511. Statement by the Official spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs reacting to the Broadcast of General Musharraf.

New Delhi, October 18, 1999.

In response to a question, the Official Spokesman said that we had seen reports of General Pravez Musharraf’s televised address of 17th October 1999. The steps outlined by General Musharraf confirm that Pakistan is now effectively under what amounts to martial law, following the military coup of 12 October 1999. The administrative structure sought to be put in place will be entirely under the total direction and control of the Pakistan Armed Forces.

In his brief reaction of October 13, 1999 Prime Minister Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee had outlined India’s consistent and principled policy towards Pakistan. India continues to wish the people of Pakistan well and desires to build with them ties of friendship and co-operation based on mutual trust and confidence, for which the Government of Pakistan needs to create a proper environment. In order to foster such an environment, it is imperative that Pakistan should cease its sponsorship of cross-border terrorism in Jammu and Kashmir and elsewhere in India. Pakistan has pursued the sponsorship of terrorism in India as a matter of state policy and as yet we see no signs that this is abating. We will judge them by their actions in stopping cross-border terrorism and abandoning hostile propaganda.
In the context of General Musharraf’s comments on the State of Jammu the Spokesperson reiterated that the entire state of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of the India Union. A part of the territory of the State is under the illegal and forcible occupation of Pakistan. The State is at the very core of Indian nationhood. The people of the State have shown remarkable resilience and have not been cowed down by Pakistan’s campaign of terrorism.

With regard to General Musharraf’s announcement of the return of forces moved to the international border in the recent past, the official Spokesman said that let us be clear about this withdrawal offer. The withdrawal is intended to be from the international border where Pakistani troops had massed during the Kargil operations. All that is going to happen is that Pakistani troops from these locations will now go back to their barracks. Attempts, however, at transgressing the LOC continue, of which Kargil was the extreme manifestation.

1512. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs regarding reported remarks on India-Pakistan relations by General Pervez Musharraf in his press conference:

New Delhi, November 2, 1999.

In response to a question on General Pervez Musharraf’s reported remarks on India-Pakistan relations during his press conference yesterday, the Official Spokesman remarked that without attempting to match any stridency of language there is need to draw attention to India’s abiding desire to build a relationship of peace and friendship with Pakistan based on principles. India harbours no enmity towards the people of Pakistan. India has always taken the initiative towards improving relations, as it did again last year by putting in place the composite dialogue process to build confidence and trust, establish a stable structure of cooperation and address all outstanding issues. Prime Minister had sought to reinforce this approach through his historic visit to Lahore in February 1999.

Pakistan’s armed intrusion and aggression in Kargil was, of course, a violation of the Line of Control, but more than that it was betrayal of trust. Pakistan must, therefore, facilitate a restoration of trust through actions, abandon its state-sponsored cross-border terrorism against India in Jammu & Kashmir and elsewhere, and it must also cease hostile anti-India propaganda.

As for foreign policy, broad outlines have been sketched by the Chief Executive, characterized by continuity, the policy cannot but remain responsive to imperatives of peace and the security of our country. In pursuing our goal we shall not be oblivious to the legitimate interests of others. Principles of international Law, norms of peaceful coexistence and reciprocity will be our guide in the promotion of mutually beneficial relations with all countries.

Containing nuclear dangers in South Asia will command our top priority. To that end the Chief Executive’s pledge of restraint and responsibility will reinforce his government’s search for effective, non-discriminatory, multilateral and bilateral agreements.

Historically, Pakistan was not the first to build weapon-oriented nuclear plants in our region. Even after the Indian atomic bomb test in 1974, Pakistan observed restraint. Despite achieving explosion capability, Pakistan did not conduct a test.

In 1996 Pakistan voted in favour of the CTBT. It did not sign the treaty only because we suspected India’s intentions. The apprehension was confirmed on May 11, 1998. Worse after the multiple explosions, Indian government ministers engaged in threats and bluster leaving Pakistan no choice except demonstrate its deterrent capability and thus safeguard its peace and security.

Immediately thereafter, Pakistan declared a moratorium on further tests. As in the past so also in the future, Pakistan will not take a provocative initiative. We will remain sensitive to all world community’s concerns for non-proliferation.

Reduction of tension between Pakistan and India is obviously desirable. Overt nuclearisation in 1998 added to the necessity and urgency of eliminating flash points. Pakistan remains ready to respond to the international community’s call for a dialogue to address the root causes of tension between Pakistan and India, including specifically Kashmir.

The Kashmir question involves the life and future of the millions of Kashmiris. Self-determination is their inherent right. It was pledged to them by India as well as Pakistan. It remains sanctified in resolutions of the Security Council.

Pakistan wants to improve relations but India does not give that prospect a chance. Instead of resolving differences on basis of law and justice, it seeks to exploit power disparity to impose unilateral preferences. Attempts at domination and dictation cannot be an acceptable basis for international relations.

India alone has shut its ears to the sigh of relief of our people at riddance from corruption and misrule. Instead it has sought to exploit our domestic affair for narrow ends. Unmindful of the injurious blow to the hopes implicit in SAARC, it has unilaterally aborted the scheduled summit.

Pakistan will not retaliate. We will not engage in brickbats. The policy of General Musharraf’s government will reflect our commitment to good-neighbourly relations. Adhering to principles of peaceful coexistence, we shall persevere in our efforts to build a future better than the past.

1514. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistan's Support to Cross-border Terrorism.

New Delhi, November 10, 1999.

Our strong concerns at the anti-India tirade witnessed during the annual congregation of the terrorist organisation, Lashkare-Tayyaba, held at Muridke from November 3-5, 1999, were conveyed to the Deputy High Commissioner of Pakistan, who was summoned to the Ministry of External Affairs today.

He was told that it was particularly reprehensible that open threats against India were made during the congregation by the terrorists and the Pakistani authorities had taken no action against those who had made these threats and had used provocative language. This was yet another manifestation of Pakistan's support to international terrorism. The Pakistan Deputy High Commissioner was told that the Government of India once again called upon the Pakistani authorities to abandon their irresponsible support of cross-border terrorism.

1515. Statement of the Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on General Musharraf’s policies.

Islamabad, November 19, 1999.

The Chief Executive, General Pervez Musharraf, spent the entire day, today, at the Foreign Office for a briefing on the Foreign Policy of Pakistan and organizational matters of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

2. Welcoming the Chief Executive, the Foreign Minister said that the Chief Executive’s visit reflected his deep interest in Foreign Policy and the role of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The Foreign Minister stated that the international community reacted to the Chief Executive’s sincerity of approach and the agenda set forth by him positively and with understanding. The International community now has a better appreciation of the circumstances of the change of government in Pakistan and its priorities for reform and democratization.

3. The foreign Secretary gave the detailed briefing on all aspects of Pakistan’s Foreign Policy with particular focus on its future direction. The Foreign Secretary said that our Foreign Policy was rooted in our Islamic ethos, our values, our commitment to international norms and the geo-political environment. The safeguarding of our security, promotion of our national interests and economic development constituted the pivot of our Foreign Policy. In our volatile geo-strategic environment, the Foreign Policy of Pakistan was its first line of defence. Consistent with the objectives of our Foreign Policy, the Foreign Secretary said that Pakistan wanted good relations with all countries on the basis of sovereign equality and non-interference in internal affairs.

4. The detailed policy review took into account the state of Pakistan’s relations with the major powers including the US, Russia and China, the Islamic world and Pakistan’s neighbours as well as nuclear and security issues, our trade and economic interests and the welfare of Pakistani community abroad.

5. Pakistan would continue to engage with the US on various important issues with sensitivity and in the spirit of traditional friendship which has characterized Pakistan-US relations.

6. Pakistan’s positive approach to non-proliferation issues including CTBT was reiterated. It was agreed that Pakistan would continue its policy of responsibility and restraint and maintain a minimum credible nuclear deterrence in the interest of regional peace and stability.

7. The improved relations with Russia were considered of great significance. Pakistan would continue to endeavour for enhancement of economic and commercial ties and an across-the-board expansion of relations with Russia.
8. The compulsive India hostility and her current propaganda campaign against Pakistan were noted with great regret. To deflect attention from her own state-sponsored terrorism, and repression against the Kashmiris, India has been raising the bogey of cross-border terrorism. Nevertheless, Pakistan would maintain its positive attitude towards a purposeful dialogue with India for resolution of all disputes including the core issue of Kashmir.

9. Pakistan would steadfastly continue to extend moral, political and diplomatic support to the Kashmiris until the attainment of the right of self-determination in accordance with the UN Resolutions. The Kashmiris have offered enormous sacrifices in their continued indigenous struggle against the Indian occupation. The international community, particularly the supporters of Human Rights must speak up against Indian atrocities and prevail upon India to honour its commitments to the Kashmiris.

10. Relations with the Islamic world particularly with the Gulf countries were considered as the key element in Pakistan's Foreign Policy. These relations would be further strengthened in all fields.

11. High priority was accorded to reinforcing of the traditionally friendly and close relations with Iran.

12. Relations with China are the cornerstone of the Foreign Policy of Pakistan. Over the years these ties have gained strength. The enduring nature of the Sino-Pak friendship was strongly reaffirmed. Pakistan will further consolidate its strategic relationship with China in the coming millennium.

13. Pakistan desires durable peace, stability and national reconciliation in Afghanistan. A broad-based government in Afghanistan would be in the interest of the Afghan people. Pakistan would continue to cooperate with the Six Plus Two and friendly countries for consolidation of peace in Afghanistan and encourage greater engagement between Taliban and the international community.

14. The role of Pakistan Missions abroad in advancing our economic interests was emphasized. Several proposals were discussed for enhancing the effectiveness of our Embassies abroad in this regard.

15. Concrete proposals for the promotion of the welfare of the expatriate Pakistani community were also considered. It was decided that the community should be better mobilized to promote its role in the nation building efforts.

16. The Chief Executive emphasized that Pakistan Missions abroad must vigorously, and in coordination with various Ministers and Agencies of the Government, project the correct image of Pakistan as a progressive and moderate Islamic country.

1516. Statement by Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad offering a dialogue to India without pre-conditions.

Islamabad, November 25, 1999.

Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmed said Pakistan was ready for a meaningful talks with India without any pre-conditions.

Pakistan was a pro-dialogue country. It was ready for dialogue with India with dignity and “without pre-conditions,” Shamshad said. And added “We shall never run away from dialogue. But we don’t beg for it.”

He regretted India was raising, “pre-conditions that are unacceptable to us. Their pre-conditions involve the very issues that can only be addressed through dialogue.” Indians speak of “conducive environment and restoration of, “trust,” but it is only through dialogue that, “we can achieve these objectives after meaningfully addressing the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir,” he said. “If India does not want dialogue what can we do”? he asked, adding, “we cannot hold our breath to respond.”

Shamshad said neither trust nor tension free environment would return to the region as long as the core issue of Kashmir was resolved. He hoped India would adopt more positive approach towards the need of the region which is peace and stability on the basis of final settlement of Kashmir problem.

The Foreign Secretary said “sincere and purposeful approach,” was required for a meaningful dialogue between Pakistan and India.

Shamshad said unless Kashmir problem was solved there could not be peace in this region. Without peaceful solution of the core issue of Kashmir, he added, tension and instability will plague this part of the world. “There is an open offer for dialogue to India. It is up to India to reciprocate our offer with the same sincerity that we are demonstrating,” said the Foreign Secretary. He said, “peaceful settlement of disputes through dialogue is the need of the time and need of our region.”

But obviously for any dialogue, unless the two sides engage themselves in sincere talks, “that dialogue becomes meaningless”, he said.

1517. Letter from the High Commissioner G. Parthasarathy to the Foreign Secretary Lalit Man Singh.
Islamabad, November 29, 1999.
High Commissioner of India
Islamabad

My dear Lalit,

I had a long luncheon meeting today with the former Director General of the ISI Lt. General (R) Hamid Gul. I felt that such a meeting would be useful because Hamid Gul not only retains close ties with the Military establishment and the ISI but is also regarded as the Founding Father of the Insaf Party led by Imran Khan. As you are aware, Foreign Minister Sattar was a Member of the Insaf Party till he took up his present assignment. Gul played a pivotal role in the rise of the Taliban in Afghanistan. He has long been regarded to be a hard-liner on relations with India and has been a strong critic of the United States and its policies. The Americans, in fact, tend to view him with some trepidation.

2. The main purpose of my meeting Gul (with whom General Musharraf has been in touch) was to get some idea of how he assessed recent developments in Pakistan, and the growing feeling here that under Western pressure Musharraf is all set to put pressure on the Taliban and secure the removal of Osama Bin Laden — dead or alive. I also availed of the opportunity to apprise Hamid Gul about our own domestic and foreign policies with particular emphasis on how we were determined to have a sustained economic growth rate of 7% to 8% per annum while meeting the challenges posed by globalization. I dwelt at some length about our relations with United States, European Union and our immediate neighbours including China. I made it a point to emphasise to Gul that despite differences on the border issue and continuing concern about the strategic implications of some of China’s policies, we did have a programme of wide-ranging cooperation and dialogue with China, which had led to enhanced confidence and a substantial reduction of tension along our borders.

3. Hamid Gul told me that it would be unrealistic for anyone to expect that the Taliban would yield to external pressures and let down someone like Osama Bin Laden whom they hold in high respect. He added given the strong pro-Taliban sentiments in Pakistan, no Government in this country could afford to be seen to be pressurizing or acting against the interests of the Taliban. He said that recent UN sanctions had only served to unite Afghans in supporting the Taliban and noted that even an ally of Masood like Prof. Abdul Sayyaf had denounced the fatwa issued by an Uzbek ulema against the Taliban. He added that direct pressures on the Taliban by the West would only alienate Masood’s supporters. Such pressures would have very little influence on Taliban’s policies. Gul made it clear that in his view neither Musharraf nor indeed any other leader in Pakistan would be able to meet American demands for a change in Afghan policy. He added that any leader who attempted to do so would face the wrath of the people of Pakistan.

4. Responding to my queries about whether Musharraf would succeed in his efforts to revive the economy and usher in a new political era in Pakistan, Gul was surprisingly candid in saying that World Bank recipes that Musharraf was adopting were no cure for the economic ills of Pakistan. He felt that the economic policy measures being contemplated by Musharraf would not succeed and would only lead to further impoverishment of ordinary people in Pakistan. He indicated to me that he felt that Musharraf took rather simplistic approaches to complex issues. I might add that General Mirza Aslam Beg also seems to have similar views about Musharraf’s intention to stay in power for an indefinite period of time, though for different reasons. While Hamid Gul is a hard core Islamist, Beg is not.

5. Gul like other influential military personnel whom I have met in Pakistan appeared to be quite concerned about reports of a “Strategic Partnership” between India and United States. He kept repeatedly telling me that the United States and particularly Clinton could not be either trusted or relied upon, as their sole interest was to retain global hegemony at any cost. I might add that when I mentioned to Gul that there was a feeling in India that there were perhaps people in United States who favoured the establishment of an independent Kashmir, Gul responded by saying that he had no doubt that this was indeed the aim of the United States. He revealed to me that it had come to his notice that large amount of funds from the USA were being transferred to supporters of pro-independence groups in POK. I was, in fact, rather surprised when he asserted that the POK leader Sardar Abdul Qayum was amongst those who were receiving American funding and support. (Qayum was the only influential leader in POK who supported Sharif’s “Washington Accord” for withdrawal from Kargil). He also said that for strategic reasons the Americans wished to have a presence not merely in Kashmir but also in the Northern Areas.

6. While referring to our improving ties with our neighbours I told Gul that we sought similar mutually beneficial relations with Pakistan. I added that we felt that it was important to create a climate, which would facilitate resolution of differences. Gul himself brought up the subject of Kashmir and told me that he felt that there be a frank and direct dialogue between the two countries on the subject, adding that he was opposed to Third Party (American) mediation. Gul told me that the issue of Kashmir was a highly emotive one, which had the potential to inflame religious sentiments in Pakistan and indeed in the Islamic world. (Yeh ab Deen ka sawal ho gaya hai=this is now a religious issue). I told him that people in Pakistan had to remember that just as there were strong sentiments about what was perceived to be the “unfinished” agenda of Partition, there were equally strong sentiments in India that Kashmir was an issue touching on our secular nationhood. We would not like to tinker with the provisions of our secular and democratic constitution in any manner. One had, therefore, to look for a framework to a solution, which would be realistic and mutually acceptable.

7. Gul mentioned to me that he felt that it would be totally unrealistic for us to expect that any Government in Pakistan would be able to rein in “freedom fighters” in their struggle in Kashmir. I responded by telling Gul that we had found that the bulk of the so-called freedom fighters (around 80 per cent) to be Pakistani nationals and not Kashmiris. He, should therefore, realize that there were strong sentiments in India about the trans-border activities of militant groups in Pakistan. Gul, however, remained adamant in his assertion that it was just not feasible for any Government in Pakistan to restrain those who believe they were participants in a just struggle for the rights of their Muslim brethren. He did not deny the large scale presence of Pakistani nationals involved in militancy in Kashmir. He merely said that while 40% of the militants were Pakistanis, 60% were Kashmiris.

8. Interestingly, Gul mentioned to me that while at the height of the Afghan Jehad there were Muslims from 37 countries participating in the Jehad; there was not yet such widespread Pan-Islamic involvement in Kashmir. He ventured to suggest to me that Islamic sentiments were so high on this issue that even some Indian Muslims had joined in militant activities in Kashmir. I found this assertion rather self-serving as nothing would suit Pakistan more than to give a communal colour to militancy in Kashmir and disrupt communal harmony in India. I am inclined to take what Gul told me about the continuing Jehad in Kashmir rather seriously. It is doubtful whether Musharraf would succeed in pleasing the Americans through a clampdown on Islamic militant groups even if he should endeavour to do so. I must mention that throughout the luncheon meeting Gul was friendly and courteous. He introduced me to his son and some of his grand children. I was impressed by the fact that unlike some other Pakistani Generals he leads a relatively simple lifestyle.

9. I had a brief exchange on nuclear related issues with Gul. I told him that I was personally pleased that rather than joining the self-serving chorus of people who claimed that Pakistan commenced its nuclear programme in response to PNE in 1974, Foreign Minister Sattar had acknowledged that the programme commenced in 1972 following the Bangladesh conflict primarily because Pakistan wished to readdress the conventional disparity with India through the acquisition of a nuclear deterrent. I said that in these circumstances it would be preferable if Pakistan directly negotiated CBMs with us on nuclear related issues and also joined us in efforts for securing the dealerting (sic) of nuclear weapon systems and the removal of warheads from missiles on a global basis. Gul said that he personally found such an approach beneficial.

Shri Lalit Mansingh,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi

1518. Statement of the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding withdrawal of additional troops of Pakistan Army from Line of Control in the Kargil Sector.
New Delhi, December 16, 1999.

In response to a question, the Official Spokesman said that we had seen media reports indicating that Pakistan had completed the withdrawal of additional troops from the Line of Control, including the Kargil sector. The Spokesman recalled that General Pervez Musharraf had, on 17 October 1999, announced a withdrawal of troops only from the International border between India and Pakistan and Pakistani officials had thereafter clarified that there was to be no withdrawal of troops from the LoC. The present remarks of the spokesman of the Pakistan Army are only an exercise in obfuscation. In actual fact, we have not observed any withdrawal of any Pakistani troops deployed at the Line of Control.

In response to another question, the Official Spokesman said that we had seen reports of a proposed reduction in Pakistan's defence expenditure as part of an economic reforms package. In this context, the Spokesman emphasized that India had always desired economic stability and prosperity of our region as a whole. With regard to Pakistan's defence expenditure, the Spokesman noted that, as a proportion of its GDP, Pakistan's defence spending was amongst the highest in the world. Also, international financial institutions have, over a period of time, made insistent demands for the reduction of Pakistan's defence expenditure and have sought greater transparency in Pakistan's budget making exercise regarding defence expenditure.
Pakistan did not rule out on December 26 the possibility of a pre-conceived design by a foreign intelligence organization to manufacture the hijacking of Indian aircraft incident, malign Islamabad and isolate it internationally.

"Since October 12 New Delhi has been trying to isolate Pakistan, beginning with its moves to seek suspension of our Commonwealth membership, its unilateral postponement of SAARC summit and now perhaps, India decided to manufacture the hijacking incident," Foreign Minister Abdul Sattar told a news briefing.

Talking about the hijacking incident, Mr. Sattar recalled that it was "not unlike the operation of January 30, 1971 when India Planned and foisted a so-called hijacking of an Indian airliner named "Ganga" for manufacturing a pretext to deny Pakistan's rights and block over-night flights by PIA between East and West Pakistan." Accompanied by ISPR Director General Brig Rashid Qureshi and Additional Secretary Foreign Ministry Tariq Altaf the Foreign Minister dismissed Indian assertions the hijackers boarded the Indian aircraft at Kathmandu after disembarking from a PIA flight. He argued the there was a difference of about six hours between the departure of the two flights.

He said the PIA flight arrived at Kathmandu at 09.35 AM. None of the passengers aboard the PIA flight was booked by Indian airlines.

The PIA Plane took off for return journey an hour later at 10:35 A. M while the Indian Airline flight IC-814 took off from Kathmandu six hours later at 4:25 P.M.

Mr. Sattar regretted malicious propaganda against Pakistan by Indian media and said they were doing it through former senior government and military officials who were making adverse comments. "So this is part of a design to malign us," he said. He said that Indian Minister for External Affairs Jaswant Singh had not blamed Pakistan for the incident when he spoke to him on telephone on December 24 evening.

The Foreign Minister also raised several questions on the issue after the hijacked plane had left Pakistan and asked: "who are the hijackers? What are their names and nationalities? Why did the Indian government refuse permission for the airliner to land at Lucknow as requested by the pilot? Why did India request Pakistan to prevent the plane's take off from Lahore although they did not do this at Amritsar? And did the Indian government request authorities in Dubai to detain the plane and if not, why?"
Mr. Sattar said he had conveyed these reservations to his Indian counterpart during the telephonic conversation and specifically asked him why the Indian authorities at Amritsar had not provided food and fuel and not prevented the takeoff. He quoted Mr. Jaswant Singh as replying that before a decision could be made the airliner had taken off. But Mr. Sattar said the Plane remained at Amritsar for quite some time.

Replying to a number of question the Foreign Minister said the behavior of the Indian pilot was no less suspicious because he did not tell authorities at Lahore where he was heading for. "Nor did he make requests to the Indian authorities for interception of the plane. Also he did not ask for the same facilities from the Indian Government, which he asked from Pakistan." Again, the Foreign Minister said the Captain of the hijacked plane told the authorities in Lahore that the hijackers were Indians. "So he did not tell us correctly."

He said the Indian design against Pakistan was evident from the fact that New Delhi was continuing with allegations against Islamabad and was "withholding facts from its own people." For instance Mr. Jaswant Sindh did speak about the transfer of hijackers from the PIA flight to the hijacked plane but was silent on the time difference.

Mr. Sattar said while his Indian counterpart asked for Pakistan's assistance he did not level any allegations like the Indian media, which had begun to charge Pakistan right from the very beginning.

Asked if there was any contact between Pakistan and Afghanistan, the minister replied in the negative but said the UN team which had left for Kandahar, had returned to Islamabad.

He said New Delhi had made a request to Pakistan to allow air space to its flight with a capacity of 170 passengers to fly to Afghanistan, which Islamabad had granted. He said Pakistan would consider any further requests by India.

Replying to another question, Mr. Sattar said that Islamabad hopes that the hijacked plane does not return to Pakistan, "but if it does we will judge the situation in accordance with the international law and safety of the passengers."

Asked to comment on reports that Ibrahim was among the hijackers, the Foreign Minister said "this needed to be verified because the Indians had not disclosed full details". "We are thus in the dark but we would certainly like to make cross checks and find out whether the one for whose release the hijackers had made a demand and the one indentified as Ibrahim were really brothers?"

He said Pakistan did not have details of the contact among the UN officials, the Taliban and the hijackers. He said the Afghan nation was an innocent victim of the hijacking crisis. "In calling for the UN cooperation in resolving the tragedy, the Afghanistan Government had demonstrated responsibility and wisdom."

Mr. Sattar reiterated that Pakistan condemned terrorism in all its forms including violence against civilians whether perpetrated by individuals or state forces. Targeting of innocent civilians was abhorrent to mankind.

He said facts and transparency alone could bring objectivity to discussion. "That will expose, discredit and falsify the perverse speculations and baseless allegations being vent by irresponsible Indian commentators. By contributing to the build-up of hysteria and tension, such individuals betray their hatred and animosity towards Pakistan." The minister said Pakistan could not object to individuals views it could only object to the Indian government's views.

Asked if the recent tirade of allegations would adversely impact Pakistan--India relations, Mr. Sattar said it be noted that the root of all troubles and tensions between the two countries was that Indian was not prepared to resolve issues under the law and sought to settle them through the display of force.

Meanwhile on December 25, Pakistan's Foreign Office had slammed India's media accusing the Press of exploiting the hijacking of the Indian Airlines aircraft as propaganda against Islamabad.

In a terse statement the Foreign Office dismissed Indian media criticisms of its neighbour as "deplorable." "Pakistan deeply regrets that the Indian media in a typical display of malevolence and compulsive hostility towards Pakistan, are engaged in a tirade and baseless and malicious allegations in regard to the hijacking of the Indian aircraft," the Foreign office statement said.

[The aircraft was hijacked as it left Kathmandu airport and Pakistan refused it permission to land at Lahore but later the aircraft landed when it came within 500 feet of the ground.]

It is deplorable that the Indian media are exploiting the fate of more than 150 of its innocent nationals in a perverse attempt at propaganda against Pakistan," it said. The Foreign office said Pakistan initially denied permission to land because of a 1971 hijacking of an Indian plane to Lahore which it said was "stage-managed" by Indian intelligence. Later on December 24, flight IC-814 was finally allowed to land in Lahore on "humanitarian considerations and in response to the appeals made by the Indian authorities at several levels," the Foreign office statement said.

PIA refuted on December 26 TV's allegation linking Pakistan with the hijacking of the Indian flight from Kathmandu to New Delhi. Managing Director Pakistan International Airline Arif Abbasi described as "ridiculous" the Indian propaganda that the hijackers who boarded the Indian plane at Kathmandu had flown by PIA flight PK-806 from Karachi to Kathmandu. ZEE a private TV, quoting its correspondent from Kathmandu, had alleged that the hijackers arrived at Kathmandu by a PIA flight and slipped into the Indian carrier. The PIA chief categorically denied any such possibility, saying the time difference between the two flights was "five hours" and "it was impossible that the hijackers had travelled by PIA flight and boarded the India plane at Kathmandu."

To a question whether it was possible for any passenger to board the PIA plane without visa Mr. Arif said, "Immigration authorities could not have let any passenger board the plane without visa."

He said: "We are clear about our stance and will release the list of passengers who boarded the PIA aircraft. We shall make the list public ensuring that no possibility of rumours remains there," Mr. Abbasi said.

Meanwhile, ISPR Director General Brig Rashid Qureshi has also said India holds Pakistan responsible for all its ills, whether it is Kashmir or separatist movements in its eastern and southern provinces. India has a lot of problems. There are internal problems, there are people who are dissatisfied with what is happening in India, there are separatist movements and for all their ills the only country that they find to blame is Pakistan," Brig Rashid Qureshi said in a PTV programme.

"Whatever happens inside Kashmir they externalise it, whatever happens in Indian Punjab they hold Pakistan responsible for it. Whatever happens in the eastern and southern provinces of India they blame Pakistan," he pointed out.

Brig Qureshi said: "One really wonders about some statements from India which are irresponsible, ridiculous and harbouring on stupidity as the Indians this time were saying that if the aircraft took off from Lahore, it will head for Kabul."

Pakistan was trying to ward off the charge of abetting hijacking of the Indian Airlines Kathmandu - Delhi flight IC-814 which finally landed in Kandhar.
1520. Statement issued by the Official Spokesperson of the Ministry of External Affairs on hijacking of IAC flight IC-814.

New Delhi, January 15, 2000.

In connection with the recent hijacking of Indian Airlines flight IC-814, India today drew the attention of Pakistan to the latter's legal obligations under the Montreal Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation of 1971, the Hague Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft of 1970 and the SAARC Regional Convention on Suppression of Terrorism, to all of which Pakistan is a party.

The Pakistan High Commissioner, Mr. Ashraf Jehangir Qazi, was summoned to the Ministry of External Affairs today by the Foreign Secretary and informed that the Government of India had jurisdiction over the offences committed by the hijackers and their accomplices. He was reminded that Pakistan also had legal obligations, under the Simla Agreement of 1972, to prevent the organization, assistance or encouragement of any acts detrimental to the maintenance of peaceful and harmonious relations and also to prevent hostile propaganda. He was told that support to acts of terrorism, including the hijacking of the Indian Airlines aircraft and subsequent anti-India public statements by the released terrorist, Masood Azhar, who was in Pakistan, were in contravention of Pakistan's obligations under the Simla Agreement.

The Pakistan High Commissioner was also told that the terrorists, whose release was secured by the hijackers by threatening the lives of the hostages and killing one of them, had since made their appearance in Pakistan and Pakistan-occupied Kashmir. Given that a large number of terrorists whose release was sought by the hijackers are Pakistani nationals and that the first destination chosen by the hijackers was Lahore, there was strong ground to believe that the hijackers were currently in Pakistan. Accordingly, Pakistan, as a State party to the above Conventions, had the clear legal obligation to take them into custody and extradite them to India.

It was also made clear to the Pakistan High Commissioner that the Government of India expected Pakistan to take the necessary measures to apprehend the hijackers and their accomplices present in Pakistan, to extradite them to India for prosecution in fulfillment of its obligations under the international conventions mentioned above, to co-operate in connection with criminal proceedings against the offenders and to report to the International Civil Aviation Organisation all relevant information in its possession regarding the hijacking and the action taken against the offenders.
He was also informed that the Government of India reserved the right to take further measures as appropriate.

The UNGA has adopted by consensus the Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, in which it has categorically affirmed that acts of terrorism for political purposes are in any circumstance unjustifiable, whatever the considerations of a political, philosophical, ideological, racial, ethnic, religious or any other nature that may be invoked to justify them. The Declaration has also asked States to refrain from organising, instigating, facilitating, financing, encouraging or tolerating terrorist activities and take appropriate practical measures to ensure that their respective territories are not used for terrorist installations or training camps or for the preparation or organisation of terrorist acts intended to be committed against other States or their citizens.

7. Growing international consensus against terrorism is also reflected in the resolution 1269 adopted by the UN Security Council on 18th October, 1999, which unequivocally condemned and called upon States to prevent and suppress terrorist acts.

1521. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

Islamabad, January 24, 2000.

Government of Pakistan
Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan present its compliments to the High Commission of the Republic of India in Islamabad and with reference to the note verbale of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs dated 15 January, 2000 handed over to the High Commissioner of Pakistan in New Delhi along with a so-called report has the honour to once again emphatically reject the baseless and fabricated accusations of Pakistan's alleged involvement in the hijacking of Indian Airlines flight IC -- 814.

As a State Party to the relevant international conventions concerning air piracy and hijacking, the government of Pakistan is cognizant of its obligations.
Pakistan is opposed to all forms of terrorism including hijacking and has repeatedly and unreservedly condemned such acts.

The domestic laws of Pakistan stipulate the harshest penalty against the abhorrent crime of hijacking. The government of Pakistan has accordingly, undertaken to apprehend and prosecute any person or persons found on its territory or the territory of Azad Jammu and Kashmir who may be suspected of having committed such offences.

The Ministry notes with deep regret that the Government of India continues to make absurd and unfounded allegations to implicate Pakistan in the incident. Repetition of these allegations lends them no respectability.

The Government of India has alleged that the hijackers are in Pakistan without giving any evidence to substantiate this claim or information that might be of assistance in determining the identities and whereabouts of the hijackers. The so-called report has falsely quoted the Taleban Information Minister as saying that the hijackers were headed for Quetta. the Afghan Information Minister has categorically denied the statement attributed to him.

So far, India has also failed to make available as requested by Pakistan, the transcripts of its talks with the hijackers and the terms of the deal it struck with the hijackers which would be helpful in unravelling the mystery of the hijacking. India itself agreed with the hijackers, as part of the deal, that they should have a vehicle at their disposal and time to be able to get away without leaving any trail. It is not surprising that questions are being asked about motives behind this kind of a deal.

There is nothing concrete to substantiate the Indian claim about the nationality or nationalities of the hijackers. The passengers list continuously announced by India indicated 154 Indians, 12 Europeans, 2 North Americans, 8 Nepalese 1 Japanese and 1 Australian. No Pakistani was ever mentioned on the manifest of flight IC-814. India has not provided immigration record to the identity of any Pakistani on board.

The Indian Foreign Minister's allegation that the hijackers had walked off the PIA flight in Kathmandu and boarded the Indian airlines plane was refuted by the Indian Airlines' officials themselves, not forgetting that the two flights were at Kathmandu airport five hours apart. Similarly fanciful is the allegation that an official car of the Pakistan embassy in Kathmandu was involved in the hijacking. The idea of official cars plying to aid and abet a hijacking is too absurd to merit a refutation.

The allegation that the hijackers' first destination was Lahore is belied by the fact, that, according to Indian reports, the hijackers had first sought to land in Lucknow, in India itself.
The hijacked plane was allowed to land at Lahore International Airport in dire emergency in response to the requests made by the Government of India through their Foreign Secretary in New Delhi and their High Commissioner in Islamabad and the Director General of the Indian Civil Aviation. Pakistan's primary concern was the safety and security of the passengers because the Captain threatened to crash land in Lahore as the plane had practically run out of fuel, food and fuel was provided in accordance with the request of the Indian authorities for all help and assistance to the hijacked plane. The hijackers had also threatened to kill passengers if fuel was not immediately provided to the aircraft. Medical assistance was also offered to the captain of the plane, which was not accepted.

Contrary of false Indian claims, no request or suggestion for off-loading women and children and injured person/s at Lahore was by the Captain of the plane. It must be noted that only the Captain of the plane and not the hijackers were in communication with the control tower at Lahore.

Throughout the hijacking crisis, Government of Pakistan extended all possible assistance to India e.g. a helicopter was arranged to fly the Indian High Commissioner to Lahore; over-flight clearances were instantly provided to the Indian aircraft plying back and forth between New Delhi and Kandahar; the visit to Kandahar of an Indian diplomat in Islamabad was facilitated on a UN flight; a sick hostage released by the hijackers was received for medical treatment in Islamabad. Similarly instant over-flight clearances were provided for the flight to Kandahar taking the Indian Foreign Minister and the three aircraft returning from Kandahar to New Delhi.

The Indian Foreign Minister Mr. Jaswant Singh in a telephone conversation with the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, and subsequently on television acknowledged the assistance provided by Pakistan and expressed gratitude of the Government of India.

It is a matter of great regret that as soon as the hijacking was over this expression of gratitude was substituted by a series of scurrilous allegations against Pakistan with obvious mala fide intentions. Clearly the Government of India wanted to exploit the incident to intensify its continuing anti-Pakistan propaganda campaign.

The Indian accounts of the hijacking of flight IC-814 are full of contentions, and fabrications. So far India has failed to provide an explanation as to how the heavily armed hijackers boarded the aircraft; why did the Indian authorities deny permission to its own aircraft to land at Lucknow and after it had landed in Amritsar why was the plane allowed to take off? It was entirely possible for India to take control of the aircraft in Amritsar and terminate the hijacking in a manner considered most suitable by the Government of India. The fact that Indian authorities made no effort to stop the aircraft from becoming airborne demonstrates that India had no intention of terminating the hijacking. As indicated in the "Report" on hijacking, the aircraft was allowed to take off on a nearly empty fuel tank so that it could have only gone to Lahore. This clearly demonstrates the premeditated and mala fide intention of India to implicate Pakistan in the Incident.

In the "Report", the Indian charges rest solely on the supposed confession by the alleged four accomplices in Mumbai. According to Indian media reports, the Mumbai police chief had confirmed that the so-called four accomplices were arrested for bank robbery one day before the hijacking ended. In this context, attention of the High Commission of India is drawn to a dispatch appearing in the Indian Express on 7 January 2000 entitled "Mumbai mystery: how bank robbery turned into hijacking conspiracy". It is also incredible that the hijackers who were believed to have remained masked throughout, left their passport size photographs with their so-called accomplices for turning over to the Government of India on demand.

Pakistan regards terrorism, including hijacking, a heinous crime. The gravity of this crime in the case of the Indian Airlines hijacking is compounded by the fact that it had the obvious potential of hurting the Kashmiri cause and maligning Pakistan. Accordingly, the Government of Pakistan desires to see those responsible for this crime apprehended and their designs and motivations fully exposed. In case the hijackers are apprehended in Pakistan, they will be prosecuted in accordance with the law.

In view of the foregoing, the note verbale and the attached "Report" under reference are rejected as being spurious and a tendentious attempt to malign Pakistan. These demarches are part of India's propaganda campaign against Pakistan which would only contribute to the aggravation of the already tense environment of the region.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs urges the Government of India to desist from provocations against Pakistan in the interest of peace and stability in the region.

The Ministry of Foreign affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of the Republic of India the assurances of its highest consideration.

The High Commission of the Republic of India, Islamabad 1522.  Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan to Foreign Secretary Lalit Mansingh.
My dear Lalit
You would have seen the telegram that I have sent about my recent four day visit to Lahore where Shanti and I were able to meet a wide cross-section of people. Both of us along with the Ghanashyams and First Secretary Mohananey were guests of the wellknown Pakistani industrialist Syed Babar Ali for a Basant luncheon at Babar Ali's Heveli in the heart of Lahore. Babar Ali is a highly influential industrialist and philanthropist in Lahore. He has been the Finance Minister earlier and was offered the assignment of Commerce Minister by Musharraf- an offer he declined. Razak Dawood, also a well known businessman from Lahore, who is a Mohajir from Gujarat and has familial and business ties in India, was appointed Commerce Minister at the behest of Babar Ali.
2. Razak Dawood was present at the 'Basant' luncheon and he made it a point to seek me out and shed tears of woe about what he said was the peremptory manner he was dealt with by our delegation at the Seattle WTO meeting. Dawood went to great lengths to say that he had sought a call on our Commerce Minister - a request that had not been acceded to. He had thereafter tried to at least speak to our Commerce Minister but was initially rebuffed. It was only after that he was seated next to our Commerce Minister at a plenary session that he offered his hand to our Commerce Minister who, he said, rather reluctantly accepted his gesture. He, however, added that thereafter there was a measure of cooperation between the two delegations on issues of common concern in this particular plenary session.
3. Dawood mentioned to me that he was deeply hurt by the way his gestures of friendship and cooperation had been spurned by us at Seattle. He told me that he understood that quite obviously our Commerce Minister was acting in consonance with our Government's policies, but added that he for one had refused to join those who spoke out against expansion of bilateral trade and economic cooperation with India and had, in fact, continued to advocate the need for expansion of such cooperation. Dawood told me that he was particularly disappointed that despite the fact that he had been good friends with me, I had not called on him ever since he took over. He said that he was hurt by this approach of a person whom he regarded as a good friend, though he realized that he was acting in accordance with policy instructions.
Dawood also hinted to me that we were being unnecessarily harsh on General Musharraf who, he claimed, was trying to make every effort to reach out to us. He asked me why I had personally not called on General Musharraf?

Responding to the various points that Dawood made, I told him that in the initial days after the military takeover we had indicated that we were ready to establish contacts with General Musharraf primarily in order to get an idea about how he perceived the further development of relations with India. Musharraf, however, had found that he had time for HOMs from countries as far as Turkey and Malaysia and chose not to respond to us. In the meantime it became clear to us that there was growing international opinion against according any legitimacy to the Military Rulers as it was felt that military takeovers were not good for peace and stability either in the South Asian Region or across the World.

I told Dawood that in these circumstances we had no option but to conform to the provisions of the Durban CHOGM Declaration which had urged Member Governments of the Commonwealth not to take actions which would give legitimacy to the Military Regime. I added that he would have noted that even Governments like the UK which had commercial interests in Pakistan were averse to Ministerial level exchanges or indeed any exchanges which would confer legitimacy on the Musharraf regime. It was in these circumstances, that with considerable regret, I found that it was not possible for me to call on even persons like him, National Affairs Adviser, Javed Jabbar or Food and Agriculture Minister Shafkat Ali Shah Jamot, all of whom were people I had known and regarded as personal friends for several years. I told Dawood that this did not mean that we did not wish to have any contacts whatsoever with the present regime at the diplomatic level. On the contrary we would be quite happy to be apprised from time to time at high level by the Pakistan Government about their views and perceptions, particularly on relations with India. In these circumstances I would be quite happy to meet him or any other Ministerial representative at any venue of their choice provided the proposal emanated from their side. Responding to a query whether this policy applied to my meeting the Chief Executive, I replied in the affirmative.

Dawood told me that he was scheduled to meet the Chief Executive this afternoon and promised to convey what I had said to the Chief Executive. He said that he would make efforts to see that there was a process of contacts with us. His only fear was that if the Pakistan side should undertake any initiative at the present moment, we and others may construe it as a gesture meant to please Bill Clinton. I told Dawood that we do not view our bilateral relations with Pakistan in the context of what Clinton or others like or dislike. This was the essence of our approach to bilateralism. I have no doubt that Dawood would have spoken to Musharraf and conveyed what I have said. We will wait and see how he responds.

7. In response to assertions by Dawood about our seeking to support Nawaz Sharif even at the present moment, despite Nawaz Sharif having been involved in the Kargil adventure, I told him that we had no doubt in our mind that Nawaz Sharif had indeed approved the Kargil intrusion. It was however, a widely accepted fact that despite his unquestioned political abilities, Nawaz Sharif was not given to thinking through the implications of such actions in substantive detail. The main reason why we had serious reservations and doubts about Musharraf's intentions was that it was fairly well known that his predecessor General Karamat was not too enthusiastic about the kind of adventure in Kargil that General Musharraf had strongly and ardently advocated. Suspicions about General Musharraf's intentions are, therefore, inevitably going to continue in India till such time as we are assured on the ground that he is not escalating tensions and militancy.

8. I must say that while Dawood is a businessman entirely new to the ways Governments function, his comments did indicate that there is a deep sense of frustration and dismay within the Pakistan government at the policies we have adopted on contacts with their senior functionaries.

With warm personal regards

Shri Lalit Mansingh,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.
Excerpts from the interview of Gen Parvez Musharraf with Washington Post.

Question: Do you think that President Clinton is endorsing your position on Kashmir?

Answer: He has said he is not going to mediate on Kashmir but (he can) facilitate a dialogue between India and Pakistan. I would like to convince him that the main cause of tension is but one and that is Kashmir.

Q. Do you have a vision of a settlement for Kashmir?

A. Let us start by accepting that Kashmir is the core of tension in this region. Once the talking starts, solution can be debated later.

Q. The US government has put the Pakistan-based group Harkatul Mujahideen on the US terrorists list,

A. It is not a terrorist organisation.

Q. They kidnapped five westerners.

A. Yes. It was a splinter group and we do not support that. It is a mystery where it has gone.

Q. Reportedly you gave sanctuary to two hijackers of the Indian Airlines jet.

A. This is absolutely wrong. This is what the Indians keep saying. They are not in Pakistan.

Q. Pakistan was helpful in turning Ramzi Yousaf [the architect of the World Trade Center bombing] over to the USA. Can you do the same with Osama?

A. We don't have control over what is happening in Afghanistan. If anyone thinks we can order the Taliban around he is wrong.

Q. There are terrorist training camps in Afghanistan, aren't there?

A. Right, this is the area I will like to negotiate with them. The Taliban activity is being branded as terrorism, which it is not. There may be other groups there which are training to carry on militancy. That is where we need to crack down.

Q. Why is [former Pakistan Prime Minister] Nawaz Sharif on trial for attempted murder, hijacking—not just for corruption?

A. But he did that He didn't allow the Plane [carrying Musharraf back to Pakistan] to land and was forcing it to go to India.
Q. Shouldn't the trial be free and fair?
A. It's a totally fair trial.

Q. How can you have an independent judiciary if you make the judges take an oath to obey you?
A. The judiciary is absolutely independent in Pakistan. About 89 out of 102 [Judges] took the oath, which shows the order was legitimate and valid.

High Commissioner for India
Islamabad

My dear Lalit,

Please refer to my telegram No. 52 regarding my meeting with Foreign Secretary Inam ul Haque on March 29 regarding the Clinton visit. There were a few points, which Haque mentioned to me which I had not, for reasons of brevity, brought to your notice in my telegram.

2. While speaking of concerns in Pakistan that we were contemplating the setting up of a "Security belt" across the Line of Control similar to what the Israelis had done in Lebanon, Haque referred to the on going visit of three of our Naval ships to Israel. He said that there had been reports that India was the largest customer for defence equipment and technology from Israel and asked me whether our defence ties with Israel were indeed so extensive. I responded by telling Haque that while there was a measure of defence cooperation between us and Israel, we had no aspirations to be Israel's largest partner on defence related issues. This was a distinction to be conferred on two countries which Pakistan regarded as its close friends - China and Turkey!

3. I am reporting this to you because the Urdu Press here and even knowledgeable people who should know better repeatedly assert that Pakistan is a victim of "Hindu-Jewish" conspiracies. Nevertheless, Benazir Bhutto had referred to a meeting that she had with Prime Minister Rabin when she was Prime Minister of Pakistan when I met her in Karachi last year. I would, therefore, not be surprised if the Pakistanis are covertly maintaining links with Israel. Apart from the obvious bilateral benefits of such link it would, no doubt, be felt here that links in any form with Israel would help Pakistan in its efforts to woo the pro-Israeli lobby in the United States.

4. In discussions which I have held with a number of Pakistanis, I have found that they view Assistant Secretary of State Karl Inderfurth with considerable suspicion. Haque wryly remarked to me that he had seen reports in media that Inderfurth had told you and Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister that Clinton had taken an even tougher position in his private talks with Musharraf than he had in his public televised address. He sarcastically remarked that he could not understand how Inderfurth could make such an assertion given the fact that he was not present in the first 80 minutes of discussions which took place between the two delegations. (Contrary to the impression that we had earlier, it is true that Inderfurth was not present in the 80 minutes restricted delegation level meeting. Bruce Reidel acted as the note taker in this session). It thus seems that the Pakistanis view Karl Inderfurth in much the same way that we viewed his predecessor, Robin Raphel. Maleeha Lodhi had a very warm relationship with Raphel and is now finding that she cannot make the same headway with Inderfurth.

5. Inam ul Haque also mentioned to me that Musharraf had alluded to the substantial increase in our defence budget this year as a source of concern. I deliberately did not respond to this reference to our increased defence spending. Haque is well aware of the fact that in informal meetings with the Pakistanis I have made it clear that following the Pak intrusion in Kargil we are determined to restore the qualitative edge that we developed over Pakistan after the 1965 conflict and throughout the decades of the 1970s and 1980s. I have, at the same time, stressed that given the sustained rate of economic growth that we are achieving, we are quite confident that we can achieve this strategic objective even while keeping our defence expenditure within manageable and comfortable levels as a proportion of our GDP.

Shri Lalit Mansingh,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.
1525. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs regarding the meeting of High Commissioner of India in Pakistan with the Pakistani Foreign Secretary.

New Delhi, March 31, 2000.

In response to a question, the official Spokesman confirmed that our High Commissioner to Pakistan had met the Pakistan Foreign Secretary on 29th March. The Meeting was held at the request of the Pakistan Foreign Secretary. During the meeting, the Pakistan Foreign Secretary conveyed his country’s desire to renew dialogue with India and also raised concerns about India’s so-called aggressive postures against Pakistan.

India has always sought to establish a relationship of peace, friendship and cooperation with Pakistan. The India-Pakistan Composite Dialogue Process was put in place in 1998 at India’s initiative. Prime Minister Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee visited Lahore in February, 1999 to reinforce India's message of goodwill for Pakistan. Pakistan's Kargil misadventure constituted not only a violation of the Line of Control, but a transgression of the territory of trust. The cessation of Pakistan's Cross-border terrorism and the abandonment of its vicious propaganda are essential ingredients for any meaningful dialogue. We once again call upon Pakistan to look to the future, to the welfare of our peoples, and for this purpose, give up the path of conflict and senseless violence.

India has no aggressive designs on Pakistan. Prime Minister Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee had made this clear when on 21st March, 2000 he said: "We do not think in terms of war, and nobody should think in those terms in this sub-continent". It is Pakistan, which has in recent months, intensified its state-sponsored cross-border terrorism in the State of Jammu & Kashmir. While we will continue to scrupulously maintain our policy of restraint, we will effectively respond, as we have demonstrated in the past, to any threat to our territorial integrity.

1526. Report on the US State Department's Annual Report dubbing Pakistan along with Afghanistan as a "Major Hub of International Terrorism."

The USA for the first time singled out South Asia as a 'major hub of international terrorism', accusing Pakistan and especially Afghanistan of providing safe haven to international terrorist groups*. The New York Times which carried the State Department annual report on terrorism said the US stopped short of adding Pakistan or Afghanistan to its list of state sponsors of terrorism but qualified this observation that 'Pakistan is being watched'. "They need to do better", the paper quoted an unnamed US official. "Pakistan too" the Report asserted "is sending 'mixed messages' on terrorism by harbouring and aiding known terrorists". The Paper quoted Michael Sheehan, State Department's Coordinator for Counter-Terrorism as saying that Afghanistan was not added to the list because Washington did not recognise its Government and Pakistan was not added because, he said, it is a friendly state that is trying to tackle the problem", although its record badly needed improvement. The report severely criticising Pakistan said: "While it has arrested and extradited several terrorists, it has refused to end support to groups that train terrorists in neighbouring Afghanistan and in Pakistan itself and has declined to close 'certain religious schools' that serve as conduits for terrorism." The report further said that there were also "credible reports" that Pakistan continues to support militant groups like the Harakatul Mujahideen citing the incident related to Maulana Masood.

* Interestingly on January 3, 2000 the United States had dismissed Indian demand to declare Pakistan a Terrorist State. The Indian demand was made in the wake of the hijacking of the Indian Airlines Kathmandu - Delhi flight IC- 814. At that time, the State Department had suggested to New Delhi to involve Pakistan in a dialogue by starting the bilateral talks. "It still remains in the interest of India and Pakistan to resume their talks. We would like to see that. I don't know the impact the hijacking will have, we will have to see that," a senior State Department official was reported to have told the Karachi based Dawn. It may be recalled that on the same day, i. e. January 3 Prime Minister Vajpayee had urged the major nations of the world to declare Pakistan a terrorist state. "Our Government will work systematically towards this objective."

Pakistan Foreign Minister Abdul Sattar also on January 3 tried to down play his country's involvement in the hijacking incident. He told a Press conference in Islamabad that Indian charge against Pakistan was a "preconceived Indian objective of building a strategic relationship with the USA on trumped up charges of terrorism". He said Indian allegations were "aimed at diverting domestic denunciation for delay ,inefficiency and insensitivity shown by New Delhi to the pain and suffering of the passengers and their families of the hijacked Indian airlines." Foreign Office Spokesman Tariq Altaf said in Islamabad on the same day (January 3) that baseless allegations by India against Islamabad could only expose New Delhi's prejudice and malevolence, not to mention ingratitude for the cooperation of Pakistan extended throughout the hijacking crisis.
Azhar "who was freed from an Indian prison in exchange for hostages taken in the hijacking of an Air India plane last year."

Pakistan's Reaction

A Foreign Office Spokesman of Pakistan on May 1 dismissed the US allegation that Islamabad harbours terrorists and clarified that it has always cooperated with the international community to combat terrorism. The Spokesman Tariq Altaf in a formal statement said Pakistan has always conveyed international concern to the Taliban and stressed the need for cooperation with the international community. However the Spokesman ruled out any interference in Afghanistan's internal affairs. While dismissing reports of Pakistan support to Kashmiri militants, the Spokesman insisted that "Pakistan only supports the Kashmiri's right to self-determination-politically, morally and diplomatically". He said Pakistan is irrevocably opposed to terrorism. "A number of suspected terrorists have been handed over to the US Government and to other countries. Recently the Government had announced a de-weaponisation campaign to cleanse society of illegal arms", he said.

Foreign Secretary from Ambassador.

The ICJ gave its judgement this afternoon on the Atlantique case. By 14 votes to 2, it found that it had no jurisdiction to entertain the Application filed by Pakistan. The two dissenting opinions were by Pakistan's ad hoc Judge Pirzada and the new Jordanian Judge on the Court A1-Khasawneh.

2. Pakistan's principal arguments were based on the applicability of the 1928 General Act on the Peaceful Settlement of Disputes; on compulsory ICJ jurisdiction according to its own Statue and the UN Charter; on jurisdiction being part of the Simla Agreement; and in rebuttal of India's reservations relating to ICJ jurisdiction where Commonwealth membership and membership of multilateral treaties were concerned. On each of these counts, the ICJ found that it did not have jurisdiction. In other words, India's position was accepted on all counts.
3. In concluding its judgement, the Court made five brief observations as follows:-

(i) “there is a fundamental distinction between the acceptance by a State of the Court’s jurisdiction and the compatibility of particular acts with international law …. whether or not States accept the jurisdiction of the Court, they remain in all cases responsible for acts attributable to them that violate the rights of other States.” (Fisheries Jurisdiction (Spain v. Canada), Jurisdiction of the Court, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1998, p.456, paras. 55-56)

(ii) “the judicial settlement of international disputes, with a view to which the court has been established, is simply an alternative to the direct and friendly settlement of such disputes between the Parties;….consequently it is for the Court to facilitate, so far as is compatible with its Statute, such direct and friendly settlement” (case concerning the Free Zones of Upper Savoy and the District of Gex, Order of 19 August 1929, P.C.I.J., Series A, No. 22, P. 13; see also Frontier Dispute (Burkina Faso v. Republic of Mali), I.C.J. Reports 1986, P.577, para 46, and Passage through the Great Belt (Finland v. Denmark), I.C.J. Reports, 1991, p.20.

(iii) The Court’s lack of jurisdiction does not relieve States of their obligation to settle their disputes by peaceful means. The choice of those means admittedly rests with the parties under Article 33 of the United Nations Charter. They are nonetheless under an obligation to seek such a settlement, and to do so in good faith in accordance with Article 2, paragraph 2, of the Charter.

(iv) As regards India and Pakistan, that obligation was restated more particularly in the Simla Accord of 2 July 1972, which provides that “the two countries are resolved to settle their differences by peaceful means through bilateral negotiations or by any other peaceful means mutually agreed upon between them”. Moreover, the Lahore Declaration of 21 February 1999 reiterated “the determination of both countries to implementing the Simla Agreement”.

(v) Accordingly, the Court reminds the Parties of their obligation to settle their disputes by peaceful means, and in particular the dispute arising out of the aerial incident of 10 August 1999, in conformity with the obligations which they have undertaken (cf. Fisheries Jurisdiction (Spain v. Canada), Jurisdiction of the Court, Judgement, I.C.J. Reports 1998, p.456, para 56).
4. I am not detailing the various legal aspects of the case covered in the Court’s judgment, which in any case will be better communicated by Dr. P.S. Rao, JS (L&T), who is returning to New Delhi tomorrow 22nd June, 2000.

5. Copies of the full judgement, including the individual (and the two dissenting) opinion expressed by various judges, are being sent by this week’s bag.

1528. Summary of the salient point of the decision of the International Court of Justice on the complaint filed by Pakistan on the shooting of the Pakistan naval aircraft.

From: Indembassy, The Hague

Following is the summary of the salient points of the decision rendered by the Court in the Aerial Incident Case including separate opinions and dissenting opinions.

The International Court of Justice today delivered its judgment on the preliminary objections raised by India to the jurisdiction of the Court in the Aerial Incident case of August 10th 1999 brought before the Court by an application submitted by Pakistan in September 1999 following the shooting down of the Atlantique naval aircraft. With 14 votes to 2 the Court upheld the objections raised by India to the jurisdiction of the Court.

First it dealt with the submissions made by Pakistan to establish the jurisdiction of the Court on the basis of Article 17 of the General Act for Pacific Settlement of International Disputes signed at Geneva on 26th September 1928 to which British India was a party with certain reservations. India objected to this ground on the basis that the General Act was never regarded by India as applicable to it since its Independence and that it made its position very clear through a communication addressed to the Secretary General of the United Nations on 18th September 1974. India also contested that Pakistan could not claim succession to the General Act in terms of India Independence Order of 1947 dated 14th August 1947. In this connection, India also pointed out that under Customary Law as codified in the 1978 Vienna Convention on Succession of States in respect of treaties (Article 8), Pakistan could not claim succession to the General Act.

After dismissing several arguments presented by Pakistan, the Court held: “Even if arguendo, the General Act was binding on India, the communication of 18 September 1974 is to be considered in the circumstances of the present case as having served the same legal ends as the notification of denunciation provided for in Article 45 of the Act.” It further noted that: “It follows from the foregoing that India, in any event, would have ceased to be bound by the General Act of 1928 at the latest on 16th August 1979, the date on which a denunciation of the General Act under Article 45 thereof would have taken effect. India cannot be regarded as a party to the said act at the date when the Application in the present case was filed by Pakistan. It follows that Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the Application on the basis of the provisions of Article 17 of the General Act of 1928 and of Article 37 of the Statute.”

The Court thereafter consider India’s objection to its jurisdiction on the ground that Pakistan is or has been a Commonwealth country and as such its reservation concerning “disputes with Government of any State which is or has been a member of the Commonwealth of Nations” would be applicable. Pakistan contested this reservation of India as not valid, or unopposable to Pakistan as it was extra-statutory in nature or otherwise it was obsolete. Court rejected these contentions of Pakistan and accepted India’s submissions in this regard and held that the Commonwealth reservation was valid and applicable for the following reasons:

1) The jurisdiction of the Court exists only within the limits within which it has accepted;

2) Article 36(3), which Pakistan claimed as laying down the conditions under which reservations could validly be made, has never been regarded as laying down in an exhaustive manner the conditions under which the declarations might be made;

3) The right to attach conditions to the jurisdiction either generally or to certain aspect of any kind of dispute, or specifically to certain classes or lists of disputes or to combine different kinds of reservations is well accepted not only by a resolution of the Assembly of the League of Nations of 26th September 1928 but also by the founding fathers of the Statute of the International Court of Justice as well as by the practice of States.

4) Since 1929 a number of Commonwealth States have formulated reservations concerning other Commonwealth members and such reservations are currently to be found in the declarations of those States.

The Court did not also accept Pakistan’s argument that India’s reservation was a discriminatory act constituting an abuse of right because the only purpose of India’s reservation was to prevent Pakistan from bringing an action against India before the Court. The Court noted that “States are in any event free to limit this scope ratione personaee which they wish to give to their acceptance of the compulsory jurisdiction of the Court”. In this connection the Court also rejected Pakistan’s argument that the reservation of India was obsolete and noted that any declaration must be interpreted as it stands having regard to the words actually used. Further it stated that “While the historical reasons for the initial appearance of the Commonwealth reservation in the declarations of certain States under the optional clause may have changed or disappeared, such considerations cannot, however, prevail over the intention of a declarant State, as expressed in the actual text of its declaration. India has repeatedly made clear that it wishes to limit in this manner the scope ratione personaee of its acceptance of the Court’s jurisdiction. Whatever may have been the reasons for this limitation, the Court is bound to apply it.”

The Court also rejected the argument of Pakistan that Article I of the Simla Accord under which India agreed to resolve all differences with Pakistan by peaceful means created an estoppels against India to object to the jurisdiction of the Court. The Court said that it “regards this provisions as an obligation, generally, on the two States to settle their differences by peaceful means, to be mutually agreed by them”. Further, “the said provision in no way modifies the specific rules governing recourses to any such means, including judicial settlement. Thus the Court cannot interpret that obligation as precluding India from relying, in the present case, on the Commonwealth reservation contained in its declaration”.

Finally the Court also rejected Pakistan’s argument that it had jurisdiction on the basis of various provisions of the UN Charter read with Article 36 (1) of the Statute of the Court. In this connection the Court observed that “the United Nations Charter contains no specific provision of itself conferring compulsory jurisdiction on the Court. In particular, there is no such provision in Article 1, paragraph 1, 2 paragraphs 3 and 4, 33, 36, paragraph 3, and 92 of the Charter relied on by Pakistan”.

Finally the Court observed that “the Court’s lack of jurisdiction does not relieve States of their obligation not settle their disputes by peaceful means. The choice of those means admittedly rests with the parties under Article 33 of the United Nations Charter”. It added that: “They are nonetheless under an obligation to seek such a settlement, and to do so in good faith in accordance with Article 2, paragraph 2 of the Charter”.

The Court noted further: “As regards India and Pakistan, that obligation was restated more particularly in the Simla Accord of 2 July 1972, which provides that “the two countries are resolved to settle their differences by peaceful means through bilateral negotiations or by any other peaceful means mutually agreed upon between them. Moreover, the Lahore declaration of 21 February 1999 reiterated the determination of both countries to implementing the Simla Agreement”.

It concluded that “Accordingly, the Court reminds the Parties of their obligation to settle their disputes by peaceful means, and in particular the dispute arising out of the aerial incident of 10 August 1999, in conformity with the obligations which they have undertaken”.

Judge Oda, Koroma and Reddy appended separate opinions.

Judges Oda, believed that the General Act of 1928 could not itself be considered a document which would confer compulsory jurisdiction upon the Court independently from or in addition to the “optional clause” under Article 36, paragraph 2 of the Statue of the Permanent Court of the International Justice. This is in addition to his agreement with the Court that Pakistan cannot rely upon the General Act against India to claim jurisdiction of the Court.

Judge Koroma was happy that the Court reminded the Parties of their obligations to settle their disputes by peaceful means and felt that the legal issues raised in the present case were amenable to be resolved by applying international law which the Court, as a Court of Law, would have been entitled to do were it competent to do so.

Judge Reddy underlined the element of good faith which is required by any State which wishes to settle its dispute with another State as required by Article 33 read with paragraph 2 of Article 2 of the Charter of the United Nations. In this connection, he pointed out that the Lahore Declaration was significant in that it referred to the menace of terrorism and reaffirmed the condemnation of terrorism by both the parties in all its forms and manifestations. It is in this context the “good faith” referred to in paragraph 49 of the Judgment assumed, in his opinion, “singular significance”. He added “the requirement of “good faith” obliges the two countries to create an atmosphere where the bilateral negotiations or any other peaceful means mutually agreed upon” can be conducted and carried on meaningfully and in good faith.”

Judge Al-Khasawneh in his dissenting opinion felt that “the jurisdiction of the Court is possible to be established. On the General Act of 1928 he disagreed with the Court’s decision stating that it based its decision on a conclusion which might be justifiable in the present context, but which falls short of certainty required to fortify the decision against recurring doubts”.

With respect to Commonwealth reservation, he took the view that the Court never had the opportunity to decide on the validity or the otherwise of a reservation excluding disputes ratione personae. He felt that the Court had a duty to do justice and examine the validity of a reservation on objectively even while it held the view that the Court’s jurisdiction operated only within the parameters of the declarations and that if jurisdiction had to be proved to the hilt. He noted further that “An assessment of the terms of the Indian Commonwealth reservation (addition of the words “or has been” a Member of the Commonwealth of Nations), the absence of a reference to alternative means of peaceful settlement agreed upon or to be agreed upon, and a consideration of the circumstances under which the reservation was made together with the actual text, reveal a clear will of arbitrary exclusion and give the reservation an exceptional nature that puts it outside the purview of permissibility. I am compelled therefore to the conclusion that the reservation is invalid and cannot bar the Court’s jurisdiction”

Having held that the Commonwealth reservation as invalid, he also believed that it was severable from the rest of the reservations and the declaration of India. In his view various reservations made by India could be classified into distinct headings and the integrity of those other reservations would not be affected by striking out the impugned reservations. For this conclusion he relied upon the case decided by Supreme Court of India which he quoted: “On the other hand, if they are so distinct and separate that after striking out what is invalid, what remains is in itself is a complete code independent of the rest, then it will be upheld notwithstanding that the rest has become unenforceable.” (RMD Chamarbaugwala v. The Union of India, 1957, Supreme Court Reports, p.951).

In his view, striking out the Commonwealth reservation is unlikely to lead to unjust results for India by a reason of the continued performance of its remaining obligations under its declaration.

Judge Al-Khasawneh also held the view that the multilateral convention reservation presented by India would not debar the Court from exercising its jurisdiction “to the extent that the actions complained of by Pakistan would prima facie constitute breaches under customary international law.”

Judge Pirzada in his dissenting opinion first recounted the arguments submitted by Pakistan on facts and noted the denial by India and stated that these were not for comment.

He defended the Pakistani contention that Pakistan and India were both successors to British India and that the General Act of 1928 developed upon both of them and continue to apply India and Pakistan. He also observed that the conduct of India since 1947 upto 1999 amounted to an estoppels preventing India from objecting to the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice if no other forum was available.

On the Commonwealth reservation, it is his view that it was obsolete. He also felt that reservation is invalid and severable from other reservations made by India in its declaration of 1974. He also felt that the Indian denunciation of the General Act of 1928 was not valid. He held the view that the Court is competent to exercise jurisdiction under Article 17, 39 and 41 of the General Act.

He questioned India’s arguments on the applicability and validity of the Commonwealth reservation as lacking in good faith and unreasonable. He supported Pakistan’s contention that despite multilateral convention reservation of India, the Court could exercise jurisdiction in the case of complaints on violations of obligations against non-use of force under customary international law.

In conclusion he emphasized “that the parties are under obligation to settle in good faith their disputes including the dispute regarding the State of Jammu and Kashmir and in particular the dispute arising out of the Aerial Incident of 10 August 1999. He expressed the hope that taking inspiration from Jinnah and Gandhi “let India and Pakistan keep in view the ideals of the two great leaders and take prompt and effective measures to secure peace, security and justice in South Asia”.

1529. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs welcoming the decision of the International Court of Justice.

New Delhi, June 21, 2000.

Government of India welcomes the decision of the International Court of Justice in the Aerial Incident case filed by Pakistan against India regarding the shooting down of a military combat aircraft of Pakistan (Atlantique) over Indian air space on August 10, 1999. With a decisive 14 - 2 verdict, the Court has upheld India's submission that it had no jurisdiction in this matter.

India also welcomes the Court's observations regarding the Simla Agreement and the Lahore Declaration. Through its comments, the Court has vindicated India's stand on these landmark agreements, that are the very cornerstone of India-Pakistan relations. It is noteworthy that the Simla Agreement commits both countries to building trust and confidence, putting in place a stable structure of cooperation and addressing all outstanding issues through peaceful bilateral discussions. That is what India had sought to accomplish through the composite dialogue process that was established at our initiative. That was also the high purpose, for which Prime Minister Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee travelled to Lahore in February, 1999. India stands committed to dialogue and calls on Pakistan to create the proper environment for such a dialogue through cessation of cross-border terrorism and the abandonment of hostile propaganda.

Pakistan High Commissioner (PHC) invited me to a one-on-one lunch. Given the tradition that in the India-Pakistan context, i.e., High Commissioners interact with Foreign Secretaries and Deputy High Commissioners with the respective heads of the territorial divisions, PHC's invitation was not only a departure from tradition but an indication of a desire to take soundings on our current approaches on India-Pakistan relations and make comments on the current state of bilateral relations. With Foreign Secretary’s approval, I accepted the invitation and spent a couple of hours with him on July 11, 2000.

2. The main points which emerged during the lunch conversation are summarised below. As the discussion was not structured, these points were thrown up during ebb and flow of the conversation and not in the sequence given below:

(i) In response to my observation that I was still not fully certain in my mind about Pakistan's motivations/need to undertake Kargil, PHC remarked that Kargil should never have happened. [Comment: This was clearly his personal view. He was not conveying any "massage".]

(ii) PHC said that Musharraf was a soldier who had never expected to assume the office which he was now holding. Further, in line with his commando training he is a mission oriented persons. In response to my query if Musharraf was capable of evolving, PHC gave no definite answer though he did mention that the General's articulation was becoming a little more nuanced, e.g., whereas earlier he had said repeatedly that dialogue with India could only be on Kashmir, he was now saying that while Kashmir was the core issue and had to be discussed in a major way, other issues would also be discussed.

Drawing a comparison with Nawaz Sharif, PHC said that while Nawaz had good instincts on India-Pakistan relations, he did not have the ability or the stamina to deliver. Pointing to Nawaz Sharif's recent remark that if the coup had not occurred, Jammu & Kashmir would have been resolved by now, PHC said that this would have meant a resolution along the LOC. At this stage this was simply not acceptable to Pakistani public opinion. Nawaz Sharif himself did not have any intention of wanting to resolve Kashmir on the basis of the LOC; he had indicated as much to PHC himself. In contrast to such an approach, Musharraf was straightforward and would ensure that he delivered on all that he agreed to.

(iii) PHC said that the present lack of engagement between India and Pakistan was harmful to Pakistan but was also, perhaps, not in India's interest for it led to the development of a negative dynamic in both countries and within Pakistan it would encourage extremist forces. PHC said that he was conscious of our difficulties in engaging Pakistan. He had been told by many persons in Delhi that should the Government engage Pakistan, the Prime Minister would, no doubt, be asked, "kya ek baar dhoka khana kafi nahi tha". In fact, he had himself clearly conveyed this point to Musharraf. In this background, all that would be credible on his part to suggest was that in beginning an engagement with Pakistan, we could say that we would that we would test Pakistan's sincerity and should we find Pakistan to be insincere, we would withdraw from the dialogue. Also an engagement need not begin immediately. There were developments in respect of the situation on the LoC and we could wait and watch for some time before engaging in dialogue. [Comment: There is no doubt that PHC anticipates that once India engages in dialogue with Pakistan, it would not be easy to withdraw; hence, this subtle argument]

(iv) PHC said that once dialogue began, great thinking and effort would have to take place on how it would be sustained. The management of public opinion on both sides would have to be constructively undertaken. [Comment: I pointed out that the composite dialogue process was designed to ensure a sustained and comprehensive dialogue; he agreed. His thought process, however, did not indicate a certainty that in wanting to engage in dialogue, Pakistan wishes to go back to the comprehensive dialogue process. I deliberately did not probe this matter, as it would have been premature to have done so.]

(v) On my part, I told PHC that trust had to be restored. It was difficult to begin this restoration with Pakistan continuing to foment violence in Jammu & Kashmir and with Musharraf questioning the sincerity of PM. I referred to Musharraf's comments on PM's visit to the Minar-e-Pakistan. [Comment: PHC agreed that the comment of Musharraf was uncalled for. He said that prior to PM's visit to Lahore, he had himself recommended to his authorities that a visit to the Minar should be included in Prime Minister's programme.]

(vi) On cross-border terrorism, PHC said that once dialogue begins, we would have every right to put it on the table. [Comment: He did not deny infiltration or cross border terrorism.] I also pointed out the connotation which the use of the word Jehad has for India.

3. As PHC has already been in India for over three years, I asked him about his future plans. He said that the present Foreign Secretary, Inam-ul-Haque, retires in October but there was a possibility that he would be given an extension. Should that not happen, he implied that there was a possibility of his becoming the Foreign Secretary.

1531. Crash Message from High Commission of India in Pakistan to the Ministry of External Affairs.

From: Hicomind, Islamabad,

JS (IPA) from Acting High Commissioner

It was summoned to the MFA at 5.00 p.m. this afternoon. Councilor Akbaruddin accompanied me. DG (SA) Mohd. Haroon Shaukat handed me a Note Verbale, faxed herewith, “proposing immediate steps, including the early resumption of Foreign Secretary level talks, be taken to settle by peaceful means all disputes between the two countries”. The proposal was put in the context of ICJ judgement on the Atlantique case.

I replied in standard language, pointing out that India stood committed to resolving all outstanding issues with Pakistan through dialogue on the basis of the Simla Agreement and the Lahore Declaration. I added that consequent to Kargil the onus was on Pakistan to take steps to restore the trust that had been damaged, and to create a conducive atmosphere which alone would permit a meaningful dialogue to take place. I added, quoting statements made earlier, that such a dialogue should not be a public relations exercise but a bilateral relations exercise. I further added that we made our position on the Atlantique incident clear on several occasions and facts speak for themselves. On his part, Mohd. Haroon Shaukat insisted that Pakistan made this proposal on all seriousness and sincerity, and it stands committed to all previous international obligations.

Best wishes

NOTE OF THE PAKISTAN MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Government of Pakistan
Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

No. Ind(P-I)-VIII/9/99 July 14, 2000

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan presents its compliments to the High Commission of the Republic of India in Islamabad and has the honour to state that the International Court of Justice, in Its Judgement of 21 June 2000 in the CASE Concerning The Aerial Incident of 10th August 1999 (Pakistan v. India), has declared as follows in paragraph 51 to 55:

'51. Finally, the Court would recall that

“[t]here is a fundamental distinction between the acceptance by a State of the Court’s jurisdiction and the compatibility of particular acts with International law…. Whether or not States accept the jurisdiction of the Court, they remain in all cases responsible for acts attributable to them that violate the rights of other States” (Fisheries Jurisdiction (Spain v. Canada), Jurisdiction of the Court, Judgment, I.C.J. Reports 1998, p. 456, paras. 55-56)

52. As the Permanent Court of International Justice had already observed in 1929, and as the present Court has reaffirmed, “the judicial settlement of international disputes, with a view to which the Court has been established, is simply an alternative to the direct and friendly settlement of such disputes between the Parties;… consequently it is for the Court to facilitate, so far as is compatible with its Statute, such direct and friendly settlement” (case concerning the Free Zones of Upper Savoy and the District of Gex, Order of 19 August 1929, P.C.I.J., Series A, No.22, P.13; see also Frontier Dispute (Burkina Faso v. Republic of Mali, I.C.J. Reports 1986, p.577, para. 46, and Passage through the Great Belt (Finland v. Denmark), I.C.J. Reports 1991, p.20).

53. The Court’s lack of jurisdiction does not relieve States of their obligation to settle their disputes by peaceful means. The choice of those means rests with the parties under Article 33 of the United Nations Charter. They are nonetheless under an obligation to seek such a settlement, and to do so in good faith, in accordance with Article 2, paragraph 2, of the Charter.

54. As regards India and Pakistan, that obligation was restated more particularly in the Simla Accord of 2 July 1972, which provides that “the two countries are resolved to settle their differences by peaceful means through bilateral negotiations or by any other peaceful means mutually agreed upon between them.” Moreover, the Lahore Declaration of 21 February 1999 reiterated “the determination of both countries to implementing the Simla Agreement”.

55. Accordingly, the Court reminds the Parties of their obligation to settle their disputes by peaceful means, and in particular the dispute arising out of the aerial incident of 10 August 1999, in conformity with the obligations which they have undertaken (Cf. Fisheries Jurisdiction (Spain v. Canada), Jurisdiction of the Court, Judgment, ICJ, Reports 1998, p. 456, para. 56).

2. It may be noted from the contents of paragraph 53 of the judgment that the Court's lack of jurisdiction does not relieve States of their obligation to settle their disputes by peaceful means. Furthermore, by using the word "disputes" in plural in paragraph 55 of the judgment, the Court reminds Pakistan and India of their obligation to settle not only the case involving the shooting down by India of an unarmed plane of the Pakistan Navy inside Pakistan's air space on 10 August 1999 but also all other disputes pending between them.

3. The Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan reiterates the necessity of addressing all existing disputes between Pakistan and India for settlement by peaceful means. The Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan on its part also reiterates its readiness to use any and all of the means prescribed in Article 33 of the United Nations Charter for the purpose of settlement of the disputes between the two countries.

4. Accordingly, pursuant to the Judgment of the International Court of Justice, the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan proposes to the Government of the Republic of India that immediate steps, including the early resumption of Foreign Secretary level talks, be taken to settle by peaceful means all disputes between the two countries.

5. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of the Republic of India the assurances of its highest consideration...

14th July 2000

High Commission of the Republic of India
Islamabad.
Meeting between Joint Secretary (IPA) Vivek Katju and Pakistan Deputy High Commissioner Akbar Zeb.

New Delhi, July 18, 2000. [14.30 hrs]

Pakistan’s Deputy High Commissioner, Akbar Zeb (AZ), was called in to the Ministry by JS(IPA).

JS(IPA) said that he had received the message of sympathy from the Pakistan Foreign Minister addressed to EAM in connection with the recent Patna plane crash. JS(IPA) said that it would be conveyed to EAM. He also expressed appreciation for the message. JS(IPA) then expressed gratitude for the assistance rendered to shipwrecked Indian sailors retrieved by the Pakistan fishing vessel and for the medical attention provided to them by Pakistan medical personnel. He requested that our Mission in Islamabad be provided consular access to these sailors, some of whom were convalescing in a hospital at Pasni.

JS(IPA) said that he also wished to convey India’s response to the recent offer by the Pakistan Government for a resumption of dialogue. In this connection, he handed over a Note Verbale (attached) containing our response.

After perusal of the Note Verbale, AZ said that he wished to highlight the fact that this current offer for talks was made in all sincerity by the Pakistan Government. This was not an attempt to achieve propaganda. He said that as the Indian side would have noted the Pakistan authorities had not “gone to the press” on the issue, this itself should speak of their genuine “motives”. He said that the International Court of Justice (ICJ) had not considered the merits of the Atlantique case, and had in fact left it to the two parties concerned after invoking the principles enshrined in the Simla Agreement and the UN Charter. AZ said that it was “in this spirit” that the Pakistan side had made the offer for a resumption of dialogue. AZ also remarked that dialogue was something that could happen only if both parties agreed to it. He said that he also wished to comment briefly on the last paragraph of our Note Verbale and reiterated that while India had its position on the facts surrounding the Atlantique incident, Pakistan too maintained its position. He would, however, convey the Note Verbale to his authorities.

In his reply, JS(IPA) said that we did take notice of the fact that the Pakistan side had not gone to the press with its offer for a resumption of talks. He assured AZ that the Indian side had taken the contents of the Pakistani Note Verbale (received through our Mission in Islamabad) very seriously. He said it had been discussed “at great length within our system”. He reiterated the Indian position on resumption of dialogue by saying that to enable a meaningful dialogue a conducive environment would have to be created, for which Pakistan has to end its support to terrorist infiltration and hostile propaganda. He said that this has been our position in the past and we continue to abide by it. JS(IPA) also said that he wishes to reaffirm India’s commitment to the Simla Agreement and the Lahore Declaration, both of which he characterized as fundamental to our bilateral relations. With regard to the facts of the Atlantique incident, JS(IPA) drew attention to the reference made to it in our Note Verbale. JS(IPA) also emphasized that on the Indian side as well, there was no interest in publicizing this current exchange (i.e. the exchange of Notes Verbale regarding resumption of dialogue).

In his reply, AZ said that he wished to refer to the two points, i.e. of terrorism and propaganda, that had been raised by JS(IPA). He wished to reiterate that there was no official involvement in the former and that there had always been a difference of “perception”. He also said that there were differences with regard to facts surrounding the Atlantique case. It was these differences in perception that needed to be discussed. JS(IPA) replied that he would convey the Pakistani position to the Indian authorities.

At the end of the meeting AZ said that he also wished to remind Indian Government about certain other outstanding issues. He listed these as follows:

- The issue of airport passes.
- The release of three Tablighi members, including a Pak Airforce Sergeant who apparently “strayed” into Indian territories and were picked up from the border in Ganganagar.
- The Exchange of mentally retarded prisoners.
- The request by Pakistani Sikhs to visit India
- The Issue regarding the post of an external auditor under the Chemical Weapons Convention.

J.S. (IPA) ended the meeting by assuring AZ that he would pursue these matters.

Note handed over by J.S (IPA) to the Pakistan Deputy High Commissioner as referred to in the Note above:

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and has the honour to refer to Note Verbale No. Ind (P-I)-VIII/9/99 of July 14, 2000 of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the High Commission of India in Islamabad.

India has carefully studied the entire judgement of the International Court of Justice in the case concerning the Aerial Incident of 10th August, 1999 (Pakistan Vs. India). As a responsible and mature State that is committed to international peace and order, India has always adhered to and conducted its international relations on the basis of the principles set out in the judgement of the Court in this case. In its relations with Pakistan, India has desired to establish trust and confidence, build a stable structure of cooperation and address outstanding issues.

India believes that the Simla Agreement of 1972 is the cornerstone of India-Pakistan relations. It is significant that India and Pakistan reiterated their commitment to the Simla Agreement in the Lahore Declaration of 1999. India reaffirms its faith and its full commitment to the Simla Agreement and the Lahore Declaration which inter alia emphasize the peaceful resolution of outstanding issues through direct bilateral dialogue. India regrets that Pakistani leaders have expressed reservations on these documents which are fundamental to the establishment of good neighbourly relations between the two countries.

The International Court of Justice has clarified in its decision that under Article 33 of the UN Charter, the choice of the means of settling outstanding issues rests with the concerned countries. Further, the Court has emphasised that any settlement must be sought in good faith and in accordance with Article 2, Paragraph 2 of the Charter. The thrust of this paragraph is clear. It demands of Pakistan to ensure that dialogue is held in good faith. The sponsorship of cross-border terrorism, the call for Jehad and continuing vicious propaganda against India cannot create an environment in which meaningful dialogue can be undertaken. India once again calls upon Pakistan to stop cross-border terrorism and abandon hostile propaganda so that an environment appropriate for dialogue is created.

The facts regarding the shooting down of Pakistan's military combat Atlantique aircraft on August 10, 1999 have already been made clear by India. The aircraft had intruded deep into Indian airspace. On being intercepted by Indian aircraft it engaged in aggressive manoeuvres. The actions taken by the Indian aircraft in response to the action of the Atlantique were in accordance with well known operating procedures.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

High Commission for the Islamic Republic of Pakistan,
New Delhi.

1533. Record of Discussions during High Commissioner Shri V.K. Nambiar’s initial call on Foreign Minister Abdul Sattar.

FM Abdul Sattar was accompanied by S.O(India) in the Pakistan Foreign Office as note taker; HC was accompanied by the undersigned.

Sattar: After welcoming HC and wishing him a personally pleasant and professionally rewarding stay in Islamabad, said that he had a certain, sympathy with former HC Shri G. Parthasarathy. He had known him from long. Unfortunately, his last 8-9 months were not productive, and were the victim of a given situation. He hoped that with HC’s help, some amelioration in the situation can be brought about.

Several friendly countries had suggested to Pakistan to use back-channels of communication with India. He had told them -- including US Assistant Secretary of State Pickering-- that both countries had professionals in each other’s capitals. He had no reservation on back-channel contacts, but those with assigned responsibilities can do the job better. He hoped that he could use High Commissioner and the Pak HC in Delhi for this purpose, when India was ready. Till then, he would wait.

HC: Noted that this was his first official meeting after presentation of Credentials. He recalled having met Sattar in the mid 70s, when he (HC) was on deputation to Ministry of Commerce in Delhi and Sattar was member of a delegation led by then Pak Commerce Secretary Ijaz Naik; he had also met Sattar in Kuala Lumpur, when he had come for an NGO Seminar. He had also served with Ambassador Ashraf Jehangir Qazi in Beijing.

HC said that he was conscious that the last few months of his predecessor’s stay were tight in terms of professional requirements. He was coming to Islamabad from Delhi. He was carrying no special message, but he was optimistic - at present there were certain exigencies that we feel in respect of the Pakistani position, which he hoped shall be overcome. It would be HC’s endeavour to see that matters between the two countries do not get worse, that normal courtesies and functions were preserved. He agreed that the direct track was the most efficacious way for contact, and on our side we have no difficulties of interaction through our respective missions.

Sattar: said that we do not need to re-visit the background. We need to take a fresh look, for the tragedy was that for much time since independence, we are going around in circles - sometimes normalization first, sometimes Kashmir first - he did not think either course was more productive than the other. But the priority was to keep the situation stable. Stabilisation of the LOC, resulting from the ceasefire of December 17, 1971 - should be a mutual priority.

There have been openings, such as the Hizb ceasefire of July 24. Pakistan did not criticize Hizb’s decision. It was a surprise announcement, not done after coordination with the other freedom fighting groups. The UJC had expressed reservations at first. This seemed to be an opportunity for some forward movement. That had passed, but it need not be the last one. The perception in Pakistan, which India may not agree with, was that the opportunity was wasted largely because of technical reasons. India used it for dividing the Kashmiri freedom movement. A sensible approach would be to utilize such opportunities in a meaningful way.

Pakistan was committed to the February ‘99 Declaration, which represents a base from which to start. Why it did not fructify is now a matter of history. But we should try to bind the ideas contained in the Simla Agreement, the Declaration, the Joint Statement and the MOU for a new beginning. Pakistan tends to emphasise the sentence “the two sides will intensify efforts for a resolution......”, while New Delhi may put a finger on something else. But, as and when the two sides feel, we can revert to these documents, we can consider various steps.
In the context of stabilization, one aspect is preventing police organizations from taking over bilateral relations. When he was in Delhi (as High Commissioner), within a few weeks of his arrival, there (was) a serious incident involving one of (PHC’s) staffers. He had spoken to (then) Foreign Secretary Jagat Mehta and mentioned to PM Morarji Desai that we should not use violence to settle minor scores. Things happen which should not be acceptable to either side. It is not easy to do anything about it. But he has seen this going on for 25 years. During his second time in Delhi, there was an incident in Islamabad, and the Foreign Secretary had read out the riot act to him. We should do what we can, but unfortunately things are not totally in control of the Foreign Offices. Agencies play their role. He believed that (the Indian) Foreign Office, and knew that the Pakistani Foreign Office, does not authorize such activities. Agencies play this game, from vengeance or whatever. Beyond that, he did not know what can be done at this time. He sought ideas from HC.

Sattar continued, the present (Pak) Government is engaged basically in the domestic agenda. Pakistan has had democratic governments, whose agendas were personal rather than national. This had brought them to a difficult pass. Pakistan had a mountain of debt, and it would take a generation to get out of that. Because too much of state revenues are pre-empted by debt servicing, other development tasks get neglected. Committed as the present Government is to more functional democracy, it has taken on very difficult tasks, but he was personally glad that the Government has persevered and withstood pressures. Finally, the business community has understood the Government's seriousness on taxes and documentation. Improving governance cannot be done in two years and one month (the time remaining for Gen. Musharraf to restore democracy, according to Supreme Court verdict) but the task has to be attempted. It would cause hardship to some people, but they were proceeding on the presumption that 90% will benefit.

The process of accountability was becoming difficult because of a global environment that permits people to secret funds abroad, off-shore and on-shore. He had told (Commonwealth SG) McKinnon that apart from chastising countries about democracy, the Commonwealth should help countries overcome corruption. Public chastising was not the answer - confidential counseling, technical assistance is of greater use. The Pakistan Government was committed to its programme of rectification and reforms. Pakistan has taken into account the world environment, that military (accountability) courts are not acceptable. But civil courts have their own problems. In the last 10 months, NAB has persuaded defaulters to return Rs. 24 billion, with an equal amount rescheduled for future return. He felt that there is general agreement, both internally and abroad, that things are moving forward. But it needed to be understood that there can be no instant results. Pakistan is not alone in lamenting the situation; the UN, last year, and the G-77 Havana Summit last April had also called for tracing of illegal funds stashed abroad. The Warsaw Meeting of the Community of Democracies had similarly noted that corruption corrodes democracies. But international responses were very slow. Pakistan had not asked McKinnon for exemption from Commonwealth procedures, including suspension from its Councils. But in spite of its own statements denouncing corruption, the Commonwealth does not seem inclined to do anything.

These then were the items on Pakistan's agenda. The Musharraf Government had 14 Ministers of which 12 were civilian technocrats and 2 military technocrats. It was amazing how much time has been spent on domestic policy issues, especially devolution, in Cabinet meetings, which has been thoroughly discussed. Some tend to conclude that devolution plan is akin to Ayub Khan's Basic Democracy. This is not the case. The Provincial elections will be direct and party based. At the local level, the most important element is that the DC will cease to be the Head of Administration in the Districts. The British administrative legacy has not worked in Pakistan's case. There would be transfer of resources from the Centre to the Provinces and from the Provinces to the Districts, which would then be put to the best use. This will require a certain amount of self-education for the Nazim (administrator) to function effectively, as also for the DC to change his role to that of a coordinator. Pakistan will be spending $ 135 million on new electoral roles and ID cards to eliminate bogus voting. The voting age is to be reduced to 18 years.

HC: said that in India too, we are concerned with similar social introspection. In a sense, we are working through the traditional framework, by strengthening certain institutions, through a process of decentralization of power to the States, and empowerment of the lower levels of society. The focus of our politics is thus also changing. In this process, foreign policy plays an important but concomitant role.

Sattar: India is fortunate to have a Prime Minister who is an icon of personal integrity. The BJP in general, not having been in power, brings with it clean credentials. India has also the advantage that its electorate has become quite sophisticated in course of time. Power is a terrible thing in a way - if used to promote personal agendas, the country is very badly served. He had often told people in Pakistan that it was remarkable how many Indian Prime Ministers had no property of their own. He hoped that the Musharraf Government would be able to get across the impression that crime, at any level, carries the danger of punishment.
HC: said he had taken note of Sattar’s statements regarding the Lahore Declaration. India remains committed to the composite dialogue process, but the territory of trust transgressed by events subsequent to Lahore had to be regained before meaningful dialogue can be resumed.

Sattar: said that we need to do some introspection. Why is it that Pakistan and India have never succeeded in resolving issues bilaterally? In contrast to getting a settlement of the Kutch boundary through mediation in two years (with Pakistan getting only 10% of the area in dispute, yet accepting the accord) there is Sir Creek on which 31 years have passed in bilateral discussions without resolution.

HC: wondered aloud whether this represents an inability to agree upon something that has already been agreed earlier.

Sattar: Sir Creek had been acknowledged as a problem on both sides. This is where frustration sets in among professionals at a certain stage. So the interests of both countries would be better served if they can reach understandings. He had often thought about the contrast in the approaches of India and Pakistan. Powerful countries think that they know what is right; while countries not so powerful seek solutions through international law and justice. How do countries graduate from (one) level to the other? Gradually the world is moving in that direction, at the UN etc. Then there is the endeavour to induct other criteria, and norms, rules, regulations are often weighted in favour of the developed world. The WTO is an example. But the struggle for the developing world is relentless, in seeking an equitable order.

HC: raised the matter of the 11 seamen of the sunken ship "Jal Kalyan", who had been rescued after an ordeal at sea by Pakistani fishermen and brought to Pasni. While expressing our gratitude to the Pakistani fishermen and the District authorities for rescuing the seamen and treating them, noted that we have not yet been granted consular access even after two months. [Sattar: questioned the note taker, SO (India) in MFA, about background, which he said was being dealt with by another officer. Promised to look into it and expedite.]

Sattar: referred to SAARC and said that all South Asian countries had worked very hard, with Bangladesh in the lead to make a success of this organization. However, in the present situation there was a danger that the Association will wither away. The visiting BDFS Shafi Sami was very concerned. He had suggested that Sami could speak to two other equally concerned SAARC countries, Nepal and Sri Lanka, to discuss amongst themselves what should be done. He hoped that India could help these three countries in rescuing SAARC from going defunct. He had met their Ministers at Cartagena, and they were very disturbed.
At Cartagena, he and EAM had come face to face. He knew EAM and respected him, but had deliberately limited his conversation to pleasantries. He did not want to put him in an embarrassing situation by requesting a meeting. In New York too (at forthcoming Millennium Summit) he will do the same in case they run into each other. He had heard stories and comments later about the non-interaction at Cartagena, but that did not diminish Sattar's respect for EAM.

1534. Extract From the Letter of British Prime Minister Tony Blair to Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee

10 DOWNING STREET
LONDON SW 1A 2AA

THE PRIME MINISTER

29 September 2000

Dear Prime Minister

I was very sorry that we were not able to meet at the Millennium Summit in New York. There were several issues I had hoped we could discuss.

I am delighted at the way in which relations between Britain and India have flourished over the past year. The pace of Ministerial visits in both directions has increased. Stephen Byers, John Prescott, Robin Cook and Jack Straw have all returned from their visits to India with strong impression of a dynamic and forward looking economy and society. Our bilateral cooperation has also developed well with the launch of the Indo - UK Round Table and the establishment of a Joint Working Group on Terrorism. I welcome this type of close, practical cooperation. I hope we can combine it with more joint action in international forums. One possible area might be to work together on implementation of the Brahimi Report on UN peace-keeping.

I am interested to hear how you see the situation in Kashmir. Your recent efforts to engage in dialogue with Kashmiris offered real hope. I know from my own experience that such peace initiatives entail political risk, and I can well understand the difficulties and pressures that you face, especially after the terroristic massacres at the beginning of August. I am sure you are right to continue your efforts to open dialogue with all concerned, including the Pakistanis, to bring peace to Kashmir.

We will continue to spell out to the Pakistani authorities that violence and terrorism do not solve problems anywhere and that their support for terrorists active in Kashmir is unacceptable. Each step that you can take to address the concerns of the Kashmiris will help to undermine the terrorists' support base and contribute to long-term peace in Kashmir.

I have your invitation to me to visit India very much in mind. As I mentioned to Jaswant Singh when I saw him in New York on 7 September, I hope to be able to take it up sooner rather than later.

Yours sincerely

Tony

His Excellency Atal Bihari Vajpayee

1535. Excerpts from the Address by the Chief Executive (Pakistan) to the OIC Contact Group on Jammu and Kashmir at the Ninth Islamic Summit.

Mr. Chairman,
Excellencies,
Honourable Secretary General,
Distinguished delegates,

I wish to pay the highest tribute to the Kashmiri leadership and to the courage and fortitude of the freedom struggle, especially the All Parties Hurriyet Conference. In the face of relentless repression, they have remained steadfast in demanding their inalienable fundamental right to self-determination, which is sanctified by the United Nations. I welcome Mir Waiz Umer Farooq and Maulana Abbas Ansari who have been able to represent the Hurriyet, while their other APHC colleagues who were invited could not do so because of denial of permission to travel.

The right of the Kashmiri people to self-determination is derived from international law, which the international community expressly guaranteed to them through the UN Security Council. India itself made a solemn commitment for holding a plebiscite under United Nations auspices. It refused to honour that promise when it realized that it would not be able to manipulate such a plebiscite in its favour.

Since then, India has used both force and manipulation to maintain its hold on Kashmir. Its response to the Kashmiri freedom struggle has been an exponential escalation of violence and repression against innocent and unarmed Kashmiri people. Today more than 700,000 Indian military and paramilitary forces in Kashmir are engaged in an effort to subjugate ten million Kashmiris. There is no parallel in recent history for such a concentration of forces to quell a freedom movement.

* * *

In its frustration at its inability to suppress the freedom struggle, India now seeks to malign the noble and heroic struggle of Kashmiris by telling the world that those who resist Indian illegal occupation of the State are "terrorists" or "Islamic fundamentalists." This argument will have a familiar ring. The Palestinians who fight against the occupation of their land have also been given the same appellation. This is no coincidence. Not long ago, a Minister of the Indian Government visiting Israel also spoke of the common threat of "Islamic terrorism" faced by the two countries. Not surprisingly, too, India has sought the help of the same country in suppressing the Kashmir freedom movement.

The real terrorists, of course, are not those who struggle against injustice and oppression but those who perpetrate atrocities against a civilian population which does not submit to the illegal occupation of its land. It is the Indian occupation forces who are engaged in state sponsored terrorism against the people of Kashmir.

India has misread international trends, if it feels encouraged in seeking a military solution of Kashmir or rejecting dialogue with Pakistan. Kashmiri aspirations for freedom will not be extinguished, nor can the international legality established by the UN resolutions lapse.

The Kashmir question, which involves the life and future of the millions of people of the State, has also been the root cause of tensions in South Asia as recognize by the world community. Its settlement is an indispensable prerequisite for peace and stability in the region. Pakistan is firmly committed to seeking a solution of the Kashmir dispute in accordance with the wishes of the Kashmiri people and international norms of justice.

1536. Sou moto statement by the External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh in the Lok Sabha.

New Delhi, December 4, 2000.

Hon'ble Members would recall that on November 19, 2000, Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee had announced that the Indian security forces would not initiate operations against militants in Jammu and Kashmir during the holy month of Ramazan. He had also said that India would continue with its efforts to normalise the situation and had urged a return to the path of peace. He had then also expressed a hope that, along the LOC, infiltration would cease.

On December 2, 2000, the Government of Pakistan responded, through its Foreign Secretary, Mr. Inamul Haq, who in a press conference issued a statement conveying that their armed forces "deployed along the Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir will observe maximum restraint". The High Commissioner of India in Islamabad was subsequently invited to the Pakistan
Foreign Office and handed over a copy of the statement.

I would like to underline here, for the benefit of the Hon'ble Members that the Government of Pakistan has clarified to its media that "there is nothing new but there are new ways of saying things", and that there was not any "basic shift in the policies of Pakistan". We, too, do not find anything substantially different in Pakistan's announcement from what they have earlier been saying.
As the Hon'ble Members are aware, our security forces have always exercised utmost restraint in the face of persistent provocation and violations of the LOC.
They will continue to do so. Attempts, however, to misuse this phase and push terrorists will be robustly met. The government wishes to reiterate that there is no role here of any kind of any third party.

The Government hopes that this statement of Pakistan would be a precursor to a meaningful change in its attitude. We expect Pakistan to address our concerns and also of the international community about cross-border terrorism, infiltration into India, and aiding and abetting of violence. We note that Pakistan in reaffirming its commitment to "earlier agreements". That is why a clear reaffirmation of and adherence to the Simla Agreement, and the Lahore Declaration would only be logical.

A dialogue, too, has been proposed. Hon'ble Members are, no doubt aware, India has always been the initiator of a dialogue and remains committed to the earliest resumption of the composite dialogue process between the two countries.

It is our hope that with all the initiatives for restoration of peace and normalcy taken by Prime Minister A.B. Vajpayee, Pakistan would now be persuaded to creating an environment suitable for resuming our composite dialogue.

Hon'ble Members are also aware of the government's readiness to have talks with all parties and groups in Jammu & Kashmir, including also the militants. I take this opportunity to reiterate the government's resolve in this regard. The modalities of these talks, the how, when and in what form, is for the government to determine. Let me make it absolutely clear that there is, in this, no room for what are being termed as "tripartite talks".

In conclusion I wish to reiterate the government's approach in regard to the initiative taken by the PM on November 19. We are committed to the peace and will remain steadfast in our approach. Upon conclusion of the month Ramzan the government will review the situation and plan its further course of action.

Pakistan wants to defuse tension and resolve all issues with India through talks, the Foreign Office Spokesman Aziz Ahmad Khan told BBC in an interview on December 29, 2000. He said Pakistan want to “cool down the situation and resolve all issues with India through talks.” Pakistan is capable of throwing every kind of aggression, he insisted and added “unfortunately, India has been escalating the situation from the very beginning.” Mr. Khan said India had reduced the level of diplomatic relations by recalling its High Commissioner. It also brought about 50 per cent reduction in the strength of the High Commission. Moreover India had stopped the bus and train services and flights. It also deployed its forces on the forward positions, escalating the tensions further, he said.

Mr. Aziz said: “We want that all the troops and aircraft that are now at the forward positions be withdrawn to the peacetime positions. We want the atmosphere to be made conducive so that the issues could be resolved through dialogue.” To a question whether possibilities exist to avert the war, he said: “We, on our part, are trying our best to avert the war and resolve all the issues peacefully.” Mr. Aziz said: “We have made defensive movements, but we say that war is not the proper way.” “We, on our part, are trying our level best and have held talks with the UN, the OIC and different countries to use their influence and try to improve the environment. We can defend ourselves if war is imposed on us,” he added.

Editor’s Note: Separately, the spokesman for the President of Pakistan Maj. Gen. Rashid Qureshi told the BBC on December 31 that any Indian military strike against Pakistan “will be regarded as an act of war”. If India makes the mistake of launching an attack, air or ground, or anything on the land frontier, or violates the air frontier with Pakistan, Pakistan will respond in a reciprocal fashion, Qureshi said. “Pakistan will consider that an act of war,” was his response to the Indian threat to launch military action in retaliation for the attack on Indian parliament. He insisted that the groups in Pakistan calling for the freedom of Kashmir were not involved in the parliament attack in New Delhi. There were no terrorist camps in Pakistan, he said adding that Islamabad had offered to cooperate with a probe into who was behind the attack on the Indian parliament.
Dear Vivek,

I am enclosing a record of the conversation I had with Foreign Secretary Inam ul-Haq on Saturday 30.12.2000. I had called FS the same day on sampark to report major points of this conversation.

2. While Inam seemed to be fairly open and forthcoming in his conversation with me, I am not sure how au fait he is with latest developments in respect of the contacts between Ambassador Qazi and Indian leaders. There has recently been some diplomatic cross talk about the extent to which Inam is involved in the nitty gritty of the military regime's Kashmir policy. The diplomatic corps here have also displayed a prurient interest in the relations between Foreign Minister Abdul Sattar and Inam. My own assessment is that both are being utilised optimally by the military regime in the management of Kashmir and India policy but in different ways. Sattar is perhaps less involved in the day-to-day management of affairs at the Foreign Office as in the marketing of the Kashmir policy with political groups within the country. We find Sattar making a detailed expose of the proceedings of the National Security Council in the local media as well as in some of the consultations with political grouping including the POK leadership. As Foreign Secretary, Inam would appear to be concerned with detailed fine-tuning of background and option papers from the Foreign Office angle. There are, however, indications that the Foreign Office is getting more space to deal with the policy issues on relations with India as well as on the Kashmir question.

3. On the key question of tackling the rightwing parties, however, I cannot see Sattar becoming involved in any substantive way. The reason for this would appear to be the extent to which the Army has now become enmeshed with the right-wing religious groups. But the question is whether at all there is any intention to take on these elements. We have been receiving information to suggest that that though there is division among the top leadership, the Chief Executive himself is inclined to take them on. It also appears that while he has the sympathy of close colleagues like DG ISI General Mahmud Ahmed, institutional constraints prevent the latter from taking any frontal position for the moment. Of the rest the configurations within the top uniformed leadership is unclear and at best split equally. In this connection I am enclosing an article in the latest issue of The Friday Times which carries interesting information about the connections within the "other ranks" of the Pakistani Army of Ikhwan leader Maulana Akram Awan. What is highly striking is the suggestion that these and other religious and militant groups are getting their "signals" from within the army. Other facts corroborate this suggestion including the report that the Lashkar-e-Tayyaba was allowed to lead the Id ul Fitr prayers at the Qaddhafi Stadium in Lahore at which not only were they present with their armed bandest but that they were, with the acquiescence of the local police, actually subjecting the local population to body searches etc to fulfil their own security requirements. All this could hardly have been possible without clearance at the highest level in Lahore, possibly of General Aziz himself. Added to this is the report of Aziz's meeting with Qazi Husain Ahmad almost at the same time as the meeting between Major General Akram of the ISI. We are not sure which meeting came first and whether these meetings carried the same or opposing agendas. The fact is the Qazi remains unchecked though somewhat muted in his statements. These and other reports add grist to the strong rumours of major differences within the top levels of the Pakistani army. The impending reshuffle at the top level of the army hierarchy - due to take place by the middle of the month - should give us an idea of which way the dice has fallen.

Warm regards,

Record of the Meeting with Inam ul Haq,
Foreign Secretary of Pakistan
Foreign Office
30.12.2000

The conversation with Pakistan Foreign Secretary was informal and without any set agenda. At the outset, after conveying Id-ul-Fitr good wishes, I mentioned that this was the first time I was meeting him after my recent visit to New Delhi. I was sure he would have had briefings from his own Mission in New Delhi about the contents of the meetings and discussions Ambassador Ashraf Qazi was having with Indian leaders and officials. I referred to a Jang report put out some days earlier wherein the Foreign Secretary had been quoted as saying the Indian High Commissioner had not briefed him on his consultations in New Delhi. Inam commented on the character of the Jang journalist Saleh Zafar and explained how difficult it was to keep him out of the way.

2. I said I carried no special message from New Delhi but I certainly had the opportunity to brief the leaders at all levels of the current situation in relations from the point of view of the High Commission. There were many questions asked of me and I had also taken time to be briefed on latest developments as viewed from the Indian side. I gave Inam an idea of the persons I had met during my stay in Delhi. He said that seemed to me more than they managed to do when their HOMs were here. I said it was clear High Commissioner Ashraf J Qazi was not inactive. He had been meeting quite a few Indian leaders and though there was little in the media about these meetings he was getting access and insight into a lot of views both officially and non-officially. I said that while I did have a set of talking points as a result of my latest consultations and while the substance of these talking points was not very mysterious, however I would like to point out that these responses were given prior to Red Fort attack (by Lashkar-e-Tayyaba.). I personally felt that the Lashkar attack on the Red Fort had created an altogether changed situation. I expected that this event would affect our assessment of Pakistan's overall intentions regarding pursuing a dialogue with India. Here, Inam replied by first expressing consternation at the statements made by "these organisations" (Who are these organisations? he also asked rhetorically) to launch attacks on the Prime Minister's office in India. He said they were extremely stupid statements. The government would like to distance itself from these statements and ruled out any suggestion that there might have been any official complicity at any level in the actions of these bodies. I explained to him that it was the firm belief and clear assessment of concerned agencies and officials in India that the Lashkar-e-Tayyaba could not have even contemplated undertaking an action such as the one it took in the Red Fort without a go-ahead from official agencies in Pakistan, at the very least of the ISI. If what the Foreign Secretary said was to be considered correct and to be believed, then it was only worse in that it could mean they have no control over these organisations. How is it then that there had not been any clear denunciation of these organisations or of their actions and no expression of any determination to put them down? It should be clear that only such action would carry credibility. Inam said he understood that this was necessary and they would be looking into what action would have to be taken in this regard.

3. I said that I did not carry any message from India for the Chief Executive but I did have a set of talking points. Of these the short point was the need for a clear reaffirmation at the highest level by the Chief Executive himself of the Lahore process. Now that we have this new development, there will also have to be a clear stand on it. On the question of affirmation of the Lahore process Inam said this had been done at the official level many times. He agreed that there had been no public statement by the Chief Executive of Lahore. He said it should be possible to think in terms of such a reaffirmation on a joint basis. We could work out a document. I said the question was not of a document but of whether or not an existing commitment was accepted by the Chief Executive.

4. Inam then spoke of the possibility of the APHC visiting Pakistan. I said there were press reports to the effect that they might be making a visit but I had no official confirmation about this so far. I asked how he saw the development. He said they were not clear what the APHC was planning to do or even of the direction in which the APHC was thinking. He said he was not sure if the APHC itself had any clear ideas on what they would be pressing for in the discussions here. As far as he could see the Kashmir question was not going to be resolved at any early date or in any quick manner. This was going to take a long time and would required arduous discussions. The main point was the need to talk.

5. Inam mentioned that he would like to suggest that the Indian Foreign Secretary should agree to a courtesy call by High Commissioner Ashraf Qazi. There had been no formal meeting for a long time between the two and he was at pains to understand why there should be a problem over a meeting of this kind. I said I did not see any meeting. In fact the impression seemed to be the other way around. It was the High Commissioner who seemed to be bypassing the MEA. In any case, I said I would take this matter up with the Foreign Secretary. (There was a brief conversation about the appointment of the new Indian Foreign Secretary and whether she had done Pakistan before. Inam expressed the confidence that institutional structure in India being what it was, there would be little difficulty for the new FS to get into right form soon enough. He asked me when FS would be taking up his new assignment. I said it was not clear but it could take a few months.)

6. Bringing back the conversation to the militant bodies in Pakistan and their activities, I said I had been asked when in India if it was my assessment that these groups were getting out of control. I had given my assessment that I did not think so. Also I had been asked about the nature of the thinking within the army. I mentioned to him my own assessment given to persons in India that it was my view that the army remained highly disciplined and united at the top. Inam said that while there were differences of viewpoints within the army these were not any different from those in any other organisation. These differences also did not affect its ability to function in an efficient and disciplined manner. About the various militant organisations and their influence, he continued to stress that the more militant and extreme organisations operated on the fringe of society and their influence had been exaggerated. He then spoke of the Ikhwan, which had announced a march on Islamabad by Id ul Fitr day, a programme which has since been defused at the personal intervention of the Minister for Religious Affairs. When I expressed my impression that this body seemed to have much following in the army, he said it was not so much the serving officers who were influenced by the Ikhwan as the retired officers and their men. He said a large portion of enlisted men came from the Chakwal area. This accounted for the influence of the organisation. I made reference to some of the critical comments made by Qazi Husain Ahmad. He said that was a different matter and that the Qazi was an adept operator. He asked whether I had met him and said I would find him interesting even though his views would predictably be a little unpalatable for me. About the Chief Executive himself, Inam's view was that he was a straightforward and "simple" person who thought along a narrow bandwidth. He also wished to give a clear impression to his interlocutors that he was firmly in charge. Of course Inam admitted he had the usual susceptibilities deriving from the armed forces as an institution. Interestingly, here Inam, rather suddenly, mentioned as a parallel the Reaganite idea of "evil empire" and said that Musharraf felt that the "enemy" had to be clearly identified and firmly engaged. I referred to the comment made by the Chief Executive that India was not sincere and asked whether this was a realistic basis for engaging in a dialogue. In case however, he is a person who expresses his views clearly and forthrightly, it should also be possible for him to modify his views swiftly in the light of circumstances. To this comment, Inam was quick to respond by saying, the CE found it difficult to retract once he adopted a particular line. I asked (indirectly) whether there was any sense that there had been outside influences affecting his judgment. Inam replied saying there is no real sense of the regime being under outside pressure.
7. I returned to bilateral issues and informed him that the recently announced withdrawals by Pakistani forces along the LoC were not finding complete acceptance in India as genuine. To this he responded by saying that a brigade had been withdrawn from Muzaffarabad and relocated at Mangla. This brigade had earlier in the year been inducted during the talk from the Indian side of “hot pursuit.” I said there was no real likelihood of any withdrawals by India as long as it was our assessment that infiltrations from across the LoC remained unchecked.

8. Inam informed me that he hoped to be able to fix a meeting with the Chief Executive prior to his expected foreign tour on January 7. He said there was a need for such a meeting even from the “optical” angle. In some other rambling comments he spoke of Indian TV programme like “Face to Face” and “The Big Fight” where he had watched a recent interview with Ms. Uma Bharati. He expressed interest in the wide range of opinions expressed both by the interviewers as well as those from the audience. There was also some reference to recent blasts in Lahore and other cities in Pakistan. He also made some references to Indian senior leaders. During the conversation he made the curious comment that Pakistan had erred in the past in making correct evaluations off many senior Indian leaders. Some of these needed correction. He mentioned in this regard two names: Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel and Shri Lal Krishna Advani.

9. The meeting lasted an hour. There was no one else present.

1539. Telephonic Talks between Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee and Pakistan Chief Executive Pervez Musharraf.

New Delhi, February 1, 2001.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Atal Behari Vajpayee, and the Pakistani Chief Executive, Gen. Pervez Musharraf, established their first direct contact by speaking to each other over telephone on February 1, 2001.

The five-minute conversation, the first after the October 1999 military coup in Pakistan, took place in the context of the Pakistani humanitarian assistance to the victims of the Gujarat earthquake. The Prime Minister “assured the Chief Executive of India’s continuing desire to build a good neighbourly relationship with Pakistan”.

The initiative for the conversation was taken by Gen. Musharraf, who conveyed his sympathy at the great loss of life caused by the earthquake. “The Prime Minister thanked the Chief Executive for Pakistan’s assistance. This gesture was greatly appreciated by the people of India,” the statement said.

While the Indian Officials maintained that the initiative for the talks came from Musharraf, Pakistan media said that “Mr. Vajpayee called Gen. Musharraf to express gratitude and thanks for the relief supplies and Pakistan’s offer to send more goods if India so desired”.

Statement of Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee in both Houses of Parliament regarding Jammu & Kashmir.

As Hon'ble Members would recollect, Rashtrapatiji during his address to the Joint Sitting of both the Houses of Parliament had given voice to the Government's approach to the whole question of Jammu & Kashmir. He had then, amongst other things, shared with the Hon'ble Members of Parliament that:

"The Government is pursuing a multi-pronged strategy to bring peace and normalcy in Jammu & Kashmir. As part of this, it launched a major peace mission on November 19, 2000, by announcing a unilateral non-initiation of combat operations in the State during the holy month of Ramzan. This bold initiative was extended twice up to February 26, 2001. As anticipated, this was warmly welcomed by the people of Jammu & Kashmir, who are longing for an end to militancy and violence in their beautiful State. The international community has also given overwhelming support, because it sees in it yet another demonstration of India's sincere commitment to a peaceful and permanent solution to the Kashmir issue."

Rashtrapatij had also then informed the Hon'ble Members that:

"Militancy in Jammu & Kashmir is now increasingly confined to foreign mercenary groups. This has widened the scope for democratic activity in the State. The people of the State participated enthusiastically in the recent Panchayat elections. I reiterate the Government's readiness to have talk with every group in the State that abjures violence."

The Govt. has decided to pursue this path by initiating talks with various groups in J&K.

The Government has seriously addressed the question of continuing with the peace process and further extending the period of non-initiation of combat operation by our security forces. In this regard, the Government has benefited by the detailed briefing of and consultations with all political parties that it had on February 21, 2001.

Having examined all aspects of the question in its totality, the Government has decided to further extend the period up till the end of May. Let this opportunity not be missed by all those that desire peace, for our patience is not infinite.

I wish to make it abundantly clear that the peace process is only for those that wish to benefit from it. We will not let this process be derailed, diluted or misused.
For such organizations or elements, as have vowed to disrupt the peace process, or intend to continue with violence and the killing of innocents in J&K, my message is unequivocal and clear. If you inflict injury on any Indian citizen in the State of Jammu & Kashmir, or elsewhere, or commit any act of violence or terrorism then the security forces have clear instructions to act decisively and to defeat such intentions. Law and order shall be maintained. Those who think that our security forces are less determined today to put an end to terrorism are only deluding themselves.

It is my hope that Pakistan will act, even now, and abjure violence, give up their continuous hostile propaganda against India, stop promoting and aiding cross-border terrorism, take the path of peace through bilateral talks as enshrined in the Simla Agreement and the Lahore Declaration, thus creating a conducive atmosphere so that the composite dialogue process can be resumed resulting in a lasting solution to the problems.

The process of peace is to enable our citizens in Jammu & Kashmir to live peacefully. It is their voice that has to be heard, not of the militants or foreign mercenaries.

Peace is our objective, to peace and dialogue we remain committed because that, above all, is what the people of Jammu & Kashmir need most.

1541. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs announcing the decision to invite Chief Executive of Pakistan General Pervez Musharraf for a Summit meeting.

In November last, on the eve of Ramzan, Prime Minister Vajpayee had announced non-initiation of combat operations against terrorists in Jammu and Kashmir. This was subsequently extended. It has now lasted for six months. It was expected that various terrorist groups and organisations, mostly foreign, would see reason, and recognising the imperatives of peace, dialogue and cooperation shun violence. Regrettably, they have not.

This phase, therefore, is now over. These terrorist groups have hindered the restoration of peace in Jammu and Kashmir and have inflicted misery upon the people of that State. Hereafter, security forces shall take such action against terrorists as they judge best. They will, in the process, continue to exercise maximum care that no harassment is caused to the civilian population.

A gratifying feature of these last six months has been relative peace along the LOC on account of restraint exercised by both sides. There has also been considerable lowering of cross LOC exchange of fire. In this regard, the Government has decided that it will continue to observe maximum restraint as hitherto.

The process of dialogue initiated by the Prime Minister under Shri K.C. Pant shall continue unhindered. Our invitation to all sections in J&K to join this dialogue is reiterated.

India’s commitment to peace, dialogue and cooperative co-existence with Pakistan remains unaltered. Prime Minister Vajpayee had set in motion a peace process by his historic and path breaking visit to Lahore in early 1999.

In pursuance of Lahore Declaration and the Shimla Agreement, Prime Minister Vajpayee has decided to invite General Pervez Musharraf, the Chief Executive of Pakistan to visit to India at his early convenience. A formal invitation will be delivered shortly.

India is yet again offering the hand of friendship, reconciliation, cooperation and peace to Pakistan, in the expectation that this opportunity shall be positively and purposefully utilised by them.

Excellency,

Thank you for your letter of May 24 2001. I accept your invitation to me and my wife to visit India, with great pleasure.

Pakistan has always sought to establish tension-free and cooperative relations with India so that our two peoples may be able to devote their resources and energies to the task of economic and social development. We wish to see a stable and prosperous India at peace with its neighbours.

As the beginning of the new century, our two countries must do their utmost to overcome the legacy of distrust and hostility, in order to build a brighter future for our peoples.

The root cause of tension between our two countries is the unresolved Jammu and Kashmir dispute. I, therefore, look forward to sincere and candid discussions with you to resolve the issue of Jannu and Kashmir in accordance with the wishes of the Kashmiri people. We are ready to discuss all other outstanding issues between our two countries as well.

Please, accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Soon after Musharraf said in an interview that he was ready for talks for totally denuclearization of South Asia if the Indian Prime Minister is interested. But all these issues are secondary, he said, and it is the Kashmir issue which is the primary focus. He told BBC that he was willing to be flexible on the agenda of the talks. Some of the questions he answered were as under:

Q: The Indian Government had previously said that you were the main architect behind the fighting in Kargil. Do you think that the fact they have now offered you this invitation to come to Delhi, means that the low point between the two countries has now come to an end?

A: Well, I suppose so. I hope so, because as I have been saying our previous history is not very peaceful, very attractive, why talk of Kargil? If you go a few years behind we arrive at Siachen also. So that is all history and we need to move ahead, look ahead with optimism. I am looking ahead with cautious optimism; I would say.

Q: this week is the anniversary of Pakistan’s nuclear test and there have been great concerns that this area could be a nuclear flashpoint. Would your talks include discussions on reducing or eliminating these weapons altogether?

A: well, if India wants such a dialogue, we have been saying that yes, we could talk about totally denuclearization South Asia, so if the Indian Prime Minister is interested, I would certainly go ahead with him. But let us not sideline again the main issue; all these are secondary, it’s the Kashmir issue which is the primary focus.
1543. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs announcing the visit of Pakistan Chief Executive General Pervez Musharraf.

New Delhi, June 19, 2001.

At the invitation of Prime Minister, Atal Bihari Vajpayee, the Chief Executive of Pakistan, General Pervez Musharraf and Begum Musharraf will visit India from 14th to 16th July 2001. Their stay in India will include a ceremonial welcome in Delhi, a retreat in Agra, where discussions will be held between the two leaders, and a visit to Ajmer Sharif. Details of the programme are being worked out.

1544. Press Release issued by the Ministry of External Affairs to promote People to People contacts between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, July 4, 2001.

In order to enhance people-to-people ties, especially among the youth of India and Pakistan, Prime Minister has decided the following:

(a) 20 scholarships will be offered to students from Pakistan in Indian technical institutions;

(b) Pakistani poets, academics, writers and artistes will be invited individually, or in groups for a month long visit each, as guests of the Government of India;

(c) Groups of Pakistani students (from school to university, boys and girls) will be invited by the Government to visit and tour Indian academic establishments.

2. Desirous of a permanent resolution of the problems of Indian and Pakistani fishermen, who from time to time, are taken into custody, the Prime Minister has instructed that the Indian Coast Guard will not in future take Pakistani fishermen, who inadvertently transgress into our waters, in custody. Henceforth, they will be turned back after due warning.

3. The Prime Minister has also instructed the Ministry of Home Affairs to take expeditious action for the release of all Pakistani ‘civilian’ prisoners currently in India, after due processes of law.
4. In order to encourage Pakistani imports into India, Prime Minister has instructed the Ministry of Commerce to reduce/eliminate tariff on 50 tariff lines. These lines will be identified and instructions to this effect issued before 15 August 2001.

1545. Press Release issued by Ministry of External Affairs easing travel restrictions on Pakistanis visiting India.

New Delhi, July 9, 2001.

It is our conviction that the foundations of peace between India and Pakistan have to be laid in the minds and hearts of men and women, and above all, the youth of both countries. Thus travel between India and Pakistan should be made as simple and easy as possible. The Prime Minister has, therefore, decided that henceforth Pakistani passport holders will be allowed to come by the road route and obtain visas at the check-post at Attari. An additional check-posts will be opened at Munabao, in Rajasthan. Similar check-posts will also be opened at designated points along the IB and the LOC in Jammu and Kashmir. Administrative arrangements, including those for transport, will be urgently put in place so as to implement the Prime Minister’s decision within three months.

Interview of Pakistan Chief Executive Pervez Musharraf with Gulf News.

Question: The run-up to the summit has started off with you being quoted as saying that you were "open" about it and "flexible" about the talks. But it is now being perceived that you have taken an 180 degree turn to emphasize over and over that talks must focus now solely on Kashmir. Why has that happened?

Answer: I have never at all said that I will be flexible on the issue to be discussed which is Kashmir. I have said that Kashmir is the only issue. Yes, I will be flexible on Kashmir, but I would like to correct this misperception, this misunderstanding. I have never said that flexibility will be shown on the issue to be discussed.

Kashmir is the issue, it is the reality on the ground. I am not saying anything which is unrealistic. Where is the tension between India and Pakistan? Is there tension because of anything else, therefore the focus should be on the main issue. The remaining issues, certainly if Prime Minister Vajpayee is keen, certainly one would go ahead and discuss those also.

Q: Do you believe then that India is trying to deflect attention from what you see as the 'core' issue by raining CBMs on Islamabad?

A: Yes, this is certainly our perception. And this suspicion is there, not just now, I would say. It has been happening over the last 50 years, if not 40 years. In 1958, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru declared that Kashmir was a part of India and rejected plebiscite, till now Kashmir has always been sidelined by India and may I also add that, now that you have asked this question, even the Simla Agreement and the Lahore Declaration didn't make any progress. Why didn't it make any progress?

That was because it avoided the main issue of Kashmir, anyone, any leadership in Pakistan that goes and has any arrangement with any Indian administration, makes any agreements, any deals where Kashmir is sidelined, I can say with full certainty, that declaration or that treaty will never go forward because the people won't let it go forward. And that is why the Simla Agreement and the Lahore Declaration did not move forward.

Q: So that means that in the forthcoming Agra agreement - if there is one, if the Indian government does not give you what you see as appropriate on Kashmir, you will go public with your disagreement on the issue?

A: Well, let's not raise issues of opposition and...
Q: Let me rephrase that, what would you like to see in the Agra agreement?
A: Again this should be left to what I am going to discuss with Prime Minister Vajpayee. But I will say quite clearly, I am meaning to correct our focus. And we need to set our focus on Kashmir. And that certainly needs to be done.

Q: General, on the other points of contention such as Sir Creek, the Wullar Barrage and Siachen, it is said that Pakistan and India were this close to an agreement, that surveyors general from both sides have demarcated the boundaries, that Indian Prime Minister Narasimha Rao and the Prime Minister of Pakistan were in agreement. Would you allow these issues to be discussed concurrently with Kashmir, or will they be held hostage to the Kashmir issue?
A: No, they could move concurrently, but what I would be against is if we start, and in the process of progress of dialogue, subsequent progress I am talking of, we sideline the Kashmir issue or drop the Kashmir issue, and we keep going forward on the Wullar Barrage and Sir Creek and all that. Now these are not the issues. The main issue is Kashmir. If the Kashmir issue is progressing well. I don't mind progressing up all issues. Certainly. I have no problem with that. But nothing can be done at the cost of Kashmir.

Well, then this is obviously going to come up against the Indian government's view which has again been reiterated, over and over, just as you have that Kashmir is the main issue, that it is just one of the many issues that bedevil relations. Only the day before Vajpayee told Indian opposition leaders that it would be discussed in the totality of relations.

Yes, let's do that. I am in agreement with Prime Minister Vajpayee on that. Fine. I am in agreement, I am not saying it should be discussed in any half-hearted way, we will discuss it totality.

Q: Would you be happy if the Indian government admits in some way or the other that Kashmir is the core issue, is that the minimum that you are looking for?
A: Well, I am just saying, it's nothing unusual that I am saying, I am not saying anything which is Utopian by any nature. I mean we are trying to improve relations between India and Pakistan, engage India. The end-game is this. I would say the end-game really is to do something, that will improve the condition of this economically deprived region of the world, the most poverty-stricken region of the world, one-fifth of humanity is living in this India-Pakistan subcontinent and may be if this is the only region to collaborate to improve its economic conditions.

Therefore I think, what India and Pakistan must realise and the leadership in both these countries must realise, is that we must improve the condition of the people of the subcontinent. And how can we do that, we can do that if we remove the causes of tension between India and Pakistan. And how do we do that? By resolving Sir Creek? Or resolving Wullar Barrage? No, we have to do that by resolving the Kashmir dispute.

I am just trying to be realistic. And if anyone thinks that this tension can be removed, by collaborating on improving economic conditions without resolving the cause of hatred between the two countries. I think, they are not being realistic.

Q: Talking of hatred and animosity, they say that you are the first leader in Pakistan who is trying to remove the animus that has existed these last 50 years in one form or the other, within the Pakistan administration by telling them that if India walks the same road towards resolving the issue.

A: Yes. I would say that. Indeed, this is the line I am trying to take. Let's remove the root cause of the problem between the two countries. That is the only way forward between developing relations between us. In fact I would say that the time has come when the public has also started realising that we must remove this tension, why is this region in the world only in the grip of tension. Of course at some stage somebody has to come up and take decisions and free this region from this animosity.

Q: There is also the view that the Army has thrived on this very animosity. Just as there is one view that it is only a military government in Pakistan and a Bharatiya Janata Party government in India which can deliver, there is also the opposite view, that the Pakistan Army thrives on this very animosity and has every reason to keep the Kashmir pot boiling for its own ends. Will it really be feasible for the Army to deliver on Kashmir?

A: That is the view from India. That whenever there is a movement towards peace, it is the Army that blocks and creates this feeling. Nothing could be farther from the truth. It is the people of Pakistan, not the Army. It is the people of Pakistan who will not allow anything to happen between India and Pakistan unless the main conflict is resolved.

It is not the Army; I don't accept this point of view at all. The army goes along with the government always. Unfortunately, what happened after the Lahore Declaration, I don't know whether you know it was the Jamaat Islami which went all out on the streets protesting. Was the Army doing that? It was the people of Pakistan.

And nothing could happen further. The people of Pakistan will not allow it I am afraid this is the reality. All that I am saying, people call me a very blunt person and all that, yes. I am. But I am just speaking the truth and the reality. Whether someone calls me blunt or.... I don't contribute to this theory of diplomacy where you are hiding the truth and not spelling out the facts. I don't believe in that kind of diplomacy.

I have never been a diplomat. Really, diplomacy is to put across your view in a diplomatic manner and not to hide the truth, not to speak the truth. I believe in a frank expression of views, and I try to do that as best as possible.

Q: There's 48 hours to go before the summit. Could you give us a hint on what you feel, as the summit nears of what you would like to find coming out of Agra? Apart from the Kashmir issue itself, such as a lessening of troops from the Valley, or...

A: No, I think everything, the starting point, let me put it this way; that would be going too far. I would really appreciate any withdrawal of troops, but that's expecting too much may be. If there is withdrawal, that would be excellent. But one has to first of all...

Q: Strike a rapport?

A: Yes, strike a rapport and build mutual understanding that strives for peace and the resolution of Kashmir. Everything will fall in line. Nothing fell in line in the past, because we were ignoring this basic fact. All the rest, troop reduction or tension reduction will follow through this one agreement, or acceptance or concurrence of views.

Q: Did you change your mind about the Hurriyet after Yasin Malik's comments in an interview in London that 'he did not expect this of Pakistan'.

A: I am not sure...

Q: You did say that you would leave it to India, you would defer to India's wishes on the matter. Yet, a day after Yasin Malik's interview, you issued an invitation to the Hurriyet for tea at the Pakistan High Commission in Delhi. Many believe its a 'storm in a teacup.' Nevertheless, did you change your mind?

A: I haven't changed my mind at all. Right from the beginning I have said, and I am of this view even now, that there are three parties to the Kashmir dispute, the Indians, the Pakistanis and the Kashmiris, and we believe the Kashmiris' representative is the APHC.

Now, Prime Minister Vajpayee has invited me, but I have always been saying, that although as a starter, we accept the non-presence of the Kashmiri representatives, but anytime in the future, they have to be included in the process of dialogue, if there is to be progress. Now, where the invitation for the APHC is concerned, we sent out the invitation because we feel the Kashmiris, the APHC ought to be taken along. However it is up to the Indian government, now whatever their decision on the subject.

Q: That doesn't really answer it. Because if you say, it's up to the Indian government, they don't want the Hurriyet to come to tea.

A: I don't know whether the Indian government has allowed them to come to tea. I would certainly prefer having them there but I am certainly not going to make an issue of it. Because there's a greater issue involved.

Q: India and Pakistan are nuclear capable nations today. And Pakistan has said time and again, that differences over Kashmir could spark off a nuclear conflict, that it's a nuclear flashpoint. There is a view that if the Agra summit does not resolve the dispute, there is a growing likelihood of nuclear war, that Pakistan would not hesitate using the nuclear option.

A: Certainly, the leadership of the two countries should show responsibility and show that the nuclear path is not the way to go down. And I would not like it said that if there is a failure now in Agra, we are closing to a nuclear holocaust, nothing of the sort. I only hope there is progress, but if there is failure, it will be very sad for the people of Pakistan, the people of India, in fact it will be very sad. But not closer to a nuclear exchange, I hope not.

Q: Will there be a nuclear restraint regime?

A: Yes, there is one in place. Certainly, we have erected this regime and we would go along with a nuclear restraint regime or any steps.

Q: How would you describe your feelings as the summit approaches. Are you worried, are you confident? What is it that is going through your mind?

A: I never worry. That is out. I am at peace with myself. As they say, one doesn't clap with one hand, so on my side I am going with an extremely open mind so that progress is made and improvement of relations between India and Pakistan does take place. But similar keenness and desire has to be visible, and has to come up, and I am not worried but I am anxious.

And I am intrigued I would say, up till now whether the Indian leadership is going to accept the centrality of the Kashmir issue to be resolved. Because they have never done this before. So it is really intriguing. Because when they invited me, my stand has been very unambiguous, I think.

Always without fail, I have been saying that the Kashmir issue has to be resolved between India and Pakistan. Now that they've invited me I have never created any doubt in their mind about where I stand.

Q: The Indian government has made it clear that they have put Kargil behind them and that they are prepared to move forward. But they do have residual doubts about the jehadi elements. The fidayeen from the Lashkar Tayyaba are more worrying than the Hizbul Mujahideen fighters. You had said that you would examine whether you would encourage the suspension of the jehad if the right atmosphere is created. Has that time come?

A: First of all, I certainly do not have total command and control over the jehad, or over the freedom struggle going on in the Valley, which has its own dynamics and it's very, very indigenous. All I can say is that, progress on the Kashmir issue between Mr. Vajpayee and myself will certainly have a sobering effect on the freedom struggle.

I would also like to say that when you say India has put Kargil behind them. Pakistan has put Siachen behind it. Because on Siachen, the Indians came in and altered the Line of Control, altered the status quo there which goes very much against and runs counter to the Simla Agreement. It is written very unambiguously, that no party will alter the LoC, and that was done in Siachen first of all.

Q: So do you accept then that the LoC should not be changed?

A: The Line of Control is the problem. What is the freedom struggle going on about. It's about the LoC. Its the problem, not the solution. How can the problem be the solution? There are a number of solutions, but before going to the solution, there are some that need to be rejected. One of them you have just said the Line of Control being made permanent

Now who in Pakistan will ever accept this? Nobody in Pakistan can accept this and expect to stay in power. No leader in Pakistan can do this and accept it. I think it will be very unrealistic for any Indian leader to expect any leader of Pakistan to go and accept the permanence of the LoC.

Q: Are you saying that Nawaz Sharif by accepting the July 4, 1999 agreement with Clinton on respecting the LoC dug his own grave?

Q: No, that didn't have any such...

Q: The agreement was that Pakistan would respect the LoC and withdraw its forces...

A: No, respecting the LoC is a different matter; accepting it as a permanent solution is another matter. That doesn't mean he accepted or we accepted that the Kashmir dispute is over and the LoC is permanent. I don't think he accepted that at all, that was not part of the agreement.

Q: LoC autonomous region, trifurcation ....
A:  Now you are coming to the final solution... it's rather premature to discuss a solution. I always say that to discuss solutions that may be in itself so contentious, we may not start talking at all. So why talk of solutions, let's go step-by-step.

Q:  That means then, that Pakistan is looking really for a step-by-step solution? Talks at regular intervals where Kashmir is discussed.

A:  Well, I am for, if at all Prime Minister Vajpayee wants to discuss Kashmir and solve it, with all boldness I can sit there and in two days let's solve it, okay, or we can go on 24 hours and solve it.

Certainly, it entirely depends on the process of the dialogue. On this issue a lot of hype has been created internationally. I only hope and pray and desire that this summit turns out to be successful and we move forward towards establishing a better relationship between Pakistan and India.

Q:  Why this utter silence then when India is raining CBMs in what they say is a bid to create a better atmosphere?

A:  Yes, again, let us not deflect from the main issue, let us not dilute it, or digress from the main issue. How can we have CBMs when there is suspicion between the two countries? Let's remove the suspicion first and then go for CBMs.

How can you have suspicion and then go for CBMs? This is absolutely ridiculous. Other than these releasing of fishermen or that cyclist - that gentleman Vikas - anytime I would like to do that, I am an extremely humane person I would say, but on issues like the Director General of Military Operations wanting to meet our DGMO, what does he want to come here and talk. I am going to tell my DGMO just keep quiet And keep listening.

Myself and Mr Vajpayee have to talk first and then let the DGMOs talk. Anyway, the DGMOs talk every Wednesday on the telephone. What is the point in talking now before myself and Mr Vajpayee have spoken. It's premature. Anyway, the biggest CBM is the resolution of the Kashmir dispute. What other CBM is better than this? Opening of entry points, opening of trade routes, all this can follow.

Q:  So there will be an Agra agreement?

A:  I have read every single agreement and treaty between India and Pakistan. I have studied it carefully and nowhere does it mention that Kashmir is the issue. Why is that You see, we must also understand each other's compulsions. I would like to work to remove, to lessen the compulsions on the Indian leadership and they should work towards understanding and removing our compulsions.
1547. Interview of Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee with the Associated Press of Pakistan.

New Delhi, July 12, 2001.

Q: Your invitation to the President, General Musharraf, for summit level talks has been widely welcomed. Can you elaborate on the factors that led you to this decision? Is your invitation not a move in response to persistent international pressure on India to begin dialogue with Pakistan?

A: We extended the hand of friendship because we continue to believe in the vision of peace and friendship between India and Pakistan. Despite the setbacks in the past, we never abandoned this vision. We do not need external pressures to tell us what is good for us.

Q: Kashmir remains the main hurdle in normalization of relations between New Delhi and Islamabad. There has been no progress on the solution for over 50 years. How do you intend to move forward now towards a resolution of this dispute? General Musharraf has stated clearly that he would not be rigid at the talks. How would you reciprocate?

A: We keep hearing about this “main hurdle” standing in the way of good neighbourly relations. We have never shied away from this or any other issue. But narrow and cliche-ridden approaches have not worked in the past. Nor has violence. We have to seek ways to take our entire relationship forward and address the core concerns of our peoples in their struggle against poverty. India is prepared to explore with Pakistan such constructive ways forward.

Q: Recently the report of the All India Fact Finding Team into human rights situation in Jammu & Kashmir pointed to the large scale violations of human rights in Indian Held Kashmir, even dating to what was called by India as the NICO. Would you think it is time India released (relieved) its massive forces in Kashmir?

A: India’s human rights record, and its commitment to punish human rights violations, whenever and wherever they occur, are recognized the world over. As for our troops in Jammu & Kashmir, their strength is directly related to the level of cross-border terrorism. It is this terrorism, and not the presence of troops, that is the cause of immense suffering to innocent citizens.

Q: When in your view can the All Parties Hurriyat Conference be involved in talks over Kashmir destiny?

A: We have always indicated our readiness to hold a dialogue with all groups and individuals in Jammu & Kashmir that abjure violence, and are committed to peace. The APHC is not an exception.
Q: The nuclear and missile build up by India has been a case of concern to the international community. You have recently been buying a lot of sophisticated arms from Russia. One does not see a security threat to India. What are these meant for?

A: India’s defence expenditure is based on a realistic assessment of global trends, offensive capabilities in our neighbourhood, and our technological options. Our security policy has always remained defensive in character and content. We are committed to a policy of no-first-use of nuclear weapons and their non-use against non-nuclear weapon states. However, we are sensitive to the need to maintain an appropriate defence preparedness in response to developments in our security environment.

Q: India had shown reluctance to talk to Pakistan due to the Kargil situation. Is it not a fact that situations like Kargil and Siachen arise because India has been unwilling to solve the Kashmir problem?

A: India has never avoided discussion on any issue, however intractable it may be. History has recorded the number of occasions when we have discussed Jammu & Kashmir with Pakistan.

Q: The Kashmir problem has not been resolved so far in bilateral talks, is it not, therefore, time that other means of peaceful (settlement) provided for in the UN Charter are used to resolve the Kashmir issue.

A: India and Pakistan have bilateral commitments which go well beyond the UN Charter in enjoining us to resolve differences through peaceful dialogue. What is required is not a Charter or a Resolution; it is mutual political goodwill.

Q: Why is India reluctant to go ahead with the gas pipeline project from Iran through Pakistan despite Pakistan’s guarantees for the secure supply of gas to India?

A: We have had detailed discussions with Iran on the various modalities available for possible transfer of Iranian gas to India. Both sides will eventually identify a mode of transfer which is long term, cost effective, and secure. We hope to decide on the most viable option, taking into account all technological, economic and political risks.

Q: Would you like to give a special message to the people of Pakistan?

A: I would like to reiterate the message I gave from the Minar-e-Pakistan about two and a half years ago: that my country has a deep desire for lasting peace and friendship with Pakistan and that a stable, secure and prosperous Pakistan is in India’s interest. I sincerely wish the people of Pakistan well.
1548. Interview of Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee with The Jung Group of Newspapers.

New Delhi, July 12, 2001.

Q. Why did you take so long in inviting General Musharraf?

Ans. At this stage, it would be more purposeful to look to the prospects for the future than to dissect the events of the past. President Musharraf has accepted my invitation and I look forward to his visit.

Q. While Musharraf intends to be flexible, will you be too? And what do you mean when you say "not to tread on beaten tracks"?

Ans. In our quest for a new architecture of peace and prosperity in South Asia, we will not shrink from bold and innovative measures. We would naturally be governed in this by our national interests and by our abiding commitment to peace and justice.

Q. Why is India reluctant to implement the Siachen Agreement reached between Ms. Bhutto and Mr. Rajiv Gandhi?

Ans. The premise of this question is flawed. Siachen is a mutually identified subject of bilateral dialogue, on which India has always sought an early resolution.

Q. Similarly, why is India not ready to benefit from the support Pakistan is ready to provide to the oil pipeline project from Iran to India, passing through Pakistan?

Ans. We are discussing with Iran various modalities for transfer of Iranian gas to India. The ‘benefit’ from each of the different options on the gas pipeline project will be determined by techno-economic studies. We will naturally decide on a mode of transfer, which is cost effective and secure in the long term after consideration of all political and economic factors.

Q. Do you feel a need to address the strategic imbalance and asymmetry in conventional weapons on the pattern of the Helsinki Security act in Europe?

Ans. Asia is a continent of immense diversity and its security situation is very different from that prevailing in Europe during the Cold War. We have to find our own security framework for Asia compatible with our political, military, economic and cultural realities.

Q. It is believed that you have a mission in the sub-continent. What is your dream about the future of the sub-continent?
Ans. Our subcontinent is extraordinarily rich in human and material resources. I believe that the vision of a peaceful South Asia actively pursuing equitable socioeconomic development through cooperative endeavours can and should be transformed from a dream into concrete reality.

Q. When the Kashmiri freedom fighters said that they would not talk with India within the framework of the Indian Constitution, you said that talks will be held within the framework of “Insaniyat”. What did you mean by this? Will you stick to this position during talks with Gen. Musharraf?

Ans. Insaniyat is an Urdu word which is widely understood both in Pakistan and in India. It is a quality which stands above legalistic considerations, sectarian differences and calculations of short-term gains and losses. I believe Insaniyat should be the ultimate basis for resolution of any difficult problem.

Q. Can you visualize any decrease in your defence budget if the Kashmir issue is solved?

Ans. Our defence budget is based on an assessment of the overall security environment in our region and our desire to maintain an adequate defence preparedness.

Q. Are you open to any solution even remotely changing the present confused status of Kashmir? Several options have been discussed in the media and even in Track 2. Is any of them worth consideration. In other words, is a solution in your view possible?

Ans. If India and Pakistan engage in peaceful and sincere bilateral dialogue to resolve all differences in perceptions between them, no problem should elude resolution.

Q. Would you ask General Musharraf to support India’s case for membership of Security Council, if everything else goes well and according to your expectation?

Ans. All members of the United Nations are aware of our views on the restructuring and reform of the UN to make it more representative of current realities. We naturally welcome the support of all countries for them.

Q. What role do you see for Kashmiri fighters in the near term and long term? If they do not accept a solution worked out between India and Pakistan, how will you deal with them?

Ans. You are aware that our democratic polity permits a free expression of political preferences through the ballot. At the same time, our security forces have the necessary capability, resolve and stamina to deal with terrorist groups and foreign mercenaries that foment violence and terrorism against innocent civilians and security forces.

Q. Can India and Pakistan decide to stop hostile propaganda against each other immediately and allow free flow of ideas, tourists, journalists and trade. Can the summit actually result in more visas, more business services, more trains and more flights between India and Pakistan?

Ans. We do not believe in hostile propaganda against our neighbours. We have always believed that people to people contacts contribute to the development of good neighbourly relations by increasing understanding. We have already announced several steps to promote such contacts. This will continue to remain our endeavor.

Q. You have been advocating to acquire a permanent seat in the Security Council of the United Nations and have been struggling for quite a long time as such. Do you agree with the opinion that to initiate negotiations, on Kashmir, at this stage, is under some compulsion, as you wish to convey this impression to the world community, during the General Assembly to be held in September, that negotiation for the settlement of Kashmir dispute are already underway, therefore, objections and reservation to India’s nomination, for permanent membership of the Security Council, or you are, in fact determined to reserve the Kashmir dispute with all assurance so that an environment of durable peace and convincible security may be achieved.

Ans. Our views on the need for reform and restructuring of the UN system and our desire for peaceful good-neighbourly relations with Pakistan are both integral parts of India’s world view. There is no causal link between the two.

Q. Do you presume China to be enemy number one? Can China harm India, by extending her influence in the region?

Ans. We do not think in such terms. We have a regular and friendly dialogue with China and are increasing our bilateral cooperation in all areas.

Q. US India relations are being postured to a new kind of relationship, which is more enthusiastic than ever before? Do you favour US National Missile Programme? Pakistan and China both have opposed it. Are such cordial relationships with US in conformity with India’s conventional progressive policy? Will it not affect India’s age-long friendship with Russia?

Ans. India and the United States are in the process of forging closer ties, based on many shared values, interests and opportunities for mutually beneficial cooperation. Our relationship with the US is neither directed against anyone nor is it at the expense of our traditional friendship with other countries, including Russia. We have welcomed some of the elements of the new strategic framework announced by President Bush, particularly the intention to reduce and de-alert nuclear weapons. We have also encouraged the United States to pursue its plans through consultation and cooperation, without unilaterally moving away from its international commitments.

Q. How do you see the scenario of South Asia in the forthcoming decade?

Ans. South Asia should aim to intensify regional cooperation to promote development in all its countries. If the countries of South Asia can establish a climate of friendship and trust within the entire region, we can harness our considerable human and material resources to the upliftment of our peoples, and to the satisfaction of their other aspirations.

1549. Speech by President K. R. Narayanan at the Banquet hosted in honour of the visiting Pakistan President Prevez Musharraf.

Excellency President Musharraf,

Begum Musharraf, Distinguished Guests from Pakistan,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

It is with the greatest pleasure that I extend to you and Begum Musharraf and the distinguished members of your delegation, a cordial welcome on behalf of the Government and the people of India. You must have, Excellency, sensed the warmth with which Delhi is welcoming one of its distinguished sons on his first visit to the city after nearly half a century. From this capital city that throbs with old and new history, the heart of a modern and resurgent India, may I give expression to the hope of our people that your visit, on any reckoning a historic one, will open a new chapter in the relations between our two countries that will enable us to walk together on the high road of peace and friendship to our common goal of progress and prosperity.

In 1945-46, when the partition of India appeared almost inevitable, Pandit Jawahararl Nehru, sitting in a cell in a British jail, wrote in his book “The Discovery of India”, and I quote, “It is obvious that whatever be the future of India, even if there is regular partition, the different parts of India, will have to co-operate with each other, in a hundred different ways”. And after the partition took place, he declared his belief that “it is to India’s advantage that Pakistan should be a secure and prosperous State with which we can develop close and friendly relations.” Quaid-e-Azam Mohammed Ali Jinnah expressing the same sentiment to the press said that “now that the division of India has been brought about by a solemn agreement between the two Dominions, we should bury the past, and resolve that, despite all that has happened, we shall remain friends. There are many things which we need from each other as neighbours, morally, materially and politically, and thereby raise the prestige and status of both the Dominions”. It is this vision of the future articulated by the leaders of both our countries that we have to pursue as the unfinished agenda of partition for resolving all the differences between us and for ensuring peace and prosperity for our peoples.

India, Your Excellency, is home to one-sixth of humanity. It is a nation of unparalleled diversities, held together by the spirit of tolerance, by its policy and practice of secularism, and its deep attachment to democracy. The words of Emperor Ashoka still rings in our ears, “all sects deserve reverence . . . By thus acting a man exalts his own and at the same time does service to others”. It was the same message that Akbar the Great proclaimed. I recall the words of Quaid-e-Azam Mohammed Ali Jinnah in Pakistan Constituent Assembly when he referred to the tolerance and goodwill that Emperor Akbar showed to all as something that should be followed and practised. We in India hold fast to the fundamentals of tolerance and secular democratic principles and it is our conviction that on the basis of these principles India and Pakistan can regulate their relationship to one of genuine peace, friendship, and co-operation.

Excellency, history has left behind many issues and problems between our two countries. But the major and the overriding issue for the millions that inhabit the sub-continent is that of poverty, illiteracy and ill health, in short general and massive deprivation. You have, Excellency, often talked about this. In India it has been our main preoccupation since Independence to eradicate poverty and to elevate the levels of living of our people. Mahatma Gandhi had said that his mission in life was “to wipe every tear from every eye”. He had advised us whenever you have to make a decision, you recall to your mind the face of the poorest man you might have seen and ask yourself if the decision you are going to take will help him or not. Tomorrow when you and the Prime Minister of India sit together in Agra for your dialogue I hope the face of the poorest person in the sub-continent will be before you and you will ponder together how this impoverished common man will be benefited by your deliberations and decisions. If this is held before you I believe that all other issues between us will pale into secondary importance and will become amenable to amicable and satisfactory solutions.

There are many fields in which we can work together and co-operate constructively for the benefit of our peoples. Both our countries have made significant strides in economic development and in science and technology. Let us remove all impediments in the path of interaction between our peoples. Let our scholars, artists, writers and professionals and above all our common people meet freely and sense the warmth of fraternal friendship. Let us join our forces and the talents of our gifted people to make development and the blessings of modern science and technology for the benefit of our people. It is only common sense that for this purpose we need an atmosphere of peace and mutual confidence between us. We have to rule out violence from our relationship. We seek friendly and co-operative relations with all states, particularly with those in our neighbourhood. We believe that our region has to progress together even while each state safeguards and develops its individual and distinct personality and its own chosen way of life. India continues to support and strengthen SAARC on the basis of the well-thought out charter of the organisation. I believe that if India and Pakistan can establish normal bilateral relations SAARC will be transformed into a dynamic regional organisation. Excellency, let us endeavour during this visit to build upon what we have agreed upon in the Shimla Agreement and the Lahore Declaration. At Shimla we had solemnly declared that “the two countries put an end to the conflict and confrontation that have hitherto marred their relations”. It is time to implement this eloquently stated desire of our two countries. The City of Agra where you would be parleying with our Prime Minister from tomorrow is the city of love as well as the city of reconciliation. It is near there at Sikandra where Akbar the Great lies buried. May his spirit pervade the conference chamber tomorrow. I believe that the dialogue between India and Pakistan that we have initiated will evolve into a structured dialogue at the summit as well as other levels which will lead to the removal of all obstacles and misunderstandings that stand in our way and pave the way to the solutions of problems and the creation of enduring friendship between our two nations.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, may I invite you to raise a toast:

— to the establishment of friendship and cooperation between India and Pakistan;
— to the progress and prosperity of the people of Pakistan;
— to the good health and happiness of the President of Pakistan and Begum Musharraf.

Bismillah

Your Excellencies the President and Mrs. Narayanan,
Your Excellency Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee, Distinguished Guests,
Ladies and Gentlemen,

Assalam-o-Alaikum

It is a privilege and a pleasure for my delegation, my wife and me to visit India and its historic capital.

We are also looking forward to visiting Agra and Ajmer Sharif in the next two days. To us in Pakistan, these are familiar names that evoke glorious memories of powerful empires of a flourishing culture and of saintly figures that stirred the souls of countless millions. On our return to Pakistan, we will carry with us indelible images of the richness of this historical legacy.

I thank you, Mr. President, for the warm hospitality extended to us since our arrival in Delhi, the city where I spent my early childhood. I thank you also for the opportunity, my wife and I had, earlier this evening, of meeting you and the gracious First Lady, Mrs. Narayanan. Your wisdom and warmth of personality have left a deep impression on both of us.

My meeting with Prime Minister Vajpayee, at lunch today, was extremely rewarding. I am deeply impressed by his wisdom and dignity. During the next two days, we will hold discussions on the future direction of our difficult and troubled relationship.

My presence in your great country brings to an end a hiatus of more than two years, which I believe, has not served the broader interests of either side. As neighbouring countries, we need to bridge the gulf that divides us. I come to India with this purpose.

Fifty four years ago, to the day, in this city, the Founder of Pakistan, Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah, said and I quote "I sincerely hope that relations between Pakistan and Hindustan will be friendly and cordial. We have a great deal to do, both states, and I think that we can be of use to each other, not to say to the world. Being neighbours, from our side, I do not think you will find goodwill wanting". Mahatama Gandhi, Bapu of Indian Nation, also laid down his life in the cause of nonviolence and peaceful coexistence.

Fifty four years and two generations have passed since then. The world has entered a new century and a new millennium. Regions around the world are focusing on reducing tension for economic prosperity, social well-being and poverty alleviation. Regional associations for this purpose are gaining strength.

Where does our region stand? With 1/5th of the world’s population, and impoverished, deprived, disillusioned and tolling masses, we still are groping for co-operation, mutual trust and peace.

I believe in Quaid-e-Azam’s vision of good relations between Pakistan and India. I believe also that this vision is not beyond our grasp. I have come to India because I would like to do everything possible to realize the dream of the Quaid-e-Azam.

The legacy of the past years is not a happy one. Our two countries have been through wars. Blood has been spilt; precious lives have been lost. We have been locked in mutual suspicion and hostility. We have paid a heavy price for it. We owe it to our future generations to do our utmost to open a new chapter of goodwill and cooperation.

We must not allow the past to dictate the future. Our nuclear status imposes now responsibilities on us. We must overcome the burden of history. Other nations have done it. We must also do so.

The experience of the last decades and more is before us. The Jammu and Kashmir dispute continues to block progress towards normalization of our relations. I believe that there can be no military solution of this dispute. It can and must be resolved peacefully. We must be bold enough to face this issue squarely and resolve it once and for all. This indeed, will open a new chapter of fruitful relations between our two countries and also put an end to the sufferings of the hopelessly of Kashmir.

Our capabilities and responsibilities in the new century no longer offer us the option of continuing on the path of a sterile impasse, continued hostility and mistrust.

I am deeply committed to finding a path towards normal relations between our countries. I would like communications to open, trade to flourish, mindsets to change and stereotypes to disappear. The children of Pakistan and India must not be made to live under the constant shadow of conflict. They must also not be made to live in deprivation and crippling poverty. The energies of our peoples must be diverted to the immense and challenging task of social and economic uplift of banishing misery and ushering in an era of progress and prosperity.
I would like to conclude with another quote from Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah on the eve of his departure for Karachi from New Delhi on 7th August 1947 he said, "The past must be buried and let us start afresh as two independent sovereign states of Hindustan and Pakistan. I wish Hindustan prosperity and peace".

Today again I urge you to join me in this noble endeavour. Let us begin this effort now. Let us today embark upon this challenging and rewarding task. Let us join hands in building a better future for our succeeding generations. Let us, together, create history for the world.

With these words, I request you to join me in wishing health, happiness and well-being for his Excellency the President and Mrs. Narayanan, progress and prosperity for the people of India and peace and security for the entire region.

Thank you, Excellencies.

1551. Prime Minister’s Opening Statement at the Plenary of the India-Pakistan Summit

15 July, 2001

I extend to you and your delegation a warm welcome to this ancient and historic city of Agra. I hope that your stay here will be comfortable, and that our deliberations will take our relations forward positively and constructively.

2. Through the past five decades, India has held firm in its abiding desire for peace and friendship with Pakistan. We remain committed to the establishment of trust and confidence, to developing mutually beneficial cooperation and to address all outstanding issues, including Jammu & Kashmir. We believe that the core concern of our peoples is their struggle against poverty, want, hunger and deprivation.

3. We have always taken a comprehensive view of India-Pakistan relations, because it is our conviction that we must progress where we can, even as we address the more complex issues. We believe that, rather than operating in segments, we should take a broad based approach across the spectrum of possibilities in our relationship.

4. It is with these perspectives that we announced a few decisions in advance of your visit, aimed at addressing some of the mutual concerns of our peoples. They relate to peace and security, to the development of people to people ties, and to promote contacts by facilitating travel.

5. We have already had a frank discussion on important matters. We look forward to a further detailed exchange of views on all issues including that of Jammu & Kashmir. You are fully aware of our views on this subject and we have heard yours. We cannot deny that there are vast differences between us on this. We are willing to address these differences and to move forward. But for this, it is important to create a conducive atmosphere. The terrorism violence being promoted in the State from across its borders do not help to create such an atmosphere. We will counter them resolutely. Let no one think that India does not have the resolve, strength or stamina to continue resisting terrorism and violence. But, they do not promote meaningful dialogue.

6. We firmly believe that a framework to address the differences between us on Jammu & Kashmir would have to include the issue of cross-border terrorism in its ambit. We can also look at other confidence building measures to further encourage this process.

7. The subjects which we have identified for the Composite Dialogue between our two countries cover a wide range. Progress on them can meaningfully contribute to the welfare and security of our peoples. We believe that the time has come to resume our engagement on the entire range of these issues.

8. I wish to refer to certain additional specific matters.

A. We have consistently for over two decades urged Pakistan to release the 54 Indian POWs that we strongly believe remain in your custody. This is a human problem. I would urge that Pakistan takes urgent and purposeful action to end the agony of the families of these soldiers.

B. We know that some terrorists and criminals, guilty of crimes like the bomb blasts in Mumbai in 1993 and the hijacking of the Indian Airlines flight, are living in Pakistan. We have requested Pakistan that they should be arrested and handed over to us. They have to be brought to justice.

C. We have recently issued instructions to our Coast Guard not to take into custody Pakistani fishermen, who inadvertently stray into our waters, but to turn them back after due warning. A similar reciprocal gesture on Pakistan’s part would lead to a permanent resolution of this recurring problem.

D. Pilgrims to religious shrines in both countries have to be facilitated and their sentiments respected. The presence of known terrorist who have been allowed to stay in Sikh Gurudwaras in Pakistan is a matter of grave concern to our Sikhs. We have formally requested your authorities that these terrorists be handed over to us to face due process of law in connection with crimes for which they are wanted in India. I wish to specifically reiterate this request to you. While on the subject of religious shrines, the upkeep of Hindu temples and the treatment of Hindu pilgrim is also a matter of concern to us.

E. The enhancement of trade ties would be mutually beneficial— we seek no unilateral advantage. Trade and industry circles have constantly urged both governments to respond to the desire for great interaction. We are willing to take further major steps in this direction. We have already announced a reduction or elimination of tariffs on 50 tariff lines to encourage Pakistani imports to India. I propose that a group of experts of both countries be constituted to recommend measures to increase bilateral trade, economic and technical interaction.

9. Our vision for the future of India Pakistan relations has to construct a durable road map for the future based firmly on the lessons of its often troubled history. We should respond not only to our immediate need for peace and progress for our peoples but also to an international environment that increasingly stresses inter-dependence and cooperation over conflict and discord. Let us grasp this fresh opportunity to create the lasting peace and amity which has eluded us for these past 54 years.

1552. Statement and Verbatim Record of Press Conference of External Affairs and Defence Minister Jaswant Singh.

Statement

At the invitation of Prime Minister Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee, the President of Pakistan H.E. General Pervez Musharraf visited India on 14-16 July, 2001.

2. In keeping with his abiding vision of good Neighbourly relations between India and Pakistan, the Prime Minister had invited President General Pervez Musharraf to walk the high road of Peace and reconciliation. Our commitment to that noble objective, upon the attainment of which, rests the welfare of many, is not transitory. It is that commitment, which was demonstrated at Simla, in Lahore and recently during President General Pervez Musharraf’s visit.

3. Significant CBMs that were announced prior to President Musharraf’s visit would be fully implemented on our part. It is our conviction that, when put in place, they will make an important contribution to our relations.

4. During his visit, the President of Pakistan had extensive discussions with our entire leadership. These included three rounds of one-on-one meetings with the Prime Minister and an hour-long farewell call prior to his departure yesterday night. There were also detailed discussions during delegation level talks. All these meetings were marked by cordiality and candour. They provided an invaluable opportunity to both sides to understand each others' viewpoints, concerns and compulsions.

5. Our negotiations for an agreed text of a document were seriously pursued. There were long hours of discussions at official and political levels. During these negotiations India did not shy away from any issue. In keeping with the confidentiality, which is necessary for these negotiations, and the maintenance of which is essential for the future of bilateral relations themselves, it would not be proper to go into details. However, it needs asserting that during the negotiating process, India fully respected all established international norms. As a mature and responsible democracy, we negotiate to improve bilateral relations with our neighbours, not to indulge in public relations.

6. We are of course, disappointed that the two sides could not arrive at an agreed text. It will not be a breach of confidentiality to clarify that this was on an account of the difficulty in reconciling our basic approaches to bilateral relations. India is convinced that narrow, segmented or unifocal approaches, will simply not work. Our focus has to remain on the totality of relationship, our endeavour to build trust and confidence, and a mutually beneficial relationship even as we address and move forward on all outstanding issues, including Jammu & Kashmir: building upon the existing compacts of Simla and Lahore.

7. It was also made abundantly clear to the Pakistan side during the visit, that the promotion of cross-border terrorism and violence are unacceptable and must cease. Let there be no illusions on this score: India has the will and resolve to defeat all such challenges.

8. We will pick up the threads from the visit of the President of Pakistan. We will unceasingly endeavour to realise our vision of a relationship of peace, friendship and cooperation with Pakistan.

As this text, ladies and gentlemen of the press, will be shortly with all of you, I wish to simply add that on these three broad areas, which is, a unifocal approach by Pakistan, which conflicts with the concept that we abide by, that relationship has to be broad-based or spaced by an approach which was dictated by the impulse that unless the issue of Jammu and Kashmir is made central there will be no progress on any other aspect. We do not believe that bilateral relations between India and Pakistan ought to, or can be held hostage by any single issue. We believe in the totality of approach which addresses all issues. As we move along improving bilateral relations we will continue to address the issue of Jammu and Kashmir as well.

The second aspect is relating to cross border terrorism and violence is unacceptable to India. I might refresh your memories, ladies and gentlemen of the press, that even during the Lahore visit on the eve of which we had experienced, if you would remember, the killing of 22 innocent civilians in Jammu, we had still persisted with our endeavour and Pakistan had then found it possible to announce with India, its complete opposition to terrorism and rejection of it. That was the second difficulty.

The third is that we continue to believe that every compact, or agreement, or effort that has preceded the present effort cannot be negated, rescinded, or wished away. That is why we made it clear and there is a reference here that the effort at Agra was a continuation not simply of the Lahore process but also as a building upon the foundations that were laid by Shimla. It is that central objective which again had some difficulty in being accepted by our distinguished visitors. These were the three broad areas.

I am, of course, in my colleague Joint Secretary (Publicity)'s hands and I will endeavour to answer all questions that you might have, subject of course to the confidentiality that must always mark discussions between Heads of Government and Heads of State, and subject also to the fact that I actually work in Delhi and not in Agra and I must go back and start working. I have an aeroplane to catch which is really an aeroplane that has to take back high dignitaries and I do not want to keep them waiting. So, as Nirupama has said, we have an hour and a quarter. I am in your hands Nirupama, and she is in your hands. I do not mean physically.

Question (Ms Pamela Constable, Washington Post): What is the likelihood that Prime Minister Vajpayee will still accept the invitation from General Musharraf to visit Pakistan, and how would you characterise the atmosphere and the tone of the talks as they ended last night, compared to the cordial atmosphere in which they began on Saturday?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: There is an invitation that has been extended to Prime Minister Vajpayee. He has accepted that invitation. That invitation and its acceptance remains in place. So far as the atmosphere of departure is concerned, naturally it was marked by some disappointment on both sides. But in the totality of India-Pak relations, I am not disheartened by any one single incident to take that as the defining incident and treat that as a kind of fixed mark for ever.
Question (Mr. Ramesh Bhan, UNI): Was President Musharraf stopped from addressing a press conference yesterday?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: I must correct this because it is a matter of, for me personally, very great regret that my distinguished colleague and officer of the Ministry of External Affairs received very uncivil treatment. I must put it on record, it is my responsibility that she was so subjected and I really wish I knew that. I am very sorry Nirupama, I want to publicly apologize to you because I am responsible for your welfare as a Minister. It is a matter of very great regret to me.

I must clarify abundantly that as a visiting Head of State, Head of Government, we did not stand in the way of, whenever General Musharraf or anyone else from the Pakistan delegation wished to meet the media, have a press conference in whatever fashion at whichever place. It is not we that stood in the way of General Pervez Musharraf. Even though the whole thing trod very close to negotiating through press, we did not at any stage choose to do so because that is not how discussions or negotiation between high dignitaries of State is ever conducted or can ever be conducted. So far as denying an opportunity to His Excellency General Pervez Musharraf sahab to meet the press last night, the question does simply not arise. There was an original intent that should an agreement or should an agreed text of a document be reached, then of course there will be a joint press conference. As the evening progressed it became evident that this was becoming more difficult to achieve. Thereafter I think, if I am not mistaken, around 9:30 or so at night - I might be in error on the exact time of it but roughly at that time - a request was received that General Musharraf, after the farewell call, would like to meet the press in Hotel JP Palace. The security requirements accompanying General Pervez Musharraf mandate that 90 minutes’ notice be given for any press conference or any meeting with the press to be held. We were given a departure time and it was simply not practical, as dictated by security, to have an impromptu press conference in Hotel JP Palace. It was not the Government that stood in the way, it was a security consideration and the practicality of holding a press conference at such short notice which is really the aspect of it.

Question (Mr. Narayanan, All India Radio): How close did you come to an agreement yesterday? There are reports that you almost clinched an agreement but India backed out of it later on.

Mr. Jaswant Singh: I am not going to engage in the game of who backed out from what. It is not proper for me to go into that exercise. Complex discussions and negotiations of this nature always hang by a thread as it were. We made every effort to arrive at an agreed text. I must place on record that I received all cooperation and understanding from my distinguished and able counterpart
His Excellency the Foreign Minister of Pakistan. But I do not want to say how close we were or how far we were because when it comes to issues of principle, it is not possible for India to treat principles as being close, or to compromise with them in any sense.

Question (Mr. Soumya Bandopadhyay, Pratidin): At yesterday’s breakfast meeting President Musharraf had compared Kashmir with Palentinia. At the same time he had made reference to actions of India in Bangladesh. What do you think about it?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: I do not want to comment on the views held and expressed by General Pervez Musharraf sahab at that breakfast meeting. The original request that had come to us was that he would like to meet the senior Editors, - if I understand right, I do not want to be faulted on detail because I necessarily do not go into all details – that it was off the record meeting and we facilitated such a meeting. The views the he holds are his views. Of course, we do not agree with them.

Question (Seema Guha Times Of India): I just wanted to know what happened during the farewell call. What was the mood like of President Musharraf and the Prime Minister?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: What happened during the farewell call? I regret very much that it is not up to me to disclose what was discussed between two Heads of Government. What was the mood like? As I have already explained, the mood was reflective.

Question (Mr. Vijay Naik, Sakal Papers): I just want to know that yesterday in the briefing by Pakistani side, they said that some of the Ministers objected to the points which were in the document and, therefore, the document or the declaration could not be arrive at.

Mr. Jaswant Singh: Please repeat that.

Question (Mr. Vijay Naik, Sakal Papers): The Pakistani side after the meeting briefed their own press and said that some of the Ministers did not confer with the points which were there in the document or the declaration and, therefore, the declaration could not be signed and that they were disappointed. We were also told by her that the Indian Government is also disappointed. Was it a fact that we objected to certain points which we did not agree.

Secondly, I just want to know why Indian Government actually gave these points which were raised by Shri Vajpayee in the first meeting with Mr. Musharraf after 24 hours to the press here. They could have been given immediately after he made the points. But why did we delay? When Mr. Musharraf went on addressing the press conference, we received the speech of Mr Vajpayee after 24 hours.

Mr. Jaswant Singh: The first part of the question, for those of you that have not heard it, is 'were there any differences in the Indian delegation, particularly amongst the ministerial colleagues of mine in regard to the text of the document that was being discussed?' The second part relates to, 'why was Prime Minister Vajpayee’s statement in the plenary held back and not issued until almost 24 hours after it was made?'

To the first part about differences, let me set all your minds at rest. At a feverish pitch good friends in the media imagine all kinds of occurrences. Please do not let your fever rise to such levels. There were no differences between the ministerial colleagues that constituted the delegation. This is a canard which I refute with all emphasis. It is an absurdity. These are my distinguished colleagues in the Cabinet. To suggest that we were working at cross purposes is really to belittle the high purpose which has inspired all my ministerial colleagues in this task of finding an answer to the complex issue of India-Pak relations.

On the second aspect relating to 'why was Prime Minister Vajpayee’s opening statement in the plenary held back, it was done for the obvious reason which I have specified. India does not believe that discussions or negotiations between two Heads of Government are ever or can ever be conducted in public or through the press. We abided by that impeccably. However, when we found that there was a kind of approach from the other side of engaging with the media as an additionality to discussion, to which aspect I have referred in my opening statement, it was found necessary that for the sake of the public of India the essence of what Prime Minister Vajpayee had emphasised and said be made also known to everybody.

Question (Ms. Arusa Alam, Pakistan Observer): You have very forcefully raised the so-called cross border terrorism issue. Not long ago your own Chief of Army Staff and authorities in Jammu and Kashmir have admitted that the LOC has been very quiet. In the past Indians have been alleging that Pakistani troops fire and under the firing the infiltration takes place. When you have admitted yourself that LOC has been quiet for the last seven months, how can you blame Pakistan for cross border terrorism at this point? First of all, why did cross border terrorism became the bone of contention in this historic Agra summit?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: I must answer both these points. As it happens, I have the honour to be the Defence Minister of India as well. So, I do not have to go simply by what my gallant Chief of Army Staff says. I do know what is happening on the Line of Control. It is not a question of timing: it is a question of clearly asserting that one of the beneficial consequences of the peace process that was launched by Prime Minister Vajpayee on the 23rd of November last has been relative quiet on the Line of Control. There is secondly an illusion, or a misapprehension which is in fact tacitly admitted in your question itself that cross border firing across the LoC was engaged in by Pakistan to facilitate infiltration. Infiltration is, of course, facilitated by that but it continues, notwithstanding the relative quiet that prevails. It is our hope that that achievement will continue.

Question (Mr. Jayakrishnan, Sify): You have outlined three points which you said are the difficulties between the two sides. General Musharraf had taken up a point where the Union Information and Broadcasting Minister Sushma Swaraj had made some remarks. He had objected to that. How much of that was a factor, or was that a factor at all?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: I must clarify this again. I have heard reports that my good friend and distinguished colleague in the Cabinet, the Minister for Information and Broadcasting, Shrimati Sushma Swaraj somehow spoke on her own as it were, and was not supposed to do so, and all kinds of other assumptions are made about her. She is the Minister of Information and Broadcasting of the Government of India. When she speaks, she speaks with the authority of the Government of India. There is no question of the Minister of Information and Broadcasting speaking out of turn, for that matter any Minister speaking out of turn, on matters of high policy. As to whether that had an affect on the discussions, negotiations, etc., - not at all because after all what Sushmaji pointed out were aspects of what is public knowledge and were aspects that were emphasised by the Prime Minister subsequently also.

Question (Ms. Geeta Bajaj, Eye On Asia, USA): Mr. Minister, despite several wars and decades of hostility, India and Pakistan have been successful in hammering out the Shimla Accord in 1972 and the Lahore Declaration in 1999. At both times there was a democratic leader in Pakistan. Now, many of us got a flavour of the offensive, straightforward strategy of General Pervez Musharraf on television yesterday. There was also an expectation that because he is a dictator he will be able to deliver in case he does hammer out an accord with India. To what extent do you believe, Mr. Minister, that the fact that he is a dictator and he is used to getting his way perhaps got in the way or had an influence on the result of the Summit? Could you share your views with us in terms of one-on-one kind of discussions at the delegation levels, if that aspect came through. I mean, whatever you can share with us.

Mr. Jaswant Singh: Thank you very much for your long thesis. It is more a thesis than a question. Please understand that it is not for me to comment on the internal arrangements that Pakistan chooses to have for itself. I am certainly not going to engage in a theoretical exercise of who is it better to deal with or negotiate with, one or other variety of governance.

Question (Mr. Jayant Ghoshal, Bartaman Patrika): Do you think that yesterday's breakfast meeting was a critical point that destroyed the atmosphere of the Summit? Secondly, since you are the Defence Minister also, do you apprehend escalation of violence again on the border in Jammu and Kashmir? Yesterday also incidents took place.

Mr. Jaswant Singh: On this much beaten about question of breakfast press meet, press interview by His Hxcellency General Pervez Musharraf sahab, I have already replied. When we are seized in complex negotiations, the objective being the high purpose of lasting peace, amity and goodwill between India and Pakistan, then certainly we firstly do not and cannot negotiate and discuss through the media, much as you might, all ladies and gentlemen of the press, like it. Insofar as the other aspect of incidents on the Line of Control go, I did say that there is relative peace on the LoC. I did not say there is total peace. These incidents happen. It is regrettable. We deal with the incidents as they arrive.

Question (Mr. Vinod Sharma, Hindustan Times): Since last evening we have been hearing from Mrs. Rao's counterpart on the Pakistani delegation that the draft agreement, the so-called Agra Declaration or whatever, was discussed and agreed between the two Heads of Delegation and between the two Foreign Ministers and at the eleventh hour it was sabotaged or discarded or whatever by a hidden hand. That is the statement coming from the counterpart of the spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs. What do you have to say about this? Rashid Qureshi speaks for the President of Pakistan and he has been making these statements. Would you agree that right from the word go, be it in sartorial terms or be it in diplomatic terms, Pervez Musharraf treated this Summit as a media event to score certain media mileage over India?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: In both the aspects, I do not wish to comment on His Excellency General Pervez Musharraf sahab, the President of Pakistan, at all. So far as the official spokesman of the Government of Pakistan is concerned, I am sure you will understand that it is not for me to engage in rebuttals, contradictions, clarifications or in any kind of bandying of words with the official spokesman. I refuse to engage in that kind of exercise — “The official spokesman said this, what do you have to say?” The official spokesman will deal with it.

Question (Mr. Satish Jacob BBC): Prime Minister Vajpayee had been invited to Pakistan and we were told that he had accepted the invitation? Will he be going to Pakistan, and how soon?
Mr. Jaswant Singh: I think that was one of the first questions asked, if I am not mistaken by Pamela Constable and I have already answered it. The invitation was extended by His Excellency, the President of Pakistan. The Prime Minister of India has accepted that invitation. That fact remains in position. The dates of the visit, the convenience of the visit, etc., is now a matter of diplomatic arrangements and that will be dealt with in due time.

Question (Mr. Imtiaz Gul, The Friday Times, Lahore): You are calling Pakistan’s insistence on the centrality of Kashmir as a unifocal approach. But, as we understand, India is also pursuing almost the same approach by predominantly emphasising on the issue of cross-border terrorism. With what expectation did you invite General Musharraf? Did you expect that he would be giving in on this issue as he described that the Indians are not accepting it as a dispute?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: I must clarify this. There are two aspects of the question. Just as Pakistan is fixated upon the issue of Jammu and Kashmir, the distinguished questioner has suggested that we are fixated upon cross-border terrorism as the only issue. No. Let me correct this. It is one of the issues. It is a very important issue. I had made clear in my prepared text that the two approaches differ here. Pakistan’s approach is that unless the issue of Jammu and Kashmir is addressed nothing else will happen. India believes that in the totality of relationship between the two countries, all issues should be addressed simultaneously which is what really the composite dialogue process is all about. We believe and we continue to believe that as we progress in increasing confidence and trust, and movement of people between our two countries, there can and will no doubt be movement in regard to the issue of Jammu and Kashmir as well. There was a second part of the question which was relating to the expectation. So far as expectations are concerned, yes, certainly the invitation was inspired by the expectations of not the suggestion being that anyone should abandon the fixed positions of principle. Not at all. But the expectation was that there will be accommodation, understanding and movement forward.

Question (Mr. Chandan Mitra, Pioneer): Jaswantji, the build up to the Summit was not exactly propitious with a series of interviews being given by President Musharraf, which were fairly belligerent in tone. From your response also when you had to clarify a number of points, it was very clear that both countries were fairly determined to stick to their respective positions on the eve of the Summit. So, looking back at this kind of build up and the fact that both countries were fairly adamant on these two approaches that you spoke about, do you think the Summit was held prematurely, and that there was inadequate preparation, and that it would have been better if the preparations had happened at the level of officials and some of these key issues sorted out before the two leaders actually met?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: So far as the first part, Chandan, your suggestion that I was belligerent in ...

Question (Mr. Chandan Mitra, Pioneer): I did not say you were belligerent, Mr. Minister.

Mr. Jaswant Singh: But then I am glad that you do not think I was belligerent. As to the press interviews that General Pervez Musharraf sahab chose to give prior to visiting India, surely that is his choice. It is his determination and we do not at all wish to comment on that except to say what I have in my press statement that it is our belief, that we remain committed to it, that when it comes to discussions on bilateral and international issues, even if it did not involve Heads of Government and Heads of State, even if it involves officials of countries, we shall not negotiate through the media. That is our commitment.

I was very severely commented upon by a number of friends in the media that whereas in Pakistan there was almost two or three media events per day Mr. Vajpayee did not choose to give even one interview, and that I was remaining silent. I was not remaining silent because I had lost my speech! I was remaining silent because it is not proper for me to keep on engaging in answers to questions that arise, or rebuttals. That is not how diplomacy is conducted. When I chose to speak, it was only because a great many issues of importance to India were suffering through default. It was an obligation that I had to the nation and to the Government to make clear certain issues.

As to whether there should have been preparation, we did suggest to Government of Pakistan that firstly let there be an exchange of officials prior to the Summit. We volunteered that we will send the officials of the Ministry of External Affairs to Islamabad to sit with their counterparts to agree upon an agenda, and to prepare what is ordinarily done before such summits preparatory documents for the summit, so that all the preparatory work which is routine and which is normally done before such meetings is taken care of. Consistently we received a response from Pakistan that they did not want such a visit to take place, that they did not want officials to visit Islamabad, that so far as the agenda is concerned they did not wish to fix an agenda in advance, that it be left to the two Heads of Governments to determine the agenda when they meet. As hosts, we could only request our distinguished guests up to a point. We kept on uptill the last day almost, suggesting that it is better if there is preparatory work done and an agenda is determined. I cannot dictate: I can only request.

Question (Mr. Christopher Kramer, Sydney Morning Herald): Good Morning,
Mr. Singh. What are we left with in terms of India-Pakistan engagement? There have been a number of suggestions about the kinds of meetings and the levels at which they might take place. Say, over the next six months, what are the high levels at which do you expect the interaction exactly to be?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: Permit me to somewhat alter the suggestion of alarm in your question about what are we left with. It suggests that everything has collapsed in India-Pak relations. No, that is not so. This is an ancient relationship. Pakistan is our neighbour. I have made clear in the opening statement that I have given that India remains committed to working towards lasting peace, amity and co-operation with Pakistan and this high purpose which has inspired the Prime Minister’s public life will continue to be our purpose.

In practical terms, I have made clear that the invitation to the Prime Minister by His Excellency the President of Pakistan is in position. The invitation has been accepted. Through diplomatic methods a convenient date for such a visit will take place. No doubt that there will be other opportunities at other levels to continue with interaction between the two countries.

Question (Mr. Srinivasan Jain, NDTV): During the negotiations, at any stage, at any level, was there an acceptance of the centrality of Kashmir in any sort of peace process between India and Pakistan? Of course, other issues would also have been a part of that. But was there any acceptance that Kashmir would emerge as the central issue? Secondly, given the sort of serious differences that seemed to have emerged late last night when the talks eventually seemed to break down, what hopes you have? What could be the basis for any future engagement with Pakistan, at least with this regime?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: That Jammu and Kashmir is an issue which needs to be addressed has been recognised by India and so stated since, in fact, the Shimla Agreement. India remains firm on that. If some of you would go back to the text of Shimla Agreement you would find a reference to that. India’s position has, therefore, remained constant. We recognise that it is an issue. We are committed to addressing the issue. I understand you enquired about the centrality. I have answered that in my prepared text. Here we have a conceptual difference with Pakistan. We recognise it as an issue that needs to be addressed. We do not recognise it as the only issue. We do not certainly – I have answered this question and I do not wish to bore you with repeating the same reply – accept it as the core issue and such other definition. But we accept it as an issue and we are committed to addressing it.

Question (Mr. Srinivasan Jain, NDTV): I had a second part of the question which was, what was really the basis for any future talks given the very serious differences.
Mr. Jaswant Singh: Yes, and I have answered it. I have answered this to several other questioners earlier. I would not treat this as the end of the exercise. Our commitment to peace and dialogue, amity between the two countries remains. I have said this earlier. The caravan of peace will continue on its march. I have no doubt in my mind that on some auspicious day, it will reach its destination.

Question (Mr. Prem Prakash ANI): There was hardly any preparation for this Summit. Now that the invitation for Mr. Vajpayee has been accepted, can one expect that there would be preparation for that?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: I followed your question. Please let me correct this because in the question there is a misimpression as if India did not prepare for it. I do not believe that. I have now held this responsibility for several years. I have no difficulty in sharing with you that the officers of my Ministry have taken to despair as to how many demands are made on them about preparing for this visit! The Government of India or the Ministry of External Affairs or other Ministries were not lacking in preparation for this visit, were not wanting preparation. We were fully prepared. All the members of the delegation were fully briefed. The documents that we had prepared had not been prepared impromptu. They had been prepared weeks in advance, discussed at length between the ministerial colleagues and the delegation members. So, the preparation on India’s side was not lacking. All that I am pointing out is that when India suggested that let the officials of the two Governments meet, prepare some basic working documents and arrive at a possible agenda for submission to the Heads of Government, we found sadly that Pakistan did not want it in that manner.

Question (Ranjan Gupta, CBS): How will you now characterise India-Pakistan relations after the talks? Are they better than before the talks, or worse? Considering that a tremendous amount of much-displayed bilateralism did not succeed, will you go in for third party goodwill, third party mediation?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: Yes, we have a better understanding of the Government of Pakistan and I would hope that they have a better understanding of the Government of India. Third party – ‘No.’ Two parties are more than adequate. Three is a crowd.

Question (Ms. Aditi Phadnis, Business Standard): Mr. Minister, you have acknowledged that there are conceptual differences between India and Pakistan on various issues. If there are conceptual differences, what is the space left for you to take Indo-Pakistan relations forward?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: There are conceptual differences, but I believe that India and Pakistan’s relations should not be defined by differences. They must be able to move beyond and transcend the differences for the sake of the welfare of the peoples of the two countries. So far as my responsibility as the Minister of External Affairs of India goes, I do interpret my responsibility as one of constant endeavour to attempt to bridge the gaps of understanding, to continue to endeavour to reconcile differences. That indeed is the inspired thought that persuades the Prime Minister too.

Question (Mr. Siddharth Varadarajan, Times Of India): Would you use the word failure to describe the Agra Summit?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: No.

Question (Mr. Siddharth Varadarajan, Times Of India): Once talks have broken down in terms of the text of the declaration, was there any attempt to reach an understanding on a very basic minimum text such as, ‘the President of Pakistan has come, extended his invitation, the Prime Minister has agreed’ etc., something that would just be a minimum statement which could have been given and which might perhaps have given a better ending to this meeting, if as you said, you do not want to characterise it as a failure?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: No, I do not characterise it as a failure. I do term it as yet another step in our march towards finding lasting peace, amity and co-operation between the two countries. I do not wish to speculate what would have been better and what would not have been better. That is now in the realm of past.

Question (Mr. Stephen, London Times): Sir, you continue to emphasise the totality of relationships and he, one central issue. You look to the precedents of Shimla Accord, and the history, and to the future, and you keep issues confidential - whereas he talks in public. Can you do business with this man?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: Well, I have just done business with him. I have to deal with the world as it is and not as it ought to be.

Question (Mr. Raja Mohan, The Hindu): Mr. Minister, you said, ‘three is a crowd’. One of the problems at the Summit was Pakistan’s attempt to bring a third party into the definition of the problem whether through the notion of self-determination, whether through taking into account the wishes of the people. Was that one of the problems that did not allow the final declaration to come?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: There are two aspects of your question Raja. If I went into the details of answering the second, I would teeter very close to confidentiality of discussion. Permit me not to indulge in any such fine balancing acts. So far as the first which relates to ‘three is a crowd’, and was there any attempt to bring the third, no, there was not. India and Pakistan by themselves are enough to deal with India-Pakistan matters.

Question (Mr. Jairam, Indo Asean News Service): Mr. Minister, what will be the implication of this Summit on the SAARC process? Is it destined to remain in a limbo for long?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: I must make it clear that so far as SAARC is concerned, before the Summit the Foreign Secretary Mrs. Chokila Iyer was due to go in a special meeting of the Foreign Secretaries to initiate the SAARC process all afresh. Most regrettably, just then the sad and tragic events invaded Nepal which has insisted on postponement of that visit. I have no doubt that the Foreign Secretary has now got fresh dates for the purpose and she would be going and it is my hope that the SAARC Summit, subject of course to the convenience of the other member-countries and the host country Nepal where the meeting will take place.

Question (Mr. Smith, Press Trust Of India): I would like to know whether the talks achieved anything in real terms. Or, were they a futile exercise? Mr. Jaswant Singh: No, it is not a futile exercise. We remain committed. Real terms is your subjective way of putting it. Your real terms and my real terms might differ. I have an aeroplane to catch which does not wait for me. But I will answer that question.

Question (Ms. Kathy Soko, Kyoto Journal): It was not so long ago that M.J. Akbar had written in his book ‘Kashmir Behind the Veil’ quoting former statesman Jaiprakash Narain. He wrote in a confidential letter to Indira Gandhi many years ago – “We profess democracy but rule by force in Kashmir. We profess secularism but that Hindu nationalism stampeded us into trying to establish it by repression. Kashmir has distorted India’s image in the world as nothing has done. The problem exists not because Pakistan wants to grab Kashmir but because there is deep and widespread political discontent among the people.” Now, I would like to ask you, Sir, in the year 2001, how would you characterise Indian rule in Jammu and Kashmir?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: First of all, I do not agree with what late Jaiprakash had written. That is his personal viewpoint. When you call Indian rule, please correct yourself. The State of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India. Whatever internal problems that India faces, we are committed to resolving both internal as also the aspect of cross-border terrorism. Ladies and Gentlemen of the press, I am really in your hands. I have endeavoured as best as I could.

Question: Some of your crucial allies, even elements within your ruling family, are opposed reviving talks with Pakistan. In the wake of this failure, will the Government have some rethinking on this? Will there be a chance for the Prime Minister to meet the President in New York in the General Assembly Session?

Mr. Jaswant Singh: Firstly, this is not a failure. Secondly, your suggestion that there is any difference of opinion within the National Democratic Alliance, No. What you described as the family, not there either. Will he meet the President on the sideline of the United Nations General Assembly? That will be determined in due time.

1553. Press Conference of Pakistan Foreign Minister Abdul Sattar.

The Agra Summit remained inconclusive and it did not fail, said Foreign Minister Abdul Sattar while addressing a Press conference in Islamabad on July 17. He said Pakistan and India twice came close to adopting a joint declaration on the last day of the Summit but "it is unfortunate that the fruition of the exercise was aborted". He expressed the hope that the Summit can provide a basis for further dialogue between the two countries.

"Both sides are keen to use the progress that has been made for further discussion, this is our sense and we hope that this sense will be reciprocated by the other side," he said.

He said Prime Minister A.B. Vajpayee has accepted President Musharraf's invitation for a return visit. He said: "The two leaders are expected to meet in New York in September and continue efforts to promote an agreement. The goodwill between them is an asset for better relations between the two countries," he said.

The minister expressed the hope that a full agreement can be reached in the next meeting. "In fact the two leaders succeeded covering a broad area of common ground in the draft declaration. That will provide a valuable foundation for the two leaders to reach a full agreement at their next meeting," he said and added that he has also extended invitation to India's External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh to visit Pakistan.

He said more time is needed to clarify the approaches of the two sides on different issues. He said Pakistan expects India will allow APHC leaders to travel to Pakistan for consultations. Explaining the nature of the snags in response to a question, he said: "The snags relate to relationship between settlement of the Kashmir question and progress on normalisation of relations between the two countries. We came close to arriving at the settlement".

However, Mr Sattar admitted that the Indian authorities "created hurdles in the way of President Musharraf holding a Press conference before his departure from Agra". He said that before the start of the visit Pakistan Foreign Office had asked the Indian External Affairs Ministry to make arrangements for President Musharraf's Press conference at Agra. "We renewed our request in this regard but for reasons better known to India the Press conference was not arranged," said the Foreign Minister.
He said valuable progress was made at Agra on evolving a structure for a sustained dialogue process “that would take up Jammu and Kashmir, peace and security, and terrorism and drug trafficking at the political level. Economic and commercial cooperation, Siachen, Wullar Barrage, Sir Creek and promotion of friendly exchanges at various levels would be addressed at the level of high officials”.

He said that all these issues need to be addressed purposefully, constructively and in an integrated manner, with a sense of urgency. He said, responding to Press questions, the President of Pakistan was forthcoming on discussion of any issues of concern to India. He emphasised again and again that realism requires a focus, and that progress on settlement of Jammu and Kashmir will be conducive to normalisation of bilateral relations, he said.

"President Musharraf and Mr. Vajpayee share a common vision of peace, progress and prosperity for their peoples in the 21st century," he said. He told a questioner that the draft declaration on which meeting of minds was achieved referred to subjects of cross-border terrorism and narcotics control that needed to be addressed.

He said that there is no international border between the two countries in Jammu and Kashmir and no reference has been made to cross the Line of Control in the course of drafting of declaration. Responding to a question, the minister said that a leading Kashmiri figure has said that it is Indian repression in the valley that has driven Kashmiris to launch an armed struggle against Indian troops.

He said the words of cross border terrorism are basically meant to divert the attention from the brutalities being committed by the Indian forces in Kashmir. About Gen Musharraf’s meeting with Indian media, Mr. Sattar said that the proceedings of the meeting were telecast live by the Indian electronic media.

When his attention was drawn to the fact that one of the senior Pakistani journalists, Rana Jawad, was manhandled in Agra, Mr. Sattar said that Pakistan has taken up the issue with the Indian authorities.
In response to questions, the Spokesperson said the following:

- Asked about the statement of Pakistan's Foreign Minister Mr. Abdul Sattar that considerable understanding was reached at the Agra summit, the Spokesperson said that we have seen Foreign Minister Sattar's statement and comments to the media yesterday on President General Pervez Musharraf’s visit to India. We are happy that President Musharraf has carried the impression back to Pakistan that there is a great desire within India for the establishment of good neighbourly relations between India and Pakistan. The caravan of peace will move ahead, our engagement with Pakistan will continue. The processes of peace that have been put in place at the initiative of the Prime Minister will also proceed forward. It was disappointing that no closure was reached on the text of an agreement. We will, therefore, have to begin again on the basis of the existing agreements, i.e. Simla Agreement and the Lahore Declaration, which are the cornerstones of India Pakistan bilateral relations.

- Asked to respond where the Agra summit stands if Pakistan and India have to begin on the basis of existing agreements, the Spokesperson said that the initiative taken by the Prime Minister has been carried forward by this meeting. The processes of peace will be carried forward.

- Asked to comment about the Pakistan Foreign Minister referring to cross-border terrorism as being apart from cross-LoC terrorism, the Spokesperson said that, we are astonished by the technicality that Pakistan has voiced. We know very well that Pakistan understands perfectly what is meant by cross-border terrorism which is inclusive of encouraging and abetting infiltration of terrorists across the Line of Control.

- Asked to comment about the Pakistan's Foreign Minister statement that one cannot avoid the media in parleying a simultaneous role in contemporary diplomatic negotiations, the Spokesperson said that this is a very novel interpretation on how diplomatic parleys are to be conducted. While we recognise the need for information access on the part of the media, such information cannot violate the terms of confidentiality; secondly it must not violate the terms of diplomatic propriety either. Thirdly there is a time-tested code of conduct between the host and the guest in regard to observance and to which applies to both in terms of access being provided to media. This is because if the logic of media conducting negotiations simultaneously with the principals Pakistan has said that the July 18 statement of the spokesperson of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs appeared to disavow the understandings reached between President Pervez Musharraf and Indian Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee during the Agra Summit.

"We have moved forward at Agra and the journey should continue," the Foreign Office spokesman said in a statement on July 19. He said on July 17, the Indian External Affairs Minister had told a Press conference that "we will pick up the threads from the visit of the President of Pakistan". On the same day, the spokesman said the Pakistan Foreign Minister expressed a similar resolve at a Press conference.

The two sides, he said, were unable to reach agreement at Agra on the full text of a joint declaration because of differences on one of its paragraphs. Nevertheless, the spokesman said, in the course of talks the two leaders reached several understandings which signified a substantial forward step in bilateral relations. Pakistan, he said, believed that these understandings should be preserved and expanded in the interest of peace, security and development. "We hope the government of India will join us in efforts to build on the foundation of these understandings."

The spokesman said President Musharraf's visit to India was an important milestone on the road to resolving the Jammu and Kashmir dispute and other outstanding issues and establishing good neighbourly relations between the two countries.

"Pakistan-India relations are governed by the UN Charter, international law and obligations arising from the multilateral and bilateral agreements to which the two countries are parties. Pakistan adheres to all of them," he added.

Admitting that he returned from India empty-handed, President Pervez Musharraf announced on July 20 to carry forward the dialogue process by giving peace a big chance, as he found no wide gulf between Pakistan and India to address the core issue of Kashmir.

"I returned from India empty-handed, but not disappointed, as the Agra Summit had generated tremendous goodwill and understanding," said Gen Musharraf in his first Press conference since he returned from India. The Press conference, with live-telecast on the electronic media, was attended by a large number of Pakistani and foreign journalists, including Indians.

Gen Musharraf said: "The wide gulf between India and Pakistan has in fact narrowed as a result of the Summit, though twice we were close to signing the declaration." He hoped that the India - Pakistan dialogue process will continue as Pakistan is formally inviting both Indian Prime Minister Vajpayee and External Affairs Minister Jaswant Singh for talks.

He said: "I regret and deplore that twice a mutually-agreed draft declaration could not be issued by us." He added: "It is not time to throw blame on each other." Contrary to what the Indians are projecting in the form of misinformation, Gen Musharraf said 90 per cent time of his four one-to-one meetings with Mr. Vajpayee, which spread over six hours, remained focused on the Kashmir dispute.

CREATING HISTORY

"I asked Mr. Vajpayee to create history together, and I tried to bring down the hostility, mistrust and suspicions and worked for peace for one-fifth of the humanity." Spelling out four points for resolving the Kashmir dispute, he said he would have certainly extended his visit by one day if the Indian side had requested him. It was not a football match and there was no question of scoring goals or points. If talks had failed the losers were the people of India, Pakistan and Kashmir; and if we had reached the agreement again the people of the world would have gained." He said he saw disappointment writ large on the faces of the people, but now "I feel no body can stop the process from moving forward."

He raised three questions and said: "A truthful and honest answers will take us forward for strategic objectives of resolving the Kashmir dispute.” These are: "Do we genuinely want peace and bring a new era for the sake of our people?" He said overwhelming majority would say 'yes' to it and he personally wanted to give peace a big chance; "can we bring peace without resolution, of the Kashmir issue? He said ‘no, never’ and “why do we shy away from acknowledging this reality. He said resolution of the Kashmir dispute is the heart of Indo-Pak relations; and “can we reach a resolution on the Kashmir dispute without involving the Kashmiris?” He said it is just not possible.

OTHER ISSUES

He, however, said one should lay the focus where it belongs and did not deny or negate the importance of other issues bedeviling Indo-Pak relations. He enlisted Siachen, peace and security, strife within Kashmir, Sir Creek, strategic and nuclear issues, Wullar or Tulbul Barrage, economic and commercial ties, Jinnah House in Bombay, POWs, fishermen, visa problems and some other issues categorised as less important than the Kashmir dispute.

He asked whether any of these issues has any comparison with the Kashmir dispute. "Our policy is not uni-focal, rigid, as we also want to address all these problems," he said: "Put the correct focus on the core issue and then go along with all other issues in tandem, and do not try to have Utopia," he said.

He said the biggest CBM is the resolution of the Kashmir dispute. "Let us make the people of India, Pakistan and Kashmir judges on this issue who are allowed to prepare a declaration for the two governments, as writing a two-page declaration is just no problem," President Musharraf said.

He said there must be progress to be made for a mutually agreed agreement among India, Pakistan and the Kashmiris; importance of all the issues be recognised in tandem; there must be a structure for discussion on these issues and finally a time-frame for the resolution of these issues.

KEENNESS FOR PEACE
