Note from Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan High Commission in India.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No.PSP/411/6/71 February 5, 1971

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission of Pakistan in India and has the honour to state as follows:

2. A demonstration by the Delhi University Students Organisation took place outside the Chancery premises of the Pakistan High Commission on the 3rd February, 1971, resulting from the actions of the authorities in Pakistan in respect of the two criminals who hijacked an Indian Airlines aircraft to Lahore and were finally allowed to blow it up three and a half days later, The Indian authorities had taken full and adequate measures to ensure that the demonstrators should not enter the premises of the Pakistan High Commission, cause any damage to them or violate the normal facilities extended to all diplomatic missions.

3. Unfortunately, when the demonstrators were outside the Chancery of the Pakistan High Commission, several members of the Pakistan High Commission started throwing stones and brickbats from inside the High Commission premises at the demonstrators outside which resulted in injuries to some of the demonstrators as well as several police officials on protective duty in the area. It is further reported that some members of the High Commission indulged in other regrettable acts such as using provocative and threatening language against the demonstrators. Photographers have appeared in the newspapers of the 4th February, 1971 of members of the Pakistan High Commission throwing stones from inside the High Commission premises at the demonstrators. These unusual and unfortunate action on the part of the High commission staff greatly provoked the demonstrators and rendered the task of the police personnel extremely difficult.

4. The Ministry of External Affairs express their surprise and concern at such unusual behaviour on the part of the members of the Pakistan High Commission and express the hope that members of the Mission would refrain from such provocative acts. The Ministry of External Affairs would like to assure the High Commission of Pakistan in India that they are taking every possible step to ensure the safety and security of the Pakistan Mission and its personnel.
5. The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

New Delhi, February 5, 1971.

No. PSP/411/6/71 February 5, 1971

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission of Pakistan in India and has the honour to stated as follows.

The two persons, Mohammed Hashim Qureshi and Mohammed Ashraf, who hijacked an Indian airlines aircraft to Lahore on January 30, 1971 are guilty of serious criminal offences under Indian laws by which they are required to stand their trial in India. It is requested that they may be returned immediately under escort to the Indian authorities at a place and time to be mutually agreed, the details of which may be communicated at an early date.

The Ministry of External Affairs avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

0567. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

Islamabad, February 5, 1971.

5th February, 1971

The Ministry of Foreign affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission for India in Islamabad and has the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the High Commission’s Note No: ISL/103/6/71 dated 4th February, 1971, conveying the decision of the Indian Government to suspend, with immediate effect, the over flight of all Pakistani aircraft over its territory.

2. The Government of Pakistan categorically reject the contention of the Government of India that the Pakistan authorities are responsible for the hijacking and had deliberately allowed the Indian Airlines Corporation plane to be blown up. The High Commission is fully aware that the plane was throughout in the possession of hijackers and any attempt at dislodging them by force by the Pakistan authorities could only have been counterproductive. The Government of Pakistan took all reasonable measures within its means to obtain the release of the plane. It has since officially deplored the blowing up of the plane.

3. The logic of the demand by the Government of India for compensation is not understood. The IAC aeroplane was hijacked by two nationals of Kashmir, a territory which is under the military occupation of India. It is beyond comprehension how the Government of India could consider the Government of Pakistan in any manner responsible for the act of hijacking. The Government of Pakistan subscribes to international conventions which are designed to discourage hijacking and fully stands by its comments. It cannot however have control over and be responsible for hijacking of planes by persons outside its territorial jurisdiction.

4. The High Commission’s Note regarding compensation for the IAC aircraft was received late in the evening of 3rd February 1971. The Government of Pakistan regrets that within a short period of the delivery of the said Notes, the Government of India should unilaterally decide to suspend the overflights of all Pakistani aircraft including civilians aircraft over the Indian territory. These overflights have been operating on reciprocal basis, under agreed arrangement between the two governments. Their suspension in this arbitrary and unilateral manner cannot but be interpreted as a serious breach of international and bilateral commitments.

5. The Government of Pakistan is surprised at the Government of India’s claim that the said measure was taken not to inconvenience the people of Pakistan. The Government of India is well aware that the commercial PIA flights, apart from passengers, carry essential supplies to East Pakistan and the suspension of these flights cannot but adversely affect the present relief operations in East Pakistan.

6. The hijacking incident is the direct result of repressive measures taken by the Government of India in occupied Kashmir. The Government of Pakistan regrets that instead of employing normal diplomatic procedures for resolving it, the Government of India has used this incident to heighten tension between the two countries. In addition to the suspension of overflights of all Pakistani aircraft over Indian territory, the Pakistani diplomatic mission and its personnel in New Delhi have been subjected to unceasing demonstrations for the last few days which culminated yesterday in the burning of High Commission property and injuries to its personnel. The Government of India’s attention has been invited to this in an aide memoire which was handed over to the Indian High Commissioner yesterday, as well as in oral representations made to him.

7. The Government of Pakistan has no wish to allow the situation to deteriorate further, and while reserving its position to claim compensation for the damage caused to the Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi, requests the Government of India to rescind its decision to ban the overflights of Pakistan aircraft, and invites it to have recourse to established diplomatic procedures so as to allow the situation to return to normal. There is no reason why this problem, like other matters between our two countries, cannot be solved by mutual discussion, in a spirit of understanding.

8. The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of India in Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

New Delhi, February 9, 1971.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No. PSP/411/6/71 9 February, 1971

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India and with reference to the Note-Verbale dated 5 February 1971, handed over to the High Commission for India, by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan, has the honour to state as follows:

The Government of India categorically reject the disclaimer of the Government of Pakistan of their responsibility for and involvement in the crime of hijacking of the Indian Airlines aircraft to Lahore airport, on 30 January 1971, and its blowing up on 2 February 1971. Instead of showing a willingness to settle the matter amicably and agreeing to pay compensation for the loss and damage caused, the Government of Pakistan have sought to confuse the issue by introducing wholly extraneous matters and have even gone to the extent of questioning the sovereignty and territorial integrity of India. The Government of India regard this attitude of the Government of Pakistan as totally uncooperative, negative and obstructive. If the Government of Pakistan are not willing to settle the matter of compensation and to return the two hijackers to face their trial in India, the situation may deteriorate, and Government of Pakistan will be wholly responsible for any consequences that may follow.

The Government of India are fully convinced, on the basis of evidence, that the premeditated criminal act of hijacking and wanton destruction of the India Airlines aircraft within the protected area of Lahore International Airport was the direct result of the Government of Pakistan having permitted their territory to be used for instigating, abetting and encouraging unlawful and subversive activities against India. The Government of India wish to remind the Government of Pakistan that on 1 September 1970, they had informed the Government of Pakistan through their High Commissioner in New Delhi about the existence of a conspiracy in Pakistan to hijack Indian aircraft to that country. It was because of the active involvement of agencies of the Government of Pakistan in such subversive activities that the Government of India had recently to declare a member of the diplomatic personnel of the Pakistan High Commission in India persona non grata.

The responsibility of the Government of Pakistan for the criminal hijacking and deliberate destruction of the Indian Airlines aircraft is borne out, inter alia, by the following facts:

(i) The Government of Pakistan gave asylum to the two self-confessed criminals even while they were threatening to blow up the Plane and before they had been disarmed and had surrendered themselves to the Pakistan authorities;

(ii) They have publicly expressed their solidarity with these criminals and their associates;

(iii) They refused to disarm the hijackers and take them into custody;

(iv) They failed to take adequate measures to protect the aircraft and its contents;

(v) They permitted the two criminals to move and act freely in the airport area and terminal building, including making long-distance telephone calls to their accomplices in Pakistan and meeting Political leaders like Mr. Z.A. Bhutto, Mian Mahmood Ali Kasuri, etc., journalist and others freely;

(vi) The criminal were provided with food and other amenities for three and a half days, thus facilitating their continued unlawful occupation of the plane;

(vii) The Lahore Station of Pakistan TV — a Government organization — was obviously with foreknowledge, able to film and later televise the entire sequence of the blowing up of the aircraft;

(viii) The two criminals, even after they had come out of the aircraft, were allowed to prevent the local fire Brigade from fighting the flames engulfing the aircraft;

(ix) Crowds were permitted to congregate in the protected area of an international airport when the authorities had all the resources of a Martial Law administration available to them;

(x) The two criminals were allowed to destroy the aircraft in full view of the troops, police and other airport personnel; and

(xi) The Government of Pakistan created unnecessary delays and difficulties frustrating the attempts of the Government of India to be of assistance in bringing back to India the passengers, crew and contents of the aircraft besides the aircraft itself.

The conduct of the Government of Pakistan in relation to this act of air piracy compelled the Government of India to enforce certain measures for ensuring safety of aviation and the restoration of public confidence in air transit. Accordingly, they were compelled to reroute their own services to avoid overflying Pakistan and to suspend over flights across Indian territory by Pakistan aircraft, both civil and military. The violation by the Government of Pakistan of their international obligations under the Tokyo Convention of 1963 on Certain Offence on Board Aircraft, the Solemn Declaration of the Extraordinary Session of the Assembly of the International Civil Aviation Organization held at Montreal in June 1970, the United Nations General Assembly resolution 2645 (XXV), and the Hague Convention of December 1970, and their failure even now to give compensation for the loss and damage caused to India and to prosecute the two hijackers and return them to India make it clear that the Government of Pakistan are not willing to ensure the safety and security of aviation and air transit over the sub-continent. It is therefore necessary to continue these restrictions until the Government of Pakistan accept their responsibility and make amends for what has been done and give assurance about the future.

The Government of India are amazed at the accusation made by the Government of Pakistan that India’s action will interfere in the carriage of essential supplies for relief work in East Pakistan. They would like to remind the Government of Pakistan that they had given the extraordinary facilities of a blanket clearance, covering unrestricted number of over flights, even at night, by Pakistan Air Force aircraft across Indian territory, for ferrying relief supplies to East Pakistan, for a period of over two months. Further, it was the Government of Pakistan that created all kinds of difficulties and obstructions in the way of commencing and maintaining the deliveries of relief supplies from India for the cyclone-affected people of East Pakistan. In any case, if the Government of Pakistan wish to fly any relief supplies to East Pakistan, they can still do so in foreign aircraft. Instead of accusing the Government of India, the Government of Pakistan should ponder whether through their willful interference in the internal affairs of India they are not creating a situation of confrontation which is not in the interests of the people of India or Pakistan.

The Government of India take serious objection to the reference to the internal affairs of India in the note under reference, and wish to remind the Government of Pakistan of their obligation to vacate their aggression on Indian territory in the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir. If the Government of Pakistan persists in its attitude of openly or clandestinely interfering in India’s internal affairs, they will be wholly responsible for the consequences of this policy.

The Government of India categorically reject the insinuation in the same note that the Pakistan High Commission in India and its personnel were deliberately subjected to demonstrations, and draw the attention of the Government of Pakistan to the extraordinary behavior of the personnel of the mission whose fusillade of brickbats and bottles injured the police and other personnel engaged in the duty of protecting the mission and its personnel. The Government of Pakistan should realize that these spontaneous demonstrations were only a natural expression of the indignation of all sections of the Indian people against the deliberate provocation of the Government of Pakistan. The Government of India categorically deny that any member of the Pakistani mission was injured or even touched by the demonstrators. The Government of India had assured the Pakistani mission that all possible measures had been taken and would continue to be taken to safeguard their security and this assurance has been fully implemented by the Government of India through the very elaborate preventive measures they took.

The demands made by the Government of India are logical and simple: first, the Government of India should be compensated for the loss of the aircraft, and secondly, the two criminals who hijacked the aircraft should be surrendered to Indian authorities so that they can stand their trial.

The Ministry of External Affairs avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan in India the assurance of their highest consideration.

0569. Press Note issued by the Government of Pakistan regarding the “Recovery of Dues to Enemy Subjects or Firms etc.”

PRESS NOTE, E.NO. 373 A.

Recovery of dues to enemy subject or firms from Pakistan Parties.

SPECIAL TRIBUNAL SET UP TO HEAR PETITIONS FROM AGGRIEVED

The CMLA has been pleased to promulgate the Marial Law Regulation No. 70 dated 26th September 1970, concerning matters relating to recovery of amounts due from Pakistani parties to enemy subjects or enemy firms. The MLR authorizes the Custodian of Enemy Property for Pakistan to call upon a person or an organization to pay his or its dues, allowing him at least 15 days time for the purpose. If the person or party concerned fails to pay the dues, the Custodian has the authority to take possession of his or its property and to recover the dues by sale of the property.

In order to provide opportunities of representation and redress to aggrieved parties, the MLR lays down that the Central Government shall constitute a Special Tribunal of which at least one member shall be a retired Judge of the High Court or a person qualified to be a judge of the High Court to hear petitions filed by the aggrieved parties. A Special Tribunal with Mr. Justice Aminul Islam, SQA., a former Judge of the East Pakistan High Court, Dacca, has been set up for the whole of Pakistan and is located at 75 Kakrail Road, Dacca. The Special Tribunal shall, for the purpose of a proceeding under the MLR, have the same power as are vested in a civil court under the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908 (Act V of 1908) for trial of a suit. The decision of the Special Tribunal shall be final and shall not be called in question by or before any court including the Supreme Court and the High Courts. A party aggrieved by an order issued under the MLR or under the provisions of the Defence of Pakistan Rules shall have the right to file an appeal against such order before the Tribunal within 30 days of the issuance of the order.

No.PII/452/4/71 February 15, 1971

The Ministry of External Affairs present their compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India and have the honour to State as follows:

The Government of India are disturbed to learn that the two criminals who hijacked an Indian aircraft to Pakistan on January 30, 1971, and blow it up at Lahore airport on February 2, 1971, have already been lionized and publicly paraded in Lahore and that they are being permitted to be similarly lionized and paraded in Rawalpindi today. The Government of India feel concerned over the possibility that such licence given to these self-confessed criminals and their associates may lead to further attacks on the High Commission of India in Pakistan and its personnel.

The Government of India therefore request that adequate measures be taken to protect the Indian mission in Pakistan and their personnel in terms of the assurance already conveyed by the Government of Pakistan.

The Ministry of External Affairs take this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for Pakistan the assurance of their highest consideration.

New Delhi, February 16, 1971.

The Ministry of External Affairs present their compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India and have the honour to State as follows:

2. The Government of India have noted with serious concern the refusal of the Government of Pakistan to accept their request for the return of Mohd. Hashim Qureshi and Mohd. Ashraf to India, who hijacked the Indian Airlines aircraft to Lahore on January 30, 1971.

3. Instead of co-operating in this matter so that an amicable solution can be found, the Government of Pakistan have attempted in their Aide Memoire, handed over to the High Commissioner for India in Pakistan on February 6, 1971, to question the territorial affairs. On this particular aspect, the Government of India have made the position amply clear and it does not require reiteration.

4. As regards the two criminals, they are guilty of a serious crime and are required for trial in India. The Government of Pakistan are required to return them to India and the Government of India would once again urge them to do so. The responsibility for the consequences of continued refusal would rest wholly on the Government of Pakistan.

5. The Ministry of External Affairs avail themselves of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for Pakistan the assurances of their highest consideration.

The Ministry of External Affairs present its compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India and, with reference to Note dated 13 February 1971 handed over to the High Commission for India in Islamabad by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, has the honour to state as follows:

2. The Government of India regret to note that instead of making any effort to seek an amicable settlement of the situation arising from the hijacking and eventual destruction of the IAC aircraft on the lines suggested in the note of 9 February 1971, the Government of Pakistan have again sought to confuse the issue by introducing extraneous and irrelevant matters and by making obviously incorrect statements, e.g. that Indian aircraft continued to over fly Pakistan even after over flights by Pakistani aircraft had been banned. The Government of Pakistan are well aware that over flights of Pakistan territory by Indian aircraft had completely ceased before the ban in question was imposed.

3. The Government of India have already stated their position to the Government of Pakistan. The Government of Pakistan’s failure to deal with the two hijackers and the manner in which they have dealt with the whole matter cannot but be an open encouragement to the repetition of such criminal acts in future.

4. The Government of India wish to remind the Government of Pakistan that after the Indo-Pakistan conflict of August/September 1965, they would have been well within their right to disallow the resumption of over flights so long as relations between India and Pakistan had not been fully normalized. However, on a specific request made by the then President of Pakistan, the Government of India agreed, in February 1966, to forego their right to demand prior settlement of outstanding issues and consented to resume mutual over flights. Such over flights by the scheduled services of the civil airlines of one country across the territory of another are, as the Government of Pakistan are aware, a matter of privilege. They constitute a facet of the normal relations between the countries concerned and the privilege in question is extended in the context of the broad and universally accepted objective of fostering better relations and friendliness within the family of nations. In this context, the Government of India would reiterate that the hijacking of the IAC aircraft and its destruction were the direct result of the policy of confrontation and interference pursued by the Government of Pakistan over the years. In the circumstances, the Government of India are constrained to conclude that the hostile policy of the Government of Pakistan against India and the manner in which they have dealt with the recent hijacking of the Indian aircraft pose a direct threat to the safety of aviation and air transit and the national security of India. The Government of India are therefore perfectly within their right to demand action against the hijackers, compensation for loss and adequate assurances from the Government of Pakistan regarding the future.

5. The Government of India take serious objection to the slanderous accusations contained in the note under reply and categorically reject them. They further wish to state that should the Government of Pakistan genuinely desire an amicable settlement of the present question and restoration of normal relations, they should refrain from interfering in our internal affairs. On their part, the Government of India would be willing to receive from the Government of Pakistan directly through normal diplomatic channels any concrete indications of the willingness of the Government of Pakistan to proceed towards a settlement of the question of compensation for the loss of the IAC aircraft, the punishment of the two criminals who hijacked it and adequate assurances regarding the future.

6. The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan in India the assurance of its highest consideration.

The High Commission of Pakistan in India,
New Delhi.

Personal discussion would have been better. Maintaining absolute secrecy and my movement free from suspicion. Mujib’s dissatisfaction conveyed by emissary captain Sujat Ali. Mujib again sent special appeal for help at this critical hour. Two and a half divisions Pakistan army commanded by Lt. General Mitha Khan being moved from Quetta to East Pakistan. Mujib feels this movement possible due to withdrawal of Indian Army from West Pakistan Border. Mujib also feels interception of troops, ships and aircraft to East Pakistan on pretext violation of Indian Borders can only shake military morale. India’s decision in this connection be communicated immediately so that Mujib can decide his next move.

2. U.S. Ambassador Farland during talks with Mujib agreed to ensure withdrawal of Pakistan Army from East Pakistan on condition leasing of a bay island for seven years. Mujib reluctant to agree but if no help forthcoming from big Asian nations particularly India, Awami League may be forced to accept Farland’s proposal ultimately. Mujib says East Pakistan has gone to the point of no return and is in position to strike at the army with Arm provided India could stop further reinforcement. Mujib wants your decision immediately. Mujib has no alternative but to fight for independence. If we can gain gratitude of Bangladesh by showing slightest good gesture our Naga and Mizo problems would be settled fully and Kashmir problem fifty percent. Note of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

No. IN(III)-14/1/71 March 22, 1971

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission for India in Islamabad and with reference to Note dated 3 March 1971, handed over to the High Commission for Pakistan in New Delhi by the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, has the honour to state as follows:

2. The Government of Pakistan notes with regret that the Government of India has so far not agreed to withdraw its unjustified ban on flights of Pakistani aircraft over the Indian territory. Instead, the Government of India has suggested that these over flights are in the nature of “privilege: extended to Pakistan in 1966 and that India was within its rights to withdraw it unilaterally. The Government of Pakistan cannot accept this position and are firmly of the opinion that the mutual over flying rights are governed by the 1948 Agreement between Pakistan and India as well as International Conventions on the subject. Even if, for the sake of argument, the Government of India could claim that after the 1965 conflict it was “well within their right to disallow the resumption of over flights so long as relations between India and Pakistan had not been fully normalized”, the Government of India has, in the note under reference, acknowledged that the “Government of India agreed, in February 1966, to forego their right to demand prior settlement of outstanding issues and consented to resume mutual over flights”. So far as outstanding disputes are concerned it has always been the endeavor of the Government of Pakistan to settle them in a peaceful, just and equitable manner.

3. In regard to the Government of India’s allegation of Pakistan’s “failure” to deal with the hijackers and their complaint about the “manner in which Pakistan dealt with the whole matter”, the helpful action taken by the Government of Pakistan has already been explained fully in the notes of 5 and 13 February 1971. Besides, the Government of Pakistan would invite the attention of the Government of India to the recent announcement in which it has been stated that a judicial inquiry, headed by a High Court Judge, is being held to investigate into the hijacking incident.

4. The Government of Pakistan rejects the contention of the Government of India that the Government of Pakistan has in any way interfered in the internal affairs of India. Without wishing to enter into a controversy, the Government of Pakistan invites attention to the fact that it is the Government of India which has on occasions interfered in the internal affairs of Pakistan. In this context, attention is drawn to a statement reported to have been made by the Government of India spokesman on 8 March 1971, in which referring to the question of rescinding the ban on over flights, it was remarked that “it is obvious the people of East Pakistan would view any sudden ending of the ban with deep misgivings”.

5. The Government of Pakistan once again invites the Government of India to withdraw the ban on over flights of Pakistani aircraft across Indian territory, imposed in violation of the provisions of the International Conventions and bilateral Agreement. This step will also create favourable condition for an amicable discussion of the hijacking incident and related issues for which Pakistan remains ready as before. With this and in view, the Government of Pakistan invites the Government of India to instruct its High Commission in Islamabad to enter into negotiations with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan.

6. The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of its highest consideration.

The High Commission for India in Pakistan, Islamabad.

Islamabad, March 26, 1971.

On the sixth of this month I announced March 25 as the new date for the inaugural session of the National Assembly, hoping that conditions would permit the holding of the session on the appointed date. Events have, however, not justified my hope and the nation has continued to face a grave crisis.

In East Pakistan, a non cooperation and disobedience movement was launched by the Awami League and matters took a serious turn. The events were moving very fast and it became absolutely imperative that the situation was brought under control as soon as possible.

With this end in view I had a series of discussions with political leaders in West Pakistan and subsequently on March 15, I had a number of meetings with Sheikh Mujibur Rehman in order to resolve the political impasse. Having consulted West Pakistani leaders, it was necessary for me to do the same over there so that the areas of agreement could be identified and an amicable settlement arrived at.

As has been reported in the Press and other news media from time to time, my talks with Sheikh Mujibur Rehman showed some progress. Having reached a certain stage in my negotiations with Sheikh Mujibur Rehman, I considered it necessary to have another round of talks with West Pakistan leaders in Dacca. Mr. Bhutto reached there on March 21 and I had a number of meetings with him.

As you are aware, the leader of the Awami League had asked for the withdrawal of Martial Law and transfer of power prior to the meeting of the National Assembly. In our discussions, he proposed that this Interim period could be covered by a proclamation by me, whereby Martial Law would be withdrawn, provincial Governments set up and the National Assembly divided into two committees, on composed of members of East Pakistan and the other composed of members from West Pakistan. Despite some serious flaws in this scheme in its legal and other aspects, I was prepared to agree, in principle, to this plan in the interests of peaceful transfer of power but with one condition. The condition which I clearly explained to Sheikh Mujibur Rehman was that I must first have unequivocal agreement of all political leaders to this scheme.

I, therefore, discussed the proposal with other political leaders. I found them unanimously of the view that the proposed proclamation by me would have no legal sanction whatsoever. It will neither have cover for Martial Law nor could it claim to have been based on the will of the people. Thus, a vacuum would be created and chaotic conditions would ensue. They also considered that the splitting of the National Assembly in two parts through a proclamation would encourage divisive tendencies that may exist. They, therefore, expressed the opinion that if it is intended to lift Martial Law and transfer power in the Interim period, the National Assembly should meet to draft an Interim Constitution Bill and present it to me for my assent. I entirely agreed with their view and requested them to tell Sheikh Mujibur Rehman to take a reasonable attitude on this issue.

I told the leaders to explain their views to him that his scheme whereby on the one hand you extinguish all source of power and Martial Law and on the other fail to replace it by the will of the people (in the National Assembly) will merely result in chaos.

They agreed to meet Sheikh Mujibur Rehman, explain the position and try to obtain his agreement to the Interim arrangement for the transfer of power to emanate from the National Assembly.
The Political leaders were also perturbed over Sheikh Mujibur’s idea of dividing the National Assembly in two parts right from the very start. Such a move, they said, would be totally against the interests of Pakistan’s integrity.

The Chairman of the Pakistan People’s Party at the meeting between myself, Sheikh Mujibur Rehman and him had also expressed similar views to Mujibur.

On the evening of March 23 political leaders who had gone to talk to Mujib on this issue called on me and informed me that he was not agreeable to any changes in his scheme. All he really wanted me to do was to make the proclamation whereby I withdraw Martial Law and transfer power.

Sheikh Mujibur’s decision of starting his non-cooperation movement is an act of treason. He and his party have defied the lawful authority for over three weeks; they have insulted the Pakistan flag and defiled photograph of the father of the nation. They have tried to run a parallel Government, they have created turmoil, terror, insecurity and a number of murders have been committed in the name of the movement. Non-Bengali brethren and others who have settled in East Pakistan are living in a state of terror and are fleeing for fear of their lives.

The armed forces in East Pakistan have been repeatedly subjected to taunts and insults of all kinds. I wish to compliment them on the tremendous restraint that they have shown in the face of grave provocation. Their sense of discipline is indeed praiseworthy. I am proud of them.

I should have taken action against Sheikh Mujibur and his collaborators weeks ago, but I had to try my utmost to handle the situation in such a manner as not to jeopardize my plan for a peaceful transfer of power. In my keenness to achieve this end I kept on tolerating one illegal action after another and at the same time was trying to arrive at some solution. I hardly mention the efforts made by me and by the various political leaders to get Mujib to see reason. We have left no stone unturned, but he has failed to respond in a positive manner. On the other hand, he and his followers kept on flouting the authority of the Government even during my presence in Dacca.

The proclamation that he proposed I should make was nothing but a trap. He knew that it would not have been worth the paper it was written on and he could have done anything with impunity. His obduracy and his absolute refusal to talk sense made one conclude that the man and his party are enemies of Pakistan. They want East Pakistan to break away completely from the country.

We will not let some power-hungry, unpatriotic people to destroy this country and play with the destiny of 120 million people.
In my address to the nation on March 16, I had told you that it is the duty of the Pakistan armed forces to ensure the integrity, solidarity and security of Pakistan. I have ordered them to do their duty and fully restore the authority of the Government.

In view of the grave situation that exists in the country today, I have decided to ban all political activities throughout the country. As for the Awami League, it is completely banned as a political party. I have also decided to impose a complete Press censorship. Martial Law regulations will very shortly be issued in pursuance of these decisions.

In the end, let me assure you that my main aim remains the same, namely, transfer of power to the elected representatives of the people. The sooner the situation permits, I will take fresh steps towards the achievement of this objective.

It is my hope that the law and order situation will soon return to normal in East Pakistan so that we can again move forward towards our cherished goal.

I appeal to my countrymen to appreciate the gravity of the situation for which the blame rests entirely on anti-Pakistan and (secessionist) elements.

0576. TOP SECRET

Record of conversation between Chairman Kosygin and the Indian Ambassador D.P. Dhar.

Moscow, March 23, 1971. (10.00 AM)

Apart from the Interpreter the Chairman was assisted by Mr. Fomin and his Special Assistant. The Ambassador was accompanied by the Minister.

The Chairman opened the conversation by asking the Ambassador whether he was leaving for Delhi in the near future. The Ambassador replied that he would not be leaving for Delhi immediately but might do so after a few weeks. The Ambassador said as the question of his leaving for Delhi had somehow arisen, he would like to take this opportunity to inform the Chairman that to his infinite regret he would be leaving the Soviet Union and his post also within a short time. He had an extremely fruitful period of duty in this country and he would like to express his deep gratitude to the Chairman and his colleagues in the Government and especially to his friends in the Foreign Office for their personal interest and solicitude for his welfare which they had always shown to him. The Ambassador went on:

I came to this country at a rather difficult period. Now I would be leaving when things are much better, both for India and the Soviet Union and also for Indo-Soviet friendship. In fact, all my life, I have been a partisan, even an ardent partisan, of Indo-Soviet friendship and it has been my ambition to contribute whatever I can for the development of Indo-Soviet relations. The friendship between our two countries has been an article of faith with me and I hope to cherish it wherever I go, whatever task I am called upon to perform in the future. Before I actually leave I hope I shall have an opportunity of formally calling upon you to pay my respects. The present one, I would like to explain, is not in the nature of a formal farewell call. I have been instructed by my Prime Minister to convey to Your Excellency her views on two or three matters of great urgency. It is for this purpose that I have craved your indulgence at a time when I know you are so busy. I am fully conscious of the fact that you are pre-occupied with the 24th Congress of your party. It was very gracious of you, an expression of your friendliness for India and my Prime Minister particularly, to have agreed to receive me now.

Chairman Kosygin said that he would be very happy to listen to all that the Ambassador had to say.

AMBASSADOR: Before anything else, Your Excellency, I would like to share with you my joy at the recent developments in India. At this moment, I would recall the first meeting I had with Your Excellency when I came here more than two years ago. I tried on that occasion to give you my assessment of the picture of the political situation in my country. I then said that the political trends in India were leading to a polarization of the Left and Right forces. The rightist reactionary forces were uniting to resist all progressive measures; at the same time there was also a corresponding, but a slower, attempt by the leftist forces also to act together. My country, I then recalled, had passed through difficult times. First it was our conflict with China in 1962 and with Pakistan in 1965. Difficult times followed, times of famine, hunger, struggle and conflict. While our friends were fully concerned at this, our enemies were full of glee and expectation that the country would fall into pieces. I, at that time, elaborated before you the role of my Prime Minister as I saw it in shaping the events in my country. I saw her leading the battle courageously and spiritedly against the forces of status-quo, reaction and extremism. It was a grim struggle and it is a matter of pleasure for all of us that the Prime Minister and her party have won the first round of the battle decisively.
My Prime Minister specially asked me to thank you for your various messages of friendship during those difficult times, the support, the assistance and even the words of good cheer which you always spoke to her in those difficult times. This, Your Excellency, is not merely a matter of formality but of genuine and sincere emotion. It is the Prime Minister's sincere desire that I should communicate to you our deep sense of thankfulness.

Today the situation is different. The political picture now in India is very tidy, clean and clear for the first time. Important issues were very clearly decided by the people of India and the electorate have given the Prime Minister a massive mandate. The Prime Minister and her party have been given by the Indian people the authority to tackle the most urgent issues of our country, the bridging of the gap between the rich and the poor, immediate reform in land relations, strengthening of the Public Sector and the application of the principles of social justice to the millions of the poor and the dispossessed in our country. She has also been given a mandate to continue the policies of Nehru in foreign policy, the policy of non-alignment, peace and friendship with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries.

During these elections we have also had fortunate evidence of some understanding, some limited understanding, between the Congress led by Mrs. Gandhi and some elements – more realistic elements, if I may say so – in the leftist forces in the country. Even though this is true, it is unfortunate that the left parties continue to be divided; at the same time, it is true that there has been, in general, a consolidation of the left forces and an erosion of the feudal, monopolistic, reactionary and chauvinistic forces who formed themselves into a grand alliance during the elections. As a result of the elections the broad features of policies and issues have now become evident and identifiable with the interests of the common man. There is, however, still the urgent need for continuous effort to achieve the unity of the forces of progress. There is no doubt that the right-wing forces have been routed. However, this newly born unity of the new forces will, I am afraid, be subjected to attacks by elements both indigenous and foreign. Already in the western countries the press has started saying that the Congress is going to dispense with the left forces after the electoral victory. Mischievous propaganda is thus being assiduously carried on with the frank intention of bringing about dissention in the newly forged unity amongst forward looking sections of our people. I would like to tell Your Excellency that the victory of the progressive forces in India would have been even more impressive if there had not been disunity in the left ranks and distorted and narrow understanding of the powerful role of my Prime Minister and her party in defeating reaction. It is my hope that the forces of the left will concentrate more on consolidating and mobilizing public opinion in favour of carrying out radical and far-reaching reforms rather than in pursuing, as in the past, negative and barren attitudes towards the role and the leadership of Mrs. Gandhi and her party in shaping the future of the country as a whole.

Your Excellency, now that a new government has been formed, our immediate problem is to increase, so to speak, the national cake in volume and at the same time re-arrange the distribution of that cake among the people of our country according to more just principles. In the question of increasing our national production we hope to get, as in the past, your assistance in a larger and greater measure; in the second question relating to the re-arrangement and flow to all sections of the people of all the benefits in the country, it is our hope that we shall profit by your example.

In the foreign policy matters, my Prime Minister has asked me to convey to Your Excellency our determination that we shall continue to co-operate actively in all the healthy initiatives in which both the Soviet Union and India have been engaged for the achievement of peace. In Asia we will be prepared to take a more active part in supporting efforts for organizing some type of a collective security system which would lead to unity and security in Asia in which all Asian states would be fully represented. We have always emphasized that any cooperative effort in Asia should have mainly the content of economic cooperation and coordination and not any military overtones. In this context your ideas of Regional Economic Cooperation and particularly Transit Trade would be welcome to us and would in our opinion provide a healthy beginning and direction towards the fulfillment of the larger goal of Asian cooperation.

With regard to Pakistan I would like to assure you that my Prime Minister and her government are very much interested in the continued stability of Pakistan as an entity, as a country. Your Excellency and my Prime Minister have been having a meaningful exchange of views on this subject. I would not like to add anything to what has been submitted to you on this matter. I would only like to re-state our firm belief in a stable, united, democratic Pakistan. We wish that country well. Indeed, as I told Mr. Fomin, when we were waiting outside, that even if we look at this question from the point of view of a really selfish Indian, who is involved in looking absolutely narrowly to the self-interest of his own country, the first hope and desire that he would entertain would be to establish friendly and cordial relations with Pakistan.

The basic questions in our elections, Your Excellency, related to domestic policy. Some questions of foreign policy were also broadly discussed in the elections. For example, the so-called grand alliance of the right-wing parties carried out a vicious campaign of anti-communism and anti-Sovietism. It was alleged that the Soviet Union was dominating the Government of India and that the mid-term elections were influenced by the views of the Soviet Government. This campaign was even carried to a point of stupidity. It was whispered that the Prime Minister had gone to Ladakh before announcing the mid-term poll and consulted you on the high Pamirs. Then there were other minor irritants which had been occasioning some disturbances in our relations like persistent demand by the reactionary circles for an enquiry into the circumstances which led to the tragic demise of Shastri at Tashkent. This and similar other irritating questions were agitated both within and outside Parliament. I remember that the Foreign Office used to be disturbed about these developments. I used to tell my friend, Mr. Fomin, who is present here, that these slanders were of a temporary character, deliberately used for poisoning our relations. I was confident that in time the people would reject these slanderers and calumniators of Soviet-Indian relations. All the crusaders, for example, for having a judicial enquiry into Shastriji’s death have been ignominiously defeated at the polls including its prominent notary Mr. T.N. Singh in U.P. I told my Foreign Office colleagues that they should not judge the people of India by what is published in the irresponsible press owned by vested interests in India.

In this context, I would particularly like to take this opportunity of placing on record our deepest sense of appreciation of the very important decision which Your Excellency and your colleagues took with a view to suspending the arms aid to Pakistan. This was the highest act of statesmanship. If this step had not been taken at the right time it would have been a source of great embarrassment to everyone of us in the election battle. This alone could have been a subject, which would have been exploited in the Indian public to the absolute disadvantage of the progressive forces.

Our Prime Minister has also asked me to convey to Your Excellency her assurances that we will endeavour to continue and develop the progressive policies we have been pursuing in the Middle East and in South-East Asia. With a strong government led by her in the saddle I would like to mention it to you that it will be now possible for us to develop and take new initiatives for lessening the tension and indeed for solving the problems involved in the tragic situations of Middle East and Indo-China.

Your Excellency, I would now like to return to the question of Pakistan. It is a matter of great satisfaction to us that our kind friends like yourself do not have to be convinced of our bona fides in our relations with Pakistan. I would like to assure you, however, that in the future also you will not find us wanting in making the appropriate response, the appropriate gesture whenever it is sought. At the same time I hope you will forgive me for saying that we will always have to be careful and wary about the intentions of Pakistan. We have been bitten three times and we cannot, therefore, but be shy. We have every reason to be worried about any accretion of military strength to Pakistan which she has secured from the countries of the western camp and also other friends. We are also feeling worried and apprehensive that, to divert attention from internal difficulties, someone might be tempted to start some offensive activities on our borders. I am not a pessimist, a prophet of doom, but I will be failing in my duty if I do not draw your attention to these unfortunate possibilities. I would like to give Your Excellency only two examples to illustrate what I have been saying. Seven days before the East Pakistani elections a story was put out that India had invaded East Pakistan. The story was circulated by all the government controlled mass media in Pakistan. A tremendous tension was created. There was no truth at all in these allegations. The second example is the hijacking incident about which I do not want to go into details. An Indian plane was burnt; the hijackers were taken out in a procession at Lahore as heroes. All this is well-known but what is not so well known is the fact that there were large scale movements both on West Pakistan’s borders with India and in the East on the Tripura - Assam border. These two examples I give not out of bitterness, Your Excellency, but as a measure of the abundant caution which we have to exercise in our relations towards that country.

As Far as China is concerned, nothing has changed. There has been no expression of overt friendship and enthusiasm for India on the Chinese side. We have now a strong government and we are in a position, much better position, to take further initiatives, if necessary, to normalize our relations with China. But, Your Excellency, you will appreciate we cannot argue before a stone wall. In the absence of a genuine reaction we cannot indulge in fanciful thinking. I would like to mention this to Your Excellency that we would try to keep our doors for conciliation and restoration of cordial relations with China always open. We would also take particular care to avoid all provocations and irritations. Nevertheless, after all this is said I do not see much of a hope in reaching any friendly agreement with China in the near future. Once again I hope you will not regard me as a pessimist, but I feel it is not consistent with the hegemonistic, expansionist philosophy of the present leadership in China to tolerate a strong, united and independent India which has friendly relations with the countries of our own choice.

Last of all, I would like to convey to Your Excellency my Prime Minister’s most heart-felt gratitude to the Soviet Government and to you personally for the very positive response to the requests made for further equipment and military hardware handed over to Ambassador Pegov by Mr. Haksar, Prime Minister’s Secretary. This response has indeed been generous. There is, however, one matter of serious disappointment which we were unhappy to see in the Soviet reply and I would like to bring this regrettable question to the attention of the Soviet Government. This is the question of the bomber aircraft. This is a request which we have made on many occasions in the past. In fact our Prime Minister herself had placed this item before Your Excellency. Your Excellency will recall that when the present Foreign Minister, who was then incharge of Defence, called on you last year and mentioned this question to you, you were very kind to indicate that there was a possibility of a bomber of Soviet manufacture, answering our requirements, being supplied to us. This had given us hope and we were all happy indeed. Unfortunately, the reply to the memorandum shows that this is not possible. Very briefly I would like to tell you why we are anxious to secure this aircraft. Our desire for having bombers is dictated by our absolute need for our security. The Pakistanis have acquired 2 squadrons of MIRAGE-III-E aircraft from France and supplemented it recently by 30 MIRAGE –V aircraft. Recently they have also purchase B-37 bombers from West Germany. By this purchase they have made considerable increase to their fleet of fighter bombers and their offensive abilities in the air. Even at the risk of boring you and in spite of being aware that Your Excellency knows all the details of these aircraft I would still like to highlight some of the special features of the capabilities of these aircraft which cause us worry.

MIRAGE III-E is a long range fighter bomber/intruder aircraft capable of carrying a variety of weapons. It is equipped with Tactical Air Navigator (TACAN) and sophisticated fire control, bombing computer and automatic gun sight. Its weaponry comprises of :-

2×30 mm Cannons with 125 rounds each
2×1000 lbs bombs

Or

A.S. 30 Air/Surface missile
2×1000 lbs bombs.
2×18 Rockets (68 mm)
2×250 litre fuel tanks

In interception role it can carry one MATRA Air/Air missile together with guns and 2 sidewinder Air/Air missiles. Its maximum performance is :-

- Sea level 870 MPH
- At 12000 meters Mach 2.2
- Service Ceiling at Mach 1.8 17000 m.
- Service Ceiling using Rocket motors 23000 m.

This aircraft is also capable of carrying MARTEL (missile Anti-rader Television) a guided Air to Surface missile which can be fitted with interchangeable heads for T.V. guidance or anti-radar homing mission. It is claimed that this missile has a stand off capability. In its role in ECM environment it is a very effective weapon. The anti-radar version (AS -37) offers an all weather attack capability against radar antennae in several frequency bands. It can be launched at very low, medium or high altitudes and flies a homing trajectory into the emitting target source without further control from parent aircraft.

MIRAGE-V is a modified version of Mirage III-E with less sophisticated electronic equipment and a greater weapon load. Its performance is compatible with MIRAGE III-E. It can carry up to 4,000 kg weapons and its combat radius of action is as follows :-

High/Low/High
Configuration 1300 km.

Low/Low/Low
Configuration 650 km.

Ferry range with 3 external tanks is 4000 km.

Mirage's radius of action permits this aircraft to reach most of our airfields in North India. Indirectly it affords adequate protection against retaliation from Indian fighters and light bombers. If equipped with ECM capability, it could seriously threaten our radar stations including those operating in conjunction with our SAGW.

What is really worrying us is the effective operational range of this aircraft. Once again I would like to mention that all the cities of Northern India, your Excellency, will be within bombing range of this aircraft. We have reliable information that one Pak Mirage was located in the USA and was being fitted with electronic counter measures. They have now aircraft fitted with an anti-Radar device which gives it an all weather capability.

Against these all that we have are aged and aging Canberras. This is the position. Any chink in our armour, any weakness, any loophole in our defence, will be, as Your Excellency is well aware, an invitation to adventure. Pakistan has got many sources of supply. We have chosen, deliberately, as a matter of policy, to depend upon your kind assistance for the maintenance and development of our defence capabilities. How do we remove these inadequacies in our defence? We have no way to go, neither do we wish to go elsewhere for this assistance. We shall be most grateful if you will have another look at it. I hope your Excellency will agree with me when I say that we can be trusted to use our defence capability only for defensive purposes. We have no interest in other countries, we seek no territory, we seek merely to protect what we have. I am most grateful to Your Excellency for listening to me so patiently all this time. I intended to speak about some important phases of economic cooperation between the two countries but I will postpone this to the very end and mention them only if Your Excellency has time.

CHAIRMAN KOSYGIN: I would like to begin by telling you that we are unhappy to know that you have decided to leave the Soviet Union. I would like to tell you that we would be very unhappy to part with you. I myself and my colleagues have watched with appreciation your activities and fruitful labours in the cause of Indo-Soviet friendship. Please accept my sincere gratitude and our appreciation for your efforts. The fact that very friendly relations have always existed between the two countries, your task as India’s Ambassador became comparatively easy in finding answers to questions and I and my colleagues were particularly pleased by the contribution you made personally to further strengthen the friendly relations between India and the Soviet Union. Please do let me know when you leave the Soviet Union so that I shall make it a point to say good bye to you personally.

I am most grateful to your Prime Minister for what you have told us about her views on the present situation. The analysis that you have given of the situation in India, by and large, corresponds with our own assessment. There is also great similarity in the views that your Prime Minister and the Soviet Government have with regard to various important issues in the world. It is true that there were some doubts entertained by some people about the outcome of elections in your country but I and my colleagues were extremely sure, absolutely clear cut, absolutely explicit in our belief that her victory would be certain, complete and comprehensive. We knew that she and her party were pitched against a powerful array of reactionary forces, all ganged up against her and that they would use every means, every method to gain victory. But as before we had faith in her and her policies and the great maturity of the Indian people and we were sure of her success. Mr. Ambassador, it would not be an exaggeration to say that every person, that every man, woman and child in the Soviet Union followed with the deepest sympathy and interest the brave struggle which was waged by your Prime Minister in India. All of us reacted with great enthusiasm to the successes scored by your Prime Minister. If we go still deeper into the matter I should say that every decent person in the world sympathizes with your Prime Minister and calls her victory his own. Her victory during the elections and the setting up of a strong progressive government with the support of such a large majority is of great value to all of us and to the entire progressive mankind. We greet this event with feelings of jubilation. These were indeed historic days for India and the great people of India. What is important is that the people of India have emerged from this election as a mature people. They have shown that they know how to chose their leaders, how to defend the interests of India. The Indian people will never forget these historic days which witnessed the success of progressive forces in their country and the rout of reactionary forces. We certainly agree with you that the struggle is by no means over. Your Prime Minister feels so and she has said so and we agree with her. The struggle might be severe and long. The reactionary forces will join together to regain power and restore their position. They will not spare any effort and they will be able to count on the support of United States and other reactionary regimes. Therefore, vigilance will be necessary for preventing this. As to the policies of the Government of India our views coincide with your government on the issue of the major problems in the world like Indo-China and South-East Asia. As far as the problems of Indo-China and West Asia are concerned we cannot expect that they will be solved very soon but we do appreciate your sentiments and feel assured that the voice of your Prime Minister, which indeed is the voice of India, will always be raised for the establishment of peace and also for the support of righteous causes.

Your most acute problem is, of course, with Pakistan. As you know we are having constant consultations with your Prime Minister about the developments in Pakistan. Please tell your Prime Minister on my behalf that we are very satisfied with the consultations we are having with each other and we are indeed grateful to her for the manner in which she has shown appreciation and vision in assessing the present situation. We shall continue to have consultations with her. As far as our foreign policy towards Pakistan is concerned, please convey my assurances to your Prime Minister that we will always formulate it in consultation with India and we shall take no step which does not meet with her approval or which is even remotely harmful to the interests of India. Whatever we do, whatever initiatives we shall take, we shall consult her and seek her advice.

You mentioned China. As you know negotiations have been going on between our two countries for a long time. No essential changes have taken place since we last informed your Prime Minister of the latest developments. In fact there is nothing new to report except that yesterday our Ambassador met CHOU EN-LAI. I have not received so far the details of the talks.

I would like to inform you, Mr. Ambassador, that we are very much satisfied with our bilateral relations particularly in the field of economic cooperation. The new orientation which has been given to these relations is most welcome to us. I would like to assure you and through you I would like to assure your Prime Minister that we will do everything in our power to develop these relations and be of assistance and help to India in whatever sphere she wishes within the range of our possibilities. I agree with you that we should do everything in our power to enlarge these relations, extend them and enrich them.

Now we come to the question of defence problems. You have mentioned the question of bombers. I would like to study this question once again before taking a decision. However, you would know that now a days in major conflicts this type of aircraft will hardly play any role; you must believe me that our bomber industry is not fully developed in our country for the limited roles that you have in view. We are certainly aware of what Pakistan has acquired. It is our impression that it has not made a substantial difference in their capabilities. We know about the Mirage aircraft and other aircraft. We, as far as developments in Pakistan are concerned, are watchful and vigilant. We can assure you that we will do everything to ensure that no event, under any circumstances, goes against you.

As far as, as you put it, the irritants in our relations are concerned, for example the campaign about Prime Minister Shastri's tragic death and other press campaigns, we understand the position fully. There are people who react to such events and try to take advantage of small problems but we are confident that the victory of the Prime Minister's government will make these attempts ineffective.

As far as our own political relations are concerned they are, of course, in an excellent condition and now they have an excellent and a bright future. I would like to take this opportunity of informing you and through you your Prime Minister that we are expecting that she will find it possible and convenient to visit the Soviet Union officially. In fact this is long overdue. She can do it any time she considers opportune and convenient. As you know we have, in the past, invited her many times. May I take this occasion to sincerely reiterate this invitation? As I said earlier we have already conveyed formal invitations to her earlier. We repeat it now and we hope that she will be kind enough to accept it in the near future. I am making this invitation to Her Excellency the Prime Minister not only on my behalf or on behalf of my government but on behalf of Comrades Brezhnev and Podgorny and on behalf of all the peoples of the Soviet Union. It will be a peoples reception. Every citizen of the Soviet Union would like to utilize the opportunity of her visit to shower their affection on your Prime Minister.

In conclusion I would like to ask you to convey to your Prime Minister the most sincere greetings of all of us, my colleagues Mr. Brezhnev and Mr. Podgorny and myself and all the rest of us. All of us admire the struggle she has conducted and waged. We feel that her victory is a victory of the people of India and that it has elevated the prestige of India in the international arena to a level unheard of in the world. All of us feel similarly in this matter.

Ambassador conveyed his grateful thanks for the invitation and hoped that it would be his personal pleasure and privilege to be in the Soviet Union when the Prime Minister visited this country. 'It would indeed be, if I may put it that way, a last act of grace while am here'.

AMBASSADOR: I would also like to convey to Your Excellency our deep gratitude for the strenuous efforts made by the State Committee for Economic Relations with Foreign countries and the team under General Siddorovitch in helping us to resolve the acute problem which we faced in the matter of supply of aircraft spares. I am hoping that two more delegations, one for the Army and one for the Navy, will come later and seek and secure a solution for their difficulties also.

CHAIRMAN KOSYGIN: when the matter of the crisis in the spare parts was brought to my attention I gave immediate orders that this should be solved to your entire satisfaction.

AMBASSADOR: I have taken too much of your time. I have been here for nearly two hours. It is, however, a matter of great pleasure and privilege for me to have been afforded this opportunity to exchange views with Your Excellency about the situation in our country, about the relations between our two countries at this historic moment one week after our elections and one week before the Congress of your great Party. May I wish all success to you in the fulfillment of one of the most elaborate and many faceted plans for economic development, on which you have just embarked. As I said, Your Excellency, I have taken too much of your time. I shall, therefore, discuss some important economic and commercial matters with my friends in the Foreign Office who will no doubt place them before you for your kind perusal and attention.

Before I leave, however, I wish to revert to a subject which I have already mentioned. This may be construed as impertinence on my part but I feel emboldened to mention this very important question because I happen to be a friend and I am aware that as excellent relations between our two countries and between the two Prime Ministers, my submission will not be taken amiss. This, once again, relates to the question of bombers. We would appreciate if you were to take us into confidence and tell us if you have any difficulties in meeting our request. We will understand and appreciate frankness in dealing with this issue. This answer need not be given to me but Your Excellency can convey your reasons directly to my Prime Minister, so that she is in a position to appreciate your difficulties, if any. You will once again forgive me if I venture to inform Your Excellency that if this issue remains unresolved or is allowed to continue to remain in its present nebulous state it will lead to unnecessary and avoidable misunderstandings.

CHAIRMAN KOSYGIN: Mr. Ambassador you have once again mentioned the question of bombers. I can assure you that we will reconsider this matter in the nearest future and we shall, without delay, convey our views as has been suggested by you to your Prime Minister.
0577. Statement by Foreign Minister Swaran Singh in Parliament on Recent Developments in Pakistan.

New Delhi, March 27, 1971.

The Government of India cannot but be gravely concerned at the events taking place so close to our borders. We can, therefore, understand the deep emotions which have been aroused in this House and in the entire country.

Honourable Members are, I am sure, fully aware of political developments in Pakistan since November 28, 1969 when the President of Pakistan announced his plan for evolving a democratic Constitution and for the transfer of power to the elected representatives of the people.

The Government and the people of India have always entertained the friendliest of feelings for the people of Pakistan. We had therefore hoped that a democratic evolution in Pakistan would follow its natural course and that the elected representatives would evolve a Constitution reflecting the urges of the vast majority of the people expressed through the elections held in December last year.

However, events have taken a different and tragic turn. Instead of peaceful evolution there is now a bloody conflict.

According to reports received, the Pakistan Army started taking action on the midnight of 25th and 26th March against units of the East Pakistan Rifles, the provincial police and the people. The reports are that casualties have been heavy. On the morning of March 26th, the Radio Station at Dacca was seized by the Army. Thereafter the Radio Station made an announcement of 15 new Marshal Law Regulations banning, among other things, all political activities, processions, meetings speeches and slogans. Complete censorship of all news, Radio and Television programmes was imposed.

More than two regular Divisions of the Pakistan Army are deployed in suppressing the people of East Pakistan. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the people who are undergoing great suffering.

We naturally wish and hope that even at this late stage it would be possible to resume democratic processes leading to the fulfillment of the aspirations of the vast majority of the people there. We cannot but take note of the fact that such a large segment of humanity is involved in a conflict and that many people are suffering in the process.

Recently, when natural disaster overtook East Pakistan, the Government and people of India along with other members of the international community responded to bring relief to the sufferings of the people there.
We are prepared to make our contribution once again, in concert with the members of the International Community or International humanitarian organizations, concerned with bringing relief to innocent victims of conflict.

New Delhi, March 27, 1971.

[Intervening in the discussion on the statement made by the Minister of External Affairs on recent developments in Pakistan in the Lok Sabha on that day, the Prime Minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi said in the House]

The point is that this news (regarding the arrest of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman) has come through Radio Pakistan and, therefore, I cannot say whether it is true or not. But we should not take it as true because it could be just a propaganda.

Sir, the strength does not lie in words. If my colleague, Shri Swaran Singh, has not spoken with passion, it is not much for lack of feeling either on his part or on the part of the Government but because of the fact that we are deeply conscious of the historic importance of this movement and the seriousness of the situation.

Something new had happened in East Bengal - a democratic action where an entire people had spoken with almost one voice. We had welcomed this, not because we wanted any interference in another country's affairs, but, because there were the values, as one of my hon. friends pointed out, for which we have always stood and for which we have always spoken out. And we had hoped that this action would lead to a new situation in our neighbouring country which would help us to get closer, which would help us to serve our own people better and create an entirely new situation. As our statement has said this has not happened and a wonderful opportunity for even the strengthening of Pakistan has been lost and has been lost in a manner which is tragic, which is agonizing and about which we cannot find strong enough words to speak because this again is a new situation.

It is not merely the suppression of a movement, but it is meeting an unarmed people with tanks. We are in close touch, as close touch with the events as is possible in such a situation. I am sure hon. Members will understand that it is not possible for the Government to say very much more on this occasion here.
I would like to assure the hon. Members who asked whether decisions would be taken on time, that obviously that is the most important thing to do. There is no point in taking a decision when the time for it is over. We are fully alive to the situation and we shall keep constantly in touch with what is happening and what we need to do. But I agree with him also that we must not take merely a theoretical view. At the same time we do have to follow proper international norms. But there are various other suggestions made here, about genocide and so on, about which we are fully conscious and which we also discussed with the leaders of the Opposition.

I think at this moment I can only say that we do fully share the agony, the emotions of the House and their deep concern over these developments because we have always believed that freedom is indivisible. We have always raised our voice for those who have suffered, but, in a serious moment like this, the less we, as a Government say, I think the better it is at this moment. I can assure the House that we shall keep in close touch with the leaders of the Opposition so that they can continue to give us their suggestions and we can also give them whatever knowledge we have.

 Resolution adopted by both the Houses of Parliament on East Bengal.

New Delhi, March 31, 1971.

Moving the Resolution on East Bengal in both the Houses of Parliament on March 31, 1971 the Prime Minister, Shrimati Indira Gandhi, said:

The tragedy which has overtaken our valiant neighbours in East Bengal so soon after their rejoicing over their electoral victory has united us in grief for their suffering, concern for the wanton destruction of their beautiful land and anxiety for their future.

I wish to move a resolution which has been discussed with the leaders of the Opposition and, I am glad to say, approved unanimously.

TEXT OF RESOLUTION

“This House expresses its deep anguish and grave concern at the recent developments in East Bengal. A massive attack by armed forces, dispatched from West Pakistan has been unleashed against the entire people of East Bengal with a view to suppressing their urges and aspirations.

Instead of respecting the will of the people so unmistakably expressed through the election in Pakistan in December 1970, the Government of Pakistan has chosen to flout the mandate of the people.

The Government of Pakistan has not only refused to transfer power to legally elected representatives but has arbitrarily prevented the National Assembly from assuming its rightful and sovereign role. The people of East Bengal are being sought to be suppressed by the naked use of force, by bayonets, machine guns, tanks, artillery and aircraft.

The Government and people of India have always desired and worked for peaceful, normal and fraternal relations with Pakistan. However, situated as India is and bound as the peoples of the sub-continent are by centuries old ties of history, culture and tradition, this House cannot remain indifferent to the macabre tragedy being enacted so close to our border. Throughout the length and breadth of our land, our people have condemned, in unmistakable terms, the atrocities now being perpetrated on an unprecedented scale upon an unarmed and innocent people.

This House express its profound sympathy for and solidarity with the people of East Bengal in their struggle for a democratic way of life.

Bearing in mind the permanent interests which India has in peace, and committed as we are to uphold and defend human rights, this House demands immediate cessation of the use of force and the massacre of defenceless people. This House calls upon all peoples and Governments of the world to take urgent and constructive steps to prevail upon the Government of Pakistan to put an end immediately to the systematic decimation of people which amounts to genocide.

This House records its profound conviction that the historic upsurge of the 75 million people of East Bengal will triumph. The House wishes to assure them that their struggle and sacrifices will receive the whole hearted sympathy and support of the people of India.”

Record of Foreign Minister Swaran Singh’s conversation with USSR Charge d’affaires Dr. V. K. Boldyrev on April 4, 1971 at 6.00 PM.

Ministry of External Affairs

The Cd’A said that he had been directed by his government to communicate to the Prime Minister the following information:

The Soviet Ambassador in Islamabad had been sent for by the Deputy Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Sultan Khan, on April 2 and told that, guided by the friendly nature of Soviet-Pakistan relations and concern for preservation of peace in the sub-continent, he wished to bring to the notice of the Soviet government the serious nature of the situation existing on the Indo-Pak borders.

He alleged that six Divisions of the Indian Army were deployed in West Bengal and that small armed groups from Indian territory had started infiltrating into East Pakistan to help the freedom fighters. Also, on the night of April 2, four Indian naval ships had forced a Pakistan merchant vessel to turn back from the vicinity of Dwarka to Karachi. Mr. Khan said that the Pakistan government wished to bring to the notice of Moscow that Indian actions cannot but provoke reaction from other States leading to an international conflict. Pakistan was not interested in such a development and had not sought the deterioration in Indo-Pak relations.

The Cd’A said that ‘it went without saying” that the Soviet Ambassador did not in any way, ‘directly or indirectly’, associate himself with the Pakistan Deputy Minister’s statement. The Soviet government thought that it was their duty to bring this to the notice of their Indian friends and particularly of the Prime Minister. It would be highly appreciated in Moscow if P.M. could share her views.

2. Foreign Minister said that he would convey the message to P.M. However, the Foreign Office in Islamabad had already spoken to the High Commissioner for India on similar lines and it had already been explained to them that the allegations were totally unfounded. India had no intention of intervening militarily in the matter and it was obvious that the Pakistan authorities were trying to build up a hate-India campaign and making unwarranted allegations to divert the attention of people, particularly in West Pakistan. As for the two incidents mentioned, it was entirely incorrect to claim that we were sending any people into East Pakistan. However, it had to be remembered that the Indo-East Pak border was hitherto manned by the East Pak Police who owed allegiance to Mujibur Rehman and there could have been movement to either side with their connivance. We were not at all concerned and were, in fact, worried when people come in from East Pakistan. We were not keen on having refuge seeker coming in large numbers. It was apparent that the West Pakistan army authorities were trying to explain the growing momentum of the freedom fighters. As for the charge of interference with the ship, this too was without foundation: was it possible for naval ships to compel any ship to return? We believed in the freedom of the high seas unless our territorial waters were violated.

If we had any intention to interfere with their ships, we would have done so when they were moving large numbers of troops and equipment to East Pakistan.

If Pakistan’s talking in this way indicated some plans on their part, or in collusion with any of the countries with whom they had military understanding, to embark on a military adventure, they would bear the entire responsibility and they should not run away with the idea that they would be able to get away with it.

3. The Charge d’Affairs stressed that the Soviet Ambassador did not, in any way, associate himself with the statements. He requested that the message should be conveyed to P.M. and her reply obtained.

Foreign Minister replied that the Cd’A should convey his reply to Moscow. The message would be conveyed to P.M. and if P.M. had anything to add to what he had said, this would be communicated. The Cd’A said that he appreciated F.M.’s receiving him and that the Soviet government highly appreciated the confidential exchange of information and contacts with Government of India on the developments in East Pakistan. F.M. said that we, too, valued these and wished to keep them completely confidential. He would be away for two days, during which the Cd’A should keep in touch with F.S.

Note Verbale from the Pakistan High Commission in India to the Ministry of External Affairs regarding grant of asylum to the Pakistani members of the Crew of a ship flying the Lebanese flag.

No. 1(10) CSVI/71. April 24, 1971

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, and has the honour to state that according to a report appearing in The Statesman, Delhi, of April 20, 1971, 26 Pakistani members of crew of SS Ivory Napaire, carrying a Lebanese flag, were granted asylum by the Government of India while the ship anchored at Budge Budge in 24 Parganas (West Bengal).

2. The High Commission requests the Ministry kindly to intimate to it urgently the correct position with regard to the above report. In case the report is correct, it would constitute another instance of open interference by India in the internal affairs of Pakistan in contravention of all norms of intercourse between sovereign States.

3. The High Commission views with serious concern these acts of overt and covert interference by India in the internal affairs of Pakistan. It is a matter of further concern that such acts have multiplied in the recent past despite the Government of India’s professions to the contrary.

4. The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry the assurances of its highest consideration.

0583. Note Verbale from the Ministry of External Affairs to the Pakistan High Commission in India regarding the influx of refugees from Pakistan.

New Delhi, April 30, 1971.

No. PII/281/71 April 30, 1970

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, presents its compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India and has the honour to state that the Government of India have received disquieting reports about large scale influx of refugees from East Pakistan to India of late.

2. It has been ascertained that since January 1970, about 29,000 persons have been forced by circumstances within East Pakistan to enter India through unauthorized routes by walking across the border with the help of touts operating within East Pakistan. According to them, while they were crossing the border the members of the East Pakistan Rifles forcibly took away all their belongings. The bulk of refugees so crossing the border belong to Khulna District of East Pakistan. they hail from villages within the jurisdiction of police stations Dumuria, Rampal and Baitaghata.

3. It has also been learnt from these refugees after careful interrogation that they left East Pakistan on account of the generally insecure conditions facing the minorities in Pakistan, namely, thefts, robberies, decoities and, in particular, offences against women, like rape, molestation, abduction and forcible marriages of Hindu girls to Muslims. It is universally complained that the Pakistan police take no action on complaints from the Hindus. The general feeling of insecurity is stated to have been further accentuated by the recent election campaign during which some communal parties have been making sinister insinuations questioning the minority community’s very loyalty to Pakistan.

4. The Government of India have noted with concern that this influx of refugees is continuing unabated. The Government of Pakistan will no doubt realize that men, women and children in East Pakistan would not voluntarily elect to abandon their hearths and homes if they were enjoying security of life, property and honour. The Government of Pakistan will also appreciate that such large scale illegal migration from Pakistan tends to create a totally undesirable and sensitive situation. The Government of India are also faced with the immediate problem of giving relief and rehabilitation assistance to these innocent refugees on humanitarian considerations, as they are unwilling to return to their hearths and homes in Pakistan, apart from the problem of maintaining law and order in circumstances exciting the feelings of the people where the migrants tend to collect.

5. The Government of India protest against the failure of the Government of Pakistan to ameliorate the continuing unhappy plight of the minority community in Pakistan and are constrained once again to urge the Government of Pakistan to take effective measures to assure the security of the life, property and honour, and to enable them to live in peace and honour as equal citizens of Pakistan. The Government of India also request the Pakistan Government to punish the persons causing harassment to the members of the minority community and to restore confidence amongst them so that further illegal migration of these Pakistan nationals of the minority community does not take place. Attention of the Government of Pakistan is once again drawn to the Nehru - Liaquat Pact of 1950, which requires them, inter alia, to guarantee to their minorities, security, full freedom and equality of rights.

6. The Government of India would appreciate being informed of the action taken in this regard, if there is no objection.

7. The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

The High Commission for Pakistan,
Chanakyapuri,
New Delhi.
0584. Note Verbale from the Ministry of External Affairs to the Pakistan High Commission in India regarding the Pakistani Crew of a ship allowed to stay on in India.

New Delhi, May 11, 1971.

No. PI/103/14/71 11 May, 1971

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission of Pakistan in India and with reference to the latter’s Note 1(10) CSVI/71 dated the 24th April, 1971 has the honour to state that 26 East Bengali members of the crew signed off at Calcutta port and have been permitted to stay on in Calcutta till they are in a position to leave for their destination. Those members of the crew have been granted the necessary landing permits to enable them to remain in Calcutta for this purpose.

2. It is a matter of some concern to the Ministry of External Affairs that the High Commission of Pakistan chose to record their protest without first fully ascertaining the facts. The Ministry of External Affairs takes serious exception to the allegations contained in the above mentioned note of the High Commission for Pakistan which, as already indicated, is totally unfounded.

3. The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

0585. Letter from the Indian High Commissioner in Ceylon Y. K. Puri to the Prime Minister of Ceylon Mrs. Sirimavo R. D. Bandaranaike explaining the position with regard to the influx of refugees in India.

No.PS/HC/EB/71. May 21, 1971

Subject : EAST BENGAL

When I had the privilege of seeing you the other day I had an occasion to talk to you about the situation in East Bengal. In that connection you had asked me whether the six points, on which Sheikh Mujibur Rehman’s demand for autonomy was based, were known before the elections.

2. The six points in question were actually laid down by a conference of the Opposition Parties held at Lahore in February, 1966. For your information, I enclose herewith a copy of the six-point programme agreed to on that occasion, not only by the Awami League but also, in principle, by some of the Opposition Parties in West Pakistan. It will be noticed this programme does not envisage anything in the nature of secession. In fact it specifically mentions the role of East Pakistan in preserving the integrity of Pakistan.

3. It is openly on the basis of these six points that the Awami League of Sheikh Mujibur Rehman fought the elections, which were held under arrangements made by the Martial Law Administration and which were the first ever held in the history of Pakistan on the basis of universal adult suffrage.

4. The result of these elections could not have been clearer. Sheikh Mujibur Rehman’s Awami League won 288 seats out of 300 Seats for the Provincial Assembly of East Bengal. They also won 168 out of 169 seats in the National Assembly allotted to East Bengal. There could be no more eloquent testimony to the solid support for Sheikh Mujibur Rehman and the six point programme from the whole of East Bengal.

5. On the basis of his overwhelming victory Sheikh Mujibur Rehman not only had a tremendous popular mandate for an Awami League Ministry to come into power in East Bengal but he also held more than 50 percent of the votes in the National Assembly and some at least of the members of the National Assembly from West Pakistan were likely to support him. On the majority attained by his own Party alone he became entitled to become the Prime Minister of Pakistan (not merely the Chief Minister of East Bengal). It is perhaps this prospect of Pakistan being ruled by a Prime Minister from East Bengal who enjoyed a solid majority and had full support for the six point programme that proved unpalatable to the military regime and led to the decision to undo the electoral victory of the Awami League by military force.

6. It is alleged that Sheikh Mujibur Rehman wanted East Bengal to secede from Pakistan. As far as one can judge from all available evidence, he had no such plans until after he found that the Central Government of Pakistan had no intention of giving effect to the results of the elections or to confer on East Bengal the autonomy in financial matters that it had been seeking as a means of re-dressment of the economic exploitation of East Bengal for the last 23 years. In this connection the following quotation from a speech from Sheikh Mujibur Rehman might be of interest:
“We believe that this feeling of absolute equality, sense of inter-wing justice and impartiality is the very basis of Pakistani patriotism. Only he is fit to be a leader of Pakistan who is imbued with and consumed by such patriotism. A leader who sincerely believes that the two wings of Pakistan are really two eyes, two ears, two nostrils, two rows of teeth, two hands and two legs of the body politic of Pakistan, a leader who feels that to make Pakistan healthy and strong one must make each one of these pairs equally healthy and strong, a leader who earnestly believes that to weaken any one of these limbs is to weaken Pakistan as a whole, a leader who zealously holds that anyone who deliberately or knowingly weakens any limb of Pakistan is an enemy of the country and a leader who is ready to take strong measures against such enemies, is the only person entitled to claim the national leadership of Pakistan. Pakistan is a magnificent country with an uncommonly wide horizon. To be fit to become its leader one must possess a similarly magnificent heart with an uncommon breadth of vision.”

7. It is also to be noted that before the army cracked down on March 25th, Sheikh Mujibur Rehman was asked by a Press Correspondent whether he would advocate a secession of East Bengal from Pakistan. He replied that the question of such secession did not arise, as his Party held the mandate of the majority of the people of Pakistan taken as a whole.

8. It has been alleged in some quarters that Sheikh Mujibur Rehman went on increasing his demands or that he would not wait for the National Assembly to decide the political issues. There is no evidence of any type whatsoever that throughout the negotiations between him and the President of Pakistan, or at any time before the 25th of March, 1971, Sheikh Mujibur Rehman went beyond the six point programme on the basis of which his Party had won an overwhelming majority. As regards the question of the meeting of the National Assembly, the facts are that Sheikh Mujibur Rehman had requested a meeting of the National Assembly by the 15th February, 1971. The President of Pakistan fixed the 3rd March. Between the 15th and the 28th February Mr. Bhutto threatened to boycott the Assembly if it met on the 3rd March. On the 1st March the President of Pakistan announced that the meeting had been postponed without fixing another date. On the 3rd of March the Pakistan Army opened fire on a large number of persons who were peacefully protesting against this postponement and a large number of people were killed. On the 6th of March the President of Pakistan announced a meeting on the 25th of March. On the night of 25th the Pakistan Army started a pre planned programme of large scale terrorization and the elimination of leadership potential in East Bengal. What has happened subsequently is by now well known to the world, based on eye-witness accounts including those of foreign students who were in Dacca University on the night of the army’s attack on that University.

9. There have been allegations that India had promised and/or has given military or other help to the Awami League or to the people of East Bengal. There is no truth in this. The Government of India have not, to this date, given any arms or any other material help to the people of East Bengal at their fight, whether constitutional in the first phase and armed in the second phase, against the oppression and exploitation by West Pakistan. In fact the Government of India were, up to the 25th March, 1971, extremely careful not to do or say anything which might in any way diminish the chances of an agreement between Sheikh Mujibur Rehman and the President of Pakistan, or which might prejudice the chances of a reversion to Parliamentary democracy in Pakistan. It is only after the brutal military repression, the genocide and the terrorization of the population started on March 25th that the Government of India had to speak out for human rights and for democracy and to express their moral support for the people of East Bengal in the struggle for self expression and the end of exploitation.

10. This may be an internal matter for Pakistan but India cannot overlook that in the name of its own internal affair, Pakistan has committed such brutality against its own people, in defiance of human rights, that over 3 million of its citizens have spilled over into India in a state of terror and exhaustion. The provision of the most elementary relief to these refugees, on humanitarian grounds, is a monumental task, which has cost the Government of India an intolerable political and economic burden. The majority of these refugees are Muslims and the rest are Hindus, Buddhists, Christians and tribals. On purely humanitarian grounds and irrespective of their religion, the Government of India are providing such relief as is within their power and means. The number of these refugees is still growing and the first and absolute necessity of the case is to bring moral pressure on Pakistan so that the killing and the terrorization is stopped and conditions are created in which more people do not feel it necessary to abandon their homes and flee and in which those who have come to India can go back to their homes. In the meantime, having regard to the very large number involved, which is still increasing, the help of the whole international community will be necessary to save these people from starvation, disease, exhaustion from lack of shelter in the torrential rains of the monsoon and extreme hardship in other forms. If the number of refugees rises to 5 or 8 million, the situation will become completely untenable.

11. This letter is intended only to keep you informed of the present situation. Of course the Government of India and the refugees from Pakistan will be very grateful for any concrete help which the Government of Ceylon or voluntary organizations in Ceylon or the Ceylon Red Cross can extend with a view to bring the very minimum of subsistence and protection against disease and starvation to over 3 million human beings who have crossed over to India to seek temporary refuge.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

Sd/-

New Delhi, May 24, 1971.

No.14/12/71-I(V). May 24, 1971

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and with reference to Note No. D. 4622 PI/71, dated May 14, 1971, from the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, to the Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi, has the honour to state as follows:

2. The nature of demand made against the Government of Pakistan in the Note under reference is indeed extraordinary. Under the guise of expressing concern for the refugees the Government of India has attempted to arrogate to itself the right to sit in judgement over the developments in East Pakistan and to dictate to the Government of Pakistan certain course of action in regard to matters which are exclusively Pakistan’s own affairs. Similarly, the allegation of deliberate expulsion of people from East Pakistan through a campaign of terror is totally false, malicious and unwarranted.

3. The allegations as also the demand made against the Government of Pakistan by India constitute direct interference into the internal affairs of Pakistan. The Government of Pakistan, therefore, rejects as totally unacceptable the Note under reference. In this connection, attention of the Government of India is invited to its obligation under the Charter of the United Nations and the principles of international law which enjoin the member states to desist from meddling into the affairs of other states.

4. The figure of refugees as mentioned in the Note is highly exaggerated and bears no relationship with the realities of the situation. Again, it is the Government of India which largely has to accept the blame for whatever refugees there might be in India. These people became the victims of the conditions created by India’s armed infiltration into East Pakistan as well as the false and distorted Indian propaganda and highly exaggerated accounts of incidents put out by the AIR and the Indian press the credibility of which now stands thoroughly exposed. Public encouragement given by the Indian leaders has also contributed to the influx. In this connection, mention may be made of the statement by the Prime Minister of India on March 27, 1971, in which she is reported to have said that India would keep her borders with East Pakistan open to receive any refugees who might come.

5. In the circumstances, it appears to the Government of Pakistan that the refugee problem has been deliberately allowed to take certain dimensions by the Government of India with some ulterior motive. This apprehension is further confirmed by the fact that instead of treating the question of refugees on humanitarian basis a callous campaign has been launched by India for political purposes. In this connection, the insinuation contained in para 2 of the Note under reference and the statement of the Indian Prime Minister at Rani Khet on May 19, 1971, in which, referring to the refugee problem, she is reported to have said that India “is fully prepared to fight (against Pakistan) if a situation is forced on us” is ominous.

6. In so far as Pakistan is concerned there has never been any question of withholding permission to the return of its bona fide and law abiding citizens to their respective homes. In this connection, attention of the Government of India is invited to the statement made by the President of Pakistan on May 21, 1971, urging the Pakistani citizens to return to East Pakistan.

7. This is in sharp contrast with India’s persistent refusal to take back over half a million Indian nationals evicted by her from Assam, Tripura and West Bengal to East Pakistan. These refugees have been a great economic burden on the Government of Pakistan for the last ten years. The Government of Pakistan demands that India should take immediate steps for their return and rehabilitation in their own properties in India.

8. Lastly, the Government of Pakistan takes serious exception to the use of the terminology East Bengal. The Government of Pakistan demands that, in future, the Government of India should refer to East Pakistan by its accepted official name only.

9. The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for India in Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

0587. Speech of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi replying to the debate in the Lok Sabha on the situation arising out of the arrival of refugees from East Bengal.

New Delhi, May 26, 1971.

Mr. Speaker, Sir, May I express my deep appreciation of the sentiments voiced on all sides of the House in regard to the struggle of Bangla Desh? I fully realize that even though some Hon. Members have used harsh words, they have done so out of deep emotion and feelings of concern. They have reflected the anguish which we and the entire country feel at the tragic and heartrending happenings in Bangla Desh. My Government and I share that anguish and deep concern.

It is only natural that with our own traditions of love of freedom, our involvement with the values of democracy and human rights, we should feel deeply concerned when these values are crushed.

We have heard much talk of democracy. The Allies claimed that the Second World War was fought to save democracy. But when democracy is so flagrantly and so brutally being destroyed, we do not hear much comment, nor do we see the sort of spontaneous strong responses which the situation warrants. Could there be a greater or a clearer expression of democracy than the one we witnessed in the elections in Pakistan? Let me remind the House that although the elections were held under the rules formulated by the military regime, immediately afterwards military repression was used mercilessly to halt the process leading to the formation of a democratically elected Government in Pakistan.

We are told by some countries that while they may disapprove of what is being done by the military rulers, they cannot be a party to the disintegration of Pakistan. Is it suggested that we wish the disintegration of Pakistan? Have we not, as many Members have pointed out, at every step tried not only for propriety in our relationship but also for friendship? If there is a struggle between the two parts of Pakistan, it is certainly not of our making but of the rulers of Pakistan. Is it anybody’s contention that the methods being used today can achieve any integration or stability worth the name now or in the future?

The question of secession is also raised, if I may say so. This is a distortion of facts. It is conveniently forgotten that the majority of Pakistan’s people live in the eastern region. In a democratic system, the majority does have certain rights. They cannot be accused of secession if they assert those rights. However, if today there is such strong feeling amongst our people it is not merely because the democratic rights and liberties of 75 million people are being crushed but because of the damaging effect which this cruel tragedy is having on our entire country economically, politically and socially.

This is the reality of the situation. It is not propaganda or the figment of anyone’s imagination. Our experience of the influx of refugees and the preposterous propaganda by Pakistan has reinforced the fact that what is happening in Bangla Desh does have many sided repercussions on our internal affairs. That is why I have said that this cannot be considered merely as an internal problem of Pakistan. It is an Indian problem. More, it is a world-wide problem. The international community must appreciate the very critical character of the situation that has now developed. Any failure to do so may well lead to disastrous consequences. For what is happening in Bangla Desh is not just a political and economic problem. It is a problem of the very survival of the people of that whole area, the people of Bangla Desh.

It is a problem created by calculated genocide that is resulting not only in the murder of tens of thousands of men, women and children but also forcing many more to seek refuge and shelter in India. It is a problem that threatens the peace and security of India and indeed, of South East Asia. The world must intervene to see that peace and security is re-established and maintained.

As Hon. Members know, yesterday, there was a similar debate in the other House. I had to sit there also for a part of the time, and so, I could not listen to all the speeches which were made here. I was sorry, however, to hear some hon. Members take even this opportunity to cast aspersions on our Foreign Office. I must deplore this tendency to try and find an easy way out by blaming the services. I do not say that we have not made mistakes or that all our representatives are always up to the mark. When there is a mistake, we should certainly find fault. But constant criticism is disheartening and demoralizing. We should not blunt the instruments with which we have to function. Our work here and abroad has to continue. We do realize that any help given to the rulers of Pakistan will be used against the innocent people of Bangla Desh. On this occasion our representatives abroad have worked hard and have done excellent work. They have been as effective as they could possibly be in the prevailing circumstances. Some Governments have set views and even if their sympathies are roused, they are not often willing to take a stand on a matter such as this. I would like to say that all our Services engaged in dealing with the present situation have shown fortitude and a sense of dedication.

If it gives some solace to Hon. Members to abuse the Government and blame them for lack of courage, for lack of direction and even of understanding, I certainly do not want to deprive them of this comfort. To some Members, guts are equated with voice power and the use of passionate words. I wish life were so simple.

Now, this Government may have many faults; but it does not lack courage nor is it afraid of taking a risk if it is a necessary risk. As I have said many times over, we are not merely concerned with the legal aspect of this situation or, indeed, of any situation. We are concerned with one thing and one thing only – our own national interest and security and naturally that of the heroic people of Bangla Desh. That is why it is important to act calmly. The situation is far too grave for anything else.

The word ‘recognition’ has echoed from every side, as if recognition by itself could solve the many difficulties which confront the people of Bangla Desh or the many difficulties which our country faces especially our States on the border, that is, West Bengal, Assam, Tripura and Meghalaya. We have given deep and anxious thought to all aspects of this question. It is, as my colleague has said, constantly under review. We are not waiting to see what other countries will do in the matter. Whatever decision we take in this or other issues is guided by our own independent assessment of the situation and how our interest in the broadest sense are served.

Yesterday, I spoke in very deliberately measured words of our present difficulties and of the likely dangers and burdens, not because I am or ever have been afraid of burden or of danger, but because I want Hon. Members to think deeply about all these matters.

Danger can be faced only when one is prepared for it. This, as I said previously and I should like to repeat, is no time for party rivalry. We must stand together; we must help one another in the economic and other tasks which confront us. Communal tendencies must be curbed. All parties, I think, must help to ensure that the question of Bangla Desh and of the refugees is not reduced to a communal level but is kept on its true level which is a national and an International one. I shall continue to keep in touch with the Leaders of the Opposition and with other Members of this Hon. House on these questions and developments, and I hope that Members will feel free to come to see me to express their views or whatever knowledge they have on the subject. In the meantime, there is not much else that I can say.

I would only say, let us not lose heart. Let us have faith in ourselves and in our people. Let us have faith in the courageous people of Bangla Desh and in their determination to fight for their rights. No great task is achieved without sacrifice. There is an old saying:

‘Is experience gained with a song?

No, it takes all that a man has.’

Sacrifice and hardship there must be for all who fight for freedom or for justice or for a great cause. But I have no doubt that the spirit of man and the spirit of freedom cannot be vanquished. We must face this entire problem with this confidence, and do what we have to do with calm and deep thought and with unity amongst ourselves.

It is true that there was an intrusion in part of Assam, and the Chief Minister had phoned to me. But we did send immediate help, and all the intruders were driven out. The situation is under control. They were driven out by five o’clock the day before yesterday.

Any case of spying is always treated with the utmost seriousness, whether in Assam or anywhere else in the country.

This point has been answered on many occasions.

The Hon. Member told me about this yesterday. We are looking into the matter.

So far as I know, all such entrants are being registered except some who manage to avoid registration. Although my colleague, the Minister for Rehabilitation, is doing all he can to provide tents, tarpaulins, etc., there is no doubt that we are not fully equipped to deal with such a large influx. So, there is bound to be discomfort and hardship which we are trying to minimize to the extent possible.

Letter from the Indian Ambassador in Moscow D. P. Dhar to Foreign Secretary T. N. Kaul regarding the proposal to conclude a treaty with USSR.

Moscow, June 5, 1971.

D.O.No.677-Amb/71 June 5, 1971

My dear

I made my farewell call on Marshal Grechko today in the morning. The conversation turned out to be rather interesting and purposeful. Tandon has prepared a brief record of these talks which is enclosed. I am submitting a copy of this record to the Foreign Minister for his perusal also on his arrival in Moscow.

I would not like to enter into a detailed argument about the advantages and disadvantages of concluding the proposed treaty with the Soviet Union at this juncture. It would perhaps be improper for me towards the fag-end of my present assignment to take responsibility of making any positive recommendations. I would, however, like to bring a few recent facts which are relevant to this issue to your kind attention.

The Soviet Union tried to remove the sharp edges from the controversy which raged between India and Pakistan in the wake of the hijacking incident. They were prepared even to play the role of an honest broker or perhaps of an interested and concerned mediator between the two countries. Events moved fast and there was a confrontation between Mujib and Yahya in Dacca. In this controversy also, it is now well known, the Soviets tried to mediate between the two sides. In fact, it is my suspicion which even the Soviets are also very grudgingly admitting that Yahya perhaps made the use of their good offices to silence the suspicions of Mujib about the intentions of Yahya and his military regime. Then the negotiations broke down and the bloodiest drama in recent human history was enacted in East Bengal. I have no doubt in my mind that the Soviets are aware that we may in spite of our wishes to the contrary be slowly inching forward towards a conflict with Pakistan. Such a possibility is rendered more somber and ominous in their minds by the publicly pronounced attitude of China. The mention of this document in various forms from Pegov to Grechko, from our Central Committee contact to a junior dignitary as Labochev in Foreign Office makes it clear that in spite of the developing crisis in our relations with Pakistan and with the Chinese intervention as a distinct possibility the Soviets would be prepared to accept the responsibilities and obligations which would devolve on them as a result of such a commitment.
Zaheedi’s shame-faced threat to us that Iran would come to the assistance of Pakistan the activities of the so-called consortium of some Islamic countries the continuing threats from China, all put together make me wonder whether we are being wise in reacting in a lukewarm manner to the Soviet offer of unequivocal help to us. The pros and cons of this proposal and its present and ultimate utility can best be judged in New Delhi in consultation with the Foreign Minister and other concerned authorities. It is, however, important that we do have some sort of an understanding of what we expect the Soviet Union to do for us in the event of our country being involved in a conflict with Pakistan singly or along with her allies. I am not talking merely in terms of the political requirements of the situation as it will develop as a consequence of a conflict of this type. I am more interested in the military aspects of the aid and assistance which we will need and which we are bound to seek. You will recall that in a meeting of the Committee of Secretaries for Internal Affairs in which the three Defence Chiefs were present and which was convened in your chamber I posed this question squarely to all of you. It was agreed then at Sam’s suggestion that the three Defence Chiefs would study this matter and prepare detailed proposal. I wonder if any action has been taken so far as a result of that decision. Even now it is time that we should devote our attention seriously to this problem, determine clearly in our minds the sources from which we can secure help and assistance in the event of an open conflict with Pakistan. Once again, I would like to mention here that I am not sure whether the conclusion of a treaty in the form in which it was discussed in the year 1969 would satisfy the needs of the present situation. Perhaps, an exchange of letters which would set out the same objectives as were contained in the treaty would be an equally good substitute for the treaty at the present juncture. Or, again, we could think in terms of a secret document which could emerge as a result of the joint consultations between the General Staffs of the two countries or as a result of consultations which could be held on a purely political level.

As I have mentioned earlier, I am submitting a copy of this letter and the record of my discussion with Grechko to the Foreign Minister. I will naturally take this opportunity of discussing some details of this question with him.

With kind personal regards,

Yours sincerely

D.P. Dhar

Shri T. N. Kaul,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.
A. Record of discussions held during the course of the farewell call by Ambassador D. P. Dhar on the Defence Minister of Soviet Union Marshal A. A. Grechko.

Moscow, June 5, 1971.

After exchange of courtesies, the Ambassador stated that he had come to bid farewell to Marshal Grechko and while doing so, he would like to express sincere gratitude to the Soviet leaders and personally to Marshal Grechko for the kindness and consideration which was extended to him throughout his stay in the Soviet Union. The Ambassador added that wherever or in whatever capacity or position he happened to be, he would deem it his privilege to continue to serve the cause of achieving greater cooperation and friendship between the two countries.

2. Marshal Grechko expressed his sorrow over the departure of the Ambassador from the USSR but added that he had no doubt in his mind that the Ambassador would always continue to promote the cause of friendship between the two countries which was of mutual benefit. The Ambassador wished to take this opportunity of conveying to the Marshal the deepest appreciation of his Government and of his own for the great role that the Marshal had played in not only agreeing with our assessment of our defence needs but also in assisting us to secure a positive satisfaction from the Soviet Government.

3. The Ambassador added that towards the very beginning of his arrival in Moscow, he had on various occasions brought to the notice of the Soviet Government and also to the special attention some of the deficiencies and inadequacies in our defence equipment. He was happy that towards the conclusion of his term of office in the Soviet Union, most of these requirements had either been met or had been accepted in principle. Several delegations had come to the Soviet Union recently, representing various defence organizations, they had held fruitful consultations with the Soviet experts and some equipment had already been contracted for being purchased and some was in the process of being contracted.

4. Marshal Grechko observed that the Soviet leaders, the Soviet Government and he personally held the Ambassador in very high regard for his ability and for his devotion to the cause of his country and also for the great contribution he had made to further develop the Indo-Soviet relations.

5. The Marshal then expressed his deepest regrets for not being able to meet his great friend, Sardar Swaran Singh during his visit to the USSR. He would have to leave Moscow at about 11.30 a.m. on the 7th of June for Sevastopol where his presence was unavoidable during the military manoeuvre and training exercises which were scheduled to commence from that date as already announced in the press. He stated that this training exercise would cover the south, south-east and south-west of the USSR and would be a combined exercise of all wings of the Soviet Defence Forces. He stated that his continued presence during the exercise was unavoidable. Till the moment of his departure for Sevastopol on 7th June, he would remain continuously busy with the Defence Minister of Sweden who was already on a visit to the USSR. He added that his engagements with the Swedish Defence Minister were so crowded that he had no free time to meet Sardar Swaran Singh. He expressed his deep concern in not being able to meet him, who was a good friend of his and had sent a warm letter to him. He wished that if (it) could be possible for Sardar Swaran Singh to meet him at Sevastopol.

6. The Ambassador stated that since Sardar Swaran Singh would be on a very short visit here, it would not be possible for him to meet Marshal Grechko at Sevastopol. He assured Marshal Grechko that as a good friend, Sardar Swaran Singh would understand his difficulty and that he need not feel unduly concerned about his inability to meet him. The Ambassador stated that Sardar Swaran Singh would have perhaps made some requests personally to Marshal Grechko about certain defence matters. Now that there was only a faint possibility of the two leaders meeting each other, the Ambassador said that he would make bold to make some of these requests of his behalf. He stressed that he would mention these requests not in any way implying that he had not already received the maximum satisfaction from Mr. Skachkov and the Soviet organizations under him. The Marshal intervened and said ‘Please do not worry. There is no need to be polite. Skachkov’s organization is directly a part of my Ministry. Skachkov is only a ‘cover’. The Ambassador then requested Marshal Grechko to consider the possibility of increasing the quantity of Armoured Personnel Carriers to be supplied by 15th September, 1971 from 50 pieces to 85 pieces and that of 130 mm ammunition to be supplied in 1971 from 40,000 rounds to 90,000 against our new requests. The Ambassador also mentioned our interest in acquiring, after evaluation, special Soviet anti-aircraft guns and bridging spans. He stated that he hoped to receive consideration for these requests from Marshal Grechko as a parting gift.

7. Marshal Grechko stated that he had got accustomed to listen to many requests from the Ambassador. He had always endeavoured to do his best to meet these requests. Even now he would do his utmost to be of help. Marshal Grechko then said: ‘I hope my friend, you are now happy about the aircraft which we have now agreed to supply. This was your old grievance. I hope we have succeeded in removing it. You are always fond of describing your requirements as only for defensive purposes. Surely, this weapon is not a defensive weapon but a fairly offensive one’.

8. The Ambassador thanked Marshal Grechko for this remarkable gesture to our Government and the Prime Minister in offering this aircraft. He also thanked Marshal Grechko for his kind offer to study the requests mentioned by him. The Marshal added in a lighter vein ‘You always get everything you want from us’. The Ambassador stated that this was perhaps due to the reasonableness of our requests as well as the kindness and generosity of the Soviet Government in considering them.

9. The Ambassador then stated that our country was passing through a very difficult phase. We had already four million refugees from East Bengal on our hands and about 50,000 to 60,000 refugees were entering India every day.
Unfortunately, in their wake, they were carrying cholera with them. This epidemic had spread in some of the refugee camps and it was apprehended that it might spread to the rest of Bengal. The Ambassador stated that the seriousness of the situation was aggravated by regular provocations by Pakistan on our borders. He further stated that while the border on our side was guarded by the Border Security personnel, Pakistan was deploying regular army personnel including artillery units. This was against all the provisions of the agreements and the mutually accepted ground rules. All this had created considerable tension and to add to our problems, ‘Our friend from the North’ had also assumed a threatening posture. The Ambassador stressed that we were really passing through a very difficult period.

10. Marshal Grechko stated that there was no doubt that it was a very complicated situation and it was difficult to foresee how events would develop just as it was difficult to foresee six months back that such a situation would at all develop in such a manner in East Bengal.

11. Marshal Grechko again intervened to say: “If I were you, I would not be worried by Pakistan. You should take into account the unpredictable enemy from the North”. Marshal Grechko continued to say that, personally speaking, he was convinced that there was a definite Chinese policy. He did not know how to define it in words – perhaps it could be described as a policy of sabotage and black-mail. A hostile situation had developed due to the feelings of hatred of China towards the USSR. Marshal Grechko further stated that hatred towards the USSR was ingrained in the minds of Chinese children even from the age of five years. All their art, culture and education demonstrated this hatred. He stated that on account of this hostile attitude of China, a tense situation was created on the Eastern borders of the USSR. China had made claim to 1.5 million kilometers of Soviet territory embracing a population of eight million.
He stated that the Chinese even boasted to starting aggression and added that according to his judgment, the Chinese policy would remain like that for many years. He further stated that the USSR laid no territorial claim on China and it would not be the first to start any conflict. He proceeded to say with some emphasis that in case China started to ‘use aggression, the USSR would not hesitate to use its strength and force in repelling it’. He further stated that in the recent past, the USSR had considerably increased its armed strength on her eastern borders. The concentration of forces there was five to seven times more than before. These included land forces, air force, naval units and also rocketry. The Chinese were aware of the superiority of Soviet forces on the Eastern borders and this had ‘downed their tail’. Of course, the Chinese were aware ‘of our army concentrations’. Chou En-Lai had been repeatedly grumbling about it. Grechko said ‘Of course, we made no secret of it and informed the Chinese that these preparations were a direct conclusion of their continuing hostility towards the USSR and this position would not change till they alter their attitude completely and basically’. Of course, he said, that it was idle to believe that such wide-spread military preparations could be kept a secret. In Mongolia alone, there were nearly 70,000 Chinese and Mongol-Chinese; border was very inadequately guarded with 100 to 150 kms., separating one check-post from another. The Marshal said that how could they hide the strength of their forces in Mongolia. At present there were 1,000 tanks and several thousands aircraft stationed in Mongolia. Where two years ago, there was not a single tank or a single aircraft there. The Chinese knew the purpose of these tanks. The terrain permitted them to move straight to Peking even if half of these forces were destroyed, the other half would comfortably reach its destination. The Marshal added that the Chinese were aware of the Soviet mood and would not dare to play any pranks with them. This, however, placed a crushing financial burden on their country, but it was unavoidable because the requirements of security had to receive precedence over any other need of the community. Unfortunately, however, the Marshal added, the Chinese were aware that India was relatively militarily week. They could, therefore, afford to be aggressive, even insolent and arrogant towards India. They had to be watched, he added, and India had to be careful.

12. Ambassador stated that India’s policy was one of peace. She would never take the first step in creating conditions for conflict. However, India shall be ready for the worst and give a befitting reply to any aggression launched against her singly or jointly in collusion. It was not that India was not able to or could not otherwise develop deterrent weaponry of her own. We had not done so far several reasons. In the first instance, it was even the Soviet view that there should not be a proliferation of weapons of a certain type and as far as India was concerned, though she would not be a party to bind herself down to a course of action considered appropriate by others for her, she was wedded to the use of these new energies for purpose of peace and peaceful development. Secondly, India needed every ounce of her scarce resources for investing in order to improve the standard of living of her teeming millions. The Ambassador added that, thirdly, which in his opinion was important, India believed that she could count the strength of her friends as her own strength in the event of difficulty or crisis.

13. Marshal Grechko stated that ‘We must be ready to fight the Chinese aggression very seriously’. He further stated that it would be of vital importance both to India and the USSR if our friendship was ‘fixed’ in a treaty of mutual help of the kind recently concluded by the USSR with the UAR. He added that such a Treaty would demonstrate to China, Pakistan and any other potential aggressor the solidarity between the peoples of the two countries. Such a document would deter any one from embarking on an adventure against India. He further stated that he had spoken to Sardar Swaran Singh about three years ago to have such a treaty and had also shown him the draft of a possible document. He as Defence Minister had shown that treaty to Sardar Swaran Singh who also at that time was the Defence Minister of India only because of his friendship for him as he knew that these matters did not fall within the purview of Defence Ministers. He, however, did not know how the diplomats in both the countries had looked at this matter but he was certain that such a treaty would be of benefit to both the countries. The Ambassador stated that he had been fully associated with this matter. He was working at it for six months and he had been authorized by his Government to discuss the draft of such a Treaty with the Soviet Foreign Office. As a result of these discussions, an agreement had been reached in principle at their level on the text and contents of the proposed document. The job had thus been done at the diplomatic level and “Abede” (meal) was ready on the plate. Ambassador further added that Marshal Grechko was aware that soon after the finalization of this document at the Foreign office level, quite a number of important changes took place in India. The question arose whether the political climate was appropriate and the time opportune for concluding such a document. It was agreed that for some time consideration of the document should be postponed. Recently after the elections which gave the Prime Minister a massive mandate from the people, he had occasion, the Ambassador said, to very briefly refer to this matter during the course of his talks with Chairman Kosygin. Ambassador had told him that now that the elections were over, we would have to pick up the threads of quite a number of problems from where we had left them nine to ten months ago. He had the question of this document in his mind as one such matter. The Ambassador assured the Marshal that he would convey his views faithfully to Sardar Swaran Singh. The Marshal reiterated that what he had said was his personal view and he felt that a treaty between the two countries at this time would be opportune and appropriate and he would suggest that it should contain some reference to military cooperation also. The Ambassador said that in principle we had never been opposed to the suggestion for having such a treaty. The only question that had to be determined was the appropriateness of the occasion and also that of the time so that such a treaty should not cause any harm to the interests of the two countries but promote what was its main objective, viz., mutual strength of relation between the two countries and a further consolidation of their friendship. Ambassador further felt that any mention of military cooperation would have to be done in a very lukewarm manner in the document itself. Perhaps, the same purpose could be achieved by an exchange of letters or record of the exchange of views on mutual assistance. In any case, like the Marshal, these were, the Ambassador said, his personal views and he was not competent, particularly now that he was on the verge of relinquishing his charge as the Representative of India in the Soviet Union to make any statement which would even remotely involve a commitment of any sort. The Ambassador, however, wanted to ask a question from the Marshal as to whether in view of the present tensions which existed between Pakistan and India as a result of the direct action of Pakistan in East Bengal and on our borders abetted and aided by China, it would be appropriate at the present moment to conclude such a treaty. The Marshal was of the categorical view that such a treaty would perhaps act as a strong deterrent to force Pakistan and China to abandon any idea of military adventure. Even then, he said if they invite a conflict, they would be courting a disaster.

14. The Ambassador said, he would like to venture an opinion even though he was aware that he was technically not competent to express it. In his view, the Ambassador said the defence of the steppes could be guaranteed by the effective defence of the Himalayas and the effective defence of the Himalayas would vice versa guarantee the defence of the steppes. It was gratifying to note, Ambassador added, that there was an awareness of the mutuality of interest both in terms of security and defence on the one hand and long term development on the other between the leaderships of the USSR and India. The Marshal said "I am in absolute agreement with your formulation. Do you think that the massing of our troops in the western and the north-western borders of China does not help India directly in her defence against China? If the Chinese had not to contend against our forces, they would release their hordes for use against you. We have to understand these problems in the military sense – in the operational sense."

15. The Ambassador thereafter stated that there was another matter which Sardar Swaran Singh might have liked to mention to Marshal Grechko at personal level. He asked whether Marshal Grechko could suggest the acquisition of some more equipment by India from the USSR after assessing what we needed and what the USSR could supply. He added that any suggestions by Marshal Grechko in this regard would be studied by us without causing any misunderstanding. Marshal Grechko stated that suggestions in this respect could be made either only after the USSR knew what equipment India had, in what condition it was and what additional equipment India needed. He added that if such information was asked for, it could lead to misunderstanding. The better course that he could suggest was for the Indian experts to study their problems and state clearly what type of equipment they would need in relation to their problems either for purpose of defence or for increasing essential offensive capabilities. These requirements then could be studied and analysed by the Soviet experts in consultation with our experts. He added jocularly, “Of course, all the questions cannot be solved in a day. Some questions will have to be left for solution to the future. Otherwise there would be no justification for you and I to meet again”. Ambassador added that he only wanted to tell the Marshal that it was possible that we may require more equipment but Ambassador said he would like to assure the Marshal that our demands will not be such which could embarrass the Soviet Government nor would they spread to fields where we knew it would be difficult for the Soviet Government to accommodate us.

16. Thereafter, Marshal Grechko again expressed his regret for his inability to meet Sardar Swaran Singh in the circumstances explained by him. He stated that he had discussed this matter with Gromyko but no possible solution had been found till then because all his time was tightly booked with the Swedish Defence Minister. Marshal Grechko, however, noted the time of arrival and departure of Sardar Swaran Singh and again consulted his published programme. He left the Ambassador with the feeling that perhaps he may call on the Foreign Minister at an odd hour before he leaves for Sevastopol.

17. The Ambassador again thanked the Marshal for his kindness and courtesy. The Marshal was very affable and extremely friendly and he presented his latest book to the Ambassador with his autograph. He once again made very complimentary references to the Ambassador’s work in the Soviet Union.
0589. Letter from the US President Richard Nixon to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi regarding the visit of Henry Kissinger to New Delhi.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

July 1, 1971

Dear Madame Prime Minister:

Dr. Kissinger is visiting New Delhi to discuss United States relation with India and in particular to seek your views on the problem caused by the movement of millions of refugees from East Pakistan into India. As I told your Foreign Minister when I talked with him in the White House on June 16, we are concerned about the problem not only because of its humanitarian aspects, but more importantly because it is a major international issue with implications for all of us. It is because of these implications and our concern for the peace and well being of Asia that we must all devote so much attention to encouraging progress toward a solution.

I hope that the assistance which we have been able to provide in support of the refugees and which has been discussed with your Foreign Minister will help to meet your most pressing immediate needs.

With regard to the need for actions which will make possible a reversal of the refugee flow, we have continued to emphasize that a return to peace and security in East Pakistan and a visible political settlement are crucial to restoration of a more stable situation in South Asia. Dr. Kissinger will also be talking to President Yahya about this subject and will be delivering a personnel message from me. I think there has been some forward movement in this regard over the past several weeks, but there is a need for more.

It is hoped that the recent difficulties over the delivery of arms ordered by Pakistan prior to March 25 will not prevent us from working together to achieve the objectives of peace and prosperity in South Asia, which are in the United States’ interest as well as in India’s. I understand the nature of your Government’s concern. You can appreciate the essentially restrictive nature of the interim actions we have taken since the civil strife began in East Pakistan. the United States must maintain a constructive relationship with Pakistan so that we may retain some influence in working with them toward important decisions to be made in that country, as we have in the past.
It was a great pleasure for me to have had the opportunity to discuss those issues with your Foreign Minister last month. I very much hope that we can continue to have frank exchanges of views on these matters and that you will be entirely candid with Dr. Kissinger in telling him how my government can be of assistance in resolving such complex and difficult problems.

Sincerely,

Sd/- Richard Nixon

Her Excellency
Indira Gandhi
Prime Ministry of India
New Delhi.

SECRET

Record of the meeting between the Assistant to U. S. President on National Security Affairs Henry Kissinger and the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister P. N. Haksar.

New Delhi, July 6, 1971.

Prime Minister’s Secretariat

Dr. Henry Kissinger called on me on Tuesday, July 6, 1971, at 6.00 p.m. and stayed on until 7.20 p.m. I met him again with Dr. Vikram Sarabhai at a lunch and had further conversations with him for another 1-1/2 hours. As I could not obviously take notes of the conversations, I recorded brief notes after the conversations. However, it would be idle to pretend that I can reproduce verbatim the precise language he used, but the record reflects as accurately as possible all that was said.

H.  (P.N. Haskar): Welcome, Glad to see you again. Our last meeting was much too brief.

K.  (Henry Kissinger): I am glad to be back in India. The weather is much cooler.

H.  Yes, we have had some showers and it has cooled down. I hope you have had some little rest after arrival.
K. Not much, as I had to meet our Embassy people. However, I have been greatly looking forward to meeting with you. I wonder how much time you have, as I know how busy you are.

H. So far as I am concerned, I am entirely at your disposal. We have a dinner this evening. We can carry on until then if you so desire.

K. I deeply appreciate this because I know the burden you carry. May I raise one small matter initially?

H. Yes, please do by all means.

K. It is a little delicate, but I would like to have an opportunity to meet P.M. alone. How much time has P.M. set apart to meeting us?

H. I am not certain, but I should imagine that it would be about half an hour to 45 minutes.

K. Could I have 10 or 15 minutes alone? I cannot suggest this to the Ambassador. After meeting P.M. alone, the Ambassador could perhaps be called in. Don’t you think that he should be called in?

H. It is only right and proper that the Ambassador should be there, but if you wish to see P.M. alone for a few minutes, this could probably be arranged.

K. Will you then speak to the Ambassador?

H. This can be arranged.

K. I have a letter from the president and I would like to deliver it to the Prime Minister and have a few minutes alone with her.

K. I leave it entirely to you then.

K. I should like to discuss with you not only the present situation which is difficult, but also the long term perspectives of Indo-American relations. I must say that the question of arms sale is the worst example of bureaucratic muddle. When I read about it in the New York Times, I was myself taken aback, we are having it thoroughly investigated.

H. I would personally accept your explanation. We are ourselves familiar with bureaucratic muddles in our country. However, my impression was that the United States was better organized with its far better Information System. However, if it was a case of ‘bureaucratic muddle’, then surely one should expect that it would be stopped. We have received no assurances on this.

K. India should not really worry too much about these arms sales. Taking the overall position, these supplies are only of marginal significance. There is also the consideration that we have to have some leverage with Yahya Khan.
H. This is what troubles me. The implication of calling it 'bureaucratic muddle' is that it was something wrong which ought not to have happened and has happened because of muddle. But when you argue that it is of marginal significance, I personally do not agree. Also, you cannot explain the arms supply as a bureaucratic muddle and yet argue that such supply gives you leverage. There is some contradiction in this.

K. I see the point you are making, but our Pentagon people argue that we should not cut off completely these military supplies which are basically non lethal.

H. The only conclusion I draw from what you have said is that Pentagon people have their way. I also do not accept the validity of the metaphysical concept called 'non lethal'. I should perhaps explain why I say so. You are aware that between 1954 and 1965, United States, ignoring all protests from India, pumped into Pakistan $2 billion worth of military hardware. Everyone knows that this hardware requires spares. A Patton tank, for instance could be immobilized because a few track links were required. Track links appear non lethal, but when supplied and fitted on to the Patton tank, make that tank active. Such tanks so far have only been used against us. Despite the assurances given by President Eisenhower that American arms supplies will not be used against India, they were used exclusively against India. This kind of contradiction between what you say and what you do, develops a credibility gap. It is not good for the kind of relations we like to establish with your country. You would recall that when I had occasion to meet you when you came here with President Eisenhower, I had mentioned to you that all of us were anxious to give stability to Indo-American relations, but were troubled about the framework of American policy vis-à-vis India and Pakistan. unless this framework is changed, all the good things you do to us and for us, get negatived and neutralized.

K. I can only assure you that President Nixon and his closest advisers are anxious to make a fresh start. The President sincerely feels that in this whole region of South and South-East Asia, India is the one country which has all the potentialities of being not only a big power, but a Power for peace and stability. Pakistan is only of a small regional significance and does not occupy any place in our global perspective.

H. Apart from being the closest Adviser to the President, you are a most distinguished political scientist and from the books you have written and which I have read, I felt overwhelmed by your power of analysis. Please do not take it as a flattery. In any case, as the saying goes, 'good wine needs no bush'. However, I did want to ask you if you have spent some time in analyzing the phenomenon called 'Pakistan'.
K. I am familiar rather intimately with Europe and I am beginning to learn about this part of the world, but India is one of the countries with which I deal. I let the State Department send papers to President, but when it comes to India and a few other countries, I take personal interest.

H. I feel reassured. But India is an extremely complex country and unless you spend a little time and study its complex problems, you may well get a picture which is far removed from reality and the same thing applies to Pakistan. In fact, Pakistan is that part of India which bears an Islamic label. Pakistan consists, like India, of several linguistic sub-national groups. Pakistan consists of Punjab. We too have our Punjab. Pakistan consists of East Bengal just as we have West Bengal. Pakistan also has Baluchistan, Frontier Province and Sindhu just as we have Maharashtra, Gujarat, Tamil Nadu and a host of other States. We are intensely conscious of the complex problem of marrying regional aspirations with national aspirations. All this requires very delicate handling. Despite this, explosive situations develop and we have to defuse them. These situations develop on simple things like locations of an industry, or use of a particular language, disputes relating to utilization of river waters, boundary disputes and so on. Some sort of tensions exist in Pakistan. There are great disparities in development of various regions of Pakistan and these disparities and the problems which arise from them cannot be resolved by all the emotive power of Islam. If religion could provide a basis for creating Nation-States, Europe would probably still have the whole Roman Empire. And if national and sub-nationalist aspirations could be made subordinate to dynastic concepts, Austro-Hungarian Empire would not have fallen apart. And when you have a State like Pakistan defying all laws of social and economic development, accentuating regional disparities, then you are building up an inherently unstable system. The burst up in East Bengal and the earlier turbulence in Baluchistan, are all rooted in total defiance of the elementary principles of social, economic and political engineering by the military junta in Pakistan.

K. I have no difficulty in agreeing with your analysis, but the question is: what can we do to change it? I have heard it said that East Bengal would not have been in the present situation and the Awami League would not have got the votes they got had it not been for the cyclone. Of course, this is a ridiculous theory.

H. It is, of course, ridiculous, but I am troubled that you should have even mentioned it. I suppose human mind has a craving for simplifying things and putting them in capsules which one can easily swallow. I hope this simple explanation of the success of the Awami League at the last elections is not being swallowed by persons who are less perceptive than you are. Awami League’s success is a long history. It began with resistance of East Pakistanis to the imposition of Urdu language. We, in India, understand very well what passions are aroused by linguistic controversies. We had an explosion on this question in Tamil Nadu. One has to understand that the deeply-rooted cultural and linguistic traditions of the constituent elements of Pakistan are in no way different from those obtaining in the various States of India. In India too, we have political forces, largely represented in organizations like the R.S.S. and the Jan Sangh, who think that the complex political and social structure of India could be based on the concept of Hindu Rashtra (nationalism) just as Pakistan thought that they could create a Nation-State on the basis of Islam. Of course, our Government knows that we cannot build a viable India on the basis of it being a Hindu country. That is why we have, all these years, laid such great emphasis on both democracy and secularism. The influx of a large number of refugees and more particularly the fact that now nearly 90% of those coming out of East Pakistan are Hindus by religion, gives a powerful impetus to those disruptionist forces in India who want to appeal to the religious sentiments of the people. Our Government is seriously concerned about this development, as it strikes at the very root of our attempt to build secular democracy.

K. Do you think that the Hindu refugees will go back or would like them to go back?

H. It is a cruel thing to say that we would not like these refugees, whether Hindu or Muslim, to go back. As to whether they will go back or not, quite clearly, they would not go back, nor can we push them back, if the political situation and the regime in East Pakistan is such that they feel that they would be subjected to same sort of butchery which they have only recently experienced. I personally have no doubt that if East Pakistan had a democratic Government of the kind which the Awami League envisaged, not only the Muslims would go back but also the Hindus. After all, despite all the discrimination to which the Hindus have been subjected in East Pakistan, nearly 10 millions of them continued to remain there for all these years. Also, whatever might be the pull of religion, people of Bengal, be they Hindu or Muslim, are deeply devoted to their country. People from many parts of India have migrated abroad, but people from Bengal have not. In contradistinction, the people from Punjab have no difficulty in adapting themselves or adjusting themselves in other parts of India or in foreign lands. So, I have no doubt that East Bengali refugees would like to go back and would, in fact, go back if they feel reassured about their life, liberty and limbs.

K. It has been said that India is preventing the return of normalcy because of the support you are giving to the guerilla movement.

H. I shall be perfectly frank with you on this question. As you are undoubtedly aware, prior to the events of March 25, 1971, there were large number of East Pakistan Bengalis who had received military training and formed part of military and para-military organizations. There were the East Bengal Regiments; also East Pakistani Rifles. In addition, there were people who were described as the Mujahids and the Ansars. Our estimate is that these people who had received military training and had arms and equipment deserted en bloc. They numbered some 40,000 to 50,000 people. The hard core consisted of East Bengal Regiments. According to our information, they put up desperate but heroic resistance to the onslaught of the West Pakistan army. Even if one assumes that three-fourths of them died, there still remain 10,000 to 12,000 of these people still inside Bangla Desh. They provide the hard core of the Mukti Fouj (liberation army). Many foreign correspondents, who have recently been to East Bengal at the invitation of the Pakistan Government, have testified to the fact that these people are active there, so far as we are concerned, we have given no arms, and that they are probably living either on the arms they had or the arms they might have snatched. Of course, our frontier is such that even with the best will in the world, we could not possibly seal it at every point and it is not impossible for these people to go in and out. And this is what is keeping up the resistance and not what India is doing. We have bent over backward to ensure that despite many provocations given to us day after day by the regular Pakistan army, neither our Border Security force nor our Army respond to such provocations.

K. I am worried about the possibility of a conflict between India and Pakistan. In the event of such conflict, China would certainly react and this would lead you to rely upon Soviet assistance. Such a development will cause complications for us in America.

H. We in India are not seeking the conflict. In fact, we wish to avoid the conflict. We want a peaceful solution. Prime Minister has written to President Nixon and Heads of other friendly Governments seeking their advice on how to solve this problem. Everyone has testified to the restraint we have shown. But I would like to ask you if you can give me some sort of a picture which we could look forward for peacefully solving the problem created for us by the influx of refugees. This is our approach. As I said, we want, and we would like, to avoid a conflict. However, if one is forced upon us, I can understand your fears about China reacting in a particular way, that is, in a way which is detrimental to us. However, in such a situation, it is not unreasonable for us to expect and to hope that United States would take a sympathetic attitude towards our country. Viewed in this context, I am a bit puzzled by your saying that if we get involved in a conflict which is not of our choosing and the Chinese intervene in one way or another, United States, instead of assisting us, would feel some sort of discomfiture. I should, in fact, like to have some idea of the broad framework within which you view your policies towards the Soviet Union, China and India.

K. Soviet Union is a great and powerful State. We have been continuously in contact with them on a variety of matters. However, there has not been a period when our contacts and conversations could go on un-interrupted. Something happens and there is a sliding back. This is due to two factors: firstly, cumbersomeness of decision making in the Soviet Union. There is probably too much of bureaucratization; secondly, the Soviet Union is still concerned with maintaining her ideological position. And so we have ups and downs. However, the President is determined to push through our contacts and conversations with Soviet Union, particularly in sphere of Strategic Arms Limitation. We do not think there is any conflict of Soviet and American interests so far as India is concerned. Both of us want a peaceful and stable India. As for China, we are desirous of improving our relations. We think that we can now quickly move forward in this direction. However, it would be a folly for us to seek to improve these relations with China in a manner that the interests of the Soviet Union are put in jeopardy. Also, if the Chinese seek to dominate areas outside their country, or, for instance, dominate India, we cannot connive at this. In this global view, Pakistan is only of regional significance.

May I ask you how you view, in long term perspective, India’s position in the world as it is evolving and more particularly, long term perspectives India’s position in the world as it is evolving and more particularly long term perspective of Indo-U.S. relations?

H. I am assuming that the present Administration in the United States will get away from some of the working assumptions of their past policies which express themselves, in our view, in the United States wanting to maintain a balance between Pakistan and India; it has also, in the past, expressed itself in the power and prestige of the United States being ranged against us on the question of Kashmir, or on the question of Goa. Because of these manifestations of U.S. policy, India had to seek support from the Soviet Union. In course of time, these relations with the Soviet Union, as a State, have grown and multiplied. I was glad to hear that you felt that there was no conflict of interests of Soviet Union and the United States and that both the countries desire peaceful and stable India. In this view of the matter, I did not understand some of the accusations made by your State Department about our leaning on the side of the Soviet Union. I don’t think we lean. We wish to have stable relations with the United States and we see no conflict in having such relations with your country and having equally good relations with the Soviet Union. As I said, if we can get over the past and also work together in solving the most critical situation created by the events in East Pakistan, then we can calmly look forward to a long period of stable, friendly relations with the United States. And if the problem of South Vietnam is resolved, and we have in South and South East Asia States which are truly sovereign, indeed as sovereign as Ceylon, I, for my part, see no difficulty in entering with these States into arrangements which will ensure the security and sovereignty of these States and their neutralization. I said that you may not have regarded it as of any great significance India’s recent response to the request of the Government of Ceylon to send our troops and our Navy. It signifies the extent to which India can play a part in safeguarding the security and territorial integrity of friendly sovereign states in this part of the world.

K. Yes, we were most impressed by India’s response to the situation in Ceylon and felt heartened. You referred to the legacy of the past. I agree that many things were done in the past which make no sense whatever to me. But that era is gone. Are there any other matters impeading development of Indo-American relations? I had a report of what took place in New York when Prime Minister was last there.

H. Yes, that was quite extraordinary. Mr. Rogers apparently forgot for a moment that he was the principal diplomat of United States and he even forgot that he was addressing not only a Prime Minister, but a gracious lady. I also felt that perhaps Mr. Sisco could have spoken less loudly. In any case, the matter raised by Prime Minister was important.

K. Do you think that no change has taken place in recent months?

H. I do not observe these matters in detail. It seemed to me that some old habits persist. In a sense, these were understandable. After all, United States was a big Power having a large Mission. It also inevitably had Intelligence Agencies operating. I can imagine that when they first began their operations in India way back in 1947 during the cold war period and found the Government of India and Mr. Nehru seemingly unsympathetic to the United States’ cold war aspirations, Intelligence Agencies must have established contacts with those elements in India which were opposed to Government and to Mr. Nehru. In human affairs, there is a tendency for things to continue unless positively checked. These often continue at lower levels even when higher levels are clear about things.

K. Could we maintain contact with each other at a personal level in confidence? I shall always welcome your letting me know any instances. I can assure you that we have not given any authorization to our Intelligence Agencies in India to maintain contacts with political elements hostile to the Government of India.
Perhaps it is taking time for your directions to filter down. In matters of this sort, Ambassadors are helpless.

Do you travel abroad?

I am very much tied to my desk and I do not travel unless there is a special occasion for this.

It would be a good thing if we can meet once in a while and sit down and talk, not merely about political matters, but about Indo-American cooperation in a variety of other matters in the field of science and technology and in matters connected with exploration of space.

Yes, this is a good idea and worth pursuing. Coming back to the Bangla Desh, may I ask you what kind of a solution you consider possible?

It is rather difficult for me to say. Much would depend upon my talks with Yahya Khan. We have few other contacts there.

I hope that your conversations with Yahya Khan would result in real communication between two minds. The British Parliamentary delegation which recently visited Pakistan and talked to Yahya Khan, could not carry on any rational dialogue with him. I understand that Cargill had a similar experience. I feel, however, that you might be able to prize him upon. We would be interested to know the result of your conversations.

Yes, I will let you know this. What would be the best means of conveying this.

The best means would be to convey it, through our Ambassador in Washington, personally to me.
K. President was deeply impressed with the success of your visit. I want to explain the events that followed your visit. When I saw New York Times my reaction was same as yours, i.e. it cannot be true. The bureaucracy sometimes blunders.

Military action in March in East Pakistan seemed a civil war at that time. Refugees were exclusively Muslim. We discussed the question of arms. We were told no arms were going to be shipped in September. No orders had been placed under the ‘one time exception’. No licenses were to be issued. There would be administrative delays on existing undertakings. This is what the bureaucracy told us. We in the White House and the State Department believed it. But the bureaucracy did not keep us and you fully informed of things already delivered to the docks prior to March 25, 1971. None of us was aware of this category when we talked to you. We were therefore very much surprised at the New York Times Report.

Whatever the outcome of this tragedy, great nations should not indulge in treachery and must keep things above board. That was bureaucratic blunder. As for events that followed, we are trying to find out what exactly is moving. When I left we did not have an exact catalogue, for example the F-86 engines they have sent for reconditioning are their property as against the ammunition which can be used against people. The total amount cannot exceed dollars 29 million. We have already stopped items that are to move out of depots.

President’s policy is as follows:

1. Political solution between Pak President and East Bengal people.
2. It must involve substantial majority of refugees or all of them.
3. We want to use our influence in Islamabad for this.
4. We do not know if there will be a solution or confrontation.
5. We shall review the transit of arms to see if it involves items that would upset the military balance. We want to be absolutely honest with you.

F.M. Let us keep suspicions apart. What is the present policy is more important.
K. We have not issued any licence after 1\textsuperscript{st} April – two were issued but revoked. No orders were taken on ‘one time exception’.

The President was well treated in Pakistan when he was out of office. He has a personal equation with Yahya Khan. Still he has not allowed anything to Yahya under one time exception.

The only thing available are arms licenced before April 1 that were in commercial channels and not in depots or not at the dockside. Totaling 1 million dollars, \textit{e.g.} items like parachutes. The maximum total can be 29 million dollars and we are going to review it.

F.M. Some items are not from commercial firms. Are there different kinds of depots?

Sisco. Dr. Kissinger has referred to commercial channels regarding items which have been licenced.

F.M. If what is available in depots can be channelled through commercial channels it can be significant.

K. That was true before April 1 but not after that.

F.M. How far back would licences issued before April 1 take us?

K. One year is maximum period of licence, that is up to 1.4.70. Usually they take out more licences than the orders they place so the actual figure is much less than the 29 million dollars.

F.M. We were all along under the impression that nothing would move after March 25. It would have been better if we had been told the truth.

K. I agree. I was myself under the impression that nothing would move before 1.9.71., except a few police rifles.

F.M. Nobody is under cross examination and it would be the duty of your staff to give the whole information. I would give hell to my staff if they did not give me full information.

K. Our bureaucracy is not as disciplined as yours, \textit{e.g.} our military adviser was killed in Laos but the bureaucracy did not include his name among Military Attaches. Therefore I said nil when asked if any Military Attache had been killed. I am raising hell, but I agree that is no consolation. We were ourselves misled.

F.M. It is an embarrassment, not to me but to you, though I may face an angry Parliament. That is part of my job, but it does give a serious blow to our relations which we were trying to build up in a frank manner.
K. I entirely agree. Relations between two great countries must be based on strict confidence.

F.M. After my meeting with your President I was profoundly impressed and noticed even a slight change in the State Department’s attitude. It could be traced to the White House.

K. That is true. The feeling was mutual. The President felt the same way as you. He has made the very same point that you have made to me.

F.M. Regarding the substantive issues I want to have a clear picture from you so that I can speak accordingly.

K. I would like next week to review the list when I get back and tell you precisely where we stand to your or our Ambassador or both.

F.M. I would like you to convey to your President that we expect a good review not on purely legalistic basis. We would urge that there should be a review of this policy because a great deal has happened ever since I met your President. Any supply of arms to Pakistan would be detrimental to your interest also and primarily to ours.

When I was talking to Secretary Rogers he said. ‘It is in our national interest’. That could end the argument, but we would like to know what is that national interest. We do not see any basic conflict between your and our national interest.

K. Nor do we.

F.M. We would like to have a frank discussion as to whether your national interest cannot be served in some other way, e.g. during the Dulles period you had a policy of counter communism. We did not agree with the supply of F-104 and other war machines etc, but now there are clear postures that you are friendly with USSR and China and your President’s policy is different from previous US policy. It passes my understanding if we are coming in the way of your interest – if so, we may review our own policy.

K. Let me give you a general answer and then we could talk alone. Our general view is that India is one of the pivotal countries in the world because of its size, government, etc. It can be an example to others and a force for peace and stability in the world. As compared to India, Pakistan has only a regional and not global role and has only a limited appeal to other countries. Therefore, our commitment to the vitality and cohesion of India is important - to the strength and growth of India - compared to almost any other great power. We are relatively disinterested in any political party.
F.M.  Though some of your parties claim it.

K.  I know. There was an unfortunate discussion between Secretary Rogers and your Prime Minister, but nothing could happen there without our Ambassador’s knowledge. Nothing can happen in USA without my knowledge.

F.M.  But you yourself said bureaucracy can do things without your knowledge.

K.  I am trying to get on the top of the bureaucracy and have issued instructions that any licence issued after 1969 not cashed within six months cannot be renewed. You can write to me privately whatever you like, but not formally.

F.M.  I had a frank discussion with your Ambassador. It was not all recorded. In such matters there cannot always be proof. If we had proof we could take action.

Amb. Keating. The political staff was guarded during the elections.

K.  Ambassador has direct access to the White House.

F.M.  We do not accept kite flying and convey things only when we are convinced.

K.  Our relationship with Pakistan is historical. It started with a military alliance. We are however more sophisticated now. We do not have the same view as the military view of the situation. But we do believe: (i) War between India and Pakistan would be a disaster and make the sub-continent an arena for outside powers. (2) The President has some equation with Islamabad and wants to use it for a political solution. I cannot guarantee if it is possible but we shall try. (3) We know you cannot maintain 6 million refugees without serious consequences. This is our general assessment.

F.M.  We know Pakistan is getting a lot of arms from China. We cannot do anything about it. But your giving of arms to Pakistan will provoke a war.

K.  It is our judgment that the maximum of military equipment will not enable Pakistan to go to war or to do anything more to East Pakistan. I shall review the situation next week.

I understand the symbolic effect of stopping our supply to Pakistan. You would like us to shock Islamabad by stopping all supplies. We do not believe that status quo can be maintained. If we see then our policy does not bear fruit then it will have to be reviewed.
F.M. I hope you have examined Yahya Khan statement.

K. We are looking at it very carefully. We know Mujibur has his problems.

F.M. I was told that your President would take it up with Yahya Khan, but I have not mentioned this to the press. After Yahya Khan’s statement we would like you to reconsider. His statement has dispelled any possibility of even regional autonomy. Whether Mujib is there is not so important. Yahya Khan’s statement means (he) wants to continue with military rule, but for how long. I am very doubtful if people of East Bengal will accept any solution unless Yahya Khan changes his policy basically.

Bottomley (U.K.) told me he was convinced. Yahya Khan does not know the whole story. He is ignorant of true situation. If Yahya Khan continues this line, we cannot but feel that the international community under your leadership cannot influence Yahya Khan. Therefore you will have to review your policy and we too.

Kissinger’s talks with F.M. alone as mentioned by F.M. later.

K. Our national interest shows that India is a reliable country of large size, US national interest is that India should become strong. There is no clash between our national interests.

(2) Kissinger did not explain how their national interests were served by supplying arms to Pakistan.

(3) Kissinger would speak to Yahya Khan that even economic aid may be stopped if there is no political settlement. But why does India insist that there can be no political settlement except with Mujib and Awami League.

F.M. replied we have seen Yahya Khan’s letters to others. We know him.

K. Yahya Khan says you do not want to send back refugees.

F.M. This is ridiculous. It is not in our interest to keep them.(it seems Sisco had mentioned this to K.)

F.M. When we say Mujib or Awami League, we are not keen on any particular individual or set up. What we mean is that a military regime or a communal regime will not inspire confidence among the refugees. They cannot go back in the same regime which pushed them out or a civilian but a communal regime.
K. Our and your long range interests coincide.

F.M. Third countries can cut off oil. Is it your policy to permit this? Do you wish to continue arms supplies.

K. what about China and USSR.

Dr. Henry Kissinger, Assistant to President on National Security Affairs called on Defence Minister on 7.7.1971. at 6 p.m. Defence Secretary was present. Dr. Kissinger was accompanied by Mr. Harold Saunders and Ambassador Keating. A brief record of the conversation follows:

Dr. Kissinger said he would be interested to know the Defence Minister’s assessment of the Chinese position and our preparedness in the context of the crisis in East Bengal. Defence Minister replied that there was no change in either factor over the last couple of years. Even before Pakistan's military operations in East Bengal, China had been assisting Pakistan in various ways to our detriment, such as training Pakistanis for guerilla warfare and training and equipping Naga and Mizo hostiles on our border. Dr. Kissinger said that he had not heard of this before. He enquired whether there was any increase in China’s forces. The Defence Minister replied that there was no substantial increase though here and there they were improving their bunkers.

Dr. Kissinger wanted to know whether we would get any notice of China’s intentions if they chose to create trouble. Defence Minister said that there would be some notice because they would have to build up their stocks and logistics are not easy over that terrain.

Dr. Kissinger wanted to know how long the Chinese would take to prepare offensive action against India. Defence Secretary thought it might take two to three months to augment troops and to stock up supplies. Dr. Kissinger asked, ‘Would you get that much of warning?’ Defence Secretary said, ‘No, not likely because we may not get timely information from inside Tibet.’ He asked the visitor ‘Judging from their present political stance, do you think China will start something without some justification?’ Dr. Kissinger replied, ‘We think it highly unlikely. I might also tell you that we would take a very grave view of any Chinese move against India.’ Probing a little further, Defence Secretary asked, ‘In view of the present situation between you and China, is it possible that China would be in some doubt in this regard?’ Dr. Kissinger said, ‘We will leave them in no doubt.’ Defence Secretary remarked that ‘The Chinese would then have to take this into account.’ He added that the Chinese were a cautious people and except for their action in Korea and in 1962 against us, there had been no precedent of any such military action by them. Dr. Kissinger said, ‘We have been adopting a certain attitude in order to promote tranquility and peace but if it looks as if they are going in for violence, we would take a very grave view.’ He added that it was in the United States’ interest to have a strong and stable India.
Reverting to the Pakistan situation, Defence Minister said we had grave apprehensions as to what was going to happen in regard to East Bengal. “For some time India and Pakistan had been maintaining a sort of military preparedness vis-à-vis one another. We felt that any accretion to the military strength of Pakistan naturally increased the threat to us. Now we have the Bangla Desh situation as well. This should be viewed in a wider perspective, I studied in Bengal and the fathers of some of the present leaders of Bangla Desh were with me. The West Pakistanis do not regard the average Bengali as one of them. How then, would it be possible for them to live in peace together?’

He went on to point out how the East Bengalis were discriminated against by the West Pakistanis. It was for the United states to consider, he said, whether any continuation of the Bangla Desh situation was in the interests of India or Pakistan or this whole region.

Dr. Kissinger asked, ‘Please tell us what we should do in this situation? We would really like your advice.’ Defence Minister replied, ‘It is not for us to tell you what to do. You need only remember that Pakistan has been sustained entirely by you. Do you agree?’ Dr. Kissinger replied, ‘Only partially.’ Defence Minister smiled back, ‘No, not just partially, almost entirely. Consider the volume of assistance you have given in building up Pakistan’s economy and her military strength.’ Dr. Kissinger repeated his question, ‘What should the U.S. do?’ Defence Minister observed, ‘The moment our people feel that the refugees are going to continue here, the tension will be intense.’ Therefore, a solution would have to be found. The people of Bangla Desh had made their wishes clear in the last election. If there was any doubt about it, the will of the people could be ascertained again in another election. He was implying that as often as you hold a fair election, the results will be the same as in the last. ‘What is said in the newspapers, Indian and foreign,’ he said, ‘is only a fraction of what is happening there’. ‘If economic aid did not come from various countries, Pakistan cannot retain Bangla Desh.’

Dr. Kissinger said: ‘No massive aid is being given now. So perhaps things will work out.’

Defence Secretary observed that the general interest of Pakistan and of the region cannot be served by Pakistan’s present course of action. Neither could military action ensure the integrity of Pakistan. Dr. Kissinger said, ‘I would like to make one thing clear, we are not advocating secession.’ It was explained to him that Awami League had not sought secession but they had wanted an autonomous government. The Minister pointed out: ‘We knew even before he made his statement on June 28 that President Yahya Khan was thinking of some kind of civilian Government, but an unrepresentative Government will not be acceptable to the people of Bangla Desh and will not be able to keep its hold on East Bengal. If it becomes Bangla Desh, it will be the 2nd largest Muslim state in the world, Indonesia being the first and India being the 3rd.'

Defence Secretary recalled the article by Mr. Mascarenhas the journalist who had escaped from Pakistan. The article showed clearly the mainsprings of West Pakistan Army’s actions in East Bengal. The Minister remarked that the ‘average Punjabi in Pakistan considered himself as the Ruler and the Bengali as the ruled. They had never put faith in the Bengalis. Mujib had never thought of leaving Pakistan. He had generally ‘exercised as moderating influences on the extremists.’

Bhashani had wanted separation but Mujib had not and he had swept the polls. Removing Mujib from the scene would be removing a moderating influence from this part of the world. Dr. Kissinger asked, ‘you say we should do something about this?’

Defence Minister: I say only you can.

Dr. Kissinger: ‘I have understood the intensity of your feeling. Actually, the Ambassador had reported to us on this point. You say we have been equating India and Pakistan. Actually, we regard a strong stable India to be in our basic interest.’

Defence Minister: ‘The pressure on us here and particularly on me as Defence Minister to take some action has been mounting but we have been resisting this.’

Dr. Kissinger: ‘We are strongly opposed to a military conflict here.’

Defence Minister: ‘So are we but there is a limit to what we could take. It was in Agartala recently. The Pakistanis were going on shelling at the border. Some of these shells were falling on our side.’

Defence Secretary remarked that there were four Divisions ‘plus’ of Pakistani troops in East Bengal. Dr. Kissinger asked how they were supplied. Secretary answered that they were supplied by sea.

Defence Minister: ‘These troops cannot sustain themselves without outside assistance. They do not understand the language and have changed even the number-plates on vehicles to Roman letters and figures. They cannot get the wheat they prefer. Hence they cannot continue their military operations without help from outside.’

Defence Secretary said that the Pakistan Army had some gun-boats and boats supplied by the Chinese. America had also supplied them a number of boats to help in cyclone relief and now the Pakistan Army was using them for their own purpose. Dr. Kissinger spoke of the need to use such influence as the United States had with Pakistan for the purpose of persuasion. Defence Secretary pointed out that Pakistan had not allowed itself to be influenced into moderation even when the United States' influence with them was at its best. ‘You could not have had greater influence than when you gave them two billion dollars worth of arms.’

Dr. Kissinger: ‘The arms now going to Pakistan from the United States are trivial in quantum and content and irrelevant for the present conflict’.

Defence Minister: ‘I have studied the American and Indian newspapers on what you call ‘bureaucratic loopholes’. Our own assessment is that while no new offensive stuff is going, the spare parts and other little items that are going could activate old material.’

Dr. Kissinger: ‘I really do not know. I am going to study the lists when I get back.’

Defence Minister: ‘We are not interested so much in talking of the quantum. We are more interested in your intention.’

Dr. Kissinger: ‘Our intention is what I have told you, i.e. to bring about a solution which would help the refugees to go back. We have no interest in producing a Bay of Pigs situation here. It would be insanity to pursue today the policies we pursued in the 1950’s.’

Defence Minister: ‘I know that if India is weakened, it will affect the stability of the world and that cannot be in your interest. So I accept what you say.’

Dr. Kissinger: ‘We are interested only in a global balance. We would like India to play a constructive role in South and South-East Asia which she can if she is strong. We would not like India to be dominated by any outside power.’

Defence Minister: ‘A stronger India would be in a better position to help you in your objective.’

Dr. Kissinger: ‘We would like to keep an eye on the long-term objective. We should have from time to time constructive discussions at high levels. These two days have given me a new awareness of the problems of this region. I have in the past given considerable attention to it. I will give it even more attention hereafter.’
Statement made by the External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Rajya Sabha on Pakistan President’s threat to Declare War.

New Delhi, July 21, 1971.

President Yahya Khan is reported to have said that ‘if India made any attempt to seize any part of East Pakistan’ he will declare war.

Pakistan has been trying for some time to mislead the world into thinking that the situation in Bangla Desh is a matter between Pakistan and India whereas in fact it is a matter between the military rulers of West Pakistan and the people of Bangla Desh. It is the Pakistan regime’s own actions, and the brutalities committed by the Pakistan Army in Bangla Desh, that have landed Pakistan in a morass in Bangla Desh. Only a settlement with the already elected representatives of the people of Bangla Desh will enable the military rulers of Pakistan to extricate themselves from this morass.

So long as Pakistan does not recognize this, the activities of the Bangla Desh freedom fighters will continue and increase. When the freedom fighters succeed in liberating territory in Bangla Desh and Pakistan uses it as a pretext for attacking us, then I must make it clear that we are ready to defend ourselves.

We have no desire ‘to seize any part of Pakistan’, President Yahya Khan is either trying to mislead his people and the world at large or preparing them for an aggression against India by making such unwarranted and baseless statements.
Letter addressed by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to its Heads of Mission abroad regarding the Indian attitude.

Islamabad, July 24, 1971.

Government of Pakistan
Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

NO.14/26/71-I(V) July 24, 1971

My dear Ambassador/High Commissioner,

Following the announcement of the Presidential plan for transfer of power on June 28, 1971 the Indians have become more explicit about their aims in East Pakistan. Addressing a meeting of the ruling Congress Party, the Indian Minister for External Affairs, Mr. Swaran Singh recently said ‘We may have to take action of our own if a satisfactory political solution to the “Bangla Desh” crisis is not found soon.’ Outlining India’s concept of a “solution” the Minister said that Shaikh Mujibur Rahman, the President of the defunct Awami League, would have to be a party to any plan for the transfer of power. He went on to say that President Yahya Khan’s attempt to install a ‘quisling Government’ would not meet the requirement of the situation.

2. Peter Hezalhurst of the London Times who interviewed Mrs. Indira Gandhi on June 29, 1971, provided an insight into the line of action India had in mind. He reported that during the course of his interview with the Indian Prime Minister, the latter refused to deny or confirm that India had considered the following options:-

(a) India would mount a naval blockade to cut off East and West Pakistan until President Yahya Khan entered into a political settlement with the Bengalees by which the displaced persons could return to their homes.

(b) It could arm and strengthen the hands of the ‘Liberation Army’.

(c) It could carve out a region in ‘East Pakistan’ for the displaced persons.

3. Meanwhile, on July 12, 1971, Defence Minister, Mr. Jagjivan Ram had stated in the Lok Sabha that ‘in their determination to establish a democratic order the freedom fighters have our sympathy and support’. The perspective in which the remark was made is clear from the assertion made elsewhere in the speech that ‘the indomitable courage of the freedom fighters will ultimately succeed in establishing ‘Bangla Desh’.
4. This desperateness in the Indian attitude came in the wake of the failure of the Foreign Minister, Swaran Singh and Mr. J.P. Narayan to convince the foreign powers of the urgency of a particular type of political solution in East Pakistan during their whirlwind world tour early last month.

5. During the course of a debate in the Lok Sabha on June 28, 1971, after his return from abroad Mr. Swaran Singh said “the hard fact is that most countries regard the situation in Bangla Desh as Pakistan’s internal Affairs”. Sounding a note of despair he said that the countries’ “foreign policies are conditioned by their self-interest and the capitals I visited wanted to keep their options open”. In a press conference on June 29, 1971, Mr. J.P Narayan said that India should not expect others to help her out of her difficulties. He added that “I found no evidence anywhere that anyone was prepared to pull the chestnuts out of fire for us.”

6. You should brief the Government of your accreditation and the press and other local mass media about India’s threatening posture against Pakistan on the lines indicated above. You should emphasise in particular that after having failed to enlist foreign support for installing the Secessionists into power, the Indians are now giving all the indications of implementing Mrs. Gandhi’s threat of ‘unilateral action’ against Pakistan to achieve their ends. No wonder the Indian Prime Minister is reluctant to meet our President for a reduction of tension in the sub-continent.

Yours sincerely,

Record of discussions at the meeting between Special Representative of Prime Minister Ambassador D.P. Dhar and the Soviet Foreign Minister A.A. Gromyko in the Soviet Foreign Office.

Moscow, August 4, 1971.

The following were present:

On the Indian Side
1. Shri D.P. Dhar
2. Dr. K.S. Shelvankar, Ambassador
3. Shri A.K. Damodaran, Minister
4. Shri S.V. Purushottam, Counsellor

On the Soviet Side
1. Mr. A.A. Gromyko, Foreign Minister
2. Mr. V.V. Kuznetsov, First Deputy Foreign Minister
3. Mr. A.A. Fomin, Chief of South Asia Division

Mr. Gromyko opened the discussion on the various amendments (to the Draft Treaty of Peace) that had been suggested by the two sides at the first meeting (minutes no available). He said that he would like to deal with Article V a little later.

In the second paragraph of Article IV, Mr. Gromyko suggested the replacement of the expression 'Government of India' by the 'Republic of India'. This was accepted.

Article VII was acceptable to the Soviet side as proposed by the Indian side.

On Article XII, Ambassador Dhar stated that the Indian side would prefer to retain the expression ‘by peaceful means’. He was agreeable to the deletion of the word ‘exclusively’. It was finally agreed that the first sentence of Article XII would read as follows:
ARTICLE XII

‘Any difference of interpretation of any Article or Articles of this Treaty which may arise between the High Contracting Parties will be settled by peaceful means bilaterally in a spirit of mutual respect and understanding.’

Returning to the preambular part of the Treaty, the two sides agreed on the modifications suggested in the second line of paragraph 4 which would now read ‘peaceful coexistence and cooperation between’ in place of “peaceful and cooperative coexistence between”. On the wording of the last para of the Preamble, there was a brief discussion about the format in which the names and appointment of the plenipotentiaries of the two sides for signing the Treaty should be stated in the Treaty. Firstly, it was agreed that the expression ‘Government of India’ in the first line of the last para will be replaced by ‘Republic of India’ and that in the second line the words ‘Government of the’ will be omitted. Secondly, it was agreed that at the place where the appointment of the plenipotentiaries of the two countries is to be indicated, the expression ‘the Government of India’ will be replaced by ‘on behalf of the Republic of India’ and that in the second line the words ‘Government of the’ will be omitted. Secondly, it was agreed that at the place where the appointment of the plenipotentiaries of the two countries is to be indicated, the expression ‘the Government of India’ will be replaced by ‘on behalf of the Republic of India’ and, similarly, the Soviet side will be indicated by ‘on behalf of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics’ in place of ‘the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics’. The last para will, therefore, read as follows:

“The Republic of India on the one side, and the Union of the Soviet Socialist Republics on the other side, have decided to conclude the present Treaty, for which purpose the following plenipotentiaries have been appointed:

On behalf of the Republic of India:

On behalf of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics:

Who, having each presented their Credentials, which are found to be in proper form and due order, have agreed as follows:"

It was agreed to retain the title of the Treaty as contained in the Indian Draft.

It was agreed that the Treaty will have the usual Title Deed reading as follows:

“Done in New Delhi on ...........”

And the signatures of the plenipotentiaries will be just below this.

Ambassador enquired about the time-schedule of the Treaty. Mr. Gromyko stated that the Soviet Government’s final consent to the Draft they had worked out together should be available by Friday, the 6th August, 1971, when the Soviet Government’s decision on Mr. Gromyko proceeding to India for the signing of the Treaty will also be made known to the Indian delegation. Mr. Gromyko said that he anticipated no difficulty in either of these two procedures and that the Indian side could expect him to arrive in New Delhi in the early hours of the morning of Sunday, the 8th August. The Treaty could then be signed on August 9, 1971.

Ambassador Dhar informed Mr. Gromyko that Prime Minister Mrs. Gandhi was going to tell her colleagues about the preparations for the signing of the Treaty and that the approval of the Indian Cabinet to the text could be expected by Saturday, the 7th August, 1971, that is, well before Mr. Gromyko's arrival in India. Mr. Gromyko said that he would be grateful if Ambassador Dhar could kindly ensure that after the Soviet representative's arrival in India, there should be no 'hedge-hogs' with regard to the text. Mr. Dhar explained that he did not expect any major point to arise, but at the Cabinet consideration of the text, it was possible for a word or two or for a minor textual change to be introduced. Mr. Gromyko requested that, all the same, what he mentioned should be conveyed to his colleague in India.

Ambassador D.P. Dhar then requested the permission of Mr. Gromyko to say a few words. He said that he was carrying a personal message from the Prime Minister for Mr. Brezhnev and Chairman Kosygin. He was conscious of the fact of his short visit and the engagements and preoccupations of the Soviet leaders. If, therefore, some time could be found for him to convey the message to General Secretary Brezhnev and Chairman Kosygin personally, he would consider it a great privilege.

Tracing the sequence of discussions over the Treaty, Ambassador Dhar stated that we had been considering very actively the desirability of entering into such a Treaty relationship with the Soviet Union. This was first mentioned by the Soviet side two and a half or three years ago. Mrs. Gandhi had even at that time discussed it with some of her close associates and, as was known to the Soviet side, her own response and that of her close associates to the idea was positive and enthusiastic. In the background of the principled, consistent and close friendship and cooperation existing between India and the USSR – a relationship which regarded the establishment of peace and easing of tensions as its highest objectives and whose architect was our great Prime Minister, the Late Jawaharlal Nehru -, it was only appropriate that this relationship should be formalized into a Treaty of Friendship, Peace and Cooperation. That is why the Prime Minister, Mrs. Gandhi decided to consider the Soviet Draft. The two Governments recognized the importance of such a step and appointed their representatives to negotiate a Treaty. Ambassador Dhar added that he was happy to note that on behalf of the Government of India he had the good fortune to conduct the negotiations.
The Prime Minister of India, Shri Dhar continued, had wanted very much to conclude the Treaty soon after discussions on it were almost completed about two years ago, but the question of its timing worried her and Chairman Kosygin was gracious enough to indicate that she should decide the timing of conclusion of the Treaty. The circumstances that led to its postponement are well known; these were explained to the Soviet side by us including our Foreign Minister when he visited Moscow last June. Ambassador Dhar explained how before and during the last elections, friendship with the USSR had become an important issue before the electorate. The overwhelming mandate received by Mrs. Gandhi and her party confirmed not only this friendship but underlined the desire of the people of India to expand and further strengthen it.

Ambassador Dhar stated that hopefully we were about to sign the Treaty and should be aware of the background of constant Indian interest in the task of strengthening friendship and cooperation with USSR. The conclusion of the Treaty would be a momentous step and the Prime Minister would like to reiterate it. It is a significant factor in relations not only between India and the USSR but among other nations. India was conscious of the fact that while the step would cause jubilation to some, it would also disturb some minds and invite the displeasure of others. This is but natural. Great friendships do invite big jealousies. Our Prime Minister would like the Soviet leaders to know that she and her colleagues are fully aware of these factors, that they have taken them fully into account, that they have decided to take this step with their eyes open and are ready to face any consequences flowing from it. We know that some countries in the west would not like it; some near us amongst our neighbours may also not like it and may create difficulties for us. Ambassador Dhar said that he would like to reiterate that India had decided upon it with her eyes open.

Ambassador Dhar said that the Prime Minister of India wanted to specially invite the attention of the Soviet leaders to some unfortunate developments in the Indian sub-continent and in the whole of Asia. Asia was under torment, it was bleeding. There were tensions everywhere, in Indo-China and in the Middle East. As if this was not enough, a most unfortunate tragedy was created in East Bengal. A brutal and minority military regime has ruthlessly carried out and is carrying out atrocities, unmentionable cruelties and genocide on a majority, the gruesome details of which have been reported and confirmed by impartial observers. Certain consequences have flown out of this monumental tragedy. Millions have fled to India. Many more millions are stalked by disease and starvation and it is inevitable that large numbers of them will flee to India for shelter and to save their lives from the continued military repression in East Bengal. It was unnecessary to repeat these facts since no one was more aware of the terrible consequences of this gruesome tragedy than the Soviet Government and no one had responded more humanely to the requirements of the situation than the Soviet Union. The question arose: what should be done to meet the situation? The economic strains felt by India were enormous, but the social and political tensions were no less appalling. i.e. India had not talked of the communal nature of the persecution in East Bengal. Apart from the intelligentsia which supported the Awami League, the Hindu minority had been especially selected for attention by the ravaging Pakistani army. India has 60 million Muslims and it was a tribute to the Prime Minister’s quality of leadership that no communal tensions had been allowed to get out of hand inside India. The Prime Minister had acted as a dyke against the immense pressures exerted by both the rightist and the leftist parties in this regard. The Soviet side was aware of the decision of the RSS and the Jan Sangh to start an agitation on the slogan that the Government of India had not done enough for Bangla Desh, that it should immediately recognize Bangla Desh.

Ambassador said that we would be willing to recognize Bangla Desh, but at this moment it would only make the situation more precipitate and lead to further deterioration. Yahya Khan has already shown a lot of bellicosity; his war-mongering is matched in fervour and enthusiasm by China. Pakistan’s intransigence has been further strengthened by the help rendered by them in facilitating Kissinger’s visit to China. In fact, it has provided the Pakistani Army dictatorship a new theme to encourage its bellicose posture.

He said that we were increasingly receiving reports of trouble in Pakhtoonistan, Baluchistan and Sind which are protesting against the Punjabi domination. West Punjab is only one State of the western part of Pakistan. Gaffer Khan’s statement might have come to the notice of the Soviet Government; he accused the Punjabi minority of trying to decimate the majority not only in Bengal but in West Pakistan also.

The United States, Ambassador Dhar continued, was trying to satisfy its client. Our Foreign Minister’s unfortunate experience of US duplicity about shipments to Pakistan has destroyed whatever little faith we had left in the US leadership. We had been bitten several times and there was no need to narrate the deception carried out by the USA when it gave us assurances in the context of the creation of SEATO and CENTO that US arms in Pakistan would not be used against India. In the present situation, we could not imagine how the Americans changed their mind only two days after they had assured our Foreign Minister at the highest level in Washington that a total embargo on US arms supplies to Pakistan had been imposed. Shri Dhar added that our Prime Minister wanted the Soviet leaders to know this as also the fact of the support given to Pakistan by a few western powers and by China.
The partisan warfare in East Bengal, said Shri Dhar, was constantly expanding and widening. The people of Bangla Desh were determined to throw out the alien ruler; no bridge, however feeble, now existed between the ruler and the ruled. The Pakistanis had been unable to find any quislings. They were able to get together only 17 members elected last December for their purposes; all the rest had met separately and declared their full allegiance and support to the Bangla Desh liberation movement. The movement with the total support of the people was bound to succeed. The army in East Bengal was, therefore, getting more and more nervous and rapidly hateful.

Ambassador Dhar said that it seemed to us in India that we were sitting on the top of a volcano which might explode any minute. We could not allow our country to be blown up into pieces along with it. We did not want a war. We would like to apply ourselves to the job of economic developments in conditions of peace and tranquility. We were thinking of coordinating our Fourth Five-year plan with ‘your Ninth Five-year Plan’ when suddenly this rude interruption in our efforts took place. It was full of dangers and the Indian Prime Minister, said Shri Dhar, wanted him to convey to the Soviet leaders that it was absolutely necessary to put our heads together to prevent a war, to take steps so that adventurers did not unleash it. This was our primary aim and it was one of the common endeavours of USSR and India. Shri Dhar said that India, therefore, was seeking the Soviet Union’s advice, assistance and guidance so that peace could be maintained in the sub-continent.

If, however, in spite of our endeavours, a war was forced on India, Ambassador Dhar said, India and the Soviet Union should jointly assess how best the situation could be met. He emphasized that the primary aim, nevertheless, remained to prevent a conflagration. At the same time, it would be unwise to remain oblivious of the possibility of a conflagration materializing in actual fact – a war being forced on us. In that event, the two countries have to determine the means and methods of cooperating with each other in the economic, political and defence fields so as to meet the situation effectively.

Concluding, Ambassador Dhar mentioned that he had, in conveying the Prime Minister’s message, tried to share with Mr. Gromyko the fears and apprehensions that were being felt in India. ‘We are on the threshold of a new opportunity that this Treaty will unfold, opportunities of greater cooperation, whatever be the temporary difficulties and disadvantages. I have no doubt that it will become the corner stone of our relations. It may even provide the foundation for building a collective security system in Asia which was proposed by His Excellency Mr. Brezhnev and which was so lucidly explained by Your Excellency at a meeting of the Supreme Soviet. I would like to conclude by saying that the tragic events in the sub-continent have not destroyed our faith in the goodness of mankind, our faith in Indo-Soviet friendship and cooperation and our peoples’ and our Governments’ firm commitment to further strengthen relations between our two countries.

The Foreign Minister, Mr. Gromyko expressed his gratitude for the detailed account given by Ambassador Dhar of Indo-Soviet relations, of the factors concerning the Treaty and for his analysis of the developments in ‘your region of Asia’. He said that he would convey all this to Comrades Brezhnev, Kosygin, Podgorny and others who would carefully go through what had been said on behalf of Mrs. Gandhi. He particularly appreciated the fact that the Indian side had taken every factor concerning the possible consequences and effects of the Treaty into account and added that the Soviet side had also taken into full account all aspects of the matter and come to the conclusion that the conclusion of the Treaty was necessary and extremely important.

About the situation in South Asia, he said that the Soviet policy was well-known to the Indian leaders. The Soviet Government shared India’s concern at the military clique’s repression in East Pakistan. So far as Indo-Pak relations were concerned, the Soviet Union firmly believed that peace between the two was in the interest of both the peoples of India and Pakistan and all people in the whole of South Asia. The Soviet Government felt very strongly about the situation and they were doing everything possible to prevent aggravation. The entire situation was receiving the Soviet Government’s constant attention and care and the Soviet Government were happy that India also wanted to prevent any deterioration in the situation. He promised to convey all that had been discussed and said to Chairman Kosygin and added that he would be able to let Ambassador Dhar know the following day if there was anything that he would have to convey on behalf of Chairman Kosygin to him.

Ambassador Dhar thanked Mr. Gromyko for the patience with which he had heard him and expressed the hope that these matters should be discussed in greater detail and depth in India during Mr. Gromyko’s visit.

During the course of the lunch hosted by Gromyko for me, I suggested that it would be useful for him to have two experts, one from the Army and the other from the intelligence side, included in his delegation. I advised Gromyko that an assessment of the military situation as it confronted India and the Soviet Union in Asia would have to be made even though in somewhat broad terms at this stage. Similarly, it was important that India and the Soviet Union should exchange information which would help them to make an assessment of the overall strength and also the intentions of China and Pakistan separately as well as jointly. At the same time they should make an appreciation of the attitude of the United States in the context of the recent developments both in relation to Pakistan and China. Gromyko agreed and said that he would discuss this matter with Chairman Kosygin during the course of the cabinet meeting which he was due to attend the same afternoon in connection with the finalization of the document.

Yesterday (6th August, 71), while I was having an informal exchange of views with Fomin in the Soviet Foreign Office, Gromyko sent for me quite unexpectedly. He told me that the suggestion that I had made to him on the previous day during the course of the lunch had met with the approval of Chairman Kosygin, but it was extremely difficult to select the proper persons and collect the required material at such short notice. He, therefore, was apologetic in not being able to carry the two persons bearing the description which I had mentioned to him earlier as members of his delegation during his forthcoming visit to India.

I, however, took this opportunity of once again drawing Gromyko’s attention to some of the essential matters allied to the question of the document which he would, as a natural course, be required to discuss with the Indian leaders during the course of his visit to New Delhi.

As had been stated by me at some length during the course of my conversation with Gromyko and Chairman Kosygin, we would have to determine all possible measures and initiate all conceivable efforts to ensure that Pakistan and her highly ebullient and belligerent allies do not feel tempted to unleash a war against India. Gromyko intervened to say that while he agreed with me, he would also like to remind me that this matter had an important bearing on the obligations which flowed directly from the agreements envisaged in the document. I agreed with Mr. Gromyko and told him that in that case, I would like to reiterate some important matters in as much as they bore essential relevance to some significant provisions of the treaty. Let us say that the threat of conflict exists to-day. Indeed I would say that the threat of attack is absolutely apparent in the context of the Sino-Pakistani behaviours towards India. There can be a difference of opinion whether this threat of attack is absolutely imminent or is yet slightly remote. Nevertheless, an obligation has been cast on the two parties to enter into consultations as to how such a threat should be removed. All the measures for this purpose, whether these are undertaken individually or in concert with each other, or in alliance with like-minded countries, or from the forums of the United Nations, will have to be determined at least in broad outline. Secondly, I had no doubt in my mind, that a discussion between Mr. Gromyko and the Indian leaders would also become inevitable regarding the steps which may have to be taken in the military, economic and the political spheres in case an attack materializes as a reality. We will also have to discuss the forms of consultations. These consultations can be at various levels. What is more important perhaps would be the need to have the situation under constant and intimate review and scrutiny. How do we do that? These, I said, would be some of the questions which would engage Mr. Gromyko’s attention in the course of his discussions with the important leaders of Government of India. Mr. Gromyko agreed fully with my observations and said that he would come prepared for such discussions and he had no hesitation in admitting that these matters were important in themselves and had great relevance not only to the treaty but to the demands of the contemporary situation.

He, however, wanted to know from me whether he would have these discussions with the Prime Minister or the Defence Minister or the Foreign Minister or with all the three of them. He very politely seemed to suggest that matters of this nature will have to be discussed at a fairly high and restricted level. I said that the mechanics of these proposals could be worked out on his arrival in Delhi.

I told Mr. Gromyko that my talk with Chairman Kosygin had opened very fruitful possibilities of approaching some of the countries of Asia for co-operating with each other in the background of the new developments which had taken place in this continent as a result of the ping pong diplomacy. I told Mr. Gromyko that so far the situation in Asia indicated that a large number of countries were either apprehensive of the Chinese hegemonistic expansionist postures or the interventionist attitude of the USA. The minds of people of various countries in Asia oscillated between these two sets of fears and doubts. Now I had no doubt in my mind that at the present stage many countries in Asia would be in political disarray. Let us take the example of Japan and Thailand, as typical of the countries under the American influence. The whole relationship between America and these two countries and also other countries falling in the same category, were based on how and in what manner a defensive system could be built against the encroachments and expansionist tendencies emanating from China. There would be serious re-thinking even amongst the non-aligned countries of Asia in the immediate neighbourhood of China, including countries like Indonesia and Ceylon. It would be worthwhile after the conclusion of this treaty, for the Soviet and the Indian Governments to pursue a common strategy of allaying, in fact, altogether removing the fears which envelope the policies of these various countries. They could co-operate with each other, they could stand on their own legs, they could draw succour from each other, become economically viable and self-reliant. And in this endeavour, they could count on the friendly cooperation of the two great countries of Asia, viz. India and the Soviet Union. In short, I told Mr. Gromyko that the whole spectrum of inter-state relationships and arrangements is now in a state of flux and of change. It should be possible for us to resurrect the free resurgent personality of Asia. I told him that I did not mean this in a chauvinistic sense, but in the broader context of peace and political tranquility in this region. Mr. Gromyko said that he whole heartedly agreed with my understanding of the new developments of the situation in Asia.
In fact, he was himself thinking of re-formulating the Soviet policies towards Japan. He would be extremely interested in discussing his views with the Indian leaders and it would be a matter of great importance for peaceful development in Asia if the Soviet Union and India could jointly pursue healthy and co-operative policies towards Japan. Mr. Gromyko added that the two countries could similarly forge a common approach to many other countries in Asia.

0596. TOP SECRET

Record of Conversation between Chairman A.N.Kosygin of the USSR and D.P. Dhar Special Representative of Prime Minister.

Moscow, August 5, 1971.

Ambassador K.S. Shelvankar and Minister A.K. Damodaran were also present. The Chairman was assisted by his Special Assistant and Mr. A.A. Fomin.

Chairman Kosygin started the conversation in a very pleasant and informal manner by saying it was an example of the great co-operation and friendship between the two countries that he was able to meet two Ambassadors at the same time. Mr. Dhar had come to the Soviet Union on a very pleasant mission.

Mr. Dhar replied that to him it had been a tremendous privilege to be able to come back to the Soviet Union for the special purpose of completing this very important work which had been initiated during his tour of office. In fact, he had actually come to assist Dr. Shelvankar in finalizing the document as he was new to his assignment in the Soviet Union had no time to familiarize himself with the various aspects of this Document. “In one sense, therefore, I am here at the behest of Dr. Shelvankar. Dr. Shelvankar is a great Indian, distinguished and learned, and a great believer in the cause of strengthening friendship between India and the Soviet Union. The very fact, Your Excellency, that you have an array of two Ambassadors in front of you bears testimony to the special and intimate relations which exist between our two great countries. It also provides evidence that the principles of co-existence can extend even to Ambassadors.”
Chairman Kosygin said that the new Ambassador was indeed very lucky to be able to start his mission in such an auspicious manner and on such a happy note. The Chairman then intimated to Mr. Dhar that he was willing to listen to all that he asked to say.

Mr. D.P. Dhar: Your Excellency, I have come to the Soviet Union, as you know, with a specific purpose and at the express desire of my Prime Minister who wanted me to convey her personal greetings to yourself, to H.E. Mr. Brezhnev and H.E. Mr. Podgorny and all other leaders of the Soviet Union and also her best wishes for the success and prosperity of your people.

Chairman Kosygin said that he was extremely grateful for this message and would see to it that it was communicated to all the other leaders.

Mr. D.P. Dhar: To me, Your Excellency, this visit represents the fulfillment of a dream. To have been entrusted with this delicate and historic mission during the early part of my stay here was a great privilege and that mission is now completed. In completing this task I would like to remember, with special gratitude and affection, H.E. Mr. Firyubin, Mr. Fomin, Mr. Khlestov, among the friends of the Foreign Office with whom my colleagues and I functioned with such cordiality and in a spirit of camaraderie. I would be failing in my duty if I were not to place on record the really great contribution made by H.E. Mr. Firyubin and all his colleagues in finalizing this Document. It was very gracious of H.E. Mr. Gromyko to have spent several hours discussing with me all the details of this Document and also, several other matters connected with this Document. I am certain that you, Your Excellency, already have a clear picture of our discussions through Mr. Gromyko. Therefore, I would only very briefly touch upon the background of this Treaty.

You will remember, Your Excellency, that the idea of having such a Treaty between the Soviet Union and India was first initiated by you. This was 2 ½ years ago and it produced an immediate and warm response from my Prime Minister. My Prime Minister, Mrs. Gandhi, was anxious to conclude, as soon as circumstances permitted, this Document. Then came a period of changes in our country, changes of many types — quick, kaleidoscopic, difficult and sometimes complex changes. There was, therefore some delay in our finalizing these discussions and I remember very well, because I was personally present, how graciously Your Excellency informed our Prime Minister that the time of signing this Treaty could be chosen by the Prime Minister of India and all the formalities concerned carried out accordingly. You unreservedly assured her that she would be the sole judge of choosing the opportune moment and appropriateness of the occasion for completing this Document.

After the recent Elections, Your Excellency, when the progressive policies of Mrs. Gandhi and her party were given an overwhelming support by the people of our country and the forces of reaction, conservatism and communalism were defeated, we felt that the time had come – the climate was suitable for initiating new and active discussions on this Document which could take place in this new and refreshing background. We felt that in this new phase of our national life it would be only most appropriate that we could forge richer ties with the Soviet Union and complete the work which had been left incomplete before the elections.

You might recall, Your Excellency, that just after the elections I had the privilege of calling on Your Excellency and reporting to you the significance of a new era of stability and progressive endeavours which had opened up in the wake of these elections. I had occasion to inform you then that the victory of Mrs. Gandhi and her party in the elections had made it possible for us to pick up the threads of discussion on several important matters which had been left over for better times in the period immediately preceding the elections. The resumption of discussions on this Document, with a view to finalizing its Draft for being concluded as a Treaty between the two Governments, was one of the subjects which I had in mind then. Later, during his recent visit, our Foreign Minister also informed Mr. Gromyko as well as Your Excellency of the intention of our Prime Minister to take early steps for finalizing this Document. There is, therefore, nothing new about this Document or about the mutual desire to have it concluded. Of course, the circumstances in which it is likely to be signed may have somewhat altered.

I was, therefore, instructed by my Prime Minister to proceed to the Soviet Union and to inform Your Excellency that our Government desires to conclude this Treaty and this decision has been taken by our Prime Minister and some of her principal colleagues. I would like to inform you also that this decision has been taken by our Prime Minister and her principal colleagues with the full consciousness that it marks the historic moment in the development of relations between India and the Soviet Union, and also it marks a new development in the relations between nations. The circumstances of history, the background of the relationship which exists between India and the Soviet Union are unique in so many ways. It is based upon principles. It is rooted in the best interests of our countries and we are convinced this friendship forms a corner stone of peace in the area and the world; more than anything else this friendship epitomizes the shared beliefs of our two countries in the eternal principles of peace. It is a friendship which has stood the test of time. It has met, during its history, many storms, quite a lot of opposition and several criticisms. But it has remained steady mainly because the people of the Soviet Union and the people of India always maintained unflinching dedication to the cause of peace and unselfish friendship that existed between them. At this time one has to bow one’s head in humility and respect to the memory of the great architect of this friendship, Jawaharlal Nehru, and also offer sincere tribute to the endeavours of the great defender of this friendship today, his daughter Mrs. Indira Gandhi, our Prime Minister.

Thus, in effect, this Treaty will only formalize what in reality has already been in existence for so many years. My Prime Minister believes that a Treaty of this nature between our two countries will form a truly significant and important event. We also recognize and this, on behalf of my Prime Minister, I have already mentioned to Mr. Gromyko yesterday, that great friendships always provoke great enemies, great jealousies. While we are aware that this Treaty will be welcomed by peace loving people everywhere, by democratic countries, by progressive forces all the world over, there will be some people and countries who will be displeased, indeed annoyed and irritated, as these quarters have always been opposed to this special and unique relationship between India and the Soviet Union. My Prime Minister wanted me to inform your Excellency that we are fully aware that some of the western powers will be particularly unhappy about this Treaty. We also know that our neighbours, the Chinese and the Pakistanis, will be still more unhappy at this development. We know and we are quite prepared for the fact that the conclusion of this Treaty will cause us some detriment, some harm, some disadvantages will accrue to us because of it. My Prime Minister wanted me to inform you, your Excellency, that we have considered all these implications, analysed the situation carefully and finally and formally concluded that a Treaty between India and the Soviet Union would serve the best interests of both countries; apart from its being in the fundamental national interests of both countries, it will also be a powerful contribution for peace in the whole world. As I said the Prime Minister is aware of the risks and the difficulties that may come in our way and, therefore, we are taking this step with open eyes, without equivocation and hesitation. My Prime Minister also wanted me to inform you and the Soviet leadership that in our understanding it is directed against none but has only as its aim the promotion of peace in the world. Your Excellency, this is the background of this historic Document. It is a basic development and fully reflects permanent and fundamental values which we have always cherished.

The Prime Minister believes in India’s friendship for and co-operation with the Soviet Union. She wanted me to assure you, Your Excellency, that this is totally independent of all temporary considerations and depends only on permanent values.

The next question which I would, with your permission, like to discuss with Your Excellency, is the critical situation as it obtains today in the sub-continent and in our neighbourhood. You will recall that my Foreign Minister had the privilege of submitting detailed information, regarding this development during his visit to the Soviet Union, both to Your Excellency and to Mr. Gromyko. In view of this I need not dilate on the details of this question, my Prime Minister has, since then, received your kind advice with gratitude and we have done everything in our power to prevent the escalation of the situation into a conflict. We have carefully concentrated only on the question of the refugees and the basic issues involved in their tragic exodus. These refugees are even now pouring into our country day after day. Just now there are a little under 8 million refugees who have already come over. The exodus continues at the rate of 40 to 50 thousand a day. We have concentrated on the demand that conditions should be created in East Bengal which would enable them to go back to the land of their origin in a situation of peace and with the guarantees of a peaceful life. I would not like to go into details, Your Excellency, because you already are aware of most of them. I would, however, like to repeat that the influx of refugees and the continued frightful repression by the Military Junta of West Pakistan in East Bengal constitutes a very grave danger to peace in the sub-continent. This has imposed upon our country a tremendous financial strain. There are even worst strains, strains of a political and of social nature in the very fabric of the Indian society. We have not given any publicity to this but it is an unfortunate fact that the majority of the refugees are non-Muslims. The military regime has systematically wiped out first the intelligencia, the intellectuals, the avant garde, which has stood for all that is decent and good in Bengali life, progressive groups and then proceeded to organize a genocide of the non-Muslim population of the country. As Your Excellency knows we have 60 million Muslims in India. It is a remarkable tribute to the courage and steadfastness of Mrs. Gandhi and her unswerving faith in secular principles and her undoubted influence on the people of India, that she has so far been able to check the communal tensions, in fact communal retaliations, which could very naturally flow from these tragic events. At the same time, however, it is difficult to see how long we can continue to prevent the deterioration of the situation into a communal frenzy. How long can Mrs. Gandhi act as a dyke against the rising floods of communalism. We are full of serious apprehension that the whole of India might be drawn into the vortex of strife and communal disorder. You can imagine the unfortunate consequences of such an eventuality.

There is yet another complicating factor of which I am sure Your Excellency is very well aware, viz., that our eastern borders are very sensitive – have been sensitive for several years. There has been organized subversion and trouble financed, armed and abetted by China and Pakistan particularly in the Naga and Mizo areas. Then there is the question of the Maoists – we call them Naxalities – who are out to disrupt peace all over India. Their operations are concentrated in the eastern parts of India. They also derive inspiration, finances and support from China. India, therefore, cannot acquiesce in this existing situation and cannot adopt a pose of total inaction. We are sitting on the top of a volcano. We cannot allow it to explode and tear the fabric of the unity of India into threads. We are, more or less, caught in a vice from extreme left anarchist elements inspired and fostered by foreign nations on the one hand and on the other by obscurantist, communal and reactionary elements, both engaged in achieving one aim viz., the disruption of India and bringing to naught the splendid achievements of the recent elections. You have received a copy of a letter from my Prime Minister through Ambassador Shelvankar. I have only elaborated some of the details of what my Prime Minister has mentioned in that letter.

The second question relates to the attitude adopted by Pakistan and her allies towards us. Developments are taking place very fast in Pakistan. Immediately following the lightening attack launched by the organized Pakistan army against the unarmed people of East Bengal and the period of unlimited repression consisting of mass rapes, murder of children, annihilation of intelligencia etc., there has been a complete alienation between the rulers of West Pakistan and the people of East Bengal. Even under the most forbidding circumstances, in the past, history has provided instances where foreign occupying forces found it possible to discover quislings; but this has not been achieved so far in East Bengal. All the elected members in the Central parliament and the local Assembly have now publicly avowed their unequivocal, uncompromising allegiance to the principle of complete independence of East Bengal. At the same time they are now taking resort to action against the military government. The liberation forces are very active and have been able to cause substantial damage to the Pakistani armed forces. Our information is that the Pakistani army suffers causalities of the order of nearly a battalion strength every month. The army causalities and wide-spread damage to communications and other vital installations are admitted even by the controlled Pakistan and Dacca radios. It is being admitted that the liberation forces are inflicting damages upon the communications and the military strength of the occupying army. Now there is another development. After the holocaust of military occupation and repression, there is starvation in the country and this, we are afraid, will provoke a further exodus. Thousands of young men, doctors, lawyers, engineers, professional men and the intelligentsia are taking up arms and joining the liberation forces in their thousands. In West Pakistan also there have been significant changes. The West Punjabi clique is being increasingly isolated from North West Frontier Province, Balauchistan, and Sind. The great Pakhtoon leader, Abdul Gaffar Khan, has recently issued a statement which is of considerable significance. As a result of all these circumstances and also, unfortunately, as a result of the constant encouragement from China and also from the United States, which has more prominent since the part played by them as mediators between Kissinger and the Chinese leaders, Yahya Khan has become more and more determined in his evil course. His bellicosity, his threats of total war against India are becoming irritatingly frequent. His bellicosity is being echoed equally strongly by the Chinese regime and we have evidence that there are some troop movements of the Pakistani army in both the western and eastern sectors. There is, Your Excellency, thus a real danger. As in the case of a gambler, who knows he is to lose, as a result of failure of all his calculations, Yahya Khan may be forced to commit aggression against India. There is evidence that he is being strongly tempted to make war with India, that he in fact is flirting with the idea of war.

(A few minutes before this an Assistant had come into the room and handed over to Chairman Kosygin a small news sheet and he had carefully studied it for some minutes. He then intervened and said-

Chairman Kosygin: I have just received information that even yesterday Yahya Khan spoke about the possibility of a war with India. This is an Agence France Presse report. It says that Yahya said yesterday that the situation in the eastern zone is becoming more and more tense and there is danger of aggression against East Pakistan. The situation is tense and in normal circumstances there would be war. 'We are, however, exercising patience to avoid war but patience has its limits.'

Mr. D.P. Dhar: It is obvious that President Yahya Khan would not like us to forget and would like to use every occasion to remind us of his threats. But about our attitude towards this question, I do not think it is necessary for me to explain it in any great detail to Your Excellency. Among the world’s statesmen, there is really no one better than you, a trusted friend of India, who knows the mind of our Prime Minister as you do. She abhors the idea of another conflict with Pakistan. She detests the very possibility of being entangled into a conflict with Pakistan. She has asked me to convey to you her assurances that we will do everything to preserve peace. She will do her best to avoid a war with Pakistan. In spite of the greatest provocations which are now being flaunted at us, we shall do everything in our power to preserve peace. This represents the unflinching determination of my Prime Minister. We in India believe that we have nothing to gain from a war. Indeed, we have everything to lose by a war. As a matter of fact, Your Excellency, one of the most valued bonds which hold the people of the Soviet Union and India together is their abhorrence of war and their dedication to peace. Both of us would like to do everything possible to keep peace all over the world, most of all in our part of the world. In fact our Prime Minister has asked me to tell Your Excellency that we deeply appreciate the benefit of your valuable and sage advice. How can we, by ourselves and in co-operation with other friendly countries, react to this threat? We would like very much to coordinate and evolve a common attitude, a common strategy or a parallel strategy to meet the threat from Pakistan, the intention and the obvious desire of Yahya Khan and his clique to unleash a war against India. The Prime Minister has asked me to convey to Your Excellency her deepest appreciation of the advice given by you for which she and her colleagues are deeply obliged. She has, once again, asked me to seek the advice of Your Excellency about any move which in the view of the Soviet government would be necessary to reduce these tensions and deter the aims of the Pakistani military junta to unleash a war and also to discover ways of averting armed conflict in the subcontinent and for preserving peace. This is the second submission I have been asked to make to Your Excellency. We, as I said, wish to avert a conflict. We are prepared to act in concert with you. We are ready to explore the use of international forums for achieving this one aim viz., making it impossible for Pakistan and her allies to start an armed conflict.

I will now come to the third and the last part of the message which my Prime Minister has asked me to convey to you. As I submitted to Your Excellency just now that while we shall do everything in our power singly or in the forums of the world to avoid a conflict, we have to take into account the possibility of a conflict also. We know it is a purely hypothetical question. Nevertheless, you will agree with me that while one hopes for the best one must be prepared for the worst. We are convinced, Your Excellency, that the Soviet assessment on all these would be of enormous benefit to us. At a time when not merely our part of Asia but other parts on our continent, Indo-China, the Middle East lie bleeding, victims of cruel conflict and tension, a continent full of troubles and tribulations, India represents the only example of stability – an oasis of peace surrounded by fierce turbulence. What do we do then in the event of such a contingency? How are we to confer with each other to act to meet such a contingency? I hope we will have the benefit of your advice about what we should do, how we should react if our peace is also, in fact, disturbed and a conflict is forced on us.

Chairman Kosygin: I am most grateful, Mr. Ambassador, for a long and extremely generous oral message you have brought from the Prime Minister – a message which testifies to the faith and trust you have in the Soviet Union. We appreciate this very much. This is going to be an act of trust on your part, an act not caused by temporary considerations, but something which will remain in the memory of the people of the Soviet Union, India and the world for several centuries. We fully share the estimate you have made about the importance of this Treaty and the assessment of your Prime Minister of this Treaty. As far as the Treaty itself, I do not see any obstacles to the conclusion of the Treaty according to the plan. We have decided to agree fully with all the amendments which you have suggested to our Foreign Minister, Comrade Gromyko. He will soon fly to Delhi to sign the Document. I would like to say we appreciate fully the strength and the determination shown by your Prime Minister in reaching this decision after analyzing all the factors which have a bearing on this – after she has taken into account all the aspects. We are fully conscious of the role, the great role, the personal role, played by your great Prime Minister in reaching this decision. I have no doubt that this will be welcomed as one of the events of great significance in the world of our time. We would also like to add a special tribute to the work which has been done by the Foreign Minister of India, Mr. Swaran Singh, who has laboured hard to bring this to a successful conclusion. More than anything else I would particularly like to compliment you, Mr. Ambassador, on your personal contribution towards the strengthening of relations between our two countries. Your very successful stay in the Soviet Union as the Ambassador of India to our country which has been now crowned by this great achievement. We have noted with satisfaction how, parallel with the hard work and your general activities regarding the development of relations between our two countries in all spheres, you have at the same time made pains taking efforts to complete this Document which, as I have said, will go down in the history of our relations indeed as a great contribution. It was only appropriate, therefore, that the Prime Minister would have chosen you, Mr. Ambassador, personally to come here for the special purpose of completing this most important work. The great success which has attended your career as Ambassador in this country makes us anticipate that you will have much more glorious and further success in your future career both as a diplomat and as a politician. We are therefore, deeply appreciative of the decision of your Prime Minister to send you to the Soviet Union to finalise this very important and historic Document. We also agree with you on the assessment of your Prime Minister about the value of this Treaty itself. The importance of this Treaty depends more than anything else on the mutual faith which exists between our two countries. It is a manifestation of the complete trust which exists between the two countries and the two peoples – it is also a manifestation of our strength (the strength of our two countries) – our moral strength reflected also in political economic and military affairs. The friendship between India and the Soviet Union is not merely a question of words only. I quite agree with your assessment of this Treaty as being not due to temporary considerations. There will be people who will be asking what is the purpose of this Treaty, who gain an advantage from this Treaty. It will be the wrong question because in such a situation when there is such mutual respect and understanding, there will be no question of anyone getting advantage at the expense of the other. We should also remember that such a Document between India and Soviet Union is a great factor for peace. Both our countries proceed upon the principles of complete trust and equality between our two States. More than anything else, Mr. Ambassador, this is a Treaty of peace, directed against war. When we evaluate in the immediate future the number of countries which will be interested in this Treaty, you will find, of course, that there are some countries which will have a negative reaction. They will make negative remarks. This does not mean that the people of those countries will not welcome it. For example, we think the leaders of China will have a negative attitude. We also think that the ruling military clique in Pakistan will not be happy. In the United States there will also be a negative reaction from the government. But in all these countries it is not the government but the people who matter. In Pakistan particularly there is no doubt that the ordinary people will be happy. The military regime of Yahya Khan will have a negative reaction. As for China the government will be against this, of course. But we know that there are forces in China who will welcome this development. In Indonesia there will be many people who will welcome this Treaty. Thailand has its difficulties. There also the people will be happy. Indo-Chinese people on the whole will welcome this Treaty. People everywhere will understand this Treaty as a symbol of peace and co-operation, as an instrument for lessening tension and not increasing tension. We should be very careful in presenting it to the world in such a manner.

As for the United States, President Nixon will be completely against the Treaty. But in the Congress and in the country itself there will be many people who will by sympathetic. In other parts of the world like Latin America, this Treaty, I am confident, will be greeted as a symbol of peace and tranquility during a period of tension and conflict directed against war and dedicated to peace.

This much for the Treaty itself. Now I shall turn to the situation in Pakistan about which you, Mr. Ambassador, have spoken so eloquently. The Prime Minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi has written to me in this matter and I have studied the letter and I know the situation is complicated and becoming more complicated every day. President Yahya Khan recently sent us a telegraphic message requesting us to receive a special messenger from him. We have sent a copy of that message to the Prime Minister. We did not agree to receive the envoy. Again, recently Pakistan has requested us to receive her envoy. We shall receive him this time and we will send to the Prime Minister a copy of Yahya Khan’s message and also all that transpired between us.

We fully agree with Mrs. Indira Gandhi about the absolute need of protecting peace in the region against war. We would like to repeat that war is not in the interests of India. It is not in the interest of the peoples of India. When this envoy comes, we will make it absolutely clear to him that we will stick to the present decision of giving no weapons, no further weapons or military equipment. We will also make it clear to him that no more spares will be given. We have some economic assistance like the steel plant and other projects. In these matters also we will apply economic pressure to moderate the bellicose policy of the Pakistani Government.

In the connection, I would like to note that only yesterday President Nixon, in an interview, has announced his intention of giving economic and other aid to Pakistan. We do not know what exactly he is going to give but this policy is obviously the policy of provoking war between India and Pakistan with some forces in the United States backing both the sides. This would, in effect, be extending the policy of Vietnamisation to the sub-continent. The President of Pakistan has also been making dangerous statements like those you mentioned to me and like the one I read out to you earlier. One way of looking at things would be to assume that both Nixon and Yahya Khan are making these statements only for internal consumption. In the case of President Nixon there is also another motive. Some of the statements are deliberately made to support internal opposition to Mrs. Gandhi, support the well-known forces in India who have always been arrayed against the present government. The United States attempts to make skillful use of all the elements in your country which are engaged in a struggle against Mrs. Gandhi. They finance them and they give them physical support in many ways. Nevertheless, I agree with you that we should also take the statements of the military clique of Pakistan seriously. It is quite possible they may mean serious business. We should be prepared for it.

Let us consider the most crucial problem, the problem of your borders. In the first instance let us take into account the purely military aspects of this question. According to our information, your enemies, Pakistani intelligence and others, know all about your borders and everything even beyond them. They know quite a lot about the military situation in your country. The refugees go forward and backward, military formations travel across the border, many people see and watch what is happening, almost at every point of your frontiers. It is obvious that nothing is a secret from your enemies. They know how many units you have on the border, where they are stationed, their strength, their arms and all the connected matters. I would like to repeat that both the United States and Pakistan know all this. They know that, they talk about these things like refugees being armed and sent across the border to fight etc. they do so on the basis of irrefutable knowledge. It is my advice to you that you should be more careful. You should be cautious, you should not allow your intentions or programmes to become visible to everyone. It is for you to make a very careful assessment of what more you should do to ensure that a climate of absolutely secrecy about all that is happening on your borders is scrupulously maintained. Otherwise you will face many difficulties and many dangers. What you intend to do should remain know only to you. No one else should have evidence of your intentions. I would again wish you to be careful.

I would now like to refer to another aspect of the matter which you mentioned to me. The answer to your question really lies in the fact that you should strengthen your armed forces. This strength should become known and it should be manifest to everyone. I do not mean that the manifestation of your strength should be interpreted as a desire on your part to use it against somebody. But it should in very clear terms administer a warning to everyone, it should frighten your enemies, it should frighten Pakistan and her allies. Pakistan and her friends know that you have the strength to counteract all their nefarious designs. Once the enemy knows that across your borders and violation of your sovereignty means their death they will recoil and never dare at anything against you. In spite of this if they are so foolish as to do something against you, please do not worry. They will have to face your strength and court disaster for themselves. It is my advice to you that you should have strong defence forces and that fact alone will enable you to avert war.

I am happy to learn that your Foreign Minister will be visiting several countries. This is very important. He will be visiting Indonesia. It is necessary to do propaganda to organize support among the countries of the region and the countries of the world. Both China and the United States are anxious to have influence in the region. It is, therefore, necessary that you and other like-minded countries should unite together against this. In this connection, of course, the strongest factor will be this Treaty. I know that the Treaty will face the opposition of the reactionary forces in India and they will do their best to fight the Treaty. They are capable of doing anything to frustrate your government and its aims. That is why it would be necessary for you to exercise caution, vigilance. It is necessary to be careful. I would, once again, particularly advise you to be careful about the police and the army, about their reliability, effectiveness and ‘battle preparedness’.

Yesterday, I was speaking to Comrade Brezhnev, who is resting in the South and he particularly told me to convey through you to the Prime Minister that he fully supports this Treaty and its provisions. He wanted to convey his personal greetings to Mrs. Gandhi. He believes that the fruitful results of this Treaty will contribute to still further strengthening of our friendship. Comrade Podgorny and other members of the Politbureau have also asked me to convey their best wishes to the Prime Minister. I do not think it is necessary for me to go any further into details since Gromyko will be flying to New Delhi and there he will fully inform the Prime Minister all of our views. We really do not have any secrets from you. In conclusion I would like to repeat that the friendship with India is very much cherished by the people of the Soviet Union and it is our belief that this friendship will contribute to peace and progress all over the world.

Chairman Kosygin at this stage turned to Dr. Shelvankar and welcomed him as the new Ambassador. He expressed his conviction that the new Ambassador would have as successful a career in strengthening Indo-Soviet friendship as his predecessor. Dr. Shelvankar thanked the Chairman for his kind words and handed over the official copy of the letter which had been sent by the Prime Minister through him to be personally handed over. A copy of the letter had earlier been sent to the Chairman through the Foreign Office.
Mr. Dhar invited the attention of the Chairman to the fact that several items of our defence requirements which had been projected by him in his capacity as the Ambassador to the Soviet Government had yet to be cleared for being supplied to India. He had been instructed to draw the kind attention of the Chairman to the urgent need of our requirements in respect of these items. Chairman Kosygin said that as far as the Petyas were concerned, he hoped that the required number would be made available to the Indian Navy from out of the Soviet fleet. These would require some changes which, he had no doubt, would be completed in the shortest possible time. The decision of the Soviet Government would also be conveyed to the concerned departments regarding the supply of the other items required by the Indian defence forces.

Mr. Dhar also informed the Chairman that the Prime Minister was very keen to visit the Soviet Union. She was acutely conscious of the fact that this visit was long overdue. Developments in India, however, needed her constant and uninterrupted attention. This prevented her from realizing her wish to pay an early visit to the Soviet Union. Nevertheless, Mr. Dhar said, she had instructed him to convey to the Chairman that it would give her great pleasure to find an early opportunity of visiting the Soviet Union and have a free and frank exchange of views on various important subjects with the Chairman and his colleagues. The Chairman said ‘Mr. Ambassador, you have jumped the gun, as we say. I was about to request you to convey our request – indeed a request from Comrade Brezhnev, Comrade Podgorny, myself and other members of the Polit Bureau of the Soviet Government, to your Prime Minister to visit the Soviet Union. She could make this visit private or official, depending entirely on her convenience. We in the Soviet Union would take pride in welcoming your Prime Minister, whom we respect not only as our great friend, but also as a world leader of great stature.’ Mr. Dhar promised to convey the sentiments of the Chairman and his colleagues to the Prime Minister.

The Chairman then expressed the view that as it was agreed to treat Mr. Dhar’s visit to the Soviet Union as confidential, today’s meeting should be announced in the press as having taken place only between him and the new Indian Ambassador to the Soviet Union. Mr. Dhar agreed with this procedure. He informed the Chairman that in fact this procedure suited him admirably on two accounts. In the first instance, Mr. Dhar said that his mission required deliberate anonymity on his part and secondly, being temperamentally a shy person, he welcomed the fact that his name would be omitted from being mentioned in the press.

Mr. Dhar thanked the Chairman warmly for receiving him and having such a frank and free exchange of views on important matters concerning the two countries.
Agreement on Arrangements for the Repatriation of Indian personnel from Dacca and Pakistani personnel from Calcutta.

New Delhi, August 6, 1971.

1. Swiss diplomatic Representatives coordinate and supervise the arrangements of the simultaneous repatriation in Dacca and Calcutta. For this purpose the Swiss authorities will delegate Mr. Enrico Tosio, Swiss Consul General in Karachi, in Dacca and Dr. Pritz BOHNERT, Counselor of Embassy at the Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi, to Calcutta.

2. The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan will designate a Representative in Calcutta and in Dacca respectively who will be responsible for the carrying out of the repatriation arrangements and with whom the Swiss Representative will deal. The name of this liaison officer will be conveyed to the Swiss Ambassador in New Delhi for information of the other party.

3. The Swiss Representative will supervise the ‘safe conduct’ provided by the respective Governments for the departing personnel from their residences up to the boarding of the aircraft. Security measures are the responsibility of the Host Government.

4. The Swiss Representatives will ensure and supervise the simultaneous departures of the aircraft from Dacca and from Calcutta. For this purpose they are to be given the facilities of communicating with each other on the High Frequency radio of the Airport Control towers in Dacca and Calcutta. They will also be in touch with the operating personnel of the control towers at each end.

5. It is agreed by the two Governments that the Indian personnel is to be repatriated by one Soviet aircraft and one Swiss aircraft. The Pakistani personnel will be repatriated by one Iranian aircraft. All aircraft will only make one trip each. The personnel of the two Governments will carry their personal belongings only.

6. To ensure simultaneous repatriation the aircraft will take off at exactly the same time at each end. The difference in time between Dacca and Calcutta will be taken into account for fixing the agreed departure time.

7.(a) The respective Governments will grant exit permit early in advance of the departure so that there will be no holding up in boarding the aircraft at the airport. There will be no immigration and health formalities.

(b) The Governments will also ensure prompt clearance of the belongings of the departing personnel. No Government property or archives will be carried. The two Governments will have the right to demand inspection by customs to ensure that this understanding is adhered to.

8. Each person to be repatriated will be allowed to carry with him personal belongings of himself and the members of his family to the extent of availability of space in the aircraft.

9. (a) Heavy personal effects which cannot be transported by air such as cars, furniture etc. should be transported to the seaport and shipped from there. The respective local Governments will arrange for such transportation and shipment of such effects; the cost will be defrayed by the Home Government of the national to be repatriated.

(b) A list of such personal effects will be prepared by the Deputy High Commissioner concerned and handed over by him to the Swiss Representative for onward transmission to the Representative of the Host Government.

10. Property of the Indian Government in staff residences in Dacca and property of the Pakistan Government in staff residences in Calcutta is to be stored in premises already rented by the respective Governments and may be sealed by the Deputy High Commissioners or their Representatives before their departure. The safe keeping of this property will be the responsibility of the Host Government in either case.

11. The Deputy High Commissioner for India in Dacca and the Deputy High Commissioner for Pakistan in Calcutta or a Representative designated by the Deputy High Commissioner will be given permission to personally visit his staff early in advance of departure in order to advise the members of his Mission on the repatriation. The Swiss Representative will be present during such visits.

12. The Government of Pakistan will inform the Deputy High Commissioner for India in Dacca of the above arrangement on repatriation and the Government of India will likewise inform the Deputy High Commissioner for Pakistan in Calcutta.

Letter of Pakistan President to Chairman A.N. Kosygin.

August 1971.

Prime Minister’s Secretariat

On instructions from Chairman Kosygin, the Soviet Ambassador handed over to P.M. on an extremely confidential basis, copy of President Yahya Khan’s letter to Chairman Kosygin. After F.M. and F.S. have seen this, P.M. desires the Ministry of External Affairs to look into the letter so that we could meet the kind of propaganda in which Pakistan is engaging.

P.N. Haksar
Secretary to P.M.
6-8-1971

Foreign Minister.
Foreign Secretary.

The Letter of President Yahya Khan to the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR A.N. Kosygin.

Esteemed Mr. Chairman,

I have carefully considered your letter dated 24 June, 1971 as well as the views you expressed during your recent talk with our Ambassador. In the spirit of friendly understanding and trust I would like to inform you of the latest events in our country and to share with you my opinions on some questions which were covered in your letter as well.

You stated that a political settlement in Pakistan which takes into consideration legitimate interests of our people would normalize the situation which threatens the cause of peace in our region. All my efforts were consistently being aimed at coming to national consensus in respect of a constitutional arrangement which would be firm and at the same time provide for integrity and cohesion of Pakistan. I declared last March that as soon as it would be possible I should take new steps in transfer of power to the elected representatives of the people. Later I made public my well-thought out plan for this aim and I feel confident that in about four months my plan will be successfully carried out.

You stressed the importance of solving the problem of displaced persons and also advised to remove factors which make people seek refuge in India and prevent their return to East Pakistan. I agree with you. We took a number of steps to prepare conditions for their return. It is equally important that India should take corresponding steps lest our efforts are in vain. From the very beginning we considered this as a question of humanitarian character. Some six weeks ago I appealed to our citizens who had gone to India to return to their houses in East Pakistan. This was followed by the announcement of general amnesty by the Governor of East Pakistan. To facilitate the repatriation of the displaced persons 21 reception centres were opened along the border between East Pakistan and India. The UN High Commissioner for Refugees who had visited some of these centres, expressed satisfaction with the steps taken for the reception and accommodation of refugees. We suggested that he should leave behind his representative in East Pakistan and took steps to provide him everything needful for frequent visits to these centres to observe the measures being taken there. We also requested the UN High Commissioner for Refugees to render help in the work of settling these people.

The Government and other bodies in India, which so eloquently expressed their concern over human conditions and complained against the impact of this problem putting unbearable strain on the Indian economy, engaged themselves in the business of creating one obstacle after another in the matter of repatriation of the displaced persons to East Pakistan. The Prime Minister of India and her Defence Minister said in public that India was against the idea of return of the displaced persons to East Pakistan and that they would permit them to return only to ‘Bangla Desh’. Fabrications and hostile inventions to the effect that the displaced persons will be killed or repressed on return to East Pakistan and that their property will be confiscated, are being spread in India. The Prime Minister of India states that she will not allow them to stay in India but at the same time she will not allow them to return to East Pakistan to be butchered. Other Indian leaders speak of a political settlement in East Pakistan which must be acceptable for India.

They keep on talking about armed conflict to settle the problem of the displaced persons. Such statements from the side of the Indian demoralize and sow fear and disbelief in the minds of the displaced persons. How can they return, Mr. Prime Minister, under such conditions? We have to think whether India is sincere, when she says that this is a problem of humanitarian character.

You said further, that the guarantees of personal security regardless of language, religion and so on would facilitate an early settlement at this problem. I fully agree with you. In my broadcast to the whole country on June 28, I expressed sympathy with all displaced persons on behalf of our whole country and said that it would be inhuman, if the matter of their early return to normal life were not given paramount attention which it deserved.
Once again I reiterated that all citizens of Pakistan regardless of religion, caste or beliefs, who had crossed our borders and were in India, should return to their homes and reunite with their families.

With a certain regret I note that part of your letter alleging that Pakistani military units crossed the Indian border and fired at the Indian civil population. I have to declare with all determination, I am capable of that the facts are quite different. In fact, the cases of border crossings by the Indian troops, violations of our air space and also heavy artillery and mortar shelling of our villages have become frequent. A very serious incident occurred on July 3, when four fighters and one armed helicopter of the IAF intruded up to six miles into the limits of our territory and made fire at the village near Dinajpur. In Sylhet the Indian shelling is regular as it is evident from the extract of the article from the Daily Telegraph. Describing the aims of military activities along the border near Sylhet, the Daily Telegraph correspondent Clair Hollingworth wrote that those few British estate owners who stayed in the area fully justified in blaming the Indian Government for vast destructions at the factories of the known tea estates in Sylhet district of East Pakistan as well as for mass exodus at the Hindu skilled labour. Five of the British tea estate owners who met Mr. Bottomley team complained according to the report of the Daily Telegraph that they continue to be disturbed by shelling by mortars, rifles and sometimes 25 pounders from across the Indian border.

We regard it as unthinkable to strive for increasing tension in the Indo-Pakistani sub-continent in the period of the national crisis. By no means we have ever threatened India, and the military confrontation with this country at any time would cause a great damage to our national interests. With all my sincerity I would like to assure you about our firm intention to strive for the peaceful solution of all Indo-Pakistani problems.

I would like to use this opportunity to inform you that our peaceful intentions have got no corresponding response in India and we are constantly subjected to intimidation and intolerable provocations. Responsible Indian leaders, including the Prime Minister, continue to make statements threatening to undertake military actions against Pakistan. The Prime Minister of India is reported to have said recently that if the international community failed to create such a situation in Pakistan which would be acceptable for India, the Indian Government would take necessary measures in order to solve this problem with Pakistan. There were made some statements in the Indian Parliament calling to occupy a part of the East Pakistan territory by force for settling the DP’s there. There were some reports in the foreign press that India would launch a naval blockade of East Pakistan and Indian side did not repudiate this information. The Indian Government give encouragement and military assistance to the disruptive elements inside East Pakistan and to those who cross the border into India. According to the report of the Times from its correspondent in East Bengal, at least 30,000 men are being trained now in special camps which were set up by the Indian army for staging armed attacks upon our territory.

Taking into account the friendly interest shown by the Soviet leaders and particularly by you, Prime Minister, to the events in the Indo-Pakistani subcontinent, I appeal to you once again to use your considerable influence upon Indian leaders, in order not to allow their interference into the internal matters of Pakistan and to remove all obstacles for returning DPs from India to East Pakistan. Several thousands of DPs have already returned and many more continue to come daily. We would welcome the continuous increase of their number. I am sure that your active mediation in this matter with the Indian leaders would be a very important contribution for preserving peace in this region.

General Agha Muhammed Yahya Khan

New Delhi, August 7, 1971.

Dear Mr. President,

Thank you for your letters – one dated May 29 and the other brought by Dr. Kissinger, dated July 1. I have read them with interest. Dr. Kissinger has no doubt spoke to you about his wide-ranging discussions in New Delhi.

Since I wrote to you on May 13, the situation has not improved. Sanguinary conflict continues unabated in East Bengal. The number of Pakistani citizens fleeing their homeland and seeking shelter in India is steadily augmenting. We now have more than seven million registered evacuees. The West Pakistani army has driven out the greater part of the minority community as well as more than a million Moslem citizens of East Bengal. In recent weeks, the number of the latter is increasing.

It is not for us to object to the United States maintaining, as you, Mr. President, have put it, ‘a constructive relationship with Pakistan’ so that the U.S. may ‘retain some influence in working with them towards important decisions to be made in that country’. We have waited patiently and with restraint, hoping for a turn in the tide of events which the Government, Parliament and people of India could recognize as a step towards a political settlement.
Your letter of May 29 referred hopefully to President Yahya Khan’s press conference of May 24. Since then, we have carefully considered his statement of June 28 and his utterances on television. These pronouncements show a hardening of attitude and it seems to us that they do not take us nearer a solution.

Nothing would give me, my colleagues in the Government and the Indian people a greater sense of relief than to be able to say that the United States was working towards a viable settlement which would restore peace and the semblance of civilized Government in East Bengal which would enable Pakistani citizens to return to their homes.

However, the malaise afflicting the socio-political structure of Pakistan and the tensions prevailing between the various parts of it are deep rooted. The present attempt is to solve chronic problems, arising out of political, social and economic disparities, by force. I believe that the Government of the United States supports the view that the posting of U.N. observers on either side of the frontiers of India and East Bengal could solve the problem of the refugees. We regret that we do not see the situation in this light. India is an open democracy. We have a large diplomatic corps and many representatives of the world press. We have had visits of parliamentary delegations from various countries. All are free to travel and to visit the refugee camps. They see for themselves that although we are doing all we can for the refugees, life in the camps is one of deprivation and acute discomfort. Hence it is unrealistic to think that the presence of a group of U.N. observers could give any feeling of assurances to the evacuees when every day they see new evacuees pouring in with stories of atrocities. Would the League of Nations Observers have succeeded in persuading the refugees who fled from Hitler’s tyranny to return even whilst the pogroms against the Jews and political opponents of Nazism continued unabated? In our view, the intentions of the U.N. Observers might be more credible if their efforts were directed at stopping the continuing outflow of these unfortunate people and at creating conditions which, to any reasonable person; would assure the safety of life and liberty of the refugee who wishes to return to East Bengal.

Mr. President, I am touched by your generous references to the vitality of Indian democracy and the strength of purpose of our Government in meeting the complex social and economic problems which confront India. These problems have been rendered more complex by the action of the Pakistan Army and the burden on us is almost unbearable. It is by sheer act of will that we are able to hold on.

I should like to mention one other matter. Our Government was greatly embarrassed that soon after our Foreign Minister’s return from his Washington visit and despite the statements made by Ambassador Keating in Bombay on April 16 and by the State Department’s spokesman on April 15, 1971 came the news of fresh supplies of U.S. arms to Pakistan.

It was a sad chapter in the history of our sub-continent when the United States began to supply arms to Pakistan in 1954 and continued doing so up to 1965.
These arms have been used against us, as indeed we feared they would be. And now these arms are being used against their own people whose only fault appears to be that they took seriously President Yahya Khan’s promises to restore democracy.

In the midst of all the human tragedy, it is some relief to contemplate the voyage of the astronauts in the Apollo-15. These valiant men and the team of scientists supporting them represent man’s eternal longing to break from the constraints of time and space. As I write this, the astronauts are heading homewards, back to our earth. We pray for their safety and success. Please accept, Mr. President, our warm felicitations.

I was glad to have your message regarding your initiative to normalize relations with the People’s Republic of China. We have welcomed this move and we wish you well.

With best wishes and regards,

Yours sincerely
Indira Gandhi

His Excellency
Mr. Richard M. Nixon,
President of United States of America,
Washington.
Government view with grave concern press reports of President Yahya Khan’s statement that Sheikh Mujibur Rahman would be ‘court martialled’ and that he could not say whether or not the Sheikh would be alive when the so-called Pakistan National Assembly meets. President Yahya Khan himself had, in one of his earlier statements, referred to Sheikh Mujibur Rahman as ‘the future Prime Minister of Pakistan’. As the leader of the Awami League Party which won 167 of the 169 seats to the National Assembly from Bangla Desh, and thus had a clear majority of votes in the National Assembly of Pakistan, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman held a unique position as the acknowledged leader not only of East Pakistan, but of the whole of Pakistan. What happened after the 25th of March this year is known to the whole world. The denial of the verdict of the people and letting loose of military oppression and trampling on the fundamental human rights of the people of Bangla Desh stand self-condemned. Instead of respecting the verdict of the people and acknowledging Sheikh Mujibur Rahman as the elected an undisputed leader of Bangla Desh, the Pakistan Government has launched a reign of terror and carried out a calculated plan of genocide, the like of which has not been seen in recent times. To stage a farcical trial against Sheikh Mujibur Rahman is a gross violation of human rights and deserves to be condemned by the whole world.

We have repeatedly expressed our concern for the safety and welfare of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and his family who also are under house arrest or in prison. We have conveyed our concern to foreign governments and asked them to exercise their influence on the Government of Pakistan in this regard. Should any harm be caused to the person of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman or his family and colleagues, the present situation in Bangla Desh will be immeasurably aggravated and the present Pakistani rulers will be solely responsible for the consequences. We share the concern expressed by about 500 Members of Parliament in this regard. We appeal to the conscience of humanity to raise their voice against the action that the President of Pakistan proposes to take. We express our condemnation of the proposed action and warn the Government of Pakistan of its serious consequences.

New Delhi, August 9, 1971.

I have the honour to lay on the Table of the House a copy of the Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Co-operation, signed today by me on behalf of the Government of India with Mr. A.A. Gromyko, Foreign Minister of the USSR Government, who has signed it on behalf of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Government welcome this Treaty as a further step towards strengthening friendship and cooperation between India and the Soviet Union. The Treaty will, we are convinced, provide a stabilizing factor in favour of peace, security and development not only of our two countries, but the region as a whole. It is not aimed against any third country. In fact, we hope that this Treaty will provide a pattern for similar treaties between India and other countries in this region. Such treaties between countries of this region would stabilize peace and strengthen their independence and sovereignty.

I should like to emphasise in particular that this Treaty is, in its true sense, a Treaty of Peace. It strengthens our policy of non-alignment, respect for which is expressly mentioned in the Treaty. We sincerely hope that the policy of non-alignment will be further strengthened and will become an effective instrument for the safeguarding of our national interests as well as an important factor in the maintenance of universal peace and international security and in the lessening of tensions in the world.

It is a Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation. It is also a Treaty of non-aggression. It further provides a credible assurance that in the event of an attack or a threat thereof, the High Contracting Parties shall immediately enter into mutual consultations in order to remove such a threat and to take appropriate effective measures to ensure peace and the security of their countries. This should act as a deterrent to any powers that may have aggressive designs on our territorial integrity and sovereignty. It is, therefore, in essence, a Treaty of Peace against War.

Sir, the world is presenting a rapidly changing and dynamic picture. There is a change in the configuration of various world forces. Our policy of non-alignment is a dynamic policy which can be adapted to these changing situations. I should like to assure Hon'ble Members that our policy of peace stands firm as ever. We have no designs on the territory of other countries. At the same time, we shall not tolerate aggression or threat of aggression from any country. We do not want to provoke war with any country. We shall do everything in our power to defend peace and prevent war.

Following is the text of the Treaty:

TREATY OF PEACE, FRIENDSHIP AND COOPERATION BETWEEN THE REPUBLIC OF INDIA AND THE UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REpublics

DESIRous of expanding and consolidating the existing relations of sincere friendship between them.

BELIEVING that the further development of friendship and cooperation meets the basic national interests of lasting peace in Asia and the world.

DETERMINED to promote the consolidation of universal peace and security and to make steadfast efforts for the relaxation of international tensions and the final elimination of the remnants of colonialism.

UPHOLDING their firm faith in the principles of peaceful coexistence and cooperation between States with different political and social systems.

CONVINCED that in the world today international problems can only be solved by cooperation and not by conflict.

REAFFIRMING their determination to abide by the purposes and principles of the United Nations Charter.

The Republic of India on the one side, and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics on the other side.

HAVE decided to conclude the present Treaty, for which purpose the following Plenipotentiaries have been appointed:

On behalf of the Republic of India:
Sardar Swaran Singh,
Minister of External Affairs,

On behalf of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics:
Mr. A.A. Gromyko,
Minister of Foreign Affairs,

Who, having each presented their Credentials, which are found to be in proper form and due order,
HAVE AGREED AS FOLLOWS:

ARTICLE I

The High Contracting Parties solemnly declare that enduring peace and friendship shall prevail between the two countries and their peoples. Each party shall respect the Independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of the other party and refrain from interfering in the other’s internal affairs. The High Contracting Parties shall continue to develop and consolidate the relations of sincere friendship, good neighbourliness and comprehensive cooperation existing between them on the basis of the aforesaid principles as well as those of equality and mutual benefit.

ARTICLE II

Guided by the desire to contribute in every possible way to ensure enduring peace and security of their people, the High Contracting Parties declare their determination to continue their efforts to preserve and to strengthen peace in Asia and throughout the world, to halt the arms race and to achieve general and complete disarmament, including both nuclear and conventional, under effective international control.

ARTICLE III

Guided by their loyalty to the lofty ideal of equality of all peoples and Nations, irrespective of race or creed, the High Contracting Parties condemn colonialism and racialism in all forms and manifestations, and reaffirm their determination to strive for their final and complete elimination.

The High Contracting Parties shall cooperate with other States to achieve these aims and to support the just aspirations of the peoples in their struggle against colonialism and racial domination.

ARTICLE IV

The Republic of India respect the peace loving policy of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics aimed at strengthening friendship and cooperation with all nations.

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics respects India's policy of non-alignment and reaffirms that this policy constitutes an important factor in the maintenance of universal peace and international security and in the lessening of tensions in the world.

ARTICLE V

Deeply interested in ensuring universal peace and security, attaching great importance to their mutual cooperation in the international field for achieving those aims, the High Contracting Parties will maintain regular contacts with each other on major international problems affecting the interests of both the States by means of meetings and exchanges of views between their leading statesmen, visits by official delegations and special envoys of the two Governments, and through diplomatic channels.

ARTICLE VI

Attaching great importance to economic, scientific and technological cooperation between them, the High Contracting Parties will continue to consolidate and expand mutually advantageous and comprehensive trade, transport and communication between them on the basis of the principles of equality, mutual benefit and most favoured nation treatment, subject to the existing agreements and the special arrangements with contiguous countries as specified in the Indo-Soviet Trade Agreement of December 26, 1970.

ARTICLE VII

The High Contracting Parties shall promote further development of ties and contacts between them in the fields of science, art, literature, education, public health, press, radio, television, cinema, tourism and sports.

ARTICLE VIII

In accordance with the traditional friendship established between the two countries each of the High Contracting Parties solemnly declares that it shall not enter into or participate in any military alliance directed against the other party.

Each High Contracting Party undertakes to abstain from any aggression against the other Party and to prevent the use of its territory for the commission of any act which might inflict military damage on the other High Contracting Party.

ARTICLE IX

Each High Contracting Party undertakes to abstain from providing any assistance to any third party that engages in armed conflict with the other party. In the event of either Party being subjected to an attack or a threat thereof, the High Contracting Parties shall immediately enter into mutual consultations in order to remove such threat and to take appropriate effective measures to ensure peace and the security of their countries.

ARTICLE X

Each High Contracting Party solemnly declares that it shall not enter into any obligation, secret or public, with one or more states, which is incompatible with this Treaty. Each High contracting party further declares that no obligation exists, nor shall any obligation be entered into, between itself and any other State or States, which might cause military damage to the other Party.

ARTICLE XI

This Treaty is concluded for the duration of twenty years and will be automatically extended for each successive period of five years unless either High Contracting Party declares its desire to terminate it by giving notice to the other High Contracting Party twelve months prior to the expiration of the Treaty. The Treaty will be subject to ratification and will come into force on the date of the exchange of Instruments of Ratification which will take place in Moscow within one month of the signing of this Treaty.

ARTICLE XII

Any difference of interpretation of any Article or Articles of this Treaty which may arise between the High Contracting Parties will be settled bilaterally by peaceful means in a spirit of mutual respect and understanding.

The said Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Treaty in Hindi, Russian and English, all texts being equally authentic and have affixed thereto their seals.

Done in New Delhi on the ninth day of August in the year one thousand nine hundred and seventy one.

SECRET

Record of the Talks between Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and the Soviet Foreign Minister A. A. Gromyko.

New Delhi, August 10, 1971.

Gromyko. We are very satisfied with the welcome given in Parliament to the Treaty. We also heard about your rally in Delhi. May I congratulate you on its success.

P.M. Government reports say that there were 1 million people but the party workers say there were 2 million people.

G. Government should always be strict with figures.

Yesterday my colleagues and I were greatly interested in hearing your views about the situation in East Pakistan, your relations with Pakistan and China. Today I would like to give you our assessment. Yesterday in my talk with your Foreign Minister has made my task today easier: We understand the concern of the Government of India over the situation created by upheavals in East Pakistan. We consider your policy and position well founded and we condemn the treatment meted out by West Pakistan to East Pakistan and its people. We believe more than ever that the Pak military will not succeed in keeping down the people of East Pakistan for long and the rule is doomed. May be it is not for us to prejudge whether East Pakistan should be separate from West Pakistan or one with it, but we know that people of East Pakistan are waging a just struggle for their inalienable rights. This determines our policy and our attitude to your policy. The people of East Pak must have the last word. We resolutely condemn the oppressive policy of West Pakistan in East Pakistan.

The problem of refugees has been created by the West Pakistan military regime. They and Yahya Khan are responsible for creating this situation. You may rest assured that in regard to refugees we shall always support your position.

We have told the Pakistan leadership and Yahya Khan how we assess the situation and their regime. We have told them so resolutely and shall do so again. The information I have received regarding the situation will help us to draw appropriate conclusions and report to our leadership. The deep analysis you gave yesterday and your general approach will help us to determine what steps we should take. Today we are convinced, more than ever, that we cannot rely on the word of the military leadership in West Pakistan and Yahya Khan.

P.M. There is a report that Mujib is going to be tried tomorrow and will be immediately executed. There is tremendous emotion and I cannot say what reaction it will produce in India.
The Jan Sangh will exploit it for political reasons.

G. We received this information from your F.M. yesterday. Thank you for what you have told us. I am sure we will not remain indifferent and will take certain steps. If it happens, it will be scandalous and will rouse strong resentment against the military regime of West Pakistan among our people.

As regards China our understanding of your attitude is that China is on Pakistan’s side and is encouraging Pakistan against you. This is also our assessment. This is a destructive policy of China, though it is difficult to assess to what extent China is encouraging Pakistan, but there is no doubt they have responsibility for it.

The position of USA is, I think, as bad as they are encouraging Pakistan through their military deliveries and also politically. We know your assessment and it coincides with ours.

Our leadership appreciates your position of restraint as far as possible in relation to the developing events and in relation to the policy of Pak Government. We believe it would be very good if your Government continues the restraint and regards the situation in a cold blooded way. We know the emotions of your people which are justified. It would be good if they could be kept under control. The heart should be warm but the mind should be cool as we say.

P.M. To the extent possible we should keep calm and cool as I said yesterday. But the situation is not static. More and more refugees are coming in. I do not know what we can do unless some solution is found. I am posing the question to you what can we do.

G. We also realize it is not an easy problem and there is no easy solution. We will put considerable pressure on Sultan Alam Khan the First Vice Foreign Minister of Pakistan when he comes to Moscow. The Pak Government must give guarantees of security to those people who left because of unbearable conditions. We shall say so to Pakistan firmly and take into consideration Mujib’s projected trial and its consequences.

Another consideration is that India and USSR should closely watch military preparations of Pakistan – after our Treaty – and exchange all information more fully.

On the eve of my departure to India Comrade Breznev asked me to convey to you that the Soviet Union is prepared to convey all information to India at all levels and through all possible channels. He attaches greatest importance to it.

Your F.M. raised some specific points this morning. They will be given serious and close consideration. When we finish this subject I would like to talk about Sino - US relations and their collusion and Nixon’s visit.
P.M. You have given your assessment regarding Pakistan and China. What is your concrete assessment of the actual support that China will give to Pakistan? What can be done about it?

G. According to statements of Pak leaders and of Yahya Khan – they told us – that they are not going to wage war against India. This is confirmed by some other information we have. On the other hand there are hints or semi hints in the statements of China that she is going to support Pakistan. Our information is not specific regarding what China can do to aid Pakistan, but that does not exclude possibility of China doing something. Nor can there be any guarantee regarding this. But it is not easy for China to act against India.

P.M. Except that they could try to take NEFA (present day Arunachal Pradesh) which they claim.

G. We have no such information. But as we exchange information we shall give particular attention to this. We watch very closely the situation created by contact between US and China regarding Nixon’s visit. We take a cool view of it. No particular earthquake has occurred. It was not totally unexpected.

P.M. I said the only unexpected thing was the melodramatic manner of it.

G. You are quite right. Nonetheless some aspects should be kept in view by you, us and others. Normalization of relations between U.S. and China does not itself become negative, if it is done in the normal way. The US Administration – Nixon and Rogers – gave us assurances it will not do the slightest damage to US - Soviet relations. We do not take these assurances at their face value as we know the handwriting of US policy makers. We know very well they try to step on our toes whenever they can. As for example in Vietnam where we condemned their aggression. Our understanding is that US and China do not have an easy field before them. Neither side can depart radically from its position. It is not as simple as just coming to Peking

G. I should tell you that the Soviet Union will pursue its former policy towards USA and not give it up. We will agree whenever it is possible. But we will continue to condemn US aggressive policy, e.g. regarding 4 - Power talks on West Berlin. Nixon has told us he would like them to continue. We do not exclude a successful conclusion. Also regarding SALT negotiations, our attitude will be the same. But US course is not quite clear yet. As regards strategic nuclear disarmament, the attempt is to exclude accidental or unauthorized attack by both US and us, but this is not disarmament. Please treat this as confidential.
As for Sino-Soviet relations, they are bad and even tense. There are no bloody border(s), incidents of fighting, but our negotiations on the border issue are not making any progress. We will not cede any territory to China and they have learnt this lesson. But we are willing to make mutual insignificant concessions in some places. Chinese leadership has not informed us regarding Nixon’s visit. We will continue the same policy towards China. We are going to watch the situation from the Chinese side, bearing in mind the Washington-Peking axis. Certain other states have expressed concern regarding Sino-US détente, especially Japan. She is a major Asian State and we both should focus our attention on her. We understand why Japan is concerned regarding China and why China is concerned about Japan—at least Chinese leaders say so. We have smooth relations with Japan except in the Kurille islands. They would like to have two or some of them, all 4 of the islands. They have different appetites, but our territory will remain ours and we told them so. We told them to have a Treaty of peace with us on a realistic basis. In 1955 Premier Hotoyama signed a declaration of renunciation of war with us. We would like both India and USSR to have better relations with Japan and think what steps would influence Japan. She is facing the crossroads, whether to re-militarise or to have peace. We cannot be indifferent to this. e.g. regarding the bases and US troops in Japan. Would US prefer a weak or strong Japan militarily? US herself does not know the answer. We should therefore have close consultations regarding our attitude to Japan on this and other questions.

We do not exclude possibility of attempts to disrupt our friendship or to stand in the way of strengthening this friendship on some suggestions from China or USA. We should be above such suggestions and have confidence in our relations. We have no information on any specific point regarding this, but we should be on the look out in the future. This is what my leadership wanted me to tell you.

P.M. what would be the effect on South and South East Asia.

G. Each country has its own view, but it is clear that this agreement is a blow to China and USA who have their own plans. In DRVN and therefore also a blow to other people of South East Asia who sympathise with Saigon. Therefore, it has had and will have a negative effect on Saigon and South East Asia. We know it from the horse’s mouth that the attitude of Saigon is very negative. This is in strict confidence.

P.M. What about other countries?

G. I do not know concretely about Thailand, but I know that Thai government’s policy is only an appendage of USA.
Indonesia, Malaysia and Ceylon feel disturbed as China may be able to make a movement further southward.

In France, in general they assess it in positive terms but they are not enthusiastic about it. If I may go back to South-East Asia, Thailand has reason to be afraid of China, but will they automatically go into the orbit of China? We have no reliable information regarding Thailand. But the whole region is worried at the possibility of China moving southward.

P.M. What about Yugoslavia?

G. They regard it favourably. Yugoslav leadership showed tremendous ability to make 180 degrees turn. It came as a surprise even to us. They gave a very warm welcome to it. They do not mention any negative aspect of it. There was a time when they shouted they will not tolerate Chinese domination. However, we are taking some steps which we can to improve relations with Yugoslavia.

P.M. Is the Yugoslav attitude because of economic reasons, because of her relations with the West?

G. They do not have bad relations with the West as it is, but their attitude on this issue shows lack of principles. They will not profit from it. They have this in mind.

P.M. We are deeply concerned regarding West Asia.

G. It is very complicated. If we give a realistic assessment, there is no tangible movement towards a solution because US and Israel backed by US (sic) are not prepared to make any withdrawals which UAR demands and which you and we support. We are against the demands of war by some extremist Arab countries as we do not think that all political possibilities have been exhausted. We give much equipment to the UAR and their fighting force is much more effective but it does not ensure 100 percent victory.

P.M. What is the position in Sudan?

G. We regret very much what happened in Sudan as we felt they were doing well. The core of the problem is that Numeri was planning for some time to weaken ties with progressive countries. Therefore, he took strong action against all progressive elements in his Government a long time ago. We are very much concerned at the massacre taking place there. We fear Sudan may be thrown back by many years. We feel countries like yours and you personally could exercise your political authority to influence events.

P.M. And Algeria?
G. During recent times we have had even relations with them. On international problems they have clear positions. In the past they were for war against Israel, but we told them it was not realistic. On other issues, like colonialism, etc, they are with us. We would like to strengthen relations with them.

P.M. Mr. Kaul reminds me that Algeria is openly supporting Pakistan and Mr. Numeri.

G. This will have to be taken into account.

Do you have any different assessment from ours regarding USA or China?

P.M. No. But what does China think she gains from this.

G. Evidently Taiwan is the main issue. Also the possibility of doing harm to USSR. How can they think of wanting to strengthen you? As regards China’s right to enter UN, we consider it legitimate.

P.M. This is also our position.

G. Do you have contact with Iran, Turkey, Algeria which are inclined to support Pakistan?

P.M. We thought our relations with Iran were improving, but they have told us that in case of conflict they will stop our oil and are giving US arms to Pakistan already. One of our Ministers went to Algeria. Most of these Arab and Muslim countries say they do not want disintegration of an Islamic country. If Pakistan disintegrates, it is not because of us, but because of actions of its military regime.

G. Have you had any talks with China or USA regarding Indo-Soviet relations as our relations were on the rise?

P.M. We are hardly on talking terms with Peking. After Mao’s famous smile, our CDA in Peking had some talks but they have not made any progress. After meeting with other Heads of Government I wrote to Chou En-lai regarding East Pakistan, but have had no reply.

G. Thank you for the information you have given me. It helps us greatly and has great meaning for us.

P.M. These talks have great significance. Your visit has made a tremendous impact on our people.
0603.  Message of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi to the Heads of Government.

New Delhi, August 10, 1971.

Government and people of India as well as our Press and Parliament are greatly perturbed by the reported statement of President Yahya Khan that he is going to start secret military trial of Mujibur Rahman without affording him any foreign legal assistance. We apprehend that this so-called trial will be used only as a cover to execute Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. This will aggravate the situation in East Bengal and will create a serious situation in India because of the strong feelings of our people and all political parties. Hence our grave anxiety. We appeal to you to exercise your influence with President Yahya Khan to take a realistic view in the larger interest of the peace and stability of this region.

0604.  Message of External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to the U. N. Secretary General U Thant.

New Delhi, August 10, 1971.

We are distressed and shocked at the announcement made in Rawalpindi that they propose to commence Sheikh Mujibur Rahman’s trial from tomorrow. This announcement comes in the wake of the several categorical statements, which have lately emanated from President Yahya Khan about Sheikh’s culpability in waging war against Pakistan and in having indulged in treasonous activities. Sheikh Mujibur Rahman is an outstanding leader of his people, much beloved and much respected. His victory at the polls in December 1970 was perhaps the most magnificent one, in any similar election anywhere in the world, in recent years. Our people, press, Parliament and Government are all convinced that the problems which have been created for us by Pakistani action in East Bengal will be multiplied ten-fold if the Government of Pakistan do something precipitate and extreme in the context of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman’s life and welfare. We would like to appeal to Your Excellency to take urgent steps to request Government of Pakistan not to take this action which is certain to make their difficulties and ours very much worse. Anything they do to Mujib now will have grave and perilous consequences.

0605. Statement by Deputy Minister of External Affairs Surendra Pal Singh in the Rajya Sabha regarding the trial of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman by the Pakistani military authorities.

New Delhi, August 12, 1971.

According to reports, the trial by court martial of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman has started in West Pakistan on the 11th August for “waging war against Pakistan”. This trial is being held in camera without allowing any foreign legal assistance to him. Earlier, in the course of several statements, President Yahya Khan had warned that the punishment could include death penalty and that he could not say whether or not the Sheikh would be alive when the so-called Pakistan National Assembly meets. Government view with grave concern these developments. President Yahya Khan himself had, in one of his earlier statements, referred to Sheikh Mujibur Rahman as “the future Prime Minister of Pakistan”. As the leader of the Awami League Party which won 167 of the 169 seats to the National Assembly from Bangla Desh and thus had a clear majority of votes in the National Assembly of Pakistan, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman held a unique position as the acknowledged leader not only of Bangla Desh but of the whole of Pakistan. What happened after the 25th of March this year is known to the whole world. The denial of the verdict of the people and letting loose of military oppression and trampling on the fundamental human rights of the people of Bangla Desh stand self-condemned. Instead of respecting the verdict of the people and acknowledging Sheikh Mujibur Rahman as the elected and undisputed leader of Bangla Desh, the Pakistan Government has launched a reign of terror and carried out a calculated plan of genocide, the like of which has not been seen in recent times. To stage a farcical trial against Sheikh Mujibur Rahman is a gross violation of human rights and deserves to be condemned by the whole world.

We have repeatedly expressed our concern for the safety and welfare of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and his family who also are under house arrest or in prison. We have conveyed our deep anxiety and concern to the Secretary General of the United Nations and foreign governments and asked them to exercise their influence on the Government of Pakistan in this regard. Should any harm be caused to the person of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman or his family and colleagues, the present situation in Bangla Desh will be immeasurably aggravated and the present Pakistani rulers will be solely responsible for the consequences. We share the concern expressed by all members of Parliament in this regard. We appeal to the conscience of humanity to raise its voice against the action that the President of Pakistan is taking. We express our condemnation of the action and warn the Government of Pakistan of its serious consequences.

Note by Prime Minister for a treaty with China.

Should we not indicate to Misra* that the Indo-Soviet treaty does not preclude similar Treaty with China?

I would respectfully submit that a Treaty of the kind we have just concluded with the Soviet Union reflects, in time and space, a particular coincidence of interest. In all the Chanceries of the world, the Treaty has been interpreted in this light and I believe rightly so. For us now to go round saying to all and sundry that we are prepared to sign a similar Treaty would appear either unrealistic or, if I may say so, something lacking in seriousness. Bearing this in mind, I had submitted to F.S. the other day that we are overdoing this business of our readiness to sign a similar kind of Treaty with anyone who might come forward. This attitude dilutes the impact of the Treaty we have signed and also makes us look a little cheap. I recall reading a telegram from our Embassy in Japan. Our Ambassador offered a similar Treaty to Japan and, as I expected, Mr. Hogen, who was speaking to our Ambassador and who is an extremely shrewd person, said that he had noted what the Ambassador had to say and pointed out that it would be some time before Japan is able to react to this suggestion, as the Chinese were always accusing Japan of militarism. So, from this I conclude that it would be quite wrong of us to openly rush to Japan to offer to them a similar treaty. I think we have to be quite clear in our mind as to which countries might sign such a Treaty and then we should quietly work for it and not publicly state, day in and day out, that the Treaty with the Soviet Union is so routine that we are ready to sign it with everyone. This is how, at any rate, I see the problem. As for signing a Treaty with the Chinese, even a talk about it would not bring about a Treaty with China and it would certainly attenuate greatly the effect of the Treaty which we have signed with the Soviet Union.

Note by the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister P. N. Haksar on the call by the Soviet Ambassador.

New Delhi, August 14, 1971.

IMMEDIATE
Prime Minister’s Secretariat

The Soviet Ambassador called on me, at his instance, at 5.15 this evening. He said that he was instructed to convey to Prime Minister, information on two matters: Firstly, that Chairman Kosygin had received Prime Minister’s message on Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and that immediately on receipt of the message, the Soviet Government instructed their Ambassador in Islamabad to call on President Yahya Khan and to tell him that among the Soviet people, responsible official circles of the Soviet Union and the world at large, there were great feeling about the manner in which Sheikh Mujibur Rahman had been imprisoned and now sought to be tried and executed, and that if this were to happen, it would aggravate the situation seriously. The Soviet Ambassador said that they had not received a reply from President Yahya Khan and that as soon as it is received, it will be duly conveyed to P.M.

2. The Soviet Ambassador then referred to a letter which the Government of Pakistan has addressed to the Chairman of the Security Council for this month, who is apparently the Italian Permanent Representative. He handed over to me copy of this letter which has been sent to the Soviet Permanent Representative in a confidential manner. A copy of the letter from the Government of Pakistan is at slip ‘A’, together with a copy of Chairman, Security Council’s letter addressed to the Soviet Charge d’Affaires in the Permanent Mission in New York.

3. The Soviet Ambassador added that in dealing with this matter which has been raised by the Pakistan Government, the Soviet Union will cooperate with India in the same manner as they had done when the question of U.N. Observers was raised. And if this question was ultimately raised in the Security Council, they would have no hesitation in vetoing it.

UNOFFICIAL TRANSLATION

Pakistani Mission in the United Nations

Your Excellency,

My Government has instructed me to call the attention of the members of the Security Council to the present crisis in the relations between India and Pakistan and to the situation on the border between East Pakistan and India in the hope that the members of the Security Council will find appropriate means of averting the obvious threat to peace.

2. As the members of the Security Council are aware, the relations between India and Pakistan are tense due to disputes which remain unsolved during a long period of time. This tension has become so deep in the result of the present situation that it creates a dangerous possibility of a conflict which may not remain limited or localized.

3. The Pakistani delegation periodically informed the members of the Security Council about the measures taken by the Government of Pakistan for improving the situation. Pakistan is not only aware of the problem created by displacement of the large number of persons from East Pakistan, but also strives for their repatriation. It called upon these displaced persons with an appeal to return to their homes. It promised them the prompt rehabilitation. It announced restoration of their property and a general amnesty. It quickly accepted the proposal made by the Secretary General on 19 July that the Representatives of the High Commissioner for Refugees should be accepted on both sides of the border for “facilitating the voluntary repatriation of refugees in a safe and organized manner, paying due attention to their welfare”. Shortly speaking, it has demonstrated its readiness to cooperate in the maximum possible way in implementation of any measures, which would serve the cause of averting the escalation of the present situation to an armed conflict between India and Pakistan.

4. But it is clear that all measures of this kind cannot be successful without a full cooperation of the Government of India. Unfortunately it has not shown this cooperation so far. The members of the Security Council are aware that the Government of India categorically refused the proposal of the Secretary General, contained in his Memorandum of 19 July. But that is only one of the smallest manifestations of a completely negative approach. The Foreign Minister of India stated in the Indian Parliament on 20 July that India “did everything possible for supporting the liberation army”. This publicly accepted support consists in training, organizing, arming, financing and guiding the forces, which try to cut Pakistan into the two parts and cause an irreparable damage to the economy of East Pakistan. Besides that there are irrefutable proofs of the direct participation of Indian military personnel in raids across the border to East Pakistan. It is obvious that as long as the border between India and East Pakistan remains violated the refugees cannot cross it to return to their homes. Thus the tragedy of these people will not only continue but aggravate.

The Government of Pakistan strives for the peaceful end of this dangerous situation. Though it cannot agree with any interference in affairs which in essence are under its inner jurisdiction, it addressed all the countries friendly both to India and Pakistan to advise the Indian leaders to take the path of reconciliation and peace. The President of Pakistan publicly proposed to meet the Prime Minister of India “in any place and at any time”. Unfortunately this proposal was rejected.

6. As one cannot permit the situation to aggravate and in order to avert the distinctive (destructive) war between these two countries, the Government of Pakistan in the interests of peace proposed that the Committee of good offices of members of the Security Council should visit both countries, particularly the areas of present tension with the aim of relieving the threatening situation.

7. I shall be grateful if you convey to the members of the Security Council the contents of this letter. Please accept, Your Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Summary of Discussions at Pakistan Ambassadors’ Conference held in Geneva on August 24-25, 1971.

A meeting of Pakistan Ambassadors was held in Geneva on Aug 24-25 presided by Foreign Secretary Sultan Khan and attended by Lt. Gen M. Umer and Information Secretary, Roedad Khan. The main points were:-

The For. Secy. Admitted that the present crisis as the biggest since 1947 and blamed India. He referred to the hostile press in the U.S.A. and the hostile press and govt. reaction in U.K. He thought that Pakistan’s case had not been understood. He mentioned the Aug 17 letter of Kosygin promising Russia’s continued desire to help Pakistan. President Nixon had also agreed to continue maintaining economic and other aids to Pakistan. China is also interested to maintain the integrity and strengthening of Pakistan. Many Arab states had told India not to interfere.

Lt. Gen. Umer believed that the military situation was under control in the absence of any organized military resistance. As such no organized military operation was necessary except repelling Indian aggression and action of saboteurs. To counter saboteurs, civil armed forces and Razakars have been organized. He admitted that the communications had been almost ruined and would take a very long time to restore. The Awami League would remain banned and some members would face criminal charges and if found guilty would lose their seats. He mentioned that some civil-ization of the administration to take place soon. Martial Law would assist civil administration. He asserted that economy had to be restored, food to be sent to areas of shortage. The future constitution would ensure autonomy as well as integrity. But according to him nothing was constant in politics.

Information Secy. Roedad Khan admitted that the image of Pakistan had been badly tarnished. He mentioned of a most resolute publicity offensive to be launched. He asserted that adequate staff and funds would be made available.

Main observations of the Ambassador/High Commissioners:

U.S.A. Mr. Z.M. Faruqi (for Agha Hilaly) said that Nixon well disposed to Pak. views as a result of Pak role in US/China rapprochement. He admitted the scepticism of U.S. public and Congressmen over Bangla Desh. The US would continue to assist the current projects. Admitted that Senetor Kennedy’s support of Awami League and refugees in India made adverse publicity for Pakistan. He believed that the establishment of civil govt. in East Pakistan would improve the image of Pakistan. He urged that intellectuals, students from both wings to visit USA to influence the views of the U.S. govt. and the public.

USSR. Ambassador Jamshed Marker believes that the Russian have no intentions to sever ties with Pakistan and that the Indo-Soviet Treaty was mainly aimed to extend Russian influence in the South East Asia. He regarded the Treaty as more anti-Chinese than anti-Pakistan. Soviet Union has given no indication that the economic aid to Pakistan would be reduced.

U.K. High Commissioner Salman Ali said that British govt. had not seen Pak. view. He revealed that the High Commissioner had set up a Pakistan Solidarity Organisation to counter the various Bangla Desh Organisations. He blamed the British press as Jewish inspired and British TV as largely Indian inspired. He thought that the British Labour Party was bent on undoing the partition of 1947. the H.C. had been financing groups and individuals to focus Pakistani views. He also spoke of methods to befriend the Sylhetis. He advocated the insertion of advertised publicity in the Times and other newspaper during the visit of Mrs. Gandhi to UK and the opening of the General Assembly of the UN. He would also try to screen the Pak films on the Bengali massacres of the non Bengalis.

China. Amb. K.M. Kaiser said that China wanted non-intervention. He stated that China had advised for a political settlement maintaining the integrity of Pakistan. China suspects the Indian motives in supporting Bangladesh. China is ready to give aid for rehabilitation of E Pak. economy. The Chinese press did not publicize the Indo-Soviet Treaty and China believed that it is directed against China. China intends to strengthen her relations with Afghanistan, Ceylon, Nepal and Burma. China would like to see Pakistan active in the politics of Indo-China. Amb. Kaiser was not sure about the nature of Chinese help in case of a war between India & Pakistan. Private sources indicate arms shipment to Pakistan since March 25 was almost nil. Most of the Chinese weapons Pakistan now using were received during the years after 1965.

UN. Amb. Agha Shahi said that in the last ECOSOC meeting Pakistan got support on technical grounds and not on substance. He is afraid that in the forthcoming Gen. Assembly Session India would get strong support on Bangla Desh issue. He suggested that some drastic measures must be taken to prevent this. Restoration of civil govt. substantial return of refugees, tackling the present food shortage, postponing the trial of Sk. Mujib were some of his suggested measures. He mentioned of the hostile press in the USA. New York Times, Washington Post, Time and Newsweek Magazines and recommended advertised publicity. He strongly suggested that the press and TV must be made to see Pak. view at any cost. He recommended that the Pak. Delegation to UN should include East Pakistanis.
France: Amb. Dehlavi said that French press and public not sympathetic to Pak views. According to him France regarding the……………(not legible)

W. Germany: Amb. J.G. Kharas said that W. German govt. regarded this as an internal affair but India had been trying to blackmail W.G. with the threat of recognizing East Germany. He mentioned about adverse publicity made by German press and suggested that action be taken to counter this.

Canada: H.C. M.S. Sheikh said that Canada was concerned over repressive action of the Pakistan army. Both the govt. & press remained adverse after the visit of the Canadian parliamentary delegation to India and Pakistan. He stated that a Pak. students organization has been formed to publicize Pak views but he was not optimistic about any appreciable change in the press or of the Govt. of Canada.

Italy: Amb. Hamid Nawaz Khan said Italian Govt. had not suspended its aid to Pakistan even after the suspension of aid by the Consortium. Some aids for the Tarbela project is still on the pipeline. He mentioned about the Italian press being unsympathetic (because of the murder of Catholic priest.)

India: H.C Sajjad Hyder said that the Indian Foreign Office trying its utmost to influence the foreign ambassadors. He did not agree that Indo-Soviet treaty would restrain Mrs. Gandhi in her plan to recognize Bangladesh. He believed that India and Russia may have some agreement on future actions with regard to Bangladesh.

Switzerland: Amb. Afzal Iqbal said that the Swiss govt. was very much distressed at the human misery in the East Pakistan.

Austria: Amb. Enver Murad said that the Austria govt. had shown great anxiety over the reported loss of human lives as well as influx of refugees into India. Austrian press had been very critical of Pakistan action in East Pakistan.

Turkey: Amb. Iftikhar Ali said that although the Turkish govt. was committed to assist Pakistan both Turkish press and public were divided on this issue. He did not foresee any favourable change in their attitude towards Pakistan.

Poland: Amb. Bashirul Alam said that the Polish govt. did not agree with the contentions of the Pak. Govt. Polish govt. greatly concerned over the refugee problem. Polish press was critical of Pakistan and held it responsible for the E.P. tragedy. He also did not foresee any appreciable change in the position of either of the Polish press or govt.

Spain: Amb. Maj. Gen Syed Abid Ali said that the Spanish govt. completely understood Pakistan stand. Spain not only fulfilled with promptitude all the arms order placed with them but had offered additional supplies at favourable terms. But some of the press were critical of Pakistan.
Czechoslovakia. Amb. Kamaluddin said that the Czech govt. as well as press were anxious about the Pakistan tragedy and urged for a political settlement.

Argentina: Amb. Abdul Homin arrived after the meeting had ended.

Ghana : H.C  S.A. Moid said that the Ghana govt. followed neutral policy.

Bulgaria:  Amb. Mustapha Kamal did not much of any importance (sic).

Netherlands: Amb. R.S. Chatari said that the Dutch govt. was greatly perturbed over the human misery. Holland was distressed over the unilateral moratorium decision. But Dutch govt. had agreed to lease out 7 Coasters on payment of 2.8 million dollars.

Nigeria : H.C Samiullah Koreshi said that Nigeria supported Pakistan since Nigeria herself suffered from such a secessionist revolt.

Belgium: Amb. Masood said that neither the press nor the govt. did appreciate the stand of Pakistan govt.

Yugoslavia : Amb. I.A. Akhund said that the Yugoslav govt. was friendly disposed towards Pak. but did not agree that the revolt was India-inspired. He also reported of very active part played by one Mr. Bam of India at present Head of UNDP in Belgrade.

The following decisions were reached:

2. The foreign press to be allowed into Pakistan for reporting and treated nicely and must be won over at all costs.

3. All Pak missions should take serious steps to cover press, TV, radio through articles, demonstrations and letters to the editor.

4. The Parliaments, universities must be made aware of Pakistan position.

5. A micro-institute under a few scholars or officials be set up in Switzerland to disseminate Pakistani views.
0609. Press Note of the UN Press Section regarding the Indian complaint to International Court of Justice on the hijacking of Indian aircraft to Pakistan.

Press Release ICJ/290 7 September 1971

World Court to Consider New Case Brought by India Against Pakistan

On 30 August, the Government of India filed in the Registry of the Court an Application instituting proceedings against Pakistan.

The case has its origin in India’s decision in February 1971 no longer to permit the overflying of its territory by Pakistan aircraft. The case concerns the question of whether the Council of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) – a specialized agency of the United Nations – has jurisdiction to deal with a complaint by Pakistan against that decision.

The Application states that India and Pakistan are parties to two instruments concluded at Chicago in 1944: the Convention on International Civil Aviation and the International Air Services Transit Agreement. Under these two instruments, aircraft of each of the two countries had the right to overfly the territory of the other. According to the Application, this regime was suspended during a period of hostilities between the two States in August-September 1965 and was never revived. In February 1966, the two Governments concluded a special agreement under which a new concession to overfly each other’s territory was granted, but on a provisional basis, on the basis of reciprocity, and subject to the permission of the Government concerned. After the diversion of an Indian aircraft to Pakistan and its destruction at Lahore airport (30 January – 2 February 1971), the Government of India suspended overflights of its own aircraft over Pakistan territory and withdrew permission for Pakistan aircraft to overfly the territory of India.

On 3 March 1971, Pakistan submitted the matter to the ICAO Council, which is empowered to deal with disputes concerning the interpretation or application of the 1944 Convention and Agreement. India argued that the Council had no Jurisdiction in the present dispute, which related on the contrary to the termination or suspension of these two instruments in so far as they concern overflights between two States. On 29 July 1971, the ICAO Council decided that it had jurisdiction. In its present Application, India, on the basis of article 84 of the Convention and Article II of the Agreement, appeals from that decision to the Court.

The Application claims that:

(a) the ICAO Council has no jurisdiction to handle the matters presented by Pakistan, as the 1944 Convention and Agreement have been terminated or suspended as between the two States:

(b) the ICAO Council has no jurisdiction to consider Pakistan’s complaint, since no action has been taken by India under the Agreement; in fact no action could possibly be taken by India under the Agreement since that Agreement has been terminated or suspended as between the two States;

(c) the question of Indian aircraft overflying Pakistan and Pakistan aircraft overflying India is governed by the special regime of 1966 and not by the Convention or the Agreement of 1944. Any dispute between the two States can arise only under the special regime, and the ICAO Council has no jurisdiction to handle any such dispute.

Islamabad, September 18, 1971.

As you are aware my aim has always been to have constitution framed by the elected representatives of the people. When on the 28th of November 1969 I announced my plan for the transfer of power, I discussed various alternatives for framing the constitution of our country and I adopted a democratic programme of having a constitution framed by the elected representatives of the people. Unfortunately my original plan received a very serious setback by the developments in East Pakistan.

I have always maintained that the shock the country received due to the crisis in East Pakistan will not be allowed to jeopardize my aim for the transfer of power to the elected representatives of the people. In my statement of June 28 this year I declared that because of deadlock created by the crisis in the Eastern wing I had no alternative but to get the constitution prepared by a committee in consultation with political leaders and constitutional experts which will contain a normal amending procedure in the constitution itself.
However, after careful thought and detailed consultations with political leaders I have come to conclusion that the constitution which will be prepared by a committee of my officials should be presented to the National Assembly and once the assembly meets in its full strength i.e. when bye-elections have been held, the assembly shall discuss the constitution and if any member puts forward any constructive amendment for improvement he should have an opportunity to do so.

In order to enable the members to bring forward such amendment I have evolved a simple method for the initial period of three months. An amendment may be passed by the house by a simple majority which must include a consensus of all the federating units. If any amendment is presented to me, after having been passed by the National Assembly, in the manner specified earlier, and if I give my assent to the amendment after full consideration in the national interest, it will then be incorporated in the constitution.

If, on the other hand, it is found that the amendment is unacceptable in the national interest it will be returned to the assembly for reconsideration. The Assembly may return it to me for reconsideration with modifications, or in the original form. I will at that stage, reconsider it and if it is still found unacceptable the amendment will then have to follow formal amending procedure provided in the constitution itself.

Thus a period of 90 days will be allowed for the Assembly to discuss and put forward any amendment it considers necessary. After the Assembly has had an opportunity to discuss and debate fully and thoroughly the constitution within a period of 90 days, the constitution will then cease to be provisional and will be given a final shape. The whole object of this procedure is to offer to the representatives of the people an opportunity to make improvement in the constitution which I had of necessity to get prepared by a committee.

As it must be evident to you by now, I have never had any desire to impose a constitution on the country, nor do I have such a desire now. The main reason from getting this constitution prepared by a committee was to hasten and facilitate the process of transfer of power. At the same time the elected representatives of the people will have full opportunity to discuss, debate and make improvements in the Constitution.

I sincerely believe that this is how the exigencies and urgencies of the crisis can be reconciled with the expression of the people’s will.

At the end, I should like to reiterate that I would be only too glad to accept amendments as long as those changes do not adversely affect the territorial integrity and solidarity of our nation, or the ideology on which Pakistan is based.

From: Mr. Naseem Mirza, PFS. Director (UN)

No. UN(I)-1/24/71 October 1, 1971

My dear Ambassador/High Commissioner,

I enclose herewith for your information the extracts from the ‘Introduction to the report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization’ relating to Kashmir and East Pakistan.

2. In para 130 of the Introduction (Annexure I) (Not reproduced here) the Secretary General has mentioned Kashmir as one of ‘the great issues or hard core problems of our time’.

3. As regards East Pakistan (Annexure II) you may please usefully exploit the portions which are favourable to Pakistan, whenever a suitable opportunity presents itself, in your discussions with the officials of the Governments of your accreditation. It may please be explained that the UN Secretary-General has reiterated that the developments in East Pakistan are purely an internal affair of Pakistan and that the return of refugees is being hampered by the Indian infiltrators.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

Sd/- Naseem Mirza

ANNEXURE II

EAST PAKISTAN

177. The civil strife which erupted in East Pakistan in March 1971, and its aftermath, are the matters of deep concern to me as Secretary-General of the United Nations. While the civil strife in itself is an internal affair of Pakistan, some of the problems generated by it are necessarily of concern to the international community. The recent events in East Pakistan, following on the cyclone disaster of last November, have resulted in extensive loss of life, destruction and disruption. The plight of much of the population is serious, and millions of people have fled to the adjacent states of India bringing to the Indian authorities overwhelming health and relief problems and imposing an intolerable burden upon their already strained resources. International assistance on an unprecedented scale was urgently needed both for the relief of the distressed people in East Pakistan and for aid to the East Pakistan refugees in India.

178. I expressed my concern over this situation to President Agha Mohammad Yahya Khan shortly after the events of March 1971 and have been in continuous touch with the Governments of Pakistan and India, both through their Permanent Representatives at the United Nations and through other contacts. In these exchanges I have been acutely aware of the dual responsibility of the United Nations, including the Secretary General, under the Charter both to observe the provision of Article 2, paragraph 7, and to work, within the framework of international economic and social cooperation, to help promote and ensure human well-being and humanitarian principles.

179. It was with this latter responsibility in mind that I appealed for assistance both for the East Pakistan refugees in India and for the population of East Pakistan. In order to channel the assistance given in response to those appeals, I designated the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees as the focal point for assistance to the refugees in India and assigned, with the agreement of the Government of Pakistan, a representative in Dacca in order to make as effective use as possible of the international assistance made available for the relief of the population of East Pakistan. In addition to those two emergency relief operations, the High commissioner has initiated, with my full concurrence, an effort to facilitate the voluntary repatriation of the refugees now in India.

180. At its meeting on 16 July 1971, the Economic and Social Council held a full discussion of these operations, based on the statements made in the Council by the High Commissioner and the Assistant Secretary-General for Inter-Agency Affairs. At the conclusion of this discussion, the President of the Council expressed full support for the action taken by the Secretary-General.

181. Substantial contributions have been promptly offered in response to my appeal for the refugees in India. However, the money and supplies made available are not nearly sufficient, and the Indian Government still faces the appalling and disruptive problem of caring for millions of refugees in its territory for an unforeseeable period of time.

182. The response to my appeal for the relief operation in East Pakistan, particularly in its initial phase, has been far from sufficient or adequate to the magnitude of the task. In this connection, I should mention that in my dealings with the Government of Pakistan, I have been at pains to emphasize the necessity of being able to give to the donor countries appropriate assurances that their contributions will reach their intended destination – the people of East Pakistan.

183. Efforts to bring about the repatriation of the refugees have so far been unavailing. Since President Yahya Khan announced his agreement to allow the East Pakistan refugees to return on 25 May, only an insignificant number of refugees have done so, and, according to Indian and other sources, the total number of the refugees in India has steadily increased.

184. The crux of the matter is that international and government efforts in East Pakistan are increasingly hampered by the lack of substantial progress towards a political reconciliation and the consequent effect on law, order and public administration (of) the region. There is a danger that serious food shortages, and even famine, could soon add to the sufferings of the population unless conditions can be improved to the point where a large scale relief programme can be effective. Equally serious is the undoubted fact that reconciliation, an improved political atmosphere and the success of relief efforts are indispensable prerequisites for the return of any of the refugees now in India. The situation is one in which political, economic and social factors have produced a series of vicious circles which largely frustrate the efforts of the authorities concerned and of the international community to deal with the vast humanitarian problems involved.

185. These human tragedies have consequences in a far wider sphere. The violent emotions aroused could have repercussions on the relations of religious and ethnic groups on the subcontinent as whole. The relations between the Governments of India and Pakistan are also a major principles of the territorial integrity of States and self determination has often before in history given rise to fratricidal strife and, in recent year, has provoked highly emotional reactions in the international community. In the present case, there is an additional element of danger for the crisis is unfolding in the context of the long-standing and unresolved difficulties between India and Pakistan – difficulties which gave rise to open warfare only six years ago. Although there can be no question of the deep desire of both Governments for peace, tension between them shows no sign of subsiding. The situation on the borders of East Pakistan is particularly disturbing. Border clashes, clandestine raids and acts of sabotage appear to be becoming more frequent, and this is all the more serious since refugees must cross this disturbed border if repatriation is to become a reality. Nor can any of us in the United Nations afford to forget that a major conflict on the subcontinent could all too easily expand.

186. In tragic circumstances such as these, it is all too easy to make moral judgements. It is far more difficult to face up to the political and human realities of the situation and to help the people find a way out of their difficulties. It is the latter course which, in my view, the United Nations must follow.

187. In the light of the information available to me, I reluctantly came to the conclusion, by mid-July, that the time was past when the international community could continue to stand by, watching the situation deteriorate and hoping that relief programmes, humanitarian efforts and good intentions would be enough to turn tide of human misery and potential disaster. I was deeply concerned about the possible consequences of this situation, not only its humanitarian aspect, but also the potential threat to international peace and security and the bearing it might have on the future of the United Nations as an effective instrument for international co-operation and action. It seemed to me that the tragic situation arising from these events, in which humanitarian, economic and political problems were mixed in such a way as almost to defy distinction, presented a challenge to the United Nations as a whole which must be met.

188. For these reasons I felt it was my duty, as Secretary-General, to bring this problem to the attention of the Security Council. I did so on 20 July by means of a memorandum to President of the Council. In that after outlining the considerations set forth above, I stated that the political aspects of this matter were of such far-reaching importance that the Secretary-General was not in a position to suggest precise courses of action before the members of the Security Council had taken note of the problem. I believed, however, that the United Nations – with its long experience in peace-keeping and with its varied resources for conciliation and persuasion – must and should play a more forthright role in attempting both to mitigate the human tragedy and to avert a further deterioration of the situation. I expressed the view that the Security Council, the world’s highest body for the maintenance of international peace and security, was in a position to consider, with the utmost attention and concern, the situation on the subcontinent and to reach some agreed conclusions as to measures which might be taken. My primary purpose was to provide the basis and opportunity for such discussions to take place and to express my grave concern that all possible means should be explored to resolve this tragic situation.

189. At about the same time as I submitted this memorandum, which is related to a concern for international peace and security, I made a humanitarian proposal, also in the exercise of my responsibilities and within my competence as Secretary-General, aimed at facilitating the process of voluntary repatriation of refugees by establishing on both sides of the border a limited representation of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. As an initial step, I suggested that such representatives should be stationed in two or three areas to be selected by the two Governments, in consultation with him. The Government of Pakistan accepted my suggestion, but the Government of India did not on the grounds that it was not preventing the refugees from returning to East Pakistan.

190. Recently I also took an initiative for the strengthening of the United Nations relief operation in East Pakistan. On the recommendation of my representative in Dacca, I approved a plan to increase considerably the United Nations personnel for this operation, thus greatly improving its effectiveness. This would also put the Organisation in a better position to assure the international community, and donors in particular, that all supplies reach their destination – the people of East Pakistan. It is my hope that with this strengthening of the United Nations operation, more contributions will be obtained for the relief and rehabilitation that are so urgently needed in East Pakistan.

191. In a disaster of such vast proportions, the international community has a clear obligation to help the Government and peoples concerned in every possible way. But, as I have indicated, the basic problem can be solved if a political solution based on reconciliation and the respect of humanitarian principles is achieved.
Letter from Pakistan Foreign Secretary to Pakistan Ambassador in Paris.

Foreign Secretary
Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

My dear Ambassador/High Commissioner

The French Ambassador, who has returned recently after spending a few weeks on leave in France, called today. The purpose of the visit was to tell me that he expected worsening of the French public attitude against Pakistan in the coming weeks. I expressed surprise at this and enquired why this should be so when things were beginning to get better in Pakistan. At the peak of the crisis, I pointed out, the French public opinion had remained objective.

2. The Ambassador replied that it was also difficult for him to understand why it should be so and his feeling was based mainly on what he had heard during his stay in France from different quarters. Probably, it was the accumulated result of the publicity which had been going on and which had tarnished Pakistan's image. He knew, for example, that some members of Parliament would make statements when the session opens in early October. Moreover, people like Mr. Malraux, although not representing any one, had a certain hold on sections of public opinion, and their antipathy towards Pakistan would influence others. The Ambassador was at some pains to emphasise that the attitude of the French Government remained as it was before and pointed out that recently at a press conference President Pompidu had reaffirmed his Government's known position about the situation in Pakistan.

3. I asked the Ambassador what could be done to meet the anticipated adverse trend. He made the following remarks which, in my opinion, are valid and need to be pursued.

1. People at large in France do not understand the details of our case. For instance, when the Indians say that there should be a settlement between the elected representatives of the people in East Pakistan and the Central Government in Islamabad, it falls on willing ears, and people see nothing wrong with it. Great importance is attached in France to matters like representation, elections, self determination etc. It was for this reason that throughout the history of the dispute France has supported Pakistan’s stand on Kashmir. It has to be explained repeatedly by us that those who were elected changed their mandate and instead of autonomy for which trust had been placed in them by the electors, they sought secession. In other words, a group of self-seekers betrayed the trust of the people.

(ii) Further, we should never get tired of informing the French that Pakistan accepted U Thant’s proposal for stationing UN Observers; Pakistan also proposed the Good Offices of the UN Security Council to de-fuse the situation; the President of Pakistan accepted the initiative of the Shah of Iran to meet Mrs. Gandhi at Tehran but India rejected all these moves.

(iii) The formation of the civilian Government in East Pakistan headed by an East Pakistani Governor, and a Cabinet composed entirely of East Pakistanis was an interim measure to hold by–elections for which dates had been set. Thereafter transfer of power will take place to the elected representatives of the people.

4. To the above, I would add the following:

(a) India says that she will not accept UN observers or a Good Offices Committee of the Security Council, but she insists on raising Pakistan’s internal matters in the General Assembly and in other bodies of the UN. There could be no greater example of contradiction.

(b) India does not desire transfer of power to the representatives of the people, and as the internal situation gets better, she is intensifying interference through infiltrators and also massing her armed forces around East Pakistan as well as on the borders of West Pakistan to threaten and browbeat us and to prevent by-elections from taking place. Her objective is that the longer the stalemate continues the greater would be the economic burdens on Pakistan as well as the political complications not only in East Pakistan but also in West Pakistan.

(c) Mr. Brezhnev is expected to pay a visit to Paris soon. It would be very timely if our official views on different aspects of Indian interference and the obstructions they are placing in the way of the return of the displaced persons are once again brought to the attention of the French Government. Emphasis should be made on the mounting threat to breach of peace. In recent days there have been three major incidents of infiltration resulting in heavy casualties to infiltrators. Nearly eight Divisions are encircling East Pakistan. These are distinct from the Divisions available to India facing China. Eight Divisions are massed along the frontiers in West Pakistan. Indian Air Force has activated airfields closer to Pakistan in both wings, inducted sophisticated supersonic aircraft there, and also moved forward Air Force tactical headquarters nearer the scene of operations. Nearly 60 percent of the Indian Navy is deployed near Bombay and the remaining at Vishakapatnam, on the East Coast. All these preparations point only in one direction: Conflict.

5. The President will be addressing President Pompidu separately in the near future in time for the visit of Mrs. Gandhi, but it is also necessary to brief the French Government in time for Mr. Brezhnev’s visit. Since he will be coming to Paris after Mrs. Gandhi’s visit to Moscow, it is possible that the subject of continued threat to peace in the sub-continent may come in discussions in Paris, and we should try, through the French, to gather some indication of the latest Soviet thinking. This would be most useful.

6. Reverting to what the French Ambassador had to say and suggest, kindly redouble the efforts of the Embassy, at all levels of public opinion to present Pakistan’s point of view again and again. Everyone tends to get excited about the sufferings of the displaced persons, but if we can get some Members of parliament and other leaders of public opinion to refer to the numerous constructive steps which Pakistan is taking regarding their return and rehabilitation and in the political field and by contrast, the difficult attitude which India has adopted, it would be most helpful to our cause. It would also be immensely useful if the French could invite Mr. Brezhnev’s attention to these steps taken by Pakistan, and add that Pakistan needs time and uninterrupted peace to resolve the complicated problems facing her.

Yours sincerely

Since the points raised in this letter are of general application to most of our Missions, a copy is being endorsed for similar action in countries of their accreditation. In Socialist and other countries where circumstances do not permit an approach to parliamentarians and other sections of public opinion, action should be taken at the level of Government.

Subject: Secessionist/regional movement and anti-centre feeling in India

Dear Missions/Departments,

In continuation of our Counteraction circular letter No. 44, issued on 30th September, 1971 on the subject mentioned above, your attention is invited to the Reuter story, which appeared on the front page of the Pakistan Times dated October 4, 1971 under the heading 'Sikh case before UN' for suitable exploitation in exposing the suppression/betrayal of the Sikh community of India by the ruling circles of New Delhi. In this connection, also please note the PPI News item entitled ‘Sikh volunteers being treated as criminals’ which was published in the Pakistan Times, Rawalpindi on October 5, 1971. These papers have already been supplied to you by the PID.

IMMEDIATE

From: Aftab Ahmad Khan, SQA; S. K; PFS
Director General
Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Islamabad

No. 14/42/71 – I (V) October 8, 1971
My dear Ambassador,

In advance of Mrs. Indira Gandhi’s visit, it is necessary that the Government of your accreditation should be fully briefed about the critical situation in the subcontinent resulting from India’s persistent intervention in our internal affairs and continuous violations of our borders. In this connection, the main point to emphasize is that whether it be for the creation of a climate conducive to the return of displaced persons or for the normalization of situation on the borders, it is essential that further deterioration in Indo-Pakistan relations should be arrested and that India and Pakistan should work out ways and means to reduce tension. For this purpose, Pakistan has been willing to hold discussions with India at any level. India, on the other hand, had contended that it was not a party to any dispute and that its concern was limited to the return of displaced persons.

2. We are confident that no one will be misled by the Indian argument. India’s insistence on a political solution of the East Pakistan problem in a particular manner prior to its agreement to allow the displaced persons to return, is a clear proof of its determination to dictate us about our own affairs. Further, its support to those who have disintegration of Pakistan as their objective, puts the responsibility for the creation of present tension squarely on India’s shoulders.

3. All the countries which are friendly to India and Pakistan and which are interested in the maintenance of peace in the sub-continent should, therefore, urge upon India the need for entering into negotiation with Pakistan for reducing tension and defusing the present critical situation.

4. Furthermore, the nature of Indo-Pakistan relations is such that controversies are bound to arise between the two countries about the procedures for the return of displaced persons as well as on the ways and means for reducing tension. It is, therefore, necessary that as proposed by U. Thant, the U.N. Observers should be posted on the both sides of the border. In addition, a good offices mission of the U.N. Security Council as requested by Pakistan should also visit the areas of tension. These are specific and constructive proposals which in our view should prove effective and helpful in the present situation.

5. The Government of your accreditation should be requested to use its good offices with India for accepting the above mentioned proposals. In case they have any alternative suggestion to offer, Pakistan will be glad to give it serious thought.

Yours sincerely

Sd./- Aftab Ahmad Khan
Islamabad, October 12, 1971.

My dear countrymen,

I am addressing you today in a matter of grave concern to all of us. As you are aware, hostile forces which opposed the establishment of Pakistan have never accepted its existence and have been constantly on the look out to weaken us and to ultimately destroy the country. In spite of your sincere endeavours towards amity and friendship over the past 24 years, I regret to say that India has never missed any opportunity to bring harm to Pakistan. Her hostile designs towards us have been evident from a number of actions that she has taken and continues to take against us. The forcible occupation of Kashmir, attack on Pakistan in 1965, the construction of the Farakka barrage, despite our persistent efforts to point out the terrible miseries that it would cause to the people of East Pakistan, are some of the major examples of India’s efforts to weaken us and to harm us in every possible way. There are innumerable instances of their ill-will towards Pakistan.

India’s latest efforts to disintegrate Pakistan are well-known to every one of you. She has tried to cut away East Pakistan from the rest of the country in collusion with certain secessionists in that wing by assisting the miscreants with arms, ammunition, funds and sending infiltrators to cause damage to life and property of patriotic East Pakistanis. She has shelled and continues to shell a number of areas in that wing with artillery and mortars. The world is gradually coming to know that all major sabotage activities like the blowing of bridges, disruption of communications in East Pakistan are being conducted by Indian infiltrators in the name of the secessionist. Frogmen— saboteurs trained and sent by India attempted to damage food ships in and around the ports in East Pakistan. Of course they have been dealt with by our armed forces but by such acts India’s aim cannot be anything else but to create famine conditions and starve the people in East Pakistan. So much for their claims of sympathy for the people of our Eastern Wing.

In addition to these hostile activities, India has moved forwards armed formations of all types including infantry, armour, artillery all along our borders of East Pakistan. Similarly, Indian Air Force units have been located in positions from where they can secure a direct hit to that wing. In Western zone also, a large number of units and formations have been moved out of their peace stations and brought forwards towards our borders.

It is obvious from these moves and posture adopted by her armed forces that there is a serious possibility of aggression by India against Pakistan. These feverish military preparations can lead to but one conclusion and that is she can launch a war of aggression against Pakistan at short notice.

While there is no reason for undue alarm, I have described to you the hostile moves of India as the nation must know and realize the dangerous situation the country is facing today. However, let me assure you that the Government and the armed forces are fully alive to the situation and are aware of the imminent danger of aggression by India in both wings. Your valiant armed forces are fully prepared to defend and protect every inch of the sacred soil of Pakistan. With complete faith in the righteousness of their cause and the trust and help of Allah, our armed forces will successfully meet the challenge of aggression as they have done in the past.

But let me remind you that in the event of war or equally grave emergencies, it is not enough that only the Government and the armed force should be ready to meet the challenge. Each one of you has a responsibility and duty to perform. In the present critical situation, every one must work hard with the spirit of a true Mujahid in his own particular sphere.

With the aggressive forces on our door step, we must sink all our differences, throw parochial and provincial prejudices, eliminate suspicion and mistrust. I have no doubt that people will rise to the occasion and join hands with their armed forces to meet the challenge to her security, integrity with patriotism and courage. Indian leaders by their bellicose statements have left no doubt in anybody’s mind about their intention. They have been openly talking about the unilateral aggression against Pakistan and some of them have deliberately sought to whip up war frenzy. A number of important Indian leaders have been visiting foreign capitals to vilify and malign Pakistan and to solicit support for the cause of the secessionists who have crossed over to India. The world, however, can see through the Indian game. It cannot be hoodwinked by her propaganda. All peace loving countries of the world have understood with sympathy the problem we are facing and striving to resolve.

A number of friendly countries have given us assistance directly and through the UN for the relief and rehabilitation of displaced persons and for the reconstruction of East Pakistan’s economy. I would like to express my grateful thanks to them.

We have been gratified by the reassuring attitude of a very large number of countries who have fully supported the stand that events in East Pakistan are our internal matter and that no one has any right to tell us how to conduct our affairs.

Recently I sent envoys to call on the leaders of some African and Latin American countries who have supported us in upholding our action in suppressing the internal rebellion and disorder. Messages of solidarity with our cause have been received from friends in the Muslim world, a number of Asian and African countries. We deeply appreciate the friendship and support of the Government of the People's Republic of China in our just stand. The understanding shown by the US Government in the present situation is an important contribution for the principle that every nation has a right to find a solution to its own problems.

I have noted with interest the keen desire of Premier Kosygin expressed during a recent speech at Moscow that for the maintenance of peace in the sub-continent the Soviet Union will do everything possible in the event of breach of peace. I welcome this and sincerely hope that the Soviet Union would use its influence to persuade India to refrain from indulging in acts which would lead to an armed conflict. I however, regret that Premier Kosygin made no mention of the various positive steps taken by me to transfer power to the elected representatives of the people as well as to facilitate the return and rehabilitation of displaced persons. Many proposals by the United Nations like posting of UN Observers to facilitate the return of displaced persons and diffusing the explosive situation on the borders have been welcomed by us but spurned by the Indians. This is not the way towards peace.

As a result of the amnesty granted by the Government and as a result of the arrangements made for their rehabilitation, about two hundred thousand displaced persons have come back to Pakistan. but India is still holding back a large proportion, although their number is grossly exaggerated by Indians. In this regard we would welcome international agencies to assess the correct number of displaced persons. This proposal has also been turned down by the Indians.

The obvious conclusion one can draw from this is that she has bloated the figures of the displaced persons for one purpose alone. And that is to extract maximum external aid under false pretences. She is forcibly keeping displaced persons in a pitiless state in stinking slums and does not allow them to return home.

We would be grateful for all friendly countries if they would influence India to resolve the issue of displaced persons as a human problem instead of making political and financial capital out of this. Let them return to their homes. The international community should also impress upon India the need to desist from interfering in our internal affairs and to withdraw her forces from her borders. This is the only solution for reducing tension in this area. The alternative is this will lead to a disastrous war which will lead to colossal damage to life and property in both the countries.

It is our sincere belief whether it be for the creation of a climate conducive to the return of displaced persons or for the normalization of the situation, it is essential that India and Pakistan should work out ways and means to reduce tension and allow normalcy to return at the very earliest.
Having this in mind we have accepted in the past and will always be prepared to consider any positive initiative from any quarter which would help to realize this objective. Here I would like to address a word to my countrymen who are living abroad and who are misled by the horrifying tales borne by the imagination of Indian propagandists and their foreign protagonists. I am glad that facts are now becoming known to them. I wish it is possible for them to come home to see for themselves and to discover how the Indian propagandists have distorted the truth.

I have repeatedly said and I say it again that we are a peace loving country. We want to live in peace with all the nations of the world, particularly our neighbours. We have no desire to interfere in the affairs of other people. Nor shall we allow other to interfere in ours. Undisturbed and lasting peace is essential for the prosperity and well being of our people. We have throughout done our utmost to avoid conflict and exercised every restraint in the interest of peace. However, unilateral efforts by us only in such a situation are not enough. There has to be response and reciprocity from India. We know and I hope that our neighbours also realize that armed conflicts do not solve any problem. In fact, more problems are created. Though the problems hamper peace and progress, we believe firmly that all outstanding issues between our two countries including those of Kashmir, and the Farakka Barrage should be settled peacefully in a just and equitable manner. While we desire peace, we are fully prepared to defend and protect our territorial integrity and sovereignty. Let there be no misunderstanding or miscalculation on this account.

I would now like to apprise you of the details of my plan for the transfer of power which I announced on the 28th of June this year and which was followed by a statement by me on the 18th of September this year. I might mention here that the plan was fully discussed with the political leaders and they were informed in clear terms of what I was going to announce. As you are aware, I have already taken certain steps towards the fulfillment of my plan. Arrangements have been made by the Chief Election Commissioner to hold bye-elections to fill the vacancies in the National Assembly as well as the Provincial assembly in East Pakistan. The Constitution will be published by the 20th of December this year. The National Assembly will be summoned on the 27th of December this year. You are also aware that the National Assembly will have every opportunity of suggesting amendments in the Constitution and a special procedure for facilitating this work has been evolved for the initial period of ninety days. This procedure would be that the Assembly may propose an amendment to the Constitution by a simple majority of the total number of seats of the Assembly and consensus of provinces, that is to say, a minimum of twenty five percent of total seats of each province. For purposes of arriving at these figures, a fraction will be taken as a whole. I might add that this period of ninety days include the time taken for consideration or reconsideration of the proposed amendments by me.
I thus visualize that the proposed amendments will continue to be submitted to me throughout this period from its commencement. The last amendment, however, may be submitted to me by the House not later than eighty days from the commencement of the three month period in order to give me at least ten days for such consideration or reconsideration. The completion of the whole process will not exceed the total period of ninety days. The polls for the National Assembly will be completed on the 23rd of December. The National Assembly will be summoned to meet on the 27th of December under the chairmanship of the oldest member of the House who will be nominated by me. This will be followed by oath taking by the members and the election of the Speaker and the Deputy Speaker.

4. Now, in order to accelerate the process of transfer of power, the Central Government will be formed soon after the inaugural session of the National Assembly. The ninety day period for submission and consideration of amendments will commence after the Central Government has been formed. The Provincial Assemblies in West Pakistan can be summoned at short notice after completing the bye-election for women's seat, and a few other bye-elections.

5. As regards East Pakistan, the election schedule for bye-elections for the Provincial Assembly has already been announced by the Chief Election Commissioner, that is to say, bye-elections for 105 seats are being held along with the 78 Seats of the National Assembly from the 12th of December to the 23rd of December.

The polls for the balance of 88 seats of the Provincial Assembly will be held from the 18th December to 7th January. The way for the functioning of the provincial assemblies in the provinces will thus have been cleared and stage for the formation of governments in these provinces would have been set.

I have explained my plan for the transfer of power in detail now. As I have said earlier, this plan was made fully known to the political leaders and now I have explained it to the nation. There should be no longer any cause of speculation. While I would expect all political parties to sincerely devote their attention towards the fulfillment of this plan, I would appeal to the leaders of the nation not to forget the grave danger of external and internal threats to the solidarity and integrity of the country. The stakes are so high, the dangers so grave, that on no account should we be diverted from our main objective, the defence of this country, and the achievement of a democratic way of life. Any action or statement by anyone of you in this country, which would divert the nation from these main aims cannot obviously be patriotic. I would like to appeal to my nation, particularly to the national press and the political leaders, to desist from causing or giving air to speculation and rumours which if not curbed, can only seriously hamper the process that I have spelt out earlier to you. It would only gladden the hearts of enemy. Let the nation turn up as one man and march ahead towards the achievement of our goal. Let us show to the world what stuff we Pakistanis are made of. I have no doubt in my mind that the people of Pakistan whose love of the Holy Prophet, whose great strength is that of their Iman (religion), who rely on the help of Allah, will rise to the occasion and meet any challenge from any direction.

In the end, I would again like to impress upon you that there is no cause for undue alarm but there is certainly no room for complacency. The situation must be faced in a calm, cool manner. We must remain vigilant, make full preparations to meet any threat to our integrity and sovereignty. Let us sink all our differences and we must once again prove to those who have designs against us that we are a united nation firmly resolved to frustrate their plans. No power on Earth can cow down a nation of 120 million Mujahids of Islam determined to guard their independence and fulfil their destiny. Let us demonstrate it once again that every single citizen of Pakistan is capable of making the supreme sacrifice for the just and noble cause, defence of this land. May Allah help us and grant us success in protecting Pakistan, restoring democracy, raising the standard of living of our people. God be with you and bless you all. PAKISTAN PAINDABAD.

Islamabad, October 20, 1971.

Excellency,

I have today received your message of October 20, 1971, through my Ambassador.

I fully agree with your appreciation of the gravity of situation which is worsening rapidly on Indo-Pakistan borders. I also fully share your concern for preservation of peace and prevention of a disastrous situation developing for both the countries which could only result in suffering for millions of people. Already as a result of shelling of border villages on our side hundreds of men, women and children have been killed and wounded and large numbers rendered homeless.)
It is a pity that a press conference in New Delhi on October 19, 1971, the Indian prime Minister has summarily rejected the proposal for withdrawal of forces of both countries from borders. The reason advanced for this is that Pakistan's lines of communications to borders are shorter than those of India. I do not wish to enter into a controversy on this point and would suggest that withdrawals of man power along with armour and artillery may take place all along the Indo-Pakistan International frontiers both in East and West, if not to peace time stations, then at least to a mutually agreed safe distance on either side of the border to provide a sense of security on both sides. At the same time armed infiltration and shelling into our borders in East Pakistan should cease.

I further recommend that UN Observers on both sides of borders should oversee the withdrawal and supervise the maintenance of peace. Only the recognized border security and police forces should then remain at border posts which they have traditionally occupied.

I also welcome the offer you have made for making your good offices available and very much hope that you can pay an immediate visit to India and Pakistan to discuss the ways and means of withdrawal of forces. This I am sure will have a salutary desirable effect and further the cause of peace.

In view of the urgency and gravity of the situation confirmed by Indian leader on October 19 last, threatening to occupy and hold border cities of Lahore and Sialkot a public declaration by you of your intention to visit India and Pakistan to seek a settlement of differences would be most desirable.

In conclusion I assure you of full co-operation on the part of my country in all your efforts directed towards the preservation of peace.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration,

Agha Mohammad Yahya Khan,
President of Pakistan.

There is some evidence to indicate CHOU EN-LAI and KISSINGER discussed situation in Indian sub-continent.

2. Director East European Affairs in Chinese Foreign Ministry told an East European Ambassador on 27th October.

There are many rumours that a war between India and Pakistan is imminent but situation is not so serious; China hoped (later he said ‘believed’) U.S. will not encourage two countries to embark on a war; Soviet Union is also not interested in a war on sub-continent; China certainly does not want a war between India and Pakistan; China hoped India will not embark on one.

3. Significantly Chinese official did not say anything about what Pakistan might do and thus implied perhaps that China has advised Pakistan against a war. By saying China ‘believed’ U.S. is not encouraging either country. Chinese official clearly hinted at an understanding between China and USA.

4. Also on 27th October Ceylonese Ambassador met Vice Foreign Minister HAN VIEN LUNG. When I asked Ambassador if Indo Pakistan tension was discussed he replied in negative but added his impression was that ‘China was indifferent!’ He also said China’s support to Pakistan has been over rated.

Talks between US Secretary of State Rogers, Prime Minister Mrs. Gandhi and External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in New York – end October, 1971. (exact date not given)

Rogers. President thought it would be useful to continue discussions regarding other problems and I would be grateful you could tell us anything you wish regarding Pakistan and bring us up to date.

P.M. The real situation is that the security of India is threatened not only by Pak armed forces at our border, but by the situation in East Bengal and not only by the influx of refugees. I am worried by security aspect but that cannot destroy us. We can bear anything; it may ruin us but not finish us. Certain threats to our security and stability can be seen. Any piece by piece solution will not help. Pakistan is attempting to convert their difficulties in East Bengal into an Indo-Pak dispute, which it is not. They are doing this only to divert public opinion. They think that by accelerating tension they can threaten our security.

Rogers. What do you mean by that?

P.M. For example Jaiparakash Narain feels that we should take firm action, that we should have gone to war right at the beginning. I did not think that was right because I know what a war means. We are being pushed step by step to exasperation. My colleagues thought that I should not come on this trip, but I came because I thought that would ease the situation.

Rogers. Quite right.

P.M. In the beginning we did not retaliate, but we were intimated. I visited the border areas. When I visited J&K, Pak planes flew over. Now these planes have again begun to fly over our territory. We cannot bear this at the cost of security. Although I have a big majority in Parliament, my party and other parties’ opposition is very strong. Unless we can prove that the threat to India has receded, I cannot do anything.

Rogers. Difficulty is involved in the risk of war. We faced the same situation in North Korea when our planes were attacked.

Your judgment is sound. As President said it would be a tremendous tragedy if war broke out. The situation has been created by others and not by you. We will do all we can. We are already taking some steps. Arms shipments are exaggerated, thought we realize its psychological effect. It will now stop. Since 1965 we only permitted spare parts. ‘We had one short delivery’.

F.S. Can it be said then that there will be no further shipment?

Sisco. Yes, except what is in the docks. We gave only 4.5 million dollars worth of arms so far.

L.K. (ambassador): Can this be made public now?

Rogers. Soon after we had talked to Congress leaders. We accept that India and Pakistan should not be equated. We did suggest mutual withdrawal at first, but now we suggested to Yahya Khan unilateral withdrawal.

We agree it is basically a political problem and not just a military problem. We have talked to Yahya Khan and Awami League. Yahya Khan has agreed to meet with approved Awami League leaders and Bangla Desh leaders, now in India, or someone designated by Mujibur Rahman.

If we can secure withdrawal of troops from borders, talks can start at the same time. We cannot ask Yahya Khan to release Mujibur Rahman. But if talks start it would be some progress.

L.K. Military people are completely out of touch with public feeling, as for instance Yahya Khan’s statement that Mujib would be killed if he went back to East Bengal. Pakistan military authorities have little local support even in Dacca.

Rogers. We would prefer – we do not want to press this point – that you will also withdraw if Yahya Khan does so unilaterally.

P.M. He may withdraw from West Pakistan border, but what happens in East Bengal? The main danger is from there.

Rogers. In the west also there is shooting?

P.M. No. it is mainly in the East. There is no shelling in the West.

F.S. In the East Pakistan army is right on our borders as the East Bengal Rifles and Police have defected.

Haksar. Explained the ground rules regarding Border Security Force and said: ‘It is a long open border, 650 miles. Though in West Pakistan they say they want military lines for training purposes, our contact told our Generals that this was nonsense and we had, therefore, to ensure security of our borders.

Rogers. Would not a unilateral withdrawal be useful?

Sisco. We will not discuss details with you, in the West or the East. We understand your fears in East Pakistan.
Haksar. Withdrawal can be misleading. We have had memories of Kutch and Rajasthan. In what way can it be more harmful if Yahya Khan negotiated with Awami League.

Rogers. We can only act as a catalyst. Yahya Khan is desperately looking for a political solution.

P.M. He is looking for a political solution that by passes elected leaders. In our view that is no political solution. He was continuously shouting for war – a religious war – His tone was even worse than his words in his Radio broadcast. He thought he would frighten us. He said China; USA, USSR and others were on his side and India was alone. This is what drew the wrath of my people on you.

Rogers. This is where we differ. We do not think he wants war nor do you. He wants a political solution though his ideas are different.

P.M. The important point is not my or his assessment but what lies in the future. He thought he could solve it militarily. We said No. Now we say that the men whom he is presenting will not succeed and he will – jeopardize both East and West Pakistan.

Sisco. Short of outright independence Yahya Khan is prepared to consider anything.

Rogers. We are not trying to raise questions of prestige. We recognize that ultimately Mujibur Rahman and Awami League have to come in, but we want to start the process by talks with Bangla Desh leaders or a nominee of Mujibur Rahman.

We have made progress in establishing U.N. presence in Dacca. We are not going to give any more weapons. We do not want to equate India and Pakistan. We are playing a role and we hope you understand. We have tremendous respect for India.

Haksar. The practical difficulty is that we cannot say Yahya Khan wants a political settlement. Hitherto all his actions are not consistent with a political settlement. He wanted to finish this job in a week’s time. When he failed he blamed India and called Mujibur Rahman a traitor. Then he formed Peace Councils and Razakars with non-Bengali Muslims. But it did not work. Then he removed Tikka Khan but that did not improve matters. Governor Malik is nobody. How can we say without any new elements that he is for a political settlement. We cannot tell our people that Yahya Khan will not talk to Mujibur Rahman who did not declare for independence while his Awami League did. The British talked to Gandhi and Nehru, Jaykar and Sapru, but Yahya Khan is not willing to talk with Mujibur Rahman. What evidence is there that Yahya Khan has changed his mind? But Sisco is correct that there is a link between withdrawal and political settlement.

Rogers. What is your conclusion? We are doing all we can. We cannot do more.

Haksar. I am not scoring a point. We have a common diagnosis and should seek common remedy. We have 9 million refugees and an increasing influx. Where is the light at the end of this tunnel. I asked Kissinger. This is our common concern.

Rogers. No one sees the light at the end of the tunnel. In Korea or in Vietnam. We by and large, agree with you. We all agree and so does Yahya Khan that there has to be a political solution. If we start, may be some light at the end of the tunnel appear. War could be tragic for India and the world. We agree with 90% of what you say, but we cannot force Yahya Khan to deal with Mujibur Rahman whom he regards as a traitor.

Haksar. So he regards all the Bangla desh leaders. Churchill said worse things about Gandhi.

L.K. Neither of us is saying you should have done more and are not doing enough. Yesterday’s briefing showed mature restraint on both sides.

Haksar. Your Ambassador in Pakistan made a valiant effort for Pakistan.

Sisco. I agree with you regarding Yahya Khan’s published statement. Which does not show that he wants a political settlement.

Rogers. This is one of the few times we have not talked about the Middle East. Your Ambassador is doing an excellent job as your other colleagues. We understand fully your political problem at home. We also doing everything we can. P.M. was complimentary to our President yesterday regarding South East Asia. Our relations are much better.

Washington (DC), November 4, 1971.

The White House
Memorandum of Conversation

Subject: Meeting Between President Nixon, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, Mr. Parmeshwar Narain Haksar and Dr. Henry A. Kissinger

Time & Place 10:30 a.m., November 4, 1971 in the Oval Office

Following press photographs, the President welcomed the Prime Minister and expressed his pleasure at the opportunity that this meeting provided for an exchange of views on a range of subjects of mutual interest to old friends. The president suggested that the first session might be used to discuss the situation in South Asia and that the second session on Friday might be reserved for discussion of broader issues, to include the People’s Republic of China, the Soviet Union and the situation in Southeast Asia.

The Prime Minister agreed to this formula and expressed India’s admiration for President Nixon’s skill in handling both the Vietnam situation and his initiative in seeking the normalization of relationships with the People’s Republic of China, the Soviet Union and the situation in Southeast Asia. It appeared from the Indian perspective that each move of the United States had been carefully thought out and well designed. Each move was accomplished in an imaginative and effective way, with a style which kept the main objective in view and which did not permit diversionary distractions to derail progress. The President thanked the Prime Minister for her expression of support and noted that the attitude of the Prime Minister’s government had been most helpful in the process. He noted that the U.S. had expected a great deal of criticism domestically from more conservative elements who are opposed to the normalization of relationships with the People’s Republic of China. On the other hand, he was convinced that the steps had to be taken in the interest of stability in Asia. The President stated that stability could best be served when parties are able to communicate and this has been his initial objective. Dr. Kissinger added that he agreed it was important that the People’s Republic of China no longer remain isolated.

The President continued that the essential objective is to eliminate the frustrations that China’s isolation can cause and thereby achieve increased moderation. The very act of communication between parties has a beneficial effect in relieving tensions. India’s understanding of this process and support for it have proven very helpful. The U.S. has always had great respect and admiration for the Indian people and there is a deep-seated friendship for India among the American people. Americans want India to succeed.

With respect to the recent Senate action on the foreign aid, the President emphasized that he was fighting to have it restored and was equally confident that his efforts would succeed. On the other hand, there are strong sentiments in the U.S. which no longer favour and extensive foreign assistance expenditure.

The President then asked Mrs. Gandhi to present her views in detail on the situation in South Asia. In initiating this discussion, the President emphasized.

1. The U. S. has no illusions with respect to the realities of the situation
2. The initiation of hostilities between India and Pakistan would be unacceptable from every perspective.
3. For this reason, U.S. policy toward Pakistan has been shaped by the imperative to retain influence with the Government of Pakistan.
4. In this regard our military assistance program has been retained in a most limited fashion to enable us to continue a dialogue with that government. The U.S. has and will continue to discourage military actions by the Government of Pakistan.
5. The situation demands the continuation of U.S. aid to relieve the plight of the nine to ten million refugees on both sides of the border. This is an enormous task which requires the concentrated efforts of all the parties.

The President then outlined the measures which the U.S. has taken to relieve the plight of refugees in India and in Pakistan. He listed specifically the following:

1. In June and July the U.S. Government persuaded Pakistan that a famine was likely in East Pakistan if massive forestalling efforts were not undertaken. We have just received a report from Mr. Williams in Dacca that widespread famine has probably been averted as a result of major U.S. Pakistani and UN efforts. Such a famine could have further exacerbated the problem of the flow of Moslem refugees and created a tremendous new burden on India.
2. Despite initial opposition by President Yahya in April, following pressure from the U.S. Government he agreed to an international relief presence in East Pakistan.
3. At U.S. urging the Pakistani government accepted a civilian governor in East Pakistan.
4. U. S. pressure on Pakistan resulted in President Yahya's public proclamation of amnesty and specific public reference by him to returnees of all creeds, Hindus as well as Moslems.

5. U. S. representations brought assurance from President Yahya's that Mujib would not be executed.

6. U.S. representations also resulted in President Yahya's agreement to pull some military unite back from Pakistan's western border with India as a first step toward de-escalation.

7. President Yahya informed our Ambassador Tuesday, November 2, that he is prepared: to hold direct discussions with cleared Awami League leaders, to meet with a Bangla Desh leader from India and to consider our suggestion that Mujib be allowed to designate the representative.

The President stated that the Australian Ambassador shares India's concern and is most sympathetic with the difficulties that the situation in East Pakistan have brought the people of India. On the other hand, the U.S. could not urge policies which would be tantamount to overthrowing President Yahya. It is recognized that Mujib is a core factor in the situation and that unquestionably in the long run Pakistan must acquiesce in the direction of greater autonomy for East Pakistan, but the situation is extremely fragile and Yahya's flexibility is very limited in the short run. Unquestionably Mujib's fate is an essential aspect of the problem and ultimately he will have to play a role in East Pakistan's future. However, he depends largely on the way events proceed in the shorter term. The greatest danger of all would result if either side were to consider that military action could provide a solution that only an historical process can settle. Should India resort to force of arms, the current balance suggested that it would succeed in a military sense but in a political sense there could be no winner.

The President continued by observing that the consequences of military action were incalculably dangerous. In this regard, India's recent agreement with the Soviet Union was understood by this government but India must recognize that it is not popular in the U.S. It must, therefore, have an impact on the general attitude of the U.S. Government. Should the situation deteriorate to armed conflict, there is doubt that the conflict could be limited to just India and Pakistan. It would have implications and possibly great dangers for the whole framework of world peace. The American people would not understand if India were to initiate military action against Pakistan. While the U.S. could not expect India to determine its own policies based solely on U.S. attitudes, these attitudes should be taken into consideration.

The President then asked the Prime Minister if she believed that President Yahya could really survive if Mujib were released at this point in time. The President noted that the U.S. Government understood the political realities of the situation in East Pakistan. On the other hand, practical considerations and limitations on the courses of action open to all parties could not be overlooked. Nevertheless, many have attributed a lack of progress and the continuing deterioration of the plight of the refugees as somehow resulting from U.S. policies. For this reason, the President remained deeply concerned and had concentrated more time on this particular problem than on any other subject. Criticism, no matter how well meaning, tended to further limit the U.S. Government’s ability to be helpful.

Prime Minister Gandhi stated that India was not being driven by anti-Pakistan motives. India had never wished the destruction of Pakistan or its permanent crippling. Above all, India sought the restoration of stability in the area and wanted to eliminate chaos at all costs. The Prime Minister recalled the genesis of the partitioning of the subcontinent and noted that the solution, largely dictated from abroad, had left the peoples of the area restive and dissatisfied. President Nixon agreed that the partitioning of the subcontinent had contributed to a permanent instability and noted that India had a larger Moslem population than Pakistan.

Prime Minister Gandhi observed that many harbor the feeling that her father had let the country down by accepting the partitioning along the lines ultimately reached. Nevertheless, once the decision had been taken it had been accepted. But the partitioning generated a persistent “hate India” campaign which resulted in the conflicts of 1947 and 1965. Since that time, U.S. arms shipments to Pakistan had become a major point of concern to the Indian people. The provision of armaments to Pakistan could not help but affect the attitude of the Indian Government even though its leadership attempted to restrain outraged public opinion. To the degree that these shipments continued, the Prime Minister was subject to attack even from her own party.

Following India’s independence, it was the leaders of the independence movement who formed India’s government. On the other hand, in Pakistan it was the loyalist or pro-British factions which formed Pakistan’s government. Pakistan proceeded to imprison or exile leaders of the independence movement. Baluchistan, as well as the provinces along the northwest frontier, has a strong desire for greater autonomy. There has been, therefore, a long history of separatist policies in Pakistan which heretofore has not necessarily been supported in India. Yahya was mistaken in trying to suppress Mujib.

India, on the other hand, has always reflected a degree of forbearance toward its own separatist elements. The pattern has been clear. West Pakistan has dealt with the Bengali people in a treacherous and deceitful way and has always relegated them to an inferior role. As the situation worsened, India attempted to ameliorate it by maintaining communication with all the parties.
The Prime Minister then turned to the great numbers of refugees who continue to stream across the border from East Pakistan. She noted that there were many estimates of what the totals might be and that precise calculations had to be inconclusive due to the confusion and the possibility of miscalculation.

President Nixon stated that this tragic situation demanded prompt and extensive humanitarian assistance and that for this reason he would continue to pressure the U.S. Congress to provide this assistance.

The Prime Minister noted that India had been accused of supporting guerrilla activity but that the situation was not that clear. She drew a parallel to the problems the U.S. Government had when Cuban refugees based in Florida launched forays against the Cuban mainland.

The Prime Minister then cited the additional problems which had resulted from the severe cyclone. She noted that the situation was aggravated by the differences in religion and background between the refugees and the local population in India on which they were superimposed. This situation demanded the utmost efforts on the part of the Indian Government to prevent communal riots and bloodshed.

President Nixon stated that U.S. policies were predicated upon the need to have the refugees return to their homes. The Prime Minister emphasized the great dilemma facing India. She noted that India does not object to observers but has difficulty in understanding what role they would play. She stated that, contrary to current criticism, foreign observers were free to go where they pleased.

President Nixon expressed sympathy with India’s dilemma and noted that the U.S. and other nations as well, were greatly concerned with the problems posed by the flood of refugees from East Pakistan. He noted, however, that many of the tactics which were being employed by the Bangla Desh were increasing the dilemma. For example, it was difficult to understand their motives in harassing and destroying the flow of humanitarian supplies being carried in ships to Chittagong harbour. Also it would seem that guerrilla activity of this type must involve sophisticated training and equipment.

The Prime Minister then described in detail the atrocities which were occurring in East Pakistan. She noted that despite oppressive measures, the Pakistani military had been unable to establish control in the area. There were, of course, continuing accusations that India had instigated the guerrilla movement and continued to support it. However, the realities were that it was no longer realistic to expect East and West Pakistan to remain together. The pressures for autonomy are overwhelming.
The President agreed that accusations and counter-accusations on both sides made progress most difficult. It also complicated the U.S. Government’s efforts to be helpful. There was no doubt that Pakistan must ultimately do more to relieve the situation.

The Prime Minister stated that President Yahya continued to speak of a Holy War. It may well be that the presence of Indian forces along Pakistan’s frontier had deterred the initiation of military action by Pakistan thus far. This tense situation had influenced India toward making its treaty with the Soviet Union as a means of creating an additional deterrent. Stability in India was an important objective to the Soviet Union and, therefore, the Soviet Union had been pressing for a political solution. Many in India have been opposed to the Soviet treaty and the majority of the Parliament was concerned about this.

President Nixon asked the Prime Minister for her views on how a solution could be achieved. The Prime Minister stated that India’s major concern was the impact of the situation on India itself.

President Nixon stated that U.S. efforts with respect to Pakistan were designed to alleviate the situation along constructive lines. The U.S. Government had always admired the people of India and shared its concerns. This had been clearly demonstrated. The restrictions we had placed on military assistance to East Pakistan had been undertaken with our relationships with India clearly in mind.

The Prime Minister replied that the crucial issue remained the future of Mujib who was a symbol of the imperative for autonomy.

The President reassured the Prime Minister that the U.S. Government had thus far placed great pressure on Pakistan. It had urged President Yahya to move his forces back from the border with India unilaterally as a de-escalatory step. While the U.S. Government understood that India must make its own judgment in this regard, based on its national interests, some disengagement would serve the interests of lessening tensions.

Mr. Haksar noted the difficulties for India posed by the displacement of Indian forces.

The President expressed his understanding for India’s problem in undertaking the displacement of forces, but he noted that President Yahya had indicated a willingness to undertake some pullback. If India now believed that such a step would not contribute to the lessening of tensions, it would be necessary for the U.S. to reconsider its efforts to effect such a pullback by Pakistani forces. Up to now, the U.S. had been urging President Yahya to take the first step and President Yahya had expressed a willingness to do so on a unilateral basis. It had been the U.S. Government’s view that if Yahya would undertake such a step we could then anticipate similar moves on the part of India. Obviously, however, India would have to make its own decision.

President Nixon assured the Prime Minister that the U.S. Government would continue to pursue all avenues to improve the situation. The U.S. Government would:

— continue to assist with humanitarian relief efforts, both through multilateral organizations and bilateral programs.
— continue to urge restraint on the Pakistan Government.
— explore with all parties measures to facilitate a political solution.

However, the President stated, nothing could be served by the disintegration of Pakistan. The initiation of hostilities by India would be almost impossible to understand. In some respects, the situation was similar to that in the Middle East, where the U.S. Government had told the Israeli Government that it could not support the initiation of hostilities by that government, despite our long established ties of friendship and respect. It would be impossible to calculate with precision the steps which other great powers might take if India were to initiate hostilities.

As the meeting concluded, President Nixon expressed the U.S. Government’s continuing sympathy and support for the Government of India at this most difficult and trying time.

SECRET

Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Embassy in West Germany Conveying the message from Peking.

New Delhi, November 8, 1971.

TELEGRAM

From: Foreign, New Delhi
To: Indembassy, Bonn

Following is retransmission of Indembassy, Peking, telegram dated November 08*.

Begins. No.162.

(First of Two Parts)

Secretary (East) from Mishra.

Bhutto’s visit to Peking from 5th to 8th November.

No joint communique issued. Only guidelines to nature of talks and their results are speeches by CHI PENG-PEI and BHUTTO at Chinese banquet given 48 hours after arrival of delegation. A comparison of two speeches (as also taking into account Chinese pronouncements in April this year) reveals that:

a. China’s support to Pakistan for the purpose of deterring India from deliberate military measures is reiterated. Words used are almost exactly same as in CHOU’s message of 10th April to YAHYA. However the phrase ‘should Indian expansionists dare to launch aggression against Pakistan” “has been changed to read “should Pakistan be subjected to foreign aggression”.

b. China is “greatly concerned over the present tension in the sub-continent”. China holds that disputes between states should be settled through “consultations and not by resorting to force” and welcomed YAHYA’s proposal for withdrawal of armed forces from the borders and disengagement as “reasonable” since it is “helpful to easing tension in the sub-continent.” By using these words and phrases China indicate she does not want a war in Indian Sub-Continent.

c. Regarding situation in East Bengal there is some deviation in Chinese position. While CHI mentioned “domestic secessionists” he goes on to advocate “a reasonable settlement” in East Bengal. This is a guarded reference to the need for a political settlement. At another point he expresses hope “the Pakistan people will strengthen their unity and make joint efforts to overcome difficulties and solve their own problem”. This is a public hint to Pakistan to associate people of East Bengal in solving the problem. Thus China while continuing to support Pakistan’s “national unity and unification” joins the ranks of those who have advised YAHYA to seek a political settlement in East Bengal.

* Prime Minister was in Bonn at that time.

d. CHI castigates India for having “crudely interfered in Pakistan’s internal affairs carried out subversive activities and military threats against Pakistan by continuing to exploit the East Pakistan question”, but he makes no (Second and Last Part) mention of refugees who have fled to India.

e. There is no Chinese reference to Kashmir or 1965 war in speeches or usual slogans. BHUTTO referred to both in his speech but Hsinhua has deleted them in its report. This is very significant and may be designed to remove one point of discord between India and China. Omissions of reference to 1965 particularly as BHUTTO mentioned it in connection with China’s support to Pakistan in that year indicates that China wants to keep its options open in the event of war between India and Pakistan.

f. As was to be expected BHUTTO lashed out at India with unbridled fury. But Hsinhua while not diluting India’s “interference” in East Bengal has sought to moderate BHUTTO’s speech by many significant omissions. Apart from deleting references to Kashmir, 1965 war, refugees, India’s lack of “mutual respect tolerance and accommodation” towards its neighbours, Pakistan’s accepting U THANT’s proposals, following attack on Indian leaders is left out by Hsinhua. “Indian leaders by their statements have left no doubt in anybody’s mind about these intentions. They openly talk about unilateral actions against Pakistan and have created war hysteria in their country”. Further BHUTTO’s claim that Pakistan has China’s “complete understanding and unstinted support” has been reproduced only as “understanding and support”.

g. At return banquet same evening (7th November) no formal speeches were made. But while proposing toast BHUTTO said he was returning “with complete satisfaction”. CHOU EN LAI only talked of “satisfactory result” on matters of mutual interests. Since CHOU spoke after BHUTTO this is significant.

There is some difference of opinion between BHUTTO and SULTAN KHAN. At press conference on 7th November BHUTTO said it was not necessary to rush to U.N. Security Council in a panic. When SULTAN KHAN intervened to say that the question could be left open. BHUTTO claimed there was complete identity of views in talks with Chinese but added that this was his personal view thus indicating difference of opinion with other members of his delegation.

2. My overall assessment is that China has adopted an attitude of restraint and is advising Pakistan to do the same. Pakistan is also being advised to seek a political settlement in East Bengal. At the same time China wants to keep its options open in relations with India. China has not played up BHUTTO’s visit. In fact military aspect of delegation has not been emphasized at all although Pakistani propaganda sought to give impression that all the arms and equipments are theirs for the asking. Our earlier information that already passed on to DMI (Indian Army) was that China was stalling on move for supply of arms and equipments*. Perhaps this is the reason why high ranking officer of the three services made the trip to Peking along with BHUTTO.

*. Next day on November 9 Mishra clarified further that his source had told him that China "will give all arms and ammunition" besides support to Pakistan at the UN but "will not intervene in the event of War between India and Pakistan." The Source ascribed Chinese reluctance to intervene “dictated by desire to avoid direct clash with Soviet Union.”

At the invitation of the People’s Republic of China the President of Pakistan, General Agha Mohammad Yahya Khan paid a State visit to the People’s Republic of China from 10th to 14th November, 1970. During the visit the Chinese People’s great leader Chairman Mao Tse-Tung met the President of Pakistan, General Yahya Khan and members of his party and had a cordial and friendly conversation with them.

The President of Pakistan and party were accorded a rousing welcome and a magnificent and enthusiastic reception by the Government and People of China. This fully demonstrates the sincere friendship and the high regard of the People of China for the people of Pakistan.

Premier Chou En Lai and President Yahya Khan held talks in a very sincere and friendly atmosphere on important international issues further developing the friendly relations and cooperation between China and Pakistan and other questions of common interests.

Both sides were highly satisfied with the result of the talks.

Taking part in the talks on the Chinese side were Chief of General Staff, Huang Yung Sheng, Vice Premier Li Hsien Nien, the Deputy Chief of General Staff, the Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Vice Minister of Foreign Trade, the Vice Minister of the Commission for Economic Relations with Foreign Countries, the Head of the Peking Department of General logistics and leading officials of military and foreign affairs.

Taking part in the talks on the Pakistan side were Professor G.W. Choudhury, Minister for Communications, Lt. Gen. Pirzada, Principal Staff Officer to the President, Mr. M.M. Ahmed, Economic Adviser to the President, Mr. Sultan M. Khan, Foreign Secretary, Mr. K.M. Kaiser, Ambassador of Pakistan, Mr. A. Ahmed, Secretary Ministry of Information and National Affairs, Major General Malik Abdul Alim, Major General M. Haider, Mr. Tabarak Hussain, Director General Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Mr. M.A. Jafri, Minister Embassy of Pakistan, Mr. F.A. Zuberi, Director, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Group Captain S.A. Khan, Air Attaché Embassy of Pakistan and Col. S.A. Khan, Army and Naval Attaches, Embassy of Pakistan.

The two sides expressed full satisfaction at the all round development of the friendly relations between China and Pakistan on the basis of the five principles of equal respect for sovereignty and territorial integrity, military non aggression, non-interference in each others internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit and mutual cooperation.

The two sides expressed the view that the further strengthening and development of the friendly relations and cooperation between China and Pakistan will ensure their common desire and fundamental interest of the two peoples and will be conducive to the Afro-Asian peoples cause of unity against imperialism.

The two sides expressed the view that the experience by both China and Pakistan in the five principles of peaceful co-existence was exemplified in the settlement of the boundary questions between the two countries. Such friendly relations between China and Pakistan provided a good example of friendly relations between States practicing different social systems.

The Pakistan side expressed full appreciation of the assistance and cooperation that China had extended to Pakistan and warmly acknowledged the fact that China’s generous help in the true spirit of mutuality of benefit had contributed to the economic development of Pakistan.

Noting that Pakistan had launched the fourth five year plan, the Chinese Government expressed its willingness to render to Pakistan further assistance within the Chinese means and capacity to help make the economy of Pakistan self-reliant.

Warmly praising the determination and courage that the people of Pakistan have consistently displayed in safeguarding their national integrity, the Chinese side reiterated their further support to the people of Pakistan in their struggle for the defence of national independence and against all forms of outside aggression or foreign interference and to the Kashmiri people in their just struggle for the right of self determination.

The Chinese side noted with interest the recent offer made by the President of Pakistan on the withdrawal of troops with a view to making the people of Jammu & Kashmir to freely exercise their right of self determination and consider it worthy of the support of the people of various countries.

The Pakistan side expressed thanks for the Chinese support. The President apprised the Chinese leaders of the dispute over the distribution of the Ganges Water. The Chinese side appreciated Pakistan’s stand for a peaceful solution of this question and hoped for an early settlement of this dispute.

The Pakistan side reiterated that the Government of the People’s Republic of China was the sole legal government of the Chinese People and that Taiwan was an inalienable part of the territory of the People Republic of China.
Pakistan side expressed its firm conviction that without the participation of the People’s Republic of China, the important problems that confront the world today could not be resolved and reaffirmed that the legitimate rights of the People’s Republics of China in the UN should be restored forthwith.

The Chinese side expressed thanks for the friendly stand of Pakistan.

The two sides held that the present international situation was continuing to develop favourably. The two sides held that the people of all countries have the right to settle their problems by themselves without outside interference, and without outside threat and interference.

* * * * *

Both sides agreed that the visit of the President of Pakistan, General Agha Mohammad Yahya Khan, to China and the useful exchange of views between the leaders of the two countries would lead to further development, strengthening and consolidation of the friendly relations between the Peoples Republics of China and the Islamic Republic of Pakistan.

The President of Pakistan took this opportunity to renew his invitation to his Excellency Premier Chou En Lai to pay a visit to Pakistan at a mutually convenient date. The Premier while thanking the President of Pakistan indicated that he would visit Pakistan at the earliest possible opportunity.

New Delhi, November 18, 1971.

Dear Mr. President

I should like to thank you for your warm reception and kind hospitality during my recent visit to Washington. It was a privilege to meet you and Mrs. Nixon again.

The opportunity to discuss matters of immediate concerns and also wider international issues with you was of great value to me.

Immediately on my return to Delhi three days ago, I spoke to my colleagues in the cabinet and to the leaders of the opposition parties in Parliament about he broad results of the discussions which I have had with you and with other heads of states and Governments.

The winter session of our Parliament began yesterday and I made a statement there. I am asking Ambassador Jha to invite your personal attention to it. It reflects our anxiety and hope. I made it in the faith that justice will prevail and the reality of the situation appreciated. This faith is sustained by the discussions I had with you which, I believe, led us to a common understanding of the root causes of the tragedy in East Bengal. I also believe that we generally agreed about the manner in which this crisis could be resolved so that we would be relieved of our suffering and danger to our country.

I hope that the vast prestige of the United States and its wisdom, which you personify, will be used to find a political solution acceptable to the elected representatives of East Bengal and their leader Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. On my Part I shall make every effort to urge patience on our people. However, I would be less than honest if I were not to repeat that the situation in which we find ourselves has long been an unbearable one.

I am somewhat concerned to learn of efforts to involve the Security Council. However well-intentioned these may be, I have little doubt that any public debate at this stage will lead to a hardening of attitudes, which would make the task of reconciliation an extremely difficult one. This is part of the common experience of many solutions which we jointly seek. In India it will create the impression that the participants are interested not so much in a lasting solution as in side tracking the main issue, namely, the Revolt of the people of East Bengal against the Tyranny of the military regime of West Pakistan, first in denying them the fruits of development and then in suppressing their legitimate demand for democratic rights. I hope that the influence of the United States will be used to prevent the development of such an impression.

We have all admired the great courage which has inspired you in taking several important and decisive initiatives to resolved complex problems. I sincerely hope that the same clear vision will guide relations between our two democracies and will help us to come closer. It will always be our effort to clear any misunderstanding and not to allow temporary differences to impede the strengthening of our friendship.

With warm regards and best wishes to you and to Mrs.

Yours Sincerely

Indira Gandhi
Mr. President

I am addressing this message to you with a deep sense of urgency in view of the grave situation which has arisen in my country as a result of unprovoked and large scale attacks by Indian Arms Forces into various parts of Pakistan.

On the same day, another brigade of 23rd Indian Division launched an attack in the Belonia Salient of Naokhali District pushing 8 miles deep into Pakistan territory, supported by the rest of the Division.

In the Brahmambaria subdivision also on November 21 attacks were launched by a battalion group each from 57th Division against two of our border posts at Mukandpur and Saldandi which were over run.

In Sylhet District Maulvi Bazar subdivision, two battalion groups attacked and over ran border out posts at Dhalai, Atheram and Zakiganj. The battalion groups included two companies of Gurkhas.

On November 21, another attack was launched in Rangpur District in the Burangamari Salient where an Indian Brigade Group penetrated 15 miles into Pakistan territory up to Nageshwari.

On the same day in Jessore District, a major offensive was launched by a brigade group of 9th Indian Division supported by armour and air cover. The attack was launched opposite Chaugacha and Indian tanks penetrated about 8 miles into Pakistan territory.

The Indian air attack was challenged by Pakistan Air Force. One Indian aircraft was destroyed and we lost two. Six Indian tanks were destroyed in the engagement and eight of ours were destroyed.

Intermittent shelling of Jessore airfield continues. In Mymensingh District repeated attacks against our border out posts at Karitola have been repulsed.

As many as 12 Indian Divisions have been deployed around East Pakistan. In addition there are 38 battalions of the Indian Border Security Force. 2nd and 5th Indian mountain divisions which were previously deployed on the borders with China have also been moved towards East Pakistan. The 8th Mountain Division (of 6 brigades) has also been moved to East Pakistan borders towards Sylhet from Nagaland where only one brigade is now left.

Twelve squadrons of the Indian Air Force are now placed around East Pakistan. A sizeable Indian Naval force comprising aircraft carrier, frigates, landing ships and two submarines is standing by near Vizigapatham in the Bay of Bengal posing an amphibious threat to Chittagong and Chalna ports. The approaches to Chalna Port have been mined by the Indians with the result that two merchant ships chartered for carrying food grains and other essential supplies have been damaged. This would seriously disrupt food supplies to East Pakistan.

Mr. President, as you are aware Indian armed forces in the last few months have maintained pressure all along our Eastern borders. Apart from training, equipping and launching rebels supported by Indian Border Security force personnel into Pakistan territory, Indian artillery units have been constantly shelling areas in East Pakistan. But as I have pointed out above, in the last 3 or 4 days the Indian Armed Forces have turned from localized attacks to open and large scale warfare on so many fronts. They have further escalated the conflict by introducing armour and Air Force. Pakistan Army and Air Force Units in East Pakistan have been under strict orders not to cross the Frontiers and to exercise utmost restraint in the face of grave provocations. The present situation, however, is such that the offensive launched by Indian Armed Forces must be met by us with all the force at our command in the defence of our territorial integrity.

We were assured from time to time that India did not intend to launch open and large scale warfare against Pakistan. It is now evident that far from exercising restraint India has chosen the path of unabashed and unprovoked aggression. India continues to harp on the theme that the inroads into Pakistan are being made by the so called ‘Mukti Bahini’ – a rebel force created, maintained and sustained by India. No one will be deceived by the Indian claim which stands disproved by the scale of present operations and by the equipment including armour and Air Force elements now being used.

Mr. President, I have kept in touch with you since the beginning of the crisis in East Pakistan and I have always been deeply appreciative and thankful for your understanding and wise counsel. In addressing this message I am also conscious of your sincere concern for peace in this region and stability in the sub-continent. On my part, I would like to say unhesitatingly that I wish to avoid a senseless and destructive war with India. But the developing situation created by India may lead us to a point of no return. I am sanguine that your personal initiative at the present juncture could still prove decisive in averting a catastrophe. I shall anxiously await your response.

With warm personal regards.

Call by the Pakistan High Commissioner in India on External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh.

New Delhi, November 24, 1971.

Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.

The Pakistan High Commissioner called on F.M. at his (PHC’s) request at 4.30 p.m. today. The following is the summary record of the meeting:

2. After the exchange of courtesies the PHC said that although he had not received any instructions from his Government to meet F.M., he had asked for a meeting in the context of the border situation to see whether anything can be done to reverse the present situation so that the cause of peace would not suffer. The President of Pakistan has already sent his greetings on the occasion of Id to the Government of India and the High Commissioner felt that people on both sides would bless F.M. if he could do something to avert the disastrous course of events. He wanted to know whether Mr. Atal (Deputy High Commissioner of India) would be returning with a message from the Government of India for the President of Pakistan. He (PHC) would like to appeal to F.M. not only as F.M. but also as someone he had known all his life to do something to avert this collision course. In addition to the efforts which Mr. Atal would make, he was prepared to go to Islamabad himself or send a message to the Pakistani President from us if we so desired and would place himself at our disposal in this matter.

3. F.M. replied that the burden of any collision would have to be borne by the peoples of the two countries. He enquired of the PHC whether he had heard our PM’s statement in Parliament today. The PHC replied that he had not seen the text of the statement but had heard about it. He had also heard the Pakistani version from their Radio Pakistan. He had not come to contest or argue about anything we had said. F.M. asked the PHC what Pakistan Radio had broadcast in this regard. The High Commissioner replied that Pakistan Radio had mentioned that the Indian army had launched massive attacks with tanks in several sectors and that India was now actively participating in the fighting. The two armies (Indian and Pakistan) were in conflict.

4. F.M. asked if Pakistan Radio had said anything about the air battle. The High Commissioner then gave the Pakistani version about the loss of two of their aircraft during patrolling duties on their side of the border after being attacked by Indian planes. F.M. wanted to know what Pakistan Radio had said about the pilots; on which side were they? The High Commissioner replied that it was only a question of 5 kilometres this way or that and that when an aircraft was flying at 600 M.P.H. such a small distance made no difference to the side of the border.

5. Regarding the air incident.

F.M. ‘We do not want escalation. Our Prime Minister has stated in parliament today that we treat this matter as a local incident. We do not consider an air incident like this an act of aggression or war but we will shoot down intruding aircraft.’

6. Regarding Pakistan Radio report quoted by the PHC that the Indian army was involved massively in the struggle of the ‘freedom fighters’:

F.M. “I do not wish to enter into an argument in this regard and what I have to say should be taken in the friendly spirit in which it is meant. You should report to your Government that the Mukti Bahini has become a very effective force to reckon with. The continued projection of the Mukti Bahini as “Indian agents” or “the Indian Army” participating in the fighting is a wrong appreciation of the situation by the Government of Pakistan.

Propaganda is of course a different matter but I would regret it if this view of the Pakistan Government has to be taken as their real appreciation of the situation”.

7. Replying to the PHC’s contention that the freedom fighters had emerged as a strong force because of Indian help to them against his Government:

F.M. “The PHC must know that originally the Pakistan army could overpower the freedom fighters only because they were engaged in pitched battles. The freedom fighters have their own arms and are also receiving supplies from abroad. It would be factually wrong to think that they have no support except from India. They have other supporters, both official and non-official. I would suggest in all earnestness that the best way for Pakistan to defuse the situation is to make a dramatic political gesture. It is not for us to suggest what this should be because we do not want to give the impression that we are wedded to any particular course. I am making the suggestion in a friendly and purely informal way that Pakistan in its own interest should try some method other than military. I am not saying this officially but as man to man at this late stage only because you asked me. Such a political gesture will be not only in Pakistan’s interest but peripherally it will be to our interests also with regard to the refugees regarding whom we have security problems because some of them could be involved in sabotage and have to be screened carefully.”
Pakistan Government can rest assured that we do not want a conflict.

8. In reply to the PHC’s remark that F.M.’s advice indicated that he had in mind the solution which India had been advocating all along:

F.M. ‘We have carefully avoided taking any attitude on the substance of the solution. We have not said that there must be any particular solution but it is our assessment that only a solution acceptable to the people of East Bengal can ensure normalcy and create conditions in which the refugees can return. This aspect of the matter has not received from your Government the attention it deserves. Having been here for some time you should appreciate the pressure on us for recognition and other measures. Our Prime Minister has even then not taken any decision about the substance of the solution. We leave it to the leaders of Pakistan to judge what it should be. But as somebody senior in age to you and as a politician I must mention that in my considered judgement a breakaway civilian regime is not likely to deliver goods. The replacement of an elected group by another through executive action gives people the impression that they are being cheated. This kind of replacement of individual ‘x’ by individual ‘y’ by executive action angers people and is unlikely to produce the desired results even if it is done with the best of intentions’.

9. The Pakistan High Commissioner then referred to the personal attacks against him in the Indian press, particularly the manner in which they highlighted statements made by the Head of the “so-called Bangla Desh Mission”, Mr. Choudhury. Mr. G.K. Reddy’s article which alleged that he (P.H.C.) had been personally responsible for misrepresenting the Government of India’s views to Islamabad, indicated official briefing. Even his wife had been attacked by our press, “a thing which has never happened in Pakistan to the family of any Indian High Commissioner”. Accusations against him for delaying repatriation of the personnel of the Indian Mission in Dacca, refusal to issue a press release about Hussain Ali could have been based only on official information. F.M. advised the PHC not to take such press attacks to heart and draw, if possible, some comfort from the fact that our press did not spare even our P.M. he could assure him that all that had appeared in our press could not be taken to be our view.

10. F.M. then enquired about the plans of the PHC and when his successor could be expected. The PHC replied that he would be here for two months for personal reason before going to Turkey. F.M. concluded by saying that if it was not considered improper he would like to take the liberty of reciprocating the Pakistani President’s Id greetings. He added “the people of India and Pakistan want to live in peace with each other and anybody in your position can contribute to the maintenance of peace and be of considerable service to both countries. It is unfortunately a great pity that 8 months have elapsed while the burden of refugees on us has continued. The Pakistani leaders tried the military method against their own people first and then against us through the movement of troops. I would urge them to consider whether this military approach has succeeded. I would suggest to them that they should try another approach. There is no question of prestige as such being involved between the rulers and the ruled."

11. The Pakistan High Commissioner said that what had happened in Pakistan was their internal affair which they would try to settle according to their best light but he would like to state that they had not adopted a military approach or effort against India. He had been in India for a considerable time and during recent months he had been conscious of threats repeatedly uttered against Pakistan, specially the statements made by the Indian Defence Minister.

0625. Telegram from President of the US to US Ambassador in India containing a Message from President Richard Nixon to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Subject: Presidential Message to Mrs. Gandhi.

1. In view of further deterioration in Indo-Pak situation you should at request of President seek earliest possible appointment with Prime Minister to present following letter.

2. QUOTE

Dear Madame Prime Minister:

I have read with care your letter of November 18 in which you shared with me your most recent thoughts on the current situation in South Asia. I very much share your hope that our discussions and the continuing dialogue between us will indeed clear away misunderstanding and lead to the strengthening of the friendship between India and the United States. Your visit to Washington helped to clarify views about many of the problems affecting South Asia and about the steps which are required to achieve a viable political solution. Hostilities between India and Pakistan would negate the efforts which we hoped to make such solution. I appreciate your assurance that you will make every effort to urge patience on your people.
Unfortunately in recent days the danger of war has increased. Considering how productive our talks were, I am distressed at the recent deterioration of the situation and at the ominous trend of events. Military engagements along India’s border with East Pakistan have increased in number and strength. Tanks, aircraft and regular forces have been involved on both sides. In this connection I note your Government has confirmed that your armed forces have been engaged on Pakistan territory. The situation has reached a critical stage and there is a danger of all out hostilities. As I indicated to you during your visit, the American people would not understand if Indian actions led to broad scale hostilities. Hostilities would inevitably affect our ability to be helpful in many of the ways which we discussed. I hope that you will take into account American Attitude as you formulate your policies for the future.

In our conversations, I mentioned to you that President Yahya Khan would be willing to take the first step in disengaging his forces on the frontier provided India were willing to take reciprocal action. I have not heard from you on the point. And I hope you would agree promptly to designate a representative who could discuss a limited disengagement with a representative named by President Yahya. Such a step would be in the interests of both India and Pakistan and of peace in the world. A limited withdrawal would not only help deescalate the situation, and recent events have shown how real the dangers of escalation are, but it would also create conditions which would facilitate efforts to achieve a political solution. It is only in a defused situation that progress can be made in the direction of a political settlement for which we continue to work.

In view of the seriousness of the situation, I have also written to President Yahya and Premier Kosygin.

Sincerely

Richard Nixon

1. This cable contains Presidential letter to Yahya for delivery soonest.

2. As you will see from sotels President has written to Mrs. Gandhi and PM Kosygin to urge that India agree promptly to talks with Pakistan looking towards mutual withdrawal of forces. In presenting President’s letter to Yahya, you should stress that we have urged GOI to name a representative promptly who could talk to a representative named by Yahya on how to achieve mutual withdrawals. You should also tell Yahya that we have also indicated to GOI willingness of Yahya to take first step in this regard, provided there is Indian response.

3. For your information we believe GOI and GOP high level military representatives are best way to proceed; we do not want to get into middle of trying to work out details of disengagement. This has to be done on ground by military reps., of two governments.

4. Text of letter to Yahya follows:

QUOTE:

Dear Mr. President:

Thank you for your letter of November 22 in which you describe the deepening conflict along your country’s eastern borders with India. I am grateful to you for the continued friendship and candor in our relationship which your letter represents. You know the importance I attach to this.

I am especially gratified to have reaffirmation of your strong desire to avoid what you so wisely say would be a senseless and destructive war with India. I have asked Ambassador Farland to convey to you directly what we have been trying to do recently, as friends of both Pakistan and India, to counsel restraint, to accomplish a withdrawal of forces, and to contribute to a lessening of tensions. I have made clear to the Government of India that the people and government of this country would find great difficulty in understanding of Indian actions led to broad scale hostilities. We are also continuing to make our views known on this to the Soviets, at the highest level.

Mr. President, my government intends to continue as a concerned friend of Pakistan to act in ways that hopefully might help prevent war between your country and India. War would only further complicate the difficult but essential task you face in achieving the viable political accommodation among your people which I know you seek and which I am sure you agree has now become a matter of even more urgent necessity.

I have asked Mr. Ambassador Farland to keep in closest touch with you and your associate in the days ahead. We will welcome any suggestion your government may wish to discuss with us that will help reduce the risk of further conflict in South Asia.

With warm regards,

Richard Nixon

0627. U.S. State Department Telegram to US Embassy Moscow repeated to US Missions in Islamabad, Dacca, New Delhi and New York, containing the letter from President Nixon to Chairman Kosygin of USSR.

Subject: South Asian crisis

1. We are increasingly concerned at deteriorating military situation in South Asia and at prospect of full scale hostilities between India and Pakistan in near future. You should seek earliest possible opportunity to present following letter from President to Chairman Kosygin.

2. QUOTE

Dear Mr. Chairman:
I have been following extremely closely developments on the South Asian subcontinent. The recent border incidents which have involved engagements between Indian and Pakistani aircraft, tanks, and artillery in the Jessore sector of East Pakistan have been of particular concern to me, as I am sure they have been to you. The situation has reached a point at which there appears to be an imminent danger of full-scale hostilities between India and Pakistan.

As Ambassador Beam has made clear to Foreign Minister Gromyko and Mr. Kuznetsov, the United States government is doing all in its power to assist in de-escalating the crisis and to search for a viable political solution to the problem. It is neither in the interests of the United States nor of the Soviet Union that there be war in South Asia. I welcome the assurances that your Government is using its influence to promote a peaceful resolution of this crisis.

In order to deescalate the crisis, we have proposed to the Governments of India and Pakistan that they withdraw their forces a limited distance from the frontiers. President Yahya has indicated his willingness to take the first step of withdrawal if he could be assured that the Indian would reciprocate. I believe that a limited pull-back would directly contribute to a lowering of tension and would make possible the pursuit of the political settlement which we recognize is essential. I hope that your Government would give support to this idea with a view to having India and Pakistan designate promptly high level representatives who could work out the details.

Finally, I agree fully that our governments should continue to consult closely on this matter.

Sincerely yours

Richard Nixon

No.24680  November 27, 1971.

High Commissioner from Secretary (East).

British High Commissioner saw me this evening and said that he has been instructed to convey to us 3 points made by Pakistan Foreign Secretary to British High Commissioner in Islamabad on November 25 (when latter had gone to deliver reply of Prime Minister HEATH to YAHYA KHAN’s circular appeal dated November 24)

1. President Yahya Khan had said more than once that if East Pakistani territory was taken and held war must result.

2. Indian recognition of Bangla Desh must mean war.

3. 3 1/2 Pakistani Divisions in East Pakistan could not be abandoned without the most serious repercussions in West Pakistan. (The High Commissioner could not elaborate on this)

2. Pakistan Foreign Secretary pre-fixed his remarks by saying that even if the Pakistani public and the Pakistani leaders could have agreed to negotiate with the Awami League, the publicity given by Indian leaders to such demand ruled this out.

3. The High Commissioner asked me whether we would like to convey any replies on these points to Pakistan Government. I told him that our High Commissioner is in Islamabad and the Pakistan High Commissioner in New Delhi. The Pakistan Government are free to use both the channels for communicating directly with us.

4. I told the High Commissioner that there has been no change in the policy explained to him by Foreign Minister that the Indian Army had no intention of taking or seeking to retain Pakistani territory. I said that we would not, however tolerate Pakistan causing any damage to our territory. If they fire from Pakistani territory at us and caused death and destruction, we would see to it that they stopped such firing. I added that there has been no change in our policy regarding recognition of Bangla Desh as earlier enunciated by Prime Minister.

5. I then referred to the Belgian move for calling a meeting of Security Council and said that the main problem can only be solved by YAHYA KHAN negotiating with elected representatives of East Bengal and not by Security Council. Security Council meeting would make the issue seem to be an Indo-Pakistan affair and would only harden positions all round. The High Commissioner said that we would not find British position in any way embarrassing to us on this matter.

Moscow, December 3, 1971.

TELEGRAM

Esteemed Mr. President

My colleagues and I carefully acquainted ourselves with your letter of November 27 concerning events on the Indian sub-continent.

We share the anxiety, expressed in your letter, about the aggravation of the situation in this region.

Weighing once again what steps could be taken to de-escalate tension leads us to conclude that the suggestion about the withdrawal of troops irrespective of our wishes appears scarcely feasible in the present, specifically existing circumstances.

We are convinced that we both should firmly support a political solution of the question, clearly stating this to the interested parties, and for understandable reasons, particularly to the President of Pakistan Yahya Khan.

Specifically, this should mean a recommendation to Yahya Khan immediately to release Mujibur Rahman and to resume negotiations with him and with other leaders of the people’s party. Understandably, these negotiations need to begin at that stage where they were interrupted because of the arrest of the representatives of one of the sides participating in the negotiations.
We think that both our Governments would perform a good and necessary deed if they would energetically support such a course of action. If the Pakistan side would take account of this friendly advice, this would then relieve the present dangerous tension, would avert further worsening of the situation, and would open the way to a political settlement in East Pakistan.

Now every day, every hour is dear. On this bases we are addressing ourselves at the present moment to the President of Pakistan Yahya Khan and to the Prime Minister of India Indira Gandhi.

Respectfully,
A. Kosygin

Summary of Decisions
The President’s decisions were announced.

1. Our U.N. Ambassador would go to the Security Council today with the strongest possible statement calling for an immediate ceasefire and withdrawal. The resolution should be based on the General Assembly resolution and would be introduced by us or by another country. Our Ambassador should clarify strategy with Bhutto. The importance and seriousness of the situation should be emphasized. We should edge toward calling it aggression.

2. Our Fleet will move to the area through the Straits and into the Indian Ocean. In 45 hours they could move anywhere we wanted them. If asked, Defense could say that the purpose was to stand–by – for a possible evacuation of Americans.

Please convey following message from Prime Minister to Premier CHOU – EN – LAI. The signed letter will follow in due course.

BEGINS

My dear Prime Minister,

Although the Representatives of China in the United Nations have made harsh and ill-informed allegations against India, I feel that I should, nevertheless, write to you so that you may have a connected account of facts as we see them.

When I wrote to Your Excellency in July, it had already been evident that the policy of military repression pursued by the Government of Pakistan in Bangladesh would aggravate tensions and imperil peace in the sub-continent. Our assessment has all along been that no amount of force would be able to suppress the people of Bangladesh or thwart their aspirations for democratic rights. It was for this reason that we continuously urged the release of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, to be followed by negotiations between President Yahya Khan, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and the other genuinely elected representatives of the people of Bangladesh. A growing volume of international opinion also came to the same conclusion.

It is a matter of regret that the military regime persisted in ignoring the realities of the situation, despite the combined pressure of world opinion and the advice of many Governments well disposed towards Pakistan.

Instead of seeking a settlement, the Government of Pakistan continued to persecute the people, installed the so-called ‘civilian’ administration in Dacca and went ahead with its plans to hold bye-elections to fill seats arbitrarily declared vacant. All this added to the anger of the people, who intensified their struggle. The sequel of events is well known to Your Excellency.

During this entire period, we bore the burden of an ever-growing number of refugees, now totaling 10 million, and exercised the utmost restraint in the face of repeated violations of our air space, shelling of Indian areas in the East and other provocations.

When these violations continued in spite of our repeated warnings, we were compelled to take defensive action at Boyra on November 21 to silence Pakistani tanks and guns. The very next day, three Pakistani Sabre jets intruded into India air space and were brought down on our territory.

However, we regarded these as isolated local incidents and hoped that the military regime in Pakistan would desist from further provocations. But this hope was belied. At 1730 hours Indian Standard Time on December 3 Pakistan launched a sudden but evidently pre-planned attack on our western borders. The Pakistan Air Force made simultaneous strikes on our airfields at Amritsar, Pathankot, Srinagar, Avantipur, Uttarlai, Jodhpur, Ambala and Agra. A few minutes later, heavy Pakistani shelling began all along our western border.

Pakistan Radio made the baseless allegations that Indian Armed Forces had launched a massive attack on the border of West Pakistan on the afternoon of December 3, without specifying either place or time, and claimed that their Sabre jet aircraft were attacking Indian positions in retaliation. This was a total fabrication.

At the time the Pakistani attack started, I was in Calcutta addressing a public rally. Our Defence Minister was in Patna and the Finance Minister was in Bombay. We rushed to New Delhi immediately to take counsel with our colleagues and came to the conclusion that there was no alternative but to repel Pakistan’s wanton aggression by force.
With your vast experience of human affairs and movements of people in revolt, I am sure you will appreciate that every Government derives its legitimacy from the support which it receives from its own people. The majority of the people in Pakistan who live in Bangladesh and who number as many as 75 million people have repudiated their allegiance to Pakistan. This may be deplorable. But it is unrealistic to imagine that the revolt on so vast a scale could be explained away in terms of the fiction of ‘Indian interference’ or ‘India’s alleged ambitions’.

China as an Asian Power, who together with India struggled against imperialism, should be able to understand the phenomenon of people’s revolt. Situated as we are, we are deeply affected by the consequences of this revolt. Millions of refugees have poured into our land.

I am sure that China, along with the other nations of the world, desires that these refugees should be able to go back to their homeland. The question is: how and in what conditions they would return? I earnestly request you to consider this matter with the utmost objectivity.

It is not for us to interfere or advise Pakistan how it should structure its political life, but as a neighbouring country, we cannot help observing that every step which the military regime in Pakistan has taken, has led to a successive alienation from its own people. And it is we who have to suffer the consequences.

May I, in all sincerity, request Your Excellency to exercise your undoubted influence with the Government of Pakistan to acknowledge the will of the people of Bangladesh, so that the suffering of these unfortunate people is not further accentuated and that peace is restored to the sub-continent. On our part, we shall do our utmost to seek the restoration of peace on a durable basis.

We ardently desire to be allowed to live in peace in order to pursue our own way of life, neither interfering with others nor allowing interference from outside. We seek friendly relations with all our neighbours and we seek China’s friendship too. In my last letter I had indicated our readiness to discuss the problems of mutual interest.

As one looks towards the future of this Earth, I have no doubt that its only hope for advancement in peace and tranquility lies not in conflict but in cooperation. Let each one of us seek in cooperation to bring happiness and a sense of fulfillment to our people.

With assurances of my highest esteem and consideration,

Yours sincerely

Indira Gandhi

T.N. Kaul from Haksar Personal.

I have just now received your message setting out certain proposals which FARMAN ALI has apparently made on his own. We had received information about these proposals from other sources also.

2. As you have rightly pointed out, these proposals have not been accepted by the President of Pakistan. Consequently, we are not called upon to react to proposals made by individuals.

3. P.M. desires that whatever proposals are made, our delegation should not take any position, but forward these proposals to the Government of India for their consideration. This is desirable both tactically and also to give the appearance that every proposal will receive our careful consideration.

**************

ANNEXURE - I

Following is the text of the message from Major-General Farman Ali as handed over to Paul Marc Henri, United Nations Administrator in Dacca;

“For the President of Pakistan.

(a) As the responsibility of taking the final and fatal decision has been given to me I am handing over the following note to Assistant Secretary General Mr. PAUL MARC HENRI after your approval.

(1) It was never the intention of the armed forces of Pakistan to involve themselves in an all out war on the soil of East Pakistan.

(2) However a situation arose, which compelled the armed forces to take defensive action.

(3) The intention of the Government of Pakistan was always to decide the issue in East Pakistan by means of a political solution for which negotiations were afoot.

(4) The armed forces have fought heroically against heavy odds and can still continue to do so but in order to avoid further bloodshed and loss of innocent lives I am making the following proposals;

(a) As the conflict arose as a result of political causes it must end with a political solution.

(b) I therefore having been authorized by the President of Pakistan do hereby call upon the elected representatives of East Pakistan to arrange for the peaceful formation of the Government in Dacca.

(c) In making this offer I feel duty bound to ask the will of the people of East Pakistan and demand the immediate vacation of their land by the Indian forces as well.

(d) I therefore call upon the U.N. to arrange for a peaceful transfer of power and request:

   (1) An immediate ceasefire
   (2) Repatriation with honour of the armed forces of Pakistan to West Pakistan.
   (3) Repatriation of all West Pakistan personnel desirous of returning to West Pakistan.
   (4) The safety of all persons settled in East Pakistan since 1947.

(5) Guarantee of no reprisals against any person in East Pakistan.

(a) In making this offer I want to make it clear that this is a definite proposals for peaceful transfer of power.

(b) The question of surrender of the armed forces will not be considered and does not arise and if this proposal is not accepted the armed forces will continue to fight to the last man;'

**************

Annexure II

Following is the text of the message from Paul Marc Henri to the Secretary General, U Thant:

(1) Have been received by Major General Farman Military Adviser to Governor East Pakistan and by Chief Secretary at 1300 on Friday December 10, 1971.

(2) I was handed a note the text of which follows which can be considered as a firm offer to comply within the terms of the Soviet resolution to the Security Council concerning the basic conditions for cessation of hostilities in East Pakistan.
(3) My personal comments and suggestions are the following:

AAA. The military situation is desperate but the armed forces or at least part of them are quite ready to fight to the last man.

BBB. Subpara DDD 3, 4, and 5 above are fundamental. (These paragraphs relate to FARMAN ALI's proposals) The minorities in question have now regrouped in Dacca in certain quarters, are armed to the teeth and are ready to defend their lives in a last desperate resistance against a threatened massacre.

CCC. It is essential that the Indian Forces should give some minimum guarantee in the respect of the above. In this regard the All India Radio is carrying threats of reprisal which can only exacerbate the animal fear which grips large sections of the population.

DDD. Two totally distinct operations are described in this proposal one is the peaceful transfer of power to the elected representative of East Pakistan through the setting up of a Government, politically acceptable to the people. Two, is repatriation with honour of the Armed Forces of Pakistan to West Pakistan.

EEE. I do not see any distinct chronological relationship between the two. My impression is that the United Nations guarantee is essentially required for the peaceful repatriation with honour of the armed forces of Pakistan to West Pakistan and for the repatriation of all West Pakistan personnel desirous of returning to West Pakistan. Also United Nations guarantees as yet un-described are required for protection of certain categories of persons as mentioned above.

FFF. This is by far the most immediate problem. If India guarantees the above the transfer of power can take place almost immediately in any possible or desirable manner provided that this process not interfered with the major logistical operation involved in the transportation back to West Pakistan of nearly 100000 military personnel, perhaps 50000 civilian personnel and possibly a massive transfer to West Pakistan of the so called Bihari population.

(4) It is the wish of General Farman, acting with the full authority of President, that you should immediately inform the Security Council of the above communication and that you should obtain from the armed forces of India and their allies an immediate agreement for cease fire providing for zones of regrouping wherever appropriate of the armed forces of Pakistan and of civilian wishing to be repatriated to West Pakistan.

(5) We are now dealing with a matter of hours concerning the avoidance of the final assault on Dacca. It seems to me that only a Security Council resolution can be binding on both parties concerning cease fire and peaceful evacuation of the city of Dacca and the territory of East by the Pakistani army”.

ENDS

You know of course that the original proposals of FARMAN ALI have not been approved by YAHYA KHAN and now stand withdrawn.

TELEGRAM

From: Foreign New Delhi
To: Indiadel, Washington.
Repeated: Indiadel, New York.

Reference your telegrams 567 and 568 of December 9 and 10 respectively. We have no territorial claims or ambitions so far as Bangla Desh is concerned. If we had any, we would not have accorded recognition to that Government. The act of recognition means self-imposed restraint on our part against making any claims whatsoever.

We have no claims against the territory of West Pakistan. However, this does not mean that Pakistanis can continue to savagely attack our forces and occupy our territory and that we should, in advance, declare to them that they can do all this and we shall sit with our hands tied and surrender meekly to their attacks.

As for Azad Kashmir, the State Department ought to know that for a period of 24 years, India has consistently maintained that this territory legally belongs to us. Pakistan, on the other hand, has not only seized this territory, but continues to advance claims on our State of Jammu and Kashmir. And Yet we have in the past said that we will not alter the status quo by force. In this context it would be relevant for us to ask the State Department representatives if they can tell us what are Pakistan’s intentions in regard to Jammu and Kashmir. Why are they mounting attacks after attacks with their Armoured Division against Chhamb?
Merely to seek assurances from us in regard to West Pakistan without giving us an assurance that so far as United States is concerned, it ceases to support Pakistan’s claim to Bangladesh and to state of Jammu & Kashmir, appears to us not only unfair way of treating us, but extremely partisan and one-sided. However, we have no desire to aggravate the situation and shall exercise self-restraint consistent with the needs of self-defence.

Letter from Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister P. N. Haksar to Secretary in the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting.

New Delhi, December 13, 1971.

My dear Robi,

In his report to the U.N. Secretary General U Thant, UNEPRO Administrator Paul Marc Henry has reported that a very large number of U.P. and Bihar Muslims and others have been concentrated in a particular area in the city of Dacca. All of them are gripped by animal fear of being massacred either by Mukti Bahini or by Indian Armed Forces. They have been armed to the teeth and would naturally fight for their lives. He has stated that All India Radio has been feeding their fear by threats of reprisals. I do not know if this is a fact. Quite obviously, such threats are self-defeating. We should, on the contrary, say that Indian Armed Forces will not resort to the barbarism of Pakistan Armed Forces that everybody who peacefully surrenders will be treated with respect and his life safeguarded. You might also say that Major General Farman Ali, under instructions of President Yahya Khan, had offered to transfer power to the elected representatives of Bangladesh but that President Yahya Khan, displaying total insensitiveness to the suffering of the people, has withdrawn that offer. Therefore responsibility for continuing unnecessary bloodshed rests squarely on the military junta in Pindi who enjoying safety and comfort of Islamabad are showing callous disregard for the suffering of the people in Bangladesh and in Dacca.

Yours Sincerely

0640.

Note recorded by Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister for the information of Prime Minister.

New Delhi, December 13, 1971,
Prime Minister’s Secretariat

December 13, 1971.

If I have been able to understand it, Mr. Kuznetsov’s mission is as follows:-

1. The Soviet leadership at the highest level wishes to inform itself of our thinking on certain vital matters.

2. The most vital is our objectives in West Pakistan. According to them, United States’ commitment to defend the territorial integrity of West Pakistan is of a nature and character that any provocation on our part which might lead U.S.A. to conclude that we have territorial ambitions in West Pakistan would enlarge the conflict.

3. The Soviet leadership is also anxious that India should enable the Soviet Union to say something in the Security Council which is not altogether negative in character. It is apparently the Soviet view that the so-called Farman Ali proposals, even though rejected by Yahya Khan, provide a basis for building up a set of proposals which while not compromising Indian objectives in Bangladesh give an appearance of positive approach to problems of restoring peace in the sub-continent.

2. I had discussions with Mr. Kuznetsov on the footing that all I was saying was my own, without any commitment and was in the nature of an exercise in thinking aloud. This morning again I had further discussions with the Ambassador Extraordinary accompanying Mr. Kuznetsov.

3. The Ambassador Extraordinary put to me a paper setting down certain principles. This paper is at Slip ‘A’. (Not available) I told him that since the central theme of Farman Ali’s proposals is transference of power to the elected representatives of the people, we should begin with that. The Ambassador Extraordinary did not argue too much and accepted this proposal. On that basis I suggested to him a set of principles which I had set out in the paper at Slip ‘B’. (not available)

4. In setting down these principles which might form the basis of some initiative in the Security Council, the Ambassador Extraordinary pointed out that at this stage they would require a general approval on the part of India. However, they would initiate these proposals exclusively on their own responsibility and that when these proposals are formally made in the Security Council, India would naturally not reject them out of hand but say that they would like to consider them and also consult with the Government of Bangladesh.

5. I told the Ambassador Extraordinary that having regard to the time factor involved, I could not give any commitment that Prime Minister would be in a position to say anything on these proposals by the time Mr. Kuznetsov meets P.M. He said that he understood this position, but enquired whether Prime Minister would be shown these proposals before the meeting with Mr. Kuznetsov. I told him that I would undertake to do this before the meeting, but how much time P.M. would have to read these proposals I could not say. In any case because when formally made in the Security Council, P.M. would naturally wish to consult with some of her colleagues in the Cabinet.

6. The Ambassador Extraordinary said that he understood this very well but since time was the essence of the matter if P.M. could give us some indication in the course of today.

7. Fortunately, the Security Council meeting has been adjourned until tomorrow and this gives us a little time.

8. Since I have taken in hand in setting down these proposals, naturally my own feeling is that no harm would be done if we were to tell the Soviet Union that proposals along these lines and in the sequence set out would not be rejected by us and we shall give them our consideration. I feel that we should also advise them that if these proposals are to see the light of the day, it might be desirable for some country other than Soviet Union or Poland to take the initiative. This would enable the Soviet Union to be free to resist amendments which would not be acceptable to us or even use veto if the proposals take a shape which is unacceptable to us.

9. P.M. may kindly send for me as soon as she is free from the work of the Consultative Committee on Atomic Energy.

0641. Statement by the External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Security Council over-ruling the Soviet Delegate Mr. Malik’s Point of Order asking the Council to invite Bangla Desh Representative.

Mr. President, it is not my intention to challenge your ruling, but I thought it better that the position should be clarified. You stated that your ruling did not mean that persons who might be competent to give information about what is happening there would be barred. The representative of the Soviet Union has pointed out that he had not suggested that they should be invited as representatives of the State, but under rule 39 as persons competent to supply the Council with information or to give other assistance in examining matters within its competence.

This is a matter which is not denied by anyone—and I suppose it will not be denied even by the representative of Pakistan -- that apart from the armed forces of India and Pakistan being engaged in the conflict in Bangladesh, there is also a large number of persons armed, organized and accepting the orders of the government of Bangladesh who are participating in partisan activities and carrying on their fight for maintaining their freedom. Whereas I can understand the reluctance to invite them as representatives of the state, any discussion which is calculated to restore normalcy in that area and create conditions in which the hostile armed activities should come to an end, is not practical and does not have any content or meaning unless a group which is functioning there, according to us in their capacity as persons who belong to the armed forces of the government of Bangladesh, is heard by the Council. Other countries may not recognize them, but the reality is there, and in that capacity persons who might be competent to give information regarding what is happening in the area, information which will enable the Security Council to decide on adequate measures in accordance with whatever may be the wish and desire of the Council, should give that information within the meaning of Rule 39. Those decisions will actually have to be implemented in the area. By that process those persons will also be involved in establishing a durable peace. It appears to be absolutely essential that an opportunity should be given to such persons to enable the Security Council to understand the issues involved and also to allow them to assist the Security Council in enforcing any decisions that it may take to restore peace and to bring about normalcy in that region.

With these observations, I would strongly urge the Security Council or you, Mr. President, to consider the desirability of affording an opportunity to such persons, within the meaning of Rule 39.

***********

Prime Minister’s Secretariat
(Pradhan Mantri Sachivalaya)

Note for the Political Affairs Committee of the Cabinet.

As a result of the conversations which our Foreign Minister and Foreign Secretary had in the U.N. and en route, it has become clear that every day’s delay in completing the military operations in Bangladesh is playing into the hands of our opponents. In order to meet the situation, suggestion have been made that some Member-State of the U.N. might, on its own initiative, suggest a draft of a Resolution either to the Security Council or to the General Assembly based on certain set of principles to which India could express her readiness to consider only. The political and tactical advantage of doing this need hardly be spelt out. We shall gain time. We would not appear negative and intransigent and that we would be able to say that we are ready to respond to anything which is reasonable. The question for consideration is whether one could evolve a set of such principles.

2. The following principles are submitted to the P.A.C. for their consideration:

1. Peaceful transfer of power in Bangladesh (East Pakistan) to the genuinely elected representatives of the people headed by Sheikh Mujibur Rahman who should be immediately released.

2. Immediately on commencement of the process of transference of power, there shall be cessation of military actions in all areas and a ceasefire for a period of 72 hours initially.

3. With immediate commencement of the initial period of the ceasefire, Pakistani armed forces shall begin withdrawal to designated places in Bangladesh (East Pakistan) for the purpose of evacuation from the Eastern theatre of war.

4. Similarly, all West Pakistan civil personnel and other persons wishing to return to West Pakistan as well as all East Pakistani civil personnel and other persons in West Pakistan wishing to return to Bangladesh (East Pakistan), shall be allowed to return under U.N. supervision being assured by all appropriate authorities concerned that no reprisals will be used against any person.

5. As soon as the withdrawal of Pakistani forces and their grouping for that purpose had commenced within the period of 72 hours, the ceasefire shall become permanent. Indian forces shall withdraw from Bangladesh (East Pakistan). However, the commencement of such withdrawal of Indian armed forces will take place with the consent of the newly established authorities set up as a result of transference of power to the genuinely elected representatives of the people headed by Sheikh Mujibur Rahman.

6. Recognising the principle that territorial gains made by application of force shall not be retained by any party to a conflict, Governments of India and Pakistan through their appropriate representatives of the respective armed forces shall immediately commence negotiations in the Western theatre of war as soon as possible.

3. The principles set out in paragraph 2 are sufficiently elastic to generate discussion and give time. They also have the merit of reflecting the proposals which General Farman Ali formally made on behalf of President Yahya Khan to the U.N., but which Yahya later withdrew. The positive substance of those proposals was the readiness to transfer power to the elected representatives of the people. This is what we have been consistently urging and today we are fighting for achieving this objective. The Farman Ali proposals, together with the text of the message of the U.N. Representative in Dacca, Mr. Henri, are annexed to this note. (These may be seen at Document No………………………)

4. It is well understood that neither U.S.S.R. nor Britain, France or Poland will sponsor any Resolution based on the above principles. Either a Member of the Security Council not belonging to this Group or some Member State not a Member of the Security Council, could sponsor the idea of working a Resolution. It is also understood that neither India, nor Soviet Union, nor Poland, nor Britain, nor France will be committed to these proposals. The initiatives for obtaining the sponsorship will not be taken by India, directly or indirectly. We shall remain free to seek elucidation, and suggest amendments. Only we will not reject them outright.

5. P.A.C.’s approval is sought to the principles set out in paragraph 2 above subject to the reservations spelt out in paragraph 4.

My dear K.B.,

I know that you are aware of the complex political factors dominating our western front. All the reports we received yesterday from Washington, London, Moscow and sources close to China point to the fact that the United States and China have now only one dominant interest, namely to preserve the integrity of West Pakistan. Anything that we may do or say which gives the impression that we have serious intentions, expressed through military actions or dispositions and propaganda, that we wish to detach parts of West Pakistan as well as that of Azad Kashmir would create a new situation.

Yours sincerely,

0644. Letter from Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to US President Richard Nixon.

New Delhi, December 12, 1971.

Dear Mr. President,

I am writing at a moment of deep anguish at the unhappy turn which the relations between our two countries have taken.

I am setting aside all pride, prejudice and passion and trying, as calmly as I can, to analyse once again the origins of the tragedy which is being enacted.

There are moments in history when brooding tragedy and its dark shadows can be lightened by recalling great moments of the past. One such great moment which has inspired millions of people to die for liberty was the Declaration of Independence by the United States of America. That Declaration stated that whenever any form of Government becomes destructive of man's inalienable rights to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness, it was the right of the people to alter or abolish it.

All unprejudiced persons objectively surveying the grim events in Bangladesh since March 25 have recognized, the revolt of 75 million people, a people who were forced to the conclusion that neither their life, nor their liberty, to say nothing of the possibility of the pursuit of happiness, was available to them. The world press, radio and television have faithfully recorded the story. The most perceptive of American scholars who are knowledgeable about the affairs of this sub-Continent revealed the anatomy of East Bengal's frustrations.

The tragic war, which is continuing, could have been averted if during the nine months prior to Pakistan's attack on us on December 3, the great leaders of the world had paid some attention to the fact of revolt, tried to see the reality of the situation and searched for a genuine basis for reconciliation. I wrote letters along these lines. I undertook a tour in quest of peace at a time when it was extremely difficult to leave, in the hope of presenting to some of the leaders of the world the situation as I saw it. It was heart-breaking to find that while there was sympathy, the war could also have been avoided if the power, influence and authority of all the States and above all the United States, had got Sheikh Mujibur Rahman released. Instead, we were told that a civilian administration was being installed. Everyone knows that this lip service was paid to the need for a political solution, but not a single worthwhile step was taken to bring this about. Instead, the rulers of West Pakistan went ahead holding farcical elections to seats which had been arbitrarily declared vacant.
There was not even a whisper that anyone from the outside world, had tried to have contact with Mujibur Rahman. Our earnest plea that Sheikh Mujibur Rahman should be released, or that, even if he were to be kept under detention, contact with him might be established, was not considered practical on the ground that the US could not urge policies which might lead to the overthrow of President Yahya Khan. While the United States recognized that Mujib was a core factor in the situation and that unquestionably in the long run Pakistan must acquiesce in the direction of greater autonomy for East Pakistan, arguments were advanced to demonstrate the fragility of the situation and of Yahya Khan’s difficulty.

Mr. President, may I ask you in all sincerity: was the release or even secret negotiations with a single human being, namely, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, more disastrous than the waging of a war?

The fact of the matter is that the rulers of West Pakistan got away with the impression that they could do what they liked because no one, not even the United States, would choose to take a public position that while Pakistan’s integrity was certainly sacrosanct, human rights, liberty were no less so and that there was a necessary inter-connection between the inviolability of states and the contentment of their people.

Mr. President, despite the continued defiance by the rulers of Pakistan of the most elementary facts of life, we would still have tried our hardest to restrain the mounting pressure as we had for nine long months, and war could have been prevented had the rulers of Pakistan not launched a massive attack on us by bombing our airfields in Amritsar, Pathankot, Srinagar, Avantipur, Uttarai, Jodhpur, Ambala and Agra in the broad day light on December 3, 1971 at a time when I was away in Calcutta, my colleague, the Defence Minister, was in Patna and was due to leave further for Bangalore in the South and showed perfidious intentions. In the face of this, could we simply sit back trusting that the rulers of Pakistan or those who were advising them, had peaceful constructive and reasonable intent?

We are asked what we want. We seek nothing for ourselves. We do not want any territory of what was East Pakistan and now constitutes Bangladesh. We do not want any territory of West Pakistan. We do want lasting peace with Pakistan. But will Pakistan give up its ceaseless and yet pointless agitation of the past 24 years over Kashmir? Are they willing to give up their hate campaign posture of perpetual hostility towards India? How many times in the last 24 years have my father and I offered a pact of non aggression to Pakistan? It is a matter of recorded history that each time such offer was made, Pakistan rejected it out of hand.
We are deeply hurt by the innuendos and insinuations that it was we who have precipitated the crisis and have in any way thwarted the emergence of solutions. I do not really know who is responsible for this calumny. During my visit to the United States, United Kingdom, France, Germany, Austria and Belgium the point I emphasized, publicly as well as privately, was the immediate need for a political settlement. We waited nine months for it. When Dr. Kissinger came in August 1971, I had emphasized to him the importance of seeking an early political settlement. But we have not received, even to this day, the barest framework of a settlement which would take into account the facts as they are and not as we imagine them to be.

Be that as it may, it is my earnest and sincere hope that with all the knowledge and deep understanding of human affairs you, as President of the United States and reflecting the will, the aspirations and idealism of the great American people, will at least let me know where precisely we have gone wrong before your representatives or spokesmen deal with us with such harshness of language.

With regards and best wishes.

Yours sincerely

Indira Gandhi

0645. Message from Lt. Gen. A.A. Niazi, Commander of the Pakistan Eastern Command to the Indian Chief of Army Staff.

In order to save further loss of innocent human lives which would inevitably result from further hostilities in the major cities like Dacca, I request you to arrange for an immediate ceasefire under the following conditions:

A) Regrouping of Pakistan armed forces in designated areas to be mutually agreed upon between the commanders of the opposing forces;

B) To guarantee the safety of all military and para-military forces.

C) Safety of all those who had settled in East Pakistan since 1947;

D) No reprisals against those who helped the administration since March, 1971.
In those conditions, the Pakistan armed forces and para-military forces would immediately cease all military operations.

I would further abide by any resolutions which the Security Council of the United Nations may pass for the permanent settlement of the present dispute.

I make this proposals with full authority vested in me by virtue of my position as Martial Law Administrator of Zone B (East Pakistan) and Commander Eastern Command exercising final authority over all Pakistan Military and para-military forces in this area.

Sd/- Lt. Gen. Niazi

Witnessed:

Major General Farman Ali.

0646. Message from the Indian Chief of Army Staff to Lt. Gen. A. A. Niazi, which was conveyed through U.S. Embassy in New Delhi.

BEGINS

FIRSTLY I have received your communication re: a ceasefire in Bangladesh at 1430 hours today through the American Embassy at New Delhi.

SECONDLY I had previously informed General Farman Ali in two messages that I would guarantee (A) the safety of all your military and para-military forces who surrender to me in Bangladesh. (B) complete protection to foreign nationals, ethnic minorities and personnel of West Pakistan origin no matter who they may be. Since you have indicated your desire to stop fighting I expect you to issue orders to all forces under your command in Bangladesh to ceasefire immediately and surrender to my advancing forces wherever they are located.

THIRDLY I gave you my solemn assurance that personnel who surrender shall be treated with the dignity and respect that soldiers are entitled to and I shall abide by the provision of the Geneva Convention. Further as you have many wounded I shall ensure that they are well cared for and your dead given proper burial. No one need have any fear for their safety no matter where they come from. Nor shall there be any reprisals by forces under my command.

FOURTHLY Immediately I receive a positive response from you I shall direct General Aurora the Commander of Indian and Bangladesh forces in the Eastern theatre to refrain from all air and ground action against your forces. As a token of my good faith I have ordered that no air action shall take place over Dacca from 1700 hours today.

FIFTHLY I assure you I have no desire to inflict unnecessary causalities on your troops as I abhor loss of human lives. Should however you do not comply with what I have stated you will leave me with no other alternative but to resume my offensive with the utmost vigour at 0900 hours Indian standard time on 16 December.

SIXTHLY In order to be able to discuss and finalise all matters quickly I have arranged for a radio link on listening watch from 1700 hours Indian standard time today 15 December. The frequency will be 6605 Khz by day and 3216 KHz by night. Call signs will be CAL (Calcutta) and DAC (Dacca). I would suggest you to instruct your signalers to restore microwave communications immediately.

0647. Indian announcement declaring a Unilateral Cease-fire on the Western Front.

New Delhi, December 17, 1971.

We have repeatedly declared that India has no territorial ambitions. Now that Pakistani armed forces have surrendered in Bangladesh, and Bangladesh is free, it is pointless in our view to continue the present conflict.

Therefore, to stop bloodshed and unnecessary loss of life we have ordered our armed forces to cease fire everywhere on the western front with effect from 2000 hours IST on Friday, December 17 1971.

It is our earnest hope that there will be a corresponding immediate response from the Government of Pakistan.

Statement by Pakistan President Yahya Khan accepting the Cease-fire.

I have always maintained that war solves no problems and there should be negotiations between India and Pakistan for resolving outstanding disputes.

In pursuance of this stand Pakistan had accepted several proposals made by the General Assembly of the United Nations and by friendly countries which could have averted the present situation between India and Pakistan.

Pakistan had also accepted the three resolutions of the Security Council as well as the General Assembly resolution calling for a ceasefire, withdrawal of armed forces to their respective borders and a political solution to the problems facing Pakistan.

The General Assembly resolution had the overwhelming support of 104 member nations of the international community and the world expected India to respond to it in the interest of peace.

It is unfortunate that India showed total disregard of all these urgent expressions of world opinion which would have spared bloodshed and suffering.

Now India has made an offer of ceasefire on the western front. Pakistan is already committed to a ceasefire along with other consequential steps through its acceptance of the General Assembly resolution and is willing to reciprocate within the framework of this resolution. If India is sincere, she should proceed through the UN to formalize it.

In keeping with the foregoing and in the interest of peace, I have responded to the Indian offer and have ordered my armed forces to cease fire from 1430 hours GMT (2000 hours IST).

17 December 1971.
0649. Statement by Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi in Parliament on Ceasefire on Western Front.

New Delhi, December 17, 1971.

On March 31, 1971, six days after the great upheaval in Bangladesh. I had the honour to move a Resolution in this House.

I said then that India’s permanent interest in peace and our commitment to uphold and defend human rights demanded the immediate cessation of the use of force and of the massacre of the defenceless people of Bangladesh. I had called upon all peoples and Governments to take urgent and constructive steps to prevail upon the Government of Pakistan to immediately end the systematic decimation of a people.

I had concluded my statement by expressing the profound conviction of this House that the historic upsurge of the 75 million people of East Bengal would triumph. We also gave an assurance that their struggle and sacrifice would receive the wholehearted sympathy and support of the people of India.

Today the pledge we then made together in this House and in the country stands redeemed.

It is natural that the people of India should be elated. We can also understand the great rejoicing of the people of Bangladesh. I share the elation and the joy. But as the Gita says, neither joy nor sorrow should tilt the balance of our equanimity or blur our vision of the future.

All those who have borne arms, all those who have been involved in the planning and direction of the operations, all the people of India who have responded so generously – these are to be thanked and congratulated.

It is a victory but a victory not only of arms but of ideals. The Mukti Bahini could not have fought so daringly but for its passionate urge for freedom and the establishment of a special identity of Bangladesh. Our own forces could not have been so fearless and relentless had they not been convinced of their cause.

India has stood for breadth of vision, tolerance of the points of view of others, of being in the battle, yet above it.

We stand for democracy, for secularism and for socialism. Only this combination opens the way for full freedom, gives protection to the weaker sections and the opportunity for the growth of different personalities. We believe that no nation can be built on concepts which are negative or which do not have meaning for all its people. Unfortunately, Pakistan had based its policies on hatred for and confrontation with India.

While we re-dedicate ourselves to our ideals, I hope the people of Pakistan will seek a path which is more in keeping with their circumstances and needs. These 24 years we have heard many aggressive speeches and much abusive and false propaganda against us. We cannot believe that this is the true voice of the Pakistani people. They have been kept in darkness by their successive regimes.

We want to assure them that we have no enmity towards them. There are more things in common than those which divide us. We should like to fashion our relations with the people of Pakistan on the basis of friendship and understanding. Let them live as masters in their own house and devote their energies to the removal of poverty and inequalities in their country.

It is this sincere desire which prompted us late evening to instruct our Army, Navy and Air Force to cease operations from 2000 hours today on all fronts in the West.

I am grateful for the support which all political parties of the country have given throughout this difficult period and specially to this initiative on behalf of peace.

This offer was communicated to the world community by our Minister of External Affairs, Sardar Swaran Singh, in New York. We also had it formally conveyed to the Government of Pakistan through the Swiss Embassy. We hope that the people and rulers of Pakistan will appreciate and reciprocate this offer.

The consequences which flow from a failure to do so will rest squarely upon the military rulers of Pakistan. However, regardless of what happens on the Western front, let us not be complacent. The coming months specially will bring new and complex problems. We must be ever vigilant to safeguard our integrity and our interests, and above all the fundamental beliefs of our national existence.
Letter from the US President Richard Nixon to Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.

Dear Madame Prime Minister:

I have received your letter of December 15, 1971, in which you seek to place the responsibility for the war in the subcontinent on others and in particular the United States. In the light of the many exchanges over the past year it cannot surprise you that I reject this view.

I will write you soon at greater length in confidential channels where this discussion belongs. But I cannot let your statement that 'not a single worthwhile step' was taken to bring about a political solution remain without response on the public record. It is a matter of judgment what is 'worthwhile'. The U.S. made efforts extending for nine months to take steps to assist the refugees and to provide the worthwhile basis for political negotiation.

When we met in Washington you were assured of our intention to continue to carry the main financial burden for care of the refugees. You were informed of the Government of Pakistan's willingness to take the first step of military disengagement if it could be assured that India would reciprocate subsequently. You were also informed of various ways which could be used to get talks started between the Government of Pakistan and Bangladesh representatives. We asked your Ambassador to work out with us a specific timetable for political evolution. You said that India wanted a peaceful solution. We accepted this statement at face value.

We never made any claims that our proposals met India's position fully. They were proposals which would have started the process of negotiations. I had thought that this was one of those times when statesmanship could turn the course of history away from war.

If there is a strain in our relations, and there is, it is because your government spurned these proposals and without any warning whatsoever chose war instead. The subsequent disregard of your government of repeated calls of the United Nations for cease-fire and withdrawal— adopted by overwhelming majorities – confirms this judgement.

The stand taken by the United States in recent days has not been taken against India. It has been taken against the practice of turning to military action before all political resources are exhausted.

We recognize that India is a major Asian power and that we share the common values of genuinely democratic government. No act has been taken with a desire to damage the relationship between our two great countries. We should hope that the day may come when we can work together for the stability of Asia, and we deeply regret that the developments of the past few months in South Asia have thrust the day of stability farther into the future.

Sincerely
Richard Nixon

Her Excellency
Indira Gandhi
Prime Minister of India
New Delhi.

0651. Note Verbale from the Swiss Embassy in New Delhi conveying a message from the Pakistan Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, December 19, 1971.

Ambassade De suisse

The Embassy of Switzerland presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs and has the honour to relay the following message received by the Government of Switzerland from the Swiss Embassy in Islamabad:

‘The Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of Pakistan informs that several ships of Pakistan and foreign nationality, as a consequence of events, had to be re-routed to Colombo, Singapore and other ports in the Middle Orient. The merchandise transported by these ships is destined for India and Pakistan. The Ministry of External Affairs wishes to submit, through the protecting power, the request to the competent Indian authorities that these ships should not be intercepted. Pakistan is ready to undertake a similar undertaking on the basis of reciprocity.’

The Embassy of Switzerland avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs the assurances of its highest consideration.

_Ambassade De suisse_

The Embassy of Switzerland presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs and has the honour to inform the Ministry that it has received the following message which was transmitted to the Swiss Political Department by the Swiss Embassy in Islamabad:

‘The Government of Pakistan accuses India of a number of ceasefire violations:

1) Occupation of WAGAN ATTARI border village of PULKUNJRI

2) Occupation of three posts in the Rajasthan sector

3) Numerous cases of firing in Kashmir

4) Capture of a post South of HUSSAINIWALA with seizure of 26 soldiers

The Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of Pakistan further states that they had picked up a radio conversation in which an Indian unit had asked its superior whether the prisoners should be shot. The Pakistan authorities request the intervention of the Swiss Government and states that Pakistan has also made prisoners.

The Pakistan Government has also learned that Mukti Bahini had committed atrocities in East Pakistan against certain groups of the population. They request the Government of India to intervene to prevent such inhuman acts.

The Government of Switzerland, acting as the protecting power of Pakistan interests in India, kindly request the Government of India to investigate these alleged violations.

The Embassy of Switzerland avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs the assurances of its highest consideration.

Ministry of External Affairs

Please prepare a brief note for our record about the treatment given to the Members of our Mission in Islamabad/Karachi after the cutting of diplomatic relations by Pakistan. I would particularly like to know whether the diplomatic immunity of our Missions was in any way violated by the Pakistan authorities. Brief details may be given about the arrangements made by the Pakistan authorities for looking after the needs of members of our Missions after they were confined to their houses.

(S.K. Banerji)
Secretary (East)
21.12.1971

As desired by Secretary (East) Vide his note dated 21.12.1971, I record below the treatment given to members of our Mission at Karachi by the Pakistani authorities.

1. At about 5.30 p.m. on December 3, Shri J.N. Bhat, First Secretary, telephoned me at home to say that according to Pak Radio, ‘India had attacked Pakistan on the Western front’. I rushed to the Chancery immediately. Other officers joined as soon. After getting the news confirmed from AIR, we destroyed our 3 way cipher links keeping just the 2 way link with Delhi. As our Security measures were all dependable and well-rehearsed, I asked the other officers to go to their respective residences and myself stayed behind at Chancery along with Shri J.N. Bhat. Capt. Syal, Naval Adviser also decided to stay in the Chancery. (He continued to stay there till we were evacuated to Delhi whereas Bhat and I were shifted to India Lodge on December 5). Subsequently, when Pak. Authorities were surrounding Chancery Building, 2 way cipher links as also all other classified papers were burnt.

2. At about 10.30 p.m. on December 3, Pakistani uniformed police and other security officials entered the Chancery compound and also the compound of Hindustan Court flats where our officers were staying. At the Chancery, they forced the guard on duty to open the gates at gun-point and thus entered the Chancery compound. Subsequently, they came into the building itself by forcibly entering the reception. Shri J.N. Bhat, First Secretary, who had gone home to collect some night clothing, was stopped by the police when he was trying to enter the building. Shri Bhat pointed out to them the grave implications of their action in having entered the premises of a diplomatic mission. The officer in-charge told him that he had his orders. The police also made efforts to come to the first, second and other floors but were unable to do so as we had, in the meantime, immobilized the lift. The only other way to enter these floors was by breaking open a number of iron grills. They did not do this and after some time, withdrew from the reception area. However, for all these days the authorities remained inside the Chancery compound. At Hindustan Court the Police withdrew from the compound after having initially entered it and staying for the night of December 3. At India Lodge, Assistant High Commissioner’s residence, the police remained outside the four walls of this building all through.

3. On December 5, I sent a third person note to the Local Foreign Office, asking to see some responsible officer so that I am allowed to visit the officers and staff members and enquire after their welfare. Protocol Officer Hamid came to see me in the afternoon. We were asked to shift into 3 buildings. Consequently I drew up lists as to who would be staying where and gave these to Pakistani authorities. We were shifted on the afternoon of December 5, itself. But this was done in a haphazard and hurried manner, no officer was allowed to supervise the shifting and it did cause inconvenience to a number of our members of staff. Some of the individuals were also not shifted to the places I had earmarked for them. This resulted in much difficulty later when we had to hand over the Mission to Swiss Consulate.

4. Security officials posted outside the three buildings, namely, Chancery, India Lodge and Hindustan Court, used to take one person from each building to the market every second or third day to make purchases of fresh vegetables etc. from the market. On the whole, these arrangements were satisfactory. Moreover, we all had stored rations for a month or so in anticipation. We were, however, unable to get some medicines urgently needed by a few staff members. These were subsequently purchased for us by the Swiss Consulate.

5. During this confinement, we were allowed absolutely no contact with our colleagues confined in other buildings or with any other outsider. Repeated requests by me to be allowed to visit the other two buildings to enquire about the welfare of our officers and staff were turned down. We were also not permitted any newspapers or periodicals. On the whole, Pak security officials were overtly courteous but obstinate.

6. On December 8, Swiss Consul General Mr. Enrico Tosio called on me. He also visited other officers and staff at Chancery and Hindustan Court. He asked me to start preparing for handing over the Mission to him. But I pointed out that this would be impossible unless at least 3 or 4 staff are shifted to Chancery and some officers are permitted to accompany me to Chancery. Mr. Tosio came back on 12th to say that we might be leaving on 13th/14th. Three members were shifted to Chancery on 12th evening and handing over was done on 13th & 14th.
7. Some of our officers and staff were inconvenienced due to the fact that they were shifted in a great hurry, had to leave even their clothes behind and were not allowed till the very last day to go and collect the same. But things improved considerably after the Swiss were nominated to look after our interests in Pakistan and Pak Security authorities behaved much better after that.

THE SECURITY COUNCIL

Having discussed the grave situation in the subcontinent which remains a threat to international peace and security,

Noting the General Assembly resolution 2793 (XXVI) of 7 December 1971, Noting the reply of the Government of Pakistan on 9 December 1971, Noting the reply of the Government of India on 12 December 1971, Having heard statements of the Deputy Prime Minister of Pakistan and the Foreign Minister of India, Noting further the statement made at the 1617th meeting of the Security Council by the Foreign Minister of India containing a unilateral declaration of a ceasefire in the western theatre,
Noting Pakistan’s agreement to ceasefire in the western theatre with effect from 17 December 1971, Noting that consequently a ceasefire and a cessation of hostilities prevail.

1. Demands that a durable ceasefire and cessation of all hostilities in all areas of conflict be strictly observed and remain in effect until withdrawals take place, as soon as practicable, of all armed forces to their respective territories and to positions which fully respect the ceasefire line in Jammu and Kashmir supervised by the United Nations Military Observation Group for India and Pakistan;

2. Calls upon all Member states to refrain from any action which may aggravate the situation in the subcontinent or endanger international peace;

3. Calls upon all those concerned to take all measures necessary to preserve human life and for the observance of the Geneva conventions of 1949 and to apply in full their provisions as regards the protection of the wounded and the sick, the prisoners of war and civilian population;

4. Calls for international assistance in the relief of suffering and the rehabilitation of the refugees and their return in safety and dignity to their homes and for the full cooperation with the Secretary General to that effect;

5. Authorizes the Secretary General to appoint if necessary a Special Representative to lend his good offices for the solution of humanitarian problems;

6. Requests the Secretary General to keep the Council informed without delay on the developments relating to the implementation of this resolution;

7. Decides to remain seized of the matter and to keep it under active consideration.

Note from the Ministry of External Affairs to the Swiss Embassy regarding procedure for the Swiss Embassy to act as the Protecting Power.

New Delhi, December 22, 1971.

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of Switzerland and has the honour to refer to the Embassy Note No. 822 of 13th December 1971 and the meeting between His Excellency the Ambassador of Switzerland and the Secretary (East) in this Ministry on 22nd December 1971.

The Ministry has noted the procedure in paragraph 2 of the Note.

In regard to paragraph 3, the Ministry would request the assistance of the Government of Switzerland, as the Protecting Power, from time to time as required for the protection of Indian nationals, property and other interests instead of cataloguing all the needs of the Government of India in this respect at one time. It was understood from His Excellency the Ambassador of Switzerland during the meeting mentioned above that this is acceptable since it would be difficult to make a list of all present and future requirements at one time.

The Ministry wishes to take this opportunity to record its appreciation of the assistance being rendered by the Government of Switzerland as the Protecting Power and also to renew the assurances of its highest consideration to the Embassy of Switzerland.

New Delhi, December 22, 1971.

The Embassy of Switzerland,

Prospects in Bangladesh:

Foreign Minister opened the discussion by giving a brief assessment of the present situation in Bangladesh and in West Pakistan. He said that the extent and nature of reprisals against those who had collaborated with the West Pakistan regime had not been as violent as some people had feared despite the atrocities that the Pakistan army and the Razakars had perpetrated. We ourselves feared that much worse would happen. There had naturally been considerable jubilation among the Bengalis after the surrender of the Pakistan army but their intention was to look after those who were not with them in the struggle. They would not like to take reprisals against the civilians but it was possible that there would still be some reprisals. For this reason we had taken General Niazi and the former Governor Malik to India. The latter was regarded as a Bengali collaborator of the West Pakistan regime.

It was our hope that the people of Bangladesh will take over the administration completely as quickly as possible. We did not want to send any administrators but it was clear that they required some help for a month or six weeks. Hence we had to send some administrators to assist them. In particular the police force in Bangladesh had been badly shattered during the course of the freedom struggle. The entire police force had joined the freedom struggle and in the initial stages had made the mistake of taking on the army in frontal pitched battles. The results of such battles could hardly be doubted since the police could not be effective against the army in this kind of conflict. Subsequently, the police formed the focal point of the Mukti Bahini and it would take some time for them to revert to their normal task of maintaining law and order. It was necessary for the Bangladesh Government to bring about a certain amount of decentralization in the administration in order to restore proper functioning.

Over the course of the last nine months the politicians who had won the election were cut off from the main stream of life in the county but basically, despite this, their image as the leaders of the people persists and their original luster not only continue but has been heightened as proved by the enthusiastic welcome given to them on their return to Dacca.
Prospects in West Pakistan

Regarding West Pakistan, FM had not been able to make an assessment of the major overhaul particularly in the army which had been undertaken by Bhutto. He did not know whether this would strengthen or weaken the army; it could work either way. The changes brought about by Bhutto were in order to shape the country in accordance with his own ideals but it was still too early to judge what effects these would have.

There has been frustrations among the West Pakistanis and Bhutto has cashed in on this. For instance, he spoke of continuing struggle even after the surrender. On the other hand, he has also shown a capacity of realism. He showed this in formulating the Security Council Resolution. Also privately Bhutto has been saying that it is the military which has ruined Pakistan and he himself wants to start afresh and wants friendship with India. However, it is doubtful whether he can do anything because in order to consolidate his position in West Pakistan he may be obliged to adopt an anti-Indian posture. In adopting such a posture he would not run any risk on the ground as there is a ceasefire.

Bhutto has made some moves for reconciliation with the people of the North-West Frontier by releasing Wali Khan, and removing the ban on the N.A.P.

FM also mentioned that Mujib appears to be alive since Bhutto has decided to let him out of prison and put him under house arrest.

British attitude

FM said he greatly appreciated the consistent stand adopted by the U.K. and the understanding shown by the British of the real problems involved in the sub-continent over the past months. If other countries particularly the United States had shown an equally good understanding then perhaps a head on collision could have been avoided. The British attitude has resulted in a new relationship and a new understanding between India and the U.K. We greatly value this and our intention is to consolidate this new relationship. In particular FM mentioned that the British Permanent Mission in New York had played a balancing role and had definitely been a stabilising factor during the discussion at New York.

Sir Alec said that they had done their best in New York and elsewhere to get some kind of the recognition of the realities of the situation.

He said that as far as reprisals are concerned it was their assessment that it would be remarkable if there were not any although he hoped that we would use our influence to ensure that they were prevented.

Recognition by U.K.
On the question of recognition Sir Alec said that the British criteria are ‘fairly firm and fairly flexible’. Usually these criteria are that the Government had to be in effective control of the territory. It would be difficult to day that this is so as long as any Indian troops are in Bangladesh.

FM said that one of the reasons that Pakistan army did not fight was that they were doing a police job which was not their real role. Hence they were not in the best of shape. We would not like to be put in a similar position and we would like to get out as quickly as possible. Sir Alec asked when this might be and FM replied that we would keep the British informed of the developments.

Sir Alec said that once they knew the position they would be able to judge more accurately when it would be possible to grant recognition.

Sir Alec mentioned Commonwealth membership asked whether FM would advise the Bangladesh authorities to take this matter slowly. He said it would be advisable to see how the question of recognition by various countries goes before they actually apply for membership of the Commonwealth. It was in any case desirable that West Pakistan should approve of such membership.

Foreign Minister said that it might be possible for them to express an intent to apply for membership of the Commonwealth without actually putting in a formal application for the time being. The Bangladesh Government were pledged to abide by the principle of the U.N. Charter and of the Geneva Convention and they would also in due course like to take their place in the Commonwealth.

He added that the Bengali people are extremely intelligent and they would like to take their own decisions and give the impression that they are taking their own decisions despite the fact that our army is there.

Bangladesh-West Pakistan Relations.

Sir Alec said that he had met Bhutto on his way back at the airport. Bhutto feels that he would like to be given the opportunity to regularize West Pakistan’s relations with East Bengal. He feels there is an outside chance of some relationship being established. Bhutto had asked what India’s attitude would be if he got in touch with the Bangladesh leaders.

FM said that he did not think that we would have any objection to Bhutto speaking to the Bangladesh leaders. However, if he makes the same mistake as Yahya Khan did by trying to divide the people and rule by this means he would fail. As far as we were concerned we have recognized Bangladesh as a sovereign country and this means that it is up to them whether they want to discuss such matters with Bhutto. As a sovereign country they may decide to have links with Burma or they may decide to have links with any other country.
Sir Alec asked whether it would be possible for West Pakistan and East Bengal to form some kind of confederation.

FM said this was very doubtful. The Bangladesh leaders would stay independent but they would certainly wish for friendly relations with West Pakistan. They cannot accept Bhutto as the leader of Pakistan; he himself has placed Nurul Amin, who is an East Bengali in the position of Vice President where as earlier he was the Prime Minister and Bhutto was the Deputy Prime Minister. So even symbolically he has not retained that degree of representation for the Bengalis.

Sir Alec asked whether China had confined her role in providing military equipment or had done anything more active in support of Pakistan.

China’s Role

FM said that China had supplied weapons in fairly large quantities to Pakistan. The Chinese had also continuously given the impression that they would intervene physically. They were very good at giving this impression in a subtle way by putting it in words which could not be contradicted even if they did not intervene. Evidently the Pakistanis did believe that the Chinese would intervene and the latter encouraged them to adopt extreme postures.

Sir Alec asked whether the Chinese would cut their losses or whether they would give even more backing to West Pakistan.

FM said that the latter is more probable. The Chinese are firm believers in the doctrine of continuous struggle. They would have assessed at an early stage that Bangladesh would emerge but they would like those who are pro-Chinese either to be in authority or to be playing significant role. Hence they may well encourage subversion or try by such means to ensure that their supporters have a role to play.

C.F.L. in Kashmir

Sir Alec asked about the question of Kashmir specifically whether we would agree to the reversion to the earlier ceasefire or whether we feel that adjustments are required.

Foreign Minister said that we have not really yet got down to thinking about it. As far as West Pakistan was concerned we had no intention of keeping our army there. As regards the ceasefire line, we would like to have some rationalization of some kind but basically we would be willing to revert to the earlier position.

In reply to a question about Kargil, FM clarified that some of the posts in that area overlooked our road. These posts are of no strategic significance to Pakistan.
He then said he doubted whether Pakistan would accept any change in the cease-fire line. In fact it would suit Bhutto not to come to a settlement. President Yahya Khan was facing a disaster even in the West and this made him a realist but Bhutto is likely to continue a tough attitude and anti-Indian stance with the encouragement of China.

U.S. attitude

FM asked Sir Alec about the U.S. attitude. What were his conclusion after his discussion at Bermuda?

Sir Alec said that apart from a postmortem of past events nobody had enough knowledge of future attitudes or trends to discuss there in any details at Bermuda. The British had explained reasons for their position and the Americans had accepted these. Regarding the future of West Pakistan they had not gone into this subject in any detail but the Americans would like a stable West Pakistan as the British would and as, he felt sure, India would. The Americans have not yet discussed these matters even with Bhutto.

As regards economic aid to India, there would be problems the Americans Congress has taken a very stiff attitude and it might be some time before the administration would consider resuming it. But the U.S.A. has been very generous on humanitarian issues and they would undoubtedly be generous in regard to relief assistance and there may be a way here for India to get back into a relationship.

As far as recognition was concerned this would present greater problems for the U.S. Government than for the British.

Sir Alec said that his general impression was that while the Americans had no fixed idea about the future they were somewhat unhappy about what has happened in the past.

FM said that we had avoided taking too much of an excited attitude and had been restrained in our comments. There were indications at New York that towards the later stages the Americans were more quite, particularly in their interventions. If this represents a rethinking we welcome it; we have no interest in wanting to worsen matters. There is a strong anti-U.S. feeling in India at present and this was sharpened by their sending an aircraft carrier to the Bay of Bengal. FM mentioned that he had spoken to Mr. Royle about the British proposals to send their naval ships to the area and he was glad that the British had understood our position. Sending naval ships at such a time would have been misunderstood in India.

FM then said that if the U.S.A. arms Pakistan heavily this would not help the situation. We would, of course, have no objection to their giving economic aid.
Sir Alec said his assessment was that the aid given by the U.S.A. to West Pakistan would be economic though it was possible that they may give some arms.

He doubted, however; whether aid to India would be resumed early.

FM clarified that the question of aid to India was not such a difficult problem though we may have to make some sacrifices. But if the U.S.A. start arming Bhutto in a big way while he is saying that he will take revenge, then India would have to divert its resources increasingly for defence and this would be a negative factor.

Sir Alec mentioned that the mistake Pakistan had made was to turn to China and virtually abandon links with the Western powers through SEATO and CENTO.

FM asked whether there was any parallelism between U.S.A. and Chinese thinking in this area. The Chinese had acted in a curious way in New York; they had voted for the Security Council Resolution but in the speech the Chinese delegate had said many things against it.

Sir Alec said he did not think there was any parallelism between the U.S.A. and China particularly not in the sense of coordinating their policies.

Aid for Bangladesh

He then mentioned the question of reconstruction in East Bengal, humanitarian assistance and help to the refugees for rehabilitation. He said Bhutto had asked if India could give maximum encouragement to the international Red Cross for this purpose. The Bangladesh Government may not want foreign teams operating inside their country but the Red Cross could be treated by them on a different basis.

He said Bhutto had also mentioned the question of the reprisals to him.

Foreign Minister said that we had advised the Bangladesh Government against reprisals and if they took our advice this would help to stabilize the situation in their country. It was our hope that they would not take reprisals.

Regarding the international Red Cross, he said he would have to talk to the Bangladesh Government about it. He had already met the representative of the international Red Cross and told him to maintain good contacts with the Bangladesh Government. Many Governments may hesitate on juridical grounds to have such contacts but the Red Cross could do so.

Sir Alec asked about aid for returning refugees.

FM said the process of the rehabilitation of refugees on their return would be much easier than that of making provisions for them as refugees. In this matter the Red Cross could function in cooperation with the Bangladesh Government. They should not try to function independently. The Bangladesh administration would be carrying out the rehabilitation and would be appointing officers for this purpose in the various districts. Many of the refugees came from border areas and their return would present fewer problems.

U.K. Bangladesh relations

FM suggested that the British may like to keep their Deputy High Commissioner in Dacca on a de facto basis.

Sir Alec agreed to do this and said that the British were willing that some kind of relations should be established with East Bengal. British jute interests had been enquiring as to what they should do and this was one specific matter in which they were interested in developments in East Bengal.

FM said there were other problems also such as those of foreign exchange and of currency.

The British Deputy High Commissioner could also assist for example in giving travel documents. People from Bangladesh who are resident in the U.K. would be going to visit their country and when they return they would require travel documents. Sir Alec stated that there would be no difficulty in regard to such matters since some kind of visas or documents could be provided.

FM mentioned that he had spoken to Adam Malik who gave the impression of taking a realistic view of the present situation. He had said that for him Pakistan means East Pakistan and he would like to have exchanges of professors and other such exchanges between Indonesia and East Pakistan.

Our advice to the Bangladesh authorities should be that they should not create difficulties in developing a working or de facto relationship with other countries in order to force the pace of recognition.

FM then mentioned that the Bangladesh people will have all types of problems facing them especially in the economic field. Perhaps the British could start thinking about this for example through collaboration in various projects or through humanitarian aid.

Sir Alec mentioned that the Bangladesh Government may like to encourage U.N. agencies to undertake humanitarian and other work in their country. An impression has been created that they do not much care for the U.N. but quite a large sums of money have been committed by the U.K. for action there through the U.N. and there would be difficulties in trying to get this money back and re-channeling it bilaterally.
FM said that there might be some suspicion in the Bangladesh authorities about the U.N.; for example U.N. transport was extensively used by the West Pakistan army to try to crush the freedom struggle. However, at this stage the Bangladesh people should be able to get over that.

0657. Record of discussions held between Foreign Secretary T.N. Kaul and Sir Denis Greenhill, Permanent Under Secretary of State in the British Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

C.F.L. in Jammu and Kashmir

Sir Denis Greenhill opened the discussions by asking about our intentions in Kashmir. He said he was not sure ‘where you go from here’.

FS said that FM had made it clear to the international community and in the Security Council that J&K is an integral part of India. However, we have not used force in this matter as we are anxious to avoid any threat to the peace. It was Pakistan which had crossed the ceasefire line and we had to take defensive action. Some adjustments have to be made to make the line more viable and safe for the future. We were ready to talk to Pakistan about this but should Pakistan use force at any time we would have to respond accordingly. Our Prime Minister has made a unilateral statement that as regards the ceasefire line we do not wish to use force to recover our territory which is at present held by Pakistan.

Sir Denis asked whether the first stage in negotiations with Pakistan would be in our view to tidy up the ceasefire line by making adjustments.

Foreign Secretary replied that this was the question for the commanders from the two sides to discuss. At present we were occupying about 2000 square miles in West Pakistan and the Pakistanis were in occupation of about 50 square miles of our territory. These questions would all have to be discussed including the ceasefire line to make this more rational. For example around Kargil we have taken certain heights which are of no use to Pakistan but they are of importance to us. There are also some posts in the Thithwal area which are of vital importance to our Security but are not of particular importance to Pakistan. The same is the case with certain high points between Uri and Haji Pir though we have not occupied Haji Pir as we did in 1965. All these were matter for the commanders from the two sides to discuss.

Sir Denis mentioned that the question of how long the negotiations would go on depends on who is the established authority in Pakistan and how long it would take for some established authority to emerge.

FS said we are ready to open negotiations tomorrow and agreed that whether this would be possible or not would depend on developments in Pakistan.

Situation in West Pakistan.

Sir Denis said he would guess that West Pakistan may not be in a position to start such discussions immediately. They have been hit by a stunning blow and it would not be till later that they would realize the extent of damage that had been done. In the army the full effects of the events have not been worked through yet and they are still in the process of adjustments. Such adjustments also depended on whether any one could challenge Bhutto and who that could be.

FS pointed out that we had said that we would welcome Bhutto as the Democratic leader of the largest party in West Pakistan. But he must recognize that the Awami League was by a far a larger party in the East. This means that West Pakistan must recognize that there are now two independent entities. Bhutto’s statements could be for public consumption but there was a danger that he could become a prisoner of his own propaganda.

Sir Denis said that Bhutto had problems of his own in adjusting to the new situation. Perhaps he would be compelled to make such statements till the lessons of recent events have sunk in at various levels in West Pakistan. Sir Denis said that Bhutto thinks unification is now a practical political possibility.

FS asked whether Bhutto was trying to link up the question of recognizing the realities in Bangladesh with Kashmir. If this is so, he is living in an unreal paradise.

Sir Denis said that the most difficult job that any leader could have is to lead a country in defeat. This requires a lot of patience by him and by others.

FS wondered whether he would really be prepared to be impatient. Were the Chinese or the Americans egging him on in adopting his present posture?

Sir Denis said he did not think so. The Chinese may have said that India will rue the day they committed aggression against Pakistan, but he did not think they would egg Bhutto on in his present course.
FS said we think Bhutto is receiving encouragement from the Chinese. He has been saying that he did not expect the war so soon and, therefore, did not ask the Chinese to intervene; had he done so they would have intervened effectively.

Sir Denis said he did not think that the Chinese were really in a position to give significant assistance to Bhutto in his proclaimed intention of unifying Pakistan. It was, however, possible that Bhutto was banking on the Chinese to give him assistance by creating trouble in Bangladesh and so creating a lever in his favour.

U.S. attitude

FS asked about American policy and Sir Denis replied that his impression as a result of discussions in Bermuda was that the Americans were very upset with India and they made no secret of that fact. Their reappraisal of the situation in the subcontinent and their future actions there will definitely be influenced by this. They feel that looking back over the last twenty five years. They have done a tremendous amount for India and despite this India had not acted in the way they had expected. He said it would take the Americans a long time to readjust their ideas about the subcontinent.

Sir Denis said that the Americans feel that relations between the two wings of Pakistan could have been dealt with satisfactorily through negotiations. They felt the action taken by India set an extremely dangerous precedent. In particular they have felt that India was operating ‘a sort of modified Brezhnev doctrine under which when you see democracy in danger it is sufficient for you to go in and clean the place up’.

FS mentioned here our sincere appreciation for the attitude taken by the British. He said in New York he had worked in close consultation with Sir Colin Crowe. This was in contrast to the U.S. attitude.

Sir Denis specified that the British attitude now was that whatever had happened in the past, they wished to make the most constructive contribution in the effort that will be required to tidy things up. India could help the British as well as every one else in this effort by using her influence to prevent the Bangladesh Government from forcing the pace of events on the question of recognition. Given time these things can work themselves out satisfactorily. The question of recognition should not be pushed to a point of conflict. In regard to Britain’s attitude for example they had every intention of resuming development aid to Bangladesh as soon as circumstances permit. However, if the question of recognition is prematurely brought to ahead for example if the Bangladesh authorities say that they will not deal with the British or others unless recognition is accorded, this would make things more difficult.

FS said that there is great appreciation among the Bangladesh authorities of the attitude taken by Britain and France and naturally their own attitude to Britain and France would accordingly be different to that towards other like the U.S.A.

FS mentioned that Sir Alec had said the British attitude towards recognition was ‘firm and flexible’. In what respects was it firm and in what respects was it flexible.

Sir Denis said that Britain’s attitude was flexible in being realistic. They would not adopt a dogmatic attitude in regard to relations with the Bangladesh authorities or refuse to have any contacts because the question of formal recognition. HMG would have to say in Parliament that the necessary and well known criteria have been fulfilled. This means control by the Bangladesh Government of its own destiny and of its own administration and the fact that this is likely to remain so. That is, its authority should not be maintained by any one else’s bayonets and it should be on its own feet.

FS asked whether the British would then like our forces to withdraw immediately.

Sir Denis denied this and explained his understanding that they would need to remain there for some months. This seemed sensible since there are likely to remain problems which the Indian forces would need to help out with. However, if it becomes apparent that the Indian forces are going to run the show in Bangladesh for ever, this would create problems on the question of recognition.

When FS said that we had no desire to stay Sir Denis mentioned that ‘originally the British also had no desire to stay in areas which eventually became part of the British Empire. This was the way the British Empire was built’.

Foreign Secretary replied that there was no comparison between the two cases. He then said that the British Deputy High Commissioner in Dacca should remain in touch with the Bangladesh authorities on a de facto basis. There are various problems which would arise and which he could discuss with them. The attitude of the Bangladesh authorities is not hostile and we have advised them to have de facto relations with other countries for the time being. We hope that the in the next few weeks recognition would be given. Since the longer recognition is delayed the greater is the possibility that Bhutto, in pursuit of his claim would start a conflict.
Sir Denis mentioned that their Deputy High Commissioner is already in touch with Bangladesh authorities on a de facto basis.

Regarding Bhutto one has to show a little bit of patience. If recognition of Bangladesh comes very early Bhutto's task would be made more difficult. The violent reactions that would occur in West Pakistan would make it more difficult for Bhutto to calm things down and to take a more sensible line. One of the basic problems that would arise of course is if Bhutto continued to insist on a sort of Hallstien doctrine regarding Bangladesh.

FS said that he would probably insist on adopting such a line. However, the dangers of delaying recognition were that he would be strengthened in propagating an Hallstien type of doctrine. Further there are certain overall considerations which have to be taken into account. After all the population of Bangladesh was 75 million as compared to only 50 million in West Pakistan.

Sir Denis mentioned that they would like to work out something which would be in the best interests of all three parties.

East Bengali Seamen under detention in U.K.

Foreign Secretary said that according to a report some East Bengali seamen had gone ashore in the U.K. because they had trouble with their West Pakistani superior officers. They had left the ship and had now been reportedly put in Pentonvill prison. The Bangladesh Government would be taking up this matter but we would be grateful if something could be done about this.

Sir Denis respected that a note be kept of the matter and that whatever was possible for the release should be done.

U.S. arms and economic Aid

In response to a query by the High Commissioner on U.S. attitude Sir Denis said that there would be no problem in the grant of aid and assistance for straight humanitarian operations. But in the Consortium their attitude towards aid to India would be difficult. He pointed out that there was no a new factor in the American attitude towards aid. Formerly, they were unhappy if they offered aid and people did not want it, but now they are happy if people do not want it. They are not anxious to give aid.

Foreign Secretary said that if the U.S.A. start arming Bhutto the situation would become full of dangerous possibilities for the stability of the area.

Sir Denis said he would be astonished if the Americans thought or talked in terms of building up Pakistan militarily. However, it was in their interest that West Pakistan should survive as a cohesive State.
FS said 'so are we. We would welcome it if West Pakistan becomes stable and prosperous'.

Indo –West Pakistan negotiations

Sutherland asked what other subjects we envisage could be discussed with the Pakistan Government. Some of the subjects, apart from the evacuation of the army from each other’s territory, could be the return of Pakistani forces which have surrendered to India and the return of Bangladesh people in West Pakistan to East Bengal. Would these be discussed at military commander’s level or at other levels? There was also the question of over-flights.

FS said that we would like to get all these questions out of the way if possible. The exchange of people and personnel could be sorted out; naturally the Bangladesh Government would have to come in regarding the exchange of people. However, on the specific question of over-flights, West Pakistan would have to recognize Bangladesh Government before those could be resumed.

Sir Denis asked whether there was the prospect of famine in Bangladesh as a result of planting of rice not having taken place.

Reconstruction in Bangladesh

FS said the reports regarding these matters were not entirely true. Normally, Bangladesh is about one million ton short of rice. They have three crops of which the main one is the Aman crop; this will run short according to our estimate by about 20%. On the other hand, 10 million people from Bangladesh have been in India and we have been feeding them. On balance it should be possible to solve this matter.

Sir Denis asked about the transport problem between India and East Bengal and within East Bengal.

FS said that we could certainly help in solving this; the international community should also help. The main problem will be the re-construction of their homes and houses, giving them grants for this purpose; the restoration of law and order and running of the administration. For example there has been feeling against the non Bengali collaborators and four of them were killed but this is nothing compared to what might have happened.

In the matter of reconstruction, we would like the U.K. to join us in the effort. However while dealing with the Bangladesh authorities, while they have to be aware of the British susceptibilities, their susceptibilities are infinitely greater and the British should respect them.

Sutherland mentioned that the U.N. could be one channel for humanitarian aid, but U.N. seems to be unpopular.
FS said he had discussed this matter with U Thant and others of the U.N. the U.N. has a skeleton staff in Bangladesh and the Bangladesh authorities would deal with them on a de facto basis but not as a supra national authority. If the U.N. accepted this and respect these susceptibilities of the Bangladesh authorities and did not send their staff in large numbers to the area, there should not be any difficulty.

Sutherland mentioned that a small team from the international Red Cross were on their way to Bangladesh via Calcutta. They were having some difficulties.

FS said international Red Cross representative had met him in New York and had been told to go to Delhi to meet us. If they had come to us in Delhi and had approached the Bangladesh authorities there would have been no problem. It was better not to force matters by arriving in Calcutta and demanding to go in.

Sir Denis said that it was the instinct of the international Red Cross to go to the scene where action is required as quickly as possible.

Indo-U.K. bilateral talks.

Foreign Secretary raised the subject of the Indo-U.K. bilateral talks and asked when it might be possible to hold them. This time it was the turn of the British to come to India.

Sir Denis said that some dates had been tentatively proposed and envisaged the talks being held in the third week of February.

FS mentioned that it would be preferable if the talks were not held during a Parliament session as we would be extremely busy during that time. Perhaps they could be held between 15th, 16th, 17th of February or thereabouts.

Sir Denis mentioned that the Indo-British technological group would be meeting in mid February and while the bilateral talks should not coincide they could be held immediately before or after.

He then added that while returning on the plane from Bermuda the British Prime Minister had spoken to him about contacts between Britain and India. Mr. Heath had wondered whether it would not be possible to have a meeting at Minister-level. Would there be any advantage in holding the proposed talks at Minister level instead of official level.

FS agreed and said that we would have no objection to the talks being held at higher level.

Bangladesh and Commonwealth.

FS then said that in regard to Bangladesh joining the Commonwealth, they may have to wait till recognition comes from other Commonwealth countries. However, would it be at all embarrassing if the Bangladesh authorities make a declaration of intent that they will join. We think it would be a good thing if they joined the Commonwealth and do not remain outside.

Sir Denis said that a declaration of intent would embarrass West Pakistan. It was possible that West Pakistan would react by saying that if Bangladesh joined the Commonwealth they would withdraw. This question should be taken slowly by the Bangladesh authorities. The British did not want everyone to take up attitudes from which they would not later be able to retreat.

Sir Denis asked whether there was any recent information regarding Mujibur Rehman. He was out of the jail and was now under house arrest. There was also a story that Bhutto may use Wali Khan as an intermediary to discuss matters with Mujib.

FS asked whether British representatives in West Pakistan could contact Mujibur Rehman. They could perhaps try and let us know whether any information is available.

FS then asked if Sir Denis would give him an idea of British perspective on the future and their ideas hopes and apprehensions.

British hopes and fears

Sir Denis said their hopes were that the whole thing will settle down; the operation having taken place the patience will be healthier as a result so that constructive work can start.

He mentioned Farakka and FS said that this was never really a problem and it was quite easy to solve it now.

Sir Denis added that Britain would certainly make whatever contributions they could including in the field of aid and technological contacts.

British fears were that matters would not settle down and that Bhutto would continue to take a difficult line. He said in these matters one should not under-estimate the tenacity of the Chinese. They were extremely concerned about Soviet intentions in this area and would read a great deal more into Soviet relations with India than is justified. They are immensely influenced by the fear that India’s relations with the USSR are a threat to them. They are becoming increasingly sensitive of Soviet actions and they feel that while they cannot dictate what should happen they are entitled to take legitimate precautions in view of these developments.

FS asked why the Chinese should feel aggrieved and added that while it was difficult to predict it was likely that China was more concerned with the ideological war with Russia.
Sir Denis said the Chinese would think that the Soviet Union was adding India to the balance on its side of the scales. Hence they would seek to compete.

The Chinese are never the ones to make the first moves if they want to normalize relations. Others have to go first to them. His instinct was that they would not like to make the first move. However, in terms of action they are more likely to indulge in propaganda and subversion than in creating incidents along the border.

Indian Ocean

FS asked about the Indian Ocean and whether Chinese expansionist policy worries the British.

Sir Denis said that border crossing by the Chinese would not worry British. But there was an area from Indonesia via Singapore and Malaysia through Burma up to Bangladesh. This is an area that concerned the British very much. It was an area in which the Chinese were very active especially in Malaysia. In Burma also if they stirred their stumps they could do a lot of damage.

FS reassured Sir Denis that the British need not feel threatened or worried in this area since we could look after their interests.
0658. Note from Ministry of External Affairs to the Swiss Embassy in New Delhi.

No.PSP/415/12/71 December 31, 1971

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of Switzerland and with reference to the Aide Memoire given by His Excellency the Ambassador of Switzerland on December 22, 1971, the Ministry wishes to inform the Embassy that it notes the willingness of the Government of Switzerland to cooperate, 'more particularly in regard to visits to military camps and civilian internee camps and to supervise the application of obligations resulting from such action', and to say that the matters referred to therein are being examined by the Government of India. In the meanwhile, as the Government of Switzerland are aware, the International Committee of the Red Cross are carrying out its humanitarian work under the relevant Geneva Conventions.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Embassy of Switzerland the assurances of its highest consideration.

659. Press Conference of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.

New Delhi, December 31, 1971.

QUESTION: I would like to know whether your assessment during tour abroad and meeting the Heads of States, including that of the United States, and the reactions after Pakistan declaring war on us were different.

THE PRIME MINISTER: I would say that on the whole they were accurate; of course there was some little difference.

Q: Do you see in Mr. Bhutto's latest utterance any indication of a change towards the acceptance of the reality? And could you assure Mr. Bhutto that you accept the independence of Pakistan as it stands now so that peace talks could start?
P. M: Mr. Bhutto has made very many statements, and not all of them saying the same thing. But I do not know what you mean by saying ‘do we recognize Pakistan?’ we do recognize Pakistan but we also recognize Bangladesh.

Q: Now that a brilliant victory has been scored by India over Pakistan, and you are being hailed as Empress of India, Bharat Mata and Durga, what have you decided (a) about the captured areas being returned to Pakistan, (b) repatriation of Pakistani prisoners of war, (c) getting back Pakistan occupied areas in Kashmir and (d) getting back our jawans and officers, if any, who are in the custody of Pakistan?

P. M: To all these questions I do not think I can give any answer now, because it is a matter for negotiations. So far as territory is concerned, our stand has been quite clear. The whole idea of ceasefire line was to maintain peace and security. Now we have to see whether this has been attained. And, I think it may be necessary to have some adjustments, but it is all a matter for talking over. I don’t think that I can give a categorized answer.

Q: Before the war some western powers were saying that they would press for the release of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. Now the war is over. Have you any information if any of these powers has done anything to secure the release of Sheikh Mujib Rahman? Secondly, since Sheikh Mujibur Rahman is the President of Bangladesh, under what law can the President of a foreign country be kept under detention?

P. M: I think your question is a very pertinent one and it is for the United Nations and all the international community to give an answer to it. So far as the efforts to release Sheikh Mujib are concerned, we are certainly making every possible effort and I think that many other countries also are doing so.

Q: what is your assessment of the present military situation on Indo-Pakistan borders; is it an uneasy ceasefire, with bleak prospects of a truce agreement or is it indicative of some lull before a big storm that is to come?

P. M: it is very difficult to say. As you know there have been breaches of the ceasefire.

Q: Earlier there were statements in Delhi about movement of Chinese communist troops during the war. Have these movements continued? Have they caused any concern or anxiety to the Government of India?

P. M: I don’t think that there is any sizable movement. There was some movement but I don’t think that there were threatening movements.
Q: Indo-American relations have suffered quite a setback in the past two months. How do you see the future relationship and what do you think America should do to try to patch them up again?

P. M: Well, if they have had a setback, it certainly is not due to us. We have done everything possible to be friendly, and because we value friendship with America we would very much like our relationship to be friendly again. What can be done, I think, it is easier for you to figure out. A certain situation exists and one must see and one must recognize the reality of it. Also much of this depends on whether the U.S. Administration wants friendship or not because that is the first question which you have to ask them. So far as the people are concerned, I must say that they have shown the greatest understanding and sympathy throughout this very difficult period and a very large portion of my mail is from American citizens, from quite old people -- I mean from an old lady of 85 to Class III of some schools. Also, I must say that the American media, news media have also given a correct picture of what is happening. I thought, the realities were obvious not merely to us but to most of the world. The realities are that a situation was created in Bangladesh, whereby the Pakistani army sought to annihilate an entire population, an entire people, 75 million of them. This was regarded by the world community as an internal affair, although even according to the United Nations it is not really so. You cannot annihilate the whole people and be allowed to do it even if it is in your own country. But the world community chose to see it as an internal problem, although even according to the United Nations it is not really so. You cannot annihilate the whole people and be allowed to do it even if it is in your own country. But the world community chose to see it as an internal problem. Well, very soon this problem overflowed into our country in the shape of over 10 million refugees, who were wounded, starving, ill. They spread a certain amount of disease in the beginning. We had tremendous financial problems, to feed them and give them shelter, and then they created administrative problems, social and political problems, and most dangerous of all, a danger to our security. Now this was the situation then. We were told by all other countries that they were doing everything possible to help towards a peaceful solution. We have not been able to see to this date what exactly was done to this end. Nobody has really been able to point this out to us. If it was a question of talking to the Pakistan Government, well, nine months a pretty long time; and if they are not going to listen in nine months, what guarantee was there that they were going to listen in the next month or two?

Now the present reality is that a new country, a new State, has come into being. Its name is Bangladesh. It has a Government and it is working hard and fast to bring about normal conditions, and it has, by and large, already succeeded.

Q: You have mentioned the problems presented to India by these millions of refugees. But millions of them are so happy here and they are so well looked after that they do not want to go back. How are you going to encourage them?
P. M: I am afraid you are not very well informed because firstly, although we did our very best, I do not think anybody can say that they were very comfortable here. You have only to see the TV films taken -- perhaps by yourself -- of the conditions in the camps.

The question is whether they want to remain in India and not go back. I do not believe that it is true. I think the great majority of them do want to go back. They said they did not want to go back at a stage when they were sure that they would be killed when they returned. They could not foresee a free Bangladesh presumably at that time and, therefore, they were not sure of their future. Today when they see that there is a stable government, they see that things are returning to normal, already 260,000 have gone back and we think that most of them will have returned by the end of January and certainly by the end of February.

Q: Could you give us some idea of what Mr. Nixon wrote to you in his recent letter? Has he tried to justify his blatantly partisan attitude during the India-Pakistan war or there is some change in his attitude?

P. M: I do not see what purpose is served by continuing this sort of polemics. Had Mr. Nixon wanted his views to be made public, he would have given his letter to the press.

Q: Is the Government of India likely to take a fresh look at its relationship with the Arab countries, particularly Egypt, in view of their attitude to (a) the war thrust on India by Pakistan, (b) the reaction of Egypt in particular to Mr. Bhutto’s emergence as President of Pakistan and (c) the attitude of the Arab countries towards Bangladesh?

P. M: If you follow all that has been happening in India and how we formulate our policies, it is not a pendulum that swings from side to side. We base our policies on certain basic matters, ideas, ideals and so on and there is no cause for us to change our policy. So far as reviewing it or giving it a fresh look is concerned, that is done constantly by our Foreign Office. As you know, even with China, our attitude remained consistently the same regardless of their attitude towards us.

Q: The self styled President of Pakistan, Mr. Bhutto, is every day threatening another war with India. Do you expect any such war in future?

P. M: I think it is wrong to say ‘self styled’. He has been sworn in as President. Some of his speeches have been threatening and some have also made some friendly gestures. It is very natural that Pakistan should be in a traumatic stage. I am sure as they return to normal and calmer thinking, they will see that it is in the long term interests of us all that India and Pakistan should have better relations.
Q: What will be the eventual outcome of Bihari Muslims in Bangladesh? Do you think there is a possibility that they might wind up as evacuees in India?

P. M: There is no chance of that at all. There were a few reprisals right at the beginning. But the situation has been in control now for quite a while. Well, if I may say with due respect I think that was a rather mischievous sort of question, because one of the Western press tried to show up and printed these rather terrible pictures of a few people being killed. I am against anybody being killed and certainly against people taking the law into their hands and so on. But one must view things in perspective. When a million people were killed, when on the eve of surrender, 218 intellectuals were brutally murdered, tortured in front of their families, their children, their daughters, their wives, we did not see these pictures appearing in many newspapers. Twenty people were killed afterwards. I agree that they were brutally killed. But there is some sense of proportion between twenty and over a million people, and I think that the restraint which the people of Bangladesh have shown in this matter is quite remarkable.

Q: Would it help if Mr. Nixon was to visit India and Bangladesh to see the reality for himself?

P. M: This is for the President to decide himself.

Q: How will you assess the Indo-Soviet relations in the present year?

P. M: The Indo-Soviet relations have been good and I think that our friendship has deepened. This gave us tremendous moral support during the critical period.

Q: In view of the stand taken by the United Nations to keep the Indian Ocean free from the foreign ships, what stand are we going to take on the presence of the U.S. 7th Fleet in this Area? Are you going to take this matter back to the United Nations?

P. M: I don’t think it is still there. Is it?

Q: There was an earlier question as to whether the Nixon Administration wanted to improve relations. The Nixon Administration has called India the aggressor and Mr. Rogers has in a recent press conference said he has no reason to apologise for that statement. Could you tell us what your views are of the Nixon Administration’s policy? What do you think is their view about India?

P. M: I think specially since you come from New York yourself, you are able to answer all this. I don’t think it is proper for me to go into it. I think what has been said and how it tallies with what has actually happened, it is there for all the world to see and people’s saying things does not change the situation. You can say something for one year, for 10 years, or a hundred years but the reality of the situation is not going to change just because you happen to be a big country or a rich country. The reality remains, as the U.S. has discovered in other parts of the world, by the way.

Q: In view of our recent experience and also the renewed emphasis that you have recently laid on the need for self reliance and reducing dependence on foreign aid what readjustment or re-orientation of policies and attitudes are necessary for the people and the Government to achieve these targets?

P. M: So far as re-assessment is concerned, it is happening all the time. Your life is not in compartments. You do not say from Monday to Tuesday I do something else and from Wednesday to Friday I do something else. It is one continuous thing. You are re-assessing your policy every single day and if a change needs to be made, it is gradually made all along the line. Our desire for self-reliance is also not new but now we are in a better position to work towards this. We can do without aid now, whereas earlier we could not, even though our desire was to do without aid.

Q: What would be your comment on the resumption of American bombing on Democratic Republic of North Vietnam?

P. M: The question was about the bombing of North Vietnam. I share the world’s horror at this, coming so soon after President Nixon’s statement. I forgot the exact words, something about bullets and shells being not the way to bring about peace.

Q: Has your Government made an assessment of the economic needs of Bangladesh? If so, how big a hand can India lend to Bangladesh?

P. M: Our people have been working with the Bangladesh experts and Government for some time on this. Whatever we can do and what the Bangladesh people would like us to do, we shall try to do. Fortunately, the damage to the economy of Bangladesh is not as great as we had feared at first. The tactics as well as the rapid advance of the Indian Army also helped to mitigate the damage. There has been damage to communication and so on. Our railways have done a very good work in trying to re-establish the links and our Army has done a very good work in re-building of bridges and so on. It is certainly a big task but it is a manageable task.

Q: How do you view the prospects of peace in the world and in this sub-continent, particularly in 1972?

P. M: We all desire peace. We can achieve it by working for peace. There are different kinds of peace. There is peace of the graveyard too and I do not think any of us wants that kind of a peace and when some nations were telling us that a solution was possible in Bangladesh my fear was that they were envisaging that kind of a solution, that is, if the people were annihilated there would be no problem.

Obviously, we could not accept that situation. There can be peace when people allow other people to live their own lives and everybody is concerned for the rights of the human being, for human dignity, human freedom and the voice of the underprivileged.

Q: Will the Government of India now tell the United States to refrain from arming any neighbouring country in view of the fact that the U.S. arms were used only against India by Pakistan, failing which it will be considered as a hostile act or an unfriendly act?

P. M: A hostile act or an unfriendly act has a specific meaning in international language. But we do regard this as not friendly to India. It has happened before and we have heard indications that it may happen again.

Q: Has not the time now come to say goodbye to U.S. aid and ask all the AID agencies functioning here to wind up their show?

P.M: I would like to make one thing clear. With the growth of knowledge and so on, somehow the people instead of becoming clearer about language, seem to be blurring it more. Aid, as you all know, is not aid at all; it is a long term credit, and India has so far paid back every cent, penny, paisa of what we owed to other countries; so it is not really aid as such; it is merely a loan. As I said before, we are trying to be fully self reliant; with every passing year we do more things ourselves; we have greater know how, and greater capacity. And today if countries want to stop their so called aid, we will have hardship in some area; there are some specialized areas where we may not be able to manage by ourselves immediately but it is not going to push us back. We can manage. It will mean greater hardship but it is something that we can manage.

Q: I am asking a supplementary question. Recently Americans loaned submarine Ghazi and that was used against India. Do you not think this unfriendly action, and should not India protest about it?

P.M: What is the point of counting all the unfriendly actions? As you know all these things have their own reactions. It did us no harm.

Q: Pakistan was supported by America and China, two nuclear power countries. Are you thinking of reviewing your atomic policy and planning to produce atom bombs just as a deterrent against possible threats from those two nuclear powers?

P.M: I do not think it is necessary. I think we were able to deter people quite sufficiently without.
Q: During the recent Bangladesh developments we witnessed that the international community is completely indifferent to the sufferings of the people. Now, there does not seem to be any indication of any international effort to help them rebuild themselves. Do you feel that in recent years there has been toughening of international relations, certain heartless attitude of the big powers in dealing with each other and with other nations?

P. M: It is not true to say that no nation is trying to help them; I think they are having talks with some countries which are wanting to give help. I do not know whether the world is more callous than before or not; it is very difficult to measure the degree of callousness; but they have shown a lot of callousness in the Bangladesh situation as well as other situations around the world.

Q: Has any country like France or Britain offered you their good offices to start peace talks with Pakistan and to get Mujib released?

P. M: These are two separate things. So far as talks with Pakistan are concerned, I think this should be dealt with on a purely bilateral level. I believe some countries - I do not know exactly which at this point - are trying to get Mujib released.

Q: Some time back, somewhere towards the end of November, it seemed that we were very close to restoring some part of our relationship with China. How do you view our relationship with China in 1972?

P. M: I hope it will get much better. I do not think it has deteriorated, by the way. I think the Chinese reaction was exactly as I expected; neither more nor less.

Q: Will there be any changes in the Indian Five Year Plan because of the war?

P. M: There has been a re-appraisal of the Plan. I think we do have to look at our priorities again, because this has been a heavy financial burden. But it is too early to say whether there has to be any great change or not.

Q: Following the death of Dr. Sarabhai, will our atomic energy and space research programme suffer a setback?

P. M: Dr. Sarabhai occupied a very important place and he was a very fine person, a very fine scientist as well as a fine man. So, naturally, his death is a loss to Indian science and to the country. But no country is really dependent on any person and I am sure there are many very bright young people and more will be coming up as time goes on.

Q: Ideologically, how do you see the Chinese and American support to the military regime of Pakistan? Is it not a collapse of Chinese interpretation of Marxism and American understanding of democracy? It is more pertinent in the context of India combining politics with modernity.
P.M: Each country looks at these questions from the point of view, what it considers, its own interest. Some countries also have a picture of what they consider their global interests. We in India also look at things from our own interest. We are not trying to be holier than other people. But we believe that our interests are so closely tied up with our ideals that if we separate them our interests will not be well served; and that is what we have stood for, our voice has always been raised for freedom, democracy and the rights of the common man. Now what other countries do, I do not think it is fair for me to dilate on.

Q: Regarding self-reliance in economic policies, don’t you think that in the present mood of the people some radical and concrete measures are required instead of continued assessment by the various Ministries and departments?

P. M: I do not think the two are contradictory. I think that radical measures can be and are taken even though Ministries make the assessments.

Q: In view of your observation that India and Pakistan should remain at peace with each other and also in view of the latest statement of Mr. Bhutto published this morning, would you like to renew the country’s offer of ‘no war pact’ with Pakistan?

P. M: I don’t know whether it is necessary to make a formal offer of a ‘no war pact’, but I think we have made our views very clear that we don’t believe in war, and that if India and Pakistan were to give up thought of war and cooperate peacefully it would be of mutual benefit.

Q: In view of Pakistan’s continued hostile action, would you consider reimposition of contraband control as was done by the U.S.A. as a measure of defence, on October 22, 1962, with reference to Cuba even though there was a thing like Bay of Pigs disaster, or is it your judgment that adoption Of U.N. Resolution declaring the Indian Ocean virtually as an area of peace would be good enough?

P.M: The resolution is good, but obviously one has to work to implement it. India has always believed that Indian Ocean should be an area of peace and we shall do everything possible to keep it so.

Q: Going back to the question of self-reliance will it be correct to say if the United States offers economic aid again, your Government will reject it?

P. M: It depends on what the help is for, and what the nature of it is and the conditions and all kinds of things. As I said, we do plan to cut down on foreign aid, no matter from where and it is only for certain very special things that we might accept help.
Q: With the conclusion of negotiations between the two Germanys, how soon will you recognize G.D.R. now?

P. M: I will let you know as soon as we take a decision.

Q: The Opposition parties are critical of the move to put off the budget session by one or a few more months and they say that the ruling party is afraid of facing the poll after imposing very heavy taxes. What is your justification for putting off the budget session?

P. M: We have not put it off at all. It usually is either in February or March. When there are elections sometimes, it is a little later. And, election date is not fixed by us; it is fixed by the Election Commissioner.

Q: There was some controversy about a particular treaty between the United States and Pakistan, you said. Is there any treaty between them that is unknown to us?

P. M: If it is unknown to me, how can I say?

Q: You said about China that the reaction was expected; nothing less, nothing more. But did you expect Yugoslavia and Egypt also to behave in the same way?

P. M: I don’t think the first resolution of the United Nations was necessarily against us, because when a problem is put, talking merely of a ceasefire and so on a lot of people get taken in by it, and many countries have problems in their own countries, and naturally they do not want it to affect them.

Q: Some political parties have made a suggestion that the state of emergency now in force should be lifted before elections are held to State Assemblies. Do you think the time has come to consider this suggestion to lift the state of emergency?

P. M: This suggestion was mine, not that of the Opposition parties. On the contrary, they thought that the emergency should continue. We thought that if we had some powers whereby, if necessary, emergency could be put in some limited areas in the country, then it would not be necessary for the whole country to be under emergency. But the Opposition did not like this, and they themselves said that ‘it is better that you continue the emergency’. That is why it is there. But we do not want to continue it any longer than is absolutely necessary.

Q: Is there any change in your desire to hold elections in West Bengal in view of the fact that you have not been able to get a decision from the Opposition?

P. M: These matters are in the hands of the Election Commissioner. We have put our views and presumably the Opposition parties will put their views. But I think he has certain difficulties at this moment.
Q: Referring to China, you said that its conduct has been neither more nor less than what was expected. Would you say the same of the Japanese Government?

P.M: I can only say we had hoped that some of these other countries like Japan would have taken a more realistic attitude.

Q: I am referring in particular to the Japanese Government’s action suspending aid and now offering to resume talks. Don’t you think this very insulting?

P.M: I think they are just being realistic. Once they realize that their previous position was not the right one, they now take the right one. What response we give is for us to consider.

Q: Some of the very countries which have publicly been very critical of us and have been talking of our being in occupation of East Pakistan are now suggesting privately that we should keep our forces in Bangladesh for quite some time, presumably to safeguard their own properties and investments there, whereas we are preparing to thin out our forces and withdraw them. Would you like to state your policy on this matter?

P. M: Our policy is regardless of whether people are criticizing us or are praising us. Our policy is based on what we consider the right thing to do. I think it is right for the Indian army to move out as soon as it possibly can. Already quite a large number have come out and the others, I hope, will come out soon. As I said, earlier there was some fear about the non Bengalis who are resident there, about their safety. But I think the Bangladesh Government is in full control of the situation.

Q: What form will aid to Bangladesh take? Will it be government to government aid or will private investment be allowed as so many of our industrialists seem to be too eager to do?

P. M: I think this is for the Government of Bangladesh to decide what kind of help they want. But I might say, if I may share a secret with so many people, that those of our people who want there have come back full of praise for the new young people they have in their Secretariat and so on. They say they are of a very high caliber, well trained, very intelligent and dedicated. I don’t think they will want very much help from our side.

Q: In the recent war with Pakistan we have seen very old and friendly countries never cared for us at the time of real need. What will be our reaction for our future relations with them?

P. M: As I said we are not at all bothered whether other people care for us or not, whether they abuse us or flatter us. All these things are superficial things.
We are concerned with what we consider to be in India’s interest and in the interest of world peace and we shall pursue that path whether we have people with us, or whether we are alone. I have said this many times and I shall continue to say it because that is the stand of the Government of India and I think, of the people of India.

Q: Would you clarify to the people in India whether the Pak occupied area of Kashmir is linked with the withdrawal of forces when you negotiate with Pakistan?

P. M: I think the people of India have full faith in me and they do not need me to clarify anything to them.

Q: Do you propose to have a mutual defence treaty with the new Bangladesh Government to safeguard their security?

P. M: I think you must have seen today there was a report about a speech or statement by the Foreign Minister of Bangladesh. He said there in no need for us to have treaties. Should there be a need, we will consider it then.

Q: Mr. Bhutto had said that he was working on a Summit meeting between India and Pakistan. Would you think that a Summit meeting at this stage would be advisable? If so, what should be its agenda? And also what preparation in needed before that Summit meeting could be held?

P. M: I do not think that one can decide at what level the meeting should be just now. As I said that when the situation is more settled in Pakistan, then these things can be worked out.

Q: Have you any fear that the personality cult in our country might receive a further boost as a result of recent developments?

P. M: I do not have any fear at all about anything.

Q: In the morning newspapers you might have noticed a new type of influx - - some people joining your party from Cong(O). It seems if this goes on unabated, the party might grow even bigger than what it was before the split. What are you going to do about it?

P. M: What is important is not how big the party is but whether all these people who are coming in well sincerely abide by our programmes, our policies and the kind of functioning we want to have in this country.

Q: May I ask in this connection, whether you would forgive those people who actually expelled you from Congress and take them back if they wish to return? I am told that some feelers have already been thrown through some intermediaries that they would like to come back.
P. M: There is no question of forgiveness because I never held any resentment against them or anybody. I think that life is too short to waste on such unproductive emotions or feelings. But so far as people’s coming back is concerned, it depends on whether their coming back is going to strengthen the party and strengthen us in what we want to do.

Q: Don’t you think that you are going to State elections too soon with two unhealthy trends which might develop out of it? One is that your party may, on the ground of a national victory sweep the polls and to that extent weaken democracy, and, secondly, the national rallying point which you have become could have been utilized for a period at least to channel our energies to productive purposes and that trend may suffer because all political trivialities will now crop up.

P. M: It is a funny way of strengthening democracy by not having elections. If elections had not been due, I would not have held the elections earlier. As a matter of fact they are even now being held a little later than they should have been because they should have been in February. While the actual fighting was on, I did not think it possible to hold elections. But when we consulted the Opposition leaders, several of them said that elections should not be postponed beyond March, and I felt well if you can’t hold them in February, it is unlikely that you will be able to hold them in March. So we were for postponement but most of the Opposition parties were not. And now that there is a ceasefire, there is no actual fighting, there is no good reason not to hold elections, especially because in India, because of weather and so on, it is not possible to hold them in every month. If you have the monsoons then large areas cannot go to polls. So we are restricted in the timings. Therefore, it is a good thing to hold them.

The other statement you made is equally astonishing, which is, if you have elections, the Opposition parties will not help in economic programmes. I think it is a very sad commentary on them that when they see that the need of the nation is for economic progress, they should offer an excuse, elections or any other excuse, or take a contrary line. I doubt if it will help them or the country; but postponing the elections is not going to help.

Q: Will you state that during these elections the DIR will not apply to Opposition parties who might be criticizing your party or the ruling party?

P. M: It certainly won’t be applied for criticizing us; it will apply only if it is the national interest.

Q: You did not give your own opinion whether you think that return of some of the old stalwarts will strengthen the party in implementing its purposes or will weaken it. You left it rather vague.
P.M: Because surely we were not discussing it personality by personality; so you can only give a general answer. The policy of the party in taking back people from the Congress, who were in the Congress earlier, is to view each case separately.

Q: Madam Prime Minister, this year two events have happened. One is winning the elections and the other winning of the war. Which is your finest hour?

P. M: I am one of those people who enjoy a challenge and these were indeed great challenges. But I do not think life is ever without challenges. It is only when I am dead that you can see which was the finest hour.

Q: Have you received any specific feeler from Kamaraj to get back? We learn that in Madras both the Congress parties rank

P.M: I have not received any.

Q: The year 1971 has proved a lucky year to the country under the great leadership of Mrs. Gandhi. In that light, I would like to know how we should celebrate 1972 tonight so that it may bring more luck and prosperity.

P.M: Firstly, I do not believe in luck. Luck comes only to those who have the character to attract it and who have the character to hold it. It is not something that by chance flutters in through the window. You have to work jolly hard. And I think the best New Year resolution you can make is that everybody should work hard to create the type of India which we all want.

Q: You have been talking of cutting down imports. Have you decided to completely stop import of Hollywood films some of which are your favourite also?

P.M: I am surprised that you know which are my favourites. I have not seen a film for a long time now, unfortunately. I don’t think it is a good thing not to see them. But it just has happened.

Q: The question remains unanswered.

P. M: She is the de facto Minister.

Q: Shri Bansi Lal said in a public meeting yesterday that you have become so popular all over the world that if you stand against Nixon, you will defeat him. Any comments?

P. M: I think politicians talk too much.

Q: Do you envisage any difficulties in the supply of international aid to Bangladesh due to the failure of other countries to recognize the Government of Bangladesh? In other words how will this aid be channeled in, if there is no formal recognition between the United States and the Bangladesh Government or between any other country and the Bangladesh Government?

P.M: I think the United States itself was not recognized for many years after its Independence, I think, seven years. The U.S.A. did not recognize the Soviet Union for 16 years; it still has not. Do not think any of this has prevented their having every kind of relations, contacts, trade and everything.

Q: May I have this opportunity on my behalf and my colleagues to wish you a very happy and glorious new year and pray for many such victories for India under your great and dynamic leadership?

P. M: Thank you very much. Any more questions?

Q: When are you likely to visit Bangladesh?

P.M: I do think that there are far too many advertisements in newspapers. If they have so many pages, we should get more news, or articles or things which are more of interest to everybody. I think you seem to have run out of questions.

Q: Some people have been urging that we should demand reparations from Pakistan for the war it treacherously thrust on us. Could we have your views in the matter?

P. M: There is no doubt that Pakistan did commit aggression on us and the matter can be considered.

Q: During all your speeches you have been emphasizing the moral aspects of the war. This was probably the only just war in the history of mankind as far as I understand history. The western newspapers and most of the western politicians are looking at the moral aspects of the war. Is it not that something is wrong with their attitude? Is it not that the time has come when they should change their attitude to see the happenings in this part of the sub-continent in a different perspective?

P. M: We believe in co-existence. I do not think it is for us to say what other countries should think and what they should do, except when it concerns us. I do not think it is true to say that this is the only moral war. I saw my friend here shaking his head. He is probably thinking of the American War of Independence. There have been many wars of Independence; there were many other such fightings which had every good reason and the morality behind them. But while the moral aspect is very important and the question of ideal is very important, I think we should give due credit to the achievement of our armed forces helped by the para-military forces such as BSF and others. They really did a superb job. As many outsiders who know more about military strategy than I do have said that they did it with the minimum of damage. Somebody who was livings in Dacca, a foreigner, has told us that he himself was pilot in World War II and he has seen other fightings in other places but this is the first time he saw pilots actually risking their lives in order to see that they hit the target and not anything besides it. I think that the moral aspect is important but I think the preparedness of the Indian army and the leadership as well as the quality of the Indian jawans is something that needs our praise.

Q: Could you sum up India's present position in the international community?

P.M: I do not know what you mean about present position. Our position is the same. We do what we think is right. We have done it in the past, we are doing it now and we shall continue to do so. So far as other countries are concerned, what I said to them when I was there is not that we are asking you to do this because it is good for India, but we are asking you to face the realities of the situation because we think that is in your interest. Since the situation is going to be there every country should have seen what was in its long term interest. This is all that I tried to do when I went abroad.

Earlier, I think you said something just now about my going to U.S.A. I think I might as well clarify that I have no territorial ambition whatsoever.

Q: What is your assessment of the American Seventh Fleet being in the Bay of Bengal during the crucial days of the conflict?

P.M: The question is why was the Seventh Fleet sent to the Bay of Bengal at a very crucial time. I can only say that I do not think it had any good intentions.

Q: What do you think of BBC’s coverage of the war?

P. M: I have not listened in and I don’t know.

Q: It is reported that an extensive tour programme is prepared by the Congress President for your tour all over the country to campaign for the Assembly elections. Have you accepted it?

P. M: I am touring all the time, whether the programme is arranged by the Congress President or somebody else. Part of my job is to tour the whole time so that I can keep in touch with what is happening.

Q: Earlier, you said that there has been no change in your attitude towards China. Does it mean that you are hoping to normalize the relations with that country and sending an Ambassador soon?

P. M: Now don’t jump various steps. I do not know when an Ambassador will go but so far as normalization of relations is there, that was my hope earlier and it remains my hope.
Q: When do you propose to appoint our Ambassador in Bangladesh?
P. M: The matter is under consideration.

Q: If the press reports are correct, a large quantity of arms and ammunition have been smuggled into West Bengal from Bangladesh, because most of our border posts are unmanned at the present moment. It is also being said that these might fall into the hands of parties wedded to violence and it may lead to intensification of interparty clashes.

P. M: I think some arms were smuggled in, but the border posts are manned, and I do not think there is great danger of that. Now we have seen in Bengal that the public is also very much aware of this. I think they are going to stand up to any kind of violence of this type.

Q: In view of the atrocities committed by the West Pakistan army, would you consider the admissibility of setting up a War Crimes Tribunal, since certain things have happened which have nothing to do with fighting a clean war.

P. M: This is up to the Government of Bangladesh.

Q: Now that there is no East Bengal, do you think we should continue with the name of West Bengal?

P. M: As a matter of fact there was no reason even before. It could have been East Bengal and Bengal.

Q: East Pakistan also?

P. M: We don’t say West Pakistan any more. We just say Pakistan and Bangladesh.

Q: Is there a proposal to make Gen. Manekshaw Field Marshal because of the excellent services rendered by him during the war.

P. M: He did render excellent services; there is no doubt, I think we can end now. Nobody has any more questions and we have gone the full hour. I would just like to say this, because a question was asked earlier and I did not give a complete reply about reprisals. I want to go back to that because the hint was that perhaps it was Mukti Bahini which was indulging in this. So I wanted to say that the people who have fought so heroically for their freedom and sacrificed so much for the liberation, for the creation of Bangladesh, I am quite sure, I have full confidence, they will now work equally hard for the unity and reconstruction of their country and also to give their country the right sort of image in the world. I am giving just an added argument why I don’t think that sort of thing can continue.
Now, 1971 has been a year of grim challenges if I can put it that way. It has been a year of tremendous hard work and of tremendous effort for us in India. But it has also been a year of achievement. And I think the two always go together. You can never have achievement unless you have challenge and hard work. In India we do not want a soft life. We don’t want an easy path. We want to have challenges so that we can prove that we can meet them and we can overcome them. I think somebody asked me yesterday or the day before, what my goal was. Now goals, of course, are many and I don’t think that one ever reaches one’s goal because that would not be a goal then. I think what I would like for my country is that we live in dignity, and as our army has shown, we die with dignity too when we have to die. So far as my view on life is concerned, just this morning I was looking at some book and my eyes fell on Browning. I don’t know whether I have got the words right because I have not got it with me, but he said something that life should be a stuff on which to try the strength of one’s soul. I think all these challenges that we are getting in India are strengthening us, are uniting our people; and so long as we continue to go in the right direction, I have no doubt that we shall overcome our difficulties.

May I say ‘Thank you very much’ to the press of India and to that of the other countries, because they have also had to face many challenges, and they have faced them with courage and good reporting. May I wish you all a very happy 1972, by ‘happiness’ I do not wish you an easy time, but I wish that whatever difficulties you may have, you will overcome in joy.

New Delhi, January 1, 1972.

Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi

The Swiss Ambassador, Dr. Frits Real, called on the Foreign Minister at 11.30 this morning.

2. F.M. congratulated the Swiss Ambassador on the smooth efficiency with which repatriation of the diplomatic personal was carried out.

3. In reply FM's enquiry whether the Swiss Ambassador was in touch with his counterpart in Islamabad, the latter answered in the affirmative and said that in order to quicken action, radar communication has been established between his Embassy here and the Swiss Embassy in Islamabad, and they conferred with each other twice a day.

4. FM enquired whether it was customary, in such cases, that the Swiss Embassy in Islamabad would furnish any political reports to the country whose interests they may look after. The Swiss Ambassador clarified that they would perform only those obligations which were of a "technical" nature, and no political information would be furnished. The Swiss Ambassador added, in reply to FM's query, that his colleague in Islamabad was functioning only in West Pakistan and had no communication with Dacca.

5. FM said that this was an unprecedented situation when a big chunk of a country has become independent after turmoil, there would be no precedent as to how to deal with the situation. The Swiss Ambassador agreed and added that the situation is more complicated, because the country has not yet been recognised.

6. FM said that, internationally, the country may not be recognized but the hard reality is that they are in de facto control. In a situation like this, how would the Swiss Ambassador in New Delhi or his counterpart in Islamabad deal with them?

7. Dr. Real said that Islamabad did not even have the means to deal with Bangladesh. He himself would, therefore, have to deal with Bangladesh because when the war ended, the Indian army took over certain tasks in regard to the Pakistan army; they also declared that they would obey the Geneva Conventions. Switzerland has some obligations as a protecting power under the Conventions - functions in regard to prisoners of war and civilian internees. Switzerland could, however, only deal with a government which had signed the Convention and that government was the Government of India. But de facto, he could deal with Bangladesh on the spot. The protecting power had obligations which in some ways were parallel with the activities of the ICRC. As a protecting power for Pakistan in India, he was entitled to visit the pows and civilian internees in Bangladesh.

8. FM wondered how “civilian internees” would be defined. Various aspects would have to be studied carefully. In the east, where these events took place, there is a country which we recognized as independent and sovereign. What exactly was the implication of the term “civilian internees” would have to be enquired into.

9. The Swiss Ambassador said that from the advice he had received from Berne “civilian internees” meant those who had been interned under the protection of the Indian army – that would mean West Pakistani officials.

10. FM intervened to say that there were no “West Pakistani” officials. In fact, there would be only Pakistani officials. The Swiss Ambassador said that there may be non-officials also who may not be interned. He recalled the case of Germans in the USA during the Second World War. All the Germans were not interned but as a protecting power for Germany, Switzerland could visit them according to the Geneva Convention.

11. FM said that our initial reaction was that they any action taken by Bangladesh in this respect is something over which we have no control because we recognized them as a sovereign power. Secretary (East), who was also present, reminded the Ambassador that there was a joint command of the Indian and Bangladesh forces.

12. FM clarified that our functions were not those of an occupying power and that is why we had sent only an interim reply to the Swiss Note. The Swiss Ambassador said that his Government was pressing for an early reply. They would like to know whether India recognized the obligations of the protecting power under the Geneva Convention. India had accepted Switzerland as the protecting power for Pakistan. General Manekshaw had said that the war prisoners were under the protection of the Indian army.

13. FM said that we were not quite clear whether, because Switzerland was acting as Pakistan’s protecting power in India, it was automatically looking after Pakistan’s interests in Bangladesh. F.M. assured the Swiss Ambassador that the Indian army had a tradition and in accordance with these traditions, you would fulfill the spirit of the Convention but the technical question is whether, because Switzerland is looking after the interests of Pakistan in India, it is automatically entitled to function in another separate country. We were studying this question; the Swiss Ambassador may also study it.
14. The Swiss Ambassador then said that the Pakistan Government had given permission for the Swiss Ambassador in Islamabad to visit Indian prisoners, but here he was not able to visit the Indian camps. The Swiss Ambassador further added that this permission was sought at the request of Secretary (East).

15. Secretary (East) explained that we only wanted to know whether the Pakistani would agree to the Swiss Ambassador in Islamabad visiting the camps.

16. The Swiss Ambassador said that permission for the Swiss Embassy in Islamabad to go to Lyallpur had been received. He added that General Maitra of the ICRC had even asked for a list of the prisoners. He also said that Mr. Tosio, the Swiss Counselor in Karachi, had been to see the Indian sailors detained in Karachi. The Pakistan Government has also given permission for a representative of shipping company to see the Indian crew whenever they wished.

17. Secretary (East) clarified that we requested the Swiss to look after our interest in Pakistan. What was involved was our consular interests in Pakistan, and in Switzerland’s capacity as our protecting power, we had requested that Swiss Ambassador that the Indian crew who had been off-loaded in Pakistan, should be released.

18. The Swiss Ambassador said that “protecting power” was defined in Geneva Convention. What would happen if Pakistan took the same view as we took?

19. F.M. said that we would not object if Pakistan took that stand and we would leave it at that. F.M. added, however, that the reason why he had asked in the beginning whether the Swiss Ambassador’s work involved political matters was that the question of internees in Bangladesh was a political issue. The impression the Swiss Ambassador had given was that that political matter were outside his purview.

20. The Swiss Ambassador said that the prisoners of war were under Indian supervision or Indian protection. FM explained that there was a distinction between the two. Here is unprecedented situation, and even if we wanted we cannot function in Bangladesh, because we had recognized Bangladesh.

21. The Swiss Ambassador said that his Government has asked that one of his officers should be sent to Dacca and contact the Commanding Officer in charge of the prisoners and also, if necessary, the local authorities. He did not, however, act although he wanted to send this officer on Monday last and, in fact, the Bangladesh authorities had given him a visa. The Swiss Ambassador asked whether India did not want Mr. Iuthi, who had recently come form Switzerland to look after Pakistan affairs in his Embassy should go to Dacca.

22. FM said that this also clearly raised a very important question whether a member of the Swiss Mission which is looking after Pakistan’s interests in India, was in capacity permitted to look after Pakistan’s interests in Bangladesh also. The Swiss Ambassador thought that it was under the Geneva Convention, but the Foreign Minister pointed out that there were legal complications. The “civilian internees” are with Bangladesh and not with us. FM enquired whether Pakistan had asked the Swiss Embassy to look after its internees in Bangladesh also; in that case it would be a simple matter. The essential points is that merely because Switzerland was looking after the interests of Pakistan in India and India’s interests in Pakistan, it did not follow automatically that Switzerland was looking after Pakistan’s interests in Bangladesh.

23. The Swiss Ambassador said that it was just a question of prisoners of war, as protecting power Switzerland had to look after the prisoners of war. Explaining a hypothetical situation, the Swiss Ambassador said that if, for example, during World War II American prisoners were held by the German army in Austria, the protecting power for America could insist on the German authorities providing facilities to visit the American prisoners in Austria.

24. FM pointed out that there were two categories (i) civilians, and (ii) army personnel. There was also a unified command and the surrender was in another country. We have to examine very carefully the legal implications. This is because Bangladesh is not a party to the Geneva Convention. Article 45 did not contemplate a country which Islamabad not recognized.

25. The Swiss Ambassador said that he would inform Berne of these discussions: that according to our point of view, the Swiss Embassy’s obligations were not automatic. FM suggested that the Ambassador should add that the surrender took place in Bangladesh and that there was a unified command in Bangladesh. We wanted to study this matter more carefully. Legal matters apart, we wanted to be helpful in a humanitarian way. We shall accept all obligations whether legal, humanitarian or practical. But Bangladesh which we recognized as sovereign was in de facto control and we cannot control them.

26. The Swiss Ambassador agreed to transmit these views to his Government. FM said that we would have this matter fully examined by our legal experts.

(R. Ranganthan)
Deputy Secretary (PAK)
1.1.1972
Aide Memoire of the Swiss Embassy in India regarding the applicability of Geneva Conventions in the present situation between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, January 7, 1972.

AIDE MEMOIRE

The Competent authorities of the Federal Political Department of the Swiss Government examined anew the question of applicability of the Geneva Conventions in relation to the present conflict between India and Pakistan particularly the question of the obligations deriving from these Conventions for Switzerland as Protecting Power and for India having agreed to Switzerland’s mandate. They advance the following:

1. Article 8 of the third Geneva Convention provides that the Convention shall be applied “with the cooperation and under the scrutiny” of the protecting Power. It results form the preparatory work and the most authoritative commentaries that this article of the Convention confers expressly upon the Protecting Power a direct responsibility and a right of initiative of its own. The moment the Protecting Power had accepted the mandate and has been agreed upon as a mandatory Power by the State of Residence, it automatically assumes all duties irrespective of the intent of the requesting Power (or Power of origin) and without further agreement with the Power in which the mandate is to be carried out (State of Residence). The members of the diplomatic and consular staff of the Protecting Power are ipso facto entitled, in virtue of their capacity as official representatives of their Government, to engage in the activities arising out of the Convention.

2. Specifically, Article 126 of the third Geneva Convention confers upon the representatives or delegates of the Protecting Power the right and the duty of visits to and the inspection of all places where prisoners of war may be held particularly places of internment. The right of access to such places of internment and of the visits to prisoners of war by those representatives of the Protecting Power may not be prohibited “except for reasons of imperative military necessity, and then only as an exceptional and temporary measure”.

3. From what precedes, it derives that under the third Geneva Convention the prerogatives of the Protecting Power are granted automatically from the very moment this Power did accept the mandate and has been agreed upon as Protecting Power by the State towards which it exercises the said mandate.

4. By recognizing Bangladesh, India performed an act of national policy determining her bilateral relationship with that entity. It is not up to Switzerland to express judgment neither on the sovereign decision of India nor on the effects... which may be born out of this recognition on the bilateral level. However, the said decision by the Government of India cannot have, on the other hand any legal effects, for the time being, regarding third states and among them in respect to the Swiss Confederation in the exercise of her duties to safeguard the interests of the parties to the conflict and to supervise the application of the Geneva Conventions as conferred upon her by Article 8 of the third Geneva Convention, Article 9 of fourth Convention and by Article 1 of both Conventions.

5. It has further to be considered that Bangladesh does not, for the time being, fulfill the requirements for recognition under international law since their authorities have been installed only a short time ago and Pakistan has not relinquished any of her sovereign rights on East Pakistan territory. Besides, as long as the Indian armed forces continue to remain in Bangladesh, it is not possible to judge whether the authorities governing this entity would be able to maintain an administration sufficiently stable over the major part of the territory and population which constitutes precisely a prerequisite for attaining international recognition. It appears finally that this position is shared by the members of the international community which so far neither as a whole nor by a majority has been able to recognize Bangladesh as a sovereign State.

6. While Switzerland does not intend to express any judgment on the effect which the recognition of Bangladesh by India may have on bilateral relations between India and that entity, India cannot either on her part attribute to this act of recognition an international effect. Specifically, India cannot invoke the fact of having recognized Bangladesh with the view of renouncing - wholly or partly - her obligations which she undertook to respect by signing a multilateral worldwide instrument namely the Geneva Conventions. With regard to these Conventions, whatever the relations between India and Bangladesh may be, the Indian army is to be considered an occupying force in the technical sense of the term and therefore bound by all the obligations which derive form such function.

7. Even if India’s argument that she had recognized Bangladesh already on December 6th, 1971, i.e. before the surrender of the Pakistan Armed Forces, was to be accepted as the basis of legal considerations one would arrive at the same conclusion; namely, the fact remains that the act of recognition did not precede the moment at which Indian Armed Forces entered the Eastern Province of Pakistan. Thus, even under this hypothesis at least until December 6th, 1971, a state of military occupation in technical sense did partly exist.

8. India having signed the fourth Geneva Convention, it follows form the above that Article 47 of the fourth Convention does apply. This article stipulates that the rights of protested persons and consequently the duties of the Occupying Power are not being modified by any subsequent agreement that may be concluded between the Occupying Power and the authorities of the occupied territory.
9. Concerning the particular question of the transfer of protected persons, be it prisoners of war or interned (protect) civilians, Article 12 of the third Convention and Article 45 of the fourth Convention prohibits such transfer to a Power which is not a Contracting party to the Conventions. Quite independently of the question of being a recognized State or not, Bangladesh is in fact not a party to the Geneva Conventions. The responsibility for the treatment of prisoners of war and of interned civilians remains unquestionably with the Detaining Power.

No.PSP/415/12/71 New Delhi, 13.1.1972

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of Switzerland and has the honour to refer to the Embassy's Note of 6th December, 1971 and the subsequent Aide Memoire handed over by His Excellency the Ambassador of Switzerland on 22nd December, 1971, on the question of looking after Government of Pakistan's interests in India.

The Government of India wish to clarify that when they communicated their agreement to the Government of Switzerland in their Note of 8th December 1971 their understanding was that the Government of Switzerland would act as protecting power for looking after Pakistan's interests in India under the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations 1961. It would be recalled that by its Note of December 6, 1971, to the Embassy of Switzerland the Government of India, in view of the announcement made by Pakistan of breaking off diplomatic relations with India, requested the Government of Switzerland to look after India's interests in Pakistan in this very context.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Embassy of Switzerland the assurances of its highest consideration.

New Delhi, January 13, 1971.

0663. An unsigned Note given by the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India to the Swiss Ambassador in New Delhi.

New Delhi, January 14, 1972.

1. The assumption that Switzerland is already a protecting power under the Geneva Conventions is not correct. Switzerland was appointed protecting power to look after India’s interests in Pakistan and Pakistan’s interests in India with effect from December 6, 1971 under the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations. This was the intention, the understanding and the context of Switzerland’s appointment on December 6, 1971, after the breakup of diplomatic relations by Pakistan on that date due to India’s recognition of the Republic of Bangladesh.

2. The question of appointing Switzerland as a Protecting Power under the Geneva Conventions is receiving the consideration of the Government of India.

3. While indicating their understanding of the legal implications of the Geneva Conventions and the obligations of India arising there under it may not be necessary for the Swiss legal advisers to bring in political matters. In this regard, paragraph 5 of their Aide Memoire is particularly offensive in as much as it questions the qualifications of Bangladesh to be recognized and therefore reflects on the judgment of a member of Government who have already recognized Bangladesh or who may be recognizing that State and its Government in future.

4. Paragraphs 6 and 8 of the Aide Memoire are also equally and needlessly offensive, based as they are on the assumptions made in paragraph 5. India is regarded as the occupying power in Bangladesh and the Government of Bangladesh is called “the authorities of the occupied territory”. This would be offensive to India as well as to Bangladesh. India has recognized Bangladesh. Its forces entered Bangladesh at their request to assist their forces in their struggle for liberation. The Pakistani Armed Forces had surrendered to the Joint Command, and recognized the Armed Forces of Bangladesh specifically in the Instrument of Surrender. The fourth Convention relating to Civilians cannot accordingly apply to Bangladesh after the close of military operations thereafter December 16, 1971. The exception will be the persons who continue to be in detention after that date. The Government of Bangladesh is in occupation of its own territory. India is not an occupying power in Bangladesh.

5. In view of the above, the assumptions and inferences drawn in paragraph 9 of the aide memoire cannot apply to the custody of prisoners of war or protected persons who are in the charge of the Government of India and the Government of Bangladesh.
6. The facts indicated in paragraph 7 of the Swiss Aide Memoire and the inferences drawn there from also require further reflection by the Swiss legal advisers. It is well-known that Pakistan made an unprovoked attack on India on December 3 and India was, therefore, perfectly within its rights to take measures of self-defence, at any place. In so far as Bangladesh is concerned, India entered there, apart from in exercise of its rights of self-defence, at the request of the Government of Bangladesh. The context of this request is clear from the communication addressed to the Government of India by the Government of Bangladesh which were referred to by the Prime Minister in her statement in Parliament on December 6, 1971, on the formal recognition of Bangladesh, and copies of which were placed on the Table of the House.

7. In a nutshell, it must be recognized that the parties in conflict in Bangladesh were three, namely, India and Bangladesh on the one side and Pakistan on the other. It is in this context that the protecting power has to play its role under the Geneva Conventions. The Government of Bangladesh has already publicly declared on December 13, 1971, that it will respect the provisions of the Geneva Conventions as well as the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations. India and Pakistan are already parties of the Geneva Conventions.

0664. Aide Memoire of the Government of Pakistan delivered to various Governments regarding the entry of Pakistani nationals who entered into India in the wake of 1971 conflict.

Islamabad, January 18, 1972.

AIDE MEMOIRE

As a result of disturbed conditions in East Pakistan, a number of Pakistani nationals were compelled to cross over into India. Amongst them are Government officials, businessmen, employees of tea estates, representatives of banks and commercial firms etc.

2. A list of such Pakistanis who are reported to be in India has been compiled and is attached. This is not a complete list and the actual number of Pakistanis would be much larger.

3. According to information available in Islamabad, the majority of Pakistanis mentioned in the list were apprehended by the Indian authorities and detained in jails in India.
4. The Government of Pakistan has approached the Government of India to release these persons on humanitarian ground and to arrange for their expeditious repatriation to Pakistan. These persons are neither criminals nor have they deliberately violated any Indian Law. Therefore, there is no justification for their continued detention in India. Unfortunately the Government of India has so far not responded to Pakistan’s request. Nor has it confirmed the whereabouts of these persons. Consequently, their kith and kin in Pakistan are greatly worried about their welfare.

5. As this is a humanitarian question, the friendly governments are requested to use their good offices with the Government of India and arrange the release and repatriation of all Pakistan officials etc., who are detained or stranded in India and who wish to return to their homes.

New Delhi, February 21, 1972.

EMBASSY OF SWITZERLAND

No. 826.5

The Embassy of Switzerland, Pakistan Affairs Division presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India and has the honour to inform them that the Government of Pakistan has proposed – through Swiss diplomatic channels – to examine, on a reciprocal basis, the possibility of delivering exit permits to nationals of India and Pakistan who are stranded in the other country as the result of the outbreak of the recent conflict.

These persons were generally on visit to relatives in the other country and would like to return home where they left members of their family. Several have to resume their professional activities.

The Embassy would appreciate being informed if the Indian authorities agree to this proposal.
The Embassy of Switzerland avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India the assurances of its highest consideration.

0666. TOP SECRET

Note recorded by the Indian Ambassador in Paris of the discussions between D.P. Dhar, Chairman, Policy Planning Committee, Ministry of External Affairs and French Foreign Minister Schumann.

I accompanied Shri Dhar when he called on Foreign Minister Schumann. The meeting lasted for one hour and a quarter. I give below the main points which emerged.

2. Mr. Schumann thanked Shri Dhar for the greetings and good wishes of our Prime Minister conveyed by Shri Dhar and requested Shri Dhar to convey his high esteem and good wishes to her. Shri Dhar also expressed appreciation of the understanding of France of the recent events leading to Indo-Pak conflict.

3. Schumann then said that he wanted to know “from a humanitarian point of view” the position of the Pakistani civilian officials and other prisoners of war who were in Indian custody. He hastily added that France had been asked by Pakistan about this matter. Shri Dhar explained that the prisoners of war – regular soldiers – were very well looked after and that India was treating them even better than what the Geneva Convention required. As far as the civilian officials are concerned, some of them are charged with war crimes and they have been transferred to the custody of the Bangladesh Government. A short discussion on the timing of the release of the prisoners of war ensued and Shri Dhar made it clear that India could not release the equivalent of almost five Divisions of the Pakistan regular army who could be rearmed and deployed against us, unless durable peace with Pakistan was achieved. Shri Dhar also explained that the Government of Bangladesh was involved in it because of the atrocious war crimes committed by many who were now prisoners and, therefore, this issue could not be settled bilaterally between India and Pakistan without the participation of Bangladesh. (My impression was that Schumann was probing – not necessarily on behalf of Pakistan – to discover India’s real intentions regarding the POWs. The French understood it very well – even if they do not admit it publicly – that India cannot hand back the prisoners unless real peace replaces the present provisional ceasefire. We need not soften our attitude on this. Recently the French have been asking for extradition of a former Nazi official from Bolivia charged with atrocities in France during the war. Therefore, the French appreciate that Pakistani war criminals cannot be just forgiven and forgotten.)

4. There was then discussion on the possibility of achieving a durable peace settlement. Shri Dhar said that India had no feeling of vulgar military triumph, India coveted no Pakistani territory, and all India wished was a just and durable peace leading eventually to the friendly cooperation among the three countries in the sub-continent – Pakistan, Bangladesh and India. Shri Dhar mentioned “a package of peace” in this context and he explained that all the elements of friction which had created conflict between India and Pakistan since Partition must now be identified and disposed of in the peace negotiations. Shri Dhar emphasized that India could not go on leaping from war to war and a settlement should give at least a decade of peace to the sub-continent. (Schumann said that a decade of peace was not enough – it should be for eternity!) Schumann made a very cautious and tentative offer of mediation which Shri Dhar adroitly ignored. Shri Dhar mentioned that Bhutto might come to Delhi according to a message he had received, though there were ambiguities in the first part of the message. Schumann seemed surprised and said that this meant that Bhutto wanted meaningful talks. Shri Dhar hoped that Bhutto’s visit, if it materialized, would not be similar to the visits he had been making of late to various countries. Shri Dhar mentioned here the vast process of forthcoming State elections which would require PM’s attention. Shri Dhar also wondered whether Bhutto was in complete control or whether the relics of the military regime were still operating the levers of power from behind the façade of Bhutto. Why wasn’t Bhutto giving up Martial Law. He was not even a military officer and he was elected by the largest party in Pakistan and it was inappropriate for him to act the Chief Martial Law Administrator. Schumann referred to the agitation in the provinces of Pakistan in this context and Shri Dhar stated that only democracy and regional autonomy—responding to the legitimate aspirations of Pathans, Baluchis and even considerable sections of Punjabis—could save Pakistan’s unity. The military regime achieved the break-up of Pakistan and, if resurrected it could dismember what was formerly West Pakistan. In this context Shri Dhar said India was held together because of democracy and that DMK which started off as a secessionist party, was not banned and it finally abandoned its secessionist policy.

5. Shri Dhar then explained at some length the tragedy of Pakistan which practically since its birth has been dominated, corrupted, and oppressed by a military elite set-up armed, and supplied by certain foreign powers for their own purpose and that this military elite had as its ally a strong section of the bureaucracy which developed a vested interest in upholding the regime to the detriment of the people of Pakistan. Now the military elements were humbled but were not destroyed. They might be lying low for the present. It would be a great catastrophe if the same old policy which created the military elite were to be revived because in that case there would be no hope for Pakistan and there would be great turmoil in the entire region. (Schumann seemed very interested and listened patiently. I am glad that Shri Dhar gave this analysis of the situation to Schumann, because I have been talking on parallel lines earlier and this thesis, coming form the level of Shri Dhar, would make a powerful impact on the highest quarters in France. This is particularly important because in the past France has been a major supplier of arms to Pakistan.)

6. The discussion was then channeled by Shri Dhar to the possibility of a joint action by China and Pakistan at the opportune moment to open another round of conflict. Shri Dhar asked Schumann’s opinion on this. Shri Dhar also mentioned how we had been scrupulously polite and even friendly to China in spite of the abuse heaped on us by Peking. Schumann doubted whether China would participate in any military action against India saying “China always talks loudly but acts prudently”. Schumann thought that China’s anger against India was because of India’s friendship with the Soviet Union. Shri Dhar pointed out that France maintained friendship both with the Soviet Union and with China and he wanted to know the recipe of French success. Schumann said that after all France had not signed a treaty with Soviet Russia, to which Shri Dhar replied that even before the Treaty with the Soviet Union was signed, China had been hostile. Schumann suggested that India should stress her non-aligned policy in various statements to signal to Peking the Indo-Soviet friendship was not directed against China. (The French do believe that China is obsessed by the fear of the Soviet Union but my conversations with the French over the last two years indicate to me that, quite apart from the obsession with the Soviet Union, the Chinese, in the opinion of the French, want to keep India off balance and establish Chinese pockets of influence on the sub-continent. The French hope – this has been mentioned to me by them – that India will be strong enough to counter Chinese moves in her own way.)

7. The discussion then turned back to the prospects of a durable peace between India and Pakistan and Schumann mentioned in this context the feasibility of guaranteeing the frontiers of the countries in the sub-continent. Shri Dhar discouraged this line of thought but assured Schumann that India would do everything reasonably possible to give Pakistan full sense of security. He suggested that a belt of territory ten miles wide on either side of the frontier could be demilitarized though India would not accept foreign observers. In any case, the UN observers on the Kashmir ceasefire line had never been able to prevent infiltration, incidents and even conflict. (Though Schumann did not comment on this, I foresee no difficulty in convincing the French of the justice and correctness of our position. The French themselves are allergic to the UN or foreign observers in the context of their own territories and they certainly will not make difficulties for us if we firmly uphold our position.)

8. Shri Dhar talked of the close and growing Indo-French relations which he thought could be "concretized", both in the political and economic context, to ensure that establishment of durable peace not only in the sub-continent but also in the whole south-Asian region. (A treaty of friendship with France would be very desirable form our own points of view and Shri Dhar would discuss this on his return to Delhi.) Shri Dhar then suggested that Foreign Minister Schumann might lead the French delegation to the annual bilateral talks to be held in Delhi this year. Schumann appeared gratified but he mentioned how strenuous his programme was (I know this to be true) but he asked the Director of the Asia Division of the Foreign Office who was taking down motes, to look for appropriate dates.

9. Shri Dhar then followed the Director to his room to clarify one or two points which had been raised during Shri Dhar's talks with Schumann. As France had voted for the last Security Council resolution after the termination of the Indo-Pakistan conflict, the Director of the Asia Division raised the matter of "troop withdrawals". It was explained to him that ceasefire was not peace and that India would certainly withdraw her troops from the West (Pakistan) and settle other issues after peace was established. (I shall have to follow this up because the Director was not completely convinced about the 'ceasefire not being peace'.) The Director also wanted some clarified –
I think to his satisfaction – when it was pointed out that the various elements of tension had to be negotiated on to achieve real peace. Earlier, Schumann had appeared to be satisfied that we would settle all problems with Pakistan proper while the Kashmir problem might remain outside the area of settlement. It was made clear to the Director, as it was done to Schumann earlier, that the package of peace related to overall settlement of all elements of tension and friction and that included Kashmir also. (I am reasonably optimistic about convincing the French that Kashmir need not be kept out of a peace settlement with Pakistan. In fact, I have already raised this matter and the response has not been discouraging.)

TOP SECRET

Record of discussions between Chairman, Policy Planning Committee of the Ministry of External Affairs D.P. Dhar and Mr. A.N. Kosygin, Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR.

Moscow, February 24, 1972

After the initial pleasantries, Chairman Kosygin remarked that he was glad to meet Shri Dhar again, “now that all problems have been solved”. Chairman Kosygin seemed completely relaxed and in very good humour. Verbatim record of the discussions which followed is given below:

Dhar: I am very glad that Your Excellency could receive me. I shall not take much of your time since I know how busy you are.

Kosygin: Please wait for a moment. I am going to take a sheet of paper to take down some notes.

Dhar: My Prime Minister has asked me to convey her sincere and heart-felt thanks to the Soviet Government, to Your Excellency, to Comrade Brezhnev, President Podgorny and the people of the Soviet Union for the support and unfailing help and understanding extended to us during our difficulty. She has sent a letter to Your Excellency but unfortunately the aircraft has not arrived yet. But I have sent a copy of the letter in advance to you. The main points on which she wants your assessment and advice are contained in her letter.

It will be good if Your Excellency can, as on the last occasion, give your comments and advice on the questions raised by the Prime Minister, and then we can exchange our views.

_Kosygin:_ You know, first of all I would like to put some questions to you. This means that we can put some questions to each other. As you are aware, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman is coming to our country soon. I am unable to see from the letter of your Prime Minister what kind of “specifics” she wants us to raise in our meeting with him. He comes on March 1, 1972, and it is a necessary for us to do everything so that our talks will take due account of your interests. It is, therefore, most important for us to know about these aspects.

I would like to say that if you see some shortcoming in our talks with Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, this can be attributed to you (looking at Chairman Dhar). All the more so as we all consider you to be an expert on Bangladesh.

I will now look through the letter and try to answer the questions your Prime Minister has raised. Firstly, your Prime Minister has mentioned about the further developments, etc. I am saying this since it concerns Bangladesh. We will consult you to coordinate all our actions so that we have a consistent and steady point of view. Our Ambassador in Bangladesh (Mr. V.F. Popov) has just come in today from Dacca. We are now in close contact with the Bangladesh Government. Our Ambassador will inform us of his talks with Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and we will, of course, take this into consideration also.

The first question your Prime Minister has put is of our relations with Pakistan and Bhutto. She has said that Ambassador Pegov keeps you informed and that your views are communicated to us through him. So we have really nothing more to tell you about this.

As regards whether we can rely on the statements made by Mr. Bhutto, that he wants good relations with India and is willing to have talks, it is difficult to give a categorical answer. It is also not possible to say whether we can place any faith in these statements. But if we try to handle this question, taking due account of developments in Pakistan, and analyse them, we can imagine the situation which he is in now. Madam Prime Minister also writes that she understands the difficulties of Mr. Bhutto. It is necessary first to analyse and find answers to a number of questions. Do we want to support Bhutto or do everything to see that he is not there? In such an event who is to succeed Bhutto? Will his successor be better or worse?
You are probably in a better position to answer these questions since you are aware of the situation in Pakistan and the events which are likely to follow each other.

You know that in the past Bhutto was a difficult and complicated man. The statements he made after the Tashkent Conference were antagonistic to India and of a strong nature. After he has come into power he has made statements of a different nature. He has been to Peking and to some other States. Here again he has made different kinds of statements. But whatever his statements, he is already basing himself on the position that reunification with Bangladesh is no longer possible.

As I can see from the Prime Minister’s letter, the Indian side is interested in a stable regime in Pakistan which will be friendly to India. But the coming into power again of the Army in Pakistan can only be on the platform of revenge and with the support of China and the United States. They can hardly accept that they will be popular if they accepted the status quo. Only revanchist slogans to create a united Pakistan, etc., can be expected from them. This is not a categorical statement but we see no other possibility. The people are in revolt in Pakistan and everything seems to be on the boil there. Pakistan is now less than half of what it was.

May be you have more detailed data on Pakistan, and the struggle and the possible emergence of more progressive forces but we have no such information.

In order to find a way to satisfy public opinion, the main question Bhutto is trying to resolve is the return of POWs and internees. We will appreciate to have your views, if you deem it possible, so that we can orientate ourselves on the basis of Bhutto as Head of Government in regard to further developments with India, particularly since we see no prospective candidate who can proceed on these lines. There is also this, that if you wish to test Bhutto’s sincerity your side should have direct talks with him.

As regards the question as to what you would like us to convey in our talks with Bhutto, we have already transmitted what you had wished us to do. Of course, the talks can proceed in two directions. We understand that the Indian Government has indicated that the talks could be held at the level of Heads of Government or they could also be held, for instance, at the level of Foreign Ministers, respective Chiefs of Staff, Foreign Secretaries or Defence Secretaries. While this course is possible, it would be better in our view for either the Heads of Government or their confidential personal representatives, perhaps with yourself on the Indian side, to meet first. It may be also another way for formulating the guidelines without involving the rigidities of a comprehensive agenda as a basis for the talks between the Heads of the State. I do not give this as our advice but only as a point of view. If military representatives of the two sides meet, they are bound to get involved in arguments and it is difficult to say for how much time the talks may drag on. We also are not inclined to favour talks at the Secretaries at this stage. That will give a formal framework to the pre-summit talks which may not be conducive to better results.

We agree with Madam Prime Minister that there is no consistency in Bhutto’s statements – they are friendly and unfriendly, revanchist and conciliatory. But without talks you cannot settle your problems and so an approach to talks must be found. Undoubtedly the most careful analysis on the approach to the talks would be required to ensure that they are crowned with success. To me, personally, it appears that it may be necessary for your Prime Minister and President Bhutto to meet so that questions are considered in a global context and one can discuss recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan, entry of Bangladesh into U.N., return of POWs, etc., and even perhaps Kashmir.

I am glad to see from the letter that your Prime Minister is positive about Bhutto’s visit to the Soviet Union. We regard the statement with satisfaction. But we believe we cannot receive him earlier than end of March. The dates are not yet finalized. I think this is all that I have to say on the question of Pakistan.

As regards the position of United States and China, this is still not clear. They are bound to discuss developments in the sub-continent. To some extent they can affect Bhutto’s attitude as well as the solution of the problem. He is hardly independent enough to ignore their voice. We do not yet have any details about the U.S. and Chinese talks. If we had, we would have informed you. We will do so as soon as something is known. At any rate, the Joint Communique will be published soon and may throw some light on their attitude on the Indo-Pakistan question. They will not bypass this question, which is clearly of concern to them.

Regarding our relations with China there are no changes there. The status quo continues. The Sino-Soviet talks have not recommenced. Ambassador Likhyachov is now holidaying in the Soviet Union and has not gone back to his post. We have had no forward movement in our relations with China.

The malicious position of Chinese leaders against the Soviet Union is being pursued as before and particularly by Prime Minister Chou En-lai. Having failed in their gamble of helping Pakistan against India, the Chinese are now trying to strengthen their position in an opportunist way. They have been comparatively silent recently on the question of Bangladesh. However, they are trying to play one against the other so that there is no unity in the sub-continent. May be they cannot succeed in this but it cannot be ruled out. In the beginning they were very strongly against Bangladesh and then played it down. Similarly they shouted about help to Pakistan which was later shown to be a bluff. Now they are looking for ways and means to save their face.

We also understand the complexity of the situation in Bangladesh. This is a State not yet fully established. Many forces are working there. The Chinese and the British are both trying to expand their influence and so also the United State, so that Bangladesh can be made to orientate itself towards them. We have got only some approximate knowledge of the forces working in Bangladesh. You are better informed about them. It is important that Sheikh Mujibur Rahman adheres to that line which first and foremost corresponds to the interests of India. It is necessary to have a good friend of India in Bangladesh. During their discussions with Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, the Soviet Government will do everything possible to strengthen the most friendly relations existing between Bangladesh and India. If there are any “specifics” which you wish us to raise in our discussions we will be glad to do so.

We highly appreciate the gigantic work done by India under difficult circumstances, as well as the moral and material help you gave to Bangladesh. The Central Committee, the Party, the Politburo and Comrades Brezhnev and Podgorny greatly admire and appreciate the policies of your Prime Minister whose consistent, bold and determined policies had led to victory and had created a new unity in India itself between the people and the leadership. We are convinced that the forthcoming elections will show greater unity of the people and the opposition parties will be able to do nothing against it.

We on our part will continue our position of full support to your Government and to your Prime Minister and will do everything in that direction. We are sincerely glad about the events which have taken place and congratulate you on this immense historic victory of your Prime Minister.

Dhar: I am grateful to Your Excellency for your analysis of the situation. I would like to take a few minutes to explain some of the points that you have raised. As you know, our earlier assessment of developments in the sub-continent has been proved correct. We had made it clear that as soon as Bangladesh was liberated we would do everything on our part for immediate cessation of hostilities. We feel that time has to come to turn away from conflict and tension and work for a new chapter to ensure a durable peace. The unilateral cease-fire declared by India flowed from this position.

Your Excellency will recall that when I had the privilege of meeting you in this very room during the recent conflict, when the U.S. Aircraft Carrier “Enterprise” was at our doorstep, certain decisions had been taken. We agreed that India was not working for the disintegration of West Pakistan. We also agreed that we would do nothing to alter the status quo in Kashmir by the use of force, though the U.N., and the Soviet Union in particular, had conceded that juridically the sovereignty of India extended over the whole of Jammu and Kashmir State as it was constituted on the occasion of the partition of India. We further agreed that as soon as Bangladesh was liberated we would create conditions for immediate cessation of hostilities. In fact, Mr. Kuznetsov had been put to some inconvenience by being woken up at midnight to be informed of our Prime Minister’s confidential decision that as soon as the Pakistani occupation forces in Bangladesh would surrender, we would declare a cease-fire. Only our Prime Minister and a very few others knew of this decision at that time.

Kosygin: You know, you took a very good decision. It was analysed very well.

Dhar: Soon after this we made a unilateral offer for talks without pre-conditions at any time, at any place and at any level, as mutually convenient. We had conveyed this decision also to your Excellency through Ambassador Pegov. We have taken all steps to have a durable peace and are prepared to talk directly to Bhutto or his representatives but the talks must cover the fundamental issue of war and peace.

A few days ago we had received a message from Bhutto through the Ceylonese Government which began with a strange concern and solicitude for the difficulties of Prime Minister and Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and offering to have talks in New Delhi. As you know, the first offer of talks was made by us.

Kosygin: Was this message received after your offer?

Dhar: After. Even after our formal communication to the Secretary-General of the U.N. about it. The lack of reference to India’s message was obviously meant to convey the impression that the offer of talks is being made originally by Bhutto. The wordings and timing of the message have raised some doubts in our minds.

Kosygin: This is certainly strange. That is why I asked.

Dhar: We are seriously concerned as to how we can secure peace. You have been good enough to study the problem and have an intimate knowledge of our affairs. We have been attacked four times by Pakistan in the space of two decades.

Now there is the question of POWs. Whatever the form of the talks, whether at the level of Heads of Government, their confidential personal representatives, etc., the intention is to succeed in having a durable peace. It should not be another lull before a new storm. As regards POWs, apart from Bangladesh having to be consulted, it is not practicable to hand over nearly one hundred thousand trained men capable of taking up arms without seeing even a faint glimmer of hope for peace.

Kosygin: Where are the POWs now, in camps or in tents?

Dhar: They are in regular barracks and our soldiers are in tents. In fact, the POWs thanked the Chief of Army Staff when he visited the camps, since it is very cold now in the open.

Kosygin: Are the camps in many places?

Dhar: Yes, both for reasons of security and due to limitation of accommodation.

Turning to the question of return of territory, we do not want an inch of the territory of West Pakistan which is under our occupation today. But in Kashmir we are faced with the question whether we leave this artificial line where trouble breaks out frequently or whether we should address ourselves to this problem also once and for all. Even if all other issues between the two countries are resolved but the Kashmir issue is allowed to fester like an open wound, there can be no hope of permanent peace in the sub-continent. I had mentioned this question last time to you and also at length to Mr. Firyubin.

Kosygin: How much of the population in Kashmir is under Pakistani rule?

Dhar: About 65 per cent is in India and 35 per cent in the POK.

Kosygin: How many in number?

Dhar: About 1.5 million in POK.

Kosygin: What about territory?

Dhar: They have more territory.

In case you want to balance the picture by giving them a little more population, we will be only too happy to oblige them.

As I have stated earlier, we have been attacked four times by Pakistan. On the last occasion Pakistan was a signatory to a solemn Agreement at Tashkent concluded under your auspices. The only part of the Agreement accepted by Pakistan was the right to over-fly India to Dacca. They did not return our property but auctioned it. Not one obligation contained in that international Agreement was fulfilled by Pakistan. Bhutto had participated in the Tashkent Conference, and you are aware of the intransigent attitude he adopted there. All this will make clear the flamboyant and thoroughly unreliable character of Bhutto.

Kosygin: Please do not think he is a relation of ours.
Dhar: In fact, I had said that he was my friend and from that point of view, perhaps, I could be more suspect!

But I feel it will be a mistake to relate the problems of peace and tranquility in the sub-continent to the choice of one person or the other. The real choice is between two different systems — the system of military dictatorship which breeds war or a democratic structure which holds out the hope for security and peace. And it is not possible to say that Yahya Khan was better than Ayub Khan or that Bhutto is better than Yahya Khan, or Gul Hassan will be better than Bhutto or Rahim Khan will be better than Gul Hassan. In determining the question of peace, we cannot afford to be a prisoner of preference for one person over the other.

Kosygin: Eventually, the system also projects the person in power. When I spoke of Bhutto I meant, do you think you can have an agreement or understanding with him? Or is it ruled out?

Dhar: I am very skeptical personally about our reaching an agreement with Bhutto. However, this opinion, whether it is subjective or objective, cannot alter the present reality. In the interest of seeking peace, India will be prepared to go all out for talks with Bhutto. To refuse to talk to him will be contrary to our declared position and our objective of peace.

Kosygin: Do you think he feels stable or not?

Dhar: There is going to be no stability in Pakistan as long as China and U.S. keep propping up the military junta.

Kosygin: Do you think that U.S. and China are satisfied with him?

Dhar: I think he is capable of playing any role. He is capable of being anybody’s stooge. I do not think he is a person of high principles. If I may repeat what I had told Mr. Schumann in Paris, the mistake that the western powers committed was to pump in 2 billion dollar worth of free military equipment into Pakistan to prop up a military elite. This had created vested interests for this military elite in maintaining a certain structure of the State for this Junta to remain in power only by repeated confrontations and conflicts with India. The United States and China chose this junta as a lever to hamper the developmental processes in India.

Today there are forces in Pakistan, not only in Pakhtoonistan and Baluchistan, but for the first time even in West Punjab which are trying to secure the establishment of democracy, for which after the elections, the structure already exists, who are openly pleading for a policy of rapprochement and understanding with India. It should be our endeavour to encourage these forces. If the ruling class that broke up Pakistan continues to survive, even West Pakistan will inevitably break up; not as Mr. Bhutto alleged because of “the monkey business” of the Soviet Union to stir up trouble inside West Pakistan, as published in his interview with Mr. Sulzberger of the New York Times.

We are worried today that while it is in keeping with the policies and objectives of both the Soviet Union and India to seek the establishment of peace in the Sub-continent, China and USA may have designs to the contrary. We are concerned by the resumption of arms aid to Pakistan by the U.S. and reliable intelligence reports that China will supply equipment for two or three Divisions of the Armed Forces of Pakistan. This leads us to apprehend a new adventure. It is in this context that the Chairman of our Chiefs of Staff Committee, General Maneckshaw is visiting Moscow to share our assessment of the situation with the Soviet side and to do everything to prevent a fresh confrontation. But if such a confrontation should take place, India has to be fully prepared for it.

Our assessment is that a fresh confrontation may begin with active Chinese support and U.S. military aid materially, towards the end of April or early May when the northern passes become passable. This factor also has to be taken into account and it becomes necessary for India to replace the losses in military equipment which we had suffered in the recent conflict. It is very important that this should reach us before the end of April or early in May. The only positive signs in Pakistan today are that the democratic forces are able to raise their voice in favour of a settlement being reached with India. I can assure you that as and when direct talks with Pakistan take place we will take your suggestions fully into account.

Kosygin: I would like to ask you quite openly as to what you have decided about Kashmir? Have you or have you not decided to take that part of Kashmir forcibly?

Dhar: Which part?

Kosygin: The part with 1.5 million population under Pakistani rule. Have you settled to embark on such a policy? In our opinion what you intend to do will play an important role in future developments. You know that Pakistan already has the Pushto and Baluchi problem and it is making itself felt.

Secondly, in your assessment for whom is time working – is it working for your side or their side? Do you think postponement of talks will be helpful to your side or to Pakistan? If you cannot answer these questions for any reason I will not insist. Without interfering with your decision in any way, we merely wish to get the orientation.
Dhar: There is complete frankness between us and over the three years I have known Your Excellency there has never been a single occasion when it has been otherwise. In fact, the amount of trust and confidence you have given me has always overwhelmed me.

Kosygin: You may wonder why I asked this question. You spoke of Kashmir as a "bleeding wound" which causes trouble. Please do not think I doubt your words. I believe you as I believe myself. The question is as to what has to be done to this "bleeding wound"? Should this wound be only bandaged now or has the time come for a surgical operation? Whether this question is decided or not has a bearing on other events.

Dhar: I would like to repeat to Your Excellency that we will do nothing to alter the present territorial status quo on the CFL by forces or any other means. There has not been, there is not and there shall not be any plans for this. I recall that at Tashkent you had informally dropped a hint to General Ayub Khan whether it was possible to convert the cease-fire line into an international boundary. Personally I believe that the situation can be normalized by give and take. It is possible, with suitable modifications of the CFL, to convert it into an international boundary.

Kosygin: Today the problem is one of stabilization. Whatever may happen 30 to 40 countries have recognized Bangladesh. The forces which want revenge now have no basis for it. Even if they gather together they would not get support except from USA and China. But if hostilities are started by India in Kashmir it will help these forces to raise their heads.

Dhar: We shall do nothing ourselves to disturb the existing status quo.

Kosygin: The way you have suggested is the correct way. Of course there can be accepted changes by talks but not by military action. I think Bhutto is afraid of this possible adjustment but there are some forces in Pakistan which may even desire it.

As for the personal assessment of Bhutto you have given, I fully agree with you. Please do not misunderstand that we are some how interested in Bhutto. If Pakistan has friendly relations with you then they will have the same with us. Bhutto as an individual does not interest us but we are interested in a personality who can bring peace. We feel that coming into power of the military can complicate the situation.

I am not going to give an assessment of the people there. There are many who have aggressive views at the present moment.
You referred to 2 billion dollars of military aid given to Pakistan. Over 100 billion dollars, or according to some estimates 200 billion dollars, have been invested by the USA in Vietnam. But all the same they will have to get out from there. But, in general, they will try to cling on as long as possible. I am glad you gave your clarification in the matter.

As for the timing of the talks, your talks with Pakistan are inevitable. Your talks also cannot be with the help of the third countries and will have to be direct. None of us can answer the question you have referred to about the success of the talks. Of course the correct timing of the talks will be very important. I think prospects of stability will be brighter.

The chances of stability will also increase after Sheikh Mujibur Rahman’s visit here. We shall do everything possible to strengthen the present status of his Government which has surely the most friendly relations with India.

There is another point which interests us. This is the behaviour of the U.K. in this case. Of course they maintain their influence there, or otherwise how could it be that they should have suggested such an early entry of Bangladesh into the Commonwealth?

Dhar: There is U.K.’s influence in Bangladesh but I do not think that the entry of Bangladesh into the Commonwealth is due to this. There is a large Bengali population in England and there are British interests in the jute trade. When I was asked in Dacca about the entry of Bangladesh into the Commonwealth, I advised them that they have to make up their own mind.

There are competing influences discernable in Bangladesh. The CIA is openly backing reactionary forces and the Maoists are doing their best to undo the stability in Bangladesh. As a result of our mutual understanding out of which Bangladesh was born, US and China have suffered in their influence and have been isolated in the sub-continent – even in Pakistan where the bluff of China and the U.S. has been exposed and resentment against them exists.

Kosygin: Are there any nuances which we should take into account in our discussions with Sheikh Mujibur Rahman.

Dhar: I had a talk with Mr. Firyubin and have given him my detailed views on developments in Bangladesh and also in regard to the leaders. It would be best if Mr. Firyubin can convey these to you. Of course, Mr. Firyubin and I had differences in the past in regard to our respective assessments, but our (Indian) assessment has been proved right. In spite of this fact, I can assure you that my relations with Mr. Firyubin are of the friendliest nature and he has always been very kind and considerate towards me. Bangladesh is now a State in the stage of adolescence and it is possible to influence her policies in the right direction during its formative period.
During Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's recent talks with Sheikh Mujibur Rahman in Calcutta, inter alia, she made the following important points:-

(a) That Soviet Union and other Socialist countries had combined their efforts powerfully with India not only to secure his release but also accomplish the liberation of Bangladesh.

(b) That Soviet Union like India was interested in having a friendly, genuinely independent strong Bangladesh which would contribute to the stability and peace of sub-continent – in fact the whole region.

(c) That all aid was not good aid and one need not go far to seek an illustration of this because Pakistan itself we the worst victim of “bad aid”.

(d) Similarly, all “left” was not bad “left”. In fact, the danger to Bangladesh stemmed from the forces of the extreme right and extreme left, as was our experience in India also. Therefore one should not shy away from limited but principled cooperation with other parties who were interested to defeat these two extreme political tendencies. The cooperation of CPI and Congress was an example in point.

These points in brief I thought I would mention to you.

I shall take a few minutes more to complete my brief. In the first instance, we need some military equipment. As we have proved in the past, we have always requested only for our very minimum requirements. We have suffered some losses in equipment which must now be made good. It is very important that we should receive this equipment before the end of April of early May.

Kosygin: we shall do everything possible.

Dhar: I thank you, Your Excellency. I mentioned this since the discussions with our delegation are progressing somewhat slowly.

The second point which I wish to raise makes me feel a little embarrassed. Due to various reasons we are presently in a difficult financial situation. We had spent nearly a million pounds a day on looking after the refugees. The difficulties have been aggravated by the suspension of U.S. aid and we are not going to beg for its resumption, and also stoppage of PL-480 imports. We have further incurred considerable expenditure in regard to the liberation movement in Bangladesh and the 14-day war. These developments have created pressure on our budget which is due to be presented in March. We do not want to take advantage of your friendship and kindness and make any demands of you merely on that account. We are self-respecting people and we shall never embarrass you by addressing any request which is not in keeping with our dignity. But I have to raise this question with you in view of the difficulties which I have briefly enumerated.

Kosygin: we will consider this.

Dhar: We have a proposal which I can explain to Mr. Firubin, namely postponement of payments over a short period and the extension of the period of repayment by a few years.

Kosygin: We already have this request from your side. We shall consider it very seriously. We had received the request through Ambassador Pegov.

How is the Prime Minister?

Dhar: I cannot understand how she is able to bear up with the strain. At present, every day she also addresses a large number of election meeting. The strain on her is great. Even some of us who have the privilege of working with her, even though in peripheral capacities and with lesser responsibility and far less quantum of work, are on the verge of a physical breakdown. And she carries on this burden day in and day out without rest or respite.

Kosygin: This is very bad, you know. She should not strain herself unduly, particularly after the pressures she must have gone through over the last months. She is a person of great strength. She is an asset not only for her country but for the entire progressive mankind. Please convey to her best wishes and greetings on my behalf and on behalf of all other members of the Polituro.

Moscow, February 24, 1972.

Mr. Firyubin welcomed Chairman, Policy Planning Committee and said he looked forward to have his assessment of the latest developments. Mr. Firyubin said that he had sent Prime Minister’s letters on to their destinations and also requested for the meetings with Chairman Kosygin and Mr. Brezhnev.

2. Chairman said that he sincerely looked forward to the discussion and also the opportunity of conveying to the Soviet leaders the views of our Prime Minister on various questions. Mr. Firyubin told the Chairman that although the time-schedule was tight, with one party delegation presently in Moscow and another shortly to arrive, they would do their very best to realize the appointments.

3. Mr. Firyubin then opened the discussion by saying that they were fully occupied at the present time with preparations for the visit of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman who will arrive on March 1. They hoped the visit would be fruitful. The Soviet attitude was fully in conformity with Indian views in this regard. As regards Pakistan, the Soviet Government is acting in the same key as India.

4. The Chairman expressed pleasure at the forthcoming visit of the Bangladesh Prime Minister to the Soviet Union. In fact, the Chairman informed Mr. Firyubin that during his last visit to Dacca, the Bangladesh Prime Minister had discussed the contents of his reply to the query made by the Soviet Government through us, about the possibility of a rapprochement between Dacca and Islamabad. On that occasion, the Chairman had ventured to suggest to the Soviet Consul General that in his reply to the letter of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, it would be appropriate for Chairman Kosygin to invite Mr. Mujibur Rehman to pay a visit to the Soviet Union. Mr. Firyubin confirmed that this message was duly received by Chairman Kosygin from their Consul General in Calcutta and the suggestion was deeply appreciated.

5. The Chairman added that incidentally the Soviet Union would be the first country to be visited by Shaikh Mujibur Rahman, apart from India, after his assumption of office as the Prime Minister of Bangladesh. Mr. Firyubin said that they had no doubts the appropriateness of the invitation extended by the Soviet Union to Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. He said he will be grateful if the Chairman could reply to some questions and also indicate any specific aspects which it may be useful for the Soviet side to raise with the Bangladesh Prime Minister.

6. The Chairman said that he had been privileged to be closely associated with the developments in Bangladesh during the last ten months and he would be glad to share his experience. While on occasions the Soviet assessment had differed from ours regarding the likely course of events in Bangladesh, India had been proved right. The active cooperation between India and the Soviet Union had been responsible by and large not only for the independence of Bangladesh but also in preventing the interference of the combined forces of the American Administration and the Chinese Government. It was also now clear beyond doubt that there was no hope of even a symbolic association between the two wings of what once constituted Pakistan.

7. The Chairman said that these are matters of the past and now both India and the Soviet Union must think of the future. A new inter-relationship of forces had come into existence in the subcontinent. The Chairman said that one of the principal aims of his visit was to identify areas in which the Soviet Union and India could coordinate their efforts to deal with the changed situation so as to defeat the machinations of war-mongers and to open a new vista of peace. This would require a thorough analysis of the attitudes of other powers as well as of our own attitudes. There is no doubt that if India and the Soviet Union work together a durable peace can be found. A stable peace in the subcontinent will radiate far beyond its borders. It will affect beneficially the situation in South East and West Asia, in the Pacific Ocean and in fact in the whole area south of the Himalayas. India and the Soviet Union have no competitive interests but share similar aims and can work together.

8. The Chairman expressed his satisfaction about the visit of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. The advice and influence of the Soviet Union to the Prime Minister of the new State of Bangladesh is bound to be beneficial in its formative years.

9. Mr. Firyubin said that he had some questions. Firstly, in connection with Sheikh Mujibur Rahman’s visit to which they attached great significance, they would appreciate the Chairman’s advice, particularly so since he knew all the top leaders of Bangladesh personally. This would make it easier for the Soviet Government to prepare for Sheikh Mujib’s visit. Secondly, although the Soviet Government have clear picture of the emergence of the new state, they would welcome as much information as possible about the present state of affairs in Bangladesh itself: in particular, the inter-relationship of political forces. Thirdly, the Soviet Government would be grateful to have our assessment of the situation in Pakistan, the measure of stability there and the strength of the opposition forces – not only to counter but to defeat the present regime. Mr. Firyubin said that the forces of chauvinism and the ultra-extremists with pro-Chinese feelings are active in this regard. Fourthly, Mr. Firyubin wished to learn from the Chairman something about the economic and nationalities questions in Bangladesh, the path of economic development which would be followed in the future.

10. The Chairman said that he would be glad to answer these questions briefly. On the first question about the political characteristics of the leadership, he had already discussed this with Chairman Kosygin, Mr. Firyubin and other leaders on several occasions in the past including the role of the Awami League and other parties. There had been some difference in the Soviet assessment in this regard. But, it would be correct to say that the movement under Sheikh Mujib can best be described as a modern version of 19th Century nationalism imbued with the ideals of freedom and independence. Sheikh Mujib is undoubtedly the most popular leader of Bangladesh for whom the people have almost idolatrous adulation. Historically speaking, a person with such mass following can either degenerate into a Nkrumah or Soekarno or elevate himself to the position of a Nehru or a Lenin. In our view, the positive factors which exist in Bangladesh can convert it into a progressive State with a socialist framework. The people of Bangladesh have been under a dictatorship for two decades and freedom had been earned at great cost by the entire people – the working class, peasants, students, etc. There in no monopoly or organized capitalism, since the entire structure of investment had so far been foreign in that it was all from West Pakistan singly or in collaboration with foreign concerns. To give an example, Bangladesh had no indigenous banking system of its own. So when the Bangladesh Government speaks of socialism they do not speak of it as a fashionable slogan but as a practical proposition. In giving a broad socialist content in their State policies, they will be neither hampered by the resistance of vested interests nor by the fuss of ideological controversy. Moreover, the process of nationalization cannot result in any conflict with an indigenously entrenched bourgeoisie. The main development will certainly be in the public sector. There may, however, be some difficulty in implementation of far reaching land reforms since part of the leadership of the Awami League and even of the NAP is feudal with land-holding interests. But the popular base of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman consist of landless peasantry and small landholders and this class may be expected to move the Government in favour of radical land reforms, perhaps even more radical then what we have succeeded in achieving in India so far. The Chairman said these were some of the political and economic indicators of the shape of the future political and economic structure of Bangladesh. There was one other welcome development. This was the announcement by Sheikh Mujibur Rahman on his return to Bangladesh that the Government would be based on a Cabinet system and not on a Presidential system. The Presidential from of Government, even though in the past it was basically and intrinsically a naked dictatorship, had become malodorous in the mind of the common people of Bangladesh. The fact that Sheikh Mujibur Rahman had made his choice for a system of collective responsibility to a freely elected Parliament and at the same time initiated speedy action to complete the new Constitution on democratic, secular basis, gave one the hope that Sheikh Mujibur Rahman would perhaps not choose the path of authoritarianism but would be amenable to a system of democratic functioning and as such would respond to the obligations inherent in such a system.

11. The Chairman concluded by saying that while these were the positive developments which generated hope, there are forces at work trying to subvert and undo Bangladesh. One of their aims is to create schisms and dents in the friendship between India and Bangladesh. As the policies of India and the Soviet Union are considered by these forces as two faces of the same coin, this also means that it is likely that they may make an effort to create a cleavage in the close relations existing between India and the Soviet Union over our attitude towards Bangladesh. CIA propaganda in Bangladesh and also in West Bengal harps on these that association of India and Bangladesh “will bring Bangladesh into the orbit of the Soviet Union”. The other propaganda platform is to revive chauvinist forces in Bangladesh on the basis of Muslim link with some of the reactionary Muslim countries of the world. Even the humanitarian vehicle of aid was being used to achieve their objectives.

12. The Chairman said that it is in the above light that the Soviet Government would have to formulate its attitude in its discussions with Sheikh Mujib. During the recent talks which our Prime Minister had with Sheikh Mujib, she had told him that the interests of India and, if we may presume, of the Soviet Union are very limited in Bangladesh, namely, 1) that Bangladesh should be a genuinely free and independent country; ii) that it is in the interests of Bangladesh not to allow itself to become a tool of these forces which are enemies of peace in the region, in the name of aid, religion etc.

13. As regards the inter-relation of political forces in Bangladesh under the accepted leadership of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, there has been fullest coordination and harmony between all progressive elements like the Jamaat-i-Islami, the Naxalites etc. There are still large caches of arms yet to be recovered. There are still stresses and strains in the field of law and order and signs of impatience amongst the youth. These are factors which can contribute to tensions and even strife but they are fairly under control at present.

14. The Chairman said that as Mr. Firyubin is aware the Indian army is being withdrawn from Bangladesh. We had taken this decision quite some time ago since anti-Indian forces were using the presence of the Indian army for their propaganda purposes. By the 15th of March, ten days earlier then the deadline we have announced, the last Indian soldier would have left Bangladesh.

15. Then there was the question of economic reconstruction of Bangladesh. This is a colossal task. It would be very important for the Soviet Union and other socialist countries not to lose time in participating in the reconstruction of Bangladesh in a big way.

16. To sum up, the approach of India and the Soviet Union to Bangladesh should not be merely one of trade and commerce but basically, and intensely, political.

17. As regards the question of nationalities, which Mr. Firyubin had raised, the Chairman said that he presumed this was with reference to the presence of ethnic non-Bengalee minorities in Bangladesh. He said that before he visited Dacca, even he could not believe that human nature can be so debased as to indulge in such unmentionable crimes although one had read of the Hitler atrocities. In Bangladesh these were not considered to be merely quislings but criminals. They had become the sword-arm of the Pakistan occupation forces. When the Chairman had pleaded with sections of the leadership, intellectuals, professional people etc. that an endeavour should be made to absorb this minority into the national life of Bangladesh, there had been no response. Taking a practical view, the Chairman said that he did not think they had any future in Bangladesh. Sheikh Mujibur Rahman had himself said that while he had given them protection of life and limb, he could not ensure the normal life of a citizen for them since they are so deeply hated. There would seem to be no other humanitarian solution possible except to exchange population between West Pakistan and Bangladesh of the respective minorities. Every day mass graves were being dug up and fresh evidence of atrocities was coming in. This made any endeavour, howsoever feeble they may appear at the moment, for reconciliation, completely ineffective.

18. Mr. Firyubin enquired as to how many people would be involved in such an exchange. The Chairman said that there were one to one-and-a-half million non-Balgalees in Bangladesh while the population of Bangalees in West Pakistan (inclusive of civil servants) would be around 600, 000.
The discussion between the COAS and the members of the Soviet General Staff lasted for a total of nearly nine hours. Today, Defence Minister Grechko gave a lunch for the COAS and me. Curiously enough, he wished to have some talks with us confidentially before we started the lunch. These talks went on from 2 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and it is only after that that the formal lunch commenced.

2. The Marshal had been fully briefed by his colleagues of the General Staff on the exchange of views that had taken place between them and us. We briefly recounted the steady development of the friendly relations between India and Soviet Union which found a happy culmination in the Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation. In recent days, we told the Marshal, the sympathy, support and understanding that the Soviet Union had displayed towards India in her days of trouble and travail had further cemented these bonds of friendship. During the past six or seven years, one of the happiest feature of our cooperation with the Soviet Union was visible in the relations which had grown between the defence forces of the two countries. These relations had, during the recent conflict, blossomed into a deep understanding and camaraderie.

3. The COAS then drew the attention of the Marshal to the policy of confrontation which Pakistan, with the support of China and the United States, was pursuing towards India, and shared with him his apprehensions that this may again lead to a renewal of conflict between India and Pakistan. The Marshal was very lavish in his praise of the role of the defence forces of India in this conflict and said that he felt particularly proud that they had made the best use of their weapons and achieved spectacular results. He wished to congratulate the defence forces of India on their heroism, professional proficiency and superior combat-worthiness. He also praised the professional qualities of the leadership of the defence services of India. He then talked with deep feeling and affection about our Prime Minister. He said that one of his proudest possessions was a photograph of Mrs. Gandhi which always adorns the main room of his house. He wondered if the Prime Minister at all remembered him as one of her admirers and well-wishers. India, he said, was fortunate to have been gifted with a leader of such ability and eminence.
4. The Marshal, turning straight to us, said that he, as a soldier, did not believe in mincing words. He felt that we had, in the past, and we were still overrating the threat to the security of India from Pakistan. We have always missed the ominous sources from where the real threat to India emanates, namely, China. China had stooped so low that they had not only repudiated the principles of socialism and fraternal internationalism, but had now entered into open collusion with US-imperialism not only against the Soviet Union and other socialist countries but against the whole of progressive humanity. China was the real danger and India would be well-advised to constantly remind herself of this fact. She could ignore this fact only at her own peril.

5. The Marshal, then turning to the COAS, said that he would prefer to put politics aside for a moment and talk as soldier to a soldier. In this capacity, he added, he felt that history had cast the role of India and the Soviet Union into those of allies against this menace. He said that he saw the future very clearly; that they would have to defend themselves together against this menace and it would be wise for both countries to coordinate their strategies and plans and harmonies their defence organizations for meeting such an eventuality. In fact, he said, he would go further and think in terms of some form of a military alliance. Then, again, turning sharply to the COAS, he said that he would like him to mark his words that India would need the Soviet Union and the Soviet Union would need India and her support to deal with the designs of China. He added that it was important, therefore, to talk in terms of the realities of the situation rather than little phantoms like Pakistan. For the next 10 to 15 years China knew that she was incapable of causing any harm to the Soviet Union because she would not have an atomic arsenal ready by then. The Soviet Union had also made it unequivocally clear to them that a attempt on their part to disturb the peace or encroach on Soviet territory would bring about a massive retaliation in which every weapon would be used from which it would take her long to recover. "I said this openly and publicly in a meeting attended by 2,000 of our top-ranking officials", the Marshal added.

6. I told the Marshal that our own relations with China had not registered any improvement in spite of our persistent desire to do so. We also, as the COAS had told him, were trying to take into account the possible malevolence of Chinese intentions. I told him that the mechanism for mutual consultations and coordination of our strategy and tactics already existed in terms of Article IX of the Indo-Soviet Treaty. I agreed with him that the threat from China to both India and USSR cannot be ignored particularly in the light of Nixon’s visit to Peking and the known position of the U.S. and China on matters vitally affecting peace and security in the sub-continent and in Asia. It would not only be useful but also necessary and timely for our two countries to take these factors fully into account. The COAS added, “What advice would the Marshal tender to me as a distinguished and highly experienced soldier?” The Marshal said: “Be constantly vigilant, be on your guard, never lower your guard, never be caught napping”. The COAS added that it was for this purpose that we wanted equipment and, as the Marshal was aware, we will try to make the best use of the equipment that we would acquire from the Soviet Union. “If we have an alliance”, the Marshal said, “I shall earmark 50 IBMs for your defence against China. I shall not locate them on your soil but on my own so that you do not run any risk. What else do you want to do for your defence?” I told the Marshal that I felt extremely unhappy when we had to higgle and haggle about a few tanks here and a few tanks there. I asked him how I could, in all honesty, tell my own people that the great Red Army could not spare 150 tanks or 50 Schilkas (anti-aircraft) off its own shelf? The Marshal replied: “Would Mrs. Gandhi just tell Brezhnev? He will ring me up and I will say, Comrade, I will not only give 150 tanks but 15,000 tanks. But it has to be settled at that level”. (I have been getting more and more the feeling that with the passage of every day, Brezhnev is outdistancing more and more his other colleagues in importance and political significance.) The Marshal then related the story, in strict confidence to us, about the chase by the Soviet submarine fleet of the Seventh Fleet when it went beyond the Malacca Straits. He said that one of their nuclear-powered submarines went 400 metres below the “Enterprise”. “That is how, General Maneckshaw, the Americans wished the world to believe that they can defend their Fleet against my submarines”. “The question of equipment,” the Marshal added, “was not of very great importance.” But he believed that the time had come when India and the Soviet Union must enter into a detailed understanding of how and in what manner they should meet the Chinese threat whenever it materializes. The Marshal had some technical discussions also on matters of professional importance with the COAS.

7. He was in a very Happy, relaxed and extremely friendly mood. When we moved to the lunch table, he took me arm in arm wished me to convey his warmest and deepest regards to our Prime Minister and an assurance on behalf of the Soviet Union armed forces that they would always be at her disposal.

Moscow,
Note recorded by Chairman of the Policy Planning Committee in the Ministry of External Affairs on his assessment of the visit of the Indian Chief of Army Staff to the Soviet Union.

Moscow, February 26, 1972.

The visit of the COAS began on a dull note and in fact gathered momentum only after a late start. At first, we were rather puzzled whether the Soviet side was at all keen to receive this delegation. Later developments, however, revealed to us that our earlier disappointments were unfounded and, in fact, from my experience of the Soviet Union I consider it a most rewarding visit.

2. The discussions with the Soviet General Staff covered a total of nine hours. The COAS divided the exposition of our point of view broadly under the following categories:

i) Our experience and analysis of the recent conflict with Pakistan.

ii) The behaviour of Soviet weaponry in the war – a description of their merits and demerits.

iii) The need for acquisition of equipment within a prescribed time-frame for (a) replenishment of the losses and (b) acquiring additional punch and fire-power in the areas where it was found to be deficient in comparison to that of our adversary.

iv) The military strength and offensive capabilities of Pakistan and China and also the potential for their augmentation by third parties.

v) An assessment of the short-term and long-term threats which may materialize against the security of our country from Pakistan and China, either singly or collusively with such material and other help which the United States of America and the CENTO and SEATO allies of Pakistan were capable of mustering.

3. I was left with the very happy impression that the manner in which the COAS dealt with the variety of subjects was professionally competent and even otherwise outstanding. His Soviet counterparts were greatly impressed and he succeeded in evoking from them frank and detailed response. It is also my impression that they gave their assessment of the situation without any reservation and with frankness.

4. After my talks with Chairman Kosygin, I felt it advisable to request the COAS to explain, in purely professional and military terms, the implications of the issues of prisoners of war and the cease-fire line in J&K. The COAS did this with rare ability and secured the acceptance of our point of view on both these questions by the Soviet General Staff.

5. On the question of the prisoners of war, the Soviet General Staff conceded that until the authorities responsible for the defence of our country had full assurances of a stable peace it would be nothing short of folly to hand over nearly 100,000 trained men who could be arrayed against us, augmenting the already existing strength of the enemy. The Kashmir cease-fire line, they agreed, represented a highly untenable position, and the time had perhaps come when, purely form a military point of view, the stabilization of this line as a secure frontier should be discussed and achieved.

6. I am sure the COAS will be giving a professional account of his talks here. In my view, the prestige of India and her capacity to safeguard her interests, consistent with her adherence to the principle of peace and amity, had been vastly enhanced in the Soviet Union generally, but more particularly in the mind of the professional soldier. Even the members of the General Staff praised, with unrestrained emotion, the high quality of political leadership provided by our PM throughout these many months of crisis.

7. The COAS and I, along with the Ambassador, had a long meeting with Marshal Grechko and a separate note on our talks with him is attached.

Letter from Chairman of the Policy Planning Committee in the Ministry of External Affairs to Principal Secretary to Prime Minister P.N. Haksar.

Moscow, February 26, 1972.

D. P. Dhar
Chairman
Policy Planning Committee,
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi,

CAMP: Embassy of India, Moscow.

February 26, 1972

My dear,

I am enclosing two notes – one containing my impressions of the meeting the COAS had with the Soviet General Staff and the other outlining briefly our talk with Marshal Grechko.

2. This is the second occasion that Marshal Grechko has revealed, in his usual soldierly language, the thinking of the Soviet leadership. You will kindly recall that he was the first to suggest the conclusion of an Indo-Soviet Treaty. Now, again, he happens to be the first to suggest that the two countries should arrive at a firm understanding which will involve a programme of cooperation, coordination and even structural inter-relation of strategy, tactics between the Soviet and Indian defence forces against a possible Chinese involvement in a conflict with us or with Soviet Union.

3. I told Marshal Grechko that even without thinking in terms of any military alliance, the Indo-Soviet Treaty already provides for consultation under Article IX for both sides to take stock of any threat to their security and to devise necessary effective measures to counter the same. From our discussions with Marshal Grechko it is very clear that the Soviet Government is genuinely concerned about a possible military conflict with China. I feel that this suggestion is very important and we should find the earliest occasion to discuss all its implications, in the first instance, with the Prime Minister as soon as the COAS and I are back in India.

4. The day's rest that you had so kindly planned for me in Paris has already worn off and the Russians, with their amazing disregard for organized hours of work, have literally exhausted me. Nevertheless, I shall also endeavour to send you a note on the basis of some very good ideas which Krishna gave me regarding the various questions which may arise during the course of our dialogues with Pakistan. I will also be sending you a detailed account of my talks with Chairman Kosygin and a brief account of the discussions which I had in the Foreign Office with Firyubin for over 4 hours.

5. I am enclosing another set of these documents for the perusal of the Prime Minister in case she finds time to glance through them.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

0672. TOP SECRET

Note by D. P. Dhar, Chairman of the Policy Planning Committee of the Ministry of External Affairs on his talks with the leaders of the French Government in Paris and Chairman Kosygin in Moscow on the ways and means to establish peace in the sub-continent in the post-Bangladesh period.

NOTE NOT DATED.

After talking to Schumann, M/S. Alfon and other functionaries of Quai d'Orsay in Paris and later with Chairman Kosygin in Moscow, it is my impression that there is universal appreciation for our initiative in seeking direct talks with Pakistan without pre conditions. There was, moreover, identity of view on two important modalities which, according to us, should govern these talks. In the first instance, it was understood that we should not rush into talks without due preparation as otherwise we may court a failure. Secondly, no time should be lost in trying to frame a rigid agenda as that would involve premature wrangling and argument. We should nevertheless, by agreement, draw up a list of subjects which the two sides were likely to raise and discuss in their meeting. Chairman Kosygin, however, did not favour pre-summit talks either at the level of the Foreign Ministers or the officials of the Foreign and Defence Ministries in combination with, or separately from, the Chiefs of the Military Staff. In case preparations had to be made for the first meeting between our Prime Minister and Bhutto, then it should be done by emissaries who enjoy the confidence of the two leaders, secretly and away from the fanfare of publicity. (Kosygin was very kind and suggested as an example that I could be one such emissary). The French, with their flair for secret diplomacy, more or less favoured a similar approach and wished to know in an oblique manner whether they would be asked to play any role in this process.

2. Both in Moscow and Paris there was a certain amount of skepticism about the sincerity and genuineness of the offer of initiating talks with us by Bhutto. One thing was understood that the talks could be held only after we had settled down after the completion of our elections.

3. We have succeeded in evoking both sympathy and understanding for the legitimacy of the desire on our part for exploring strenuously the paths which could lead to durable peace. The objectives before us are not to rest content with the transient palliatives of mere cessation of hostilities but to frame measures for preventing its resumption in the near future. With the known desire of India to avoid tensions and conflict, neither in Paris nor in Moscow did I find any apprehension that there was need for further stabilization of cease-fire, otherwise war would be lurking round the corner. The attitudes of neither revealed any urgency for taking any measures apart from the simple cease-fire which exists today in this particular context.

4. There was, however, a natural sympathy for the issue of the POWs – a sympathy not born out of any particular regard for Bhutto or Pakistan but as a normal reaction to the unfortunate fate of these victims of wrong Pak policies. It is also felt that the pressures on Bhutto are rising for seeking a settlement with India on account of this issue because it affected not only a large number of people in the vocal West Punjab but the continued incarceration of the prisoners of war acted as a reminder of humiliation of defeat. As I have already informed you in my earlier communications our position on this issue has been understood fully and there is a realization that the return of the POWs has to be resolved, on the one hand, with the Bangla Desh authorities and, on the other, on the basis of its vital association with essential problems of our security. Peace, therefore, or a dependable promise of peace, has to precede a disposal of this issue. Sam (Manekshaw-COAS) has done remarkably well in striking a chord of understanding in the minds of the Soviet General Staff on this score.

5. What is our own strategy regarding this issue? We have studied the question from the point of view of international law and conventions and covenants etc. we now know that some of them can be arraigned for trial for crimes against humanity and genocide etc., but we have not yet coordinated our strategy with the Bangla Desh authorities on how to deal with this issue. The Bangla Desh Government, as I have already informed you, seems to be interested in this issue only to the extent of using it as a lever for securing the return of the Bengalees, officers and others, at present residing in West Pakistan. We have not yet involved them in an understanding of the problem of security that forms an essential content for us of any approach to the solution of this problem. This has to be done. We cannot afford to speak with two voices on this issue.

6. The next issue is that of Kashmir, made more ticklish both by age and disuse as a slogan of blatancy which sustained Pakistan's bigotry. In fact, whenever I mentioned the desirability of dealing with the question of Kashmir as a part of the process of securing durable peace, I could feel a yawn of boredom greeting me with the unexpressed pathetic question, 'why raise an issue which is lying almost dead in its present state of dormancy?' The world of international affairs being status quo-ist both as a consequence of sheer lethargy as well as the exigencies of present world politics, the natural inclination is not to stir the Kashmir dispute too deeply lest it should foul the possibilities of an agreement which may be available otherwise on the remaining issues with Pakistan. I do not mean to say that I did not find full understanding for the first time of the need for resolving the Kashmir issue finally and satisfactorily in Kosygin's language 'by a bold surgical operation'. Nevertheless, we shall have to work harder and take more firm attitudes for making the solution of the Kashmir problem integral to the main problem of the establishment of a durable peace.

7. This would mean that we should prepare our case on this issue. It has to be prepared not by resurrecting old and archaic arguments about the relevance of which you and I were doubtful even in 1948. Our presentation has to be fresh with a new look and it should bear the stamp of our new prestige and authority. Apart from working out briefly the juridical context of the Kashmir issue which in any case will be only for purposes of reference rather than for actual use, we shall have to concentrate on working a viable, secure line of division which becomes a firm frontier and inviolate as far as possible. We should also be prepared as a quid pro quo while gaining an inch here to yield an inch or two elsewhere in shaping this line. Here again, we have not even mentioned the problem of Kashmir to Bangla Desh and what attitude we would expect them to display when it is likely to be debated between us and Pakistan and perhaps later in the Security Council. Would it be possible for them to say that with the disappearance of old Pakistan, both as a concept and as an entity, any international obligations with regard to Kashmir which may have been imposed on India, have lapsed? In other words, that the validity of the Security Council resolutions on the Kashmir question no longer has any basis. At any rate, what we have to do is to get out of the old commitments which have been stipulated in the Karachi agreements of 1948 because there has been no progress in the last 25 years or so towards the implementation of the other elements contained in the Security Council resolutions. If the impossible division of one single country, ethnically, historically, geographically a distinct entity, namely Germany, into two parts artificially despite the known fact of the lack of desire of one part against such a division, has been converted into an internationally acceptable fact, I find no reason why the division of Jammu and Kashmir which was at best an aggregate of artificially patched bits of territory cannot be sustained, particularly if such a solution lays the foundation for stable peace in the sub-continent, in fact the whole region.

8. It is understood and I have made it clear in our talks that we are not interested in clinging to the territories of Pakistan which are at present under our occupation and the return of these territories will provide no problem whatsoever. This measure of understanding should not be minimized because it illustrates the faith of these nations in the peaceful objectives of the Prime Minister which has become amply known to them during the course of her leadership throughout the period of this crisis.

9. Lastly I would suggest that we should prepare a paper on the non-performance of the obligations which Pakistan had undertaken as a part of Tashkent agreement relating to various matters, more importantly the restoration of properties, trade, communications, etc. Here again, we shall have to coordinate our approach and strategy with the Bangla Desh Government.

10. Even at the risk of repetition, I may once again state for your consideration that all the aspects of our known and likely difficulties with Pakistan should be clearly identified and a fair measure of understanding secured from the Bangla Desh Government for the approach that we propose to adopt both during the course of our dialogue with Bhutto and in case the talks get deadlocked, during the course of the debate which is bound to be re-activated in the Security Council.

New Delhi, February 25, 1972.

On 24th February 1972 the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of Pakistan has given to the Swiss Ambassador in Islamabad the following

Aide Memoire

“The message conveyed by the Ambassador of Switzerland on February 17, conveying the Government of India’s willingness to enter into discussions with Pakistan, is under consideration. Meanwhile an official spokesman of the Indian Government is reported to have stated that India was ready to have talks with Pakistan without any preconditions. If correctly reported, the statement is welcome because this has been the stand of the Government of Pakistan from the very beginning and it is glad to note India’s acceptance of this principle. At the same time, however, several statements have been made by responsible Indian leaders which amount to laying conditions for such talks. One such statement was made by the Defence Minister of India on January 27, in which he is reported to have talked about territorial adjustments in the negotiations between the two countries. This statement has not been contradicted. In view of these conflicting statements, it would be appreciated if the Ambassador of Switzerland would kindly seek necessary clarification from the Indian Government.”

0674. Note by Director (Legal and Treaties Division), Ministry of External Affairs on the Legal Opinion on the implications of accepting Switzerland as a Protecting Power under the Geneva Convention.

New Delhi, March 1, 1972.

Secretary (East) is aware that he had conveyed to the Swiss Ambassador on 14 January, 1972, when the latter called on him, our views about the legal framework within which India could consider accepting Switzerland as Protecting Power under the Geneva Conventions. A copy of the legal frame-work, given to the Swiss Ambassador informally in an unsigned note, is enclosed for ready reference.
2. It is understood that Switzerland is contemplating recognition of Bangladesh shortly; we should accept them as a Protecting Power under the Geneva Conventions. Their recognition of Bangladesh would certainly smoothen their role as a Protecting Power and to an extent remove the difficulties we had earlier indicated to them, namely that since the prisoners of war and the civilians have surrendered in Bangladesh to the joint command of the forces of Bangladesh and India, India alone would not be able to accept Switzerland as a Protecting Power in relation to such POWs or civilian internees. Bangladesh must also recognize Switzerland as a protecting power and Switzerland must approach them directly in this regard. Obviously, Bangladesh would be able to do so only if Pakistan were to make a request to Switzerland to protect their interests in Bangladesh. This would thus imply at least a de-facto recognition by Pakistan of Bangladesh and its Government. It might also be added that if Pakistan agreed to make such a request, the relations between the two countries will be regulated by the Geneva Convention directly. It might further be added that to the extent the fourth Geneva Convention relating to Civilians is applicable Bangladesh could make a reference to the provisions of Article 36 thereof, which indicates that special agreements may be concluded between the parties to the conflict concerning the exchange and repatriation of their nationals in enemy hands. Mutatis Mutandis, they may utilize this provision for arranging repatriation of Bengali Muslims from Pakistan to Bangladesh and of Behari Muslims from Bangladesh to Pakistan.

3. By accepting Switzerland as a Protecting Power, after they have recognized Bangladesh, India and Bangladesh would of course be taking steps which would ensure greater international appreciation and acceptance in regard to the treatment of POWs, the trial of some POWs by the Bangladesh authorities, and their release and repatriation to each other's country. However, once we accept this role for Switzerland, we must be aware that - they would then be entitled to visit and interview the POWs and the civilian internees to be fully informed about their treatment, to receive complaints from them directly, to receive information about their trial, to arrange assistance and defence to them, etc. etc. Thus, in so far as trial is concerned, the prisoner’s representative and the Protecting Power must be told, as soon as possible, of the offences punishable by death under the law of the Detaining Power (Article 100); three weeks' notice of the particulars of a forthcoming trial of a POWs must be given to the Protecting power (Article 105); conviction must be reported (Article 107) to the Protecting Power; six months must elapse between notification of a death sentence to the Protecting Power and execution (Article 101); and so forth.

4. If the recognition of Bangladesh by Switzerland takes more time to materialize, and if some additional time is spent on making further arrangements between Pakistan and Bangladesh about the recognition of Switzerland as a Protecting Power in each other's territory, the question of Swiss role as a Protecting Power may become academic particularly if political development took place in the meanwhile at a fast pace and the possibility of direct negotiations between India, Bangladesh and Pakistan on these issues materializes. In that event, the question of POWs and Civilian interests would be settled directly and there would be no need for a Protecting Power. However, I might add that the question of trial of POWs and civilian internees by Bangladesh is a thorny question and is bound to be time-consuming. If any such persons are kept back for trial, under Article 85 of the third Convention they retain the privileges and safeguards of the Geneva Conventions and accordingly, they will still have to be repatriated after they have undergone the sentence. Accordingly, whether, and if so at what point of time, should Switzerland be accepted as a Protecting Power, must be considered primarily from a political point of view, keeping in mind the above legal aspects of the question.

0675. SECRET
Letter from Ministry of External Affairs to Indian Ambassador in Switzerland.
New Delhi, March 2, 1972
Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi.

R. Ranganathan
Deputy Secretary (Pak)
No.PSP/412/81/71 2nd March, 1972

My dear Head of Mission,
In the period from 25th March 1971, to the 2nd December 1971, a good number of West Pakistanis, who were residing in the former East Pakistan, illegally crossed over into India out of fear of danger to their lives. These West Pakistanis included senior government officials, business executives (mostly of tea gardens) and other well-placed persons. Some of them were apprehended in India on charges of illegal entry; many others are, presumably, still at large. We do not still have with us an accurate list of these persons. Under the present regulations, these persons cannot leave India unless their exit from the country is specifically authorised by the Government of India.

2. These West Pakistanis have influential connections in West Pakistan and, presumably, the Pakistan Government felt obliged to take a special interest in securing their early repatriation. In addition to addressing the Government of India in many individual cases, the Pakistan Government also sought the intervention of foreign Governments in this matter. Further, they issued publicity bulletins in the U.N. circles and capitals abroad with a view to putting pressure on us.

3. In the first list handed over to us in June 1971, the Pakistan Government had said that 33 such West Pakistanis had crossed over into India; subsequently, according to the Pakistan Government this number has increased.

4. The Government of India’s view in this matter has been that while we were prepared to allow these West Pakistanis to return to their homes (subject to security considerations), we have to take into account the fact that, ever since 1965, the Pakistan Government had kept in detention hundreds of Indians on flimsy pretexts, e.g. inadvertent crossing of the border, even though in reality, the Indian nationals concerned may have been kidnapped. Our request for information in regard to our nationals in Pakistani jails used to be ignored by the Pakistan Government; our Missions were prevented from rendering any consular assistance to our own people in Pakistani jails. In brief, the attitude of the Pakistan Government in regard to our nationals on their custody was one of utter non-cooperation. The reasons for this are not far to seek: the punishment for illegal entry into Pakistan were severe, but on the contrary, the Indian laws were mild and Pakistanis arrested for similar offences in India were used to be generally let off after a token punishment. The Pakistan Government, therefore, felt reasonably certain that their nationals in our custody would be released after short sentences. There was, therefore, no special reason for them to be co-operative in this matter.

5. In these circumstances, we felt it necessary to ensure that while arranging for the release of the West Pakistanis who had come over from Bangladesh into India, it would be appropriate for us to secure the return of our own nationals in Pak custody.
6. On 1st December 1971, the High Commission for India in Pakistan made a proposal to the Pakistan Government that an exchange of civilians held in custody in either country may be arranged as early as possible. The Pakistani government seemed interested to discuss this matter, but on the 3rd December 1971, open hostilities started and Pakistan broke off diplomatic relations with us. No progress was made on this issue.

7. On 17th January 1972, the Pakistan Government revived the proposal through the Swiss channels. According to the Pakistani Government, there are now 109 West Pakistanis who had entered India from Bangladesh. We have replied to the Pakistan Government through the Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi (copy enclosed) that we are willing to take up the proposal for the exchange of pre-war civilian prisoners detained in the two countries during the period 1965 to the 2nd December 1971. We have also furnished to them a list of our nationals in Pakistani custody. According to our information, there were 150 Indian nationals under detention in West Pakistan, and 278 in former East Pakistan. (We have included the names of Indian prisoners in the former East Pakistan also, just to provide for the possibility that some of them may have been transferred to West Pakistan before the 16th December, 1971.

8. While we are awaiting a reply from the Pakistan Government in this matter, we propose to take the following action in regard to the Pakistani list of 109 persons:

(i) ascertain whether the persons concerned are actually in our custody;

(ii) ensure that only civilians are involved and that no military or para military personnel are included in the list;

(iii) ascertain whether these persons came over to India prior to the war. Those who had entered this country after this date would be disposed of in consultation with the Bangladesh authorities.

9. The above is for your information and such use as you wish to make of it.

Yours sincerely

(R. Ranganathan)

The Ambassador of India, Berne.

President Bhutto’s handling of the domestic crisis in Pakistan since the middle of January, has graphically exposed the more negative features of his government. Instead of strengthening his Party’s popular base by convening the National Assembly and lifting martial law he and his colleagues have been anxious to find excuses for perpetuating martial law. The Impression is, therefore, gaining ground amongst his political opponents, both NAP (National Awami Party) and the Right Wing parties, that he is not so much interested in establishing a representative and democratic system as in creating a system to retain personal power through a pseudo-dictatorship, in which the PPP and the Army support each other to the exclusion of all democratic forces. In this context the setting up of the para military youth organization called the People’s Guard under Retired Major General Akbar Khan (organizer of the Kashmir Raiders in 1948) assumes added significance.

2. The enclosed analysis of President Bhutto’s domestic policies during the past two months reveals his strong inclination for the use of unscrupulous tactics as well as strong-arm methods to eliminate potential rivals. His so-called reform measures like nationalization of industries and purges in the army have been marred by his obsessive desire to settle old scores with his enemies from the period of Ayub Khan and Yahya Khan. Similarly, in the Frontier region and in Baluchistan he has been trying to buy support by various means in order to undercut the influence of the NAP/JUI combination.

3. However, all these tactics on the part of Mr. Bhutto have only helped in consolidating the opposition constituted by such diverse elements as the NAP/JUI on the one hand and the two Muslim Leagues and Jamaat-i-Islami on the other. The demand for immediate lifting of Martial Law and convening of the National Assembly has become urgent and universal. The continuing unrest and agitation, gheraoes (blockades) and specially the wide-spread strike by the police which has been described by Mr. Bhutto himself as “a mutiny”, have shaken the Government to its very foundations. In the face of these developments, Mr. Bhutto has not only had to make some compromises with the opposition parties i.e. postponement of local bodies elections, but he has also had to go in for a major shake-up at the top levels of the Army, Air Force and Navy. He has had to part company with General Gul Hasan and Air Marshal Rahin Khan who had brought him into power in December, to join hands with the hard-line faction of General Tikka Khan and with a new leadership in the air force.

4. In coming months, therefore, it is to be seen whether Mr. Bhutto will be able to retain this uncomfortable coalition with the Army or whether the Army will not once again set up and unadulterated military dictatorship. Even if Mr. Bhutto retains his present hold, genuine democratic forces in Pakistan are likely to be curbed severely and unrest might be the order of the day.

Yours sincerely,

( A.S. Chib )

Analysis of President Bhutto’s domestic policies (January – February 1972)

i) Attitude towards parties in NWFP and Baluchistan

In dealing with opposition political parties Mr. Bhutto is ignoring the defeated parties in the Punjab and the Sind (he can afford to do so in view of the PPP majorities) and is concentrating on tackling Wali Khan’s NAP in the NWFP and the NAP/JUI combination in Baluchistan, which together holds a majority of the Provincial Assembly seats. Initially, President Bhutto tried to entice the NAP into joining hands with him, by lifting the ban imposed by President Yahya and offering three posts in his Central Government to NAP and JUI nominees. However, Wali Khan remained non-committal as Bhutto’s offer meant the involvement of the NAP in an essentially undemocratic arrangement with the PPP dominated Government at the Centre, without any commitment for either convening the National Assembly or lifting of Martial law. (Action significantly similar to Mr. Bhutto’s efforts in January – February 1971, to encourage the idea of setting up a so-called National Government at the centre with Sheikh Mujib’s participation, while martial law continued under President Yahya). The objective in both cases was the same, namely, to push through a Constitution in accordance with the dictat of an authoritarian Government, supported by the army.

ii) Demand for lifting of Martial Law

Wali Khan’s answer was to reject the idea propounded by PPP leaders that martial law is necessary for introducing Socio-Economic reforms. According to him a duly elected National Assembly can vote on the reforms with the sanction of the people. The lead taken by Wali Khan in calling for the removal of martial law gathered sufficient momentum to encourage even traditionally anti-NAP leaders like Khan Abdul Qayyum (PML) to state that the goal before the people was the lifting of martial law and restoration of democracy. Similar statements were made by leaders of the JUI as well as Jamaat-i-Islami at Lahore in January and February. On February 17 the PPP Central Working Committee decided in its meeting to ignore the opposition’s demand by stating that in the supreme national interests and for the integrity of the country, martial law must be continued for some time. On February 19, Mr. Bhutto introduced another factor by tying up the lifting of martial law with the conclusion of his talks with Sheikh Mujib and our Prime Minister.

iii) Demand for Convening of Provincial Assemblies.

Wali Khan had also demanded the immediate convening of the provincial assemblies as the NAP and the JUI which together hold majorities in the NWFP and Baluchistan are in position to form Governments. Mr. Bhutto’s answer to his speech at Larkana on the 22nd January was, that provincial assemblies would be convened on the 23rd March and Ministries would be formed by the majority parties but that in NWFP and Baluchistan “cooperation of other parties” would be necessary. This special proviso introduced in the cases of NWFP and Baluchistan where the PPP was in a minority was blatantly partial. To add to the controversy, the Government announced its decision to hold wholly unimportant local bodies elections before convening the provincial assemblies, on the ground that this was necessary to establish democracy in the country at the grassroots level. (Reminiscent of Bhutto’s enthusiastic support of Basic Democracy during President Ayub’s time).

The NAP saw in this move yet another design to undercut its popular support in NWFP and Baluchistan by establishing a cadre of PPP office-holders loyal to the Government at the town and village levels, through rigged elections. Wali Khan demanded that the democratization of the local bodies should be carried out by the duly elected provincial governments and that the Centre should not interfere in provincial matters. Significantly, Wali Khan’s old enemy, Khan Abdul Qayyum again supported this anti-Government demand. At Lahore the CML (Daultana group) announced its intentions to boycott elections to local bodies until the martial law was lifted. The JUI came out with a similar resolution. Thus the Bhutto Government’s stand on this issue ultimately led to the formation of a joint front of diverse Political parties to agitate the demand for postponement of the local bodies elections till after the convening of provincial governments. On 19th February the Bhutto Government was forced to yield ground, when the local bodies Minister, Mohd. Hanif, announced the postponement of the proposed elections till after the convening of the Provincial Assemblies on March 23.
(iv) Arming of People’s Guard

Another point of provocation in NWFP and Baluchistan arose out of the Government’s decision to arm the People’s Guard under the organization of retired Major General Akbar Khan, Mr. Bhutto’s Adviser on National Security. Wali Khan accused the PPP of trying to create an organization similar to Hitler’s S.S.Guards which would create conditions of civil war in Pakistan. According to Pakistan Press reports Akbar Khan had stated that the People’s Guards were soon to be provided with firearms to fight the ‘reactionary and the anti-people elements and those who wanted to create discontent against the people’s government.’ Wali Khan threatened to take counter measures to organize armed Pathan youth most of whom were already familiar with the use of guns. Under attack from Wali Khan General Akbar Khan had to publicly deny the charge that People’s Guards were being armed, though the existence of the organization was not denied.

(v) PPP clashes With the Police and Civil unrest

The PPP youth volunteers were soon to show their hand when they broke up a political rally at Peshawar addressed by Air Marshal Asghar Khan, as he criticized Mr. Bhutto’s policies. This led to a clash between the Police and the PPP volunteers, which later triggered off countrywide strikes and violent demonstrations by the police. The strikes and demonstrations by the policeman came as the culmination of widespread civil unrest all over Pakistan during the preceding weeks. While the police also joined in the general clamour for higher wages, it is learnt that in some places policeman struck work because of excessive interference by the PPP workers who went to the extent of getting arrested persons released.

In the industrial sector gheraoes and strikes were organized by workers at Karachi, Lyallpur, Lahore and Oakara. While the PPP accused right-wing parties for fomenting such strikers at Karachi the well-known pro-Bhashani left-wing labour leader Kaneez Fatima issued a three month notice to Mr. Bhutto’s Government to fulfill its promises towards labour, failing which government would have to reckon with even bigger strikes.

The labour unrest continued despite the announcement of the new labour policy by Mr. Bhutto, as the labour groups felt the Government’s measures did not go far enough. Similarly, the strikes by policemen continued to spread to new areas despite the latest threat by the Punjab Governor on 27th February that striking policemen will henceforth be dealt with under the martial law involving R.I. upto 14 years. It was earlier revealed by the Governor that at Hyderabad, policemen had gone to the extent of seizing the armoury and cutting off telephone connections of top government officials, before striking work. At Lahore troops had to be called out as striking policemen clashed with civilians on the 25th February. According to reports reaching Kabul the policemen’s strike at Peshawar was no ordinary strike.
It involved attacks by the policemen on Government offices, police posts and particularly on PPP offices. Portraits of Mr. Bhutto and even of Mr. Jinnah were reportedly burnt along with PPP flags.

(vi) Dissatisfaction within the PPP

Another incident highlighting the dissatisfaction within the PPP ranks was the seizure of the Party’s Central Secretariat in Karachi by an 18-member Action Committee on 10th February. All attempts by senior party officials to persuade the PPP workers to end their forcible occupation failed as the Action Committee insisted on speaking only to Mr. Bhutto or the Provincial Chairman Ghulam Rasool Talpur. The situation was ultimately resolved by the latter’s intervention. There was considerable dissatisfaction amongst the ranks of the PPP at the manner in which party offices were distributed. There were even some demands for the resignation of Mr. Bhutto and his Ministers and for holding elections for posts at all levels.

(vii) Settling old scores

Considerable resentment has been caused amongst opposition groups by the high-handed manner in which the Bhutto Government has proceeded to take action against individuals with whom Mr. Bhutto had old scores to settle. In the course of the decision to take over the management of certain industries he singled out relatives of the Ayub Khan family, i.e. General Habibullah, Chairman of the Gandhara Industries, was put under arrest on some trumped up charges, the diamond mines at Swat belonging to President Ayub’s younger son-in-law were expropriated. However, certain other industries where Government control could have been more justifiable were left untouched. In NWFP the lands of the Nawab of Hoti (Commerce Minister under President Ayub) were expropriated prior to any general pronouncement of land reforms. It was being openly said in Pakistan that Mr. Bhutto hesitates to touch landlords in the Sind as many of them like Talpur, Jatoi, etc., are members of the Government. Also, that he does not wish to touch Army officers owning lands along the Punjab-India border. In the NWFP and Baluchistan there are no such compulsions as the PPP has nothing to lose and land reforms can bring the added advantage of winning support amongst the landless, labourers and tribesmen, making inroads into the NAP’s influence.

An incident that has achieved considerable notoriety is the arrest and continued detention of the Editor of the Dawn Mr. Altaf Gauhar (the influential information Secretary under Ayub Khan). He was supposedly arrested for charges brought against him by the Yahya Government which were never implemented. However, it is generally believed that the real reason for Mr. Altaf Gauhar’s arrest was that Mr. Gauhar who had fallen foul of Mr. Bhutto during the Tashkent talks, was engaged in writing a pamphlet exposing his negative role. However, since a search of Altaf Gauhar’s house failed to produce results, he was put in prison and refused bail to keep him from revealing the truth. Altaf Gauhar before his arrest had advocated lifting of martial law and recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan. This he may have done at the instigation of the Haroon family, wealthy industrialists and proprietors of the Dawn group newspapers, who had large investments in Bangladesh as well as links with the Awami League.

Finally, the students who Bhutto had long championed have also voiced opposition. The NSF, which agitated for Bhutto’s release from prison in 1968, on 17th February 1972 threatened to launch a mass movement if President Bhutto did not restore democratic institutions forthwith. The NSF President accused the Bhutto regime of collaborating with Jagirdars and capitalists.

0677. Interview of President Bhutto with Dilip Mukerjee and B. K. Tiwari of the New Delhi based newspapers Times of India and Indian Express respectively.

Larkana (Sind), March 14, 1972.

I. COOPERATION NOT CONFRONTATION

Pakistan can no longer afford to pursue the policy of confrontation towards India. Confrontation was a right policy at one time; “It was to our advantage and it served our national interest.” However, in today’s changed situation, “I would like to pursue the policy of consultation, not confrontation.”

Our people “would like to see peace and I am going to make a genuine search for peace”. President Bhutto said.

II. TALKS WITH INDIA

(a) Summit meeting proposed: President Bhutto prefers direct talks with our Prime Minister to a meeting between officials and emissaries of the two countries.

(b) Venue of talks: President Bhutto would be willing to come to Delhi. But if Prime Minister could make it, “she is welcome to Pakistan”.

(c) No third Party intervention: Negotiations should be strictly bilateral. President Bhutto said; “I am allergic to third party intervention.”
Step-by-step approach favoured: Mr. Bhutto recalled Pt. Nehru’s ‘realistic approach’. Indo-Pakistan problem cannot be resolved in ‘one day’. A Tashkent type settlement ‘simply does not work’. The first summit meeting should have a “limited purpose”. At this meeting “we can take a number of steps to create a better situation to facilitate progress towards a final settlement”.

III. SPECIFIC INDO-PAKISTANI ISSUES

(a) Kashmir: While both sides must take into account the genesis of the problem and the commitments made, the fact remains that “struggle for self-determination cannot be inspired from outside. Like revolution it cannot be exported …… we have been to war several times over Kashmir……..the problem has not been resolved for us by military means. You have not resolved it politically either……it is for you to solve the problem. You set the tone. I cannot set the pace any more.

(b) Prisoners of War:

(i) The POW issue should not be treated on the basis of “legal fictions”. The Mukti Bahini did not have any role in the East. Even assuming there is joint Indo-Bangladesh jurisdiction over the POWs, “it is for you to make the right suggestion to Sheikh Mujib. He will be amenable.”

(ii) If India used the POWs to “milk Pakistan” Pakistan would have only two alternatives: (i) capitulation (2) continuing confrontation.

(iii) As long as the POWs remain in Indian camps, tension will be generated in Pakistan. “Political crisis or instability in Pakistan is not to your advantage”.

(iv) India should make a “handsome gesture” and repatriate the POWs. India runs no risks in returning the POWs – the war has ended; a fairly durable ceasefire exits. Repatriation would strengthen Bhutto’s hands and give him elbow room during negotiations on the basic issues of conflict between the two countries.

IV. BANGLADESH

While parrying a question on the reality of Bangladesh, President Bhutto expressed determination to “make some progress” in Pakistan’s relationship with Bangladesh.
Record of discussion between Foreign Secretary and the Swiss Ambassador.

New Delhi, March 15, 1972.

The Swiss Ambassador called on the Foreign Secretary in the evening of 15th March 1972. He began by repeating the same points raised by him in the discussion with Secretary (East) earlier in the afternoon of which a summary is given in the attached note*. A gist of the additional points raised during discussion with the Foreign Secretary is given below:

(i) The Swiss Ambassador referred to the limitations placed by India on the Swiss functioning as a Protecting Power under the Geneva Conventions for Pakistani interests in India. He expressed the hope that with the recognition of Bangladesh by the Swiss Government it would now be possible for India to remove these limitations. Foreign Secretary replied that even if India were to accept the Swiss as a Protecting Power it would not be possible for us to allow them to deal with the prisoners of war captured from the Eastern theatre unless the Bangladesh Government also accept the Swiss to act as a Protecting Power on behalf of Pakistan. He explained that prisoners from the Eastern theatre were taken into custody by the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Command and as such India could not act without authority by the Bangladesh Government. Foreign Secretary, however, said that we could consider the possibility of allowing the Swiss to act on their mandate vis-à-vis the Pakistani prisoners of war taken from the Western theatre; in whose case the Bangladesh authorities were not directly concerned.

(ii) The Swiss Ambassador stated that as Pakistan had appointed the Swiss to act as a Protecting Power on behalf of their nationals imprisoned in India, it was for the Government of India to suggest what steps they should now take in this regard. Foreign Secretary replied that the next step should be that they should approach Bangladesh Government if they would agree for the Swiss to act as a Protecting power on behalf of Pakistan. Bangladesh Government may even think of entrusting the Swiss to look after their interests in Pakistan vis-à-vis the Bengali soldiers and officials who are reported to have been put under some kind of concentration camps in Pakistan.

(iii) The Swiss Ambassador suggested that they could perhaps look after Pakistan’s prisoners of war in India with the consent of the Bangladesh

* Not available
They could deal with their welfare and humanitarian aspects under the Geneva Conventions while the question of repatriation can be taken in hand later when there is an agreement between Pakistan, India and Bangladesh. He repeated that the attitude of India to this whole matter was important as India is a signatory to the Geneva Conventions and it is therefore not logical that she should put legal limits on the mandate of the Swiss. The Swiss Ambassador also tried to suggest that in January when the matter was first raised the Bangladesh Mission in Delhi was willing to give a visa to one of his Embassy officials to visit Bangladesh but he was advised by our Ministry not to send this official. Foreign Secretary corrected the Swiss Ambassador by saying that the grant of the visa by the Bangladesh Mission did not automatically afford the right to the Swiss official to visit POW camps in Bangladesh. Such a permission could have been given only by the Bangladesh Government. Obviously, the Bangladesh Government is not willing to go along with Pakistan’s idea of tackling the POW question in isolation from the overall settlement on the issues such as the Bengali minorities in Pakistan etc.

Foreign secretary also mentioned that even according to Article 133 of Geneva Conventions it is necessary that there should be a prior agreement in a peace settlement for the repatriation of prisoners of war. A peace settlement has not yet taken place between India and Pakistan even though active hostilities may have ceased and we could not be expected to return as many as four divisions of Pakistan’s regular troops without some assurance that the Government of Pakistan is not likely to make preparations for another confrontation with India. Such an assurance can come out of the proposed bilateral talks between India and Pakistan about which an offer has been made through the U.N. Secretary General and repeated to Pakistan.

(iv) The Swiss Ambassador enquired if in view of the circumstances our Government felt the Swiss had any useful role to perform. Foreign Secretary replied that in view of Switzerland’s additional policy of neutrality, their association with the institution of Geneva Conventions and their record in assisting the repatriation of Indian and Pakistani High Commissions personnel we would say that the Swiss have a very useful role to play. In the present context the Swiss could convey to President Bhutto that we want to settle all problems with them in a spirit of give and take; we do not want to take any undue advantage of our military victory; we do not want to keep territory except for minor adjustment and that if Mr. Bhutto acts in a statesman like manner there can be a settlement for lasting peace in the whole sub-continent. The Swiss Ambassador said that his counterpart in Islamabad was unfortunately not familiar with the thinking of the Indian Government and is perhaps not able to reflect his views as clearly as he should. The Swiss Ambassador enquired if in our view there will be some useful purpose if he were to visit Islamabad and try to put across the views of the Indian Government directly to the Pakistan authorities. Foreign Secretary told him that our Government will not misunderstand such a visit if it is at the initiative of the Swiss Government. The Swiss Ambassador enquired that Mr. Bhutto may say on what authority he had come to Islamabad to talk to him. Foreign Secretary replied he could say that the authority was on the basis of talks he has had with our Government. The Swiss Ambassador before leaving said that he would think over this possibility and if he feels any useful purpose will be served he would approach Berne about it.

CONFIDENTIAL

Message from the British Home Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home to the Indian Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.

I had a long talk with President Bhutto this morning. He is very anxious to talk over with you the ways in which an entirely new relationship with India may be established. He would like to have a meeting which would first range over all the possibilities and secondly fix an agenda for future meetings, dealing with the various matters which would make up a final settlement.

He told me of the proposal that each of you might start with a trusted emissary but he feels that what is required is a real meeting of minds between you and him and that no substitutes could really do this with the authority and public support which you and he could command.

He is anxious that such a meeting should be convened quickly before the middle of next month. He would rather like to bring some of the leaders of sections of opinion in Pakistan with him so as to involve them from the start in the creation of a new climate of relations.

But he would not, I think, wish them to be in on the intimate talks which he would like with you and which he considers basic to improved relations.
Finally he would like the invitation to talk to come from you. Although he is of course aware of your public statements, I think a formal invitation would help him enormously.

If I may add an opinion of my own, I greatly hope that you will find it possible to suggest such a meeting.

I believe it would loosen a situation which looks like becoming increasingly rigid. Contact with Mujibur Rahman would thereafter become much easier. I will send a further message on this very soon. With best wishes.

Alec Douglas-Home.

SECRET

Note recorded by the Secretary (East) in the Ministry of External Affairs S. K. Banerji to the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister regarding discussions with Pakistan.

New Delhi, March 21, 1972.

In Foreign Secretary’s telegram No. 24324 dated 12.2.1972 to our Permanent Representative in New York, we give the text of the letter which he was asked to give to the Secretary General expressing our readiness to have direct talks with the Government of Pakistan at any time, at any level and without any preconditions, for achieving lasting peace between India and Pakistan. The text of the letter was handed over by us to Heads of Mission of Security Council countries in New Delhi on the 14th and 15th February, 1972. I gave the Swiss Ambassador a copy of the Aide Memorie on the evening of 15th February “in order to keep him informed of developments” and not specifically for the purpose of transmitting the message to President Bhutto. The Swiss Ambassador in Islamabad met the Pakistan Foreign Secretary on the morning of 17th February and informed him of our message sent to the U.N. Secretary General. I reproduce below a hand-written note given by the Swiss Ambassador to me on the 23rd February, 1972:-

“The text of the Aide Memoire was transmitted by me to Berne late afternoon of 15th February, with commentary of Mr. Banerji.”
2. The Swiss Ambassador in Islamabad met the Foreign Secretary at the MEA in the morning of 17\textsuperscript{th} February. The Foreign Secretary seemed at the time not yet aware of the Aide Memoire to Dr. Waldheim. He told the Swiss Ambassador who must have informed of India’s willingness to negotiate without any preconditions: “This is a very interesting message”. He then said that he would inform President Bhutto without delay and he is sure that the reply would be in the affirmative.

\end{quote}

On 24\textsuperscript{th} February 1972 the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of Pakistan had given to the Swiss Ambassador in Islamabad the following

\textbf{Aide Memoire}

“The message conveyed by the Ambassador of Switzerland on February 17, conveying the Government of India’s willingness to enter into discussions with Pakistan, is under consideration. Meanwhile an official spokesman of the Indian Government is reported to have stated that India was ready to have talks with Pakistan without any preconditions. If correctly reported, the statement is welcome because this has been the stand of the Government of Pakistan from the very beginning and it is glad to note India’s acceptance of the principle. At the same time, however, several statements have been made by responsible Indian leaders which amount to laying conditions for such talks. One such statement was made by the Defence Minister of India on January 27, in which he is reported to have talked about territorial adjustments in the negotiations between the two countries. This statement has not been contradicted. In view of these conflicting statements, it would be appreciated if the Ambassador of Switzerland would kindly seek necessary clarification from the Indian Government.”

The Swiss Ambassador was given the following reply orally by J.S.(Pak) on the same date:-

“Our message of 15th February which was from Government to Government is absolutely clear. It is not capable of any misconstruction.”

3. The Swiss Ambassador handed over the following Aide Memoire to Principle Secretary to P.M. on the 28th February:-

“Aide Memoire”

With reference to the message which the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India requested the Swiss Ambassador to relay to the Pakistani authorities in response to their Aide Memoire of 24th February, 1972, regarding clarifications, the Embassy of Switzerland wishes to transmit the following message received by the Swiss Ambassador in Islamabad on 27th February 1972 from the (Pakistan) Ministry of External Affairs:

“The contents of the message communicated to us yesterday have been interpreted by the Government of Pakistan to mean that there are no preconditions to proposed negotiations between India and Pakistan. If we do not hear to the contrary by March 2, we would understand that our understanding is correct.

The above message was given to the Swiss Ambassador in Islamabad by the Secretary General of the Ministry of External Affairs.”

It was decided by us not to send any message to Pakistan, thereby confirming correction of Pakistan’s presumption.

4. The Ceylon High Commissioner handed over the following note to Secretary (West) on 17th February:-

“No.PAD 12

Ceylon High Commission
Kautilya Marg, Chanakayapuri,
New Delhi

February 17, 1972

The High Commission for Ceylon in India presents his compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India and has the honour to state that the Prime Minister of Ceylon has received the following message from President Ali Bhutto of Pakistan for transmission to the Hon. Prime Minister of India Smti. Indira Gandhi.

Message commences-

“I should be grateful if you would be so kind as to convey to the Prime Minister of India on my behalf that both she and Mujibur Rehman are faced with situations which need to be resolved expeditiously. Its continuation is neither in the interest of India nor of Pakistan not indeed of the sub-continent as a whole. I am ready to meet her with open mind and without any preconditions whatsoever. I am hoping that she also would be willing to do likewise. I would be willing to come to New Delhi on any mutually convenient date. It is my firm belief, our contacts can be productive for lasting peace in the sub-continent.”

Message ends.

The High Commissioner for Ceylon should be grateful to receive the reaction of the Hon. Prime Minister of India for onward transmission to the Prime Minister of Ceylon.”

5. On the 18th February I sent for the Ceylon High Commissioner and told him that we had not been able to follow the meaning or significance of the first sentence of the message and were wondering whether there had been any error in transmission. I told him that we would appreciate clarification of this part of the message. The Ceylon High Commissioner sent me the following Top Secret letter which was received by me on the 23rd February:-

“No.PAD/12

Dear Shri Banerji,

I wish to refer you to our discussion of the 18th instant. I have been informed by my Government that there has been no fundamental mutilation in the transmission of the message sent by President Bhutto to the Hon. Prime Minister of India. The only alteration is that in the first sentence of the message, the word ‘situations’ should read as ‘situation’.

I have also been informed that the clarification sought has been referred to the Government of Pakistan.

Yours sincerely

Sd/- N.Q. Dias

High Commissioner.”
6. on the 24th February, I received the following Top Secret letter from the Ceylon High Commissioner:

“No. PAD/12

Dear Shri Banerji,

Further to my letter of even No. dated February 22, 1972, I have been directed to inform you that the Pakistan Embassy in Ceylon desires that the following sentence be substituted for the first sentence of the message contained in my third person note No. PAD/12 dated February 17, 1972, which I personally handed over to you.

“I should be grateful if you would be so kind as to convey to the Prime Minister of India on my behalf that she and I are faced with a situation which needs to be resolved expeditiously.”

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- N.Q. Dias
High Commissioner.

7. The final text of the message from President Bhutto to the Prime Minister would, therefore, read as follows:-

“I should be grateful if you would be so kind as to convey to the Prime Minister of India on my behalf that she and I are faced with the situation which needs to be resolved expeditiously. Its continuation is neither in the interest of India nor of Pakistan nor indeed of the sub-continent as a whole. I am ready to meet her with open mind and without any preconditions whatsoever. I am hoping that she would be willing to do likewise. I would be willing to come to New Delhi on any mutually convenient date. It is my firm belief, our contacts can be productive for lasting peace in the sub-continent.”

Record of discussions between the Foreign Secretary and the Swiss Ambassador.

New Delhi, March 26, 1972.

Record of Discussion between the Foreign Secretary and Dr. Frits Real, Ambassador of Switzerland, on 26-3-1972.

The Swiss Ambassador, Dr. Frits Real, called on the Foreign Secretary at 10.30 a.m today.

2. The Swiss Ambassador said that he is obliged in the name of Pakistan to protest against a further incident of shooting of a Pakistani POW in an unidentified camp. FS, after speaking to Defence Secretary, said that we did not know of this incident, and that we would enquire. But till the facts were known we could not accept the Pakistani protest. FS added that the highlighting of such incidents by Pakistan did not help at all, it only aroused passions.

3. The Swiss Ambassador raised the question of repatriation of sick and wounded POWs. FS said that we were in touch with the Bangladesh Government and that we hoped that they would agree to the return of such of those sick and wounded POWs as were not wanted for war crimes.

4. At this stage, FS reminded the Swiss Ambassador that we ourselves took the initiative in the matter of repatriation of sick and wounded in the West. We were disappointed that Pakistan did not hand over 121 of our sick and wounded POWs. We would like that ICRC to go into this. We had in addition two cases in which Pakistani behaved inhumanly towards our prisoners.

5. The Swiss Ambassador enquired if we would like him also to go into this matter. FS replied that on purely bilateral problems, even if they are covered under the Geneva Conventions, we would like the Swiss to look after our interests. The Swiss Ambassador pointed out that Switzerland had been appointed protecting power for Pakistan and we had made it clear this was only under the Vienna Convention. It was also believed that once Switzerland recognized Bangladesh, it would be easier to proceed further in this matter.

6. Clarifying the position, FS said that we would not expect Switzerland to go to POWs camps of prisoners taken in Bangladesh. Now that Switzerland had recognized Bangladesh, the Swiss Ambassador would be able to keep in touch with Bangladesh and if Bangladesh wanted Switzerland to look after its interests in Pakistan it is a matter for them and Pakistan to decide. So far as the west is concerned, Switzerland looked after our interests.
7. The Swiss Ambassador said that his Government regretted our stand that he could not go into issues concerning POWs or civilian internees under the joint responsibility of India and Bangladesh. FS pointed out that on the contrary it was our regret that the Swiss Government had not understood our point of view. We accepted Switzerland as protecting power only for Pakistan under the Vienna Convention. The Swiss Government in their note had gone to the extent of describing our position in Bangladesh as that of an occupying power. Anyhow, the position is now clear. We could consider accepting Switzerland as protecting power (under the Geneva Convention) only for the West, but the Swiss Ambassador must first get the reaction of his Government.

8. Regarding the proposal made at one time for the Swiss Ambassador’s visit to Islamabad, the Swiss Ambassador said that his Government had agreed to the visit but Secretary (East) had later mentioned that there were now many channels. FS replied that we had offered to Pakistan bilateral talks through other channels. It was for the Swiss Government to decide whether it was worthwhile for the Ambassador to go to Islamabad. As for communications to Pakistan we would use the Swiss channels rather than anything else. We had complete confidence not only in the Government of Switzerland but also in the Swiss Ambassador himself. The Swiss Ambassador said that his Government was willing to let him go to Islamabad and that he would wait to know what we would like him to do. Giving the present position of the talks with Pakistan, FS said that there is need for caution and care and we had taken some steps. At the present moment there may be no role for the Swiss to play but we would like to use the Swiss agency rather than any other.

9. The Swiss Ambassador said that, speaking personally, with regard to POWs, the impression in western countries is that if India instead of Pakistan had 93,000 POWs in the other country, India’s attitude would be different.

10. FS said that after all war is war. We all know how long it took for the German prisoners to return after World War II. Ours was a genuine difficulty. We had to take into account the views of the Bangladesh Government and the atrocities committed by the Pakistan army. For Pakistan also, sooner peace is re-established the better it would be. Otherwise, other developments may take place. In a settlement, everything will fall in its place.

11. The Swiss Ambassador said that while under the Geneva Conventions the ICRC was playing purely a humanitarian role there were other issues, mostly legal, e.g. death certificates of POWs or the last will which POWs might wish to make. These cannot be attended to by the ICRC, and were the duties of the protecting power. FS said that these issues could be examined by us. As for the western sector, we could consider Switzerland’s role as a protecting power but the Ambassador should first obtain the reactions of his Government.

12. Referring to the visit of Ambassador Kellor, FS requested that he may be assured that we did not want to keep the POWs indefinitely but it cannot be glibly said that once ceasefire in announced everything is settled. Bangladesh is an essential party; we appreciated Bhutto’s difficulties and would not like to increase his problems. We are keen to ensure a durable peace in the sub-continent.

13. The Swiss Ambassador, explaining his personal view, said that the essential reason for Keller’s visit was probably public pressure; there had been comments in the Swiss press that Switzerland has achieved nothing and it was reflection on the Ambassador himself. Some people in Switzerland felt that he should have called on the Prime Minister and placed the problem before her, but he knew very well that this was unnecessary. For him, therefore, Keller’s visit was somewhat embarrassing. FS again assured the Ambassador that we had complete confidence in him personally.

0682. Message from the Government of Pakistan for the Government of India received through the Swiss Embassy in New Delhi regarding Indian nationals stranded in Pakistan.
New Delhi, March 28, 1972.
The Embassy of Switzerland, Pakistan Affairs Division, presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India, and has the honour to inform the Ministry that it has received - through Swiss diplomatic channels – the following message from the Government of Pakistan:
“The list of Indian nationals stranded in Pakistan after the outbreak of hostilities is being prepared. The Indian Government may kindly also be requested to provide a list of Pakistani nationals similarly blocked in India”.
Simultaneously the Embassy of Switzerland is submitting to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India, an updated list based on its local record.
The Embassy of Switzerland avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India the assurances of its highest consideration.

0683. SECRET
Letter from the Indian Ambassador in France D. N. Chatterjee to the Secretary (East) in the Ministry of External Affairs S. K. Banerji.
Embassy of India
Paris
D.O.No.PAR/103/3/71 11 April 1972
Last evening Secretary General Alphand came to dine with me. We had discussion on various subjects which, naturally, included Indo-Pakistan relations. I mention below briefly some of the things he said:
2. Alphand had called the newly posted Pakistan Ambassador towards the end of last week and told him that it was to the interest of Pakistan to open serious negotiations with India to establish durable peace. Alphand had explained to him that Bangladesh government should also be a party to the negotiations and that all contentious subjects should be dealt with in the talks. In reply to my question Alphand said that in the first phase of negotiations, Kashmir, in his view, should be left out because the Kashmir issue was so charged with emotion that to take up Kashmir at the very beginning of peace talks would inevitably result in a stalemate. Alphand felt that there was better chance of settling the “Kashmir dispute” if it was put off until the second phase of negotiations. I told him that “Kashmir” was one of the subjects which Pakistan had always seized on to justify a conflict with India and durable peace could not be established unless this ghost was laid once and for all. I added that Pakistan certainly could not conquer that part of Kashmir which was under our control, while we had the power to assert our physical control over Pakistani held part of Kashmir though we chose not to demonstrate our military superiority in this context. Alphand agreed. I went on to say that “Kashmir” had to form part of a general peace settlement with Pakistan and, of course, the modalities would, no doubt, be determined by the parties concerned.

3. I distinctly got the impression the Aplhand was thinking of converting the Kashmir ceasefire line into an international frontier, but he felt that other issues such as Pakistani recognition of Bangladesh, evacuation of occupied territories by both sides, exchange of prisoners-of-war, re-establishment of diplomatic relations between Islamabad and Delhi, and general normalization of relations be dealt with first as these matters could be settled without undue friction if the emotionally charged Kashmir issue was not injected too early into the peace talks. It is possible that Ambassador Legards had been informed of this and he may reflect this point of view in his talks when he sees you next.

4. At a recent Reception, I chanced to meet General Yakub, the new Pakistan Ambassador. He seems to be a pleasant person and, being less abrasive than Dehlavi, he had already made a favourable impression (as I had expected) on the French Foreign Office. Apparently Yakub had not argued against Alphand’s proposals. I also discovered that Yakub and myself were together at the Indian Military Academy as cadets. He seems to be willing to establish personal relations with me.

5. In my telegram No. 18, dated the 31st March, 1972, I had said that the delivery of Mirages (under the old contract) to Pakistan was to begin in September this year. We have made discreet enquiries at the Dassault Factory and now we understand that delivery would not begin until December this year of January next year.
0684. Letter from the President of Sudan Gaafar Mohmed Niemer to the Prime Minister Indira Gandhi regarding Pakistani prisoners of war.

Khartoum, April 9, 1972.

The Democratic Republic of the Sudan
People’s Palace,
Khartoum, Sudan

9th, April 1972

Dear Prime Minister,

We have been closely following the developments between your great country and Pakistan. Recently we are concerned over the problems which have arisen in the aftermath of the conflict. Such concern is motivated by the friendly relations we maintain with your country, and the great affection we have for the great Indian people under your wise and sagacious leadership.

It is our sincere desire to see peace and friendship prevail between India and Pakistan. But in order that peace and friendship may prevail, we believe that an endeavour should be undertaken to remove the obstacles that prevent the attainment of these objectives. In this respect, we wish to mention the issue of the repatriation of the prisoners of war who are still being held. The question of the repatriation of the prisoners of war, we believe is a humanitarian problem and until it is resolved it will tend to create many difficulties.

In this connection, we noted with satisfaction Your Excellency’s recent announcement in which Your Excellency had expressed desires and hopes that both India and Pakistan turn their backs to the era of conflict and confrontation and work together in a spirit of co-operation. This hopefully encourages us to express our sincere wishes that the solution of the question of the repatriation of the prisoners of war could be the first positive step in this direction.

In conclusion, we like to express our sincere desire to further enhance our long established, cordial and fraternal relations, and to promote them in the interests of our two peoples. May I wish Your Excellency good health and prosperity for the people of your great country.

Major-General (PSC)

H. E. Mrs. Indira Gandhi,
Prime Minister of India.

DRAFT*
Letter from the Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to the Sudanese President in reply to his letter of April 9, 1972.

New Delhi,

Dear Mr. President,

I was touched by the warmth of the sentiments expressed in your letter of April 9. I heartily reciprocate Your Excellency’s desire to further enhance the long-established cordial and fraternal relations between our two countries. Indeed, this has been our constant aim and endeavour. I do not recall an occasion when we acted in a manner detrimental to the interests of the Democratic Republic of the Sudan.

I share Your Excellency’s concern about the problems which have arisen in the aftermath of the conflict in the sub-continent. The origin and the causes of this conflict need to be considered with the utmost of objectivity.

Ever since independence, we have sought only peace and friendship with Pakistan. If Pakistan had reciprocated, the history of the last 25 years would have been altogether different. Both our countries would have advanced with greater rapidity. There would have been political stability in the entire sub-continent. Our two peoples would have prospered. India and Pakistan,

* Only draft could be located. The Editor is unable to vouch if this was the exact text which was finally issued.
cooperating together as good neighbours, would have been a source of strength to all the countries of the developing world. Unfortunately, the successive rulers of Pakistan chose the path of confrontation and hatred with India and also alienated the majority of the people living in its Eastern Wing.

Despite all that has happened, I should like to assure Your Excellency that our desire for good neighbourly relations with Pakistan has in no way diminished.
On the contrary, we ardently desire a durable peace between our two countries.
Inspired by that, I took initiative for a direct dialogue with Pakistan and talks at the official level have already taken place. We are hoping to have a meeting with President Bhutto later in this month.

We do not wish to keep the Pakistani prisoners of war in India. We should like to return them as soon as possible to a Pakistan which gives us credible assurances of peace in the future. However, Your Excellency will appreciate that the vast majority of the prisoners of war held by India surrendered to the Joint Command of the Armed Forces of India and Bangladesh. Bangladesh is a sovereign, independent country recognized by a majority of the Members of the United Nations and is now a Member-State of both the World Health Organization and UNCTAD-III. We have made it known to Pakistan and to all our mutual friends that the Government of Bangladesh is a necessary party to take any decision regarding the repatriation of prisoners. It is a matter of profound regret that Pakistan has not yet addressed itself to this problem and has been delaying coming to terms with Bangladesh.

If Your Excellency shares the point of view I have endeavored to express, I hope that Sudan’s influence would be exercised in persuading Pakistan to take appropriate steps for normalization of its relations with Bangladesh, so that all the three countries in the sub-continent could together overcome the aftermath of the conflict and thus lay the foundations of peace, stability and cooperation within the sub-continent.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest esteem and consideration.

Your sincerely,

(Indira Gandhi)

His Excellency,
Major General Gaafar Mohmed Niemeri,
President and Prime Minister,
The Democratic Republic of the Sudan,
People’s Palace, Khartoum.

0689. Joint Statement on Talks between the Special Emissaries of India and Pakistan.

Rawalpindi, April 30, 1972.

The Special Emissaries of the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India met at Murree and Rawalpindi from April 26 to 29, 1972. Shri D.P. Dhar, Special Emissary of the Prime Minister of India was assisted by Shri A.S. Chib, Joint Secretary, Shri P.L. Sinai, Director, Shri S.P. Jagota, Director, Col. A.J.M. Homji, Staff Officer, Shri J.N. Bhat, Press Officer, Shri N. Dayal, Under Secretary and Shri R.K. Kapur, Senior Research Officer of the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India. Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Special Emissary of the President of Pakistan, was assisted by Mr. Rafi Raza, Special Assistant of the President, Mr. Iftikhar Ali, Foreign Secretary, Ambassador Sajjad Hyder, Mr. Aftab Ahmed Khan, Director General and Mr. Abdul Sattar, Director General of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Governments of Pakistan. This was the first occasion on which representatives of India and Pakistan were able to meet and communicate directly with each other on behalf of their Governments since tragic developments of last year.

The Special Emissaries held several sessions. These were marked with cordiality and a readiness on both sides to appreciate each other's point of view.

Shri D.P. Dhar also called on His Excellency the President of Pakistan. He conveyed to the President the greetings of the Prime Minister of India and took the opportunity to thank him for the gracious hospitality accorded to him and the members of his Delegation. The Special Emissaries have accomplished the task entrusted to them. They have settled the modalities for the forthcoming meeting between the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India and have defined the subjects to be discussed by them. In this connection they considered several matters, including in particular those bearing on the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent. The two Emissaries wish to place on record their satisfaction that ground has been prepared for a meeting between the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India. The meeting will be held towards the end of May or the beginning of June at New Delhi. A mutually convenient date will be announced in due course.

Note recorded by the Indian High Commissioner in Bangladesh Subimal Dutt on his meeting with the Soviet Ambassador in Bangladesh.

The Soviet Ambassador came to see me this afternoon by previous appointment. He stated as follows:

(1) Recently the Ambassadors of France, Denmark, West Germany and the High Commissioner of Great Britain called on him and all of them tried to convince him that if there is any trial of prisoners of war in Bangladesh, the situation will take a serious turn and any possibility of understanding with President Bhutto would be ruled out. The world opinion also would be highly critical.

The Ambassador has the impression that all these envoys were trying to persuade him indirectly to report accordingly to his Government, himself supporting this view. These persons also referred to the maltreatment of Biharis.

I gave the Ambassador my assessment of the situation and told him that these Ambassadors also spoke to me on the same lines and I had replied answering their doubts.

(2) The Ambassador mentioned that according to his information the officials are anti-Soviet and anti-Indian. They are not keen on economic collaboration with India and the Soviet Union, and therefore, putting obstacles in the hope that they would then be able to suggest to their Government to invite assistance from the U.S.A.

(3) The Ambassador also expressed the view that there is deterioration in the economic situation in Bangladesh recently and this was a matter for concern. He said he was not able to understand the economic policies of the present Government. Apparently, in the Ambassador's view pressures for socialism are not as adequate as they could be.

(S. Dutt)
High Commissioner
11.5.1972
Record of the discussions between the Indian Ambassador in Bangladesh S. Dutt and Foreign Minister of Bangladesh

Dacca, June 1, 1972.

The High Commissioner called on the Bangladesh Foreign Minister on Friday, 1st June, at 5.15 P.M. at the latter’s residence.

The High Commissioner spoke on the following points:

1. In the Economic and Social Council debate at the U.N. the Chinese delegate said that it was Indian aggression that created Bangladesh. This obviously indicated that China has not yet changed its assessment of the factors that led to the birth of Bangladesh.

2. The High Commissioner then went on to give some details about the build up of Pakistan’s armed forces since December 1971 and China’s role in supplying a large proportion of military hardware.

3. On the question of return of POWs, the High Commissioner said that a study made by us shows that most of the countries (like USA, UK, France) which were loud in criticizing us now for holding back the POWs (in apparent violation of Geneva Conventions) had themselves taken on an average 2-3 years and even more to repatriate their POWs after the end of the last war.

4. The High Commissioner said that anti Indian criticism in Bangladesh had become strong and their intensity had increased especially in the past 4-6 weeks. This was carried out with the help of malicious and slanderous writing in some local newspapers and the local businessmen appear to have joined forces against India. Their criticism is basically directed at the present Government of Bangladesh and India is being used as an alibi. The HC handed over a copy of the Hau Kathe of May 27 to the Foreign Minister. The CIA has been very active and substantial funds are being spent for this purpose.

The Foreign Minister made the following points:

(a) The Bangladesh Government feels that the two Governments should meet and have discussion on the question of relations between India and Bangladesh. This was especially necessary now as forces at work mainly in Bangladesh, were trying to drive a wedge in the existing friendly relations between the two countries. As an example of the malicious propaganda that was being carried out he said the journalist Anthony Mascarhenas had told him that he had been told that “Indian troops have positioned all around Dacca” and also that, “Jessore is already under the Indian Army.” Mr. Mascarenhas would not divulge any names. The Foreign Minister said that at least that would have enabled the Bangladesh Government to pinpoint the direction from which these stories were emanating. At present, international moves and intrigues were directed at two targets i.e. (i) the Government of Bangladesh and (ii) Indo-Bangladesh friendship. Their aim is to bring about a situation of confrontation between India and Bangladesh. Their purpose is to ensure that anti-Indianism takes firm root here, as then India would continue to have a hostile neighbour.

(b) The present thinking of the Bangladesh Government, on the question of travel regulations between India and Bangladesh is that a system of entry permits should be introduced. Bangladesh would like to restrict travel to India of delegations and groups who now travel fairly freely.

(c) The Bangladesh Government feels that further exchanges of views on the forthcoming Indo-Pak Summit should take place. Rumours have been spread to the effect that Bangladesh and Pakistan have had meetings or at least contacts. No such meetings and or contacts have taken place. It appears that there are some who while accepting that there is a new government in Bangladesh, have not yet totally accepted the idea of a new sovereign independent nation.

(d) Nepal may ask Bangladesh to obtain from India transit facility for trade between themselves. The Foreign Minister will be visiting Nepal, either between 12th and 15th June or between 13th and 16th June.

(e) The Chief Minister of West Bengal, is to arrive on the 10th June. As agreed upon earlier by the two governments, formal invitation to him was being sent through the Ministry of External Affairs.

Aide Memoire of the Government of India to the Government of Pakistan on the question of stranded persons.

New Delhi, May 15, 1972.

AIDE MEMORIE

The Governments of India and Pakistan have already indicated that they have no objection to the removal of the restriction on the departure of nationals, who were stranded while on temporary visits in December, 1971. The Government of India therefore propose the following:

(i) The restriction on the departure of stranded visitors may be removed with effect from the 25th May, 1972, if acceptable to the Pakistan Government, on a reciprocal basis;

(ii) Such stranded passengers should be allowed to return from Pakistan and India by air, sea and land;

(iii) India is willing to allow the stranded Pakistani nationals to travel to Pakistan by air from Delhi to Karachi or Lahore on international airlines operating on these routes as well as by sea from Bombay. It may please be confirmed if Pakistan Government will afford reciprocal facilities for Indian nationals stranded in Pakistan;

(iv) India would also allow stranded Pakistani nationals to cross over by the land route at Attari-Wagah every Thursday, provided Pakistan Government affords reciprocal facilities to Indian nationals stranded in Pakistan.

May 15, 1972.

AIDE MOMIRE

The Embassy of Switzerland in Islamabad has received from the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs the following message:

“It was agreed at the meeting of the Emissaries that hostile propaganda will be reduced gradually and stopped by a certain date before the meeting of the Heads of Government. The Government of Pakistan has taken necessary steps in that direction and proposes to implements the agreement by May 25, 1972. The Government of Pakistan will be grateful to receive confirmation from the Government of India about similar action on its part.”

0694. Press Release issued by the Government of India regarding hostile propaganda.

New Delhi, May 26, 1972.

The External Affairs Ministry, in an announcement here today, says:

“A few days before the Emissary-level talks were scheduled to begin at Murree the Prime Minister had issued orders that programmes broadcast over Radio and T.V. networks in India should faithfully reflect our desire for a durable peace with Pakistan and not, in any way, create ill-will between peoples of India and Pakistan. India’s emissary at the meeting in Murree informed the emissary for Pakistan about the Prime Minister’s unilateral decision and expressed the hope that Pakistan Government would take reciprocal action. Later, the Pakistan emissary informed us of their intention to take reciprocal action to “taper off” programmes against India on their Radio and T.V. networks and to stop it altogether on a date to be fixed later.

In pursuance of this an Aide Memoire was received from Pakistan Government on May 22, through the Swiss Embassy in India, in which Pakistan had declared its intention to implement this proposal effective from May 25. The Government of India have welcomed Pakistan Government’s decision.”

AIDE MEMOIRE

The Ministry of External Affairs with reference to the oral message communicated by Mr. A. Monnier, Counsellor of the Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi to Mr. R. Ranganathan, Deputy Secretary on May 30, would request the Embassy to kindly transmit the following message to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan:

“The Ministry of External Affairs have been informed through the Swiss Embassy in New Delhi that the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan desire a formal reply to the Pakistan Government’s Aide Memoire of 22nd May proposing the cessation of hostile propaganda from the 25th May 1972.

In this connection, the Ministry would like to draw the attention of the Government of Pakistan to the Prime Minister’s letter of 24th May, 1972 addressed to the President of Pakistan. In this letter the Prime Minister had welcomed the implementation of the agreements reached between the Emissaries of the two countries in regard to the cessation of hostile propaganda and had indicated that as far as India was concerned, instructions had already been issued before the meeting of the Emissaries that hostile propaganda against Pakistan should stop.”

New Delhi,
June 1, 1972.
0696. Note of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs sent through the Swiss Embassy regarding hostile propaganda.

Islamabad, June 1, 1972.

The Embassy of Switzerland in Islamabad transmits the following messages of a note of June 1, 1972 from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan:

“As a follow up of the decision taken at the Emissaries Meeting in Murree to taper off and completely stop hostile propaganda, Radio Pakistan has completely stopped with effect from 25th May, 1972, all broadcasts that could be considered as hostile to India. It has, however, been noted that some India radio stations have not fully responded. Two specific instances are noted below:

(a) On 22nd May in its news bulletin at 7.40 hours, All India Radio broadcast the following item: “In Quetta yesterday, President Bhutto was forced by an unruly crowd to cut short his speech. President Bhutto escorted the visiting Iranian Princess Ashraf Pehlavi from the platform and drove away.” This is a negation of the facts and is clearly intended to create a false impression. The President has spoken for 50 minutes before a responsive audience and his entire speech was broadcast by Radio Pakistan.

(b) In a news commentary broadcast by Srinagar Radio at 19.25 hours on 19th May, it was stated that a clash between the NWFP Government and the Central Government in Pakistan was inevitable on the “Pakhtoonistan” issue. It was also claimed that the Pakistan Delegation’s visit of Afghanistan was a complete failure. The above report has no relation to the facts.

The Government of Pakistan would wish to bring to the notice of the Government of India these instances of violation of agreement and request that fresh instructions be issued to All India Radio so that such propaganda is not broadcast in future.”

June 2nd, 1972.
Letter of External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to Foreign Ministers of some friendly countries.

New Delhi, June 7, 1972.

Excellency,

As Your Excellency may be aware, following the conflict resulting from Pakistan's aggression on India on the 3rd December 1971, and the surrender of Pakistani forces in Bangladesh on the 16th December 1971, India offered to Pakistan a cease-fire on the Western front later the same day. The offer was accepted by Pakistan on the following day, as a result of which a cease-fire came into effect on the 17th December 1971.

Shortly afterwards, India took the initiative to suggest to Pakistan that talks should take place between the two Governments to establish lasting peace between our two countries. An exchange of correspondence took place between the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan for a meeting between them to resolve all issues so that durable peace may be established. By agreement between them, a meeting of their Emissaries took place in Pakistan in the last week of April 1972, in order to make preparations for the Summit Meeting. The Emissaries of India and Pakistan were able to reach agreement on the Agenda for the meeting of their Heads of Government and also suggested jointly that the meeting could be held towards the end of May or the beginning of June. However, His Excellency the President of Pakistan suggested a later date, which India had accepted and a meeting between the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan would take place in India on the 28th June, 1972.

We on our part are anxious that these talks should result in ending forever the unfortunate cycles of conflicts followed by cease-fire – which has been the history of the recent past – and would lead to the establishment of lasting peace and friendly and good neighbourly relations so vital for the progress of our two countries. We earnestly hope that in the talks between the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan there would be a frank discussion of all matters which have caused tension and conflict between us in the past and would result in an accord being reached which would lead to enduring peace between India and Pakistan.

One of the subjects which would come up for discussion between the two Heads of Government would be the return of the prisoners of war. As Your Excellency may be aware, the bulk of the Pakistani POWs in India surrounded to the Commander of the Joint India-Bangladesh forces in Dacca and they continue to remain in the joint custody of India and Bangladesh.
Any discussion regarding their repatriation would necessarily involve Pakistan, Bangladesh and India. Bangladesh has been recognized by 75 countries. It has been admitted to the World Health Organisation and to UNCTAD. The Bangladesh Government have acceded to the Geneva Conventions. Pakistan, however, has not yet found it fit to recognise Bangladesh. The Bangladesh Government, on their part, have publicly indicated their inability to take part in any discussions with Pakistan until Pakistan has recognized them. Pakistan’s non-recognition of Bangladesh has thus created an unnecessary hurdle in making possible a meaningful discussion of the question of repatriation of prisoners of war in the ensuing talks between India and Pakistan.

It is our considered view that a satisfactory and peaceful solution of these problems, which is so essential for the well-being and prosperity of the people in this sub-continent, can only be arrived at by mutual efforts through bilateral negotiations. My Prime Minister will be approaching the forthcoming meeting with the President of Pakistan with this hope and objective in view.

I am writing this letter to share our thoughts with you so that we may have full understanding of your esteemed Government for the endeavours that India is making to reach a peaceful solution of problems affecting this region.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Swaran Singh)

0698. Letter of the Indian Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi to the French President Georges Pompidou.

New Delhi, June 12, 1972.

Your Excellency,

Once again I am writing to share my thoughts with you on the aftermath of the tragic events which took place on this sub-continent last year.

Perhaps I might begin with a bare recital of the board facts from the date when Pakistan, finding itself unable to control the situation within its eastern wing, imposed a war on us.

On the day of the surrender of Pakistani forces in Bangladesh on December 16, 1971, India offered a unilateral ceasefire of the western front to Pakistan.
On the following day the offer was accepted by Pakistan and the ceasefire became effective on December 17, 1971.

In the middle of February 1972, India took the initiative in suggesting to Pakistan that talks between our two Governments should take place to try to establish a lasting peace between the two countries. Subsequently, I personally wrote to President Bhutto to suggest a preliminary meeting of special emissaries of the two countries, which would prepare for the summit meeting. This was ultimately accepted. A special emissary was sent to Islamabad in the last week of April 1972.

The emissaries of India and Pakistan were able to reach agreement on the agenda for the meeting of the Heads of Government. They also agreed that the meeting should be held towards the end of May or the beginning of June. However, His Excellency the President of Pakistan suggested a later date which India has accepted and a meeting is now scheduled to take place on June 28, 1972.

Since our independence, we have consistently worked for peace and friendship with Pakistan. We are convinced that if Pakistan had reciprocated, the history of the last 25 years would have been entirely different. Pakistan and India could have made more rapid advance. There would have been political stability on the entire sub-continent, more rapid advance for both countries to prosperity for our people. Cooperating as good neighbours, we could both have helped to strengthen the other countries of the developing world. Unfortunately, the successive rulers of Pakistan chose the path of confrontation with and hatred of India, and also alienated the majority of the people living in its eastern wing.

I should like to assure you that despite all that has happened, our desire for good neighbourly relations with Pakistan is undiminished. Hence our anxiety that the forthcoming talks with President Bhutto should succeed in putting an end to the unfortunate cycles of conflicts followed by ceasefire and should lead to the establishment of lasting peace, to friendly and good neighbourly relations which are so vital for the progress of both countries.

We should like to return the Pakistani prisoners of war as soon as possible to Pakistan which gives us a credible assurance of peace in the future. Neither our people nor our Parliament will understand the reasons for the return of the prisoners of war to a country un-reconciled to a durable peace with India. While we are not insensitive to the humanitarian aspect dealing with the prisoners of war – indeed we are looking after them as best as we possibly can – we regard the question of the establishment of durable peace between India and Pakistan as a matter of equal if not of greater humanitarian importance.
I should like also to invite your attention to the fact that the vast majority of the prisoners of war held by India surrendered to the Joint Command of the Armed Forces of India and Bangladesh. Bangladesh is a sovereign, independent country of 75 million people which is now recognized by a majority of the members of the United Nations. It is also a member-State of the world Organisation and of UNCTAD-III. And yet there is no indication that Pakistan has given serious thought to coming to terms with the reality of Bangladesh. This adds complication to all the problems of the sub-continent, including the question of repatriation of prisoners of war.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

(Indira Gandhi)

0699. Aide Memorie of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding hostile propaganda to the Ministry of Foreign Affair of the Government of Pakistan sent through the Swiss Embassy.

June 16, 1972.

AIDE MEMOIRE

With reference to the Aide Memoire dated 2nd June, 1972 from the Embassy of Switzerland, New Delhi, the Ministry of External Affairs request that the following message may be transmitted to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Govt. of Pakistan.

"The Government of India have inquired into the instances quoted by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of alleged violation of the agreement on cessation of hostile propaganda. The verified position is that while the item broadcast by A.I.R on 22nd May, 1972 was based on an AP report from Quetta itself, the news commentary from Srinagar Radio on 19th May, 1972 was derived mainly from Kabul Radio broadcast. It would, therefore, be clear that there was no intention to distort facts of events in Pakistan.

The Government of India wish to take this opportunity to reiterate their resolve to fully honour their decision on stoppage of hostile propaganda."
The Government of India, however, feel constrained to draw the attention of the Government of Pakistan to the fact, that, despite their decision to stop propaganda broadcasts directed at India with effect from May 25, 1972, Pakistan Radio continues to put out objectionable and mischievous anti-Indian items. A statement containing a few examples of such hostile broadcasts is attached herewith.

The Government of India earnestly hope that the Government of Pakistan would issue suitable instructions to the concerned authorities in Pakistan so that hostile propaganda items are not broadcast in future."

New Delhi, 16th June, 1972.

STATEMENT OF HOSTILE BROADCASTS OVER PAKISTAN RADIO

25.5.1972 Radio “Azad Kashmir” accused India of usurping the freedom of the Kashmiris, the Sikhs and the Mizados. In its “Zarb-i-Kaleem” programme, the Radio said that the seeds India had sown in “East Pakistan” would be reaped by her in West Bengal and Assam. India will lose both these States.

26.5.72 The features “Waqt Ki Awaz” accused the “ruling clique” in India of being unaware of the meaning of “friendship”. India, the commentary stated, nourishes its enmity towards Pakistan and wants to establish supremacy over its neighbouring countries”.

25.5.72 Radio “Azad Kashmir” accused India of conspiring with Israel against Pakistan and termed the Indian leaders “imperialists”.

28.5.72 The Punjabi Darbar programme quoted the allegation levelled by Pakistan’s delegate to the Social Committee of the ECOSOC to the effect that Pakistani Prisoners of War were being subjected to inhuman treatment by India.

28.5.72 Pushtu feature from Peshawar denounced “Indian Brahmins” for feeling intoxicated after capturing “East Pakistan”. The feature alleged that this was because India had never in its history won victory in war. It was stated that the Hindu leaders in India would also like to bring Pakistan under their domination.

Radio “Azad Kashmir” alleged that the Indian Prime Minister had stated in a speech last December that India would like to take revenge for the thousand year of Muslim rule, which India had not forgotten.

30.5.72 Radio “Azad Kashmir” accused India of using the POW question as a lever, of not being sincere in its approach to Pakistan and of interfering in the internal affairs of Pakistan.
31.5.72 Radio “Azad Kashmir” commented that India had not accepted the very existence of Pakistan and accused India of going back on the promise made in regard to Jammu & Kashmir.

1.6.72 In its broadcast Radio “Azad Kashmir” spoke of “Sharp reaction being expressed” in Bangladesh against the looting and smuggling of essential commodities by India. In another programme the Radio said that while Indian imperialists were talking of peace and friendship towards Pakistan, they were committing ceasefire violations.

3.6.72 A commentator speaking in the Lahore programme “Waqt Ki Awaz” accused India of keeping the people of Kashmir cowed down by force. The commentator said that Kashmir dispute was as important for PAKISTAN as the Palestine issue was for the Arabs and Cyprus for Turkey. Kashmir, Palestine and Cyprus were described as the symbol of struggle of the people against oppression by impartial powers.

4.6.72 In a programme broadcast over Radio “Azad Kashmir” it was alleged that Indian rulers were thinking in terms of military adventurism.

5.6.72 Radio “Azad Kashmir” warned India not to interfere in Pakistan’s internal affairs. In its “Zarb-i-Kaleem” feature, the Radio made derogatory remarks about India’s Defence Minister and said: “Had Jagjive Ram seen his face and figure in the mirror, he would not have perhaps felt the need to give lessons to Pakistan on the formulation of foreign policy”.

12.6.72 In a programme spot lighting newspaper headlines, Radio Pakistan quoted the Governor of Sind as having alleged that “Bharati and Russian agents plotted disturbances in Karachi for making the summit conference unsuccessful”.

Mr. De BASSOMPIERRE Head of the Asia Division in the Belgian Foreign Office called me today and spoke to me on the following lines:

(1) Belgian Government were very happy that summit talks were being held between India and Pakistan and hoped that these would lead to a general peaceful solution for the problems of the sub continent. They were in no position to give any advice to either side but wished to convey their concern for establishment of lasting peace in the area.

(2) India not only was the victorious party but also enjoyed greater political stability and economic progress. On the other hand Bhutto's position at home was not strong. India was therefore in a position to act in a statesman like manner and afford to be somewhat generous.

(3) The Belgian Government were following the developments in the Indian sub-continent with interest in the context of the general world situation. They felt that the establishment of lasting peace in the sub-continent was an important element in the chain of developments in other parts of the world such as Europe and Vietnam which were also of concern to them.

(4) The Belgian Government had also spoken in similar terms to Pakistan and stressed the need for finding solutions to all the problems involved.

(5) Although they appreciated the position that the P.O.W. surrendered to a joint command of India and Bangladesh they felt that India as a detaining power should have arranged for their immediate repatriation after the establishment of an effective cease fire.

(6) As regards Kashmir in their view both sides should go back to the

* Secretary (East) in the Ministry of External Affairs
November line of 1949 subject to such modifications as might be mutually agreed upon.

2. DE BASSOMPIERRE said that the Belgian Foreign Minister who is away in Luxemburg today wished the above to be brought immediately to the attention of the Government of India. The Belgian Ambassador in New Delhi had also been instructed to speak on similar lines in New Delhi.

3. I drew DE BASSOMPIERRE’s attention to the recent letter of the Foreign Minister dated 7th June addressed to Belgian Foreign Minister and reiterated the arguments contained in it emphasizing the following:

(1) India could not act unilaterally with regard to P.O.W.S. Bangladesh would have to be a party to any discussion with regard to them. It would be helpful if friendly governments persuade Pakistan to recognize Bangladesh so that such discussions could take place. DE BASSOMPIRRE said that they had already indicated their views to Pakistan that the latter should recognize Bangladesh.

(2) The cease fire line of 1949 was no longer valid. There was therefore no question of any return to that line. Lasting peace could only be established after mutual agreement on a permanent international boundary.

4. DE BASSOMPIERRE suggested that India could further increase its already high prestige by unilaterally releasing a small number of P.O.Ws who were clearly not war criminals. I said that it would be difficult to take such unilateral action unless all the issues involved had been discussed among all the parties concerned including Bangladesh. He particularly requested that this subjective thinking might be communicated to you.

Foreign Secretary from (Ambassador) Shelvankar.

I met FOMIN today to get some information on AZIZ AHMED’s visit. FOMIN told me a detailed report had been prepared and was awaiting KOSYGIN’s approval before it was transmitted to PEGOV* to be communicated to Prime Minister. He was therefore sorry, he said, that he could talk to me about it only unofficially and in the terms detailed below:

2. According to FOMIN, AZIZ AHMED had nothing new to say about the preparatory talks in Murree and nothing different from what the Soviet side had already heard from us and from their Ambassador in Pakistan. What AZIZ AHMED told the SOVIET side about BHUTTO’s aim at the summit was consistent with assurances given by BHUTTO to BREZHNEV in Moscow last March–namely, to work for a lasting peace settlement with India. AZIZ AHMED’s tone was restrained; he carefully avoided making any harsh or unfriendly remark about India. His only complaint was that Pakistan’s expectation that at least some POWs would be released by India before the summit had not been fulfilled. The fact that AZIZ AHMED was generally moderate and reasonable, and more or less objective in his account of the Murree discussions, FOMIN said, justified some optimism.

3. In answer to my questions, FOMIN further said that AZIZ AHMED had not brought any specific proposal or suggestion to the Soviet Government in connection with the summit except the point that a prior token gesture by India on prisoners repatriation would help to create a good atmosphere. AZIZ AHMED had also requested the Soviet side to inform the Indian Prime Minister that Pakistan would take a positive attitude at the summit. He had given them some idea of Pakistan’s thinking on the question of Bangladesh recognition but FOMIN expressed inability to be more explicit on this. The “Details” he said would be communicated to Prime Minister by PEGOV. On BHUTTO’s visit to the 14

* Soviet Ambassador in New Delhi
Muslim nations FOMIN said the impression AZIZ AHMED have was that the tour was intended to dissuade these countries from recognizing Bangladesh until Pakistan had made up its mind on the question. AZIZ AHMED may have received some assurance in this respect from CHOU-EN-LAI when he went to Peking recently.

4. FOMIN was curious vague hesitant and circumlocutous in all that he said. When pressed to give his own assessment of the summit prospects in the light of what AZIZ AHMED had told them he said he was now more optimistic and hopeful. BHUTTO he said was of course unpredictable and this had to be kept in mind. But AZIZ AHMED was speaking strictly within the brief he had brought from his President and what he had to say strengthened Soviet Government’s optimism about the summit which FOMIN thought should yield some positive results. FOMIN was at pains to emphasize that everything they said to AZIZ AHMED form the Soviet side was in line with their understanding of the Indian position.

5. I gathered that AZIZ AHMED had brought a message from President BHUTTO for the Soviet leaders. They in turn might be sending him a letter through their Ambassador in Islamabad before BHUTTO’s departure for India.

0702.  TOP SECRET

Record of the meeting between Foreign Minister Swaran Singh and Soviet Ambassador N. Pegov.

New Delhi, June 27, 1972.

The Soviet Ambassador handed a communication which he said he had received just this morning.

F.M: Is it about Aziz Ahmed’s visit?

Pegov: Yes: I received the communication just this morning but the Prime Minister had left.

F.M: I am also leaving tonight and will receive Bhattu tomorrow. He will not be very happy to see me.

Pegov: I shall take this opportunity and your kindness to request you to get acquainted with this information and to convey it to the Prime Minister.

(F.M. read the communication carefully.)
F.M.: thank you Your Excellency. I have very carefully studied the information. We have noted with satisfaction that the Soviet leaders have insisted on Aziz Ahmed the necessity for a Peace Treaty and the need to strive for peace in the sub-continent. If the Soviet assessment turns out correct about Bhutto’s readiness to work towards a final settlement on Jammu & Kashmir in the form of conversion of the ceasefire line into a permanent boundary, then the Summit will succeed in creating an atmosphere of peace and in reversing the military confrontation between Pakistan and India.

Your leaders have rightly conveyed to Aziz Ahmed that India is not approaching the Summit as a victor. Our Prime Minister has stated this a number of times. We are anxious for a durable peace. We would like to work out a “just and honourable peace” – to use the words of Aziz Ahmed. This has to be just and honourable to both. Pakistan alone cannot be the judge of what is just and what is honourable.

You will agree Your Excellency that the question of return of POWs is one where we are anxious also to effect the return as soon as possible. It will facilitate the return of POWs if the climate is one of peace and not of confrontation. If this is achieved and Bhutto wants peace, a decision on the return of POWs will be facilitated. Also if the reality on the sub-continent is increasingly accepted by Bhutto, by recognition of Bangladesh, this will also facilitate their return.

To sum up, if we see that peace is in sight, we can return the POWs – not if we think confrontation will continue. Also the recognition of Bangladesh will facilitate the process. Reading the message carefully, Aziz Ahmed seems to have conveyed elements of these thoughts in his talks with the Soviet leaders.

One position should be made clear. This is in regard to conversion of the ceasefire line into an international boundary. If settlement is in sight, we will propose this. If settlement is not in sight, our traditional position will remain viz., that Jammu & Kashmir is an integral part of India and is entirely ours by legal accession.

But in the interests of a lasting peace, we are willing to recognize the line of actual control, with minor modifications, as the international boundary. This will be the final position and will not be at the beginning of the process. It cannot be the starting point on which Pakistan can again raise objections.

We do not appreciate Bhutto’s position when he says that he must first talks to Sheikh Mujibur Rehman before he recognizes Bangladesh. Sheikh Mujibur Rehman has already said that he will not talk to Pakistan before Bangladesh is recognized. Bhutto will cause more complications for himself and for Pakistan by not recognising Bangladesh and by sticking to this unrealistic attitude.
Our unfortunate experience of the past is that Pakistani spokesmen speak with different voices in Moscow, Peking, Washington and India. We will judge carefully what Bhutto says and if he means serious business, we will respond.

We greatly appreciate the friendly sentiments of the USSR Government in taking us into confidence on talks with Aziz Ahmed and also for the views of the Soviet leaders on the best way of settling the problem. Those views are also our views and we thanks the USSR leadership for talking a principled stand based on justice.

I shall convey this to the Prime Minister.

The meeting thereafter came to a close with the Soviet Ambassador conveying his best wishes for success in talks.

TOP SECRET

Letter of the Soviet Ambassador N. Pegov addressed to the Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi enclosing the report on the talks of Soviet leaders with Aziz Ahmed in Moscow.

New Delhi, June 27, 1972.

Esteemed Madame Prime Minister,

On the instructions from Moscow I am conveying to you the confidential information on some consideration of the Soviet leaders regarding the present situation in the South Asian sub-continent and also on the talks with Mr. Aziz Ahmad, a special representative of President Bhutto, secretary-general of the Ministry of External Affairs of Pakistan.

Unfortunately, I could not call on you in Delhi; therefore I am using the kindness of H.E. Sardar Swaran Singh for conveying to you the above mentioned confidential information.

With deep regards,
Unofficial Translation

Continuing the practice of a friendly confidential exchange of opinions, the Soviet leaders would like to share with the Prime Minister certain consideration in regard to the present situation in the South Asian subcontinent.

We highly appreciate the state wisdom, displayed by the prime minister at this complicated junction for the peoples of the subcontinent. The Prime Minister is well aware of the position of the Soviet Union. We firmly and consistently stand for the establishment of a lasting peace at the subcontinent, for the speediest solution by negotiations of all the complicated problems, created as a result of the developments of the last year. In this connection the Soviet leaders sincerely hail the reached agreement on the meeting of Prime Minister I. Ghandhi with President Bhutto in Simla on July 28, and would like to hope that the meeting will lead to the solution of the basic problems, dividing India and Pakistan.

It would be a pity, if the meeting in Simla gives no positive results. It would only put the wind in the sails of those forces in Asia and beyond it, which, proceeding from their narrow interests, are longing for the preservation of tensions in the region.

Moscow is aware that the problems dividing India and Pakistan are complicated and that it is not easy to resolve them. The Soviet leaders agree with the Prime Minister that much will depend on the position, which Bhutto will take at the coming negotiations.

Taking into account this very circumstance, the Soviet side is striving to use all the available opportunities to prompt President Bhutto to take not in words but in deeds the course for the speediest normalization of the Indo-Pakistani relations and for reaching a political settlement on the subcontinent taking into account the present realities.

The talks of the special representative of President Bhutto, the General Secretary of the Foreign Ministry of Pakistan Aziz Ahmad in Moscow/ he was received by A.N. Kosygin, A.A. Gromyko and N.P. Firubin/ were subordinated to this goal. We have already informed the Prime Minister that he visited the USSR on the initiative of the Pakistani side.
A. Ahmad conveyed to the Soviet leaders President Bhutto's assurances that he was, as before, interested in the speediest normalization of the relations with India and in achieving a political settlement on the subcontinent.

Replying to the question, what the President would like to convey through us to the Prime Minister of India, A. Ahmad asked to pass over the following information:

“We want to live in peace with India. We wish also the restoration of peace and normal conditions in Bangladesh. This is the paramount goal. The President is ready to discuss with Mrs. Indira Gandhi any problem, which she would like to touch at the forthcoming meeting, including the question of a peaceful settlement. We think, it will be unrealistic to consider that all the problems, including that of Kashmir which could not be settled for 25 years, can be solved during one 5-day meeting. If all the issues are not settled at one meeting, the leaders of our countries could meet once again.

Finally, the Prime Minister of India may count on President Bhutto's readiness to go as far as it can be possible in the joint search for a peaceful solution. But he had no right to agree to such a settlement which would be dictated by India or would be connected with the renunciation by the President of main principles or basic national interests. The settlement should be an honorable, honest and just one for the both parties. Otherwise, there will be no settlement and that would have disastrous effects.”

Pakistan's position on some basis problems which arose on the subcontinent after the armed conflict of 1971 is, according to A. Ahmad, as follows:

President Bhutto agrees in principle to the desirability of signing a political treaty or an agreement between India and Pakistan, which would contain the party’s pledges not to use force and not to intervene into each others' domestic affairs, etc. Talks with A. Ahmad produced an impression that Bhutto is ready to achieve ultimately in principle an agreement on this matter already in Simla on the condition that such agreement would remain strictly secret for some time, until the President paves the way in Pakistan for making this agreement public.

During the talks a great importance was attached to finding out the position of Pakistan on Kashmir and to exercising by the Soviet Union an appropriate influence in favour of making Bhutto to adopt a more realistic position on this most important issue.

According to A. Ahmad's information, President Bhutto stands for the speediest withdrawal by India and Pakistan of their troops from the ceasefire line in Kashmir to the positions, held by them before the armed conflict in 1971. Though
A. Ahmad was stressing, that Pakistan intended to insist firmly on the observance of the UNO Resolution on the Question of the ceasefire line. It seems to us that the Pakistani side had a reserve position on the problem of Kashmir. When A. Ahmad realized that the Soviet side completely supported the Indian point of view on the necessity of a final settlement of the Kashmiri question on the mutually accepted basis, he said, that President Bhutto was not against discussing this question in Simla. Without giving up the condition of the withdrawal of the troops in Kashmir to their previous positions at this stage, A. Ahmad made to understand, that Bhutto is ready, in principle, to consider the possibility of converting the ceasefire line into the permanent international frontier.

As A. Ahmad said, President Bhutto attaches as before the paramount importance to the earliest repatriation of the Pakistani POWs. It was clear by everything, that though Bhutto would like to prefer to separate artificially the POWs’ question from other outstanding problems of the Indo-Pakistani relations, he understands an unreality of such an approach. In any case, having realized the negative attitude of Soviet side to such a position, A. Ahmad said that Bhutto was ready to discuss in Simla the question of POWs’ repatriation on the basis of the agreed agenda, emphasizing that the position of the President in the country would be considerable stronger, if India could shortly start the repatriation of at least a small group of the POWs and civilians.

A. Ahmad made to understand, that President Bhutto in principle accept that necessity of Bangladesh’s recognition by Pakistan but he still believes that the preliminary meeting with M. Rahman would make such a step easier for him. A. Ahmad strictly confidently informed that Bhutto intended to put the question of recognition of Bangladesh before the National Assembly in August this year, and later might have a referendum in the country on this problem. According to A. Ahmad, agreements reached at Simla, can be put for approval before the National Assembly.

The Bhutto’s representative confirmed the negative position of Pakistan, known to Indian side, concerning the demand of Bangladesh for trial of the Pakistan POWS, who committed crimes during the events of 1971. A. Ahmad also claimed that trials of civilians in Bangladesh who previously collaborated with Pakistani military administration is badly timed from the point of view of creating a favourable climate for the Simla talks. He also referred to the negative reaction of broad circles in Pakistan to these trials.

During the talks in Moscow A. Ahmad was asked to convey to President Bhutto position of the Soviet Union, known to the Prime Minister. We drew the attention of the Pakistani side to the fact that it was highly important for the success of the forthcoming talks at Simla to come forward with a peace programme which would create a basis for a settlement of all the particular disputes between Pakistan and India. We stated, in particular, that we expected Bhutto to fulfill his promise, given in Moscow to take constructive steps towards concluding a political treaty or an agreement with India, towards settlement on a realistic basis of the Kashmir and other outstanding questions through bilateral negotiations.

In other words we repeated our position on all problems of a political settlement in the subcontinent, which was agreed with the Prime Minister and with the Government of India.

The talks with Ahmed give an impression that Bhutto understands the necessity of normalization of the situation in the sub-continent and the responsibility, which he would take on himself, if the meeting in Simla does not bring about positive results.

The Soviet leaders are sending a message to the President of Pakistan with the purpose to influence him, properly in favour of his adoption of a constructive and realistic stand at the Simla meeting.

It is noteworthy that during the talks A. Ahmad expressed apprehensions that India could go to the Simla meeting with a rigid approach of a victorious country. We resolutely rejected these allegations and underlined that Prime Minister I. Gandhi had informed us that India, as a victorious country, did not want to threaten Pakistan or to humiliate the Pakistani people, did not strive for any territorial acquisitions.

We are satisfied with India’s constructive stand and its approach to the Simla talks, we think that such a position will promote considerably a success of the forthcoming negotiations with the President of Pakistan, will confront him with a necessity to seek a mutually acceptable solution of the outstanding problems.

We believe that A. Ahmad’s information about his visit to the PRC, which he intimated in Moscow, can be of some interest to the Prime Minister. According to A. Ahmed, he had given to Chou En-lai the information on Pakistan’s position similar to that which was conveyed to us. The Chinese side alleged that it was striving for the establishment of peace in the subcontinent and standing for the existence of a strong and independent Pakistan. As noticed by A. Ahmad, the USA, in Pakistan’s opinion, also stuck to that position.

Moscow payed (paid) a special attention to the statements by the Prime Minister about the desirability of consultations between India and the USSR on actions directed at frustrating the plots of the USA and the PRC in Bangladesh. The developments in that country show that the activities of the enemies of Bangladesh are obtaining more and more dangerous character. We completely share this idea of the Prime Minister and are ready to consult her on the abovementioned questions in any form convenient to her. It is merely necessary in our common interests.

The Soviet leaders would like to assure the Prime Minister that the Soviet side is always striving for coordinating its efforts with the efforts of friendly India on all the problems of the subcontinent, and this fully corresponds with the Soviet Indian Treaty on Peace, Friendship and Co-operation, which serves well both our two countries and the cause of peace in general.

Moscow would be grateful, if the Prime Minister finds it possible to share her views on the mentioned questions.

L.I. Brezhnev, N.V. Podgorny and A.N. Kosygin avail themselves of this opportunity to convey to the Prime Minister their regards and best wishes.

Note of the Cabinet Secretariat on the ensuing talks between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 28, 1972.

According to a report, the British Foreign Office assessment in connection with the Summit talks between the Indian Prime Minister and the Pakistan President is as follows:-

1. Bhutto would aim at serious negotiations at Simla.
2. Bhutto might announce recognition of Bangladesh at Simla if there is an agreement between India and Pakistan for the releases of the Pakistani prisoners of war captured in the Western sector. The intention of Pakistan in having this agreement would be to exploit it for building pressure on India for the release of POWs captured in the Eastern sector.

0705. Address of President Z. A. Bhutto to the nation on the eve of his departure for India to attend the Summit Conference.

Islamabad, June 27, 1972.

Tomorrow I am leaving for discussions with the Prime Minister of India. I want to take this opportunity of talking to you.

My brothers and sisters, I want to share with you the problems which confront us. I want to share with you our hopes for the future. We are going to India in circumstances which are but a part of the tragic legacy we inherited. The war we have lost was not of our making. I had warned against it but my warning fell on deaf ears of a power drunk Junta. They recklessly plunged our people into the war and involved us in an intolerable surrender which lost us half our country. The Junta did not know how to make peace nor did it know how to make war.

Four divisions, fully equipped were surrendered into enemy hands within fourteen days of the conflict. Over 90,000 of our people are now in enemy hands. A first class fighting machine has become dispirited and degenerate through continued involvement into vested politics. Degeneration and lack of national purpose have seriously affected all our institutions and all our attitudes. The country was on the edge of a political, economic and moral collapse. This is a tragic situation with which we have to deal. We have come a long way from the dark December days. Our people have been revitalized. Our armed forces are under new leadership, recapturing the motivation that makes them the finest in Asia. Our economy is on the way to recovery.

Some disgruntled men of yesterday have the temerity to question why we are going to India? Do they think that we should not seek the return of our prisoners of war? Do they suggest that we should allow the Indians to continue their occupation of two tehsils in Sind and one in the Punjab? Do they think that we can remedy the situation if we do not go to India to talk about these matters?

The past 25 years have been an era of confrontation and war in the subcontinent. With what results to the peoples of the region? They remain the poorest, the most under-fed, illiterate and disease-ridden. It has been a heavy price, and the heaviest has been paid by the poorest in the land. The people of Pakistan sacrificed everything, including political and economic progress. Those who gave their love and tears for Pakistan has to wait for a generation for the advent of democracy. We have lost all hopes for the future. We have lost the largest part of our country. The history of last 25 years makes a pitiable reading.

All this must change. We must concentrate our efforts on serving the people and introducing an era of economic growth. This does not mean that we should reduce the strength of our armed forces. The defence of our motherland will continue to be of supreme concern to us.

But we will have to reorient our outlook to build a new, strong and vibrant Pakistan. The people of Pakistan must see some measure of prosperity and progress. They have endured much hardship and sacrifices. They have the right to realize the dream which inspired the creation of Pakistan. To provide such a change we are going to India in search of a durable peace in the sub-continent. We hope that the Indian leaders share the same sincerity of purpose.

For nearly three decades we have quarreled while the rest of the world watched us with cynical amusement. In order to find a modus vivendi to live as good neighbours we must have a dialogue. That is the civilized way. The Americans are meeting the Chinese at the level of chief executives. At the height of the Viet Nam war, peace negotiations continue. And the United States-Soviet summit took place in Moscow at a time when war clouds were thickening. We believe in listening to the other point of view in the making and demanding adjustments where adjustments can be made without compromising fundamental positions. One reason we have failed over the years is because of our basic unwillingness to discuss issues with each other. Let us exercise this option now in our search for peace with honour. Peace certainly cannot be imposed and yet remain durable. It must be equitable and acceptable to both India and Pakistan. It is an inherent contradiction to think that a one-sided settlement can lead to durable peace. It can never be lasting. It can only lead to continued instability and war. This is the lesson of history. The Treaty of Versailles which ended the First World War in Europe attempted to impose a humiliating peace on the German nation. In 15 years it was overturned, and a few years later the world was submerged in a massive and bloody conflict without parallel.

It we do not learn from history, we will never learn. To achieve durable peace in the sub-continent the existing obstacles must be removed. The consequences of the last war must be eliminated. Our prisoners of war and civilian internees must be returned and withdrawal of the armed forces must be arranged forthwith.

As far as the authorities in Dacca are concerned there must be an end to the talk of war trials and responsible attitude must be shown towards the non Bangallies and the Bengal federalists allowing them to live as honourable citizens, free from persecution.

The issue of prisoners of war is the most important immediate concern to our people. Tens of thousands of families have been deprived of their fathers and husbands, sons and brothers. Your Government has taken every measure to alleviate their hardships but no amount of moral and material support can provide a substitute for the absent ones. Our people have shown fortitude in the face of this affliction and if necessary will bear with continued separation. But India had no justification, moral or legal, for continuing to detain our sons. She is flagrantly violating the Geneva Conventions by holding our people prisoners for six months. If by doing this the Indians think they can force us to accept humiliating terms of peace, they are mistaken. As I have repeatedly said, we will not barter principle at stake for human flesh.

In total violation of the resolution passed by 104 member states of the General Assembly of the United Nations on the 7th of December, 1971 and by the Security Council on the 21st of December last year, the Indians have refused to comply with the demand for withdrawal. How can peace be achieved. Nearly one million of our people have been rendered homeless by the continued illegal occupation of our territory. This is not the way to establish durable peace. The Indians must without further delay, arrange to withdraw their armed forces.

By a curious exercise of logic, the Indians say they cannot return our military personal, nor can they withdraw from our territory without first arriving at a permanent peace settlement. Surely, this is putting the cart before the horse. It is only by the return of our people and the withdrawal of forces that we can hope to pave the way for a permanent peace.

The Indians would also have us abandon the right of self-determination for the people of Jammu & Kashmir. But how can we? It is not our right. That is the question. It is the right, the birth-right of the people of Jammu & Kashmir. The principle of self-determination is universally accepted. This right of the people of Jammu & Kashmir has been enshrined in numerous resolutions of the UN acknowledge by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, the father of the present prime minister. It is for the people of Jammu & Kashmir to assert or abandon their right of self-determination. It is for us to adhere to principles. We will not forsake our principles, whatever the consequence.

The Indians also seek a readjustment of the international frontier between our two countries, to remove what they call ‘irrationality’ but, in effect, to acquire more territory. Are they not satisfied with the seizure of Hyderabad, Junagadh and Manavadar; with their occupation of Kashmir; with the dismemberment of our country? By peace do they mean further expansion? There can be no peace at the expense of our sovereignty. Peace in the sub-continent depends on justice and goodwill. The people of Muslim Bengal have, truly been through a terrible ordeal perhaps, more than anyone else, they require a period free from strife in order to put together the shambles of their shattered land and build anew. This they can do by putting behind the event of the recent past. I do not believe that talk of war trials and the ill-treatment of non Bangalis federalists can, in anyway, contribute to peace in the future. Instead of moving forward, such measures lead back into the past, a past which has not only been negative but also destructive.

The people of Muslim Bengal are our brothers. Together we fought for our independence. Today we are estranged. But need this estrangement be permanent? This is something we have to settle with the leaders of Muslim Bengal. It concerns our two people. India has no locus standi in the matter. This I have repeatedly stated. This cannot be settled on the soil of India.

I hope to meet Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, and then put the outcome of our discussion to the people, to the elected representatives in the National Assembly. In fact, there is no question of by-passing the National Assembly in any matter of fundamental importance.

The task which lies ahead in our discussions with India is not an enviable one. The people of Pakistan have reposed their confidence in me and I must fulfill the duty I owe them. The unanimous vote of confidence in me passed by the National Assembly of Pakistan confirmed and reinforced my mandate from the people.

The crisis end to end is not of our making. You and I warned against it. But now it is there in its fullest form for you and me to confront. I ask you to put yourself in my place. For a moment think that you are me. For I am with you in war and in peace, in distress and in joy.

Fellow Citizens, ask yourself what you would do if you are in my place? How will you negotiate if you are seeking to reconstruct Pakistan? If you are determined to make Pakistan and vindicate national honour, you must exercise wisdom and patience. Slogans are wonderful, but in their own place. There is a time for along and there is a time for reflection. I have always reposed my confidence in the people and sought their guidance and inspiration. It is for this reason that before undertaking the present mission to India, I consulted a cross-section of people to explain the situation and seek their views. Some individuals had said that there was no necessity for my holding these meetings as I am armed with the mandate of the people. But I remain firmly convinced that dialogue with the people is a continuing process. Too long have they been denied this dialogue and we only have to look back to December to see the results.

In the last two weeks, I have talked to leaders in every field, to elected representatives, persons of every shade and opinion, ulemas, intellectuals, editors and journalists, lawyers, teachers and students. I have also met the commanders of our armed forces. For the first time, in the history of Pakistan, representatives of all sections have been involved in matters of vital national concern at the highest level. I have undoubtedly, gained from these exchanges. The consensus that has emerged will guide me during our discussions in India. It is heartening to know that as I go to India I carry with me the prayers and support of our people. You may rest assured that I will never let you down. I have never failed you. I shall never fail you.

Apart from the people of our country, I have also consulted our friends and neighbours abroad. As part of this process I have also visited Peking and Moscow and recently sent a special envoy to these two capitals. As you all know my last mission took me to 14 countries in the Middle East and Africa. This was in continuation of my earlier visits to eight Muslim countries in January. The support that has been shown both at home and abroad will undoubtedly strengthen my hands in negotiating terms of peace. Let nobody doubt that these terms are still to be negotiated. A final settlement cannot take place in the forthcoming negotiations with India. A decision on the fundamental issues can only be taken by the people through their chosen representatives. I am going to hear what the Indian leaders have to say. I shall put over views to them. I hope we shall find some common ground for a lasting peace. I hope we can set the tone and the pace for lasting mouds vivendi.

Whatever proposals are made these will remain dependent upon the will of our people. Whatever the outcome of the Simla meeting its acceptance or rejection will not be for me alone to decide but the whole nation.

The history of relations between India and Pakistan is indeed melancholy. It is one of missed opportunities and distrust. It has cost the people of the sub-continent dearly. We are prepared to make a new beginning. If the Indians reciprocate this sincerely, I believe we can make a new beginning.

The search for peace is long and arduous. We cannot in one stroke wipe our past differences and suspicions. We cannot tear off the leaf of history in one week. We have to move forward step by step, and at each step with sincerity on both sides. And this will be sufficient.

We are prepared to discuss now and later all issues within the framework of principles. There have been negotiations in the past with India right from 1947. There can be negotiations in the future. Discussions in the past may have failed to resolve the issue but so has other alternative – war. And the failure of talks, you will agree, is less costly than that of war.

It is better to talk directly than through intermediaries. With this in view we have to first resume diplomatic relations with India. After all we did not break diplomatic relations in the 1965 war. For that matter it will be of mutual benefit if we reopen communications, letters and telegrams can be exchanged. We can start again and it will no doubt be of benefit to the people of the region if a measure of trade is resumed in good time after due deliberations.
Bu this is anticipatory. We have made many gestures to India. We have offered the hand of peace, and in token the unconditional release of the Indian prisoners of war in our custody. Surely it is now up to India to demonstrate her desire for peace in deeds rather than words. But so far India has not made a single constructive gesture to herald a new era in our relations.

We desire peace but not at any price. We desire peace but not at the expense of our principle and honour. I repeat, we seek a just and honourable peace, a peace at the service of our people. We have a difficult task ahead, a task made all the more difficult by certain forces at work in Pakistan.

It is no coincidence that just before my departure labour and language trouble should have erupted in Sind. Some have tried to create dissent in the reborn unity of the nation. They are not patriots. They are not friends of Pakistan. They are not friends of our people. They have been merely posing as patriots and friends of the poor; in truth they are enemies of the people. They have been trying to make trouble during my absence and after my return. But we will not allow these anti-people elements to succeed in their nefarious aims. We will crush them with the power of the people. We will not permit anyone or anything to play with our Pakistan. Inshaallah, nothing can stop us from together building a new and vigorous Pakistan. Nothing can stop us from keeping our appointment with destiny.

The challenge is there both for you and for me. Shall we grasp this moment or shall we let it pass? I declared to this new generation of Pakistan that with your trust and confidence in my judgment we shall cross the broken bridges and reach the mountain top. I beseech you in the name of Allah and in the name of Pakistan to give me your prayers and you good wishes. Pakistan Zindabad.

Assessment of the speech of President Z. A. Bhutto by the Secretary to the Prime Minister. P. N. Dhar.

New Delhi, June 28, 1972.

I think Bhutto's broadcast must have sounded reasonable to impartial listeners. He talked of the resumption of trade and travel and diplomatic relations, etc. to domestic audiences, he impressed the fact that he will not accept any settlement which is not just and honourable. He, obviously, could not say anything less than that. For us, the speech is a curtain-raiser. He describes P.O.Ws and territory occupied by us as 'fruits of aggression' and asks us to disgorge these ill-gotten gains if we are really interested in durable peace in the sub-continent. To Kashmiris, he said, that the right of self-determination is not something given to them by Pakistan but one that is enshrined in numerous U.N. Resolutions and recognized by India at one stage. But he significantly added that they can also abandon this right, if they so choose. [In the news bulletin that followed the broadcast, the Kashmir part has given a wrong emphasis.]

In this context, our problem is to produce an argument that will convince the Pakistanis that we are holding on to POWs only because Pakistan has failed to recognize Bangladesh. And since the Government of Bangladesh is a party to the question, Pakistan's non-recognition of this Government has tied down our hands. To prove our bona fides, we can readily agree to return the POWs of the Western Sector.

On Kashmir, since he has put the ball of self-determination in Kashmir court, we can refer him to the statements of Kasem (Qasim), Beg and Abdullah and our willingness to abandon our rights to Pak-occupied Kashmir and some further territorial adjustments without disadvantage to Pakistan.

It is significant that Bhutto began and concluded his broadcast by longish reference to his promise to work for the welfare of the people. It seems that he wants to build his political support on a mass base rather than on elitic (elite) preferences. If that be so, Bhutto should have a vested interest in the reduction of defence expenditure. The present budget is undoubtedly defence-oriented and leave much less than was expected for his promised economic reforms. I do not know how the budget has been sold domestically, but he can very well argue that he has had to postpone the reforms so that he may not have to speak from a position of utter weakness at the summit. From our point of view, Bhutto's promises of economic reforms and people's oriented politics are most welcome. Compulsions of these promises will reduce the scope of military confrontation with India. This gives hope that he, in fact, will feel compelled to avoid the confrontationist course, unless his welfare oriented economic programmes and war machine are financially supported by external sources which seems unlikely because of the sheer size of the bill.

SECRET
Assessment of the speech of President Z. A. Bhutto by the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister P. N. Haksar.
New Delhi, June 28, 1972.
Prime Minister's Secretariat
President Bhutto’s broadcast over the Pakistan radio last night needs to be carefully studied. It is reasonable. It is constructive in its approach. It will sound reasonable to the outside world and we have to take this into account.

2. It may be worthwhile summarizing the main structure of his arguments. Briefly, it may be stated as follows:-

(i) He admits that he is the inheritor of a tragic legacy of the misdeeds of his predecessors whom he describes as “a power-drunk junta”.

(ii) He admits that the past 25 years of relations between India and Pakistan have been “an era of confrontation and war”, so that the peoples of the region have suffered.

(iii) He emphasizes that a whole generation of Pakistanis had to wait for “the advent of democracy”. He also holds out the hope to the people of Pakistan that he desires to serve the people and introduce an era of economic growth giving to the people of Pakistan some measure of prosperity and progress.

(iv) He describes the raison d’ etre of going to India as a search of a durable peace in the sub-continent, to regain two tehsils in Sind and one in the Punjab under occupation of India. He further justifies the need for a modus vivendi with India as good neighbours. And he justifies negotiations by referring to the negotiations between the Americans and the Chinese and the Russians and the Americans. Finally, he says that talks and negotiations are less costly than war.

3. There are, of course, negative features in his speech. There are:-

(i) He still talks about the right of self-determination to the people of Jammu & Kashmir which he describes as being “enshrined in numerous Resolutions of the U.N. and acknowledged by Prime Minister, Jawaharlal Nehru”. However, it is note-worthy when he says that it is for the people of Jammu & Kashmir to assert or abandon their right of self-determination.

(ii) He recalls the story of Hyderabad, Junagadh and Manavadar. He accuses us of dismembering Pakistan and evokes the image of India as one wanting “further expansion”.

(iii) He accuses India of not having made a single constructive gesture to herald a new era in our relations.

(iv) Finally, continued efforts to paint India as aggressor in defiance of established facts.

4. President Bhutto states that he is coming to India to hear “what the Indian leaders have to say” and that he “shall put our views to them”. He is realistic enough to say that “we cannot tear off the leaf of history in one week and have to move forward step by step and at each step with sincerity on both sides.” He also said that he is prepared to discuss now and later all issues within the framework of principles. He then goes on to express his great desire for resumption of diplomatic relations with India which will enable India and Pakistan to talk directly, rather than through intermediaries. He expresses his readiness to re-open communications, so that letters and telegrams can be exchanged. He talks about the benefits to the people of the sub-continent if a measure of trade is resumed in due time after due deliberation.

Structure of negotiations with President Bhutto

5. I feel that there should be a brief one-hour session between P.M. and Bhutto alone. I could be present if P.M. so desires. In this session, P.M. should, in her own way, convey to President Bhutto our deep desire for peace with Pakistan. P.M. might also say that she, on her part, has no difficulty in accepting that President Bhutto too desires peace. Two things stand in the way: firstly, the history of our past relationship; and, secondly, President Bhutto’s own image in India. It is too much of a burden for P.M. to carry if she also has to present to our parliament and people that President Bhutto is entirely different a person than what he presents himself to be. It is for the President to consider how she can discharge this burden with credibility.
6. The most painful aspects of the past relationship are:-

(b) Pakistan’s active involvement in encouraging the Nags, the Mizos and the sponsoring of the so-called right of self-determination of the Kashmiris. Finally, Pakistan’s continuous involvement with the Muslims of India.

7. There is another difficulty which is not of our making, namely, the relations or rather the lack of them between Bangladesh and Pakistan. The long shadow of this is inevitably cast even on our sincere desire to make a new beginning in relations between India and Pakistan. P.M. might say how she wished that the summit which is now taking place had been preceded by normalization of relations between Bangladesh and Pakistan. P.M. might make President Bhutto aware of the intensity of emotional feeling in Bangladesh and how very extremely sensitive they are to the question of the Joint Command and their insistence that they are a necessary party to the settlement of the question not merely of the prisoners of war, but repatriation of civilian internees. Passionate feelings are involved in regard to the fate of the Bangalis in Pakistan. These are the facts we have to face, howsoever inconvenient they might be.

8. The question is: how do we get over these difficulties? P.M. might say that she has said all this not with any emotion, but merely as facts to be reckoned with. The terrible legacy of the past had to be got over. And this can be got over if we are today able to enunciate the broad features of our future relationship in which the strongest element should be our firm resolve not to use force in settling our differences either as they exist, or that might arise in future. Such a declaration accompanied by some concrete steps towards implementation of this resolve would put us on the new road to life of peace, amity and good neighbourliness. P.M. might then ask President Bhutto: how do we set about it?

Telegram from Ambassador in Paris for Principal Secretary relayed to him in Simla.

June 28, 1972.

TELEGRAM

From: Foreign, New Delhi
To: Indian Delegation Simla

MOST IMMEDIATE

No.48 June 28, 1972

The Following Telegram received from the Indian Ambassador in Paris on June 27 was repeated to the Indian Delegation at Simla.

P.N.Haksar from (Ambassador) Chatterjee.

I had 35 minutes talk with POMPIDOU today on subjects arising from PM's letter. Present French official thinking indicates (a) Need for Indian magnanimity (b) liberation of POW (c) Dealing the Kashmir issue only in second phase of Indo-Pakistan peace talks (e) recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan.

It is essential to reverse direction of French thinking regarding (b) and (c) above. Hence my interview with POMPIDOU. I explained at length all the aspects of the POW question and he was satisfied that they were well treated. But he said "India is now a great power" you have nothing to fear from Pakistan. If Pakistan attacks you, she will again be defeated and as disastrously". He stressed need for magnanimity which he thought was also effective as policy.

3. On Kashmir I told him plainly and at length that leaving that state as a kind of "no-man's land" was to invite trouble. For inexplicable reasons, some powers did not consider Pakistan attack on Kashmir in 1965 as aggression against India. I stressed that unless we had proper international frontier, Kashmir might play the disastrous role of a Balkan state before the First World War. POMPIDOU listened intently and nodded but said that he could not see how Bhutto could at one strike recognize Bangladesh and also renounce claims on Kashmir. Bhutto was simply not strong enough for this. A little later after liberation of prisoners and a certain normalization of relations, Bhutto's attitude might be different. I disagreed and cited our bitter experience of the last 25 years.

4. The interview throughout was cordial and it was good of POMPIDOU to have received me considering the monetary crisis, his forthcoming visit to Bonn, presence of foreign heads of state in Paris etc. POMPIDOU smiled often to ease the tension whenever I looked grim at his enunciation of what we should do regarding Kashmir. (He said—at least twice—that India was “a great power” now and—“great powers are always tough”). But my general impression—without wishful thinking—is that PM’s letter has had good effect on him and if I can keep on putting our case on Kashmir directly and indirectly (through my Gaulist channels) French position may well be modified to our advantage. Last year I had similar experience regarding the liberation struggle in Bangladesh. PM’s visit to Paris was decisive in that context. This time too we must be patient and persistent.

0709. Interview of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi with a group of Pakistani journalists.

Simla, July 1, 1972.

[Most of the questions and answers were in Urdu and it is a free translation of the conversation]

Question: When are you coming to Pakistan?

The Prime Minister: That will be decided later. There is no question of any definite date at present.

Q: Do you wish to visit Pakistan?

P. M: It is not a question of anybody’s wish. It is of what we want to do. I have long felt, particularly ever since the new trend of friendship and of forgetting old conflicts began in Europe. If we have a look at history, Europe has been dominating the whole of the world. It seems to me that if we do not resolve our problems, Asia will always remain in a state of suppression and will be subject to pressures. There is poverty everywhere in all our countries big and small. There are problems which we can never solve whatever help we get from outside and whatever effort we make ourselves. It is absolutely essential that we begin a similar trend here (in Asia) not from the chauvinistic point of view. There are masses who have been under suppression since centuries and have remained poor. They should get a chance to begin a new life. It is therefore, necessary to settle all mutual disputes. If my visit helps this purpose, I shall be only too happy to go there.
Q: Did you ever visit Pakistan after partition?

P. M: I had gone once with Panditji. Perhaps at the time of Liquat Ali Sahib. I don’t recollect the date.

Q: (Not clear, it related to the Summit).

P. M: A brief summit took place yesterday.

Q: When is the next meeting?

P. M: There will be one today also.

Q: Are you satisfied with yesterday’s meeting?

P. M: The whole situation is quite complex – both for Pakistan and for us. The fact that a meeting takes place at all, is bound to have some effect.

Q: Are you satisfied with the progress of the talks?

P. M: It is a word that is being used in all connections. I am not a person who is ever satisfied because I feel no matter what happens better could have happened. But in the circumstances one can’t expect very much; one can only expect that a small beginning is made in lessening tension and suspicion and fear of the people on both sides.

Q: There is a common feeling that the biggest hurdle in the present is the lack of trust. In your view how can this trust be revived so that there is a relaxation in the situation and things get moving?

P. M: The first basic thing is whether both the sides really want peace and compromise.

Q: what is your opinion?

P. M: I believe they do want it.

Q: Both?

P. M: Yes; both want it.

Q: Have you any idea what our problems are?

P. M: Your President has tried to give me some idea.

Q: Has he succeeded or not?

P. M: Even before his telling us we did know about your difficulties. People who have reached agreements in Europe and elsewhere faced no less difficult problems.
Q: At the end of Mr. Dhar’s talks when he visited us it was thought that the situation had become more favourable. After the lapse of these two months, it now appears that more obstacles have arisen. This is the impression of others and those present here.

P. M: Some of the statements that have been made have not helped. Their effect has not been very good. The President himself feels that, that some hardening of attitude has taken place among certain elements.

Q: We also feel that as time passes and if there is no forward movement – things cannot remain static in this age.

P. M: They can never remain static.

Q: The movement is always there, backward or forward. If they do not move forward they will move backward.

P. M: It is correct. There has been some hardening of attitude in Bangladesh as well during this period.

Q: How can a softening in these attitudes be brought about?

P. M: There is no prescription for such things. There is no patent medicine that can be given. Only an effort can be made.

Q: But you are the doctor.

P. M.: No. I am not.

Q: As the bigger country, some gesture..

P. M: I do not believe in big or small. As I told the President on the first day, everything is automatically balanced in the world. If we have some advantages in being bigger we have the same amount of disadvantages, because of the size of the population, the area and the levels of development. It is possible that if the progress continues for many years, we might be some power at some time. As it is we are equally balanced.

Q: (Inaudible)

P. M: Perhaps it is there in your country. I do not know. There is far greater political consciousness here than in other countries I have visited. Everyone follows everything. He has his own opinion.

Q: It has grown much in our country also. More than required. The people express view on every matter, on the biggest problems. Mrs. Gandhi, there is a request. Can you permit Pakistan TV team to visit the POW camps.
P. M: I do not know if it will be of any use.

Q: This will help improve the climate between the two countries.

P. M: It can be good and it can be the other way round. They are in a good condition. The question really is...

Q: Our friends have told us that they are in a very good condition. But it will have a good effect on our country if a group of journalists were allowed to visit the camps. I think they would report on their very good condition.

P. M: It will have to be seen from every point of view what will be its effect.

Q: It we go into the details and depths the whole issue becomes confusing.

P. M: Even then one has to look at all the four sides before doing anything, and consider what the implications are.

Q: Apart from the Jan Sangh is there any determined opposition to a rapprochement with Pakistan?

P. M: Well, in the political parties, that Socialist party. They say they want a rapprochement but they want a federation or a confederation, something like that. But in the ordinary people there is still some fear and especially among people who live along the borders. Quite honestly they say that you will agree to something and as soon as they are ready they will attack once again and we are the ones who will suffer. This is very bluntly said.

Q: But there is change in the effective conditions. The fact is that Pakistan is one tenth of the sub-continent.

P. M: Well, in military strength there is not much difference. We have a very big frontier and we have two frontiers. So I don’t think we are superior. One of the difficulties in this interim period is the startling size of your defence budget...

Q: Compared to yours?

P. M: Ours is a smaller fraction of the total.

Q: But you are self-sufficient.

P. M: Well, not really. Only in food grains.

Q: (not clear).

P. M: Well, you see this is where we have diametrically opposite views, because we have never used our forces for any aggressive purpose nor do we ever intend to do so. But we have had unprovoked invasions on both sides. Even the first time your troops went into Kashmir, we had no troops there at all, not a single one. There was no presence at all. And your own Foreign Minister at that time finally admitted at the U.N. that the Pakistan troops had gone, although in the beginning you had said “no, they were merely tribals.”

Q: Won’t it probably have a good impact if your and Bhutto Sahib’s visits to each other are frequent?

P. M: It may. I admit that meeting can be useful. You have seen the friendly welcome accorded to him despite fears and suspicions. If the people do not cheer him loudly it does not mean that they did not want to do so. They did not know what would be his thoughts. Many people told me that they were wanting but they were hesitant. But whenever the President raised his hand even slightly then everybody waved.

Q: Is there any possibility of your visit?

P. M: There is no definite discussion. The President just made a reference to it.

Q: (Not fully audible – but it referred to POWs and that Pakistan is not short of manpower but only of weapons).

P. M: And you have no shortage of resources for those either.

Q: The other point I like you to comment on is that you are a signatory to the Geneva Convention. If I remember rightly, Article 118 says that the POWs will be exchanged soon after the cessation of active hostilities – I think that is the phrase. Bearing these two points in mind, how do you justify your position on the POWs issue?

P. M: We have fully conformed with the Geneva Convention. But if you look at that the situation is not that simple. For instance, they do make provision for trials for war crimes. The majority of the troops have surrendered in Bangladesh to a joint command and this also is something which just cannot be ignored. And we have no choice. It is not a question whether we want to do this or do not do that. We have no choice in this matter, unless we have the concurrence of the leaders of Bangladesh, we cannot take any action without that.

Q: Even on the question of those civilians who never wore any arms?

P. M: But they were taken there, you see. They were found in that area. So far as those who surrendered on the Western front there should be no...
Q: But the Article refers to detaining country?

P. M: To that Bangladesh said if you have any problem you send them back here and we will look after them. So you see this....

Q: It is said that those army officers who are possibly repatriated will be used against you. But not the civilian officers. At least civilians...

P. M: It is not such a simple situation. There is a third country involved and we cannot interface in your relations with them and more than we could with your relations with any other country. So, the sooner you patch up or come to some agreement the easier it would be to deal with all the other questions. That is the complicating factor.

Q: where would you like to make the beginning?

P. M: You see some things are not in my hands. So it is no use saying where I will make a beginning. In Bangladesh, at the most I can say, “well in our view, perhaps you should do this.” But that is for them to judge.

Q: If I recall correctly, it was at your, I mean at the request of the Indian delegation, which visited Pakistan that Pakistan agreed to the participation of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman at a certain stage of this session between you and Mr. Bhutto. And so far as we know there was no other condition than this on the question of Mr. Mujibur Rahman such as that we should first recognize Bangladesh; then he would come here. What has really been the development in the intervening period? Isn’t it that the idea is to secure recognition before he could come and join the talks?

P. M: So far as we are concerned, there is no condition. But as I said, he is the leader of his country and we can only tell him “Well, this is a good thing or this will help.” But it is for him to take the ultimate decision. And as I said earlier in reply to another question, we feel that the attitude there had also hardened.

Q: But this becomes your condition. So far as we are concerned...

P. M: But look, what can we do about it? Our situation is like those countries which are sending telegrams to me and probably to your President, such as Canada and others, who say that we must do everything to have a solution or an agreement. “Please make the summit a success.” This is all we can say to Bangladesh also.

Q: Bangladesh will listen to you because of the help you have given..

P. M: The world is neither like that nor it should be. Because we gave a little help to Bangladesh, towards the end, it does not mean that they are not a sovereign people. That is a fully independent country. They have their own opinions. They have their own difficulties. It is no an easy situation.

Q: But if you….

P. M: Now you have the Bengalis. It might help if you did something about it.

Q: Now this is a question for the peace of the whole of the sub-continent. You are the major partner.

P. M: I sincerely do not believe in major and minor. There are many countries far smaller than Pakistan. But all are equals —whether in U.N. or in other world matters. Compact states have their own advantage.

Q: But you are in a good bargaining position.

P. M: I am not a debater. That is one of my disadvantages.

Q: (Not fully audible—but concerned Bangladesh)

P. M: We cannot help it. Our liking or not liking something does not change history. A situation was created in Bangladesh which caught us unawares. We had no idea of it until it burst upon us as a bombshell. At that time we had come to a certain stage in our political and economic situation where we were looking forward to big progress. We were absorbed in our own affairs. Suddenly the whole situation burst open and the manner in which it developed overflowed into our territory affecting the stability of our country. The social, political and administrative tensions are yet to be overcome.

Q: A new leaf has been turned, has it not been? Can’t we make a new beginning?

P. M: If we did not appreciate the fact, there would not be this summit. We do appreciate that a Government has been formed in Pakistan, and that there is a democratically elected President, that can reflect the thinking of the country. I myself have been saying that we should not keep looking backwards. We must look towards the future. But, certainly, you cannot ignore history in this sense that certain mental attitudes have led to certain situations. But if you stick to those attitudes, may be you come to an agreement but very soon again you have the same sort of situation. The past intrudes only to that extent.

Q: Well, to make a beginning we will have to clear the air. Let us say the present democratically elected Government of Pakistan had been handed down certain things by a regime which the people of Pakistan never accepted or never endorsed.

P. M: No. But if you will excuse my saying so, we sometimes see the Pakistani press. Now you have only to compare the newspapers - this is not a question of what I say or your people say - of the last year or two years or three years, if you like, and see what sort of attitude was projected to the people as a whole. You will not find any sort of "hate Pakistan" campaign in our press except perhaps in the Jan Sangh newspapers. And that also has come out very recently.

Q: The press in Pakistan till a few months ago was completely controlled. So the press really at that time reflected that attitude of the Government. It can't be interpreted as reflecting the people's attitude.

P. M: But does it not have an effect on the people when they read this sort of thing?

Q: There is a realization. I do not know if it is in India or not, that with the change of regime this is the time for some sort of time for the settlement between Pakistan and India. A time like this would probably never come again. Mr. Bhutto is the kind of person who can deliver the goods and he can thrash our certain issues. If the settlement is not made today such an opportunity would never come probably for many years. I don't know whether there is such a realization here or not.

P. M: I think there is. Of course I think that any time is opportune time for something good, such as an agreement. But I entirely agree with you that President Bhutto is certainly better placed and, as I said earlier, he himself has the type of attitude which can help towards an agreement. We are not always sure whether this attitude is reflected in other members of the delegation.

Q: Has a breakthrough taken place?

P. M: It is very difficult to say anything categorically. But I wouldn't be too pessimistic about it either. I think something can be done. You see, nothing very definite has emerged. So it would not be correct for me to give any definite answer. But as I have said, I am not pessimistic.

Q: My question may be hypothetical but suppose this current discussion fails to produce any very meaningful results, would you think that it would close the door on any future discussions also?

P. M: I hope not.

Q: When are you meeting again?
P. M: We will be meeting in a smaller group. I don’t know whether it is a secret or not, but I share a lost of secrets with others! I think we are meeting in a smaller group. We will be just deciding that. We had originally thought of 10 o’clock but anyway we are not quite ready. So it may either be later this morning or in the afternoon.

Q: We are not a part of the delegation, but if something happens we will also return home happy.

P. M: There must be hope always.

0710. SIMLA CONFERENCE
June 28- July 2, 1972

Simla, June 28, 1972.

Prime Minister Shrimati Indira Gandhi’s Speech:
May I welcome you all. I am glad that you were able to come. This meeting is not perhaps easy of us. Yet I personally feel, and my country feels confident that it should mark a new beginning in our relationship. We welcome the trend of your broadcast, namely to forget the past and look towards the future. Many changes have come about all over the world and there is no reason why we cannot look at our problems afresh.

Pakistan President’s Reply:
I would like to thank you, Madame Prime Minister, on behalf of my entire delegation and on my behalf for your hospitality. I hope that our past contacts will prove beneficial. But before we leave to have this discussion, I want to say a few words. Believe me, we are interested in Peace. That is our objective and we will strive for it.

We want to turn the corner we want to make a new beginning. We are dealing with a very difficult situation, with many past prejudices. I am sure it is difficult for us as well. We have to make a sincere effort. A little experience of the past might be helpful to understand our problems.

I want to begin with this assurance to you and to your delegation and to the people of India that we would forget that past bitterness, and hostilities and will strive to attain peace with honour. We will try and work it out, and in that you will have my country’s, my people’s and our fullest cooperation.

B. TOP SECRET

Summary of Discussions between official delegations of India and Pakistan.

Simla, June 28, 1972.

Chairman* opened the discussion by expressing the hope that the task before the two delegations would not be too difficult as the leaders had defined it precisely and without ambiguity. This should facilitate the deliberations.

Chairman said that he had been asked by the Prime Minister to convey that India wished to make a genuine and firm search for peace “that shall reign henceforth”. In this search it would be necessary to make some references to the past. But these references should not be made in a spirit of recrimination, but rather for guidance for the future and for the course that the two delegations would chart out for submission to their Heads of Government. The basic question was: whether there is complementarity in the relations and the cooperation that we seek, or whether apprehensions of continuing confrontation would characterize our relationship. Chairman said that, doubtless, in the course of the discussions differences would crop up, but we should not allow these differences to become insurmountable hurdles in the path of peace. We should attempt to circumvent, if not remove all obstacles, and reach an agreement so that the wishes of our leaders are fully met.

Chairman said that he had been deeply struck by Mr. Ahmed’s frankness, candour and cooperation during the Murree talks. He hoped that the Pakistan side would once again share confidences with India to enable a speedy resolution of mutual problems.

* Chairman of the Policy Planning Committee D.P. Dhar
Chairman suggested that the discussions proceed on the basis of the documents already available to us, namely the agenda finalized at the Murree talks supplemented by the agreed general principles.

In his opening reply Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that Pakistan would heartily reciprocate India’s attempts at a genuine search for peace. He expressed appreciation for Prime Minister’s welcoming statement and felt that if the two sides approached the agenda items in the spirit in which the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan desired, problems could be solved and a picture emerge which would show to the peoples in both countries that India and Pakistan were decided to move resolutely on the path to durable peace.

Mr. Ahmed recalled Chairman’s “impressive” handling of the emissary-level deliberations and expressed Pakistan’s gratitude for some very positive assertions made by the Chairman on that occasion. In particular the following extracts from Chairman’s statements had had a very favourable impact on the discussions:

(a) that India was prepared to give all assurances; that it wished Pakistan well and that it fully recognized its identity and the compactness of its personality;

(b) that India would do nothing to place President Bhutto in an embarrassing situation; and

(c) that India recognized that any solution to mutual problems should be such as would be accepted by the peoples of the two countries.

On the basis of this approach, progress was made at the Murree talks despite the limited brief of the Pakistan emissary. The talks had generated considerable optimism in Pakistan about the future.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed recalled a reference to the question of POWs during the emissary level talks. He had then suggested that if India wanted to keep the POWs indefinitely, she could do so. He said he was not being “cussed” when he made this statement; it only reflected Pakistan’s conviction that if such a line was adopted by India, it would not be conducive to the establishment of durable peace. Mr. Ahmed asserted that he presence of POWs in India posed certain difficulties for President Bhutto. However, the magnitude of the question was not such that the President would not be able to cope with. The reason was that recruitment to the Army in Pakistan was traditionally done from five districts of the Punjab. In these areas the people were used to seeing their men-folk going to war and dying by the thousands. The people therefore were not seriously agitated over the continued detention of the POWs in India. Their general sentiment was that the Pakistan Government should not accept a ‘dictated peace’ or abandon her principles in any anxiety to effect repatriation. Mr. Ahmed quoted the impression gathered by Pakistan’s Chief of Army Staff’s recent tour of a certain district: the latter was categorically told that he relative of POWs were ready to wait, as even in peace time they saw the soldiers only once a year.

Mr. Ahmed said he had made another suggested at the Murree talks, namely that unless repatriation of POWs and withdrawals from occupied territories commenced prior to the holding of the summit, people in Pakistan would feel that India was exerting pressure to extract a settlement from President Bhutto. It had been suggested, Mr. Ahmed recalled, that had the POWs been released before that summit there would have been a tremendous impact in Pakistan. Chairman, at that stage, had agreed that India could consider releasing the Western theater POWs, women and children of prisoners, stranded in Pakistanis and eventually civilian internees. However, since then nothing had happened and India had obviously rejected Pakistan’s suggestion. This had caused considerable personal disappointment to Mr. Ahmed.

Mr. Ahmed stated that the second point that belied his optimism was the fact of the absence of Sheikh Mujib at the summit talks for discussing the question of POWs. Pakistan was initially against tripartite talks on this issue. However, on Chairman’s suggestion they had agreed. The fact that he could not be persuaded to join the deliberations was unfortunate. On the other hand, the Sheikh continued to say that there would be no discussion with Pakistan until Bangladesh was recognized. In this context, a further element of pessimism had been introduced by the fact that India’s Foreign Minister had reportedly endorsed Sheikh Mujib’s position.

What had, however, caused a grave reaction in Pakistan is the news that trials of the so-called collaborators had already begun in “East Pakistan”. A strange law had been put into operation for holding these trials: it was with retrospective effect from 25th March 1971.

Under this law, personnel of the U.N. Agencies working in “East Pakistan” should also be tried as collaborators. Recently, a report had come out that one person had been tried and sentenced to death. Even, senior officials are to be tried. Moreover, not a single day passed without the so-called Ministers in Dacca reiterating their intention to hold trials. Mr. Ahmed said that this had caused a very “unpleasant situation”. It had also been reported that India would be handing over POWs to the Dacca authorities for trial. This had caused tremendous resentment in Pakistan. Fortunately, a denial had been issued by India.

Mr. Ahmed said that the developments enumerated by him above had caused pessimism in Pakistan. Foreign Secretary interjected to say that the very fact that the emissary-level talks had led to the present summit meeting was in itself a positive outcome which should generate optimism. Mr. Ahmed replied that recently there had been some set-backs.

Chairman said that the views expressed by him during the emissary talks were reflections of the sentiments of the Prime Minister and the overwhelmingly large segments of public opinion in India. Chairman emphasized India’s desire for durable peace and said that the peace we seek is one between equals. Why then should Pakistan raise again and again their apprehensions about an unequal peace? There is no such thing; an imposed settlement can only be the precursor to wars and confrontations. India talked to Pakistan not only as an equal but as an estranged brother. There is a deeper quality to our relationship which has been lost but which has to be recaptured. We are not so vulgar, and nothing is farther from our intentions, as to dictate any peace settlement to Pakistan. We are sincerely animated by a desire to turn our backs on an unfortunate and tragic past and to build up a new chapter based on trust and mutual confidence.

Chairman said that when he spoke of the possibility of repatriating categories of POWs, he had simultaneously set out two necessary conditions which were regarded by India as essential pre-requisites to repatriation, viz:

(a) the question of concluding a peace settlement between India and Pakistan, and

(b) India’s commitment to Bangladesh on the question of POWs.

Chairman recalled that he had suggested that Pakistan should agree to the consultation and association of Bangladesh on this question. As Pakistan could not agree to accept such consultation and association, Chairman had asked for a formulation form Pakistan that would satisfy India’s requirement in the matter. The formulation, however, submitted by Pakistan omitted both “consultation” and “association” and was merely restricted to a “discussion” with Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. Chairman had suggested that this attitude of Pakistan could jeopardize even the other results of the emissary talks. He had, therefore, requested Mr. Ahmed to inform us subsequently about Pakistan’s decision in the matter. No communication had, however, been received.

Chairman reiterated that our position on the POWs should not be interpreted as a device to stall on the question of their repatriation. It reflected a commitment to which India was honour bound. The key to the resolution of the difficulty posed by our differing approaches; however, lay not with India but really with the President of Pakistan. India would not plead for the recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan. But, Chairman said, such recognition would be very helpful in resolving not only the question of POWs but also other issues of a
We were not making any gratuitous suggestion; we leave it exclusively to Pakistan to take a decision on this question. On our part whatever influence we have with Bangladesh, we have used it in a positive manner, to bring forbearance to frayed tempers. India, Chairman reiterated, was not so callous as to trade in human flesh. We are not going to use the question of POWs or withdrawals for forcing anything on Pakistan which goes against that country's dignity.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that his sense of pessimism may have been due to some misunderstanding. Pakistan did not realize that the difference between “consultation” and “discussion” with Bangladesh was so vital for India. However, Pakistan’s main anxiety at this present juncture was that in Sheikh Mujib’s absence what progress could Pakistan expect on the question of POWs? How do the two sides proceed? Do we postpone a decision until Sheikh Mujib finds it possible to participate?

Chairman suggested that the delegations should first tackle the question of determining the elements of durable peace which was the first item on the agenda. Afterwards, solutions could be found to other questions. Mr. Ahmed stated that it had been clearly mentioned in the agenda that the items regarding a peace settlement and the POWs would be taken up simultaneously. If India could not take decisions on the question of POW repatriation and withdrawals we were “stuck” straightway. The Sheikh did not want to talk to Pakistan. This in itself was very unwise. But if this fact stymied a discussion on POWs, it would be a double tragedy.

Chairman stated that if we made headway on a peace settlement, other problems, which seem intractable at the moment, would also lend themselves to a solution. As regards the specific question of the POWs, there were two elements; there was a bilateral aspect as well as a trilateral element which involved consultation with Bangladesh. Chairman suggested that the two sides might first discuss the bilateral aspect instead of getting bogged down. What was more important, we should concentrate on how enduring peace could be established. The question of POWs, withdrawal from territories and other allied matters were merely the after math of the hostilities: they were not in themselves the cause of conflict, but its sequence. By addressing ourselves to finding a cure for the disease, the symptoms would sort themselves out subsequently.

Mr. Ahmed asserted that, in view of India’s position that the bulk of the POWs surrendered to a joint Indo-Bangladesh command, the bilateral aspect of the question was insignificant as it involved merely 600-odd POWs. However, what is required is a decision regarding the vast, majority of the prisoners. In Pakistan’s view therefore the absence of the Sheikh was a “major hurdle”, unless, of course, the Indian Government had already consulted the Dacca authorities and had obtained agreement on questions relating to repatriation of POWs. Pakistan Delegation could not possibly return with only a peace settlement; without POW repatriation and withdrawal of forces, there would be little merit in continuing discussions.

Chairman urged Mr. Ahmed not to throw up his hands in despair at the very outset. India’s desire for the establishment of perpetual peace did not in any manner imply an agreement on this issue in vacuum, without taking decisions on other problems.

At this stage Mr. Ahmed enquired in specific terms that if Pakistan could reach an agreement with India on a statement embodying the elements of durable peace, would India be in a position to make a declaration about the repatriation of POWs and troop withdrawals? Or, would a reference to Shiekh Mujibur Rahman still be required? Chairman replied that if we could see the prospects of peace emerging and are also able to resolve the bilateral question relating to the POWs, we could jointly address ourselves to the other questions. Let our agreements first take some shape and form. We could then take up consideration of the residual difficulties. We were happy to note that Pakistan had had time to devote itself to the question of the elements of durable peace. There should, therefore, be no difficulty on this score. On the POW question the bilateral aspects could be discussed and settled. It was, therefore, only the question of the association and consultation of Bangladesh that presented a problem. Chairman suggested that Mr. Ahmed might like to communicate this to President Bhutto.

Mr. Ahmed abruptly suggested that unless the Indian Delegation had anything further to state on items 1(a) and (b) of the agreed agenda, the meeting could be adjourned. Intervening in the discussion, Principle Secretary to Prime Minister stated that while India could not advocate the recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan, the lack of recognition created problems for us. It was our impression that even in Pakistan there was a feeling that recognition of Bangladesh would facilitate Indo-Pakistan discussions. We had also received the impression that Pakistan was itself, contemplating such recognition. If this was indeed Pakistan’s thinking, we could remove the main obstacle to an agreement on durable peace between the two countries. He wondered whether it would not be possible to devise a formulation which would enable the two sides to get rid of this obstacle within an agreed time-frame given the perspective of durable peace.

Principal Secretary stated that while the Americans, Russians and Chinese could talk about the affairs of the sub-continent, it should not be beyond the peoples of this region to find a modus vivendi. It was necessary for both of us to recognize the realities of the situation. They had to be faced. It was futile to transfer epithets to a third person, who was not even present. Principle Secretary assured the Pakistan side that we were sensitive to their position, but urged a joint resolution of mutual problems. Mr. Ahmed's query as to how these problems could be resolved; Mr. Haskar replied that Mr. Ahmed was far too experienced a civil servant to pose this question. Mr. Ahmed then suggested that India might help in persuading Sheikh Mujib to meet President Bhutto without any preconditions. Mr. Haksar replied that the Sheikh was a person of deep emotions and a leader who took things very seriously. Foreign Secretary intervened to say that even the Sheikh has felt that movement was possible when an agreement had been reached with Pakistan regarding the exchange of a thousands hardship cases on either side. But this proposal had subsequently been rejected by Pakistan.

Mr. Ahmed explained why the exchange proposed by the ICRC has fallen through. Pakistan could not start by repatriating “civilians” without first taking some steps on the question of the return of POWs. A civilian exchange would have created an adverse reaction in Pakistan. The Armed Forces would also not have liked it. In any case, the exchange involved peons etc. and other people who did not really matter. However, Mr. Ahmed felt, the mere fact that this exchange did not go through should not make Sheikh Mujib obstinate. The Sheikh was clearly on the “wrong end of the stick”. Mr. Ahmed again solicited India's assistances in persuading Sheikh Mujib to talk to President Bhutto. If a meeting did take place, President Bhutto would sympathetically consider Pak-Bangladesh matters. The main problem was that President Bhutto had consistently taken a public position that there could be no recognition of Bangladesh without a prior meeting with Sheikh Mujib. He cannot possibly go back from this position. He could have, perhaps initially - - even up to three months ago - - decided himself to recognize Bangladesh. He cannot do so now. President Bhutto finds that with the passage of time, opinions in Pakistan are hardening on the question of recognition. This was a natural corollary of the rising morale in Pakistan and is precisely why President Bhutto now has to take the whole question to the National Assembly. President Bhutto is, of course, seized of the problem, and has even considered the expensive proposition of holding a referendum on the question He must be able to carry the people with him in any decision that might be taken on this issue.

On the other hand, President Bhutto had strived ceaselessly to prepare the ground for the summit. He has repeatedly spoken of Pakistan's decisive and humiliating defeat at the hands of India to meet the argument of revanchist and hard-line elements in the country, despite the fact that this hurts the people of Pakistan and particularly the Armed Forces. The President had also undertaken visits abroad with the same objective. He has held meetings at Murree with different sections of the Pakistani public - - all as part of his endeavours for peace. But while he does what he can, he cannot go ahead and recognize Bangladesh on his own. It was difficult to accept the Sheikh’s condition of recognition before entering into any dialogue with Pakistan. Principal Secretary categorically rejected this assertion.

Chairman said that India was gratified to know of President Bhutto’s valiant efforts to induct peace into a war-torn sub-continent. Pakistan should rest assured that in this endeavour of President Bhutto, India is completely with him.

Chairman then summed up the discussion as follows:

(1) It was possible to perceive a broad, viable perspective of peace which could be followed by normalization of relations, vacation of occupied territories and the repatriation of the prisoners of war.

(2) The only hurdle to reaching such a peace settlement was the lack of Pakistan’s agreement to the association of Sheikh Mujib on the question of repatriation of POWs.

Chairman said that if the Pakistan side agreed to these conclusions, they could be remitted to the respective leaders.

Mr. Ahmed then enquired that if President Bhutto agreed to a suggestion to hold talks with Sheikh Mujib, would the Sheikh be able to join the delegation here at Simla. Chairman disabused Mr. Ahmed of the persistent Pakistani impression that Sheikh Mujib needed but a small hint from India to come running to Simla. He suggested that the question of the Sheikh’s association had to be approached jointly. It was a small obstacle that could be crossed, but because of this problem the two sides should not throw away the possibility of discussion and agreement on more vital issues. Shall the talks founder (flounder) on the mere question of the presence or absence of Sheikh Mujib?

Mr. Ahmed reiterated the Pakistan position that the summit must result in visible progress on the questions of POW repatriation and troop withdrawals. Without such movement President Bhutto would not be able to place any other agreement that might be reached at the Summit talks before the people of Pakistan. Was the Indian side suggesting even a tentative agreement on these issues?

Principal Secretary assured Mr. Ahmed that India was sensitive to Pakistan’s position. Chairman added that India would not do any thing that would be derogatory, or cause embarrassment, to the President.

The meeting adjourned with the understanding that the two delegations would report to their leaders and that another session would be held at 10 A.M. the following day. It was also agreed to issue a joint statement to the press indicating that the discussions were continuing satisfactorily as this would discourage harmful speculation.

C. Joint Statement issued after the firsts meeting between the Indian and Pakistani delegations.

Simla, June 28, 1972.

The summit talks between India and Pakistan began at 5 p.m. in Simla today. At the opening session the Prime Minister of India extended a warm welcome to the President of Pakistan and his delegation and expressed the hope that the talks would mark a new beginning in the relations between the two countries. The President of Pakistan thanked the PRIME MINISTER for her words of welcome and hospitality extended to his delegation and reciprocated her sentiments.

The Prime Minister and the President of Pakistan than met separately in a restricted session. They nominated their respective delegations to commence discussions on the agenda finalized at Rawalpindi on April 29, at the conclusion of the emissary level talks.

The delegation headed by Shri D.P. Dhar and Mr. Aziz Ahmed began their discussions at 7 p.m. the talks were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere and continued for two hours. It was decided that the two delegations would report to their respective leaders and resume their discussions on Thursday, 29th June at 10 a.m.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed, leader of Pakistan delegation, referred to the Indian draft on elements for durable peace submitted at the Emissary-level discussions at Murree. He recalled the two comments he had then made on this document, namely that any such statement should be compact, simple and in accordance with common international usage, and secondly that it should contain an effective machinery for peaceful settlement of disputes. Shri D.P. Dhar reminded Mr. Ahmed that he had then expressed full agreement to the first comment but had reserved his comments on the second at a later stage.

Mr. Ahmed said that the most important consideration for them in devising the language of any agreed understanding is that their President should be able to sell it to the people of Pakistan. Along with the question of recognition of Bangladesh, any understanding reached with India would have to be ratified by the National Assembly. Mr. Aziz Ahmed then referred to the joint declaration issued by U.S.A. and U.S.S.R. and said that they felt that this declaration contained formulations which could guide us in evolving an understanding. They had prepared a draft on this model (Annexure A) which he would like to submit with the following comments:

Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that this draft understanding did not include the last two points of the draft of elements on durable peace submitted by the Indian Delegation at Murree talks (These concerned the inviolability of the frontier or boundaries and preventing subversion in each other’s territory), as they felt that these were covered by other relevant provisions.

Shri D.P. Dhar said that we were not wedded to any particular terminology or expressions, nor prisoners of any captions or labels. We were, however, convinced that any agreed formulation should firstly be in conformity with the existing situation, and secondly capable of implementation, thus paving the way for future relations between the two countries. To this extent the U.S.A./U.S.S.R. declaration does not contain principles which can be incorporated in an understanding between India and Pakistan. However, he said that he was happy that we were moving in a positive direction and promised to study the document given by the Pakistani delegation most carefully.

Shri D.P. Dhar also expressed his doubts concerning the inclusion of machinery for peaceful settlement of disputes, as it had implications of arbitration, mediation, etc. He felt that the world was fast moving towards bilateralism, as the USA/USSR declaration itself indicated. Therefore there was no need for us to look towards any outside agency or country or forum for settling our disputes or differences of opinion. Moreover, self-executing machinery and similar expressions were products of past suspicions and mistrust. It is our hope that in the altered circumstances we would be able to settle our disputes bilaterally.
However, Shri Dhar said he would like to reserve his comments on this provision and had made the above observations only as he had left India’s position on this subject unclear at Murree. Shri Dhar also said that the seven elements of peace submitted by the Indian Delegation at Murree, though unexceptionable, could be extended to cover more problems or facts which may need support.
And therefore we would not like to be rigid on these principles.

Shri D.P. Dhar then mentioned that he had not formally brought out the question of Kashmir which had been the sources of conflict and tension between our two countries although he had mentioned it in private to the leader of Pakistan Delegation as also to the President of Pakistan.

Mr. Ahmed tried to defend their concept of machinery for the settlement of international disputes by saying that this is a necessary and reasonable formulation which provides for peaceful settlement of our disputes. It is not born of any mistrust but is being suggested with a view to any eventualities that may arise in future. He further said that the people of Pakistan were expecting a provision of such a machinery in any understanding with India, as they would otherwise feel that President Bhutto had been pressurized into singing a peace settlement due to the Pakistani prisoners of war in India, Indian occupation of Pakistani territories and the fact that India’s military resources are five times bigger than those of Pakistan. He also said that they would discuss Kashmir separately if that was also to be made a condition of peace.

Mr. Ahmed again referred to the internal pressures on President Bhutto and underlined the absolute necessity of reaching a settlement acceptable to the people of Pakistan.

With reference to the internal pressure on President Bhutto, Shri Dhar said that in the interests of peace and friendship for our future generations, one had to take certain calculated risks. He also said that in enunciating any elements of peace we have to take care that they do not contain any agreements or formulations which were never kept or acted upon in the past. In this context he referred to the Tashkent Declaration which was wholly accepted by India. If an agreed document has to reflect the present situation, it must seek to abjure the right of either party to alter any situation by use of forces. In the past Pakistan had always reserved the right to alter situation by use of force, and under the shadow of the Kashmir issue, it was impossible to decide on various other considerations. Instead of trying to use forces to settle issues, we should let them remain unsettled. When Mr. Ahmed mentioned that we have to take recourse to other peaceful means like arbitration, mediation, judicial settlement etc., Shri Dhar said that as signatories to the U.N. Charter we can always bilaterally decide to settle any dispute by any of these means. He reminded Shri Ahmed that the Kutch issue was similarly referred to a judicial tribunal.

Shri P.N. Haksar said that the U.N. Charter itself mentioned other peaceful means by which international disputes could be settled. Shri Dhar said that it was the Kashmir issue which brought us back to self-executing machinery, arbitration, mediation, etc. and recalled that India had never accepted these in the past. When Ahmed said that this might mean our going back to the 1951 position, Shri Dhar said that he hoped we shall be able to resolve that Kashmir issue also.

Shri P.N. Haksar made the following two points:

(a) that we should not allow ourselves to be influenced by echoes of the past but come with new ideas and new approaches which can help us solve our own problems ourselves, instead of either going to war or involving distant countries into our disputes,

(b) Indian politics has its own compulsions and complications. We consider it our business to manage our obscurantist and hard-core elements. We are similarly hopeful that you will be able to manage yours. But we cannot permit our individual internal compulsions to affect the settlement in favour of either party.

Commenting on this Mr. Ahmed said Pakistan’s compulsions were of a unique nature as his country had faced dismemberment, had 93,000 prisoners of war in India and had it territories occupied by Indian Army. These are not normal compulsions of internal politics but reflected that results of last year’s tragic events. He expressed that the Indian side would appreciate this.

It was then decided to adjourn the meeting so that the Indian delegation could study the draft submitted by the Pakistan delegation. It was also decided that the official delegations shall meet again at 4 p.m. and report to their respective leaders who would be meeting later in the evening.
E.

Summary record of discussion between the official delegations of India and Pakistan.

Simla, June 29, 1972. (5.30 P.M.)

Chairman (D.P. Dhar) stated that the Indian Delegation had prepared a document which calibrated our ideas on durable peace. It also incorporated suggestions from the draft submitted earlier by the Pakistan side on the basic principles that should govern relations between the two countries. Chairman stated that we had called the document a “treaty”, but this did not mean that it had to be labeled as such. The inspiration to term it a treaty, Chairman remarked, had actually come from Pakistan; all the earlier agreements between the two countries had been observed more in their breach than implementation. Mr. Ahmed interjected to say that a less obtrusive designation than a 'treaty' would be required. He, however, said “We do not want to raise eye-brows unnecessarily”. He, however agreed to Chairman’s suggestion that calling any agreement reached between the two sides a 'statement' would be too mild, dull and inappropriate.

Chairman then presented India’s draft treaty “for reconciliation, good neighbourliness and durable peace” between India and Pakistan. (Attached as annexure ‘B’)

After a brief perusal though the document, Mr. Ahmed stated that his initial reaction was that the treaty was worse than even the Tashkent Declaration. It could not possibly go through Pakistan’s legislature. President Bhutto would not even place it before the National Assembly. The treaty implied a rejection and negation of Pakistan's proposals. Mr. Ahmed said that Pakistan had desired an ‘informal’ agreement, couched in simple language of common currency. Any agreement also had to provide for a self-executing machinery for its implementation; this was vital for Pakistan. The Indian document was nothing more than a no-war declaration in its old form which had been rejected 20 years ago. Mr. Ahmed said that he categorically told Chairman at Muree that President Bhutto was not even prepared to discuss a no-war treaty. The Pakistan Government had also considered Chairman’s suggestion that there could be a secret agreement between the two sides on such a no-war declaration, and had decided against it. Moreover, Chairman had then promised that whatever agreement may be reached on the non-use of force would be worded as innocuously as possible. India’s present draft treaty was a very far cry from innocuity. Mr. Ahmed wondered why India was so keen to have Pakistan agree to a no-war declaration. At no time had Pakistan been a threat to India’s security, despite constant propaganda in India that this was so. History has disproved, and recent events have clearly established, that Pakistan can never pose a threat to India. It was India which now had in detention over 90,000 Pakistani prisoners. India was also in occupation of Pakistani territory. There can, therefore, be no doubt as to which country poses the “threat”. On the basis of the document presented by India, Mr. Ahmed asserted, there could be no “meeting ground” between the two sides.

Chairman replied that he had listened to Mr. Ahmed’s observations with considerable dismay. The reference to India being a threat to Pakistan was unfortunate. We thought that the deliberations would be guided by the wise statement of the Pakistan President that it would be futile to determine “who had fired the first shot”. There was, of course, Chairman said, a common belief in India that we had been subjected to unprovoked attacks by Pakistan on several occasions. But we did not wish to go into this controversy as we felt that the task of the officials of both sides was not to apportion blame or credit for past events but rather to devise means of how best we could turn backs on the unfortunate chapter of the past.

Chairman said that Mr. Ahmed’s observations had brought to the fore the principle elements in the present situation - - the apprehension and fear in both countries about each other’s intentions. The Indian document seeks precisely to eliminate this apprehension. It provides for disengagement, balanced reduction of forces, removing the fear of sudden attack, etc. We had gone further and, in abridgement of our sovereignty, had provided for joint inspection teams to supervise the suggested balanced reduction as also the stationing and deployment of the Armed Forced.

Chairman said we had endeavored to make far-reaching commitments instead of mere assertions regarding the maintenance of peace between the two countries. We had gone to the core of the problems in the hope that the Pakistan side would find this approach unexceptionable. For instance, the treaty had sought to remove yet another apprehension on both sides that the unity, solidarity and identity of India and Pakistan were threatened by means that were latent and not open like war.

Moreover, Chairman said, the expressions and words used in the Preamble of the Treaty closely resemble the language of the Pakistani draft. The wording of the other articles was precise and of common usage, thereby meeting Pakistan’s points on this score. It was unfortunate that Pakistan should regard the document as another Tashkent Declaration and condemn it outright. In any case, the tragedy of the Tashkent Declaration was not that its language was the language of surrender but rather one of non-implementation of its provisions. India’s draft treaty was not similar. It was also not a simple no-war declaration. It rather contained the principles enshrined in the UN Character, expounded at Bandung and accepted in most of the recent treaties concluded between Western powers. It did not even remotely smack of a dictated document. Pakistan was not being asked to sign on the “dotted line”.

Chairman then took up Pakistan’s insistence on providing for a self-executing machinery to settle mutual disputes. Why should the two countries, he said, bind their hands to arbitration and mediation in advance. The concept of such a machinery had proved self-defeating in the past. Moreover, the means that this machinery laid down were already embodied in the UN Charter which, as the Chairman had explained in the morning session, could be resorted to by both countries by common agreement. Specifically laying down arbitration, mediation, etc. conveys the impression of continuing distrust and suspicion on both sides.

Chairman suggested that the Pakistan side consider the Indian draft in the spirit in which it had been prepared. It should not be difficult to grasp this spirit. The provisions of the document could, of course be reframed or altered by mutual discussion.

Mr. Ahmed said that he was deeply conscious of his personal failure in conveying to the Indian Delegation the limitations under which the President of Pakistan was operating. Public opinion in Pakistan was very raw, very sensitive. The President was striving ceaselessly to extricate his people from this state of mind. This was a difficult task as very big issues were involved. (Bangladesh recognition, living in peace with a country after last year’s events). Apart from public opinion the President also had his own commitments, he will do nothing which involves a surrender of principles. He did not want another Tashkent Declaration. It was true that the Declaration contained some unexceptionable principles but the people in Pakistan, perhaps illogically and irrationally had never accepted it. The President would have to take this opinion into account. Pakistan was not being difficult, but they would rather do without a settlement than agree to something which could not be sold to their people.

Mr. Ahmed asserted that the two sides were working on false premises. He could not agree to the Indian Document, its format, its elements. This was not the psychological moment. Pakistan merely wanted a briefly worded agreement on principles which could be put across to the people. The Pakistani draft was, therefore, precise and brief. But the Indian side had totally rejected its contents and format, and had instead suggested a treaty. The President could never agree. Mr. Ahmed said he would, nevertheless, place it before the President as an indication of how India’s mind was working.

Chairman asked for a clarification on how the document involved any surrender of principles. Frankly, we did not know the precise areas in which we had
Mr. Ahmed replied that he could not accept the Chairman’s remarks as the basis for discussion. Specifically, however, the following aspects of India’s draft treaty were unacceptable:

(a) it involved a surrender of Pakistan’s right to determine the best way to defend the country by providing for balanced reduction of forces and joint inspection.

(b) There is no provision for a ‘machinery’. Pakistan may not insist on a “self-executing machinery”, after obtaining President Bhutto’s approval, but some such provision was a pre-requisite to any agreement on non-use of forces.

Regarding (a) Chairman said that this provision was incorporated as we felt that it would meet with Pakistan’s approval. If it did not please the Pakistan side, it would be withdrawn. Secondly, we had thought that the provisions of the UN Charter would themselves be adequate to cover the point raised by Mr. Ahmed at (b). Mr. Ahmed replied that the Charter was not enough. What was India’s objection to arbitration or decision by tribunal? Precedents in the context of Indo-Pak relations could be found in the Bagge Award and the Kutch Tribunal, both of which had succeeded in settling disputes. Mr. Ahmed reiterated that the maximum that Pakistan could go was to avoid, with President Bhutto’s approval, a precise definition of the self-executing machinery. But if this minimum position even was not acceptable to India then, Mr. Ahmed confessed, he did not know how to proceed further.

In conclusion, Chairman cautioned against complete despair. He suggested that the Pakistan side co-relate the ideas contained in the Indian and Pakistani drafts and perhaps superimpose our suggestions onto the Pakistani proposals. A formula could well be devised which would prove unexceptionable. We should at least go through these steps before confessing to failure. Mr. Ahmed agreed to do so.

It was decided that the officials’ delegation would resume discussions at 10 A.M. the following day. The two sides also agreed to issue a joint press statement.
ANNEXURE “B” INDIA
29-6-1972

DRAFT TREATY FOR RECONCILIATION, GOOD NEIGHBOURLINESS AND DURABLE PEACE BETWEEN THE REPUBLIC OF INDIA AND THE ISLAMIC REPUBLIC OF PAKISTAN.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA AND THE GOVERNMENT OF PAKISTAN,

DETERMINED to put an end to the conflict and confrontation that have hitherto marred the relations between India and Pakistan and work for the promotion of a friendly and harmonious relationship between the two countries and their peoples with a view to the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent.

CONVINCED of the undesirability of diverting resources from development of defence, and of the need to devote their resources and energies principally to the pressing task of advancing the welfare of their people.

UPHOLDING their firm faith in the principle of peaceful cooperation and co-existence between States, non-interference in each other’s internal affairs and respect for sovereignty, national independence and territorial integrity of each other,

DECLARING their firm resolve to restore normal and peaceful relations between their countries and to work jointly and unceasingly for maintaining a climate of reconciliation and understanding between their peoples,

HAVE AGREED as follows:

ARTICLE I

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan attach supreme importance to maintaining a climate for durable peace and preventing the development of any situation capable of causing exacerbation of their relations.

ARTICLE II

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan affirm their resolve to respect the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of each other and refrain from interfering in each other’s internal affairs.

ARTICLE III

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan regard as totally inadmissible recourse to war for the solution of international problems, and hereby renounce the threat or use of force in their mutual relations. In pursuance of this pledge, they undertake to settle all issues between them bilaterally and exclusively by peaceful means.

ARTICLE IV

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan shall refrain from organizing or encouraging the formation of irregular forces or armed bands including mercenaries or volunteers howsoever named, for incursion into the territory of the other State. They shall not assist by any means activities, whether armed or otherwise, directed towards the overthrow of the lawfully constituted authorities of each other.

ARTICLE V

In order to concentrate their energies on economic and social development and to avoid diversion of resources from development to defence, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agree to a balanced reduction of their defence forces facing each other and of their stationing and deployment in areas mutually specified so as to eliminate the possibilities of a sudden outbreak of hostilities.

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan further agree that joint inspection teams shall be established to ensure effective implementation of agreements entered into pursuant to this Article. The joint inspection teams will submit their reports from time to time to the two Governments.

Both sides agree to enter into a Protocol for the implementation of this Article, which shall be an integral part of this Treaty.

ARTICLE VI

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agree that in order to create and maintain a climate of peace, friendship and understanding between the peoples of the two countries, it is essential that all hostile propaganda directed against each other shall cease. They further agree that both countries shall actively encourage the dissemination of information to promote the development of friendly relations and cooperation in various fields between the two countries.

ARTICLE VII

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan undertake to identify and develop areas of cooperation and common interest between their two peoples. In order to achieve this objective, they shall establish joint commissions or other joint bodies so that areas of cooperation may develop on a firm and long-term basis for mutual benefit. For this purpose, both sides agree to enter into Protocols which shall be integral parts of this Treaty.

ARTICLE VIII

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan regard commercial, economic and cultural ties as important and essential elements in the strengthening of bilateral relations. They agree to promote the growth of such ties.

ARTICLE IX

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agree to facilities visits of nationals of one country to the other through mutually agreed routes for personal, commercial, religious, cultural and other reasons.

ARTICLE X

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agree that with a view to the effective implementation of this Treaty, periodic consultations shall be held between the two countries at appropriate levels.

ARTICLE XI

This Treaty shall enter into forces upon signature. It shall continue to be in force for a period of ten years in the first instance. It shall continue to be in force thereafter until it is terminated by either party by giving to the other six months notice in writing.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the representatives duly authorized by their respective Governments have signed this Treaty in two original texts, each of which is authentic.

DONE on this the ___________ day of _________ one thousand nine hundred and seventy two.

For the Government of India
For the Government of Pakistan

NOTE

As agreed earlier, the question of Jammu and Kashmir will be discussed separately. To complete the text of this Treaty, the Agreement reached at such discussion shall be incorporated in the form of Articles at an appropriate place in this Treaty, and shall constitute an integral part of this Treaty.
PAKISTANI DRAFT
(June 30, 1972)

Agreement on Bilateral Relations between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan are resolved that the two countries put an end to the conflict and confrontation that have hitherto marred their relations and work for the promotion of a friendly and harmonious relationship with a view to the establishment of durable peace in the subcontinent, so that both countries may henceforth devote their resources and energies principally to the pressing task of advancing the welfare of their peoples.

In order to achieve their objective, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan have agreed as follows:

1. The two Governments reaffirm the universal and unconditional validity of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations as the basis of relations between the two countries, and declare that the breach of these principles cannot be justified in any circumstances whatsoever.

2. The two Governments shall in their bilateral relations adhere to the principles set out in the Declaration on the strengthening of International Security adopted by the United Nations General Assembly on 16 December, 1970, and which was accepted by both India and Pakistan. In accordance with the Declaration they reaffirm that they will:

   (i) respect each other’s national unity, territorial integrity, political independence and sovereign equality;

   (ii) refrain from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of each other;

   (iii) not interfere in any manner whatsoever in each other’s internal affairs; and

   (iv) fulfill in good faith the obligations assumed by them under the United Nations Charter.

3. Any dispute between India and Pakistan or any situation the continuance of which is likely to endanger peace between them will be settled by peaceful means such as negotiation, inquiry, mediation, conciliation, or, should these methods prove unavailing, by arbitration or judicial settlement.

4. In order to concentrate their energies on economic and social development, the two Governments will, as far as possible, avoid diversion of their resources from development needs to defence purposes, keeping in view the principle of equal security.
5. Hostile propaganda directed against each other shall cease. Both countries will encourage the dissemination of such information as would promote the development of friendly relations between them.

6. The two Governments will progressively normalize their relations step by step:
   i. Resuming communications, postal, telegraphic, sea, land and air links, including over flights, in accordance with bilateral agreements entered into by the two Governments in the past and relevant international Conventions and Agreements.
   b. Opening of border posts.
   c. Providing adequate travel facilities to the nationals of the other country.
   d. Resumption of trade and cooperation in economic and other agreed fields as far as possible; and
   e. Exchanges in the fields of science and culture.

In this connection teams of experts from the two countries will meet from time to time to work out the necessary details.

7. This Agreement will be subject to ratification by both countries and will come into forces with effect from the date on which the instruments of ratification are exchange. The President of Pakistan had declared that this Agreement will require ratification by the National Assembly of Pakistan.

In the meantime, both Governments will take immediate steps to implement Resolution No. 307 (1971) of the United Nations Security Council by –
   (i) withdrawing all armed forces to their respective territories and to positions which fully respect the Cease Fire Line in Jammu and Kashmir supervised by the United Nations Military Observers Group in India and Pakistan; and
   (ii) repatriating all prisoners of war and civilian internees in each other’s custody in conformity with the Geneva Conventions of 1949.

Also, the two Governments will resume diplomatic relations as from an agreed date.

Draft Joint Statement by the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India on Basic Principles of Relations between India and Pakistan.

The President and the Prime Minister are resolved that India and Pakistan put an end to the conflict and confrontation that have hitherto marred their relations and work for the promotion a friendly and harmonious relationship with a view to the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent so that both countries may henceforth devote their resources and energies principally to the pressing task of advancing the welfare of their peoples.

In order to achieve this objective the President and the Prime Minister are agreed that in their bilateral relations India and Pakistan will adhere to the principles set out in the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security adopted by the United Nations on the 16th December, 1970. more specifically those principles which bear on renunciation of thereat or use of forces, respect for territorial integrity, non-interference in each other's internal affairs, their sovereign equality and political independence, and the principles that states shall fulfill in good faith the obligations assumed by them in accordance with the Charter.

The President and the Prime Minister also agree, as required by the same Declaration, that any disputes between India and Pakistan or any situation the continuance of which is likely to endanger peace in the sub-continent will be settled bilaterally and by peaceful means, as set out in the Annexure to this statement, in such a manner that international peace and security and justice are not endangered.

Peaceful Methods for the settlement of India – Pakistan Disputes

The President and the Prime Minister of India agree that any dispute between the two countries or any situation the continuation of which is likely to endanger peace in the sub-continent will be settled through bilateral negotiations or mediation and, should these methods fail, by arbitration or judicial settlement. To that end, they agree that when other methods prove unavailing, at the request of either Party an arbitral or judicial tribunal, as the case may be, will be set up, one member of which will be nominated by India and one by Pakistan and the third member, who will be the Chairman, may be appointed by mutual agreement or, in the absence of such an agreement, by the Secretary General of the United Nations. They further agree that the award of the tribunal shall be binding on both Governments and shall not be questioned on any ground whatsoever.

G. TOP SECRET

Summary Record of Discussions between the Official Delegations of India and Pakistan.

Simla, June 30, 1972. (3.00 P.M.).

Mr. Ahmed presented a revised draft agreement which he said incorporated some suggestions from India’s draft treaty. Mr. Ahmed asserted that the Pakistan side was motivated by a sincere effort to resolve the major issues and to push the official discussions forward. In their revised draft they had also taken the liberty to include the rest of the items of the agenda for the summit.

On the document itself, attached as Annexure C, Mr. Ahmed had the following comments to make:

(i) Paras 1 & 2 had been adapted from the relevant provisions of the U.N. Charter and the U.N. Declaration of the Strengthening of International Security of 16th December, 1970.

(ii) The Indian side would observe that as a concession to their position, the Pakistan side had eschewed any reference to a self-executing machinery in Para 3.

(iii) Para 4 was a redraft of the principle calling for the diversion of resources from defence to development in the agreed general principles finalized by the Emissaries at Murree.

(iv) Paragraph 7 provided for the agreement’s ratification by Pakistan’s National Assembly for the implementation of its first half, while the remaining portion could be implemented straight away.

In his reply, Principal Secretary stated that India recognized the efforts that have gone into the preparation of the draft. But as Pakistan had covered a wider field, the Indian side would have to give it serious consideration. Principal Secretary however mentioned the following initial reactions:-

(1) We had our doubts about Para 3.
Para 6 (i) presented a slightly new angle. We would therefore like Mr. Ahmed to elaborate on it. The other sub items of Para 6 presented no serious problem.

The Indian side would have to examine the wording of the concluding paragraph 7. There was no objection in principle, however.

Principal Secretary also commented on the references to the U.N. Resolutions passed last year and stated that even then India had expressed certain reservations in the matter.

There was some discussion on the Pakistani suggestion that over-flights, communications etc. be restored “according to bilateral agreements”. Shri Haksar stated that while these items could be covered by existing agreements, these agreements may require some revision and amendments. Mr. Ahmed replied that he was not particular, one way or the other. He then referred to Chairman’s reference the previous evening to a mutual agreement on withdrawing the case on over flights presently being debated by the ICJ. He enquired whether this was Chairman’s personal suggestion or whether the Indian side had a definite proposal to make in this regard. Principle Secretary replied that India did consider it odd that litigation on a question arising out of the hijacking incident last year should continue in today’s changed context. Mr. Ahmed promised to consult President Bhutto as to what best could be done in the matter.

Principal Secretary then asked for clarification on the term “equal security” contained in Para 4 of Pakistan’s draft. Mr. Ahmed replied that this term was taken from the agreement recently entered into between the United States and the Soviet Union and merely meant that the two countries should feel equally secure in respect to the intentions of the other. It did not imply any equality in armaments between the two countries. In any case such equality was beyond Pakistan’s capacity. Pakistan only wanted to maintain sufficient armaments that could equip a deterrent force necessary for the country’s security. What would constitute this deterrent forces will have to be determined by the technical and military experts; its size would also be dictated by the availability of resources.

Principal Secretary referred to the mention by Mr. Ahmed of the disparities between India and Pakistan. We would like to make some observations on the subject. He requested Secretary to Prime Minister, Shri P.N.Dhar, to set out this view point.

Shri Dhar clarified that he would speak as a professional economist with a bias in favour of productive investment. On this basis, he said, there could be no meaningful comparison between India and Pakistan, in terms of absolute figures.
because of the differences in the size of their respective economies. Comparison would be rational, however, on the basis of percentages of the respective national incomes. On this basis, India spends 3.6% of her national income on defence as against 9% by Pakistan. Comparison could also be made on the basis of budget figures. They reveal that while India spends a total of 12% of her national budget on defence, the corresponding percentage in the case of Pakistan comes to 33%. Despite the comparatively low figures of expenditure on defence in India, we find that our economy cannot really bear this burden. We have a compulsion to reduce military expenditure especially in terms of economic commitments to the people. We feel that, correspondingly, the strains on Pakistan's economy must be greater. This state of affairs has caused development in both countries to remain stunted. Evidence of this can be found in the rate of savings in both India and Pakistan which have, since 1947, remained of the order of 5%.

The discussion then turned to the question of Kashmir. Principal Secretary requested the Pakistan side to favour us with their preliminary views on the subject. Mr. Ahmed replied that he had “very little to say”. Pakistan, of course, would welcome an early settlement of the dispute; but they could not possibly consider any solution as long as there is no progress on the questions of POW repatriation and troop withdrawals. At the moment, there is no equality in the negotiating positions of the two sides. Any solution reached at the moment would convince the Pakistani people that it had been extorted under pressure. Principal Secretary enquired whether Pakistan contemplated any formula which could assist the ultimate solution of Kashmir dispute. Mr. Ahmed replied that it would be unwise to make suggestions in this regard for the present. He has already clarified that Pakistan could not force a settlement of the issue. It cannot afford to attack India. It also had severe economic compulsions. It was only concerned with striking a balance between peace and development on the one hand and national security on the other. Pakistan ardently desires peace. However, Mr. Ahmed said, he could not enter into a discussion on Kashmir. Perhaps, the leaders of the two sides may discuss the issue but it would not be worthwhile to include any reference on Kashmir in the present draft agreement. The leaders may wish to make a reference to this issue in a separate communiqué although substantive negotiations would have to await a more propitious juncture, say, six months or a year. The question of timing was important.

Principal Secretary said that he had a few observations to make. We had deliberately not called into witness the past history of our relations. Both sides had their own respective “mythologies”. What was now required was to work for durable peace. Secondly, India believes that her own domestic compulsions would also have to be reckoned with in any consideration of the question of peace in the area. If we accept the Pakistani draft our people would feel that the sourest factor of our relations had not even been referred to and no hope or direction had been indicated as to how the problem could be resolved. Principal Secretary requested Mr. Ahmed to consider the reasonableness of our position and to take into account the factors mentioned by him.

Mr. Ahmed stated that Pakistan had already made several compromises. For the first time they were singing a document of peace. Pakistan was genuinely interested in peace as it felt that confrontation had only served to involve other powers in the affairs of the sub-continent. Last year’s events have increased the chances of such third country intervention. Perhaps India, which was a big power, can withstand external pressures. Pakistan could not prevent foreign encroachment. Therefore Pakistan had agreed to a written document of peace with India, pledged to turn away from confrontation and had provided alternative means for settling disputes. Having done this, why was it necessary to settle the Kashmir question today; especially when Pakistan did not enjoy equality in negotiations? Let us wait for few more months, perhaps a year. Future summits could tackle this question.

Principal Secretary said that India understand the structure of the argument put forward by Pakistan. He wondered whether there was any way of persuading Pakistan to accept that the discussions were being conducted only on one basis — that of equality. We earnestly desire a solution to this problem. India’s socio-political structure is based on peace. We would like to remove the endless curse of conflicts on the question of Kashmir. There are differences in our positions on this question. While we believe that Jammu and Kashmir is a part and parcel of India, as stated in our Constitution, President Bhutto keeps calling for a solution through self-determination. We frankly do not understand what this means. We do not accept the concept of self-determination for integral parts of a country. We would, however, like to find some solution. For this, Principal Secretary said, it would be useful to know the parameters within which Pakistan envisaged a solution to the question of Jammu & Kashmir. Pakistan should take us into confidence even if we do not come to any agreement.

Mr. Ahmed did not think that the two sides should proceed with this debate as, he felt, discussion would neither be conducive to a settlement nor to the maintenance of a friendly and helpful atmosphere. The views expressed by the leader of the Indian delegation were very controversial.

Foreign Secretary enquired as to how Pakistan contemplated further discussions. He referred to Mr. Ahmed’s statement that the two sides might wait for a year before tackling the question of Kashmir. After then what? Foreign Secretary reiterated that for India’s Parliament and people there could be no durable peace unless and until there was a solution on Kashmir. Mr. Ahmed replied that since the Indian side insisted on knowing Pakistan’s position on Kashmir, he would in very general terms summarise it. Pakistan believed in the right of self-determination for the Kashmiris. This right has not been conferred on the Kashmiri people by Pakistan. It could not be taken away from them. It was also recognized by the United Nations and, initially accepted by India. Secondly, Pakistan felt that any settlement had to be in accordance with the wishes of the people of the State of Jammu & Kashmir, ascertained as impartially as possible, perhaps through a plebiscite.

Principal Secretary enquired whether the Pakistani position as enumerated above, was non-negotiable, whatever the form of the document to be signed by the two sides. Mr. Ahmed reiterated his suggestion that a reference to Kashmir could find place in a separate communiqué, where it could be stated that the matter would be taken up at subsequent meetings. He replied in the negative to Principal Secretary query whether there was any flexibility in this position. Principal Secretary reiterated that for India the question of Kashmir was very important and if there was no understanding, a new situation would be created which would require serious consideration.

The two sides tentatively agreed to meet at 10 a.m. the following day. It was also decided that no joint statement need be issued to the press although the press could be verbally told that discussions were continuing on all items of the agenda. Unfair speculation, which alleged that the Prime Minister was not available for a meeting with President Bhutto should also scotched.

H. Record of meeting between the Prime Minister and the Indian Delegation (Foreign Minister, Principal Secretary to P.M. Foreign Secretary, and Secretary (East)) and President of Pakistan and the Pakistan Delegation (Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Secretary General, Mr. Rafi Raza, Special Assistant, and Mr. Iftikhar Ali, Foreign Secretary) held at 3.45 P.M. on July 1, 1972, at Himachal Secretariat.

Simla, July 1, 1972.

President: We have exchanged three drafts. We received that latest Indian draft (Enclosure A) – at least I received it – at 3.15 P.M. today. We have prepared something (Enclosure B) on the basis of the Indian draft. Whatever are our apprehensions, we can discuss them frankly and resolve them if we can.

Foreign Minister, referring to Article 5 of the Pakistan draft (regarding repatriation and withdrawals), enquired whether there had been discussion between the official delegations on this matter. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that there had been only a very preliminary discussions. Foreign Secretary pointed out that we had made reservations on the contents of this Article in the earlier Pakistani draft.

President Bhutto, referring to Para 5(i) of the draft (Enclosure B), said that he had told P.M. yesterday that as far as U.N. observers are concerned, if that is our view, we need not deal with them.

P.M. Our point is that the ceasefire line has no validity. It did not keep the peace.

President: If one’s attitude is to use force, consequences will follow, whether observers are there or not. On the other hand, if we have negotiations, steps will be taken following the negotiations. There will be a changed outlook on the problem. Shall we start with the beginning of the draft?

P.M. The main problem is in regard to Article 5.

President: Article I is identical in both your and our drafts. The word “both shall” should be added in Article 1(ii).

P.M. We do not see any need in Article 1(vi) for a reference to the Declaration on the strengthening of International Security.

F. M. The U.N. Charter has already been referred to earlier in Article 1(iv). What is the need for adding the Declaration?
F.S. We had mentioned “bilateral”. This has been omitted.

President: We have deleted in our draft any reference to a self-executing machinery because of your sensitiveness. The U.N. Charter does not bring in any compulsions.

F.M Do we want to look to our Heads of Government or to the U.N?

President: The Declaration provides a framework for negotiations provided in the Charter, for example, good offices. We will go back to this point later.

F.S. said that the Declaration mentions so many things and enquired whether if was necessary to bring in the Agreement.

President: There is a whole history behind the proposal for a No War Pact. It conjures up in us a sense of capitulation. The present draft is a major departure. It gives us an opportunity to cover up this idea multilaterally. As we have both agreed to the Declaration, its mention will bring about a swing in our public opinion. Entirely from the practical point of view, it helps us. I do not see why you should object. It strengthens qualitatively our bilateral commitment.

F.M.: We do not want to go over the past but wish to start with a clean slate. If we bring in the whole concept of U.N. Resolutions, we are back again to our original positions. There should be a break with the past. We have not gone to the U.N. except over Kashmir. (The President interrupted “and Junagarh”). To commit ourselves again to the U.N. would be difficult for us to explain to our people.

President: The Declaration has no reference to Kashmir. It is not a question of our going to the U.N. I am cynical about the U.N. this reference is not for the purpose of our taking this matter again to the U.N.

F.M.: The Declaration contains a lot of vague generalities.

P.M.: it does not add anything but weakens the bilateral approach. We have confined our references only to such an approach.

President: Article 1(iv) and 1(vi) will be discussed again.

P.M.: Your Article 5(i) and (ii) are not at all acceptable to us. This was the bone of contention in earlier Pakistani draft also. Our point of view has been clearly stated.

F.S.: said that repatriation and withdrawal have to be part of durable peace and can take place only after durable peace has been established.

President: The rationale of our Agreement for peaceful settlement would be knocked out without these two provisions and we would appear to be negotiating under duress.

F.S. said that we regard the solution of the question of Jammu & Kashmir as important for the establishment of durable peace. That is why we have introduced our Article 5 (Enclosure A).

F.M. We understand you have difficulty in solving the question of Jammu & Kashmir straightway.

President: it would make it more difficult to solve this problem if you hold on to P.O.Ws and to the captured territories. I have been saying in Pakistan how can we fight for the rights of Kashmiris? I have prepared public opinion for the days ahead. But we cannot do it under compulsion. We did not express any views on the statements issued by Sheikh Abdullah and Afzal Baig. For us war is not on the cards; there is a vast difference between India and Pakistan as it stands today.

P.M. As regards P.O.Ws there is firstly our own difficulty, what we feel about durable peace. Secondly, there is the attitude of Bangladesh, which we discussed last evening. We have a basic difference: we feel that we have been the victims of aggression several times. For us to sort out everything without sorting out the basic problems would be difficult. Our people would feel that we would be jeopardizing our national interest thereby. Just as you have to prepare your people, this is the kind of argument that comes up here.

President: You can tell your Lok Sabha that there is a complete change in our relations.

P.M. We have no intention of keeping the P.O.Ws indefinitely.

F.S. said it is important for us to obtain Parliamentary approval to the solution of the Kashmir problem.

Principal Secretary to the PM: The officials have met and we have exchanged ideas. We feel that we are on the eve of a new kind of relationship. Discussions at our level cold not produce results on the question of P.O.Ws. Mr. Aziz Ahmed had suggested that we have the Bangladesh Government’s agreement on this subject in our pocket. That is not so. We are leaving some difficult question behind, not because we have forgotten about them but for discussion at future meetings. Hence we have listed them in Article 5. We are not using them as pressure points but there is need to discuss them further in order to solve them. Confidence would have grown by the time we meet next; other obstacles would have been removed. There is agreement about good neighbourliness and to solve problems peacefully.
P.M.: Our Foreign Minister was asked by our people to demand more land, a corridor, to get reparations etc. There is considerable feeling in our political circles on these matters. We are holding them back as the price for peace. I do not know what reactions there would be in our parliament. There is considerable feeling that Kashmir should figure in our agreement.

President: You have great things for your country. It would be ungracious for your people to ask you for more.

Mr. Aziz: In Murree, Shri D.P. Dhar said that he was speaking with the Prime Minister’s full authority. He said that India did not want to keep the P.O.Ws a day longer than necessary but that there should be some understanding, a document-- in however innocuous a language -- that Pakistan would have peaceful relations with India. Secondly, he said that Sheikh Mujibur Rehman would be associated with the negotiations in some form. We have now produced a document. Talks broke down earlier on the question of machinery for solving disputes. We have now given that up also. The present draft shows that we have turned a new leaf to live in peace. I was not given to understand that a settlement of the Kashmir question is a condition precedent. Any discussion on Kashmir, as long as the P.O.Ws remain, would be taken in Pakistan as having been held under duress.

F.M.: That would depend on the context of the agreement.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We have agreed to everything except Kashmir.

President: I have, in a way, agreed to Kashmir being resolved by peaceful means within the framework of the U.N. Charter, peacefully between us. No further problem remains. Let us therefore agree about the P.O.Ws.

F.M.: Our attitude is not to stall on this question but there is the involvement of Bangladesh in it.

President: It would be a great tragedy if the whole thing were to hinge on this.

P.M.: We have recognized Bangladesh. Prisoners of war surrendered to the Joint Command. We are bound by this. I told Sheikh Mujibur Rehman in Dacca that the repatriation of P.O.Ws would be with his concurrence.

President: If Sheikh Mujibur Rehman and I could meet, we could solve this. But if he starts war crimes trials, we would reach a point of no return and it would make my task impossible. There would then be trials of Bengalis in Pakistan also. I hope I meet Sheikh Mujibur Rehman this month.

F.S. suggested that this matter could be left over till then.
President: I would then not be able to carry out the agreement. If I sign the agreement, I am bound to implement it. Is the agreement to flounder on Sheikh Mujib’s caprice?

P.M. It is not Sheikh Mujib’s caprice; he has his public opinion.

Principal Secretary to the PM: Shri D.P. Dhar and we felt that there is a feeling of forward movement. It is not we who have asked Sheikh Mujib not to do something; on the contrary. The agreement may change the situation.

President: I have respect for Sheikh Mujib.

F.M.: Sheikh Mujib has mentioned to us that he is beholden to you.

President: It is going to be counter-productive for Sheikh Mujib also.

F.S. said that if we have durable peace, it may be easier for Sheikh Mujib. In this agreement there is no settlement on Kashmir. That is why we have suggested Article 5.

P.M.: I do not know Sheikh Mujib very well. I met him alone for about 10 minutes in New Delhi, for about 30 minutes in Calcutta and for an hour in Dacca. There has been a hardening of attitude in Dacca. The impression that we have been given is that they lay great importance on their recognition. If recognition comes, they may then be softer on other things.

President: I intend taking up this matter in August.

P.M.: This is a question between you and Bangladesh. In their private talks, Bangladesh leaders say that they do not stand in need of recognition. We have never suggested to them that they should not talk to you. We have not given any advice to them; this is a matter between them and you.

P.M.: The people in Bangladesh are extraordinarily touchy because of their newly acquired independence.

President: It is a great pity that we are stuck like this.

P.M.: Where do we go on from here?

Mr. Aziz: I repeat what I suggested to Shri. D. P. Dhar that people in Pakistan would feel that negotiations had been held under duress if P.O.Ws and captured territories are not returned. Hence we had suggested that if a start could be made of a few P.O.Ws being returned before the Summit Meeting, it would make a very big impact. Could something similar be done now and a start is made? The President would be asked questions on this point on his return to Pakistan. Repatriation of P.O.Ws is necessary under the Geneva Conventions.
F.M.: That is why we have made our formulations in our draft.

Aziz Ahmed: The Agreement has to be ratified by the National Assembly according to the assurances given by the President. We do not know whether the Agreement in its present form would be ratified.

President: As regards the Kashmir dispute, in the foreseeable future an agreement will emerge. It will evolve into a settlement. Let there be a line of peace, let people come and go. Let us not fight over it.

F.S. said that it would be very difficult to explain to our people that there has been no settlement on Kashmir.

F.M.: The debates on the Tashkent Agreement in our Parliament should be studied to see the feelings on this subject.

P.M.: Our Prime Minister Shastri paid with his life over the Tashkent Agreement. He would have had a very difficult time if he had come back.

F.M.: Shastriji received a great set back when he talked to his family after singing the Tashkent Agreement. There was a great deal of suspicion in both our countries.

F.S. said that we have made a gesture by sending back 199 seriously sick and wounded Prisoners of War to Pakistan against 24 sent by Pakistan to India.

P.M.: Why this has become a very complicated problem is because we took certain unilateral initiatives in 1965, for example, regarding seized cargoes, but there was no response. I have been charged with giving up various claims (against Pakistan). I sent an innocent message to President Ayub on the occasion of the inauguration of Mangla Dam when I was flying over Pakistan. There was criticism in our Parliament for a month over this message.

President: Your contention is that Pakistan committed aggression. Now there is a commitment on our part that there will be no more aggressions. You have got what you had wanted.

F.M.: We claim the whole of Jammu and Kashmir though we have no intention of going to war over it.

P.M.: There was criticism even against our declaration of cease-fire, which we did only on the compulsion of peace.

President: My back is to the wall; I cannot make any more concessions.

F.S. said that if in Jammu & Kashmir the line of actual control could be made into a line of peace, other steps could follow.
President: Isn’t this document (Enclosure B) enough?

F.S. said that we cannot afford to go on fighting. During the next three to six months, we can go ahead rapidly to solve our mutual problems.

President: In Trieste they came to an agreement without either side giving up their principles. We can come closer; I cannot say on timing but we shall proceed as quickly as possible.

Aziz Ahmed: Is it your stand that there can be no withdrawal until a Kashmir settlement?

F.M.: That is an oversimplification. Our formulation is in Article 5 of our draft.

Aziz Ahmed: When will troop withdrawals start?

P.M.: In a way they have already started with the seriously sick and wounded Prisoners of War. This first session of our meetings has cleared some ground. We shall move forward hereafter.

F.M.: Your ratification of the agreement itself will take one-and-a-half months.

President: Ratification will be done by the end of August. But we would find great difficulty in securing ratification.

F.M.: Public opinion is the same in both countries. We have to face it.

P.M.: I said to the President last evening that the Opposition in our Parliament was kinder to me when I was in a minority than now.

President: I am keen on an agreement which I can carry back with me.

F.M.: With peace assured between us, you will be in an ideal position to carry on your economic program.

President: I cannot use force.

F.M.: You have shown great gifts of political handling in Pakistan.

With this the meeting came to an end.

INDIAN DRAFT

1-7-1972

Agreement on Bilateral Relations between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan.

1. The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan are resolved that the two countries put an end to the conflict and confrontation that have hitherto marred their relations and work for the promotion of a friendly and harmonious relationship and the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent, so that both countries may henceforth devote their resources and energies to the pressing task of advancing the welfare of their people.

In order to achieve this objective, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan have agreed as follows:

(i) That the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations shall govern the relations between the two countries;

(ii) That the two countries will not use forces for the settlement of any differences between them and will resolve them exclusively (by peaceful means) through bilateral negotiations or by any other peaceful means mutually agreed upon between them. Pending the final settlement of any of the problems between the two countries, neither side shall unilaterally alter the situation and shall prevent the organization, assistance or encouragement of all acts detrimental to the maintenance of peaceful and harmonious relations;

(iii) That the pre-requisite for reconciliation, good neighbourliness and durable peace between them is a commitment by both the countries to peaceful co-existence, respect for each other’s territorial integrity and sovereignty, non-interference in each other’s internal affairs and cooperation on the basis of equality and mutual benefit.

(iv) That the basic issues and cause of conflict which have bedeviled the relations between the two countries for the last 25 years shall be resolved bilaterally and by peaceful means;

(v) That they shall always respect each other’s national unity, territorial integrity, political independence and sovereign equality;

(vi) That they shall always refrain from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of each other;
2. Hostile propaganda directed against each other shall cease. Both countries will encourage the dissemination of such information as would promote the development of friendly relations between them.

3. In order to progressively restore and normalize relations between the two countries, it was agreed that:

(i) Steps shall be taken to resume communications, postal, telegraphic, sea, land and air links, including over flights.

(ii) Steps shall be taken for the opening of border posts.

(iii) Adequate travel facilities to the nationals of the other country will be provided.

(iv) Trade and cooperation in economic and other agreed fields will be resumed as far as possible.

(v) Exchange in the fields of science and culture will be promoted.

(In the connection) teams of experts from the two countries will meet from time to time to work out the necessary details.

4. This Agreement will be subject to ratification by both countries in accordance with their respective constitutional procedures, and will come into force with effect from the date on which the Instrument of Ratification are exchanged.

5. Both Governments agree that their respective Heads will meet again at mutually convenient time in the future and that, in the meanwhile, the officials of the two sides will meet to discuss further the modalities and arrangements for the establishment of durable peace and normalization of relations, including the question of Jammu & Kashmir, repatriation of prisoners of war and civilian internees, withdrawal of all armed forces to their respective territories and the resumption of diplomatic relations.

PAKISTAN’S DELEGATION’S VIEW ON INDIAN DRAFT
[PAKISTAN’S COUNTER DRAFT]

Agreement on Bilateral Relations between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan.

1. The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan are resolved that the two countries put an end to the conflict and confrontation that have hitherto marred their relations and work for the promotion of a friendly and harmonious relationship and the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent, so that both countries may henceforth devote their resource and energies to the pressing task of advancing the welfare of their peoples.

In order to achieve this objective, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan have agreed as follows:

(i) That the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations shall govern the relations between the two countries;

(ii) That the two countries are resolved to settle their differences by peaceful means though bilateral negotiations or by any other peaceful means mutually agreed upon by them. Pending the final settlement of any of the problems between the two countries, neither side shall unilaterally alter the situation and both shall prevent the organization, assistances or encouragement of any acts detrimental to the maintenance of peaceful and harmonious relations;

(iii) That the pre-requisite for reconciliation, good neighbourliness and durable peace between them is a commitment by both the countries to peaceful co-existence, respect for each other’s territorial integrity and sovereignty and non-interference in each other’s internal affairs, on the basis of equality and mutual benefit.

(iv) That the basic issues and causes of conflict which have bedeviled the relations between the two countries for the last 25 years shall be resolved by peaceful means as provided in the U.N. Charter.

(v) That they shall always respect each other’s national unity, territorial integrity, political independence and sovereign equality;

(vi) That, in accordance with the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security adopted by the U.N. General Assembly on 16th December, 1970, they shall refrain from the threat or use of forces against the territorial integrity or political independence of each other in accordance with U.N. Charter.

2. Hostile propaganda directed against each other shall cease. Both countries will encourage the dissemination of such information as would promote the development of friendly relations between them.

3. In order progressively to restore and normalize relations between the two countries step by step, it was agreed that:
   (i) Steps shall be taken to resume communications, postal, telegraphic, sea, land including border posts; and air links, including over-flights.
   (ii) Adequate steps shall be taken to promote travel facilities to the nationals of the other country.
   (iii) Trade and co-operation in economic and other agreed fields will be resumed as far as possible.
   (iv) Exchange in the fields of science and culture will be promoted.

In this connection delegations from the two countries will meet from time to time to work out the necessary details.

4. This Agreement will be subject to ratification by both countries in accordance with their respective constitutional procedures, and will come into force with effect from the date on which the Instruments of Ratification are exchanged.

5. In the meantime, both Governments will take immediate steps to
   (i) withdraw all armed forces to their respective territories and to positions which fully respect the Cease Fire Line in Jammu & Kashmir (Supervised by the United Nations Military Observers Group in India and Pakistan); and
   (ii) repatriate all prisoners of war and civilian internees in each other’s custody in conformity with the Geneva Conventions of 1949.

Also, the two Governments will resume diplomatic relations as from an agreed date.

6. Both Governments agree that their respective Heads will meet again at a mutually convenient time in the future and that, in the meantime, the officials of the two sides will meet to discuss further the modalities and arrangements for the establishment of durable peace and normalizations of relations including the dispute of Jammu & Kashmir.

Simla, the... July, 1972.

The President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India held discussions in Simla from June 28 to July 2, 1972, with a view to usher in an era of reconciliation, good neighbourliness and durable peace between the two countries and peoples. They were assisted in their talks by their Ministerial colleagues. The officials of the two sides held a number of meetings, and explored the possibilities of reaching agreement on the items of the agreed agenda for the Summit.

2. The Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan discussed all major problems affecting the relations between the two countries. They also discussed Jammu & Kashmir. They expressed the hope that a mutually agreed settlement of all outstanding issues would be possible and that the process of reconciliation initiated at this first meeting of the Heads of Government would be continued.

3. The Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan agreed that they would meet again at mutually convenient time in the future. In the meanwhile, the representatives of the two sides will meet to prepare the ground further for the continuing effort of the Heads of Government to establish durable peace, good neighbourly relations and normalization of relations between the two countries.

propaganda directed against each other. Both countries will encourage the dissemination of such information as would promote the development of friendly relations between them.

3. In order progressively to restore and normalize relations between the two countries step by step, it was agreed that:

(i) Steps shall be taken to resume communications, postal, telegraphic, sea, land including border posts, and air links including over-flights.

(ii) Appropriate step shall be taken to promote travel facilities to the nationals of the other country.

(iii) Trade and co-operation in economic and other agreed fields will be resumed as far as possible.

(iv) Exchange in the fields of science and culture will be promoted.

In this connection delegations from the two countries will meet from time to time to work out the necessary details.

4. In order to initiate the process of the establishment of durable peace, both the Governments agree that:

(i) Indian and Pakistan forces shall be withdrawn to their side of the international border.

(ii) In Jammu & Kashmir, the line of control resulting from the cease-fire of December 17, 1971, shall henceforth be respected by both sides, as a line of peace. Neither side shall seek to alter it unilaterally, irrespective of mutual differences and legal interpretations. Both sides further undertake to refrain from the threat or the use of force in violation of this line.

(iii) Minor adjustments of the Line of Peace in Jammu & Kashmir or the rest of the international border considered necessary by both sides to make the border more rational and viable may be made by mutual agreement.

(iv) A joint body composed of an equal number of representatives, nominated by each Government, shall be appointed to establish ground rules and to supervise the effective observance of the Line of Peace and the rest of the border between the two countries. The withdrawals shall commence upon entry into force of this Agreement in accordance with the ground rules evolved by the above-mentioned joint body and shall be completed within a period of 30 days thereof.

5. This Agreement will be subject to ratification by both countries in accordance with their respective constitutional procedures, and will come into force with effect from the date on which the Instruments of Ratification are exchanged.

TOP SECRET

Record of the meeting between the Pakistan Official Delegation (Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Mr. Rafi Raza and Mr. Iftikhar Ali) and the Indian Delegation (Shri P.N. Haksar, Shri T.N. Kaul, Shri S.K. Banerji and Shri P.N. Dhar).

Simla, July 2, 1972. (3.30 P.M.).

Mr. Aziz Ahmed began by saying it would be our last meeting as our draft of the Agreement (Enclosure A*) has not been found acceptable by them. He enquired whether he should give their (?) reasons for this. Shri Haksar said that depended upon Mr. Aziz Ahmed. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that in our draft, we had gone back: Pakistan cannot accept that the ceasefire line had ceased to exist. This is the main reason for not accepting the Indian draft. He suggested that we could perhaps give thought about a Joint Communiqué.

2. Shri Haksar said that the Joint Communiqué would be no problem. However, he said that to dismiss our draft Agreement on this ground was a severe disappointment. We have proposed in it withdrawal all along the border.

* Not available. Perhaps it is reference to Document I above which was also handed over to the Pakistani side on 2nd July.
For the sake of a word, namely, ‘ceasefire line’, it is a great disappointment to us that the draft Agreement has been found unacceptable.

3. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that the President had stated that Pakistan respected the U.N. Resolution. He had referred to the ceasefire line as the line of peace.

4. Shri Haksar said that what troubled him was not the failure to accept our draft but the reasoning that went behind it. We are proposing withdrawal all along the borders. In Kashmir, we are not asking Pakistan to give up her position on Jammu & Kashmir. We are finding a formula for total withdrawal; yet our proposal has been rejected.

5. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that there are two objections to the Indian draft:
   (i) In J&K there would be no withdrawal;
   (ii) There would be no repatriation of Prisoners of War until the Kashmir question is settled.

Pakistan wanted implementation of the U.N. Resolutions.

6. Shri Haksar said he contradicted both these points categorically. The Pakistan side wanted to thrust the U.N. Resolution down our throat. He referred to the reservations which our F.M. had made on the Resolution which, he added, the Pakistani Foreign Minister had torn up and had walked out of the Security Council.

7. Shri Haksar said that the Pakistani side wanted everything; they are not satisfied with any partial solution. They are not accepting withdrawal because the word ‘ceasefire line’ – which has been sanctified by the U.N. – has not been used.

8. Yesterday the Pakistani side had wanted both withdrawal and repatriation. We are not responsible for Pakistan tying their hands on the recognition question. Our assurances are sincere. We will make our efforts with the Bangladesh Government in this respect. In the meanwhile, he expressed the hope that Pakistan would also make their efforts.

9. Shri Haksar added that our Armies are facing each other. President Bhutto had stated publicly that our troops are occupying two Tehsils in Pakistan. We are ready to move back from them. Yet the Pakistan side is pinning their hopes on the U.N.

10. Mr. Aziz Ahmed while regretting the failure to reach agreement said that there is a fear of outside intervention in the affairs of the sub-continent. Shri Haksar strongly repudiated this so far as India was concerned and said that no outside power will ever be allowed to intervene in India.
11. Shri Haksar repeated that he greatly regretted Mr. Aziz Ahmed’s statement that our proposal for withdrawal is a setback.

12. Thereafter, the two Delegations discussed the question of an agreed Joint Communiqué. The Indian draft (Enclosure B*) was handed over the Pakistan Delegation. The Pakistan Delegation said that their draft would be given to the Indian Delegation before tonight’s Dinner by President Bhutto.

M. Farewell Message of President Bhutto to the Indian Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.

Madam Prime Minister,

On behalf of my Delegation and on my own behalf I convey to Your Excellency, to your Government and the people of India our sincere thanks for the great hospitality extended to us during our stay in Simla. The arrangements left nothing to be desired. The Agreement we signed last night represent a breakthrough in our relations. I return home with firm conviction that we can embark on a new era of peace. If we implement the Agreement with sincerity and goodwill, we can give to our people the peace with honour and progress which we have not found for so long. Today we have that opportunity. I have no doubt that we can set the foundation of a durable peace which we owe to our people. As I leave India I wish to convey to the people of India my good wishes for their happiness and prosperity. We have no doubt that under your judicious leadership they will prosper and progress.

Another message issued by President Z.A. Bhutto before boarding the Helicopter to the people of Simla and Pakistani Prisoners of War and internees in India.

I would like to thank the people of Simla for their hospitality during our stay at this beautiful hill resort. But, above all, I wish to express my thanks to them for their patience and forbearance in the face of security cordons, which though necessary, caused inconvenience and marred their holidays. But everyone accepted these difficulties, for which my delegation and I are thankful.

I cannot but take this opportunity also to address a few words to the tens of thousands of our prisoners of war and civilian internees who are in camps in India. They have remained uppermost in our minds. Their relations and friends, as indeed all the people of Pakistan, are deeply interested in their well-being and early repatriation. We have no doubt that this problem, which is essentially a human problem, will be resolved before long. We now have an agreement which should lead to their early return home. Meantime our thoughts and prayers remain with you.

Report on Miss Benazir Bhutto’s Visit to Simla During the Indo-Pak Summit Conference (28th June -3rd July 1972)

By Veena Datta, IFS

Miss Benazir Bhutto arrived in Simla on the morning of 28th June, 1972 along with her father, His Excellency Mr. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, President of the Republic of Pakistan. As instructed by the Chief of Protocol, I received them at Himachal Bhavan at about 1 P.M. Mrs. Manorama Bhalla had accompanied Miss Bhutto form the helipad to Himachal Bhavan. On showing Miss Bhutto to her suite, we conversed for about half-an-hour. The conversation related mostly to her education at Radcliffe College, Harvard University, where she is majoring in “Comparative Government” and is due to graduate in June 1973. She indicated that although she would have preferred to study Psychology, her father insisted on her doing a course on Political Science. He would like her to join Oxford University after graduation, just as he had done. Benazir, however, would prefer to join the Harvard Law School instead. She had done Senior Cambridge in 1969 from the Convent of Jesus and Mary, Murree.

2. We left Benazir (known as Pinkie to her close friends) at about 1.45 P.M. so that she could lunch with her father. As far as possible, they preferred to have their meals together, just by themselves. This enabled them to discuss the day’s events and exchange notes.

3. Although her scheduled programme was due to commence only on the 29th morning, on the 28th evening Miss Bhutto requested to visit a few bookshops in Simla in order to see some books on Indo-Pakistan relations, particularly those published after the Sino-Indian conflict of 1962 and after the two Indo-Pak conflicts on 1965 and 1971. she was very interested in books which threw some light on the Indian viewpoint regarding these issue. No such books had yet appeared n the bookstalls in Pakistan. She bemoaned the lack of similar enterprising authors in Pakistan who could spell out their side of the story. She mentioned that she had been instructed by her father to collect such books for him and emphasized that she had come to India as his Personal Secretary. During our unscheduled visit (at about 5.30 P.M.) to various bookshops on the Mall, she took down the name of some 7 to 8 books including Dilip Mukherjee’s “Bhutto: Quest for Power” B.G. Verghese’s “End of confrontation” Pran Chopra’s “Indo-Soviet Treaty”, and Brig Dalvi’s “Himalayan Blunder”. She rejected several titles including D.R. Manekar’s “Pakistan cut to size”; Benedict De Costa’s “Dismemberment of Pakistan”; and books on Bangladesh like “Rape of Bangladesh” by Antony Mascarenhas. Subsequently she told me that her father’s Military Secretary bought about 10 books, including some which she had rejected. Benazir was very flattered and excited to know that Indian authors had paid so much attention to her father’s biography, and was equally delighted to note that huge and friendly crowds greeted her wherever she went. She often waved to them and did ‘Aadab’ in the typical cultured Indian Muslim style.

4. Benazir remarked on several occasions during her subsequent stay in Simla that she had never received such a welcome by the people or the Government anywhere, not even during her recent tour of the Middle East countries with her father. In Iran, for instance, she remained largely indoors in the Palace. She added that Iran being a monarchy, State Guests had little chance of coming into contact with commoners, and even though her mother has wanted to meet her relations in Teheran, she was unable to do so because of these protocol difficulties.

5. When we returned to Himachal Bhavan at about 7 P.M., Mr. Bhutto was having tea on the lawns with a few of his close advisers, after having returned from his first meeting with Mrs. Gandhi. Benazir wanted to talk to him about the books she had selected and also to enquire whether she could give a few interviews to the Press Correspondents who were very keen to meet her. One look at his face, however, seemed to convince her that he was not in an approachable mood at all. On one more occasion, she confided in me about her father’s depressed and frustrated mood during their stay at Simla. She described her lunch with her father on 2nd July. Mr. Bhutto refused to eat anything and was lost in thought throughout the meal. Suddenly he pushed away his chair and told Benazir that the summit talks were so badly deadlocked and were heading for a failure. He was about to leave the room but at the door he turned back and said that there seemed to be just one last ray of hope. This incident depressed Benazir very greatly although she did her best to hide her feelings from the public and carried on with her scheduled programme. Father and daughter thus appeared to me to be in close communion with each other as regards their thoughts and moods. Benazir was always anxiously vigilant of her father’s changing moods, but insisted that in spite of it, he was basically a very kind hearted, warm, affectionate and reasonable man, who could discern clearly all aspects of a problem placed before him. He was a devoted father and head of a well-knit nuclear family. She once remarked that in spite of his heavy pre-occusions, he found time to guide her even in such minor matters as what she should wear on any particular occasion.

6. Miss Bhutto’s scheduled programme from 28th June to 3rd July is attached at encl-A. She evinced a keen interest in all the places she visited and was very receptive and responsive to different aspects of Indian culture and education. She particularly enjoyed going to the Convent of Jesus & Mary where she met some of the Nuns who had been with her in Murree. She also enjoyed the picnic to Fagu where she met and talked to several young people of her own age group.
7. She told me that she was scheduled to visit China along with her brother, towards the end of July on a good-will-cum-educational tour and was looking forward to it excitedly.

8. Miss Bhutto struck me as an extremely intelligent person, remarkably poised and self-confident for a girl of her age. She is a close confidence of her father, who made it a point to call her in for almost all the political discussions he held with his close advisers. Her approach to her father’s close colleagues like Rafi Raza, Hayet Mohd. Sherpao and Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi was that of a contemporary, and she felt free to talk to them as to people of her own generation. At the end of any political discussion at which she might be present, her father often asked her for her views on the matter. I got the impression that her father is grooming her for a political career. This could have been one of the reasons why Mr. Bhutto brought her with him to the Simla summit. She often remarked that Mr. Bhutto’s party had a large number of active political women workers. It can, therefore, be surmised that he wants her to assume their leadership.

9. Miss Bhutto was very cautious and careful in all her remarks on the subject of Indo-Pakistan relations. She was regularly briefed by her father throughout her stay in Simla on the statements and comments that she should make on the subject. She fought shy of making any comparison between India and Pakistan even on such apparently innocuous matters like movies and handicrafts. This was her first ever visit to India, and she readily admitted that she came with mixed feelings. She could not ignore the fact that India and Pakistan had fought three wars in 25 years, and this did not make for normal relations between the two countries. As a result, she was uncertain of the reception she would receive in India. However, Benazir repeatedly told me that even within a day she began to feel that Indians were genuinely friendly. The large cheering crowds she met everywhere, the lavish presents she received and the extensive press coverage of her visit helped convince her of India’s sincerity towards her country.

10. She is a devoted daughter and is quite willing to give in to her father’s dictates even on such vital issues as her future career, her education and who she should marry. She is proud of her father and is extremely unhappy that he has been “vilified and maligned” in the Indian press. She was particularly unhappy at the “factual inaccuracies” in Dilip Mukerjee’s book on Mr. Bhutto. When Dilip Mukerjee sought an interview with Mr. Bhutto to seek clarifications on these points, he was advised to meet Benazir, who gave him an interview from which we were excluded.

11. While reiterating her father’s dictum that peace between India and Pakistan must be based on principles, she emphasized that the reaction of the younger generation in Pakistan (i.e. the product of post-partition days) was quite different and un-inhibited by bitterness and reproach as compared to those who have lived through the days of partition. She felt that it was the younger generation who could show the way to a peaceful sub-continent. Although she was in a depressed mood on the evening on 2nd July when the summit talks appeared to be floundering, on the morning of 3rd July she was jubilant and effusive. She described the "Agreement" as a very promising beginning in Indo-Pakistan relations. She emphasized that this was the maximum outcome that could be expected at the first meeting between the heads of two states, which were fighting a bitter war only six months ago.

12. Benazir is essentially a simple fun-loving teenager, who nevertheless tried hard to build up a public image of being a sober and mature person. I suppose that this must be in accordance with her father's wishes and instructions. However, she tended to get rid of these inhibitions whenever she was alone with us. While describing her impressions about America, she deplored the break up of the nuclear family and did not appear to be a champion of the women's lib movement in the States. She was greatly impressed to see that Indian girls are doing so well in the Foreign and Administrative services and said that she would persuade her father to introduce legislation to permit women to join these services in Pakistan as well.

13. Benazir is responsive to affection and sincerity in personal relations. Her father too, seemed to greatly appreciate any gesture of friendship and kindness towards his daughter. This alone explain Mr. Bhutto's friendly and kind attitude towards me. He authographed his Banquet invitation card to me and penned the following lines:

"Thank you for all your troubles.

With best wishes,

Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto
Simla, 3rd July 1972."

Benazir felt free enough on two separate occasion to write:

"In the delicate atmosphere in which we arrived, you made me feel relaxed with Indians. Thank you.

30th June, 1972."

"Although I will not be here for your wedding at the end of this year, my best wishes to both you and your fiancé.

Thank you for making my trip a memorable one.

Pinkie Bhutto
3rd July, 1972."

0712. Briefing by Foreign Secretary for Heads of Foreign Mission on the Simla Agreement.

New Delhi, July 4, 1972

Ministry of External Affairs

i) The Agreement reflects the genuine and sincere desire of both India and Pakistan to end the past era of confrontation and usher in a new chapter of cooperation, friendship and durable peace. This was not an easy task because of past conflicts and lingering doubts, suspicions, and fears. However, there was realization on both sides that conflicts had not helped and that it was essential to mitigate the sufferings of the people of the two countries and put their energies to more productive use;

ii) The Agreement underscores the desire of the leaders of India and Pakistan to find a bilateral and peaceful approach to resolving mutual problems. This is a most important aspect of the Agreement. We Asians have been victims of several wars. There is now a realization that we can solve our problems ourselves.

iii) While establishment of durable peace was the first requisite for normalization of relations, something more was needed to ensure the economic and social progress of the people of India and Pakistan. In the Agreement there is provision for resumption of communications, bilateral trade, cultural exchanges, etc. Moreover, the Agreement provides for meetings between the Heads of Government as also representatives of the two sides to further discuss the modalities and arrangements for durable peace and normalization of relations.

iv) There was awareness on the part of Pakistan that while some of the questions were purely bilateral in nature, others were trilateral, with which Bangladesh was intimately involved. India went to the maximum extent possible in the bilateral field by offering troop withdrawals from occupied territories. There was no bargaining on this question; the offer was made in view of the assurance of durable peace and in pursuance of Prime Minister’s oft-repeated statement that India did not covet an inch of Pakistani territory.

v) In Jammu and Kashmir, both sides agreed to respect the December 17, 1971 line of control (not the 1949 cease fire line) without prejudice to the recognized position of the two countries. The Agreement also provides for further meetings to discuss the final settlement of Jammu and Kashmir. This precludes any supervisory role for the UNMOGIP.
vi) The Agreement does not solve all our problems but we regard it as an important step forward in our quest for the establishment of durable peace.

vii) We regard the Agreement as important not only for India and Pakistan but for cooperation among all the three countries of the sub-continent. We also feel that it has some relevance to the countries of Asia and even South Asia and West Asia.

0713. Message from the Pakistan Government to the Government of India sent through the Swiss Embassy.

July 12, 1972

AIDE – MEMOIRE

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan has transmitted the following message dated July 12, 1972 to the Embassy of Switzerland in Islamabad to be forward to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India.

BEGIN

India is in control of the railway line in the Khokhrapar Chor Sector in Sind. Pakistan is in physical control of a part of the Hussainiwala Headworks. The Government of Pakistan would be prepared to ensure that the Headworks are left intact at the time of withdrawal of troops and would expect that the railway line mentioned above would also be left in good order.

Islamabad, July 14, 1972.

Now I come to the Simla Agreement at last. Sir there have been three distinct attitude towards the Simla Agreement. One is, that it has been praised beyond recognition. Second, that it has been condemned and condemned wholly. Thirdly, cautiously it has been said that it is only beginning. Why have we got three different attitudes? Objectively speaking we have got three different attitudes because there are three different thoughts associated with the Simla Agreement. People have praised it. People have attacked it but my friend Mr. Ghaus Bakshh Bizenjo has said, “his eulogies are necessary.” If it was a question of eulogies, to sing them. So when my agents do not praise it, how can I expect my friends to praise it? And I told my friends to take my attitude if they want to take because there can always be an objective conclusion. But why have they praised it? There must be some good reasons. Because circumstances were really impossible, India had all the cards in her hands and India is not a generous negotiator. They had Pakistani territory. They had East Pakistan separated from Pakistan. They had 93,000 prisoners of war. They had the threat of war trials and so they were sitting pretty, as the saying goes. What did we have in our hands? Riots, labour troubles and all sorts of internal dissensions. But we also had something else in our hands. Basically the common man of Pakistan, the poor man of Pakistan, the nameless man of Pakistan, the faceless man of Pakistan was with us. We had his blessings. When he went home he prayed for our success. We had his support and we had courage in our hands and we had our convictions. So out of this unequal situation it arose.

One great lawyer of Karachi told me, “You see, you must do what Talleyrand did after the defeat of Napoleon”. He thought he was giving me great wisdom. I told him that Talleyrand went to the Congress of Vienna in September 1815 after the defeat of Napoleon at Waterloo, but that Napoleon almost won at Waterloo. It was the last minute intervention by Prussia that brought about his defeat. Moreover, the Congress of Vienna was a multilateral conference. The concept of the balance of power in Europe was the pillar of British policy and the British did not want the power of France to be obliterated. But there was no such situation in our Simla discussion. It was a discussion between India and Pakistan; if you like, between victorious Pakistan and defeated India! It was a meeting between India and Pakistan. We had, Sir, nothing, hardly anything. And, I tell you, there is some vanity in every man and I believe that I also possess a little bit of vanity although I am not high caste like our Sardar of Dera Ghazi Khan. But there is a little vanity in an individual and I was not at all comfortable in our defeated circumstances. But we met and we discussed. I do not need go into the details as I am coming to that later. We thrashed out an agreement about which I think we could come back and say that if it was not a victory for Pakistan it was also not a defeat. So some people, my sycophants, Rao Khurshid Ali and Mr. Abdul Khaliq raised it. So there is no question of my having asked them to do it. What is important is that the people praised it, the people accepted it, and the people understand it.

Sir, I have been accused by my friend from Dera Ghazi Khan that he whipped up agitation against the Tashkent Declaration, that I whipped up agitation against the Tashkent Declaration for personal power and aggrandizement. Mr. Faruque is sitting here, returned recently from his honeymoon. You ask him, if faithful to his God, what was my attitude at Tashkent? I am coming to Tashkent later. I told Ayub Khan at Tashkent, “I know the people of Pakistan; they will never accept your agreement”. That was my conclusion at Tashkent before I even arrived in Pakistan. There was a spontaneous revolt against Tashkent. We did not inspire it. It had already taken place before we landed on the soil of Pakistan. I had predicted it even at Tashkent. The people did not accept the Tashkent Declaration. Today our friends from the opposition might say anything, anything against the Simla accord. But you see, these problems go to the heart of the people. We who believe in the people, we know that the people cannot be deceived. They have accepted it; they did not accept Tashkent. They have accepted this for good reason; they had rejected Tashkent for good reason.

The people are the final arbiters; the people are finally sovereign. They have a sixth sense which none of us is endowed with. That is why the people have accepted it. Now whatever you may say against it, eloquently or otherwise, they are not going to refuse this agreement. It does not betray their interests; it has not been against them. So the debate here is really superfluous. But it had to take place because you represent “the sovereigns”, as Mr. Daultana told us in his lecture the other day. The point is that since you represent the sovereign, you have to finally give your assent but the people have already accepted it. So, Sir, that is why they praised it.

Now it has been condemned. This is very important. You must take cognizance of it. Why has an agreement which even the enemies think – I do not want to use the word ‘enemy’ – the other side thinks is fair, good and proper, been subjected to condemnation? Certainly, therefore, there is nothing wrong with the agreement per se. there is another motivation behind the condemnation. This is very important because if this is condemned I cannot move forward. They would have tied my hands. Because if something which is patently in our favour, patently to the advantage of Pakistan, to be condemned then it is impossible to move forward to more difficult problems. It is being condemned not because the agreement is bad but because there are other reasons and those other reasons are more vital.

The third view calls it a “beginning”. But even on this, people have different interpretations to which I will come later.

Now I want to cover those who have condemned it. Sir, if there is no motive behind the condemnation then there must be some reason which is inherent in the Agreement. What is that reason? The reason is that Pakistan was victorious. That General Aurora surrendered to General Niazi and that Calcutta fell and West Bengal was liberated! Otherwise there is no other reason for condemnation. Unless we come to the conclusion that Pakistan was victorious, Aurora surrendered to Niazi and Calcutta fell and with it came the liberation of West Bengal!

Otherwise, I really cannot find any rational reason, my dear friends, for any opposition to it. But, surely, Sir these Gentlemen, these friends of ours, they must know the ultimate realities. Certainly they are aware of the situation Pakistan is facing. Certainly they cannot be ignorant of what is happening. You know, the 20th of December, things were bad when I took over; and today when I look back to that, I wonder how we have pulled through. It was a nation completely demoralized, shattered, and these very chauvinists, who are now talking in these terms, they sent messages, “immediately recognize Bangladesh, immediately agree to Indian terms, otherwise West Pakistan will also be finished and our women and children will be raped by Indian soldiers”. I told them not to be defeatist in their outlook, to hold on, to have the spirit to revive.

And today these some individuals are speaking in terms which are chauvinistic, which are unbelievable. What are they saying? That fundamental issues relating to the very existence of Pakistan have been compromised; Bangladesh has been recognized; Kashmir has been surrendered; the case of Kashmir has been withdrawn from the United Nations; Indian hegemony had been accepted; the spirit of Jehad has been destroyed; strategic positions in the Lipa Valley have been given to the Indians; a no-war-pact has been signed, a non-aggression Pact; Hussainiwala head-works have been returned for wasteland in Sind – and what about the poor displaced persons over whom they are having sleepless nights? – the prisoners of war have not been brought back; Indian aggression has been respected; the two- nation theory has been destroyed and a precedent has been set for the breaking up of the remaining part of the country.

Sir, I admire their perverse imagination. They have risen to glorious new heights. But I would like to ask you, before I even go into the analysis of the situation, how has the existence of Pakistan been compromised? How has Bangladesh been recognized in this agreement in Simla? I said not only to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi but also at my Simla Press conference that I refuse to recognize Bangladesh on the soil of India. Then how have we compromised Bangladesh by going to Simla, by coming to an agreement in Simla? “Kashmir has been surrendered”, it has been said. How has Kashmir been surrendered? I am coming to that later. On the contrary, for the first time, after Tashkent, Kashmir has been reactivated. It has been argued that Kashmir has been withdrawn from the United Nations. How has Kashmir been withdrawn? It is an item on the Agenda. If I withdraw it then I will say we have withdrawn it. If one likes to go to the United Nations, I am prepared to send Mr. Hafiz Prizanda abroad again. So, why should you say that Kashmir has been withdrawn from the United Nations? “Indian hegemony”; What hegemony of India has been accepted? We said we want Indian friendship, not Indian leadership. I have said it time and again. I told Mrs. Indira Gandhi, “How do you accept your leadership to be imposed on the people of Pakistan?” Rightly or wrongly the Muslims of the subcontinent have ruled the subcontinent for 700 years. How can we now today accept their tutelage and the domination of India over us?

The spirit of Jehad, Sir this is the worst of it. Did the Muslims destroy the spirit of Jehad over a fair and good agreement? Is that the resilience of Musalmans? Is that what Musalmans are made of? Is the spirit of the people destroyed by coming to an agreement? On the contrary the agreement revives the spirit of the people. If an agreement is against the interest of the people, the people revolt against it and the spirit is raised rather than destroyed, as a result. How can Musalmans, claiming to be Musalmans, make such an assertion? Only because they are sitting in the opposition? After all, as one of the Members has said, have the Muslims not lost before? In the days of the Holy Prophet (peace be upon him) also battles were fought and the Muslims spirit of Jehad was never destroyed. The same Khalid who opposed the Holy Prophet and who was responsible for the defeat of the Muslim forces because a Musalman and he took the forces of Islam to Spain and other places. If I talk to you about Islamic history, then they will say, “How can a kafir speak about Islamic history?”

“Strategic points of Lipa valley has been given away”, they say. O! Field Marshals, what do you know of all these advice from the former Commander-in-Chief of Staff? I have taken advice from the former Commander-in–Chief who was retired. These are technical matters. In 1965, Kargil was lost to Pakistan. Again Kargil was lost to Pakistan. But you know what we have got in exchange for it. We have got the whole Chhamb sector. But if you want to say this thing, and it sounds nice to you, of course, you can say it but it is not true. This is not the military position.
"Hussainiwala headworks" I am surprised that a Member of a progressive party should have advanced that argument, but I am not surprised because he came from the Jamit-i-Islami to our Party. Sir, territories of nations are sacrosanct. It is not a question which is more valuable and which is less. Every piece of Pakistan territory smothers earth to us. The member may not like Tharparkar. Tharparker is far away from where he stays. But I am in love with Tharparkar and every part of Pakistan from Khyber to Karachi and any part of Pakistan whether alluvial of desert, productive to unproductive. It is sacred to me. For me it was a great sense of achievement that we could get back our territory, and if they get back their territory why should I be opposed to the people of Rajasthan? Why should I want them to suffer? We have no quarrel with the people of India. Why should their areas be turned into a desert? Why should there be floods? Are we so cruel to want the Indian people to suffer when we are getting our own territory, two Tehsils in Sind and one Tehsil in Shakargarh in Punjab, back? Shakargarh is a very important place from Tharparkar in 1965; one and a half million refugees came back.

I took over on 20th December. I sent the Governor of Sind the next day to Tharparker, I sent the Governor of Punjab the next day to Shakargarh. We love the people of Sharkargarh and Tharparker. They have voted for us. They are our blood. They are our kith and kin.

"Indian aggression had been made respectable." How has the Indian aggression been made respectable? In what way? It is very well to use these words, but how can it be said that Indian aggression has been made respectable? I cannot understand. Since I cannot understand it, I cannot give an answer.

"The Two-Nation theory has been compromised." Sir here is indisputable point. Enemies cannot compromise with the two nation theory. What is happening in Sind today? If we have to build Pakistan, we must accept Pakistan. We must love Pakistan. We must have respect for Pakistan. We must be identified with Pakistan. We must have a State of Pakistan. We must believe in the creation of Pakistan in the making of Pakistan and in the glorification of Pakistan. Others have nothing to say for this. That is like being done away by proxy. What is the concept of sovereignty? Will England be compromised because of France’s hostility; Germany because of France; the Soviet Union because of American hostility? If President Nixon meets Chairman Mao Tse-tung, has China’s sovereignty gone? Is China’s concept gone? If Mr. Nixon meets Mr. Kosygin, is American sovereignty gone? After all let us be pragmatist? At least, let us have some concept. It is all very well to say things, but prove it to us; show it to us.

“A precedent has been set for the breakup of the rest of the country.” How can a precedent be set for the break-up of a country? We have already set our own precedent by taking wrong decisions, by pitting brother against brother. Precedents are not legal factors. It is not a case in the Privy Council or in the House of Lords or in the Supreme Court of India or Pakistan. This precedent is a political factor. These are human relations. These are the questions of love and hate. These are the questions of harmony or discord. These are questions of dichotomy or reconciliation. How can a precedent be set for the breaking up of the country? The country can be broken if we take the wrong decisions, if we pursue undemocratic means, if we destroy our own soil and if we go against our own people.

Now, Sir, there are people who are opposing the Simla Accord because they say they want to take revenge from India. But even if they want to take revenge, is this the moment to take revenge? Is this the moment to go to war with India? You know the agent provocateur. The role of the agent provocateur has been perfected in our times. I do not want to give example of other countries where agent provocateurs went more extremes that was warranted by the situation. I do not want to talk of other countries because it is not fair for me in my position to do so. But these people are nothing short of agent provocateurs. They want to provoke a war with India immediately, here and now. They want to see Pakistan eliminated. Why do they want to do it? I don’t want to say more. Look into their past and you will find the answer.

Now, Sir, others have said it is only a beginning. Yes, it is true, it only a beginning. I admit, it is not even a first step. It is a first shot. It has been left to the people which way they want to go; whether they want to take the path of war or they want to take the path of peace. It is a question of interest. We have had agreements so often in the subcontinent, outside the subcontinent, but unless the intentions are there, we cannot move forward. You want peace with India; you want an honourable settled peace on the basis of rights, equity and justice. You want that or you do not want that. You want to go under Indian tutelage or you want to fight with Indian straightaway.

There are three courses left. First is, fight straightaway and decide finally. Second is, no, we have peace. Some people will say have peace for all times based on justice, equity and fair play. Other say: “have peace to build Pakistan, but later take revenge. The Indian also think. They also must wonder what is Pakistan’s object – what these Musalmans want, who have never reconciled. I am not revealing some secret. It is an objective analysis. As far as fighting immediately is concerned, it is out of the question. If you want to be jingoistic, if you want to be Bonapartist, somebody else will have to go into it. I will not do it because I know it will be the end of my country.
Others say build Pakistan, a strong progressive, people’s Pakistan. In which direction will that people’s Pakistan go, is not for me to decide? I will not be there. My mandate is limited. My mandate is to build Pakistan. I will build Pakistan. I will give every ounce of my intelligence; I will give every part of my life to build my country. It is for the future generations to decide whether they want to make it a progressive, prosperous and happy Pakistan. It is for them to decide if they will go to war or to peace. Only they will decide. If the Indians want to know what Bhutto’s intentions are, I tell the Indians of my intentions that I cannot do it. Not in the next 5, 10 or 15 years. So, all I can do is to build Pakistan. It is for the people of Pakistan and the people of India to decide what kind of relationship they want between themselves. Only two big leaders have spoken for the people. It is time for the people of India to decide whether they want to live honourably as good neighbours, or whether they want to be enemies, always hostile to each other and always at war with each other. That decision does not lie in our thinking, the people’s thinking, but the people fundamentally think for themselves. I can only help them to get going, get them prepared for what they want. That is all I can do. I can do no more. I will make a prosperous Pakistan, a great Pakistan, a monumental Pakistan in the service of the people, a Pakistan for the poor masses of Pakistan.

We have to release great energies and we have also to unleash a great force. We have to open the golden flood-gates and we have to channelise our energies. When it comes to a bad situation the old guard leaders say that we are responsible for it, and when we succeed they say, we were talking the same thing many years ago. Your talk was just talk, but we galvanized the people and we brought the energies of the people into play. Of course, they were talking before me about socialism in this country, but they could not get themselves elected even to a Municipality. I am not ashamed of what I have done to the people of Pakistan. I am proud of having galvanized them. I am proud that there is now a sense of dignity in the common man. I am proud that the Hari can tell his Zamindar to go to hell and that he wants his rights. If there is chaos in the wake, it is productive chaos, not negative chaos.

Those who do not have a sense of history will never understand these things. There will be problems but we must face them. Europe had these problems. We have kept the giant asleep; we have let the giant sleep too long. It is a big giant. We have shaken it out of its long slumber. We said, “Get up, you cannot sleep. You fool, open your eyes. It is now for you to fight for your rights.” My friends ask: what has the people’s Party done? Where is their manifesto? What we have done is to set a great movement of great ideals into motion. Those who used to be elected from their bathrooms have been defeated. This is not a mean achievement, no matter how much they ridicule us. I can mobilize the energies of the people of Pakistan and make them into a great, progressive and modern state, with modern thinking and contemporary ideas, in the service of the people of Pakistan. The world will praise it. Let the people of Pakistan then decide what is going to be their future with India.

Coming to this Agreement, my friend, Mr. Bizenjo said that it is a matter of intentions. Sir, there are two kinds of treaties. International Law, Sir, - with due deference to Mr. Malik Akhtar, who speaks with authority, with authoritative ignorance – has two concepts for treaties—one Pacta – Dunt – Servanda and the other Clausula Rebus Sic Stantibus. One treaty is sacred, is binding and is for implementation. The other treaty is just a scrap of paper. It can be discarded and it can be thrown into dustbin. Now it is for you to decide whether you want the former type of treaty or the latter type. It is not for me to decide whether you want to use your collective force to bring about harmony to the people of this sub-continent. It is not for me to decide.

In this context, we say that the Indians cannot be trusted and the Indians say that Pakistanis cannot be trusted. This is a big debating point. Some talk here about Munnoo and Chunnoo, and the talk of Muhammad Bin Qasim and of Mahmood Ghaznavi, and the talk goes on and on. But who is going to judge those intentions? It is through actions and conducts by which intentions are judged and, with all due respect, I would say that in the past India has not inspired confidence in us. Whatever my friends may say, that Pakistan has been built on hate, that we are responsible for confrontation, I do not want to introduce a sour note in this national debate. I have great respect for my friends in the Opposition and I do not want to analyses their speeches. I would say no more than this, that I do not think it is right to say that we have not inspired confidence in the minds of the Indians.

I do not want to go into the question of Hyderabad, Junagadh and Manavadar. You all know that better but for how long are we to go round the mulberry bush? Somebody has to cut the Gordian knot. I have just told you that I cannot cut that knot because I will not be there in terms of history to cut it. So someone else will have to take the courage and say, “All right, I am going go to do it”. If we are capable of that courage then I think we can make some progress. But if we continue in this vicious circle, if we go into the antiquity of history we will go suspecting each other. After all, France and Germany had the same problem.

But where are we going? Somebody has to say that a new situation has arisen and a new pattern is needed and I am going ahead. I do not have that courage, I hope somebody after me might adopt that course and might try to put things in the situation where they are, or both of us, can get together and say alright let us forget the past, let us forget our follies, let us forget all the wrong that we have done – we live in the same geographical area, we cannot get out of the sub-continent. We cannot change geography. Pakistan cannot be lifted and taken to Canada and India cannot be lifted and taken to Australia. Since we live here let us find some method of living together, some modus vivendi. Let us live on the principle of live and let live. I think then we will be able to bring to the people, peace that has been denied to them for centuries.

Let us do so for your children, for my children, for everyone’s children, so that they can build their country, build hospitals, build schools, and can give education to their children. We need not remain the cesspool of the world, not the slum of the world that we are. We can then rightly tell the world that we are an ancient people, we are a great civilization and show them what our civilization means. We can say, “See what we have done for ourselves.” This is all I believe we can do and this is what I will strive to do.

Sir, in this connection, I would like to tell the House and, through your kindness, the people of my great country that I have kept my pledge to the people. My pledge was that I will not compromise principles, which I have not done. I had said, there will be no bargaining, which I have not done. I had said that I will not compromise the right of self-determination of the people of Jammu & Kashmir, which I have not done. I had said that I will not discuss Bangladesh in India, which I have not done.

Sir, any student of history knows that secret agreements never flourish. Secret agreements have no validity. As long as they remain secret, they are of no value, and the moment they come out, the people oppose them. So you have to know how the world had moved from the days of Moenjedaro in order to know that secret agreements are really redundant.

I told the people that I would bring the Agreement to the people, and I have done it. I have brought it to you, to all of you, and now it is for you to accept it or reject it. I will not accept it if you reject it. It is not my personal property. I have told you that I do not feel a sense of elation; I do not need any Qaseedas (songs of praise); I do not want it if you do not want it. Why should I want it if you do not want it? If you are not happy with it, how I can be happy with it? If you are not happy with it, how can I feel a sense of justification? If you feel humiliated, if my country does not like it, if my people are against it, if they feel that I have let them down, they should throw out this Agreement and they should throw us all out. We do not want it if you do not want it. So, I have brought it to the people. I have brought it to this August House.

I had said, Sir, that I would redeem national honour. Some people have asked how will I redeem national honour? Sir, redemption of national honour is not a day’s job. National honour does not get redeem until you can do it and not come in the way of that redemption, not to obstruct that redemption. I have not obstructed that redemption. I have upheld Pakistan’s dignity, sovereignty and self-respect under very tiring and difficult circumstances. I can swear before God and man that I have not in any way compromised Pakistan’s self-respect, sovereignty and honour, and that itself is redeeming national honour. If the redemption of national honour means something else to some people, I would say that today is not the day for Salahuddin to get on his horse. I have not deviated from my belief and my concepts although they say that I am full of contradictions. That is another story, whether I am or not. I have not in any way deviated from a single basic principle.

Long ago in 1966 I had said in my book “The Myth of independence” that “bilateralism is the only form of foreign policy that Pakistan should adopt”. I have struggled for bilateralism. There is the former Foreign Secretary sitting here and others who know the struggle I had with Ayub Khan for the concept of bilateralism. I have not surrendered the concept of bilateralism. I have actually vindicated my own position on this concept of foreign affairs. To agree to bilateralism now is in no way a deviation from my own concepts and my own beliefs.

Sir, before leaving for Simla, we made all the preparations that were humanly possible, because, as I have said, we had nothing in our hands. We had no trump cards; we had no leavers; the only lever was to consult our people, meet them, and also to visit foreign countries, fraternal countries, friendly countries, Russia and China. It was a fatiguing endeavour, but it is done in the supreme national interest and I think it paid dividends. Some Members of the Opposition have appreciated it, for which I thank them.

Now, Sir, we come to the criticism that the Simla Agreement is worse than the Tashkent Agreement. While it is said that the Tashkent Agreement was a better agreement, the arguments given here are that East Pakistan was with us at that time, therefore, Simla is worse than Tashkent; the doors of the United Nations had not been closed at Tashkent; Kashmir was not settled at Tashkent – it was settled in Simla according to inference – withdrawals were effected throughout West Pakistan including Kashmir, where on this occasion, this was not done; a better ceasefire line was not given to India in Kashmir, as was done at Simla. A certain official was present at both Tashkent and Simla, who has been responsible for all the damage.

I will take the last point first, Sir. I do not think it is fair, whether a Member in this House be a prince or a pauper, to make such allegations. It is not fair, it is not fair to the official and it is not to the leadership. I can never conceive of an official of my Government doing something against my instructions. It will be a direct insult to me. I cannot conceive of a greater insult. Whatever was done by the officials and this official at Simla, was with my concurrence, with my support and under my guidance. Every move that was taken, every step that was taken, every word that was uttered was with my consent. They were with me all the time, taking my instructions. So it is not fair to say this. How, they say the same official was in Tashkent. Of course he was. I was also in the Tashkent and I must say to the credit of this official that in the whole galaxy of Ministers and officials who accompanied us at Tashkent, this official was the one to stand by me. He was the only one to tell Ayub Khan that the Foreign Minister is right. All others went and stood under Ayub Khan’s wings telling him, “Do what you like. Sign it, Sign it.” When I opposed Ayub, this official said, “Sir, you have no right to be so harsh to the Foreign Minister he is doing his duty to the country.” And that is why he came into Ayub Khan’s bad books.

Ayub Khan did not forgive him for standing by me at Tashkent, and threw him out soon after I left the Government for standing not by me but by Pakistan’s interest.

I resent and deplore those allegation made by relations of Ayub Khan to cover the betrayal of the nation of Pakistan at Tashkent. I assert that if Ayub Khan had left the Tashkent negotiations to me and to my officials, just as I left the Simla negotiations to the officials, we would have secured a much better agreement perhaps we could have secured a settlement of the Kashmir dispute at Tashkent. But Ayub Khan, the Field Marshal, was shivering in his pants, the Field Marshal was browbeaten, the Field Marshal was shaking.

And what did the Field Marshal do at Tashkent? What is the difference between Tashkent and Simla? At Simla, we had lost half the country, we had 93,000 prisoners of war, our three Tehsils were in Indian hands, we had threats of war trials, and Pakistan was demolished and demoralized physically and ideologically. At Tashkent we went with our heads high. If we had not won the war, there was at least a draw. East Pakistan was with us not because Ayub Khan kept it with us but because of other factors. Mr. Shastri was in a weak position. Mt. Shastri was demoralized and was trying to find a way out.

During the first meeting at Tashkent which I had with Mr. Chavan, the Defence Minister said to me, “You must settle Kashmir here and now, there must be a final settlement”. I said, “Mr. Chavan, if you expect me to remove the ashtray from here to there, I would not do it. If Kashmir has to be settled it has to be settled on our terms”. Then he want to Mr. Shastri and Mr. Shastri went to Mr. Kosygin who went to Ayub and they all said, “You have a very difficult Foreign Minister and unless and until he is removed from the negotiations there can be no progress.”

The Ayub Khan come to us and said, “You know, these people have told me that I am a statesman whereas they are politicians and that I alone can settle this problem.” According to Ayub Khan, Shastri told him, “I am too small a man, I am too little a person, I am in the hands of my Lok Sabha but, Sir, you are a great man, a great ruler, a great statesman, you can go beyond your people, you can go beyond the nation”. Ayub said, “Well, if he cannot do it, if he cannot compromise on Kashmir, I will make a compromise on Kashmir”. I was the one man who got up. Mr. Ghulam Faraque was also there, I said, “Shastri had no right to compromise because his people had not given him this right. Don’t feel you have been given the divine right by God because, finally you are answerable to God Mr. Ayub Khan”. For that I was victimized, for that I was browbeaten, for that there were assassination attempts on me, because I stood for the integrity and the honour of Pakistan at Tashkent.

Today you say that Tashkent was better than Simla. On what basis do you say that Tashkent was better than Simla? If you come to such feudalistic and obsolete conclusions, Sardar Sahib, let me tell you, my dear friend from Dera Ghazi Khan, that you have misread the mood of the people, that you have miscalculated the courage of the people of Pakistan to have come to that conclusion. We did not exploit Tashkent, we were betrayed at Tashkent. Kashmir was put aside at Tashkent. If today I have difficult problem it is not because of the prisoners of war, it is because of the legacy of Tashkent. Books will be written on it.

They say, “Why don’t you talk of the Tashkent secrets.” I am too much of a Pakistani, too patriotic to talk about the Tashkent secrets. Those secrets are coming out.

If Kashmir has become an insurmountable problem for us, Mr. Chairman, Sir, it is not because of our dereliction and weaknesses at Simla, it is because of Ayub Khan at Tashkent when he said, “I am prepared to put Kashmir aside. I am prepared to forget Kashmir”. And today he lives, he lives free, he lives with respect, and we are blamed for everything. We are told, “What have you done to keep up national honour? The aggressed are being acquitted. There is an unequal treatment”. My answer is “who brought about the surrender of Pakistan at Tashkent when we had at least come to equal terms with India?”

Why we did not win the war in 1965 is another story, which I may tell you. But you will have to sit here a little longer for that, as you also made me sit for five days. I am going to these lengths to elaborate my points because my friends must know, they must understand.

Sardar Kher Baksh Mari wants to know why I think my coat is liked by people. It is because I stood by the people. Sardar Sahib, don’t be envious because my coat is liked by the people, or my handkerchief is liked by the people. I have shed my tears for you and wiped them with my handkerchief, so don’t forget the past that easily, Mari Sahib, and talk like that.
So, Sir, the point is that we have the legacy of Tashkent. If you want to talk about precedent, it was set at Tashkent. The precedent was not set at Simla. And yet you say that Tashkent was better than Simla.

Tashkent was a betrayal of the whole nation. Tashkent was abject surrender, a complete capitulation without cause.

It is said that at Tashkent withdrawals were effected throughout that border. Yes, because the Indians wanted to establish the ceasefire line as an international boundary. Is there no logic in these people? Don’t they understand that, by bifurcating and delinking the international line from the ceasefire line in Kashmir, we have it admitted that Kashmir is a disputed issue, otherwise why should there not have been a total withdrawal if it was an international line? At Simla, I did not agree to that position, but Ayub Khan had accepted it because he had forgotten Kashmir at Tashkent.

Reverting now to this Simla accord itself, Sir, at Tashkent, the Indians and their friends wanted everything to be settled in one go. Naturally, if Ayub Khan had agreed to a settlement on Kashmir like that, why not settle everything in one go at Simla too? But we said no to that. We said it will be a step-by-step approach. That means we are concerned about Kashmir. If we were not concerned about Kashmir I would have said, “All right, let this all be done in one go.”

In earlier years, Pakistan had asked India to resolve this fundamental dispute but Mr. Nehru refused and suggested a step-by-step solution to the problem. Now the Indians say, “We were wrong then and Pakistan was right. Resolve the basic problem and everything else will follow”. But neither they are right now nor were we right then. The point is this the Indians took the position earlier on a step-by-step solution because they did not want to come immediately to Kashmir as at that time, there would have been a plebiscite and Kashmir would have gone to Pakistan. So they did not want to come directly to Kashmir and, instead, wanted a step-by-step settlement. They sought a settlement on Kashmir now because, due to our defeat, the balance had tilted in favour of India. Therefore we did not agree to it. So the tables have been turned, not because we were right and they were wrong but because the objective conditions have changed. Than it was in their interest to go step-by-step; and now it is in our interest to go step because we do not want to surrender Kashmir.

If I wanted to surrender Kashmir, I would have said, “Let us go about it the way Ayub Khan did”. Mrs. Indira Gandhi had originally said, “it must be a package deal, a basket deal”. Mr. Dhar said to me “it must be a bouquet of roses, all in one”. I said. “No, one rose at a time.”
Sir, why are we not being given even a little credit for having done a very elementary thing for our national honour and self respect? We have worked very hard in the face of overwhelming odds to secure agreement on a step-by-step basis so that we do not have to tackle the Kashmir dispute immediately.

Then they say what about our prisoners of war. Prisoners of war would have been sitting at home if I had given even a hint for the Kashmir settlement. When they said, “settle Kashmir if you want prisoners of war”. I would have got them back. When I refused this, Indira said at least settle the principles. “If I settle the principles it amounts to settling the whole thing”. That is what I told them, because there is only one principle and that is the principle of self-determination which you do not accept. If I give another principle it means partition and partition would be on the basis of the present ceasefire line. I cannot give another principle. You will have to keep the prisoners as long as you want. Now if you all want to jump down my throat for not bringing back the prisoners of war, I shall accept it.

So, this is the situation, and yet all kinds of allegations are being made that Tashkent was better than Simla. We are also being asked, “What was done about Bangladesh? What have you done about Kashmir?” The simple answer is: if you wanted us to settle everything at Simla, we could have done it but on whose terms? That is what India wanted, to settle everything.

Now, as far as the prisoners of war are concerned, a mention of Geneva Conventions and United Nations has been made. Sir, you are a lawyer, my friends, many of them, are lawyers, and you know that status of international law. Is international law a superior court? Is international law a superior Government? International law is just a philosophy. International law is a subject which people study when they have nothing else to study. That is why I studied it.

Let us be realistic. Let us be pragmatic. Where is the sanction behind the Geneva Conventions? Has a single United Nations resolution from the inception of the United Nations to this day been implemented which does not have the concurrence of the Great Powers? Has the resolution on South Africa been implemented? Have the resolutions on Israel been implemented? Have the resolutions on the Indo-Pakistan sub-continent been implemented? None of them. None of them. None of the resolutions, and not the Geneva Conventions. Who has implemented them?

It is for the states finally to decide. We know that India had violated the Geneva Conventions. We know India has violated the United Nations Charter. What has the United Nations done? It has given India Hyderabad. It had given India Kashmir. It had given India Goa and Pondicherry. With every violation of the United Nations Charter they acquired more territory. In the beginning we were excited at the concept of the United Nations. We thought that the United Nations was a super-government and that it would answer all our problems. That is not the position.

The key to the release of the prisoners of war is in India’s hands. Of course, the Geneva Conventions are there. But the keys are with Mrs. Indira Gandhi. They are not in my custody. They are in her custody. She has to decide. You may throw the Geneva Conventions into her face. She would not accept them. What can I do? No use talking about it.

India has accepted the withdrawal of troops from the borders. Troop withdrawal is more difficult to obtain than the return of prisoners. Prisoners cannot be kept indefinitely. Territory can be kept indefinitely. Israel has not left an inch of Arab territory but they have returned all prisoners of war. Territory is more sacred, more permanent. Once withdrawals take place, what is the rationale for India to keep the prisoners? The war has ended. There is a ceasefire. There are withdrawals. Why should they keep prisoners? Certainly, we will tell our brothers and every one else to help in the process. We will certainly get back our prisoners of war— if not today, then tomorrow. They will come back Inshallah.

Now, Sir, back to the Simla Agreement. I am afraid that what has been said on the question of “mutual agreement” in the accord is not correct. If we want peaceful settlement either it is through the United Nations or it is by mutual agreement. We have not withdrawn our case from the United Nations. You know very well what we have got from the United Nations. In 1948 the first resolution, Mr. Nehru had an agreement with the British Prime Minister. Mr. Attlee, and the passage of the resolution was delayed by a few days. The British made a point that the Pakistan forces would withdraw from Azad Kashmir completely but from the Indian occupied Kashmir only the bulk of the Indian forces would be withdrawn. What “bulk” means is very difficult to determine. That was the day, that was the moment when you jeopardized the right of self-determination in Jammu & Kashmir. Whether India did that with British help or with someone else’s help is open to an objective study. It goes back to 1948.

What was the basis for the United Nations to say that Pakistan forces withdraw from Azad Kashmir and the Indians would remain in occupied Kashmir? Was not India the aggressor? Why was the aggressor allowed to remain in Kashmir and the aggressed to withdraw from Kashmir? Who equated the aggressor with the aggressed? Who gave an unequal treaty? We gave respectability to the concept of aggression in Kashmir? Not this government. We were not anywhere on the scene. Why was it agreed at that time? Somebody will be saying that I am attacking the Quaid-i-Azam. Quaid-i-Azam is dead. I am not attacking anyone. I am just mentioning to you the objective facts. That is the position under the 1948 Resolution.

After that, every successive Resolution – please study them, Sir, went against the concept of self-determination, went against our basic position. So much so that in 1964 the United Nations was not even prepared to give only a consensus, which I rejected. It was humiliating to accept that consensus. And what did the President of the Security Council say? He said, “we can say India and Pakistan must have bilateral negotiations”. But, forget about that.

In 1965, after the September war, we were in a good position, a favourable position. The United Nations at that time was not even prepared to mention the name of Kashmir in the Resolution. The Resolution mentioned the political problem underlying the cause of the conflict. When Mr. S.M. Zafar told them to put in the word “Kashmir” they said that they would not do so. That is after the war. When I went to the United Nations at least they agreed to use the words “the political problem underlying the cause of the conflict” which appeared in the Resolution. They said that they could not mention Kashmir – Kashmir’s situation had changed.

The British position on Jammu and Kashmir has changed. The American position has changed. And the Russians have said that they would veto any resolution on Kashmir even before they have seen it. That is the position in the United Nations.

But we have not left the United Nations for whatever it is worth, for whatever we have got or not got from the United Nations. I was not a Minister, I was not President, I had not gone to Simla, when in the last meeting of the United Nations I walked out in sheer disgust. I did not tear up any resolutions; I tore up the pages on which I was writing my notes. I said, “You keep it yourself”. You know the “compliments” I paid to the United Nations, but if the people of Pakistan think the only answer to Kashmir lies in going to the United Nations. If you think we have withdrawn the case from the United Nations, I shall take every member of the Opposition to the United Nations to disprove that, and then let us see what the United Nations gives us. I am not deploring the United Nations. I am not deploring the United Nations. I am just giving you the factual position.

In the light of these circumstances, without getting out of the United Nations, what have agreed to at Simla? We have agreed to have bilateral negotiations and that too under the Charter of the United Nations, under the Principles of the Charter of the United Nations. I have mentioned deliberately the word ‘Charter’ because Charter includes also the International Court of Justice. So, the point is this: if our bilateral negotiations fail, there is nothing to stop the process going to the United Nations. One Member of this Assembly said that we had tried peaceful means for 25 years and what had we got by peaceful means? My dear friend, my dear brother, we have tried peaceful means for the last 25 years but we have also tried war in 25 years. We might not have gained anything by peaceful means but how much have we gained by war? The gain by war is that we lost half the country; the gain by war is that we have 93,000 prisoners of war there in India; the gain war is that we have lost some of our tehsils which we are going to get back as a result of the Simla Agreement; the gain by war is that we have established for the moment at least that India has militarily an upper hands. If we have gained nothing by peaceful means, we have certainly not gained by war.

What do you want – war or peace? I have told you that it is for the future generations to decide what they want. But today certainly you cannot take out a war chariot, because you are not in such a position. December 17, 1971 is not away from July 14, 1972. The Indian Defence budget has not been cut. It has, on the contrary, been increased. The general international situation has not changed. Do you want to go to war? Yes, you might overthrow me, that may satisfy you, but there is no other justification to pursue such a course of action. So, Mr. Chairman, Sir, with due respect, I would say that the position we have taken is preeminently justifiable.

I was going to quote from the United Nations Charter but it is getting late in the night. Otherwise I would have established to you by quoting some Article from the Charter that we have no way compromised our position. There is Article 103 which provides that if an agreement between two countries is inconsistent with the Charter of the United Nations, the Charter prevails. So, if we have come to an agreement which is inconsistent with the United Nations Charter, the Charter will still prevails. That is Article 103. Article 51 of the Charter says that a State has the inherent right of national self-defence. Article 33 of the Charter speaks of the settlement of disputes by adjudication. Article 11 of the Charter says that the Assembly can only make recommendations. Article 10 provides that the Security Council can make decisions. Article 23(3) says that the Security Council can only come to a settled agreement if all the five Great Powers agree.

I could go on quoting from the Charter. I am not a good lawyer. I was a bad lawyer. That is why I went into politics. But that is the position under the Charter. Don’t throw the Charter at me. I know the Charter inside out. If we can get Kashmir by the Charter certainly we would go to the United Nations tomorrow.

Sir, there is only one way to “get” Kashmir – neither by negotiations, nor through the United Nations. If you want to have the people of Kashmir to secure the right of self-determination you must fight for their right of self-determination. There is no other method. Twenty five years of history has shown us that the right of self-determination cannot be achieved by proxy. Even the Americans, the greatest power on earth, cannot deprive the people of Vietnam the right of self-determination by using all their power and all their might in that small, little country. If the people of Jammu & Kashmir want their independence, if they want freedom, if they want to be a free people living in fraternity and friendship and comradeship with Pakistan, they will have to give the lead. I tell you, Sir, on the floor of this House, with the solemn commitment of the people of Pakistan, that if tomorrow Sheikh Abdullah or Maulvi Farooq or others, start, a people's movement, we will be with them. We were with the people of the Third World in their struggle for independence and self-determination, and so, how can we not be with the people's struggle for liberation if the people of Jammu & Kashmir are prepared to make sacrifices for their inherent rights. That is the answer.

We have not compromised anything. We say we have not given the people of Jammu & Kashmir the right of self-determination. It is their inherent right. I have got quotations of Mr. Nehru saying, that I do not want to quote them all now but Mr. Nehru has said, “we believe in the right of self-determination of the people of Kashmir”. What did it mean when we said in the Simla Agreement “without prejudice to the recognized position, that is the international position? Pakistan’s position of self-determination is an internationally-recognized position. India’s position of usurpation of Jammu & Kashmir is not the recognized position because international law, the United Nations and the world do not recognize it. When we say “without prejudice to our respective positions”, it is really without prejudice to our position because India’s position is not based on principles. At one time India said ‘self-determination’. Now India says ‘usurpation’ and tomorrow better wisdom might prevail on Mrs. Indira Gandhi after reading the ‘Glimpses of World History’ and she might again say ‘self-determination’.

So let us try it out because there is only one recognized position that is Pakistan’s position. So when we say without prejudice it means without prejudice to Pakistan’s position because that is the only recognized position. So we stand by the position, thoroughly committed, up to the end from the cradle to the grave, from sunrise to sunset, provided, of course, the people of Jammu & Kashmir are in the vanguard. And with them there will be the Baluch, Pathan, Punjabi and the Sindhi.

Struggle is not a new thing for us. We have struggled internally. We can struggle for our people. We have been belied and browbeaten by bullets of jails. Wali Khan Sahib says that every child in the Frontier knows how to shoot. So we know how to shoot. We will fight if we want to fight. We will struggle if we want to struggle. We will sacrifice if we want to sacrifice. This is an eternal position and there can be no position better than that.
Mr. Chairman, Sir, much mockery has been made of the policy of confrontation and a 1000-year war. How many people, including Mr. Ali Hasan Magi, have tried to explain the concept of a 1000-year war. The 1000-year war is an objective concept. It is not a subjective concept. If Zulfikar Ali Bhutto says, “We will fight for a thousand years”, and if the people of Pakistan refuse to do that, they will throw me in the lunatic asylum. But it is a fact that the people of Pakistan accepted this concept and that is why it has been the subject of so much talk and discussion.

What does a 1000-year war mean? Does it mean that we will stand behind a machine gun and shoot for a thousand years? Even America does not have that much ammunition. So it is a metaphysical concept. It is an objective concept. It means that a nation will never surrender its rights till eternity. As long as it lives that nation will fight for its rights. Have I committed a sin by saying that we will fight and fight? As Bizenjo Sahib says: “Nobody can take away rights as long as the people are willing to fight for their rights till eternity”. From the days of the Roman Empire up to the Present times people have fought for their rights.

We have lived a thousand years in the sub-continent. A thousand years are nothing in the future. No individual can rule for a millennium. Even Hitler who claimed to rule for a millennium was finished in twelve years. So it is not the struggle of an individual. It is the peoples struggle. If the people do not want to fight, they do not want to struggle, they will never accept it. But if the people of Pakistan want to fight and they say we will fight for our rights till eternity, then they will fight. It may be a thousand years, it may be ten thousand years; they will do it whether I say ten thousand years or not.

One great stalwart of the Opposition said: “we had heard that war would go on for a thousand years. We should have fought five hundred years, one hundred years, fifty years, twenty years, even ten years. Or at least we should have been able to fight for seventeen days”. According to their light, to scale down from 10 years to 17 days is fair enough. This is not my concept that I should reduce a thousand year’s war to 17 days. In fact, these people cannot understand its objective and purpose. A defeated man cannot understand the meaning of a thousand year long struggle. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto has not been traitor to the cause of Pakistan’s struggle. If the nation is prepared and if the nation accepts then 10 years or 17 days make little difference. Victory and defeat are transitory events in the life of a nation. I can look down the vista of years and see the vision of victory after a 1000 years and not the defeat of today as they do.

About confrontation, Sir, I do not want to go into the political aspects of confrontation but you know finally where we stand today. We stand here because of conformation. If we have not succeeded in our favour. It has not succeeded in India’s favour but, finally, the settlement or the new development and the turning point came through confrontation. So the validity of the concept of conformation is not lost by the defeat of Pakistan. It has been vindicated by the victory of India. What can we do if we did not have men enough, if we had chicken, usurpers, avaricious and corrupt people ruling Pakistan? Could not we in 1962 confront India and take Kashmir? But at that time the Field Marshal was hiding in Hunza and we were searching for him. In 1965 also, had it not been for failings, weaknesses and corruption, we could have gone on up to Delhi. This is a fact.

Opportunities can never remain at the doorsteps of a nation for all time. Opportunities change, situations change. Americans, with all the slur that has been cast on them, had given us weapons and equipment which in the 1965 war gave us superior armament and a superior Air Force. This is known to the Indians. This is known to the whole world. Mr. Neville Maxwell has written that he was waiting at Bangkok because he expected the Pakistan Army to be in Delhi because of the armored division. In the Rann of Kutch — and Generals are sitting here — we could have wiped out the Indians. In 1962 certainly we could have taken Kashmir because India had withdrawn all her forces from the border. But if you lose your opportunities, if you lose your chances, if you turn turmoil into greed, into a caprice, then no one can help you. India took advantage of the opportunity that came her way.

How can you say that the policy of confrontation has not achieved its purpose? Why do I admire Napoleon? Because Napoleon was the last professional soldier who went to war. Professional soldiers do not go to war. It is only civilian leaders who go to war.

We lost our opportunities, we turned our back on them, but the Indians did not. Her nation will salute Mrs. Indira Gandhi for the decision she took. It required courage. If General Manekshaw was the President of India he would never have the courage to do so. If enemies do something which is in their interest we must acknowledge it. She took her decision. This is a decision which Ayub Khan and Yahya Khan shuddered to take.

Who says the policy of confrontation has failed? I had to go to Simla because the policy of confrontation succeeded. It succeeded in India’s favour instead of ours, because from 1962 to 1965 we let the opportunities go and did not make use of them. The Indians took advantage of their opportunity. It was confrontation which went in favour of India and against us because we lost the opportunities. We lost the chance, because the representatives of the people were thrown out and were victimized.
0715. Message from the Ministry of External Affairs to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs sent through the Swiss Embassy.

July 21, 1972

Aide Memoire

The Ministry of External Affairs has the honour to request the Embassy of Switzerland to transmit the following message to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan in reply to their message dated July 21, 1972.

BEGINS

India has never any intention of destroying the railway line in the Khokrapar Chor Sector in Sind or, for that matter, of damaging or destroying any other facility which exists in areas occupied by Indian forces, prior to their withdrawal, the Pakistan Government’s proposal that the Headworks at Hussainiwala and the railway line in the Khokrapar Chor Sector in Sind, should be left intact, when respective forces of the two sides withdraw, is welcome and accepted.

0716. Letter from the Soviet Premier A. Kosygin to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. [Unofficial Translation from Russian text]

Moscow July 21, 1972

Esteemed Mrs. Prime Minister,

We have already got a possibility to set forth through the Soviet Ambassador the Soviet point of view on a new situation on the subcontinent arisen after the successful negotiations in Simla. We are glad that the results of these negotiations have been met with a wide support not only in India but also in Pakistan. The ratification of the Simla Agreement by a convincing majority of the Pakistan National Assembly testifies, in our opinion, to big positive changes, which have recently taken place in sentiments of various Pakistani circles. This once again confirms validity and wisdom of the policy pursued by you at the talks with Bhutto in Simla.

We hope that new steps will become possible in the nearest future aimed at normalizing the situation on the subcontinent and this process will continue, regardless of intrigues of enemies of the stabilization of peace in this area.
You, probably, already know, from the information conveyed earlier by the Soviet Ambassador through Foreign Minister Mr. S. Singh, that my colleagues and myself share your apprehensions regarding possible development in Bangladesh, taking into account intrigues by the USA and China. We are convinced that in this matter the interests of the Soviet Union and India coincide. We stand for steady advancement of the sovereign state of Bangladesh along the path of democratic development, for a solution of emerging problems by herself, without any outside interference. We, like India, render all possible assistance and support to this new state. We have undertaken appropriate steps to hold consultations on this question with leaders of the friendly socialist countries, which regard with understanding complicated problems facing the leadership of Bangladesh. As you have been already informed, the Soviet side is ready to hold appropriate consultations with the Government of India in any form convenient to it. Possible forms and dates of such consultations could be agreed upon through the diplomatic channels.

The views in of your letter of June 23, regarding a practical significance of the meeting of the Soviet leaders with President Nixon in May coincide with our own assessments of this event and of its possible international consequences. We intend to maintain contacts with U.S. Government in order to continue efforts aimed at strengthening peace and international security, which all peoples and states are interested in.

It is very important that the understanding reached in Moscow would be concretely converted into practical deeds of the U.S. administration – in the field of bilateral relations with us and in the sphere of international life. This applies, first of all, to the course pursued by the USA in Indo-China where the aggressive war unleashed by the United States against the Vietnamese people and peoples of other countries of this region continues. This applies also to the US policies towards West Asia and the countries of South Asia.

As you rightly note, a real perspective of further lessening tensions and developing international cooperation has opened in Europe. But mobilization of all peace-loving forces is required here also to fortify the favourable trends and to achieve new positive results.

I would like to express my satisfaction over the fact that you have agreed to use our invitation to visit the Soviet Union. We treated with understanding your considerations regarding your being busy in the late June and we shall be glad to see you in Moscow in the time, convenient for the both sides, which could be specified additionally.

I take this opportunity to convey to you the regards and best wishes from L.I. Brezhnev, N.V. Podgorny and from myself.
With respect, A. Kosygin

Moscow, the Kremlin, July 21, 1972.

Her Excellency
Mrs. Indira Gandhi,
The Prime Minister of the Republic of India,
New Delhi.

0717. Statement by External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Lok Sabha initiating the debate on the Simla Agreement.

New Delhi, July 31, 1972.

I have the honor to lay on the table of the House a copy of the agreement between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan signed at Simla by the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan on July 2, 1972.

The agreement is a first step towards establishing durable peace on the subcontinent. It provides a framework which, if faithfully worked out, can bring about an altogether new relationship between India and Pakistan. The experience of the past 25 years shows that outside agencies and third party involvement have made the solution of problems between India and Pakistan extremely difficult. Recognizing this, it was agreed by both sides that they will settle their differences by peaceful means through bilateral negotiations or any other peaceful means mutually agreed upon between the parties. This trend of bilateralism which is showing itself in other areas of the world is a healthy trend and we welcome it. The idea of providing for “self executing machinery” which would automatically bring in involvement of third parties or outside agencies has thus been given up.

Another important feature of the Agreement is that both sides have agreed that the basic issues and causes of conflict which have bedeviled relations between the two countries during the last 25 years shall be resolved by peaceful means. Both sides have further agreed that they will refrain from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity and political independence of each other. Both Governments have agreed that pending the final settlement of any of the problems between the two countries neither side shall unilaterally alter the situation. They have further undertaken that both sides shall prevent the organization, assistance or encouragement of any acts detrimental to the maintenance of peaceful and harmonious relations.

A number of steps have been proposed for the normalization of relations under article 3 of the agreement. They include communications, travel facilities, trade, cooperation in economic and other agreed fields and exchange in the fields of science and culture.

Once these principles for the establishment of durable peace were accepted by Pakistan and Pakistan further agreed that in Jammu & Kashmir, the line of control resulting from the cease-fire of December 17, 1971, shall be respected by both sides without prejudice to the recognized position of either side, we agreed to the withdrawal of Indian and Pakistani forces to their side of the international border. A smooth implementation of this will generate the necessary confidence for the growth of friendly and peaceful relations between the two countries.

I would like honorable Members to look at the agreement in the proper perspective of history. This Agreement comes after a long period of conflict and confrontation between the two countries and opens up the possibility of establishing normal and cooperative relations on the sub-continent. The Agreement is based on the principle of equality of sovereign nations and not in the spirit of a victor dictating his terms to the vanquished. We have kept our promise which we had made before, during and after the last war that we do not have any designs on Pakistan's territory. We hope that Pakistan appreciates this and will reciprocate by adhering faithfully to the letter and spirit of this Agreement. The Agreement is only a first step, a beginning in the process of establishing peace, friendship and cooperation. The success of this Agreement and of the process it has initiated will depend on its faithful implementation. As far as India is concerned, we are prepared to treat the new Pakistan as a friend. The things that unite the interests of the people of India and Pakistan are far more important and lasting than the things that seem to divide us. It is in this spirit and in an effort to serve the long term common interest of the people of the sub-continent and this region that we have signed this Agreement and it is in this spirit that we would like it to be judge.
Mr. Speaker, Sir, there is hardly any need for me to intervene in this debate because I find that from our own side and from Members of the Opposition there has come solid support for this Agreement. And the only arguments, if one can call them arguments, which were put forward by the Jan Sangh (now Bharatiya Janata Party), have been very ably refuted by Members from all sides of the House.

This morning, we witnessed what I can only call an utterly deplorable and ridiculous demonstration on the floor of the House. I do not think that any Members of the House, no matter on which side or which policy he stands for, will say that such doing have anything whatsoever to do with democratic functioning and that is why it is astonishing that the same Members had the cheek to talk of democracy in this House today. One could have called such an action childish. But it would be an insult to the children of India to call it so.

I must repudiate very strongly – I do not think there is any need to do so but these things must go on record – the constant allegation that the Government of India is acting at the behest of some outside power. I think – I am sorry for these people – I can only say that they must be suffering from some deep inferiority complex. They must be suffering from an utter lack of confidence in the people of India. (Interruption) I am not going to yield. I am capable of taking care of myself… (Interruption) I am not yielding to this gentleman at all. They have made enough demonstration of their behaviour, their sagacity and their experience, as they call it, this morning. The House has had enough of it. I hope, Sir, you will not in future permit such behaviour on the floor of the House. When foreigners have visited this House and when I have gone abroad it is sad to hear comments on this sort of behaviour taking place inside the House. This is no compliment to Indian democracy or to Indian unity.

Mr. Vajpayee spoke also of Indian unity. I know something about the unity of this country and the unity of the people. Let me repeat what I have said before, that unity is for a purpose. You do not have unity just for the sake of unity. You have unity to make the country strong; you have unity to take the country forward. You do not have unity to take the country down, to show meanness, to show pettiness and to show lack of statesmanship. Today Mr. Vajpayee was right in saying that he had some lakhs of people with him. He does have. But let me remind him that the population of India is 60 crores and not with Mr. Vajpayee. He may have a few lakhs but there are still the crores of people. Are we going to listen to the voice of the crores or are we going to listen to the voice of the small, whining minority?
It is not a minority that speaks up with strength; it is a whining, weak, full-of-inferocity. He has not only no confidence in the people of India, he has shown utter disregard for the people of Kashmir. How dare he say that we are leaving the people of Kashmir to the tender mercies of the Pakistanis? Do not blame the people of Kashmir who have stood by us in all times of turmoil. At a time when there was no Indian military to help the people of Kashmir, it was their own militia who met the Pakistani attack. (Interruption) how dare he challenge their bravery? How dare he challenge their solidarity with India?

This country, and this Government, is keenly aware of where it is going and where it wants to go. There were a time – not very long ago; only last year – when the same hon. Members did not believe me when I said that we knew what was going to happen in Bangladesh that we were going to see that the refugees were returned with honour and safety. Mr. Vajpayee said to me, ‘I do not believe you’. I said, ‘Mr. Vajpayee I am not concerned with whether you believe me or not; I am concerned with what is going to happen’. And today it is not I who am saying what happened. Can Mr. Vajpayee deny that there is Bangladesh today? Can Mr. Vajpayee deny that the refugees have gone back to Bangladesh? And still he says,

‘I do not believe you’. Let him not believe me; it matters little to the people of India whether he believe or does not believe. But history will show whether what has happened has been for the good of India.

I have made no tall claims for the Simla Agreement; I make no tall claims now. All I say is that it is a beginning; it is a small beginning perhaps, but it is a good beginning. Why do I say so? I am not concerned with whether we can trust the President of Pakistan or not; I am only concerned with whether we can trust ourselves or not. Do we trust ourselves or not? Have we the strength to handle the situations or not? This is what concerns me. Are we afraid? May be the Jan Sangh is afraid of Pakistan...

Shri Hukum Chand Kachwai: No.

Shrimati Indira Gandhi: Why do you shout like this if you are not? (Interruption) it is no use saying anything now. (Interruption)

I appeal to the Members of my Party. I am not like the leaders on the other side; I am fully able to defend myself; I do not need support from others. Every time when Mr. Vajpayee got up, eight of his members felt it necessary to support him. But this is not necessary on our side of the House.

Now we have a certain national pride, and when I use the word ‘pride’, I do not mean any false pride. I do not mean any feeling of arrogance, but pride in this nation and what it has stood for, pride in the Indian people and what they are capable of doing, pride which makes you want to do your best to give your utmost, no matter what it costs, for the good of the country. Perhaps it is a settlement that cannot be understood by some of our friends opposite. We cannot blame them. They are no less than Pakistan, creatures of partition. They had no place in India before, and perhaps they fear that they will have no place when there is complete peace. That is why they are so concerned that the spirit of confrontation should continue.

What is the basic issue before us? May I take the House into confidence? No, I must digress a moment - we have been blamed by all sides for not consulting the opposition. Now, we held a meeting of the leaders of the opposition on the 19th of May where we told them whatever it was possible to say before the Simla talks actually took place. We put our point before them. Our friends from the CPM refused to attend the meeting. But we cannot be blamed for that. The others, including the Jan Sangh, were present. There was nothing more we could have said, had we met even one day before the talks. Therefore, it is not true to say that we did not put our views before them. Naturally, we could not know the details. We did not know how things would proceed.

The very first remark that I made to Mr. Bhutto was that we have to decide, Pakistan and India have to decide, whether the interests of these two countries are complementary, or are they always going to be conflicting? This is a major issue to decide. If we think that our interests conflict, then you can have one agreement or a hundred agreements and you will not have peace. But, if we believe today that our interests are largely the same, that the major problems we face are the problems of poverty of our peoples, of the economic backwardness of our countries and the incessant effort of the foreign powers to pressurize us – we all know and most of us have been involved in the freedom struggle, what deliberate attempt there was to create friction within ourselves. Why? So as to weaken the freedom struggle. They knew that if all the religions and all the communities kept together, then their unity would create a strength that nobody could move, not even the great British Empire. But they knew also that if they could divide us on any issue, whether it is language or religion or anything else, well, then they would have a chance of defeating us. That is why their effort was to create dissensions.

After Partition, they could not do it in the same manner. Therefore, the attempt of those who were interested in keeping the sub-continent weak, was to see that this confrontation should continue between the different parts of the sub-continent so that we would be more involved in this sort of quarrel than in tackling our basic problems and trying to become strong in ourselves.

This is what we have to study. When this is the state of affairs, do we permit it or should we say. ‘Enough’ we have had enough of the traps of others. Today we must realize what is in our real interest. There is no doubt that the real interest of this country, as of Pakistan lies in peace between the two countries.

Now, will there be peace or not? I am neither an astrologer nor do I consult astrologers. I do not know. All I know is that I must fight for peace and I must take those steps which will lead us to peace. If they do not work out, we are prepared. It is not as if we are disregarding the interests of the nation. We are not saying, ‘No, no; we thought there would be peace. Even, if somebody attacks us, we are not ready(?). This is our attitude. We are prepared to face any threat or any kind of aggression, would it take place. But we must all consider, as our friend hon’ble Member Shri Anthony has said, whether this is really within the realm of possibility or whether it is a remote consideration or thing.

In a situation like this, when we obviously have the upper hand, we are in a position to guide affairs. Had we stood up saying as when two children are quarrelling, ‘You have taken my toy, I must have it before I speak to you or something like that, if we had that kind of attitude, what would have happened?

It may be that the talks would not have broken down, we could have said, ‘Mr.
Bhutto, go back and we shall meet again.’ And the same would happen next time. We could keep on meeting and have very pleasant meetings or perhaps not so pleasant. What would have been achieved? Would India have been stronger? Would we have been able to relax more than what we can today, for instance? We would not. As some historian has said, had the countries of Europe treated Germany with the understanding that India has shown to Pakistan, there would not have been a Hitler and there would not have been a Second World War.

So, it is a question of the manner of dealing with things. A situation has been created whereby it is, I am not saying impossible, but difficult for Pakistan to do very much against us. It is for us, by our action, by our behaviour, to see that this situation is maintained. This is not done by taking up a hard attitude or soft attitudes, but by assuming a situation whereby the capacity for Pakistan or any other country acting against us minimized.

Several Members have pointed out that the situation has changed in Pakistan.
I think the leadership of Pakistan is fully aware of the chance. We in India are fully aware that the situation has changed in India also. It is not the situation which pertained at the time of Tashkent; it is not the situation which pertained at the time of previous arguments; it is different situation. Today we have the whole Indian public, and, in spite of the Jan Sangh, it is a united public, it is united on the main issues, it is united in guarding its interests. I do not think it is feasible for anybody to go against the interests of the people.
Shri Hukum Chand Kachwai (In Hindi): Go amongst the people, then you will know.

Shrimati Indira Gandhi: I do not need Shri Kachwai’s advice on what I should do, nor do the people want his advice.

As I said, we are not afraid of Pakistan; we are not afraid of any other people either also. But, we do realize that the danger is not so much from Pakistan as it is from those forces who envisage confrontation on this sub-continent, or confrontation in Asia, to be in their interest. As I have said on a previous occasion, Asia is a continent which has given great richness to the world. It is to the exploitation of Africa and Asia that today the affluent countries owe their wealth and their riches and their industrial advance.

But we remain where we are. Why? Because, we are caught up in past thinking. Somebody provokes us and we get provoked into saying, ‘all right, let us fight amongst ourselves.’ We do not see that the third parties are taking advantage of us.

The time has come when Asia must wake up to its destiny, must wake up to the real needs to its people, must stop fighting amongst ourselves, no matter what our previous quarrels, no matter what the previous hatred and the bitterness. The time has come today when we must bury the past. We should see in what way we can make the people of Asia, who were rich not only in heritage, once more regain – I won’t say past glory, because I don’t believe in that kind of glory, but certainly a status in the world, where they can also mould the future in order to make the world a fit place for man to live in.

This is the vision of the future which must guide us today. If we get entangled in petty quarrels then we have to say good bye to such a future and we will always be enmeshed in conflicts. That is why we must now look, not to the past, but to the future. If we say we must look to the past, how can we ask Pakistan not to look to the past? We have to choose – either both look to the past or both say, ‘Good-bye to the past. Let us try to build a new future’. It is easier for us to say good-bye to the past because we have never preached hatred. At the worst times, we have expressed our concern for the people of Pakistan, have expressed our sorrow at their being deluded by their leaders, by their military dictatorship and so no. We have never preached any hatred against Pakistan. So, for us, it is a little easier; but in the case of Pakistan which has promoted a hate-campaign, and which has attacked India so many times, is it realistic to expect a sudden wishing away of past attitude and adoption of new? These things do not come about by wishing or wanting. I think that President Bhutto is making a sincere effort to take his people go towards a new future. Whether he will succeed or not, I do not know. But at least, he is making an effort; and I think that it is in our interest that his efforts to turn the face of Pakistan from its past hatred and bitterness to a new future of peace and friendship is very much worth supporting.

During the debate, it was also said that certain remarks here were made for political purposes. This is a ridiculous statement. There is nothing in the world which is not political. The people who consider themselves as non-political are usually those who do not want change, but they are no less political than those who do want change.

We also remember that at the time of Bangladesh also, while everybody was with us and broadly supported us, there were parties which tried to take political advantage of the situation. They did raise the sort of issues which they thought would catch the public imagination, which would show the Government in a poor light, whether it was the question of the refugees or the question of marching our Army in to Bangladesh or anything else. Therefore, let us not get pulled by these soft words or imagined that these things were not political. All of us in this House are political beings, and we are very conscious of the political action taken by others. Had there been no political motives, there would have been no reason to have the sort of tamasha (show) held on the border – that is the only word that describes it. It was a tamasha that the people regarded it also – or to have the sort of tamasha that we witnessed here.

There is one other point to demonstrate how little regard these people have for truth. Almost every day, there is some story or other in their newspaper which is completely fabricated and baseless. Today there was one which caused me some worry, something about a Pakistani attack on Naya Chor. I have enquired and am told that it is absolutely baseless. It is completely fabricated. So you see that there is constant effort to renew an atmosphere of confrontation, of giving out news that would incite people.

I do not want to say anything more at this stage. But there is one point – some Members from my own party talk about hope in the leadership and do on, but this leadership has always stood for one thing, and that is hope in the people of India. Let us not lose that because that is our strength. I think that is India’s strength. We are with the people. My colleague Shri Swaran Singh reminded me of another point. It seems that apart from the other heavy work that the Jan Sangh has, they indulge in eaves dropping on telephone contestations – imaginary ones. I have not phoned to anybody while I was in Simla, neither privately nor officially.

I do not remember whether the hon’ble Member said that I phoned or Sardar Saheb (Swaran Singh) phoned or Shri Yeshwantrao Chavan) phoned or Shri Jagjivan Ram phoned or Shri F.A Ahmed (they were Central Ministers) phoned or somebody else did so, on our behalf. That is what I am replying to. It is immaterial whether anybody spoke to any foreign country, spoke to Moscow. I categorically declare that nobody spoke to any foreign country at all. We did receive a large number of messages from various countries hoping and wishing that the talks would be successful, but nobody gave us any advice as to what we should do for the good reason that they know that our reaction to such advice is not very good. We like advice on some occasions, but not on all occasions, because each country must make its own decisions. It is only the country itself and the leaders of that country can judge what is in the interest of the country. Nobody from outside, however great a friend of India, or enemy can tell us what is in the true interest of India. We know, as I have said earlier, that nobody from outside can be interested in our strength; it is only we ourselves who are concerned.

Therefore, I plead with the hon'ble Members of the Jan Sangh not to be the voice of outside reaction as well as of reaction inside the country. Today they are repeating what the enemies of India outside are saying. That is what the Jan Sangh is propagating.

I know that the House has supported the agreement and the entire world has supported it. let us do so with grace and dignity.

CONFIDENTIAL

Letter from External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to Pakistani Minister for Political Affairs Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi.

New Delhi, August 4, 1972

PERSONAL

4th August, 1972

Excellency,

You would no doubt have received word that we have ratified the Simla Agreement and with the receipt of the Instruments of Ratification by your Government, the Agreement would come into forces. We are now looking ahead to a speedy and smooth implementation of the various provisions of the Simla Agreement.

2. I am taking the liberty of writing to you. I had the pleasure of meeting you at Simla during the Indo-Pakistan Summit talks. There is one matter – a human and political problem – to which I would like to invite your attention. This concerns the Pakistani nationals belonging to the minority community living in the areas captured by Indian forces adjoining the Rajasthan/Gujarat borders during the recent conflict. Many of these Pakistan nationals who either remained in the occupied territory in their homes or in camps which had to be set up by the Government of India for their welfare, or came into Indian territory are apprehensive and uncertain about their staying on in their homes when the territories are returned to Pakistan. As they belong to the land which is being restored to Pakistan, it is only fit and proper that they should remain there. The question is can India and Pakistan resolve the anxiety of these people in the spirit of mutual accommodation shown at Simla? My Prime Minister had raised this matter with his Excellency the President of Pakistan at Simla, and the President had been good enough to assure her that he would take suitable steps to reassure these people and ensure their staying on in safety and honour in their hearths and homes in Pakistan. His Excellency the President had suggested that he would send one for two leaders of the area, including a member of the National Assembly, Mr. Rana Chandra Singh, to visit these refugees and prevail upon them to stay on in Pakistan. Subsequently, the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister, Mr. P.N. Haksar, had written to the Special Assistant of the President, Mr. Rafi Raza on the 14th July, in the same connection.

3. Now that the Agreement has been ratified and the Army commanders of the two sides are to discuss shortly the programme of withdrawals to the international border, you may kindly discuss this matter with his Excellency the President of Pakistan. Both sides are looking forward to the return of good relations between our two countries. The people living on a either side of the border should not be under any sense of fear or suspicion. It appears to be necessary that appropriate atmosphere and conditions would have to be created so that these people may have a sense of security. This can be brought about by suitable action at the political level and would also have to be backed by affective administrative measures in Pakistan territory. The size of the problem is not very large and I thought I should seek your good offices for initiating suitable action on the Pakistan side which would enable these people to continue to remain there or which might enable those who have crossed over to the Indian side to return to their hearths and homes. The success of our two countries to deal with this matter affectively would go a long way in building goodwill among people in the area, apart from mitigating human suffering.

4. I shall be grateful if you could kindly indicate the steps which are being taken in this matter.

With warm personal regards,

Yours sincerely

Sd/- (Swaran Singh)

His Excellency
Mr. Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi
Minister for Political Affairs and Communications, Government of Pakistan

0720. Letter from Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to Prime Minister of Sri Lanka Sirima R.D. Bandaranaike.

New Delhi, August 7, 1972

My dear Prime Minister,

Very thoughtful of you to send me a framed photograph of the statue of the Sedant Buddha of Anuradhapura. My father and I both admired it and all these years I have kept it at the entrance of my own home. Thank you for thinking of me.

I regret that I have not been able to reply to your letter of June 14. I was away in Sweden, Czechoslovakia and Hungary. Soon after my return from there, I had to go to Simla. I am taking the earliest opportunity to share with you my thought on the subject of the meeting of the non-aligned States. I agree that it would be useful to have a summit meeting of the non-aligned countries in the near future. However, I feel that such a meeting should be preceded by intensive consultations and careful preparations as was done in the case of the Lusaka summit. I hope that the Foreign Ministers who are meeting in Georgetown will be able to find an acceptable date, possibly in 1973.

So far, non-aligned meetings, whether at the summit or at the ministerial level, had been convened whenever it was felt that there was a distinct need for holding them in the light of the prevailing world situation. I believe that this is a good practice and should be continued. Institutionalizing arrangements for the holding of the summit meetings is likely to diminish their importance and impact. Therefore, we should meet as and when necessary.

I agree that the next summit should be held in Asia. We will be glad if we could meet in Ceylon in recognition of the role you have been playing in the non-aligned movement. I hope that this matter will be satisfactorily resolved in Georgetown and a consensus will emerge in favor of having a meeting in Ceylon.

I meant to write to you about the Simla summit. I need not dwell on the agreement itself the text of which must be known to you. In his private talks with me, President Bhutto told me that although he himself was the father of the policy of confrontation with India, the situation had entirely changed and he now believed in peaceful cooperation. The two points he was most anxious about were, firstly, the withdrawal of troops and, secondly, the return of the prisoners of war. With regard to the second, the vast majority of the POWs had surrendered to a joint command of the Indian Army and the Bangladesh forces in Bangladesh. Hence, no decision can be taken about them without the concurrence of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. We would have no objection to Sheikh Mujib participating in the talks, but he himself feels strongly that he should not meet President Bhutto was somewhat upset at this attitude but hinted that he might recognize Bangladesh before the matter comes up in the United Nations, i.e. in August or beginning of September. On the Indian side, we felt that durable peace was not possible without a settlement of the Kashmir question. The President assured me that he would like to do this and seemed to accept what he himself called a “line of peace” on the border. However he did not wish to make this public at present.

The President’s approach was not evident in the attitude of his officials and it is difficult to believe that the President was unaware of this. Every day it seemed that the talks would break and it was only with great patience and perseverance that an amicable atmosphere was restored finally and almost at the last moment an Agreement was reached. So far as we are concerned, it is not wholly satisfactory and many matters remain to be settled. But it is a beginning. Much depends on President Bhutto’s attitude and the direction he gives to his people. We hope that the Agreement will lead to a new era of cooperation and peace between the two countries.

With Warm regards and best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

(Indira Gandhi)

Her Excellency Sirima R.D. Bandaranaike, M.P., Prime Minister of Sri Lanka,

August 7, 1972

Embassy of Switzerland

The Embassy of Switzerland presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India and has the honour to inform the Ministry of the following communication which the Embassy received this morning at 11.00 a.m. from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan for onward transmission to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India:

BEGIN

From: Iftikhar Ali
    Foreign Secretary
    Ministry of Foreign Affairs
    Government of Pakistan
    Islamabad

To: His Excellency
    Mr. T.N. Kaul
    Foreign Secretary
    Ministry of External Affairs
    Government of India
    New Delhi

Excellency,

This is to inform you that the Government of Pakistan has taken certain decisions pertaining to Indian nationals in Pakistan and that the following press statement is being issued in Pakistan at 18.00 hours today:

( i ) Now that the Simla Agreement has come into force with the exchange of instruments of ratification, the Government of Pakistan has decided to take further measures to relieve the difficulties of Indian Nationals in Pakistan. Accordingly all Indian civilians who had been detained for illegal entry into Pakistan before December 3, 1971, and those interned during the hostilities in December 1971 are being released. So, all Indian nationals who had entered Pakistan on regular visas and have been stranded in Pakistan since December 3, 1971, may now leave Pakistan.

( ii ) This decision of the Government of Pakistan has already been communicated to the International Committee of the Red Cross which had approached the Government in this connection.
( iii ) To facilitate the departure of Indian nationals, the Wagah border post will be opened on a date or dates to be announced as soon as possible.

With the assurance of my highest consideration.

Ends

The Embassy of Switzerland avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India the assurances of its highest consideration.

0722. Letter from Pakistan Foreign Secretary to Indian Foreign Secretary sent through the Swiss Embassy.

Aide – Memorie

With reference to the Aide-memoire of the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, dated August 7, 1972, the Embassy of Switzerland has received this afternoon the following message from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan for onward transmission to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India:

BEGINS

From: Mr. Iftikhar Ali
Foreign Secretary
Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Government of Pakistan
Islamabad

To: His Excellency
S.K. Banerji
Secretary
Ministry of External Affairs
Government of India

Excellency,

We have received your message, which was delivered to us by the Swiss Embassy on the 8th August, 1972, in which you have asked for certain clarifications about the exact categories and number of Indian nationals who would be released and allowed to leave Pakistan under the decision of the Government of Pakistan.

2. The following categories of Indian civilians are covered by this decision:
   a) Indian nationals who had entered Pakistan on regular travel documents and have been stranded in Pakistan since the out-break of hostilities in 1971. The number is estimated at 6,500.
   b) Indian civilians who were interned during the hostilities in December, 1971. These would include seamen and civilians from the areas occupied by Pakistan during the conflict. Their number is about 300.
   c) All Indian civilians who had been detained in Pakistan prior to the war on the charge of illegal entry into Pakistan. Their exact number is unknown but is believed to be small.

3. Those Indian civilians who are serving sentences, after having been convicted on criminal charges, are not included among those to be released. This category of civilians has no relation to the events of 1971.

With assurances of my highest consideration.

0723. Extracts from President Bhutto’s address to the Pakistan National Assembly.

Islamabad, August 14, 1972.

The fact that our brothers in the East have now chosen to call themselves Bangladesh, a secular state, does not make them cease to be Muslims. Their motivation and inspiration is Muslim. Mere physical severance from this part does not and cannot change this basic and primeval reality. Let us not forget easily that Bengali separatists have consistently and continuously based their case on the 1940 Resolution itself. Mr. Ataur Rehman, Maulana Bhashani, and even Shaikh Mujibur Rehman spoke repeatedly and with eloquence on Muslim separatism in the sub-continent on this basis. So how has separation negated the two-nation theory? How has it changed the basis of Muslim nationhood in the sub-continent? Our future relationship with the Eastern part of the country remains to be determined. It cannot be determined in isolation. The issues facing the sub-continent will have to be faced painfully and in their totality.

I had hoped there would be full debate on the subject in this session of the House followed by a positive decision. But as I explained recently this is not now possible. The dialogue that we expected to establish with Dacca authorities in July has not taken place. We have not changed our position regarding East Pakistan. We unambiguously stated time and again that the resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council of the United Nations adopted on the 7th and 21st December 1971 respectively should be enforced. We continue to maintain this position steadfastly. Those members of the international community, both great and small powers, who uphold right and justice, will, I believe, continue to support our right position, our position of principles. In doing so they will not only be supporting Pakistan but the principles of international law, justice and morality. They have said that we are prepared to discuss our future relationship and links with the leaders of East Pakistan discussions free in every sense and free from any preconditions. We have said that these discussions are necessary before any decision can be taken. We continue to maintain this position. It is not we but the Dacca authorities who have refused to come to grips with an inescapable dialogue, the only sensible and civilized way to resolve our problems, or for that matter the problems of any people. We are deeply grateful to those friendly countries that have stood by us. We will remain beholden to them. Let me take this opportunity to repeat again and categorically that we will, at all times, keep these friends fully informed of developments in our endeavour to hold discussions between the elected leaders of the two wings to determine our future links and relationship.
The present developments in the Security Council will remain related to the developments here. We will speak with the same voice and we will take the same stand; there should be no doubt in anyone’s mind of this obvious necessity.

Hounourable Members, those who speak of objective reality should know that the only objective reality, in lasting sense, in this sub-continent is that Muslims and Hindus are separate nations. This does not mean that the separate nations must continue to live in a state of perpetual vendetta. Geography with its cruel compulsions has placed a burden of responsibility on us. Surely we can learn to live and let live. This is the process that the Simla Agreement has set in motion.

SECRET
Telegram from Principal Secretary to Prime Minister to High Commissioner in Bangladesh.
New Delhi, August 14, 1972.
TELEGRAM
MOST IMMEDIATE
High Commissioner from Haksar. Personal
Your telegrams 731 of August 11 and 736 of August 11 and 736 of August 12. our Foreign Minister is at present away in Guyana and is returning only early tomorrow morning. He has had conversations with Foreign Ministers of non-aligned countries on Bangladesh’s admission to the United Nations. We shall know his assessment only when he returns. We have also asked our Permanent Representative in New York to let us have his assessment. In the meantime, you may like to speak to the Foreign Minister and the Acting Prime Minister along the following lines-

(I) Bhutto’s publicly stated position on recognition of Bangladesh has certainly altered since Simla Summit. This might be due to consolidation of opposition to him internally. There is also visible deterioration in the situation prevailing in Sindh and in Baluchistan too. His opponents might, therefore, be in a stronger position to use the question of recognition of Bangladesh as also the Simla Summit against him. The Chinese must be aware of this and are probably, for their own reasons, trying to throw some spanner in the works.

(ii) Bangladesh should deal with the objections raised by the Chinese and Pakistanis on a factual basis without bringing into it acerbity and request all those Governments who have recognized Bangladesh to give a public expression of their support to the application for admission. A widespread expression of such support between now and August 21 might have effect on the Chinese.

(iii) All our Missions, including those situated in the countries who are members of the Security Council, have been directed to actively canvass support in favour of Bangladesh’s admission.

(iv) As for Bangladesh or India raising the question of legitimacy of Pakistan continuing to be a member of the U.N., we are examining this matter. However, considering that there are still a very large number of countries who even while supporting the admission of Bangladesh would not wish to sever their connections with Pakistan, it is unlikely that argument to unseat Pakistan would carry wide acceptance. If this assessment is correct, which it appears to be, then merely raising the matter without winning point is not likely to have any effect and might even adversely affect Bangladesh’s interest.

2. You have rightly emphasized in paragraph 3 of telegram 731 that even while concluding Simla Agreement, our Prime Minister took particular care to safeguard the interests of Bangladesh by refusing to discuss the question of repatriation of prisoners of war. It was also made quite clear to Bhutto that unless Bangladesh was recognized, and thus becomes a party to a decision on the question of disposition of prisoners of way, we can have no agreement. We continue to adhere to this view. The Pakistanis were extremely anxious at Simla to establish diplomatic relations with us. We told them that this has to await normalization of our relations. As I had reported to Sheikh Saheb, the Pakistanis had even brought to Simla their Ambassador designates to India. There are provisions in the Simla Agreement for normalization of communications, trade, etc. we are at present withholding action on implementing this part of the agreement. However, our Bangladesh friends should recognize that a country like India cannot abrogate an Agreement which has been solemnly ratified. Such a step on our part would have adverse repercussions.

3. We fully endorse the advice given by you in paragraph 2 of your telegram 736.
0725. Letter from Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi to Pakistan President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

New Delhi, August 19, 1972.

Dear Mr. President,

You must have heard of the widespread discussion which took place in India on the Simla Agreement. Many forces combined to oppose this Agreement within our Parliament and outside. My colleagues and I in the Government of India and our Party took an uncompromising stand in defence of the Agreement. We have every interest in fulfilling the Agreement both in letter and in spirit.

In Simla I spoke to you about the problems of the refugees who have come into the Rajasthan, Sind and Gujarat sectors. I was reassured by your response that you also were aware of this problem. My Principal Secretary, Mr. P.N. Haksar, wrote about this to your Special Assistant Mr. Rafi Raza, on the 14th July, 1972. As there was no answer, my colleague, Sardar Swaran Singh, wrote to Mr. Jatoi*. However, we have had no reply so far.

A certain shadow has also been cast by the manner in which the question of the delineation of the line of control in Jammu and Kashmir is being considered by representatives of Pakistan. The reported statements of the spokesman of your Foreign Office appear to us to be at variance with our understanding of the nature and character of the line of control.

We could not reach a settlement on the question of the prisoners of war in Simla because of the absence of Bangladesh. We had hoped that this particular difficulty would be sorted out, enabling Bangladesh to participate in our future meetings. This hope has received a set back by some of the pronouncements on the subject which have been reported.

We had agreed that we would meet again at a mutually convenient time and also that our representatives would meet to further discuss several matters of great importance to both our countries. I am naturally anxious that nothing should stand in the way of these contemplated meetings. However, I feel constrained to point out that some recent developments are causing anxiety. In Simla there was a spirit of understanding and mutual confidence which enabled us to reach an agreement. It would be a pity if that spirit were allowed to languish.

In order to dispel any doubts about the future perspective of settling outstanding problems I suggest that our representatives might meet once again to exchange views. If convenient you could send a representative of your confidence to New Delhi for this purpose. However, if for some reason this is not possible, I would ask my colleague, Sardar Swaran Singh, to go to Pakistan to confer with you. Sardar Swaran Singh would be accompanied by some high officials. I hope that it will be possible to hold the proposed meeting in New Delhi or in Islamabad in the immediate future.

With regards,

Yours Sincerely,

(Indira Gandhi)

His Excellency,
Mr. Zulfiquar Ali Bhutto,
President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan,
Islamabad.

0726. Letter as approved by the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister for the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

New Delhi, August 19, 1972.

Prime Minister’s Secretariat

I have taken the liberty of amending the draft of a message to be sent to the Pakistan Government which you had kindly sent me yesterday. I place below the revised draft.

(P.N. Haksar)
19-8-1972

Secretary (East). M.E.A.

From: S.K. Banerji,
Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs,
Government of India,
New Delhi.
To: Mr. Iftikhar Ali,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of Foreign Affairs,
Government of Pakistan,
Islamabad.

Excellency,

In the speech delivered by his Excellency President Bhutto before the National Assembly of Pakistan on the 14th August, 1972, which was heard over Radio Pakistan, the President is understood to have referred to the UN General Assembly Resolution of 17th December, 1971, and the US Security Council Resolution of 21st December, 1971, in the following terms: "We unambiguously stated time and again that the Resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council of the United Nations adopted on the 17th and 21st December, 1972, respectively, should be enforced. We continue to maintain this position steadfastly."

The Government of India wishes to seek a clarification from the Government of Pakistan as to the implications of this statement attributed to the President of Pakistan, on the continued applicability of the UN Resolutions, even after the Indo-Pakistan Agreement on Bilateral Relations signed at Simla on 2nd July, 1972.

The operative paragraphs 1 of the U.N. General Assembly Resolution of December 7, 1971 as well as the Security Council Resolution of December 21, 1971 provide for an immediate ceasefire and withdrawal of the armed forces. The ceasefire came into effect on December 17, 1971. As for the withdrawal of the armed forces, paragraph 4(i) of the Simla Agreement provides for it. In the light of these facts, it is not clear why it is considered necessary to refer to the U.N. General Assembly and the Security Council Resolutions of December 7 and December 21, respectively.

As for the reference to the ceasefire line in J&K in the operative paragraph 1 of the Security Council Resolution, the Government of Pakistan is aware that it has been superseded by paragraph 4(ii) of the Simla Agreement which enjoins upon the parties to the Agreement to respect "the line of control resulting from the ceasefire of December 17, 1971".

Paragraph 2 of the General Assembly Resolution deals with the voluntary return of the refugees to their homes. This too has been fully implemented and all the refugees have returned to their homes in Bangladesh.

Operative paragraph 3 of the Security Council Resolution calls for "all measures necessary to preserve human life, and for the observance of the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and to apply in full their provisions as regards the protection of wounded and sick prisoners of war and the civilian population". As the Government of Pakistan are aware, the reports of the I.C.R.C. on their visits to camps for POWs and civilian internees in India bear ample proof that these Pakistani nationals are being treated humanely and in accordance with the provisions of the Geneva Conventions. The sick and wounded prisoners have continuously been repatriated to Pakistan in batches. Thus, the objective set out in paragraph 3 of the Security Council Resolution of December 21, 1971 has been met.

Neither of the two U.N. Resolutions, cited by his Excellency the President of Pakistan, refer specifically to the repatriation of prisoners of war. However, this matter was discussed bilaterally, both at the Emissary level meeting in Murree and at the Indo-Pakistan Summit in Simla. India had clearly indicated on both occasions that this subject can be finally settled only if the Bangladesh Government is also a party to the settlement as the Pakistani forces in the eastern theatre had surrendered to the Joint Command of India and Bangladesh. Further, it was linked with the establishment of durable peace between India and Pakistan, as later embodied in the last paragraph of the Simla Agreement.

It would appear that the recent interpretation given by the Pakistan Government to the implementation of the U.N. Resolutions of December 7 and 21, 1971 is in contradiction of the factual position mentioned above; in fact, it amounts to the by-passing and ignoring of the Simla Agreement, which enjoins the two Governments to adopt the method of bilateral negotiations for the settlement of differences and for the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent.

The Government of India are of the view that the stand now taken by the Government of Pakistan casts a shadow on the Simla Agreement which needs to be removed if the Agreement is not to be put in jeopardy.

It will be appreciated if a clarification is received from the Government of Pakistan on the applicability of the U.N. Resolutions of December 7 and 21, 1971 to the situation emerging after the signing of the Simla Agreement.

0727. Letter from Pakistan President to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Rawalpindi, August 22, 1972

President’s House
Rawalpindi

August 22, 1972

Dear Madam Prime Minister,

I thank you for your letter of 19th August.

2. I should like at the outset to assure you that we are determined to ensure that the Simla Agreement is implemented in its letter and spirit. As was to be expected, the Agreement has aroused considerable opposition in certain quarters in Pakistan, as it has in India. We have firmly resisted this opposition and will continue to do so. I am glad to note that he majority of the people in both countries have approved the Agreement and wish it to constitute the basis of future relationship between our two countries.

3. We were contemplating that the meeting of the representatives envisaged in the Simla Agreement might take place some time next month. In the meantime, in view of what you have stated and in order to remove any impression that may lurk in the mind of the public in your country or ours that the spirit of Simla has in any way suffered a set-back, I consider it necessary that discussions between our representatives should be initiated without loss of time and that they should meet on the earliest possible date. I have nominated Mr. Aziz Ahmed as my Special Envoy for this purpose. He will be assisted by my Special Assistant, Mr. Rafi Raza and a small team of senior officials from the Foreign office. If it is convenient to your Government, the team will arrive in New Delhi on August 25.

4. I regret we were not able to inform you earlier of what we were doing about our nationals who had moved into India as a result of the war last year. Mr. Jatoi has written to Sardar Swaran Singh on this subject explaining what we plan to do to deal with this problem. I need hardly reiterate that these refugees will not only be welcome to return to their homes but will be assured of a life of safety and dignity as Pakistan nationals.

5. I do not anticipate that any difficulty is likely to arise in the delineation of the Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir by our senior Commanders. I find that the Suchetgarh meeting reached businesslike and sensible conclusions, which should facilitate the quick determination of this Line. As far as I know the delineation of this Line has proceeded reasonably smoothly since then. In this respect we shall adhere to the provisions of the Simla Agreement.

6. The question of repatriation of prisoners of war continues to be a matter of grave concern to us. Apart from other considerations, as you know, this is fundamentally a humanitarian issue. We regret that Mujibur Rahman decided not to attend the Simla meeting. Some of the statements by the Dacca authorities since then have created the impression that they intend to use the issue of repatriation of the prisoners of war as a lever to extract recognition from Pakistan. This, and their negative response to the conciliatory gestures we have made over the past several months has inevitably led to a hardening of public opinion in Pakistan on the question of recognition. I have, therefore, found myself unable to refer this question to the National Assembly at this stage, although I had originally planned to do so. We continue to hope, however, that wiser counsel will prevail and that some progress in relations between Islamabad and Dacca can be made in the near future.

7. We are anxious, as I am sure you too must be, that human suffering should end without further delay. With this object in mind my Government decided recently, as a first step, to release all interned Indian nationals and to remove restrictions on the exit also of those Indians who have been stranded in Pakistan since the beginning of hostilities last December.

8. We trust Mujibur Rahman and his Government can be prevail upon not to mar the Simla spirit of understanding and goodwill. We find reassurance from your letter that your Government wishes that spirit to continue to mark future relations between our two countries.

With kind regard,

Yours sincerely,

Sd/ - Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

Her Excellency Mrs. Indira Gandhi,
Prime Minister of the Republic of India,
New Delhi.

0728. Letter from Pakistan Minister for Political Affairs Ghulam Mustafa Khan Jatoi to External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh.

Islamabad, August 22, 1972.

Excellency,

I thank you for your letter of August 4, 1972, on the subject of our nationals who crossed over to India following Indian military operations in Tharparkar district. I regret there has been some delay in writing to your Government on this subject.

I should like to point out at the outset that the President has not been unmindful of his talk with your Prime Minister on this subject. This matter has been engaging his personal attention. Since his return from Simla, he has received Rana Chander Singh and discussed with him the question of how our nationals now in India can be persuaded to come back to their homes after the Indian army has withdraw from that area. Under instructions from the President, Rana Chander Singh has also called on the Secretary General of the Foreign office and on the Foreign Secretary and discussed this matter with them. I should like to state categorically that the President and his Government are most keen to ensure that these refugees return to their hearths and homes in Pakistan at the earliest possible opportunity.

As a result of these discussions it has been decided that as soon as the Indian Army has withdrawn from that area, mines and other hazards have been cleared and it has been safe for the return of its original inhabitants, necessary steps will be taken to facilitate their return to this area. A Reception Camp will be set up at near the area and those who are now in India would be invited to come back to their homes. I may mention, that at the appropriate time, similar Reception Camps will also be set up for the reception of all our nationals who are presently interned in India.

In the meantime, it has been decided, in accordance with Rana Chandar Singh’s suggestion, that he and two Members of Parliament from Tharparkar should visit the area, even while it is in occupation of the Indian Army, to reassure the people who are still residing there and also invite a number of prominent Hindu leaders of the area currently in India, to be named by him, so that he could speak to them with a view to persuading the refugees to return. The Government of Pakistan would appreciate any assistance that your Government may be in a position to give in this regard. Please be assured that our Government would do everything possible to facilitate the return of these displaced persons to their homes and to ensure that they live there in safety and honour as citizens of Pakistan.

Yours sincerely

Sd. Ghulam Mustafa Khan Jatoi
Minister for Political Affairs and Communication

* The transcript of this discussion was not available.
June regarding the scrupulous maintenance of the cease fire and the resulting quiet conditions have convinced me that we are able to maintain tranquility along the line of control in the future also. Our troops in J & K are only too familiar with the line of control but there are inevitably some areas where there are minor differences which must be resolved immediately if our aim of initiating the processes of durable peace is to be realized. With this in view and in order to avoid any future dispute, I consider it essential that our Representatives should meet to clearly delineate the line and have this marked on maps. Finally, the message says that the delineation of the line of control in J & K should be completed very quickly as I feel that unless this is done, it will leave room for local disputes and confrontation which will mar our efforts to produce congenial conditions for the full implementation of the Simla Agreement. It is for you and I to ensure that we do everything possible to successfully complete the process for the establishment of durable peace as agreed between your President and my Prime Minister.” In the reply from Gen. Tikka Khan to this message, there is no hint at all of the kind of things which were subsequently said from your side. I read from the minutes of the Senior Military Commanders held between August 10 to 12, 1972. Paragraph 6 of our record says:

Now we are surprised. According to our understanding of the Simla Agreement, we came to an agreement that there was to be a line different from the cease-fire line of 1949. It was a line which may be called a Simla Agreement line and, therefore, to import into it either the description or the conception of the cease-fire line of 1949 is, I must say, surprising. And I think this kind of argument is still going on and various proposals are made in regard to its nomenclature. The message received from our DMO says that “the Pak representative stated that his stand on question of a line of control in J & K is that such a description can be given only to that portion of the CFL which has been disturbed. Undisturbed portion of the CFL would continue to be called the CFL and should be governed by the provisions of the Karachi Agreement including the use of U.N. Observers.” Yesterday, you said that this matter could be sorted out. You said that there were no difficulties and probably the nomenclature would not present any difficulties. The nomenclature should be totally free from difficulties. These difficulties were neither anticipated by your COAS nor ours. Suddenly for these difficulties to arise at all leads us to conclude that some things which were not acceptable at Simla at the political level are being sought to be introduced at the level of the Army Commanders, in a matter which ought to have been dealt with politically, if that was your understanding. I am not blaming you for it. I am merely trying to point it at an early stage. This question of 1949 Agreement United Nations Military Observers Group, their role, etc., was the subject-matter of a discussion arising out of a draft which you had presented.
Paragraph 1 of the draft was to the following effect:

“Withdraw all armed forces to their respective Territories and to positions which fully respect the cease-fire line in J & K supervised by the U.N. Military Observers in....”

This draft was discussed between the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India and your President was kind enough to say to my Prime Minister that he understood our sensitivity on this question and subsequently when we worked it out, it finally represented a different picture. I do not want to go into the legalities of this matter, but I have broadly stated the position that the cease-fire line, by its very nature, is different from the line of actual control. In 1965, there was the Tashkent Agreement in which the cease-fire line is specifically referred to. It had to be referred to, because it is a matter of common knowledge, understanding that............. Every fresh war brings an end to the cease-fire line. That being the position, to hark back to the Karachi Agreement, which has been wiped out by the tragic conflict, is not consistent with the legal regime. It is not consistent with our understanding of the Simla Agreement. It is not consistent with the exchanges arising out of your draft paragraph. And, therefore, we have this annoying question. Why rake it up? What is its significance? That question I would like to put to you with great respect. I should have thought that this was a matter which was so clear that it was not relevant to go ahead defining this line and call it a line of control resulting from the cease-fire. Therefore, when the matter is so simple, when there is a document of discussion and yet the thing is raked, we felt that it is a legitimate cause for doubts in our minds that something else is behind it than what appears on the surface. Yesterday you said that although you have agreed to regulation of our relations on a bilateral basis – a great achievement – you said that “we are able to build up a case for going to the U.N. Security Council, although you said you, on your part, reserved the right ‘at present’ to go to the U.N. I was disturbed by the use of the words ‘at present’. We are bound to ask: Are we here buying time, as it were, and buying time for agitating the matter not in bilateral, but in international forums? Then, we are entitled to know if that is your understanding. Our understanding at Simla was that for variety of domestic reasons, President Bhutto was not able to say publicly certain things which he was prepared to say privately. We can understand the domestic compulsions of President Bhutto. But to say publicly that everything is reserved and bilateralism is only for the time being at present, that future remains dark and uncertain etc. – these things were said not by Opposition leaders or your Ministers, by the Head of your State – has caused doubts in our minds. Our understanding was that President Bhutto said that he would go so far as to call it a line of peace, but he cannot call it so publicly. We can understand that. But now an altogether different interpretation is put on it. And now I cannot understand proposals being made on compromise formula, this kind of formula with certain portions should be called something and other called something else. On the Military Observers Group, I refer to record of a meeting between the Prime Minister, Foreign Secretary, Secretary (East) and President Bhutto, yourself, Mr. Rafi Raza and Mr. Iftikhar Ali Khan.

“President We have exchanged three drafts. We have received the latest Indian draft. We have to get something on the basis of the Indian draft. Whatever our apprehensions…..

Foreign Minister referring to article 5 of the Pakistan draft enquired if in this matter ….

Mr. Aziz Ahmed There had been a very preliminary discussion.
President Bhutto told P.M. yesterday that as far as U.N. Observers were concerned, we need not deal with them.

Now if we cannot maintain the inviolability of the line we hope would be delineated, there would be further complications. U.N. Observers have certainly not helped peace in the past and so far as we are concerned, their presence gives us no feeling of assurance. This will ……… Our army and your army, between our leaders and your leaders. So far as we are concerned, the whole regime of 1949 cease-fire is dead and gone, just as it was buried in the past, because we would not like to do things ……… That was the philosophy, hope and aspiration which sustained us and which brought about the Simla Agreement. If you think that U.N. Observers have some role to play, it gives us no hope. In great earnestness and sincerity, I took the opportunity of putting a question, a simple question. Are there any circumstances you envisage at present when you would like to rely on the Security Council or its Resolutions to obtain withdrawal and release of prisoners of war, rather than really on fulfillment of the Simla Agreement paragraph 6 of which deals specifically with the subject?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed : I can answer that question with a straightaway ‘No’. We will have to settle that between ourselves.

Mr. Haksar : I am very glad to hear that. There are a whole lot of things you said yesterday about Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, his psychology etc. it is no part of my brief to defend Sheikh Mujibur Rahman or to speak for him. It is onerous enough for me to speak for my side.

You said one of the troubles was of communication between you and Bangladesh. Long time ago I was student of sociology and there was a big chapter suicide nevertheless interesting subject which has stood me in life to understand other people is that other people’s superstitions are….. superstitions.
Those are the facts to be...... The emotions, sentiments, feelings, right or wrong, and that is why in Simla our Prime Minister was sensitive to difficulties which might........ In fact, my Prime Minister told President Bhutto that he knows his people, he will handle them in his own way. But we realized that we should meet some way, half way, do something ........ We thought of withdrawal because .......... Now Bangladesh, I think, feel strongly about their recognition. They feel that 82 countries have recognized them. They feel that it is natural for them on the strength of their recognition to get in the United Nations. It is a State. They have committed no trespasses against anybody. They have not abrogated any obligations assumed under the Charter by them which would prevent any country to be a member the U.N. and they said that as we are supposed to be friends, we want your support, support of everyone to enter United Nations. I do not think that the line of their reasoning is illegitimate and I do not think that anybody in India would say no. We will not sponsor help in the process of their being taken in the United Nations.

Mr. Aziz Ahmad: I too share that.

Mr. Haksar: Bangladesh had not entered U.N. nevertheless. Lot of people voted for it. One against. Now so far as they are concerned, Bangladesh is not admitted. I understand that it was the view of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman that he wanted to test the realities. Now we have to live with the consequences of it. This matter is postponed and I frankly do not follow the argument. The Chinese say that Bangladesh has not fulfilled her obligations. What obligations we would like to know. Our suspicion is that Bangladesh is merely for India....... That India has not fulfilled her obligations is not correct. Regarding the POWs we are in the process of fulfillment. The General Assembly Resolution talked of ceasefire, return of refugees, withdrawals. All these have been fulfilled and are in the process of being fulfilled. As we read it when the Chinese say that Bangladesh has not fulfilled her obligations, it is pressure on Bangladesh and on us, that we should deal with question of prisoners of war in terms of the Security Council Resolution, which we did not accept in Simla, and that we should not deal with it in terms of paragraph 6. Therefore, I take it that Pakistan has not associated itself with this particular interpretation which the Chinese had put on their self-imposed task of being the only authentic upholder of the Charter of the United Nations. I said yesterday that we in India feel that Chinese are perfectly free to do whatever they like. They are a sovereign State. But we are trying to understand the meaning and consequences of it, because we have seen arguments being advanced from your side which lend colour to the conclusion that it is now your intention to deal with the question of POWs through the instrumentality of other agencies than those contemplated within the Simla Agreement. We have been perfectly straightforward, honest and sincere with you. We told you our difficulties as you told us of your difficulties.
We are not insensitive to your difficulties. Our difficulties are that we cannot deal with the question of prisoners of war in the absence of Bangladesh. You may have good case that they are unreasonable, but I am not wondering what has happened last night is going to help us. As I said yesterday, we are concerned with the consequences of it. You can just as well say, quite rightly, that this is none of our business, but without this we cannot have a move forward. We cannot abrogate our obligations. Time and again we have explained at Simla and today again that we are in difficulty.

Shri Kaul: Without recognition Bangladesh's attitude stiffened.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: May I get one thing out of way first? It is a reference to the question of Bangladesh's desire to enter the U.N., to the effect that Pakistan was acting in coalition with China in opposing Bangladesh's admission to the world body. Well, I thought attack on Pakistan's motives, the characterization of the conduct of Pakistan, of its diplomatic relations with China, I feel that I should protest against this. There is a great improvement. I hope that you are satisfied that our members by and large confine with the requirements of Simla Agreement. If, however, there are any failings on our part, we shall try to improve. But I was sorry to note this attack on us. We have diplomatic relations with China only of coalesive nature and we are designing some prejudices against India. It is very unfortunate that this should be so and I thought I should bring this to your notice.

Now we go back to your statements. I am very glad that you have set out your views frankly. This is what we came for I would also try to be as frank as I can. Let me first assure you that we are not trying to change the Simla Agreement. I want to assure you categorically on that point. I said yesterday that statement by the Indian senior Commander that if the line of control is not delineated, then there will be no withdrawal of our forces from the western border was not a statement which was really relevant to his task. He is not concerned with the line of control on the western border. He was concerned with the very limited task of trying to find out jointly with our Commanders in the area where the line of control lay at the time of the ceasefire of 17th December, 1971. I said that he introduced a political issue. He had no authority to do that. The questions such as to what extent U.N. is involved in this, will be involved in this, whether the U.N. Observers have any role to play, have no role to play, they did not concern the service people. The portion is quoted, I myself noted that, questioning the need for him to raise this issue. It was not his job to raise this matter. So I do not condon his conduct in this regard. I find, reading the press, that something terrible has happened, that we are involved in trying to alter the Simla Agreement. Well, it is good to read your papers which is as if we are being exposed to what they think but I was surprised that this was being blown up into something...... That was the view I expressed hesterday. It is still my view today. So far as we are concerned, there are no serious difficulties in determining the line of control, there will be no difficulty in determining the line of control, there will be no difficulty in determining where exactly the line of control is and our instructions to our men are that if we cannot come to agreement, it does not mean you stop your work but that the line of control must be defined. As I have mentioned yesterday, to be just as you naturally wanted, there is no reason why we should delay the delineation issue. There is certainly no reason why through this very simple thing of delineating the line of control, we should alter the character of Simla Agreement. We do not want it and we have no desire to do so. I would also like to give you one more assurance that of and so far as the extent of which it impinges on your stand on Kashmir or our stand on Kashmir, hear our stand where it will be part of ceasefire line it is your stand. Let us...... by the agreement itself without prejudice to the respective positions of our parties. I do not see really there is any need for us to worry about the implication of the line of control and certainly we have no such worries as you may have been led to believe. So we are quite clear in our mind that tasks assigned to the Commanders is a straightforward one.

This is really a minor matter. It is not going to hurt us. It is not going to help you. There is no desire to alter the Simla Agreement. We are not trying to do that. We have no intention whatever to try and alter the Simla Agreement. I would also give you the other assurance.

Let them call it whatever name. The point is very minor. I have got to get President's clearance that we protect our position. You call it of course the line of control and it is in fact the line of control and this is what we are trying to seek what is the line of control.

I can assure you that President is not going to ....

No political briefs were given to our Army Commanders. Now that we see that the way they handled this on our side, as we see there are mistakes on both sides, both sides ..... We are not going to try and change the Simla Agreement by other line of control. We will not do it and in any case there is neither any ......nor it is possible to do it nor we have any intention to do it.

It is not the object to attempt to change anything what the President said. I have no authority to say nor it is our President's....... What happens is that there is a differences of opinion between you and us on the interpretation of what your Prime Minister said or what our President said. Well, my view is that an impression remains after listening to your very clear, frank and sincere statement yesterday that difference of opinion is not of vital nature.
You also asked me this question that is it our intention to deal with the question of prisoners of war through the instrumentality of other agencies than those contemplated under the Simla Agreement. No. A similar question I answered while you were making this statement. This matter has to be settled between you and us and I see from the way the situation has developed, Bangladesh is creating trouble for both of us. I think the real problem that faces is and we must seek your assistance and help in this. We should really jointly work, instead of sitting 300 miles apart, the line of control delineation and the next step of repatriation of prisoners of war. Sheikh Mujibur Rahman is creating difficulties both for you and us. You may perhaps say that it is what is happening and the fact that he is creating trouble on the question of prisoners of war might persuade our people to...... So far the result has been just the reverse. I do not know whether you saw President's statement of 14 the August in favour of recognition of Bangladesh. Though the atmosphere was hostile in the country, but he felt that he must say something on this issue. Afterwards he felt that this would not be appropriate time and he raised this question in the Assembly; let there be cooling time and let the people recover, those who are opposed to the Simla Agreement.

Mr. Rafi Raza: I think when you said that members of the Government and Party make speeches also. I think I would. I think the party itself will go down...... quite a strong feeling Punjab that is one of my critical support where the issue will be but I would not put it that dissidents number more than handful in any part. But it is the general public feeling, it is not so much concerned as our own PPP members. This may be reflected by the People's Party.

Shri Kaul: Bangladesh's entry to U.N. could have tremendous effect at this time and perhaps soften the public opinion in Pakistan.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: He is to take the atmosphere in the country into account and in the party. You know I told you that President's intention is not to use...... everybody speak his mind. Some of them support the agreement. There are members in the PPP who are against the Simla Agreement. Carrying the Party collectively ........ has to take into account the opinion in the country. This is what you and I have to consider, a joint strategy on this issue. How do we bring Sheikh Mujibur Rahman into this? How do we bring about some change in rather unbending stand on the question of recognition? He can be persuaded to attend the next summit. These are the things we can discuss.

Mr. Haksar: The President was pleased to observe at Murree frankly and I think he repeated to our Prime Minister at Simla probably if he had finished with the question of recognition. But my feeling is that as an observer of the Indian scene in 1966-67 or particularly after 1969 when the Congress Party led by Mrs. Gandhi did not have a majority. There were many occasions when one had to take a decision contrary to one what is regarded as public opinion because once you give in public opinion gets deep. This has been our experience. Here also these chaps Jan Sangh and Swatantra, my good friend Phioo Mody who regards himself ……. Jan Sangh mounted terrific……. They found extraordinary support in Majlis…. than …… because they had grouse on Aligarh Muslim University and they had grouse about the Simla Agreement sell out something which is watered by the blood of the Indian jawans and so on. I suppose if one could bend round……. What I am saying is first of all they should ……. you must ratify through Parliament. We did it before meeting of Parliament. PPP has 18 votes. I take it that other parties, they are opposed to it from the speeches they have made.

Passage of time is a great healer or is it going to complicate matters. Truly speaking, I have no doubt once relations are normalized, good relations with Bangladesh and we really can go places above.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: I cannot advise President on this. He is not changed. It is not after having gone from Simla that there has been change. He knows when this has been done, timing of it, how this to be done. You and I cannot advise that this is the time.

I turned on the Radio and I heard someone praise your bureaucracy. He said that it is the best bureaucracy in Asia and in the world. I wish the same happens in our country.

Well, this is a matter in which we need your help and understanding and some kind of communication, continued exchange ideas between you and us, when we certainly exchange ideas, when we have representatives meeting, but before this break this deadlock.

Buying time. Interested in agitating this matter in international forum. Were we departing from the Simla Agreement. No.

Mr. Haksar: I told you what has caused us anxiety. We recognized that when there is a change from the past, inevitably that past and the future mingle. What we felt was probably not required even so little a thing. Let us say about Kashmir. I know that the official version does not contain, but your Pakistan Times carried shedding of blood. I think too much of blood has already been shed. There was an element of incitement. If from the floor of this House say that ……. This brought comfort to our enemies who were JanSangh. About your quoting various things (Chakravarti’s article in the Hindustan Times). If you look at the press of India as a whole, they have played very constructive role in defending the Simla Agreement. Our Radio has tried to do it. We always had grouse against the……in the past about the so-called……. Well, you can maintain the position that Azad Kashmir is independent. They run their own Radio. Please do something for it. May be, you have persuasive powers, but what they say, it is dreadful, it is not even decent. Shouldn't there be some decency in phraseology?

Draft of Agreed Decisions

In pursuance of the recent exchange of letters between the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan, the representatives of the two sides met in New Delhi from 25 to 28th August, 1972. The Pakistan Delegation comprised

The Indian Delegation

2. The two sides reviewed the developments since the signing of the Simla Agreement and the need to resolve any doubts that may have arisen on either side in order to ensure the smooth implementation of the Agreement both in letter and in spirit. They reaffirmed the determination of the two Governments to implement the provisions of the Simla Agreement in letter and in spirit. They further reaffirmed their mutual obligation to adhere to the principle of bilateralism as embodied in the Simla Agreement for finding a solution of all outstanding problems between the two countries as well as for establishment of durable peace and normalization of relations.

3. The following recommendations to their respective Governments were agreed to by the two delegations: -

(i) The line of control in Jammu & Kashmir resulting from the cease-fire line of December 17, 1971, will be delineate all along its length on maps to be exchanged by the two sides in terms of paragraph 4(ii) of the Simla Agreement and described in detail in the notes appended to the maps. The inviolability of the line of control will be ensured by both the sides bilaterally in accordance with paragraph 4(ii) of the Simla Agreement (without intervention of any outside agency).

(ii) The delineation of the line of control in Jammu & Kashmir, as agreed in sub-paragraph (i) above, will be competed by the 4th of September.

(iii) Withdrawals of the respective forces to the international border will start from the 4th of September and be completed as soon as possible.

(iv) The political leaders designated by His Excellency the President of Pakistan will visit the areas of Sind occupied by the Indian forces and also the camps in India where the Pakistani refugees and the minority communities have taken shelter in order to assure the said refugees that they will be welcome to return to their hearths and homes in Pakistan and assured of a life of safety and dignity as Pakistan nationals. The Indian side will give facilities for these visits in order to reassure the said refugees that they can return both in the occupied areas and elsewhere in Pakistan to a life of safety and dignity. The withdrawal of the Indian forces from the areas of Sind occupied by them will be integrated with the plan of the resettlement of these refugees by the Pakistan authorities.

(v) The two sides agreed that Bangladesh is a necessary party to discuss the repatriation of Pakistan prisoners of war and civilian internees. The Indian side stated that the mutual recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan would facilitate further progress in this regard. The Pakistan side stated that the Pakistan Government had not changed its mind about according recognition to Bangladesh, but it was a question of time.

(vi) Both sides agreed that in accordance with the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement, the case before the ICAO on the hijacking of the IAC plane would be withdrawn without prejudice to the respective claims of each side and settled bilaterally in accordance with the spirit of the Simla Agreement.
Agreed recommendations of the Leaders of the Indian and Pakistani delegations regarding implementation of the Simla Agreement.

New Delhi, August 29, 1972.

In pursuance of the recent exchange of letters between the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan, the representatives of the two sides met in New Delhi from 25th to 29th August, 1972. The Pakistan Delegation comprised Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Special Envoy of the President of Pakistan, Mr. Rafi Raza, Special Assistant to the President of Pakistan and Mr. Abdul Sattar, Director-General, Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The Indian Delegation comprised Mr. P.N. Haksar, Principal Secretary of the Prime Minister of India, Mr. T.N. Kaul, Foreign Secretary, Mr. S.K. Banerji, Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs and Mr. A.S. Chib, Joint Secretary.

2. The two sides reviewed the developments since the signing of the Simla Agreement and the need to resolve any doubts that may have arisen on either side and to ensure the smooth implementation of the Agreement. They reaffirmed the determination of the two Governments to implement the provisions of the Simla Agreement in letter and in spirit.

3. The following recommendations to their respective Governments were agreed to by the two delegations:

(i) The line of control in Jammu & Kashmir resulting from the cease-fire of December 17, 1971 will be delineated along its entire length on maps to be exchanged by the two sides in terms of paragraph 4(ii) of the Simla Agreement. This line will also be described in words in such detail as is adequate to avoid any misunderstanding. The inviolability of the line of control will be ensured by both the sides in accordance with paragraph 4(ii) of the Simla Agreement. It was agreed that the delineation of this line will be completed by the 4th September, 1972.

(ii) In view of certain practical difficulties that have arisen, it may not be possible to complete the process of withdrawals within the period specified in the Simla Agreement. Accordingly, the withdrawals to the international border will be completed by the 15th September, 1972.

(iii) Political leaders from Tharparkar will visit the areas of Sind occupied by the Indian forces in order to assure the inhabitants of the area that they will be welcome to remain in or return from camps in India to their homes in safety and dignity, in accordance with the Plan given by the Director of Military Operations of Pakistan to the Director of Military Operations of India on August 21, 1972 (vide Annexure). Indian side will give the necessary facilities to ensure full implementation of the Plan.

(iv) The Indian side stated that Bangladesh is a necessary party to discuss the repatriation of Pakistani prisoners of war and civilians internees, and that the recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan would facilitate further progress in this regard. Pakistan side noted the Indian view and stated that the question of recognition of Bangladesh is under serious consideration.

(v) Both sides considered it desirable that the case regarding over flights now pending before the I.C.A.O. Council should be settled bilaterally.

ANNEXURE

Resettlement of Displaced Persons

Outline plan for the resettlement in Sind of sections of the minority community displaced as a result of war, handed over by the DMO of Pakistan to the DMO of India on 21-8-1972.

1. The President of Pakistan is anxious that all persons displaced as a result of war shall be rehabilitated in their homes as soon as possible and that the lives, properties and rights of the affected minorities are to be fully safeguarded to enable them to resume life where it was disturbed by war.

2. To this end, under the direction of the President, necessary machinery has been set up, plans made and material resources allotted to enable speedy resettlement of displaced persons.

3. This plan, in outline, is based on the following:

(A) That Indian authorities have agreed in the first instance that they will arrange for as many as possible of the displaced Pakistani nationals who left for India during and after the war to return to their homes before vacating areas in Sind.

(B) That the remaining Pakistani nationals who are unable to return for any reason in the first instance are kept temporarily in camps on the Indian side.
(C) That as soon as Indian forces vacate areas in Sind, Pakistan forces shall move forward to re-occupy these areas. Immediately afterwards the civil administration shall be established which will have a special component organized to implement resettlement and rehabilitation.

(D) Simultaneous with re-establishment of the civil administration, police and paramilitary forces will establish a network of posts with mobile reserves at union level for enforcing necessary authority to curb any hostile activities against the returning minorities.

(E) Relief committees, social welfare bodies and teams consisting of members of the National and Provincial Assemblies of all denominations from the affected area and other notables will move in to ensure harmony between all sections of the people.

(F) The next step will be to establish reception centers at suitable places near the border inside Pakistan to receive the balance of displaced persons held in Indian camps.

(G) Displaced persons received in these reception centres will be gradually moved to their homes.

(H) As far as possible, only after steps in paras (A) to (F) have been completed will displaced persons of the majority community presently held in camps in the interior of Sind, who belong to areas where the minority community is also living, be brought forward and resettled.

(I) The strength of police command, [sic] other law enforcing agencies is to be substantially increased in the affected areas with a view to providing more effective protection to the minority community.

[Regarding para. 3 (B) above: The Indian authorities will be intimated when the reception centres are ready to receive (the remaining Pakistani nationals)].

0731. Statement by the External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Parliament regarding the meeting of the representatives of India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, August 30, 1972.

The Prime Minister sent a letter to the President of Pakistan on August 19 suggesting that representatives of the two governments might meet to exchange views on the developments that have taken place since the Simla Agreement was signed and to resolve any doubts about the future prospects of settling the outstanding problems in the spirit of mutual confidence as contemplated in the Simla Agreement. In response, the President of Pakistan sent a reply on August 22 that Pakistan is determined to ensure that the Simla Agreement is implemented in its letter and spirit and that the Agreement should constitute the basis of future relationship between our two countries. He suggested that his Special Envoy, Mr. Aziz Ahmed, assisted by the Special Assistant to the President, Mr. Rafi Raza and a small team of senior officials from the Foreign Office would arrive in New Delhi on August 25.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed and the members of his delegation held frank and comprehensive discussions from August 25 to 29, 1972 with the Indian delegation led by Shri P.N. Haksar, Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister, on the developments since the Simla Agreement with a view to resolving any doubts that may have arisen. The text of a Joint Statement to the press issued on the conclusion of the discussions is laid on the Table of the House.

I should also like to inform the Honourable members that the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister had written to the Special Assistant to the President of Pakistan, Mr. Rafi Raza on July 14 regarding the need to ensure the safety of the person and property of the Pakistani nationals who had been affected by the war and who had remained in the territories of Pakistan occupied by our forces in Sind or crossed into the territory of India. When no reply was received, I wrote on this subject to the Minister of Political Affairs and Communication of the Government of Pakistan, Mr. Ghulam Mustafa Khan Jatoi, on August 4. Mr. Jatoi sent me his reply on August 22 stating categorically that the President of Pakistan and his Government are most keen to ensure that the persons affected by the war return to their homes in Pakistan at the earliest possible opportunity. Pakistan has decided to send Rana Chanadar Singh, a member of the Sind Provincial Assembly and two Members of Parliament from Thaparkar to visit the area even while it is under the occupation of the Indian Army, to reassure the people who are still residing there and also to invite a number of their prominent leaders who are currently in India, so that they could speak to them with a view to persuading the affected persons to return. The President of Pakistan has also assured our Prime Minister in his letter that these affected persons would not only be welcome to return to their homes but would be assured of safety of life and dignity as Pakistan nationals. The Government of India have agreed to this suggestion in the hope that this will create the necessary atmosphere and conditions to enable the affected person to remain in or return to their homes in Pakistan and live there in safety of person and property.

Some differences had arisen in the discussions between the Indian military commander and the Pakistan military commander regarding the delineation of the Line of Control in Jammu & Kashmir resulting from the ceasefire of December 17, 1971. The discussions held between the Indian and Pakistani delegations have resolved these differences and it has been agreed that the Line of Control in Jammu & Kashmir will be delineated along its entire length and maps showing this line will be exchanged by both sides. The delineation of the line will be completed by September 4, 1972. The inviolability of this line will be ensured by both sides in terms of the Simla Agreement. Withdrawals in terms of the Simla Agreement will now be completed by September 15, 1972 as mutually agreed by the two delegations.

As for the question of return of prisoners of war and civilian internees, we have reiterated to the Pakistan delegation that this question cannot be settled without the participation and agreement of the Government of Bangladesh. We have impressed on the Government of Pakistan that any delay in the recognition of Bangladesh by them will hamper the process of durable peace and normalization of relations and delay the achievement of the objectives set out in the Simla Agreement. It is our earnest hope that Pakistan will not further delay the recognition of the realities of the new situation on the sub-continent. It is in the interest of the three countries of the sub-continent to resolve their difference by mutual discussions.

Excerpts from Foreign Minister’s replies to questions in Rajya Sabha on September 1, 1972.

A. Recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan

1. It is a fact that after the Simla Summit meeting we did have a distinct impression based on talks and exchange of views that the question of recognition by Pakistan was a matter to which Pakistan would give the highest priority. It is because they knew fully well that the association of Bangladesh and their agreement for any final settlement of the prisoners of war, who had surrendered themselves on the Eastern front or in Bangladesh, was a necessity.
We also got an impression that it was increasingly realized by Pakistan that it was not in their interest not to recognize Bangladesh, and therefore, they would proceed quickly in this respect. Subsequently, I concede, there has not been a positive development and we have reiterated our decision, as I have said, that they should recognize Bangladesh so that the process of normalization in the sub-continent among the three countries could be established for arriving at a final settlement with regard to the prisoners of war.

2. They gave us an impression that they will very seriously consider this matter as a matter of high priority.

3. We repeated the position to the Pakistan delegation that continued non-recognition of Bangladesh is a circumstance which obviously comes in the way of normalization of relations and establishment of durable peace and specifically it is coming in the way of the final settlement of the question of the prisoners of war and we were told by them that they were seriously considering the question of the recognition of Bangladesh…

B. Line of Control in Jammu & Kashmir

1. Sir, the agreement between India and Pakistan is that the line of control as it existed at the time when the cease-fire became effective on the 17th December, that line of control will be actually delineated and agreed upon between the two sides and any change of position in favour of Pakistan that had taken place after the 17th December will be restored and the line as it existed on the 17th December will be established as a result of these talks.

2. …..the 17th December line will be restored and these two posts (in Tithwal) to which the honorable member now makes a reference – we have made the position clear – that they went over to the Pakistan side after the 17th December and I have no reason to believe that two Governments will not agree on this.

3. ……..according to what has been here (Joint Statement), the two sides will ensure the inviolability of the new line of control that is established there. And in view of this, the UN observers have no role whatsoever. I have no hesitation in saying that even today they have no role so far as India is concerned. We do not recognize the role of the UN observers because the ceasefire line as it existed earlier, about which the UN observers had a role according to certain agreements, no longer exists. There is a new line which is described as ‘line of control’ and in that the UN observers have no role. So far as the UN observers are concerned, we are not allowing them to play any role.

4. …….Now the point that is raised is about the latest Pakistan radio reports (These reports had spoken of delineation only in “disturbed areas” of Kashmir). I would only say that the Joint Statement is so clear and categorical that any misrepresentation by Pakistan radio should be taken as something contrary to the Joint Statement. It is the Joint Statement, to which the Pakistan plenipotentiary has subscribed, that is operative, and any interpretation to the contrary that might be given by Pakistan radio or by any other individual is something which is beside the point, has no relevance and we should ignore it.

5. Between a statement signed by a plenipotentiary and a version put out on the radio, I would certainly prefer the statement which is signed by the plenipotentiary.

C. Displaced Pakistan Nationals From Areas occupied by Indian Army

1. As a general principle it is difficult for us to accept that any citizen of any of our adjoining countries, if he comes over to us, then automatically we should be compelled to take him as a refugee or as a stateless person and should be responsible for looking after him. This is a principle which cannot be accepted as a general principle. Of course, with our traditions of tolerance and of compassion, we have from time to time been giving succor and relief to the people who came over to India. But at the same time we have insisted that it is the responsibility of our neighboring country to create conditions that such displacement of people do not take place. And if such displacement do take place then it is their responsibility to create conditions there so that these people can return and return in honor with their person and property safe.

2. ..........it is the responsibility of Pakistan to create the conditions there which would enable these Pakistani nationals to return to their homeland, from which they have been displaced, to return in the confidence that their person and property would be safe. We cannot absolve them of that responsibility, and we should insist on the Pakistan authorities both at the political and administrative level to create those conditions. Well, after they have done that, as many people as would like to go, they would go. But if there is any remnant we will take a human view of them.

3. We would continue to hold Pakistan squarely responsible for the safety and security of Pakistani nationals whatever may be their religion who have been displaced, and at the same time I have said that we will take humane view.

D. Bilateralism

1. Sir, it is true that some of the things which my honourable friend has mentioned, the attitude and the actual statements made by the Pakistani representatives on the various issues are hardly consistent with bilateralism. It was for this reason that we had to suggest that they should come here or that we were prepared to go to Islamabad to have discussions so that we might bring the two sides back to bilateralism and it is in that spirit, Sir, that the talks between the two delegations took place and there is now a joint statement…

2. ………So, the essence of the agreement is bilateralism. If there are any difficulties in interpretation, they will have to be resolved bilaterally. If there is any dissatisfaction on either side about implementation, that also will have to be resolved bilaterally by mutual discussion.

0732. Extract from the Statement of External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Lok Sabha in connection with the discussion regarding the meeting of the Representatives of India and Pakistan on the implementation of the Simla Agreement.

New Delhi, September 2, 1972.

One point has been raised what will happen to the two posts in the Lipa Valley which, according to us, were taken by Pakistan after 17th December? The Agreement is quite clear. Both the sides are committed that the line of control as it existed on 17th December will be restored and the two commanders will settle that line of control. And I have no doubt in my mind that these two posts cannot be retained by Pakistan because they were not with Pakistan on the 17th of December……..

The Simla Agreement settled the principle, that the line as it existed on the 17the December has to be respected by the two sides. But, there may be a difference of opinion as to what was the line on the 17the December. This is precisely the business of the two representatives and in this case, the two Governments have entrusted this responsibility to the Commanders because they were familiar with what was happening on the ground and if the line of control had been settled in Simla itself, then we should have withdrawn on the following day.

Under the Simla Agreement, the principle was settled that the line of control as it exited on the 17th December, has to be respected. But some body has to show on the ground where the line is and also to delineate it on maps. So, this is the process which has been going on and I would like to remind this hon. House… that while I made the statement about the Simla Agreement, I had said that the question of delineation of the line of control and the question of withdrawal will have to be simultaneous………

Now, as a matter of fact, according to this agreement, the line of control has to be delineated first and the withdrawals will take place eleven days later. So, if anything, we have tried to give a concrete shape - within a time from the time the agreement has been arrived at. So, I do not see what objection can there be to this approach….

Another point has been made. What is the role of the UN Observers in relation to the line of control? The reply is simple. The UN Observers were there in accordance with the Karachi Agreement. There was a cease-fire line and the UN observers' role was to see that there were no disturbances of that cease-fire line and no violations of that cease-fire line. Now, there is no cease-fire line. There is a line of control. There is no Karachi Agreement and there is no UN role at all in relation to the line of control because the line of control did not exist when the UN observers were there. …

The line of control in Jammu and Kashmir, resulting from the cease-fire of December 17, 1971, will be delineated along its entire length. …

Now this point has been raised: what is the significance, when it is said that this is without prejudice to the recognized position of the two sides? This is a broad question. I would like to take this opportunity to clarify it. We have to remember there is no final settlement about Jammu and Kashmir in this Simla Agreement. The agreement is that there will be a final settlement. You cannot expect the other side to give up their legal attitude till there is a final settlement. What is meant in so many words is that our position in relation to Jammu and Kashmir is there – that is the legal position – but notwithstanding that legal position there is the physical position on the ground so that there will be a new line of control delineated along the entire length.

At this stage I would like also to explain the significance as to why we now say that it is to be delineated on the entire length. There was an attempt on the side of Pakistan to say that the major part of the original ceasefire line was not disturbed in the course of war and there were only certain deviations or disturbances of that line. There was an argument which was put across - mistakenly according to us, and they did not stick to that argument in the course of the discussion – as if there could be some role for the UN along that portion which was not disturbed. But now, according to this agreement there is going to be a delineation of the line of control as it stood on December 17, in the entire length, which means, the line of control is what will emerge on the maps and on the ground, as a result of the agreement between the two countries, saying, this is the line of control, so that we can be doubly sure that there is no relationship with the 1949 ceasefire line, so that there may not be any argument later that something of the original thing is still left for which there may be some remote chance of UN observers coming.

This is the whole significance of the present agreement that in view of the clear agreement between the two sides, that inviolability of the line of control will be observed by both sides.

AIDE MEMOIRE

The Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi is requested to convey the following message to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan.

BEGINS:

In continuation of their communication dated 4th September 1972, the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, have the honour to state that it is now possible to exchange the Pakistani and Indian nationals taken into custody form respective territories captured by either side in the Western sector during the December 1971 conflict. Consequently, arrangements have been made by Government of India for receiving Indian nationals of the category from Pakistan at the Wagah border on September 16th/17th and for handing over Pakistani nationals of this category on the 18th and the 19th. The number of Pakistani nationals of this category is about 700.

The Government of India had handed over to I.C.R.C., New Delhi, lists of 431, Indian nationals believed to have been captured by Pakistan from occupied Indian territories. In their reply dated 18th July 1972, I.C.R.C. forwarded a list of only 272 persons in this category. In a communication dated 11th August, 1972 from His Excellency Mr. Iftikhar Ali, Foreign Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan to Shri S.K. Banerji, Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, the number of Indian nationals in this category is said to be about 300. It is hoped that the Government of Pakistan is taking the necessary action to enquire into the whereabouts and welfare of the remainder who have not yet been accounted for.

0734. Aide Memoire of the Government of India to the Swiss Embassy in New Delhi to transmit a message to the Pakistan Government regarding lifting of restrictions on Pakistani nationals for departure to Pakistan.

New Delhi, September 12, 1972.

AIDE – MEMOIRE

BEGINS

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, has the honour to inform the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, that restrictions have been lifted on the departure of those Pakistan nationals who had entered India from West Pakistan before December 3, 1971, on valid travel documents and were stranded due to the outbreak of hostilities in December 1971. Accordingly, instructions have been issued to the State authorities to stamp exit endorsements on the passports of all such Pakistani nationals so that they can leave India for Pakistan by land, sea or air.

Aide Memoire of the Government of India to the Swiss Embassy in New Delhi requesting them to transmit a message to the Pakistan Government regarding arrangements for exchange of Indian and Pakistani nationals.

September 15, 1972

AIDE MEMOIRE

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, request the Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi to transmit the following message to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan:

BEGIN

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, has the honour to inform the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, that the immigration authorities of the Government of India at air and sea check-posts, as also the land check-posts at Wagah, have made necessary arrangements to receive Indian nationals who had gone to Pakistan on valid travel documents and were stranded there due to the outbreak of hostilities in December 1971. They would freely permit the entry of those Indian nationals whose passports have expired but were valid till December 2, 1971, a day before the outbreak of hostilities. As a special case, those Indian nationals whose passport had expired within six months of the outbreak of hostilities, i.e., between June 1 and December 2, 1971, and who were unable to get these revalidated, shall also be permitted to enter India on satisfactory clearance of the documents in their possession by immigration authorities at the Wagah land checkpost.

In the case of those Indian nationals whose passports had expired even before June 1, 1971, and were not renewed since, Swiss Missions in Pakistan have been requested to advise them to get in touch with the Embassy of Switzerland at Islamabad or the Consulate General of Switzerland at Karachi so that appropriate action can be taken in extending the validity of such expired passports to enable these Indian nationals to return to India at an early date.

New Delhi, 15.9.1972.
Letter of the Joint Secretary Ministry of External Affairs addressed to the Heads of Indian Mission circulating to them a note on “President Bhutto’s Handling of the Opposition” in Pakistan.

New Delhi, September 20, 1972.

A.S. Chib,
Joint Secretary (Pak)
No. PI / 102 / 4 / 72-II September 20, 1972

Dear Head of Mission,

I enclose a note prepared by Shri K.N. Bakshi, Deputy Secretary (Pak) on President Bhutto’s handling of the opposition in Pakistan. The note contains an incisive analysis of the latest trends in the domestic situation in Pakistan since the language riots in July and throws light on Bhutto’s standing vis-a-vis the opposition political parties, as well as, in relation to the Army.

2. The analysis of Bhutto’s handling of the NAP / JUI provincial coalition and his motivations for allowing a controversy to build up on the fanciful “London Plan” is most interesting. As correctly surmised, Bhutto has since publicly denied the existence of this alleged anti-nationals conspiracy in his statement before the Karachi Chambers of Commerce and Industry on 16th September. After allowing his information Minister Maulana Kausar Niazi to cast aspersions on Wali Khan’s loyalty to Pakistan, Bhutto calmly declared that there was nothing to the London Plan. It is typical of Bhutto in his handling of the domestic situation to allow controversies to build up to let off steam and then to assume the role of an arbitrator and mediator. It cannot be denied that so far Bhutto has successfully ridden out turbulence in the domestic political situation in Pakistan by using these tactics. Despite the weakening of his position after the Sind Language riots and the developing under-currents amongst the traditional supporters of army rule in Pakistan, there is as yet no evidence of a sizeable threat to President Bhutto’s authority.

Your sincerely

( A. S. Chib )
President Bhutto’s handing of the opposition in Pakistan.

According to recent reports, the uneasy relationship between the PPP controlled Central Government and the provincial governments in NWFP and Baluchistan run by NAP-JUI coalitions, is showing signs of increasing strains. Pakistan’s Information Minister, Maulana Kausar Niazi, has accused top NAP leaders (Khan Wali Khan, President of NAP, Mr. Attaullah Ulla Khan Mengal, Chief Minister of Baluchistan, and Mr. Ahmad Nawaz Bagti, Finance Minister of Baluchistan) of hatching a conspiracy against Pakistan during their recent stay in London. Describing the opposition leaders as “anti-national elements” he alleged that they were demanding four different states as opposed to the concept of one Pakistan. Pakistan Radio reports also alleged that these leaders had urged Sheikh Mujib to use his influence with India to prevent withdrawal of troops from occupied areas by September 15 as this would have strengthened Bhutto’s hand.

“London Plan”

2. These accusations which have come to be known as the “London Plan” are not a sudden development but have been built up gradually through government controlled media like the Press Trust newspapers and Radio Pakistan. In fact, when Bhutto’s attention was drawn to such reports in Pakistani newspapers, he was quoted as having said “Intrigues against Pakistan never ended. There is nothing new in it”. It is quite obvious that Niazi had brought out these serious charges against NAP leaders in the full knowledge of his President.

Baluchistan Governor Bizenjo was urgently summoned to Rawalpindi for immediate consultations. According to an official spokesman the President had taken note of the serious concern caused amongst people by the reports pouring in from London and appearing in the Pakistani press. The President was said to be unhappy about the situation and anxious to rectify it.

3. On his way to Pindi Governor Bizenjo described these reports and accusations as “false and mischievous”. Similar denials were issued by other NAP spokesmen. It was categorically stated that no NAP leader has met Mujib. The question is, why has President Bhutto thought it fit to bring out such a serious charge against these important opposition leaders at this stage? To analyse Bhutto’s motives and any action he might now take, one must look at the internal situation in Pakistan as it prevails toady.

Bhutto’s difficulties – dissension within PPP

4. It is now quite certain that the domestic situation in Pakistan since July has displayed a certain erosion of President Bhutto’s authority. The inept handling of the language riots in Sind, the continuing labour unrest, the sagging industrial production, rising prices and expectations, have all made their contribution towards creating and maintaining unrest in Pakistan. Bhutto’s Government finds it difficult to do some thing immediately to satisfy the aspirations of the people which it had itself helped to arouse. A backlash of the Sird riots has caused serious dissensions in the PPP. The language controversy split the party right down the lines and many a PPP leader in Sind was reported to have sided with the Sindhi aspirations. On the other hand, reports of the displacement of a large number non-Sindhis, including Punjabis, has had serious repercussions in Punjab, Bhutto’s stronghold. This is borne out by the fact that amongst those arrested under the maintenance of internal security in Pakistan recently are PPP leaders from both Sind and Punjab. The compromise evolved the controversy has satisfied neither the Sindhis nor the non-Sindhis. Whereas Sindhis accused Bhutto of having cowed down, the ‘Muhajir’ and Punjabi elements criticize him, for having acted more like a Sindhi rather than as a Pakistani President. Dissensions in the party seem to have reached such a stage that, according to some reports, PPP members in the National Assembly were asked to hand over their letters of resignation as a surety for good behaviour to a Central Minister – a measure allegedly taken to maintain discipline in the party. It is obvious that the party needs discipline if one were to go by the speeches of dissident members both inside and outside the National Legislature. According to an opposition leader, people’s party has not been able to hold even a single public meeting in Punjab during the recent weeks.

Rightist Opposition

5. On the other hand, rightist opposition in Punjab has really gone to town in a big way to cash in on the Sind riots. The major cities of Sind like Karachi and Hyderabad, were always Jamaat strong-holds. Given the sympathy of the Punjabis with the cause of Urdu and ‘Muhajirs’ in Sind, it was easy for these opposition parties to exploit the issue in Punjab. It is in this context that a number of rightist leaders in Punjab were recently arrested. Another issue on which the rightist parties have been able to whip up opposition against Bhutto in Punjab is the Simla Agreement which they describe as “sell out.” Punjab has always been in the fore-front as breeding ground for anti-Indian confrontationists and the opposition has reportedly made significant gains during their recent campaign.

Armed forces

6. Bhutto’s equation with the Armed Forces is still far from clear. Army Chief Tikka Khan has been described as a good soldier with no political ambitions. But during his recent tour of Sind, he was enthusiastically welcomed wherever he went. In fact, posters in some Sindhi towns appealed to him to take over the reins of government from Bhutto. According to some reports, he received thousands of telegrams from non-Sindhis in the Sind to this effect. Some unconfirmed reports have even suggested the active involvement of the Armed Forces in the language riots. Similarly, the recent retirement of a dozen odd senior army officers by Bhutto could have been due to the fact that there was some kind of a plot in the Armed Forces against the civilian government. Bhutto’s Ministers never tire of reminding the people of conspiracies against the regime.

7. In his speeches Bhutto has repeatedly emphasized that Pakistan was given a crushing and decisive defeat by India in the December conflict. Apparently, the bulk of the officer corps in the Army do not think so. According to reports available with us they are convinced that it was the corrupt leadership of persons like Yahya that let them down, that they had done quite well in the Western sector, and that they have only suffered a temporary set-back and not a permanent defeat. The rightist parties have also been plugging this line in an obvious effort to please the Armed Forces. What is however interesting to note is that even People’s Party leaders have now started saying the same thing. This is clear from the speeches made by Central Ministers during Defence of Pakistan Day celebrations in September.

8. Moreover, “Bonapartism” is far from dead in the Pakistan Armed Forces and it would be naïve to think that they have abandoned all hopes of controlling the destinies of Pakistan once again. They are lying low because they have to. The events of 1971 were a great set-back to their own morale as also their image in the public. But if Bhutto’s government cannot deliver the goods fast enough and confusion and lawlessness prevail, the Army could certainly stage a come-back. The so-called ‘Islam Pasand’ parties would prefer the Army to Bhutto any day despite their professions of allegiance to democracy. The Army could also use them as a convenient front. The feeling of revanchism being whipped up by these elements could prove a tremendous asset. Above all, Punjabis who control the Army as also the bureaucracy would like to continue to hold their dominant place in Pakistan’s politics.

9. In Bhutto’s equation with the Army, Major General (Retd.) Akbar Khan, is another curious factor. He is an arch conspirator, a brilliant instigator and a master organizer of subversion. In the new government he heads Pakistan’s intelligence set-up, in addition to being the top boss in the People’s Guards movement, a para-military arm of the PPP. Apparently, Bhutto is using him to keep some kind of a check over the Army where he has a lot of prestige. But some recent reports have suggested a growing liaison between him and Tikka Khan which could prove dangerous to Bhutto.
NAP’s Growing Influence

10. In this precarious situation Bhutto has also to contend with the growing influence of NAP in Punjab and Sind. Wali Khan has succeeded to a certain extent, in projecting a national image. Controlling the provincial governments in NWFP and Baluchistan in coalition with JUI has given NAP an additional source of strength. Together the two parties have managed to establish themselves as a symbol of democracy and democratic opposition in Pakistan. For example, they continue to advocate a federal constitution for Pakistan with a parliamentary form of government, fundamental rights, etc, whereas Bhutto’s sympathies for a presidential government are well-known. Similarly, NAP has been advocating greater provincial autonomy, whereas Bhutto desires a strong centre. In his speech to the Baluchistan High Court Bar Association recently, Bhutto described this divergence in approach as a major reason for the delay in the framing of the constitution.

11. Bhutto has been trying his best to neutralize NAP influence but without any significant success. There were reported efforts to “buy” some of the NAP legislators. These did not succeed. An abortive attempt was made on Wali Khan’s life and Quyyum Khan, an arch enemy of Wali and Bhutto’s Central Minister, was accused of involvement in the plot. Bhutto has also tried in vain to win over the NAP by offering ministerships in the Centre in exchange for accommodating PPP in the provincial coalition. There have been much advertised meetings between Bhutto and NAP-JUI leaders to evolve a “cooperative approach”, but nothing seems to have come out of these, as the recent London Plan shows. On the other hand, there has been continuous mudslinging between the provincial governments and some of Bhutto’s Ministers.

12. It is not beyond Bhutto to try more devious methods and he has indeed done that. He has been using the break-away NAP leader Abdul Samad Achakzai, to create a division amongst Baluchis and Pathans in Baluchistan. Achakzai has been demanding the creation of a new province called “Pakhtoonistan” which would include the Pushto speaking population of NWFP and Baluchistan. Simultaneously, demands are also being made for the creation a province of “Qabalistan” to be carved out of the tribal areas of NWFP, thus reducing the weight of the existing province in Pakistan’s politics. Similarly, as mentioned above, Bhutto has taken Qayyun Khan as his Minister of Interior in order to neutralize NAP influence in NWFP. Qayyum Khan has the dubious reputation of being adept at creating lawlessness and confusion. Reports of clashes between landlords and peasants in NWFP disturbances at public meetings etc. show that Qayyum Khan is not sitting idle.
Bhutto’s options

13. In these circumstances it is clear that the so-called “London Plan” has been invented. (In fact, this is the second London Plan which has appeared on Pakistan’s political horizon: the earlier one also included, amongst others, Daultana). Bhutto can have the following objectives in mind:

(a) As apprehended by NAP leaders and suggested by some commentators Bhutto might make use of this alleged plot to come down heavily on the NAP and JUI. These allegations are of an extremely serious nature and Bhutto can seek to justify any strong-armed tactics, in the interest of Pakistan’s integrity. However, we do not think Bhutto would adopt these methods. Firstly, he is aware that, unlike Bengalis in the former East Pakistan, Pathan and Baluchs would not take any high-handed action lying down. Any armed confrontation leading to civil war would be suicidal. Secondly, even large scale arrest of NAP leaders and imposition of curfew, press censorship etc. would only be counter-productive by making heroes of the opposition. Thirdly, to take any severe action will first have to suspend the provincial government which would, in turn, lead to a far-reaching constitutional crisis. Lastly, it would give the Armed Forces an opportunity to reassert themselves in Pakistan’s internal politics.

(b) Bhutto might use these allegations to embarrass the NAP leaders and thus to naturalize their growing influence. These efforts to malign NAP as anti-national can be expected to sell well in Punjab. This would give Bhutto an opportunity to achieve two objects in his political stronghold simultaneously. Apart from undercutting the growing NAP influence, he would also be able to play the chauvinistic sentiments of the Punjabis, thus re-establishing PPP influence in the province which is being eroded by the rightist opposition.

14. Bhutto can also utilize the situation thus created to pressurize NAP into “cooperating” with him in matters like framing of the national constitution. Similarly, this could give him another handle to try and decide NAP leaders. Some unconfirmed reports suggest that Baluchistan governor Bizenjo seems to get along much better with the President than with the others.

Conclusions

15. It can, therefore, be concluded that the so-called ‘London Plan’ is another attempt by Bhutto to embarrass NAP, neutralize its growing influence and to create conditions under which they are forced to his line. Bhutto will not take any drastic action against NAP leaders despite the serious accusations. At the most, he might ask Qayyum Khan to intensify his efforts at creating disturbances in the two provinces with a view to discrediting the governments.
16. Another interesting feature of the so-called conspiracy is the alleged request to Mujib to use his influence with India not to withdraw from occupied areas. This has implications which go beyond the internal politics. Due to the delay in the delineation of the line of control in Jammu & Kashmir, it was clear that withdrawals were not taking place by September 15.

This is, therefore, a warning to India that any delay in the process would only result in Bhutto’s government coming heavily on NAP and other forces friendly to India. In his address to the Chamber of Commerce and Industry in Karachi on 15 September 1972, President Bhutto took serious objection to the reported observations of Wali Khan in an interview to Indian newspaper which cast aspersions on Bhutto’s trustworthiness. Bhutto linked this to the Simla Agreement and asserted that “this did amount to ask India not to trust Pakistan”.

New Delhi, October 22, 1972.

From: DDMO, INDARMS To: DDMO, PAKARMS

PLEASE PASS ON FOLLOWING MESSAGE TO HIS EXCELLENCY MR. AZIZ AHMED FROM MR. P.N. HAKSAR.

QUOTE. I deeply regret that owing to my absence from New Delhi, there has been delay in replying to your redrafted message handed over to DMO India by DMO Pakistan at Suchetgarh on October 15 at 1711 hours. Government of India are glad to accept your proposals subject to amendments as in following sub-paragraphs:

One. Substitute last clause in your para one by following:

Quote. They should record their joint recommendations in regard to Line of Control in J & K area to their respective chiefs for submission to their respective governments. Unquote.
Two. Add the following at the end of your para two:

Quote. On the two chiefs confirming to each other that ground positions have been carried out to conform to the line of control an announcement may be made simultaneously from ISLAMABAD and New Delhi releasing to the press broad details of the line of control in Jammu & Kashmir in accordance with the provisions of the bilateral agreement between India and Pakistan signed in Simla. Unquote

Three. The last six words in paragraph three of your redrafted message may be substituted by the words quote their respective chiefs for securing approval of their respective governments. Unquote.

Shall be grateful for your confirmation of the amendments proposed. Unquote.

Note by the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister P. N. Haksar on a message received from President Z. A. Bhutto on October 22, 1972 and submitted to the Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.

Prime Minister’s Secretariat

P.M. may kindly see the message* from President Bhutto which was received this morning. As P.M. is going away tomorrow and will not return to New Delhi until the 29th, I feel that the reply should go today. I have, accordingly, prepared a draft which is at Slip B. The most important part of President Bhutto’s message is in paragraph 10 of it. I discussed this matter with the C.O.A.S. and he agreed that perhaps P.M. could respond by modifying the position we had hitherto taken. In this connection P.M. may kindly see the portion sidelined ‘A’ in blue chalk of the draft reply to President Bhutto’s letter. As I could not get the C.O.A.S. on telephone, I am sanding him a copy of the draft with the request that he might convey directly to P.M. any amendments he might wish to make to the draft and more particularly to the portion sidelined ‘A’.

22. 10. 1972

* Message not available.
Dear Mr. President,

I have your message of October 22. I wrote to you on August 19, 1972 because the way the question of the delineation of the line of control in Jammu & Kashmir was being dealt with caused me considerable anxiety. I felt that the matter was of sufficient importance for our representatives to meet. I was glad that the meeting took place.

2. I know that your representatives took the position that there was no connection whatever between withdrawals from the international frontier in accordance with paragraph 4(i) of the Simla Agreement and provision in paragraph 4(ii) of it. We, on the other hand, have consistently taken the position that paragraph 4 must be implemented as a whole. And if this is to be done, then the delineation of the line of control is of no less an importance than the question of withdrawal of troops from the international border. Having regard to the fact that in the past our two countries have been involved in conflict in Jammu & Kashmir, the undertaking in paragraph 4(ii) that neither side shall seek to alter the line unilaterally and that both sides shall refrain from the threat or the use of force in violation of the line of control were matters of vital importance. The argument that obligation in respect of withdrawal is time bound and that those explicit and implicit in paragraph 4(ii) are not, does not appear to us to be a reasonable one.

3. I felt that during the Delhi talks, the distinguished representative of Pakistan accepted the legitimacy of our concern when we both agreed that the withdrawals and delineation were equally important parts of paragraph 4 of the Simla Agreement and that one could not envisage situation in which withdrawals from the international border take place leaving the delineation of the line of control and its inviolability hang in a state of uncertainty. I would urge upon you in all sincerity to try and see our point of view in this matter. However, I am glad that we are on the eve of reaching an agreement in regard to the delineation.

4. You have, Mr. President, referred to certain human aspects of the problem. It was these very human aspects which weighed with me in Simla when I agreed to the withdrawal of troops. I do not want you to feel that I have become insensitive to these problems. I am, therefore, giving directions to the Chief of our Army Staff that as soon as the delineation is completed and approved by our two Governments in accordance with the procedure which has been now settled between us, the withdrawal from the international frontiers shall commence and be completed within a period of 10 to 11 days. I hope no difficulties will arise in carrying out adjustments of the ground positions to conform to the line of control within the period of five days to which we have both agreed.

5. When one surveys the results of the full and final implementation of paragraph 4 leading to withdrawal of Indian troops from fairly large areas of Pakistani territory, I am baffled why the Pakistani side should have been arguing about little points along the line of control in Jammu & Kashmir. I can assure you, Mr. President that we are not only anxious to implement the Simla Agreement both in letter and in spirit, but we have consistently refrained from agitating any aspect of our mutual relationship or mutual problems in any international forum or anywhere else. I was, therefore, saddened when I read the speech which your distinguished delegate made in the general debate in the U.N. this year. We gave strict instructions to our delegation not to exercise their right of reply.

Yours sincerely,

(Indira Gandhi)

Letter from Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister P.N. Haksar to Secretary General Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed.

New Delhi, October 23, 1972.

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmed,

I conveyed to you through the channel of DDMO, Indarmy, and DDMO, Pakarmy, the following message on Sunday, October 22, 1972-

Quote. I have your message of October 20 conveying your Government's acceptance of the amendments proposed in sub-paragraphs 1 (1) and 3(3) of my message of October 19. Taking into account the considerations you have urged, we agree with the suggestions contained in paragraph 3 of your message. The final position in respect of the procedure will thus be as follows:

(1) As soon as the line of control has been delineated and the maps have been signed by the Senior Commanders and exchanged as provided in the Joint Statement signed in Delhi on August 29, 1972, they should record their joint recommendations in regard to the line of control in J & K areas to their respective Chiefs for submission to their respective Governments.

(2) The signed maps and relevant documents should then be forwarded to the two Governments and as soon as they have accorded their approval to the line, an announcement may be made simultaneously from Islamabad and New Delhi in the following terms:

“The line of control has been delineated in J & K in accordance with Simla Agreement of July 2, 1972 and that it has the approval of both Governments. Adjustments of ground positions will be carried out to conform to the line of control approved by both Governments within a period of 5 days from the date of this announcement.”

Simultaneously, both Governments may release to the press only broad details of the line of control. Thereafter, adjustment of ground positions of both sides will be carried out to conform to the line of control approved by both Governments within a period of 5 days from the date of simultaneous announcement of approval by both Governments. As soon as this operation has been completed, an announcement may be made simultaneously from Islamabad and New Delhi that adjustment of ground positions of both sides has been carried out to conform. to the line of control which was delineated in Jammu & Kashmir in accordance with the Simla Agreement of July 2, 1972 and was approved by both Governments.

(3) On conclusion of their work, the Senior Commanders may announce only repeat only that they have completed their task and have forwarded their recommendations to their respective Chiefs for securing approval of their respective Governments.

2. Grateful for your confirmation that the procedure outlined in the preceding paragraphs correctly reflects our mutual understanding. Unquote.

2. I confirms having received the following message in reply on October 22, 1972 at 1955 hours :-

Quote Thank you for message of DTO 221545. This is to confirm that the procedure outlined in your message correctly reflects our mutual understanding. Unquote.

With warm regards and best wishes,

Yours sincerely

(P. N. Haksar)

His Excellency
Mr. Aziz Ahmed,
Secretary-General,
Ministry of Foreign Affairs,
Government of Pakistan, Islamabad.
Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmed,

I have your letter of September 27, 1972. I am sorry that owing to my intermittent absence from New Delhi, there has been delay in sending reply. I need hardly say how warmly Government of India welcomes your suggestion that in accordance with paragraph (v) of agreed recommendations signed between us in New Delhi on August 29, 1972, we should settle between us the case regarding over flights now pending before the ICAO Council. However, it is not clear to me if Government of Pakistan contemplate moving the Council under Article 17 of the Rules for the Settlement of Differences, 1957, requesting them to discontinue the proceeding. Naturally, we would support such a request in any manner you deem it appropriate. We could even make a joint request.

2. You have apparently a somewhat different view in the matter and desire to keep the proceedings in a state of suspended animation even though paragraph (v) of Delhi Agreement considered it desirable, without any qualification, that the case regarding over flights now pending before the ICAO Council should be settled bilaterally.

3. The Government of India are ready to start talks with Government of Pakistan both for resolving the manner in which the proceedings in ICAO Council should be discontinued or suspended as well as for making the proposals to settle the case bilaterally.

4. in the meantime, I am wondering whether Government of India and Government of Pakistan could both agree to inform the ICAO Council that as the two Governments are about to commence negotiations, the matter before the Council need not be taken up during the 77th and 78th sessions commencing respectively on November 13, 1972 and February 26, 1973. This will also dispose of the enquiry made by the President of the Council, which has presumably been also addressed to the Government of Pakistan.

5. Please let me know if the suggestions I have made about our bilateral talks and for dealing with the immediate situation in the Council will be acceptable to you. As for the time and venue for talks between our two countries on the subject of over flights, we would welcome your delegation coming to New Delhi sometime during the first week of November i.e. after the Diwali and Idulfitr holidays. However, we would be equally prepared to send a delegation to Pakistan if this is more convenient.

With warm regards and best wishes,

Yours sincerely

0741.  SECRET

Note of discussions between the Indian High Commissioner in Dacca with the Soviet Ambassador in Dacca regarding recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan.

Dacca, November 4, 1972.

High Commission of India, Dacca

The Soviet Ambassador, Mr. V.F. Popov, who has recently been back from home leave, saw me today. He said that the Soviet Ambassador in Islamabad had been told by President Bhutto (Pakistan Government?) early in October that Pakistan would not recognize Bangladesh before next Spring. President Bhutto will require time to explain facts to his people. Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, in the President’s view, is being unreasonable in insisting on recognition before meeting him. Bangladesh has separated not as a result of a spontaneous movement by the people but by Indian intervention, and the President must convince his people that he has done everything possible to keep the two parts together before recognizing Bangladesh as a separate country. President Bhutto also complained about India being unreasonable about the implementation of the Simla Agreement.

2. On return to Dacca Popov saw Sheikh Mujib. The Sheikh said Bhutto could not be trusted and he would not meet him before recognition. He was not anxious to start war crimes trial immediately, but Pakistan could claim no say in the trial of Bangladesh collaborators.
3. The assessment of the officers of the Soviet Mission is that anti-Indian and anti-Soviet feelings have grown in recent months in Bangladesh. It is being said for example that Soviet fishing trawlers which have been gifted to Bangladesh have no refrigeration facilities. The Bangladesh Government is deliberately delaying signing the draft agreements with the Soviet Union. These drafts have been lying with the Bangladesh authorities for many months and they are not responding to the Embassy’s request for action. A propaganda is being carried on by Western circles that the capacity of India and the Soviet Union to assist Bangladesh is limited, and if the country is to come out of a serious economic crisis, it must turn to the Western countries for assistance.

4. I gave Mr. Popov my assessment of the current situation in Bangladesh. I said I was aware of the anti-Indian campaign being carried on by Bhashani with the assistance of extreme right and extreme left elements. In this context I referred to the recent communal flare up and said it was extraordinary that simultaneously on the same date and between the same hour communal troubles should have broken out in many parts of Bangladesh. We had information that some of the anti-social elements who had participated in the trouble were handsomely paid. The anti-India campaign was basically directed against Sheikh Mujib and his Government – that they had sold the country to India and are willing parties to Indian domination. While I agreed with the Ambassador that correct facts must be placed before his people by the Prime Minister and his colleagues and no amount of our saying to the contrary will convince the people, we have to recognize the realities of the situation. Eighty percent of the people are illiterate and orthodox Muslims all easy victims to anti-Indian and anti-Hindu propaganda. With the elections due in a few months’ time Sheikh Mujib cannot take a very firm line which would make action against Muslim extremists but I am convinced that he wants to maintain friendly relations with India (and the Soviet Union). After the new elections when he comes back to power with a clear mandate, he is expected to take a more firm line against those determined to harp on communalism and carry anti-Indian propaganda. Until then we have to be patient and understanding. I agreed with the Ambassador’s view that India and the Soviet Union are being bracketed together by the extreme elements as enemies of Bangladesh. I advised the Ambassador also not to lose patience, and promised to keep in close touch with him.

High Commissioner

4.11.1972.
Statement made by the External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Rajya Sabha on the question of delineation of the Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir.

New Delhi, November 14, 1972.

Hon'ble Members would recall my statement in the House on August 30, at the conclusion of the meeting between the representatives of India and Pakistan, wherein I had conveyed the agreement of both sides to the delineation of the line of control in Jammu & Kashmir along its entire length. I had also stated that maps showing this agreed line would be exchanged by both sides and that delineation of the line would be completed by September 4, 1972 and withdrawals to the international border would be completed by September 15.

In accordance with the Simla Agreement the line of control had to be mutually respected, therefore its delination has to be agreed so that its inviolability may be ensured by both sides.

The Senior Military Commanders of India and Pakistan, who were entrusted with the task of delineating the line of control on maps, have so far held 9 rounds of discussions. By the 7th round, which was completed on October 18, an agreement was reached on 19 maps delineating the entire length of line of control from the Chamb area on the international border to Partapour sector in the North. These maps were to be signed in the 8th round. On that occasion, however, Pakistan's Senior Military Commander raised a fresh controversy over a pocket approximately 1½ square miles in area which is in Pakistan's occupation but separate from the line of control. Several messages have been exchanged between the Chiefs of the Army Staff of India and Pakistan on this issue and as a result further meetings took place between the Senior Military Commanders on November 7 and 9. However, these discussions failed to iron out the differences. It is now being considered whether the stage has been reached for a meeting at another level to resolve this question.

Honourable Members would appreciate that as the talks are still in progress, it would not be in our national interest to discuss this matter in greater detail. The major task of delineation of the line of control in Jammu & Kashmir, in terms of the Simla and Delhi Agreements has been completed on maps. It is hoped that the remaining problem will also be resolved by further bilateral discussions. After the delineation of the line of control is approved by the two Governments the withdrawal of troops to the international border will be completed in the shortest possible time. We hope that Pakistan Government will view this matter in realistic and constructive manner.
0743. Announcement by India and Bangladesh regarding the repatriation of Bangladesh women and children from Pakistan to Bangladesh.

New Delhi and Dacca, November 26, 1972.

The Governments of Bangladesh and India note that the Government of Pakistan has announced its decision to permit, as a first step, 10,000 Bengali women and children to leave Pakistan for Bangladesh. While they regret that, in response to the joint Indo-Bangladesh proposal, Pakistan has not agreed to the repatriation of all families (women and children) of Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan regardless of numbers and purely on humanitarian ground, they have noted that Pakistan has described their response as “a first step” in this direction. Consequently, arrangements could be made for commencing repatriation of all families (women and children) of Pakistani civilian internees and POWs detained in India to Pakistan via the land check post at Wagah. The date on which the repatriation will commence can be settled by mutual agreement. The Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi is being requested to obtain Pakistan Government’s concurrence in this regard. Regarding the repatriation of families of Bangladesh nationals from Pakistan to Bangladesh, the Pakistan Government is requested to inform the Swiss Embassy in Islamabad of the travel arrangements which they propose to make for their repatriation.

0744. Statement by the External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Parliament regarding the release of POWs captured on the Western front.

New Delhi, November 27, 1972.

According to a broadcast of Radio Pakistan the Government of Pakistan are reported to have decided to release 617 Indian prisoners of war. These prisoners of war were captured on the western front. Government of India have not received any official communication on this subject. It will be recalled that during the Simla Conference the Government of India had offered to release all the Pakistani prisoners of war numbering 540 who had been captured on the western front, but the Government of Pakistan at that time did not show any interest in this offer. The Government of India reiterate their offer to release all those Pakistani prisoners of war who were captured on the western front.

0745. Statement of the Ministry of External Affairs on the repatriation of POWs captured on Western Front.

New Delhi, November 28, 1972.

In pursuance of the statement made by the Foreign Minister on November 27, 1972 in both Houses of Parliament, announcing the Government’s decision to release all the Pakistani prisoners of war who had been captured on the western front, it has been decided that the repatriation of these prisoners will take place on December 1, 1972. Arrangements are being made to send these prisoners numbering 540 to the Indo-Pakistan border at Wagah where they will be released to the Pakistan authorities. The Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi are being requested to send a representative to the border check-post to be present on the occasion.

746. Joint Indo-Bangladesh Announcement regarding repatriation of Pakistani women and children.

New Delhi, November 30, 1972.

As a humanitarian gesture, the Governments of Bangladesh and India have decided to repatriate to Pakistan, families (women and children) of Pakistani civilian internees who sought protection with the Joint Command of the India-Bangladesh forces and families of prisoners of war who had surrendered to the Joint Command.

It is hoped that the Government of Pakistan will act in the same humanitarian spirit and allow the families of all Bangladesh nationals who are detained or held up in Pakistan to return to Bangladesh. On receiving positive response, arrangements will be made to give effect to this proposal on both sides expeditiously.

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmed,

I have your message of December 2. Our Chief of the Army Staff, General S.H.F.J. Manekshaw, has sent a communication to General Tikka Khan suggesting a meeting on any of the dates between December 6 and December 8. He has also expressed his readiness to go to Lahore or Islamabad for the meeting. I earnestly hope that they will meet at an early date and reach a settlement so that we could go forward with the implementation of paragraph 4 of the Simla Agreement and thereafter take steps towards implementation of paragraphs 6 and 3.

2. I must confess to a feeling of disappointment when you say that you found General Manekshaw giving an inflexible negative response to various alternatives suggested by General Tikka Khan in their meeting at Lahore on November 28. During our negotiations both in Simla and Delhi, we endeavored with utmost of sincerity to take into account your difficulties and even domestic compulsions. It is, therefore, very unfair to attribute to us inflexibility. Indeed, we could not agree with you more when you say that we should not permit deadlock over Thako Chak to continue. We have every interest in keeping the Simla Agreement intact and, indeed, improve upon the spirit which animated it, so that we could go forward to the kind of future which both your President and my Prime Minister had in mind.

3. I have carefully gone through the chronology of discussions on Thako Chak during the talks between the Senior Military Commanders of India and Pakistan right up to what was stated on October 19 and 22 by Pakistan’s D.M.O. Be that as it may, it is not my intention in this message to discuss this unfortunate controversy at this long distance. But I would like you to personally go through the entire record and see whether our feeling that Thako Chak dispute is so very unnecessary, is justified or not.

4. Finally, I should like to reiterate once again what I conveyed to you in my message of November 25 that our commitment to the implementation of the Simla Agreement is deep and abiding and that I do not have to present our credentials of sincerity and consistency.

With warm personal regards and best wishes,
Yours sincerely
(P. N. Haksar)

Secretary-General,
Ministry of Foreign Affairs,
Government of Pakistan,

0748.
TOP SECRET
Summary Record of discussions between the Acting Indian High Commissioner in Dacca and Bangladesh Foreign Minister.
Dacca, December 6, 1972.
High Commission of India
Dacca

The meeting was held at Foreign Minister Samad’s suggestion. Mr. Samad stated that in the aftermath of the proceedings of the U.N. General Assembly about Bangladesh’s admission, Bangladesh and India should consider taking some initiatives which would

(a) prevent Pakistan from exploiting the contents of the Argentine resolution approved by the General Assembly for political or propaganda purposes;
(b) resolve the impasse on issues like the repatriation of the Bangladeshis from Pakistan and about recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan; and
(c) expedite Bangladesh’s admission to the U.N. and put Pakistan on the defensive in relation to Bangladesh and India.

2. Foreign Minister Samad informed the undersigned that he was thinking of an initiative on the following lines, the announcement regarding which could be made on the 16th December (Victory Day) to get maximum political mileage out of the initiative. The outline of the initiative given by Mr. Samad is as follows:

(i) Bangladesh Government will hand over a list of 150 war criminals required for war crimes trials in Bangladesh to us by the 10th of December and ask for their being sent back to Bangladesh.
(ii) Once was agree to the list and repatriation arrangements are made for these war criminals, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman will make a statement on the 16th December announcing that India has been asked to return the war criminals to Bangladesh and that war crimes trials would be held in the near future. Bangladesh and India are willing to repatriate the remaining Pakistani Prisoners of war taken in the Eastern Sector by the Joint Command, provided Pakistan

(a) accords recognition to Bangladesh;
(b) agree to the repatriation of Bangladesh nationals back to their country; and
(c) take positive steps to expedite the implementation of the provisions of the Simla Agreement.

(iii) The Prime Minister of Bangladesh would also be willing to meet President Bhutto if the above suggestions are accepted.

(iv) A governmental announcement would be made that this initiative by Bangladesh conforms in spirit to the recommendations of the Argentine resolution.

3. Mr. Samad hoped that such a move might put Pakistan politically on the defensive, particularly because an offer would be made for the return of the large majority of Pakistani Prisoners of war. This might also be useful argument at the U.N. about Bangladesh’s reasonableness. The Chinese point of view that the return of the prisoners of war is an important factor affecting Bangladesh’s admission to the U.N. might also be partially met by the above initiative.

4. Mr. Samad planned to submit the above proposals at a cabinet meeting on Thursday, the 7th December, for preliminary consideration. He had not mentioned this to his Prime Minister so far. He asked the undersigned whether he had any personal preliminary reaction to this proposal. The reactions given by the Acting High Commissioner were the following:

(i) The pre-conditions stipulated for repatriating the majority of prisoners of war are nothing new. This has been the traditional stand of Bangladesh and India.

(ii) If the initiative taken by Bangladesh is linked up by Bangladesh itself with the U.N. resolutions, it would invite U.N. intervention and contradict the principle of bilateralism which we have emphasized in resolving pending problems in the subcontinent.
Announcement of war crimes trials being held at this point of time may result in the attitude of President Bhutto stiffening in relation to Bangladesh and India. It may also be interpreted by the international community as a contradiction of one of the clauses of the Argentine resolution which had urged that all parties should refrain from any act which would increase tensions or make the resolution of the pending problems difficult.

The Acting High Commissioner suggested that Mr. Samad might have a discussion with the High Commissioner before he finalized the proposal. Mr. Samad agreed.

Foreign Minister Samad then recalled his conversation with Acting High Commissioner on the 4th December during which he had suggested that the Pakistani offer for the repatriation of 10,000 women and children and 5,000 others should be viewed cautiously and that discussions regarding the proposals should be soft-pedaled because Bangladesh apprehends that many of these may be indoctrinated persons who would act as Pakistani agents in Bangladesh. Mr. Samad stated that he had discussed the matter again with the Prime Minister of Bangladesh, who felt that regardless of this negative possibility, Bangladesh nationals being offered by Pakistan have to be accepted by Bangladesh. This was a matter of principle. Mr. Samad however said that before actual repatriation takes place, the Government of Pakistan may be asked to provide the following information:

(a) A list of names. The name of the father/husband/head of Family;
(b) The home addresses of these women and children in Bangladesh;
(c) How many of them would go directly to their homes and how many would like to remain in reception camps till the heads of families return and arrange for their permanent resettlement here.

If Pakistan provides this information, then at least Bangladesh authorities would have an opportunity to keep track of the activities of the Bangladeshis coming from Pakistan.

Foreign Minister Samad then mentioned that he had reported his conversation with President Ceausescu of Romania on China - Bangladesh relations to our Foreign Minister Sardar Swaran Singh and the former Foreign Secretary Mr. T.N. Kaul. Mr. Samad conveyed that during his visit to Romania early in November he had a two-hour closed-door private discussion with President Ceausescu, during which President Ceausescu mentioned that Chinese were unhappy about Bangladesh not trying to normalize relations with China and Bangladesh’s “rigid attitude regarding Pakistan.” China, according to President Ceausescu, was willing to have good relations with Bangladesh.
provided Bangladesh followed “a correct foreign policy in relation to China and Pakistan.” Mr. Samad stated in response that Bangladesh was equally anxious to have normal relations with China, but the Chinese should not link up the question of their having good relations with Bangladesh with the state of Bangladesh’s relations with Pakistan. Instead of arguing only Pakistan’s cause, China should try to appreciate the problems of Bangladesh and the motivations of Bangladesh’s policies in relation to Pakistan.

8. The minutes of these discussions between President Ceausescu and Foreign Minister Samad were finalized by them the same evening. President Ceausescu, with the approval of Foreign Minister Samad, conveyed the text of these minutes to Mr. Chou En-lai through the Romanian Embassy in Peking, suggesting that the Chinese might like to respond to Mr. Samad’s views. Later, when Mr. Samad was in London, a note containing the Chinese response to the above minutes was handed over to Mr. Samad. The note was sent by the Romanian Government through the Romanian Embassy in London with the suggestion that Mr. Samad might like to respond to the Chinese views contained in the note. The Chinese note reiterated the Chinese stand that the resolution of the problems of the subcontinent depends on Bangladesh agreeing to the repatriation of all the prisoners of war and to Sheikh Mujibur Rahman meeting President Bhutto without pre-conditions. China is willing to have good relations with Bangladesh provided Bangladesh frees itself from the incorrect attitude in foreign relations which it has been taking under the influence of the Soviet Union.

9. Foreign Minister Samad informed the Acting High Commissioner that this was the first communication from China meant for Bangladesh, which has come through diplomatic channels. The Prime Minister of Bangladesh has decided to respond to this Chinese communication by means of a note. The note would contain a statement of Bangladesh’s attitude towards Pakistan and related problems. It would also reiterate Bangladesh’s desire to normalize relations with China. Mr. Samad told Acting High Commissioner that the note was to be sent to the High Commission of Bangladesh in London. The High Commission would hand over the note to the Romanian Ambassador in London who would then transmit it, through his Government, to Peking.

10. The Acting High Commissioner suggested that Foreign Minister Samad might receive High Commissioner Mr. Dutt for a detailed discussion as early as possible. The Foreign Minister stated that Mr. Dutt could call on him at his residence on the 7th December at 5.30 P.M.

Sd/- J.N. Dixit
Deputy High Commissioner
11-12-1972.
Summary of discussions between Foreign Minister of Bangladesh and the Indian High Commissioner Subimal Dutt.

Dacca, December 7, 1972.

High Commissioner Shri Subimal Dutt, accompanied by the Deputy High Commissioner, called on the Foreign Minister at his residence at 5.30 p.m. on the 7th December.

2. High Commissioner spoke to the Foreign Minister on the suggestion made in Foreign Secretary’s telegram No. 25676 dated the 6th December about the Bangladesh Government agreeing to receive the Secretary General of the U.N., Dr. Kurt Waldheim, between the 9th and the 10th February. High Commissioner stated that it would be advisable for Sheikh Saheb to adjust his election programme so as to be able to receive the Secretary General. As the Secretary General would be visiting Pakistan, Prime Minister’s not receiving Dr. Waldheim, apart from creating an adverse impression on him, might give an advantage to Pakistan on international public opinion. High Commissioner strongly recommended that Dr. Waldheim should be received. Foreign Minister Samad agreed with the suggestion. He said that he would take up the matter with the Prime Minister. High Commissioner stated that if the Prime Minister agrees, the invitation may issue through the Bangladesh Observer at the U.N. Foreign Minister Samad said that he would expedite a positive decision on this suggestion. The Foreign Secretary of Bangladesh would inform the Deputy High Commissioner of the decision of the Bangladesh Government in the matter early in the following week.

3. High Commissioner then recalled Mr. Samad’s conversation with the Deputy High Commissioner on the 6th December and enquired as to what precisely Bangladesh expects to gain by taking an initiative which involves an announcement of the dates for war crime trials with the pre-conditions which Mr. Samad had in mind about repatriating the large majority of Pakistani POWs. The High Commissioner made the following comments on this initiative:

(i) The preconditions stipulated for repatriating the majority of prisoners of war are nothing new. This has already been the stand of Bangladesh and India.

(ii) If the initiative taken by Bangladesh is linked up by Bangladesh itself with the U.N. resolutions, it would invite U.N. intervention and contradict the principles of bilateralism which we have emphasized in resolving pending problems in the sub-continent.
(iii) Announcement of war crimes trials at this point of time may result in the attitude of President Bhutto stiffening in relation to Bangladesh. It may also be interpreted by the international community as a contradiction of one of the clauses of the Argentine resolution which had urged that all parties should refrain from any act which would increase tensions or make the resolution of the pending problems difficult.

(iv) It might stiffen China’s attitude at the U.N. The initiative regarding war crimes trials might have an adverse impact on international public opinion.

4. High Commissioner underlined that the holding of war crimes trials should be decided on full consideration of possible impact on domestic public opinion and international public opinion. From the point of view of internal politics, there is both a positive and negative side. On the one hand, holding of war crimes trials may satisfy Bangladesh opinion which is keen on trial of war criminals, but on the other hand this might result in Bhutto putting an equal number of Bangladesh nationals on trial. This in turn might result in criticism of the Government here by opposition parties and others and more pressure on Government to do everything possible for the return of Bangladesh nationals.

5. While agreeing with this analysis, Foreign Minister Samad added that if all the Bangladesh nationals are not repatriated, there would be the additional criticism that the Bangladesh Government, while agreeing to repatriate a large majority of Pakistani Prisoners of war, has not been able to arrange for the repatriation of all Bangladesh nationals who are innocent.

6. High Commissioner said that from the point of view of international public opinion, the announcement of war crimes trials in the immediate aftermath of the debate at the UN would have an adverse impact. If, however, the Bangladesh Government wants to announce the holding of these trials, they should also announce the procedures which would be followed at the trials, the legal framework within which the trials would be held and the details regarding the composition of the war crimes tribunal, the objective being to tell the world that adequate facilities for defense would be given to the accused, that the trials would be fair and in consonance with the relevant principles of international law.

7. Mr. Samad agreed that this is necessary. He informed the High Commissioner that it is a matter of political judgment whether all the details should be announced or not. The Law Minister, Mr. Kamal Hossain had already informed Mr. Samad that announcements can be made about the procedures and composition of the tribunal. Mr. Samad enquired whether it would be a good idea to ask for the return of war criminals immediately from India adding that the accused could be ‘secretly’ brought over to Bangladesh. The Prime Minister, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman could then make a statement on the 16th December that the Government of Bangladesh is only trying a limited number of war criminals and is willing to repatriate the large majority of the prisoners of war if Pakistan also agrees to repatriate all the Bangladesh nationals and agree to discuss all pending problems with Bangladesh and India on a basis of equality, recognizing the realities of the situation on the sub-continent.

8. High Commissioner said that such an initiative may not have the desired result. High Commissioner expressed the view that while the Government of India would be willing to send back the war criminals required by Bangladesh, the chances of keeping the whole transaction secret are remote. If the Prime Minister is going to make an announcement on the 16th December, then the objective of this temporary secrecy is not clear. High Commissioner observed that if might be advisable at this stage to announce a programme of war crimes trials. His suggestion was that if an announcement was to be made, the Government of Bangladesh could make a general announcement that, after due legal scrutiny the Government of Bangladesh has now finalized the list of persons against whom there is prima facie and justifiable evidence of their having committed genocide and crimes against humanity. Simultaneously there should be some indication of the composition of the tribunal and assurance of full facilities to the accused for defence. It is for the Government of Bangladesh to take a decision on broader considerations such as international public opinion and likely consequence on important issues like recognition by Pakistan and repatriation of Bangladesh nationals etc. Bangladesh should avoid making a definite statement about dates of trials.

9. The Foreign Minister said that one of the motives for bringing back the war criminals quickly to Bangladesh was that this would reduce international pressure on India for the repatriation of all Pakistani prisoners of war.

10. High Commissioner stated that international pressure on India would not be reduced by repatriating a limited number of prisoners of war accused of war crimes to Bangladesh. In fact, once such repatriation takes place, the pressure on India might increase. High Commissioner underlined that the initiative of the type envisaged by Mr. Samad and communicated to the Deputy High Commissioner on the 6th December would not bring any dividends from Pakistan, China or the U.N. at this stage.

11. Mr. Samad acknowledged that the High Commissioner’s analysis indicates that the entire question of taking a diplomatic initiative should be examined anew. He said that while there is a necessity to take some sort of an initiative it would have to be more carefully formulated. Mr. Samad said that a precise formulation would be prepared and after it has been considered by the Prime Minister, it would be handed over to the High Commissioner by the Foreign Secretary.
12. Mr. Samad then recounted to the High Commissioner his conversation with President Ceausescu about Bangladesh - China relations, which he had conveyed to Deputy High Commissioner on the 6th December. (Reference paragraphs 7, 8 and 9 of Summary of Discussions with Deputy High Commissioner). Mr. Samad also informed the High Commissioner that a reply has been sent to the Chinese note through the Romanian Embassy in London on the 5th December. Mr. Samd said that the Chinese communication through the Romanian Government and the text of the reply from Bangladesh to China would be handed over to the Deputy High Commissioner.

13. High Commissioner stated that Bangladesh should not have any undue expectations about China resiling from its basic stand on the repatriation of the POWs and the necessity of unconditional talks between Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and President Bhutto.

14. Mr. Samad stated that while he agreed with this assessment, the Government of Bangladesh was sending a reply to the Chinese so that the Chinese Government would not have an excuse to criticize Bangladesh for not having responded to the Chinese overtures through the Romanians.

15. Mr. Samad enquired of the High Commissioner whether in his assessment; the contents of the Argentine resolution imposed any obligation on Pakistan to recognize Bangladesh if issues like the Prisoners of war etc. are resolved. High Commissioner read out the contents of the Argentine resolution to the Foreign Minister (the text of the resolution had been taken by the High Commissioner to the meeting) and pointed out that none of the provisions of the Argentine resolution imposed any obligation for recognition on any of the parties. It only talks about resolving the pending problems to facilitate establishment of normal relations.

0750. Statement by the External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Lok Sabha on the Thako Chak Issue.

New Delhi, December 8, 1972.

I told the House yesterday that serious efforts were being made to settle the outstanding differences in regard to the delineation of the line of control in Jammu and Kashmir. I can now inform the House that these efforts have been successful. The Army Chiefs of India and Pakistan met at Lahore yesterday. At the end of the meeting they issued the following joint statement and I quote from it:

“General Sam Manekshaw met with General Tikka Khan once again at Lahore on December 7, 1972. The meeting lasted three hours and was held in an atmosphere of goodwill and mutual understanding.

“The two Chiefs were able to compose the differences that existed and are directing their senior military commanders Lt. Gen. P.S. Bhagat and Lt. Gen. Abdul Hameed Khan to meet at Suchetgarh on December 11, 1972 and finalise the delineation of the line of control in Jammu and Kashmir as adjusted by them (two Chiefs). This line of control will commence from Chhamb Sector and end in the Turtok Sector (Partapur Sector).”

Honourable Members will appreciate that what was involved in the negotiations which concluded in Lahore yesterday was not a territorial question. It involved the acceptance by Pakistan of a position which India had held all along, namely, that there was a basic difference between the border dividing the state of Jammu & Kashmir and Pakistan and the line of control in Jammu and Kashmir.

We are naturally glad that in the interest of not merely the Simla Agreement but of future relations between the two countries in the spirit of this Agreement Pakistan has recognised, at least by implication, the validity of our stand. The consequence of this fact is likely to be lost if we think merely in terms of territory. In Lahore, our Chief of the Army Staff insisted that the question of Thako Chak had to be settled in terms of its own merits.

The Honourable Members will appreciate that the delineation of the line of control consisted in the acceptance or rejection by either side of claims made on the basis of military positions on the day of the ceasefire, namely, 17th December 1971. Once Pakistan agreed to settle the question of Thako Chak, our Chief of the Army Staff reviewed some of the claims which Pakistan had earlier made. As a gesture in the interest of peace, we settled some of these claims and this also resulted in the rationalization of the line of control, by minor adjustment.

Finally, the Hon'ble Members will appreciate that the essence of all negotiations being conducted by us is not to depict the solution of problems in negotiation as total victory or total defeat for one side or other. In fact, it is wiser to say that in the interest of further implementation of the Simla Agreement, the Agreement reached in Lahore yesterday is a victory for both, and if I may add defeat for none.

0751. Letter from the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister P. N. Haksar to the Secretary General of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed regarding the Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir.

New Delhi, December 11, 1972.

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmed,

I jus now received your message which reads as follows: -

“I am to inform you that the Government of Pakistan has accorded its approval to the Joint Recommendations submitted by the Senior Military Commanders of Pakistan and India today December 11, 1972, in regard to the delineation of the line of control in Jammu & Kashmir.

If the Government of India also accords its approval to the Line of Control as jointly recommended by the senior military commanders, I suggest that an announcement may be made simultaneously from Islamabad and New Delhi at 6 PM (WPST) today, 11 December 1972, in terms suggested in your letter No. 308/PSS/72, dated October 23, 1972, namely, “the Line of Control has been delineated in Jammu and Kashmir in accordance with the Simla Agreement of July 2, 1972 and that it has the approval of both Governments. Adjustments of ground positions will be carried out to conform to the line of control approved by both Governments within a period of 5 days from the date of this announcement.

This Government proposes simultaneously to release to the Press broad details of the Line of Control.”
2. I have the honour to inform you that Government of India too has accorded its approval to the joint recommendations submitted by the Senior Military Commanders of Pakistan and India today, December 11, 1972 in regard to the delineation of the Line of Control in Jammu & Kashmir. I agree with paragraph 2 of your message containing terms of the announcement to be made at New Delhi and Islamabad at 1830 hours (IST) on December 11, 1972 in the terms suggested in my letter No. 308/PSS/72 of October 23, 1972.

With warm personal regards and bet wishes,

Your Sincerely,

(P.N.Haksar)

His Excellency

TOP SECRET

Record of the discussions between Indian Deputy High Commissioner J. N. Dixit and the Bangladesh Foreign Minister.

Dacca, December 11, 1972.

High Commission of India
Dacca

Foreign Minister Mr. Samad called me for a meeting at 1300 hours this afternoon. Mr. Enayet Karim, the Foreign Secretary was present during the meeting at the Foreign office.

2. Mr. Samad stated that he had asked me to come in continuation of High Commissioner’s conversation with them on the evening of the 7th December. The Foreign Minister confirmed that, as suggested by the High Commissioner, Sheikh Saheb has agreed to receive the Secretary General of the U.N., Dr. Kurt Waldheim, on the 9th or 10th February. Ambassador S.A. Karim, the Bangladesh Observer to the United Nations, has been instructed to extend an invitation to Dr. Waldheim on behalf of the Prime Minister of Bangladesh. The invitation is to be delivered on the 11th or the 12th December. Mr. Samad stated that most probably a meeting between Dr. Waldheim and the Prime Minister of Bangladesh would be organized on the forenoon of the 10th of February 1973. Foreign Minister will hold discussions with Mr. Waldheim on the 9th afternoon and he will also host a dinner or other appropriate entertainment for Dr. Waldheim.

3. I place below a telegram is continuation of High Commissioner’s telegram No.1057 dated the 9th December to the Foreign Secretary, which may issues subject to High Commissioner’s approval.

4. Referring to the information which Mr. Samad gave the High Commissioner about the note sent to the Government of Bangladesh by the Government of the People’s Republic of China, Mr. Samad said that due to some reasons he does not wish to hand over the text of Bangladesh’s reply to the note. He however asked the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Karim, to read out the full text of both notes to me. Foreign Minister Samad clarified that the Chinese note was received by him in London in the third week of November and that the reply to the Chinese was sent through the Romanian Embassy in London on the 5th December 1972.

5. The main points in the Chinese note as it was read out to me by Mr. Enayet Karim were as follows:

(i) China had taken a principled stand on the Bangladesh issue. This principled stand about which China has been consistent, has been ‘injured’ by the attitude of Bangladesh and India. This situation has not changed.

(ii) It is China’s hope that the problems of the subcontinent could be solved “by peaceful means” by the countries concerned.

(iii) President Bhutto had repeatedly offered to meet Sheikh Mujibur Rahman unconditionally, but Bangladesh has not responded to this offer. Instead, Bangladesh has stipulated the pre-condition of recognition. Bangladesh has also not implemented the provisions of the U.N. Security Council resolutions of December 1971. Bangladesh has not agreed to the repatriation of the Pakistani Prisoners of war.

(iv) “It is the opinion of the Government of China that if Bangladesh implements the UN resolutions of December 1971, agrees to the repatriation of all the Pakistani Prisoners of war, agrees to a discussion without pre-conditions with President Bhutto and follows a free and independent foreign policy, the problems between Bangladesh and Pakistan would be finally resolved satisfactorily by peaceful means.”
“This would also create conditions for the establishment of good relations between China and Bangladesh.”

(v) If Bangladesh accepts the above suggestions, China would not oppose Bangladesh’s admission to the United Nations. China is not “emphatically or categorically opposed to Bangladesh’s admission to the U.N.” China only wishes to ensure that correct principles are followed in international relations.

6. The main points in the reply sent by the Government of Bangladesh to the Chinese note on the 5th December are the following:

(i) Bangladesh has been and is following a free and independent foreign policy. It is incorrect to state that Bangladesh’s foreign policy is influenced by any other country.

(ii) It is not Sheikh Mujibur Rahman but President Bhutto who is stipulating pre-conditions to resolve pending problems in the subcontinent. It is President Bhutto who is refusing to treat Bangladesh on the basis of equality and sovereignty. He is making recognition conditional to a prior meeting, which is inconsistent with the realities of the situation in the subcontinent. Once the Government of Pakistan accepts the emergence of Bangladesh as a sovereign country, the Prime Minister of Bangladesh would be willing to have discussions on all pending problems with President Bhutto.

(iii) It is the opinion of the Government of Bangladesh that normalization of relations with China by means of China’s recognition of Bangladesh, Bangladesh’s admission to the U.N., which China can facilitate by withdrawing its veto, and recognition by Pakistan of the independent existence of Bangladesh would be conducive to durable peace and stability in the subcontinent and would also expedite the speedy resolution of all pending problems between the countries of the subcontinent.

(iv) The Government of Bangladesh considers it desirable to normalize relations with China and is willing to undertake necessary initiatives for this purpose on the basis of equality and sovereignty of Bangladesh.

(v) All pending problems of repatriation, implementation of the UN resolutions etc. will be facilitated by the international community and Pakistan recognizing Bangladesh’s independent political existence.

(vi) The Government of Bangladesh earnestly hopes that the Government of the People’s Republic of China will appreciate and understand Bangladesh’s point of view in the matter and would support endeavors to normalize the political situation in the subcontinent and to ensure durable peace in the area.
7. The significant points in this exchange of notes are China’s repeated insinuation that Bangladesh is not following a free and independent foreign policy and China’s insistence that Bangladesh’s admission to the UN would only be allowed by them after Bangladesh comes to terms with Pakistan within the framework of the U.N. resolutions of December 1972. The note also tends to suggest that the pending problems of the subcontinent can be resolved between Pakistan and Bangladesh without the involvement of India. China has indicated its decision not to recognize Bangladesh till the conditions stipulated by China are met by Bangladesh. The Government of Bangladesh in its reply has rightly emphasized the independence and freedom of Bangladesh’s foreign policy. It has also set out the correct priorities in steps to be taken for normalization of relations with Pakistan. The reply points out that recognition, admission to the UN and an end of a policy of ambivalence and confrontation by Pakistan are necessary to resolve all the pending problems in the subcontinent. The reply of the Government of Bangladesh invariably refers to countries of the subcontinent there by countering the Chinese attempt at excluding India from the process of normalization of relations between Bangladesh and Pakistan. The reply appeals to China to exert its influence with Pakistan to appreciate Bangladesh’s point of view and to recognize the facts of life on the subcontinent.

8. Foreign Minister Samad’s assessment was that while this reply may not bring about immediate positive results in basic terms in relation to Pakistan, UN or normalization of relations with China, a dialogue has been initiated with China, which may ultimately help in the normalization of relations with that important neighbour of Bangladesh.

9. Mr. Samad stated that he had generally informed our Foreign Minister of the contents of the Chinese note when he passed through Delhi in November. He had also informed our Foreign Minister that the Government of Bangladesh would be sending some sort of a reply.

10. High Commissioner may consider sending a copy to this note to the Ministry of External Affairs. If he agrees, the note may be sent to the Foreign Secretary and the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister. If so decided, I will put up a forwarding letter for High Commissioner’s consideration.

High Commissioner.
Statement by the External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Lok Sabha on the finalization of the Line of Control in Jammu and Kashmir.

New Delhi, December 12, 1972.

Mr. Speaker Sir,

Hon'ble Members will recall my statement in the Lok Sabha on December 8 regarding the outcome of the meeting between the Chiefs of Army Staff of India and Pakistan held at Lahore on December 7, 1972. In pursuance of the decisions taken in that meeting the senior military commanders of the two sides completed the task of finalizing the maps showing the delineated line of control in Jammu and Kashmir and submitted their agreed delineation of the line of control to their respective Governments for approval. The approval of the Pakistan Governments was received in the evening of December 11 and approval of the Government of India was transmitted to them the same evening. The following announcement was made in New Delhi and Islamabad:

"The line of Control has been delineated in Jammu and Kashmir in accordance with the Simla Agreement on July 2, 1972 and that it has the approval of both Governments. Adjustments of ground positions will be carried out to conform to the line of control approved by both Governments within a period on 5 days from the date of this announcement.

The broad description of the line of control resulting from the ceasefire of December 17, 1972 in Jammu and Kashmir as delineated on maps along its entire length is laid on the Table of the House. This line has been delineated on 19 Mosaic maps commencing from the Chhamb sector on the international border and ending in Turtok-Partapur sector in the north. This line of control in Jammu and Kashmir has been determined through bilateral negotiations between India and Pakistan. As Hon'ble members would recall in accordance with the terms of the Simla Agreement, this line will be respected by both sides, neither side shall alter it unilaterally and both sides shall refrain from the threat or use of force in violation of this line.

I informed the House on December 8 that the controversy over the small pocket of Thako Chak about 1 ½ square miles in area in the occupation of Pakistan, had been resolved. Once Pakistan agreed to withdraw its troops from Thako Chak, we agreed, as a gesture of goodwill, to rationalize the line by minor adjustment of mutual claims. In the process, we withdrew our earlier claim in respect of the villages of Dhum and Ghikot, situated along the line of control, amounting to about 0.45 square miles in area.
Broad details of the line of Control:

(a) From MANAWAR TAWI NW 605550 the Line of Control runs North West up to a point 3 miles West of JHANGAR (with CHHAMB inclusive to PAKISTAN), from where it turns North East wards to MITHIDHARA NR 2619, thence North and North –West-wards up to PUNCH River at NR 052669 (approximately 6 miles South West of PUNCH).

(b) From there the Line again turns North Eastwards and thence North up to JARNI GALI (inclusive to INDIA) in GULMARG sector, thence Westwards passing through MINDI GALI (inclusive of INDIA) up to PIR KANTHI (inclusive to PAKISTAN), thence Northwards passing through CHHOTA KAZI NAG (inclusive to INDIA) approximately 7 miles North West of URI, up to KAIYAN in LIPA Valley (inclusive to INDIA) thence the Line of Control runs Westwards up to RICHHMAR GALI with KATRAN KI GALI inclusive to PKISTAN and the WANJAL Ridge and CHAK MUQAM Heights inclusive to INDIA.

(c) From RICHHMAR GALI, the Line of Control runs Northwards passing West of TITHWAL up to 3 miles North of KERAN, thence turning North Eastwards up to LUNDA GALI (inclusive to INDIA), thence Eastwards to HARMAAGI village in KEL sector (inclusive to PAKISTAN), DURMAT in KANZALWLAN Sector (inclusive to INDIA) and heights 14236, 15460 and KAROBAL GALI in MANIMARG sector (all inclusive to INDIA), thence along NERIL (inclusive to INDIA), BREILMAN (inclusive to PAKISTAN), and North of CHET in the KARGIL sector, up to CHORBATLA in TURTOK sector.

(d) From there the Line of Control runs North Eastwards to THANG (inclusive to INDIA) thence eastwards joining the Glaciers.
0754. Joint Statement by the Governments of India and Pakistan regarding withdrawal of armed forces of the two countries to their side of the international border.

The Chiefs of Army Staff of India and Pakistan have reported to their respective Governments that their forces have been withdrawn to their sides of the international border in conformity with the Simla Agreement.

As reported on December 17, 1972, adjustment of ground positions of both sides to conform to the line of control in Jammu and Kashmir had been carried out with the exception of a few positions in the northern area of Jammu and Kashmir where it was held up due to heavy snowfall. Adjustment of these positions will be carried out as soon as the weather conditions permit.

0755. TOP SECRET

Letter from the Indian Ambassador in the United States L. K. Jha to the Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh regarding possibility of supply of arms to Pakistan by the United States.

No. 811-S/Amb/72 December 20, 1972

My dear Kewal,

In the report I have sent you of my talks with Maurice Williams as well as in the summary which is going by this very bag of my conversation with Moynihan, you will find repeated references in one way or another to the question of supply of arms to Pakistan, particularly under the one-time-exception. I shall be exploring the subject further when I meet Kissinger for lunch tomorrow. However, I thought I should send you a fuller picture of my reading of the situation as well as pose a few questions regarding the attitude which we should adopt.

2. It seems to me that some decisions have been made. They cover the return of Pakistani equipment which had come for repairs and had been detained. They also cover at least the supply of weapon-carriers which were a part of the one-time-exception. In both these cases, pressures from the trade are strong. So I believe are the pressures in respect of supplies already contracted under the peace indigo project. It is my judgment that the motions of consultation are really in the nature of advance information and an attempt to soften our opposition by indicating that our own peace indigo project would benefit. My feeling is that this announcement could take place fairly soon, possibly simultaneously with or immediately after an announcement regarding release of the suspended 87 million dollars of aid in respect of which US went back on its signed agreement. The attempt will be to project all this as a case of honouring past pledges.

3. I am less certain about the aircraft included in the one-time-exception as well as in regard to the spares. Public reaction in this country to supply of military aircraft to Pakistan at this juncture is not likely to be favorable. However, the President is quite capable of brushing that aside if he is so inclined. Congressional opposition may receive more serious notice lest legislative impediments come in the way of future maneuverability. In any event, the most likely strategy will probably be to get whole of the one-time-exception or such part as it is intended to give finally out of the way before Moynihan arrives, and thereafter Moynihan could come forth with assurances that there will be no repetitions at least in near future.

4. Any revision of the embargo will make available a number of items for commercial purchases by both India and Pakistan. However, the resumption of spares supplies of a lethal nature will, I think, be a low key operation.

5. The question which I have been asking myself and discussing also with Eric is the line we should be taking before any announcements are made or definite decisions communicated to us. One extreme position would be to maintain an opposition to all arms at all times going to Pakistan.

6. Another approach would be to immediately undertake a sustained critical attack for any relaxation of the existing ban. In doing this we would have to advance arguments which would inter alia include the relative defense strengths of the two countries, the domestic situation in Pakistan, and the momentum for normalization within the sub-continent. Any substantive dialogue on these questions would require us to take a more sophisticated approach about the various items of equipment.

7. The possible advantage of a dialogue is that we will receive at least prior intimation in a situation where we can exercise no veto. We might event obtain some concessions through persuasion, and finally a convention of prior consultation may be established. On the other hand, we will have to guard against the Administration’s undoubted capacity to use any discussions as evidence of collusion by us later however unmerited.
8. Then, again, on the question of timing, certainly we have a strong point to urge that until things have got to normal the US should not create impediments to peace by injecting arms into Pakistan. We can even quote their own statements on the Bangladesh debate in the General Assembly. Here again, do we apply argument across the board or on a more selective basis?

9. A question might inevitably come up as to what is the political impact on Pakistan of any resumption of US arms supply in the near future. Does it strengthen Bhutto or the Army? If the latter, would this not act as a destabilizing factor inside Pakistan?

10. Another point that could be made is that US should say to Pakistan that the one-time-exception will be fulfilled after certain thighs have happened, e.g., recognition of Bangladesh. This would smack of pressures. Would it be a good thigh? Secondly, no less important, should we be taking a line which would suggest that US might exercise pressures on countries through its instrumentalities of military (and economic) aid?

11. I am posing these alternatives without giving a lead. It is not that I have no views on them but the issues are such that I cannot take a line relying on our own judgment here. The only strong view I have is that a blanket opposition is perhaps not the best course to adopt.

12. Of course, in any discussion that we may have we would have to say that the Indian people, the Indian parliament and, therefore, the Indian Government will have to publicly criticize any such move in strong categorical terms. We could not possibly lead the US to believe that the Government of India will acquiesce to whatever supplies they might make in the near future. But at the same time, insofar as there is a semblance of consultation, it would be worthwhile attempting to giver our comments in some detail.

13. I am sending a copy of this letter to Haksar.

Yours sincerely,
Sd/ (L.K.Jha)

PERSONAL

BANGLADESH

I reached Dacca on the 3rd instant (December) in the evening, and started from there on the return journey on the 6th (December). Sri P.N. Banerjee, Joint Director, R&AW, accompanied me on this trip.

2. There were two meetings with the Prime Minister of Bangladesh, and also courtesy calls on the following Cabinet Minister:-

a) Syed Nazrul Islam, Industries Minister.

b) Mr. Tajuddin Ahmed, Finance Minister.

c) Mr. Khondkar Mushtaq Ahmed, Power & Irrigation Minister.

d) Mr. Kamruzzaman, Relief Minister.

e) Mr. Samad, Foreign Minister,

f) Mr. Rab Sherniabat, Land Revenue Minister.

3. Apart from the exchange of greetings and the good wishes which I conveyed to him on behalf of the Prime Minister, the important points which came up during my discussions with Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, are briefly enumerated below:-
a) I asked the Sheikh whether he had any news from Pakistan about certain proposals regarding which he had written to the Prime Minister in October, '72. These proposals were conveyed by him to Secretary General Waldheim through Sir Robert Jackson. He said that there had been no reply from Pakistan.

b) To my question about his views regarding Pakistan-Bangladesh relations, and the steps which India should take after the withdrawal of the troops, he answered with heat that as Pakistan had in its draft Constitution mentioned of a Muslim Bangla, and provided for a future possibility of Muslim Bangla rejoining Pakistan, there was no question of talks between him and Bhutto. He had no specific comment to offer regarding any steps India should take.

c) When asked regarding a statement made by Foreign Minister Samad about the so-called three-legged foreign policy of Bangladesh, Sheikh Mujib said that there was some misrepresentation and misunderstanding about the matter. He explained that Mr. Samad intended to imply only that Bangladesh would have friendly relations with all major countries in this area viz USSR, India and China.

d) I suggested to Sheikh Mujib the desirability of refuting the statement discussed some time ago by the Information Department of the Govt. of Bangladesh, carrying the story that India had printed Bangladesh currency notes far in excess of the quantity authorized by the Bangladesh Govt. and that this was causing a devaluation of the Bangladesh currency. He admitted that such a statement had been issued, but added that no useful purpose would be served by refuting it now. He remarked that the local press had taken no notice of this statement, and that the matter had died down. In his opinion, issuing a contradiction at this stage, would only resurrect the controversy.

e) Reviewing the current political situation in Bangladesh, Sheikh Mujib said that the Bangladesh Communist Party (Moni Singh group) and the NAP (Muzzaffar group) had proposed that the Awami League should have an electoral alliance with them, so that a few Assembly seats could be left open for the BDCP and the NAP (M). This proposal had been turned down. Since then these two opposition parties had adopted a hostile attitude towards the Awami League, and against Prime Minister Mujibur Rahman.

f) The Sheikh felt that the tremendous popular response evinced at his recent election meetings had spread consternation and despondency amongst the opposition circles, most of which were bent upon creating chaos in the country. They wished to force the hands of the Govt. either to cancel or to postpone the elections. He declared that such mischievous moves would be thwarted.

g) According to the Prime Minister of Bangladesh, Pakistan is sending money from London via Calcutta to Maulana Bhasani and Ataur Rahman Khan of the Jatiya League, so that they should carry on subversive activities in Bangladesh. According to his information, the Pakistan Govt. had earmarked rupees six crores for these purposes. Sheikh Mujib could not, however, give me any details about this report, and said that he would pass them on to me when they were available.

h) According to him, the National Socialist Party of Rab-Siraj is also getting money from some sources in India. He added that Sri Jai Prakash Narain was acting as the channel for giving this foreign monetary help.

i) The Sheikh added that Pakistan was trying hard to strengthen the Muslim Bangla movement, and that some reactionary and communal elements including the followers of Maulana Bhasani were active in this regard.
Recently one person distributing pamphlets in favour of the establishment of Muslim Bangla was arrested.

j) Sheikh Mujibur Rahman deprecated the killing of two students belonging to the Chhatra Union, followers of the NAP (M) group, on 1.1.73 in a police firing, before the USIS office in Dacca. They were demonstrating against the American bombing of North Vietnam. He, however, said that the opposition parties led by the NAP (M) were exploiting this issue in an attempt to create large scale violence in the country, so that it would be impossible to hold the general elections.

k) While talking of the police firing over the students' procession, Sheikh Mujib said that the Bangladesh Govt. had no tear gas shells. He therefore desired that I should make a special effort to get some such shells released by the Govt. of India immediately.

(Note: Action about this has been taken separately and it is understood that on the basis of an earlier request received from the Bangladesh Govt. about 700 shells have already been dispatched.)

l) The Sheikh bemoaned the fact that most of his bureaucrats did not support loyally the policies of the Govt. and were pro-Pakistan and anti-Indian in their outlook. He said that the police force was also, by and large, unreliable. In view of this, he had to depend more and more on the National Militia (Jatiya Rakkhi Bahini), which is being trained with the help of our special Frontier Force officers. He forecast that during the elections, the Rakkhi Bahini would have to be deployed extensively, and said that he proposed to increase its strength, if necessary, up to 50,000.

4. Sheikh Mujibur Rahman also mentioned the following points to me, and desired that they should be specially conveyed to the Prime Minister:-

i) He proposes to bring up for trial about 100 prisoners of war in February or March next and hoped that the Prime Minister would agree with this.

ii) India should give moral and material help to the Sindhis, the Baluchis and the Pathans to win their freedom. The best way to do this should be decided by the Indian leaders.

iii) A proper dialogue should be maintained between the concerned authorities in Bangladesh and India, regarding the activities of Naxalites.

iv) He intends to increase the strength of the Rakkhi Bahini, and might seek our further help in this regard.

v) Sheikh Mujib expressed concern over what he described as black market operations in Bangladesh currently, on our side of the Indo-Bangladesh border. He said that unofficial money changers gave only 50 Indian rupees against 100 Bangladesh Takkas. This, according to him, hurt his position in Bangladesh. He, therefore, requested that the Prime Minister should consider establishing some official money changing facilities near the Indo-Bangladesh border, where Takkas should be exchanged with Indian rupees at the official rate. He said that in order to stop this black market, he was also thinking of stopping all traffic across the border for two or three months.

vi) Mujibur Rahman praised the manner in which the officials of our Embassy in Kabul had helped Bangladesh nationals fleeing from Pakistan. He desired that his congratulations and thanks should be conveyed to the officials concerned, and urged that similar arrangements should be made by the Indian Mission in Jeddah to look after the Bangladesh Hajis who go to Saudi Arabia.

vii) The Sheikh observed that after the elections in Bangladesh were over, he would like to meet the Prime Minister at a time and a place convenient to her, possibly Darjeeling.

viii) Mr. Mujibur Rahman repeated to me a suggestion he had made some months ago that our weekly political assessments should be made available to him for personal information. The subjects of interest mentioned by him are:-
POLITICAL RELATIONS: 1970-1974

(a) US activities in Asia,
(b) Chinese policy, and
(c) the overall situation in Pakistan. Here, he referred again to what he had mentioned earlier about Pakistan wanting to send through London up to rupees six crores to Bangladesh to create trouble there before the elections. He added that in this transaction he suspected the involvement of some Marwaris also.

5. Given below is the summary of the discussions held with other Ministers:-

(a) Except Mr. Tajuddin Ahmed, none had much to say. One question, however, was put to all the Ministers, viz. where the Govt. of India could do anything to counteract the anti-India propaganda in Bangladesh. None of the Ministers gave a clear answer to this question, but most felt that this propaganda could best be countered from within Bangladesh by her leaders. Some remarked that anti-Indian propaganda was already being thwarted by the pro-India public utterances of the Awami League leaders.

(b) Mr. Tajuddin Ahmed painted a dismal picture of the present political situation in Bangladesh and said that he was in danger of his life. He made a specific mention of the violent activities which had started on 1.7.73 after the killing by Police firing of two students of the Chhatra Union NAP (M) before the USIS building at Dacca. He said that the Chhatra League (Siddiqi-Makhan group) and the Awami Youth League of Sk. Fazlul Huq Mani had taken to violence to try to crush their political opponents, particularly those belonging to the NAP (M), the National Socialist Party (Rab-Siraj group) and the student wings of these parties. Mr. Tajuddin said that if these irresponsible elements in the Awami League were not restrained in time, there would be a blood-bath in Bangladesh, which might make it impossible to hold the election in a peaceful atmosphere.

(c) According to Mr. Tajuddin it would not be good for Bangladesh if the Awami League was returned with an overwhelming majority in the ensuing election. He felt that without an effective opposition, both the party and the Govt. would take to dictatorial ways which would bring a lot of misery to the people of the country. He observed that it would be ideal if the Awami League secured about 70% of the seats, and the majority of the remaining 30% went to the NAP (M). He said that there were many educated and patriotic people in the NAP (M) and that if a substantial number of candidates from this party were returned in the election, it would help not only in the establishment of democratic socialism in the country, but would also prevent the Govt. from going the autocratic way. He added that the NAP (M) was suffering from a lack of funds, and that without some extraneous assistance; it would not be possible for the party to fight the election successfully.

d) Both Mr. Tajuddin and Syed Nazrul Islam in their separate talks with me found fault with Prof Muzzaffar Ahmed. They said that he was haughty, argumentative and rigid in his approach. According to them, Altaf Hossain, the Vice President of the NAP (M), was a much more sober and discreet person and should have been allowed a free hand to lead the party, but he had been removed by Muzzaffar Ahmed.

e) Mr. Tajuddin and Syed Nazrul Islam also independently expressed the view that the Bangladesh Communist Party of Mani Singh was financially better off than the NAP (M). It did not, however, have many good workers and its following was also less than that of the NAP (M).

6. Sri Banerjee also, separately, met a number of his secret contacts. Attached is a brief note (Annexure) (not available) giving his overall assessment of the situation, with which I broadly agree.

7. It is expected that there would be widespread violence in Bangladesh before the election. Some of the hot heads who support the ruling party are foolishly creating a situation in which the opposition parties might get unnerved, and refuse to contest the election. This could only harm the Bangladesh Govt. and also tarnish the image of the Bangabandhu. The militants of the Awami League Chhatra League are so intolerant of any personal criticism of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, that in one reported incident, a man who had dared to tear off a picture of his had his ear chopped off on the spot. Such senseless impetuosity would trigger off other violence. The consequences of this could be very serious for Bangladesh, considering that there still is a very large number of unaccounted for fire arms, ammunition and explosives in the hands of various groups.

No. PII/311/2/72

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi and requests that the following message may kindly be transmitted to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan.

BEGIN

Radio Pakistan’s Urdu feature Aaj Ke Akhbarat, (Today in the Newspapers) broadcast from Lahore at 0750 hours on 24th December, 1972 quoted the Pakistan Army Chief of Staff as having made the following “disclosure”:

‘Officers of the Pakistan Army are being subjected to torture at secret camps at the Red Fort’.

The broadcast also quotes the Associated Press to say that

“the Indian Commander has admitted the existence of the secret camp at Red Fort. Officials of the International Red Cross have also inspected the Camp. According to this report, most modern gadgets are being used to brain-trash these officers.”

It is regrettable that a totally false and misleading story of this kind should have been broadcast by Radio Pakistan. This items is in obvious violation of paragraph 2 of the Simla Agreement on cessation of hostile propaganda.

The Ministry hopes that appropriate instructions will be issued to the concerned authorities in Pakistan so that such hostile anti – Indian items are not broadcast in future.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the embassy of Switzerland the assurances of its highest consideration.

0758. Letter from Pakistan Foreign Secretary Mumtaz A. Alvie to Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh.

From: Mumtaz A. Alvie, SQA, PFS

January 22, 1973

Dear Mr. Kewal Singh,

At the Delhi meeting of the Special Envoys in August 1972 it was agreed that it would be desirable to settle the overflights case pending before the Council of the International Civil Aviation organization through bilateral negotiations. Accordingly, when the president of the ICAO Council asked Pakistan and India whether the case should be scheduled for hearing before the 77th Session of the ICAO Council in November 1972 or the 78th Session in February 1973, both India and Pakistan separately informed him that we had no objection to the hearing being scheduled for the 78th Session.

2. It was then hoped that in the meantime the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan would be able to hold bilateral negotiations in this matter. It appears that our pre-occupation with more pressing bilateral issues may not permit us to take up discussion of the overflights case at an early date. Accordingly it is suggested that ICAO Council should be approached by India and Pakistan to postpone further consideration of this case and in accordance with Article 14 of the Rules for the Settlement of Differences invite the parties concerned to undertake direct negotiations. These negotiations could be held at a date to be fixed later according to our mutual convenience.

With kindest regards,

Yours sincerely

0759. Letter from Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh to Pakistan Foreign Secretary Mumtaz A. Alvie sent through the Embassy of Switzerland.

New Delhi, February 20, 1973.

AIDE MEMOIRE

The Embassy of Switzerland, New Delhi, is requested to convey the following message to Mr. Mumtaz A. Alvie, Foreign Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan. This is in reply to the latter’s communication of January 22nd to Shri Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India.

Begins

Thank you for your letter of 22nd January suggesting postponement of further consideration of the overflights case now pending before the ICAO Council.

2. Following the Delhi talks of August, 1972 and subsequent correspondence between us, we had hoped that bilateral negotiations could commence not only for resolving the manner in which the proceedings in the ICAO Council should be discontinued but also to settle the matter bilaterally in terms of the Simla Agreement. We had even invited a delegation from Pakistan for these talks during the first week of November 1972 or, alternatively, to send one to Pakistan. In spite of that, no talks have taken Place so far.

3. You have stated that pre-occupation with other matters may not permit you to take up discussion on the overflights case “at an early date”. In view of this the only course open to the two Government is to adopt the same procedure which was followed in November, 1972, namely to request the president of the ICAO Council not to schedule the case at its 78th session.

4. As you would recall, the agreement reached on 29th August 1972 at the New Delhi meeting of the special envoys was that both Government would settle the case bilaterally.

5. However, in view of your letter and the shortage of time at our disposal we are sending the following communication to the president of the ICAO Council:

   “With reference to your enquiry regarding the overflights case, the Government of India’s view is that the case may be taken up by the ICAO Council at its 78th session.”

We trust that the Government of Pakistan would be agreeable to sending a similar communication to the ICAO Council President. In the meanwhile we hope, we would be able to take steps to hold bilateral negotiations to settle the case at an early date.

Your sincerely

0760. Letter of the Indian Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh to the Pakistan Foreign Secretary Mumtaz A. Alvie.

New Delhi, March 8, 1973.

Dear Mr. Alvie,

I have just received your letter of February 28, 1973 in which you have raised the question of propaganda by news media in either country directed against the other. At the very outset I would like to assure you that I welcome this communication. It is only by frank exchanges between us on this subject that we can hope to reverse the unfortunate trend of hostile propaganda. Since we, in India, are determined to implement fully para 2 of the Agreement in this respect, as, indeed, every word of the Simla Agreement, it appears very useful to us to frequently examine how far the two Governments are achieving the objective of preventing hostile propaganda and encouraging the dissemination of information which promotes friendly relations between the two countries.

2. You have in your letter, referred to the list which you sent to us on November 30, 1972, in fact that was the last list we received of items broadcast by All India Radio which were considered objectionable by you. We took prompt and appropriate action on the list received from the Pakistan Government and I am glad to say that there has not been, according to my knowledge, any propaganda, publicity or comments on our side which would be termed as hostile to Pakistan. You would, however, permit me to mention that in some of the instances quoted in the list sent by you, the radio commentators had merely carried statements by opposition leaders or press comments. This, you would appreciate, cannot be termed as reflecting the opinion of the Government. Such extracts from the two statements of Opposition leaders etc. are also quoted by the Pakistan Radio and we have seen no justification to take exception to it.

3. In this connection, I am glad to read that you had acknowledged that the Government of India had also brought a number of instances where hostile propaganda had been carried on by Pakistan publicity media against India. I had earnestly hoped you would have taken suitable measures to prevent such hostile propaganda. I must, however, confess my great disappointment that in actual fact this hostile propaganda has not only continued but has been further intensified lately. You would recall our sending 5 notes on this subject dated These notes list a large number of instances of highly offensive and objectionable propaganda directed against India by Radio Pakistan broadcasts.
More than the volume of such material is the content and their tenor. In a spirit of frankness and with the objective which we both wish to achieve, I enclose some examples selected at random of the highly offensive propaganda that is being carried on against India. I hope something will be done to stop this.

4. In case of All India Radio, I have no hesitation in affirming that, in pursuance of the objectives of para 2 of the Simla Agreement, All India Radio is working under severe restraint. I have personally gone through a large selection of our broadcasts and find that All India Radio has scrupulously avoided making comments on law and order situation in Pakistan such as the language riots in the Sind, the recent developments in Baluchistan etc.
However, it is a matter of deep regret to us that Radio Pakistan has been going out of its way to exploit each and every domestic issue in India for propaganda broadcasts beamed to India. I give below two examples where the situation in Andhra Pradesh was the subject of comment by Radio Pakistan:

“Whenever any nation has adopted the path of injustice, and aggression and has dug a pit for other nations through conspiracies, it has itself fallen into it. What is happening in the Indian State of Andhra Pradesh at present is the latest example of this fact...”
(Muzaffarabad station on 11th January 1973 at 2125 hours)

“The crisis in Andhra Pradesh had raised its head in the early days of India’s independence when the Government crushed the “independence movement in Telengana” with forces. In 1965 the Telegana Movement was sought to be crushed by merging the Telegana region with the higher Telegu-speaking state of Andhra Pradesh....”
(Lahore station on 20.2.1973 at 1740 hours)
5. We earnestly believe that cessation of all forms of hostile propaganda on the Radio Station directed against the other country is highly desirable and in our mutual interest. This is an essential step for creating goodwill and friendly feelings between our two peoples in the cause of peace and good neighbourly relations which we earnestly cherish. We shall certainly continue our efforts to achieve this objective and would urge you also to take necessary steps in this direction.

6. For some reason, this Muzaffarabad station of Radio Pakistan continues to function as if it has a special license for denigrating India. It would be recalled that this matter was discussed during the Emissary - level meeting at Murree and the understanding reached was that cessation of hostile radio propaganda would cover all stations on both sides, including those in Kashmir.

7. You have thought it fit to raise the question of the Prime Minister’s interview with the editor of the Morning News and the alleged remark attributed to her to the effect that President Bhutto does not believe in consistency. I wish this matter had not been raised at all as statements made by Heads of Governments on both sides can hardly be discussed by us in a correspondence of this nature. However, since you have raised this question I cannot but set the record straight. The Prime Minister is always conscious of the considerations of courtesy and decorum when referring to other Heads of Government and her inoffensive remark to the editor of the Morning News has, I am afraid, been torn out of context and misconstrued. In this connection, may I draw your attention to the reported interview of President Bhutto to an Italian journalist published in L’Europa of April 27, 1972, which if true, contained some highly derogatory remarks about our Prime Minister. However, as you know we preferred to ignore this interview. More recently or January 3, while speaking at a public meeting in Karachi, President Bhutto is reported to have made highly offensive remarks against our Foreign Minister. The following quotation from the Pakistan Press is illustrative:

“I know Swaran Singh and I want to tell him in clear words that I am not the man to wilt under threats of “Sikha Shahi”.

(New Times, Rawalpindi, Jan.4, 1973)

It is a matter of great regret that no official agency in Pakistan has so far taken the trouble to deny those offensive remarks against our Foreign Minister. In the circumstances and unless some clarification appears, one cannot but expect Pakistan’s publicity media to take their cue from such a derogatory statement.

In the end I would like to say again that we attach greatest importance to the cessation of hostile and unfriendly propaganda against each other. We on our part would take every possible step to achieve this objective. It is with that end in view that I have welcomed your communication to me and I hope that my present letter would be received by you in the same spirit.

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- Kewal Singh

Mr. Mumtaz A. Alvie,
Foreign Secretary,
Government of Pakistan, ISLAMABAD.

761. Letter from Pakistan Foreign Secretary Mumtaz A. Alvie to Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh.

Dear Mr. Kewal Singh,

Thank you for your letter of February 20, 1973. We too have informed the President of the ICAO Council as below:-

"The Government of Pakistan has no objection to the overflights case not being taken up at the 78th Session of the ICAO Council. The case may please be scheduled for the 79th Session instead".

2. Before the next session we would like to arrive at a mutually satisfactory understanding as to the future course of action. In our view, the ICAO Council should resume consideration of the case at the 79th Session. We do not intend then to press for a discussion by the ICAO Council of the merits of the case. We would have no objection if the Council, acting under Article 6 read with Article 14 of the Rules for the Settlement of Differences, decides to suspend proceedings for a specified period and to invite the parties to undertake bilateral negotiations. In fact, we would be prepared to give an indication to the President of the ICAO Council along these lines. After the Council decides to suspend proceedings. The delegations of India and Pakistan could meet on an agreed date to try to arrive at a mutually satisfactory settlement.

3. In his letter of October 25, 1972, Mr. P.N. Haksar had indicated that the Government of India thought the ICAO Council might be approached for discontinuance of the overflights case under Article 17. Discontinuance would amount to withdrawal of the application and complaint made by Pakistan to the ICAO Council in 1971 which, as we had explained earlier, would not be in keeping with the understanding reached at Delhi and as such is not acceptable to Pakistan.

4. As we agreed at Delhi, the Government of Pakistan continues to consider it desirable that the overflights case should be settled bilaterally. However, to facilitate bilateral negotiations, it is necessary that the Council should suspend but not discontinue the proceedings. The ICAO Council Rules do not provide for bilateral negotiations outside the purview of the Council.

5. We do hope that, in the light of the position stated above, Government of India would find the suggestions contained in paragraphs 2 and 4 above acceptable.

With kindest regards,

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- (Mumtaz A. Alvie)

No. 12/73

Pakistani Prisoners of War — Facts and Realities

Recently much concern has been expressed in the press for the Pakistan prisoners-of-war who surrendered to the Joint Bangladesh and India Command under the Instrument of Surrender in the Eastern Theatre. A great deal of emotion has been generated while facts and realities have been overlooked. What are these facts and realities?

(1) Pakistan declared war against India on December 3, 1971 which ended when India unilaterally offered a ceasefire on 16th December. A day later Pakistan responded and hostilities ceased.

(2) Desirous of converting the ceasefire into a just and durable peace and with a view to normalizing relations between the countries of the sub-continent, Indian initiated Emissary-level talks with Pakistan which ultimately resulted in the Summit at Simla between the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India in July 1972.

(3) At the initiative of the Prime Minister of India agreement was reached at Simla. The two countries “resolved to settle their differences by peaceful means through bilateral negotiations or by any other peaceful means mutually agreed upon between them”. Consequently, India withdrew from 5000 square miles of territory which had come under its control in the West, enabling over one million uprooted Pakistani citizens to return peacefully to their homes. All Pakistani prisoners taken in the Western theatre were released and repatriated.

(4) The Simla Agreement envisaged, prior to another Summit between the Heads of Government of India and Pakistan that “the representatives of the two sides will meet to discuss further the modalities and arrangements for the establishment of durable peace and normalization of relations including the questions of repatriation of prisoners of war and civilian internees...”

Projected talks at officials level for resumption of trade, air services and other exchanges so necessary between two neighbouring countries have not, however, got off the ground because of Pakistan’s insistence on settlement of the prisoners of war issue to the exclusion of all others. It is not India’s desire to hold the prisoners a day longer than necessary; in fact, it is anxious that they should be repatriated as soon as possible. However, Pakistani intransigence in not recognizing the realities of the situation stands in the way of fulfillment of this desire. It is clear that since Pakistani Forces surrendered to the Joint Command of India and Bangladesh no settlement could be arrived at without Bangladesh being a party to it.

(5) At Simla, President Bhutto accepted the realities in the sub-continent and promised recognition of Bangladesh in August 1972. Yet now, not only has he resiled from this position but the earlier of-repeated pre-condition of a simple meeting with Sheikh Mujibur Rahman has steadily been escalated to a demand that recognition of Bangladesh can only follow a settlement of all outstanding problems, including apportionment of external financial liability between the two countries. And this attitude continues in spite of the fact that Sheikh Mujibur Rahman has received an overwhelming mandate for his policies from his countrymen.

(6) Pakistan’s refusal to recognize Bangladesh has resulted in a situation where negotiations between three equal sovereign States cannot begin. The draft constitution now being debated in the National Assembly of Pakistan makes references to “East Pakistan” and “Muslim Bengal”, describing this territory as under “foreign occupation”. This posture can hardly be said to be indicative of Pakistan’s desire to normalize relations between the countries in the sub-continent or to pave the way for durable peace and fruitful cooperation among them.

(7) Bangladesh, a sovereign State with a population of 75 million, recognized by over 100 countries and having suffered a pogrom with few parallels in history, is expected to forget, forgive and concede to becoming a “non-country” to reach agreements of a far-reaching character and implications as a pre-condition to recognition character and implications as a pre-condition to recognition by Pakistan. It is also expected to agree to the release of prisoners-of-war while Pakistan, without any reason other than that they serve as hostages, keeps over 300,000 Bangladesh nationals in concentration camps because on termination of active hostilities they were living in West Pakistan and faithfully serving what then happened to be their country. Pakistan claims that they are living in their homes etc. but the International Committee of Red Cross (ICRC) has been denied access to their “homes”.

(8) To save the Pakistani soldiers from the wrath of Bangladesh people and in order to fulfill in letter and spirit the pledge given to the Pakistan
Commander in the Eastern theatre to protect the lives and honour of those who surrendered, India brought prisoners from Bangladesh to India and keeps them in prisoners-of-war camps in strict accordance with civilized precepts governing such matters. Pakistani propaganda has been using some portions of ICRC report out-of-context in support of its allegations of inhuman treatment by India of prisoners-of-war. The ICRC, in its note of January 9, 1973, has this to say:

“The ICRC wishes to recall that the principal purpose of reports it addressed to the Governments is either to enable them as circumstances may indicate, to make desirable improvements in the conditions for detention of prisoners or to obtain information about the circumstances of their nationals. Although recipients of those reports become proprietors of them, and can therefore do what they wish with them, the ICRC always insisted upon the fact that these documents should not be utilized in a manner contrary to the principle of strict neutrality of its humanitarian action. The purpose of these reports should, therefore, in no case, provide material for polemics.”

“If, however, a Government sees fit to publish such reports ICRC has the right to expect that it will reproduce the entire text with no modification whatsoever. Consequently, the International Committee of Red Cross regret that the publication of its report by Pakistan authorities did not comply with the spirit of prevailing principle that certain modification were made in the text of this report; and that one passage therein was quoted out of context. Very firm representations have been made to the appropriate authorities following this publication and utilization made of it.”

However, it is now becoming increasingly clear that certain elements in Pakistan, opposed to normalization of situation in the sub-continent and unhappy at the positive turn of events at Simla, are seeking to reverse this process of history by exploiting this sensitive issue. Could it be that the prisoners-of-war have become a pawn, not in the hands of India and Bangladesh, but in the hands of those who still seek a “1000 years confrontation with India”? Is the prisoners-of-war question to be settled by advertisements in the newspapers of the world or by the “demands” and “rights” of Pakistan, to the exclusion of the two other sovereign parties in the sub-continent, as advocated by these elements? Or rather by the acceptance of the reality that there are three countries in the sub-continent, that present day world climate is to seek a détente and lessen tensions so that even the most intractable problems can eventually be tackled by peaceful negotiations?

INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS

(10) There can be only one answer which India and Bangladesh have given repeatedly to the third country in the sub-continent. Let us sit down and talk as equals with a desire to achieve peace and thus open a new era of friendship and cooperation in the sub-continent.

New Delhi, April 17, 1973.

The Government of India and Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh have been giving consistently their most anxious thought and consideration to the problem of restoring friendly, harmonious and good neighbourly relations between India, Bangladesh and Pakistan on the basis of sovereign equality of each state with the object of promoting, in every possible way, durable peace in the sub-continent, so that each country may devote its resources and energies to the pressing task of advancing the welfare of its own people. With this object in view, the Government of India and the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh have been carrying on mutual consultations. More recently the Foreign Minister of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh His Excellency Dr. Kamal Hossain, paid a visit to Delhi on 13 April, 1973 at the invitation of the Minister of External Affairs, Government of India, Mr. Swaran Singh. The discussions between the two Ministers concluded on April 16.

During these discussions and mutual consultations the Government of India and the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh considered measures to promote jointly the processes of normalization in the sub-continent and to solve the humanitarian and other problems arising out of the armed conflict of 1971.

Reviewing the entire situation in the sub-continent the Government of India and the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh noted with regret and concern that progress in the establishment of friendly and harmonious relations had not yet been achieved owing to the failure of Pakistan to recognize the realities in the sub-continent. They felt that the policy hitherto pursued by the Government of Pakistan had stood in the way of negotiations among all the three countries on the basis of sovereign equality of each. They further noted with concern that Pakistan continued to persist in hostility towards Bangladesh and despite the clear provisions of the Simla Agreement, continued to maintain a hostile attitude against India. The Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh reiterated their stand that they cannot participate in any discussions with Pakistan at any level except on the basis of sovereign equality.

Despite the difficulties created and hostility manifested by the Government of Pakistan, the Government of India and the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh are resolved to continue their efforts to reduce tension, promote friendly and harmonious relations in the sub-continent and work together towards the establishment of a durable peace.

Inspired by this vision and sustained by the hope that in the larger interests of reconciliation, peace and stability in the sub-continent, Pakistan will refrain from persisting in hostility, and bearing in mind the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement concluded between India and Pakistan which Bangladesh had welcomed, the Government of India and the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh jointly declare as follows:

Without prejudice to the respective positions of the Government of India and the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh, the two Governments are ready to seek a solution to all humanitarian problems through simultaneous repatriation of the Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees, except those required by the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh for trial on criminal charges, the repatriation of Bangalees forcibly detained in Pakistan and the repatriation of Pakistanis in Bangladesh i.e., all non-Bangalees who own allegiance and have opted for repatriation to Pakistan.

The Government of India and the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh earnestly hope that Pakistan will respond to the constructive initiative taken by the two Governments to solve the humanitarian problems in the manner set out in Paragraph 5.
Statement issued by the Government of Pakistan regarding Prisoners of War.

The Government of Pakistan has carefully considered the statement issued in Delhi on April 17th. While the statement purports to be inspired by the vision of a durable peace in the sub-continent the Government of Pakistan notes with regret that it contains several allegations which are both unfounded and unfair. Not wishing to enter into polemics over these issues and thus to prolong a chain of charge and counter-charge, Pakistan deems it sufficient to reiterate its resolve to adhere to the letter, and fulfill the spirit of the Simla Agreement with a view to the reduction of tensions, the settlement of disputes and the building of international relations in the sub-continent on the foundations of justice and equity. The many offers, acts and initiatives of the Governments of Pakistan towards this end hardly need to be recalled.

2. It is a fact beyond question that the normalization of the situation in the sub-continent has been obstructed by India’s continuing to hold in illegal captivity over 90,000 Pakistan prisoners of war and civilian internees despite the cessation of hostilities sixteen months ago. The Geneva Convention of 1949 about the treatment of prisoners of war, to which India is a signatory, makes it the obligation of the detaining power to release and repatriate prisoners of war “without delay after cessation of hostilities”. The obligation is unilateral and unconditional. The principle involved is basic to international law and any compromise with it, open or disguise, can set a calamitous precedent. Apart from humanitarian considerations, it will nullify all obligations under the Geneva Conventions, which civilized nations have laboured for over a century to evolve and to make binding on all states. The Government of Pakistan notes with concern that the “initiative” embodied in the statement issued in Delhi invites Pakistan to compromise the principle by agreeing to, or acquiescing in, conditions which are irreverent and unrelated to the repatriation of the Prisoners of War.

3. The Government of Pakistan cannot recognize the competence of the authorities in Dacca to bring to trial any among the prisoners of war on criminal charges. According to an established principle of international law, only a competent tribunal of Pakistan can have jurisdiction in this matter since the alleged criminal acts were committed in a part of Pakistan and since also the persons charged are the citizens of Pakistan. It would be repugnant to a nation’s sovereignty to surrender its exclusive jurisdiction in this regard. The Government of Pakistan reiterates its readiness to constitute judicial tribunal of such character and composition as will inspire international confidence, to try persons charged with the alleged offences.
4. Apart from these inescapable consideration of both sovereignty and justice, the Government of Pakistan is gravely apprehensive that if the authorities in Dacca begin to hold these trials, it will poison the atmosphere and seriously retard the establishment of that climate of peace and reconciliation which is a dire necessity for the welfare of the peoples of the sub-continent.

5. On its part, the Government of Pakistan, in its desire to put an end to a chapter of tragic conflict, has exercised maximum restraint even to the extent of refraining from exercising its rightful jurisdiction and bringing to trial those Bengalis in Pakistan against whom there is evidence of the commission of such acts as subversion, espionage and high treason. The terms of the Delhi statement would make it impossible for this restraint to continue.

6. The Government of Pakistan is prepared to fully cooperate with arrangements for all Bengalis to leave Pakistan if they so wish. Indeed, the Government of Pakistan has always sought a humanitarian solution of the problem and has taken several steps consistent with that aim.

7. As regards “Pakistanis in Bangladesh”, the proposition contained in paragraph 5 of the Delhi statement is extraordinary, advancing the unique doctrine that an ethnic, linguistic or political minority can be persecuted, offered an “option” under pain of loss of jobs, property or even life and arbitrarily expelled from its place of domicile, creating an obligation for Pakistan to receive its members. The Government of Pakistan is acutely distressed at the tragic suffering of the victims of this prejudice and bigotry, and urges the international community to persuade the authorities in Dacca to protect the basic human rights to which these unfortunate people are entitled. The solution of the humanitarian problem which may still arise should be a concern of humanity. The Government of Pakistan is willing to fully participate in the effort of alleviating this human plight.

8. Notwithstanding these difficulties inherent in the terms of the Delhi statement, the Government of Pakistan feels that it constitutes a response to Pakistan’s urgings for further dialogue between Pakistan and India. For obtaining the necessary clarifications of the implications of the statement, and in the spirit of promoting an advance towards peace, the Government of Pakistan has decided to invite representatives of the Government of India to Islamabad for discussions and also to explore further possibilities for the implementation of the Simla Agreement. The process of the normalization of the situation in the sub-continent would be accelerated by India’s promptly fulfilling its unconditional obligations under the Geneva Conventions.
0765. Letter from Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed to External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh.

Dear Sardar Swaran Singh,

By the time this reaches you, your Government will have seen the Statement that the Pakistan Government has issued in response to the India Bangladesh Declaration on the question of repatriation of prisoners of war and related matters. We should like you to know that in defining its response the Government of Pakistan has been motivated by a sincere resolve to see the obstacle to Sub-continental reconciliation removed.

My Government feels that the Government of India's statement opens the door to resumption of dialogue between our two Governments, which, unfortunately, has remained suspended for several months. We consider it important that we resume discussions with your Government with a view to an early settlement of the prisoners of war question so as to be able to take further steps to implement the Simla Agreement and pave the way for the normalization of the situation in the Sub-continent.

My Government would be happy to receive in Islamabad a representative of the Government of India to discuss this matter. From our point of view the period 28 April - 3 May, both days inclusive, will be suitable. However, if that should not be convenient for your Government, the Indian delegation would be equally welcome if it came at a later date, preferably in the third week of May, when the President and I will have returned from Iran.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely

H.E. Sardar Swaran Singh
Minister for External Affairs,
Government of India
New Delhi

Sd/- (Aziz Ahmed)
Letter from Pakistan Foreign Secretary Mumtaz A. Alivie to the Indian Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh.

My dear Foreign Secretary,

On receipt of your letter of March 8, 1973, I immediately asked for an investigation of the instances of hostile propaganda that you had mentioned. I need hardly add that, on its part, the Government of Pakistan remains resolved to implement the Simla Agreement in its totality, including Article 2, and the instructions of the Government to the concerned authorities are absolutely clear on this point and have been reiterated.

2. I do not wish to burden you with a list of hostile broadcasts by All India Radio. The Foreign Office sent a list on March 6, 1973 to your Foreign Office through the Swiss Embassy. Another has been dispatched on 25 April 1973. I would like merely to suggest that you ask the concerned authorities to exercise greater care than they have so far done. From the item below you will see that All India Radio has not exercised the restraint that is required under the Simla Agreement:

"It is surprising to know about the concern of Radio Pakistan over Afghan Government's demand for the right of self-determination of Pukhtoons... After imposition of one-unit, Pathans were once again thrown under the domination of Punjabis. Pathans are treated as slaves. Pathans never recognised Muslim League and this led to the step-motherly treatment meted out to them right since the inception of Pakistan...President Bhutto replaced Governors in this Province (NWFP) and in Baluchistan just to have his own influence there. This step was taken just because President Bhutto has no confidence in Pathans."

3. This is a serious violation of the Simla Agreement which forbids not only hostile propaganda but also interference in the internal affairs of each other. However, it is not our purpose to enter into a controversy on this issue. While we feel there has been considerable improvement generally in the tone of the press on both sides, lapses still continue to occur and both governments would need to continue to exercise vigilance so that they do not.

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- Mumtaz A. Alvie.

Mr. Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary,
Government of the Republic of India, New Delhi.
0767. Press Release issued by the Bangladesh Government on resumption of talks on repatriation of prisoners of war.

No. 24. May 3, 1973

The Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration of 17th April, 1973 has been welcomed by many Government leaders and the press of foreign countries as a bold step-forward towards solution of the humanitarian problems of the sub-continent, arising out of the events of 1971. The Declaration deals with the repatriation of three categories of persons viz. the prisoners of war (except those required by the Bangladesh Government for war crimes trial) and civilian internees, the Bangalees forcibly detained in Pakistan and the Pakistanis in Bangladesh. As such, viewed in this context the Declaration provides the rare opportunity for immediate solution of the outstanding problems of the sub-continent.

2. Bangladesh had been consistently taking initiatives with a view to create an understanding amongst the countries of the sub-continent for achieving the ultimate goal of peace, stability and cooperation. The joint Declaration is a result of this effort wherein the humanitarian issues which concern thousands of innocent people have been isolated from the political ones.

3. It may be recalled that Bangladesh and India took the initiative of releasing the wives and children of the POWs and the civilian internees in November 1972. Again, Bangladesh was the first to declare its willingness to repatriate to Pakistan all those Pakistanis living in Bangladesh who have opted for Pakistan. Bangladesh had hoped at the same time that these moves would facilitate the return to their homeland of all the Bangalees now illegally detained in Pakistan. And finally, India and Bangladesh took the bold and magnanimous initiative by making the Joint Declaration for resolving at one stroke all the humanitarian problems faced by countries of the sub-continent through simultaneous repatriation of the Pakistani prisoner of war and civilian internees, except those required by the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh for trial on criminal charges, the repatriation of Bangalees forcibly detained in Pakistan and the repatriation of Pakistan in Bangladesh i.e. all non-Bangalees who owe allegiance and have opted for repatriation to Pakistan.

4. While Bangladesh has never failed in making constructive approaches with a view to reduce tension in the sub-continent, Bangladesh cannot on principle, negotiate with Pakistan on any issue except on the basis of sovereign equality. This stand as taken by Bangladesh is both correct and realistic. Unlike Pakistan, Bangladesh does not believe in constantly changing its stand to suit the topical needs of internal or external politics.
5. There are about 250,000 non-Banglees in Bangladesh who have opted to return to Pakistan. Therefore, in the Joint Declaration both Bangladesh and India have, in accordance with the wishes of these people, called on Pakistan to take back their citizens.

6. It may be recalled here that President Z.A. Bhutto of Pakistan had, in an interview with the senior editor of the Newsweek, Mr. Borchgrave, in March 1972, said: “We can take some – one for every Bengali who wants to leave our side.” In another interview with Mr. Peter Preston, published in the Guardian of March 2, 1972, Mr. Bhutto had while discussing “the human problem of poor Biharis” in “East Pakistan” said: “In principle I would say they have every right to come here. I would like to see what can be done to bring as many as possible here.” Mr. Bhutto further said: “And if some of them come – say two three four hundred thousand – perhaps a little more than the one who goes from here then that would be better”.

7. From the foregoing account it is clear that the recent attempts by the Government of Pakistan to disown their own nationals is a volte-face which the world community should recognize. Pakistanis living in Bangladesh, who owe allegiance to and have opted for Pakistan, are not a minority in any sense of the word. They could be a minority only if they were citizens of the country.

8. The seriousness of the situation faced by the three groups of people awaiting repatriation calls for an urgent implementation of the proposals contained in the Joint Declaration of 17th April, 1973. In fact, it is only in this way that the human problems could be resolved and the hopes and aspirations of the innocent people who are unfortunate victims of the events of 1971 would be realized. This would create a better and favourable atmosphere for achieving peace and stability in the region.

9. On the question of trial of war criminals, numbering 195 the stand of Bangladesh is very well known. The prisoners of war, facing trials, had committed grave crimes against humanity in Bangladesh. The overwhelming weight of international, legal and public opinion favoured the trial of these war criminals. The fact that only 195 out of 90,000 prisoners are being put on trial for the crime makes it amply clear that the motive of the trials is not to seek vengeance but to vindicate the cause of justice and uphold the principles of law.

10. It may be mentioned that the International Commission of Jurists have unequivocally upheld the jurisdiction of Bangladesh to hold such a trial. There is the principle of universal jurisdiction whereby any county can try persons, who have committed crimes against humanity irrespective of where such crimes were committed and irrespective of the nationality of the accused. The crimes were committed on the soil of Bangladesh and against the people of Bangladesh in contravention of Article 3 of the Geneva Convention. While Pakistan had been invoking Article 118 of the Geneva Convention for the release of the prisoners of war, she is deliberately ignoring the fundamental provision of Article 3 of the Geneva Convention which prohibits commitment of crimes of certain nature during conflicts not of international nature. The trial of war crimes by Bangladesh is being undertaken for the violation of this article and as such is in conformity with the international practice.

11. Bangladesh is not concerned with legalistic arguments. If, however, Pakistan is inclined to do so, it is open to Bangladesh to reassert its own legal position as reserved in the Joint Declaration. Such an adoption of strictly legal position by both sides, is however, not envisaged in the Joint Declaration, which only seeks solution of the humanitarian problems on humanitarian consideration alone. Pakistan has continued to persist taking hostile postures as manifested in the first article of her Constitution. Besides, preventing the Bangalees from returning to Bangladesh by Pakistan, it is also an act of hostility as aliens cannot be detained forcibly unless they are enemy aliens.

12. Pakistan has threatened to put on trial the innocent Bangalees on cooked-up charges. Such trials, if held, would mean a crude attempt at blackmail through "judicial reprisal", which would in turn violate all cannons of internationally accepted civilized conduct. This, it need hardly be asserted, would further vitiate the atmosphere and stand in the way of solution of the humanitarian problems.

13. The inherent reasonableness of the Joint Declaration and its importance as an instrument for progress for creating a durable climate of peace and stability in the sub-continent need to be understood in their correct perspective. Unfortunately, Pakistan's response, as could be ascertained from the statement of April 20, 1973, has rather been disappointing. The Government of Bangladesh hope that Pakistan would understand the magnanimity of the offer and accept the proposals for resolving the humanitarian problems. It is further hoped by the Government of Bangladesh that the initiative taken by India and Bangladesh in their Joint Declaration for solution of humanitarian problems without any further delay will receive the appreciation and support of the World Community.
0768. Letter from External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed regarding the question of POWs.

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmed,

I have received your letter of 23rd April. I have also seen the Pakistan Government’s statement of the 20th April. I must confess at the outset that we are disappointed at Pakistan’s response, as shown in these documents, to the Declaration which we had made jointly with Bangladesh on the 17th of April.

2. The Indo-Bangladesh Joint Declaration had sought to resolve simultaneously the humanitarian issues arising out of the armed conflict of 1971. This was its sole, immediate objective. India and Bangladesh had deliberately set aside political considerations although they were of vital importance to them, so as not to impede the resolution of humanitarian issues. We propounded no legal arguments; indeed we had eschewed them to achieve the humanitarian objective. We had hoped that your Government’s response would be in the same spirit; concentrate on the humanitarian issues, without political and legal argumentation.

3. You will have seen my statement made in Parliament on the 24th April. This shows how our hopes have been belied. Your Government’s statement of the 20th April advances a whole host of legal and political contentions. You will excuse my saying, Mr. Minister, that if India and Bangladesh start disputing these contentions, as indeed we are entitled to, the resolution of the humanitarian issues will be interminably delayed. In fact any objective assessment would show that Pakistan Government’s statement of April 20 is tantamount to rejection of the proposals contained in paragraph 5 of the India-Bangladesh Declaration.

4. Your letter only adds to our misgivings. We have studied it carefully. We cannot help the conclusion that all that has been done is to invite a representative of India for a discussion on the prisoners of war question only. There is no effort whatsoever in your Government’s response to take into account the respective position of the Governments of India and Bangladesh. For instance, Pakistan’s contention, as mentioned in paragraph 2 of the statement, that India has unilateral responsibility and obligation towards the prisoners of war who had surrendered to the joint command of Indo-Bangladesh forces, is contrary to the conclusions reached in the discussions between India and Pakistan at Simla and New Delhi during last year and is totally unacceptable. In this connection you may recall the following extracts from the Agreed Recommendations signed by yourself and Shri P.N. Haksar, then Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister of India, on 31st August, 1972:

PARA 3 (iv)

“The Indian side stated that Bangladesh is a necessary party to discuss the repatriation of Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees, and that the recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan would facilitate further progress in this regard. Pakistan side noted the Indian view and stated that the question of recognition of Bangladesh is under serious consideration”.

Likewise, the contention of Pakistan Government in paragraph 3 of its statement questioning the competence of the Government of Bangladesh to bring to trial certain prisoners of war on criminal charges is unacceptable. The same is the case with the untenable observations contained in paragraph 7 of the Pakistan’s statement about the Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh, who have declared their allegiance to Pakistan and are desirous of repatriation.

5. We earnestly hope therefore that the Pakistan Government would review their stand on the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration which suggests a practical way for the simultaneous resolution of all the humanitarian issues emanating from the December 1971 conflict. Obviously, there cannot be a solution which takes into account only those issues which interest Pakistan and ignores the position of Bangladesh and India. In our view talks can be purposeful and lead to quick results if Pakistan Government were to indicate their agreement in principle to the solution set out in paragraph 5 of the joint Declaration of April 17, 1973. The representatives of India and Pakistan can then work out modalities for implementing the solution.

6. I should like to add that I have consulted Dr. Kamal Hossain, Foreign Minister of Bangladesh, and this letter represents the joint response of India and Bangladesh.

Yours sincerely
(Sd)

Swaran Singh
Statement in Parliament by External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in response to Calling Attention Notices on the reported internment of Bangalees in Islamabad.

New Delhi, May 9, 1973.

We have heard with deep concern reports emanating from Islamabad that several thousand Bengalees were rounded up suddenly from their homes in Islamabad in the early hours of the morning of 6th May and transported in police trucks and buses to unknown destinations. The press reports indicate that these Bengalees have been taken to internment camps in some obscure places. However, the official spokesman of the Government of Pakistan has tried to explain that the Bengalees have been shifted from their homes “because of congestion and pressure on official housing in the capital”. He also indicated that this was being done in preparation for their ultimate repatriation to Bangla Desh.

The President of Bangla Desh, Mr. Justice Abu Sayeed Chowdhury has urged the international community to condemn Pakistan’s action in rounding up the Bengalees in Islamabad and has expressed the “deep concern and anguish” of the Government of Bangla Desh on this development. We fully share the anxiety of the Bangla Desh Government at the fate of the innocent Bengalees affected by this arbitrary action of the Pakistan Government. Pakistan should bear in mind that action of this nature, instead of solving the humanitarian problems and ending the suffering of lakhs of people, can only cause further bitterness and retard the process of normalization in the sub-continent.

Laws of humanity and justice require that persons stranded in foreign countries against their will have the right to return to their homes. The Governments of India and Bangla Desh have already indicated in the Joint Declaration of April 17, 1973 a fair and practical way for the immediate and simultaneous resolution of all humanitarian issues arising out of the December 1971 conflict.

It is regrettable that Pakistan Government instead of seizing the opportunity of bringing about a fair and amicable settlement of the humanitarian problems should have resorted to forcibly uprooting the Bengalees from their homes and sending them to far off internment camps.

0770. Aide Memoire of Pakistan Government regarding repatriation of POWs received through the Embassy of Switzerland.

The embassy of Switzerland presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India and has the honour, upon instruction from the Federal Political Department in Berne, to inform the Ministry of the following Aide-Memoire which has been handed over by the Ambassador of Pakistan in Berne to the Swiss Government on May 11, 1973.

Aide Memoire

1. The India – Bangladesh statement regarding repatriation of Prisoners of War given fullest consideration at the highest level in all appropriate forums of the Government of Pakistan and a statement was subsequently issued expressing restraint and positiveness in the approach to solve humanitarian problems. The joint statement of India-Bangladesh is the first concrete response to Pakistan’s initiatives for breaking the stalemate and Pakistan is fully prepared to explore further possibilities in the spirit of promoting peace and normalcy. Accordingly, notwithstanding the difficulties inherent in the terms of the Delhi Statement the Government of Pakistan has invited the Government of India to send its representatives for discussions.

2. The Governments of Pakistan believes that the process of normalization would be accelerated if India promptly fulfils its obligations under the Geneva Conventions. The obligation to release and repatriate prisoners of war is unilateral and unconditional. This obligation cannot be made subject to any extraneous conditions. Pakistan has fulfilled its part by releasing Indian prisoners of war several months ago in accordance with the Geneva Conventions. Pakistan cannot be a party to any compromise to the universally recognized principles enunciated in the Geneva Conventions. It is hoped that the world community in general and Switzerland as depository State of the Instruments of Ratification of the Geneva Conventions in particular will assist and support Pakistan in upholding this principle.

3. Pakistan has never recognized Bangladesh as a detaining power in respect of Pakistani prisoners of war. It is well known that the so-called “Joint command” was a myth and Bangladesh has no locus standi in regard to the Pakistani POWs held in India and she has no right to try them. The trials of Pakistani prisoners of war by Bangladesh would take the situation to a point of no return. There would be a great resentment and revulsion in Pakistan and the atmosphere would be vitiated and the efforts of the President of Pakistan for reconciliation and recognition of Bangladesh would be foiled.
4. Pakistan is however prepared to hold trials in Pakistan if evidence is furnished regarding any crimes that may have been committed. Pakistan would react strongly if Bangladesh does not desist from holding trials. It would be impossible for the Government to continue to exercise self-imposed restraint in regard to trials of those Bangalees who committed acts of subversion, espionage and treason.

5. Bangladesh must be restrained from harassing and persecuting its ethnic, linguistic and political minority. These unfortunate people deserve the concern and sympathy of the whole world community. Pakistan is willing to fully participate in all efforts to alleviate their plight. Bangladesh has no right, legal or moral, to subject its ethnic linguistic and political minority to discrimination and then to give it an option to leave their homes. The non-Bengalis whom Bangladesh wants to expel have ever since their migration from India lived in the territory that now comprises Bangladesh. They are not of West Pakistan origin. Since 1947 Pakistan has had to cope with millions of refugees with the attendant problems. Pakistan cannot be justly expected to accept the burden of these hundreds of thousands more refugees.

6. Pakistan is prepared to fully cooperate with the arrangements for Bengalis to leave Pakistan if they so wish and has indeed always sought a humanitarian solution and taken several steps with that aim. India cannot claim any say in the matter of the repatriation of Bengalis from Pakistan or of Pakistanis from Bangladesh. The questions are of Pakistan-Bangladesh concern and Pakistan has been ready to enter into discussions with Dacca authorities on these questions.

7. There is no justification in the attempt to blackmail Pakistan into accepting the transfer of a minority from Bangladesh. Bangladesh should not obstruct the release and repatriation of Pakistan prisoners of war.

The Embassy of Switzerland avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India the assurances of its highest consideration.

Ministry of External Affairs,
Government of India,
New Delhi.

Statement by the Official Spokesperson of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs regarding offer of talks by Pakistan.

India has rejected the invitation of Pakistan to send a representative for discussion of the India-“Bangladesh” statement* of 17th April. India has asked Pakistan first to accept India-“Bangladesh” proposal and only for the purpose of discussing modalities of the implementation would India be prepared to enter negotiation. Commenting on this latest Indian communication, a Foreign Office spokesman said that "it is apparent that the continued detention of 92,000 Pakistan soldiers and civilians in India is sought to be used in order to impose a unilateral solution on Pakistan in regard to the trial of 195 Pakistani prisoners by “Bangladesh” and the expulsion of non-Bengalis from “Bangladesh” to Pakistan”.

The Spokesman pointed out that the use of prisoners of war as a lever of pressure for extracting concessions violates the humanitarian principles of the Geneva Conventions. Moreover, such tactics of pressure are bound to vitiate the Simla spirit of dialogue and mutual accommodation as basis for resolving the outstanding issues and promoting the establishment of a durable peace in the sub-continent.

The latest communication from India and the reported statement of the Indian External Affairs Minister in the Indian Parliament on 11th May, make it clear that the New Delhi statement of 17th April was nothing more than a propaganda ploy to divert the mounting world criticism against the continued captivity of 92,000 Pakistan POWs after nearly 17 months of the cessation of hostilities.

* Please see Document No.763
Message of the Government of India for the Government of Pakistan sent through the Swiss Embassy in New Delhi.

No. PI/302/3/73. 14th May, 1973

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi and has the honour to request that the following message may kindly be transmitted to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan.

BEGIN:

"In the talk in Kashmiri on 25th April, 1973, Radio Pakistan while taking exception to India’s disappointment at the continuing hostility of broadcasts over Radio Pakistan, and specifically from the so-called Azad Kashmir Radio, asserted that the "Azad Kashmir area, the Azad Government and the Azad Radio are not a party to or responsible for any agreement". The Government of India are surprised at this contention. It would be recalled that in Foreign Secretary’s letter dated 8th March to Pakistan’s Foreign Secretary, attention had been drawn to the fact that the Muzaffarabad station of Pakistan Radio continued to function as if it had a special license to denigrate India and that this violated the understanding reached during the Emissary-level talks at Murree, namely, that the agreement on cessation of hostile propaganda would also cover broadcasts over the so-called Azad Kashmir Radio.

The Government of India are surprised at this contention. It would be recalled that in Foreign Secretary’s letter dated 8th March to Pakistan’s Foreign Secretary, attention had been drawn to the fact that the Muzaffarabad station of Pakistan Radio continued to function as if it had a special license to denigrate India and that this violated the understanding reached during the Emissary-level talks at Murree, namely, that the agreement on cessation of hostile propaganda would also cover broadcasts over the so-called Azad Kashmir Radio.

It is a matter of regret that instead of honouring this agreement, encouragement is actually being given by the Pakistan Government to the so-called Azad Kashmir Radio to put out vicious and objectionable items directed at India. Reference is invited to the statement made on April 19 by Pakistan’s Minister without Portfolio who, while commending the work done by the Travkhal station of the so-called Azad Kashmir Radio, had stated that it was “working for an extremely noble cause and keeps alive the spirit which the expansionist forces like Bharat are trying to crush”.

The Government India would strongly urge the Government of Pakistan to issue appropriate instructions to all stations of Radio Pakistan, including the so-called Azad Kashmir Radio, to respect the obligation undertaken in terms of para 2 of the Simla Agreement and to desist from indulging in hostile anti-Indian propaganda".

0773. PAKISTAN’S CASE REGARDING POWS AT THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE, THE HAGUE.

***********

A. Letter from J.G. Kharas, Agent of the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan

To : The Registrar, International Court of Justice, The Hague.

Subject: Institution of proceedings

Sir,

In accordance with Article 40, paragraph 1, of the Statute and Article 35, paragraph 2, of the Rules of Court, as amended on May 10, 1972 I have the honour to address to you this written Application of the Government of Pakistan against the Government of India.

2. The subject of the dispute relates to charges of genocide against 195 of the over 92,000 Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees being held in India. The central issue is whether or not Pakistan has an exclusive claim to exercise jurisdiction in respect of such persons by virtue of Article VI of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, adopted by the General Assembly on the 9th of December, 1948, to which both India and Pakistan are parties.

3. The succinct statement of the facts and grounds on which the claim of the Government of Pakistan is based is as follows:-

(a) On the 21st November, 1971, taking advantage of the internal situation in East Pakistan, and acting in breach of her obligations under the United Nations Charter, the Government of India launched direct armed attacks against Pakistan’s Eastern Province. These armed attacks continued to mount until Pakistan was forced to take measures in self defence. The fighting spread to West Pakistan and resulted in a state of war between India and Pakistan on the 3rd December, 1971. India notified the existence of a state of war to Pakistan through the Government of Switzerland the 4th of December, 1971.

(b) On December 11, 1971, the Chief of Staff of the Indian Armed Forces, General S.H.F.J. Manekshaw, called upon the Pakistan Forces in East Pakistan to surrender to the Indian army. In a radio broadcast he gave his “solemn assurance” that the personnel who surrendered would be treated with the dignity and respect all soldiers are entitled to, and that India would abide by the provisions of the Geneva Conventions. Consequent upon this call by General Manekshaw and wishing to avoid any further blood-shed and destruction, the vastly outnumbered Pakistani forces under the Eastern Command surrendered to the Indian army on December 16, 1971.

(c) The External Affairs Minister of the Government of India confirmed this assurance of General Manekshaw in the United Nations Security Council on December 12, 1971 in these words:-

“India stands committed to dealing with the enemy forces according to Geneva Conventions”.

He also recalled that India’s Chief of Army Staff had assured West Pakistani troops in East Pakistan of their safe evacuation to West Pakistan, if they surrendered.

(d) Consequent upon this call, on the 16th of December, 1971 the Eastern Command of the Pakistan army surrendered, and a large number of armed personnel became prisoners of war of India which was the sole belligerent power in the international conflict with Pakistan. Consistent with Article 12 of the Third Geneva Convention of August 12 1949, relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War, the prisoners passed into the hands of the belligerent power, India. The responsibility for the treatment of prisoners of war, thus, in accordance with the above mentioned Article, rested exclusively with the ‘Enemy Power’ India and not with the individuals or military units that had captured them.

(e) The prisoners of war, including civilians paid out of the resources of the armed forces, according to information received through the International Committee of the Red Cross, number 81, 888. In addition, India continues to detain over 10,000 civilians, among them 6,500 women and children.

(f) On the 16th December, 1971, India made a cease-fire call which was accepted by Pakistan and hostilities ceased at 14.30 hours GMT on the 17th of December, 1971. The Security Council of the United Nations took cognizance of the matter on the 21st of December, 1971. Mr. Swaran Singh, the Indian Foreign Minister, stated before the Council:-

“With the independence of “Banglsa Desh” and the surrender to Pakistan troops there, their earliest possible repatriation from the Eastern theatre has to be arranged. They are under our protection and we have undertaken to treat them in accordance with the Geneva Conventions”.

The Security Council adopted Resolution No. 307, in respect of the conflict on the 21st of December, 1971, in which it noted the cessation of hostilities and called upon India and Pakistan to withdraw from territories occupied by them. The Security Council also called for the observance of the Geneva Conventions.

In January, 1972 the over 92,000 Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees, who were under Indian custody, were transferred to Prisoner of War Camps in India. India, as the sole Enemy Power, had the right to detain the Pakistani prisoners of war until such time as hostilities ceased. However, in spite of the cessation of hostilities, which the Security Council acknowledged on 21 December, 1971, India continues to hold the Pakistani prisoners of war in contravention of the Geneva Convention. Pakistani civilians, who voluntarily placed themselves under Indian protection on the basis of the assurance of earliest possible repatriation to West Pakistan, were wrongfully interned and continue to be illegally and improperly detained.

4. Meanwhile, during the occupation, with Indian encouragement and help, the leaders of East Pakistan set up that territory as the “independent State of Bangla Desh” and declared their intention of holding trials for genocide and “crimes against humanity” of a number of Pakistani prisoners of war now in Indian custody. The Government of Pakistan cannot agree the trial of its prisoners of war by “Bangla Desh” since Pakistan has exclusive jurisdiction over its nationals in respect of any acts of genocide allegedly committed in Pakistani territory. Moreover; the concept of crimes against humanity is not even remotely applicable.

5. The “Bangla Desh” authorities have nevertheless continued to make declarations of their intention to proceed with such trials, principally in relation to alleged acts of genocide. This is apparent from Presidential Order No. 8 of 1972, issued by the President of “Bangla Desh” and entitled the “Bangla Desh Collaborators (Special Tribunals) Order, 1972. In the Preamble of the Order it is stated as follows:-
“Whereas certain persons, individuals or as members of Organizations, directly or indirectly have been collaborators of the Pakistan armed force, which had illegally occupied “Bangla Desh” by brute force and have aided and abetted the Pakistan armed forces in occupation in committing genocide and crimes against humanity....”

The intention, therefore, to try the personnel of the Pakistan army for the alleged acts of genocide is clear. This intention is also borne out by the numerous statements made by leaders of “Bangla Desh”, some of which are noted here:-

(i) On February 22, 1972, a Government spokesman of “Bangla Desh” stated that Pakistani officials would be tried for acts of genocide. Sheikh Mujibur Rehman also reiterated his intentions in this regard.

(ii) On June 8, 1972 “Bangla Desh” Prime Minister, Sheikh Mujibur Reham, reiterated that the trial of some Pakistani prisoners of war on charges of genocide would be held in “Banglad Desh”.

(iii) On June 14, 1972 a “Bangla Desh” Foreign Ministry official stated that India had agreed to hand over some Pakistani prisoners of war to “Bangla Desh” for interrogation and trial on charges of genocide.

(iv) On April 26, 1972 the “Bangla Desh” Prime Minister stated that he could not understand how people who had committed genocide could escape the consequences and that they must be punished.

(v) On January 17, 1973 India told the United Nations that persons who had committed grave crimes such as genocide and crimes against humanity were, in its view, not entitled to any immunity under the Geneva Conventions and that the Joint Command of “Bangla Desh” and Indian forces had the right to demand their evacuation on behalf of the Government of “Bangla Desh” so that they could be taken into custody pending appropriate legal action under the law of the land and international law.

(vi) On March 17, 1972, the Deputy Minister for External Affairs of India told the Rajya Sabha that India had informed “Bangla Desh” that in case it wanted to try any Prisoners for committing genocide and other war crimes, the Indian Government would give all assistance.

(vii) On April 17, 1973 the Dacca Radio announced that 195 Pakistani prisoners of war would be tried in “Bangla Desh” for committing genocide and crimes against humanity. This was confirmed by the Foreign Minister of “Bangla Desh” Dr. Kamal Hossain.
6. Under Article 118 of the Third Geneva Convention and Article 134 of the Fourth Geneva Convention, India is under obligation to repatriate prisoners of war and civilian internees immediately upon the cessation of hostilities. In so far as the Prisoners of war captured on the Western Front are concerned, India and Pakistan have implemented Article 118 of the Third Geneva Convention. Thus on December 1, 1972, Pakistan unilaterally returned 617 Indian prisoners of war so as to initiate the process of repatriation under the Convention, without having any assurance from India that it would also start a similar process. India, however, did respond by repatriating only 550 Pakistani prisoners of war. But the process of implementation of these obligations was never completed and India refused to take further steps in implementation of its obligations under the above noted provisions of the Geneva Conventions. Instead, Indian leaders have made it clear that trials will take place in “Bangla Desh” and one hundred and ninety five prisoners captured on the Eastern Front shall be transferred to “Bangla Desh” by India for the purpose of trials principally for acts of genocide.

7. In a Joint Statement on April 17, 1973 India and “Bangla Desh” have decided as follows:-

“Without prejudice to the respective positions of the Government of India and the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangla Desh, the two Governments are ready to seek a solution to all humanitarian problems though simultaneous repatriation of the Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees, except those required by the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh for trial on criminal charges, the repatriation of Bengalis forcibly detained in Pakistan and the repatriation of Pakistanis in Bangladesh, i.e. all non-Bengalis who owe allegiance and have opted for repatriation to Pakistan”. India as the Detaining Power has, therefore, sought to place conditions on the repatriation of Pakistani prisoners of war after the cessation of active hostilities and has acted in breach of its international obligations under Article 118 of the Third, and Articles 133 and 134 of the Fourth Geneva Conventions. India is also in breach of the aforementioned Conventions since it has not complied with the provisions regarding humane treatment under the said Convention. It is to be noted in this context that 129 Pakistani prisoners of war have been shot by Indian Guards of whom 45 succumbed to their injuries. In addition, 120 soldiers and civilians have, according to reports received through the International Committee of the Red Cross, died of illness. Over-crowding, unhygienic conditions, malnutrition and inadequate medical facilities which characterize the captivity of Pakistani soldiers and especially of the civilians are no doubt the cause for this loss of life.
8. The Government of India has further held out threats reiterated in the statement of April 17, 1973, that those of the Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees who are required by the Government of Bangladesh for trial would be transferred from India to Bangladesh. According to Indian Press reports, the number of such persons is 195.

9. Pakistan does not accept that Indian has a right to transfer its prisoners of war for trial to “Bangla Desh” and claims that by virtue of Article VI of the Genocide Convention, persons charged with genocide shall be tried by a Competent Tribunal of the State in the territory of which the act was committed. This means that Pakistan has exclusive jurisdiction to the custody of persons accused of the crimes of genocide, since at the time the acts are alleged to have been committed, the territory of East Pakistan was universally recognized as part of Pakistan. Further the Genocide Convention does not warrant the holding of over 92,000 persons in custody in breach of their right under international law to be repatriated, merely because of allegation against a few regarding acts of genocide.

10. Without prejudice to what has been stated above it is not possible to have a ‘Competent Tribunal’ within the meaning of Article VI of the Genocide Convention in “Bangla Desh”, in view of the extreme emotionally charged situation that prevails there. This was demonstrated in the recent trials of the “Collaborators” when Sir Dingle Foot, the Chief Counsel for Dr. A.M. Malik, the former Governor of East Pakistan, and others, was not allowed to enter Dacca on November 13, 1972, and the former Governor and other eminent persons were convicted and sentenced to brutal punishments after summary proceedings for so-called complicity with the Pakistani forces in the alleged acts of genocide. Moreover, the requirements of a ‘Competent Tribunal’ are that it must apply international law, have impartial judges and allow the accused to be defended by counsel of their choice. Further, no retrospective application of a law is permissible.

11. Since the above facts disclose a question of interpretation and application of the Genocide Convention, the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice is invoked under Article IX of the Genocide Convention, in accordance with which disputes between contracting parties relating to the interpretation, application or fulfillment of the Convention, shall be submitted to the International Court of Justice at the request of any of the parties to the dispute. Thus the court has jurisdiction under Article 36 (1) of its Statute.

12. May it please the Court:

To adjudge and declare, whether the Government of India appears or not, and after such time-limits as the court may fix in the absence of an agreement between the parties:-
(1) That Pakistan has an exclusive right to exercise jurisdiction over the one hundred and ninety-five Pakistani nationals or any other number, now in Indian custody, and accused of committing acts of genocide in Pakistani territory, by virtue of the application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide of 9 December, 1948 and that no other Government or authority is competent to exercise such jurisdiction.

(2) That the allegations against the aforesaid prisoners of war are related to acts of genocide, and the concept of crimes against humanity or 'war crimes' is not applicable.

(3) That there can be no ground whatever in international law, justifying the transfer of custody of these one hundred and ninety-five or any other number of prisoners of war to “Bangla Desh” for trial in the face of Pakistan’s exclusive right to exercise jurisdiction over its nationals accused of committing offences in Pakistan territory, and that India would act illegally in transferring such persons to “Bangla Desh” for trials.

(4) That a ‘Competent Tribunal’ within the meaning of Article VI of the Genocide Convention means, a Tribunal of impartial judges, applying international law, and permitting the accused to be defended by counsel of their choice. The Tribunal cannot base itself on ex-post facto laws nor violate any provisions of the Declaration of Human Rights. In view of these and other requirements of a ‘Competent Tribunal’, even if India could legally transfer Pakistani Prisoners of War to “Bangla Desh” for trial, which is not admitted, it would be divested of that freedom since in the atmosphere of hatred that prevails in “Bangla Desh”, such a ‘Competent Tribunal’ cannot be created in practice nor can it be expected to perform in accordance with accepted international standards of Justice.

B. Letter of the Government of India to the Registrar, International Court of Justice regarding Pakistan’s Application on the Question of POWs.

Sir,

Upon instructions received from the Government of India, I have the honour, to communicate to you, as follows:

2. The Government of India have received your telegrams of May 11, 13 and 14, 1973 respectively. They have also received on May 16, 1973, your Airmail letter No. 54249 of May 11, 1973, along with its enclosures, which includes a certified copy each of application filed by Pakistan instituting proceedings against India entitled “Trial of Pakistani POWs Jurisdiction under the Genocide Convention (Pakistan versus India)” and of the request for the Indication of interim measure of protection.

3. The Government of India have pre-used the application and the request. Pakistan has attempted to seize the Court by invoking Article 9 of the Genocide Convention in accordance with which, it is stated in the application, “dispute between contracting parties relating to the interpretation of application or fulfillment of the Convention shall be submitted to the International Court of Justice at the request of any of the parties to the dispute”. It is further stated in the application that “the Court has jurisdiction under Article 36 (1) of its statute”.

4. The Court would no doubt, be aware that while filling its instrument of ratification on 27th August, 1959 to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes of Genocide 1948, the Government of India entered a reservation on Article 9 of Convention which reads as follows:-

“With reference to Article 9 of the Convention the Government of India declare that for the submission of any dispute in terms of this Article to the Jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice, the consent of all the parties to the dispute is required in each case”.

(Please see multilateral treaties “in respect of which the Secretary General performed depositary functions that list of signatures, ratifications, accession, etc. as at 31st December, 1971 (ST/LEG/SERD/5, Pages 66, 68).

5. The Government of India accordingly presume that the application and the request were communicated to them for their consideration whether consent should be given by them in terms of Article 9 of the Genocide Convention. The Government of India regrets that they cannot give consent in terms of afore mentioned reservation to Article 9 of the Genocide Convention to Pakistan for raising the alleged subject matter before the International Court of Justice under that Article.

6. Without such consent the Court cannot be in proper seisin of the case and cannot proceed with it.

7. It may be further stated that there is no legal basis whatsoever for the jurisdiction of the Court. Accordingly with the highest respect for the President of the Hon'ble Court, it is submitted that Pakistan's application and request are without legal effect.

On 23 May 1973, the Ambassador of India at the Hague, upon instructions received from the Government of India, addressed a communication to the Registrar of the International Court of Justice stating that Pakistan's Application and Request for interim measures, both filed on 11 May 1973 were without legal effect, since there was no legal basis whatsoever for the Court being seized of the matter without the consent of the Government of India. The Government of India regretted that they could not give consent in terms of their reservation to Article IX of the Genocide Convention to Pakistan for raising the alleged subject matter before the International Court of justice.

2. In this statement, the Government of India wish to elaborate and emphasize their views that there cannot be any valid seisin by the Court of the case, that the Court cannot proceed with it, and that the lack of Court's jurisdiction to deal with the merits of the case is manifestly absent at the threshold of the unilateral proceedings sought to be instituted by Pakistan.

Pakistan's Application and Request

3. Pakistan has under Article 40, paragraph 1 of the Statute and Article 35, paragraph 2 of the Rules of Court, as amended on 10 May 1972, sought to institute proceedings by bringing a case by a written application addressed to the Registrar. “The subject of the dispute,” according to Pakistan’s Application, “relates to charges of genocide against 195 of the over 92,000 Pakistani prisoners-of-war and civilian internees being held in India. The central issue is whether or not Pakistan has an exclusive claim to exercise jurisdiction in respect of such Person by virtue of Article VI of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crimes of Genocide adopted by the General Assembly on the 9th December 1948, to which both India and Pakistan are parties”.

4. The party making the application is Pakistan; the party against whom the claim is brought is India.

5. The precise nature of the claim is set out in the submissions which request the Court to adjudge and declare as follows:-

(1) That Pakistan has an exclusive right to exercise jurisdiction over the one hundred and ninety-five Pakistani nationals or any other number, now in Indian custody, and accused of committing acts of genocide in Pakistani territory, by virtue of the application of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide of 9 December 1948, and that no other Government or authority is competent to exercise such jurisdiction.

(2) That the allegations against the aforesaid Prisoners of War are related to acts of genocide, and the concept of ‘crimes against humanity’ or ‘war crimes’ is not applicable.

(3) That there can be no ground whatever in International Law, justifying the transfer of custody of these one hundred and ninety-five or any other number of prisoners of war ‘Bangladesh’ for trial in the face of Pakistan’s exclusive right to exercise jurisdiction over its nationals accused of committing offences in Pakistan territory, and that India would act illegally in transferring such persons to ‘Bangladesh’ for trials.

(4) That a ‘Competent Tribunal’ within the meaning of Article VI of the Genocide Convention means, a Tribunal of impartial judges, applying international law, and permitting the accused to be defended by counsel of their choice. The Tribunal cannot base itself on ex-post facto laws nor violate any provisions of the Declaration of Human Rights. In view of these and other requirements of a “Competent Tribunal”, even if India could legally transfer Pakistani Prisoners of war to “Bangladesh” for trial, which is not admitted, it would be divested of that freedom since in the atmosphere of hatred that prevails in “Bangladesh”, such a ‘Competent Tribunal’ cannot be created in practice nor can it be expected to perform in accordance with accepted international standards of justice.
6. In conformity with Article 35, paragraph 2, of the Rules of Court, Pakistan in paragraph 11 of the Application has sought to invoke the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice under Article IX of the Genocide Convention, in accordance with which, it is stated in the Application, “disputes between the contracting parties relating to the interpretation, application or fulfillment of the Convention, shall be submitted to the International Court of Justice at the request of any of the parties to the dispute.” And it is categorically stated in paragraph 11 of the Application: “Thus the Court has jurisdiction under Article 36 (1) of its Statue.”

7. In the Request for interim measures of protection, made under Article 41 of the Statute, read with Article 66 of the Rules of Court, after stating the submissions made in the Application, Pakistan has prayed for the Court to indicate the following interim measures of Protection:-

(1) That the process of repatriation of prisoners of war and civilian internees in accordance with international law, which has already begun, should not be interrupted by virtue of charges of genocide against a certain number of individuals detained in India.

(2) That such individuals, as are in the custody of India and are charged with alleged acts of genocide, should not be transferred to “Bangladesh” for trial till such time as Pakistan’s claim to exclusive jurisdiction and the lack of jurisdiction of any other Government or authority in this respect has been adjudged by the Court.”

8. Pakistan’s Application and the accompanying Request have thus been unilaterally made by them by invoking Article IX of the Genocide Convention 1948.

Preliminary Observations

9. The Government of India would like to submit the following preliminary observations regarding the Genocide Convention:-

India regards the Genocide Convention as among the most important humanitarian Conventions adopted by the United Nations. The Convention confirms that genocide whether committed in time of peace or in time of war is a crime under international law, which the Contracting Parties undertake to prevent and to punish. It provides for protection against destruction, in whole or in part, of national, ethnical, or religious groups, and for the punishment of persons committing genocide, whether they are constitutionally responsible rulers, public officials or private individuals.

The object and purpose of the Convention is thus the prevention and punishment of the crime of genocide and the promotion of international cooperation “in liberating mankind from such an odious scourge.”

India has contributed to the progressive development of international humanitarian law in this field, since the initiative taken by them in this matter in 1946. It had throughout supported the universal application of this Convention and has always denounced its breaches wherever they have taken place.

In the normal course, any controversy, difference or dispute relating to the interpretation, application or fulfillment of the Genocide Convention, including those relating to the responsibility of a State for genocide, should be invoked by a victim of genocide to enforce the object and purpose of the Convention. The applicant should be a sufferer, the respondent must explain and defend his action which constitutes a breach of the object and purpose of the Convention.

Lest the Convention be invoked for political purposes in utter disregard of the object and purpose of the Convention, the Government of India, both while the Convention was being adopted and at the time of the filing the Instrument of Ratification, opposed the compulsory reference of disputes as embodied in Article IX of the Convention. To this, we will revert a little later.

The present case vindicates our stand and proves our fears. India is sought to be made a defendant or a respondent in an application to enforce the Genocide Convention. The acts on which the charges of genocide, among others, may be based, the exclusive right to try which is in question, were not committed by any Indian responsible ruler, public official or private individuals. Nor were the acts committed on Indian Territory. Nor is India harbouring or shielding any alleged offenders against their being tried for the offences of genocide. Nor is India itself holding any trials. It is well-known throughout the world that the alleged acts of genocide and other crimes were committed by persons, to shield and protect whom, among others, Pakistan has filed this Application and the request for interim measures. The territory where these acts were committed, the State whose nationals were victims of genocide and who wish to bring the offenders to justice, are neither the applicant in the present case nor even the defendant or respondent.

And Pakistan submits (please see their fourth submission) that the Court should adjudge and declare that Bangladesh, in the atmosphere of hatred that prevails there, will not be able to establish in practice a competent tribunal within the meaning of Article VI of the Genocide Convention, nor will such tribunal be expected to perform in accordance with the accepted international standards of justice.
Thus the Court has been approached by Pakistan to adjudge and declare upon the rights, obligations and competences of a third state, viz. Bangladesh, which is a party in interest, even in the absence of its consent to the Court’s jurisdiction.

Attention is invited in this connection to what the Court stated in respect of Albania in the Monetary Gold Case:-

“Albania has not submitted a request to the Court to be permitted to intervene. In the present case, Albania’s legal interests would not only be affected by a decision, but would form the very subject matter of the decision. In such a case, the Statute cannot be regarded, by the implication, as authorizing proceedings to be continued in the absence of Albania”.

(ICJ Reports 1954, page 32)

India’s Reservation to Article IX and the law

10. We may turn now to India’s reservation to Article IX of the Genocide Convention.

11. The Genocide Convention adopted on 9 December 1948 was subject to ratification (Article IX). While expressing its consent to be bound by this Convention, the Government of India in its Instrument of Ratification filed with the Secretary General of the United Nations as depositary of the Convention on 27 August 1959 entered the following declaration:-

“With reference to Article IX of the Convention the Government of India declare that, for the submission of any dispute in terms of this article to the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice, the consent of all the parties to the dispute is required in each case’.

12. The Government of India confirmed and ratified the Convention subject to the above declaration. A certified copy of the Instrument of Ratification containing the above declaration is annexed hereto. This instrument was deposited with the Secretary General on 27 August 1959. (Please see Multilateral Treaties in respect of which the Secretary General performed depositary functions —list of signatures, ratification, accession, etc, as at 31st December 1971 (ST/LEG/D/5. Pages 66.68).

13. This declaration on reservation thus excluded the legal effect of Article IX of the Genocide Convention in its application to India.

14. Pakistan has never raised any objection to this reservation for the past fourteen years since 1959.

15. Reference may now be made to the effect of making a reservation to a Convention vis-à-vis country which makes no objection.
16. In so far as the Genocide Convention is concerned, it will be recalled that until October 1950, 19 states had deposited instruments of ratification or accession, one of the ratifications (Philippines) and one of the accessions (Bulgaria) being subject to reservation. The Genocide Convention was to enter into force on the 90th day following the date of deposit of the twentieth instrument of ratification or accession (Article XIII). In determining when 20 instruments adequate to bring the Convention into force had been deposited, the Secretary General of the United Nations, as depositary, was faced with questions concerning the acceptability of instruments containing reservations. Although the question was resolved when on October 14, 1950, five states deposited instruments of accession without reservations; the subject of reservations to multilateral conventions was included in the Agenda of the fifth Session of the General Assembly at the initiative of the Secretary General. The General Assembly by resolution 478 (v) dated 16th November 1950 requested the International Court of Justice to give its advisory opinion on the relevant question.

16. The questions asked for the Court’s advisory opinion and the answers given relevant to Pakistan’s Application, are as follows:-

- Question I. Can the reserving State be regarded as a party to the Convention while still maintaining its reservations if the reservation is objected to by one or more of the parties to the Convention but not by others?

- Question II. If the answer to Question I is in the affirmative, what is the effect of the reservation as between the reserving state and:
  a) The parties which object to the reservation?
  b) Those which accept it?

17. The Court’s opinion was as follows:

“In so far as concerns the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, in the event of a State ratifying or acceding to the Convention subject to a reservation made either on ratification or on signature followed by ratification.

On Question I:

By seven votes to five.

That a State which has made and maintained a reservation which has been objected to by one or more of the parties to the Convention but not by others, can be regarded as being a party to the Convention if the reservation is compatible with the object and purpose of the Convention, otherwise, that State cannot be regarded as being a party to the Convention.

On Question II:

By seven votes to five,

(a) that if a party to the Convention objects to a reservation which it considers to be incompatible with the object and purpose of the Convention, it can in fact consider that the reserving State is not a party to the Convention;

(b) that if, on the other hand, a party accepts the reservation as being compatible with the object and purpose of the Convention, it can in fact consider that the reserving State is a party to the Convention”.

(ICJ reports 1951, p.29)

18. The Advisory Opinion supported the concept of flexibility in the operation of multilateral conventions in the following words:

“Mere general resort to reservations, very great is nevertheless to be regarded as a party to the convention in relation to those contracting parties that have accepted the reservations – all these factors are manifestations of a new need for flexibility in the operation of multilateral conventions”.

(Ibid. pages 721, 22)

19. The Court also referred to the fact that, although finally approved unanimously, the Genocide Convention was the result of a series of majority votes, which make it necessary for certain states to make reservations. It then concluded that:

“In this state of international practice, it could certainly not be inferred from the absence of an article providing for reservations in a multilateral convention that the contracting states are prohibited from making certain reservations”.

20. Thus, while becoming a party to the Genocide Convention a state can enter a reservation. It shall continue to be a party to the Convention even if this is objected to by some parties, but not by others, if the reservation is compatible with the object and purpose of the Convention. If the reservation is not compatible, that State cannot be regarded as being a party to the Convention.

21. The question of compatibility was left to be determined by each State which while deciding whether to make a reservations, object to a reservation, or accept a reservation. The Opinion stated as follows:
“The object and purpose of the Convention thus limit both the freedom of making reservations and that of objecting to them. It follow that it is the compatibility of a reservation with the object and purpose of the Convention that must furnish the criterion for the attitude of a State in making the reservation on accession as well as for the appraisal by a State in objecting to the reservation. Such is the rule of conduct which must guide every State in the appraisal which it must make, individually and from its own standpoint, of the admissibility of any reservation”. (Ibid., page 24)

22. Thus, if a reservation is incompatible, the reserving State is not a party to the Convention. If another State objects to the reservation as incompatible, the Convention does not enter into force as between the reserving State and the objecting State. On the other hand, the Convention continues to be in force as between the reserving State and the accepting State, subject to the reservation. If a country has not objected to a reservation within a reasonable or specified time, it shall be considered to have accepted it.

23. On January 12, 1952, the General Assembly adopted Resolution 598 (VI) and, after noting the Advisory Opinion provided, inter alia, as follows:-

“2. Recommends to all States that they be guided in regard to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide by the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 28 May 1951.

3. Requests the Secretary-General:
(a) in relation to reservations to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, to conform his practice to the Advisory opinion of the Court of 28 May 1951;
(b) In respect of future conventions concluded under the auspices of the United Nations of which he is the depositary;
(i) To continue to act as depositary in connection with the deposit of documents containing reservations or objections, without passing upon the legal effect of such documents; and
(ii) To communicate the text of such documents relating to reservations or objections to all States concerned, leaving it to each State to draw legal consequences from such communications.

24. The Advisory Opinion having been commended by the General Assembly to all States and to the Secretary General for conforming his practice as depositary of the Genocide Convention as well as in relation to future Conventions, may be treated as international law on the point of reservations to the Genocide Convention, at the time India entered its reservation to Article IX in 1959.

Vienna Convention on the law of Treaties

25. The law embodied in the Advisory Opinion and commended by the General Assembly was eventually accepted by the International Law Commission and on their recommendation by the Vienna Conference of the Law of Treaties. Thus, under Article 19 of the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties, 1969, it is provided as follows:

“A State may when signing, ratifying, accepting, approving or acceding to a treaty, formulate a reservation unless:

(a) the reservation is prohibited by the treaty;

(b) the treaty provides that only specified reservations, which do not include the reservation in question, may be made; or

(c) in cases not falling under sub-paragraphs (a) and (b), the reservation is incompatible with the object and purpose of the treaty.

26. The mode of acceptance and objection to reservations to the extent it is relevant to Pakistan’s Application is indicated in Article 20, paragraphs 4 and 5 which read as follows:-

“4. In cases not falling under the preceding paragraphs and unless the treaty otherwise provides:

(a) acceptance by another contracting State of a reservation constitutes the reserving State a party to the treaty in relation to that other State if or when the treaty is in force for those States;

(b) an objection by another contracting State to a reservation does not preclude the entry into force of the treaty as between the objecting and reserving State unless a contrary intention is definitely expressed by the objecting State;

(c) an act expressing a State’s consent to be bound by the treaty and containing a reservation is effective as soon as at least one other contacting State has accepted the reservation.

5. For the purposes of paragraph 2 and 4 and unless the treaty otherwise provides, a reservation is considered to have been accepted by a State if it shall have raised no objection to the reservation by the end of a period of twelve months after it was notified of the reservation or by the date on which it expressed its consent to be bound by the treaty, whichever is later.”

27. The procedure regarding reservations is set out in Article 23, which reads as follows:

“1. A reservation, an express acceptance of a reservation and an objection to a reservation must be formulated in writing and communicated to the contracting States and other States entitled to become parties to the treaty.

2. If formulated when signing the treaty subject to ratification, acceptance or approval, a reservation must be formally confirmed by the reserving State when expressing its consent to be bound by the treaty. In such a case the reservation shall be considered as having been made on the date of its confirmation.

3. An express acceptance of, or an objection to, a reservation made previously to confirmation of the reservation does not itself require confirmation.

4. The withdrawal of a reservation or of an objection to a reservation must be formulated in writing.

28. In Article 21 it is further provided that a reservation established in accordance with Articles 19, 20 and 23:

“(a) modifies for the reserving State in its relations with that other party the provisions of the Treaty to which the reservation relates to the extent of the reservation; and

(b) modified those provisions to the same extent for that other party in its relations with the reserving State”.

Paragraph 3 is also significant and provides as follows:

“3. When a State objecting to a reservation has not opposed the entry into force of the treaty between itself and the reserving State, the provisions to which the reservation relates do not apply as between the two States to the extent of the reservation”.

29. These articles are declaratory of international law relating to reservations to multilateral conventions.

Legal Effect and consequences of India’s Reservation to Article IX

30. Bearing in mind the Advisory Opinion of the International Court of Justice on the question of reservations to the Genocide Convention, its commendation by the General Assembly to all States, and the law embodied in the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties, the legal effect and consequences of India’s reservation to Article IX of the Genocide Convention in relation to the proceedings unilaterally sought to be instituted by Pakistan may now be summed up as follows:

1) While becoming a party to the Genocide Convention, India could enter a reservation, despite the silence of the Convention on the question of reservations. Thus it is manifest that India’s reservation to Article IX is legally effective. (See paras. 17 to 20 and 25 above).

2) While making the reservation to Article IX, India had satisfied itself that the reservation was admissible and was compatible with the object and purpose of the Convention. (See para. 21 above).

3) The reservation made by India, which is more or less similar to reservations made by some 15 other States (Albania, Algeria, Argentina, Bulgaria, Byelouruissin SSR, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Mongolia, Morocco, Poland, Romania, Spain, Ukranian SSR, USSR and Venezuela) in relation to the same Article IX, was deposited with the depositary and was notified by him to all parties to the Convention. Pakistan has made no objection to India’s reservation during the past 14 years since 1959.

(Please see Multilateral Treaties. OP. cit. pp.66-70)

Thus, on the face of it, Pakistan has accepted India’s reservation as valid and compatible. (See para 26 above).

4) As Pakistan is an accepting State, the application of Article IX of the Genocide Convention to India stipulates the requirement of the consent of India before any proceedings can be instituted by Pakistan in the International Court of Justice.

5) If Pakistan institutes proceedings in the Court unilaterally, without obtaining India’s prior consent thereto, as it has attempted to do in the present case, the Court cannot be properly seized of the matter and cannot proceed with the case, unless the Government of India consents thereto.

The Government of India has in their communication of 23 May 1973 regretted that they cannot give their consent to these attempted proceedings.

6) By suppressing the material fact about India’s reservation in their unilateral Application, Pakistan has attempted to mislead the Court to become improperly seized of the matter.

7) Assuming, without, admitting, that India’s reservation was not valid, the result will be that India will not be deemed to be a party to the Convention either in relation to all other States or in any case in relation to Pakistan. The Court cannot proceed with the case if the other State is not a party to the Convention.

8) In any view of the matter, therefore, the unilateral Application by Pakistan, in the face of the absence of consent by India, cannot make the court seized of the alleged subject matter thereof.

Attention is invited to the following excerpts from some eminent commentators on this point:-

Manley O. Hudson in his book The Permanent Court of International Justice. 1920-1942

(1943 edition) on page 419 states as follows: “Under Article 32 of the 1936 Rules an application must” as far as possible, specify the provision on which the applicant founds the jurisdiction of the Court”. If this requirement should not be met, it would seem that the Court should at once raise the question of its jurisdiction, even if the requirement be met, it ought to be possible for the Court acting \textit{proprionmotu} to examine the sufficiency of the basis of jurisdiction set out before the application is transmitted to the intended respondent. However, Article 33 of the 1936 Rules requires the Registrar to “transmit forthwith to the party against whom the claim is brought, a copy of the application”, the fact that the State against which the application is brought might be willing to accept the Court’s jurisdiction may be a justification of this provision. The Registrar’s Transmission of a copy of the application to the intended respondent does not necessarily commit the Court, but in a doubtful case the transmission ought to be delayed until the Court has had opportunity to instruct the Registrar. The intend respondent may proceed to defend on the merits in which case it may be held to have consented to the jurisdiction, or it may file a preliminary objection and thus require the Court to consider the question of jurisdiction, or it may do nothing, in which case it risks a decision in favour of the applicant under Article 53 of the Statute provided that the Court can satisfy itself that it has jurisdiction under Articles 36 and 37 of the Statute and that the claim is well founded in fact and law. When the application by Liechtenstein in the Gerliczy Case was filed in 1939, it was forthwith transmitted to Hungary though the application disclosed the possibility of a question as to the Court’s jurisdiction.”
Ibrahim F.I. Shihata in his book The Power of the International Court to Determine its own Jurisdiction, 1965, on page 56 states as follows:—

“Second, if the application submitted to the Court does not rely on any jurisdictional title, that is, if it is obvious that the Court lacks all jurisdiction it cannot reach the conclusion that it has jurisdiction as long as this is not clearly acquiesced to by the defendant. In such a case the Court will not have even the incidental power to determine its jurisdiction. It will merely make an “administrative” order to remove the case from the list. Jurisdiction, even the most incidental jurisdiction, assumes, as will be shown, a proper seisin of the Court. If the Court is not properly seized, it has no jurisdictional powers.”

On pages 86, 87, Shihata states as follows:—

“As to the argument that sizing the court by means of an application is “only possible where compulsory jurisdiction exists”, the present Court found that this was “a mere assertion” not justified by either Article 40(1) of the Statute or Article 32(2) of the Rules.

This does not, however, mean that a unilateral application of this kind is in itself sufficient for seizing the Court. It all depends on the later development and in particular on the reaction of the other party. In this respect four hypotheses could be conceived:

(i) The other party may refuse the offer to submit to the Court’s jurisdiction. By such a refusal it prevents the seisin of the Court, and the latter will have to dismiss the application by an administrative order. This procedure was applied in eight cases before the present Court.

(ii) The other party may explicitly accept the offer implied in the unilateral application allowing, therefore, the proper seisin of the court, and perfecting its jurisdiction through the new agreement made post hoc. This was the Court’s conclusion as to the attitude of Albania in the Corfu Channel Case (1948).

(iii) The other party may directly submit its defence on the merits of the claim without raising at that stage any objection against jurisdiction. This will more likely be taken as an implicit acceptance of the Court’s Jurisdiction and will thus lead to the same result reached in hypothesis (ii) The Permanent Court’s attitude in the Minority schools case (1928) supports this conclusion.

(iv) The other party may give no answer. This is merely a theoretical hypothesis with no precedent in the practice of the International Court. No consent could of course be derived from the mere failure to comment on receiving a copy of an application not based on any pre-established title of jurisdiction. Because such an application is not in itself capable of seizing the Court and, therefore, of allowing the application of Article 53 of the Statute which assumes a valid seisin, this hypothesis should be dealt with as hypothesis (i) and the case should normally be dismissed by an order”.

Shabtai Rozenne in his book The Law and Practice of the International Court Volume II (1965 edition), on page 540 states as follows:

“The procedures of settlement and discontinuance envisaged in Articles 68 and 69 of the Rules are only available where the seisin is prime facie effective, at least to the extent of requiring the case to proceed to the stage of preliminary objection. In the instances of unilateral arraignment under the doctrine of forum prorogatum, this condition does not exist, and neither of the Articles is available (in the absence of some positive act on the part of the applicant) to initiate the removal of the case form the list if the potential respondent does not accept the invitation contained in the application, to confer jurisdiction on the Court. In such circumstances the Court, in general exercise of its powers under Articles 36 and 48 of the Statute, has ordered the cases to be removed from the list. Here it is the action of the Court rather than the initiative of either of the parties, that provokes the removal from the list.”

9) Finally, the question of interim measures of protection does not arise in the face of the patent and manifest lack of jurisdiction, and more so where the Court is not properly seized of the matter.

In Fisheries Jurisdiction Case, the Court observed as follows:

“16. Whereas on a request for provisional measures the Court need not, before indicating them, finally satisfy itself that it has jurisdiction on the merits of the case, yet it ought not to act under article 41 of the Statute if the absence of jurisdiction on the merits is manifest.”

(ICJ Reports 1972 page 33)

31. In view of the above, when the absolute absence of jurisdiction is so patent and manifest at the threshold of the institution of proceedings, the question of summoning the parties for a hearing to determine its jurisdiction does not arise. The only proper action for the Court to take is after by itself examining the Application and the Request in the light of India's observations, to remove the Application from the list by an administrative order.

32. This view of the Government of India is consistent with the deep respect it has for the International Court of Justice which is hereby reiterated.
33. Finally, reference may be made to the communication dated 25 May 1973 addressed by the Ambassador of Pakistan at The Hague to the Registrar in response to the Government of India's letter of 23 May 1973. A response thereto can be made only after the Government of India is enabled to examine the communication within a reasonable time.

D. Letter No. 54370 Dated 25th May, 1973 from the Registrar of the International Court of Justice addressed to the Embassy of India at The Hague.

Sir,

I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of Your Excellency's letter of 23rd May, 1973, reference No. HAG/103/4/73 received in the Registry yesterday, with regard to the proceedings instituted by Pakistan against India concerning the trial of Pakistani POWs.

2. I have today received a letter in this connection from the Agent of Pakistan, to whom I communicated a copy of your letter. I am transmitting a certified copy of it to Your Excellency's Government, and attach a further a copy for your Excellency's information.

* * * * * * * * * * * *

Subject: Trial of Pakistani POWs – Jurisdiction under the Genocide Convention: Pakistan's application instituting proceedings.

Sir,

I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of the certified copy of the letter dated 23rd May, 1973 from the Ambassador of India to the Netherlands, relating to Pakistan's application instituting proceedings in the afore-mentioned case, and to state that the Government of India have incorrectly presumed that their consent to the jurisdiction of the Court is necessary, and should be given to by them in terms of Article IX of the Genocide Convention.

2. The Government of Pakistan notes that Article 40 of the Court’s statute does not make it obligatory to indicate the grounds on which the Court’s jurisdiction is based. However, Article 35, paragraph 2 of the Rules of Court states that the party instituting proceedings shall also “as far as possible, specify the provision on which the applicant founds the jurisdiction of the Court”.

3. Keeping in view the statute and rules of Court, the Government of Pakistan referred merely to the main provisions on which the jurisdiction of the Court could be founded, that is Article IX of the Genocide Convention. It is clear that the Court’s jurisdiction can be founded under this Article at the request of any of the parties to a dispute. The consent of the Government of India is, therefore, not necessary.

4. It is however, regrettable in the extreme that the Government of India seeks to exclude the jurisdiction of the Court in respect of a multilateral convention of such major humanitarian importance, when the International Court has been made the main guarantor, and supervisory body, regarding its interpretation application and fulfillment. The Government of India purports to rely on its declaration of August 27, 1959, which reads as follows:

“With reference to Article IX of the Convention the Government of India declare that, for the submission of any dispute in terms of this Article to the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice, the consent of all the parties to the dispute is required in each case”.

The Government of Pakistan wish to place on record that the Indian declaration referred to above is inadmissible under the Genocide Convention and is of no legal effect whatsoever. The Government of Pakistan reserves its right to present detailed arguments in support of this proposition at the appropriate time, when the preliminary objection raised by India against the jurisdiction of the Court shall be heard in accordance with the statute and rules of Court. For this purpose, it is obligatory upon India, as a party to the statute to appoint an agent and make an appearance before the Court. It is a duty imposed upon India by the statute and rules of Court to follow the procedure prescribed for raising preliminary objection.

5. That such a “reservation” can be challenged as being without legal effect is clear from the international Court’s judgement in the advisory opinion concerning reservations to the Genocide Convention of 1951. Thus on page 22 of its opinion the Court states: “the character of a multilateral convention, its purpose, mode of preparation and adoption are factors which must be considered in determining, in the absence of any express provision on the subject, the possibility of making reservation, as well as their validity and effect”. Again on page 24 of its opinion the Court states as follows: “the object and purpose of convention thus limits both the freedom of making reservations and that of objecting to them. It has nevertheless been argued that any state entitled to become a party to the Genocide Convention may do so while making any reservations to choose by virtue of its sovereignty. The Court cannot share this view. It is obvious that so extreme an application of the idea of State Sovereignty could lead to a complete disregard of the object and purpose of the Convention”.

6. That such “reservations” can be questioned before the International Court, is clear from the Courts own views expressed on page 27 of the opinion which are as follows:

“It may be that the divergence of views between parties as to the admissibility of a reservation will be not in fact have any consequences. On the other hand, it may be that certain parties who considered that the assent given by other parties to a reservation is incompatible with the purpose of convention, will decide to adopt a position on the jurisdictional plane in respect of this divergence and to settle the dispute which thus arises either by special agreement or by the procedure laid down in Article IX of the Convention”.

Accordingly, Pakistan invokes Article IX of the Genocide Convention to challenging the admissibility of the Indian “reservation”, and asserts that it had no legal effect whatsoever.

7. In view of India’s regrettable opposition to the jurisdiction of the Court, Pakistan also relies on all other provisions establishing the Court’s jurisdiction. In particular Pakistan relies on the Indian declarations accepting as compulsory the jurisdiction of the International Court under Article 36 para 2 of its statute. The Government of Pakistan does not regard the reservation in respect of Commonwealth Members made by India to be applicable to Pakistan now that Pakistan has left the Commonwealth.

8. The Government of Pakistan also relies on Article 17 of the General Act for the pacific settlement of international disputes of September 26, 1928 (notwithstanding any reservations made by India under that Convention) as read with Article 36 (1) and Article 37 of the statute of the Court. Pakistan would also rely on article 41 of the general Act in accordance with which disputes relating to the interpretation or application of the General Act, including those concerning the classification of disputes and the scope of reservations, shall be submitted to the Permanent Court, and now by virtue of Article 37 of the Statute, to the International Court of Justice. Pakistan is a party to the General Act under International law by virtue of succession to the multilateral conventions entered into by British India before partition.

9. In accordance with Article 35 Paragraph 2 of the rules of Court these grounds will be more fully developed by the Government of Pakistan in this memorial. The Government of Pakistan request the Court to indicate to the Government of India that the subject matter is still sub-judice and that their preliminary objections as to the Court's jurisdiction shall be heard in accordance with the statute and rules of Court.

E. Order of the International Court of Justice in the Case concerning Trial of Pakistani Prisoners of War. (Pakistan Vs. India).

INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

13 JULY 1973

CASE CONCERNING TRIAL OF PAKISTANI PRISONERS OF WAR

(PAKISTAN V. INDIA)

REQUEST FOR THE INDICATION OF INTERIM MEASURES OF PROTECTION

ORDER

Present: President LACHS; Judges FORSTER, GROS, BENGZON, PETREN, ONYEAMA, IGNACIO-PINTO, MOROZOV, JIMENEZ DE ARECHAGA, SIR Humphrey WALDOCK, NAGENDRA SINGH, RUDA; Registrar AQUARONE.

The International Court of justice.

Composed as above,

After deliberation,

Having regard to Articles 41 and 48 of the Statute of the Court,

Having regard to Article 66 of the Rules of Court,

Having regard to the Application by Pakistan filed in the Registry of the Court on 11 May 1973, instituting proceedings against India in respect of a dispute concerning charges of genocide against 195 Pakistani nationals, prisoners of war or civilian internees, in Indian custody.

Makes the following Order:

1. Having regard to the request dated 11 May 1973 and filed in the Registry the same day, whereby the Government of Pakistan, relying on Article 41 of the Statute and Article 66 of the Rules of Court, asks the Court to indicate, pending the final decision in the case brought before it by the Application of the same date, the following interim measures of protection:

   “(1) That the process of repatriation of prisoners of war and civilian internees in accordance with international law, which has already begun, should not be interrupted by virtue of charges of genocide against a certain number of individuals detained in India.

   (2) That such individuals, as are in the custody of India and are charged with alleged acts of genocide, should not be transferred to ‘Bangla Desh’ for trial till such time as Pakistan’s claim to exclusive jurisdiction and the lack of jurisdiction of any other Government or authority in this respect has been adjudged by the Court.”

2. Whereas the Government of India was notified by telegram the same day of the filing of the Application and request for indication of interim measures of protection, and of the precise measures requested, and copies of the Application and the request were at the same time transmitted to it by air mail.

3. Whereas, pursuant to Article 40, paragraph 3, of the Statute and Article 37, paragraph 2, of the Rules of Court, copies of the Application were transmitted to Members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General and to other States entitled to appear before the Court.

4. Whereas, pursuant to Article 31, paragraph 2, of the Statue, the Government of Pakistan chose Sir Muhammad Zafrulla Khan to sit as judge ad hoc, and he sat in the case until 2 July 1973.

5. Whereas the Governments of Pakistan and India were informed by communications of 14 May 1973 that the Court would in due course hold public hearings to afford the parties the opportunity of presenting their observations on the request by Pakistan for the indication of interim measures of protection, and the opening of such hearings was subsequently fixed for 29 May 1973;

6. Whereas on 28 May 1973, as a result of communications received from the Governments of Pakistan and India, the Court decided to postpone the opening of the public hearings, and subsequently fixed 4 June 1973 as the date for such opening.
7. Whereas by a letter dated 23 May 1973 from the Ambassador of India to the Netherlands, received in the Registry on 24 May 1973, the Government of India declined to consent to the jurisdiction of the Court in the case, and claimed that without such consent the Court could not properly be seized of the case and could not proceed with it, and that there was no legal basis whatever for the jurisdiction of the Court in the case; and whereas in two statements transmitted to the Court with letters from the Ambassador of India to the Netherlands dated 28 May and 4 June 1973 the Government of India presented a further reasoned statement that the Court had no jurisdiction in the case.

8. Whereas at the opening of the public hearings, which were held on 4, 5 and 26 June 1973, there were present in Court the Agent, Deputy-Agent and Counsel of the Government of Pakistan;

9. Having heard the observations on the request for interim measures on behalf of the Government of Pakistan, and the replies on behalf of that Government to questions put by Members of the Court, submitted by His Excellency Mr. J.G. Kharas and Mr. Yahya Bakhtiar, Attorney-General of Pakistan.

10. Whereas in a letter of 11 July 1973 the Agent for Pakistan informed the Court of its expectation that negotiations will take place between Pakistan and India in the near future in which the issues which are the subject of its Application will be under discussion; and whereas in that letter the Government of Pakistan asks the Court to postpone further consideration of its request for interim measures in order to facilitate those negotiations;

11. Whereas in the same letter the Government of Pakistan further asks the Court to fix time-limits for the filling of written pleadings in the case;

12. Considering that it is Pakistan which requested the Court to indicate interim measures of protection on the basis that the circumstances of the case so required.

13. Whereas it is of the essence of a request for interim measures of protection that it asks for a decision by the Court as a matter of urgency, as it is expressly recognized by the Court in Article 66, paragraph 2, of the Rules of Court.

14. Whereas the fact that the Government of Pakistan now asks the Court to postpone further consideration of its request for the indication of interim measures signifies that the Court no longer has before it a request for interim measures which is to be treated as a matter of urgency; and whereas the Court is not therefore called upon to pronounce upon the said request;
15. Having regard to Article 66, paragraph 1, of the Rules of Court which provides that a request for the indication of interim measures of protection may be made at any time during the proceedings in the case in connection with which it is made.

16. Whereas in the circumstances of the present case the Court must first of all satisfy itself that it has jurisdiction to entertain the dispute;

Accordingly,

THE COURT

By 8 votes to 4

Decides that the written proceedings shall first be addressed to the question of the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the dispute;

Fixes as follows the time-limits for the written proceedings:

1 October 1973 for the Memorial of the Government of Pakistan, 15 December 1973 for the Counter-Memorial of the Government of India;

And reserves the subsequent procedure for further decision.

Done in English and in French, the English text being authoritative, at the Peace Palace, The Hague, this thirteenth day of July one thousand nine hundred and seventy-three, in four copies, one of which will be placed in the archives of the Court, and the others transmitted respectively to the Government of Pakistan, to the Government of India, and to the Secretary-General of the United Nations for transmission to the Security Council.

Judge NAGENDRA SINGH appends a separate opinion to the Order of the Court.

Judge PETREN appends a dissenting opinion to the Order of the Court.

SEPARATE OPINION OF JUDGE NAGENDRA SINGH.

While voting with the majority for what in legal effect now constitutes a clear withdrawal by the Applicant of its request for interim measures sought under Article 41 of the Statute of the Court, I have all along felt that in this case, irrespective of the competence of the Court in relation to the Applicant (Pakistan) and the absent non-applicant (India), which aspect will be examined in the second phase, it is patently obvious that the court has no jurisdiction in relation to Bangla-Desh.

It is well known that Bangla-Desh is a sovereign State recognized by over 90 countries and now a regular member of the several specialized agencies of the United Nations and a distinct member of the international community. The fact remains, however, that without its consent there can be no exercise by the Court of jurisdiction in relation to its rights.

Moreover, from the viewpoint of the Court’s adjudication, whether ad interim or final, what is vital is the positive pleading of Pakistan that Bangla-Desh and not India is contesting Pakistan’s claim to exclusive jurisdiction for the holding of trials of 195 prisoners of war. This is manifest from paragraph 4 of Pakistan’s Application, wherein it is stated that “The Government of Pakistan cannot agree to the trial of its prisoners of war by ‘Bangla Desh’ since Pakistan has exclusive jurisdiction over its nationals in respect of any acts of genocide allegedly committed in Pakistani territory.”

It is indeed an elementary and basic principle of judicial propriety which governs the exercise of the judicial function, particularly in inter-State disputes, that no court of law can adjudicate on the rights and responsibilities of a third State (a) without giving that State a hearing, and (b) without obtaining its clear consent.

Furthermore, it appears to me that the Court has not been in proper seisin of the case from the very beginning and lacks all prima facie competence. If that be so, it is regrettable to have instituted a further phase by fixing time-limits for the Parties to plead on the question of jurisdiction.

However, it is true that the Applicant, by its letter of 11 July 1973, requested the Court to agree to postpone the entire case as the Parties were about to enter into negotiations for an amicable settlement of the dispute. As already stated, a request for postponement in relation to interim measures can only have the legal effect of withdrawal, which must take priority over all other considerations, particularly when India had declined to be present and has, therefore, no say in regard to the request of Pakistan. It is in these circumstances that I voted with the majority for the decision of the Court.
While doing so, however, I do hold that the Court, when agreeing to postponement of further consideration of the request for interim measures and finding that it is not therefore called upon to pronounce thereon, should, have declined to deal any further with the case, as judicial propriety does not permit the Court to advance any further therein.

Signed: Nagendra Singh

DISSENTING OPINION OF JUDGE PETREN

Having voted against the Order, I append this dissenting opinion. In my views, the first question to which the Court should have attended was that of its own jurisdiction on the merits of the case, a question to which the Order does not advert until the last paragraph of the recitals.

In all cases, the Court obviously has a duty to satisfy itself as soon as possible that it has jurisdiction. The fact that the Indian Government denies the jurisdiction of the Court in the present case can only render the examination of that question even more urgent. There is no indication that the possibility of that Government’s recognizing the Court’s jurisdiction in the present case has been envisaged in the negotiations which, as mentioned in the letter dated 11 July 1973 from the Agent for Pakistan, are being carried on between the Governments of India and Pakistan. The fact that the Government of Pakistan has requested the indication of provisional measures does nothing to dispense the Court from the duty of settling the question of its jurisdiction even in the initial stage of the proceedings, if that should prove to be possible. In the absence of the Government of India, it is, in accordance with Article 53 of the Statute, incumbent upon the Court also to take into consideration such elements as militate in favour of the position adopted by that Government.

The arguments of the Government of Pakistan with regard to the jurisdiction of the Court were set forth at public hearings on 4, 5 and 26 June 1973. The reasons why the Government of India denies that jurisdiction have been presented in statements transmitted to the Court by letters from the Ambassador of India dated 23 and 28 May and 4 June 1973. The question of jurisdiction, as presented to the Court by the two Governments, does not appear to be enmeshed with the merits of the case. There is therefore reason to ask whether the Court, having taken cognizance of the arguments put forward any the two Governments, could not and should not have decided the question of its jurisdiction at the present early stage of the proceedings, with the aid of its own lights, instead of deferring consideration of this preliminary question to a new phase of the case by first inviting the two Governments to engage in written proceedings extending until 15 December 1973 and destined to be followed by further oral proceedings.

For the purpose of its decision in that connection, the Court, in my view, had to take the following elements into consideration.

The arguments of the two Governments on the subject of the Court's jurisdiction concerned inter alia the construction of the Convention of 9 December 1948 on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, and in particular its jurisdictional clause, as also the question whether Pakistan is a party to the General Act of 26 December 1928 for the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes and, if so, whether the jurisdiction of the Court could be founded upon that instrument. I am of the opinion that Article 63 of the Statute of the Court required the questions thus raised to be notified without delay to the States parties to the two international instruments in question. Those notifications, however, were not made, and the majority even opposed considering the question of notification in respect of the Genocide Convention before the Court had pronounced on the request of the Government of Pakistan for the indication of interim measure of protection. Given the mandatory character of the notifications provided for in Article 63 of the Statute, I do not believe that the Court may settle the question of its jurisdiction without having complied with the provisions of that Article of the Statute. In that, therefore, there exists a first obstacle to the Court's pronouncing upon its jurisdiction at the present stage of the proceedings.

Nor is it possible to pass over in silence the fact that the judge ad hoc chosen by the Government of Pakistan has ceased to sit in the case since 2 July 1973. On what questions the Court may deliberate in the decision of a case is a question which, in my view, deserves the closest attention. In particular, I have grave doubts as to the possibility of the Court's settling the question of its jurisdiction in the absence of a judge ad hoc. In the present instance, it is true that this absence could not have prevented the Court from deferring consideration of the case in conformity with the request of the Government of Pakistan, but to my mind it would have constituted a further reason for considering that now was not the time to settle the question of jurisdiction.

That having been said, I am by no means convinced that it was necessary, for the information of the Court, to open the door to further pleadings on its jurisdiction as wide as the present order has done. Furthermore, the time-limits fixed are such, in my view, as to justify some apprehension that the present case may exemplify the drawbacks that arise when different manners of settling an international dispute are confused. The attitudes of the two Governments in question give me the impression that it is much rather the intervention of the mediator than that of the international judge which would be more likely to help them resolve the series of disagreements between them. The judicial role of the Court does not, I feel, connote any consideration of problems from that angle.

Even so, as it is in my view necessary to allow States parties to the Genocide Convention and the General Act of 1928 - provided they are notified of the existence of the above-mentioned questions – sufficient time to enable them to request to intervene in the proceedings, I was in a position to assent to the operative paragraph of the Order, the terms of which concern solely the organization of the further proceedings on the question of the Court's jurisdiction.

If I have nevertheless voted against the order, it is essentially on account of paragraphs 13 and 14. According to the letter of its Agent dated 11 July 1973, the Government of Pakistan has found it appropriate to ask the Court to postpone further consideration of its request for the indication of interim measures in order to facilitate negotiations; but there was nothing in that letter to indicate that the Government of Pakistan wished to withdraw its request for the indication of interim measures. Now in paragraph 13 of the Order, the Court expresses the view that it is of the essence of a request for interim measures of protection that it asks for a decision by the Court as a matter of urgency. It is consequently stated in paragraph 14 that, by the effect of the desire expressed by the Government of Pakistan that the further consideration of the request be deferred, the Court no longer has such a request before it. As the Government of Pakistan has not withdrawn its request for the indication of interim measures of protection I am unable to assent to that conclusion.

F. Press Statement of Attorney General for Pakistan

Following are the reasons why the Government of Pakistan, on 11 July, 1973, applied to the International Court of Justice for the postponement of consideration of their Request for the indication of interim measures of protection with regard to 195 Prisoners of war whom India had threatened to hand over to Bangladesh for trials on charges of genocide.

(1) The President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India signed an agreement in Simla on the 2nd July, 1972, whereby it was provided that any of the disputes or problems between the two countries would be settled through bilateral negotiations or any other peaceful means agreed upon between the parties, within the framework of the United Nations Charter. It was further provided under Article 1 clause (ii) of the same agreement that “pending the final settlement of any of the problems between the two countries neither side shall unilaterally alter the situation on both sides shall prevent the organization, assistance or encouragement of any acts detrimental to the maintenance of peace and harmonious relations”.

(2) In spite of Government of Pakistan’s best efforts and contrary to the provisions of the Geneva Conventions Government of India on one pretext or another refused to repatriate over 92,000 Pakistani Prisoners of War and civil internees. When public opinion became highly critical about India’s attitude towards and treatment of the Pakistani POWs India and Bangla Desh issued a joint statement at New Delhi on the 17th April, 1973, the relevant part of that statement appears in its paragraph 5 which is as follows:-

“Without prejudice to the respective positions of the Government of India and the government of the People’s Republic of Bangla Desh, the two Governments are ready to seek a solution to all humanitarian problems through simultaneous repatriation of the Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees, except those required by the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangla Desh for trial on criminal charges, the repatriation of Benglees forcibly detained in Pakistan and the repatriation of Pakistanis in Bangla Desh, i.e., all non Bengalees who owe allegiance and have opted for repatriation to Pakistan”.

It was clear from this statement that India attached certain unfair conditions to the repatriation of our POWs, contrary to the requirements of the Geneva Conventions of 1949, and also proposed to surrender to Bangla Desh those Prisoners of War who were wanted for trial on alleged acts of genocide and other offences by Bangla Desh in complete disregard of Pakistan’s exclusive jurisdiction over these Pakistani nationals. The offences were allegedly committed in a territory at a time when it was universally recognized to be part of Pakistan (East Pakistan). The offenders as well as the victims of these alleged offences were both Pakistani nationals.

(3) On 20th April in a rejoinder to the said joint statement of India and Bangla Desh Pakistan claimed exclusive Jurisdiction to try the alleged offenders and invited negotiations with India on these and other issues.

(4) In a message dated the 8th May, 1973, the Minister of External Affairs, Government of India, rejected Pakistan’s claim to try the said Prisoners of War and refused negotiations on other related issues and asked Pakistan to agree in advance to all the proposals made by India and Bangla Desh in paragraph 5 of their said joint statement of 17 April, 1973. The relevant part of 8th May statement of the Indian Minister for External Affairs is as follows:-

“Likewise the contention of Pakistan Government in paragraph 3 of its statement questioning the competence of the Government of Bangla Desh to bring to trial certain prisoners of war on crime charges are unacceptable. The same is the case with the untenable observation contained in paragraph 7 of Pakistan’s Statement about the Pakistani nationals in Bangla Desh, who have declared their allegiance to Pakistan and are desirous of repatriation.

In our view, talks can be purposeful and lead to quick results if Pakistan Government was to indicate their agreement in principle to the solution set out in Paragraph 5 of the joint declaration of 17 April 1973. The representatives of India and Pakistan can work out the modalities for implementing the solution”.

It was this total rejection of Pakistan’s claim and refusal to negotiate the matter and the threatened transfer to Bangla Desh of 195 Prisoners of War in question who according to Bangla Desh authorities were to be tried by the end of May, 1973, that led Pakistan to approach the International Court of Justice and also make a Request for the indication of interim measures of protection with regard to the said POWs.

(5) Thereafter under the directions of the President of the International Court of Justice the Registrar of the Court sent a message to Government of India informing them about the institution of proceedings by Pakistan against India and expressed “the hope that the Government of India will take into account the fact that the matter is now sub-judice before the Court”.

(6) On receipt of Pakistan’s application and notice of the date of hearing, the Government of India refused to appoint an Agent or appear before the Court but through various letters addressed to the Registrar questioned the competence of the Court to deal with the application filed by Pakistan. In her letter dated 4 June, 1973, India, however, indicated her willingness to negotiate on the subject matter of Pakistan’s application filed in the Court and relied on Article 1, clause (ii) of the Simla Agreement of July, 1972. On page 21 of the said letter India stated as follows:-

“Attention in this respect is also invited to Article 1, clause (ii) of the Simla Agreement 1972, which was signed by the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India on 2 July, 1972, and after having been considered by representative Assemblies of the two countries, was ratified and is in force. This clause provides “that the two countries are resolved to settle their differences by peaceful means through bilateral negotiations and peaceful means mutually agreed upon between them”. In so far as the repatriation of war and civilian internees is concerned, Article 6 of the Simla Agreement does provide for negotiations between the countries concerned to settle the related questions. The subject matter of Pakistan’s Application must, therefore, be considered and resolved in conformity with the provisions of the Simla Agreement and in consultation with the parties concerned. No bilateral or trilateral negotiations have yet taken place on the subject matter of Pakistan’s Application”.

(7) After that further communications between the Governments of India and Pakistan indicated an understanding that negotiations would shortly be held on this and other issues between the two countries. These negotiations are to be held in the last week of this month.

(8) It was under these circumstances and taking into account India’s commitment under the Simla Agreement that “pending the final settlement of any of the problems between the two countries neither side shall unilaterally alter the situation and both shall prevent the organization, assistance or encouragement of any acts detrimental to the maintenance of peace and harmonious relations” that Pakistan, with a view to facilitating the negotiations with India and for creating an atmosphere of goodwill, requested the Court to defer or postpone further consideration of Pakistan’s Request for interim measures of protection.

I am grateful to the Court that it has in effect accepted our request for postponement and has not given any decision on our Request but has in their order stated that Pakistan was at liberty to move the Court again should the need and urgency for interim measures arise again. The Court has been further pleased to fix time limits for Pakistan and India for filing their written pleadings pertaining to the exercise of jurisdiction by the Court. Thus the matter remains sub-judice. We earnestly hope that the negotiations pertaining to the repatriation of the Prisoners of war and trial of the said 195 POWs will result in an amicable settlement between the parties concerned.

0774. Letter from Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed addressed to Indian Foreign Minister Swaran Singh.

Dear Sardar Swaran Singh,

I am in receipt of your letter dated May 8*. We agree that the issues with which we are faced are basically humanitarian and that, if they are to be resolved without delay, both Governments should refrain from getting involved in a discussion of their legal and political implications. I should like to assure you that we have been ready at all times to approach the question of repatriation of prisoners of war and that of Bengalis and Pakistan nationals stranded in Pakistan and Bangladesh respectively from a purely humanitarian angle. We had further hoped that a resolution of these issues would open the way to the further implementation of the Simla Agreement with a view to normalization of the situation in the sub-continent. It was with this object in mind that we had invited your Government to send a representative to discuss these issues further. I should make it clear also that this invitation did not imply that your representative would discuss the prisoners of war question only. In suggesting that we resume discussions with your Government with a view to an early settlement of the prisoners of war question, we had certainly not intended to bar discussion of the other humanitarian problems. We would of course be willing to discuss these other problems as well.

It is not, however, possible to accept your suggestion that we agree in principle, in advance even of a discussion of the issues involved, to the proposal contained in para 5 of the joint India-Bangladesh declaration of April 17. You would appreciate that to rule out further dialogue except on the condition you have laid down is scarcely the best way to promote a resolution of the humanitarian issues in question and I regret the Government of Pakistan is unable to concur this proposition.

We suggest that our two Governments resume the dialogue without preconditions on either side, mindful only of the fact that an early solution to the humanitarian problems has to be found so as to promote a reconciliation and establishment of durable peace in the subcontinent.

Yours sincerely,

(Sd) Aziz Ahmed.

* Document No.768.
My dear Foreign secretary,

I wrote to you on 26 March giving the views of the Government of Pakistan on the overflights case at present before the ICAO Council. We had suggested that both India and Pakistan request the Council to resume consideration. As I said we on our part would not press for a discussion of the merits of the case at the forthcoming hearing of the case and would have no objection if the Council suspended proceedings, under Articles 6 and 14 of its Rules, and invited the parties to undertake bilateral negotiations.

Since then, the Foreign office has sent a reminder through the Swiss Embassy. We have not, however, received a reply.

I now find that ALL India Radio is alleging that Pakistan has decided to reactivate the overflights case in the ICAO Council. All India Radio broadcast at 2030 hours on 19 May 1973 said that Pakistan is asking the ICAO Council “to take action in the case” and that “according to observers this is another shift from the Simla Agreement”.

You will appreciate that this is not the correct position. The request to the ICAO Council is entirely in the context explained in my letter of 26 March 1973. It does not involve any new decision. The Government of Pakistan continues to consider it desirable that the Overflights case should be settled bilaterally. We fully abide by the understanding reached at New Delhi in August 1972 and I need hardly add that we remain determined to fulfill the Simla Agreement.

Yours sincerely

0776. Aide Memoire presented by the Government of Pakistan to the Government of India regarding PoWs received through the Swiss Embassy.

Embassy of Switzerland

The Embassy of Switzerland presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India and has the honour to bring to their attention the following aide-memoire which was handed over to the Head of the Federal Political Department (Ministry of External Affairs), Berne, on 25th May, 1973, by the Ambassador of Pakistan with the request to inform the Government of India of its contents;

Aide-Memoire

The Government of India has rejected the Government of Pakistan's invitation to send a representative to Pakistan for discussion on the question of the repatriation of POWs and other implications of the Joint India-Bangladesh statement of April 17, 1973. In a letter, sent by Sardar Swaran Singh to Pakistan's Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs he has asked the Government of Pakistan to review and agree in principle to the proposals set out in paragraph 5 of India-Bangladesh joint declaration of April 17, 1973.

2. The reply from the Government of India makes it clear that no further negotiations on the question of the repatriation of the Pakistani POWs could be held unless Pakistan first accepts the following Indian demands:

Transfer to “Bangladesh” of some 195 Pakistani POWs and civilian internees for trials on criminal charges;

Transfer to Pakistan of 250,000 non-Bengalis who according to Bangladesh owe allegiance to Pakistan and have opted for repatriation.

3. The conditions that India has attached to the release of the Pakistani POWs are against the provisions of the Geneva Conventions and Pakistan cannot accept the use of Pakistani POWs as a lever of pressure for extracting concessions on the un-related issues.

4. The Indian reply further makes it clear that the joint statement of April 17, 1973 is an attempt to divert the mounting world criticism against the continued captivity of 92,000 Pakistani POWs nearly 17 months after the cessation of hostilities between India and Pakistan.

5. The process of normalization would be accelerated if India fulfils its obligation under the Geneva Conventions. The obligation to release the Pakistani POWs is unilateral and un-conditional. Pakistan has already fulfilled its obligation by releasing Indian POWs several months ago. Pakistan cannot be a party to any compromise on the recognized principles enunciated in the Geneva Conventions.

6. The trial of any Pakistani POWs would take the situation to a point of no return. There would be great resentment and revulsion in Pakistan and thus it would be a serious setback for the efforts to bring about reconciliation on the subcontinent.

7. The Government of Pakistan in its desire to put an end to the chapter of tragic conflict has exercised maximum restraint. It has not exercised its rightful jurisdiction and has not tried the Bengalis in Pakistan against whom there is evidence of committing acts of subversion, espionage and high treason. The terms of the joint statement of April 17, 1973 would make it impossible for this restraint to continue.

8. The Dacca authorities legally have no right to bring to trial any Pakistani POWs on criminal charges as any alleged excesses which might have been committed had taken place inside Pakistan and, according to the established principles of international law, only Pakistan would hold trials on such charges.
Pakistan has given an assurance that it will investigate all charges against its POWs and will punish all those found guilty by the due process of law.

9. Bangladesh is not a detaining power either in fact or in law in respect of Pakistani POWs. The so-called joint command was a myth.

10. Legally and morally Bangladesh has no right to subject a linguistic, ethnic or political minority to discrimination and then offer its members an option to leave their homes. The non-Bengalis whom Bangladesh wants to expel ever since the immigration from India have lived in the territory which now comprises Bangladesh. Most of them were born and brought up in East Pakistan and have never been to West-Pakistan. They are not in any sense of West-Pakistan origin. Consequently they must continue to live in Bangladesh under the arrangements which would safeguard their legitimate rights.

11. Since 1947, Pakistan has had to cope with millions of refugees with innumerable problems and as such Pakistan cannot be justly expected to accept the burden of hundreds of thousands of more refugees.

12. The Government of Pakistan recognizes the right of the Bengalis to leave Pakistan if they so wish. The Government of Pakistan has always sought a humanitarian solution of this problem and has taken several steps consistent with that aim. Pakistan has continued to treat the Bengalis well and those who have opted to stay in Pakistan continued to do and many among them occupy high and important position in Pakistan.

13. In November 1972 the Government of Pakistan had agreed to permit 5,000 Bengalis to leave Pakistan on humanitarian grounds. Their cases were to be recommended by the ICRC. Later in the same month, India had offered to repatriate the women and children of the Pakistani POWs in India. In return the Government of Pakistan had offered to permit 10,000 Bengalis women and children to leave Pakistan.

14. The ICRC in Pakistan had collected the particulars of about 15,000 Bengalis to be repatriated and the Government of Pakistan had issued exit permits for about 12,000. The ICRC has received authorization from Dacca for their repatriation on the basis of the particulars supplied by the ICRC.

15. According to the latest information most of the 6,500 women and children of the Pakistani POWs have refused to leave for Pakistan as they do not want to be separated from their heads of families. The Swiss Embassy's survey indicated that 1,279 women and children may be repatriated but so far the Government of India has not supplied the Government of Pakistan with a list containing their names.

16. In the meanwhile, last month the Prime Minister of Bangladesh has requested the United Nations Secretary-General for a ship to transport the 15,000 Bengalis from Karachi to Chittagong. He also offered that the ship could carry back 20,000 Pakistanis.

17. The Government of Pakistan has informed the United Nations Secretary General of its acceptance of this offer. The Government of Pakistan will accept the repatriation of all persons who on verification are found to be of the West Pakistan origin. According to the ICRC estimates their number is 10,000.

Berne, Dated May 25, 1973

The Embassy of Switzerland avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India the assurances of its highest consideration.

0777. Letter from Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh to Pakistan Foreign Secretary Mumtaz A. Alvie.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

Foreign Secretary

26th May, 1973

Dear Mr. Alvie,

We have received your message of May 24 through the Embassy of Switzerland. It is re-assuring to know that you are still interested in settling the over flights case bilaterally. I must say that your earlier message of 7th May informing us of your unilateral request to the ICAO Council to take up the over flights case in its 79th Session, had created a very different impression on us. Regarding the points raised in your letter of March 26, our view of the understanding reached at Simla and later reiterated during the meeting of special envoys of Pakistan and India at Delhi on 29th August, 1972 is reflected in the wording of paragraph 5 of the Agreed Recommendations of the Delhi meeting which is reproduced below:

“Both sides considered it desirable that the case regarding over flights now pending before the ICAO Council should be settled bilaterally”.

2. Our clear understanding of the implications of this recommendation is that bilateral negotiations should be held between India and Pakistan under the framework of the Simla Agreement and not as a result of Council mediation. However, as suggested in your letter of March 26 we have no objection if the council suspends the proceedings while bilateral negotiations under the Simla framework are in progress.

3. If this position is acceptable to your Government, in pursuance of the clarification given in your communication of May 24, we would like to know whether you are now in a position to indicate a suitable date for a meeting to commence bilateral discussions. On getting an affirmative reply, we could jointly request the ICAO Council once again, not to schedule the case for the 79th Session. I shall await your urgent confirmation on this point.

Yours sincerely,

0778. Letter from the Indian Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh to the Pakistan Foreign Secretary Mumtaz A. Alvie.

Dear Mr. Alvie,

Thank you for your letter of May 2, 1973. I fully reciprocate your view that there is need to exercise greater vigilance to put a stop to hostile Radio broadcasts.

2. However, you will kindly recall that in my letter of March 8, 1973 I had drawn your specific attention to the objectionable tone and content of the broadcasts from the Muzzafarabad station of Radio Pakistan. I had conveyed our Government’s disappointment at the continuation of these broadcasts, contrary to our Government’s agreement during the Emissary - level talks at Murree in April 1972 that hostile broadcasts from all Radio stations, including those in Kashmir will be stopped. We regret to note that this vital question has not been referred to at all in your letter of 2nd May.

3. On the other hand, we were surprised to note that in a talk in Kashmiri on April 25, 1973, while taking exception to India’s disappointment at the continuing hostility of broadcasts from stations in Pakistan Occupied Kashmir, Radio Pakistan asserted that the so-called Azad Kashmir Radio was “not a party to or responsible for any agreement”. We have also come across an instance of official encouragement being given to the so-called Azad Kashmir Radio to continue its tirade against India. On April 19, 1973, Pakistan occupied Kashmir Radio quoted Pakistan’s Minister without Portfolio as having stated that the Radio was “working for an extremely noble cause and keeps alive the spirit which the expansionist forces like Bharat are trying to crush”. We have already communicated our concern in this matter in a formal note of protest sent through Swiss diplomatic channels on May 14, 1973. A reply to this message is awaited.
4. We have separately replied to the communications dated March 6 and April 25, 1973 containing lists of All India Radio broadcasts which you have found objectionable. We are also looking into the item quoted by you in your letter of May 2, 1973.

5. Meanwhile let me assure you once again that we believe that cessation of hostile propaganda is an essential step for establishing normal and friendly relations and we hope that Pakistan Government will agree that this action will be in the larger interests of the two countries.

Yours sincerely,

0779. Aide Memoire of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs regarding PoWs sent through the Embassy of Switzerland.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

The Minister of External Affairs, Government of India presents its compliments to the Embassy of Switzerland and with reference to their Note Verbale No. 822.O dated 26th May, 1973 has the honour to request that the following message along with the enclosure thereto may kindly be conveyed to the Government of Pakistan:

The Ministry of External Affairs is unable to understand Government of Pakistan’s contention made in para 15 of their Aide memoire under reference that the list of women and children who have opted for repatriation to Pakistan has not so far been supplied to them. It may be recalled that the Ministry of External Affairs had furnished to Pakistan Government through Swiss diplomatic channels a list of 6503 wives and children of Pakistani POWs and civilian internees as far back as 15th February, 1973.

As some of the family members of the Pakistani POWs and civilian internees did not wish to be repatriated separately from the heads of families, the Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi were requested to send a representative to the POW camps to satisfy themselves that the Pakistani women and children who did not wish to be repatriated without their husbands/heads of families were doing so of their own free will. After completing this verification the Swiss Embassy had indicated that 1279 wives and children had opted for immediate repatriation to Pakistan. It was learnt that the Swiss Embassy had furnished this information to the Government of Pakistan along with a list of these wives and children containing their particulars. In view, however, of Government of Pakistan’s contention in para 15 of their Aide Memoire under reference that they have so far not received this list, a nominal role of the 1279 women and children opting for repatriation to Pakistan along with the names of 9 additional women and children who have subsequently opted for repatriation to Pakistan is here with enclosed” (not enclosed here).

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to Embassy of Switzerland the assurances of its highest consideration.

The Embassy of Switzerland,
New Delhi
My dear Foreign Secretary,

I have received your message of May 26.

2. If any impression was created that Pakistan was not interested in settling the Over flights case through bilateral negotiations, it was mistaken. As I said in my letter of March 26, 1973, we continue to consider it desirable that this case should be settled through bilateral negotiations. With this purpose in mind and indeed to facilitate bilateral negotiations, it was suggested in the letter of March 26 that the ICAO Council should be approached at the 79th Session, under Articles 6 and 14 of the Rules for the Settlement of Differences to suspend proceedings and invite the parties to undertake bilateral negotiations.

3. As I said in my letter of March 26, we had informed the ICAO Council in March that Pakistan had no objection to the Over flights Case not being taken up at the 78th Session of the Council. In the same communication, the Council was requested to schedule the case for the 79th Session.

4. Accordingly, we expect that the Council would take up the case at the 79th Session. We have not yet received any firm indication from the ICAO Secretariat but we hope the Council would schedule the case for the latter part of June 1973.

5. I would like to reiterate that the Government of Pakistan would not want at this session to enter into the merits of the case. The Council can adopt a resolution to suspend its proceedings and invite the parties to undertake bilateral negotiations. We trust that this procedure has your concurrence. Once the Council has taken this decision, the delegations of India and Pakistan can meet at a mutually convenient time.

Yours sincerely,
(Mumtaz A. Alvei)

Rules for the Settlement of Differences

Article 14

Negotiations during proceedings.

(1) The Council may, at any time during the proceedings and prior to the meeting at which the decision is rendered as provided in Article 15(4), invite the parties to the dispute to engage in direct negotiations, if the Council deems that the possibilities of settling the dispute or narrowing the issues through negotiations have not been exhausted.

(2) If the parties accept the invitation to negotiate, the Council may set a time-limit for the completion of such negotiations, during which other proceedings on the merits shall be suspended.

(3) Subject to the consent of the parties concerned, the Council may render any assistance likely to further the negotiations, including the designation of an individual or a group of individuals to act as conciliator during the negotiations.

(4) Any solution agreed through negotiations shall be recorded by Council. If no solution is found the parties shall so report to Council and the suspended proceedings shall be resumed.
0781. Letter from Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed to External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh.

From: Mr. Aziz Ahmed HPk. HQA., SPk.
Minister of State for Defence & Foreign Affairs.

June 4, 1973

My dear Sardar Swaran Singh,

On May 31, our Foreign Secretary, Mr. Mumtaz A. Alvie, wrote to your Foreign Secretary, Mr. Kewal Singh, suggesting that the ICAO Council should be approached at the 79th Session to suspend proceedings and invite the parties to undertake bilateral negotiations.

2. It has since been brought to my notice that last February the President of the ICAO Council had proposed “deferment of the Council’s consideration of the over flight case until one of the parties requests that the matter be taken up by Council”

3. On further consideration, I think it should be sufficient if we accepted the proposal of the President of the ICAO Council. Therefore, we propose to inform the President of the ICAO Council accordingly and hope you would wish to do likewise.

4. AS regards Mr. Kewal Singh’s enquiry whether we are in a position to indicate a date for a meeting between the delegations of our two countries to discuss this matter, I would suggest that this question may also be considered at the meeting of the representatives of India and Pakistan proposed in my letter of May 16.

With Kind regards

Yours sincerely

(Aziz Ahmed)

His Excellency
Sardar Swaran Singh,
Minister for External Affairs,
Government of the Republic of India,
New Delhi
Aide Memoire of the Ministry of External Affairs to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs Government of Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 7, 1973.

Aide Memoire

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, has been greatly surprised to receive the two Aides memoire of the Government of Pakistan dated 11th and 25th May, 1973, through Swiss diplomatic channels. The Government are unable to understand or appreciate the motivation in sending these Aides Memoire to the Swiss Government when correspondence was already going on directly, since April, between the Foreign Minister of India and the Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs of Pakistan, to establish the basis and scope for talks under the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration.

2. However, in view of the highly distorted, misleading and, in some case, factually incorrect rendering of India's position given in these Aides Memoire the Government of India are constrained to reiterate their views on the subject.

3. Pakistan's assertion in the Aide Memoire of 25th May that the Government of India have "rejected Pakistan's invitation to send a representative to Pakistan for discussing the implications of the Indo-Bangladesh Joint Declaration of April 17, 1973 is a distortion of facts. The Foreign Minister of India in his letter of May 8, 1973, had suggested that if Pakistan Government indicated their agreement in principle to the solution set out in para 5 of the Joint Declaration "talks can be purposeful and lead to quick results". This statement obviously reflects the constructive approach and desire of India and Bangladesh for meaningful talks with Pakistan, and cannot by any stretch of imagination be construed as a "rejection" of Pakistan's invitation for talks.

4. The Government of India categorically reject Pakistan's contention that India has laid any preconditions or demands before negotiations can commence on the question of Pakistani POWs. It is quite clear from the wording of Paragraph 5 of the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration that the solution proposed is for "simultaneous repatriation" of the three categories of persons, including Pakistani POWs and civilian internees, who have been affected by the conflict of 1971. Contrary to the impression sought to be created by Pakistan, it is Pakistan herself which is laying pre-conditions and introducing political considerations by insisting on a one-sided solution of the POW issue in utter disregard of the other equally pressing humanitarian issues arising out of the 1971 conflict involving Pakistani national in Bangladesh.

5. Pakistan Government cannot absolve itself of the responsibility for causing delay in the resolution of the humanitarian issues arising out of the December 1971 conflict. Had they recognized the changed realities in the sub-continent, the way would have been cleared long ago for the participation of Bangladesh as a sovereign equal in talks between the three Governments to resolve these humanitarian issues. However, in the absence of any such decision by Pakistan, Governments of Bangladesh and India, by separating the humanitarian issues from political and legal considerations, have suggested a practical solution in their Joint Declaration of April 17. It is, therefore, inexcusable and unfair on the part of Pakistan to describe in its Aide Memoire the Joint Declaration as “an attempt to divert the mounting world criticism” on the POW issue. This remark belies the claim of Pakistan that it is sincerely and genuinely working for an early resolution of these humanitarian issues.

6. Pakistan’s allegation that India has a unilateral obligation to release the POWs is totally unacceptable as it does not take into account the fact that the Pakistan POWs now in India, had surrendered to the Joint Command of Indo-Bangladesh forces on the territory of Bangladesh. Bangladesh Government thus has joint responsibility towards these prisoners of war. This was made clear to Pakistan repeatedly in the meetings at Murree, Simla and New Delhi last year. During the meetings at Simla and Delhi in July and August, 1972, when the necessity of Bangladesh’s participation in talks on the repatriation of prisoners of war was mentioned this was not challenged by the Pakistan side. In fact, the line taken by the Pakistan side was that the recognition of Bangladesh was receiving most serious consideration by their Government, the clear implication being that Bangladesh would then be able to participate in the talks.

7. Pakistan would doubtless admit that a source of much greater irritation than the trial of 195 Pakistani POWs for criminal offences is the continuing lack of agreement on the repatriation of three categories of persons affected by the conflict, viz., 400,000 Bangalees in Pakistan, 260,000 Pakistanis in Bangladesh and 90,000 Pakistani POWs and civilian internees in India. Rather than make an issue of the small number wanted for trials in Bangladesh, the more constructive approach would be to relieve the suffering and anxiety of the hundreds of thousands of individuals in the three categories by bringing about their simultaneous repatriation in accordance with the Joint Declaration.

8. Pakistan Government’s threat to start retaliatory trials of some Bangalees in Pakistan clearly shows in advance their utter disregard for principles of justice and reveals their desire to wreck vengeance on the innocent. The Bangalees in Pakistan can hardly be treated on the same footing as the 195 soldiers wanted by Bangladesh against whom there is clear evidence of involvement in heinous crimes, such as murder, rape, etc. The world at large is already aware of the magnitude and nature of crimes committed by Pakistani soldiers in the campaign of 1971.
9. In their two Aides Memoire, the Government of Pakistan have alleged that the proposed repatriation of Pakistanis in Bangladesh to their homes in Pakistan is an attempt by Bangladesh to “expel” a so-called “linguistic, ethnic or political minority”. Facts contradict and expose the hollowness of this claim. Out of a total of approximately 600,000 non-Bangalees, the majority have decided to stay on in Bangladesh, thanks to the statesmanlike and humane policy followed by Bangladesh Government. Only an estimated 250,000 have declared their allegiance to Pakistan and are desirous of repatriation to Pakistan. The allegation of arbitrary expulsion of these persons and of option taken under duress in unfounded.

10. It is strange logic to state that while Pakistan Government “recognizes the right of Bangalees to leave Pakistan if they so wish”, Pakistan is not prepared to fulfill its obligation towards its own nationals stranded in Bangladesh who have voluntarily declared their allegiance to Pakistan and have asked for repatriation. In this context, Pakistan’s contention that the repatriation of Pakistan nationals from Bangladesh would constitute a “burden” is not understood. Pakistan has also overlooked the fact that India had to face the burden of looking after millions of refugees at the time of partition and this process continued, particularly on the Eastern side, for a number of years. Subsequently, when the Pakistan Army started their campaign of terror against the civilian population in East Bengal in March 1971, India had to give shelter to millions of refugees. Later, Bangladesh was faced with the task of rehabilitating these millions. If the Pakistan Government is genuinely interested in normalizing the situation in the sub-continent, the resettlement of some 250,000 of its citizens repatriated from Bangladesh should not be considered an exceptional burden, especially when 400000 Bangalees in Pakistan will simultaneously be repatriated to Bangladesh.

11. The contention made in paragraphs 13 to 17 of Pakistan’s Aide Memoire of May 25, alleging that India had not furnished the list of women and children desirous of repatriation, is also contrary to facts. This has been dealt with in a separate communication dated May 30, 1973 to the Government of Pakistan, a copy of which is enclosed*.

Minister of External Affairs
June 7, 1973

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmad,

Thank you for your letter of June 4 and regarding the over flights case. We are glad to note that you are now agreeable to the ICAO Council deferring consideration of the case so that bilateral negotiations between us can commence. We presume therefore, that on the receipt of this letter you will be formally requesting the President of the ICAO Council for the deferment of this case. Meanwhile, we are writing to the President of the ICAO Council also to indicate that in view of your letter, we are desirous of deferment of this case so that bilateral negotiations can commence. On receiving confirmation from the ICAO Council that this case has been deferred, a date can be fixed according to mutual convenience for a bilateral meeting. We would appreciate receiving confirmation telegraphically of the action taken by you.

Yours sincerely

0784. Letter of External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to the Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs regarding POWs.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmed,

Your letter of 16th May, 1973, has been with us for some time. Our reply has unfortunately been delayed. This is partly due to the contradictory positions which your Government has conveyed to us in the course of the last month on the Joint India-Bangladesh Declaration of April 17. When your letter of 16th May reached us we appreciated your clarifying that the issues which faced us were “basically humanitarian” and that your Government was ready “to approach the question of repatriation of prisoners of war and that of Banglees respectively from purely humanitarian angle”. You had further stated that your invitation to our representative to discuss these issues did not imply that our representative would discuss the POW question only.

2. A few days earlier, we had received your Government’s Aide Memoire dated 11th May officially communicated through Swiss Diplomatic channels. This Aide Memoire was to say the least not only offensive in tone but reveals a negative attitude towards the solution contained in paragraph 5 of the India-Bangladesh Declaration. For instance, it is alleged that “the so-called Joint Command was a myth and Bangladesh has no locus standi in regard to the Pakistan POWs held in India and she has no right to try them”. Then again it stated “India cannot claim any say in the matter of repatriation of Bengalees from Pakistan or of Pakistanis from Bangladesh. The questions are of Pakistan-Bangladesh concern and Pakistan has been ready to enter into discussions with Dacca authorities on these questions”.

3. While we were naturally surprised on being confronted with these categorical assertions in the note of 11th May, we were willing to consider the possibility that your letter of 16th May, and the assurance contained therein on specific issues, perhaps superseded the contents of the Aide Memoire of 11th May. However, our hopes were totally belied when we received your second Aide memoire dated 25th May which your Government chose to hand over to the Swiss Foreign Minister in Berne for transmission to us. In the circumstances, we can hardly be blamed for taking note of the contents of this Aide Memoire which was issued later than your letter of 16th May. What are we to make of this official communication which blatantly accuses us of rejecting Pakistan Government’s invitation to send our representative to Pakistan for discussion?
You would agree that this observation completely ignores my letter of 8th May to you in which we had suggested a certain basis for making the talks purposeful and fruitful. Then again a totally unfounded charge is made against us that in our reply further negotiations on the question of the repatriation of Pakistani POWs have been made conditional on Pakistan’s prior acceptance of certain “Indian demands”. I need hardly emphasize that the India-Bangladesh Declaration makes no demands. It only suggests a practical and equitable solution for resolving all the humanitarian issues arising out of the 1971 conflict simultaneously. We sincerely believe that under existing circumstances when there are unresolved political issues, and Bangladesh is not recognized by Pakistan, this is the only way in which those humanitarian issues can be resolved simultaneously.

4. In this context we (are) greatly surprised to note Pakistan’s observation in the Aide Memoire dated 11th May that India cannot claim any say in the matter of repatriation of Bengalees from Pakistan or of Pakistan from Bangladesh. Pakistan is no doubt aware of the stand of the Bangladesh Government that they will not enter into talks with Pakistan except on the basis of sovereign equality. The joint India-Bangladesh Declaration, however, does provide a framework for a solution for all humanitarian issues arising out of the 1971 conflict without prejudice to the respective position of the parties concerned. Consequently, if our representatives are to discuss the resolution of these humanitarian issues, the Joint India-Bangladesh Declaration provides the basis.

5. You will no doubt agree that in order to create conditions for a fruitful meeting of the representatives of India and Pakistan, the shadow cast by the two Aides Memoire should be removed and the Government of Pakistan should clarify whether it is prepared to discuss the simultaneous repatriation of Pakistani POWs and civilian internees, the Bengalees and the Pakistanis. On our part, I reaffirm our readiness to hold talks on this basis with the representatives of the Government of Pakistan.

Yours sincerely,

(Sd) Swaran Singh.

0785. Note of the Embassy of Switzerland transmitting a note from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan protesting about the alleged transfer of some Pakistani PoWs to Bangladesh.

New Delhi, June 18, 1973.

Ambassade De Suisse

The Embassy of Switzerland, Pakistan Affairs Division, presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India and has the honour to transmit the text of the following note of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan dated June 16, 1973:

“The Government of Pakistan has seen a news item with a photograph in the Morning News, Dacca, dated May 3, showing some members of the East Pakistan Civil Armed Forces who were under detention in India.

The Government of Pakistan strongly protest against this unwarranted action of the Government of India for which there is no justification whatever. The Government of Pakistan urges the Government of India to put an immediate stop to the transfer of any Pakistani prisoners of war from India to Bangladesh. It is hardly necessary to add that such transfers would jeopardize the prospect of normalization of the situation in the sub-continent”.

The Embassy of Switzerland avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India the assurances of its highest consideration.

SECRET

Extracts from the Record of discussions between Dr. Henry Kissinger and the Indian Ambassador T.N. Kaul at the latter’s Residence.

After the initial courtesies, Dr. Kissinger said that the President had planned to receive the Ambassador earlier but was waiting for Dr. Kissinger to be available. He had just returned from Paris and was going to Camp David on Sunday for discussions with Secretary Brezhnev. The President would probably stay on the West Coast after the Brezhnev visit and it might be possible to arrange a meeting there or in Washington around July 10. The President had received the Prime Minister’s letter and was planning to send her a note to await her arrival at Lake Placid.

2. The Ambassador said he was proceeding to Ottawa tomorrow and would report to the Prime Minister on his meetings with the President and Dr. Kissinger. He then went on to say that we had got over the heat generated by the events of 1971 and so had the U.S. We would like to concentrate on the present and the future.

3. Dr. Kissinger said that US actions in 1971 were reactions to a tactical situations and were not in accordance with any fundamental US interest.

4. The Ambassador said that when they had last met, Dr. Kissinger had briefed him on Sino-US relations and dropped a hint about a possible visit to China. But, unfortunately, he had missed the point. He remembered that Dr. Kissinger had then remarked that the US was interested in a strong and stable India and did not want Chinese domination in the Asian region. Dr. Kissinger confirmed that this still remained true.

5. The Ambassador said that we welcomed the American détente with China and the Soviet Union and hoped that this would have a favourable fall out in other regions including South Asia.

6. Dr. Kissinger said that he saw no difficulties. The US was no longer in mortal competition with the Soviet Union. They, therefore, accepted that each country should choose its own foreign policy and would not force any choice on India. The only factor was that there should be mutuality of interests. The US had been trying to use its influence with the Chinese to improve their relations with India. He believed that there had been some improvements.

7. The Ambassador said that there had been some improvement in the style but not in the substance of the relationship. There had been no concrete response to the feelers that India had put out to China. Perhaps they were waiting for a normalization of relations between India and Pakistan. Dr. Kissinger agreed that improvement between India and Pakistan would certainly make the situation easier for the Chinese.

8. The Ambassador said that we were making every effort in this direction. We had succeeded in persuading Bangladesh to give up its pre-condition of recognition by Pakistan, and in the Joint Declaration of April 17, we had tried to separate the humanitarian issues from the legal and political issues.

9. Dr. Kissinger said he felt that it should be possible to arrange for a simultaneous recognition of Bangladesh with the return of POWs.

10. The Ambassador remarked that the contents of the latest communications with Pakistan belied this hope. (At this point Dr. Kissinger was given the two Pakistani Aide Memoires and he read through them).

11. He then said that when President Bhutto comes here Kissinger will certainly use US influence to get him to agree to a simultaneous recognition and return of the POWs. Did we feel that this was an appropriate solution?

12. The Ambassador said that following recognition Pakistan could talk directly to Bangladesh on the question of the repatriation of the Bengalis in Pakistan and the Pakistanis in Bangladesh, and on the question of the war-crime trials. We would be quite happy to see this happen. But the question of POWs could not be dealt with in isolation. It had to be dealt with simultaneously with the Bengalis in Pakistan and the Pakistanis in Bangladesh.

13. Dr. Kissinger asked whether the war-crime trials were an absolute necessity. The Ambassador said that his personal feeling was that some arrangements were possible in this regard. Bangladesh was obliged to carry out the trials because of public feeling, but the prisoners could, after trial, perhaps, be externed to Pakistan for the execution of their sentences. He emphasized that he had no authority to put this forward but this was a personal assessment he had made. What was important was that there should be simultaneous movement of all three categories, viz., POWs, the Bengalis and the so-called Biharies. When Dr. Kissinger asked whether this meant that this would be an exchange of Bengalis and Biharis when Dr. Kissinger asked whether this meant that this would be an exchange of Bangalis and Biharis when Dr. Kissinger asked whether this meant that this would be an exchange of Bangalis and Biharis when Dr. Kissinger asked whether this meant that this would be an exchange of Bangalis and Biharis when Dr. Kissinger asked whether this meant that this would be an exchange of Bangalis and Biharis when Dr. Kissinger asked whether this meant that this would be an exchange of Bangalis and Biharis when Dr. Kissinger asked whether this meant that this would be an exchange of Bangalis and Biharis and that the POWs would also be then returned at the same time, the Ambassador confirmed his impression. He pointed out that the so-called Biharis in question were Pakistani nationals-- those who wanted to go back and had opted for Pakistan and represented less than half the total number in Bangladesh.
14. The Ambassador pointed out that we had been somewhat surprised by the delay in recognition as Bhutto had more or less told us in Simla that he would recognize Bangladesh in July or August 1972. Dr. Kissinger confirmed that he had also had the same impression. The Ambassador mentioned that there had been some Press reports that Bhutto had discussed this at a PPP meeting in Nathiaglai (a place well known to Kissinger) (in Murree) and had obtained the silent approval of half the members present for giving him the authority to recognize Bangladesh, but had opposed a referendum on the subject. May be he was serious; maybe he was not. One could not be certain about Mr. Bhutto.

15. Dr. Kissinger said that they would certainly talk to Present Bhutto on this subject. They also seemed to have some indication that Bhutto might consider early recognition of Bangladesh.

16. The Ambassador said that when he had met Assistant Secretary Sisco, the later had mentioned to him the feeling that he had noticed amongst certain neighbours of India apprehensions about the threat from a strong India. He hoped that this assessment was not shared by the White House. Our relations with Bhutan, Nepal, Sri Lanka, Burma and Afghanistan were good. In fact, the real fears in this region were in respect of China and not in respect of India. Recently when the Foreign Minister had been to Rangoon, the Burmese had given him details of Chinese intervention and interference in their affairs.

17. Dr. Kissinger said that one could only be judged by one's actions. India was a major country in South Asia. He certainly saw no military threat from India to Ceylon or Nepal.

18. The Ambassador said that we had perhaps the greatest stake in the stability, cohesion and prosperity of Pakistan than anyone else. It was to help Bhutto, as the first democratically elected leader, that we had made concessions at Simla. We had done this in spite of strong domestic opposition to withdrawals from Pakistani territory.

19. Dr. Kissinger said that the Pakistanis had leveled accusations against us for encouraging separatist tendencies, for instance in Baluchistan. The Ambassador explained that we could not have any physical contact with either Baluchistan or the frontier province, because of geography. It had been clearly accepted by everybody including Pakistan that there was no Indian collusion in the foreign arms which had been discovered in the Iraqi Embassy in Islamabad. In any case, what would be gained by such efforts? Dr. Kissinger said that it had been said that many Indians had never accepted partition. The Ambassador said that some right wing groups such as the Jan Sangh may have articulated such a position in the past. However, even they were now reconciled. The Government of India had at no time been interested in such an idea whether it was Pakistan or Bangladesh. Our Prime Minister had made this quite clear publicly before, during and after the 1971 conflict- even at the National Press Club here in Washington. We had enough domestic problems of our own and we would not increase them by any such merger. Dr. Kissinger jocularly remarked that Bangladesh was a loser.

20. The Ambassador said that he would like to emphasize that our objective was that Pakistan should emerge as a stable and viable unit with whom we could have increasing trade, economic and cultural exchanges. We would like to extend this even further to include Iran. It was true that Iran had certain misgivings. The Ambassador explained that these were partly due to the isolation of the Shah, his advisers only allowed a Pakistani version to reach him. When he had met Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan in Geneva, he had also pointed this out. The principal adviser was Zahedi, who was now Ambassador to the US and had been the Foreign Minister. When he (the Ambassador) had called on the Shah before the 1971 conflict, the Shah had been non-committal about Iran’s support for Pakistan, but Zahedi had stated categorically that they had sent arms in 1965, and they would send arms now. Nevertheless, we hope to build up our relations with Iran. We have one functioning joint venture and we would like to have more. We had sent Mr. Haksar to Tehran to explain the position. It was in Iran’s own interest that there should be friendship between Iran, Pakistan and India. The Shah had some fears of Iraq and the Baluchi minority in Iran but India had no designs on him or on Pakistan territory.

21. Dr. Kissinger said that they too had had the impression that India’s intervention in West Pakistan was intended to further dismember Pakistan. Perhaps this had been a mistake. Ambassador explained that we never had any such designs. We had, in fact, made public statements to this effect before the actual fighting started in 1971. It was also incorrect to say that we had refrained from further action in West Pakistan because of Russian pressure. The Russians had never conveyed any suggestion to us in this regard.

22. Dr. Kissinger said that US interest was that there should be good relations between India and her neighbours including Iran.

23. The Ambassador said that during his term as Ambassador in Tehran, relations with Iran had been excellent and if Iran had fears of her Arab neighbours, friendship with India might be a stabilizing influence. Dr. Kissinger enquired how this could be achieved when Iran saw her main threat as coming from the Soviets and the Soviets having links with Iraq and India. The Ambassador explained that the answer to this lay in establishing friendly relations with all her neighbours. We had no quarrel with Iran obtaining arms in connection with her own security. But we were concerned that these arms could easily be transferred to Pakistan. It had created considerable concern among the India public, Parliament and the Press. We had sought assurances but had not received them. In fact, Deputy Secretary Rush had said that no permanent assurances were possible.

24. When Dr. Kissinger said that he thought that there were severe restrictions on the transfer of such arms, the Ambassador told him that there had been transfers of arms from Iraq during 1971 and even tanks had been transferred in 1972. The Ambassador said that we would like to have credible assurances, and he had put this point to Secretary Rogers, who had promised to consider it.

25. The Ambassador pointed out that our main concern was that the availability of arms would strengthen militaristic and anti-Indian groups on Pakistan and weaken the democratic forces. This would be against the interests not only of India but also Pakistan and the US.

26. Dr. Kissinger said that US was now more aloof from the evolution of the sub-continent. They did not intend to send any large scale arms to Pakistan, apart from spares He promised to look further into this matter.

27. The Ambassador and Dr. Kissinger compared notes about common acquaintances in China. The Ambassador then asked Dr. Kissinger for his assessment of the Chinese attitude towards India. Dr. Kissinger said that Chinese were emotional about India. This may be partly due to their relationship with Pakistan. He also believed that it was due to the arrogant treatment to some of their leaders in India in 1960, 1961 and 1962. They also believed that India was acting as a Russian puppet in the pursuit of Soviet foreign policy objectives. For instance, should India sign a treaty with Indonesia of a nature similar to the Soviet treaty, the Chinese would see that as a treaty bringing the Soviet Union into Indonesia.

28. The Ambassador explained that Prime Minster Nehru had never taken a hard line with China. They had themselves roused strong feelings because of their somersault in their attitude towards the McMahon line in 1960 and their armed incursions into Indian territory. The Indo-Soviet treaty was not a military alliance and we had, in fact, offered to have similar treaties with other countries. However, as President Nixon had pointed out in 1971, there was no need for such a treaty between India and the US. Pandit Nehru had declared even in 1960, when Chou En-lai visited India that one of the corner-stones of our foreign policy was that we should work for friendly relations between India and China.

44. The Ambassador agreed. He said that he hoped that there will be no setback to the dialogue by an unnecessary quantity of arms going to Pakistan. Dr. Kissinger said that they had no further intentions of supplying arms to Pakistan.

45. The Ambassador gave details of the increase in the Pakistani army strength and their capacity to draw upon friendly Islamic countries which made them much stronger than they were in 1971. We were genuinely concerned that the acquisition of these arms would lead them to some misadventure even if it was suicidal. Our hope was that we could build up a cooperative relationship between Iran, Pakistan, India and Bangladesh which would reduce or eliminate all external domination or pressures and this would be consistent with US interests. Dr. Kissinger said that they also had the same outlook towards the region.

46. The meeting concluded with usual expression of greetings. Dr. Kissinger asked the Ambassador to ring him up or his office any time he wanted the white House to do anything.

0787. Letter from the Indian Ambassador in the United States to the Soviet Ambassador regarding possibility of discussions on the Indian Sub-continent between President Nixon and Secretary General Brezhnev.

Dear Mr. Ambassador,

During my last meeting with you, I raised the question whether the situation on the Indian sub-continent was likely to be discussed between Secretary-General Brezhnev and President Nixon. I enclose a brief Note emphasizing the main points in this regard, without entering into the details. I was hesitant to send it to you at this time when you are so busy, but I feel I should now send it to you in view of the reported remarks of the Foreign Minister of China regarding Iran’s role in the Gulf. (Please see report in the CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR of Tuesday, June 19, 1973 under the caption “Peking swings support to Iran”). It is likely that the Chinese Foreign Minister may make even stronger Noises in Pakistan, where he has gone from Tehran. You must have already seen detailed reports on the subject and I need not say more.

2. Please convey my respectful regards to Secretary-General Brezhnev and best wishes for the success of his visit which, I am sure, will contribute to lessening of international tensions and strengthening the forces of peace in the world.

With regards,

Yours sincerely

(T.N. Kaul)

His Excellency Mr. A.P. Dobrynin,
Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, 1125, 16th Street, N.W.
Washington D.C.

Enclosure to T. N. Kaul’s letter.

The Simla Agreement reached in July 1972 by the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan was the first evidence of a change of attitude from confrontation and conflict towards negotiation and cooperation. The basis was a peaceful resolution of problems by discussions bilaterally. It was welcomed by almost all countries including the United States and U.S.S.R. Especially important, it was welcomed by the people of Pakistan, India and Bangladesh.

2. Despite some difficulties, progress has been made in returning Pakistan territory, the exchange of prisoners of war taken on the western front, and on establishing a line of control in Jammu & Kashmir. India’s efforts to make further progress in building up other areas of bilateral cooperation with Pakistan have met with little success. India intends to persist in these efforts.

3. Pakistan had agreed at Simla in July and reiterated in the Delhi Conference in August 1972 to consider early recognition of Bangladesh. They have failed to do so. On the contrary, they have indulged in propaganda against India on the question of the remaining prisoners of war seeking to turn international opinion in their favour. This is contrary to their agreement not to poison the atmosphere by such propaganda and also contrary to their agreement at Simla and Delhi that Bangladesh was a concerned party to the release of the prisoners of war. At their instance, China vetoed the admission of Bangladesh to the United Nations although Bangladesh is recognized by an overwhelming number of the members of that body.

4. After the Bangladesh elections in March 1973, the Governments of India and Bangladesh decided that despite Pakistan’s intransigence, efforts should continue to maintain the Simla spirit. Accordingly, they decided to separate the humanitarian issues from the political and legal issues. In a joint Declaration on April 17, they offered to resolve all these issues simultaneously incorporating most points earlier made by President Bhutto himself. Pakistan’s response has been deliberately confusing and self-contradictory. While offering to discuss the declaration, they have also sought to make a legal case for separating and dealing with the prisoners of war issues in isolation. They have also sought to raise in the International Court of Justice the question of restraining India from returning to Bangladesh the small number of 195 prisoners of war who are to be tried under criminal charges.

5. India and Bangladesh are confident that in the long term there can only be increasing and fruitful cooperation among the governments and peoples of the sub-continent. The stand taken by Pakistan can only delay the final achievement of this inevitable goal. However, the quicker Pakistan recognizes the realities and joins in constructive efforts to solve the problems of the sub-continent the greater the advantages will be to all, including Pakistan. India has the greatest interest in the establishment of a peaceful, friendly, stable and viable Pakistan on her borders.

6. Pakistan’s attitude is partly due to domestic factors. There are vested interests in maintaining a confrontation with India particularly among the military and the bureaucracy. There is reason to believe they do not really want the prisoners of war back as they might be embarrassed and exposed. However, public opinion in Pakistan has been in favour of the Simla spirit, in favour of recognition of Bangladesh and in favour of accepting the Joint Declaration. The reactionary circles have been receiving considerable support from China, from Iran and some Islamic countries in the shape of diplomatic and political support and military supplies. The U.S. decision to lift the embargo on arms supplies will also strengthen these forces. U.S. aid is also useful in providing the foreign exchange for purchases from other countries. Pakistan’s massive arms buildup could have serious consequences for the sub-continent. While India could eventually deal with any military threat, this could mean an arms race which would adversely affect the social and economic development of both countries. Also as Bangladesh has shown, the encouragement of the anti-Indian militaristic forces in Pakistan leads to developments within Pakistan which could permanently damage her own internal stability.

7. It is, therefore, the responsibility of all countries who have any influence with Pakistan to urge that government to abandon its methods of confrontation and military buildup, to come back to the path of negotiation and to recognize the new realities.

Dear Sardar Swaran Singh,

I am in receipt of your letter of 11th June, in reply to my letter to you of 16th May.

2. At the outset I should like to reiterate, what I had stated in my letter of 16th May, that we have been ready at all times and, still are – to approach the question of repatriation of POWs and that of Bengalis and Pak nationals stranded in Pakistan and Bangladesh respectively from a pure humanitarian angle. The two Aide Memories, dated 11th May and 25th May, to which you refer, were not meant for transmission to the Government of India. Apparently they were transmitted to your Government through some misunderstandings and I am still trying to find out who was responsible. I trust that this explanation would remove “the shadows” to which you have referred in the concluding para of your letter.

3. My letter of 16th May clearly implied that we would be prepared to discuss not only the question of repatriation of Pak POW and civilian internees but also other issues mentioned in your statement of 17th April 1973. This still remains our position.

4. We suggest, subject to the convenience of your Government, the talks may start on this basis between the representatives of the Governments of India and Pakistan in Karachi on 9th July.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely

Aziz Ahmed

Letter from the External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to the Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs in reply to the latter’s letter of June 23, 1973.

New Delhi July 3, 1973

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmed,

Thank you for your letter dated 23rd June in reply to mine of 11th June.

2. We have noted your clarification that the two aide memoire, dated 11th May and 25th May, were sent to us inadvertently and that your Government’s position is as stated in your letter of 16th May namely, that you are ready to approach the question of repatriation of POWs and that of Bangalees and Pakistani nationals stranded in Pakistan and Bangladesh respectively, from a purely humanitarian angle. As already mentioned in my earlier communication to you, in our view, talks can lead to quick results if, in accordance with the Joint India-Bangladesh Declaration, the repatriation of these three categories of persons takes place simultaneously.

3. In the circumstances, it would be useful for the representatives of the two Governments to meet in the near future to discuss the problems and modalities relating to the repatriation of the three categories of individuals indicated in the Joint Declaration of April 17, 1973.

4. As to the venue for the talks we would have gladly accepted Karachi but for the fact that this would pose a certain practical difficulty. As you are aware, the issues to be discussed in these talks are also of vital concern for Bangladesh Government, and this would require the necessity of urgent consultations by the Indian delegation with the Government of Bangladesh. For obvious reasons, if the talks are held at Karachi, such consultations will not be possible. We would, therefore, hope that under these special circumstances, your Government would be good enough to agree to the talks being held in New Delhi. Further, we hope that instead of 9th July, as suggested by you, we could commence the talks a week later on the 16th July. This would enable us to hold prior consultations with the Bangladesh Government, which are necessary for the success of the talks.

5. We shall await your confirmation that the changed venue and date is convenient to the Pakistan Government.

Yours sincerely,

(Sd) Swaran Singh

0790. Letter from Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed to Swaran Singh, Foreign Minister, Government of India.

Dear Sardar Swaran Singh,

Thank you for your message of July 3, in reply to my letter of June 23,

1. I regret the date suggested by you for the talks will not be suitable. The President will be in the United States at that time and I will be accompanying him.

2. As regards the venue, we feel that it is our turn to have the opportunity to play host and that the talks should be held in Pakistan. In order that your representatives may be able to communicate with New Delhi and Bangladesh Government more easily, the talks can be held in Islamabad or Murree. In either case necessary facilities will be available.

3. If it is convenient to your Government, the talks may commence on July 28.

Yours sincerely,
(Sd) Aziz Ahmed,

0791. Resolution of Pakistan National Assembly dated July 9, 1973, on recognition of Bangladesh.

The National Assembly, believing that the spirit of Muslim brotherhood should govern relationships between the people of Pakistan and those of the area which now calls itself Bangladesh acclaims all efforts directed towards the healing of wounds suffered by both communities in the tragic events of 1971. The Assembly is confident that mutual forgiveness and understanding will eventually prevail over rancour and hate which democratic and progressive elements in both communities deeply deplore. In this context the National Assembly endorses the stand taken by the Government with respect to immediate issues which need to be resolved for the normalization of the situation on the subcontinent.

The Assembly is convinced that the prerequisite to such normalization is the

The Assembly strongly supports the Government’s position on the issue of holding trials, some among prisoners of war and civilian internees, on alleged criminal charges and urges all concerned to respond to the needs of reconciliation by refraining from holding any such trials, which would cause a grave setback in efforts being made towards normalization of the situation on the subcontinent.

In accordance with these principles the assembly is of the opinion that the Government of Pakistan may accord formal recognition to Bangladesh and initiate such constitutional measures as may be necessary therefore, at a time when in the judgement of the Government, such recognition is in the best national interests of Pakistan and will promote fraternal relationships between the two communities.

0792. Letter from the External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to the Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs regarding the proposed meeting between the two countries to resolve the humanitarian issues.

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmed,

I have your message of July 5. When we have suggested New Delhi as the venue for the meeting of our representatives, we were guided entirely by the imperative need for close and continuous consultations with Bangladesh on all matters arising out of the discussions. Although you have been good enough to offer communication facilities, you will appreciate the delays and difficulties which will arise. However, since the question of having the venue in Pakistan is of importance to you, we are quite ready to send our representatives to Karachi or Islamabad. As for the date of the meeting, I am afraid July 28 has a serious disadvantage because both the Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Bangladesh will be away from Dacca from July 26 till about August 12 as they will be visiting Yugoslavia and thereafter they will be in Ottawa to attend the meeting of Heads of Government of Commonwealth countries. With them away, the problem of maintaining contacts with them, let alone consulting with them, which is essential, will be as you can imagine, extremely difficult. In the circumstances I suggest that if it is convenient to you, our representatives might meet either at New Delhi, as we have proposed, or in Karachi or Islamabad, as you suggest, on July 24. If President Bhutto and you are due to return to Pakistan on an earlier date, we shall be ready to send our delegation on that date. I might perhaps at this stage indicate that our delegation will be led by Shri P.N.Haksar, who has the status of Minister of State.

Yours sincerely,
Sd/- Swaran Singh.

H.E. Mr. Aziz Ahmed,
Minister of State for Defence & Foreign Affairs,
Government of Pakistan, Islamabad.

Dear Sardar Swaran Singh,

Thank you for your message of 10th July which reached me this morning. I am sending this reply immediately as I am to proceed abroad tomorrow morning.

I was scheduled to come back on 27th July. However, I have decided to cut short my visit abroad and shall return to Islamabad in time to receive Mr. P. N. Haksar and his colleagues for the talks on 24th July, as suggested by you.

We would have also like to comply with your wish that we come over to New Delhi but, you will appreciate, my tour programme is so tight that it would not be possible for me to reach New Delhi on 24th July. I hope, therefore, that it would not be too inconvenient for your Government if the talks are held in Islamabad.

Yours sincerely,
Sd/- Aziz Ahmed,

Extract from the Telegram from Ambassador in the United States T. N. Kaul to Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh.

Foreign Secretary from Ambassador/ Personal.

(Repeated Secretary to Prime Minister)

I met Kissinger for over an hour in his office today at his request. Gonsalves accompanied me. Detailed report follows by bag. Following were main points discussed:

Summit

2. Kissinger confirmed by and large Dobrynin’s version conveyed in my earlier telegram. He said that situation in sub-continent was discussed in a general way and US urged mutual restraint by both super powers. Gulf situation was not discussed. He did not attach too much importance to doubts and suspicions in Western Europe although France was a special case. West Germany was also concerned about possible reduction of US forces. However, as Kissinger said “These fears are unjustified. Summit Agreement aims at Prevention of war and does not lay down manner in which war, if it breaks out, should be conducted. It safeguards position of allies of either party. The only obligation is that of consultations”. I told him we were, on the whole, satisfied with the summit agreement as published. It was an improvement on the Shanghai communique which had unfortunately made a reference to “self-determination in Kashmir” and “legitimate interests of China in South Asia”. He took my remarks in good spirit and said he was glad to find that India had no misgivings about either party carving spheres of influence. I told him that the stage of super powers or great powers carving out spheres of influence had passed.

Sub-Continent:

3. Kissinger welcomed forthcoming Indo-Pak meeting on 24th July. He hoped postponement of Bhutto’s visit to USA would not affect meeting. I expressed hope that in spite of postponement, US would exert its influence on Bhutto to make positive response to Joint Indo-Bangladesh declaration of 17th April at forthcoming meeting. He said US fully supported Simla spirit and hoped the meeting would achieve positive results. He added that Dacca trials appeared to be mini stumbling block. I replied it was a matter to be settled between Bangladesh and Pakistan. I expressed my personal impression that if Bhutto recognised Bangladesh it might facilitate solution of this problem. He asked if he could convey this to Pakistan. I said I had no authority from my Government and none at all from Bangladesh to convey any specific suggestions. It was merely my personal impression and neither India nor I should be quoted but if Kissinger agreed with this impression he might convey it as his own to Pakistan. Bangladesh Foreign Minister had however repeated recently that trials would be held. They were suspicious of Bhutto’s intention to really recognise Bangladesh. If Bhutto made gesture it was possible it might allay suspicions of Bangladesh to some extent. I made it clear that this was my personal impression and not based on anything I had heard from my Government or from Bangladesh.

India-Iran-Pakistan-Bangladesh:

4. I explained that we had no conflict of interests with Iran. We did not wish any instability or fragmentation of Pakistan. Iranian or Pakistani suspicions and fears in this regard were totally unjustified. We would like to see an area of peace and cooperation between Bangladesh, India, Pakistan and Iran. I expressed it as my personal opinion that perhaps some kind of understanding between the four on the lines of Panch Sheel might be desirable. Kissinger reacted positively to this suggestion and asked whether he could suggest to the Shah to make such a proposal as if it came from the Shah himself. I said we did not wish to claim credit for any ideas and if the Shah would sponsor such an idea we would certainly consider it. I explained however that this was only my personal idea and I had not cleared it with my Government. I was wanting to get his response first. Since his response was positive I would communicate it to my Government.

Gulf:

5. I told Kissinger that large scale injection of arms to some countries of the Gulf by USA was likely to encourage injection of arms to other countries by other powers. We had no desire to take sides in internecine quarrels of the Arab countries in general and the Gulf countries in particular. An international agreement ensuring respect for the territorial, sovereignty and independence of the Gulf countries guaranteed by USA, USSR and possibly India, Pakistan and Iran might be worth considering. He asked what the Russian response would be. I said they were likely to look upon it with suspicion but in my personal opinion it would be in line with the spirit of détente that had set in. He expressed the opinion that if Russia came in, China might also have to be brought in. I said that was up to China and the other powers concerned but if China and Russia both came in, it might complicate matters.

He then asked if Iran could be treated as a Gulf country. I said it was definitely a Gulf country. He said he would think about the idea. I expressed my personal opinion that injection of arms in Gulf would create tensions and might lead to another Vietnam in the Gulf area if an arms race took place there. Surely it was worth while considering ways and means of preventing another Vietnam situation arising in this area. I pointed out in particular the danger of giving arms like Phantoms which had a range of 1500 miles to Iran. We were particularly concerned because in 1965 and 1971 arms as well as aeroplanes had been passed on by Iran to Pakistan. He feigned ignorance about the supply of Phantoms to Iran and asked Saunders, who was also present, if this was so. Saunders confirmed that Iran had already two squadrons of Phantoms and was to get six more. I added that a credible assurance that US arms would not be passed to third countries would go some way in allaying our apprehensions, though such assurances could not be 100 percent foolproof. He said he was going to meet the Shah alone and would impress on him to assure India, apart from US assurance, that arms would not be passed by Iran to Pakistan. I told him that I had known the Shah personally and if he thought it would serve any useful purpose I would be glad to meet him during his visit to Washington. He suggested that I ask the Iranian Ambassador to fix an appointment for me. I said I would think it over. Kindly let me know whether I should make such a request or not.

(Other issues discussed were Cambodia, PL—480, Rescheduling of Debts, Food imports, Development assistance, etc.)

0795. Press Conference of Pakistan’s Attorney General Yahaya Bakhtiar on Pakistan’s withdrawal of its request to the International Court of Justice.

Pakistan has withdrawn its request to the World Court here for interim measures of protection against India in her dispute about prisoners of war because the two countries’ Foreign Minister are starting talks on the issue in Pakistan on July 24, Pakistan Attorney-General Yahaya Bakhtiar said at The Hague.

Speaking at a press conference at the Pakistan Embassy the Attorney-General said the talks between the two countries might last until September and October. If the outcome was favourable Bangladesh might be invited to take part. This would in fact amount to a de facto recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan, Mr. Bakhtiar said.
He said that India was only willing to repatriate 92,000 Pakistani prisoners of war (80,000 soldiers and 12,000 relatives including 6,500 children), provided that West Pakistan not only allowed the Bengalis to go to Bangladesh but was also prepared to absorb the non-Bengalis. According to the Government of Bangladesh these amounted to 160,000 West Pakistanis. But according to the Pakistan Government this group amounted to many hundreds of thousands of persons, perhaps even millions, who had left for the new state from India and Burma and who had no ties whatsoever with West Pakistan.

Attorney General Bakhtiar said that Pakistan was prepared to absorb part of these people, but certainly not all of them. They should also be enabled to settle in Bangladesh and India, he added.

He said India had told the World Court in a letter that it was willing to solve the dispute with Pakistan peacefully and bilaterally.

Mr. Bakhtiar said Pakistan was willing to recognize Bangladesh provided the prisoners of war are repatriated. Both parties had committed war crimes, but it was not right to select 195 Pakistan prisoners of war and blame them, while Pakistan itself was holding former President Yahya Khan and the former Chief of Staff of the Army prisoner pending an investigation. In the mean time Bangladesh itself did not allow an investigation into the war crimes committed by the followers of Mujibur Rahman—the ‘Mukti Bahini’, the Attorney General said.

0796. TOP SECRET

Note recorded by Joint Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistan’s likely stand on the Joint India—Bangladesh Declaration during the forthcoming Talks at Islamabad on July 24, 1973.

President Bhutto’s recent statements and those of his spokesmen provide a good indication of Pakistan’s likely stand at the forthcoming talks. A brief subject wise analysis of these statements together with additional information gathered from intelligence and diplomatic sources is given below:

While in Mr. Aziz Ahmed’s letter of 16th May he had indicated Pakistan’s willingness to discuss the repatriation of the three categories of persons, namely, Pakistani POWs in India and Bangladesh and Pakistan nationals in Pakistan and Bangladesh respectively, there was no indication that Pakistan would necessarily accept the idea of simultaneous repatriation. In fact indications are that Pakistan is desperately keen to avoid an interlinking of the POWs and Bangalees with the return of Pakistanis from Bangladesh. It is reliably learnt that at a recent meeting arranged under the World Bank auspices in Washington to discuss the division of assets and liabilities the Pakistan representative took the opportunity of discussing with his Bangladesh counterpart the problems of the three-way exchange proposed in the Indo-Bangladesh Declaration. The suggestions made by the Pakistan representative were on the following lines:

i) The question of repatriation of ‘Biharis to Pakistan should, for the time being, be delinked from the offer of the three-way exchange, and, to begin with, the exchange should be only a two-way one involving the return of the Pakistani POWs in India against the repatriation of Bangalees detained in Pakistan;

ii) Pakistan is willing to implement this two-way exchange beginning from the first week of August 1973;

iii) Pakistan is prepared to accept the retention, for the time being in India, of 195 Pakistani POWs required for trial if Bangladesh also agrees to put off the simultaneous repatriation of ‘Biharis’ to Pakistan. The ‘Biharis’ in Bangladesh could at a later stage be sent to Pakistan in batches of ten to twenty thousand at a time subject to a prescribed ceiling provided their cases are based on certain categories such as hardship or compassion;

iv) It is hoped Bangladesh would eventually allow the question of the trial of 195 Pakistani POWs to be quietly dropped.

It is to be seen whether Pakistan will go even so far in the talks with India, as the position underlined in the above proposals communicated direct to the Bangladesh representative at Washington. Pakistan still harbours the anxiety to deal directly with Bangladesh on all questions except that of the POWs on which it wants to deal with India exclusively. It would be pertinent to recall that this was the purport of Pakistan’s statement of April 20 which Mr. Aziz Ahmed described in his letter to the Foreign Minister, dated April 23, as the Pakistan Government’s “response to the India-Bangladesh Declaration on the question of repatriation of prisoners of war and related matters.” Since unlike the two Aide Memoire of 11th and 25th May Pakistan has not recanted on its statement of April 20, it would presumably remain as Pakistan Government’s basic response to the proposals contained in the Joint Declaration. The only slight change of stance is in terms of the letter dated the 16th May of Mr. Aziz Ahmed wherein at least the idea of discussing repatriation of the three categories has been accepted.

Significantly, President Bhutto in reply to a question relating to Shri Haksar’s statement to the effect that the talks will be held on the basis of the Joint Declaration of April last, is reported to have commented that Pakistan should not agree in advance to anything which according to him “it did not understand”. He added “that is why we asked for talks to seek clarifications of the Delhi offer.”

On the role of Pakistani negotiators in the forthcoming talks President Bhutto said “the scope had been determined by the National Assembly resolution on the recognition of Bangladesh which meant that the recognition would be considered only after all Pakistani POWs were repatriated and the threatened trials by Bangladesh was cancelled. Another idea put forth by President Bhutto in his TV interview of July 9 is to suggest that the forthcoming meeting would be “a limited meeting meant for a bigger meeting.” He reintroduced the idea of the forthcoming meeting being in preparation for another summit by saying “quite long ago I suggested that Mrs. Gandhi and we should meet. I invited her to Pakistan”.

The kind of questions which the Pakistan delegation is likely to ask on this subject are revealed in the following quotation from President Bhutto’s National Assembly speech on July 9:

> “Who are the Pakistanis in Bangladesh? On what ground can they be considered to comprise only of non-Bangalees? What was the kind of option they were supposedly given? How can the Dacca authorities release themselves from the obligation of respecting the human rights of all the people who had made East Pakistan their home a year before the establishment of Pakistan? How can they ignore the universal declaration of human rights which forbids exile or arbitrary declaration of legal or moral claims of people on racial or ethnic ground?..... No solution will be workable if it does not take into account the physical, economic and social consequences for the life and future of the human beings involved. The human beings involved are not only the members of this unfortunate minority but also those among whom they are suggested to be resettled.”

Following the decision of the ICJ in rejecting the application of Pakistan for an interim injunction to prevent India from transferring POWs for trial to Bangladesh, the Pakistan Government has tried to give its own interpretation to this development. A Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman stated on 16th July that it was hoped India would not take any unilateral action which could (undermine) the prospects of success of the Indo-Pakistan negotiations. He further stated that the "case remains sub-judice before the World Court and the Simla Agreement also lays down that neither side can unilaterally alter the situation pending settlement of any of the problem between the two countries" (interestingly enough this latter wording is used in the Simla Agreement specifically with reference to the Line of Control under paragraph 4 (ii) and is not applicable to any other issue).

Pakistan’s Attorney General Yahya Bakhtiar in his press statement at the Hague on July 17 has also reiterated this point. Mr. Bakhtiar referring to Dr. Nagendra Singh’s “separate opinion” in which the latter had criticised the Court for not declining to deal any further with the case, has made the following comment:

Pakistan was “grateful to the Court that it has in effect accepted the request for postponement and has not given any decision on our request but has in its order stated that Pakistan is at liberty to approach the Court again should the need and urgency for interim measures arise again.”

In view of this Pakistan’s likely stand on the issue of war trials is going to be that India should give an undertaking that the 195 prisoners of war required for trial in Bangladesh will not be transferred till the question of jurisdiction is established by the ICJ. It is possible that Pakistan might go to the extent of creating a deadlock on this issue and go in for third party mediation to persuade Bangladesh to drop the idea of trials. They may bank upon reports that the top leadership in Bangladesh is now divided as to whether they should go ahead with the trials or work for the early return of the Bangalees stranded in Pakistan. Mr. Bhutto wants to dangle the additional bait of recognition before Bangladesh in case the Bangladesh Government drops the idea of war trials.

A. Summary of meeting on 24 July 1973 at Rawalpindi at 9.00 a.m.

1. Mr. Aziz Ahmed dwelt at some length on the deadlock, as he saw it, over the Simla Agreement. Indian statements and propaganda would give the Indian people the belief that Pakistan should not be trusted, and the present regime was no more than the former one in a new garb. The main obstacle in normalisation was the continued detention of POWs. When this was so, it was not possible to move ahead on “peripheral” matters such as over flights. As stated at Simla, President Bhutto did indeed wish to recognise Bangladesh, but he had to carry his people with him. Mr. Aziz Ahmed called for a resurrection of the Simla Agreement.

2. Shri Haksar said that he thought it was a pointless exercise to go into the past and to indulge in mutual recrimination. The Joint Declaration was a serious and earnest effort to solve the humanitarian problems. Bangladesh had set recognition aside: In fact she can now afford to wait for Pakistan’s recognition. Pakistan seems to seek all the time to keep options open, e.g. ICJ, ICAO, and the two Aide Memoire sent to the Swiss. If Pakistan had recognised Bangladesh, the POWs would have been back a long time ago; that had not happened, and India and Bangladesh were trying to find a way to clear the human debris of 1971. Both countries felt that the Pakistan Government would accept the trial of a mere 195 POWs, an impression that was based on statements by the Pakistan President himself. Either Pakistan can take back all the POWs with the exception of the 195, or thousands would be held up.

3. India and Bangladesh, Shri Haksar said, did not understand the question of economic burden argument of Pakistanis who come from Bangladesh to Pakistan. Immense transfers of people had taken place in Europe and there was no reason why Pakistan should not take its nationals who claimed allegiance to it. He was glad to hear that there would be no problem about Bangladesh nationals from Pakistan going back.

4. Mr. Aziz Ahmed recalled that he had described the Joint Declaration as a positive step. He was deeply appreciative of India’s efforts in persuading Bangladesh to set aside the question of recognition. However, Pakistan would not accept the trials of POWs, nor can Pakistan accept the Joint Declaration “demand” that Pakistan should accept all those non-Bangalees from Bangladesh who owe allegiance and are desirous to go to Pakistan. He would explain the reasons to Shri Haksar.

Indo-Pak Talks

Meeting of Special Emissaries 9 a.m. on 24th July, 1973.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed opened the talks by welcoming Shri P.N. Haksar (Secretary to the Prime Minister) and the Indian Delegation. He said he was glad that Shri Haksar could come to Rawalpindi. Pakistan has felt for some time that all was not well with “our relations”. The spirit of Simla was getting eroded; its implementation had got bogged down. The present meeting, therefore, was a welcome development. Mr. Ahmed expressed regret that Pakistan could not agree to New Delhi being the venue for the talks. India’s Foreign Minister had given “strong reasons” while suggesting New Delhi, as a venue. However, since, Mr. Ahmed said, he could not have made it in time for the talks, Pakistan suggested Islamabad. Mr. Ahmed assured the delegation that they would have no problem in communicating with Delhi whenever they so desired.

Mr. Ahmed said he would like to make a brief statement covering the period of one year since the Simla Agreement. He said it was not so much a question of individual items and question that is important but rather the totality of relations. Mr. Ahmed recalled that at Simla there were two alternative courses of action open to the Indian and Pakistani teams; one would have led to continued friction, tension and confrontation, the other to the establishment of friendship and amity and eventually to durable peace in the sub-continent. Mr. Ahmed said that fortunately the leaders of the two sides chose the second course. He expressed appreciation for the courage and far-sightedness shown by the Prime Minister, despite opposition in India, and said that without this even the talks at Simla would have broken down. To Pakistan the Simla Agreement reflected a fundamental change in India’s attitude. This feeling was based on the assurances given first by Shri D.P. Dhar at Murree when he said that India was of the view that a strong and independent Pakistan was in her best interests. Mr. Ahmed said that this was the first time that such sentiments had been voiced at an authoritative level. Subsequently, these sentiments were reiterated by India’s Prime Minister at Simla. She not only spoke out for a strong and independent Pakistan but also emphasised the necessity of the two countries living in peace. For this reason, Mr. Ahmed said, Pakistan felt confident that whereas the earlier agreements between India and Pakistan had not been implemented, the Simla Agreement would work.

Since then unfortunately there has been a progressive erosion not only of the Agreement but also the spirit behind it. This is evident from the fact that the two sides have taken one year to meet even though under the Agreement they were to discuss “the modalities and arrangements” for establishing durable peace and normalisation of relations. The lack of progress is causing some anxiety to Pakistan. Pakistan would like to know India’s view as to why this had happened. As far as Pakistan is concerned, it felt that the following reasons were responsible for the lack of implementation of the Simla Agreement and the erosion of its spirit:

i) Pakistan regretted to say that initially there was a certain amount of “dragging of feet” on India’s part in implementing the Agreement. The result was that there were no troop withdrawals until 20th December, 1972 even though according to the Agreement withdrawals had to be effected by 4th August and subsequently, in terms of the Delhi Agreement, by 15th September, 1972. This delay naturally occasioned considerable dis-enchantment in Pakistan as also amongst the “men of goodwill” in India. Mr. Ahmed said that in saying this, his object was not to start a debate but only to convey the reason why doubts arose amongst people regarding the Simla Agreement.

ii) Secondly, a number of statements have been made by responsible Indian leaders, including the Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister, casting aspersions on Pakistan’s bona fides regarding the implementation of the Simla Agreement. It has been said (by the Foreign Minister) that Pakistan was not implementing the Agreement. Pakistan would like to know, Mr. Ahmed said, where it had failed. Then India’s Prime Minister has stated that while at Simla President Bhutto had said that Bangladesh would be recognised, subsequently he ((Bhutto) had changed. Other Indian statements, have accused the Pakistan Army of dictating policy to the Bhutto Government on the question of the POWs. Mr. Ahmed said that such statements were based on a misconception and could only create an unfavourable impact on public opinion in India. Even the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration speaks of Pakistan’s hostile attitude. While the statement that “Pakistan continued to persist in hostility towards Bangladesh” may be understandable, for the Declaration to say that Pakistan has “continued to maintain a hostile attitude against India” is very unfortunate. Mr. Ahmed said that he would like to be enlightened as to how Pakistan has pursued a hostile policy against India. Finally, after the Joint Declaration, Pakistan’s response was characterised as “negative” and it was stated that Pakistan did not want to get her POWs back as President was afraid that their repatriation would create troubles for himself. This, Mr. Ahmed said, was an extraordinary statement.

Mr. Ahmed went on to say that while Governments can discount these statements as part of the game of politics, India should consider the impression they generate amongst the people when taken in their totality. If he were an Indian citizen, his reaction to the various accusations made could only be “Pakistan cannot be trusted.” Mr. Ahmed said that this was not the way to promote the objectives of the Simla Agreement.

iii) Hostile anti-Pakistan propagandas, despite the provisions of the Simla Agreement. Mr. Ahmed said that while on their side, Pakistan was aware that the “Azad Kashmir” Radio was “misbehaving”, and they were doing their best to restrain it, the instances of hostile propagandas in India’s press and Radio were very numerous. Pakistan realised that in a democracy it was difficult to control the Press. They were even prepared to ignore critical references in some newspapers, which were perhaps necessitated by reasons of domestic politics. But when AIR not only broadcasts but persists in hostile propaganda, Pakistan is naturally concerned. Mr. Ahmed gave the following recent instances of what he termed objectionable items carried by AIR:

(a) The Urdu Tabsara programme on 6th June broadcast that the Pakistan Government “had begun preparations for the massacre of the local people” much before civil disobedience began in Bangladesh;

(b) In the same programme on 3rd June, AIR stated that four army divisions had been deployed in Baluchistan, where the Peoples Party was following a “divide and rule” policy. It was also stated that President Bhutto’s attitude was no different from that of his predecessors.

(c) AIR stated on 3rd July that the situation in Baluchistan was deteriorating day by day and it was now similar what had obtained in Bangladesh in 1971. It was further said that the events in Baluchistan proved that Pakistani rulers had not learnt any lesson from Bangladesh. (Mr. Ahmed said that this sort of commentary will only convince the Indian people that President Bhutto is another Ayub or Yahya in a different garb).
(d) On 8th July the TABSARA commentator quoted some letters ostensibly received from Bengalis in Pakistan to claim that they (Bengalis) were being kept in detention camps and that Bengali girls were being raped in these camps, including by personnel of the armed forces.

(e) On 14th July AIR accused President Bhutto of following the same old policy of confrontation by collecting arms and ammunition.

Mr. Ahmed admitted that Pakistan was perhaps also not entirely blameless on the question of propaganda from India. But when it was taken together with other factors, the effect on the peoples of both sides could only be adverse. Already they are asking if the Simla Agreement (not only its spirit) was still in force. India knows about the deadlock that exists. It is also known how this deadlock originated. India may say that Pakistan is to blame. In Pakistan’s views, however, the key for making further progress lies in India’s hands.

Continuing, Mr. Ahmed said that he would like to take the opportunity to remove one incorrect impression which India’s Prime Minister has, regarding President Bhutto’s alleged assurance at Simla on the question of Pakistan’s recognition of Bangladesh. It was true that President Bhutto had the intention of recognising Bangladesh. Only he was not able to go forward with his original plan. President Bhutto has of course not given up the intention. In Delhi Pakistan’s Special Envoy had clarified that the matter was receiving “serious consideration”. This, Mr. Ahmed assured was no empty statement. President Bhutto has been trying for months to carry the people with them. He has held mass meeting in the frontier, Punjab and Sind. At many places the people shouted that recognition was “Namazoor” (not acceptable). President Bhutto, however, continues with his efforts to convince the people. He always knew that he could get a resolution passed in the National Assembly, given his majority. But on this very important, fundamental question the President wanted the people with him. Now when he felt that enough preparatory work had been done, and since he was anxious to get this matter through before proceeding abroad, he decided to put the question to the National Assembly in face of continuing opposition in the country. Here again difficulties had arisen. Several lawyers said that the Opposition parties planned to file writ petition in the High Court challenging the National Assembly’s competence to pass a resolution on the subject since, under Pakistan’s Interim Constitution, Bangladesh was a part of Pakistan and there could be no question of according recognition. It was in anticipation of this trouble that the question of the National Assembly’s competence was referred to the Supreme Court. Even this action occasioned criticism and was regarded as a “mere trick” by “some friends”; luckily, Mr. Ahmed said, the Supreme Court ruled that the National Assembly had jurisdiction to consider the matter and a resolution was eventually passed. While the opposition did stage a walk-out, and has subsequently tried to whip up emotions by going to the streets, fortunately in the country at large there have been no disturbances so far. But the real test will come when formal recognition is accorded to Bangladesh. Pakistan hoped that when that time came, reconciliation would have taken place and the question would have ceased to be an emotional issue. Mr. Ahmed added that the question of recognition of Bangladesh can now only come up after 15th August when the new Constitution of Pakistan comes into force.

Reverting again to the question of the “deadlock” between India and Pakistan, Mr. Ahmed said that Pakistan could not be held responsible. Soon after the Line of Control was delineated and ground adjustments and troop withdrawals effected, and President Bhutto had felicitated India’s Prime Minister and had expressed the hope that further implementation of the Simla Agreement would become possible. The President had said, however, that before progress could be made, the two countries would have to remove the main obstacle to normalisation, viz., the continued detention of POWs in India. In stating this, Pakistan was not over-stressing the importance of resolving the POW issue. Even at the Murree talks, item 1 of the agenda for the Summit meeting suggested not only the definition of “elements of peace” (already set out in the “most important” Article 1 of the Simla Agreement) but also troop withdrawals and POW repatriation Agreement thus already exists to live in peace and to remove the consequences of war. However 92,000 POWs continued to be under detention in India. when this was, Pakistan could naturally not be expected to respond to India’s suggestion to resume over flights which was a relatively “peripheral” issue. The people in Pakistan would not accept it. For Pakistan the POW question remains the single most important obstacle to normalisation of relations. In India’s views, Pakistan had to recognise Bangladesh before a solution of this issue could be found. Even on the question of Bangladesh recognition, Pakistan was “easing the situation” and moving forward.

Pakistan regarded it as extremely unfortunate that no progress could be made in implementation of the Simla Agreement for the last seven months. “We could not even meet and talk.” Pakistan has persistently called for discussion; “The initiatives have come from us.” Pakistan, Mr. Ahmed said, was glad that the Government of India agreed to withdraw its “preconditions” and to commence discussions. It regards the present meeting as “crucial”. India and Pakistan are today again back at across-tables. The two sides cannot afford to fail. If the present meeting produces no result, the repercussions as far as the Simla Agreement is concerned, could be serious, even “irreversible”. Already, Mr. Ahmed said, a great deal of damage had been done to the vision and spirit of Simla and to the bona fides of India and Pakistan. Many people say that a dead-end has been reached. Pakistan, however, hopes that the situation can still be retrieved. President Bhutto remains determined to move forward. He heads a party which is committed to the welfare of the people. He is extremely distressed and sensitive about the expenditure being currently incurred on defence, which amounts of 54% of Pakistan’s revenues. President Bhutto’s party slogan that brought him to power was “Roti, Kapra aur Makkan” (food, clothing and housing). He cannot implement his programmes if the defence expenditure remains at its present level. However, Mr. Ahmed said Pakistani “Chauvinism” will not accept reduction in defence expenditure and cited the instance when at the time of defence budget presentation, members of the National Assembly refused to allow any cut motions. This was of course not a good sign, although people may genuinely think that in the present situation no other alternative exists. India and Pakistan could break the existing tension and suspicion by demonstrating to their peoples their resolve to go forward and implement Simla Agreement. Pakistan hoped that the present meeting would lead to a “resurrection” of the Simla Agreement.

Before concluding, Mr. Ahmed categorically stated that the Army had no say in the Government or policy of Pakistan. President Bhutto is in complete control. Any contrary notion in India would be wrong and misleading. The people in Pakistan know the tragedies that can take place if the Army comes to power, as it did in Yahya’s time.

After having thanked the Pakistan Government for their hospitality, Shri P.N. Haksar said that the purpose of their visit has already been clarified in the exchange of correspondence between F. M. and Mr. Aziz Ahmed. India ardently desires to do everything within her power to find a solution to the ‘human debris’ of the 1971 conflict. Legal and political considerations have already been set aside in our sincere effort to solve these problems. If Pakistan had agreed to discuss all the humanitarian issues, the problems could have been solved already. If Pakistan had agreed to the repatriation of the three categories of persons, namely, POWs Bangalees and Pakistanis, the process of repatriation could have already begun.

Complimenting Mr. Aziz Ahmed’s admirable advocacy of the Pakistani case, Shri Haksar said that Mr. Aziz Ahmed had tried to put India in the dock; he added that he was not going to reciprocate. Shri Haksar urged that the two sides should put their heads together to solve the problems. He said that going into the history of the past six months would not help. He could also quote numerous statements including those made by the highest Pakistani authorities. He added that while such statements are made in public India is secretly asked to ignore them. Problems cannot be solved with propaganda campaigns costing vast sums of money which in any case, a poor country like India cannot afford to undertake even if Pakistan can.

Shri Haksar said that the Joint Declaration was a serious and earnest effort on part of Bangladesh and India to solve the humanitarian problems. Shri Haksar recalled that during discussions at Simla and New Delhi, it was well understood by Pakistan that the POW issue could not be resolved without Bangladesh’s concurrence. The question of Pakistan’s recognition of Bangladesh had arisen only in that context; otherwise this was something entirely up to Pakistan. India has not advocated and does not advocate Bangladesh’s recognition. Bangladesh rightly feels that they cannot have any discussions with Pakistan except as a sovereign equal, they have been recognised by many countries and can afford to wait for Pakistan’s recognition. This is the background in which the Indo-Bangladesh Joint Declaration was made. If for any reasons the same Joint Declaration has any particular connotations for Pakistan, perhaps it can be re-named. Pakistan seems to be allergic to No-War pact, bilateralism and now to the Joint Declaration.

Shri Haksar said that Pakistan has been talking about humanitarian considerations. He added that these considerations apply equally to human beings in uniform or in civilian clothings. Pakistan does not claim the detained Bangalees as her nationals and does not want them. Regarding Pakistanis in Bangladesh, India would like to know Pakistan’s arguments that they are not her nationals. But assuming that they are, Pakistan has certain obligations towards them to let them return home.

Referring to the two aide memoire sent by Pakistan Government, Shri Haksar said that India had genuine doubts which were clarified in Mr. Aziz Ahmed’s letter to FM expressing Pakistan’s readiness to discuss all humanitarian issues. Pakistan’s propaganda machine has been taking the line that Pakistan had taken all the initiatives and India had been obstructive. It is a fact, however, that despite difficulties, doubts and hesitations, India made a sincere effort along with Bangladesh to solve the humanitarian issues. Shri Haksar referred to the offers earlier made by India regarding a no-war pact, a treaty of non-aggression, balanced reduction of forces, etc., which were not acceptable to Pakistan. Whatever Pakistan’s reasons, it does seem to India that Pakistan has been trying to keep its options open. Pakistan rushed to ICAO and subsequently when it suited them to postpone hearing of the case, quoted the Simla Agreement. Pakistan indulged in a vast and expensive propaganda campaign to malign India. Shri Haksar said that instead of removing all the POWs/civilians from Dacca, India could have left a few thousands behind with foreseeable consequences. We did not do that; nor have we advertised this fact because this is not India’s style. Entering into negotiations does not necessarily mean the emergence of an agreement. Despite this Pakistan has not been ready to discuss the over flights’ case. Shri Haksar said that he would not go into the question of -hostile broad-castes by Radio Pakistan or objectionable statements by Pakistani Spokesmen as this would serve no purpose, although he could certainly devote a whole session to enumerating these instances.

Shri Haksar said that he would try and understand Pakistan's difficulties and urge them to try and understand India's limitations. He is therefore, prepared to stay in Pakistan as long as necessary so that a solution could be reached for the humanitarian problems. Solution of these problems should be our mutual objective as both Governments in India and Pakistan are committed to removing poverty and misery from their respective countries. President Bhutto is endeavouring to introduce democracy in Pakistan and it is India's sincere endeavour to help Pakistan at this juncture in whatever way it can. Shri Haksar, therefore, urged his counterpart that they should not let mutual recriminations stand in the way of mutually solving the humanitarian problems for which Indian delegation had come.

Shri Aziz Ahmed said that it was not his purpose to trade recriminations or put India in the dock but to talk frankly. They were meeting after over ten months and he would have liked to hear Shri Haksar's views on the implementation of Simla Agreement and if and where Pakistan might have made mistakes. The only purpose was to enable us to go forward. Mr. Aziz Ahmed then said that in the absence of diplomatic relations, it was easy to misunderstand each other from statements made by either side.

Regarding the two aide memoire, Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that he came to know of their existence when the American CDA told President Bhutto that India was happy with his letter but extremely unhappy about the two aide memoire sent by Pakistan. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that he had then thought that this referred perhaps to the ICAO case. It was only later that he discovered that their Ambassador in Berne had, on his own, asked the Swiss to convey these aide memoire to India. There was apparently some misunderstanding between the Ambassador and the Swiss authorities, and the Pakistan Government had expressed their unhappiness to the Ambassador. At this stage Shri Haksar referred to the "private enterprise" of Pakistani Ambassadors and quoted the incidence of Pakistan's Embassy in Peking having circulated an objectionable aide memoire immediately after the Simla Agreement.

Regarding the ICJ case, Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that Bangladesh's Foreign Minister, Mr. Kamal Hussain, had made a statement that the POW trials will be held by the end of May. Therefore, Pakistan felt that the only way of stopping it was to go to the ICJ. Pakistan realised that India must be under great pressure to transfer the POWs and Pakistan's action would strengthen India’s hands also. It was thought that India could tell Bangladesh that in view of the ICJ case, the POWs could not be transferred immediately. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that it was not Pakistan’s intention either to malign India or to be obstructive. Pakistan also realises that ICJ decisions are not always based on purely legal considerations. However, when we heard that the trials have been postponed till October and that India had decided to enter into negotiations, Pakistan told ICJ to postpone consideration of interim measures and the Court accepted Pakistan’s request. Mr. Aziz Ahmed also explained that about a million Pakistanis were affected as they were related to the POWs and Pakistan Government had to do something. He conceded that Pakistan may have acted in haste, could have got in touch with India who could have guaranteed Pakistan not to transfer the POWs to Bangladesh till a settlement had been reached. He added that in the absence of any channel of communication Pakistan could not do so.

Expressing his personal feelings, Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that, given the will, Shri Haksar and he could settle the problems in five minutes. He said that they have had a meeting with the full delegations from both sides as this was a valuable opportunity presented after a long time. He added that their idea was to exchange impressions. He agreed, however, that they could now concentrate on crucial matters.

After a short break for tea, Shri Haksar began his reply by commenting on the somewhat large size of the delegation, which he said only reflected India’s earnestness and desire to settle all problems that require resolution. However, the size of the delegation should not inhibit the Pakistan side from proceeding in the constructive manner to resolve the humanitarian issues. Shri Haksar said that if the Pakistan Emissary wanted restricted meetings, he was agreeable.

Shri Haksar said that India and Pakistan, whether they liked it or not, were destined to remain neighbours. “India will not form part of the Pacific nor will Pakistan form Part of the Atlantic.” A modus vivendi should, therefore, be reached. Shri Haksar said that he did not subscribe to the theory of confrontation; this belongs to the past. We believe that the world today does not admit of postures of hostility, unless we become pawns in a bigger political game. Today’s world was not made to measure for confrontation. For many years the American had spoken of communism as the main evil, while the Russians regarded capitalism and imperialism in the same vein. These theories are no longer valid.

Shri Haksar assured Pakistan’s Emissary that India’s Prime Minister and Government are very serious about living in peace with Pakistan. He asked Pakistan to put India to the test and said that if India failed in that test, Pakistan could always go back to its original policy. India believes in peace; this has been our consistent motivation right from the ceasefire in December 1971 to offering withdrawals and recently the proposal contained in the Joint Declaration. These are serious contributions. We are in dead earnest to resolve our mutual problems and have come with the intention of finding solutions.

Shri Haksar said that it might be of some help to the Pakistan side if he explained to them the background of the efforts which went into the formulation of the Joint Declaration. He said that we in India were stymied. It was the easiest of matters for us to release these POWs. We also knew that such action on our part would have brought us good certificates, both domestically and internationally. It would also have prevented India being painted in dark colours. Like Pakistanis, we Indians also like to be loved. However, our hands were tied. In Simla we explained that we cannot get a move on the question of the POWs without the association and concurrence of Bangladesh. Our hopes arose regarding a settlement when President Bhutto told the Prime Minister that he had every desire and intention to recognise Bangladesh. We were told of Pakistan’s difficulties. We also understood the explanation given by the Pakistan side at the Delhi talks, when the Sind language riots were given as a reason for delaying recognition. The fact, however, remains that the recognition of Bangladesh was not forthcoming and without Bangladesh’s participation no progress could be made on the question of POWs.

Shri Haksar referred Mr. Ahmed to his statement regarding the difficulties of communication in the absence of diplomatic relations between India and Pakistan. He remained Mr. Ahmed that at least in the case of India and Pakistan the idiom was the same and that there were no communication problems, it is not easy for India to convey to Pakistan what Bangladesh feels. Moreover, if Pakistan feels that it has communication difficulties with India, the communications gap between Pakistan and Bangladesh would be much wider. Despite this situation, Bangladesh and India held discussions to decide whether something could be done to settle the question of “human debris” which resulted from the December 1971 conflict.

Shri Haksar said that India understood Pakistan’s point of view on the question of war trials. Bangladesh, however, feels very strongly on this issue. What can India do? We have to convey to Pakistan the Bangladesh point of view. For Bangladesh, the holding of war trials is a solemn commitment made more solemn by constant reiteration. Bangladesh and India, however, did feel that the Pakistan Government would accept the trial of a mere 195 POWs. This impression was caused by an interview given by President Bhutto himself; he once said that he was relaxed on the question of war trials and would be prepared if even a 1000 POWs were kept back for this purpose. We, therefore, tried to find a way out and our suggestion is contained in the joint Declaration. Shri Haksar said that it was good of Mr. Ahmed to have appreciated the genuineness of this joint offer.

Bangladesh is entitled to hold war trials. This belief is supported by other international legal organisations, such as the International Commission of Jurists. Their number was reduced to the barest minimum. In response, however, Pakistan went to the ICJ, raising the issue of Bangladesh’s competence to hold the trials. This also raised the question of the jurisdiction of the ICJ itself to consider the matter.

Pakistan can, in the circumstances, adopt two courses: it can say that because 195 POWs cannot be repatriated, thousands others must similarly await repatriation. On the other hand it can agree to the return of the thousands while the 195 remain behind. This would be following the maxim of the greatest good of the greatest number.

Shri Haksar said that it was gracious of Mr. Ahmed to express the view that no trouble need be anticipated regarding the repatriation of Bangladesh nationals from Pakistan. However, when Pakistan says that there is a problem about Pakistanis in Bangladesh, should India take it to mean that Pakistan’s objection is not on the question of principle. India knows Pakistan’s argument that the return of its own nationals from Bangladesh would create an economic burden. This argument, Shri Haksar said, was conveyed to the Bangladesh Government who replied that there could not really be any question of a burden since the Pakistan nationals would only be replacing the Bangalees in Pakistan who are to be repatriated to Bangladesh.

Bangladesh and India feel that they made a very genuine attempt through the Joint Declaration to resolve the humanitarian issues. If Pakistan’s recognition had come earlier, as India had understood at Simla, the solution to the humanitarian issues would have come earlier. But now India and Bangladesh had to find a way out. Shri Haksar stated that at this juncture, India and Pakistan could either get “awfully entangled” or find solutions in a constructive manner. Pakistan and Bangladesh already have difficulties. The Pakistan Emissary had referred to certain overtures made earlier towards Bangladesh to which, it was alleged, there had been no response. Shri Haksar said that while India does not derogate from the generosity of the Pakistani offers, in his personal opinion people are inclined to look the gift horse in the mouth. The more one talks about gifts, the more suspicion it generates. Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, as Prime Minister told President Bhutto, has his own compulsions and is responsible to his people. Pakistan should take a realistic view and consider the human parameters.

Shri Haksar said that India and Pakistan can reach a deadlock today on the question of war trials; similarly on the question of Pakistanis in Bangladesh there could be a deadlock. Even if no progress could be made, India could take it, despite criticism that a continuing stalemate would occasion against India. Shri Haksar said that harsh words have never broken any bones. India’s nerve had not been shaken. On the other hand we, India and Pakistan, can adopt a constructive attitude and endeavour to address themselves to those questions that can be solved and got out of the way. Pakistan had herself suggested the step-by-step approach at Simla. We accept the validity of this approach. India feels that the commencement of the process of repatriation of various categories of human beings as suggested in the Joint Declaration would be a very positive development. If European History is to be seen, it would be noticed that transfer in Europe were of the order of 30 million people. Transfers of Greeks and Turks, Bulgarians and Germans alone amounted to some 13 million people, under very tragic circumstances. Transfers here were resorted to as a means of stability. The Europeans, Shri Haksar said have virtually propounded a theory of transfers for reducing irredentism in politics. The magnitudes were vast compared to which our problems are small. It is not also, the first time in history that the question of transfers of population has been suggested. Shri Haksar urged Pakistan to look at the problem in a more realistic manner and stated that with traditions of civilization and combined wisdom, it should not be beyond our ingenuity to find the solution required.

Shri Haksar said that he was posing to Mr. Ahmed the dilemma that India found itself in. At this stage, Pakistan could show to the world that the Indians are insincere. India will live with it. On the other hand, Pakistan could regard India as a genuine friend which has made a conscious effort, within the limits of its capacity, to find solutions to the problems facing the subcontinent. If Pakistan adopted the latter approach, a happier result would be reached. In saying this, Shri Haksar said, he was reflecting the aspirations of the Prime Minister and the Government of India. India feels that there was no advantage for India or Pakistan to be at each other’s throats. The hard facts were that either the two Governments give to their people a decent standard of living or accept big trouble ahead. Compared to the latter possibility, in which the hopes and aspirations of millions of people were involved, the magnitude of the existing humanitarian problems was small.

Shri Haksar concluded by saying that he had tried to convey to Pakistan’s Emissary the efforts, background, the difficulties, the motivations and the hopes and aspirations that had gone into the formulations, howsoever imperfect of the Joint Declaration which was necessitated since the three parties in the sub-continent could not sit together to resolve their problems.

Commenting on the Joint Declaration, Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that they were not averse to calling it Indo-Bangladesh Joint Declaration. They were, however, surprised to note that the Declaration referred to Pakistan’s “hostility” “hostile attitude”. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that they could understand Bangladesh referring to Pakistan’s alleged hostile attitude due to their non-recognition of Bangladesh, opposition to Bangladesh’s UN membership, etc. But they were indeed surprised that India also found Pakistan’s attitude hostile. He added that he would not go into this aspect in view of Shri Haksar’s earlier remarks.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed referred to his TV interview wherein he had said that the Joint Declaration had some positive features and was a step forward, particularly the delinking of Bangladesh’s recognition by Pakistan from humanitarian issues. He added that it was indeed to India’s credit that she was able to persuade Bangladesh’s to agree to this. All the same there were some difficulties which can be removed by mutual discussions. Mr. Aziz Ahmed further said that repatriation of Bangalees presented no problem and mentioned that Pakistan had offered to let them go as early as April ‘72 but the offer was turned down by Sheikh Mujibur Rehman on the ground that they would communicate with Pakistan only after recognition. Mr. Aziz Ahmed also referred to Pakistan’s offer of sending 100,000 tonnes of rice to Bangladesh as a gift which had elicited no reply. He added that it is not that Pakistan did not want the Bangalees to go to Bangladesh but that there has been no agreement so far under which Pakistan could have let them go. He added that Pakistan had done their best to make it easier for India and Bangladesh to take a lenient view on relevant issues. He referred to the offer made by India and Bangladesh to repatriate all families (women and children) of Pakistani POWs/Civilians against which Pakistan had offered to repatriate 10,000 Bangalees. In fact Pakistan had added another 5,000, asked ICRC to prepare lists and given a blanket approval for their repatriation. However, no progress has been made due to Bangladesh’s suspicion as they want to screen each individual before his agreeing to his repatriation. Bangladesh also accused Pakistan of trying to send back 5,000 destitute. Pakistan could have exploited this as priority had to be given to hardship cases, but Bangladesh insisted that others must come first. Secretary General of the UN was informed of Pakistan’s action and UN High Commissioner for Refugees took up this matter with Bangladesh but with no results.

On the other hand, ICRC had prepared a list of 10,000 persons of West Pakistani origin in Bangladesh. But the Bangladesh government said that they must examine each individual case before giving their approval. These are the difficulties in unfreezing the situation.

Referring to para 5 of the Joint Declaration, which mentions repatriation of Pakistani POWs minus those required by Bangladesh for trials on criminal charges, Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that Pakistan cannot agree to this. He added that apart from legalistic reasons which have been enumerated in Pakistan's replies; this would be in direct contradiction to the whole object of the Declaration which aims at promoting friendship and reconciliation. He said that this would reopen old wounds and lead to demands in Pakistan for the trial of 203 Bangalees against whom there is evidence of having indulged in espionage, sabotage, treason, etc. These trials and counter-trials would lead to a cycle of vengeance which will not promote reconciliation. Moreover, public opinion will never tolerate these trials.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed then referred to the “demand” made in the joint Declaration that Pakistan should accept all those non-Bangalees in Bangladesh who owe allegiance and are desirous of repatriation to Pakistan. The Government of Pakistan cannot agree to this for a variety of reasons which, Mr. Aziz Ahmed said, he would like to discuss later with Shri Haksar. In conclusion, he said, that due to these reasons Pakistan could not respond to the very positive move made by India and Bangladesh.

In reply, Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that they fully understood and appreciated the difficulties. India must have had in evolving the Joint Declaration which is a big move forward. He added that they have no wish to under-rate the difficulties and dilemmas faced by India; but Pakistan had her own dilemmas and difficulties as she is directly affected by two of the propositions made in the Joint Declaration.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed agreed that many of the difficulties would not have arisen if Pakistan had recognised Bangladesh which has not been due to any lack of intention on the part of the Government but due to public opinion in the country being against it. He said that this was how the problem had arisen as under the circumstances they are unable to communicate with Bangladesh either bilaterally or in a tripartite meeting. Despite Pakistan’s efforts, Bangladesh is not prepared to have a dialogue with Pakistan before recognition. This is something Pakistan finds difficult to appreciate. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that they have concretely moved towards the recognition of Bangladesh; Pakistan’s new Constitution does not apply to “East Pakistan”. The recent resolution passed by the National Assembly of Pakistan should satisfy Bangladesh of Pakistan’s bonafides in this regard. Unfortunately, this has not been so.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that Pakistan has no intention of letting the talks fail in order to malign India. He said that Pakistan does not give a damn to world opinion and would only do what is in her interest. He added that they can only get an occasional patronising pat from the world whereas other countries would really hold them in no high esteem, if they cannot solve their problems with India. It serves others if we remain at logger-heads but Pakistan does not want this to continue. He said that confrontation had not helped Pakistan and any favourable comments in any newspaper are only the ephemeral gains. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that they have no desire to perpetuate deadlock. He added that there was a basic shift in the attitude amongst the leadership in both the countries. However, after 25 years public opinion cannot be changed overnight and some lapses are bound to take place on both sides. However, Pakistan recognises the difficulties inherent in these new attitudes and the President of Pakistan has already demonstrated his courage and determination to face these difficulties, by, for example, telling the people that Pakistan has to recognise Bangladesh. Mr. Aziz Ahmed added that despite this recognition of Bangladesh was not possible before any talks can be held with Bangladesh. Since Pakistan has no communication with Bangladesh, she would like to request India to lend them their good offices in this regard.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed concluded by saying that he had given his views on the formula contained in the Joint Declaration. There were difficulties regarding the two points mentioned by him. He suggested that they should meet later in the afternoon at a limited session for further discussions. It was agreed that the meeting would be held at 5.00 p.m. It was further agreed that a statement would be drafted for release to the Press and put up for the approval of the leaders of the respective Delegation.
C. Summary of important points made at the meeting on 24.7.1973 at 5. p.m. in the Hotel Intercontinental, Rawalpindi (Restricted Session).

Ministry of External Affairs

A. War Trials

1. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that the Pakistan Government will in no circumstances agree to war trials. There will be “Kangaroo trials” and the Army will resent them. There is no general demand in Bangladesh for trials. Sheikh Mujibur Rahman is not working for reconciliation. Reconciliation is more in Bangladesh’s interest.

2. When the President said that a thousand can be kept he did not mean that they can be tried, but only that the vast majority should be immediately returned to Pakistan.

3. There will be counter-trials.

4. It was open to India to prevent the trials by:

   (a) pleading that Geneva Convention prevented the transfer to another country;

   (b) the Simla Agreement forbade unilateral alteration in the situation and encouragement of conditions detrimental to the maintenance of peaceful and harmonious relations.

5. Even acceptance by implication of trial is impossible for Pakistan. (This was in response to the suggestion of Shri Haksar that instead of concentrating on what might take place when trials are held, we should start with immediate repatriation of the three categories).

1.2 Shri Haksar

   (i) refuted the argument that the trials would be “Kangaroo trials”. He pointed out that Sheikh Mujibur Rehman was answerable to public opinion in Bangladesh. It could well be understood why he thought the trial is necessary. Pakistan should allow justice to take its course;

   (ii) the Geneva Convention did not preclude the transfer of POWs to the Bangladesh Government, a co-detaining power, and

   It was not possible for India to use the argument of the Simla Agreement with Bangladesh because Pakistan had gone to the ICJ in defiance of the Agreement. In any case the ICJ had refused to grant Pakistan interim measures. If the Court says Bangladesh has no jurisdiction, how does it help Pakistan? If the Court says “no” how is Bangladesh bound by it? (Bangladesh has not been impleaded).

(iii) So far India did not transfer the POWs to Bangladesh, telling Bangladesh that they could not be transferred till Bangladesh was ready with the legal provisions. Now Bangladesh has passed its law and India is honour-bound to transfer them.

(iv) When the process of repatriation of 89,000 odd POWs starts along with the repatriation of Bangalees and Pakistanis, the temperature will start getting lower and it will have a reconciling effect. Instead of concentrating on what might take place when trials are held, we should start with the repatriation of the three categories immediately.

Acceptance by Pakistan of Pakistan nationals from Bangladesh.

2.1 Mr. Aziz Ahmed said:

(i) by Pakistan nationals in Bangladesh Pakistan meant those Pakistanis who have West Pakistan domicile will be accepted. When they start coming back and the Bengalees start going back to Bangladesh, the lowering of temperature can be expected and the question of non-Bangalees can resolve itself in that atmosphere:

(ii) if some non-Bangalees pose a problem later, “we could discuss it at that time”.

2.2 Shri Haksar said:

(i) Legally, morally and culturally, Pakistan has no right not to accept Pakistan nationals;

(ii) Pakistan’s case is a strange amalgam of various pleas;

(iii) As for the alleged economic burden, when the land-man ratio of Pakistan and Bangladesh is considered, it is Bangladesh which will have the greater economic burden. If Bengalees come to Bangladesh and nearly a similar number of Pakistanis go to Pakistan one fails to understand the argument of the economic burden;

(iv) Bangladesh is not indiscriminately getting rid of Pakistan nationals. They do not want to keep about 260,000 people who say they do not owe allegiance to Bangladesh, have Pakistan nationality and want to go to Pakistan. Pakistan does not accept Pakistan nationals and yet criticises the Bangladesh Government for not treating them with humanity. This is a strange extraterritorial concern.

Recognition

Shri Haksar pointed out that it was made very clear to President Bhutto at Simla that so far as the question of POWs was concerned, discussion with Bangladesh would be essential and recognition of Bangladesh will facilitate these discussions. The basic fact is that for more than a year recognition has not taken place and it is nowhere in sight. Mr. Aziz Ahmed stated that the President had been strenuously working for recognition and had now got through the enabling resolution of the National Assembly. He also argued that there was implied recognition in that Pakistan's new Constitution makes no mention of the Province of East Pakistan. Formal recognition, however, could only take place after the POWs are repatriated, war crimes trials are given up and the non-Bangalees are not ill-treated in Bangladesh. “Unless this happens, people say that recognition will set seal to India’s aggression against Pakistan”.

Shri Haksar also refuted Mr. Aziz Ahmed’s statement that there had been a deadlock for the past six or eight months. On Shri Haksar’s query as to what was meant by “the point of no return”, Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that it meant that “there is no chance of improvement of the situation after that”.

**********
Verbatim record of the meeting held between the Indian and Pakistani delegations at Hotel Intercontinental,
Islamabad, July 24, 1973. (5 P.M.)

The following are the main points that came for discussion during the restricted meeting of the Indian and Pakistani delegations. Shri P. N. Haksar was assisted by Foreign Secretary Shri Kewal Singh and Secretary to the Prime Minister Professor P.N.Dhar. Mr. Aziz Ahmed was assisted by Mr. Altaf A. Shaikh, Additional Foreign Secretary and Mr. Abdul Sattar, Director General.

After about 7 minutes of polite conversation, the serious discussions started which mainly took place between Shri P.N.Haksar and Mr. Aziz Ahmed.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: My President and I have been giving serious thought for a long time to the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration of 17th April. As I said before, it has positive aspects and we appreciate the efforts that have gone into the formulation of this declaration. There are, however, two points which I must state in very clear terms:—

A. We simply cannot agree to the trial of prisoners of war. I will give you the reasons why it is utterly impossible for us to accept this. What sort of trials are going to be held in Bangladesh? They would be Kangaroo trials - palm tree trials. What will they achieve? With the holding of trials the atmosphere will be surcharged with emotions. Nobody dare give evidence in favour of the accused because the moment anybody comes forward to do so, he will be shot. Will any judge have the courage to give a fair decision in such an emotionally surcharged atmosphere?

In Pakistan, the public will never accept it and Pakistan Army will strongly resent it as they would feel that our men are being humiliated. What does Mujib hope to achieve with these trials? Even our soldiers who return will react violently. They will ask us what was the hurry in getting them back? They could have waited, but they would not tolerate the humiliation of our men and leaving them to be sacrificed in Bangladesh.

These trials will force us to counter-trials. That is not pleasant for us, but we will be left with no choice. This will generate hatred and bitterness.

On trials, therefore, our position is clear: as my President has stated, war trials will lead to the “point of no return”. Our acceptance of these trials is completely out of question.

I can see your problem. Mujib has been an extremely difficult man to deal with.
I have known him for 25 years. There is no general demand in Bangladesh for trials. It is only some people in the ruling party who, out of sheer vindictiveness, will ruin all chances of reconciliation. Even one of your Indian journalists wrote in the Hindustan Times of the 11th June that the Bangladesh public generally was not concerned about the question of trials. It is only the ruling party. We know Mujib and we know how utterly irrational he can be.

How do we deal with this question? I have made it clear that we will never agree to the trials. I make for your consideration two suggestions. I do not know how far you consider them feasible. But let me put them to you:

(i) Under Geneva Convention, you have to repatriate the prisoners of war to Pakistan and not to any other country. You could, therefore, tell the Bangladesh Government that, there being no other course open to you, you will have to send them to Pakistan to which they should agree.

(ii) You have also a commitment under the Simla Agreement which should enable you to resolve this problem. In Article 1 sub-para (ii) it is stated that “Pending the final settlement of any of the problems between the two countries, neither side shall unilaterally alter the situation and both shall prevent the organisation, assistance or encouragement of any acts detrimental to the maintenance of peaceful and harmonious relations”.

You could, therefore, say to Mujib that you have to honour this commitment and you could not alter the position by handing over POWs to him.

I do not know how far these suggestions are acceptable to you, but I put them before you for your consideration and I would say again that Mujib is a very difficult man and we can appreciate your situation. But from our side it should be perfectly clear that so far as war trials are concerned, in the words of my President “We simply can’t take it”.

B. Then there is the question of the Pakistan nationals. You asked me to define what I mean by Pakistan nationals. I would say that those Pakistanis who have West Pakistan domicile will be accepted by us and there will be no problem in that. But if Mujib were to include in this category Biharis, whose faces he does not like and whom he wants to expel, we cannot agree to it.

Shri P. N. Haksar: Thank you for giving me your point of view. Let me first of all give you my reply to the suggestions made by you. In regard to your argument that we have responsibility under the Geneva Convention to transfer POWs only to Pakistan, I am fairly certain that this suggestion is legally not tenable.
However, we will check it up. It is my understanding of the legal provisions that the POWs can be transferred to another country provided that country has signed the Geneva Convention and, as you know, Bangladesh Government has signed the Convention. Geneva Convention also provides for the trials of the POWs. I must frankly say that the provisions of the Geneva Convention can provide no comfort to you or to me and we cannot refuse to transfer POWs to Bangladesh Government in view of their surrender to the Joint Command and in view of the fact that they are a co-detaining power.

You then referred to the provisions of the Simla Agreement. Apart from other reasons, you yourself have made it impossible for us to advance this argument.
In defiance of the provisions of this Agreement, you went to the International Court of Justice on the question of the POWs. You went with a plea for interim measures which plea has been rejected by the International Court of Justice.
How can we deny the right of Bangladesh Government to ask for the transfer of the POWs after this, particularly as the POWs are in joint custody in India?

You said this morning that this was a sudden decision. You were taken unawares by Kamal Hossain’s statement in Calcutta on 17th April(?). If I may submit, from the documents produced before the International Court of Justice, it is obvious that this case has been prepared over a long period. You had contemplated taking it to ICJ after having made full preparation. We are also intrigued as to what happened in the International Court of Justice as we find that your ad hoc Judge has not been functioning in the ICJ, since 2nd July’73

In case, as of today, there is no proposal relating to POWs before the Court.
How do you want us to argue before the Government of Bangladesh when they claim a right to the transfer of POWs and to their trial by them?

You went to the Court to say that Bangladesh has no jurisdiction. Supposing the Court says: “Yes, they have jurisdiction”, how does that help you? If the Court says “No”, how is Bangladesh bound by it?

(They have not been impleaded??)

You must also appreciate Mujib’s position. There is already strong political agitation.
If trial is not held, it will be held up against the Bangladesh Government and they have to take into account the strong public reaction. They have repeatedly assured the nation that trials will be held. Mujib, therefore, wants to go ahead with the trials and this has been made clear to us.

It is simply impossible to fall back upon the Simla Agreement as a plea not to transfer the prisoners. More so, as there is an acute feeling generally entertained in India that Pakistan keeps all options open to herself and chooses to do what suits her.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: What are those options open to Pakistan? Where has Pakistan taken a decision which could have hurt India? Pakistan is without choice.
Shri P. N. Haksar: I can explain what I mean by Pakistan choosing options to exploit every situation:

(a) When it suited Pakistan, they indulged in paid advertisement campaign all over the world against India. Full page advertisements paid by Pakistan were published in leading newspapers of many countries to malign India, to show how inhuman Indians were in detaining the POWs. Poor womenfolk of the POWs were sent round the world to do propaganda against India. It was made very clear to President Bhutto in Simla that, so far as the question of POWs was concerned, discussions with Bangladesh would be essential and recognition of Bangladesh will facilitate these discussions. That recognition has not taken place.

(b) Again, Pakistan had the option to recognise or not to recognise Bangladesh. At one time we were told it was a question of a couple of months. Pakistan has not taken that step so far.

(c) Pakistan goes to I.C.J. or to I.C.A.O. when it suits her. On the other hand, when she chooses, she demands of us to stick to bilateralism and adhere to the Simla Agreement.

On the question of Pak nationals, I would like to know more precisely the grounds of your resistance to receive back Pakistani nationals. Legally, morally and culturally, you have no right not to accept them. On what principle you refuse to take them back? Your case is a strange amalgam of various pleas. At times you say: you are prepared to exchange “head for head”. Then, you say: only the relations and separated families would be allowed to come to Pakistan. At another time you talk of economic burden. If you consider the land-man ratio of Pakistan and Bangladesh, it is Bangladesh which will have the greater economic burden. In any case, each side must accept its nationals. If Bangladesh can take Bengalees and nearly similar number of Pakistanis come to Pakistan, one fails to understand the argument of economic burden.

One also reads in your newspapers about “Islamic nationality”. What is this conception of nationality without territory? The days of Holy Roman Empire are gone long ago. Frankly, I see no reason whatsoever how you can refuse to take these people back.

You say you have reservations on the question of Joint Command. You say it is a fiction. May be. Even if it is a fiction, according to you, it is a very powerful fiction. Fiction, when it is accepted, is a powerful factor in the hearts and minds of people. We are bound by the surrender to the Joint Command. Bangladesh has every right to have a say on any decision relating to the POWs.

A book has been published recently in Pakistan by one of your writers. It describes the happenings in those days when that grim tragedy had overtaken Bangladesh. The writer praises Mukti Bahini and General Osmani. He gives details of the happenings - the massacres, the rapes and all that. They were real things and your man admits it.

At the time of surrender, we could have left most of the soldiers in Dacca or at least a sizeable number. We said “no” to that. We thought in the interest of the safety of the POWs they should be brought away from Bangladesh where the atmosphere was so surcharged because of the heinous crimes against humanity committed by the soldiers. As the situation has improved, they demand from us that we should transfer not only 195 but more than that number to Bangladesh. They naturally point out that the POWs are being detained on their behalf and they are in the joint custody of both Governments.

There is no legal argument we can advance against Bangladesh. It is too late in the day to argue about Geneva Convention or Simla Agreement. The fact of Joint Command or its fiction, if you so like it, is too well established.

The Basic factor is that for more than a year recognition has not taken place and it is nowhere in sight. So far we have not transferred the POWs telling Bangladesh that we could not transfer the POWs till Bangladesh Government was ready with the legal provisions. Now they have passed the law and we are honour-bound to transfer them. Your going to I. C.J. dramatized the whole issue; interim measures have not been granted to you. Only the question of jurisdiction remains which we do not acknowledge. What reply can we give to the Government of Bangladesh?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: In that case it appears that we have no meeting ground. You have referred to our going to the I.C.J. after long preparations and careful deliberation. It is true that the Attorney General had been giving thought to this matter for some time. But the first time I learnt of this was in a Cabinet meeting when one of the Ministers drew attention to Kamal Hossain’s statement in Calcutta to the effect that the trials will be held by the end of May and India will transfer the prisoners to Bangladesh. I personally opposed going to the International Court of Justice on the ground that no trials would, perhaps, be held in the near future. But then, during the Cabinet discussion I felt that my advice could have serious consequences if trials were actually held. Therefore, I agreed in the Cabinet that the case should be referred to the International Court of Justice. You mentioned the printed briefs. I saw the printed briefs for the first time only in the plane when I was going to Tehran with the President. This was after the Cabinet decision. In fact, President also saw the briefs for the first time during that flight.

I might further add that it was during the Cabinet meeting that the summary of letter from Sardar Swaran Singh was telephoned to us. We were told that para. 5 of the letter read that there would be no talks unless conditions laid down in the Joint Declaration was (were) accepted and the meeting was only to discuss the modalities.

Shri P. N. Haksar: Whoever gave the summary of the Indian Foreign Minister’s letter misinterpreted it;

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We felt that the talks were very uncertain with these pre-conditions and Bangladesh was determined to hold the trials immediately. Thus we had little choice but to rush to I.C.J. I knew that will not help, but we took a decision as we had no choice, at that time.

If we agree among ourselves, the case can be withdrawn from the I.C.J.

Shri P. N. Haksar: In the difficult situation in which we are placed and your situation vis-a-vis Bangladesh you go and say in an international tribunal that Bangladesh has no jurisdiction. Where is the basis for negotiations?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: You have referred to the delay in recognition. My President had no option in the matter. He is committed and he has made public pronouncements to that effect. He wants to bring about recognition and he has been working strenuously for it since Simla. He realised that it would not be enough to get the support of the P.P.P. or the National Assembly only. He addressed public meetings all over the country. There was the strongest opposition from the public at times who shouted Na manzoor (not acceptable). He, however, persisted. Then he was told that nothing would be possible till after the Bangladesh election. Secretary General of the United Nations also told him the same. Similar was the opinion expressed in India. He told several Heads of State that he is determined to recognise and he is preparing the ground for it.

After the passage of the enabling resolution of the National Assembly, he has got the authority to recognise. Therefore, President has had no alternative option and has stood by his commitment. It was necessary for him to get the public opinion to support him.

Shouldn’t Bangladesh be convinced that there is already implied recognition? The new Constitution makes no mention of the province of East Pakistan. That is already implied recognition. Formal recognition, however, can take place only after the POWs are repatriated; war crime trials are given up and the non-Bengalees are not ill-treated in Bangladesh. Unless this happens, people say that recognition will set seal to India’s aggression against Pakistan.
On war trials again, we are having the strongest agitation going on. In Karachi, leading opposition leaders have voiced their feelings in the strongest terms. I myself had to spend a couple of hours arguing with them before I went with President to Rome the other day. I argued with them that more than 100 countries have recognised Bangladesh and if we don't recognise Bangladesh, it won't vanish into the Bay of Bengal. Time must come when we must recognise Bangladesh.

I accept that you did a great thing by bringing the POWs out of Bangladesh. Otherwise, trials would have taken place long ago. We can imagine the fate these soldiers would have suffered, but for their transfer to India.

As I said before, at this juncture, India has a grave responsibility for the future of the sub-continent. What is the objective of these trials? As I said this morning, it is a crucial period of our history. Is the objective reconciliation, peace and amity, or, is it to create hatred, bitterness, tension and conflict?

If the objective is reconciliation, how will the POW trials promote this reconciliation? There is an inherent contradiction in the Joint Declaration. What does Mujib want to achieve by war trials? Do you think that our Armed Forces will tolerate it, or the Pakistani people will agree to it? Do you think the people of Pakistan will allow any Government to accept it? Mujib must understand it. If he wants conflict and confrontation, let it continue.

We are asked every day: “Why don’t you get the POWs back?” We tell them: “What can we do? We cannot force India.”

Shri P. N. Haksar: You have spoken with considerable emotion and I can appreciate that. If we are stuck, we are stuck. I can only say that we have done our very best with a clear conscience in the circumstances in which we are placed. If you are not prepared to accept 90,000 soldiers minus 195, it is just too bad.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: But, at what price? We leave 195 at the tender mercy of Mujib.

Shri P. N. Haksar: I must say that the point of Bangladesh also deserves consideration and if I may say so, you are, perhaps, not taking a fair view of the situation. Any newly emerged Government wanting to establish itself in the international community will not set up what you choose to call “Kangaroo trials”. There will be international observers and international lawyers and certainly the Government will maintain a standard of justice which receives international recognition. I must submit that by using expressions like “Kangaroo Courts” you are imagining a situation which I cannot imagine could arise. It is not going to be a mob trial. They will observe internationally accepted judicial procedures. I feel you are exaggerating your fears. I must also say that the people of India are bewildered at your recent statements. Your President had said that one thousand soldiers or so could be retained for trials, but the rest should be sent back. Now it is only 195 whom it is proposed to retain and try. When the process of repatriation of 89,500 odd prisoners of war starts along with repatriation of Bengalees to Bangladesh and Pakistanis to Pakistan, the temperature will start getting lower and it will have a reconciling effect. If you like, we can start this process on the 1st of August. This will defuse the surcharged atmosphere. The starting of the process itself will have the effect of reconciliation.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We know Mujib. I do not think he is working for the cooling down of temperature. He has no reason to throw out the non-Bengalees. We are prepared to take Pakistanis of West Pakistan domicile and Bengalees can go back to Bangladesh. With this the lowering of temperature can take place and the question of non-Bengalees will also resolve itself in that temperature. If some non-Bengalees pose a problem later, we could discuss it at that time. It is not statesman like to ask us for a commitment just now to take all non-Bengalees whom Mujib wants to throw out of Bangladesh. Even about POW trials, it is Mujib who is trying to whip up the agitation. His Ministers are doing the same. There is no demand from the public. As I said, your own correspondent says there is no such demand in Bangladesh. I tell you what sort of trials will take place. Will anybody defend any of the POWs? They are killing each other every day in the streets. If anybody speaks in defence of a POW, he will be shot. All sorts of false witnesses will be produced and people will be hanged on any charges leveled against them.

The only hope is that some lawyers say that Bangladesh cannot legislate retrospectively. If International Council of Jurists says, they can, let that be so. But then there is no question of reconciliation. Hatred will be aroused in Pakistan by charges of rapes, murders etc. We will be forced to try Bengalees who helped in the dismemberment of Pakistan which is not a small crime.

We simply cannot leave our POWs at the mercy of Bangladesh. So far as we are concerned, the “trials shall not take place”. That will lead “to point of no return”. You say you cannot say this thing to Mujib. Why can’t you do so? He is mucking up everything. He is behaving like a petulant child. I would say he is being very foolish. It is Bangladesh which will gain most by reconciliation. He will wreck all chances of reconciliation by reviving bitterness, hatred and tension.

Crimes were committed on both sides. His own men were guilty of the most heinous crimes against humanity. We shall never agree to the humiliation of the Pakistani Army, Navy and Air Force. Which leader in the world will have the courage to say that he agrees to such trials? To us, Mujib’s position seems incomprehensible. He is being irrational, emotional.

Shri P. N. Haksar: I would still like to be clearer about your attitude on Pakistan nationals. Bangladesh Government is not indiscriminately getting rid of them. They don’t want to keep about 260,000 people who say they owe no loyalty to Bangladesh, have Pakistani nationality and want to come to Pakistan. Transfer of populations on a big scale have taken place since the 1st World War. It is true transfer causes hardship, but it is a lesser evil than the continuation of disloyal elements in a national territory. You don’t accept them as Pakistani nationals and yet you criticize the Bangladesh Government for not treating them with humanity. It is a strange, extra-territorial concern and affection. When they say they want to come to Pakistan, you refuse to address yourself to the problem.

You say that you don’t agree to the trials. You say you don’t agree to the commencement of repatriation. President Bhutto himself had said at one time that a thousand or so could be retained and the rest should be sent back. How do you explain this?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: President has to respond to the temper of the people. Take, for example, recognition. He had hoped to recognize but then he found the necessity for consulting people because he sensed the mood of the people. Hence his public meetings all over the country. You must expect some change with the passage of time.

Besides, what President meant was that you send the rest back immediately. While saying that you can retain 1000 or so, he did not mean that he agreed to the trial of the prisoners. All that he was suggesting was that, at least, the vast majority should be immediately allowed to get back to Pakistan.

Shri P.N. Haksar: You must appreciate that these constraints are applicable in case of Sheikh also. He has also to take account of very strong public opinion. You talk of contrariness of the Sheikh and you yourself admit the contrariness of the position of your President. You must accept that the inequities are equal. What, may I ask, is meant by “point of no return”?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: It means that there is no chance of improvement of situation after that. In fact we are already deadlocked for the last 6 or 8 months.

Shri P.N. Haksar: What you mean to say is that if 195 POWs are not returned, no progress can be made on the totality of the situation. I don’t agree with you that we have had a deadlock. We have made great effort all along. It was in December that the troops were withdrawn, the territories were vacated and the line of control was delineated. Then, there were Bangladesh elections. We had hoped that during this time the recognition would take place which, unfortunately, did not materialize. I understand your reasons. On April 17th we made a Joint Declaration. You should be able to appreciate the enormous and sincere effort which went behind this declaration. This initiative which promises immediate repatriation of half a million human beings deserved appreciation and a positive response.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: But the POWs are still there.

Shri P.N. Haksar: You have not helped matters by not recognizing Bangladesh. You should appreciate Bangladesh’s concern also. There are women and children and families on both sides.

We cannot tell Bangladesh that they are over-doing when they talk of war trials. They can reply that they have terrible memories of what had happened. Massacres and rapes and destruction everywhere. Why doesn’t the Pakistan Government allow justice to take its course against those who did such bad things? There is a point in Bangladesh Government wanting to insist on judicial redemption. They are not blood-thirsty but they do want that the people responsible for horrible crimes must be brought to justice.

My submission would be that instead of concentrating on what might take place when trials are held, we should deal with the present. We should start the repatriation of the three categories immediately.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Even acceptance by implication of trials is impossible for us. Bangladesh Government should understand our position. They should turn to constructive things. Trials is going to be a drama with one-sided witnesses and nobody having the courage to defend the accused. The very fact of trial we oppose. It is not the question of conviction.

Shri P.N. Haksar: On the other hand, you are prepared to hold trials in Pakistan. Therefore, you are not opposed to the trials; you are opposed to trials by Bangladesh.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We are opposed to trials. What we mean is that if they must be held, they must be held in Pakistan. I would again like to say in the end, that on the question of trials our position is very clear. Pakistan Government will in no circumstances agree to the war trials.

At this stage Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that we could, perhaps, meet tomorrow afternoon again.

Summary of important points made at the meeting held at the President Secretariat.

Islamabad, July 26, 1973. (10.30 AM)

(Restricted Session)

A. TRIALS:

(i) Shri Haksar said that he had informed the Pakistan side of the Bangladesh Government's position. On the Pakistani side there were several contradictions. Shri Haksar cited statements made by the Pakistani President, e.g., to NEWSWEEK of the 3rd April, 1972, and to BLITZ.

(ii) India was talking to Pakistan on this subject because Pakistan and Bangladesh are not on speaking terms.

(iii) As he had suggested, the repatriation of POWs, Bengalees and Pakistani nationals should start. This may have a calming effect and improve the atmosphere for further developments regarding the trials. Shri Haksar pointed out that he had no authority to negotiate on the question of trials.

(iv) If the Joint Declaration is not acceptable, Pakistan should say what is acceptable, so that the Indian side could take it back and India and Pakistan may meet again.

1.2 Mr. Aziz Ahmed stated that (i) trials cannot be accepted: Unless the question of trials is out of way, no forward movement can take place.

(ii) India must understand Pakistan's position: If India brings 10,000 POWs tomorrow and leaves them at the Pakistani frontier; can Pakistan say “no”? Pakistan also knew that she cannot convey agreement to receiving POWs while leaving 195 back for trials. Those who come will say that their colleagues had been betrayed and they would have stayed back.

(iii) God knows what would happen in the courts constituted by Mujib. Counter trials would have to be held.

(iv) By a brilliant stroke, India has skirted the question of recognition in formulating the Joint Declaration. India and Bangladesh could also skirt the question of war crimes trials.

(v) If the atmosphere improves and steps are taken towards reconciliation, Mujib may not talk about war trials.
B. Repatriation of Pakistani Nationals From Bangladesh.

2. Shri Haksar said that he utterly failed to understand the Pakistani point of view. The Pakistani nationality is not a fictional concept. The Pakistan nationals in Bangladesh had not been rendered stateless. When a state breaks up, option is given to the persons. The charge of racism is unfair: if “Biharis” leave Bangladesh that is racism, but not when Bengalees have to leave Pakistan! Legally and morally Bangladesh has been correct.

(ii) Pakistan raise a plea of economic burden. It should be explained in some concrete terms. We do not understand the economic argument as there would be an exchange of Bangalees going to Bangladesh and Pakistani nationals coming to Pakistan.

(iii) The Pakistan President said that these persons migrated to East Pakistan prior to Partition. How is this relevant? In both countries large number of People migrated before partition. Karachi is full of them and they are Pakistani nationals.

(iv) Pakistan insists that they stay in Bangladesh even if they profess loyalty for Pakistan and want to come to Pakistan. At the same time Pakistan expresses concern for their welfare in Bangladesh. Pakistan seems to claim some extra territorial rights. How is it possible to understand Pakistan’s position? Pakistan also sponsors the idea of “Muslim Bengal”! Is this not interference in the domestic affairs of another State?

2.2 Mr. Aziz Ahmed said:

(i) After the separation of Bangladesh, Pakistan nationals mean people of West Pakistan domicile. There are also people who hold Pakistani passports. They have a claim. Apart from these, Pakistan is prepared to take other people with a view to reuniting families. But the Pakistan President feels it is not possible for him to agree to take people other than from these categories from Bangladesh.

(ii) Barring people of West Pakistan origin, everybody should be eligible for Bangladesh citizenship. The principal need is to provide for certain cases of hardship which Pakistan is prepared to do. Pakistan is prepared to consider any variation if the Indian side has any suggestion of a variation.

(iii) The options were taken under “duress of circumstances”. It will take some months for the atmosphere to improve, even after repatriation is complete. Problems could then be solved in an atmosphere of reconciliation. When tempers cool down, there will be time to consider which other categories of non-Bengalees can be taken by Pakistan. Many “Biharis” may not like to leave their homes in Bangladesh where they have been for 25 years. If some want to come after condition had returned to normalcy, Pakistan will certainly consider.

(iv) The question is not economic, but political. There are underlying political forces against it and those who ask today that the “Biharis” should come will turn against the President tomorrow if he accepts them.

C. Recognition:

The Indian side pointed out:

(i) When at last Pakistan chose to get a resolution of the National Assembly, a number of conditions have been built into the resolution – and these were sponsored by the Government. They are not the results of amendments by the Opposition. Were they intended to bring the Bangladesh Government to its knees to seek recognition.

(ii) Bangladesh is no longer keen on recognition.

(iii) To give recognition graciously could improve the atmosphere, and the problems which the resolution imposes as preconditions could be resolved in that improved atmosphere.

3.2 Mr. Aziz Ahmed stated that Pakistan had hoped to take some steps about recognition, but public opinion had to be satisfied. There can be no forward movement unless the trials are out of the way.

D. CREDIBILITY GAP:

Shri Haksar pointed out that he did not know what he should tell his Government about the Pakistani view on various matters because of differing statements. He cited statement on confrontation and yet talk of peace; the Simla Agreement and yet the ICJ; contradictory statements on trials and acceptability of Pakistani nationals, etc. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said, “The President spoke of confrontation in the past. It will not be so for the future,” but requested Mr. Haksar to put all this frankly to the President: He himself would not do so.

The tenor of the talks, as the tenor of earlier talks, suggests that Pakistan was holding out the bait of reconciliation and co-operation in future while asking India and Bangladesh to drop war crime trials and to make concessions on the return of Pakistanis.

(K.P.S. Menon)
Joint Secretary.
Ministry of External Affairs

**********
On the Indian side, Shri P.N. Haksar was assisted by Shri Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary, and Professor P.N. Dhar, Secretary to the Prime Minister. The leader of the Pakistan side, Mr. Aziz Ahmed, had with him his colleagues Mr. Altaf A. Shaikh, Additional Foreign Secretary, and Mr. Abdul Sattar, Director General.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Well, I am at your disposal. How do we begin? How do we face the problems that we have before us; not your and mine problems alone, but the problems of the 700 million people of this sub-continent. I must confess that I feel overwhelmed with the responsibility which has been placed on you and me. Believe me, of my responsibilities in the Foreign Ministry and the Defence Ministry, the one that preoccupies me most is the resolution of our relations with India. This is constantly at the back of my mind. What do we do? We both know what we want; but how do we achieve it? The objectives were made clear in the Simla Agreement, but how do we attain those objectives? May I request you to share your thoughts with me.

Shri P. N. Haksar: I must say that we ourselves are constantly assailed by this question. We tried our best. We tried most earnestly to work for the objectives set out in the Simla Agreement. I tried, perhaps, in an imperfect way, but with utmost sincerity, to communicate to you the genuineness of our efforts to build up peace, understanding and friendship in the sub-continent. I have not tried to engage in a debate or to win a point. I am convinced by experience that a series of victories in a debate lead to one’s defeat. Even if you score a point, you don’t pave the way for conversation but provoke further debate. The one who feels he has lost a point will try to win the next point. I say this because I have been solely guided by a desire to assure you how earnestly we desire to resolve the problems that we have before us with utmost goodwill and sincerity.

As I see, the object of this visit is two-fold: Firstly, to liquidate the most painful aspects of the aftermath of 1971. By the Joint Declaration we made a sincere attempt to resolve the enormous human problems. I devoutly hope that even if we don’t reach an agreement, at least you would be convinced of the sincerity of our motivation.

Secondly, we should strive to fashion the long-term relations between our two countries. And, to achieve that, we must ensure that there is no credibility gap. There is at present a lack of communications between us. We have no diplomatic relations; hence we have to check and recheck what we say and do.
It has been my sincere endeavour to comprehend your point of view on several issues, but I must confess that if I were to return to Delhi today and report to my Prime Minister the sum total of the different statements, arguments and reasons put forward by you, I shall present a very confused picture. Frankly, I am confused; I don’t understand the rationality of your position on several points. Believe me, I do not say this in a spirit of debate; I am expressing to you my feelings frankly.

I said and not without sense of responsibility or with a view to saying something striking that we in India seem to feel that Pakistan keeps all its options open.
While we want to build up mutual understanding and goodwill on a sincere basis, we constantly find that you try to preserve your maneuverability in what you say and do despite our mutual commitments. As against that, you want us to adhere strictly to Simla Agreement when it suits you. It also disturbs us the manner in which you handle the matters which are of common concern to our two Governments.

Take the whole episode leading to your going to the I.C.J. We examined the document you presented at the Hague. You told me that it was Dr. Kamal Hossain’s statement about the trial of war prisoners by the end of May which compelled you to rush to the I.C.J. You also said that your decision was precipitated by someone reading to you an extract from the letter of my Foreign Minister on telephone and that para. 5 of that letter, as read to you, gave you the impression that India was being obdurate May I point out that the document you presented to the ICJ does not refer to Dr. Kamal Hossain’s statement but refers to the report in the Pakistan Times of June 15th, 1972. Your memorial refers to this report of the Pakistan Times of June 1972. Mind you it was of 1972 and not 1973. Our worry is that if Dr. Kamal Hossain’s statement or a misinterpreted extract of my Foreign Minister’s letter, read on telephone, could impel Pakistan to rush to the ICJ (although even that argument is not supported by your memorial) then, we can be in for more serious and unpleasant surprises from you.

As I said, your memorial talks of June 15, 1972. You could have easily got in touch with us. You could have sought clarification from us.

Again, you say that the Attorney General did a good deal of preparation but without your knowledge. Frankly, this would not be understood in my country.
In our country Attorney General occupies a very high position. But he does not give advice unless sought.

In my Foreign Minister’s letter, there was nothing which could be construed as rejection by India of the possibility of our entering into serious negotiations.
We were seeking clarification and that was necessary because of your statement of April 20th and your aide memoires of May 11th and May 25th. Again, about your aide memoires, you say there was some mistake and that some unauthorized communication was issued by your Ambassador concerning us. In these circumstances, what stops somebody, in future, issuing a statement seriously damaging the interests of our two countries?

Then there is the question of repatriation of Pakistani nationals. Frankly, I utterly fail to understand your point of view. There is something called Pakistan nationality; it is not a fiction. Every state has its law of nationality. How do these people cease to be Pakistani nationals?

You drew my attention to the reference made in the Joint Declaration about Pakistan’s hostility towards India and Bangladesh. In your Constitution, which is adopted by the sovereign Parliament and sponsored by His Excellency, the President of Pakistan, you talk of aggression and you talk of some steps to be taken when the aggression is vacated. We are, thus, termed as aggressors and continue to be aggressors.

Thus, you have your options. In your Constitution, you talk of aggression; when we meet, you talk of peace.

Then, one hears so much of thousands years of confrontation. We simply don’t understand what is meant by this confrontation and what is the purpose to be achieved by these pronouncements? Do you speak of it as a matter of history or a projection of future? I can only ask you if you can produce any speech by our political leaders between 1947 and 1973 ever referring to any confrontation between us. I hope you don’t think of yourselves in terms of descendants or inheritors of some political ambitions of thousands years ago. You and we are new States. We have to think of the future of our relations and our peoples. We are not aware of such confrontation and we reject such a suggestion. If you choose confrontation, naturally, the choice is yours.

In Simla, your President had said that confrontation was a matter of the past. He further said that he himself was the author of confrontation which he wanted to bury. But yesterday in a press conference he referred to thousand years of confrontation. There is a credibility gap. This must be bridged by you.

But reverting to Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh, either there is a concept of Pakistani nationality, or, there is none. Your President said that they migrated to East Bengal prior to partition. I ask you, how is it relevant? In both countries large number of people migrated before Partition. Karachi is full of them. Are they not your nationals? In our country, people came from various parts of West Punjab, including Peshwar, Rawalpindi, before partition. They are our nationals.
If you have any other concept of nationality, which is not defined by your law, please inform us.

When talking of the repatriation of the Pakistani nationals, you raised the plea of economic burden. Let us examine it. You should explain it to me in some concrete terms.

Recently, a large number of people came over to India from Sind. We did not quarrel about it. In a civilized manner, we tried to do our part. We asked your people to come and talk to them. They continue to be a burden, but we have accepted it. We do not understand the economic burden argument as there would be an exchange of Bengalees going to Bangladesh and Pakistani nationals coming to Pakistan.

On the question of war trials, I have followed your arguments. Our reason to talk to you on this subject is that you and Bangladesh are not on speaking terms. And it is not we who are coming in the way. If you are able to speak to each other, you should be able to discuss the question and should be able to appreciate the feelings of Bangladesh on this subject which are equally strong.

The question of recognition again, has kept us confused. And, at last, when you chose to get a resolution from the Assembly, a number of conditions are built into the resolution. It is not that these conditions are the result of amendments by the opposition. The resolution is sponsored by the Government.

What can we say to that? You delayed recognition for several months. Then you referred the matter to the Supreme Court. Then you got the authority from the parliament which you did not need. It is not for us to question your efforts, but we must judge by the end product. No recognition has taken place and it is not within sight.

You say to me that we should tell Sheikh Mujib to agree to this and that. You must appreciate that it is highly embarrassing for us. Whatever your estimation of Sheikh Mujib, please remember, that he, like all Heads of Government, in democratic countries, is the product of democratic elections. He has won two elections. You call him petulant or irrational, but the fact is that he is the elected leader of 75 million people. We have to acknowledge his position with respect. He has to take into account the feelings of his own nation. How can we presume to make suggestions to him which he does not think to be in his national interest?

Thus you see we are left with doubts and contradictions in your position. How can I convey correctly your position to my Government or to Bangladesh Government?
I suggested: let us begin the process of repatriation of different categories of people; let us deal with this situation urgently which is a source of human suffering and tension. Let us start with the repatriation of POWs, Bengalees and Pakistani nationals. This may have a calming effect and may improve the atmosphere for further developments regarding the trial of prisoners of war. I must state that I have no authority to negotiate on the question of trial.

I submit again, that in the lager interests, we should begin this process. Even if a few ships sail with the repatriates and a few trains bring POWs, uniting these people with their families, it will ease tension and greatly improve the atmosphere. This is the result you and I desire and this is also the result which Bangladesh desires.

As I pointed out, Bangladesh has, of course, economic difficulties. With the disaster they passed through, these difficulties are but natural. But one should not rejoice in that. Their difficulties will affect you and will affect us. We have all to be concerned about their difficulties.

There is some anti-India propaganda there. But it does not worry us. It is the future of that country that should be of concern to both of us. I am sure they can handle their problems, but, in the interest of the peace of the sub-continent, you and we have to be concerned about it.

All I can say is, that if human ingenuity cannot devise a solution to our difficulties of today, this indeed will be very sad for the future of all of us. We made an honest attempt and offered the Joint Declaration. If this is not acceptable to you, please tell us what is acceptable. I can take it back with me and we can meet again.

I am at my wit's end as to what I should go and report to my Prime Minister and my Government. I can say that there are certain difficulties and that our Pakistani friends have local compulsion, but as the record of our talks stands, we are quite confused. Please resolve your contradictions so that we clearly understand your position.

Re. Pakistani nationals: Let us discuss calmly propositions based on terms of law or principle. I am making an honest attempt to understand your position.

They cannot be rendered stateless. Law and international practice does not accept people being rendered stateless. How do your nationals in Bangladesh cease to be Pakistani nationals? U.K. accepts that British passport holders are their responsibility whether they are originally from India or Pakistan or some other country. They cannot shirk their responsibility by talking about the basis of origin. The law of nationality places responsibility squarely on U.K.
When a State breaks up, option is always given to the persons. Bangladesh Government gave that option to the non-Bengalees. It is not that these people are being pushed out, as it is argued sometimes. There was a large number; of whom, the majority exercised the option to stay there as Bangladesh nationals. The residue which is smaller maintained that they are Pakistani nationals and want to go to Pakistan. How can we blame the Bangladesh Government when legally and morally they have been correct and, hence, insist that the Pakistani nationals should leave for Pakistan?

In some of your statements, you talked about the racist doctrine. That is not at all fair. Maybe you like to use that argument in public debate, but it is highly unjust and offensive. You say that if Biharis were to leave Bangladesh, that its racism. On the other hand, it is not racism when Bengalees have to leave Pakistan to go to Bangladesh.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: The Bengalees can stay. We have given them the option.

Shri P. N. Haksar: But so has the Bangladesh Government. They have given option to the non-Bengalees and a large number of them have opted for Bangladesh nationality. Those who insist on their Pakistani nationality and want to come back to Pakistan must be accepted by the Pakistan Government. It is no use bandying words like racism.

You insist that they must stay in Bangladesh even if these Pakistani nationals profess loyalty for Pakistan and want to come to Pakistan. At the same time, you express concern for their welfare in Bangladesh. You seem to claim to have some extra-territorial rights. How can we understand your position? You also sponsored the idea of “Muslim Bengal”! Do you not realize that it is interference in the domestic affairs of another state? Maybe you feel you don’t accept Bangladesh and hence you have a right to do so. Well, in that case, we come back to your attitude that there is aggression and you are waiting for the aggression to be vacated.

These things and attitudes do cause us concern about your good faith. You may talk of your compulsion, but we don’t see these attitudes and designs based on any compulsions. They are the free exercise of your options against us or Bangladesh.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: I am grateful for your speaking so frankly. That is most important among us. The very purpose of our meeting will be defeated if we don’t talk with utmost frankness. If you go away feeling confused, as you say you are, no purpose will be served by this meeting.

You referred to a credibility gap. There is, of course, a communication gap between us. So long as diplomatic relations are severed, this gap will continue. We should remain prepared for some difficulty in communications and understanding in the present circumstances and need not be too upset about it.

After Simla Agreement, your Prime Minister had expressed some doubts about the implementation of the Agreement. We responded immediately to remove your doubts. That is why I came to Delhi. I would be prepared to do so again if ever you have any doubts about our position. We should be prepared to meet more often. In the present circumstances, there is likely to be some misunderstandings and doubts, but it should be possible for us to remove them by discussions.

You find that my statement of our position has left you confused. May be, I was unable to explain properly. But I spoke sincerely and made an earnest effort to explain to you our point of view.

I spoke to you about the Cabinet meeting and what happened there. It is not normal to give outside an account of what happened in a Cabinet meeting, but I wanted you to know the real reason for our rushing to the ICJ.

I must explain again that after Kamal Hossain’s statement in Calcutta, we thought you might transfer the POWs to Bangladesh immediately. You saved the POWs from trials by bringing them out to India. We knew that so long as they are with you, they were safe. But when Kamal Hossain made the statement after his visit to New Delhi, we thought you might have agreed to the transfer. We did not have any choice.

I told you I was unhappy about the decision. I stated in the Cabinet meeting that going to the ICJ will delay matters and create difficulties for repatriation. When another Minister in the Cabinet asked me what if the trials are held. I had no reply. Besides, as I said before, at that very stage we received an extract of your Foreign Minister’s message saying that Indo-Pakistan talks can be purposeful only if Pakistan Government indicated its agreement in principle to the Joint Declaration of 17th April. It is quite possible that we misinterpreted the message, but our impression was that, unless we agreed beforehand to the basic principle, there could be no meeting and that the meeting was only to discuss modalities. This is how we came to the decision that we must approach the ICJ. Immediately to stop Bangladesh from holding trials. We honestly felt that this might strengthen your hands also. ICJ case can be withdrawn tomorrow. It was purely a defensive action.

If the trial danger is removed, and if POWs can be repatriated, we can withdraw the case tomorrow. We had genuine fear that something might happen unless we rushed to the ICJ. But we are prepared to withdraw the case now if we both agree.
Now about recognition: Here again, you seem to misunderstand our position. My President has no option in the Matter. He stands committed to recognition. He, however, found that he had no choice but to explain the position fully to our people. President went on tour to various parts of the country to seek the approval of the people. Your Prime Minister, however, got the impression that we were deliberately delaying recognition.

Prof. P.N. Dhar: Since the issue of recognition was getting delayed, the obvious conclusion was that the understanding given to us was not being implemented.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: President felt that he must seek people’s approval. He had no choice in the matter. He went in helicopter from place to place and undertook some intensive and very tiring tours.

Assembly resolution was no problem, but it was the temper of the people which worried him. He wanted to assuage their feelings and get the people’s support.

I am not going to argue as to what was embodied in the Interim Constitution. As my President said in Simla, we want to turn our back on the past. We want to build up a new future.

Prof. P.N. Dhar: This is where we find difficulty in understanding. Yesterday, you said that some newspaper or radio reports from India have a serious impact on the minds of your people. You say now that you want to turn your back on the past. Yet, we hear repeated references to confrontation at the highest level. You would appreciate that these statements have effect on the minds of the people in India also. They simply cannot understand these statements.

Mr. Ahmed: Yes, President spoke of confrontation in the past. It will not be so for the future.

Prof. P.N. Dhar: But there had been references to India trying to be a dominant power, trying to exercise hegemony. What will be the impact on the minds of the Indian public and the Pakistani public of such accusations? You must also bear in mind that Sheikh Mujibur Rahman has also a public opinion to contend with. His people underwent untold sufferings and, in their tormented feelings, the people of Bangladesh expect their Government to honour the commitments on the war trials. At one time it was stated in Pakistan that a thousand odd people could be retained for trial. But now they are thinking of only 195 people to be tried for crimes against humanity. If Mujib says he is going to give up trials, his nation may never forgive him. Similarly, when you impose conditions on recognition, people in India and Bangladesh do start entertaining serious doubts about the sincerity of your desire for normalization of relations with India and Bangladesh.
Mr. Aziz Ahmed: (Addressing Mr. P.N. Haksar). I hope to be able to arrange a meeting for you with the President tomorrow. I have received a message from him and he has agreed to the meeting. Please talk to him frankly and mention all your doubts and your difficulties in understanding our position. On the question of confrontation also, put your questions frankly to him and I am sure he will explain to you. He is always happy to remove misunderstandings. I cannot tell him, but you can certainly question him about all your doubts.

Shri P.N. Haksar: I thank you for arranging the meeting. I shall look forward to the honour of meeting the President. Your President said that the question of Bengalees was not difficult. They could go. In that case, you should help them in departing for Bangladesh. We on our part have stated about the POWs that 90,000 minus 195 can be repatriated straightaway. Thus, large mass of human beings, at present divided from their families, can get to their homes immediately. We are left with the question of the Biharis. The Bangladesh position is that Pakistani nationals, who want to go to Pakistan, should be allowed to go. Your argument is that there is economic burden. Perhaps, we can assess that burden. It may be possible for us to understand your economic argument if you can explain a little more in detail. It should be borne in mind that a large number of Bengalees would be leaving Pakistan.

On the question of trials, I told you Bangladesh Government’s position. On your side there have been several contradictions. It would be presumptuous on my part to question the statement of the President. He is the Head of the State for whom I have great respect. But on this question of trials, he had said at times that he could live with the trials. If I recall correctly, in an interview to the Newsweek of 3rd April, 1972, he had said that he is not apologizing for the excesses committed by the Army in Bangladesh. He had accepted that they had done very bad things. He had stated that if Mujib wanted to bring some people to trial, Pakistan will be prepared to oblige. Then again, in an interview to the Blitz of India, which is widely read, President had said: “if there are charges against 5,000, 10,000 people, they can be retained. But why keep the whole lot of the prisoners of war there?”

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: As I said before, we are at the crossroads. Our talks are at a crucial stage. We must take positive decision at this stage, on all the issues. If we work sincerely, appreciating each other’s point of view, we may be able to present the people of India and Pakistan with good news. Delay can only mean more tension, more suspicion and more doubts. There will only be charges and counter-charges, as time passes. I think, in this meeting we should be able to come to decisions.

The prisoners of war have already been there for 18 months. You must understand our position on war trials and Pakistani nationals.
I assure you we want to deal with the situation in an unemotional and realistic manner, on the basis of the humanitarian considerations. This is the approach which was very rightly suggested by your Foreign Minister, Sardar Swaran Singh. On this depends the future of the sub-continent. If we all could cooperate, one can imagine what it would mean for the economic prosperity and social progress of the 700 million people of the sub-continent.

Shri Kewal Singh: I am glad you say so. This is the vision that is before our Government which we would sincerely strive to realize. Other nations in the world have overcome their historical hostilities and bitterness and are today cooperating wholeheartedly for the welfare of their peoples. We would like to see that there is cooperation between our countries based on mutual trust and mutual benefit.

But Pakistan Government must appreciate it has some basic responsibilities, if that hope is to be fulfilled. We cannot give hope of peace, prosperity and friendship to our peoples if there is constant talk of confrontation which, it is repeatedly being said, has continued for a thousand years. Is it likely to inspire our people in India and Pakistan to think in terms of friendship, amity and cooperation? If we have to realize the hopes of a peaceful and prosperous sub-continent where amity and friendship prevails, the attitude and pronouncements from Pakistan side have to be very different.

You suggest that Sheikh Mujibur Rahman should show understanding in the cause of reconciliation. Pakistan, unfortunately, has failed to take even a small step which could have made a big contribution to reconciliation. That is the question of recognition. Even now, when the Assembly has passed the resolution in favour of recognition, so many conditions have been imposed with Government’s approval before recognition is accorded. What is the purpose of those conditions? Are these intended to make Bangladesh Government go on its knees to seek recognition? It is our impression that Bangladesh is no longer keen on immediate recognition. Their leaders don’t spend sleepless nights if recognition is not accorded to them. At one stage, it was matter of great importance. You missed the opportunity. Today, they are quite indifferent to it. Why not, then, recognize graciously rather than impose conditions? This could, possibly, have a big impact on the minds of the leaders and people in Bangladesh and could improve the atmosphere. The problems of which the resolution is being imposed as preconditions could, perhaps, be better solved in that improved atmosphere if recognition is accorded in a better spirit.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We genuinely want to work for durable peace on the sub-continent. As I said before, we want to forget the past, but we have genuine difficulties which you should appreciate. Unless the question of the trial of POWs is out of the way, no forward move can take place. We are stymied.
About recognition, we had hoped to take some steps, but it was the public opinion we had to satisfy.

I must, however, say again that trials we cannot accept. May I suggest one thing? You were able, through a brilliant stroke, to skirt the question of recognition in formulating your Joint Declaration. Is it not possible to skirt out the question of war trials also? That may help in a forward movement.

You should appreciate the position in which we find ourselves. If you bring 10,000 POWs tomorrow and leave them at our frontier, can we say ‘No’? We also know that we cannot convey agreement to receiving POWs while leaving 195 back for trials. Those who come will accuse us for betraying our soldiers. They will ask us as to why we agreed to their colleagues being left behind and being let down. They would say: “We would have stayed back. Why have you sacrificed our colleagues?

This is our real problem. I hope Mujib will abandon his negative approach and involve himself in constructive action. Otherwise, it will hurt the process of normalization God knows that will happen in the Courts constituted by Mujib. Passions will be excited and memories of 1971 will be revived. We shall also have to try the Bengalees who worked for the dismemberment of Pakistan.

We hope Mujib will say one day that let the past be forgotten. He can do so. He can make his people agree to. Hence, I agree with you that the process should begin, but the question of trials worries us. Can you help us in finding a way out?

We agree bad things happened, but this Government was not responsible for them. Mujib should know that. This Government has totally repudiated Yahya’s policies. Mujib should know Bhutto. That is why I say that Mujib should show statesmanship. My President has his difficulties.

If Mujib is seeking justice and not revenge, then there are Bengalees who also committed atrocious crimes during the same period against the Biharis and others who were in favour of one Pakistan. The massacres committed by them should also be punished.

As I said before, it is Bangladesh which stands to gain more with peace and reconciliation in the sub-continent. We draw no pleasure from Bangladesh’s difficulties. They have separated and we wish them well. When some foreign country asks us, we tell them to help Bangladesh. We particularly tell them that the humanitarian aid to Bangladesh must continue.

I served there for 20 years and I know Bangladesh well and I know its needs. I know the immense pressure of population and the limitation of its resources.
If the question of war trials is out of the way, there can be cooperation between the three countries.

Shri P.N. Haksar: On your side you could help. Take the question of recognition. You got the authority of the Parliament which you did not need. You could have had the authority without conditions saying that President Bhutto could recognize Bangladesh at the appropriate time. Why was it necessary to spell out the conditions and make the recognition conditional on various things? I do not believe it was difficult for the President to recognize Bangladesh any time. He can tackle most difficult questions and carry public opinion with him.

I recall the manner in which he dealt with the question of language in Sind. We know how extremely difficult the language issues can be. Yet, he was able to resolve it.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Please tell all that to President. You should speak to him frankly. Whatever you feel strongly in India, you should not hesitate in telling the President.

Tea Interval

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: As I said before, you had shown great wisdom in skirting the question of recognition. You and Bangladesh should skirt out the question of war trials. You asked me again about the definition of a Pakistan national. After the separation of Bangladesh, it means people of West Pakistan domicile. There are others who hold Pakistani passports. They have also a claim. Apart from these, we are prepared to take other people with a view to re-uniting families.

Beyond these categories, the President feels it is not possible for him to agree to take other people from Bangladesh. President knows that those politicians, who today support that the Biharis should be accepted from Bangladesh, will be the first to attack and condemn him when the Biharis reach here. It is not for Bangladesh Government to exercise the option whom to keep and whom to push out.

Shri. P.N. Haksar: There are well-known aspects of the question of nationality. There is always the municipal law based on territorial and ethnic aspect. But where a territory secedes, choice of the person is very important. One cannot force a person to stay and accept another nationality against his will. The Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh have been given the option. Bangladesh Government cannot be expected to keep them when they have professed their loyalty for Pakistan and want to go to Pakistan.
We had that experience in our own history. After partition, our two Governments enacted laws relating to citizenship. Millions of people who migrated, became citizens according to these laws.

When the French possessions merged with India, the people were given a choice between the Indian nationality and French nationality. Same thing happened in the case of the Portuguese possessions. French and Portuguese Governments agreed to take their citizens who exercised the option to retain their nationalities. It is not the question of a state imposing citizenship, the option of a citizens is most important.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Barring people of West Pakistan origin, everybody in Bangladesh should be eligible for Bangladesh citizenship. He has rights and duties in that State. Principal need is to provide for certain cases of hardship which we are prepared to do. If you suggest any variation, we are prepared to consider.

Shri P.N. Haksar: I am not sure if you have consulted some legal experts. It would be impossible to sustain your position legally. The people in Bangladesh do not ipso facto become citizens of Bangladesh. The state determines, according to its municipal law, as to those who qualify for being its citizens. People who find themselves in a country are not necessarily qualified for its citizenship.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: As your Foreign Minister had rightly said, we should look at all questions from the humanitarian angle and not from a legalistic point of view.

The case of Pondicherry is different. It did not secede from India. It was a colonial possession. Besides, French and Portuguese willingly agreed to take these people.

Shri P.N. Haksar: I agree that the humanitarian aspect is important, but in this case both the legal and humanitarian aspects lead only to one conclusion, namely that Pakistan must accept its nationals. A man says that I was a Pakistani national, I am a Pakistani national and I want to continue to be a Pakistani national. Is it not inhuman to leave him in a foreign territory? If free volition is exercised, how can one deny a national of a country to go to his country? We have examples of large movements after World Wars I and II. People are not forced to stay in a territory under compulsion.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We are prepared to look again from the humanitarian angle. But the atmosphere must improve before we can take up additional commitments. Today, the option is not voluntary. People are suffering from privation, lack of security and a sense of fear. It is the “duress of the circumstances”. Once the atmosphere improves, we can re-examine if some more people want to come to Pakistan. It will take a few months before the atmosphere improves. It will not be so sudden. For example, when the POWs come to Pakistan, they will not necessarily contribute to immediate friendly feelings between India and Pakistan. They will say that they were very badly treated. They will say that to get sympathy and to get good jobs. Similarly, the Bengalees returning home are going to speak very harshly of Pakistan. But, after the passage of a few months, things will improve.

Broadly, our approach is that the problems should be solved with statesmanship and in an atmosphere of reconciliation. The vast majority of Biharis may be anxious to come away because the tension is high. When tempers cool down, that will be the time to consider which other categories of non-Bengalees can be taken by us. If atmosphere improves and steps are taken towards reconciliation, Mujib may not talk about the war trials and many Biharis may not like to leave their homes in Bangladesh. After all, they have been there for 25 years and they have made their homes there. If some do want to come after the conditions have returned to normalcy, we shall certainly consider.

There is a major political difficulty. Despite brave speeches, no one will support the President if Biharis and others are accepted in Pakistan. The question is not economic, but political. We know the underlying political forces against it.

Take recognition: President was convinced that it was a matter of a couple of months. How different it proved? If recognition had taken place in time, a number of problems would have been solved POWs, war trials, repatriation etc. Not being able to recognize has done us lot of harm.

G. Verbatim record of the meeting of Indian delegation with Pakistani President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto at his residence.

Islamabad, July 27, 1973. (7.30 P.M.)

President Bhutto received Shri P.N. Haksar at the President’s residence. Shri Haksar was accompanied by Shri Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary, and Prof. P.N. Dhar, Secretary to the Prime Minister. On the Pakistani side, Minister of State Aziz Ahmed and Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi were present.

After preliminary polite exchanges, the following conversation took place:-

President Bhutto: I have been looking forward to a meeting since Simla. It was necessary to meet as so much has been appearing in the press, in statements etc. By exchange of views one can know where you went wrong and where we went wrong. Of course we can both put up a perfect case in newspapers, but in the interest of our relations it is important to meet and talk. Mr. Aziz Ahmed has briefed me fully on the talks you have had. I am not interested in drawing up a charge sheet and a counter charge sheet.

There are one or two things I would like to clear straight away.

First of all about the question of recognition. Before leaving for Simla, I met various delegations of political leaders. Students, intellectuals, activists, etc. to discuss our attitudes and policies with them. I wanted to have the sense of their thinking before going to Simla. All of them said that so far as Bangladesh-Pakistan relations are concerned, this subject should not be discussed in Simla. Earlier, when I had discussions with Mr. D.P. Dhar, I had envisaged the possibility of meeting Mujib in Simla or, at least, of discussing Bangladesh-Pakistan relations there with the Prime Minister. But I found that most of leaders I met before going to Simla were not in favour of our relations with Bangladesh being discussed in Simla. Therefore, even before leaving Lahore, I publicly said that in Simla I was not going to discuss questions relating to Bangladesh, it is only the Indo-Pak relations that we would be discussing.

At the meeting in Simla, the ice was broken and I was happy with the very useful discussions and the understandings we reached. In that informal atmosphere we discussed other matters also. I informally mentioned to the Prime Minister that I hoped to take the question of the recognition of Bangladesh to the National Assembly by August. Mind you, this was quite informal a sort of loud thinking on my part.
When I came back, I called a meeting of the Party’s Central Committee and I found that not a single members was in favour of the question of recognition being put before the National Assembly. They said they were not prepared to take a risk. There will be strong opposition in the countryside and they won’t be able to go back to their homes. They have to live in their constituencies and they have to face their people. They simply cannot take the risk. The Members were not only diffident, they were frightened. They said this question must be postponed.

I, therefore, thought that I must prepare the public opinion on this issue of recognition. I went to Lyallpur where the feelings were very high and there was strong resentment on the question of recognition. I addressed public meetings there. I went to Karachi and several other towns addressing public meetings advocating recognition. I addressed a public meeting in Pindi; it was a huge meeting and the crowds were very enthusiastic and jubilant. But when I touched the question of “recognition”, there was turmoil, firing from various directions; sten guns were used. Everything was helter-skelter. Members of the National Assembly pointed out to me that they had warned me about the public reaction.

I went to the Frontier Province and addressed meetings there also.

You would, thus, see that I had to adopt a step by step approach. As a result, I see that while there was strong opposition, people are now getting more accustomed to the possibility of recognition. Even today, if I say I am going to recognize Bangladesh tomorrow morning, students and militant elements will again raise their heads and start violent agitation. That does not mean that I have not decided to do so. The decision will be taken one morning. Finally, I have now got the National Assembly’s authority.

I had to do all this so that people feel that they have been taken into confidence. I had to get their authority. I am not inhibited in my freedom of action; but it was essential to give general satisfaction to the people that I am consulting them.

You see this country is having democracy after 15 years. People are highly sensitive. They are watching whether their democratic rights are being respected or not; whether they are being consulted or not. I had no choice in the matter.

I say all this to remove the misunderstanding you have in India. I had not given any categorical assurance. In fact, I had promised before going to Simla that I shall not discuss Bangladesh question. But, in that atmosphere of informality I did mention the possibility of early recognition. However when I returned, I found that the situation was very different. I am anxious to remove any misunderstanding. It is not true that I made a promise and went back on it.
Then there is the question of our going to the International Court of Justice. I studied Law and Jurisprudence although I must confess my knowledge is very rusty. Our Attorney General, who studied the case thoroughly, was dead certain of our position. He said our case was absolutely just and there could be no question of a decision against us. He steamrolled us into taking this step. Now I asked him why he gave such advice. Did he have a girl friend at the Hague that he was keen to go there?

Of course, we said in Simla that we will solve our differences bilaterally. I have not gone away from that. I know third parties cannot help us. We must try to solve our problems among ourselves. I must, however, say that you talk a very rigid view of bilateralism. Suppose, by the end of the century, we have a million meetings and no progress is made, you cannot say no other avenue should be explored. There is UN and the ball then will be in their court.

Besides, this was only a peripheral issue. We have not taken the main issue out of bilateralism, even if you put a rigid interpretation. We have not met for a year. All sorts of things are said in the press and on the radio. They are counter-productive.

Since Simla, I have not said a single word contrary to your Prime Minister or the concept of Simla. You have dealt with others Quaid-e-Azam, Liaquat Ali Khan and others. You know, our people, how emotional they are and how they get worked up and go berserk. They are having democracy for the first time after 15 years. I have to be extremely careful. They are ready to accuse me of “betrayal” or “sell out”. One cannot live in a vacuum.

If I am accused of “sell out”, I cannot proceed further. I have to say things. You must understand my position.

I invited your Prime Minister three or four times. I had hoped she would come and sense the atmosphere. We could meet not only in the Simla framework, but also outside it. I repeatedly invited her.

I am glad you came with your delegation. We had replied within 3 days of the receipt of the Joint Declaration. We consulted the Army Chiefs and other leaders and took prompt decision. We sought some clarification. I know you had to take time because you had to consult Dacca. About the venue, we had no quarrel, but we felt it was our turn. I was keen on this meeting, so much so that, while I was going to Washington and Aziz Ahmed was to accompany me, I told him to return to Rawalpindi for talks with you. I was anxious that the things should start moving fast.

I would request you to try to find a method to move forward at least one more step. There has been no progress for a long time.
There are two other questions I would like to deal with:

Firstly, the war trials. I shall be brutally frank. I simply cannot take the risk. After the great disaster we suffered, there has been a stupid attempt recently of which you know. There are centers of chauvinism. I am not worried about my future. If democracy goes, it will be a disaster. Tomorrow, if I am not, I don’t mind. But if democracy collapses, everything will go to pieces. I tell you: So far as prisoners of war are concerned you can throw the whole lot in the Ganges, but I cannot agree to the trials. That would be the point of no return; I mean that will be disaster for Pakistan; not for you, not for Bangladesh. If everything goes to pieces, whom are you going to talk to? You must appreciate my inability to acquiesce to war trials.

Secondly, the question of Biharis. You are responsible why I cannot take the Biharis. It is All India Radio which goes on saying: “the rights of the Sindhis are being destroyed; where is the Sindhi culture?” Sindhis say “we don’t want Biharis”.

However, I do not rule out taking some non-Bangalees. We are prepared to discuss and negotiate. Once I meet Mujib, it should be possible to work out a reasonable settlement. Mujib needs them more, for his mills and his railways etc.

It is not a question of one Bangali going and one Bihari coming. It is not my position, I have not said that. It is not an economic question.

I come from Sind. I know their problems. I owe something to my constituency. We can think of taking some people, divided families and the like.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: May I first of all tell you Mr. President how grateful I am that you have been gracious enough to receive us so soon after your return. Before leaving for Rawalpindi, I met my Prime Minister. She asked me to thank you for the verbal message you sent through Khushwant Singh. She smiled and wanted me to assure you that she did not mind your occasional sallies so long as you let her know later that they were not really meant for her. It is true, Mr. President, that no meeting has taken place since Mr. Aziz Ahmed’s visit. It would have been a good thing if a meeting had taken place.

I would explain to the best of my ability what happened since Simla as we see it.

What concerns us very much is the gap nascent gap in our understanding. The bridging of the gap is even more important than the other issues we have before us and those issues are certainly important. It is the language, the phrases and the idiom which is used that leaves a gap and creates doubts.
Unfortunately there are no other means of communication between human beings than verbal formulations.

You have made a case against us that we have been insensitive to your invitation or have been dragging our feet in not responding to your invitation. I would submit respectfully that, after the withdrawals in December, we have not been lying idle. We had reasonable expectation that the problems between Pakistan and Bangladesh will be dealt with between you two. It is neither wisdom nor sagacity to try to take upon ourselves the questions which are better discussed and settled by you two. We had expectation of recognition which would have absolved us of this responsibility. We had hoped that there would be recognition and there would be a dialogue between Bangladesh and Pakistan.

I do not say that there was any formal assurance, but I would submit that there was an expectation and that we had reason for entertaining that expectation.

When discussing the question of POWs in Simla, we stated clearly that we could deal with this question only if Bangladesh agreed. We rejoice that you got the agreement from us in Simla. We rejoice that you outwitted us.

My Prime Minister and Foreign Minister attach the greatest importance to the Simla Agreement. I am only a small fry but I would like to do my best to be of some service in bringing about reconciliation between India, Pakistan and Bangladesh. I have no past with Pakistan, no complexes. I profoundly feel the tragedy of the present situation. That probably is the reason why I have been entrusted with my present onerous responsibility.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed came to Delhi and said: “President was keen to recognize, but there was a difficulty because of the Sind riots”. He assured me that the Government agencies in India had not taken interest in these riots and had not played up the Sind riots.

If there is anything about Sind which our radio or our Official agencies had said, please let me know. We will apologies and we will stop it immediately. Perhaps Mr. Agha Shahi could document our trespasses of which I am not aware.

The President: When we had trouble with our army officers, All India Radio first accused us that this Government is incapable of taking any action. Later on it started saying that this Government was destroying the best army officers.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: Let Mr. Agha Shahi give me proof. We will take most firm action.

Believe me, Mr. President, we have a deep commitment to Pakistan’s integrity and inviolability and to the processes of democracy.
In August 1972, Mr. Aziz Ahmed explained that there had been some delay in recognition. We expressed the hope that it will take place soon. We can understand the delay. I admire the efforts you have been making, Mr. President, of which you have given graphic examples. I know these democratic processes from our own experience in India. Prime Minister Nehru and our present Prime Minister have to address meetings all over the country to carry the masses with them, to carry parliament and colleagues. We rejoice in your efforts.

But as of today, recognition has not taken place. It is not for us to sit in judgment. But we have to take cognizance of the fact that recognition has not taken place.

My prime Minister has not said that you, Mr. President, have reneged on your promise of recognition. She only said that expected recognition has not taken place.

But the basic problem is that Bangladesh is not ready and willing to talk unless there is recognition. How do we get out of this situation? Still, we have been applying our minds seriously to further steps

In early March, Bangladesh elections took place and it was not fair to approach them before the elections. As soon as elections were over, I went to Dacca on 1st of April and came back on 6th. On the 13th April, Dr. Kamal Hossain came to Delhi and we announced our Joint Declaration on the 17th.

We take no credit for this Joint Declaration. Bangladesh deserves the credit. They set aside the legal and political questions. They sidetracked the question of “recognition”.

It is true we got your response promptly. But if I may say so, your response was negative Your reply was a repetition of the old stand. So far as POWs are concerned “yes”, but so far as other humanitarian questions are concerned, “no”. Hence, my Foreign Minister, Sardar Swaran Singh, wrote to Mr. Aziz Ahmed for clarification.

At this stage wonder of wonders happened. Two aide memoire which, we are told, were unauthorized, were sent to us which raised serious doubts about your willingness to solve these humanitarian questions. Now we are told that it was a “private enterprise” of an Ambassador; that the aide memoire were not meant for my Foreign Minister’s eyes. Meantime, you took the decision to go to the ICJ. You say, Mr. President, that we are interpreting bilateralism “rigidly”. The adjective either strengthens or weakens a noun. I do not know the connotation of this adjective. There is no rigidity on our part. We only want both of us to be honest to the commitment we made in the Simla Agreement.

We closely examined the document you submitted to the ICJ. The case is based on a statement which appeared in Dacca on the 14th June 1972 according to which it was alleged that the trials were likely to take place and the POWs were likely to be handed over. This was one year ago. Nobody asked us about this. Bilateralism meant that you could have asked us and you could have discussed with us. Of course, we cannot prevent you from going anywhere.

You said, Mr. President, “if a million meetings take place and nothing is achieved, shouldn’t you explore other avenues?” But in this case, not even two meetings had taken place.

I would frankly submit that going to the ICJ has put the spanner in the works. Bangladesh Government, naturally, says that they are not bound by anything. You have gone to the Court and they are not a party to the case.

Pakistan Nationals:

As usual, India is used as the whipping boy. We are required to explain to Bangladesh why non-Bengali Pakistanis cannot be accepted in Pakistan. We are told it has something to do with All India Radio. I would like to have the exact complaint and we shall look into it. We shall undo it. What do we say to our own Government, Bangladesh Government and to our people as to your attitude towards Pakistani nationals? Bangladesh whose point of view we are privileged to represent here would ask for an answer as to why you are not prepared to take your own nationals.

The question of domicile is difficult to understand. If a Pakistan citizen is in Dacca, or London, or Tehran or Abu Dhabi, he remains a Pakistani citizen. He has a right to come to Pakistan. There is no legal or moral ground on which you could refuse to accept your nationals back. However, if it is a question of modalities, numbers, difficulties and burdens, we are prepared to listen to and understand your position. We want to understand your position in terms of numbers. I could try to understand your position if you were to say that it should be only 6 lakhs, 4 lakhs or 3 lakhs. That you could take so many. I could convey your views to my Government and to the Bangladesh Government. But I do want to hear something which is legally and morally tenable and which is free from contradiction.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed stated that we should give up trials. You have to see that the Prime Minister of Bangladesh has a commitment to his people and he has repeated this commitment many times. To us, he is the Prime Minister of Bangladesh elected by his nation and we have to respect his point of view. He has also to respect the wishes and expectations of his people. Thus, you see that we are not in a comfortable position.

Are we insensitive to our reputation? Do we like to be called inhuman and brutal? We are stuck. You tell us what to do. Here is a proposal to make a move forward. With the commencement of the simultaneous repatriation of the three categories, we hope tension will be lowered and it will contribute to further constructive decisions.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed had asked me if we could not skirt around the question of war trials. Let me have a concrete proposal.

About Biharis, you said nothing can be done. You have explained your difficulties. If I may respectfully submit, I have admired your courage in taking decisions. Take the agitation on the Sindhi language. You solved it. We know something about the language problem.

We don’t want to do anything which will create difficulties for you. I would only submit that if Pakistani nationals have been loyal to you, have stood by you and they say they cannot stay in the foreign country, let them come home. If you have difficulties let us examine them —about the numbers involved and the modalities of repatriation.

Regarding my Prime Minister’s visit, she will come tomorrow, but when she comes, what will be the result of the visit? Ordinarily, among neighbours and under normal circumstances, visits of goodwill take place. But our situation today, unfortunately, is very different. You say nothing can be done till the question of the POWs is resolved. What will the Prime Minister of India come and talks about?

Finally, if you will permit me, Mr. President, I would like to say something most respectfully. I am not a historian. (Pointing to the picture of a Buddha on the wall). What do you feel about that picture? Is, or is not that a part of Pakistan?

President Bhutto: I respect Buddha.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: Then, Mr. President, May I humbly ask, why do you talk of confrontation of thousand years? Are you in conflict with your own history? Is Pakistan in conflict with its own personality? To talk of confrontation has impact on the minds and hearts of people in India and Pakistan. It will be picked by wrong type of people in India. Is that a contribution to the durable peace in the sub-continent? There is Marx’s, but as I said, I am not a historian. In Iran, is there a confrontation between the period of Cyrus the Great and the post-Islam period? You said Sindhi language is 5,000 years old. Is there confrontation in Sind between the last one thousand years and the previous 4,000 years? I beg of you, Mr. President, to think it over the implications of the pronouncements about confrontation of a thousand years. This creates serious repercussions unnecessarily. I say unnecessarily because if you gain something, we can understand.
President Bhutto: I will say less of it in future. (President looked embarrassed and confused and said “It was for internal…”, but did not complete the sentence).

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Mr. President, I suggested to Mr. P.N. Haksar that if we could skirt around the question of war trials, we might see some possibility of moving forward with the question of repatriation. About Biharis, I had mentioned, that we are prepared to accept those who had West Pakistan domicile; we could also take some who have relations in Pakistan and those who hold Pakistani passports. I had explained that if repatriation started, there will be improvement in the atmosphere. Instead of talking of Biharis at this point, I suggested that we should wait and let the atmosphere cool down a bit. After the process has started and there is improvement in the atmosphere, we could examine other cases also of people who express their option to come to Pakistan. Meanwhile, a meeting with Prime Minister Mujib could further help in resolution of this question.

It was said that our recognition was subject to conditions. If Prime Minister Mujib meets tomorrow, recognition can take place immediately.

President Bhutto: If you can ask Mujib to be reasonable, I can ask China to drop the veto. We can show our good faith in that way. We feel Mujib should, in that case, realize there is some contribution from our side. This could also improve your relations with China. We could make common approach to many things. We could collectively get out of the quagmire.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: I appreciate your gesture, Mr. President. I would beg of you to kindly show magnanimity to Pakistani nationals. It is my understanding that by the categories mentioned by Mr. Aziz Ahmed, only about 10,000 to 15,000 people will come back. I cannot make this suggestion to the Bangladesh Government. My serious embarrassment is that this suggestion was already made through Prince Sadruddin and was rejected by the Bangladesh Government. May I submit that you should think in terms of a much larger number that you can absorb? Considering also the large number of Bangalees who would be leaving.

President Bhutto: You should inform Mujib that we can help him in admission to the United Nations. That is important for him. Perhaps, that will help.

Shri P.N. Haksar: My difficulty is that of communications. Sheikh Mujibur Rahman is in Belarade. Dr. Kamal Hossain is also there. When I report, it is possible Sheikh, Mujibur Rahman may be in a position to take a decision; may be, he would have to consult his colleagues. If the present proposals are not acceptable, perhaps, we return. We could say that we had discussions, but nothing came out of them and that we hope to meet again. That will take considerable time. Sheikh Mujib will come back about the 12th of August. Then I shall have to go to Dacca and meet him there. That would mean earliest meeting would be in the 3rd or 4th week of August.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: At present it is not possible to take into account the so-called “options” exercised by the people in Bangladesh. There must be improvement of the atmosphere. We could then discuss again the question of some more who may want to come to Pakistan.

President Bhutto: The number of those whom we can accept from Bangladesh can be negotiated.

Shri P.N. Haksar: If there is acceptance of the principle that Pakistan will look after its nationals then we could discuss the manner of repatriation. We could discuss numbers. We could discuss the question of burden. But if you enunciate a new principle of nationality, viz. West Pakistan domicile, then it becomes very difficult to resolve this problem.

Mr. Agha Shahi: You have advanced a legal argument. Legal aspects are highly complicated. If we accept that the entire population of Bangladesh is of Pakistani nationality. We must, therefore, have a human approach. There are Bengalees in Pakistan; we don’t ask them to go back.

Shri P.N. Haksar: I am not averse to practical solution. In fact, that is what I am trying to understand. It is the definition of nationality based on West Pakistani domicile, which you say is not tenable in law or ethics. On humanitarian ground, we should discuss the number of individuals who are entitled to come and whom you are in a position to take.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We cannot enunciate a principle and yet work on numbers. It will be a contradiction in terms. We can only think of numbers whom we can possibly absorb on economic and political grounds.

Shri P.N. Haksar: Please examine this question carefully. It is a very important problem. I would submit to you, Mr. President, to deal it with as much magnanimity as possible. It is then that we can make a move forward.

Recently, after the unfortunate conflict, a hundred thousand people have gone to India from Sind and Gujarat. Your leaders came to talk to them. They are still on our hands. We are looking after them. We do not make much noise about it. We are dealing with the problem on humanitarian grounds.

Considering the larger perspective ahead, I would appeal to you to take a large number as you can absorb even at a pinch. Both on legal and humanitarian considerations they are entitled to come here.
President Bhutto: Please don’t think that I don’t feel sorry for them. I do. But if I say so, then there will be a storm in Pakistan. Politically there will be very strong opposition.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: I can discuss the question of numbers with Mr. Haksar. We can meet tomorrow and see if we can work out a reasonable solution.

President Bhutto: It is sad that we have no diplomatic relations. Why have we to depend on the Swiss? To me it seems that the time has come when we must restore diplomatic relations.

Shri P.N. Haksar: If the issues before us today are resolved, we will be in a position to take further steps in normalizing our relations. I shall report what you say to the Prime Minister.

President Bhutto: (Turning to Mr. Aziz Ahmed) You should discuss again tomorrow. Try to find a formula about the numbers.

(Turning to Shri P.N. Haksar) I shall not be miserly. We will deal with the question with understanding.

I must, however, say that we should avoid misunderstanding. When Mr. Karanjia saw me, I said you can keep a thousand or two thousand soldiers back. But send the rest back. I did not say that they can be tried for war crimes. I only said that they can be kept as Amanat (collateral).

You discuss it tomorrow with Aziz Ahmed. As I said, we won’t be miserly. We must find a solution to this so that we can deal with other matters.

H. TOP SECRET

Summary record of the meeting held at the Pakistan Foreign Office.

A. Pakistani Draft:

1. Shri Haksar asked for a Pakistani draft which could be considered. This draft should take into account the joint Declaration, President Bhutto’s words of the previous evening that he would be generous on the question of Pakistani nationals and, thirdly, the fact that Bangladesh has set aside recognition in order to facilitate resolution of humanitarian problems.

B. Pakistani Nationals-Legal Aspects:

The Indian side made the following points:

i) Taking Bangladesh and Pakistan Citizenship Laws, the points that stood out were:

   a) A person who affirms his allegiance to a foreign State shall not be a citizen of Bangladesh.

   b) Under international law, it is not the duty of a new State, to make all persons found therein citizens of that State.

   c) In conformity with State practice Bangladesh allowed a large number or non-Bengalees option to choose their nationality.

   d) Persons who do not become Bangladesh nationals can retain their original nationality. The Pakistani suggestion that only such persons who are domiciled in West Pakistan will be their nationals is not borne out by international law nor by Pakistan’s Citizenship Act.

   e) Neither under Pakistan’s Citizenship Act, nor under its Constitution of April, 1973, can Pakistan render stateless its own nationals in Bangladesh. To do so would also constitute a violation of international law. Under international law, Pakistan is also obliged to receive back its nationals from Bangladesh, should they wish to return.

ii) India wished to follow the humanitarian approach. But in legal matters she wanted legal cogency. The brief from Bangladesh could not be set aside as a legal quibble. We would like to see Pakistani legal refutation. (This was in reply to Pakistani comments).
2.2  i) The Pakistani side said legal arguments cannot be conclusive and a humanitarian approach has to be adopted. The legal case could be refuted.

ii) However, Pakistan was prepared to examine a legal note giving the Bangladesh point of view.

C. Trials:

3.1 The Pakistani side said:

i) If there is a break down now there will be no settlement.

ii) If the question of war crimes trials cannot be settled now, let the issue be skirted.

iii) If there is a settlement, Pakistan can withdraw the case from the ICJ. How would this effect the pressure on India to transfer the POWs to Bangladesh.

3.2 The Indian side said:

i) The decision to withdraw from the ICJ or not has to be that of the Government of Pakistan.

ii) There are no pressures on India from Bangladesh. Bangladesh itself is subject to pressures of its own public opinion.

I.  TOP SECRET

Verbatim Record of the meeting held at the Pakistani Foreign Office.

On the Indian Side, Shri P.N. Haksar was assisted by Shri Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary, Prof. P.N. Dhar, Secretary to the Prime Minister, Shri A.S. Chib, Joint Secretary for Pakistan.

2. The Leader of the Pakistan side Mr. Aziz Ahmed had with him his colleagues Mr. Agha Shahi, Foreign Secretary, Altaf Ahmed Sheikh, Additional Foreign Secretary and Mr. Abdul Stattar, Director General.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed:

3. I am glad, you spoke out your mind to the President yesterday. Sometimes this is necessary. I must say you were able to state your case frankly and fully and this has more effect than my putting up strong notes. How do we proceed now? What Should be the guide-lines? If you have any suggestions, you may mention them.

Shri P. N. Haksar:

4. The President was most gracious in receiving me. It would be better if we now formally put something in writing. If you have something ready, we can consider it this afternoon. I may say at the outset that as far as my Government is concerned, I know its mind and am quite confident about the latitude that I have. However, I have very little latitude as far as the Bangladesh Government is concerned. Therefore, the formulation that we have to make in drafting our agreement has to be based on the Joint India-Bangladesh Declaration.

5. We will produce something this afternoon which I can assure you will be positive and is acceptable to your Government.

6. The broad features which should comprise this formulation have already been discussed between us and should be taken into account. Add to this the kind of blessings given by President Bhutto yesterday, namely, that he will be generous on the question of Pakistan nationals to be repatriated from Bangladesh. We should also take into account the fact that Bangladesh has already set aside the question of recognition in order to facilitate the resolution of the humanitarian issues. These should form the guidelines for preparing a draft which can be considered by the two sides.

7. On one question I would like to do a little exercise. Bangladesh Government has given us a paper mentioning the legal aspects of the nationality question, namely, the nationality of Pakistanis in Bangladesh who wish to be repatriated to Pakistan. I would like to invite Dr. Jagota, Joint Secretary (L&T) to join the meeting to briefly state the issue. Really speaking there is no problem. These persons in Bangladesh are Pakistani national. The problem is how this fits in with Pakistan law of the Government of Bangladesh as now instituted.

8. Dr. Jagota made a brief statement, a summary of which is given below:-

“According to Bangladesh, the nationality question has to be examined both under international law and the citizenship laws of Pakistan and Bangladesh. Bangladesh having been established as a sovereign independent State, it was entitled under international law to frame its own nationality law. The term “nationality” had from internal viewpoint the aspect of citizenship which established civil rights of persons residing there. From international angle, it established the right of a State to afford diplomatic protection to the interests of its citizens abroad. There are two basic tests for establishing nationality by a sovereign State, namely (a) genuine link of the persons with the territory, and (b) their allegiance to the state. Applying these criteria, Bangladesh had established their law by a Presidential Order 149 of 1972, which has been amended by the Bangladesh Citizenship (Temporary Provision) (Amendment) Act, 1973. Thus all persons who had genuine link with Bangladesh either by birth or by permanent residence therein are Bangladesh citizens. Two other provisions have been made, bearing in mind the same twin tests, namely:

i) that if a permanent resident of Bangladesh or his dependent is in the course of his employment or in the pursuit of his studies, residing in a country which was at war with Bangladesh and is being prevented from returning to Bangladesh, he shall be deemed to continue to be resident in Bangladesh and

ii) that a person who affirms his allegiance to a Foreign State shall not be qualified to be a citizen of Bangladesh.”

9. Thus the Bangladesh citizenship law is secular and lawful and is in accordance with international law. Under international law, it is not the duty of a new State to make all persons found therein citizens or nationals of that State. Further, in conformity with State practice, Bangladesh allowed a large number of non-Bengalis option to choose their nationality, including that of Bangladesh. A number of them have voluntarily affirmed their allegiance to Pakistan and expressed their desire to return to Pakistan. Finally, persons who had not become Bangladesh nationals, will retain their original nationality.
Pakistan has suggested that only such persons who are domiciled in West Pakistan will be their nationals. This is neither borne out by international law nor by Pakistan’s Citizenship Act.

10. An analysis of Pakistan’s citizenship law would bear this out. Pakistan’s citizenship law is embodied in the Pakistan’s Citizenship Act 1951, which was amended in 1952, and which appears to be still in force. Their new Constitution of April 1973 has not defined Pakistan citizenship nor has the citizenship law been amended. According to the Citizenship Act 1951, a person who was born in the territory comprising Pakistan, or who migrated to Pakistan from India before April 13, 1951 (the date when the Act came into force), is a citizen of Pakistan. Other migrating from India until the 1st January, 1952, may be registered as citizens of Pakistan upon obtaining certificate of domicile. Even persons who had first migrated to India and have returned to Pakistan may also become citizens of Pakistan by obtaining permit for permanent return to Pakistan. Persons also became citizens of Pakistan by birth after 1951 or by descent. Thus such “non-Bengalees” in Bangladesh who migrated from India before 13 April, 1951 became citizens of Pakistan by operation of law. Others became citizens of Pakistan in accordance with the provisions referred to above.

11. Under Pakistani law, a person will lose his citizenship if he acquired the citizenship of another State. Accordingly, those persons who have become Bangladesh nationals would no longer remain Pakistani citizens. All other persons will retain their Pakistani citizenship.

12. The Pakistan Citizenship Act makes elaborate provisions for deprivation of citizenship under Section 16. No provision is made for depriving a citizen of his citizenship if he was a natural-born citizen or if he migrated to Pakistan before April 13, 1951. In the case of other migrants, they can be deprived of citizenship only if they received the certificate of domicile by fraud etc. The question of depriving naturalized persons of their citizenship is not relevant in the present case.

13. Thus, it will not be lawful for Pakistan to render stateless their own nationals in Bangladesh. Such action would be illegal in terms of their Citizenship Act, and also unconstitutional because under Articles 4 and 25 of their Constitution of April 1973, citizens of Pakistan, wherever they may be, are to be treated in accordance with law, and enjoy equality before the law. Rendering human beings stateless would also constitute a violation of international law. Therefore, Pakistan has an obligation in international law to receive back its nationals from abroad.

14. To conclude, Bangladesh has, in conformity with international law, established its nationality law. Persons not eligible to become Bangladesh citizens retain their original nationality. Under the provisions of Pakistan's citizenship Act, 1951, also, persons who have not acquired another citizenship continue to be their nationals. They cannot be deprived of their citizenship except in accordance with Section 16, which does not apply to the case of Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh. Under international law, a State is not obliged to treat all persons found in its territory as its nationals. Nor can Pakistan make them stateless. Pakistan has an obligation in international law to receive back all its nationals from Bangladesh, should they wish to return to Pakistan.

Mr. Haksar:
15. There is a presumption even under Municipal Law that it is not humane to deprive citizens of their nationality. In Pakistan’s new Constitution, only territory is defined, there is no re-definition of nationality.

Mr. Agha Shahi:
16. What you have stated is the legal contention of Bangladesh. Even though on the face of it, it may look convincing, it is really speaking quite lopsided. I am quite sure Pakistan Government can produce an equally good legal refutation to establish that the non-Bangladeshi in Bangladesh are not Pakistani citizens. In the present context, such legal quibbling is not going to help.

Mr. Haksar:
17. I would like to see this refutation. Citizenship is rooted in humanity, so are the Geneva Conventions. The idea is that in the modern day wars should be made as humane as possible. Similarly, any action to deprive the hundreds of thousands of nationals of their citizenship would not be a humane act. I cannot set it aside as a legal quibble or as a technical matter. We are not dealing with conveyance or the Law of Contract Human beings are not cattels or goods and one cannot say that Citizens Laws of Pakistan have ceased to exit.

Mr. Agha Shahi:
18. What I am trying to say is that Bangladesh Government cannot interpret the law as it suits her this presentation. Bangladesh has chosen to go by international law where it suits her, at other places she chooses to go by sovereignty. I agree with the contention that under present circumstances all Bangladesh citizens are Pakistani citizens. However, we have to see how far this approach suits Pakistani and it is Pakistan’s sovereign right that regardless of existing laws, it should decide citizens. However, we have to see how far this approach suits Pakistan and it is Pakistan’s sovereign right that regardless of existing laws, it should decide upon the suitability of Bangladesh's contention.
on this issue. Our sovereignty is not subordinate to that of Bangladesh. I agree we have no right to make persons stateless and there is something written in the Charter of Human Rights to that effect. Neither has Bangladesh any right to make its citizens stateless.

19. This would show that legal arguments can never be conclusive between States. We have, therefore, to adopt a humanitarian approach and find a solution which is fair to India, Pakistan and Bangladesh. This is in accordance with what President Bhutto mentioned last night.

Mr. Haksar:

20. I heartily reciprocate your last comment on the need for humanitarian approach. However, let me tell you that when you accuse Bangladesh of arbitrariness in its approach to this question, this is unjustified. Bangladesh law is exactly on the lines of Pakistan law as it now stands and on this basis you have no case for denying citizenship to thousands of your own nationals. If you say that all Bangladesh nationals are Pakistani nationals, this is a jolly uncomfortable argument for you. In that case how can you deny them the right of movement from one part of Pakistan to the other.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed:

21. I must point out that it has already been agreed in my correspondence with Sardar Swaran Singh that we will tackle these legal considerations. I shall quote from Sardar Swaran Singh’s letter of 8th May, para two of which states:

“India and Bangladesh had deliberately set aside political considerations although they were of vital importance to them so as not to impede the resolution of humanitarian issues. We propounded no legal arguments; indeed we had eschewed them to achieve the humanitarian issues, without political and legal argumentation.”

In my letter of 16th May, I replied as follows:

“We agree that the issues with which we are faced are physically humanitarian and that, if they are to be resolved without delay, both Governments should refrain from getting involved in discussion of their legal and political implications.”

It is clear from this that we have agreed between us that three issues will be tackled on a humanitarian basis eschewing legal and political implications. I think we should confine ourselves to this approach, otherwise, we shall get bogged down in a legal tangle. Nevertheless, if you give us a legal note giving Bangladesh Government’s point of view, we are prepared to examine it.
Mr. Haksar:

22. We want legal cogency to be maintained on legal matters. While we are of course, willing and prepared to tackle these issues on a humanitarian basis, I am not resiling from the position stated in Sardar Swaran Singh’s correspondence with you.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed:

23. On the issue of war trials proposed by Bangladesh, there seems to be little meeting ground. My own feeling is that if we break down now, there will be no settlement. All that had to be said on either side had been said. I do not see any possibility of a change of heart on the part of Bangladesh. Therefore, we have to find a way out. If we cannot settle the question of war crimes trials, here and now, let us agree to “Skirt” the issue for the time being. Let the people in Bangladesh know that the door is open for a settlement and that we are preparing a draft of the agreement. A draft of the agreement on all issues, including war trials.

24. I will put it to the President and if there is a settlement we can withdraw the case on this issue from the ICJ. However, we would like to know if this will increase the pressure on India to transfer the prisoners of war to Bangladesh I can tell you that India’s objection on the jurisdiction issue was justified. We are sure that India has resisted pressures from Bangladesh to transfer the prisoners of war but we would like to know if it would help in any way if we withdraw the case.

25. You might like to know what prompted us to take this issue before the ICJ. We were greatly disturbed by a statement made by Dr. Kamal Hossain at Calcutta on his way back from Delhi wherein he said that the trials would commence by the end of May. We, therefore, felt that some urgent action was required to stop this. This decision was taken at a hurriedly convened Cabinet meeting. However, I was not even aware of the details of the application filed by our Attorney General till quite late, as I was preparing to go abroad. Another reason for going to Court was that we were disturbed by your Foreign Minister’s letter of 8th May in the last paragraph of which there was a mention that unless we agreed in principle to the proposal contained in the Declaration, there could be no talks.

Mr. Haksar:

26. By seeking my advice in this matter you have put me in a very awkward position. I cannot advise you at all. Whether you wish to withdraw or continue has to be a decision of the Government of Pakistan. As the misunderstanding about our position on talks, I think this need not have arisen at all. This has been amply made clear in Foreign Minister’s correspondence. It should be remembered that Foreign Minister’s letter of 8th May was in the context of Pakistan’s statement of April 20 which had put Pakistan’s stand in a legal strait jacket. In the circumstances India can do no more than to seek a clarification of Pakistan’s position. Obviously, Pakistan’s statement of April 20 did not provide a negotiating basis.

27. As to the idea of pressures on India by Bangladesh Government, I can only say that there are no pressures on us, but Bangladesh Government itself is subject to pressure of public opinion which is in favour of justice being done to the victims of brutalities, perpetrated during 1971.

TOP SECRET

Summary of discussions of the meeting on July 28, 1973 at 5.30 P.M.

A. Number of Bangladesh national in Pakistan:

1. The Pakistan side said:
   (i) The ICRC had estimated in November 1972 the number at 157,000 with a 15% margin of error. This margin applied to the 95,000 persons in the private sector, not to the military and civilian personnel:
   (ii) On enquiries from the Indian side, the Pakistan side clarified that these persons were being kept at camps at Warsak, Gujranwala and near Karachi. Only 210 officers were involved in grouping these persons. They were with their families. The decision to group them was taken because resentment was expressed by those who did not escape to Bangladesh that those who went ahead would find jobs:
   (iii) Of the civilian officers, probably 15 or 16 civilians would not want to return to Bangladesh. They all had their families with them:
   (iv) Nearly 12,000 persons have come to Pakistan through Nepal and Burma. The President has not allowed the Razakers to come.
B. Pakistani Draft:
(i) This was unlikely to find favour with Bangladesh. They had skirted recognition and were now being asked to skirt trials. At the same time 203 Bengalees were being kept for reprisal trials.
(ii) What was being offered to Bangladesh was what had been formerly rejected by Bangladesh.
(iii) The Pakistan President had said that he would not take miserly view of the people who go back. The Pakistan attitude should be informed by generosity.

2.2. The Pakistan side said:
(i) The Bengalees had also committed crimes. They were also guilty of the crime of treason. They had stolen secret documents and passed them on to the Soviet Union for passing on to India and to the British:
(ii) It was because of these crimes that Pakistan had laid off Bangladesh officials:
(iii) It is Pakistan, not Bangladesh, that has had to bear the brunt of events:
(iv) The ICRC or the UNHCR could be asked to take fresh options of those who had opted. Thus the door is being kept open for further negotiations, in a calm atmosphere:
(v) Pakistan will not accept settlement on the basis of trials being held and on the basis of Pakistan accepting 260,000 persons:
(vi) If there is a breakdown, there is no point in another meeting soon because the gap is too wide; a meeting could to take place some time next year.

TOP SECRET

Verbatim record of discussion between the Indian and Pakistani delegations.

Islamabad, July 28, 1973. (5.30 P.M.)

Mr. Aziz Ahmed was assisted by Mr. Agha Shahi, Mr. Abdul Sattar, Mr. M.A. Jafri and Mr. Shahnawaz. Mr. Kewal Singh and Mr. P.N. Dhar accompanied Mr. Haksar. Mr. K.P.S. Menon and Mr. A.S. Chib were also present.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed read out the Pakistani draft, copies of which were still being typed, which the Pakistani intended to hand over to us. Pending arrival of the copies, Mr. Haksar asked what, according to Pakistan, was the number of Bangalees.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: According to the ICRC, about 150,000; some of us think that it is even less than this figure. Through Nepal and Burma nearly 12,000 persons have come from Bangladesh but we have allowed only certain categories to come. We have not even allowed the Razakar to come. This shows how firm the President has been, because probably the Razakars would be killed if they go back to Bangladesh. But if all are allowed to come this will be, to quote my President, to “open the flood gates”.

Mr. P.N. Dhar: The number has been arrived at by multiplying the heads of families by an average family size?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Yes. I think that the ICRC has been pretty good. They carried out a very good census.

When India and Bangladesh proposed in November 72 to let the families go, the President said that makes about 6,000, we will let 10,000 go. Then he said let it be 15,000. The list of these 15,000 was proposed solely by the ICRC. We understand from Indian sources that only about 2,000 women and children are willing to come away without their men folk, but we are not waiting for these 2,000 to come. Sheikh Mujibur Rehman has now said that he wants to examine each individual of the 15,000. Not a man has, therefore, moved. There has been no movement on either side for about nine months. Pity.

(Mr. Sattar entered at this point)

(After consulting Mr. Sattar)

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: The ICRC estimated the number of Bangalees at 157,000 with a 15 per cent margin. But this applies only to the 95,000 persons in the private sector, not to the military and civilian personnel. The ICRC estimate was made in November, 1972. Since then thousands have left. We took the line that we would take reasonable precautions, but if they want, let them go.

Mr. Haksar: What was the motivation for the round-up?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We found there was considerable resentment among those left behind that those who went would get the jobs. The proposal had been under consideration for 6 months. We treated them well. We do not want to embitter them. Till the end of August, we paid their full salaries. We then cut these down to half and then further but stipulated a minimum of 1,000. For people like the Chaprasis (peons) there was no cutting down. However, we found that far too many were going. A lot of anger was expressed by those left behind. So we put them into repatriation camps. Their families are with them. The camps are at Warsak, Gujaranwalla and near Karachi.

Mr. Sattar: Only 210 officers are involved in the decision to group these persons, together with their families. ICRC has visited all three camps and sent reports to its headquarters.

Mr. P.N. Dhar: Do the army personnel also have their families with them?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Very few. For they were staying in barracks.

Mr. Haksar: All the 157,000 Bangalees want to go?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Perhaps not about 15 or 16 civilians.

Mr. Haksar: Did the ICRC also take the census or whether these persons wished to back?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: The ICRC assumed that they wanted to go.

Mr. P.N. Dhar: The other ranks do not have their families with them?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: I should think so. Our other ranks also do not have their families with them.

We have been slanged a great deal about the treatment of Bangalees. This happens every time Mujibur Rehman speaks.

(The Pakistani draft was handed over)

Mr. Haksar: Instant reactions should be avoided when we are dealing with serious matters with far reaching consequences. However, with great regret I have to say that I do not have the feeling that this framework will meet the objective that we so ardently desire. I do not want to use strong words, but I have to express my feeling of disappointment, especially, because when I and my colleagues returned after calling on H.E. the President, I was expecting some generous impulse in making these proposals. I should like to seek your permission to consult my colleagues and let you have not an instant but a mature reaction during the course of the day. Knowing as I do our Bangladesh friends, I don’t think they are likely to bite this piece of morsel. Broadly speaking, their reactions would be that they have been bending backward all along the line. They set aside recognition. Now they are being asked to skirt around trials, a matter of deep importance to them. You are keeping the Bangladeshis according to your own admission, as an act of reprisal which according to them is not justified. They have been served with a dish which, as I said to the President, has been offered to them before, garnished with Mr. Sadruddin. All the concessions have been given unilaterally by Bangladesh—skirting around recognition, and now, skirting around trials. Even assuming that they agree to the latter, I am not sure what they have got: the reprisal trials of the 2 ½ 3 Bangladeshis, and nothing on the return to Pakistan of Pakistanis.

My observations are made in the knowledge of how their mind works. Perhaps we could meet again tonight.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: I am very sorry to hear this. If Bangladesh is going to exercise the veto on our relations, so be it.

Mr. Haksar: It is not a question of a veto but they will ask me, what have you got from Pakistan? Sheikh Mujibur Rahman has his commitments. I, too, have difficulties. It is unfortunate if all our labour leads us to this end. But I have an unenviable task of trying to convey as best as I can Bangladesh’s feelings. I cannot say that theirs in an unreasonable reaction. It is in fact a reasonable reaction. Two major issues, which are just as emotive, just as much involving reiterated commitments, you want to set aside. I am saying all this with great deliberation and sotto voce. If this is the result, let us part, still with goodwill, perhaps sad, hoping to meet again.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: This is all we can say. What else can I say? At another meeting? I shall be sorry if this meeting fails, but it looks a though there is no meeting ground.

You talk about commitments to Bangladesh. But there is a higher commitment to the Simla Agreement. Do we progress? There is another point which I would like to mention: I was very sorry to hear you say to the President that you were outwitted at Simla.

Mr. Haksar: The President said this to the Washington Post. I think the President understands very well what I meant. I told the President, the Prime Minister asked me to say that she has received his verbal message. She does not mind his occasional sallies so long as she is informed later on that they were not meant for her. I rejoice in our being outwitted if it means that the result is the Simla Agreement.

Mr. Agha Shahi: Is it any particular parts or the whole of our offer which is unacceptable?

Mr. Haksar: I don’t know about the formula for skirting around the trials. I don’t know about the justice of keeping 203 Bangladeshis. Then, again, about the number of people you are willing to take and the way it is done. I need not go into the preamble which is not entirely satisfactory but these are the facts of the case.

Mr. Agha Shahi: Bangladesh is so emotional that they see only their side of the case, but there has been treason of troops (Aziz Ahmed adds, also of Civil Servants - Foreign Service Officers giving away secrets). Do they really think that the misdeeds, wrongs, crimes were committed by only one side? How is this possible? There may have been alleged excesses. But are they lily-white and we black? There must be some objectivity, not this one-sided approach. We thought that with the passage of time there would be less subjectivity but this has not happened.

Bangladeshis think they are doing us a great favour by setting aside recognition but what about our own traumatic experience, of having one State split into two? We have not raised questions of international law because we wanted a non-legalistic approach. We have not raised the questions of the rights and duties of States, etc. because we know that if States ignore their obligations, nothing can be done.

We realize you are charged with thankless duties but we have really great practical and political difficulties in absorbing persons who come back. Haven’t we even the right to point out that 203 persons committed crimes? This is not a fair approach.

Mr. Haksar: No useful purpose will be served by going into all this. I accept that on your side there has been a traumatic experience. It is no use drawing up a balance-sheet of horrors. But they feel, and I think with some justification, that they have been rather more at the receiving end. May be you feel they should not be emotional. But I have seen some of these things and I can only say in justification of their feelings, whenever a conflict of this nature takes place, there is a long history behind it. You talk of a power-drunk military junta, but that is in the past. Why do you want to be inheritors of that legacy at all? There is a book written by a Major General of your army which recounts some of the things that happened. Things went wrong somewhere down the line. Ayub, Yahya did not see things as they should have seen. But I do not want to debate all this. You are stepping into shoes which are not yours. We all want to start a new chapter, you, we, Bangladesh. So we tried to set aside the question of recognition.

You are not saying that you don’t want to recognize. In fact you have been persuading your people to accept recognition. I am not questioning your sovereign right to decide upon recognition. You want to do it – and you have not done it. Why fling it in my face? The question of recognition is the greatest act of reconciliation. As the President said, “We want to embrace our brethren”. But you cannot embrace them when you do not recognize them. Mr. Aziz Ahmed has told us how the President argued with the politicians. The president himself said in Simla that perhaps he had made a mistake. What is the rationale of what you are saying, Mr. Agha Shahi? You were not in the sub-continent in those days; you were not facing the realities.

Mr. Agha Shahi: For a year I was facing headlines about the Pakistani genocide.

Mr. Haksar: Facing headlines is not the same as facing realities. I can live with headlines. I faced realities. What is the good of headlines? The world will not help us. As I said, your President himself wants to recognize Bangladesh. He swallowed the dust of your villages to do so and then faced your Assembly.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: There is nothing I can do to present our case in a manner which will meet our with your acceptance. We have to think of our responsibilities. It is our men who are kept as POWs. It is we who should recognize Bangladesh. We are asked to accept Bangladesh’s right to hold trials. We are asked to accept the alleged optees; probably they have opted because of the conditions in Bangladesh. You accuse us of reprisal trials, but what will our people think? A top Secret telegram was stolen and passed on to the Russians by Foreign Service Officers to be sent on to the Indians. Something were even sent to the British. Files have been stolen. This happened after the war. We then decided to lay off these officers, but this had also happened during the war.

If Mujibur Rehman thinks that he is at the receiving end, he is not right. We have to bear the brunt of the situation. All right, keep the POWs for another 18 months. All right, let him have his trials. Let him throw out the non-Banglaees. We will not accept them. We have no power to dissuade him from doing what he wants to do.

As I said, we are back at the cross-roads where we were before the Simla Agreement. One road points to re-conciliation, another to suspicion and confrontation. At the time of the Simla Agreement the leaders chose the right road. We are back at that point again. There can be nothing doing on the Simla Agreement with things as they are. We can go on mounting nice expressions about the Simla Agreement, but we shall be deluding ourselves. The choice is yours. We don’t have the POWs. If you say that unless we agree to these demands, you will keep the POWs, we will wait. This will be accepted as a fact of life.

Mr. Haksar: If you had taken the choice we gave you way back in April or May, all the POWs minus 195 would have come back. It was your choice not to take them back.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Not on those conditions.

Mr. Haksar/F.S.: …… to arrive at the Joint Declaration we made a tremendous effort. On trials Bangladesh says this and this is what has happened and they have made commitments on scores of occasions to hold trials. You say, that may be so, but a point of no return will have been reached. You say, skirt around the trials. My leader says, I don’t know, I shall have to consult Bangladesh. Secondly, what you are offering to do is what was formerly rejected by Bangladesh. How one we report this to Mujibur Rehman?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We have not asked him to give up the trials. We have only asked for time for all to consider the matter dispassionately. On your putting aside the question of recognition I said on TV that this a step forward. On persons coming from Bangladesh also we are keeping the matter open. Let me tell you the consideration I have in mind. We could ask the ICRC or the UNHCR to go and take fresh options of those who have opted. We are thus keeping the door open for further negotiations. But if you expect us to accept a settlement on the basis of trials being held and on the basis of our accepting 206,000 persons, then there will be no settlement. If there is a breakdown, we will meet some time next year, because there is no point in another meeting soon. The gap is too wide.

Mr. Haksar: I would leave you with a small thought. The President said that he would not take a miserly view of the people to come back. Your attitude could be informed by generosity, which is a paraphrase of what the President said.

Joint Secretary (BD)
L. First Draft of the Agreement presented by Pakistan at the discussion held on July 28, 1973.

In Simla last year, the Government of Pakistan and the Government of India "resolved that the two countries put an end to the conflict and confrontation that had hitherto marred their relations and work for the promotion of friendly and harmonious relationship and the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent".

2. Reaffirming that resolve, the Special Envoys of India and Pakistan met in Rawalpindi, determined to resolve those issues which stood in the way of the further implementation of the Simla Agreement and the promotion of reconciliation in the sub-continent. These issues are:

(i) Repatriation of prisoners of war and civilian internees from India to Pakistan;

(ii) repatriation of Benalis in Pakistan to Bangladesh;

(iii) repatriation of Pakistan nationals in Bangladesh to Pakistan.

They considered that the best way to resolve these issues was to adopt a humanitarian approach.

3. The discussions of the Special Envoys of India and Pakistan were throughout inspired by this approach. It has now been agreed with the concurrence of their respective Governments that:

(i) Pending further consideration of the question of repatriation of 195 prisoners of war in India and 203 Bengali officials, military and civilian in Pakistan, all the remaining prisoners of war in India and all the remaining Bengalis in Pakistan and Bangladesh respectively; and

(ii) as regards the non-Bengalis who, according to the joint Indo-Bangladesh statement of April 17, 1973 “opted for repatriation to Pakistan” in the first instance, all persons of West Pakistan domicile now in Bangladesh, employees of the Central Government and their families, and members of divided families, irrespective of their original domicile should be repatriated simultaneously with the repatriation of the persons mentioned in the foregoing clause.

4. The Special Envoys were confident that the implementation of the above agreement would make a major contribution to the promotion of reconciliation in the sub-continent. It was also agreed that, as soon as a measure of reconciliation has been achieved, representatives of India and Pakistan and, if possible, of Bangladesh, will meet to consider the question of migration to Pakistan of such other persons in Bangladesh from amongst those said to have “opted for repatriation to Pakistan”, who constitute hardship cases or who have special and adequate reasons for seeking migration to Pakistan.

5. It was further agreed that the process of repatriation referred to in paragraph 3 should start without delay and for this purpose, nominees of India, Pakistan and Bangladesh, assisted by representatives of the International Committee of the Red Cross and U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees should meet at Wagah on August ———— 1973, to work out the arrangements and modalities of simultaneous repatriation of all the categories of persons referred to in that paragraph.

M. TOP SECRET

Summary of important points made at the meeting held at the Pakistan Foreign Office.

A. Repatriation of Pakistanis from Bangladesh

1. The Pakistani side made the following points:

   (i) President Bhutto had consulted the Chief Ministers of Punjab and Sind. The repatriates will only be settled in Punjab. Pakistan would be willing to accept persons of West Pakistan domicile now in Bangladesh, employees of the Central Government and their families, irrespective of original domicile. In addition, they would take some hardship cases, of not more than 20,000. This would comprise a total of 50,000. These hardship cases would be a part of a secret agreement which Pakistan would disown, if made public. After the repatriation of POWs, and war crimes trials have been set aside, Pakistan would be willing to ascertain the options through an impartial international agency and take another 20,000, making 70,000 in all. Mr. Aziz Ahmed was willing to recommend to his President that this last figure of 20,000 was to be a floor, and not a ceiling.

   (ii) The ICRC census had shown only 170,000 Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan, of whom 15,000 had already left clandestinely. A large number of the remainder would not wish to go to Bangladesh. Bangladesh’s approach is racist.
(iii) The London Times had described the options taken by Bangladesh as ‘dubious’ options and when there is a change in the situation, even those who have opted for Pakistan can opt for Bangladesh with a clear conscience.

(iv) In economic terms, the question of absorptive capacity was only a small question. The issue was really a political question for which only the President can be the judge.

(v) If international verification takes place it will not be simultaneous. That is at a time when tempers had cooled down.

The Indian side said:

1.2(i) What was even more worrying than small number being accepted by Pakistan was the unwarranted description of Mujib’s action as ‘racist.

(ii) The problem was disproportionately magnified even as to political difficulties. India had absorbed 100,000 Pakistani nationals from Sind. A small road block was preventing the opening up of the vista of cooperation. There could be either international verification, in which case Pakistan must take all those who wished to go to Pakistan, or alternatively, one should go by numbers. If the latter, there must be some proportionality.

B. War Crimes Trials

2. The Indian side pointed out:

(i) Pakistan’s retention about 203 Bangladesh national was a negative step:

(ii) The suggestion of skirting the trials could be put to Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. However, recognition was being made contingent on the disposition of 195 and 203 – as the word ‘disposition’, a deliberately un-emotive word was used. But discussions would have to take place between Pakistan and Bangladesh, not Pakistan and India. How will this be possible without recognition? If any weight was to be attached in the package offer by Pakistan, recognition must take place.

(iii) The sugar-coating offered by Pakistan — of recognition when the 195 are returned and of UN membership — would not exist in the agreement. It was, therefore, only a deferred hope.

2.1 The Pakistan side said:

(i) They might be able to ask the Chinese to permit Bangladesh entry to UN after war crimes trials are skirted — and they thought China would agree — but recognition was not possible without war crimes trials being dropped because of the National Assembly resolution. With UN membership, tempers in Bangladesh will come down and war crimes trials will probably be forgotten. Fewer people will want to come to Pakistan and there would be reconciliation. However, if Bangladesh says that war crimes trials shall be held, and Pakistan shall accept these people back, then nothing would happen. The Simla Agreement will be as good as dead.

(ii) If repatriation starts, trials might be dropped. Mujib may talk to the President and say if recognition comes he would drop the trials.

and their families and members of the divided families irrespective of their original domicile, all of whom together number nearly 17,000 persons. In Paragraph 4, of the proposal made by Pakistan on 30th July (it should be 28th) there is a provision for Pakistan taking some more “hardship cases”. President Bhutto has indicated that Pakistan will be willing to enter into a “secret agreement” which Pakistan will disown if made public but according to which they would be willing to take 20,000 people from Bangladesh belonging to this hardship category. This would make a total of 50,000 people. Later, after the repatriation of Pakistani POWs has taken place, and the question of war trials has been set aside, Pakistan would be willing to ascertain through some impartial international agency like the ICRC or the UNHCR the wishes of the optees who are supposed to have declared their allegiance to Pakistan. Some simple question can be asked as to why they wish to migrate to Pakistan and if they have any good reasons. However, this will be subject to a ceiling of 20,000 persons, thus making an overall total of about 70,000 persons. This is the utmost limit to which Pakistan can go and President Bhutto wanted it to be emphasized that it would not be possible to stretch these limits any further.

Bangladesh’s estimate of Bangalees in Pakistan who are likely to go is quite exaggerated. They have been talking of 3 to 4 lakh persons whereas the ICRC which had carried out a census has mentioned a figure of 170,000 out of whom 15,000 have already left Pakistan clandestinely. Amongst the rest, there is a large element of population comprising persons who are employed in small jobs, such as labourer and domestic servants. Word has gone around that employment opportunities and economic situation are better in Pakistan. Quite a few of these Bangalees may not eventually go to Bangladesh. Therefore, Pakistan’s capacity to absorb non-Bangalees from Bangladesh is even more limited.

Looking at the package now offered by Pakistan realistically, if this is acceptable to Sheikh Mujib, we can assure them that Bangladesh will get recognition from Pakistan and also be admitted to the United Nations. I am mentioning these additional benefits which can accrue to Bangladesh if they are reasonable. Pakistan is making this offer in all sincerity in order to promote the process of reconciliation.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: You have mentioned that the 20,000 persons comprising hardship cases can be chosen after normal conditions prevail. Who is to judge whether normal conditions have come about?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: This can be seen at that time. We have no strong views about this. We can leave it to the international agency or it can be decided by some other means. My own feeling is that if Pakistan’s proposal is accepted by Bangladesh, recognition will follow and normal conditions will prevail.
Mr. P.N. Haksar: What about your idea of holding 203 Bangalees for counter trials? This would be a negative step. Would this not vitiate the atmosphere?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Bangladesh cannot have everything its own way. We are not holding these people as hostages. We have had clear cut evidence in our possession for quite some time about the involvement of these persons in espionage and anti-State activities. There were some Bangalee officials who, month after the war was over, indulged in lifting of documents from our Foreign Office and handing them over to Foreign missions. A top secret telegram was handed over to the Soviet Embassy to be passed on to India. Another officer contacted the British Embassy. I will not go into details but we are willing to organize an international tribunal to try these people and we are sure that there is enough evidence to convict them. However, we are saying to Bangladesh that let by-gone be by-gone and we are not interested in going ahead with these trials if they also drop the idea of trying Pakistan POWs. We have suggested in our proposal that the idea of trials on both sides can be skirted around for the time being. We are not saying now that no trials should be held. We only say that this matter can be discussed between Bangladesh and Pakistan and may be we can find an amicable solution. However, if this is not acceptable to Bangladesh, we can drop it but in that case the deadlock will continue.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: I am prepared to convey your proposal for skirting around trials to Bangladesh Government. It is up to them to consider it. However, I must insist that the threat of counter trials is a negative factor and does not seem to us to be justified.

Regarding the views expressed by you about accepting Pakistani national from Bangladesh, I must say that there is no intention on the part of Bangladesh or ourselves that this should result in the opening of flood gates, as feared by Pakistan. There are two ways of tackling the problem:

(a) Verification — an international agency such as the ICRC or the UNHCR can be asked to verify the number of those who want to migrate to Pakistan. Bangladesh has indicated that their number is no more than 206,000;

(b) Numbers — if Pakistan insists on going by numbers, this should be proportionate and should have some relationship to the total population of non-Bangalees which is over 6,00,000. Pakistan’s calculations have hardly any relationship with this total.

You talk of political difficulties in absorbing 206,000 persons from Bangladesh who are your own nationals. You would recall that India has after the withdrawal of troops from occupied territories in Sind absorbed nearly 100,000 Pakistani nationals who have crossed over from Pakistan during the hostilities and have stayed on. Despite the attempt at exploitation of this issue by Opposition parties in India, we have taken steps to tackle this problem in a statesman like manner. Therefore, I feel that if the total number of non-Bangalees is over 600,000 and only 260,000 want to come to Pakistan, it is not an insurmountable situation. The offer from Pakistan is nowhere near the total. It is not 90%, 80% or even 50%. I am not bargaining, but Pakistan's current offer cannot be taken seriously.

Prof. Dhar: In terms of the overall magnitude of the problem, and what you have stated about the alternatives of reconciliation and continued confrontation in the subcontinent, this problem of Pakistan nationals seem to be a minor road block. You will agree it is not important enough for Pakistan to wish to choose the wrong path, merely because of this minor obstacle.

Shri P.N. Haksar: The alternative are quite spectacular. On the one side there is the prospect of durable peace, on the other, you say there is confrontation and deadlock. Are we to choose the latter for the sake of 260,000? Do you want us to believe that any figure above the 70,000 mentioned by you is going to hamper Pakistan's political system?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: It is not a question of bargaining. It is incontrovertible issue for President Bhutto. He can only go so far as his political judgement and his political advisers will permit him.

Morning Meeting of 29.7.73 (continued):

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: May be I am wrong. I am glad of that clarification. We cannot take Bangladesh's options seriously. Under the conditions we are surprised that more did not opt for Pakistan. The whole basis of Bangladesh's approach is wrong. They talk about non-Bengalis. But then they should say you take the Bengalis also who, they claim, owe allegiance to Pakistan — there are 60,000 of them in jails. This contradiction shows up the racist approach of Mujibur Rahman.

Mr. Haksar: Quite seriously, and with great respect, what troubles me much more is your approach, more than the number of 60,000 or 70,000. You call Bangladesh racist, but they are not asking you to take all the non-Bengalis not even 300,000.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Did they give the option to the Bengalis also?

Mr. Haksar: No. Why should they? We need not go into the background: it was a struggle for Bengalis nationalism.
Mr. Agha Shahi: But the situation is going to change when the repatriation is completed and there will be the recognition of Bangladesh.

Mr. Haksar: We have not reached that stage. You are talking about a confrontation.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Are you satisfied by the stalemate?

Mr. Haksar: No. We are trying to break it. You should take into account that others also have political difficulties. It is for our political masters to arrange political difficulties. Sheikh Mujibur Rahman has his own difficulties.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We lost half the country. It is we who have the difficulties.

Mr. Haksar: Are we going into all that? Why? I go by what your President said that your former political masters lost it. We are prepared to take a risk on the highly emotive issue of trials.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: There is no risk because the trials are only being postponed.

Mr. Haksar: .......All elected political leaders are entitled to equal respect. What is the use of haranguing me about this?

Mr. Agha Shahi: One gets the impression that it is considered that Sheikh Mujibur Rahman is doing us a great favour. It is to be appreciated that he is also a beneficiary by our recognition and Bangladesh's admission to the U.N. We are trying to tell you the difficulties. The President went to the Assembly. We, as negotiators, are pressing him to be as liberal as possible. We are not pushing out the Bengalis. Once the recognition comes, there will be a qualitative change. Then even those who opted for Pakistan can opt for Bangladesh with a clear conscience. The options for Pakistan have been described by the London Times as 'dubious options'. Which other countries (besides Pakistan) have had to face our political, constitutional, economic and international problems? We believe our offer is based on genuine goodwill and considerable political risk. We believe the entire situation will undergo a qualitative change.

Mr. Agha Shahi: Kaiser has to keep cool in his seat. The Chinese have told him that, I assure, you.

Mr. Kewal Singh: Suppose there is verification of the 600,000, will this be a simultaneous verification?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: No. Tempers must cool down.

Prof. Dhar: We are talking in terms of a definite number or, if there is verification, the result will be X. I am not sure you will like this.
The whole thing is based on one supreme first principle, i.e., the humanitarian. You made a reference to absorptive capacity. But this has to have reference to a magnitude. In terms in which we are talking, you are magnifying the problem. If the figure was something like one million then I can understand such reference, but not now. We have on the one hand this small input from which we stand to gain a huge output, which is the broad highway facing us. Instead of this we are getting stuck on this small input. Some rationality of approach will result in great benefits to both of us.

Skirting of trials etc. has to be worked out, persuasion will be needed, emotional barriers will need to be lowered. And from all this, with some reasonable approach, there can be great benefits. Honestly, I do not understand your approach.

Mr. Kewal Singh: Is absorptive capacity your difficulty?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: That is not the President’s view. It is a political question. For that the President is the judge. From the economic point of view, it is a very small matter. We are not worried about that. We are worried about what happens to these people, where do they go? If not to Sind, then to the Punjab? No matter if Punjab says we can take the lot, they will gravitate to Karachi and Karachi is a politically difficult city.

I do not say the Simla Agreement will die. I say it will be as good as dead. With the POWs still with you, there can be no progress. There will be no recognition and Bangladesh’s entry to the U.N. will be barred. The whole world is laughing at us that we can forget at the moment but negative forces will begin to operate.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: With U.N. membership, tempers in Bangladesh will go down. War crime trials will probably be forgotten. Fewer people will want to come back. There will be reconciliation. But if Bangladesh says that the war crime trials shall be held, Pakistan shall accept these people back, then nothing will happen.

Mr. Haksar: You dangle the carrot of recognition and U.N. membership of Bangladesh before our nose, more correctly Bangladesh nose.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: This is not a carrot, but we have political difficulties.

Mr. Haksar: But this will not be part of the Agreement and it will not be entered in it.

Mr. Agha Shahi: A carrot:

Mr. Haksar: Yes, in Simla also you dangled the carrot of recognition. It was a promise. But there may be more difficulties, perhaps there will be larger crowds showing Na manjoor (not acceptable)...
What you describe is a sugar coating which is non-est in terms of the Agreement. So far it has been only a deferred hope. I cannot say to Bangladesh, look you are going to attain respectability, You are going to enter the Athenaeum club. I will be described as a fool.

Prof. Dhar: Does your National Assembly resolution also have reference to “other matters” being settled before recognition?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: No, there is no vagueness about the resolution (He reads the text which refers, among other things, to recognition at a time when it is in the best interests of Pakistan).

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: So you say it is not worth anything?

Mr. Haksar: Please do not put words into my mouth. I do not say that it is not say that it is not worth anything, but I do say that it is an incontrovertible fact that what you are offering will not be part of the Agreement. Obviously, you cannot put into the Agreement what is in your sphere of Sovereignty.

Mr. Agha Shahi: The President himself said this. You can convey the President’s words.

Mr. Haksar: I will convey this and your words. But the fact still remains that it is not part of the Agreement. The President has been arguing in favour of recognition, but he has come up again with political difficulties. The President is the sole judge of these difficulties. Such difficulties are more unpredictable than forecasting the weather with balloons, radar, etc. In my country, too, we know about political difficulties. All of a sudden, for instance, Andhra Pradesh was torn apart by the Mulkis versus the non-Mulkis.

Mr. Agha Shahi: Why do you think we will not recognize Bangladesh? In order to reconquer Bangladesh?

Mr. Haksar: That will also be a solution! But pending reconquest, Article 1 Paragraph 3 of your Constitution will come into force. Bangladesh has past experience. Past experience also influence our relations with you. Look at our idiom. We hear of a confrontation theory. I have read the histories of Toynbee, Marx, Engel, Lenin, Mao Tse Tung, and also the Romantic View of History etc., but no where have I found the theory of confrontation. This seems to be a case of multiple schizophrenia. It is childish even for a child. What do we do now?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Put it to Mujibur Rahman. If he says no, then no it will be.

Mr. Haksar: I ask again, what is the point of my putting it to him? Give me something which I can support.
TEA BREAK

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: I do not see that there will be any in this figure. The only alternative I see is that we tell Mujibur Rahman that this is the minimum figure to which the President is committed. If this agreement goes through, recognition is sure — this will only happen when war crime trials are dropped — then it might be possible to agree to a few more. (?) If repatriation starts, trials might be dropped. Or Mujibur Rahman may talk to the President and say if recognition comes I will drop the trials. But we will not go by Bangladesh’s options. With a new census in a more propitious climate by an independent agency, it might be possible perhaps to take some more. He, Mujibur Rahman, can also give reasons why more should go. This figure, therefore, is the floor, not the ceiling. Once the two conditions are met, it is open to Mujibur Rahman to argue that recognition can even precede a meeting. This can happen. I will be told by the President that he is not in this bargaining game. I can only put it to him, let this be the minimum, and not the maximum figure, and if you have any suggestion, I shall put it to President.

Mr. Haksar: ... My understanding was that if this package was acceptable, then U.N. membership etc. will follow. If, however, recognition is contingent on the question of war crime trials, then we are in a jam. Each of you has a leverage — you have 203 and Bangladesh 195. But if there is to be no meeting then how can you negotiate on the trials? If there is weight to be attached to this package, then recognition must take place so that discussions can take place as to what to do with the 195, 203 etc. Otherwise, we get back to square one. This reverses the situation.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: I have no authority to go beyond the National Assembly’s resolution. We are reminded again and again that the Assembly is a sovereign body.

Mr. Haksar: The President said we will advise the Chinese not to veto Bangladesh’s admission to the U.N. This is a big step toward recognition.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: If that step is taken, would it be easier for Mujibur Rahman to take other steps? (?) The Chinese keep reminding us again and again that they stand on principles. We are going to say to the Chinese that though war crime trials remain possible, please abstain. I think the Chinese will agree. If Mujibur Rahman says, here is an earnest of good faith to put it at its lowest that Pakistan has shown it means well, all right, I am willing to talk to Bhutto. If Nixon can travel all the way to China to talk to Chou En-lai, Mujibur Rahman should be able to agree. You can tell Mujibur Rehman at least talk. Then if he drops the trials, all will be plain sailing.
Mr. Haksar: The question of the disposition of 195 pows and 203 Bengali civil and military personnel should be properly the subject of discussion between you and Bangladesh, which presupposes recognition and discussion. But if recognition is contingent on dropping the trials, then this is an altogether different matter. You will notice that in using the word disposition, I have deliberately used an emotive word.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: But we cannot ignore the National Assembly resolution.

Mr. Haksar: We, too, have resolution. It is a mistaken concept that Parliament governs the country.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Mujibur Rahman has taken one step after another for the trials. He has just amended the law.

Mr. Haksar: This makes reversal more difficult. But I am prepared to argue this case...

Mr. Agha Shahi: Did you take it that the President’s words about the UN meant that he would allow Bangladesh’s admission to U.N. before the repatriation of all POWs?

Mr. Haksar: Quite. I took it that there would be recognition and then you would discuss the disposition of the 195 and 203.

Mr. Agha Shahi: After repatriation of the others, there would be discussion.

Mr. Haksar: Between whom?

Mr. Agha Shahi: Between you and us.

Mr. Haksar: No, no. We do not come into this. The discussions would have to be between you and Bangladesh.

Summary of discussions between the Indian and Pakistani delegations at Hotel Intercontinental.

Rawalpindi, July 29, 1973 (8–10 PM).

1. Shri Haksar summarized the points he had understood in the morning as follows:

   (a) De-linking and Acquiescence to UN membership of Bangladesh from recognition of Bangladesh;

   (b) Recognition of Bangladesh on completion of the repatriation of the POWs, except for the 195;

   (c) Discussion thereafter between Bangladesh and Pakistan on the disposition of the 195 POWs not repatriated and the 203 Bangladesh nationals retained by Pakistan.

2. Pakistan side asserted that recognition of Bangladesh would take place only on repatriation of all the POWs, including the 195. They argued that this was the meaning of the Pakistan National Assembly Resolution regarding the recognition of Bangladesh. They stated that the President had been consulted since the morning meeting and he felt that he would have to comply with the National Assembly Resolution in these terms. (Pakistan side regarded it as a concession that they were not taking into account that clause of the National Assembly Resolution which refers to recognition being given at a time “in the best national interest of Pakistan”. They also argued that if the 195 were not returned with the rest of the POWs, and the question of trials was only skirted round, then the threat of trials remained, which would not be in consonance with the National Assembly Resolution).

3. The Pakistan side stated that they would find it impossible to waive opposition to Bangladesh’s admission to UN without completion of the repatriation of all the POWs including the 195. Similarly, they argued that they could not advise China to acquiesce in Bangladesh’s admission to the UN till Pakistan found it possible to recognize Bangladesh (that is, till all the POWs including the 195 are repatriated). The Pakistan side would not budge on this stand, although with the return of all the POWs, except 195, they would have a leverage of 203 Bangladesh nationals, retained by them, against the 195 POWs not returned.

4. Pakistan side admitted that it would not be possible to complete by October, by which date they envisaged the return of all the POWs, the return of the Bangladesh nationals from Pakistan to Bangladesh. However, they said that this fact would not affect their decision to recognize Bangladesh, and to permit its entry into the UN, by October, if all the POWs including the 195 had been returned by then.

5. The Pakistan side stated that they were sure that not the entire 157,000 Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan (their figure based on an ICRC estimate of November 1972) would wish to return to Bangladesh.

6. It was explained to the Pakistan side that it would not be possible for the Bangladesh nationals to return from Pakistan to Bangladesh overland via India because of the immense transport problems. The Pakistan side said that they could only approach the UNHCR for ships. The Pakistan side was advised to do so and we said that we would be glad to inform the result. Pakistan side also said that they understood that the UNHCR might approach the Americans for bulk carriers which could transport 20,000 in a matter of 15 to 20 days. They also thought that the UNHCR was thinking in terms of arranging transport by aircraft.

7. Pakistan side provided figures showing that they would be willing to take 69,000 Pakistanis from Bangladesh (including 20,000 which was to be part of a secret agreement).

TOP SECRET

Verbatim Record of the discussion at Hotel Intercontinental.

July 29, 1973. (from 8 to 10 P.M.)

Mr. Agha Shahi asked to call on Shri Haksar at 8.00 P.M. He was accompanied by Mr. Sattar. Shri Haksar was accompanied by Shri Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary, Shri P.N.Dhar, Secretary to Prime Minister and Shri K.P.S. Menon, Joint Secretary (BD).

Mr. Agha Shahi: We have considered what you said. We would like to continue the meeting tomorrow at 10-30 at the Foreign Office. Meanwhile we would like to give you a draft of what we said today.

(Mr. Agha Shahi handed over two copies)

Mr. P.N. Haksar: This will constitute?

Agha Shahi: The secret agreement. It demonstrates its earnestness and sincerity. We have met your point that circumstances might arise which prevent recognition, by giving you written guarantee that recognition will be given.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: Both the President and Aziz Ahmed said that requesting China not to veto Bangladesh's entry to the UN is a separate matter from recognition. Is admission to the UN contingent on this?

Mr. Agha Shahi: Yes, because we have to bear in mind China's stand on principle. Once we recognize Bangladesh, we can ask China to consider supporting Bangladesh's admission or not to veto it, but first must come recognition.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: I thought this morning you were arguing that you would acquiesce in Bangladesh's admission to the UN. Even with the best will in the world and assuming that we reach agreement, we will take some months to implement it.

Mr. Agha Shahi: The UN meets in the third week of September. We have, therefore, two months from the first of August.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: It is too much to expect that all this can be completed by September or October.

Mr. Agha Shahi: How can we approach the Chinese?

Mr. P.N. Haksar: That should present no problem. You can say that you are in the process of re-conciliation.
Mr. Agha Shahi: Say, that the POWs take about two months. Then the atmosphere will improve so much that by October Bangladesh will be a Member of the UN.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: Assuming that it was agreed that the trials may be temporarily put aside, then I said this morning that I expected that the disposal of the 195 Pakistani POWs and the 203 Bangladeshis in Pakistan would be subject matter of discussion between Pakistan and Bangladesh.

Mr. Agha Shahi: But the Minister of State read out from a resolution in our National Assembly; we went and saw the President about this. The President said he would have a very difficult time with the Assembly. He must show compliance within the resolution.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: Ninety-nine per cent of your resolution is implemented and on top of that you have 203. He who comes to equity must come with clean hands.

Mr. Agha Shahi: Bangladesh can be seated in the UN this year. Let us fix a final time for it. Finish everything by October. We had to think what would be consequences of our first recognizing Bangladesh. It is obvious that if we did so we would have to support Bangladesh’s admission to the UN. If we first support Bangladesh’s admission to the UN, then recognition must follow as a matter of course. We were impressed by your argument that the supervention of circumstances might prevent recognition. Therefore, we committed ourselves in black and white, the Assembly Resolution also mentions that recognition has to be given at a time when it is “in the interest of Pakistan”. We have eliminated all these factors of “in of “in the interest of Pakistan” to give you the assurance about recognition.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: When the repatriation of the POWs and the others is completed you will have in hand 203 against 195 POWs. Therefore, you will have more than fulfilled the Resolution by having 8 extra detainees.

Mr. Sattar: But the threat of trials still remains.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: That is why the possibility of putting in deep-freeze…. the question of trials should be calmly discussed. You will note that I have not used the word “trials”; instead I have used the word the “disposal” of the 195.

Mr. Agha Shahi: As to whether our Assembly Resolution can be interpreted in this way is a matter for the President.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: If you think it necessary we can present to the President our point of view.
Mr. Sattar: You mentioned a time-frame of two months.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: No. What I was saying was that even if everything is completed in two months, as you suggest, you will still have 203 against 195. But given the transport and other facilities, it is impossible to complete everything in two months.

Mr. Sattar: It did not take more than two months to take out POWs from Bangladesh.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: At that time we were in a state of war mobilization. Now we have food and other problems also. And from here the Bangladeshis will have to go by ships.

Mr. Sattar: (Turning to Agha Shahi) It is true that it will take more time for the Bangladeshis to go from Pakistan.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: It takes at least 10 days one way by ship. How can you complete it in two months?

Mr. Agha Shahi: 157,000 will not go in any case, unless you want us to force them out.

Mr. H.N. Haksar: We do not wish you to force out anyone. But at any rate most will go. I would suggest that you should prepare a time-frame programme. You will find that the shipping situation is not easy. The whole programme has to be time-bound, which means that time-charters will be necessary.

Prof. Dhar: It is solely a question of logistics that makes us say that two months will not be possible.

Mr. Sattar: The UNHCR had made some investigation. It had toyed with the idea of asking the Americans for bulk carriers.

Mr. K.P.S. Menon: Mr. Sattar already knew that although Bangladesh had approached the UN several months ago for the ships, no shipping was yet in sight.

Mr. Sattar: If all the POWs came back and all the Bangladeshis had not yet left, that would not affect our decision.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: It has to be simultaneous: we do not want difficulties as at the time of delineation.

Mr. Sattar: The Bangladeshis can go through India.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: So you will take them from Karachi to Wagha? From Calcutta there is no train connection. It would mean the total disruption of our movement of food, coal, etc.

Mr. Sattar: UNCHR will have to charter ships but (turning to Agha Shahi) it cannot do in a month or six weeks.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: We also have shipping services, for instance, the Mughal lines. But please prepare a time programme. If you can give me a time schedule, I shall be very grateful.

Mr. Sattar: We have not worked on this. I only know that:

i) When Bangladesh approached the UNHCR for ships to transport 15,000 Bangladeshis, the UNHCR approaches the Americans.

ii) By August/September the Haj Traffic would not have started and so the shipping position might be easier. The UNHCR thought that in an American bulk carrier they could transport 20,000 in a matter of 15 to 20 days, but all they have to do was to get the ships.

iii) They also say that transport might also be possible by airplanes.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: I suggest you do this exercise and let us know what are the prospects of getting ships from the Americans, the UNHCR.

Prof. Dhar: During the three months of Monsoon, the goods capacity of our railways is reduced to 60 percent. We now also have problem of transport of food. Therefore, in transport we have a very small margin.

Shri. K.P. S. Menon: We had already been in touch with the railways about transport and found that this was extremely difficult.

Mr. Agha Shahi: Therefore, the Bangladeshis will have to go by ships or air.

Mr. Sattar: There is another problem. We are not sure that the UNHCR will provide assistance. The Bangladesh Prime Minister had asked the UN Secretary General for assistance to move 20,000. To this request the UN has acceded, but we do not know whether they will accede to more such requests.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: I suggest you do your exercise, to cover the movement of the Bangalees and the Pakistanis from Bangladesh.

Mr. Agha Shahi: It seems that we should make a general appeal to the world to assist in transport on humanitarian ground.

Mr. Sattar: All I can do is approach the UNHCR tonight. I might then get a reply in the next couple of days.
Mr. P.N. Haksar: So long as I am here I would be glad to have a reply. But the schedule is getting tight: the Foreign Secretary has to go to the Ottawa Conference.

Mr. Agha Shahi: Please do not push UN Membership of Bangladesh in the Commonwealth Conference because it would lead to a diplomatic confrontation.

Mr. Kewal Singh: It is not for us to do anything of this sort there.

Mr. Haksar: The Bangladesh Prime Minister will be there and it is his concern.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: To go over again the points I understood this morning:
(a) The delinking of acquiescence to UN Membership for Bangladesh from recognition of Bangladesh.
(b) Recognition of Bangladesh on completion of repatriation of POWs.
(c) Then a discussion between Bangladesh and Pakistan on the disposal of the 195 and 203.

(Dhar asked for the figures given in the morning)

(Sattar handed over a sheet of paper)

Mr. Sattar: (About the figures) The ICRC has given us some tentative estimates.

Mr. Sattar (contd): Also, some applications are not yet in. Therefore, the particular figures under some of the heads in the sheet I have given you are uncertain.

Mr. Agha Shahi: Mr. Haksar, why are you asking for the delinking of recognition from admission to the UN? Because you want Bangladesh admitted before the repatriation of POWs is completed? In that case we will oppose Bangladesh’s admission.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: It might not be completed but it will be in the bag. The President said in Paris “I told Agha Shahi that Bangladesh’s admission to the UN can take place.”

Mr. Agha Shahi: No; it is impossible to waive opposition to the Bangladesh’s admission to the UN without the completion of the repatriation. For that we have made a time-frame, completing the process by October.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: I do not think this is leading us anywhere. In the first place, I did not come here to discuss these matters.
Mr. Aghah Shahi: (interrupting) In this morning’s meeting you said that the recognition might be supervened by circumstances. That is why we have now given you this in writing. Do you mean to say that you understood the President to waive recognition unilaterally?

Mr. P.N. Haksar: No, but following upon our arriving at an agreement which is being implemented. It is necessary to work out a time-frame.

Mr. Agha Shahi: We have done it by October

Mr. Haksar: This is impossible.

Mr. Agha Shahi: Does Bangladesh want to gate-crash the UN in the face of Pakistan’s opposition? Why, when we want to support Bangladesh

Mr. P.N. Haksar: I do not know what Bangladesh will say, but at a guess they might say we are prepared to wait for admission to the UN.

Mr. Agha Shahi: (emotionally) All right. We are not helpless. We are not a door-mat. We may have only a few people with us; but they stand by principles. Bangladesh has intellectuals, Andre Marlaux and the old world with it. It is our county that has been dismembered. We are giving you everything. Do something. You always plead political difficulties.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: Mr. Agha Shahi, you have not the background of Indo-Pakistan negotiations. We have never pleaded political difficulties, not once.

Prof. Dhar: You are really going very beyond your Resolution.

Mr. P.N. Haksar: They have 195 and you have 203. So you have an extra leverage.

Mr. Sattar: But the Possibility of trials remains.

Mr. Dhar: That is one logical possibility. But there are other logical possibilities. You have been saying that once the process starts the atmosphere will improve.

Mr. Sattar: For Heaven’s sake decide this matter, then we can go on to bilateralism.

Mr. Haksar: I know your style of negotiations. On the first day you create a crisis but I am waiting. I am waiting to be able to put my influence behind a matter where it will be worthwhile to do so. But you still make recognition contingent on the return of the 195.

Mr. Agha Shahi: We give you a guarantee in writing but still…

Mr. Haksar: But how? You still make recognition contingent. Do you know how often I went to Bangladesh?
Mr. Sattar: No one in Pakistan will question your credentials. The President himself has expressed respect for the work you have done.

Mr. Haksar: I know your methods of negotiations. In Simla I gave Aziz Ahmed something and he just rejected. In Simla I offered to withdraw our troops and Aziz Ahmed immediately rejected. At that rate we would have just seat facing each other.

Mr. Agha Shahi: Yes, but we would not have gone under because of this.

Mr. Haksar: You know the difficulty we had? We had to go to the PAC (Political Affairs Committee of the Cabinet) and our Prime Minister had to argue strenuously and yet you keep lecturing me!

Mr. Dhar: On the troops withdrawal he (Haksar) had to work around the clock. We don’t mention these difficulties because we feel embarrassed. There was formidable opposition in the PAC. After hours of reasoning with the PAC, it came to us as a tremendous relief that the suggestion was accepted. We thought we had at last something to our Pakistan friends. But the moment we offer it Aziz Ahmed, rejects it just like that. He said, “It is a retrograde step”. And in India the Jan Sangh and others describe it as a sell-out and heap insults on Haksar. That is why one gets upset, when we get things through with so much difficulty, it is so summarily rejected.

Mr. Agha Shahi: We have no differences in objectives but the question is how to reach them.

Mr. Haksar: Do it with some grace. Show grace. I mentioned to the President what he had told the Washington Post and Khushwat Singh. We are talking here amongst four friends. The Prime Minister laughed. She asked me to say that I do not understand the President’s occasional sallies if I am told later that they are not meant for me. But what about the JS, etc. I am ready to do what I can but you should strengthen my hands. All you do is to hedge a bet. You say no recognition; but you have 203 against 195. We don’t want to negotiate about these persons. Then, since you do not recognize Bangladesh, how will you do so? You will simply indulge in a slanging match.

Mr. Agha Shahi: Mujibur Rehman says 300,000 (at another place the figure mentioned is three million) were murdered. Roscoe Drummand looked into this and found that the figures are wrong. All Right, doesn’t matter about that, we are barbarians.

Mr. Haksar: You go on talking about self-determination for Kashmir; we know you will say it, but how do you think, it affects our people? Also you talk about a thousand-year confrontation.
Mr. Dhar: In our school books we emphasize that we are proud of the composite culture of India. Our Prime Minister is perhaps the one person who argues consistently against the Jan Sangh.

Mr. Sattar: We also have a Jan Sangh. Our President has made strenuous efforts, touring the country, convincing groups. Although each time he mentions the subject he knows he is lighting fuse.

Foreign Secretary: You should do it with grace. You have the 203 against 195.

Mr. Haksar: As I said, there is also the question of modalities. How are you going to negotiate with Bangladesh without recognition I had envisaged that you would recognize Bangladesh and then have a discussion about the 195 and the 203. Why again, do you go on using the word “trials”? I have not used it: I have deliberately used the word “disposition” about these persons.

Mr. Sattar: In this document which we have given you, we have not used the word “trials”.

Mr. Agha Shahi: We have signed and given a document with guarantees of recognition. We cannot go beyond the National Assembly Resolution.

Mr. Haksar: Your President made a deeply moving speech in the National Assembly. I have a feeling that the Resolution is not a nonstarter, as it were, particularly when we reach our agreement.

Mr. Dhar: You yourself have said that as repatriation takes place this will give a momentum to improving the situation. Therefore, you can still recognize Bangladesh during the process of repatriation.

Mr. Agha Shahi: We cannot advise the President on a political matter which in the National Assembly.

Mr. Haksar: Please convey to the President our views. If you think it proper, we would be prepared to do so.

(The Pakistani side made no comment upon this, and thereupon meeting ended) Verbatim record of the meeting of P. N. Haksar. with Pakistan President.

President Bhutto: I am glad you have been with us; you had to work hard for 7 days.

Mr. Haksar: Mr. President, all for a good cause.

President Bhutto: Azia Ahmed has been keeping me informed of your discussions. If it hasn’t worked out now, we must try again.

Mr. Haksar: I think the talks were very useful for understanding each other’s point of view. As you know, the major problems were two:

First, it was the question of war trials. You, Mr. President had said that you could not stand it. You had explained that even if you could live with them, they would be counter productive. They would generate bitterness and hatred and foul up everything, Mr. Aziz Ahmed also elaborated on that with great conviction. However I told him and repeat with all the emphasis at my command that your retention of 203 Bangalis is totally unjustified and inadmissible. You should not insist on it.

Secondly, on the question of Pakistani nationals, there has been a slight forward move. You had said, Mr. President that you will deal with this question generously. I must confess that the proposal from your side does not, if I may say so, go far enough. As of today, there is a wide gap between what you suggest as your absorptive capacity and the expectations of the Bangladesh side whom I have the honour to represent.

We should try to bridge this gap with our offer and your efforts.

These are the basic issues of the Joint Declaration. I would say again that I and my colleagues have found the discussions very useful and helpful in pointing to the direction for the resolution of the problems.

You had been good enough to refer to the idea that occurred to you in Paris which you had mentioned to Mr. Agha Shahi. As I understood, you had felt that with a view “to sweeten the atmosphere,” you could consider speaking to the Chinese Government to facilitate the entry of Bangladesh to UN. In the Joint Declaration we had set aside the question of recognition and admission to the UN etc, but like Charles’ head, this subject kept popping up. I submitted to Mr. Aziz Ahmed that in the framework of a total picture, this subject could be of considerable interest. However, it was not really for us to discuss. It was really a matter for you and China. Recognition also was a matter within your sovereign right. Subject to these considerations, I present picture for you to consider. Proceeding on the assumption that we agree (with the approval of the Bangladesh Government) to set aside for the time being the question of war trials, we then begin the repatriation of 90,000 minus 195 POWs to Pakistan. Simultaneously, Bengalees will start leaving for Bangladesh. If we reach a modus vivendi on non-Bengali Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh, they also start moving to Pakistan simultaneously. Thus, a process begins by which a large number of people from India, Pakistan and Bangladesh start going to their hearths and homes. Naturally, we should consider the question of logistics quickly. We will have to provide ships and trains and other means of transport. I have asked Mr. Sattar to do the study here and we shall do the study in New Delhi as soon as we reach there.

Let us say that we begin the repatriation of the three categories by the end of August and within about 2 months i.e. by the end of October, a large number of these people would have already reached their homelands. If during this period the question of the admission of Bangladesh to the United Nations came up, Pakistan could take the position that while you have not recognized Bangladesh, you will not stand in the way of their admission, mainly because the main humanitarian problem was being resolved according to an agreement between the three Governments.

What to do after that? What to do with the bodies of 195? As explained by Mr. Aziz Ahmed, it should mean that Bangladesh should then agree to give up the trial of 195 POWs. I submitted to him and I submit to you, Mr. President that this will involve long distance communications - statements through Press and Radio and in other public forums. Would this really bring about the sort of quiet dialogue and deeper understanding which is necessary for the disposal of this highly emotional question? I would like to present the picture, the scene at that time. 99% of the POWs will have come home. Bangladeshis and Pakistani nationals would also have joined their families in their respective countries. On all sides there would be a feeling of relief and happiness. What would be left would be 195 POWs. I ask you whether you could not say at that stage: “at last the time has come when we feel we should recognize Bangladesh in our national interests”. You could explain that immediately with recognition you would like to discuss with Bangladesh Government all questions, inter alia, the disposal of 195 POWs. The desired result could be achieved by a discussion within four walls of a room between you and Sheikh Sahib or between your representatives and Sheikh Sahib’s representatives. Without recognition, the debate will be carried on by public pronouncements which will only complicate the issues of this residual matter.
I told Mr. Aziz Ahmed that our talks have been extremely useful. Even coming to Rawalpindi, Mr. President, has been useful. As you said, otherwise we talked through press and public statements.

We had the honour of meeting you and had exhaustive discussions with Mr. Aziz Ahmed and Mr. Agha Shahi. We have not been able to reach an agreement, but as I said, our discussions give hope for the realization of objective which you desire and we desire. I, therefore, suggested to Mr. Aziz Ahmed that we could meet again, say, on the 18th August, to continue further talks with the hope of reaching a final agreement.

We shall return to Delhi tomorrow. Sarder Svaran Singh and the Foreign Secretary will be in Ottawa. After the return of Sheikh Mujib to Dacca, I shall go and see him there. We could, therefore, meet about the 18th of August.

President Bhutto: I recall my first meeting with Mr. D.P.Dhar when I had just assumed office after the war. He asked me as to what sort of sub-continent I envisaged. Did I see continuation of strife, conflicts, suspicion, deadlocks and stalemates? Or did I think that the time had come for the 700 million people of the subcontinent to live in peace and work for good relations and cooperation. I had no hesitation in giving a reply. I told him that we have made mistakes; you have made mistakes after partition. At one time, we made strong statements both here and in India that we will accept no aid if there are strings attached to it. We had hoped to pursue certain policies and we learnt a great deal over the years. World is different from what we imagined. We attached too much importance to UN resolutions and outside approach. After this long journey, a realization has dawned on us that there should be a rational approach. I told him that the only way for economic and social progress for Pakistan was in good relations with India. Pakistan has had 15 years of Martial law and badly needs institutions, infra-structures, political stability and economic progress. We must settle our problems with India. We cannot go on living in tension and confrontation.

Indie is much closer to us - much closer than Bangladesh which is more than 1,000 miles away. We have, therefore, to deal with you every day. We had deep association with Bangladesh and we have affection for them. But our day to day problems are with you, and our cooperation has to be with you. For example, we have to have much closer relations with you than Nepal and you have to have much closer relations with us than Afghanistan. This is a geographical compulsion. It must make us wise to the urgency of good neighbourly and cooperative relations with India.

As soon as our problems with Bangladesh are over and they have entered "UNO and other things are settled, we must address ourselves to what is most important - the problems of Indo-Pak. relations, our immediate and long term problems.

We should not be obsessed by Pakistan- Bangladesh relations. Our relations with India are of vital importance to us and so are they to you.

I don’t want to go into details or into the merits of the issues you have discussed. I am glad that you feel satisfied that some progress has been made in the talks.

When I mentioned to you about the idea that occurred to me in Paris which I said could sweeten the atmosphere, I was thinking of what additional initiative we could take. I was of the view that if our talks proceeded well, we should give one more push to help the process of reconciliation. I said, just off the cuff, to Agha Shahi that we could perhaps, ask the Chinese to give up the Veto on Bangladesh’s admission to the U.N.

I must confess that, originally, China did not contemplate using the veto against Bangladesh’s admission. In fact, they were not at all enthusiastic. But, when I found that Mujib was riding the high horse and was under the impression that he could push himself into the UN, he could hold on POWs and could do whatever he liked, I felt the time had come for us to react. We thought he should know that the world is more complex. I therefore, sent my emissary to Peking to sound them on this. As I said, they were not enthusiastic. When a Super Power takes a position, it wants to base it on some principle so that their credibility is not affected. So, we put our heads together and the Chinese agreed that on the basis of the UN resolutions they could oppose Bangladesh’s entry into UN unless the resolutions were implemented. They made a good case of it and they were able to bring home to Bangladesh that she also had to take into account the question of POWs’ trials etc. They stood by us in UN. They have been taking this position on principle. We cannot say to them “stand up or sit down” according to our whims.

If, however, the essential part of the resolution or at least the substantial part of it is met that is to say, all POWs minus 195 have reached back, the position becomes different. We could tell them that the substance of the resolution has been implemented and that Pakistan would not oppose Bangladesh’s entry into the UN.

This, I felt, will be a move forward, but please note that is not only when the repatriation begins, but when major part of the repatriation has already taken place. Otherwise, Mujib might again say something and might again raise some problems.

You said that since you will have 195 POWs with you and we will have 203 Bangalees with us, we have equal leverage and that recognition could take place even if the question of giving up of trials is not finally decided.
I would like to say that we don’t want to be vindictive. We don’t want eye for eye and tooth for tooth. We don’t say that since Mujib is going to have a tamasha (theatrical performance) here.

Please understand that the 203 Bengalees are no leverage for us. I don’t want to try then. Mujib has made a fetish of trials. He has staked his prestige on it and has made statements of all sorts in Paltan Maidan.

Theoretically we have a strong case against these Bengalees. They have been stealing cipher documents and secret files and have been passing them on to some Missions and outside Pakistan even after the war. The charges are strong enough for their trial. But qualitatively there is a difference. In Dacca, they will have charges of rape, murders and massacres and by whipping up emotions they will create an atmosphere of hatred and bitterness. Qualitatively, our charges are of a different nature. The leverage is not of the same value. Charges would not cancel each other. We would hold trials if only we are forced to. I find it impossible to agree to recognition before the threat of trials is given up.

We would like to speak to Mujib or Bangladesh representatives. There are so many questions including questions of assets and liabilities.

I don’t mention assets and liabilities because of the money involved, but because I want all irritants to be out of the way. All that can cause friction should be discussed and resolved. I do not know what else Mujib might have up his sleeve of which he could make a big issue.

I would also like that the Bangladesh Government will be humane to people in prisons there who believed in one Pakistan. Fazlul Quadir Chaudhuri died the other day. There are large numbers rotting in prisons. They must adopt a humane approach.

The last talk I had with him was on the 27th December before he left on the 7th January (?). I would not like to mention to you the promises he made. You would not believe them, but I have all that tape-recorded. He said a lot about Pakistan and Bangladesh relations, but I don’t want to dwell on this subject.

I must state that I have “gone really to the edge of the precipice”.

I would like to say again how glad I am you came and saw things. Although we belong to the same part of the sub-continent, things here are very different. People here, bash each other’s head on the slightest provocation. You have read of riots and shooting in the press. This is not a crisis. It is normal here.

I simply cannot go any further. I have to take into account the public opinion and the advice of other political leaders.
May be I could take a further small step after discussions.

We will send Aziz Ahmed and Agha Shshi to Delhi. We must also both think of the time-table of the repatriation. You study in Delhi and we have it studied here. The sooner the repatriation starts, the better. About the talks, you have suggested the 18th August. On the 14th August, we have the inauguration of the New Constitution and other things, thereafter. But I think, the sooner Aziz Ahmed goes to Delhi, the better.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Perhaps, some day between 1st and 10th August could be agreed upon. That would be more convenient for me.

Mr. Haksar: Sheikh Mujib will return to Dacca only about the 13th or 14th August. I shall have to have discussions with the Bangladesh leaders. That is why I suggested 18th August as the earliest date.

President Bhuto: Never mind. Mr. Aziz Ahmed can go to Delhi on the 18th. There are important things here, but heavens won't fall if Aziz Ahmed is not here.

Mr. Haksar: Mr. President, my I say something in response to what you said about the relations between us in the sub-continent. We attach, I mean my Prime Minister attaches, the greatest importance to the future of our relations. You said that we should not look back, but work for future of friendship and cooperation. This vision, Mr. President, is constantly before us.

In regard to Bangladesh, they have enormous problems and the recent history has left deep scars. In discussing the problems of Bangladesh, one has to take these facts into account. One has to take into account the feelings based on their tragic experience. And yet Sheikh Sahib showed statesmanship in setting aside the question of recognition.

Please believe me that we are not submitting to whims and fancies of Bangladesh. We examine their point of view as objectively as possible. There is also the question of our relations with them as our relations with you. We are geographically linked with Bangladesh in an intimate sort of way. Healthy relations between India and Bangladesh based on confidence and goodwill are essential for the peace in the subcontinent. If there is any disturbance in Bangladesh it is bad for us and it is bad for you.

You can, perhaps, relax because you say that it is 1,000 miles away from you, but we cannot do that. We have to carry them with us by understanding their point of view and by reasoning with them.

I said Sheikh Mujib is my master. I literally meant it. When I go to Dacca, as my Prime Minister's emissary, I meet him as the Prime Minister of his people freely elected by 75 million people. Here I am representing his point of view. It is an extremely unusual position. I would beg of you not to advance a proposition, that we are unmindful of the interests of amity between us. We want your reconciliation with them also.

We don’t merely say that what the Bangladesh Government says is right. We study their point of view. We objectively discuss it with them. The relations between Bangladesh, India and Pakistan have to be harmonized.

Take for example, the question of trials. You have explained your point of view. We will put this to Bangladesh. But you have no case for keeping 203.

I would again urge upon you to consider if you could not bridge the wide gap in regard to the Pakistani nationals. They mentioned a figure of 260,000 who have exercised their option. The number suggested here falls short of that.

In the end, may I again thank you very much, Mr. President for receiving us twice in spite of your heavy preoccupations. I greatly value my exchange of views with you.

I am glad we came and we had, as I said, before, extremely useful exchange of views which helped understanding on both sides. We spoke with Mr. Aziz Ahmed and his colleagues. We spoke frankly and sometimes bluntly. It was necessary for both of us to fully understand each other’s point of view.

President Bhutto: I thank you and your colleagues again for coming to us. Please convey my regards to your Prime Minister. I hope you are satisfied with the final communiqué that is being issued.

Mr. Haksar: Thank you, Mr. President. The talks have been useful and we continue them after about two weeks.

R.

Summary record of the meeting.

July 30, 1973. (10. 45 AM).

Discussion turned mainly upon the text of the proposed secret agreement which Pakistan side had handed over the previous evening,

2. The Indian side made the following points:

   i) Taking the numbers, there was a vast disparity between what we thought Pakistan should do and what Pakistan is prepared to do.

   ii) The offer was illusory in that recognition of Bangladesh and its admission to U.N was made contingent on the return of the 195 - this despite the fact that Pakistan would have in its hands the leverage of 8 more persons of Bangladesh (203 as against 195). The resolution of the 195 can only come by discussion between Pakistan and Bangladesh which would mean after the recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan.

   iii) The Pakistan side was reminded that they had stated at the previous day's meeting that even in the absence of recognition of Bangladesh they could abstain on Bangladesh’s admission to the U.N.

   iv) If Pakistan now wished to delete the offer, that was up to Pakistan. (This was in response to Aziz Ahmed's query as to whether it should be deleted).

   v) The questions of recognition and Bangladesh’s admission are peripheral to what the Indian side had come to discuss.

   vi) The following possibilities were now opened:

      a) To say that we have met, exchanged views and decided to discuss again.

      b) That there has been a total failure and that we are to meet only a year hence. We do not like this.

   vii) The Pakistan side was being invited to a meeting in Delhi in August. If they felt that they could not meet for a year that was their choice.

   viii) Pakistan side was asked for a reasoned reply to the legal note earlier handed over on the Pakistan nationals.

Pakistan side made the following points:

(i) The secret offer could be deleted.
(ii) So long as the U.N. resolutions are not implemented, Pakistan cannot recognise Bangladesh. How could Pakistan allow Bangladesh’s admission to the U.N.? Nor could she advise China, a power of some status in the world, which stands on principles.

(iii) It was admitted that making Bangladesh’s admission contingent on the U.N. resolutions and the observance of the Geneva Conventions, was not a concession. The Pakistan side was only expressing what is in its mind.

(iv) The number of 20,000, in the secret agreement, is not a ceiling. The number can be negotiated in a calmer atmosphere, just as the question of trials was being left flexible.

(v) Mr. Aziz Ahmed had not made himself clear if he had given the impression that Pakistan would abstain on Bangladesh’s admission to the U.N. in the absence of recognition.

(vi) Mr. Aziz Ahmed would not attend any further meetings this year. There was nothing that he could say at any such meeting. If nothing happens before the U.N. Assembly session, feelings will run high and the position with Bangladesh will further deteriorate.

(K. P. S. Menon)

***********
Mr. Aziz Ahmed was assisted by M/s Agha Shahi, Sattar, Jaffri, Shahnawaz, Bhatti and another officer. With Shri Haksar were Foreign Secretary, Shri Kewal Singh, Secretary to the Prime Minister, Shri P.N.Dhar, JS(BD) Shri K. P. S. Menon, JS(Pak) Shri. A. S.Chib. Deputy Secretaries in the Pakistan Divisions (MEA) Shri K.N, Bakshi and N. Dayal joined the meeting later.

Mr. Agha Shahi: You have seen the Secret Document. I have nothing to say. We know each other’s views. We have gone to the farthest limit possible for us. Perhaps you think that is not enough, but we have done our utmost. I am at your disposal.

Shri Haksar: Since I am under compulsion to say something, I feel even if we have reached the situation you described - and I hope you will consider again that situation - I would say that our meeting here, the atmosphere, our call on the President had been of immense benefit and value to us.

Coming to substantive matters, the attempt to defuse the extremely emotional question of trials and counter trials is for consideration. In all conscience, however, I cannot say that Pakistan’s position on the repatriation of Pakistanis from Bangladesh is at all satisfactory. I had put forward the legal position. You invited me to set aside the legal position and quoted my Foreign Minister’s letter in justification. Even then I said that on the citizenship issue there was no contradiction between law and humanity: the law merely respects that humanity. I would still urge you to let me have a reasoned reply to the legal case. I handed over to you the legal note which I had promised you. I would be glad to be informed of Pakistan’s position on this note.

If we go beyond the compass of law to quantities, we then come to your offer. Para 5 of your offer is a contingent one, and so we restrict ourselves to para 4. There are vast disparities between what we think you should do and what you are prepared to do. You were good enough to say that to enable me to sell this program - which is wholly unsatisfactory in numbers - you would make an offer, which you did make in the secret offer contained in the note I was given last night. But this is hardly an offer: It is purchasing trouble for the future.
Mr. Aziz Ahmed: You don’t like it?

Shri Haksar: We don’t like the way it is put

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We can delete it.

Shri Haksar: The rationale of this offer is supposed to be something which the Pakistanis are offering of their own bat. That means, firstly, a promise to acquiesce, if not sponsor, Bangladesh’s admission to the United Nations and secondly, to recognise Bangladesh. But both are made contingent on a solution satisfactory to you of the 195 against the 203.

One can easily foresee that the resolution of this can only come by discussion between Pakistan and Bangladesh and such discussion can only take place after recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan. Admission to the UN is still made contingent on your getting these 195. This is hardly an offer for I should imagine that if everything went all right and you would recognize Bangladesh then Bangladesh’s admission to the UN would be automatic. You have thus made us an illusory offer. I cannot tell Bangladesh that I have brought them something new.

If you say that there is nothing more that you have to offer, then we have the following possibilities:

i) We can say that we met, exchanged views and decided to discuss again.

ii) That there has been, if you so like, a total failure and that we are to meet only a year hence. We would not like it.

But as I see, your sugar coating of the pill is bitterer than the pill itself.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We can delete it

Shri Haksar: Which? The Offer?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: No, the Secret Offer

Shri Haksar: If you wish it you are welcome to do so. It is the same position as you took about the ICJ: if you wish to withdraw the case, you may do so. But to say that once everything has happened you would then recognise Bangladesh and sponsor its admission to the UN is nothing new. What is offer? What is the grace of a gesture?

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: On the question of UN Membership if recognition has taken place this will present no problem. This presumes that even the 195 have come back, implying that the trials have been given up. We will then not oppose Bangladesh’s admission, and we would ask China not to do so either. So long as the UN resolutions are not implemented one cannot recognise Bangladesh. Then how can we allow her admission? Nor, in that case, can we ask China to do so. China, after all, has stated that she is standing on principle. She is a Power of some status in the world. We cannot suddenly tell her to forget all her principles.

I agree that if Bangladesh’s admission is contingent on the full implementation of the UN resolutions regarding repatriation, observance of the Geneva Conventions, then what we are doing is not a concession. But we are not making a concession. We are telling you what is in our mind. There are so many things we can do together. All that is blocked today.

I have tried my very best. If Sheikh Mujibur Rehman and the President agree then we can take 20,000 more. This is not a ceiling. It was my idea, off my own bat. The President agreed. It occurred to me, let us leave this matter of numbers also flexible, just as we have left the question of trials flexible, postponed for the time being for a calmer atmosphere. We can then get down to much bigger issues: the Simla Agreement, normalisation, etc. Maybe Bangladesh will also be able to join in this process.

I agree that the last few months in which there has been no progress have not been entirely wasted. You have thought of the Joint Declaration, which is a positive step. We have also been giving thought to this matter and our President has towed the country for the recognition of Bangladesh.

(From here onwards, the detailed account was taken down by Shri KN Bakshi, DS (Pak))

The following are the more important points:

I beg of you that we settle this matter here. I am not coming to any meetings this year. What will I do at meetings? What will I say? There is nothing new that I can say. If nothing happens before the UN Assembly, then feelings will run high and the position with Bangladesh might further deteriorate.

Foreign Secretary: We had told you yesterday that you would find the sponsorship of Bangladesh to the UN difficult. In the absence of recognition you said you could abstain.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: This is not what I meant. Perhaps I did not explain myself properly.

Mr. Agha Shshi: While the admission of Bangladesh can be considered at any time during the session, the application has to be filed. We envisage a total approach. We are doing everything possible to complete the process for Bangladesh’s admission in two months. If Bangladesh gets admission in two months then there will be no problems.

Shri Haksar: I am left with a strong impression that you want everything your own way. The question of recognition of Bangladesh and its admission to the UN are peripheral to what we came to discuss. You are offering what is bound to happen when your terms are fulfilled, for it is obvious that recognition and admission will then follow. We are offering you the return of 89 or 90,000 POWs. If you were not keeping hostages, I could understand superiority of your position, but you are insisting on doing so.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: The trials are only postponed.

Shri Haksar: We set aside the question of recognition. The trials can be considered in a calmer atmosphere. If you cannot meet us for a year, that is your choice. We are suggesting that you meet us in August in Delhi. You will have one more success to your credit I will cease to deal with this matter. I mean this. I cannot go again to Dacca in view of the attitude that you have taken.

(The meeting broke up for tea)

POST TEA PROCEEDINGS

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: Our talks of yesterday have more or less brought out what had to be said on either side. We have gone to the farthest limit in trying to meet the point of view of Bangladesh. This may not seem satisfactory to you but this is the best we can do under the circumstances. We can now draw up the points of agreement or we can admit failure.

Shri P.N. Haksar: Our meetings here and the opportunity we have had for discussing other matters, also the meeting with your President have been of immense value in trying to understand each other’s point of view.

In respect of substantive matters we have agreed to place before the Bangladesh Government your idea of skirting around trials and counter-trials for the time being so as to bring about a settlement of the other issues. However, I cannot say that your approach to the problem of Pakistan nationals in Bangladesh is realistic or even generous. On the one hand you want to set aside the legal position, although one cannot find any conflict between law and humanity in these matters. In any case we would request you to let us have a reasonable reply of Pakistan’s legal position on this subject. We have already handed over a note which represents Bangladesh Government’s legal position.
Regarding the Pakistan draft for the proposed agreement our feeling is that there are wide disparities between what we had set out to do and what is offered in paragraph 4 of your draft dated 29th July 1973. On a dispassionate consideration the offer as mentioned by Agha Shahi is not reasonable; the rationale of this is objectionable. Recognition and admission to the UN are both tied to the question of stopping the trial of 195 Pakistani POWs. To make admission of Bangladesh to the UN contingent upon this factor makes it a totally illusory offer.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: As I said before, this is the farthest limit to which we are prepared to go. If nothing can be done we will have to admit failure. In that case we will have to contend with the continuation of the present stalemate and there can be no progress on the Simla Agreement.

Shri P.N. Haksar: If you say there is nothing more that can be done we have two alternatives before us. Firstly we can issue a statement which can indicate that we have discussed the three humanitarian issues in detail and there is need for further consultations. We shall adjourn for the present and have another meeting in Delhi. Alternatively; we will have to acknowledge that there is a total deadlock. In that case Pakistan will also have to face the consequences.

In all conscience I must mention that the sugar-coating you have tried to provide is more bitter than the pill. To go on believing that your offer of recognition made in its present form is a concession is hardly realistic. This is not going to attract Bangladesh. They are obviously going to feel that once all conditions are fulfilled, you are bound to recognise them. You are also likely to agree to their admission to the U.N.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: The admission question is not so simple. The Chinese are not going to act at our bidding. They will say, one day you ask us not to recognise Bangladesh because of certain reasons and another day you want us to act differently, even though those reasons still exist. As you know the Chinese are very strict on principles. They will insist that the UN Resolutions should be implemented first.

I cannot understand how you find our offer so unsatisfactory. I thought that just as the trials question can be kept flexible, the question of number of Pakistan nationals to be repatriated from Bangladesh can also remain flexible. We have already indicated that after the situation is normalised we are prepared to discuss with Bangladesh the question of taking some more persons after international verification.

I beg of you that we should settle this matter here and now. I am not coming for any meeting to Delhi this year. If you want to postpone this meeting and want us to consider the matter please write to us when you get back. We will have to take into account our existing commitments and programme. There is the Pakistan National Assembly Session and after that the UN General Assembly starts.

Shri Kewal Singh: I would like you to reconsider the essentials of what we are discussing. It seems to me that the question of recognition has nothing to do with the India-Bangladesh Declaration. Similarly, Bangladesh’s admission to the UN has also nothing to do with this Declaration. As you would recall it was President Bhutto who had raised this matter, and in all fairness to him, it should be acknowledged that he was suggesting it as a way of improving the atmosphere. If it is your position that the other more important issues have to be settled first before Pakistan can accord recognition and stop obstructing Bangladesh’s admission to the UN then it is best to settle the humanitarian issues. As Haksar has already mentioned, when you speak of skirting around the issue of trials and at the same time wish to keep 203 Bengalis as hostages, you have more than an insurance in your hand. It is not understandable, therefore, why additional conditions are necessary. If Pakistan wants to recognise Bangladesh then it should do so in good faith and with good grace. This action should then be taken immediately, so that it becomes easier for other issues to be resolved.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed: We were not making any concessions, when we mentioned that the way will be clear for recognising Bangladesh and for her admission to the UN, once she has agreed to Pakistan’s proposals. We were only stating our factual position. We cannot tell our National Assembly, which is a sovereign body, to change the terms of the resolution on recognition. Nor can we tell China something contradictory to what we have said last year, on the question of admission to the U.N.

Mr. Agha Shahi: We have also to take into account the time frame. If repatriation takes place in two or three months Bangladesh can be admitted in this very session of the UN General Assembly by, say, 15th October. We will both jointly sponsor admission of Bangladesh and get it through with the help of other UN Members.

Shri P.N. Haksar: There you are quite wrong. Pakistan cannot sponsor the admission of Bangladesh without first recognising her. In any case, as we have pointed out, recognition and admission are peripheral to what we have come to discuss here which is the settlement of humanitarian issues. As to the admission question, I must say that even you cannot prevent Bangladesh’s admission to the UN once everything has been settled.

Joint Secretary (Pak)
TEA INTERVAL
(Morning Session 30th July 1973)

After the first session on 30th July, 1973 in the Pakistan Foreign Office, the discussion was carried on during the tea interval in Mr- Aziz Ahmad's office. Those present were: Shri P.N. Haksar, Shri Kewal Singh, Shri P.N, Dhar, Shri A.S. Chib. On the Pakistani side, Mr. Aziz Ahmed was assisted by Mr. Agha Shahi, Pakistan Foreign Secretary and Mr. Abdul Sattar, Director General.

Mr. Aziz Ahmed continued the argument made during the earlier session that the Pakistani side had sincerely tried to put down in writing their offer of taking additional number of non-Bangalees from Bangladesh so that the total is 69,000 in the first instance. After implementation of the other provisions of the Agreement suggested by Pakistan and recognition of Bangladesh there can be discussions between the two Governments on taking some more persons. Thus Pakistan is no longer putting a firm ceiling on this figure. In addition, Pakistan had also written down their offer of asking China to remove the obstacle in the way of Bangladesh's admission to the UN. Aziz Ahmed, however, maintained that it was difficult to change the provisions of the National Assembly Resolution according to which recognition can take place only after the idea of trials has been cancelled and all the prisoners of war are repatriated.

Shri Haksar pointed out that Pakistan's proposal was tantamount to creating another intractable problem by making the issue of recognition dependent on cancellation of war trials when the whole idea was that the question of trials should be put in cold storage for the time being and settled through direct talks. How can direct talks take place if Bangladesh is not recognised? Shri Haksar then mentioned what was his concept for a possible solution subject to the proposal being approved by the Government of Bangladesh, India and Pakistan. Main features of this scenario were as follows;

(i) Pakistan should accept the idea of simultaneous repatriation of 90,000 prisoners of war (except the 195 required for trial), the repatriation of all Bengalees in Pakistan and the repatriation of Pakistan nationals in Bangladesh who have declared their allegiance to Pakistan subject to a maximum of 260,000.

(ii) Bangladesh to consider defusing the trials issues by freezing it, without prejudice to the position of either side. Pakistan will similarly freeze the question of trying 203 Bengalee officials on alleged charges of treason.

(iii) After the repatriation of the three categories has begun and a certain number have been exchanged Pakistan Government will request its allies, especially China, not to oppose the admission of Bangladesh to the United Nations.

(iv) After the repatriation of the rest under the three categories is completed, excepting the case of 195 Pakistani prisoners of war in India and 203 Bangalis in Pakistan, Pakistan Government will announce the recognition of Bangladesh to enable direct talks to take place between the two countries for reaching an amicable settlement on the trials issue.

TOP SECRET

Summary record of important points of the meeting at the Pakistan Foreign Office:

1. Mr. Aziz Ahmed stated that Pakistan has sincerely put down in writing its offer to take back 69,000 non-Bengalees in the first instance from Bangladesh. After the completion of the agreement suggested by Pakistan, and recognition of Bangladesh, there can be discussion between the two Governments for getting more persons. Therefore, the figure of 69,000 was not a ceiling.

2. Mr. Aziz Ahmed also said that Pakistan had put down in writing its offer to ask China to allow Bangladesh's admission to the U.N. But recognition can only take place after trials are dropped and POWs are returned because of the National Assembly Resolution.

3. Shri Haksar pointed out that to make recognition contingent of cancellation of trials was tantamount to creating another intractable problem. Shri Haksar spelt out the broad features of a possible solution as he saw it, subject to approval of the three Governments:

i) Pakistan accepts simultaneous repatriation of all three categories, except the 195.

ii) India persuades Bangladesh to defuse the trial issue by freezing it, without prejudice to its position. Similarly Pakistan freezes the question of trials of 203.
iii) After repatriation has commenced Pakistan speaks to China not to oppose Bangladesh’s admission to the U.N.

iv) After repatriation is completed, except for the 195 and 203, Pakistan recognised Bangladesh to permit discussion between the two for amicable settlement on the trials issues.

U. TOP SECRET

Summary of discussions between the Indian and Pakistani Delegations at Hotel Intercontinental.

i) Mr. Aziz Ahmed confirmed that President Bhutto had told Shri Haksar the previous evening that the admission of Bangladesh to the U.N, can be made Independent of the return of 195 persons required for trials. However, the recognition of Bangladesh is still dependent on Bangladesh giving up the trials, ii) Mr. Aziz Ahmed admitted that political issues were brought into the current discussions by Pakistan. He hoped that political issues would not be tied up with humanitarian problems.

iii) Shri Haksar referred to the slanted briefing given to the Pakistan Press the previous evening. Mr. Aziz Ahmed promised to issue a denial and set the record straight.

iv) Shri Haksar asked for Pakistan’s note on the legal basis of Pakistan’s case on Pakistan nationals in Bangladesh. Mr. Aziz Ahmed promised to forward this too to India in due course.

v) Shri Haksar invited a Pakistan Delegation to New Delhi to discuss the overflight case if Pakistan Government considered that bilateral negotiations should be held to resolve this issue.
vi) Shri Haksar asked for instances of AIR’s reporting, to which Pakistan had objected regarding the situation in Sind and the trial of Army officers in Pakistan. The (Indian) Foreign Secretary promised to send to Mr. Agha Shahi an aide memoire on the interference of Pakistan television with channel 4 of Indian television.

vii) The Joint communiqué was agreed upon and it was decided to issue it at 1800 hrs. IST 31.7.1973.

V. TOP SECRET

Further to the agreement signed by them at Rawalpindi on, ………………..1973, the Special Envoys of India and Pakistan, with the concurrence of their respective Governments, have agreed as follows:

1. Formal recognition of Bangladesh will follow soon after the repatriation of the 195 Pakistani prisoners of war and 203 Bengali military and civilian officials retained in India and Pakistan respectively under paragraph 3(i) of the agreement.

2. In addition to according recognition, as provided in paragraph 1 above, the Government of Pakistan will also help in the admission of Bangladesh to the United Nations.

3. With reference to paragraph 4 of the agreement, the Government of Pakistan will admit up to twenty thousand persons from amongst those said to have opted for repatriation to Pakistan who constitute hardship cases or who have special and adequate reasons for seeking migration to Pakistan, it being understood, however, that when the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of Bangladesh meet they could discuss the matter and agree to a higher figures.

1. Persons of West Pakistan domicile - 16,000

   (a) Applications in 10,500

   (b) Expected 5,500
2. Members of Divided Families - 11,000
   (a) Applications in: 7,500
   (b) Expected: 3,500

3. Plus those who have already left Bangladesh- 22,000
   via other countries:
   - Already reached Pakistan: 1,500
   - Still in Nepal: 7,000
   - via Burma, Sri Lanka: 3,500
   - Hardship cases: 20,000
   Total: 69,000

W. Note handed over to Mr. Sattar Director General in the Pakistan Foreign Office on July 30, 1973.

We have most carefully considered the possibilities discussed in today's meeting for dealing further with the matters under discussion. These were that certain issues will be presented to His Excellency the President of Pakistan in the hope that he could provide the direction and basis for carrying on further negotiations. Alternatively it was agreed that the talks in Islamabad would be adjourned and a meeting can take place in Delhi on the 18th August 1973 so that during this period India has the opportunity to consult with Bangladesh Government on the return of the Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Bangladesh to Dacca. It was felt that this would also provide His Excellency the President of Pakistan time to consider these issues further. This seems to us to be the fairest and most constructive way of handling the situation.

We had suggested for your consideration that a request may be made to His Excellency the President of Pakistan to enable Shri P.N. Haksar accompanied by Shri Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary and Professor P.N. Dhar, Secretary to the Prime Minister, to make a farewell call on him. This would provide them the opportunity of giving their assessment of the current series of negotiations.

As we have agreed to adjourn, we would not like to trespass on the hospitality of Pakistan Government any longer and therefore intend leaving for Delhi tomorrow afternoon i.e. 31st July. Clearance for the flight and details of route to be followed by the special I.A.F. aircraft which will carry the Indian delegation may kindly be given.

X.

Note Of the Ministry of External Affairs making a Summary Record of Discussions at Hotel Inter-Continental.

Rawalpindi, July 31, 1973. (9.00 A.M.)

Making some preliminary observations, Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that President Bhutto had asked him to ensure that there was no misunderstanding on what he had told Shri P.N. Haksar last evening. The President had said that so far as the admission of Bangladesh to the UN is concerned it can be made independent of the return of 195 persons required for trials. However, recognition of Bangladesh is still dependent on Bangladesh giving up the idea of trials. Mr. Aziz Ahmed added that these measures were within the scope of the National Assembly Resolution on recognition of Bangladesh.

2. Mr. Aziz Ahmed reiterated Pakistan Government's view that the great merit of the Joint India-Bangladesh Declaration was to have separated political issues from humanitarian problems so that the latter can be resolved on purely humanitarian considerations. Pakistan appreciated the positive contribution made by the Government of India in persuading Sheikh Mujibur Rehman not to insist upon prior recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan for the resolution of humanitarian problems. However, it seemed that the resolution of humanitarian issues has somehow got linked with political problems. Mr. Aziz Ahmed admitted that these political issues were brought into the current discussions by Pakistan. He expressed the hope all the same that the political issues will not be tied up with humanitarian problems and that the three humanitarian problems enumerated in the Joint Declaration will be resolved on humanitarian grounds.

3. Since this was the last meeting in the current series, Shri Haksar took the opportunity to thank the Pakistan Government for their gracious hospitality and the courtesy extended to the Indian Delegation. Shri Haksar said that in view of the future of the sub-continent, bridging the communications gap between the two countries was far more important than even the successful resolution of the humanitarian issues which emanated from the conflict of 1971. In this context, he was happy that the discussions had been conducted in an extremely frank manner and both sides now fully understand each other's position on various issues. He had come to Pakistan with a feeling of optimism; he would like to conclude his visit in the same note and look forward to the resumption of their discussions at New Delhi.

4. Shri Haksar however said that it was a matter of deep sorrow that someone on the Pakistan side had briefed the Pakistani press and given a wrong slant. The Pakistan Times was, therefore, blaming India for trying to extort political concessions. This was regrettable because, as Mr. Aziz Ahmed was aware, India had not raised any issues extraneous to those mentioned in the Declaration. The issue of Bangladesh’s admission to the UN had been raised by President Bhutto, and in all fairness to the President, he had suggested it as a way of improving the atmosphere. Shri Haksar added that he had not met any Pakistani journalist. Mr. Aziz Ahmed agreed with Mr. Haksar and said that in fact the Pakistani Press is annoyed with him as he had also been tight-lipped all through the present discussions. Shri Haksar quipped that it seemed to be a case of ‘private enterprise’ on the part of someone in Pakistan’s delegation. Aziz Ahmed promised to issue a denial and set the record straight.

5. Shri Haksar then referred to some other matters like the over-flights case. In his last letter to Shri Haksar, Mr. Aziz Ahmed had said that he would consult other departments of the Pakistan Government regarding bilateral negotiations on this case. Shri Haksar added that if Pakistan still considered that bilateral negotiations should be held to resolve this issue, he would like to extend an invitation to a Pakistan Delegation to come to New Delhi at a mutually convenient time for discussions.

6. Secondly, President Bhutto had mentioned that All India Radio had made some trespasses regarding the situation in Sind and the trial of some Army Officers in Pakistan. Shri Haksar said that he would be grateful to receive concrete instances. Thirdly, India had given Pakistan a legal note establishing the basis for the nationality of Pakistani citizens in Bangladesh. Shri Haksar added that it would be appreciated if Pakistan could give us a similar note containing the legal basis of Pakistan’s case on this issue.

7. (Indian) Foreign Secretary referred to the subject of interference by Pakistan Television with the Indian Television broadcasts from Srinagar on Channel IV. Channel IV of the Television was registered with India and broadcasts from Rawalpindi Television station and its booster stations were interfering with the telecasts of our Srinagar station. Mr. Agha Shahi said that they would investigate this matter on the receipt of an Aide Memoire, which Shri Kewal Singh had promised to send.

8. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that since Shri Haksar had asked for a legal note on Pakistan’s case regarding Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh, this would be forward to India in due course. He expressed the hope, however, that the two sides would not get bogged down in a legal tangle but seek a solution to the humanitarian problems on purely humanitarian grounds. Mr. Aziz Ahmed said that they were pleased to have the Indian delegation in Pakistan. The special merit of these discussions had been that the two sides had understood the issues with much greater clarity. Moreover, they had come to know each other personally which was indeed a very important factor.

9. It was decided to conclude the present series of discussions by issuing a Joint Communique. The text of the Joint Communique was finalised and it was decided that this would be issued at 18-00 hours (1ST).

Y. Joint Statement issued at the conclusion of the Indo-Pakistan Talks held in Rawalpindi and Islamabad on the implementation of the Simla Agreement.

The Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan, Mr. Aziz Ahmed, and the Special Emissary of the Prime Minister of India, Shri P.N. Haksar, assisted by the delegations consisting of senior officials of the two sides, held talks in Rawalpindi and Islamabad from July 24 to 31, 1973. The Special Emissary of the Prime Minister of India also called on His Excellency Mr. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, President of Pakistan, on July 27 and 30, 1973.

During the course of these talks which were marked by mutual understanding, the two sides reviewed the progress so far made in the implementation of the Simla Agreement since their last meeting in New Delhi in August, 1972. In the context of the normalisation of the situation in the subcontinent, they discussed the humanitarian issues set forth in the India-Bangladesh Declaration of April 17, 1973, namely, the questions of repatriation of Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees in India, Bengalis in Pakistan and Pakistan nationals in Bangladesh.

In the course of the talks certain issues arose which required further consideration by both sides. It was, therefore agreed that the discussions will be resumed at New Delhi on August 18, 1973.

***********
Note on the Talks held in Rawalpindi/Islamabad on the Implementation of Simla Agreement.

New Delhi, August 6, 1973

Ministry of External Affairs

Note of the Ministry of External Affairs on Pakistan's attitude during the talks held in Rawalpindi and Islamabad from July 24 to July 31, 1973 to review the implementation of the Simla Agreement and discuss the repatriation of Pakistani Prisoners of War.

General

Pakistan's tactics were designed to show that impediments on individual issues would prevent process towards normalization on the sub-continent. The plea, in effect, was that India and Bangladesh should take commissions to remove the impediments in the overall interest of normalizations. Thus, after making an eloquent plea for the “resurrection of the Simla Agreement”, Aziz Ahmed went on to offer two specific baits to Bangladesh. These were admission of Bangladesh into the UN and the recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan.

2. An aspect of Pakistan’s advocacy was the attempt to show that where India and Bangladesh had taken a positive step, as in the Joint Declaration, the credit went mainly to India. It was Sheikh Mujib who was being obdurate. It was now for India to show equal statesmanship, as Pakistan saw it, by persuading Bangladesh to give still further concessions in order to permit steps to be taken towards normalization in the sub-continent.

3. Pakistan initially took the line that if there was a breakdown in the talks the Simla Agreement would be as good as dead and there would be no point in a meeting for another year. Finally, she agreed to adjournment of the talks, to re-commence in Delhi, on 18th August.

War Crime Trials

4. Pakistan stated categorically that it will on no account accept war crimes trials. To do so would be to reach the point of no return which Aziz Ahmed defined as meaning that once the trials are held “there is no chance of improvement in the situation”.

5. Pakistan stated that she could not even accept the trials by implication, that is, that she could not accept the repatriation of all the POWs except the 195, because those who come back would claim that their comrades had been betrayed and that they would have been willing to stay on in India with their comrades so long as the issue was not resolved.
6. Ultimately Pakistan came out with the proposal that the issue of war crimes trials be skirted, just as the issue of recognition had been skirted. After repatriation of the three categories was completed, the question of the 195 (and the 205 Bengalees in Pakistan) would then be decided by discussion. It was Pakistan’s hope that such discussion would take place in a calmer atmosphere, when repatriation was completed and when, perhaps, Bangladesh was a member of the UN. Pakistan expressed the hope that in such an atmosphere, Bangladesh might even agree to drop altogether the question of trials.

7. However, as Pakistan saw it, discussions on the 195 were to precede Pakistan’s recognition of Bangladesh, since, according to Pakistan, the National Assembly resolution did not permit her to recognize Bangladesh before all POWs, including the 195, were returned to Pakistan. In effect, therefore Pakistan visualized discussions on the 195 taking place between India and Pakistan.

Pakistani Repatriates from Bangladesh

8. Pakistan began by defining Pakistanis in Bangladesh as only those of West Pakistan domicile. Only these would be accepted back. Subsequently she added on other categories. She would accept also the employees of the Central Government and their families, irrespective of original domicile, those with Pakistan passports, others to help re-unite families and some hardship cases. She gave a category-wise breakdown showing the total figure she was prepared to accept as 69,000, of which 49,000 would be accepted straightway on simultaneous repatriation, and 20,000 would be repatriated as a result of subsequent discussions, but this understanding was to be part of a secret agreement. Aziz Ahmed said that he would recommend to the President that 20,000 was not a ceiling.

9. Pakistan’s contention was that discussions about the last 20,000 would take place in a calmer atmosphere after repatriation of the others. She further stated that the options already given by Pakistanis in Bangladesh could be taken again by an independent agency such as UNHCR or the ICRC, but these options would not take place before or simultaneously with the repatriations of the other categories, but only after some time when, according to her, tempers will have cooled. She expressed the view that if fresh options were taken, not all those who had opted for Pakistan would do so again.

10. Pakistan conceded that the argument of returning Pakistanis presenting an economic problem was not valid: The issues was a political one.

11. As against Pakistanis coming back, Pakistan was willing to let all the Bangladeshis from Pakistan return to Bangladesh, except for 203 to be retained. However, Pakistan followed what was he said to be the ICRC estimate taken in November 1972 that the total number of such Bangladeshis does not exceed 157,000, which figure, apart from the military and civilian personnel, was subject to a 15% margin of variation. Pakistan also expressed the conviction that a large number of the 157,000 would not wish to go to Bangladesh.

12. Pakistan did not present, verbally or in writing, its legal case on its conception of Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh, but promised to let India have a note on the subject.

Recognition

13. On the recognition of Bangladesh, Pakistan claimed that her hands were tied by the conditions of its National Assembly resolution — conditions which the Government itself had introduced into the resolution and which were not the result of opposition amendments. At one stage, Aziz Ahmed stated that recognition would only take place after all the POWs are repatriated, war crimes trials are given up, and the non-Bengalees are not ill-trusted in Bangladesh. This last clause was not repeated in subsequent discussions, but Pakistan stood by the position that she could not recognize Bangladesh till the war trials are dropped and all the POWs, including the 195, are repatriated. She even argued at one point that she was making a concession by waiving that phrase in the National Assembly resolution which permits recognition as a time which is in the best national interest of Pakistan. She also argued that there was implied recognition of Bangladesh in that Pakistan's new Constitution makes no mention of the province of East Pakistan.

Pakistan’s Bait

14. The bait offered to Bangladesh was the possibility of UN entry this year and Pakistani recognition of Bangladesh. After initially taking the line that neither was possible unless the trials were dropped and all POWs were repatriated, on the last day, after Shri P.N. Haksar’s discussions with the President on the previous evening, Pakistan stated that UN entry for Bangladesh was possible if the issue of trials was skirted for the time being, with the disposition of the 195 being kept aside for futures discussions, but recognition was still dependent on Bangladesh forgoing the trials altogether. It was pointed out to Pakistan that if the recognition of Bangladesh and Bangladesh’s entry into the UN were made contingent on the return of all the POWs, then Pakistan was in actuality making no concession and was making to Bangladesh an offer which Bangladesh had already rejected. It was also pointed out that the baits offered could only be regarded as a deferred hope, since they would not be spelled out in an agreement to be arrived at. Pakistan conceded that the offer was not a concession and stated that it only represented Pakistan’s thinking. Shri P.N. Haksar had spelled out (on 307.73) the broad features of a possible solution, subject to the approval of three Governments, as follows:-
(i) Pakistan accepts simultaneous repatriation of all the three categories, except the 195;

(ii) India persuades Bangladesh to defuse the trials issue by freezing it, without prejudices to its position. Similarly, Pakistan freezes the question of trials of the 203 Bangladeshis;

(iii) After repatriation is commenced, Pakistan speaks to China not to oppose Bangladesh’s entry into the UN;

(iv) After repatriation is completed, except for the 195 and 203, Pakistan recognizes Bangladesh to permit discussions and between the two for settlement on the trials issue.

15. It would be seen that Pakistan has come around to accepting these broad lines except for point (iv). There is, however, an important reservation. There still remains a vast disparity between the figures of Pakistanis in Bangladesh who have opted for Pakistan (260,000) and the numbers that Pakistan is willing to take (49,000 plus 20,000 subsequently), despite the fact that President Bhutto stated that he would not be miserly on this issue. There also remain differences on the very basis on which Pakistan in willing to take the initial 49,000 a category wise basis which is unacceptable to Bangladesh and the repatriation of the subsequent 20,000, at any rate, will not take place simultaneously with the other two categories, whereas Bangladesh insists on the simultaneous repatriation of all persons of all categories. It is also still to be seen whether Bangladesh will accept a solution for the time being on these lines.

AA. Statement of Minister of State in the Ministry of External Affairs Surendra Pal Singh in both Houses of Parliament on the Talks in Rawalpindi/Islamabad.

New Delhi, August 2, 1973.

As the House is aware on April 17, 1973, the Governments of India and Bangladesh issued a Joint Declaration which contained an offer for the immediate and simultaneous resolution of the humanitarian issues arising out of the conflict of December, 1971. The Government of Pakistan sought certain clarifications on the Declaration and for this purpose invited the Government of India to send a Representative to explain the various provisions of the Declaration. However, at the same time the Pakistan Government in its statement of April 20, 1973, came out with certain positions on these humanitarian issues which were not acceptable to the Governments of India and Bangladesh. After an exchange of correspondence between our Foreign Minister and Pakistan's Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs, Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Pakistan indicated its willingness to discuss on the humanitarian basis for the repatriation of the three categories of persons mentioned in the Declaration, namely, Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees in India, Bangladesh nationals detained in Pakistan and Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh. This exchange of correspondence took place with the knowledge and in consultation with the Bangladesh Government. A Delegation led by the Special Emissary of the Prime Minister of India, Shri P. N. Haksar, and comprising Shri Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary, Prof. P.N. Dhar, Secretary to the Prime Minister, and senior officials from the Ministry of External Affairs, visited Rawalpindi and Islamabad and held discussions with the Pakistan Delegation from July 24 to July 31, 1973. The Pakistan Delegation was led by Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Pakistan's Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs and included Pakistan's Foreign Secretary, Mr. Agha Shahi, and other senior officials.

During the course of these talks, questions relating to simultaneous repatriation of the three categories of persons mentioned in the Joint India-Bangladesh declaration were discussed in full detail. In the context of normalising the situation in the sub-continent, the two sides also reviewed the progress made so far in implementing the Simla Agreement. The Pakistan side acknowledged the fact that the Joint India-Bangladesh Declaration which had separated political considerations from the humanitarian issues was a step forward and paved the way for an early resolution of these issues. Some progress was made in defining these issues and it was agreed between the two Delegations that a point had been reached where further consideration by both sides was necessary. It was, therefore, agreed that the current discussions be adjourned and later resumed at New Delhi on August 18, 1973.
As the Hon'ble Members will appreciate, in view of the delicate nature of the negotiations and the need for further consultation with the Government of Bangladesh, it will not be in our interest to reveal further details about these talks.

0798. India-Bangladesh Consultations on Issues to be discussed with Pakistan

***********

A. Briefing by Prime Minister’s Special Envoy P. N. Haksar to Bangladesh’s Foreign Minister Kamal Hossain on his discussions with Pakistan on the question of POWs.

I. Points made by Mr. Haksar

1. Mr. Haksar gave a detailed resume of his meetings with Mr. Aziz Ahmed and with President Bhutto in the week of July 1973.

2. Mr. Haksar emphasized that due to the difficulties in communications with the Bangladesh Prime Minister and Foreign Minister and due to the nature of instructions, which he had received from the Bangladesh side, the Indian delegation had to keep stone-walling alternative proposals or formulae which Pakistan put forward during the last round of talks.

3. The Pakistani side, though still obdurate and unreasonable on fundamental things, had shown some inclination to discuss a modus Vivendi if India and Bangladesh showed a similar Inclination. But even this inclination of Pakistan was not straight forward. The offer of recognition and the offer to facilitate Bangladesh’s admission to the UN, when analysed in detail, indicate that Pakistan was not making any concession. This point was emphasized to Mr. Aziz Ahmed.

4. The talks with Pakistan clearly indicated that the two basic questions on which a mutually satisfactory solution should be found to implement the proposals contained in the Indo-Bangladesh Joint Declaration of April 1973, are:

(a) the issue of war crimes trials, and

(b) the issue of the return of Pakistani nationals now resident in Bangladesh.

5. The Pakistani delegation indicated to the Indian delegation that under no circumstances could they accept the war crimes trials proposed to be held. There was a suggestion on their part to ‘freeze’ the question of war crimes trials as it stands today, as Pakistan would otherwise be compelled to hold trials of 203 Bangladesh nationals against whom there is sufficient evidence of their having committed high treason against Pakistan.

6. As far as the return of Pakistani nationals from Bangladesh is concerned, Pakistan has agreed to the return of about 70,000 persons including the 20,000 Pakistanis who have already clandestinely gone away from Bangladesh to Pakistan.

7. Mr. Haksar gave his assessment of the internal situation in Pakistan, highlighting the following trends:

(a) Though President Bhutto and his party have made inroads into the North-west Frontier Province and to some extent into Baluchistan, the province of Sind still remains a trouble spot.

(b) The internal situation in Pakistan is complex and fluid. The Army still has great influence. President Bhutto does not seem to have complete control even over the Civil Service, much less over the Army.

(c) President Bhutto is facing a difficult economic situation, with various pressures competing to sway him. The general impression is that, with the kind of populism which President Bhutto has utilised for his political survival, his continuation in power will necessarily depend on support from elements of the previous oligarchy, which ruled Pakistan. He has not succeeded in changing the political infrastructure of Pakistani society.

8. Bangladesh should take note of the fact that the impact made by the Joint Declaration is on the wane as subsequent events including the Indo-Pakistan talks have overtaken it. Bangladesh should also carefully weigh the positive as well as negative implications of taking a rigid stand on the elements of the Joint Declaration and allied problems in the light of the last Indo-Pakistan talks. The reaction of international public opinion and the UN to the continued detention of the POWs should also be taken into account while making this assessment, as the matter can be raised in the UN.

9. In response to a question from the Foreign Minister of Bangladesh, Mr.
Haksar stated that the objective of freezing the trials was that, without prejudice to the views held by Pakistan or Bangladesh on the issue of war crimes trials, the repatriation of the other categories of persons would follow by mutual agreement.

10. Mr. Haksar ended by saying that he had come to seek instructions on the stand that he should take on the issues which he enumerated, at the forthcoming talks with Pakistan commencing in Delhi on the 18th August.

II. Points Made by Dr. Kamal Hossain

1. Dr. Kamal Hossain congratulated Mr. Haksar on the firm manner in which he met the Pakistani delegation’s tactics at the last round of talks in Rawalpindi. Mr. Haksar acknowledged the congratulations, stating that it was only deserved to the extent that he carried out the Bangladesh Foreign Minister’s instructions.

2. Dr. Kamal Hossain wished to know how Mr. Aziz Ahmed brought in the question of war crimes trials while discussing the Joint Declaration. Mr. Haksar replied that, given the nature of Pakistani politics today and the influence of the Army in Pakistani politics, as far as Pakistan is concerned the question of war crimes trials cannot be isolated from the other pending issues.

3. Dr. Kamal Hossain made the point that while both Bangladesh and Pakistan could assert the right to hold trials and counter-trials, there is no logical basis for Pakistan to link the question with the humanitarian problem of repatriation. Mr. Haksar commented that it is not a question of the logic or legality of the right to hold trials by either country that is important. The point to be reckoned with was that both the Governments had declared their determination to exercise this right to hold trials. It is the political implication of this stand on the part of Pakistan and Bangladesh that affect the negotiations, and the problem has to be resolved.

4. Dr. Kamal Hossain enquired what “freezing” of the trials meant. Mr. Haksar explained that it meant holding the trial in abeyance without prejudice to the right of Bangladesh to hold the trials or, from Pakistan’s point of view, to her right to hold counter-trials.

5. Dr. Kamal Hossain said that while one can take note of the suggestion for freezing the war crimes trial of 195 POWs, he could not understand the logic of Pakistan keeping 203 Bangladesh nationals for trials without any legal basis. Mr. Haksar said that it was a plain case of keeping hostages. But it was a political fact to be acknowledged because Pakistan is serious about holding the trial, of 203 Bangladesh nationals if the war crimes trials take place in Bangladesh.

6. Dr. Kamal Hossain made enquiries about the total number of Bangladesh and Pakistani nationals who, according to Pakistan’s assessment, have to be repatriated. Mr. Haksar gave the background, emphasizing that Pakistan claims that there are only a little over 150,000 Bangladesh nationals and not the larger number which Bangladesh estimates. Dr. Kamal Hossain suggested that Mr. A.K.H. Morshed should sit with Mr. K.P.S. Menon and cross-check the figures.

7. Dr. Kamal Hossain also requested for the authentic text of the telegram sent from Islamabad by Shri Haksar to the Bangladesh delegation during Prime Minister Mujib’s visit to Belgrade and Ottawa. Mr. Haksar agreed.

III Conclusion

The first meeting in the current series of Indo-Bangladesh discussions indicated the following:

1. Bangladesh is aware of our anxiety about not retaining the POWs too long.

2. The Bangladesh Government may be willing to consider the postponement of the war crimes trials for some time. The modalities and the political quid, pro quo to be ensured from Pakistan, if the trials are postponed for some time, would be worked out by Bangladesh if the occasion arises.

3. Bangladesh may be willing to modify its claims about the numbers of Bangladesh nationals stranded in Pakistan and Pakistanis who wish to go back to Pakistan from Bangladesh.

4. The Bangladesh authorities are keen to get as precise an assessment as possible of the internal situation in Pakistan to determine how strong Bhutto’s position in Pakistan is. Indications are that if Bhutto will last, Bangladesh would be inclined to a conciliatory stand on pending issues.

5. Mr. Haksar’s preliminary remarks conveyed to Dr. Kamal Hossain (were indicative of) India’s desire to avoid a deadlock at the next Indo-Pak talks. The remarks also gave Dr. Kamal Hossain an idea of India’s problem of facing international public opinion about the POWs issue.

B. TOP SECRET

Summary of discussions held between the Foreign Minister of Bangladesh and Shri P.N. Haksar on the 16th August 1973, at 10 a.m.

High Commission of India
Dacca

The meeting was held at the Government Guest House. The following were present at the meeting:

Bangladesh side:

1. Dr. Kamal Hossain, Foreign Minister.
2. Mr. Enayet Karim, Foreign Secretary.
3. Mr. Fakhruddin Ahmed, Additional Foreign Secretary.
4. Br. A.R. Mallick, High Commissioner for Bangladesh in India
5. Mr. A.K.H. Morshed, Director General (SC)

Indian side:

1. Shri P.N. Haksar
2. Shri S. Dutt, High Commissioner of India.
3. Shri Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary.
4. Shri K.P.S. Menon, Joint Secretary (BD).
5. Shri J.N. Dixit, Deputy High Commissioner.

2. Initiating the discussions Shri P.N. Haksar stated that the comments which Mr. Kamal Hossain had sent to him at Rawalpindi from Belgrade and Ottawa on the issue of war crimes trials and on the irrationality of Pakistan way of dealing with its own nationals in Bangladesh were conveyed to the Pakistani side but the Pakistani response was obdurate.

3. Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that he had studied the contents of Mr. Haksar’s telegram as well as the specific proposals made by Pakistan in the form of draft agreements in great detail. Pakistan’s agreeing to the return of all Bangalees except 203 persons whom they want for counter trials was an unacceptable proposition. Pakistan was equally obdurate in trying to introduce the question of war crimes trials into the discussions which were primarily aimed at implementing the proposals contained in the Indo. Bangladesh Joint Declaration of April 1973. Be that as it may, one has to find a practical solution to pending problems. Bangladesh’s approach, therefore, is to modify the Pakistan draft agreement to make the proposals of Indo-Bangladesh Joint Declaration a central theme of a new draft agreement. Dr. Kamal Hossain suggested that the elements of the Joint Declaration and the elements of the Pakistani proposals may be compared and an agreement embodying a practical and just compromise between them may be formulated. Taking the Pakistani approach to the question of repatriation of Pakistani nationals resident in Bangladesh first, it appears that Pakistan has an open-ended approach to the problem. In the first instance seems agreeable to accept certain limited categories of Pakistani nationals from Bangladesh. In the second phase, subject to a ceiling of 260,000 Pakistani nationals, Pakistan may be agreeable to accept a larger number.

4. Dr. Kamal Hossain thought that Pakistan (Bangladesh) may be agreeable to having two agreements with Pakistan: one stating the principles governing the repatriation of Pakistani nationals, and the other stating the actual numbers to be repatriated: the procedure for repatriation and the time-frame for repatriation. Dr. Kamal Hossain wished to know whether his assessment of Pakistani inclination was correct.

5. Shri Haksar reading from the record of his discussions at Rawalpindi between the 24th and the 31st July, commented that Pakistan had talked about repatriation of Pakistani nationals. So, it would be fair to assume that Pakistan accepts in principle the need of receiving back all Pakistani nationals. But in the operative paragraphs of the agreement dealing with repatriation which Pakistan had proposed, they stipulated very arbitrary criteria for determining the identity of Pakistani nationals. Pakistan stopped short of accepting all persons who have declared their allegiance to Pakistan who are now in Bangladesh. Shri Haksar stated that, he told the Pakistani delegation that their approach was unjust and illogical.

6. The basic fact, however, remains that Pakistan contemplates receiving a higher number of Pakistani nationals from Bangladesh at a later stage. They have indicated their willingness to initially accept only about 20,000 such persons. The larger number of persons owing allegiance to Pakistan can return to Pakistan only when Prime Ministers Bhutto and Mujib meet.

7. Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that if Pakistan accepts in principle the return of all Pakistani nationals, though only initially receiving a limited number, a practical formula can be evolved. It would be India’s task to reduce the gap between the total number of 260,000 Pakistani nationals who have to go back to Pakistan and the actual number of persons whom Pakistan is willing to accept. High Commissioner Mallick stated that a possible method could be an exchange of Bangladesh and Pakistani nationals on a one to one or on a head to head basis.

8. Shri Haksar clarified that he had not talked about a numbers game or an exchange of Pakistani and Bangladesh nationals on a head to head basis. Shri Haksar had left a thought with the Pakistani authorities that a precise exchange of Pakistani and Bangladesh nationals in equal numbers may be a thin proposition, but an overall number of persons to be exchanged can be determined either on the basis of a gross figure including the persons who had already gone to Bangladesh and to Pakistan through indirect means or on the basis of a net figure to be agreed upon between the two Governments excluding, the persons who had already traveled from one country to the other. Either of these formulae could be embodied in the agreement to be signed between India and Pakistan after the next talks. The agreement could be in two sections. There could be an open agreement in which Pakistan agrees to take back all Pakistani nationals provided their number does not exceed the total number of Bangladesh nationals returning to Bangladesh. This will ensure a closer approximation of population leaving each way. But this arrangement will still not meet the requirement of a large number of Pakistani nationals to be repatriated from Bangladesh to Pakistan. To cover this problem a secret agreement could be signed in which Pakistan would agree to take more non-Bangalees subject to further discussions at a later stage. Another method by which Pakistan can be persuaded to accept a large number of non-Bangalees would be to suggest that both the number of Bangalees to be returned to Bangladesh and the Pakistanis to be returned to Pakistan could be determined by an objective verification by the Swiss, the ICRC or the UNHCR. It should be proposed that the verification should be preceded by adequate publicity which would enable Bangladesh and Pakistani nationals to avail of the opportunity fully.

9. The secret agreement which Pakistan had proposed at Rawalpindi had difficult elements. It had envisaged the repatriation of larger number of Pakistani nationals from Bangladesh on the basis of discussion to be held between Prime Ministers Bhutto and Mujib. Such a discussion in any case cannot be held before recognition. Shri Haksar therefore told the Pakistanis that they were attempting an indefinite postponement of the repatriation of Pakistani nationals. The alternative would be for Prime Minister Bhutto and Sheikh Saheb to organise the repatriation of Pakistani nationals by means of indirect means or public declaration. Diplomacy by public declaration is never fruitful or successful. Dr. Kamal Hossain agreed that the Pakistani approach outlined in the proposals at Rawalpindi was impractical. He expressed the view that if an open agreement between India and Pakistan could state the basic proposal that Pakistan agrees to take back the Pakistani nationals according to a phased program and then if a secret agreement could be finalized giving details of the phased program of repatriation of Pakistani nationals subject to the ceiling of 260,000 persons, then the problem could be resolved.

10. Shri Kewal Singh as well as Shri Haksar stated that Pakistan would not subscribe to any agreement stipulating a general principle that Pakistan would accept back all Pakistani nationals. Pakistan had firmly resisted all the legal, moral and political arguments which Shri Haksar had advanced in this regard during the Rawalpindi talks.

11. Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that the objective is to finalise an agreement which would be acceptable to Pakistan. This would naturally involve having an agreement which would convince Pakistan that it has only limited liabilities regarding Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh. The aims can be realised if the open agreement only mentions the general principle of Pakistan’s willing to accept all Pakistani nationals and the secret agreement talks about a phased program of repatriation by which in the initial stage Pakistan accepts Pakistani nationals equivalent to the number of Bangladesh nationals sent back to Bangladesh. In the second phase Pakistan would agree to receive back Pakistani nationals on the basis of discussions to be held in due course with Bangladesh subject to the ceiling of 260,000 persons.

12. Shri Haksar asked as to what arguments can be put forward to convince Pakistan that it should receive an additional number of Pakistani nationals apart from the numbers repatriated in the initial stages. The stipulation for Pakistan’s accepting an additional number of Pakistani nationals at a later stage would not meet the objective which Dr. Kamal Hossain had in mind of convincing Pakistan that it would have only limited “immediate or prospective liabilities in regard to Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh”. If Pakistan accepts the general principle that all Pakistani nationals can come back to Pakistan, though it will not be an open-ended liability for them, Pakistan will not accept such a predicament. The secret agreement which stipulates the precise ceiling of Pakistani nationals to be repatriated will not be an adequate shield for the Pakistani Government to explain the situation to their own people. Shri Haksar quoted Mr. Aziz Ahmed’s remarks to the effect that Pakistan is not in a position to accept even Razakars now resident in the Akyab area due to political difficulties. Mr. Aziz Ahmed is reported to have said that even if they faced the prospect of being shot, they cannot receive back in Pakistan. The only formula which may be acceptable to Pakistan would be one providing for exchange of Pakistani and Bangladesh nationals on the basis of parity. The additional number of Pakistani nationals to be repatriated should be left to a later discussion between Bangladesh and Pakistan without stipulating figures or numbers in the agreement. Shri Kewal Singh stated that even bringing Pakistan around to this view would be a difficult exercise. He recalled that it was after three days continuous persuasion including a discussion with Prime Minister (President) Bhutto that Pakistan agreed to receive “20,000 additional hardship cases from Bangladesh” as agreed to by them during the Rawalpindi talks.

13. Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that taking all the factors described by Shri Haksar into account, it appears that in the first instance it would be better to formulate a proposal providing for an exchange of Bangladesh nationals on a one to one basis. Shri Haksar added that an open agreement providing for this (as described above) could be supplemented by a secret agreement providing for an additional number of Pakistani nationals to be returned to Pakistan. Shri Kewal Singh stated that while pressing for an exchange on a head to head basis, it would be better to finalise the figures on a net assessment rather than a gross assessment of persons who have moved and who are likely to move from one territory to the other. Shri Haksar and High Commissioner Shri Dutt agreed with Shri Kewal Singh’s view. Shri Haksar added that if one makes an assessment of the gross figure of persons moving from one territory to the other, it would involve the two Governments in a contemplated debate about the number of persons who have already gone from Bangladesh to Pakistan and from Pakistan to Bangladesh. There would also be the problem of calculating the number of persons who have assumed Bangladeshi or Pakistani nationalities after the events of 1971 and proceeded to either country. Making arrangements on the basis of “net figures” would have a neatness. The figures of persons to be exchanged can be calculated from a certain date. Dr. Mallick and Foreign Secretary Kamal Hossain then enquired whether a proposal of the type discussed would be acceptable to Pakistan.

14. Shri Haksar replied that Pakistan would not readily accept the suggestions which were being discussed because Pakistan’s view is that only the province of Punjab can absorb the migrant population. The other provinces, NWFP, Baluchistan and Sind, have either economic or political difficulty in accepting the migrant population from Bangladesh. It is taking to account these difficulties and after consulting the Governments of Punjab, Baluchistan, Sind and NWFP that the Pakistani side had suggested the overall figures of 70,000 non-Bangalees as an acceptable number of persons to be repatriated from Bangladesh. Though this is the present attitude of Pakistan, the proposals discussed during this meeting with Dr. Kamal Hossain are credible and arguable. Shri Haksar stated that he would therefore not hesitate to put this proposal to Pakistan.

15. Dr. Kamal Hossain suggested that it would then be useful for the Indian dlegation to submit a draft open agreement providing for Pakistan’s accepting in principle Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh, the secret agreement providing for returning the number and modalities and the phased programme of repatriation. Shri Haksar, Dr. Mallick and Dr. Kamal Hossain expressed the view that while such a proposal can be put forward and logically argued, the oligarchic nature of Pakistani politics and Prime Minister (President) Bhutto’s problem of political survival will present difficulties in the implementation of any agreement.

16. Shri Haksar stated that while this may be so, the basic interest of India and Bangladesh at the next round of talks and in the months to come is to appear reasonable and flexible within reason in dealing with pending problems, so that neither Pakistan nor the international community can blame India or Bangladesh for being unreasonable or rigid. The second interest that India and Bangladesh have in common is not to give to Pakistan an excuse to continue a policy of confrontation with India or Bangladesh. Dr. Kamal Hossain agreed.

17. Shri Haksar stated that the second, problem creating a hurdle in implementing the proposal of the Joint Declaration is the problem of war crimes trials. The Foreign Minister mentioned that the Joint Declaration of India and Bangladesh had clearly kept the issue of war crimes trials out, but Pakistan insisted on making it a part of the discussions on the Joint Declaration. Dr. Kamal Hossain enquired whether the proposal was to freeze the trials for the present and to commence them at a later stage. If this is so, then what Pakistan is requesting is a further concession from Bangladesh. If this request is acceded to, it would be a major concession. It would be a fair presumption that the request is being made with a view to ensure Bhutto’s survival in power and for urgent political consideration which affect the Pakistani Government. If this is so, an appeal for such a concession should not be accompanied by the brandishing stick or a threat of holding counter trials of 203 Bangladesh nationals. Pakistan should be asked to simply make a request for the concession of freezing the trials and they should not hold the trials of 203 Bangladesh nationals. Pakistan’s attitude of threatening the reprisals while asking for a concession is unacceptable to Bangladesh.

18. Shri Haksar stated that it is not such a simple matter. If it is a question of general appeal to be made by Pakistan on political considerations, the appeal would be not to hold trials. Then there would be no question of Pakistan detaining or trying 203 Bangladesh nationals. The Pakistani argument is that if Bangladesh cannot cancel the trials, then as a compromise measure to resolve the more important humanitarian problems they may freeze or postpone the trials for the time being. While Pakistan will cooperate in dealing with other humanitarian problems, they will keep 203 Bangladesh nationals as hostages to ensure that the 195 Pakistani POWs do not come to any harm.

19. Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that this is a clear case of political blackmail and it is not a rational approach which Pakistan has.

20. Shri Haksar agreed with Dr. Kamal Hossain. He added that perhaps the only circumstance in which Bangladesh can agree to postpone the trials will be if all Bangalees are repatriated unconditionally by Pakistan.

21. Shri Kewal Singh informed Dr. Kamal Hossain that Shri Haksar emphasised the points made by Dr. Kamal Hossain about war crimes trials to the Pakistani side. Shri Haksar had mentioned that Bangladesh's setting aside the question of recognition was an important concession, but Pakistan was not convinced by Shri Haksar's argument on this matter.

22. Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that India and Bangladesh should move in a systematic manner “in stages” if a concession is to be given on the war crimes trials. The first decision would be for Bangladesh to agree to postpone the trials. Secondly in reciprocation Pakistan should agree to repatriate all Bangalees without retaining any for counter trials. Freezing the trials is a major concession and if India and Bangladesh do not insist on the second condition mentioned above, they would be responding to Pakistan's request to a concession while Pakistan is not making any concession at all.

23. The Foreign Minister pointed out that apart from the 203 Bangladesh nationals who are expected to be tried, Pakistan already has nearly 2000 and odd Bangladesh nationals in jail, some of whom have already been tried and condemned. So the reprisal trial of Bangladesh nationals would be politically unacceptable to Bangladesh. Shri Haksar appreciated Dr. Kamal Hossain’s point of view and pointed out that what Pakistan is indulging in is a simple exercise of emotional exploitation. Shri Haksar added while Pakistan is not as concerned about the war criminals Bangladesh has much more concern about the 203 Bangladesh nationals who may be tried. But the proposal outlined by Dr. Kamal Hossain of freezing trials if all Bangladesh nationals are repatriated is a credible and arguable stand.

24. Dr. Kamal Hossain enquired what Shri Haksar's assessment is on Pakistan's response to this concession. Shri Haksar stated that the problem is essentially psychological. The ego of the Army of Pakistan is involved. Pakistan will argue that while they appreciate the postponement of war crimes trials, they want a double insurance for the safety of the prisoners of war which they are organising by detaining 203 Bangladesh nationals and threatening to try them. The basic problem with Pakistan is that it is not a question of its having lost Bangladesh but with the separation of Bangladesh, Pakistan having lost the very raison de'tre for its existence. India and Bangladesh should realise that they are dealing with a very sick and confused society without any ideological integrity or political cohesion. Pakistan is like “six characters in search of an author”. Dr. Kamal Hossain commented that it would be more appropriate to describe Pakistan as a number of sub-cultures looking for a national identity. Dr. Kamal Hossain enquired whether the Indian delegation had also produced any draft agreement of the type which Pakistan produced during the Rawalpindi talks. Shri Haksar stated that the Indian delegation had not produced any agreement, though for his own guidance Shri Haksar had prepared a working paper. It was intended to clarify ideas about the normal problems connected with the re-patriation of the population of the prisoners of war. Shri Kewal Singh added that a preliminary assessment made in the Indian working paper was that it would take about 8 months to bring back all Bangladesh nationals by ships.

25. Shri Haksar stated that in this context it would be relevant to take note of another position which Pakistan had been taking. Pakistan has been stating that it is not asking all Bangladesh nationals to go back. If Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan on their own wish to return to Bangladesh and if Bangladesh is keen on receiving them back, the Government of Bangladesh should pay for the repatriation of Bangladesh nationals. Similarly, as it is the desire of the Government of Bangladesh to send back non-Bangalees to Pakistan, the cost of their repatriation also should be met by the Government of Bangladesh. Shri Haksar suggested that a position paper on this issue may be prepared by Bangladesh.

26. Dr. Kamal Hossain asked what India and Bangladesh’s next step should be if Pakistan refuses to come to agreement to resolve pending problems in spite of the concessions being formulated and offered at present. Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that the request for the postponement of the trials had come mainly because Bangladesh, had delayed the trials. Delaying the trials had perhaps prejudiced Bangladesh’s position in the matter. Dr. Kamal Hossain wondered whether even at this stage it would not be an effective pressure tactic on Pakistan to transfer the 195 POWs accused of war crimes in Bangladesh. This will bring home to Pakistan the immediacy of war crimes trials and if they are worried about these trials, they may become more reasonable towards India and Bangladesh.

27. Shri Haksar stated that while India is duty bound to hand over the war criminals to Bangladesh, the overall implication of such a step should be carefully considered. Whether such a transfer should take place or not is entirely for the Government of Bangladesh, to judge. If Bangladesh feels that the transfer of POWs before the 18th of August will make the Pakistanis more amenable to reason, it is not a realistic assessment. It might only stiffen Pakistan’s attitude.
Dr. Mallick enquired what the impact of such a transfer would be on the Pakistanis. Shri Haksar stated that the Pakistani delegation would most probably state that in view of the transfer of POWs the whole atmosphere for negotiation has been vitiated. They may express the view that since war crimes trials are impending, there is no need for further discussions with India.
28. Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that the transfer of the POWs would not automatically lead to the trials. It would naturally be a political gesture to bring pressure on Pakistan. The POWs would be transferred to Bangladesh. While they would not be tried, they would still remain postponed. The transfer of the POWs would also counter the general rumour circulated about Indo-Bangladesh ties on the issue of war crimes trials.

29. Shri Haksar stated that such a gesture will not be very fruitful. While there is no question of the trials being unjustified, the political reality to be reckoned with is Pakistan’s having 203 Bangladesh nationals hostages. We can skirt round somewhat by telling the Pakistani not to hold counter trials. This can be argued, but if the prisoners of war are transferred to Bangladesh, then this argument would lose credibility. Dr. Kamal Hossain understood Shri Haksar’s point of view. He, however, added that if Pakistan refuses to respond to the concessions being offered, then perhaps the war criminals should be transferred to Bangladesh to respond to Pakistan’s obduracy. Shri Haksar stated that while on the face of it, this seems justified the implication of such a step should be worked out. Suppose Pakistan does not respond to the concessions offered and the next round of Indo-Pakistan talks fail, then what is the leverage that India and Bangladesh can use against Pakistan? India and Bangladesh can take unilateral action to implement the proposals of the Joint Declaration. Pakistan can refuse to respond to the unilateral gesture also. It should be noted that the prisoners of war have been with India and Bangladesh for 18 months. The question is whether India and Bangladesh can maintain them for another year or so; particularly can India afford to retain them for an indefinite period? Bangladesh should put itself in India’s position. While it is true that Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan are in difficulty, the fact remains that the prisoners of war detained in India attract greater international attention. Lord Mountbatten had recently written to Shri Haksar asking for the expeditious return of the POWs. Even if one overlooks the serious political implications in terms of domestic politics and international public opinion of retaining the POWs indefinitely, India and Bangladesh must carefully assess whether the POWs can be used as a leverage for attaining India’s and Bangladesh’s purposes in relation to Pakistan. It was Shri Haksar’s assessment that the POWs being wasting asset would be a progressively less effective leverage to get back the Bangladesh nationals.

30. Shri Kewal Singh pointed out that there is no domestic pressure on the Pakistan Government for the return of the POWs.

31. Dr. Kamal Hossain again enquired whether the war crimes trials can be used to compel Pakistan to reasonableness if the next round of talks fails.

32. Shri Haksar remarked that it would be very difficult to anticipate Pakistan’s reaction, but there is very little likelihood of their being affected by the war crimes trials.
33. High Commissioner Shri Dutt pointed out that apart from not making any impact on Pakistan, the holding of war crimes trials might affect Bangladesh’s more tangible interests. The Bangladesh nationals will not come back. The resultant trends in Bangladesh politics would be a serious problem for the Government of Bangladesh.

34. Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that while these problems would emerge, the Government of Bangladesh would explain to their people that the trials are being held because Pakistan had failed to respond to the concession offered.

35. Shri Kewal Singh stated that if the war crimes trials are held, the implication will be:

(a) Pakistan will hold counter trials;

(b) The prisoners of war will remain in India as Pakistan will refuse to accept them back without the concession on the trials.

(c) The repatriation proposals covering Bangladesh nationals as well as non-Bangalees in Bangladesh will not be implemented.

A major international situation will develop. It would be adverse to Bangladesh and India’s interests. The blame for the stalemate will be laid squarely on India and Bangladesh doors. While the continued tension of the prisoners of war will remain the focus of international attention, the plight of Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan will not get any publicity. As far as Prime Minister Bhutto is concerned he will survive the crisis created by Bangladesh’s holding war crimes trials by organising counter trials of 203 Bangalees. The entire exercise of holding war crimes trials is therefore impolitic at this stage. Dr. Kamal Hossain enquired whether India and Bangladesh cannot brief the international community about the concession made to Pakistan and thereby attract their support and sympathy.

35. (36) Shri Haksar stated that the international community’s response to our explanations would be lukewarm. Their major, though pervert concern would still remain the prisoners of war. Shri Haksar stated that the point to be considered is that the time frame within which Bangladesh can obtain satisfaction on the issues of the return of Bangladesh nationals and of the repatriation of Pakistani nationals along with the POWs back to Pakistan, Shri Haksar stated that it was his assessment that Pakistan will not become contrite because of Bangladesh’s holding war crimes trials. As far as India is concerned India is holding the POWs primarily to meet Bangladesh’s objective. But if the POWs become an ineffective leverage for gaining this objective with the passage of time, then India and Bangladesh, apart from not gaining their objective, would also tarnish their image in the international community. Shri Haksar recalled that India had vacated the territories in West Pakistan only to maintain the consistency of India’s foreign policy stance of fair-mindedness and of not having territorial ambition against any country. Shri Haksar’s assessment was that the POWs cannot be used much longer as a bargaining instrument to persuade Pakistan to India and Bangladesh’s point of view. On the contrary the continued detention of the POWs can be utilised by Pakistan to claim that it is indicative of India and Bangladesh’s hostility towards Pakistan. The overall result of indefinitely retaining the POWs would be Pakistan’s continuing its policy of confrontation and India and Bangladesh’s having to live in an atmosphere of tension.

36. Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that he could not understand Pakistan’s approach. Pakistan’s only response to the Indo-Bangladesh Joint Declaration has been to threaten counter trials and nothing else.

37. Shri Haksar stated that one has to deal with Pakistan realistically. One should also carefully assess the international community’s reaction to the Joint Declaration. While most countries have welcomed the Joint Declaration as a positive step forward, none of them has endorsed it as the final and just method of resolving pending sub-continental problems. The international community’s view is that while the Joint Declaration is a good initial step, India and Bangladesh along with Pakistan should have a flexible approach to improve on the proposals of the Joint Declaration if they are not adequate to meet the situation. Shri Haksar recalled that even a very friendly country like the Soviet Union indicated to India during the 1971 conflict that India should not expect the Soviet Union to go on vetoing the Security Council resolutions. There was a serious suggestion from the Soviet Union that India should examine the possibilities of coming to a settlement with Pakistan on the basis of the cease-fire proposals forwarded to the UN by Gen. Farman Ali. Fortunately the proposals were overtaken by events on the ground. During the same period Shri Haksar had to ring up the French Ambassador to request him to ask his Government to continue its neutral posture regarding the Indo-Pakistan war at the UN. Shri Haksar stated that the main point that he was making is that one should not set too much store by the international community in such matters. Their reactions are not based on consideration of justice or logic. Shri Haksar stated that if India and Bangladesh do not take a more flexible stand, there would be another deadlock and India would reach a position where it may not be able to hold on to the POWs for an indefinite period because India would not be getting any political returns for holding them. It is in this context that Bangladesh should make its judgment. Bangladesh should also take into account the fact that with the passage of time the POWs still in prison, combined with the holding of war crimes trials will, not strengthen India and Bangladesh’s negotiating position, vis-a-vis Pakistan. Whereas by adopting a more flexible approach some progress can be made about the repatriation of stranded population in both countries.

38. Dr. Kamal Hossain enquired what happens if Bangladesh holds the war crimes trials and India unilaterally sends back the remaining prisoners of war.

39. Shri Haksar stated that this can be done but the result would be that Pakistan would expect the POWs back and refuse to send back the Bangladesh nationals. Nor would they expect any non-Bangalees from Bangladesh.

40. The Foreign Minister enquired whether a unilateral initiative by India and Bangladesh to send back Pakistani nationals will not work.

41. Shri Haksar stated that at best a unilateral offer of repatriating Pakistani nationals would be a tactical exercise. Pakistan will refuse to accept the Pakistani national from Bangladesh.

42. Dr. Kamal Hossain then enquired: “Then what are the options available to India and Bangladesh if the next round of Indo-Pakistan talks break down”?

43. The Foreign Secretary, Mr. Enayet Karim, intervened to say that a situation seems to have developed where India and Bangladesh seem to be making all the concessions. He detailed the concessions given highlighting the points yielded on recognition: only 37% of the non-Bangalees are being asked to go back to Pakistan. Mr. Enayet Karin enquired if an appropriate publicity about the concessions made would not assuage international public opinion in favour of India and Bangladesh.

44. Shri Haksar stated that he need not repeat his realistic, though somewhat cynical, assessment of international community’s reactions in such matters. He added that if in spite of the reasonableness shown, the talks fail, then India and Bangladesh can discuss further steps to be taken. Shri Haksar remarked: “We may cross that bridge when we come to it”. Shri Haksar added that while the United Nations will not pass any resolution endorsing or appreciating the concessions made by India and Bangladesh, it would certainly pass a resolution asking India and Bangladesh to return the POWs. In the circumstances neither India nor Bangladesh should be sanguine about the world’s reaction or willingness to bend Pakistan to India and Bangladesh’s purposes.

45. It should also be noted, that the pressure on Pakistan would be less because Pakistan is “an available country”. India and Bangladesh have decided not to be compelled to play the role of concubines to super powers. So they face a more difficult and challenging predicament which requires greater dynamism and flexibility. Commenting on Pakistan’s easy situation, Shri Haksar pointed out that though Pakistan has left the Commonwealth, none of the Commonwealth countries during the recent Conference at Ottawa passed any resolutions or made any statements supporting India and Bangladesh’s cause vis-a-vis Pakistan. They did not ask Pakistan to recognise Bangladesh. In the circumstances the problem to be realised is that India and Bangladesh have to work together for the fulfilment of their own interests. If in spite of our effort, state of confrontation continues with Pakistan, we can survive it but the effort should be to avoid it. India’s concern about Bangladesh is that it wishes to be a neighbour of Bangladesh with no domestic pre-occupations. The events of 1971 have generated political problems as well as economic problems. India has spent nearly 300 crores of rupees in drought relief in 1973. The period between the end of 1972 till today has been perhaps the most critical in the post-Independence history of India. But India is determined not to be swamped by these problems. With Bangladesh’s cooperation and understanding, the political problems with Pakistan can be resolved. If India goes with a flexible approach to the forthcoming negotiations with Pakistan which clearly indicates to the world that, India and Bangladesh’s motives are reasonable and genuine aiming at sub-continental stability and peace, there are prospects of some success. A greater amount of reasonableness is called for in such a situation as India and Bangladesh are dealing with Pakistan which is basically an unstable, troubled and oligarchic society.

46. Dr. Karaal Hossain agreed that in this context a flexible approach should be evolved.

47. Joint Secretary (BD), Shri K.P.S. Menon, Director-General (SC), Mr. A.K.H. Morshed, and Deputy High Commissioner, Shri J.N. Dixit, were asked to prepare a draft agreement of position paper embodying proposals for (a) the postponement of the war crimes trials, (b) the repatriation of Bangladesh nationals, and (c) the phased repatriation of the Pakistani nationals from Bangladesh.

C. Summary of discussions held between the Foreign Minister of Bangladesh and Shri P.N. Haksar on the 16th August 1973 at 4 p.m.

The meeting was held at the Government Guest House. The following were present at the meeting:

Bangladesh

(1) There would be a postponement of the trials.

(2) The future of war criminals could be determined by discussion between the Government of Bangladesh and the Government of Pakistan at a later date.

(3) The discussions on the future of war criminals would naturally follow after Bangladesh and Pakistan have recognised each other.

(4) The postponement of the trials would be conditional to Pakistan repatriating all Bangladesh nationals without retaining any of them for ground trials.

(5) As far as the repatriation of Pakistani nationals from Bangladesh goes, in the first stage Bangladesh and Pakistan would send back a number equivalent to Bangladesh nationals who have been repatriated from Pakistan.

(6) The repatriation of Bangladesh nationals from Pakistan would be preceded by the Swiss-Mission ascertaining their wishes at their places of residence in Pakistan. The Swiss Government's response in this regard would be given wide prior publicity to enable all Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan to exercise their option.

(7) The balance of Pakistani nationals who will remain in Bangladesh (when the initial number of Pakistani nationals as determined have gone back) would be repatriated at a later date in a phased programme of repatriation to be finalised by direct discussions between the Prime Ministers of Pakistan and Bangladesh. This discussion would be on the basis of, sovereign equality after Bangladesh and Pakistan have recognised each other.

(8) The initial figure of Pakistani and Bangladesh nationals to be exchanged is to be calculated on the basis of net figures and not gross figures.
2122 INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS

(9) Arrangements concerning the future of the war criminals and the repatriation of, balance of Pakistani nationals to be repatriated after the initial repatriation programme has been implemented, may form the part of a secret agreement.

3. Shri Kewal Singh suggested that it might be useful to have a protocol annexed to the agreement to be signed with Pakistan giving all the details of the arrangements to be made for the repatriation of Bangladesh and Pakistani nationals. The protocol should also provide for access by the Swiss representative to Bangladesh nationals in jails in Pakistan.

4. Shri Haksar stated that the repatriation of different categories of persons should be the responsibility of the Governments in whose territories these persons are at present.

5. The priority by which different categories of persons to be repatriated from each country should be determined by the country concerned, so that there is equality among the types of persons being repatriated from Bangladesh and Pakistan.

6. In response to a query about the future of nearly 2,000 Bangladesh nationals imprisoned in Pakistan from Bangladesh side, Shri Haksar responded that the matter can be taken up with Pakistan more effectively if Bangladesh could provide factual data like name, place of imprisonment, etc. of such persons.

7. Speculating on the possibility of exchange of such imprisoned Bangalees with pro-Pakistani elements in jail in Bangladesh, Dr. Kamal Hossain as well as Mr. Mallick stated that they would have no objection to the pro-Pakistan elements like collaborators and Razakars going to Pakistan if Pakistan would accept.

8. The documents submitted by Shri K.P.S. Menon, Mr. Morshed and Shri Dixit were amended by Dr. Kamal Hossain in consultation with each other, the final version of which is available with JS (BD).

9. Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that the agreements reached would be discussed by the Prime Minister with Shri Haksar later in the evening and after Sheikh Saheb had approved of the agreements they would be finalised in a meeting to be held on the 17th August forenoon. Dr. Kamal Hossain also indicated to Shri Haksar that the new instrument given to Shri Haksar for negotiations with Pakistan would be explained to Bangladesh Cabinet on the forenoon of the 17th August.

Main points made during the discussions between the Prime Minister of Bangladesh and Mr. P.N. Haksar on August 16, 1973. (1800 Hrs).

Points made by Mr. Haksar.

(1) Mr. Haksar gave a detailed resume of the talks which he had with President Bhutto and Mr. Aziz Ahmed in Rawalpindi between 24th and 31st of July.

(2) The talks revealed that the two main issues which prevented Pakistan from agreeing to the proposals made in the Indo-Bangladesh Joint Declaration to resolve humanitarian problems in the sub-continent were:

(i) Bangladesh’s decision to hold War Crimes Trials, and

(ii) Bangladesh’s insistence on sending a large number of Pakistani nationals (260,000) back to Pakistan.

(3) The Pakistan side has suggested:

(a) Skirting of the War Crimes Trial issue by postponing it pending a final resolution of the problem by later discussions;

(b) Reducing the number of Pakistani nationals to be repatriated from Bangladesh to Pakistan to a practical and acceptable number;

(4) Mr. Haksar wished to have precise instructions from the Prime Minister of Bangladesh on how we should respond to the above suggestions, as not having a flexible approach to the above problems may result in a deadlock with Pakistan.

(5) Such a deadlock would lead to a situation where India and Bangladesh would have to retain POWs for an indefinite period.

(6) The retaining of POWs would create adverse international public opinion which would damage the image of India and Bangladesh and, at the same time, the capacity of India and Bangladesh to utilize POWs for bargaining purposes would be reduced because the POWs are a wasting asset. Pakistan can face the non-return of POWs with lesser difficulties than those which India and Bangladesh will face by retaining them. Possible solutions to resolve the issues enumerated by Pakistan have been discussed with Dr. Kamal Hossain and some formulae have been evolved. Sheikh Saheb’s final Instructions on these formulae would be the basis on which Mr. Haksar will negotiate with Pakistan at the next round of talks.
Points made by the Prime Minister

(1) The Prime Minister stated that he was aware of the discussions between Dr. Kamal Hossain and Mr. Haksar since the 15th August evening and he agreed with the general approach evolved by Dr. Kamal Hossain and Mr. Haksar.

(2) Specifically Sheikh Saheb agreed to:

(i) The postponement of the War Crimes' Trial provided Pakistan does not hold 203 Bangladesh nationals for counter trials and agrees to the repatriation of "all Bangladesh nationals from Pakistan".

(ii) Sheikh Saheb agreed to the repatriation of Pakistani nationals from Bangladesh "in two instalments" to meet Pakistan's difficulties in the matter. Initially, Bangladesh will send back to Pakistan Pakistani nationals equal in number to the Bangladesh nationals who would be repatriated from Pakistan.

The second phase of repatriation should be agreed to in principle by Pakistan in the Agreement to be signed with India. The Agreement should stipulate that the balance of the non-Bangalis who have opted to go to Pakistan subject to the ceiling of 260,000 persons should he repatriated to Pakistan at a later date, on the basis of discussions to be held between the Prime Ministers of Bangladesh and Pakistan on the basis of sovereign equality (which means after mutual recognition by Bangladesh and Pakistan of each other)

(3) Sheikh Saheb stated that the above provisions should form part of the open agreement between India and Pakistan and not a part of any secret agreement, as was originally envisaged in the discussions between Mr. Haksar and Dr. Kamal Hossain on the 15th of August and on the afternoon of the 16th August.

(4) Sheikh Saheb was opposed to having any secret agreements about postponement of trials or dealing with the repatriation of all the Pakistani nationals. Whatever compromise arrangements have to be made should form part of an open agreement which should be fully explained to the people of Bangladesh.

(5) Sheikh Saheb authorized Mr. Haksar to show Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan's letter to the Bangladesh Foreign Office estimating the total number of non-Bangalis in Bangladesh to be nearly 800,000, to the Pakistan delegation. Sheikh Saheb was of the view that showing this document will clearly prove to the Pakistanis that Bangladesh would only be sending a little over 1/4th of the total non-Bangali population back to Pakistan on the basis of their clear options. Mr. Haksar agreed that this should be a convincing document to show to Pakistan. In response to a query on the implications of the postponement of War Crimes Trial by Sheikh Saheb, Mr. Haksar and the Foreign Secretary Shri Kewal Singh explained that the implications would be the following:

1) The War Crimes Trials would be postponed for the time being;

2) The question of trials and the future of the war criminals would be discussed by the Government of Bangladesh and Pakistan at a later date;

3) Such a discussion would be only on the basis of sovereign equality;

4) It would mean that the discussion would follow mutual recognition by Bangladesh and Pakistan of each other;

5) Postponement of the trial would not mean the suspension of Bangladesh’s right to hold the trials till Bangladesh itself decides otherwise.

6) In response to a query from Mr. Haksar as to whether the Indian delegation should discuss the question of Bangladesh's admission to the U.N. and Bangladesh’s recognition by Pakistan, with the Pakistani delegation, Sheikh Saheb stated that this issue need not be discussed with Pakistan. Bangladesh is not anxious to get Pakistan’s recognition nor does it need Pakistani assistance for admission to the UN. Admission to the UN is not in the gift of Pakistan which Bangladesh is to seek as a supplicant. Bangladesh is only interested in joining the UN because it desires the world peace and because it subscribes to the principles and objectives of the UN.

7) Sheikh Saheb stated that if in spite of the latest concessions being offered by India and Bangladesh, Pakistan insists on holding counter trials of 203 Bangladesh nationals, then there is no need for any compromise with Pakistan. Sheikh Saheb would not mind the talks being deadlocked if Pakistan insists on trying Bangladesh nationals as an act of reprisal.

**********
Record of discussions between the Prime Minister of Bangladesh and Shri P.N. Haksar on the 16th August 1973 at 6 P.M.

The discussions lasted from 1805 to 1925 hours. They were held at the home of the Prime Minister at Road No. 32, Dhanmondi Residential Area.

The following were present at the meeting:

Bangladesh Side
(1) Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, Prime Minister;
(2) Dr. Kamal Hossain, Foreign Minister;
(3) Mr. Enayet Karim, Foreign Secretary.

Indian Side
1) Shri P.M. Haksar, Special Envoy of the Prime Minister;
2) Shri Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary;
3) Shri J.N. Dixit, Deputy High Commissioner.

After the exchange of initial courtesies Shri Haksar gave a brief resume of the discussions which he had at Rawalpindi between the 24th and the 31st of July. Shri Haksar recounted the earlier obdurate stand taken by Pakistan on various issues. He described the ambivalent and contradictory approach which President Bhutto has towards pending problems. He mentioned that due to the principled stand taken by India and Bangladesh, Pakistan has shown some inclination towards arriving at mutually acceptable solutions. Shri Haksar expressed the hope that he had not failed in representing Bangladesh’s point of view at the last Indo-Pakistan talks accurately. Shri Haksar pointed out that the two basic issues which were defined as hurdles in the way of the resolution of the pending humanitarian problems by Pakistan were the prospect of Bangladesh holding war crimes trials and the problem of the large number of Pakistanis who wish to go back from Bangladesh to Pakistan. These were complex problems to resolve, but the vision which inspires Bangabandhu and Shrimati Gandhi is one of ensuring sub-continental stability and peace and particularly of preventing Pakistan from reverting back to its “politics of authoritarianism and barbarism”. The Prime Ministers of India and Bangladesh have the political if one may say so, virtue of being responsive to their respective peoples. Their leadership is based on the confidence of their people. So they are capable of greater idealism and vision in their political actions. In the case of Pakistan it is not so. Even otherwise, discussing the specific tactics of dealing with Pakistan, the fact is that Pakistan is using the Bangladesh nationals as a lever against India and Bangladesh, whereas India and Bangladesh are using the POWs for similar objectives. But the question is whether the lever which we are using, namely, the retention of the POWs, can be used with the same effectiveness with the passage of time. This is a matter to be judged and an issue on which Bangabandhu’s guidance would be welcomed. Mr. Haksar stated that while mentioning these general considerations he is not forgetting that India and Bangladesh have made several concessions to Pakistan.

3. The Prime Minister intervened to say that India had vacated thousands of square miles of Pakistani territory, which was a specific act of generosity.

4. Mr. Haksar stated that be that as it may, any attempt at solving the pending problems by “dictating or stipulating conditions” will not meet with success in international politics. This is a lesson of history. Mr. Haksar quoted the negative consequences which resulted from the Versailles Treaty of 1919. He added that the German nation which had cohesion and a tangible cultural and ethnic background as a nation succumbed to the barbarism of Nazi philosophy because of the diktat of Versailles. So one should imagine the impact on Pakistan if it is confronted with such a situation, given Pakistani society’s lack of cohesion and unity as a nation.

5. Mr. Haksar added that the pending problems as well as Pakistan’s thinking on them could be effectively tackled only if India and Bangladesh continued to respond to them jointly in a rational manner. There is no question of India or Bangladesh having a different approach in the matter.

6. Recalling Pakistani suggestions for resolving the problems outlined in the Joint Declaration, Mr. Haksar mentioned the Pakistani suggestion to “skirt the issue of war crimes trials”. Mr. Haksar stated that his response to the suggestion was firm. He had told the Pakistani delegation that their Government’s decision to hold trials of 203 Bangalees was an unjustified act of reprisal. Their asking for the “skirting of the issue of war crimes trials” while holding hostages, makes their proposal about the trials unacceptable. If Pakistan wishes to make a separate appeal to Bangladesh through India for postponing the war crimes trials on political grounds, it would be a different matter.

7. Mr. Haksar also recounted the discussion which he had with Mr. Aziz Ahmed about the fate of Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh who wish to go back to Pakistan. Mr. Aziz Ahmed was told that according to the laws of Pakistan itself their refusal to the non-Bangalees who have opted to go back to Pakistan from Bangladesh was an illogical and unrealistic stand.

8. Mr. Haksar informed Sheikh Saheb that the Pakistani side did not contradict him on his basic advocacy about Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh. But they tried to explain their attitude in terms of the economic and political difficulties which President Bhutto would have if he were to accept the large number of Pakistani nationals from Bangladesh. According to President Bhutto, Punjab is the only part of Pakistan where the Pakistanis from Bangladesh could be settled as the other areas in Pakistan are either over-populated or politically tense, making them unsuitable for the absorption of the migrating Pakistani nationals from Bangladesh. Given these circumstances, if Pakistan continues to be rigid in its stand and if India and Bangladesh refuse to show flexibility of approach, the prospect is of a deadlock. India and Bangladesh can certainly sit out through a deadlock, but the question is whether such an acceptance of a deadlock and the continuation of an atmosphere of confrontation with Pakistan will meet India’s and Bangladesh’s real interests. India’s assessment was that accepting a deadlock would not serve India’s or Bangladesh’s purposes. The prisoners of war are a wasting asset. Even otherwise India and Bangladesh have the additional limitation of being conscious of their civilised and rational image in the international community. Holding on to the POWs would tarnish the image of reasonableness and civilised behaviour for which India and Bangladesh are known. The compulsions of India’s and Bangladesh’s historical and political traditions would make it difficult for India and Bangladesh to retain the POWs. So both from the practical and the normative points of view an indefinite stalemate about the POWs or the other pending problems would not be conducive to India’s and Bangladesh’s interests. Force and politico-military blackmail cannot be used in this era and this time to alter territories or to bring about desired political results.

9. The Prime Minister intervened to say that while all that Mr. Haksar stated was true, one could have solved the problem when India was returning the Shakargarh area to Pakistan. All the Pakistanis in Bangladesh could have been put in the Shakargarh area and the land could have been returned to Pakistan with the Pakistani nationals.

10. Mr. Haksar stated that while Sheikh Saheb had the option to do this, in his opinion, Sheikh Saheb would never have undertaken the exercise because Sheikh Saheb was a political leader well known for his idealism, and for his rational, constructive and civilised approach towards politics.

11. Mr. Haksar said, “You, Sir, and my Prime Minister can have many wicked ideas when confronted with certain situations, but neither of you will go against your own civilised natures.”
11. Mr. Haksar recalled the behaviour of the Portuguese and the French Governments about their small colonies in India after the British left India in 1947. He contrasted the behaviour of the Portuguese with that of the French. The French were rational and practical. But the Portuguese were not and ultimately they had to succumb to the forces of history. Mr. Haksar stated that he had discussed the problems which are likely to come up during the forthcoming Indo-Pak talks in Delhi with Dr. Kamal Hossain and stated that he and Dr. Kamal Hossain were in the process of evolving a joint approach to ensure, to the extent possible, the success of the next round of Indo-Pak talks.

12. The Prime Minister stated that he had received a full report on Mr. Haksar’s discussions with Dr. Kamal Hossain. He told Mr. Haksar that while he is aware of the complexity of the negotiations with Pakistan, he wished to know how many concessions India and Bangladesh should make to make such negotiations successful. The Prime Minister recounted the various concessions made to Pakistan since Bangladesh’s liberation. Bangladesh had set aside the question of recognition. It had agreed to the repatriation of a number of West Pakistanis to Pakistan, including certain categories of POWs. Now the suggestion is that Bangladesh give concessions on war crimes trials as well as about the repatriation of Pakistani nationals resident in Bangladesh. Sheikh Saheb added, “I have the responsibility to explain the situation to my nation. I would have to explain the concessions that I have to make. I would like to know once and for all what the nature of these concessions would be,”

13. Mr. Haksar explained that he was advocating a certain amount of flexibility on the difficult issue of war crimes trials and the repatriation of the Pakistani nationals. He was not advocating a unilateral granting of concessions to Pakistan by Bangladesh.

14. The Prime Minister said that he had considered the suggestions made to meet these problems as a result of the discussions which Mr. Haksar had with Dr. Kamal Hossain. The Prime Minister agreed that it could be conveyed to the Pakistani delegation that the war crimes trials would be postponed. But Pakistan should not insist on holding trials of 203 Bangladesh nationals. The holding of trials of Bangladesh nationals by Pakistan would be entirely unacceptable to the Government of Bangladesh.

15. As far as the question of the repatriation of Pakistani nationals from Bangladesh goes, Sheikh Saheb reiterated that he could under no circumstances accept a predicament where he would have to allow nearly 260,000 non-Bangalees who had declared their allegiance to Pakistan, to continue to stay in Bangladesh. It would be accepting a subversive fifth column in the population of Bangladesh, which would be detrimental to Bangladesh’s stability and the growth of democratic institutions in this country. Sheikh Saheb added that while this was his basic position, he would not be averse to a via media to resolve the problem. Sheikh Saheb stated that instead of a secret arrangement being arrived at between India and Pakistan for the repatriation of the 260,000 Pakistanis from Bangladesh, the open agreement should make provision:

(a) for an equal number of Bangladesh nationals and Pakistani nationals to be exchanged from Pakistan and Bangladesh respectively in the initial stage; and

(b) for the later repatriation of the remaining Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh on the basis of a discussion between the Prime Ministers of Bangladesh and Pakistan in due course - a discussion which would be held on the basis of sovereign equality (naturally after the recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan).

16. Sheikh Saheb added that it should be mentioned to the Pakistanis that the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees had estimated the total number of non-Bengalees in Bangladesh at nearly 800,000. Bangladesh is only suggesting the repatriation of a little over a quarter of this number of persons to Pakistan, because they have clearly opted for Pakistan.

17. Mr. Haksar stated that he had mentioned the general figures, but he had no specific documentation to back up these figures. Mr. Haksar specifically mentioned that though he had the letter written by Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan in his possession, he was asked not to show it to the Pakistani side. Sheikh Saheb enquired why the Bangladesh Government had put in this reservation. Mr. Dixit stated that the reservation was made by the Bangladesh Foreign Office on the ground that Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan had written the letter giving the number of non-Bangalees in Bangladesh as 800,000, in his personal capacity. Sheikh Saheb said that that should not be a consideration if the letter is only to be shown confidentially to the Pakistani delegation to prove a point. Sheikh Saheb then formally authorised Mr. Haksar to show to the Pakistani delegation the letter written by the UN High Commissioner for Refugees in support of the Bangladesh Government’s argument for the repatriation of 260,000 Pakistani nationals back to Pakistan.

18. Mr. Haksar stated that as Prince Sadruddin is very close to the Pakistani Government, utilising a document emanating from him would be a particularly effective argument with the Pakistanis.

19. Sheikh Saheb stated, “I have given you some concessions. Is there any more concession that Bangladesh can give?”

20. Mr. Haksar stated that he did not desire or need any concessions from Bangladesh. He was representing the interests of the Governments of India and Bangladesh both. The question of Bangladesh giving any concessions to the Indian side does not arise because India and Bangladesh have joint interests in the pending matters with Pakistan. Mr. Haksar added, “You are my political master in my negotiations with Pakistan. You do not have to give concessions to a servant employed in a specific task. I have only come to seek instructions from you on how you would like me to deal with the task assigned to me, keeping in view the evolving nature of the task.”

21. The Prime Minister stated that his basic instructions are:

(a) Mr. Haksar should negotiate for the return of the Pakistani nationals resident in Bangladesh back to Pakistan in two installments. The first installment should be a number of Pakistani nationals equal to the number of Bangladesh nationals coming back from Pakistan. The second installment, which would cover the remaining Pakistani nationals resident in Bangladesh, would depend on discussions between the Prime Ministers of Bangladesh and Pakistan in due course.

(b) Bangladesh would agree to a postponement of the war crimes trials. “But there is no question of Pakistan retaining or trying 203 Bangladesh nationals.”

22. Sheikh Saheb then enquired whether, subject to the above agreement, India would be willing to hand over the 195 Pakistani POWs charged with war crimes to Bangladesh. Mr. Haksar stated: “We will see. We will see.”

23. Sheikh Saheb then enquired what precisely the “skirting” of the war crimes trials issue would mean. “What are its implications?” Mr. Haksar stated that precisely the “skirting” of the war crimes trials issue would involve the following:

(i) The trials would be postponed for the time being.

(ii) The question of the trial of the 195 POWs accused of war crimes would be discussed between Bangladesh and Pakistan at a later date.

(iii) Such a discussion can only be held on the basis of sovereign equality,

(iv) Which means that such a discussion can only follow the recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan.

24. Shri Kewal Singh clarified that postponing the trials would not mean Bangladesh giving up its right to try the accused POWs.

25. Dr. Kama Hossain enquired whether an agreement to postponement of the trials would automatically result in Pakistan’s withdrawal of the case from the World Court at The Hague.
26. Mr. Haksar stated that this would not automatically follow. But Pakistan's case in the World Court is so weak that once the trials are postponed, they would find it problematic to sustain the case in the World Court. The matter will have to be decided politically between Bangladesh and Pakistan, and Pakistan would have to disentangle itself from the predicament in which it has got itself involved at the World Court on this issue.

27. Sheikh Saheb then enquired what precisely was the justification for Pakistan holding counter-trials of 203 Bangladesh nationals. Mr. Haksar explained to Sheikh Saheb the Pakistani stand on this issue as outlined by President Bhutto and Mr. Aziz Ahmed to him. Mr. Haksar summed up the Pakistani position by saying that it is not based on any valid arguments of law, justice or logic. Pakistan's decision to hold trials of 203 Bangalees is clearly an act of political blackmail, but the fact is that they are in a position to do so and that it is a matter of concern to Bangladesh and India.

28. Sheikh Saheb responded by stating that if in spite of the latest concessions being offered by Bangladesh and India, Pakistan insists on holding the trial of 203 Bangladesh nationals, then India and Bangladesh should not give any concessions. There should be no compromise. Sheikh Saheb stated that if such trials of Bangladesh nationals are going to be held, “let the Indo-Pak talks fail. I do not mind.”

29. Mr. Haksar sought the permission of Sheikh Saheb to raise a completely different matter, namely, the general suggestions made by the Pakistanis about their agreeing to support Bangladesh's candidature for the UN and their agreeing to recognize Bangladesh. Mr. Haksar recalled that these suggestions were formulated by President Bhutto in consultation with the Pakistan Foreign Secretary, Mr. Agha Shahi, in Paris late in July “to sweeten the atmosphere”. Mr. Haksar enquired whether the Prime Minister would like to give any instructions on these two points (of Bangladesh’s admission to the UN and recognition by Pakistan) if the Pakistanis touch upon these suggestions again. Mr. Haksar said that while he would carry out any fresh instructions on these matters, he had told the Pakistanis in Rawalpindi that their offer of supporting Bangladesh's admission to the UN or of recognizing Bangladesh did not involve any concessions at all because these were not matters which involved any sacrifice or compromise on their part.

30. Sheikh Saheb stated that he was firmly opposed to Mr. Haksar’s discussing these matters with Pakistan. Sheikh Saheb stated that he would like Mr. Haksar to tell the Pakistanis that Bangladesh does not wish to discuss either the question of recognition or the question of their admission to the UN with Pakistan. Bangladesh is not very concerned about Pakistan’s recognition, nor does it wish to become a member of the UN because of Pakistan’s support or intervention. Foreign Minister Dr. Kama! Hossain intervened to say that admission to the UN is not in the gift of Pakistan. Pakistan should not arrogate to itself the role of a benefactor of Bangladesh in this matter. The Prime Minister added that he had no qualms about facing another Chinese veto in the UN. Bangladesh is only concerned about joining the UN on the basis of its desire for peace and its commitment to the principles and objectives of the UN. The desire is idealistic and not based on any considerations of regional or other politics.

31. Sheikh Saheb enquired of Mr. Haksar whether Mrs. Gandhi had asked Mr. Haksar to convey any specific suggestions on her behalf on the matters to be discussed at the forthcoming Indo-Pakistan talks. Are there any specific suggestions or requirements?

32. Mr. Haksar stated that Mrs. Gandhi had not given him any suggestions or requirements to be conveyed to Sheikh Saheb. Mr. Haksar called Sheikh Saheb’s attention to the Indian Prime Minister’s speech on the 15th August, in which she stated that India and Bangladesh have a reasonable and practical approach towards sub-continental problems and expressed the hope that the forthcoming talks would lead to positive results. She forewarned the people of India that if Pakistan remains obdurate, then India and Bangladesh would have to meet any critical situation that may emerge due to the failure of the talks.

33. Mr. Haksar stated that he was one of the most brutally frank civil servants. His approach to problems was to speak up his mind and to give his clear advice to the political leaders with whom he worked. After giving such advice, it was his practice to carry out whatever instructions he received to the best of his ability. Mr. Haksar expressed the hope that Sheikh Saheb would give him the liberty to be as frank as he has always been with his own Prime Minister.

34. Mr. Haksar stated that Prime Minister Mrs. Gandhi was concerned about Sheikh Saheb’s health. The Prime Minister responded by saying that though he had been somewhat unwell recently he had recovered.

35. Sheikh Saheb said that he was aware of the tremendous problems that India was facing today and added that much of it was because of the sacrifices that India made in 1971 and 1972 for Bangladesh. Mr. Haksar stated that Sheikh Saheb should mention anything about sacrifices. Whatever India did was on the basis of shared ideals with the people of Bangladesh. Mr. Haksar added that apart from the magnitude of the problems that India is facing, the Indian leadership has to resolve them by democratic methods. To work a democracy is problematic. A leader ruling by democratic methods should have ‘three hearts, two brains and six kidneys.’ But somehow India will meet these problems.

36. Sheikh Saheb said that he also was faced with a difficult situation and there are people in Bangladesh who had asked him to become a dictator for a period of ten years before introducing democratic institutions in the country. But he had, insisted on setting Bangladesh on the path of democratic growth from its very inception. Sheikh Saheb hoped that the difficult economic situation in the six States of India suffering from drought and shortage of food, would improve soon. He added that it has been noted that in spite of 25 years of independence India is still facing these difficult problems. So Bangladesh should be prepared for similar predicaments.

37. Foreign Secretary Shri Kewal Singh mentioned in response to Sheikh Saheb's queries that food grains were not available even against cash payments in the world market. India had asked Canada for 2 million tons of wheat, but had been able to obtain only 200,000 tons. Sheikh Saheb said that Bangladesh has also had to buy 1.2 million tons of wheat during the current year.

38. Sheikh Saheb then requested Mr. Haksar to give his assessment of the domestic political situation in Pakistan. Mr. Haksar stated that the situation in Pakistan was fluid and still controlled to a great extent by the previous oligarchy which ruled Pakistan. Mr. Haksar called Sheikh Saheb's attention to the theory of historical evolution propounded by the historian, Mr. E. H. Carr, who, in a dissertation entitled What is History?, had stated that history consists of the interplay of the forces of change and continuity in any given society. This is happening in Pakistan. Bhutto desires change, but he is a prisoner of the forces of continuity.

39. Sheikh Saheb remarked that the emergence of Daud Khan as the ruler of Afghanistan may create more problems for Pakistan. Mr. Haksar stated that while this may be true to some extent, Afghanistan is incapable of making a definitive impact on regional politics. Mr. Haksar remarked that the Afghans are a marginal people. They do not have a historical past or national political dynamism enough to affect the course of events in other countries. So one should not attach too much significance to Afghan propensities in relation to Pakistan.

40. Discussing the regional tensions within Pakistan, Mr. Haksar stated that the tribal cultures of Baluchistan and the North-West Frontier Province are incapable of spear-heading a genuine political movement for change. In these areas money and tribal rivalry were the determining factors of politics. The Sindhis are incapable of joining up with the Baluchis and the Pathans of the NWFP to organize a change in Pakistan. Mr. Haksar quoted the examples of the political careers and attitudes of Mr. Bugti and Mr. Wali Khan in support of his analysis.

41. Sheikh Saheb agreed with Mr. Haksar's assessment and added that the conflict between the Bugtis, the Mengals and the Murrees will naturally prevent the emergence of a united revolutionary political force in Pakistan. So the prospects in Pakistan are uncertain and disturbing. Mr. Bhutto occupies a very tense and unstable chair of authority.

42. Mr. Haksar stated that while this is true, the common people in Pakistan have become conscious of the harm that military rule has done to them. Mr. Haksar quoted the example of a conversation he had with a private individual in Pakistan who stated that the trouble with military rule is that the army does not know how to rule and once they start ruling they commit excesses and there is nobody to prevent them from committing them. Sheikh Saheb agreed that this was a succinct assessment of military regimes.

43. Sheikh Saheb wished Mr. Haksar success in the forthcoming Indo-Pak talks and invited him to return to Dacca for a more leisurely visit.

F. TOP SECRET

Record of discussions between Shri P.N. Haksar, Special Envoy of the Prime Minister of India, and Dr. Kamal Hossain, Foreign Minister of Bangladesh, on the 17th August 1973, at 9 A.M.

The meeting, which was held at the State Guest House, lasted from 9 A.M. to 10.30 A.M.

The following were present:

Bangladesh Side
1) Dr. Kamal Hossain, Foreign Minister;
2) Mr. Enayet Karim, Foreign Secretary;
3) Dr. A.R. Mallick, Bangladesh High Commissioner in India;
4) Mr. Fakhruddin Ahmed, Additional Foreign Secretary;
5) Mr. A.K.H Morshed, Director General, Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
Indian Side

1) Shri P.N. Haksar, Special Envoy of the Prime Minister;
2) Shri S. Dutt, High Commissioner;
3) Shri Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary;
4) Shri K.P.S. Menon, Joint Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs;
5) Shri J.N. Dixit, Deputy High Commissioner.

2. The objective of the meeting was to finalise the formulation of the instructions which Mr. Haksar was to carry to Delhi for the forthcoming Indo-Pakistan talks.

3. Foreign Minister Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that there was really no basic problem to be discussed since Mr. Haksar had received instructions from the Prime Minister himself. Dr. Kamal Hossain however wished to go on record that he appreciated the firm and brilliant manner in which Mr. Haksar dealt with Mr. Aziz Ahmed and President Bhutto. Dr. Karaal Hossain particularly appreciated the manner in which Mr. Haksar raised the issue of confrontation with Mr. Bhutto. Dr. Kamal Hossain also noticed that the record of the talks at Rawalpindi indicated that it was President Bhutto who introduced the points concerning Bangladesh's admission to the UN and recognition of Bangladesh into the discussions. Dr. Kamal Hossain reiterated that Bangladesh is against the issues of recognition and admission to the UN being discussed by Pakistan. Bangladesh has no wish to request for support from Pakistan for admission to the UN. Pakistan has no right to arrogate to itself the role of a donor of admission to the UN.

4. Shri Kewal Singh remarked that this was a valid approach and that once this was clearly conveyed to Pakistan, they would desist from raising extraneous issues.

5. Mr. Enayet Karim stated that apart from the considerations stated by the Foreign Minister, Bangladesh's seeking assistance from Pakistan to join the UN will dilute the fundamental stand, taken by Bangladesh that it is automatically eligible for admission to the UN. If, after having taken this stand over the last 18 months, Bangladesh suddenly gets admitted to the organization due to Pakistani intervention, the implication would be that Bangladesh was not eligible before for admission to the UN. This is a predicament which would be unacceptable to Bangladesh. Mr. Haksar and Mr. Kewal Singh agreed with this assessment.

6. Mr. Kewal Singh informed Dr. Kamal Hossain that, according to India's information, the Chinese were not very keen on vetoing Bangladesh's admission to the UN. They only exercised the veto because of repeated requests for this from Pakistan. Mr. Haksar remarked that the argument concerning the UN was basically the brainchild of Agha Shahi with his involvement with the UN. Mr. Haksar stated, “Such clever boys can be put in their place.”

7. A discussion then took place on the text of the working paper which Mr. Haksar is carrying to India. The final version amended by Bangladesh is available with JS(BD). Two special points regarding the working paper were mentioned by Mr. Haksar. Firstly, the discussion on the repatriation of the additional number of non-Bangalees from Bangladesh to Pakistan can be held either by the Prime Ministers of Bangladesh and Pakistan themselves or by their nominees on the basis of sovereign equality and consequent upon recognition. The second point which Mr. Haksar made about the working paper was that it should be stipulated in whatever agreement is signed with Pakistan that during the transfer of populations the persons repatriated would be treated with the utmost humanity and consideration. This formal provision in Mr. Haksar’s opinion, was necessary to avoid hardships which would be imposed on Bangladesh nationals leaving Pakistan.

8. Mr. Haksar stated that he wished to leave the following additional points for consideration by Bangladesh:

(1) Bangladesh should consider whether, as a co-detaining power, India, should not he a party to the discussions about the future of the war criminals who would be retained. It should be examined whether discussions should not be tripartite; though Shri Haksar’s personal assessment was that it would be convenient for India to leave this problem to Bangladesh and Pakistan. If due to the developing situation, the POWs ultimately are transferred to Bangladesh, then the question of India’s being a participant in such talks does not arise, but otherwise the point is worth considering.

(2) Mr. Haksar stated that Bangladesh should consider the implications of taking over physical custody of 195 war criminals. If the war criminals are transferred to Bangladesh immediately, the political impact of the decision to postpone the trials could be lessened. Bangladesh’s taking over the POWs should be a definitive step at an appropriate stage to counter any Pakistani obstinacy in future.

(3) Mr. Haksar stated that in the current discussions at Dacca the assumption was that the concessions being offered by India and Bangladesh may result in Pakistan not insisting on detaining 203 Bangladesh nationals and holding war crimes trials against them. Mr. Haksar informed Dr. Kamal Hossain that the argument that he will use to compel Pakistan to abandon the idea of counter trials would be that if Pakistan insists on retaining 203 Bangladesh nationals, India will hand over 195 war criminals to Bangladesh. This will ensure a political symmetry of negotiating positions for both Bangladesh and Pakistan. While the trials will remain postponed, the physical custody of the war criminals would be with Bangladesh authorities. Mr. Haksar added that he will convey to the Pakistanis that if, however, Pakistan gives up the idea of counter trial of 203 Bangladesh nationals, then apart from the postponement of the trials, Pakistan may be given the additional assurance that the actual transfer of 195 POWs, the timing and manner of it etc. will be delayed and decided at a later stage.

(4) Mr. Haksar then inquired what Bangladesh’s position would be if Pakistan remains obdurate about trying 203 Bangladesh nationals. Would Bangladesh accept the situation where 203 Bangladeshis are retained in Pakistan and 195 war criminals are kept in Bangladesh while the rest of the repatriation progresses? Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that this point has to be considered, but Bangladesh cannot be a party to any formal agreement on the above arrangement. Mr. Haksar clarified that this would not be an agreement, but a situation on the ground in which India and Bangladesh may have to acquiesce to ensure the solution of other humanitarian problems.

(5) Mr. Haksar also asked Bangladesh to consider whether the custody of the war criminals should be with a neutral party during the period between now and the date of discussions of their future? Dr. Kamal Hossain stated that such a neutral custody would be unacceptable to Bangladesh.
If Bangladesh is not having the custody of war criminals they should remain with India. Mr. Haksar clarified that the points which he raised above were ones which occurred to him and that he still has to get the Government of India’s approval for the line of negotiations which he will take on this problem.

9. A detailed discussion followed on the logistical arrangements to be made for the repatriation of populations. The total number of persons to be repatriated being nearly half a million, the logistical and economic magnitude of the problem cannot be over-estimated. Mr. Haksar stated that the basic principle should be to make the countries concerned responsible for the repatriation of persons to be repatriated from their respective territories. The international agencies can play a supporting role. It was agreed that the concerned authorities in the two Governments would prepare a working paper on operational details and financial implications of the repatriation proposals presuming that they would be accepted at the forthcoming talks.
10. Dr. Kamal Hossain then inquired what India’s reaction would be if the next round of talks also failed? Mr. Haksar stated that it would be better to think about crossing that bridge when one comes to it. He added that if the talks fail, India and Bangladesh would have to consult each other again to devise new solutions to the problems. Mr. Haksar, however, stated that he cannot but emphasize the fact that India and Bangladesh both are subject to the basic limitations that the prisoners of war cannot be retained much longer. Their utility as a bargaining point is diminishing at a rapid rate. Apart from the problems that are generated by their presence in India, India and Bangladesh would be subject to acute international pressure if the POWs are detained indefinitely. This is the basic limitation within the framework of which further solutions would have to be found if the next round of Indo-Pakistan talks fail.

SECRET

Excerpts from the Telegram from the Indian Ambassador in the United States T. N. Kaul to Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh.

Personal

Foreign Secretary from Ambassador-
Repeated Secretary to Prime Minister.

15 August, 1973

Had lunch with KISSINGER today (15th ) for 1 ½ hours. After lunch I took MG KAUL to call on KISSINGER for about half an hour. Sending separate telegram regarding MG KAUL’s conversation with KISSINGER. Following are main points discussed at lunch:

(1)  Shah’s visit:

KISSINGER said Shah had told him that our Foreign Minister’s visit had been very useful and removed some of his doubts and suspicions. Shah had told Foreign Minister that before considering giving any help to Pakistan in case of an Indo-Pak conflict, he would first consult India. Shah seemed genuinely worried about integrity of what remains of Pakistan and particularly at Soviet and Afghan attitude towards Pakhtoonistan and Baluchistan. He had also hinted at Indo-Iraq close relations.

Regarding arms, Shah was willing to consider reduction of arms by Iran, Pakistan and India. I told KISSINGER that India's requirement of arms could not be equated with that of either Pakistan or Iran. We had to defend our frontier on two fronts. KISSINGER replied that Shah was concerned about India's expanding Navy. I told him our Navy was not aimed against the Shah and our present Naval strength was hardly adequate even for our own defences considering the long coastline. In any case we had no trouble with Shah and he should have no anxiety from our side.

(2) Indo-Pak Relations:

KISSINGER said that it would be stupid and suicidal for Pakistan to provoke another conflict with India. He thought it was inconceivable in the light of India's superior military strength. I told him I agreed that it would be suicidal for Pakistan to embark on another misadventure against India but one could not ignore the desire for vengeance of a defeated army, especially if they had access to superior weapons. I mentioned F-4, F-14 and F-15 which the Shah was buying from USA. KISSINGER ruled out the possibility of the Shah transferring any of these planes to Pakistan as they needed special training to operate, which Pakistanis did not have. He assured me that America would not give any additional arms to Pakistan and BHUTTO knew this very well. I told him I was glad to hear this assurance because giving of any additional arms to Pakistan would not only vitiate the improving atmosphere between India and USA but would retard normalization of Indo-Pak relations and increase tension on sub-continent. He assured me that US had no desire to vitiate the present improving atmosphere between India and USA and between India and Pakistan. As he said, "it would take perhaps another war to make us change this policy". I told him I sincerely hoped such contingency would not arise because we had no interest in having another conflict with Pakistan unless Pakistan forced one upon us as in 1971.

In this connection I told KISSINGER that the forthcoming Indo-Pak meeting on 18th August was important. On its success would depend normalization of relations not only between India and Pakistan but possible reconciliation between Pakistan and Bangladesh. Question of trials could be separated from the humanitarian package proposal presented by us. It would be In BHUTTO's interest to accept it at the forthcoming meeting and not delay it any further. KISSINGER agreed with me and said he would tell Pakistan Ambassador about it today. He had gathered from latter that the Rawalpindi meeting had made some progress and further progress is likely in Delhi. He added that if Bangladesh would give up trials BHUTTO would be prepared to recognise Bangladesh. This would also help normalisation of relations between China and India according to him. I told him that question of trials and recognition was a matter between Pakistan and Bangladesh and could only be settled between them. In order to improve atmosphere for this it was necessary that the package humanitarian proposal be accepted in toto.

(3) Bangladesh:

KISSINGER expressed some concern about present situation in Bangladesh. I told him that according to our information the food and economic situation in Bangladesh was improving and they had turned the corner partly due to American PL-480 grains and the diversion of Soviet food ships.

I then asked KISSINGER whether he had spoken to the Shah about the idea of an India-Pakistan-Bangladesh-Iran agreement to respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of each other. He said he had and Shah’s response was not negative. However the Shah did not wish this to be a form of BREZHNEV-Asian Security system. I told him that this had nothing to do with BREZHNEV’s idea and could be an agreement between the four countries without any other outside power coming in. He said that was a good idea and he could probe it further

* * * * *

5. In the evening KISSINGER attended our Independence Day celebrations to which we had not invited many Americans. He told me that although in 1971 he had tilted towards Pakistan, the tilt was over and he recognized the new realities on the sub-continent.

6. My general impression was that Kissinger was trying his best to show his friendly attitude to India.

Henry Kissinger telephoned me in San Francisco today. He referred to my conversation of last week and said he had passed word to Pakistan. They had confirmed that if “Your Bangladesh friends are reasonable, a settlement should be possible this week end. We have indicated to them our desirability of settlement”. He also told me that President may see me at San Clemente on Tuesday, but he will confirm it later. Grateful if you would kindly telegraph Indembassy Washington any important information or message which I should convey to President if and when I see him. I shall be in Los Angeles from Sunday the 19th August till 22nd noon and Washington can inform me of your message by telephone.

B. Statement by Aziz Ahmed, Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs on arrival in New Delhi for the talks on POWs.

New Delhi, August 17, 1973.

I am glad to be in Delhi again on a mission of peace. I was here nearly a year ago. Since then until last month, when Mr. Haksar visited Rawalpindi, there was unfortunately a suspension of dialogue between the two countries. As a result no progress could be made in resolving certain outstanding problems which are not only humanitarian but have a profound bearing on the promotion of reconciliation and peace in the sub-continent.

It is good that the dialogue has at last been resumed. We have come here to continue the talks that Mr. Haksar and his colleagues had with us in Rawalpindi last month. Considerable progress was then made and we hope we may reach an agreement during this visit. On our part, I may assure you that our Government is fully conscious of the need to resolve the outstanding issues so that our two countries may proceed with implementation of the Simla Agreement with a view to normalising the situation in the sub-continent.

We consider that implementation of the Simla Agreement is a matter of the utmost importance to the future well-being of the peoples inhabiting this sub-continent. The Agreement itself was an outstanding tribute to the statesmanship, far-sightedness and sagacity of the Heads of Government of our two countries, we consider ourselves bound by this Agreement. We will continue to do everything we can to implement it in the spirit of Simla.

There is a feeling in certain quarters in India that Pakistan is not implementing this Agreement. We are not aware in what particular respect we have failed to honour the Agreement. We do know, however, that we have done our part and are ready to continue to do so. However, if we have held the view that the situation in the sub-continent cannot be normalised so long as over 90,000 of our citizens continue to languish in Indian prison camps, is that an unjustified stand to take? These unfortunate human beings, who include thousands of women and children, have been in detention in India now for 20 months. Can anyone reasonably expect that normality can be introduced in the prevailing situation in the sub-continent under such circumstances?

We have come to resolve this intensely human problem as also the other humanitarian issues set out, in the India-Bangladesh Declaration. The Declaration aims at promoting sub-continental reconciliation. We wholly support this objective. Indeed we have taken several initiatives in this behalf in the past. As a further contribution to that end my Government has recently decided to release all Bengalis who had been convicted, or were to be tried, for attempting to leave Pakistan with contraband without the necessary authority. All cases against them have been withdrawn.

The Joint Declaration purposes to delink the humanitarian issues of repatriation of Pakistani prisoners of war in India, Bengalis in Pakistan and Pakistan nationals in Bangladesh, from political issues. We welcome this approach. We too consider that issues relating to repatriation should be settled on humanitarian grounds alone; their settlement should not be made dependent, on settlement of political issues. If we proceed on this basis, there should be no difficulty in solving these issues during our forthcoming talks with your leaders here.

My Prime Minister attaches great importance to an early settlement of these issues so that we may proceed with the implementation of the Simla Agreement and put an end - as the Agreement states - to the conflict and confrontation that have marred our relations in the past and work for the promotion of a friendly and harmonious relationship and establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent. Only by so doing will we be able to devote the needed resources and energy to the pressing task of solving the grave problems of poverty and hunger that afflict its peoples.

Repeat: Indembassy Washington (for Ambassador) Indiadel New York (for Permanent Representative.)

MOST IMMEDIATE

No. 27449. August 19, 1973

High Commissioner from P.N. HAKSAR (Personal).

Please convey the following message to Dr. Kamal Hossain:

There were two sessions with Pakistan Delegation yesterday (18th August) lasting nearly 5 hours. In the opening session I began by saying that I should like to bury the ghost of the so-called “extraneous issues” for ever. While expressing appreciation for AZIZ AHMED publicly disowning my responsibility for having allegedly raised these issues I said that in the last paragraph of his letter he was still referring to these issues. I said that I wanted AZIZ AHMED and Pakistan Government to know for all times to come that Bangladesh is not repeat not hard pressed in seeking the good offices of Pakistan for entry into the United Nations and was not repeat not interested in asking for recognition.

I then went on to strongly reiterate arguments based on law and humanity enjoining Pakistan to accept its responsibility towards its citizens in Bangladesh who had opted for Pakistan. I exposed Pakistan’s hollow charge that Bangladesh’s policy on this question is “racist” citing ICRC UNHCR sources to show that out of nearly 800,000 non-Bangalees only 260,000 have opted for Pakistan. Since Pakistan chooses to call these opted “Federalists” and Article I of Pakistan’s constitution talks in terms of “foreign aggression” existing in “the Province of East Pakistan”, the obvious conclusion is these persons are working for Pakistan. In the circumstances how can Bangladesh which is a sovereign nation retain such individuals? Regarding the issue of trials I pointed out that Pakistan’s plea for skirting around issue for the time being is eroded by her intention to keep 203 Bangladesh civilian and military officials as hostages for holding counter trials. I said these two issues could only be resolved by basing our approach on uniform application of principles and by removing contradictions so obvious in Pakistan’s stand. We could not build a bright future in the light of the past.

AZIZ AHMED in his characteristic style began by bitterly complaining that my remarks to the press on return from Dacca describing Pakistan’s approach as rather negative or far short of what Pakistan ought to have done were unfair and led to dissipation of optimism with which he had come to Delhi. He thought these remarks made soon after my return from Dacca indicated that Sheikh Sahib had rejected Pakistan’s offer. He tried to explain how Pakistan’s approach had been constructive as in deference to India’s insistence at Pindi that Sheikh Sahib cannot give up the idea of trials, Pakistan had suggested compromise formula of “skirting the issue for the time being.” He said that they had done this on being impressed by my argument that repatriation of large numbers on both sides will improve the atmosphere. Regarding Pakistan nationals, AZIZ AHMED stuck to the formulation based on categories and numbers given in Pakistan’s second draft agreement. He argued this was the farthest limit to which they could go and in any case the question of “higher figure” had been left open for decision when the Prime Ministers of Pakistan and Bangladesh meet.

I reminded AZIZ AHMED that the impression conveyed to our delegation in Pindi was not that Pakistan had reached ultimate limits on these two issues. Regarding repatriation of Pakistan nationals, President BHUTTO had said “I will not be miserly in dealing with this question”. I was, therefore, unable to appreciate AZIZ AHMED’s despondency and insistence that no move forward was possible.

In the afternoon session I faithfully conveyed latest position of Bangladesh and India as emerging out of the recent talks at Dacca. I mentioned that Bangladesh felt and we agreed with them that Pakistan wanted to go on asking for more and more concessions while herself not moving one bit towards compromise. When the Joint Declaration was announced in April last, Bangladesh had already made a big concession by setting aside recognition to pave way for resolving all humanitarian issues. Now Pakistan was insisting on trials of 195 being frozen even though this was a sensitive political issue for Bangladesh leadership. On top of this Pakistan wanted to keep 203 Bangalee officials and military personnel as hostages. I pointed out that Bangladesh Government have gone to the farthest extent. However there was some possibility for Bangladesh Government to consider the concept of “skirting round” the trials. But this was impossible to consider if Pakistan insists on keeping 203. Regarding Pakistan nationals, I said Bangladesh Government could not understand the validity of Pakistan’s calculations based on categories and numbers. After all only 206,000 had declared their allegiance to Pakistan out of nearly 800,000 non-Bangalee and in terms of existing laws Pakistan and Bangladesh, Pakistani ought to accept its own citizens. In this context, I read out President Bhutto’s earlier interviews with Guardian and Newsweek wherein he had indicated willingness to accept variously two to three lakh “Biharis” or at least agree to a head-for head exchange i.e. the same number of Pakistanis from Bangladesh as the number of Bangalees leaving Pakistan. I argued that if there was some difficulty in accepting large numbers at the same time, the matter could be tackled in two stages. As to the plea of internal difficulties this applied not only to Pakistan but Bangladesh as well, adding that task of every Government is to govern and to get over political difficulties.

AZIZ AHMED reacted by saying that whatever explanation we might give in support of contention that Bangladesh’s stand was reasonable and Pakistan’s was not, the fact remained we are stymied and the move forward to a sensible solution of these issues was paralyzed. He spoke emotionally about suffering of relatives of 90,000 POWs detained in India for over 20 months which would continue to mar relations between the two countries for years to come. Referring to the idea of retaining 203 Bangalees in Pakistan, he said treason is a very serious crime, especially since treason had succeeded and the country had been split up. How can Pakistan Government justify to its public the retention of 195 POWs in India if these 203 Bangalees are also released? Even the returning POWs will condemn Pakistan Government for leaving behind 195 in that event. While he admitted that Bangladesh Government’s willingness to consider skirting around the war trials for the time being was a step forward he described it as almost “break through”, he was totally adamant on suggestion that no Banglaee should be kept back as hostages. Regarding Pakistani nationals, AZIZ AHMED said that either Pakistan takes all those who are pro-Pakistan, in which case the number will be 5 or 6 lakhs, otherwise we must stick to categories. He repeated that Pakistan’s offer that another 20,000 hardship cases can be taken after verification and the proviso of an increased number to be agreed after a meeting between Shaikh Sahib and BHUTTO was a reasonable offer.

I said that the way AZIZ AHMED was looking at things there was no option but to say that we are stuck. I repeated that Pakistan had itself tied its own hands by insisting on 100% fulfillment of its conditions and unless there was a change of heart, there cannot be a break-through. The meeting adjourned on a somber note when AZIZ AHMED said that he would return to Islamabad soon after his call on our Prime Minister. However he ended up later by saying that he was prepared to look at any proposals we might have to make.

Despite most categorical statement I made at the very outset that Bangladesh does not repeat not seek Pakistan’s good offices for U.N. admission, Pakistan delegation appears to be strongly under the impression that Bangladesh was so desperately interested in admission to U.N. that if Pakistan were to facilitate it a great benefit would be conferred on Bangladesh. It is for you to consider how this impression has got round and how it could be corrected so that my statement makes of total credibility.

No, Primin-21154. 20 August, 1973

High Commissioner from P.N. Haksar.

Please convey the following to Dr. Kamal Hossain:

We had another meeting with AZIZ AHMED, AGHA SHAHI and ABDUL SATTAR which lasted little over an hour. Their formal position both on the question of retention of 203 and on the number of Pakistani nationals to be repatriated has the appearance of being non-negotiable. On the question of 203, their major concern is not the desire to retain them but to be able to explain to the public at large in their country the reason for not keeping a leverage against the 195 left over for the time being. In some private conversations they have suggested the idea of guarantee in a vague and undefined manner. As far as we have been able to understand, they would like an assurance reduced in writing that if 203 are transferred along with the rest of Bangladeshi nationals, 195 shall continue to remain where they are at present and India, as their custodian, will guarantee that they would not repeat not be transferred to Bangladesh until the question of their disposition is settled bilaterally between Bangladesh and Pakistan. The numbers are non-negotiable but they go on repeating that they have left the question open so that the numbers could be augmented later when discussions take place bilaterally between Bangladesh and Pakistan.

2. From all accounts, AZIZ AHMED’s present brief does not appear to entitle him to depart from the broad positions reached at Rawalpindi and we do not know if he has the courage or the competence to argue in favour of propositions which will have the effect of qualitatively changing the character of that brief. I thought I should let you know of this as it has substantial bearing on the results of the negotiations.

3. As I had mentioned in my earlier telegram, we are now under an obligation to put forward certain ideas on paper. I have already telegraphed to you our well considered draft, I shall be grateful for your most immediate instructions both on that draft and on the question referred to in paragraph 1 of this telegram.

High Commissioner from Haksar

We are meeting the Pakistanis again this afternoon. We propose probing their position on the question of 203 Bangladesh civilian and military personnel being retained in Pakistan as well as on the question of the number of Pakistani nationals to be repatriated. We shall, of course, maintain our position that unless the 203 are repatriated along with other Bangladeshis in Pakistan, Bangladesh is not repeat not even prepared to consider the freezing of the trial of 195. As for the number of Pakistani nationals to be repatriated, we would still insist that Pakistan should agree to take all those who have opted for Pakistan.

Considering that Pakistan had made in Rawalpindi a written offer on the question of freezing of trials as well as on the question of repatriation of Pakistani nationals in terms of certain categories, Pakistan representatives have suggested to us and I have already reported on this in my yesterday’s telegram that we present some sort of counter proposals. We have, therefore, prepared a kind of memorandum of understanding which we would like to present to Pakistan, subject to Bangladesh’s approval, sometime tomorrow i.e. August 21. I am separately telegraphing the text of this.

The following is the text of the memorandum of understanding proposed to be presented to Pakistan on August 21, 1973.

BEGIN:

Bangladesh, India and Pakistan desirous of solving the humanitarian problems resulting from the conflict of 1971 and thus enabling the vast majority of human beings referred to in the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration of April 17 to go to the respective homes of their choice agree to the following principles:-

(1) Pakistan agrees to repatriate all Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan who wish to be repatriated and shall not repeat not detain any one for any reason whatsoever.

(2) Bangladesh agrees to repatriate initially the bulk of Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh who have opted for repatriation to Pakistan.
(3) All prisoners of war and civilian internees to be repatriated to Pakistan except those whose cases, are dealt with in paragraph 4.

(4) In consideration for Pakistan repatriating all Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan to Bangladesh as provided for in paragraph 2, Bangladesh agrees to consider that no trial of any of the 195 POWs shall take place during the entire period of repatriation and that such prisoners of war shall remain in the custody of India.

After complete implementation of the repatriation of the category of persons enumerated in paragraphs 1 to 3, Bangladesh and Pakistan together with India as the custodian of 195 POWs will discuss the question of disposal of 195 POWs, it being understood that Bangladesh can participate in such meeting only on the basis of sovereign equality.

The principle of simultaneity will be observed throughout the process of repatriation of the three categories of persons.

ENDS.

It will be recalled that in the morning of the day of my departure, I had specifically raised the possibility of Pakistan insisting on retaining the custody of 203 Bangladesh civilian and military personnel. Assuming that we fail to dislodge them from this position, we would like to know if Bangladesh would agree to Pakistan retaining these 203 on condition that Bangladesh obtains the custody, of 195 POWs and the repatriation of the rest of POWs, Bangladesh nationals and Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh shall commence, assuming of course that we reach a satisfactory agreement with Pakistan on the question of the number of Pakistani nationals to be repatriated in terms of the formula we had evolved in Dacca.

It may be noticed that I have so far even in the draft set out above only committed Bangladesh to “consider” the question of freezing of trials. As for the use of the word “initially bulk” in paragraph 2, our idea is that we shall start by saying that our concept of bulk is 2,40,000 leaving behind about 20,000 Pakistani nationals, whose case is to be disposed of during the bilateral discussions envisaged. Our fall back position, of course, remains that initially we should insist on the head for head formula leaving the remaining to be negotiated bilaterally between Bangladesh and Pakistan on the basis of sovereign equality.

Personal.

Many thanks your useful and timely telegram No.27449 dated 19th Aug.

2. AZIZ AHMAD’s argument for pro-Pakistanis rather than Pakistani citizens in Bangladesh is untenable, but accommodation based on general principle of Pakistan accepting all its nationals and then determining who, they are and if they wish to go to Pakistan may be feasible. However, such an outcome has to have an initial commitment for repatriation of a definite number 100,000 immediately (but without the approach to ‘classification’), keeping the final figure flexible and perhaps even subject to future bilateral negotiations.

3. Provided Bangladesh agrees, Bengali hostages can at best be tolerated as the group coming last in the process of evacuation, but Pakistanis insistence on any agreements by us or Bangladesh to hold these 200 odd people will create several political and moral problems. You have already emphasised this.

4. Pakistani assessment of its great leverage because of Bangladesh’s assumed desire for Pakistani recognition and entry into the U.N. is due partly to (i) the enthusiasm shown for these measures by Bangladesh officials in New York and elsewhere and (ii) general desire for establishment of relations between Bangladesh and China. (For different reasons USA and USSR would like to see these relations start).

5. Our love and best wishes for success.

Following is repetition of our message dated: 21st August sent through R and A Wing.

BEGINS.

No. 905/73.

P.N.Haksar from High Commissioner

Personal.

Contents of, your telegrams No. 21152 and 21153 were conveyed to Dr. Kamal Hossain late in the evening. After having examined the Draft Memorandum of Understanding contained in your telegram No, 21153 Dr. KAMAL HOSSAIN has suggested the following amendments:

Paragraph 1 is in-order. Paragraph 2 of suggested Memorandum, providing for Bangladesh repatriating bulk of Pakistani nationals, seems to imply that Bangladesh has reservations about repatriating Pakistani nationals, which it is not the case. Nor does this para make any provision for the repatriation of the balance of Pakistani nationals who would be left behind in Bangladesh. These two points have to be incorporated: in paragraph 2 clearly. Paragraph 2 may therefore read: “Pakistan agrees to receive initially the bulk of Pakistan nationals in Bangladesh who have opted for repatriation to Pakistan. Pakistan further agrees to enter into discussions with Bangladesh to arrange for the repatriation of Pakistani nationals who would be left behind in Bangladesh after the initial phase of repatriation of Bangladesh and Pakistani nationals is completed it being understood that such discussions between Bangladesh and Pakistan will be held on the basis of sovereign equality.”

Paragraph (3) is in order.

Paragraph (4) may be modified to read as follows:

"In consideration for Pakistan repatriating all Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan as provided in para (i), Bangladesh agrees to consider that no trial of the 195 POWs shall take place during the entire period of repatriation and that such POWs shall remain in India. (The words “in the custody of” in your draft may be omitted.) After the complete implementation of the repatriation of the categories of persons enumerated in paras (1) to (3), Bangladesh, Pakistan and India will discuss the matter of 195 POWs, it being understood that Bangladesh can participate in such meetings only on the basis of sovereign equality. The principle of simultaneity will be observed throughout the process of repatriation of the three categories of persons.” You will notice that the second sentence in para (4) has been shortened and simplified.

2. Bangladesh Government presumes that the contents of the Memorandum as amended above, while providing the basis for negotiations, when being finalized as an agreement, will conform as far as possible to the Draft which was finalized during your recent discussions in Dacca, subject of course to minor editorial and verbal changes which you may consider it necessary.

3. Bangladesh Government’s response to the points raised in last paragraph of your telegram No. 25513 will follow earliest. Have requested Dr. KAMAL HOSSAIN to respond to them by this afternoon.

Reference your cable. Met Kissing at San Clemente for one and a half hours this morning. Shall telegraph separately about other matters. This telegram contains points mainly regarding Indo-Pakistan talks.
I spoke just on the lines of your telegram and expressed disappointment at AZIZ AHMED’s negative attitude. He mentioned that he had spoken to Pakistan’s Ambassador regarding desirability of settling matters during Delhi meeting. According to him Pakistani response was positive. He agreed to telegraph BHUTTO again today asking him to give up insistence on retaining 203 Bengalees (KISSINGER admitted that they were being held as reprisals). He would tell BHUTTO that it was his impression based on reliable source that the question of trial of 195 Pakistani POWs could be skirted around and kept pending until discussion between Pakistan and Bangladesh regarding this question and recognition. If there was agreement between Bangladesh and Pakistan the matter could be resolved amicably. Till then these 195 Pakistani POWs would be kept in India.

I told KISSINGER I could not give any undertaking or assurance that 195 prisoners would be kept in India till their future was resolved amicably between Bangladesh and Pakistan. Bangladesh was not desperate about recognition by Pakistan. However if Bangladesh agreed to give up war crimes trials in exchange for recognition by Pakistan or otherwise, that was another matter. If there was no amicable settlement between Bangladesh and Pakistan and Bangladesh demanded return of these 195 war criminals we could not refuse it. It was however my

SECOND AND LAST PART.

....personal impression, based on talks with some Bangladesh authorities (I did not mention TAJUDDIN’s name) that if Pakistan agreed to repatriate all the 240 000 Bengalees who wanted to go back to Bangladesh and agreed to take back all the 260000 Pakistanis in Bangladesh who wanted to go back to Pakistan and Pakistan did not detain the 203 Bengalees, the atmosphere for settlement of trials of Pakistanis and recognition of Bangladesh would be much improved. It would also create a favourable impression for Pakistan.

KISSINGER said it would be a difficult operation and his approach to BHUTTO would have to be subtle. He agreed to make the approach and requested that we should not make any commitment in the Delhi talks about keeping 195 POWs in India without his first getting O.K from BHUTTO as otherwise BHUTTO was quite capable of going back on AZIZ AHMED’s word to us. He also requested that if he gets O.K. from BHUTTO then we should not embarrass U.S.A. by handing over 195 war criminals to Bangladesh until all avenues of settlement of question between Bangladesh and Pakistan are exhausted. I told him I could, not make any commitment or give any assurance regarding this matter but would convey this to you and communicate with him soonest. possible. KISSINGER asked me if it would serve any useful purpose if he talked to Bangladesh to soften their attitude to war criminals trials. I told him it was for him to assess the desirability of this course. He said he was asking me because they did not wish to make any approach without our concurrence and that we should not misunderstand. I told him I would let him know on hearing from you. He said he would send a message to BHUTTO anyway suggesting that Pakistan agree to repatriate all the Bengalees including 203 and agree to take all the 260000 Pakistanis who wish to return to Pakistan with the hope of creating atmosphere for settlement of war crime trials and recognition.

Please convey the following message to Dr. Kamal Hossain:

BEGINS;

We handed over a slightly revised version of the Memorandum of Understanding to the Pakistanis this evening, the text of which is being telegraphed separately. A copy of it is also being handed over to your High Commissioner here. Our overall impression is that in consideration of 195 remaining in India, Pakistan might drop retaining 203. Their position on repatriation of Pakistani nationals is still rigid but they have carefully kept the door open. They made a slight gesture, by offering to take 20,000 hardship cases, at this stage of repatriation which in their original proposal was to be contingent upon verification after "cooling, down of tempers". I have made it abundantly clear to them that even this position of Pakistan is not repeat not satisfactory. Let us hope that when we meet again tomorrow, they show greater accommodation and that they will also finally agree to drop the question of retention of 203.
It might amuse you to know that AZIZ AHMED tried to raise with me the questions whether the number 195 could be reduced. He said that when MAZAR ALI and NAJIULLAH visited Bangladesh last year, they were told by some anonymous but important persons in Bangladesh that the number of people to be tried would be very very small, indeed. He mentioned the figure of 5 or 6. He asked me to plead with you for the reduction of the number of people to be tried. I told him that I had anticipated such a possibility in advance of AZIZ AHMED raising it, and that while in Dacca I had also enquired whether 195 was the final figure and whether it could be less., I also told him that I got a categoric answer that 195 represented the reducible minimum and that in any case this figure has got so widely publicized that it cannot be reduced. If AZIZ AHMED raises this matter again tomorrow, I would repeat again what I told him today, saying that I have again consulted Bangladesh and that the position remains unaltered.

(iii) All Pakistan nationals in Bangladesh will also be repatriated to Pakistan with the maximum of dispatch. The question who is entitled to repatriation under this description, will need Pakistan's concurrence.

It is further agreed that the repatriation of the following among the Pakistan nationals, namely, persons who are domiciled in what was West Pakistan, employees of the Central Government and their families, members of divided families irrespective of their original domicile and others who constitute hardship cases, will be taken up as matter of first priority."

2. As I reported to you in my telegram yesterday, Pakistan delegation was rather insistent in refusing to accept the validity of options exercised by Pakistani nationals. They also want to reserve the right to take only those who, according to them, are "eligible". I need hardly say that we shall, of course, argue our case firstly on the basis of our memorandum and secondly on the basis of the draft we have jointly prepared in Dacca. However, I should like to have your guidance and advice whether the following formulation would be acceptable to you in lieu of paragraph 4 of our Dacca draft.

BEGINS:

Without prejudice to the respective positions of Bangladesh and Pakistan on the question of options exercised by Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh, Pakistan, guided by considerations of humanity, agrees, initially, to receive in Pakistan optees whose number equals the number of Bangladeshi nationals returning from Pakistan to Bangladesh. Repatriation of the remaining number of persons who according to the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration of April 17, 1973, "opted for repatriation to Pakistan", shall be determined in accordance with the decisions to be arrived at a meeting of the Prime Minister of Bangladesh and Prime Minister of Pakistan or their representatives, it being understood that such a meeting can only take place on the basis of sovereign equality.

Ends

3. Both on the formulation of paragraph 4 of the Dacca draft and the revised draft suggested above question will arise, namely, in what order these persons are to be repatriated from Bangladesh to Pakistan. In order to answer this question, are we entitled to enter into a secret agreement which will not be published by either side that "persons who were domiciled in what was West Pakistan, employees of the Central Government and their families, members of divided families irrespective of their original domicile and others whose total will be equal to the number of Bangladeshi nationals repatriated from Pakistan will have priority."

4. I am conscious of the fact that if you were to agree to the formulation on the order of movement of Pakistani nationals, you may also wish to indicate, on the basis of reciprocity, your priorities in respect of movement of Bangladeshi nationals in Pakistan. If my assumption is correct, I shall be grateful for your guidance.Ends

Today’s meeting was full of surprise. After having given some indication yesterday which I had reported to you that they might not insist on retaining 203, Pakistanis produced an extraordinary draft which I am separately telegraphing to you. You will notice that they wanted to retain 11 Bangalees as hostages as against 21 POWs. How they arrived at this figure only Pakistanis know. They did not even care to explain. We charged the Pakistani delegation with double dealing and, double talk. We cited their own paper which had totally omitted reference to retaining any Bangladesh nationals. They more or less pleaded that the paper was wrongly handed over to us. Caught literally with their pants down, they had to make a promise that they would strongly recommend to their Prime Minister that 203 need not be retained. This then they proceeded to treat as a very great concession and said that their Prime Minister had given them firm instructions that there can be no accommodation on the question of number of Pakistani nationals to be repatriated in terms of categories they have already indicated. We shall naturally fight against this. But both in Rawalpindi and here they have shown extreme rigidity on the number of Pakistani nationals they are ready to take initially. I am wondering if you can suggest any basis for agreement on the numbers other than our Dacca Draft.

Reference Shri P.N.HAKSAR Telegram of this evening. Following is text of revised Pakistani Draft handed over to us this evening, which may kindly be conveyed to Bangladesh Foreign Minister:

BEGINS:

In Simla last year, the Government of Pakistan and the Government of India resolved that the two countries put an end to the conflict and confrontation that had hitherto marred their relations and work for the promotion of friendly and harmonious relationship and the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent.

Reaffirming that resolve, the Special Envoys of India and Pakistan met in Rawalpindi and New Delhi, determined to reach agreement on those issues which stood in the way of the further implementation of the Simla Agreement and the promotion of reconciliation in the subcontinent.

Accordingly, in keeping with the humanitarian approach envisaged in the India-Bangladesh Joint Declaration of April 17, it is agreed-as follows:

1. India will repatriate all Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees except those whose case is dealt with in clause (4) below.

2. Pakistan will facilitate the repatriation of all Bengalis in Pakistan who may wish to go to Bangladesh except those whose case is dealt with in clause (4) below.

3. Bangladesh will facilitate the repatriation of, and Pakistan will receive, a substantial number of non-Bengalis who are eligible for repatriation to Pakistan. Among them, persons who were domiciled in what was West Pakistan, employees of the Central Government and their families, members of divided families Irrespective of their original domicile and others who constitute hardship cases will be taken up for repatriation as a matter of first priority. It is further, agreed, that, the Prime Ministers of Pakistan and Bangladesh or their designated representatives will thereafter meet to decide what additional number of persons who may wish to migrate to Pakistan may be permitted to do so.

(4) 21 Pakistani prisoners of war and 11 Bengali officials shall not be transferred from the country in which they are presently detained pending the settlement envisaged in clause (5) below.

(5) Representatives of India, Pakistan and Bangladesh will meet by the end of October 1973 to reach a settlement in regard to the persons mentioned in clause (4) above.

Provided that if no meeting is held or no settlement is reached these persons shall be repatriated, to their respective countries not later than 1 January 1974.

(6) The repatriation of all persons mentioned in clauses (1), (2) and (3) will be carried out with the maximum of despatch.

(7) India, Pakistan and Bangladesh will each be responsible for making the necessary logistic arrangements within its territory for the repatriation of the persons covered by this agreement.

Revised Draft = August 23, 1973

Pakistan Revised Draft Memorandum of Understanding.

In Simla last year, the Government of Pakistan and the Government of India “resolved that the two countries put an end to the conflict and confrontation that had hitherto marred their relations and work for the promotion of friendly and harmonious relationship and the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent.”

Reaffirming that resolve, the Special Envoys of India and Pakistan met in Rawalpindi and New Delhi, determined to reach agreement on those issues which stood in the way of the further implementation of the Simla Agreement and the promotion of reconciliation in the subcontinent.

Accordingly, in keeping with the humanitarian approach envisaged in the India-Bangladesh Joint Declaration of April 17, it is agreed as follows:

1. India will repatriate all Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees except those whose case is dealt with in clause (4) below.
(2) Pakistan will facilitate the repatriation of all Bengalis in Pakistan who may wish to go to Bangladesh except those whose case is dealt with in clause (4) below.

(3) Bangladesh will facilitate the repatriation of, and Pakistan will receive, a substantial number of non-Bengalis who are eligible for repatriation to Pakistan. Among them, persons who were domiciled in what was West Pakistan, employees of the Central Government and their families, members of divided families irrespective of their original domicile and others who constitute hardship cases will be taken up for repatriation as a matter of first priority. It is further agreed that the Prime Ministers of Pakistan and Bangladesh or their designated representatives will thereafter meet to decide what additional number of persons who may wish to migrate to Pakistan may be permitted to do so.

(4) 21 Pakistani prisoners of war and 11 Bengali officials shall not be transferred from the country in which they are presently detained pending the settlement envisaged in clause (5) below.

(5) Representatives of India, Pakistan and Bangladesh will meet by the end of October 1973 to reach a settlement in regard to the persons mentioned in clause (4) above.

Provided that if no meeting is held or no settlement is reached, these persons shall be repatriated to their respective countries not later than 1 January 1974.

(6) The repatriation of all persons mentioned in clauses (1), (2) and (3) will be carried out with the maximum of dispatch.

(7) India, Pakistan and Bangladesh will each be responsible for making the necessary logistic arrangements within its territory for the repatriation of the persons covered by this agreement.

Indian Draft Agreement -August 24, 1973

The special Representative of the Prime Minister of India, Shri P.N. Haksar, and the Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs, His Excellency Mr. Aziz Ahmed, held talks in Rawalpindi from July 24 to July 31, 1973 and in New Delhi from August 18 to August,….. 1973. Shri P.N. Haksar was assisted by Foreign Secretary, Shri Kewal Singh, Secretary to the Prime Minister, Shri P.N. Dhar, Joint Secretaries in the Ministry of External Affairs S/Shri K.P.S. Menon, A.S. Chib, and Dr. S.P. Jagota, Deputy Secretaries S/Shri K.N. Bakashi and Naresh Dayal. The Leader of the Pakistani Delegation was assisted by the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Agha Shahi, Director General in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Abdul Sattar and Directors, Mr. Abdul Waheed and Mr. Khalid Saleem. These talks were held in the context of the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration of April 1973.

2. Desirous of solving the humanitarian problem resulting from the conflict of 1971 and thus enabling the vast majority of human beings referred to in the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration to go to the respective homes of their choice, India and Pakistan have reached the following agreement:-

(1) The immediate implementation of the solution of humanitarian problems as set forth in paragraph 5 of the Joint India-Bangladesh Declaration of 17th April 1973 is without prejudice to the positions of the respective parties concerned relating to the case of 195 prisoners of war;

(2) Repatriation of all Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees (except 195) will commence as soon as logistic arrangements have been completed and from a date to be settle by mutual agreement. This date would be subject to the arrangements being completed for commencement of the repartition of Bangalees in Pakistan and of the Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh;

(3) Simultaneously, the repatriation of all Bangalees in Pakistan and all Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh to their respective countries will commence. The repatriation of Pakistan nationals from Bangladesh will be carried out as follows:

(a) Pakistan agrees to receive initially the bulk of Pakistan nationals in Bangladesh who have opted for repatriation to Pakistan. The repatriation of these persons will be completed simultaneously with the repatriation of the Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees. If the process of repatriation from any of the three countries is held up for whatever reasons, the repatriation from one or both of the remaining two countries may also be held up;
(b) Pakistan further agrees to enter into discussions with Bangladesh to arrange for the repatriation of the remaining Pakistani nationals who have opted for Pakistan, it being understood that such a meeting between Bangladesh and Pakistan will be held on the basis of sovereign equality;

(4) In consideration of Pakistan repatriating all Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan, Bangladesh agrees that no trials of the 195 prisoners of war shall take place during the entire period of the repatriation and that such prisoners of war shall remain in India;

(5) After the complete implementations of the repatriation of the categories of persons enumerated in paragraphs 2 (2) and (3a) Bangladesh, Pakistan and India will discuss the matter of 195 prisoners of war, it being understood that Bangladesh can participate in such meetings only on the basis of sovereign equality;

(6) The time schedule for the completion of repatriation of the Pakistani POWs and civilian internees from India, the Bangalees from Pakistan and the Pakistan and the Pakistani nationals from Bangladesh will be worked out by India in consultation with Bangladesh and Pakistan respectively. The Government of Pakistan will make the logistic arrangements for the persons in its territory who are to go to Pakistan. Similarly, the Government of Bangladesh will make the logistic arrangements for the persons who have opted for Pakistan and are to go to Pakistan. The Government of India, on its part, will make the logistic arrangements for the Pakistan POWs and civilian internees who are to be repatriated to Pakistan. In making such logistic arrangements the Governments concerned may seek the assistance of international humanitarian organization and others.

(7) The representative of the Swiss Federal Government shall have unrestricted access at all times to Bangalees in Pakistan and to the Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh. The Government of Bangladesh and the Government of Pakistan will provide all assistance and facilities to such representative in this regard including facilities for adequate publicity for the benefit of the persons entitled to repatriation under this agreement;

(8) All persons to be repatriated in accordance with this agreement will be treated with humanity and consideration;

(9) Governments of India and Pakistan have concurred in this agreement. The Special Representatives of the Prime Minister of India having consulted with the Government of Bangladesh also conveyed the concurrence of the Bangladesh Government in the agreement;
During the course of the talks both at Rawalpindi and at Now Delhi which were marked by mutual understudying, the delegations of India and Pakistan reviewed the progress so far made in the implementation of the Simla Agreement since they met last in New Delhi in August 1972. Both the delegations reaffirmed the resolve of their respective Governments expressed in the Simla Agreement that “the two countries put an end to the conflict and confrontation that had hitherto marred their relations and work for the promotion of friendly and harmonious relationship and the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent.” In this connection the Special Representatives were confident that the repatriation of prisoners of war, Bangladesh and Pakistan nationals will generate an atmosphere of reconciliation between Pakistan and Bangladesh and thus contribute to the building of a structure of durable peace in the sub-continent.

Accordingly, in keeping with the humanitarian approach envisaged in the India-Bangladesh Joint Declaration of April 17, the Special Envoys have respectively given the following undertakings.
1. India will repatriate all Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees except those referred to in clause (4) below.

2. Pakistan will facilitate the repatriation of all Bengalis in Pakistan who may wish to go to Bangladesh.

3. Bangladesh will facilitate the departure of, and Pakistan will receive, a substantial number of non-Bengalis who are eligible for entry into Pakistan. Among them, persons who were domiciled in what was West Pakistan, employees of the Central Government and their families, members of divided families irrespective of their original domicile and other who constitute hardship cases will be taken up for repatriation as a matter of urgency. It is further agreed that the Prime Ministers of Pakistan and Bangladesh or their designated representatives will thereafter meet to decide what additional number of persons who may wish to migrate to Pakistan may be permitted to do so.

4. Bangladesh agrees that no trial of prisoners of war shall take place and that such prisoners of war shall not be transferred to Bangladesh pending the settlement envisaged in clause (5) below.

5. On completion of repatriation of the persons referred to in (1) & (2), representatives of India, Pakistan and Bangladesh will meet in order to reach a settlement in regard to the prisoners of war mentioned in clause (4) above.

The Special Envoys are confident that the repatriation of prisoners of war to Pakistan and of Bengalis in Pakistan to Bangladesh would make a signal contribution to the promotion of reconciliation in the sub-continent and create an atmosphere favourable to a constructive outcome of this meeting of the three countries.

6. The repatriation of all persons mentioned in clause (1), (2) and (3) will be carried out with the maximum of dispatch and completed in not more than three months.

7. The process of repatriation should start without delay and for this purpose, nominees of India, Pakistan and Bangladesh, assisted by representatives of the ICRC and UNHCR should meet at Wagah on .................1973, to work out the arrangements and modalities for the expeditious repatriation of all persons mentioned in clauses (1), (2)& (3) of this agreement.

8. India, Pakistan and Bangladesh will each be responsible for making the necessary logistic arrangements within its territory for the repatriation of the persons covered by this agreement.

I am telegraphing you separately KAMAL HOSSAIN's reply to your message in Primin-21162 read with Joint Secretary (BD)'s telegram No.26452 of 23rd August. In personal discussion with me, KAMAL HOSSAIN emphasised, and he wanted this to be conveyed to you, that in their anxiety to reach a final and definite settlement on outstanding humanitarian issues, Bangladesh has already made concessions on a number of important points in modification of the stand in the joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration of April. Unless they have some assurance that Pakistan is equally anxious to reach a settlement they would not like making any further concessions as Pakistan would make that a starting point in any future discussion. Indeed KAMAL HOSSAIN went on to say that if Pakistan continues its intransigent attitude, Bangladesh may have to go back to its original positions on outstanding issues.

Your telegram No. Primin-21162 and Joint Secretary (BD)'s Telegram No. 26542 of the 23rd August.
The following is Dr. Kamal Hossain reply:

Message Begins.

Mr. P.N, HAKSAR from Foreign Minister of Bangladesh.

We cannot but express amazement and dismay at the Pakistani draft presented in the meeting of 23rd August since it seems to introduce new and highly objectionable elements and departs materially from what were regarded as basic assumptions. Indeed it is manifestly inconsistent even from their own earlier draft. We have thus far been making our utmost efforts towards a settlement and have been showing accommodation on point after point but the latest Pakistani draft shows total lack of appreciation and reciprocity and indeed manifests an attitude of intransigence and raises serious doubt about their sincerity for a settlement. Would appreciate your assessment as to their intentions.

2. We presume that you have rejected the latest draft and will be able to proceed with negotiations from the position reached on the night of the 22nd August when they gave the first draft on which you sought our instructions(as conveyed in your message 21160 of 23rd August).

3. On this message our position is as follows:

(I) We have no repeat no objection to your presenting the revised formulation regarding repatriation of Pakistani nationals in lieu of para 4 of our Dacca draft.

(II) To solve the question of the order of movement we agree to the formulation within quotation in paragraph 3 of your message provided (a) our priority in respect of military personnel, civil servants of all grades and other categories of persons could also be indicated clearly in the memorandum, (b) these clauses are incorporated in a memorandum of understanding regarding mode of implementation of the agreement and not repeat not a secret agreement (it will however be understood that the memorandum of understanding regarding implementation of the agreement will not be given publicity by any one of the parties concerned) and (c) the principle of simultaneity is strictly observed throughout the process of repatriation.

BEGIN

I had handed over to Pakistanis draft of a proposed agreement which is being telegraphed separately. After alarums and excursions, the Pakistanis at least indicated their readiness to accept our position on 203. However, we had an extremely stormy session on the question of Pakistan nationals. The only redeeming feature was that AZIZ AHMED said that we should, meet again tomorrow instead of threatening to go home. In the meantime, AGHA SHAHI has gone to Larkana to meet BHUTTO. He has been asked to return either tonight or early tomorrow morning. We have, naturally, no means of knowing on what precise point he has gone to receive instructions but quite obviously it relates to the extremely difficult question of repatriation of Pakistani nationals. AZIZ AHMED retailed again the political difficulties which this question raises for BHUTTO. We tried to probe them about the acceptability of parity formula which he rejected vehemently. We propose to give it to him again tomorrow in writing in the form set out in paragraph 2 of my telegram No. 21160 of August 23 to which you have been good enough to give your approval. We shall then assess their reactions to it. Only as a matter of last resort, we shall deal in the manner indicated in paragraph 3 of my telegram under reference to which also you have given your approval. However, I shall be grateful if you will kindly let me have immediately a more precise definition of categories of Bangalees to be repatriated on a priority basis. I am seeking this clarification because in your telegram you refer to "other categories of persons". Do you wish it to remain as it is without further refinement; or, you would wish to particularize it further?

PERSONAL

Your telegram Prirnin-21156 August 22nd. I spoke to KISSINGER in San Clemente on telephone from Washington this morning. I asked him whether I could convey to him the telephone information received from India. He said it would be all right and added that he himself had wanted to get in touch with me to convoy something on the phone. I gave him gist of your telegram emphasizing the reasonable attitude shown by Bangladesh in agreeing to freeze question of trials and consider repatriation of Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh in two stages provided, bulk of them are repatriated to Pakistan and all Bengalis including 203 who have opted for Bangladesh are repatriated.

2. He gave me following information:

He had got in touch with BHUTTO and spoken to him on the lines of my telegram sent from San Francisco. He added I am not supposed to tell you this but I am doing so in the confidence and belief that it will help the discussions in Delhi. His impression after talking to BHUTTO was that he would be more receptive to sending back the 203 Bangladeshis if separate the 195 from them and show some flexibility regarding numbers returning to Pakistan from Bangladesh. He added 'I am glad to see that there is some progress towards this already on your side. Our impression is that there is some goodwill and receptivity on Pakistan's side also and the main stumbling block about Pakistan equating 203 and 195 has been removed. This receptivity on Pakistan's side has been conveyed to us on a personal and confidential basis and should not be mentioned in the Delhi discussions.

3. He asked me to convey to Prime Minister and Foreign Minister that his main desire was to help Delhi discussions in any way possible. He also said he would be glad to meet Foreign Minister during his brief visit to UN and hoped that Foreign Minister would be able, to have a longer meeting with him in Washington. I told him I would convey this to Foreign Minister.
4. He suggested that we might give an unsigned note of our latest proposal to Pakistan to his assistant, SAUNDERS, in Washington so that he understands the position clearly and can further press BHUTTO if necessary. I told him that I would be glad to give a paraphrased gist as I had conveyed to him on the telephone. He said that would be all right. I am asking ERIC* to verbally give the gist to KISSINGER’S Assistant today who can take it down in his own hand.

High Commissioner from Haksar. Personal.

Please convey immediately the following message to Dr. Kamal Hossain:

“This is in continuation of my telegram 21163 of August 24. AGHA SHAHI is due to return at 1100 hours Indian Standard Time. We are likely to meet this afternoon.

I have already telegraphed to you the draft of an agreement which we have given to Pakistanis. Despite Pakistan’s volte face we have been unrelenting about 203 and are fighting to win our point on 203 and keeping 195 where they are. However, on the question of Pakistani nationals to be repatriated, I anticipate, as I have already indicated to you, extreme difficulty. When we begin our talks this afternoon, we will naturally begin in terms of para 3 the draft agreement. If Pakistan rejects it totally we will then proceed in terms of para 2 and, if necessary, of para 3 of my telegram 21160 of August 23. Only if all these positions are totally unacceptable to Pakistan, I should like to put for your urgent consideration the following formulation:-

BEGIN:

* Eric Gonsalves, Minister in the Embassy of India at Washington.
All Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh will be repatriated to Pakistan with the maximum of despatch. The order of movement of such persons will be indicated by the Government of Pakistan to the representatives of the Swiss Federal Government and the order of movement for Bangalees would be indicated by the Government of Bangladesh. Initially, there will be a parity of numbers between Pakistani nationals to be repatriated to Pakistan and Bangalees in Pakistan to be repatriated to Bangladesh. On completion of this process of repatriation, the question of repatriation of residue of Pakistani nationals to Pakistan will be discussed between the Prime Minister of Bangladesh and the Prime Minister of Pakistan or their representatives, it being understood that such a meeting could only take place on the basis of sovereign equality.

ENDS

Instead of categories being indicated to the representatives of the Swiss Federal Government, we could have a Memorandum of Understanding which will not be published and would therefore be secret in terms of paragraph 3 of my telegram 21160 of August 23.

Grateful for urgent instructions"
Quote:-
1. India agrees to repatriate all Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees in India. The repatriation will begin as soon as the necessary transport arrangements can be made and will continue with the maximum dispatch.

2. Bangladesh agrees to drop the trials against Pakistani prisoners of war referred to in the Joint India - Bangladesh Declaration April 17, 1973.

3. In consideration (1) and (2), Pakistan agrees to accord recognition to Bangladesh immediately.

Also in that event Pakistan will be glad to help Bangladesh in obtaining membership of the United Nations.

4. Pakistan agrees to permit all Bengalis in Pakistan, who may so wish, to leave Pakistan. Bengalis who can make arrangements for their own transport may leave immediately. The repatriation of the rest will start immediately Bangladesh is able to make necessary arrangements for their transport by air or from Karachi to Bangladesh by sea; and would continue with the maximum dispatch.

5. Bangladesh agrees to permit as a matter of priority all non-Bengalis in Bangladesh who are of West Pakistan domicile, or who are servants of the Central Government of Pakistan with their families and members of divided families, irrespective of domicile, plus an agreed number which constitute hardship cases to leave for Pakistan by sea or air, as soon as Pakistan is able to make the necessary transport arrangements, with the maximum dispatch.

6. The Prime Ministers of Pakistan and Bangladesh will meet as soon as it is mutually convenient for them to do so to decide what further numbers of non-Bengalis who may wish to migrate to Pakistan may be permitted to do so.

Unquote.

2. We have made no comments though we had an inkling of it all along when Pakistanis raised the question in Rawalpindi. Grateful for urgent instructions.

TEXT OF THE MESSAGE

P.N. Haksar from High Commissioner (.) Personal (.)

Your telegram PRIMIN 21167 of August 25th (.)

The following is Kamal Hussain’s reply handed over at 1505 hours today (.)

“P.N. Haksar from Foreign Minister Bangladesh

Pakistan’s so called “total package” appears to be calculating to wreck the prospects of agreement (. As you rightly pointed to them, they have raised entirely new matters which are totally inconsistent with the fundamental assumptions on the basis of which an agreement was being worked out (.)

So far as the number of non-Bangalees to be repatriated, we had already indicated flexibility by approving the alternative formulation contained in your telegram No. 21160 August 23rd and indeed feel the latest formulations suggested by you in your telegram No. PRIMIN 21164 dated August 25th could be accepted provided the implications thereof are made explicit, the memorandum of understanding so that unnecessary controversy over the definition of Pakistani nationals may not obstruct the process of the implementation (. We further agree instead of categories being indicated to the representatives of the Swiss Federal Government this matter could also be dealt with in the memorandum of understanding (.)

We would request you to give us as early intimation as possible if you anticipate talks are going to be wrecked so that we can also begin to brief diplomats and the press in Dacca and in important capitals before Pakistan can launch its propaganda offensive to obscure the fact that India and Bangladesh have made large concessions both in making the Joint Declaration and thereafter in the course of negotiations and that talks have been wrecked by the Pakistan raising entirely new and untenable demands it would also be necessary in that event for talks to be held urgently between India and Bangladesh to evolve a new strategy(.”

2. Kamal Hossain added “the only language that might bring Pakistan to the senses would be to indicate to them that in case the talks are not successful Bangladesh would be compelled to proceed with the war crime trials (. To meet this eventuality India would have to immediately transfer the 195 war criminals (. A hint to Aziz Ahmed that immediate action would be taken to transfer the war criminals to Bangladesh may soften him up. Kamal Hossain added that though this is not being put in the formal reply which he is sending to you, as reproduced above, this view of his may be conveyed to you in parenthesis. With reference to the last sentence in Kamal Hossain’s message above, Enayet Karim has indicated these discussions if necessary, can be held either at Delhi or at Dacca according to your convenience.

DRAFT AGREEMENT

The Special Representative, of the Prime Minister of India, Shri P. N. Haksar, and the Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs, His Excellency Mr. Aziz Ahmed, held talks in Rawalpindi from July 24 to July 31, 1973 and in New Delhi from August 18 to August ...., 1973. Shri P.N. Haksar was assisted by Foreign Secretary, Shri Kewal Singh, Secretary to the Prime Minister, Shri P.N.Dhar, Joint Secretaries in the Ministry of External Affairs, S/Shri K.P.S. Menon, A.S.Chib and Dr. S.P. Jagota, Deputy Secretaries, Shri K.N. Bakshi and Naresh Dayal. The Leader of the Pakistani Delegation was assisted by the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Agha Shahi, Director General in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Abdul Sattar and Directors, Mr. Abdul Waheed and Mr. Khalid Saleema. These talks were held in the context of solving the humanitarian problems set out in the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration of April 1973.

2. During the course of the talks both at Rawalpindi and at New Delhi which were marked by mutual understanding, the delegations of India and Pakistan reviewed the progress so far made in the implementation of the Simla Agreement since they met last in New Delhi in August 1972. Both the delegations reaffirmed the resolve of their respective Governments expressed in the Simla Agreement that “the two countries put an end to the conflict and confrontation that had hitherto marred their relations and work for the promotion of friendly and harmonious relationship and the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent”. In this connection the Special Representatives were confident that the repatriation of prisoners of war, Bangladesh and Pakistan nationals will generate an atmosphere of reconciliation and thus contribute to the building of a structure of durable peace in the sub-continent.
3. Desirous of solving the humanitarian problems resulting from the conflict of 1971 and thus enabling the vast majority of human beings referred to in the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration to go to their respective countries, India and Pakistan have reached the following agreement.

(1) The immediate implementation of the solution of these humanitarian problems is without prejudice to the respective positions of the parties concerned relating to the case of 195 prisoners of war referred to in clauses (4) and (5) of this Agreement;

(2) Subject to para 3(1), repatriation of all Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees will commence with utmost dispatch as soon as logistic arrangements are completed and from a date to be settled by mutual agreement;

(4) Bangladesh agrees that no trials of the 195 prisoners of war shall take place during the entire period of repatriation and that pending the settlement envisaged in clause (5) below such prisoners of war shall remain in India;

(5) On completion of repatriation of Pakistan prisoners of war and civilian internees in India, Bangalees in Pakistan and Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh, or earlier if they so desire, Bangladesh, India and Pakistan will discuss and settle the question of 195 prisoners of war. Bangladesh has made it clear that it can participate in such meetings only on the basis of sovereign equality.

The Special Envoys are confident that the completion of this repatriation would make a signal contribution to the promotion of reconciliation in the sub-continent and create an atmosphere favourable to a constructive outcome of these meetings of the three countries.

(7) For the purposes of facilitating this repatriation the representatives of the Swiss Federal Government and any international humanitarian organization entrusted with this task, shall have unrestricted access at all times to Bangalees in Pakistan and to the Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh. The Government of Bangladesh and the Government of Pakistan will provide all assistance and facilities to such representatives in this regard including facilities for adequate publicity for the benefit of the persons entitled to repatriation under this agreement;

(8) All persons to be repatriated in accordance with this agreement will be treated with humanity and consideration.

(9) Governments of India and Pakistan have concurred in this agreement. The Special Representatives of the Prime Minister of India having consulted the Government of Bangladesh also conveyed the concurrence of the Bangladesh Government in the agreement.

Special Representative the Prime Minister of India.

0801. Statement by the Minister of External Affairs Swaran Singh in the Lok Sabha on Indo-Pakistan Talks.

As the House is aware, a Delegation led by the Special Emissary of the Prime Minister of India, Shri P. N. Haksar, visited Rawalpindi and Islamabad and held discussions with the Pakistan Delegation led by Mr. Aziz Ahmed. Pakistan’s Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs, from 24th to 31st July, 1973. During the course of these talks questions relating to simultaneous repatriation of the three categories of persons mentioned in the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration of April 17, 1973, were discussed in full detail. The Pakistan side acknowledged the fact that the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration, which had separated political considerations from the humanitarian issues, was a step forward and paved the way for an early resolution of these issues. Some progress was made in defining these issues and it was agreed between the two Delegations that a point had been reached where further consideration by both sides was necessary. In pursuance of this decision, the discussions were resumed at New Delhi from 18th August, 1973 and continued till the 28th August, 1973. These discussions took place with the full knowledge of and in consultation with the Bangladesh Government.

As a result of these talks, an agreement was signed yesterday, the 28th August, 1973, between the Governments of India and Pakistan. I lay on the Table of the House, a copy of this Agreement.

The Agreement provides for the resolution of the humanitarian problems resulting from the conflict of 1971. The Agreement envisages the simultaneous repatriation of all Pakistani prisoners of war (except 195), the repatriation to Bangladesh of all Bengalees in Pakistan and initially a substantial number of Pakistanis now in Bangladesh to Pakistan. The time-schedule for the completion of repatriation of these three categories of persons will be worked out by India in consultation with Bangladesh and Pakistan as the case may be. It is further agreed that the Prime Ministers of Bangladesh and Pakistan or their designated representatives will thereafter meet to decide what additional number of Pakistanis in Bangladesh may be permitted to return to Pakistan. Bangladesh has made it clear that it will participate in such a meeting only on the basis of sovereign equality.

The immediate implementation of the solution of these humanitarian problems is without prejudice to the respective positions of the parties concerned relating to the case of 195 prisoners of war. In the meantime these 195 prisoners of war shall remain in India and no trials shall take place during the entire period of repatriation. It is further agreed that Bangladesh, India and Pakistan in a tripartite meeting will arrive at a settlement of the question of these 195 prisoners of war.

In arriving at this Agreement all three countries, Bangladesh, India and Pakistan, made constructive contributions. It is our earnest hope that this Agreement will be one more step towards the goal of establishing durable peace in the sub-continent.

◆◆◆◆◆
Letter from the Indian Ambassador in the United States T. N. Kaul to P. N. Haksar Principal Secretary to Prime Minister regarding future course of action following the signing of the Agreement on POWs.

My dear,

Congratulations on bringing about a most difficult agreement. It reminded me of our efforts in Simla. Only this time the task was even tougher. The manner in which you handled both Bangladesh and Pakistan - and possibly our own people - is an example of how such negotiations should be carried out. Although I did not receive any direct encouragement from Delhi, I tried to sell the line that was finally adopted to Kissinger, and am glad he bought it and sold it to Bhutto. This may have played some little part in persuading Bhutto ultimately though I think his main compulsions were internal.

2. What next? Is Bhutto really sincere in the agreement that his stooge has signed? Is he going to implement it fully in letter and spirit? I still have some doubts, but the effort has to be kept up. I hope Bangladesh will not mislay its cards. And what thereafter when China also comes into Bangladesh with a full fledged diplomatic mission? What about our own relations with China?

3. I have been giving thought to some of these questions, but do not find a ready answer. I would hope that if Bhutto and Bangladesh play the game, we may be able to create an area of real peace and cooperation on the sub-continent. This should, in my opinion, be our first and foremost concern. If this can come about, then we could keep foreign influences out and talk from a position of equality with other powers - China USA, USSR, etc. However, I do feel that we should not give up reliable friendships for doubtful ones. While USA seems to be veering round to the recognition of the new realities on the sub-continent, I am doubtful if they are doing this without any mental and other reservations. Our friendship with USSR is an important factor, which will weigh in the minds of USA as well as China, and should not, in any case, be weakened. If we can, at the same time, develop normal and friendly relations with USA and China, we should certainly try but not at the cost of our friendship with USSR. I hope that we are also devoting some attention to improving relations with our other immediate neighbours like Afghanistan, Sri Lanka, Burma, Nepal, Bhutan, etc. I am little doubtful about Iran, particularly about the present regime. However, that is no reason why we should not try to cultivate Iran also and blunt her hostility.
4. These are some of the random thoughts that come to my mind at this moment. I would appreciate some response from you.

5. I have been mooting the idea of a fair and equitable exploitation of the resources of the world in food, fuel, fertilizer, irrigation, power, science, technology research and development. I have even mooted the idea of a World Bank for this purpose and not weighted in favour of any particular power, or group of powers, so that the resources of the world may be utilised in a manner that the fruits of exploitation may be equitably distributed, keeping in view particularly the needs of the developing countries. May be this is just a distant dream but I would like to know your reactions to this idea.

6. I came here mainly because you insisted and advised me to do so. I have not regretted the decision so far, but am not sure whether it will produce any fruitful results. I have been quite frank and firm in the exposition of my country’s cause, both in private and public, in this country. The response has not been negative but I wait for concrete results. By the end of the year, it should be clear whether America means business with us or not. I am keeping my mind open. Unfortunately, the President and the Administration are so much overwhelmed with Watergate and its various ramifications that they have little time to devote to other things. However with Kissinger’s becoming Secretary of State, it may be possible to move forward at a quicker pace.

7. I am planning to visit India at the end of November. I hope you will be in Delhi at that time.

Looking forward to the pleasure of hearing from you and with affectionate regards to Urmila, Nandita and Meeko and yourself.

Yours ever.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

September 7, 1973

My dear Ashok,

You must be gratified, as we are, at the tenor of the Press reports on the Delhi Agreement which generally reflected the satisfaction, hope and goodwill expressed by the leaders of the two delegations at the signing ceremony on August 28.

In this generally harmonious atmosphere, one dispatch has jarred us. The New York Times of August 30 published a report which opens as follow:

“New Delhi, August 29 - A Foreign Ministry Spokesman said here today that the process of releasing Pakistani prisoners of war in India would start immediately but that it ‘might take six months or five years to be completed’.”

The same dispatch quotes the spokesman as having said that “sovereign equality” meant that Pakistan agrees to recognise Bangladesh first and, further, that “some understanding” had been reached on Pakistan’s recognition of Bangladesh.

In view of the spirit of understanding and conciliation which has suffused India-Pakistan talks, we thought we only need to bring the above to your attention, and hope that you will agree that these remarks were both unnecessary and unhelpful.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely

(Abdul Sattar)

0804. Record of the meeting of Pakistan Prime Minister Z.A. Bhutto with U.S. President Richard Nixon and U.S. Secretary of State (Designate) Henry Kissinger.

Washington (D.C.), September 18, 1973

State Department Memorandum

The White House Washington Memorandum of Conversation September 18, 1973

Participants:
The President
Henry A. Kissinger, Assistant to the President and Secretary of State Designate Harold H Saunders, NSC Staff
ZulifikarAli Bhutto, Prime Minister of Pakistan
Aziz Anmed, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs and Defense
Sultan Khan, Ambassador of Pakistan

[Date and Place: Tuesday, September 18, 1973, from 11:00 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. in the President’s Oval Office on the first day of Prime Minister Bhutto’s Official Visit.]

Kissinger: Ambassador Khan put me on the plane to Peking (for Dr. Kissinger’s secret visit from Rawalpindi in July 1971).

President: You were most helpful and discreet. We are extremely grateful for what you did.

Khan: When I later saw Chou En-lai, he said I could tell my US friends that Dr. Kissinger’s visit was the best kept secret since D-Day.

Bhutto: When I came for President Kennedy’s funeral. I was Foreign Minister. Ayub Khan was in Dacca at the time, and by the time I got his consent to go it was late and I had to use a chartered plane. I met President Johnson, and the first thing he said to me was. “So you are going to break bread with Chou En-lai.” I was taken aback. It is a good thing I knew my Bible: otherwise I would not have known the phrase “breaking bread.” Here I had come simply to bring the condolences of my people, and I was confronted with that statement. Times have changed.
President: He was a very direct man.

I am sorry our visit had to be postponed from July. However, more things have happened and we can discuss them.

The important point I want to emphasize is what I said in my welcoming remarks that the independence of Pakistan is a cornerstone of US foreign policy. I chose the word “cornerstone” deliberately; I spoke with Dr. Kissinger about it as we walked over to the ceremony. We have always felt this way. We have not always been as successful in our policies as we might have been. However, this is the situation now. We hope your visit will reemphasize our dedication to that principle. Everything else will fit into that proposition. Our relations with Iran and with the PRC fit into that framework. We will not compromise on that principle. Our new Secretary of State [pointing to Dr. Kissinger] understands this.

Kissinger: We have told Chou En-lai this is our view. We have encouraged China to give military supplies to Pakistan, and we will find out through what means it is possible for us to help. We had extensive talks with the Shah, and we urged him to make contingency plans and his own deployment in ways that would help Pakistan, as well as to transfer equipment when possible. We have also made it clear to India that this is our policy.

President: Making this clear to India has been at considerable domestic cost. We have a number of people in the US who are enthusiastic supporters of India.

Kissinger: The Soviet Ambassador approached me on Afghanistan. I told him that if the recent coup in Afghanistan remained an internal Afghan affair, that would be one matter. But if it resurrected the Pushtunistan dispute, the US would be engaged. This is the basic policy of the President.

President: We can talk candidly about this. When you were here before [December 1971], I explained to you that domestic public opinion in the US is somewhat difficult to handle. At the time of the India-Pakistan war in 1971, no one could understand why we did not back India. It is ironic that our great newspapers like the New York Times and our columnists argue that we should back India simply because it was “bigger.” The world will not be safe for anybody but the very big and very strong if we adopt that as a principle of our foreign policy.

While we seek good relations with all nations, we consider Pakistan to deserve our continued friendship regardless of India or the USSR. This is not just because we are pro-Pakistan, although I admire the guts and courage of the Pakistani people. But this is not just a matter of friendship; it is a matter of the interests which the US has in a peaceful world. It is our interest that a nation not be overrun. On this our policies are in agreement. When we get down to particulars in our relationship, there may be some problems. But on the big issues we agree.

Bhutto: Thank you very much. This is a rare opportunity to talk with you. Please allow me to be candid because we do not have the opportunity to talk frequently.

First, I know that some people think there is a highly subjective element in South Asia, that emotions blind people there to cold logic. It is true that we have had personal regimes in Pakistan; there has been too much of that. Having said that, however, we know that you understand the subcontinent extremely well. You have been there. There is no naiveté in this office on the situation in South Asia. You also come from a party that has long experience in Asia. You have had your own personal experiences there. That helps a great deal.

We, Pakistanis would like to make our humble contribution to your effort to bring peace around the world. The Middle East problem is interconnected with the South Asian one. Pakistan cannot be unaware of that, and every day we find new emphasis being put on the importance of the Persian Gulf.

India is claiming to be a big power, but it is not clear what being a big power means. There are more people starving today in India than in Pakistan. There are many contradictions in India and we feel sorry for the Indian people and the economic privations they suffer.

The recent floods have set Pakistan back. Otherwise, we would have been looking forward to self-sufficiency in wheat and sugar and we have already been exporting rice. If it had not been for the floods, the prospects of our going ahead would be bright. In contrast, India is disillusioned with its own lack of progress. India also seems disillusioned with what has happened in Bangladesh. If Pakistan had followed a “Nehru policy” there would have been a number of Bangladeshs in India in the 1960s.

President: Dr. Kissinger made the same point to me the other day.

Kissinger: It has been my feeling that India started a process in Bangladesh that would work to the long-range disadvantage of India itself.

President: Not that we wish India to have trouble. I simply want to note that Dr. Kissinger and you have each raised the same point.

Bhutto: India has burned its fingers in the furnace of Bengal. Over the years we have had Sikhs, Nagas, Mizos approach us for help against India. They wanted our support in their fight for autonomy within India. We did not give them our support.
There are other factors than “bigness” involved in being a big power. There is the strength of economy. India’s legs are hollow. They are building a huge military colds sus at the same time. But that is India’s look-out. Another element one must assess is geographic position. Pakistan is situated at the mouth of the Persian Gulf. Any state that has access to the Karachi coast can dominate the Gulf. That is why the Soviet Union is so interested in that coast.

Pakistan has been committed to Western civilization. We have been committed to the US. In earlier days, there was a simplistic approach to world affairs in which the choice was between God and Satan, and we chose God. Nehru used to say that Pakistan was the most allied ally of the US. Pakistan supported the UK in the Suez crisis, and the Egyptians say they have not forgiven us yet. We have always tried to make our contribution. We kept away from Third World non-alignment sentiments.

Meanwhile, Nehru visited the Soviet Union, and the India-USSR relationship grew closer. That was in the 1950s.

In the 1960s, our relations with the US on a people-to-people level remained profound. There was only one consideration that caused difficulties in the relationship—Pakistan’s relationship with the PRC. That relationship was rooted in the fact that the Soviets were pressing on Pakistan since they had an interest in a warm water outlet. That being the case, we did not want bad relations with China at the same time. Apart from our relationship with China as a neighbor of South Asia, we felt that the problems of Southeast Asia would not be solved without Chinese participation.

President: It is only fair to say, too, that the fact that the US at that critical time seemed to cool its relations with Pakistan forced Pakistan to revise those relations. I was in Pakistan in 1964. I saw Ayub Khan then. He said to me, “Trust is like a thin thread; once it is broken, it is hard to put together again.” The initiative to China had to develop.

Bhutto: For Pakistan the changing relationship with the US was more painful. There was a romanticism in the relationship. This was wrong, stupid. But it was there.

The changing mood also coincided with the Sino-Indian conflict of 1972 (?), along with the Soviet pressure in Pakistan. At that time, Averell Harriman came to Pakistan with Duncan Sandys. Pakistan could have walked into Kashmir. Harriman told us not to move. He told us that the US supports a full settlement of the Kashmir problem. Then, Harriman and Sandys went to New Delhi and told Nehru that the US was eager to help India and India pulled back.

President: He pulled back when India didn’t need us anymore.
Kissinger: Or at least he could take us for granted.

President: He thought he could get something for nothing.

Bhutto: The US jumped the gun. We urged restraint, but the US felt Nehru was forthcoming and responded. The US provided 60 million in credit without consulting with Pakistan. Pakistan asked why the US was in such a hurry. That was in December 1962. In March 1963, another 60 million for India was announced. The US said that its global interests required this. Pakistan asked how India had modified its views. Then Pakistan began negotiating with India. Pakistan advised the continuation of negotiation, but while these were going on, the White House issued a statement saying that a Kashmir settlement was not necessary. After that Pakistan did not say any more, but the US went on to provide long-term assistance to India.

India took advantage of this. India is an important nation, but India needs US economic assistance and PL 480. The US does not need India. There is no reason why the euphoria toward India should continue. The Secretary of State Designate has said that the days of that kind of euphoria are finished and that your policy would be pragmatic from here on.

Pakistan is not the only neighbour of India that has suffered -- Nepal, Sikkim, Burma and China have all suffered similarly. So it is not that Pakistan is wrong and India is right. And it is not that Pakistan does not want good relations with India. Pakistan is determined to have good relations because we have promised a better life for our people. We have shown our bona fides. But living in peace with India does not mean Indian hegemony in South Asia.

The experience of 1971 was a freak. There were a couple of morons in power in Pakistan. Now, Bangladesh is in difficult straits.

President: What do you project for Bangladesh?

Kissinger: We have seen intelligence reports to the effect that there are Pakistani flags from time to time flown in Bangladesh. Do you see the same reports?

President: This is just for our information. They are good people. Many top Pakistani leaders were from Bengal, and I have met some of them. What do you think is going to happen? Do you think Bangladesh will survive?

Bhutto: Of course, the people will survive. But they are a most unfortunate people. We want good relations with them and we will have them. But, as I see it, it is inevitable that they will come under Chinese influence.

President: I’m sorry. I did not mean to interrupt.
Bhutto: We are prepared to have good relations with Bangladesh. If it had not been for the floods, we would have the most viable unit in South Asia. If Bangladesh wants a loose relationship with us in the future, we are prepared to have some kind of loose confederal relationship with them.

We are going to have a problem with the Afghans. Now they lay claim to two Pakistani provinces. This keeps raising the question: Is something wrong with the basic concept of Pakistan? I don’t think this can be. Two million people have given their lives for the idea of Pakistan. But people keep calling it into question.

President: The tragedy of the early days was in not settling the Kashmir question right at the outset.

Bhutto: Pakistan must have some meaning. Two million people have given their lives for it. Why do we have these problems? It is easy to stir up secession anywhere in the world. The Indians seem to be concentrating on that.

Pakistan now has 65 million people and is moving ahead. It is not that Afghanistan wants to revive its claim from the past; there is more to it than that. We believe that the USSR is interested in reviving this problem. Afghanistan by itself is no problem for Pakistan.

Now, when we talk about this, the US Government position has been that there is no concrete evidence of Soviet involvement.

Kissinger: The brother of the President of Afghanistan has just been to Moscow.

President: I am totally aware that the leadership of Afghanistan is tilting toward the USSR. You have made a fundamental point—that the fragmentation of nations is not just a problem for the subcontinent. It is a problem in Africa, of course. Even Britain has this problem in Ireland. Having countries torn apart this way can create nothing but chaos. We will support the integrity of Pakistan against either Afghanistan or India. [To Dr. Kissinger] Be sure your friends in the State Department understand that, Henry.

Kissinger: In three months, they will be your friends, too, Mr. President.

President: We'll see about that.

Bhutto: The Soviet Union has its eyes glued to the coast. Afghanistan alone would not fulfill Soviet ambitions. India alone would not fulfill Soviet ambitions. I am not saying that the Soviet Union wants to dismember Pakistan. They want to win us to the Asian Collective Security Pact. The former Afghan government was not accepting that approach.
President Daud of Afghanistan does not have roots in the coup which brought him to power. The majors and colonels under him trained in the USSR. Those young boys are difficult to predict. They will not rest until we get harpooned and lassoed.

There is no use comparing European collective security to the proposal for Asian collective security. Europe may be ripe for that kind of arrangement, but Asia is not ripe for it. There are still territorial disputes and wars going on. There is a tenuous cease-fire in Southeast Asia. Asia is in a state of flux. The objective conditions for this kind of approach to security have not crystallized. We do not feel that any approach to Asian security should be spearheaded by the USSR. We do not see why others who have interest in Asia like the US should not be involved. The Soviets are unhappy about us. They are trying to ginger up Afghanistan.

Iran agreed to a communiqué in which they accepted in principle the idea of Asian collective security. The Shah explained that he had only given in on the words and would remain cautious about the idea and about any practical steps. I told him that the principle itself was offensive to Pakistan.

I know Chou En-lai feels that the Soviets are concentrating on the middle of Asia — Persian Gulf, Pakistan and Iran — and then after directing everyone’s attention to that area, Chou feels that the USSR will hit China.

President: Mrs. Gandhi told us that the friendship treaty did not mean anything.

Kissinger: She offered the same kind of treaty to the US.

Bhutto: In the Persian Gulf, Pakistan has very good relations with the Emirate states. Pakistan also has good relations with the Arab states, even with the new messiah in Libya. Pakistan has had some pilots in Libya until they were asked to take off against the sixth fleet and we told them nothing doing.

President: It is important that Pakistan, to the extent it can, play a leveling role with the new states like the Gulf states.

Bhutto: Relations with Iran are good. It is something of a feat to have good relations with both Iran and with the Arab states.

But we do have good relations with Iran - the best of relations. I have great admiration for the Shah. However, there are one or two aspects of our relationship that we need to talk about. In the past we had contingency plans with Iran for Iran’s help in case of trouble. But when trouble came, help did not materialize, Iran had to consider how the Soviets would react. It is very well for Iran to say that Iran will come to Pakistan’s aid. However, this sometimes creates a bad reaction in Pakistan. Our people are a strong people, and they respond by asking why Pakistan needs Iran’s aid. For the Shah to talk that way suggests that Pakistan is going to disintegrate tomorrow and Iran will bail us out. Instead of contributing to our ability, that kind of statement creates a feeling of inferiority.

President: I understand. Those offers of help should be made privately and executed publicly.

Henry, when you go to State Department, I want you to tell them to knock off discussion of further dismemberment of Pakistan. I do not know whether there is much of a problem on that in State or not.

Our problem is that the attitude in the US is that Pakistan is essentially governed by military dictatorship, and there is a love affair between the American liberal establishment and India.

One of the things you can do here, Mr. Prime Minister, is to talk to people and to let them see that you are a liberal in your own right. Your record helps you here. You can speak not just as a spokesman for the interests of your country but as a leader of thought. The Indians have made their appeal in the US on the basis of a higher morality. But their actions have shown them to be something else.

Dr. Kissinger caught the devil before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in his confirmation hearings.

Dr. Kissinger: India so dependent on Soviet military equipment.

President: You can be persuasive here, Mr. Prime Minister. One of the problems Pakistan has in the US, frankly, is the public relations problem. Sometimes your candor proves to be a detriment. But your credibility with the liberal establishment will be very helpful. You can help to develop more support in Congress for our helping you. In the military area, our hands are tied. We bit the bullet in the spring by returning to a policy of providing spare parts. We need to create a climate now so that when we take another little move, the roof won’t cave in.

On other issues, you have a debt problem, and we want to be very helpful on that.

Kissinger: The Prime Minister was very helpful with Senator Percy when he visited Pakistan this summer, and you know, Mr. President, how pro-Indian Percy has been.

President: You have a strong moral case. You can be persuasive. But don’t make them choose between India and Pakistan. What we would like to do over the next three years is to be in a position to help Pakistan in a crunch if a crunch comes - economically or otherwise. Humanitarian assistance is no problem except for wheat, which is a problem of availability. Our problem is the Congress.

Kissinger: What we need to do is to help Pakistan through a series of individual programs.

President: Yes, rather than one big package. The US must have at least an even-handed policy toward South Asia rather than a pro-Indian policy.

Kissinger: We have to lay a consistent base over a period of time.

President: Public relations is important to us in getting that base established.

Bhutto: We are aware of your Congressional problems. Thus we have not really pressed the military supply issue we do not want to embarrass you or burden your position. But our need is really dire, Iran—and even a great power—has so many complications when it tries to go to the aid of another country. You can choose your time for acting, but who are we to say when we will need assistance. We need to be self-reliant.

We are your allies and will continue to be your good friends. But if Kuwait and Saudi Arabia are entitled to military sales, now that there is peace between India and Pakistan, perhaps we are entitled to the same. If we take an initiative with India to insure peace - we may even offer a reduction of military forces— we must have the psychological and political advantage of knowing that we can stand on our own feet.

Please consider our needs. It is your choice and your decision. But we believe we can appeal to you. We do have a case.

President: There is total agreement with you on that. There was great agonizing in this office during the 1971 war. We were hopeful that we could have provided more. I know that many of our friends are concerned that the US initiative with the USSR is so important that the US would not stand by its older friends. But as our declaration on avoiding nuclear war indicated, you can be sure that improvement of US-Soviet relations will never be at the expense of friends or third countries. Our Chinese friends must realize this too. I think they do.

Kissinger: I think so

President: The Soviet leaders realize that we are not talking about a condominium. In our talks with Brezhnev, we have never given an inch on South Asia. On the contrary, in 1971 some very stiff messages went to Moscow. Henry, do you want to describe the conversation we had in San Clemente with Brezhnev on this point?
Kissinger: We called the attention of the Soviets in 1971 to a letter from President Kennedy to President Ayub saying that we would help Pakistan if it were attacked by India. We told the Soviets that we regarded that letter as in full force and as applying to that situation in 1971. This was at the time when we received reports that the Indians were shifting their troops to move against Pakistan.

We also told the PRC that if they came into the war in support of Pakistan and if they were attacked, they would have our full support. As it turned out, they could not do this. The winter prevented them, and they were not ready. We have told Brezhnev that we would consider an attack on Pakistan in any form as inconsistent with the detente between us.

President: As a footnote to our conversation in San Clemente, I referred to Soviet aid to India as one way the Soviets commit aggression through using third countries.

Kissinger: The President instructed me to tell Ambassador Dobrynin after the coup in Afghanistan that any outward projection of the Afghan crisis would not be in the spirit of detente.

President: I will tell Gromyko the same thing. It is in the interest of world peace that the US try to have a modus vivendi with the USSR. The Soviets sometimes don’t appreciate what this means. It is also necessary for us to have a relationship with the PRC. Pakistan is a critical country. It is in the road to warm water ports. US interests are served by a strong and independent Pakistan.

Henry, you may want to tell the Prime Minister about my conversation with Mao Tse-tung.

Kissinger: The President began his conversation with Mao by saying that it was not sentimentality but parallel necessities and commonality of interests which had brought the US and China together. The Chinese are an attractive people but they are not sentimentalists. In February, when I saw Mao again, he picked up this theme. When I go to China, we will synchronize our views further about our common interests in your part of the world.

In short, we see a need for detente.

Bhutto: The Europeans do not need to worry about detente.

President: Henry, the difference between Europe and Asia is important. The Prime Minister is making an important point. It had not come home to me before how different the situations are.
Kissinger: We have not taken up the Soviet position on Asian collective security. We are opposed to it. There cannot be a conference which does not include the PRC, Japan, the US, India, Pakistan.

President: Southeast Asia is not ready yet.

Kissinger: It is true that in Europe there is a clearly defined military balance.

Ahmed: I was just recently in Peking. The PRC sees detente as a Soviet effort to put Europe under chloroform.

Kissinger: Ironically, detente has made the Europeans more alert. Our strategy is to force the Soviets, if they do mischief, to do it from a position of peace so that we can mobilize domestic support for our response.

President: We fully recognize that it is possible to have the appearance of detente at the top with games being played underneath. In Afghanistan, for instance, the Soviets can say, "Who, me?" We are going to be watching very carefully and will not be taking anything on faith. But the Soviets have no illusions about how we feel.

Kissinger: Concretely, what have they gotten away with since the President took office?

President: The Prime Minister might say that they had gotten away with Bangladesh.

Kissinger: But your policy was tougher than any conceivable policy that anyone else could have followed, Mr. President.

Bhutto: That is why we do not want you to be in that position again. We want to get our inherent strengths mobilized. We do not want to embarrass you.

Kissinger: Ambassador Helms will be coming to Pakistan in November. He will want to talk with you about some of the possibilities of transferring arms.

President: As former head of our CIA, he understands about that sort of thing.

Bhutto: To sum up, in our conversation tomorrow there are three things that I would like to talk about a little more: (1) I would like to say a little more about military assistance. (2) I would also like to talk further about our food needs. (3) Also, we want a port in Baluchistan. The Iranians are building a port at Chah Bahar. We need one on our coast. The Soviets are deeply interested in this coast and they have offered us to help with oil exploration, geological survey and that kind of thing. We would rather have a US presence. The port would be at Ormara. If the US is interested, there could even be a US presence there.

(At this point, Sultan Khan produced the attached map of Baluchistan, opened it up and showed where the port of Ormara would be.)

Ahmed: This is a map put out by the movement for an independent Baluchistan. You will see how the borders include areas of not only Iran and Pakistan but also a little area into the Soviet Union. Thus, the Soviets could say that they had given up a little bit to Baluchistan, too, but the main purpose would be to provide open access directly from the Soviet Union through Baluchistan to the coast.

President: Let me say in summing up that we welcome you as a friend. In the 1950s we found ourselves on opposite political sides, but that is past. [Reference to Bhutto's role while at UCLA as a supporter of Helen Douglas, political opponent of the President.]

Bhutto: That was my only mistake [laughing].

President: The interests of the United States require fulfilling our promise of support to you. In 1971, considering what we were up against, we did about what we could. We used and will continue to use our influence with the USSR. They have to understand that they will place in jeopardy their new relationship with the US if they pursue subversive activities in this area. During the war in Vietnam, the real question came down to whether they wanted to jeopardize their relationship with the US by needling Hanoi to escalate the war. In conclusion, to recall what President Ayub said, I hope you will leave feeling that you can trust us and that we will have begun rebuilding the very delicate thread of trust and confidence.

We can get into specifics tomorrow.

[The President escorted the Prime Minister to his car.]

0805. Aide Memoire of the Government of India to the Government of Pakistan regarding arrangements for the repatriation of POWs at Wagah – Attari border and Aide Memoire of the Swiss Embassy confirming the suggested arrangements.

New Delhi, September 22, 1973 and September 26, 1973.

AIDE MEMOIRE

The Government of India have been considering appropriate arrangements at the Wagah Attari border in order to ensure not only unhampered repatriation of the Pakistan prisoners of war and civilian internees but also expeditious clearance of tourist traffic and Afghan fresh fruit consignments. For this purpose, the following arrangements are suggested.

(i) On the 28th and 29th September, 1973, handing over of the prisoners of war and civilian internees at the check post would commence at 0900 hours (IST) and not at 1000 hours (IST) as communicated earlier.

(ii) Until 1600 hours (IST) on the 28th September and 1300 hours (IST) on 29th September, the check post should be closed to all civil traffic.

(iii) After repatriation of the prisoners of war has been completed for the day, clearance of the Afghan consignments and tourist traffic can commence. This may necessitate keeping the check-post open beyond the normal working hours.

2. The Government of India would be grateful to receive urgent concurrence of the Government of Pakistan in this proposal, following which suitable instructions can be sent to the Immigration and Customs authorities and a joint announcement made simultaneously from Islamabad and New Delhi.

New Delhi, September 22, 1973.
Aide Memoire of the Swiss Embassy in reply to the above:

New Delhi, September 26, 1973.

Aide Memoire

The Embassy of Switzerland transmits the following message, received through Swiss diplomatic channels, dated September 26, 1973 from the Ministry of foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan:
