The Ministry of foreign Affairs has the honour to state that the Government of Pakistan agree to the arrangements suggested by the Government of India in their Aide-memoire from September 22, 1973 regarding opening of the Wagah - Attari border for repatriation of Pakistan POWs and civilian internees and clearance of tourist traffic and Afghan fresh fruit consignments."

0806.  Letter from Indian Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh to the Pakistani Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi regarding repatriation of POWs.

Dear Mr. Agha Shahi,

I have your message of 19th September in which you have expressed some disappointment at what you term as “delay in the commencement of the repatriation.” I must confess that I fail to understand the justification for this observation

2.  In terms of the Delhi Agreement (para 3 clause viii) the schedule for the completion of repatriation of Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees from India, the Banglaeess from Pakistan and the Pakistanis from Bangladesh, had to be worked out by India “in consultation with Bangladesh and Pakistan as the case may be.” Obviously, we could not work out a comprehensive schedule of repatriation without finalization of shipping and air transport arrangements. Since the U.N. Secretary General’s appeal for international assistance in this regard is yet to materialize, strictly speaking, large scale repatriation is not yet possible. The UNHCR airlift is only able to carry a limited number and it is only now, as you have stated, that its capacity is being increased. You would appreciate that even with regard to the UNHCR airlift, we had received no information from you as to the number of Bangalees proposed to be repatriated and the period required for completing this operation. We got this information from Bangladesh when they offered to repatriate 2,600 Pakistanis from Bangladesh in return for 2,000 Bangalee civil servants and defence personnel from Pakistan. Taking note of this, we ourselves took the initiative to suggest that we should match the proposed repatriation between 19 and 30 September by repatriating 1,680 Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees, as we were anxious that the three-way repatriation under the Delhi Agreement should commence as early as possible. You would thus see that we had done our best in the circumstances and it is not fair to accuse us of delay in commencing repatriation.

3.  We have noted that the UNHCR flights are now likely to continue beyond the 30th September and that subject to availability of planes it would be possible to repatriate 600 Bangalee defence and civil services personnel daily. We can assure you that we will not be found wanting in matching this effort by repatriating additional number of prisoners of war and civilian internees in early October. However, it would considerably help us if timely information is given to us about the detailed schedule of repatriation to be carried out by the UNCHR.
4. We need hardly state that we will ensure simultaneity in repatriating Pakistan prisoners of war and civilian internees from India throughout the operation. There is no question of interruption or hiatus in the repatriation of prisoners of war. However, the pace of their repatriation will necessarily be dependent on the pace of repatriation of Bangalees and Pakistanis in accordance with the Delhi agreement.

We are most anxious that the repatriation of all persons covered by the Delhi Agreement should be carried out with the least amount of delay so as to bring about a nearly resolution of the humanitarian issues. However, we shall need Pakistan Government’s fullest cooperation and understanding to fulfill this task.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

(Kewal Singh)

Mr. Agha Shahi,
Foreign Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan.

Aide Memoire of the Government of Bangladesh protesting on the Statement of Pakistan Prime Minister at the UN threatening to oppose the admission of Bangladesh to the UN if it did not abandon the War Crime Trials.

Aide Memoire

The Prime Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Z.A. Bhutto thought it fit to use the United Nations Forum to threaten Bangladesh that Pakistan will oppose the admission of Bangladesh to UN till Bangladesh abandons the war crimes trials. His Excellency the Foreign Minister of India has already given a befitting reply to such “crude” remarks by Mr. Bhutto. The Government of Bangladesh would like to put on record its position on this issue as stated below:

(i) Bangladesh has been and is entitled to membership of the UN she fulfilled all the criteria for membership.

(ii) Extraneous and bilateral issues should not be allowed to be injected into the consideration of Bangladesh’s application for membership of UN.

(iii) The Delhi Agreement sought the solution of humanitarian problems left over from the conflict in 1971 and the Govt. of Bangladesh attaches great importance to the implementation of the Delhi Agreement. Bangladesh has been following a constructive and positive approach in her relations with all countries of the world and even on the question of solution of outstanding problems with Pakistan. The Govt. of Bangladesh would, however, like to make it absolutely clear that the Delhi Agreement has nothing to do with the question of membership of Bangladesh in the UN. To raise this question in the UN is, in fact, against the letter and spirit of the Delhi Agreement. The Delhi Agreement spells out in clear terms how the question of 195 POWs in the UN would be dealt with. Any attempt to preempt the agreement by agitating the question of 195 POWs in the UN would, therefore, not only run counter to the letter and spirit of this Agreement but would indeed, spoil the atmosphere favourable to further positive development towards normalization and establishment of durable peace which has been fostered by this Agreement.

(iv) The formula accepted in the Delhi Agreement was to skirt the question of trial in order to achieve three way repatriation. Raising the question of 195 POWs in the UN would, therefore, defeat the purpose of that formulation. This would in effect mean that Pakistan is going back on its commitment not to raise this matter while the process of actual repatriation is under way.

(v) The three countries in the sub-continent are going ahead with arrangements for very speedy repatriation in cooperation with the UN Secretary General and other humanitarian agencies and also a number of friendly countries. It is, therefore, essential that nothing should be done which may in any way, stand in the way of implementation of the Delhi Agreement.

(vi) It would be premature to raise any matter extraneous to repatriation programme at this stage. Not only the war crimes trials but some other outstanding issues with Pakistan also can await settlement through discussion among the parties concerned on the basis of sovereign equality.

(vii) The members of the UN should respect the unanimous declaration of the non-aligned summit regarding membership of Bangladesh in the UN.

(viii) If Pakistan raise the question of war crimes trials in the UN and links it with the question of Bangladesh’s membership in the UN it would be mixing political questions with humanitarian problems. The overwhelming concern of the international community for the solution of humanitarian problems must be reflected in dissuading Pakistan from starting this game particularly because Pakistan itself accused Bangladesh earlier of linking political questions with humanitarian problems. To inject war crimes trials into the UN at this stage would vitiate the atmosphere created by the Delhi Agreement and would amount to a negative development.

New Delhi,
0808. Record of discussion between the External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh and the US Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

The Foreign Minister, accompanied by the Ambassador, was with the Secretary of State, Dr. Henry Kissinger, for half an hour before lunch at the State Department on 3rd October 1973. Mr. Joseph Sisco, Asst. Secretary of State, was also present.

2. FM congratulated Dr. Kissinger on his appointment as Secretary of State. Dr. Kissinger humorously remarked “Now I cannot pick and choose when I should go before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee as I used to do before. I am now obliged to appear before them whenever they require me”.

3. Dr. Kissinger expressed the hope that FM would be able to come again soon. FM said that he had been to the State Department twice before and would be glad to come again. FM invited Dr. Kissinger to pay a visit to India. The latter accepted the invitation with thanks.

4. Dr. Kissinger congratulated FM on his speech at the UN and said “I have read it with great interest”. FM replied that he had also read Dr. Kissinger’s speech with great interest, and had asked the Ambassador to give a full text of his speech to the State Department.

5. Dr. Kissinger then said “We are delighted with your Ambassador”. FM said “So are we with Ambassador Moynihan”. Dr. Kissinger said that he was thinking of getting Mr. Moynihan back, but since he considered Indo-American relations very important, he decided to keep him on in India. FM said he was glad to hear this because Ambassador Moynihan seemed to have “imbibed the spirit of India”.

6. FM added “I know you have plenty of problems but we believe that things can change for better in our area and this could lead to greater security and stability there. There is thus a mutuality of interest between our two countries regarding this.”

7. Dr. Kissinger said “I have told your Ambassador many times over lunch and otherwise that the difficulties of 1971 are over and we can now have better relations. We consider India as our key interest in South Asia. We have no clash of interests and an objective basis exists for good relations between us”.

8. FM said “This is also our genuine and sincere desire. Geography indicates that Afghanistan, Burma, Pakistan, Nepal, Bhutan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka and India have so much in common, viz., rivers, mountains, economic interests, etc. Our 700 million people could lead a better life if there is peace, friendship and cooperation in South Asia on the basis of sovereign equality. This would add to the stability and prosperity of the whole area. We have no desire to lead or dominate others or be the overlord of any area. Our size naturally creates some feelings among our smaller neighbours. We therefore go out of our way to re-assure them. We have never interfered in their internal affairs or political, social or economic systems. We have close and friendly relations with all of them. Our relations with the former King of Afghanistan were good and they are equally good with the new Government.

9. FM added that he did not wish to dilate too much on the sub-continent, but he thought it necessary to mention that with the Simla and Delhi Agreements India, Pakistan and Bangladesh have demonstrated that problems could be solved mutually and peacefully.

10. Dr. Kissinger said “We think it is a major development and we are glad that things are being settled in a good way”.

11. FM: “The fact that India and Pakistan were able to agree and settle mutual problems is significant, and I should like to assure you that despite military vicissitudes, we did not give any feeling to Mr. Bhutto that he represented a defeated country. Our Prime Minister made him feel completely at ease”.

12. Dr. Kissinger: “Our only interest is to see success in your efforts. We do not support one side or the other. We have some concern only about Afghanistan. We have told Pakistan and Iran not to interfere in the internal affairs of Afghanistan unless Afghanistan tries to subvert their internal system.”

13. FM: “This matter came up when I went to Iran and spoke to the Shahenshah”.

14. Dr. Kissinger: “The Shah mentioned to me about your visit”.

15. FM: “I asked him plainly “Is it your position that you will always side with Pakistan against India, whatever the merits of the question are? And he said that it was not a blanket commitment to Pakistan. He made two points (1) if Pakistan was aggressed upon, he would support Pakistan, but he did not think it was Indian policy to commit aggression against Pakistan; (2) if there was a danger of disintegration of Pakistan particularly in Baluchistan, he would support Pakistan in resisting such a movement”. “I told him that my Prime Minister and I had made several statements that we had no interest in the internal affairs of Afghanistan and Baluchistan”.

16. Dr. Kissinger: “The Shah was not accusing India but only mentioned various possibilities”.
17. FM: “He was mainly worried about Baluchistan and indirectly about NWFP. I told him that we were not supporting any subversive movements there”.

18. Dr. Kissinger: “The Shah told me that you had asked him if he would consult you before he gave any arms to Pakistan and he said to you that he would”.

19. FM: “Yes, he said this to me”.

20. FM then assured Dr. Kissinger that “We had no interest in the dismemberment of Pakistan and wanted to do everything possible to bring about peaceful, friendly and cooperative relationship with Pakistan.

21. Dr. Kissinger thanked FM and told him that USA welcomed this policy.

0809. Aide Memoire of the Government of India addressed to the Government of Pakistan regarding the POWs.

New Delhi, October 12, 1973.

Aide Memoire

The Embassy of Switzerland, New Delhi, is requested to transmit the following message to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan.

Reference Pakistan Government’s aide memoire of October 8, 1973, regarding alleged transfer of Pakistan prisoners of war and civilian internees to Bangladesh.

2. As the Pakistan Government is aware, all Pakistani soldiers and civilians who surrendered to or sought the protective custody of the Joint Commend of India and Bangladesh forces in the Eastern Sector, were brought to India and lodged in POW civilian internee camps. Full details regarding these persons were furnished to the Government of Pakistan through the International Committee of the Red Cross during 1972. The Pakistan Government is also aware that the ICRC representatives have been visiting these camps regularly and furnishing copies of their reports to the Government of Pakistan.

3. No Pakistani POW or civilian under protective custody has been transferred to any country except Pakistan either before or after the signing of the Delhi Agreement.
4. However, some persons in the camps had informed the ICRC and the Government of India that they were nationals of countries other than Pakistan and had desired to be repatriated to these countries. After due verification with governments of the countries concerned and in consultation with the ICRC, these persons were repatriated to their respective countries, like Bangladesh, Afghanistan, U.K. etc. Detailed particulars of such repatriations are available with the ICRC.

New Delhi, November 9, 1973.

The Embassy of Switzerland, Pakistan Affairs Division, presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India and has the honour to draw the Ministry’s attention to the fact that since the end of the hostilities in December 1971 an unknown but certainly considerable number of Non-Bengalis have illegally crossed into India from Bangladesh and have stayed here without reporting to the Indian authorities.

These Non-Bengalis obviously belong to different categories. Some of them are of West Pakistani origin, some members of divided families, some former employees of the Central Government. Some, however, have no connection with West Pakistan. A few may be in possession of valid Pakistani passports, others may have no valid documents. Several amongst them seem to be registered on the repatriation lists prepared by the ICRC and sent to the Government of Pakistan following the Delhi Agreement.

Articles in the press have indicated that the Indian authorities have arrested a number of these Non-Bengalis illegal entrants during the past months.

The Embassy requests the Ministry to intimate the measures envisaged once these Non-Bengalis report to the Indian authorities. Particularly, the Embassy would like to know:
— Whether they are arrested and subsequently sent back to Bangladesh as has been reported, which might endanger their lives;

— Or whether and under what conditions and to which categories exit-permits are granted to proceed to Pakistan. Exit-permits have been granted in several cases known to this Embassy; — Or whether it is envisaged to repatriate them as a distinctive group.

The Embassy would also like to know whether the Ministry intend to take up the question of repatriation with the Government of Pakistan as their case resembles to the case of Pakistanis who, on their way to Pakistan, are stranded in Nepal and other countries.

The Embassy of Switzerland, Pakistan Affairs, Division, avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, the assurances of its highest consideration.

0811. Aide Memoire of the Ministry of External Affairs to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs drawing attention to certain speeches of Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto which were contrary to the Simla Spirit.

New Delhi, November 9, 1973.

AIDE MEMOIRE

The Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi is requested to transmit the following message to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, Islamabad:

BEGINS;

According to Radio Pakistan, H.E. the Prime Minister of Pakistan told a public meeting in Rawalkot on 7th November 1973 that “he could assure the Kashmiris that they could count on his support at every stage of their liberation straggle.” Similarly, addressing another meeting at Bagh, he said that “if the people of Kashmir are prepared for sacrifices, the Kashmir problem will be solved. He said we should be prepared for everything and every sacrifice. He added if one is prepared for war, one is spared of it.
2. According to another Radio Pakistan broadcast, the Prime Minister is reported to have indicated at Muzaffarabad on 5th November, 1973 that representation would be provided to the people of Pakistan-occupied Kashmir in the Pakistan Federal Legislature and also envisaged that this change in the pattern of relations could be made applicable not only for Azad Kashmir but also for the entire state. He reiterated in his speech at Keil on 6th November, 1973 that he told the political parties in Azad Kashmir that if they come to an agreement, his Government would accept it.

3. Government of India are constrained to point out that these and other similar statements by the Prime Minister of Pakistan during his recent visit to Pakistan-occupied Kashmir are contrary to the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement. According to para (ii) of the Simla Agreement "the two countries are resolved to settle their differences by peaceful means through bilateral negotiations or by any other peaceful means mutually agreed upon between them. Pending the final settlement of any of the problems between the two countries neither side shall unilaterally alter the situation and both shall prevent the organisation, assistance or encouragement of any acts detrimental to the maintenance of peaceful and harmonious relations."

4. In some other speeches, delivered at Pullundri and Bhimber on 8th November, the Prime Minister of Pakistan is reported to have "declared that in order to impress upon the Indian Government as to where it stood in Kashmir, he would make an appeal to the people of Kashmir to observe a peaceful hartal on one of the Fridays. The response to this call would serve as a symbolic protest in occupied Kashmir." This appeal and its connotations are not only in contravention of the Simla Agreement but also constitute unwarranted interference in the internal affairs of India.

5. Government of Pakistan would surely agree that such statements by the highest authority in Pakistan can only cause apprehension amongst the people and Government of India regarding Pakistan’s intentions about the implementation of Simla Agreement through which the two countries are resolved to work for “the promotion of friendly and harmonious relationship and the establishment of: durable peace in the sub-continent.”

New Delhi November 9, 1973
The Embassy of Switzerland,
New Delhi.
0812. Letter of External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to the the Minister of State for Defence & Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan regarding certain statements of Pakistan Prime Minister which were contrary to the spirit of Simla Agreement.

We had on the 9th November addressed an Aide Memoire to the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs inviting attention to some recent statements made by His Excellency the Prime Minister of Pakistan which in our view were not in tune with the aims and objectives of the Simla Agreement. While doing so we thought it best to leave it to your good judgement as to how the serious doubts and misgivings which had arisen in India could be removed.

2. This hope has unfortunately been belied as some further statements have been made which are quite disturbing to us.

3. As you are aware, the Simla Agreement lays down the principles and the procedure for bringing about “a final settlement of J & K”. Accordingly, it would be recalled that the settlement has to be in the context of normalization of relations between the two countries and has to be achieved by peaceful means through bilateral negotiations. It is also incumbent upon both countries that nothing should be done by either side unilaterally to “alter the situation and both shall prevent the organisation, assistance or encouragement of any acts detrimental to the maintenance of peaceful and harmonious relations”. In this context, we are surprised to note that during the speech at Mirpur on 9th November when some students in the crowd raised slogans “we want guerilla warfare to liberate Kashmir”, the Prime Minister is reported to have said “I like the slogans because these are revolutionary slogans”. He further exhorted the audience that if there are any young men who are interested in guerilla war they should join Pakistan’s Special Services Guards or Commandos and receive proper training. Do we understand from this that the Pakistan Government is now out to encourage the idea of guerilla warfare in Kashmir in total negation of the solemn understanding reached at Simla for the peaceful settlement of differences between the two countries? Obviously, in the absence of a categorical denial by Pakistan Government, the conclusion drawn above is inevitable.

4. The Simla Agreement enjoins upon both countries respect for each other’s territorial integrity and sovereignty and non-interference in each other’s internal affairs. This is stated to be the pre-requisite for reconciliation and good neighbourliness. In this context it is most unfortunate that during his speech at Bhimber on 8th November, the Prime Minister should have thought it fit to speak about the relations between Hindus and Muslims in India in disparaging terms. He was reported to have said “we have cut the Sardars, Khans, Jagirdars and exploiters to their size and thus we have no regional or communal systems here in the country. These systems obtain in India where Muslims are forced to eat with the Hindus in the same plate. You, the people of Kashmir, know it fully well that you could not touch even the glass from which a Pandit used to drink water. We naturally feel that statements of this kind are likely to incite communal passions and disturb harmonious relations between various communities in India. This is, therefore, not in accord with the mutual understanding reached at Simla about non-interference in each other’s internal affairs.

5. You would recall that on our part when you wrote to me on 27th October saying that there were certain misgivings in Pakistan about my visit to Kabul I readily assured you in reply of November 16, that we could continue to firmly adhere to the principle of non-interference in each other’s internal affairs in accordance with the Simla Agreement. Even without this assurance you would have noticed that during Sardar Naim’s visit to Delhi earlier and my visit to Kabul there was not one statement issued by us which can be deemed to have violated this principle.

6. In the circumstances explained above unless Pakistan Government immediately clarifies its position publicly, the conclusion will be inescapable that Pakistan Government is now paying scant regard to the provisions of the Simla Agreement and has taken upon itself to openly interfere in the internal affairs of India. Since this matter has aroused very serious concern to us I would request you to let me have an early reply so that we both understand, as to where we stand.
0813.  Letter of Pakistan’s Foreign Secretary to the Indian Foreign Secretary regarding detention of some Pakistani nationals in Indian jails.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

November 21, 1973

Dear Mr. Kewal Singh,

Following the events in East Pakistan since March 1971, hundreds of West Pakistani officials and non-officials entered India. They were forced to do so in order to save their lives. They were arrested, prosecuted on charges of illegal entry and sentenced to imprisonment. Many of them are still reported to be in Agartala and other jails and others are on bail in India.

These unfortunate people have already suffered much for over two-and-a-half years. On humanitarian as well as legal grounds, they deserve to be released and repatriated without delay.

I might add that Pakistan has already freed all Indian nationals who were held in custody in Pakistan on charges of illegal entry in 1971.

The only Indian nationals at present under detention in Pakistan are about 350 criminals who were convicted on various charges before 1971. We have offered to release all of them on basis of reciprocity. Over a year ago, we provided their list to the Government of India. However, so far we have not even received the list of Pakistan nationals held in Indian jails since before the events of 1971.

While it may take the Government of India more time to prepare the list of pre-1971 Pakistani detenus and convicts, the case of those who entered India in 1971 to save their lives deserves to be viewed separately. We would hope that in the spirit of the Simla and Delhi Agreements, the Government of India will now be able to release and repatriate them.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely

0814. Aide Memoire of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Ministry of External Affairs regarding repatriation of POWs.

Aide Memoire

The Embassy of Switzerland transmits the following message, dated November 23, 1973, received through Swiss diplomatic channels from the Government of Pakistan:

"The Government of Pakistan has taken note of the statement by the Indian Minister for External Affairs in the Lok Sebha on the repatriation of prisoners of war from India, of Bengalees from Pakistan and non-Bengalees from Bangladesh. According to the All India Radio, the Minister is reported to have stated that due to Pakistan delay, the pace of repatriation of its nationals in Bangladesh had slowed down.

As explained in this Government’s Aide-memoire, dated 12th November, 1973, this statement is based on a misunderstanding of the responsibility of the Government of Pakistan in the matter of repatriation of non-Bengalees from Bangladesh. Nevertheless, in view of the fact that Bangladesh was not able to repatriate Non-Bengalees this Government had cleared fast enough from Bangladesh, this Government decided to take whatever additional steps were possible within its sphere of responsibility to enable Bangladesh to speed up the repatriation process. It has noted with satisfaction that this action has had the desired result and the rate of repatriation of non-Bengalees from Bangladesh has “remarkably increased” as reportedly stated by Sardar Swaran Singh. The Government of Pakistan regrets to note that, on the other hand, there has been a deliberate slowing down by the Government of India of repatriation of Pakistani prisoners of war. We have not been able to find any justification for this action in the Delhi Agreement and trust that the Government of India would take early steps substantially to accelerate the pace of repatriation of Pakistani prisoners of war. At the present rate their repatriation would not be completed until May 1974, whereas — assuming that the necessary transport facilities will remain fully operative - the repatriation of Bengalees from Pakistan and of non-Bengalees (that) this Government has agreed to accept from Bangladesh, could be completed by end of January 1974."

0815. Message from Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed in reply to Indian External Affairs Minister’s letter regarding certain statements of Prime Minister Bhutto.

“Reference your message of 21st November. We are glad you have expressed your concern with complete frankness. Only by sharing such misgivings, can we both understand as to where we stand.

2. It was for like consideration that I was impelled to write to you on 27th October about exchange of visits between Delhi and Kabul. The reply you were good enough to send on 16th November, has helped clear the air.

3. It seems that reports that have reached your Government of the Prime Minister’s speeches in Azad Kashmir are incomplete or inaccurate. Taken out of context, extracts can lead to wrong constructions. The Prime Minister’s speeches, read as a whole, could not justify the kind of impression you have formed.

4. You have expressed concern over what the Prime Minister said to a group of young men who advocated guerilla war at his public meeting in Mirpur on 9th November. What actually happened is that a huge public gathering in Mirpur, a tiny group of students proceeded to disturb the meeting with slogans, in favour of guerilla war to liberate Kashmir. Turning to them, the Prime Minister said I like these slogans because these are revolutionary slogans. These slogans reflect the spirit of the people. There will be no progress till people have the right spirit and enthusiasm. Since Pakistan People’s Party is a revolutionary electoral mandate to introduce socialism in Pakistan, the Prime Minister, by commenting the young men’s attitude in these terms, set it within the framework of his party political program. He also advised them that if any of them was interested in guerilla warfare they should join Pakistan military or Para military forces. Immediately thereafter the young men stopped disturbing the meeting. This is the Prime Minister’s way of handling any hecklers at public meetings.

5. Since this incident has been fully reported in the Pakistan press, there is no need to clarify the Government position publicly on this point. It would be wholly inadvisable to blow up a small, inconsequential incident such as this out of all proportion by doing so. It is best forgotten, Perhaps it has not been brought to your notice that at practically every public meeting in Azad Kashmir, Prime Minister took the line that the Kashmir dispute should be resolved through peaceful means, that war would not resolve this issue and in support thereof he mentioned that three wars fought during the last 26 years had left this issue unresolved.

6. I should mention that perusal of Prime Minister’s speeches in their entirety would show that their main thrust were directed towards a possible reorganisation of administration of Azad Kashmir which would enable rapidly to bring the benefit of development and modernisation to that territory in accordance with the People’s Party’s economic objectives.

7. You have also taken exception to one or two remarks made by Prime Minister during his speech at Bhimber on 8th November. Here Prime Minister was again merely stating certain facts, namely, that we had cut the Sardars, Jagirdars and exploiters down to size and that there were no regional or caste taboos in Pakistan. We regret that statements made in this connection should have caused offence in India.

8. While not in any way wishing to justify any lapse or supposed lapse on our part in implementing the Simla Agreement by proffering counter complaints, I should like to take this opportunity to invite your attention to Radio Srinagar’s programme BAAT CHEET (Talks programme)on 8th November. Denouncing Prime Minister’s statement concerning Kashmiris right of self-determination, the broadcast said that “The Pakistan rulers should desist from making such statements about an area where they stand as aggressor. They have no right to do so. If the right of self determination is so dear to them, why do they not accept this right for the oppressed people of Baluchistan and NWFP.”

9. More recently, AIR seems to have cast aside all restraint in this regard, despite the assurances contained in your letter of 16th November concerning your visit to Kabul. For instance

“(a) Observers say Pakistan Army is perpetrating untold tyrannies on the people of Baluchistan. In view of these conditions, Sardar Bugti did not consider proper to continue in office;

(b) There seems no end to political violence. The situation is very critical in Baluchistan and the NWFP as the Peoples Party have not been able to find feet in these provinces. It is for this reason that an attempt to crush the opposition with great force is being made in these areas.

(c) It appears that the ruling party leadership has decided to crush opposition with an iron hand instead of coming to an understanding with it. AIR, TABSARA (commentary) 23rd November, 1973.

(d) Movement of independent Pakhtoonistan is gaining momentum in Pakistan.
(e) Reports from northern area of the NWFP, speak of growing resistance to the armed intervention by Islamabad. Several protest meetings have been held against intervention of the Pakistan Government in the affairs of Pakhtoonistan. The meetings have asked Islamabad to withdraw its armed forces from the territory. AIR News 0740 hours 26th November, 1973.

10. You may wish to look into this matter. So far as my Government is concerned, as you are aware, we have in the course of several communications addressed to your Government, repeatedly affirmed our resolve to promote friendship and harmonious relations with India and work for durable peace and, with that end in view, to implement the Simla Agreement in the letter and the spirit. This still regains the Pakistan Government’s inflexible objective.

Dear Mr. Agha Shahi,

Please refer to your message dated November 21, 1973, received through Army channels.

2. As you are aware, we had as far back as 29th April, 1972, agreed that respective nationals detained in either country before the outbreak of hostilities on 3rd December, 1971, should be exchanged. In fact it is a matter of deep regret that despite the understanding reached so far back, the matter has remained pending. I have gone into this question carefully and am unable to understand the reasons as to why your Government has not responded to our repeated initiatives for effecting limited exchanges pending completion of verified lists of detained nationals on both sides.

3. During the period February 1972 to August 1972 we had forwarded to Government of Pakistan lists of as many as 790 Indian nationals of this category who according to our information are in Pakistan’s custody—some of them since 1965-66. Pakistan Government, however, sent us a list of 380 names of Indian nationals who are in their custody which, on examination, revealed that only 88 names were in common between it and our list of 790.
4. We had also received from Pakistan Government a list of 380 who are allegedly detained in India. Some of these persons are those who are supposed to have entered India from former East Pakistan between March and December 1971. After verification with our State Governments we had prepared a list of 115 Pakistan nationals of this category who have been identified so far. This list was sent in two installments to your Government with our Aide Memoires of 29th September and 9th October, 1973 and communicated through Swiss Embassy. We can assure you that we are continuing our efforts with the help of State Governments to locate more Pakistani nationals of this category and will inform you as soon as this information is compiled.

5. In the meantime, you would appreciate our anxiety to ascertain the whereabouts and welfare of Indian nationals detained in Pakistan whose names were in the list of 790 which was communicated to you last year. We had, therefore, readily agreed to your Government’s proposal some months ago that representatives of the Swiss Missions in the two countries who are entrusted with the task of looking after consular interests on either side should be enabled to visit these detained nationals whether they are in jails or on bail so that on the basis of their reports, additional verified lists can be prepared. We thought that this would be a practical way of tackling this problem in either country. We were, therefore, greatly surprised to know recently that the Government of Pakistan was now not keen about this proposal. I hope you would reconsider your decision in this regard and if possible revive this proposal.

6. I have noticed that in your letter you have by implication tried to draw a fine distinction between Pakistan nationals who crossed over into India illegally during the period March to 3rd December, 1971 and Indian nationals detained in Pakistan for several years. In this context, I am unable to agree with your contention that Pakistan has freed all Indian nationals who were taken into custody in 1971. Perhaps you have in mind the civilians captured by your Army from Hussainiwala or other areas in the Western border. If this is so, I would like to clarify that India had also reciprocally, released Pakistan civilians captured during the conflict from the Western border.

7. You have rightly pointed out that on humanitarian grounds the pre-war detainees should be released and repatriated. However, I am sure you would agree that humanitarian considerations should be equally applicable to the Indian nationals detained in Pakistan for so many years. Surely, it would be highly unfair to apply some kind of fine distinction in their case and keep them in detention indefinitely. I think once your Government is able to take a fair decision in this regard and deal with this matter on the basis of purely humanitarian considerations as well as reciprocity, there is no reason why we cannot resolve this problem in a mutually satisfactory manner.

Yours sincerely,

0817. Letter from the Pakistani Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs to the Indian External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh regarding POWs.

Dear Sardar Swaran Singh,

You will recall that in the course of one of our meetings in New York you mentioned that since under the Delhi Agreement the trial of the 195 prisoners of war had been effectively blocked and their transfer to Dacca ruled out, the relief we sought from the International Court had in fact been provided by that Agreement. Under the circumstances you suggested that we consider the question of withdrawing our case from the International Court of Justice.

2. I am glad to inform you that the Government of Pakistan has decided to withdraw the case and necessary action to give effect to this decision is being taken. This has been done not only for the reasons stated by you but in order also to help promote normalisation of the situation in the Sub-continent in conformity with the spirit of the Simla and Delhi Agreements.

With best wishes

Yours Sincerely

(Aziz Ahmed)

His Excellency Sardar Swaran Singh,
Minister for External Affairs,
Government of the Republic of India, New Delhi.
I would like to place on record certain aspect about points which have been raised. I will try to be very brief because I do not want to make a very comprehensive speech covering every point. I would start with the last point raised by Shri Nawal Kishore. This was also referred to by Dr. Bhai Mahavir. And that is about Prime Minister Bhutto’s speeches and his general attitude. I would like to say very briefly the following which is partly factual, because you might recall that I had informed either this House or the other House that we had already taken this matter up — I think I mentioned it here during the Question Hour — with the Government of Pakistan. The House is aware of the reported statements of the Prime Minister of Pakistan during his tour of Pakistan-Occupied Kashmir in early November which were contrary to the aims and objectives of the Simla Agreement, in particular, the provisions regarding non-interference in each other’s internal affairs.

On 9th November we had sent an aide memoire to the Pakistan Government drawing pointed attention to these statements. We had said that in our view such statements by the highest authority in Pakistan could only cause apprehension among the people and the Government of India regarding Pakistan’s intention about the implementation of the Simla Agreement. Later on 21st November I sent a personal message to Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Pakistan’s Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs wherein I drew his attention to the speeches of the Prime Minister of Pakistan, particularly the speech at Mirpur on 9th November, which had tended to create the impression that he had endorsed the slogans from a section of the crowd which was advocating “Guerilla Warfare to liberate Kashmir”. I asked Mr. Aziz Ahmed to clarify the Pakistan Government’s position on this subject so that we could understand where we stood in terms of the Simla Agreement. Mr. Aziz Ahmed has sent me a reply. In his reply which was received towards the end of the last month — his reply is dated November 29 — Mr. Aziz Ahmed has tried to explain that Prime Minister Bhutto’s speeches, read as a whole, could not justify the kind of impression we had formed. Regarding Mr. Bhutto’s remarks at Mirpur he clarified that the Prime Minister was actually trying to pacify a section of the crowd which was shouting these slogans and was creating a disturbance. He has further said that this is Mr. Bhutto’s style of dealing with hecklers. He has further stated that on the other hand Mr. Bhutto has been repeatedly advocating during this tour that war would not resolve the Kashmir issue and that three wars fought during the last twenty-six years had left this issue un-resolved.
These are the words Mr. Aziz Ahmed has used while making a summary of the general trend of Mr. Bhutto's speeches. According to Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Pakistan Government remains committed to promoting friendship and harmonious relations with India and to implementing the Simla Agreement in letter and spirit. My only comment is that the fact that they are trying to be defensive on this and are trying again to come back to the Simla Agreement is a factor in the situation which we should not ignore. While we have taken note of this clarification, we cannot but express our unhappiness that the Prime Minister of Pakistan should have thought it fit to make remarks in his speeches which violated the provisions of the Simla Agreement regarding noninterference in each other's internal affairs. We will, therefore, earnestly hope that Pakistan Government will fulfill the assurance contained in Mr. Aziz Ahmed's letter of 29th November. It is necessary for us not to forget the objective. The objective is clear. We have to stabilise peace. In our relations with Pakistan we have to reverse the trends of confrontation and we are dead-earnest to establish good neighbourly relations. And if there are any deviations from the side of Pakistan, it should be our duty to point out those deviations and try to bring them back on to the rails so that they continued to be firm on the Simla Agreement. It is not a very pleasant task. But while dealing with a history of the type that we have had with Pakistan, the main objective has to be kept in view and it is with that objective that we continue to make our efforts.

I would also like to take this opportunity to bring the figures up to date with regard to repatriation of the three categories of persons about which I made a reference in my opening remark. I have got now figures which are fairly recent. I have got figures up to 2nd December, 1973. The figures available with us till 2nd December, 1973 are quite impressive and they show that the persons repatriated were as follows:

Prisoners of war and civilian internees in India . . . 30,190
Pakistanis from Bangladesh…… 22,593
Bangladesh nationals from Pakistan .... 52,821

The number is well over a lakh and this trend is continuing. My senior brother Shri Awadheshwar Prasad Sinha has pointed out that even this morning it was on the radio that more prisoners of war have gone. It is true that during these three or four days further repatriation has taken place. But I am giving you authentic figures which show that over one lakh persons have already been repatriated.

As the House is aware, we are dealing with three categories of persons — prisoners of war and civil internees in India; Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan and Pakistani nationals in Bangladesh. The outstanding number is still substantial. It will take some months more before we complete this first phase.
Indian prisoners in Pakistani custody at the time of cease-fire had been repatriated long ago. We had exchanged Pakistani prisoners that came into our custody from Western side with the Indian P.O.Ws, that were in their custody. It is obvious that there were no Indian prisoners of war on the Eastern side.

A part of the money according to international convention is recoverable and we have reserved our right to claim the expenditure which is recoverable according to international law.

Aide Memoire

The Embassy of Switzerland transmits the following message, dated December 11, 1973, from the Government of Pakistan and destined for the Government of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh to the Government of India for their information:

“In accordance with paragraph 2 of the Memorandum of Understanding signed at New Delhi on August 28, 1972, the Government of Pakistan was to repatriate Bangalee defence services personnel and civil servants and their families on a first priority basis. The repatriation of these categories is approaching completion.

2. Out of about 52,000 defence services personnel and their families, over 36,000 have already been repatriated. Of the civil servants and their families only about 4,000 are left.

3. Of the remaining 20,000 defence and civil services personnel and their families, about half will be repatriated by air from Karachi and the other half from Lahore. With readjustment in placement of the available aircraft at present engaged in the repatriation operation, it is hoped that all the remaining defence and civil services personnel and their families will be completed in about three weeks.

4. For smooth continuation of the operation, it is necessary that the completion of repatriation of the defence and civil services personnel should be dovetailed with the commencement of the repatriation of the civilian Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan.

5. The Government of Pakistan must soon have necessary information about the civilian Bangladesh nationals awaiting repatriation from Pakistan. It has been learnt from the ICRC that applications of the Bangalee civilians have already been obtained and forwarded by it to the Government of Bangladesh for clearance. It is necessary that these clearances should now be available so that the concerned authorities can make the necessary logistic arrangements. The Bangladesh nationals will have to be notified of departure dates. They will need time to prepare. The authorities will have to assemble them. All this will require time.

6. Unless the clearances are granted without further delay, it is inevitable that there will be a hiatus in the repatriation operation."

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmed.

Thank you for your message of December 6 received through the Army channels.

2. We are glad to note that your Government has decided to withdraw its application to the International Court of Justice on the issue of 195 Pakistani prisoners of war required for trial by Bangladesh Government.

3. You have referred to my conversation with you at New York. I recall having asked you at a social function whether it was true that Pakistan Government was thinking of repaginating this question before the International Court of Justice. I said if this was so it would be rather a surprising step on the part of Pakistan Government in view of the fact that Pakistan was a partly to the Delhi Agreement wherein an agreed procedure had been indicated for tackling this issue. You had said that you would have the matter re-examined on your return.

4. I am also glad to note that this decision has been taken by your Government in order to promote normalization of the situation in the sub-continent in conformity with the spirit of the Simla and Delhi Agreement.

Yours Sincerely,
(Swaran Singh)

0821. Letter from the Pakistani Foreign Secretary to the Indian Foreign Secretary regarding the prisoners of pre-war period.

Dear Mr. Kewal Singh,

I regret the delay in replying to your letter of November 30, 1973 about the question of pre-war prisoners. I was out of the country until mid-December.

2. I am happy to inform you that the Government of Pakistan has agreed to visits by Swiss Embassy officials to jails in Pakistan where Indian nationals are under detention. To start with, they will visit Peshawar on January 7, 1974.

3. The list of 380 Indian nationals under detention in Pakistan that was provided to the Government of India was based on complete information collected from the Provincial Governments. We have once again requested the authorities concerned to investigate if any other Indian nationals are held in Pakistan. I can assure you that if any are found we shall promptly convey their particulars to the Governments of India. You will agree that it is not possible for the authorities in Pakistan to give any explanation on the basis of Indian claim lists unless information is provided about the places of detention.

4. I regret to say that information about all Pakistan nationals known to be held in India has not so far been provided by the Government of India. For instance, according to a letter from a prisoner, about 300 Pakistani nationals are said to be under detention at the Alipur Central Jail in Calcutta on charges of illegal entry. Their names have not been sent to us. Even the name of a prisoner who has been visited by the Swiss Embassy at the Patiala jail has not been included in the lists of 125 persons so far provided by the Government of India.

5. You will agree that the period of one year and 8 months since the two countries agreed in principle to exchange pre-war prisoners, should have been sufficient for the concerned authorities in India to collect the names and particulars of Pakistani nationals held in jails or on bail in India.

6. In the absence of complete lists, the Government of Pakistan is prepared to agree even to a partial exchange. I must, however, state that in that case the question of persons held or convicted on security offences should be treated separately.

7. The Government of Pakistan is prepared, pending complication of complete lists, to release on basis of reciprocity, all Indian nationals in custody in Pakistan, except those held or convicted for security offences. If this is acceptable, the Government of Pakistan and the Government of India should agree to release and exchange all the known prisoners and detenus, apart from the excepted category, on a mutually agreed date. And later, if any persons are discovered to be in jails, they should also be promptly released and repatriated.

8. As for the prisoners held or convicted on security charges, their lists may be exchanged separately and they can be the subject of a separate agreement.

With best wishes

Yours sincerely,

Reply Message of the Indian External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to the Pakistani Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed regarding speeches of the Prime Minister of Pakistan.

New Delhi, January 8, 1974.

In your last message dated November 29, 1973 you had clarified that the speeches made by the Prime Minister of Pakistan during his visit to Muzaffarabad and certain other places in November 1973, read as a whole, could not justify the kind of impression that we had formed. Further you had also been good enough to reaffirm your Government’s resolve to promote friendship and harmonious relations with India and to implement the Simla Agreement in the letter and spirit. You may have noticed that in my statement before our Parliament last month I had made use of your clarification and explained this matter in as constructive a manner as possible.

2. We had naturally thought that after the helpful clarification given by you there would be no recurrence of the kind of statements to which we had taken exception earlier. Against this background I deeply regret having to invite your attention to the following remarks reported to have been made by the Prime Minister of Pakistan during a public speech at Rawalpindi on December 20, 1973 (DAWN of Karachi dated 21st December 1973):

“He reaffirmed his Government’s resolve to intensify the struggle for recognition of Kashmir’s” right of self-determination. He wondered why his announcement that he would call for Hartal on a particular Friday in Occupied as well as in Azad Kashmir should have evoked protest from India. He explained his idea was to show to the world that people of Jammu and Kashmir State were with Pakistan heart and soul, in finding a place of dignity and self-assertion for themselves.”

3. We had hoped that the unfortunate move calling for a Hartal in Jammu & Kashmir contained in one of the earlier statements of your Prime Minister about which we had drawn your Governments attention in an Aide Memoire date November 8, 1973, would have been allowed to die a natural death. This was the logical conclusion drawn from your last message. Therefore, we are surprised to note the reassertion of this idea contained in your Prime Minister’s reported statement of December 20.

4. I think a word needs to be said here about the possible consequence of this move. We have noticed that it is being claimed in Pakistan that a response to the call for Hartal in Jammu and Kashmir would serve as “a symbolic protest” and as an expression of the so-called solidarity of the Kashmiris with Pakistan.
You are no doubt aware that the occurrence of Hartals and agitations is quite common not only in India but in Pakistan as well. However, if any artificial connotation of the kind mentioned above is given by either side, it would affect Pakistan equally as much as India. Therefore, it is in this context that I would urge you to think of this matter in the larger context of developing harmonious relations between India and Pakistan and of establishing durable peace in the sub-continent. Needless to say that encouragement by a Prime Minister of a country of Hartal in a neighbouring country is a most serious interference in the internal affairs of the neighbouring country.

5. We have also noticed that in the same speech the Prime Minister of Pakistan made the following remarks:

“He was prepared to talk not only with Khan Wali Khan but also with Indira Gandhi and his other patrons.” He said, “it was malicious to say that excesses were being perpetrated on the people of Baluchistan and that four divisions of Army were deployed there. Those who indulged in such propaganda were the enemies of Pakistan and agents of India.”

We are at a loss to understand how totally unwarranted allegations of this kind against the Prime Minister of India in the context of a purely internal situation in Pakistan are likely to further the objectives of the Simla Agreement.

6. We would, therefore, earnestly hope that in the interest of harmonious relations to which both Pakistan and India are committed under the Simla Agreement your Government would find a suitable opportunity of correcting the wrong impression which has been created in India by these statements.

EMBASSY OF SWITZERLAND

The Embassy of Switzerland presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India and has the honour to communicate to the Ministry the following Aide-memoire, dated January 19, 1974, received from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan:

BEGINS

AIDE MEMOIRE

“The following message may please be communicated to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, New Delhi:

Reference Minister of External Affairs, Government of India, message of December, 3, 1975, proposing an exchange of delegations for discussion and implementation of the steps envisaged in Paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement to restore and normalize relations between the two countries.

The Government of Pakistan is of the view that first it would be desirable to take up the subject of resumption of postal, telegraphic, sea and land communication between the two countries. After this important step has been taken, the other steps envisaged in Paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement can also be discussed at the appropriate time.

Accordingly in order to discuss the resumption of communications, the Government of Pakistan has great pleasure in extending an invitation to the Government of India to send a delegation to Pakistan in the first week of March 1974.”

ENDS

The Embassy of Switzerland avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India the assurances of its highest consideration.

0824. Letter from the Pakistani Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed to Indian External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh regarding the speeches of the Pakistani Prime Minister.

Islamabad, January 24, 1974.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

From: Mr. Aziz Ahmed,
Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

January 24, 1974.

Dear Sardar Swaran Singh,

I write in reply to your letter of January, 9.

I regret that you should have again found it necessary to express concern over a subject in respect of which the position of my Government had been clarified at some length in my letter of November 29. May I suggest again that the Prime Minister’s speeches should be read in the context in which they are made. In the public speech on December 20, out of which you have culled some of his remarks, the Prime Minister briefly dealt with the Kashmir dispute in reply to domestic critics who had alleged that the speeches he had made during his tour of Azad Kashmir in November were tantamount to abandonment of Pakistan’s position on Jammu and Kashmir. Similarly his other remarks to which you have taken objection should also, we think, be viewed in the proper perspective.

Such a perspective would require, in our view, that we do not pick on a statement here or there in the Prime Minister’s public speeches but keep in view the totality of his approach to the India-Pakistan relationship. This is brought out clearly in the interview he gave to Dr. Satish Kumar, which has been published in the Hindustan Times, New Delhi, on January 2.

Take, for instance, the importance he attaches in that interview to the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries. Giving the instance of the energy crisis and other recent developments that he said here going to have far-reaching ramifications on the economies of both countries, he said:

“If today we had diplomatic relations we would be able to consult each other and find out where we go from here, because we are really sinking together.

You see sudden changes, sudden mutations take place and we find ourselves groping in the dark because we do not have a dialogue, we do not have relations... with each other. And we are still hankering over past feuds. The world has moved on and we in the sub-continent have remained behind”.

Stressing the need for establishment of normal relations between Pakistan, India and Bangladesh, he said:

“We are excellent in losing opportunities and are bad in seizing opportunities. We have made progress, judging from the way things move in the sub-continent, lackadaisically and slowly. Simla was an achievement for peace. Delhi also made its contribution. And now we await further developments. I would go to the extent of saying that we anxiously await further developments in the process of normalization.”

It was in this same spirit that during that interview he also pleaded at considerable length for a saner approach to the question of the “colossal” and “back-breaking” expenditure on defence in both India and Pakistan.

It would be helpful we think in the achievement of the objectives of the Simla Agreement if we concentrated on the positive features of statements made by leaders in both countries.

Finally, you have complained about the statement made by the Prime Minister concerning a hartal in Jammu and Kashmir. We agree with you that encouragement by the Prime Minister of a country of a hartal in a neighbouring country would be most serious interference in the internal affairs of that country. However, as you are aware, we do not accept your claim that the State of Jammu and Kashmir is a part of India and the Simla Agreement duly recognizes and respects this position.

Before I conclude I should like to say that we took note of your statement in the Indian Parliament on December 6, as being helpful in the creation of an atmosphere conducive to promotion of a harmonious relationship between India and Pakistan.

With best wishes,

Yours Sincerely,

Sd/-

0825. Letter of Pakistani Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed to the Indian External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh regarding Pakistanis held in India for illegally entering the country.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

January 25, 1974

Dear Sardar Swaran Singh,

During the disturbances in East Pakistan in 1971 hundreds of (West) Pakistanis had to seek refuge in India in order to save their lives from Bengalee extremists. For nearly three years they have been under detention in India on charges of illegal entry. We have been trying but do not seem to be making much headway in securing their release. I see no alternative now to troubling you and seeking your intervention.

2. I should be grateful if you could kindly personally look into this matter so that these innocent refugees are saved from needless suffering. They had not entered your country with criminal intent. In any case, they have suffered more than enough already.

3. The whole question appears to have got bogged down in details of essentially unrelated issues. The release of these unfortunate refugees has been linked with that of pre-war prisoners held for criminal offences, particularly with persons detained on espionage charges.

4. I assure you that we on our side will respond adequately in finding an early solution to the question of release of pre-war prisoners as well. In fact Mr. Agha Shahi has already written to Mr. Kewal Singh suggesting that the question of security prisoners be discussed separately, while persons held for other criminal offences could be released promptly.

Yours sincerely

(Aziz Ahmed)

His Excellency Sardar Swaran Singh
Minister of External Affairs,
Government of the Republic of India.
New Delhi, January 27, 1974.

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmed,

I have received your message dated 25th January, 1974, regarding the pre-war detainees which we have studied carefully.

2. I notice we have been corresponding with your Government on this question for the past two years. For one reason or the other, not a single person out of the Indian and Pakistani pre-war detainees has been repatriated, even though as far back as April 1972 agreement had been reached that all Indian pre-war detainees in Pakistan and Pakistani pre-war detainees in India will be exchanged. Pakistan's message received through Swiss Embassy on 29th April, 1972 had stated “the Government of Pakistan is agreeable in principle to exchange all prisoners and internees detained in the two countries during the period prior to the month of December, 1971.”

3. The real cause of this unfortunate stalemate has been the subsequent change in Pakistan Government's position and in insisting that a distinction should be made between prisoners who are allegedly charged with security offences and those charged with other offences; the implication being that those charged with security offences should continue to be detained in Pakistan. I am unable to see how either side is going to accent the argument advanced by the other about the nature of charges on the basis of which these persons are detained. Even on humanitarian grounds Indian nationals, many of whom have been kept in detention in Pakistan from as far back as 1965, should now be allowed to return home. We understand that there are some Indian prisoners who have gone insane while in captivity and some may have died. As a concrete instance, I may mention that only on January 21 we were informed through Swiss Embassy that an Indian national Ram Daleeli who was in Kot Lakhpat Jail had died after prolonged illness. At no stage had we been informed of the fact that this person had been seriously ailing. It is hard to believe that Pakistan Government will derive any advantage from prolonging captivity of these hapless and unfortunate individuals.

4. We are quite prepared on our side to release all Pakistani pre-war detainees including those charged with security offences and would naturally expect that in accordance with the agreement reached between the two sides in April 1972, all pre-war detainees, irrespective of the charges against them, should be released by Pakistan. This is the only way we can bring this matter to an amicable solution.

New Delhi, January 25, 1974.

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, presents its compliments to the Embassy of Switzerland, New Delhi, and has the honour to request that the enclosed aide memoire may kindly be transmitted to the Government of Pakistan.

The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Embassy of Switzerland the assurances of its highest consideration.

New Delhi, January 25, 1974.

AIDE MEMOIRE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

Reference Government of Pakistan’s message of January 21, 1974 in response to Government of India’s proposal contained in their aide memoire of December 31, 1973, for an exchange of delegations for discussion and implementation of the normalization measure envisaged in paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement.

2. The Government of India have noted Pakistan’s view that first it would be desirable to take up the subject of resumption of postal, telegraphic, sea and land communications between the two countries. As Pakistan is aware, the underlying objective of paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement is to progressively restore and normalize relations between the two countries. The first important step therefore is to remove the hardships faced by thousands of people in both countries due to the lack of communications and travel facilities. It follows, logically, that discussions should not only deal with resumption of postal and telegraphic links and sea and land communications but also result in re-establishing air links including over flights between the two countries. It would be mutually beneficial to the airlines of the two countries to resume over flights on a reciprocal basis so that long detours could be avoided. Apart from these considerations, it may be mentioned that all these items are contained in paragraph 3(i) and (ii) of the Simla Agreement and it would be appropriate to take up the subject of communications and travel as a whole. It would seem that without simultaneous agreement on resumption of travel facilities, restoration of some forms of communications while leaving out others, as suggested by Pakistan, would have little practical utility.

3. On hearing from the Government of Pakistan further, India would be glad to send an appropriate delegation to Pakistan on a mutually convenient date in March to discuss all the items mentioned in paragraphs 3(i) and (ii) of the Simla Agreement.

0828. Summary Record Note of discussion between Joint Secretary (Pak) Ministry of External Affairs and Swiss Ambassador on the question of Indian pre-war detainees in Pakistani jails.

New Delhi, February 7, 1974.

The Swiss Ambassador called on J. S (Pak) at 4.45 p.m. on Thursday, the 7th February, 1974 and handed over a report prepared by the representative of the Swiss Embassy in Islamabad on his visit to the 50 Indian pre-war detainees located at Lakpat jail (Lahore). The Swiss Ambassador indicated that the Swiss Embassy’s representative in Pakistan would shortly be visiting another one hundred Indian pre-war detainees presumably at Lahore itself.

On examining the above-mentioned report, J. S (Pak) observed that it was clear from the visit report that the Swiss Embassy representative had not been allowed to visit all the Indian pre-war detainees located at Kot Lakhpat Jail (Lahore) since none of the 50 on whom reports had been submitted was held for security offences. Pakistan thus seem to be making a distinction between pre-war detainees held for security offences and those held for other offences.
JS (Pak) felt that it was imperative that the Swiss Representatives should be allowed to meet all the Indian pre-war detainees in Pakistan irrespective of the charges on which they were held. While the question of exchange of Indian and Pakistani pre-war detainees was being examined at a high level between the two Governments, it was essential that rapid progress should be made in the preparation of verified lists of Indian and Pakistani pre-war detainees on the basis of visits to all of them by the representatives of the Swiss Embassies in the two countries.

Accordingly, JS(Pak) requested the Swiss Ambassador that on the same pattern as India was allowing the Swiss Embassy’s representatives to visit all Pakistani pre-war detainees in India, Govt. of Pakistan should be requested to ensure that all Indian pre-war detainees were visited by Swiss Embassy’s representatives in Pakistan on a reciprocal basis, JS(Pak) agreed to the Swiss Ambassador’s suggestion that an aide-memoire on this matter should be handed over to him as this would strengthen his hands.

0829. Aide Memoire of the Government of India on the pre-war Indian detainees in Pakistani jails.

New Delhi, February 8, 1974.

AIDE MEMOIRE

In the recent correspondence exchanged between His Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi, Pakistan Foreign Secretary and Shri Kewal Singh, Indian Foreign Secretary, an understanding had been reached that representatives of the Swiss Missions in India and Pakistan would be permitted to visit pre-war detainees in various jails in the two countries so that they could prepare verified lists of the actual number of persons of this category who are in detention. It was considered essential to do so in view of the need for reconciling conflicting estimates put up by the two sides. While agreeing to this proposal it was of course understood that the Swiss representatives will be permitted to visit all pre-war detainees irrespective of whether or not they had been charged with security offences. It need hardly be emphasised that the task entrusted to the Swiss representatives in the two countries is that in accordance with their consular functions they should be enabled to locate and identify the actual existence of respective nationals under detention. This task can hardly be fulfilled to the entire satisfaction of the two countries, if some of the prisoners are not allowed to be met by the Swiss representatives on the ground that they are charged with security offences.

India on its part has been facilitating the Swiss representative to meet all the Pakistani prisoners in a jail which is visited, irrespective of the nature of charges against individual prisoners. This will be borne out by an examination of the reports furnished by the Swiss Embassy representative on the 98 Pakistani pre-war detainees met by them so far. From the visit report on the Kot Lakhpat jail (Lahore) furnished to India by the Swiss Embassy in New Delhi on 7th February 1974 it appears that only those Indian pre-war detainees who were not charged with security offences have been allowed to be met by the Swiss representative.

If this impression is correct, the Government of India would urge the Government of Pakistan to reconsider this matter carefully in the light of the reasons cited above and to issue necessary instructions to its jail authorities so that the Swiss representative is allowed to interview all Indian detainees, irrespective of the offences with which they are charged.

New Delhi, February 12, 1974.

The Embassy of Switzerland, Pakistan Affairs Division, presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India and has the honour to communicate to the Ministry the following Note Verbal, dated February 9, 1974, received from the Government of Pakistan:

"The following message may be conveyed to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India:

Islamabad, February 9, 1974.

BEGINS

As the Government of India is aware, representatives of the Swiss Embassy are in the process of visiting the nationals of India and Pakistan detained in the other country. On humanitarian considerations and in order to start the process of release and repatriation, the Government of Pakistan proposes to the Government of India that the detainees visited to date by the representatives of the Swiss Embassy be released and repatriated forthwith by the two countries on the basis of reciprocity. The Government of Pakistan is hopeful that this process would then continue until all such detainees in either country have been released and repatriated.

New Delhi, February 14, 1974.

Embassy of Switzerland

The Embassy of Switzerland presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India and has the honour to communicate to the Ministry the following Aide-memoire, dated February 12, 1974, received from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan:

BEGINSS

AIDE MEMOIRE

Islamabad, February 12, 1974.

“Reference is made to the message dated 25th January 1974 from the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, on the subject of exchange of delegations for discussion and implementation of the normalisation measures envisaged in Para 3 of the Simla Agreement.

2. The Government of Pakistan have noted the Indian view that the question of over-flights should be discussed simultaneously with talks on resumption of postal, telegraphic, sea and land communications.

3. The Government of Pakistan is prepared to separately discuss the restoration of over-flights and settlement of the case pending before the ICAO Council. However, since this subject may require prolonged discussion, it should not be allowed to impede progress on the other normalisation measures on which agreement can be reached expeditiously.

4. The Government of Pakistan, therefore, reiterate its invitation to the Government of India to send a delegation to Pakistan on a mutually convenient date in March 1974, in order to discuss, in the first instance, the restoration of postal, telegraphic, sea and land communications.”

EMBASSY OF SWITZERLAND

The Embassy of Switzerland presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India and has the honour to communicate to the Ministry the following Aide-memoire, dated February 13, 1974, received from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan:

BEGINS

AIDE MEMOIRE

“Reference is made to the Ministry of External Affairs Aide-memoire dated 8th February 1974 regarding visits by the representatives of the Swiss Embassy to pre-war detainees in the two countries.

2. The impression that the Swiss representatives may not be permitted to visit Indian detainees of certain categories is based on a misunderstanding. The Government of Pakistan clarify that the Swiss Embassy representative will be permitted to visit all Indian pre-war detainees in Pakistan irrespective of the charge on which they were detained.

3. The Indian detainees are in the process of being shifted to Lahore prison pending agreement on repatriation. The 50 visited by the Swiss Embassy representative constituted only the first batch of such detainees. Another visit by the Swiss Embassy representative will be arranged after the Islamic Summit to all the remaining Indian detainees in Lahore Prison. Thereafter, visits would also be arranged to all other prisons from which such detainees have not till that time been transferred to Lahore.

4. It is reiterated that the decision of the Government of Pakistan to allow visits by the Swiss Embassy representative is without any reservations and applies to all pre-war detainees irrespective the nature of charges against them.”

Reference is made to the message dated 14th February 1974 from the Ministry of Foreign affairs, Government of Pakistan on the subject of exchange of delegations for discussion and implementation of the normalization measures envisaged in paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement.

2. The Government of India observe from Pakistan’s reply that Pakistan is in principle not against the idea of commencing talks on resumption of communication facilities mentioned in item (i) of paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement but wishes to relegate discussion on the restoration of air links and over flights to a later date. In India’s view it does not stand to reason that a discussion of the item mentioned in the Simla Agreement, namely, “air links including over flights” has to be tied up with the settlement of the ICAO case. The ICAO case is a separate issue and if Pakistan Government so desires discussion on this case can be taken up separately. However, it is only logical that discussion for the resumption of air links including over lights should commence along with the discussion in paragraph 3 (i) of the Simla Agreement. On all these matters it would be necessary to work out new agreement so that a fresh start can be made for resuming normal traffic between the two countries in line with the objectives of the Simla agreement.

3. If Pakistan is agreeable to this suggestion, Government of India can send a suitable delegation to Pakistan to discuss the resumption of communications, postal, telegraphic, sea, land including border posts, and air-links including over flights. It will be understood that the case pending before the ICAO Council will be the subject matter of a separate discussion at a later date, as desired by Pakistan.

4. At the same time Government of India would wish to reiterate its view that mere restoration of communication facilities without simultaneous agreement of resumption of travel between the two countries would have little practical utility. For this reason it is hoped that Pakistan would also be prepared to commence discussions on resumption of travel between the two countries even while the discussions on restoration of communications are continuing. For this purpose the Government of India would be glad to extend an invitation to a delegation from Pakistan to visit India in the second half of April 1974 to discuss arrangements for resumption of travel including the review and rationalization of Indo-Pakistan visa Rules.

New Delhi
February 25, 1974.

discussions on these items have met with one excuse after another from Pakistan. In 1973, Pakistan argued that the question of prisoners of war should be settled first. When India and Bangladesh found a via-media in the form of the Joint Declaration of April 1973, Pakistan produced further complications by refusing to accept its responsibility towards its own nationals in Bangladesh, who had opted for Pakistan. After painstaking negotiations, a solution was found in the Delhi Agreement to which Pakistan became a party. After the signing of the Delhi Agreement in August 1973, and particularly after the three-way repatriation process had begun in September 1973, there was little excuse left for Pakistan to continue dragging its feet on the question of resuming communications, travel, etc., with India. However, when India took the initiative on 31st December 1973, to remind Pakistan that discussions could now commence for implementing the normalisation measures visualised in paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement, a limited and rather illogical response was received from Pakistan on 19th January, 1974. Pakistan wanted discussions to be limited only to resumption of postal and telegraphic, sea and land communications omitting air links and over flights from the item mentioned in the Simla Agreement. India pointed out this omission in its communication to Pakistan of 25th January and suggested that not only there should be talks to resume all forms of communications including air links and over-flights but that resumption of communications should go hand-in-hand with resumption of travel, which was also included in paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement.

3. Pakistan argued in its rejoinder of 12th February that discussions for the resumption of over flights should be left to a later date as settlement of the case pending before the ICAO would require ‘prolonged discussions’. India in its latest Aide Memoire of 25th February has suggested that if Pakistan so desires a discussion of the case pending before the ICAO can be taken up separately, but that there was no reason nor justification for tying up this case with the discussion on the resumption of air links including over flights, an item which figures in the Simla Agreement. What is required at this stage is to work out fresh Agreements on all forms of communications including air links and over flights and for this purpose India is prepared to send a delegation to Pakistan. It is further reiterated in India’s reply that mere restoration of communication facilities without simultaneous agreement on resumption of travel between the two countries would have little practical utility. For this purpose, Government of India extended an invitation to Pakistan to send a delegation to Delhi in the second half of April 1974 to discuss arrangements for resumption of travel including the review and rationalization of Indo-Pakistan Visa Rules.

4. It is felt that if Pakistan Government is at all sincere about improving relations with India, it should accept India’s reasonable offer. Otherwise, the conclusion will have to be drawn that the Bhutto Government is more interested in a symbolic re-establishment of diplomatic relations with India while obstructing talks on the resumption of communications, travel and trade. In December 1973, Mr. Bhutto himself took a hand in trying to create public opinion in India in favour of resumption of diplomatic relations to the exclusion of everything else. Several Indian journalists were invited to Pakistan and given interviews by Mr. Bhutto. Some of these journalists unfortunately fell for this line, and on return indulged in a press campaign advocating that Pakistan’s ‘offer’ should be accepted. Pakistan Government is also briefing third countries in the same way.

5. In the circumstances, Mr. Bhutto’s proposal for a symbolic re-establishment of diplomatic relations, without implementing normalization measures, has to be examined carefully. The following considerations are important from India’s point of view:

(a) Without agreement on the resumption of communications, civil aviation, travel and trade, the re-establishment of a diplomatic mission in Pakistan will have little practical utility beyond its acting as a post office, for exchange of messages. This need is not felt as since the Simla Agreement, an Army ‘hot-line’ has been in existence between Delhi and Islamabad which is frequently used. In fact, frequent messages are being exchanged between the Foreign Minister and Mr. Aziz Ahmed as well as between the two Foreign Offices;

(b) There is little reason for India to set up a mission in Pakistan with second class rights, shorn of normal facilities open to all other Missions, on the erroneous plea by Pakistan that due to bad relations communications, trade and travel cannot be resumed. Obviously, new agreements have to be worked out before hand on all these items for which discussions have to begin between the two Governments. The presence or absence of a diplomatic mission is hardly material for this purpose. Frequent talks have taken place between the two sides at various levels, in the last two years, without any difficulty;

(c) Without establishment or even a beginning of normality in relations between the two countries, opening of Missions in the two countries will only create a false sense of normality. Once these agreements on communications, travel, trade and cultural exchanges have been signed, resumption of diplomatic relations can take place on a firm basis and a fresh start can be given to Indo-Pak relations, in accordance with the objectives of the Simla Agreement. Besides, resumption of abovementioned measures will benefit Pakistan equally and
(d) Our experience of dealing with Mr. Bhutto in the last two years has shown that a policy of firmness and patience pays dividend, ultimately. This has been amply demonstrated in the negotiations and the implementation of the Delhi Agreement. Again, on the Recognition issue, the firm attitude adopted by Bangladesh and India leading to Pakistan’s unconditional recognition of Bangladesh, also provides an object lesson. We have, therefore, to wait a while for signs of a genuine desire on the part of Pakistan to normalize relations with India.

Yours sincerely

0835. Aide Memoire from the Embassy of Switzerland to the Ministry of External Affairs transmitting a message dated March 1, 1974 from the Prime Minister of Pakistan Z. A. Bhutto.

New Delhi, March 21, 1974.

Embassy of Switzerland

Aide-Memoire

The Embassy of Switzerland transmits herewith the following message, dated 1st March, 1974, received through Swiss diplomatic channels on March 20, 1974, only - from the Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan with the request that it may be communicated to Her Excellency Mrs. Indira Gandhi, Prime Minister of the Republic of India.

BEGINS

*Dear Madame,

I (Prime Minister Pakistan) wanted to write to you earlier, but could not do so owing to both your pre-occupations and mine. I am writing now at a time when the evolution in the subcontinent has provided me much cause for satisfaction. Opinion in Pakistan developed in such a way as to enable my Government to extend formal recognition to Bangladesh without causing any strife or confusion. This would not have been possible if the bulk of the prisoners of war had not been repatriated. The Islamic Summit Conference also contributed to the establishment of a climate of reconciliation.
I am looking forward to the consolidation of this progress to the benefit of all at the tripartite meetings scheduled to be held in New Delhi from April 5th. The return to their homes of 195 prisoners of war should remove the last remaining obstacle to the normalization of relations between Pakistan and India and between Pakistan and Bangladesh. This could pave the way for such improvement for the relations of the three countries as would make an eligible impact on the consciousness of their peoples.

We on our part have no inhibition against any of the various steps envisaged in the Simla Agreement. I believe that after agreement is reached on the release and repatriation of 195 prisoners of war, we will be able to consider measures for accelerating the process of normalization.

You must doubtless have been informed of the deliberations of the Summit Conference. The Lahore declaration proclaims the identification of the Muslim World with the joint struggle of the peoples of Asia, Africa and Latin America for a juster economic dispensation. The Arab cause, of course, received emphatic support in the context of the larger struggle for peace with justice. But the creative nature of the present historic situation and the opportunities it offers for the third world to construct an equitable world order, in place of the existing imbalance, was also one of the Conference’s dominant themes.

With kind regards and best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

Sig.

Zulfikar Ali Bhutto"
ENDS.
Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

Thank you for your message dated 18th March. As you know, we have warmly welcomed your Government’s action in accordign formal recognition to Bangladesh. This has cleared the way for the promotion of a friendly and harmonious relationship amongst all the countries of the sub-continent - an objective towards which my colleagues and I shall continue to direct our sincere efforts.

The immediate outcome of the recognition of Bangladesh has been the convening of the tripartite meeting in accordance with the Delhi Agreement. I earnestly hope that this meeting will be successful in resolving the remaining problems mentioned in the Delhi Agreement so that the atmosphere is further improved for greater understanding, goodwill and cooperation between the three countries. We shall try our utmost to contribute to the success of this tripartite meeting although it is the wisdom and mutual understanding of Pakistan and Bangladesh which can bring about the happy solution of the pending issues.

I am glad to know that your Government is not against implementing the various steps envisaged in the Simla Agreement, to bring about the normalization of relations between our two countries. As you are aware, we have already suggested to your Government an exchange of delegations to begin discussions on the resumption of all forms of communications and travel. These discussions are envisaged in the Simla Agreement and are not in any way tied up with the issues which are to figure in the tripartite meeting. Therefore, talks between India and Pakistan on these matters can begin at any time convenient to both sides. We feel it would be desirable and necessary to work out fresh agreements in the field of tele-communications, civil aviation, travel, trade etc., as many of these items have remained suspended since 1965 and circumstances have changed since then. Such agreements cannot but be beneficial to the interests of Pakistan and India. It is unfortunate that in the past these matters have been viewed with a certain reserve and mistrust; this is all the more reason that we should try to break away from this sad legacy so that future generation can look forward to an area of peace and harmonious relation between our two countries.

I am glad to note that in the Declaration issued at the conclusion of the Islamic Summit Conference in Lahore, the participating countries have identified themselves with the joint struggle of the peoples of Asia, Africa and Latin America for social and economic development. This is in the fitness of things because economic issues are now of prime importance to all developing nations, whatever their religious affiliations. As you know, the non-aligned summit had also placed emphasis on bringing about cooperation between nations for a more equitable distribution of the world’s economic wealth and resources.

I am sure that the forthcoming Special Session of the U.N. General Assembly which is to study the problem of raw materials and development must be engaging your Government’s attention. Since our two countries have been affected more or less in the same manner by the current economic crisis which is a world-wide phenomenon, it would be desirable for our respective delegations at the General Assembly Session to cooperate with each other, and with the delegations of other developing countries to formulate a common approach.

With regards,

Yours sincerely,
(Sd)

Indira Gandhi.

His Excellency
Mr. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto,
Prime Minister of Pakistan, Islamabad.

0837. Tripartite Agreement signed by Mr. Kamal Hossain, Minister of Foreign Affairs for Bangladesh, Sardar Swaran Singh, Minister of External Affairs for India and Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs for Pakistan.

New Delhi, April 9, 1974.

On July 2, 1972, the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India signed an historic agreement at Simla under which they resolved that “the two countries put an end to the conflict and confrontation that have hitherto marred their relations and work for the promotion of a friendly and harmonious relationship and the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent.” The Agreement also provided for the settlement of “their differences by peaceful means through bilateral negotiations or by any other peaceful means mutually agreed upon.”
2. Bangladesh welcomed the Simla Agreement. The Prime Minister of Bangladesh strongly supported its objective of reconciliation, good neighbourliness and establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent.

3. The humanitarian problems arising in the wake of the tragic events of 1971 constituted a major obstacle in the way of reconciliation and normalisation among the countries of the sub-continent. In the absence of recognition, it was not possible to have tripartite talks to settle the humanitarian problems as Bangladesh could not participate in such a meeting except on the basis of sovereign equality.

4. On April 17, 1973, India and Bangladesh took a major step forward to break the deadlock on the humanitarian issues by setting aside the political problem of recognition. In a Declaration issued on that date they said that they “are resolved to continue their efforts to reduce tension, promote friendly and harmonious relationship in the sub-continent and work together towards the establishment of a durable peace.” Inspired by this vision and “in the larger interests of reconciliation, peace and stability in the sub-continent” they jointly proposed that the problem of the detained and stranded persons should be resolved on humanitarian considerations through simultaneous repatriation of all such persons except those Pakistani prisoners of war who might be required by the Government of Bangladesh for trial on certain charges.

5. Following the Declaration there were a series of talks between India and Bangladesh and India and Pakistan. These talks resulted in an agreement at Delhi on August 28, 1973 between India and Pakistan with the concurrence of Bangladesh which provided for a solution of the outstanding humanitarian problems.

6. In pursuance of this Agreement, the process of three-way repatriation commenced on September 19, 1973. So far nearly 300,000 persons have been repatriated which has generated an atmosphere of reconciliation and paved the way for normalisation of relations in the sub-continent.

7. In February 1974, recognition took place thus facilitating the participation of Bangladesh in the tripartite meeting envisaged in the Delhi Agreement, on the basis of sovereign equality. Accordingly, His Excellency, Dr. Kamal Husain, Foreign Minister of the Government of Bangladesh, His Excellency Sardar Swaran Singh, Minister of External Affairs, Government of India and His Excellency, Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan, met in New Delhi from April 5 to April 9, 1974 and discussed the various issues mentioned in the Delhi Agreement, in particular the question of the 195 prisoners of war and the completion of the three-way process of repatriation involving Bangalees in Pakistan, Pakistanis in Bangladesh and Pakistani prisoners of war in India.

8. The Ministers reviewed the progress of the three way repatriation under the Delhi Agreement of August 28, 1973. They were gratified that such a large number of persons detained or stranded in the three countries had since reached their destinations.

9. The Ministers also considered steps that needed to be taken in order expeditiously to bring the process of the three-way repatriation to a satisfactory conclusion.

10. The Indian side stated that the remaining Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees in India to be repatriated under the Delhi Agreement, numbering approximately 6,500, would be repatriated at the usual pace of a train on alternate days and the likely short-fall due to the suspension of trains from April 10 to April 19, 1974, on account of Kumbh Mela, would be made up by running additional trains after April 19. It was thus hoped that the repatriation of prisoners of war would be completed by the end of April, 1974.

11. The Pakistan side stated that the repatriation of Bangladesh nationals from Pakistan was approaching completion. The remaining Bangladesh nationals in Pakistan would also be repatriated without let or hindrance.

12. In respect of non-Bangalees in Bangladesh, the Pakistan side stated that the Government of Pakistan had already issued clearances for movement to Pakistan in favour of those non-Bangalees who were either domiciled in former West Pakistan, were employees of the Central Government and their families or were members of the divided families, irrespective of their original domicile. The issuance of clearances to 25,000 persons who constitute hardship cases was also in progress. The Pakistan side reiterated that all those who fall under the first three categories would be received by Pakistan without any limit as to numbers. In respect of persons whose applications had been rejected, the Government of Pakistan would, upon request, provide reasons why any particular case was rejected. Any aggrieved applicant could, at any time, seek a review of his application provided he was able to supply new facts or further information to the Government of Pakistan in support of his contention that he qualified in one or other of the three categories. The claims of such persons would not be timebarred. In the event of the decision of review of a case being adverse the Governments of Pakistan and Bangladesh might seek to resolve it by mutual consultation.

13. The question of 195 Pakistani prisoners of war was discussed by the three Ministers, in the context of the earnest desire of the Governments for reconciliation, peace and friendship in the sub-continent. The Foreign Minister of Bangladesh stated that the excesses and manifold crimes committed by these prisoners of war constituted, according to the relevant provisions of the U.N. General Assembly Resolutions and International Law, war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide, and that there was universal consensus that persons charged with such crimes as the 195 Pakistani prisoners of war should be held to account and subjected to the due process of law. The Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs of the Government of Pakistan said that his Government condemned and deeply regretted any crimes that may have been committed.

14. In this connection the three Ministers noted that the matter should be viewed in the context of the determination of the three countries to continue resolutely to work for reconciliation. The Ministers further noted that following recognition, the Prime Minister of Pakistan had declared that he would visit Bangladesh in response to the invitation of the Prime Minister of Bangladesh and appealed to the people of Bangladesh to forgive and forget the mistakes of the past, in order promote reconciliation. Similarly, the Prime Minister of Bangladesh, had declared with regard to the atrocities and destruction committed in Bangladesh in 1971, that he wanted the people to forget the past and to make a fresh start, stating that the people, of Bangladesh knew how to forgive.

15. In the light of the foregoing and, in particular, having regard to the appeal of the Prime Minister of Pakistan to the people of Bangladesh to forgive and forget the mistakes of the past, the Foreign Minister of Bangladesh stated that the Government of Bangladesh had decided not to proceed with the trials as an act of clemency. It was agreed that the 195 prisoners of war may be repatriated to Pakistan along with the other prisoners of war now in the process of repatriation under the Delhi Agreement.

16. The Ministers expressed their conviction that the above agreements provide a firm basis for the resolution of the humanitarian problems arising out of the conflict of 1971. They reaffirmed the vital stake the seven hundred million people of the three countries have in peace and progress and reiterated the resolve of their Governments to work for the promotion of normalization of relations and the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent.

Signed in New Delhi on April 9, 1974, in three originals, each of which is equally authentic.

[The Agreement has been signed by Kamal Hossain for Bangladesh, Swaran Singh for India and Aziz Ahmed for Pakistan.]

New Delhi, 9 April 1974

The Minister of External Affairs, Government of India, and the Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, examined the question of the nationals of either country detained in the other prior to the conflict of 1971. They agreed that this was a humanitarian question which should be settled quickly with a view to alleviating the suffering of the hundreds of individuals involved and their families.

2. With this objective in view, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan

Have Agreed as follows:

(i) All nationals of either country detained in the other prior to the conflict of 1971 shall be released and repatriated, irrespective of the charges on which they are detained, with the maximum possible dispatch but in no case later than 14th August, 1974. After that date, neither country shall continue to detain any national of the other who was arrested prior to the conflict of 1971.

(ii) The process of release and repatriation shall commence without waiting for the compilation of complete lists of such detainees. The detainees so far visited by the representatives of the Swiss Missions, shall be repatriated forthwith. The remaining detainees shall similarly be released and repatriated after they are located by the representatives of the Swiss Mission in either country:

(iii) The two Governments shall give extensive publicity to this Agreement in the Press and over the Radio and bring it to the attention of the Governments of their States/Provinces and of the authorities in charge of all jails, prisons and detention centers for immediate compliance.

(iv) Each Government shall provide all necessary facilities to the delegation of the International Committee of the Red Cross to trace those of the pre-war detainees who are still reported to be missing after 14th August 1974.

(v) If a detainee claims to be the national of the country in which he is detained, his case shall be investigated and decided by mutual agreement between the two governments.
Pending their release and repatriation, all detainees shall be treated with humanity and consideration.

This Agreement shall enter into force on signature.

0839. Joint Communique issued on the review of the progress of the process of normalization with Pakistan.

New Delhi, April 9, 1974.

During the presence of His Excellency Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, and his delegation in New Delhi from April 5 to April 9, 1974, it was decided by mutual consent to review the progress in the implementation of the Simla Agreement.

The two Ministers agreed that since the signing of the Simla Agreement, there had been steady progress towards the realisation of its objectives. They reiterated the resolve of the two countries to settle their differences in accordance with the provisions of the Simla Agreement. It was agreed that the time had come for exchange of delegations to discuss the implementation of normalisation measures envisaged in paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement.

Discussions would commence shortly for working out fresh agreements, where necessary for the resumption of postal and telecommunication links, restoration of travel facilities, particularly for pilgrims on a priority basis. Steps would also be taken progressively to implement other measures mentioned in paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement.

On the question of military and para military personnel the two countries reported missing, following the conflict of 1971, it was agreed that, in this purely humanitarian matter, further efforts should be made to locate them. In this regard the two countries will afford necessary facilities to the Tracing Agency of the International Committee of the Red Cross.

The two Ministers signed an agreement for the release and repatriation of all nationals of either country detained in the other prior to the conflict of 1971.

SECRET

Extract from the Record of External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh’s meeting with the U. S. Secretary of State Dr. Henry A. Kissinger,

New York, April 15, 1974.

FM (Swaran Singh) had about an hour’s meeting with Dr. Kissinger at the latter's suite in Waldorf Towers, New York, on 15th April 1974 from 6.30 to 7.30 p.m. Ambassador Kaul and Ambassador Sen were also present on our side. On the other side, Mr. Atherton, Assistant Secretary of State, and Mr.
Harold Saunders, Special Assistant to Dr. Kissinger, were also present. Mrs.
Kissinger joined for about 10 minutes. FM congratulated her on her marriage and invited her to visit India with her husband. She thanked FM and said that she was greatly looking forward to visiting India, as she had never been there before.

FM told Dr. Kissinger that June would be hot in Delhi and Kashmir would be very cool. Dr. Kissinger replied half humorously and half seriously “If I go to Kashmir, I will infuriate three countries. I have never been there, but I have heard it is one of the most beautiful places in the world. I have been in Delhi, Bombay, Ahmedabad and Jaipur before, but that was in January. I also saw the Ajanta and Ellora caves which impressed me deeply. He said that he could not spend more than 3 days in India - perhaps 2 days in Delhi and one in Agra and Khajuraho. His wife would naturally want to see Agra. FM warned that Khajuraho would be hot in June. Mrs. Kissinger thought she could stand dry heat but not humid heat. After further pleasantries Mrs. Kissinger excused herself. The following conversation then ensued.

Dr. Kissinger: Your Ambassador has been very active and very effective.
Sometimes he employs terror tactics. What I mean is he threatens that he wants concrete results and not merely sweet words and thus he puts me under moral pressure.

FM: I am glad our relations are definitely improving slowly and steadily. Both sides are doing everything possible and there is a turn for the better.

The general situation in our parts of the world has also improved and is contributing to the improvement of relations. A war that should never have taken place, did take place, but we took initiatives to re-establish peace and stabilise it.

Dr. Kissinger: We were very pleased with your efforts in arriving at the recent agreement.

FM: It was not easy, but paved the way for cooperation and normalisation. Recognition of Bangladesh by Pakistan paved the way for the recent meeting, though recognition was delayed too long. If it had come earlier, this meeting could also have taken place earlier. Prime Minister Bhutto is fond of choosing dramatic moments for such things and he chose the Islamic summit meeting to announce his recognition.

Dr. Kissinger: Perhaps he did so to make it domestically easier for him.

FM: I am not so sure. In Simla, when Ambassador Kaul was also present, Mr. Bhutto told us he could and should have recognised Bangladesh in early 1972 but he did not do so. He creates dramatic situations and then tries to solve them in a dramatic manner. That is his style and we are getting used to it. However, Bangladesh was very generous in agreeing to give up the trial of 195 POWs against whom feelings were very strong among the people of Bangladesh.

Dr. Kissinger: I must say I did not think in 1971 that Bangladesh would muster the wisdom that it has shown.

FM: Well, within 3 months all prisoners of war will be repatriated.

Dr. Kissinger: What is the progress about the others? - The Bengalis in Pakistan and Biharis in Bangladesh.

FM: 84,000 prisoners of war have gone back. Almost all Bengalis in Pakistan who wanted to go to Bangladesh numbering about 124,000 have gone to Bangladesh. There may be about 2000 or 3000 left, but the Pakistanis in Bangladesh are still there in large numbers. They worked for Pakistan during 1971 and called themselves Pakistanis and want to go to Pakistan, but the Pakistan Government is resisting. Bangladesh did not make an issue of this and only stuck to the categories which Pakistan had agreed to take back previously, and asked for a review of the question, joint consultations, etc.
Then there is the other matter of the meeting between the Prime Ministers of Bangladesh and Pakistan to decide how many additional numbers of Pakistanis in Bangladesh will be taken by Pakistan.

Dr. Kissinger: Pakistan is not keen to take them back.

FM: No, that is what makes Bangladesh suspicious, that Pakistan wants to leave them behind in Bangladesh as a sort of fifth column.

Dr. Kissinger: It would not be in the interests of Pakistan to start trouble again in Bangladesh. I talked to the Chinese. They plan to recognise Bangladesh and be very active there - not necessarily in a constructive way, but against India. Whatever our views were in 1971, now that Bangladesh exists, we want to contribute to stability on the sub-continent. We recognise that close and friendly relations between India and Bangladesh are important for peace and stability in the sub-continent, whatever Chinese interests and policy may be.

FM: The Chinese are keen to come soon to Bangladesh. They want to exploit the internal situation there - economic, political, etc. against India.

Dr. Kissinger: That is the impression I got from them. The Chinese expressed sympathy for the people of Bangladesh and thus win them over.

FM: There are some pro-Chinese elements in Bangladesh, and China will use their presence to embarrass Bangladesh Government and India, but we have to live with that problem. I agree with you that Indian and US interests in Bangladesh are the same.

Dr. Kissinger: They are parallel. We have no interests in reviving the controversy of 2 years ago. It had nothing to do with Bangladesh, but was linked to our policy towards China and the Middle East. We want democracy and freedom to flourish in Bangladesh and India.

FM: You may have heard of the extreme pro-Chinese Communists called Naxalites. They originated from a place called Naxalbari in West Bengal, close to Bangladesh. Naxalites in Bangladesh and in West Bengal are working in close cooperation. There have been political assassinations in Bangladesh. There is also economic difficulty. There is the problem of food shortage. They have not received anything by way of their share of the assets of undivided Pakistan.

Dr. Kissinger: Do you think I should go to Bangladesh for a day or so from Delhi? They have invited me. I suspect your Ambassador perhaps put them up to it!
Ambassador: I certainly did not, but they were making anxious enquiries.

Dr. Kissinger: Should I go to Bangladesh?

FM: That is for you to decide.

As you may recall, we had over 300,000 troops in Bangladesh during the conflict, but they left in less than 3 months, although the Bangladesh Government wanted them to stay on for reasons of internal instability etc. We did not wish to get involved in the internal affairs of Bangladesh.

Dr. Kissinger: That was very wise. If you had stayed longer, you might have antagonised Bangladesh.

FM: Bangladesh Government did want us to stay on, but we did not want it. We did not want to influence them in any way. Even in the recent talks, we only played a mature friendly and cooperative role and encouraged Pakistan and Bangladesh Foreign Ministers to sort out and resolve their differences among themselves though we know China and Pakistan will try to exploit circles in Bangladesh, which are unfriendly to us, we there not surprised by this. China is already next door to us. So we are fully prepared for it. It won’t come as a surprise to us.

New Delhi, April 27, 1974.

Dear Mr. Agha Shahi,

You would kindly recall that during the bilateral discussions between our Foreign Ministers, earlier this month, the question of further implementation of normalisation measures envisaged in paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement, had come up. The Joint Communiqué issued at the end of these talks reflects our agreement that “discussions would commence shortly for working out fresh agreements, where necessary, for the resumption of postal and telecommunication links, restoration of travel facilities, particularly for pilgrims on priority basis”.

2. As hopes have been raised in both countries for early movement towards normalisation, you would agree that we should now give practical shape to this idea and fix a date when the delegations can meet.

3. You would recall that in our Aide Memoire of 25th February we had proposed sending a delegation to Pakistan to discuss the resumption of communications, postal, telegraphic, sea, land including border posts and air links including over flights. However, regarding resumption of air links including over flights, Mr. Aziz Ahmed had said after the discussion with Sardar Swaran Singh that he would ask your Civil Aviation authorities whether resumption of air links and over flights can be discussed separately from the case pending before the ICAO, as proposed by us.

4. In the same Aide Memoire we had also invited a delegation from Pakistan to visit Delhi for reviewing and rationalizing the Indo-Pakistan Visa Rules, in preparation for resumption of travel. However, in view of the subsequent discussion at Delhi, we will be prepared to send a composite delegation to Pakistan comprising officials from the concerned technical Ministries and the Foreign Office, in the second half of May. On hearing from you further we can agree to a mutually convenient date when our delegation can visit Islamabad.

5. We presume by now you would have consulted your Civil Aviation authorities and would have taken a decision whether the item pertaining to resumption of air links including over flights can be discussed separately, from the case pending before the ICAO. If so, kindly let us know your views to enable us to take a decision in this matter.

Yours sincerely,

Islamabad, May 9, 1974.

Dear Mr. Kewal Singh,

Before I received your message of April 27, we were already in touch with the authorities concerned of the Government of Pakistan in connection with the discussion Pakistan and India had agreed to commence in order to work out fresh agreements, where necessary, for the resumption of postal telecommunication links and restoration of travel activities, particularly for pilgrims. I am happy to extend an invitation on behalf of the Government of Pakistan to the Government of India to send a delegation to Pakistan in the second half of May. We suggest that the talks begin on Wednesday May 22, 1974 in Islamabad.

2. Kindly confirm if the suggested date is convenient to the Government of India. Also please let us know the composition of the Delegation. Its members will be the guests of the Government of Pakistan during their stay here.

3. As for the over-flights case pending before the International Civil Aviation Organization and resumption of air-links between Pakistan and India, we are still consulting with the concerned authorities. As soon as these consultations have been completed, we shall inform the Government of India.

Yours sincerely

NEW DELHI, MAY 14, 1974.

Dear Mr. Agha Shahi,

Thank you for your message of May 9 suggesting that talks might begin on Wednesday May 22 at Islamabad to implement some of the steps envisaged in paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement.

2. While we look forward to commencing these talks, I am afraid, the date suggested by you does not suit me as I will be in London at that time in connection with the meeting of senior officials of the Commonwealth countries. On my return I will have to fulfill an existing commitment which will keep me busy till the end of the first week of June. Therefore, with the best of intentions the earliest we could visit Islamabad will be between June 7 to June 15. You may kindly let me know a date convenient* to you during that period when we should arrive in Islamabad.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

( Kewal Singh )

Mr. Agha Shahi,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of Foreign Affairs,
Government of Pakistan, Islamabad.

* In reply Mr. Shahi on May 15 confirmed June 10 for the start of the talks.
I was planning to write to you when reports of your recent statement in Lahore regarding India’s peaceful nuclear explosion test were brought to my notice. I am sorry that you should have assumed in spite of our categorical declarations that the nuclear test which our scientists have conducted entirely for developing nuclear technology for peaceful and economic uses somehow poses a threat to Pakistan’s security.

Our Foreign Minister, Sardar Swaran Singh, has already made a statement but I also should like to assure you that we remain fully committed to our traditional policy of developing nuclear energy resources entirely for peaceful purposes. The recent underground nuclear experiment conducted by our scientists in no way alters this policy. The underground test was conducted in carefully controlled conditions and is designed to develop technology for various economic uses of nuclear energy. Every country has the right to develop its natural resources and this especially so at a time when the world crisis in raw materials and energy resources has demonstrated that the tapping of all forms of energy resources is essential to our survival. India has advanced sufficiently in nuclear research to develop its nuclear technology for the utilization of its indigenous resources for peaceful and economic purposes. We have entered into collaboration with several developing countries for the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

I am aware that in popular parlance a nuclear explosion evokes an awesome and horrifying picture. However this is because our minds have been conditioned by the misuse of nuclear energy for the development of weapons and by the use of these weapons in Hiroshima and Nagasaki. We in India have condemned and will, continue to condemn military uses of nuclear energy as a threat to humanity. However the development of the peaceful, use of nuclear energy rather than posing a threat provides a ray of hope for mankind faced as it is by the specter of dwindling energy resources.

It is strictly in this context that our scientists have launched on this experiment. Every care and precaution was taken to conduct the test underground in such a way as to preclude any risk of pollution or radiation hazards either to our own people or to those in neighbouring countries.

There are no political or foreign policy implications of this test. We remain committed to settle all our differences with Pakistan peacefully through bilateral negotiations in accordance with the Simla Agreement. Moreover both countries have resolved to break away from the past history of confrontation and conflict and to work to develop normal relations and establish durable peace. I am sure you will acknowledge that the agreements which have been worked out between our two countries in the last two years have been reached on the basis of absolute equality. There is no reason whatsoever to give up this healthy trend or for a change of policy on the part of either country merely because we have conducted a test for the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

You have shown statesmanship in dealing with the problems of the sub-continent. We welcome the announcement of the forthcoming meeting of the officials of our two countries to discuss matters of common interest.

0845. Aide Memoire of the Government of India regarding arrangements for the repatriation of POWs.

New Delhi, May 31, 1974.

AIDE MEMOIRE

Reference Embassy of Switzerland’s aide-memoire dated the 13th February 1974 it would be greatly appreciated if the following message could kindly be communicated to the Government of Pakistan:

BEGIN:

“Reference Government of Pakistan’s message dated 9th February 74.

In view of the fact that repatriation of POWs was invariably completed each day within two hours, the Government of India issued necessary instructions to the concerned Attari /Wagah land border check-post authorities as communicated in its message of 1st October 1973 to Government of Pakistan, to receive civil (passenger and goods) traffic from 1200 hrs IST onwards on the days of repatriation. The concerned authorities were also instructed to keep the check-post open beyond 1600 hrs IST, the normal closing time, in order to facilitate the clearing of all civil traffic coming from Pakistan to India which had reached the India check-post prior to 1600 hrs IST.

It has been ascertained by Government of India that on the days on which the POWs were repatriated, the concerned authorities kept the check post open beyond 1600 hrs. IST to facilitate clearance of civil traffic reaching it prior to its normal closing time. Naturally on other days when no POWs were repatriated there was no necessity to keep the check-post open beyond 1600 hrs. IST.

It has further been ascertained by Government of India that the Attari /Wagah land border check-post is being kept open on all days of the week till the prescribed closing time of 1600 hrs. IST and it does not close earlier at 1530 hrs. as contended by Government of Pakistan. It is possible that the contention of the Pakistan check-post authorities that the Indian check-post closes at 1530 hrs. might have arisen on account of their overlooking the time difference of 30 minutes between Indian Standard Time and Pakistan Standard Time.

In view of the foregoing, it would be apparent that the instruction issued regarding the timing during which the Attari /Wagah land border check-post was to be kept open have been followed by the concerned Indian check-post authorities. Since the repatriation of POWs has now been completed, the special facility referred to above for opening the Attari/Wagah land border check-post open beyond 1600 hrs. is no longer necessary and the Indian check post would be kept open only between 0900 hrs. and 1500 hrs. IST on all days of the week’.

0846. Message of Pakistan Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi to the Indian Foreign Secretary regarding talks on normalization.

Islamabad, June 1, 1974.

Dear Mr. Kewal Singh,

Since I wrote to you on May 17, 1974, the nuclear test conducted by India has come as a shock to the people of Pakistan and caused a serious setback to the efforts towards the normalization of relations between our two countries.

2. The Government of Pakistan is, therefore, of the view the talks for the restoration of postal and tele-communication links and travel facilities between the two countries should be deferred until such time as the atmosphere is more favourable for a constructive outcome.

Yours sincerely

0847. SECRET

Extracts from the Telegram from the Indian Ambassador in Washington T. N. Kaul to Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh regarding his meeting with US Secretary of State Dr. Henry Kissinger.

Foreign Secretary from Ambassador.

My luncheon with KISSINGER was postponed from 4th to 7th in view of visit of Prince FAHD of Saudi Arabia. I met KISSINGER at Luncheon at State Department alone today for over one hour. Following subjects were discussed:

* * * *
(3) NUCLEAR EXPERIMENT: I told him I had been re-reading his book on Nuclear and Foreign Policy published in 1957. He had predicted therein that secondary powers would be able to acquire nuclear device within a few years. He said I am not surprised that India has exploded a nuclear device I was sure India would do so sooner or later. State Department wanted to launch a campaign against India, but I had to firmly put it down and authorized issue of only a mild statement. I do not mind if India makes nuclear weapons. In fact I am sure India will do so. Why should India not make them if she has the capability, when we and other nuclear powers make them? I felt he was deliberately leading me on. I therefore categorically rejected any idea of India going in for nuclear weapons, firstly because we could not afford the luxury and secondly, because we did not feel the necessity for it as it was inconceivable that any nuclear weapon power would dare to use nuclear weapons in any future conflict. He said he was glad to hear this because he had to answer a lot of questions in the Congress where he had been for the last two days and today pleading for the aid packet. He suggested that I should also meet some Congressmen in this regard. I told him that I had already met leading Senators and some leading Congressmen and their reaction was not negative. Even New York Times which had been critical had in today’s leaderette supported aid to India in spite of nuclear test.

(5) SUB-CONTINENT: I told him that France had welcomed our nuclear experiment while reaction in third world generally had been favourable. Japan’s reaction was predictable. Canada: reaction was mainly because of their impending elections. Pakistan’s reaction was unnecessarily sharp and may be due to internal troubles of BHUTTO. I hoped that Pakistan would see the benefits of normalisation and cooperation with India. Nuclear experiment had created a very good effect internally in India and produced political confidence and stability among our neighbours vis-a-vis China and Russia. It had great potential for economic cooperation between the countries of the region including Iran and Afghanistan. KISSINGER said he was glad to hear this and he would certainly advise BHUTTO not to impede process of normalisation but to facilitate it.

I told him that it was my duty to warn that any resumption of lethal weapons to Pakistan by US would have adverse effect on the process of normalisation and adversely affect stability in the region. He said AZIZ AHMED pleaded strongly for military supplies because of alleged threat from India. We have however given no promise and have no proposal to revise our policy in this regard. We shall always consult you in such matters. However he asked me how we could justify refusal of arms supplies to Pakistan when we were getting large quantities from USSR. I told him that Pakistan’s armaments at the moment were greater than in December 1971 although she had a smaller area to defend now. India had not yet been able to replenish the arms she had lost in 1971 conflict. We had two fronts to look after while Pakistan had only one. I could give him details of Pakistan’s armaments if he so desired. He said it would be good for us to talk to Pakistan in this regard and may be it would be possible for the two to agree on reduction of armaments along their common border. He accepted India’s need for armaments on the Sino—Indian borders.

(6) BANGLADESH: I told him that we had signed some useful agreements with Bangladesh recently and if only Pakistan would agree to the process of normalisation we could safeguard the sub-continent against instability and foreign intervention. I asked him if he thought that Bangladesh would be admitted to UN on the 10th. He said he thought so and agreed that the three countries of the sub-continent should normalise their relations and cooperate with each other. America’s and India’s interests in Bangladesh were parallel and there was no conflict. America did not wish Bangladesh to become a satellite of China. He hoped that India would be able to exercise her influence in Bangladesh for peace and stability in the region.

(7) IRAN: I told him of PM recent visit to Iran and the understanding and cooperation that had resulted from it. He said he had also had similar reports from the Iranian side and was glad about it. He said that AZIZ AHMED had informed him that India had located a Military Mission in Afghanistan and was helping them against Pakistan. I told him that there was not an iota of truth in the allegation. Our military people had visited Afghanistan, Iran and other friendly countries, but we do not have a military mission in Afghanistan. He said he was glad to hear it. I told him that Pakistan and Aziz Ahmed, in particular, was in the habit of raising bogies against India with other countries and his statement should not be taken at its face value.
Letter from Indian External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed.

New Delhi, June 15, 1974.

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmed,

I am constrained to draw your attention to some of the remarks made by His Excellency Mr. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Prime Minister of Pakistan, in the course of a statement in the Pakistan National Assembly, on June 7, 1974, which are not only against the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement but also constitute gross interference in India’s internal affairs. Relevant extracts from this Statement as broadcast by Radio Pakistan, are enclosed.

2. According to Radio Pakistan Prime Minister Bhutto alleged that “with many Indian citizens starving and going without food, when the armed forces have been used to suppress the people and kill the people, who had come out on the streets because they are hungry, the Indian Government has used bullets to kill starving citizens of her country”.

3. The Simla Agreement specifically provides for non-interference in each other’s internal affairs. Despite this commitment, which we for our part have scrupulously been adhering to, adverse comments were being made from time to time by Radio Pakistan and some leaders on our internal affairs. So far we had chosen to ignore such comments. But it is unfortunate that Prime Minister Bhutto himself has now deemed it fit to comment on India’s internal affairs on the floor of the Pakistan National Assembly.

4. In Simla, we had agreed that both Governments should take all steps within their power to prevent hostile propaganda directed against each other, and both countries would encourage dissemination of such information as would promote development of friendly relations between them. Shortly after our peaceful nuclear experiment, my Prime Minister had addressed a personal letter to Mr. Bhutto reiterating that there were no political or foreign implications of the test and urging that the resolution of the two countries after the Simla Agreement to develop normal relations and establish durable peace should not be permitted to be diluted merely because of the test. Yet, Prime Minister Bhutto has thought it fit to say that “India has acquired a nuclear weapon at very great cost, very grave risk and very great sacrifice to intimidate and blackmail Pakistan”. The Prime Minister has even gone farther to describe India as an “implacable opponent of Pakistan”. Such statements emanating from the Head of the Government of Pakistan naturally cause us deep pain and anguish, even more so as they are accompanied by similar references by Pakistani representatives in various international forums, letters to the international Press, etc. It is more than probable that such statements would encourage other leaders of public opinion in Pakistan to step up hostile anti-Indian propaganda. This development is bound to reverse the historic trend towards normalisation of relations and establishment of durable peace which was so painstakingly evolved at Simla and which we have managed to maintain despite having to face one obstacle after another. Simla Agreement apart, it is the normal and healthy practice that all countries should scrupulously avoid commenting on internal affairs of other countries.

5. On our part, we continue to believe that there is no reason whatsoever to give up the healthy trend of developing normal relations between our two countries merely because India has conducted a test for the peaceful uses of nuclear energy. We have done our best, and are prepared to do even more to allay any genuine misgivings that your government might have about the peaceful nature of our nuclear energy programme. I would venture to urge that we should continue to take joint steps to reverse the atmosphere of confrontation and to pursue the path of restoring normalcy and establishing durable peace in the sub-continent. I am convinced that this is in accord with the aspirations of the peoples of both Pakistan and India.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

EXTRACTS FROM THE SPEECH MADE BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRIME MINISTER OF PAKISTAN TO THE PAKISTAN NATIONAL ASSEMBLY ON JUNE 9, 1974

Mrs. Gandhi, the Prime Minister of India, had an election campaign in 1970 and the main plank of her election campaign was Gharibi Ko Hattao (Remove poverty). That was the main plank. If the main plank for her election campaign was Gharibi Ko Hattao, then how does it make sense to spend millions of dollars for acquiring nuclear weapons? India is in the claws of a most serious economic crisis, an economic crisis which she has not seen before; although she has seen many economic crises but the magnitude and gravity of this crisis has never been seen before. Now with serious economic crisis, with painful inflation, with many Indian citizens starving and going without food, when the armed forces have been used to suppress the people and kill the people who had come out on streets because they are hungry, it is very difficult to shoot those who had come out because they are demanding food. Yet the Indian Government has used bullets to kill starving citizens of her country.
She has resorted to many other extreme measures to suppress the people, she has crushed labour strike, she has crushed the Railway strike; 20,000 odd persons in a day’s time were imprisoned for lawful strike. On the one hand that is India’s economic position and yet India has indulged in the luxury to go nuclear. In that case, we have every right to ask ourselves that there must have been a great objective to make all these sacrifices. Otherwise, it simply does not make sense.

—RADIO PAKISTAN ON 9-6-1974 AT 2050 HRS-

India is a big country, India still is an important country without a nuclear bomb.
India is much bigger than Pakistan. India has got an ancient culture, India has got literature, art, philosophy India does not have to explode its atom bomb to acquire prestige or greatness. And so all roads lead to one conclusions and that conclusion is that India has acquired nuclear weapon at a very great cost, very grave risk and very great sacrifice to intimidate and blackmail Pakistan.
The fact that Pakistan will not be intimidated and blackmailed is a separate question. To brandish a nuclear sword at Pakistan and to extract political concessions out of Pakistan to exercise domination over the sub-continent, to exercise hegemony over the neighbouring States. These are the purposes for which India has acquired nuclear weapons. And if she does not succeed in political blackmail and if there is a possibility of a conflict Pakistan cannot rule out the possibility that India will use a nuclear device.

—RADIO PAKISTAN ON 9-6-1974 AT 2050 HRS-

....even the common man, the man in the street, the man in the villages, he will understand what it means for neighbouring country to have exploded a nuclear device. A neighbouring country which has been an implacable opponent of Pakistan, a neighbouring country which has gone to war with Pakistan on no less than three occasions in the last 25 years and which on the last occasion gineered the dismemberment of our country, the same neighbouring country which has been demanding from the world that it be recognised as a dominant power of the sub-continent.

0849. Letter from Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed to the Indian External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh.

Islamabad, July 9, 1974.

Dear Sardar Swaran Singh,

I regret I was not able earlier to reply to your message of June 15. I have been almost continuously out of the country since it was received.

2. The extracts you appear to have seen from the statement by our Prime Minister in the National Assembly on June 7, 1974 are not accurate and, taken out of context, could have conveyed a wrong impression. For instance, you have quoted him as having described India as an “implacable opponent of Pakistan”. This phrase is picked out of a sentence which ran as follows:-

“The intellectuals will draw their own conclusion. But even the common man, the man in the street, the man in the village, fully understands what it means for a neighbouring country to have exploded a nuclear device, a neighbouring country which has been an implacable opponent of Pakistan.”

You will observe that the Prime Minister used this phrase in the context of the past, a period of conflict and confrontation between the two countries to which the Simla Agreement also refers.

You have mentioned the Prime Minister’s remarks about the situation in India. He did refer to it briefly but not with the intention of interfering in India’s internal affairs; he did so to illustrate the point that if despite its economic difficulties India had set aside resources to acquire nuclear weapon capability then, he said, “We would have every right to ask ourselves that there must be a superior object, there must be a greater object to make all these sacrifices.”

I would like you to know that India’s nuclear explosion, just at a time when we thought the stage had been set for further progress towards normalising the situation in the sub-continent, came as a rude jolt to the people of Pakistan. It was a strange, totally inexplicable development considering your Government’s repeated public assertions that it was resolved to work for durable peace.

This development has caused a serious set-back in the process of normalisation. Inevitably, the projected talks between officers of the two Governments had to be postponed in order to give time to my Government to assess its implications. In the speech in the National Assembly, the Prime Minister had gone on nevertheless to say that the damage need not be irreparable. Again, in Dacca, on June 29, he said Pakistan hoped that “this set-back, serious as it is, will not be permanent”. He added that if there were no more nuclear blasts in future, “it would contribute to picking up the threads”.

The Indian Prime Minister is reported to have said that India would not use its nuclear potential for military purposes. Some concrete evidence would be needed to support this statement.

In this connection I note that you are “prepared to do even more to allay any genuine misgivings that your Government might have about the peaceful nature of our nuclear energy programme”. We would appreciate being informed of what specifically you propose to do in concrete terms to reassure us in respect of your nuclear programme.

In the meantime, we agree that we should continue to take joint steps to pursue the path of restoring normalcy. The India-Pakistan talks could be rescheduled. However, before this is done the necessary atmosphere has to be created. We consider that the least that needs to be done in this connection is that before the talks are resumed Pakistan should be publicly assured that India still stands committed to those provisions of the Simla Agreement that forbid the use of force or threat of force - including use or threat of nuclear weapons - and which enjoin upon both countries to respect each other’s territorial integrity, political independence and sovereignty and to work for durable peace in the sub-continent.

Yours sincerely

Sardar Swaran Singh,
Minister for External Affairs,
Government of India, New Delhi.

0850. Note recorded by Joint Secretary (Pakistan) in the Ministry of External Affairs on the letter of Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed.

New Delhi, July 10, 1974.

A reply has been received from Mr. Aziz Ahmed today to our Foreign Minister’s message dated June 15 regarding the objectionable statements made by Mr. Bhutto in the context of India’s peaceful nuclear experiment. The text of Mr. Aziz Ahmed’s reply is enclosed.

2. While the message is outwardly couched in reasonable terms, it is clear that in tangible terms, Pakistan Government has now laid certain pre-conditions which have to be fulfilled before talks on normalisation can be resumed. These conditions are as follows:

(a) Reference is made in para 6 to Mr. Bhutto’s statement at Dacca on June 29 that if there were no more nuclear blasts in future by India “it would contribute to picking up the threads”;

(b) In para 7 it is mentioned that Pakistan wants some “concrete evidence” in support of our Prime Minister’s statement that India would not use its nuclear potential for military purposes;

(c) In para 9, it is mentioned that before the talks on normalisation measures can be resumed, “Pakistan should be publicly assured that India still stands committed to those provisions of the Simla Agreement that forbid the use of force or threat of force including use or threat of nuclear weapons etc.”

3. The following analytical comments are offered:

(i) Pakistan’s latest position on resumption of talks for normalisation of relations with India, based on the prior fulfillment of certain conditions, is wholly untenable. India and Pakistan are committed to implement these measures under the Simla Agreement. Pakistan cannot unilaterally impose some preconditions such as guarantees against the imaginary nuclear threat by India before talks can begin. This demand is very similar to the attitude displayed by Pakistan in 1966 in the context of the Tashkent Agreement when they made implementation of normalisation measures dependant on prior settlement of the Kashmir issue. We cannot, therefore, accept this line of reasoning;

(ii) The question of affording some concrete assurances to Pakistan regarding peaceful uses of our nuclear programme, has to be considered separately in the light of our over-all objectives for the harnessing of indigenous nuclear resources for peaceful and economic uses. Obviously, for the sake of resuming telecommunication links and travel with Pakistan, which is all that Pakistan has in mind, we need not bind ourselves down to assuring Pakistan that we will have no more nuclear explosions in the future, even for peaceful purposes.

(iii) Simultaneously with the dispatch of this message, Mr. Bhutto has yesterday issued a statement to New York Times in which he has asked the U.S. Government for resumption of arms supply in fulfillment of its treaty obligations and as Pakistan is threatened by India. The Americans had conveyed to us on July 6 that Mr. Bhutto is not against resumption of talks with India. These two moves give added proof that Pakistan's message is still in the nature of a tactical move and is designed to impress the Americans and other super powers that Pakistan on its part has made a reasonable gesture towards India. Internally, Bhutto is now even more dependent on the armed forces and extremist elements in his Party and any genuine moves for normalisation with India are unlikely in the near future.

4. In view of the foregoing analysis, the following suggestions are offered for consideration:

(i) We can send another communication from Foreign Minister, also couched in reasonable terms so that the dialogue is kept open. However, we should point out that the implementation of normalisation measures, as envisaged in the Simla Agreement, should not be made dependant on fulfillment of extraneous conditions. We cannot accept Pakistan's contention that postal and telecommunication links and travel between the two countries cannot be commenced because of India conducting a peaceful nuclear test, which in no way threatens Pakistan or anyone;

(ii) As to assurances regarding India's peaceful nuclear programme, the Prime Minister's letter of May 22 has already made it clear that there has been no change in India's policy of restricting development of nuclear technology to peaceful and economic uses. Secondly that India remains committed to the provisions of the Simla Agreement for settling all differences with Pakistan through bilateral and peaceful means.

(iii) As desired in Aziz Ahmed's letter, we are willing to state publicly that India stands committed "to those provisions of the Simla Agreement that forbid the use of force or threat of force including use or threat of nuclear weapons etc."

(iv) We should ask Pakistan to indicate a date when the talks visualised for the June 10 meeting can be resumed.

Note Recorded by Foreign Secretary

Reference notes from pre-page.

JS(Pak) has rightly pointed out that the main purpose of Aziz Ahmed’s letter seems to be to give an appearance of being reasonable through an attempt to explain away the offensive portions of Bhutto’s speech, and a reiteration of Pakistan’s interest in working towards restoration of normalcy. Aziz Ahmed has laid down certain pre-conditions, but my own feeling is that we need not take them too seriously. After all, Pakistan should know that all the assurances that could be expected from us regarding the peaceful nature of our nuclear programme, and our adherence to the provisions of the Simla Agreement, have already been given on several occasions, in various ways and at the highest level.

2. We could reply to Aziz Ahmed’s letter, but there need be no great hurry for us to do so. I would prefer that we wait for a couple of weeks before sending out a brief acknowledgement to Aziz Ahmed, expressing our satisfaction that Pakistan continues to believe in working towards restoration of normal relations between our two countries and informing Pakistan that we shall await an indication of the dates which they consider more appropriate for the officials’ meeting.

3. I am recommending this gap of a few days before sending a reply due to two reasons. Firstly, the American CDA rang me up this morning and said that, consequent on his discussions with me last week, he had received a communication that the State Department had informed Bhutto of India’s willingness to resume a dialogue. Pakistan would thus be aware that the ball is really in her court. Secondly, as FM is aware, we have been somewhat perturbed to get reports of Pakistani troop movements close to the border. This subject was again raised by the Defence Secretary last evening in a meeting with the Cabinet Secretary. It is quite likely that transmission of their message through the Americans is to show to them that the Pakistanis are being very reasonable and it is India which is being difficult in the resumption of talks. Laying down the conditions in Aziz Ahmed's letter could also be used later to show that they were always ready to talk provided India fulfilled some basic conditions which they considered essential for Pakistan's security. The movements on the frontiers, in my view, could also be later represented as in response to the danger from India and further to support their plea for early supply of American arms.

4. We should wait for a couple of weeks and see the result of Pakistani moves. In any case, they know through the Americans that we are willing to talk, if they so desire. Our reply shall have to be suitably worded after any developments that come to our notice during the next two weeks.

2. I discussed this with F.M. who agrees that we should not send our reply to Aziz Ahmed in a hurry. Aziz Ahmed has made a lame effort to explain away Bhutto's provocative and offensive statements over the past few weeks and the Pakistani attempt to lay down some conditions for talks is quite unacceptable.

3. F.M. also felt that during our talks with the U.S. officials, we should avoid giving them an impression that they have a role to play in this matter. We could convey to them the correct position so that they appreciate that in approaching them Bhutto is adopting his usual propagandist stance, projecting Pakistan as being reasonable and interested in resuming a constructive dialogue with India, while at the same time continuing to act and speak in a quite different manner altogether. Bhutto's speeches in the National Assembly and outside, recent movements of the Pakistani army (one is told they are for anti-smuggling) and accusations against India are meant to build up tension rather than improve the atmosphere for a dialogue. If Pakistan is genuinely interested in working with India for normalisation of relations, there is nothing to prevent the Pakistan Government from approaching us directly; for our part, we would respond positively.

0851. Letter from Pakistan Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi addressed to Indian Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh.

Dear Mr. Kewal Singh,

For several weeks, All India Radio has been engaging in increasingly hostile propaganda against Pakistan. Typical extracts of some of the hostile broadcasts have been brought to the notice of the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India. Not to speak of refraining from such attacks, All India Radio propaganda has, we regret to note, become more offensive as the following instances will confirm:

“The aim of Pakistan rulers has always been exploitation. They talk about freedom, democracy and self determination but their aim has always been exploitation and when they lose any opportunity of exploitation they become confused.” - AIR URDU 0750 hours on 21st July, 1974.

“Mr. Bhutto is making deliberate attempts to create chaos among the people. For this purpose Mr. Bhutto is constantly telling his people that there exists a threat to Pakistan from India and Afghanistan. Such a threat is merely a creation of Mr. Bhutto's own mind. In fact Mr. Bhutto is making baseless and false utterances for diverting the attention of his people from the internal chaos of the country.” – AIR (TABSERA) URDU 2055 and KASHMIR 1750 hours on 23rd July, 1974.”

2. We are even more surprised that His Excellency Sardar Swaran Singh, the esteemed Foreign Minister of India, should have chosen to attack the Prime Minister of Pakistan personally in the course of his speech at Ludhiana on July
15. According to reports, he accused the Prime Minister of Pakistan of having “unleashed a reign of terror in Baluchistan and NWFP” and of having started “a campaign to malign India, apparently to divert attention.”

3. We on our part have throughout the past two years sought faithfully to carry out our obligations under Para 3 of the Simla Agreement regarding cessation of hostile propaganda. Official media in Pakistan avoid statements which might be considered as attacks on the political independence and territorial integrity of India or as interference in its internal affairs. Whenever the Government of India has brought to our notice any violations of the Agreement, these have been investigated and where necessary action taken to prevent recurrence of violations.

4. The Government of Pakistan continues to believe that the cessation of hostile propaganda by the official media of the two countries against each other was and must remain an essential ingredient in the efforts of the two countries to achieve the objective of normalisation of relations between the two countries. Vitriolic and vituperative attacks can only vitiate the atmosphere and delay the realization of the objective to which the Heads of Government of India and Pakistan committed their respective countries at Simla.

5. In conclusion, I must express the hope that in pursuit of the mutual interest of the two countries you will take appropriate action to stop All India Radio from continuing its hostile propaganda against Pakistan.

Yours sincerely,

Sd/-

0852. Letter of the Indian External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed.

New Delhi, August 2, 1974.

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmed,

Thank you for your letter of July 9, which has been under our consideration for some time.

2. In this letter, I propose to deal primarily with the question of rescheduling the India-Pakistan talks about which reference has been made in the last paragraph of your letter.

You have said that we should continue to take joint steps to pursue the path of restoring normalcy but that before this is done, the necessary atmosphere has to be created. We feel that the one obvious step that needs to be taken to improve the atmosphere is to put a stop to the unfortunate campaign that has been going on nearly for the past two months in which our motivations are being called to question and it is being suggested that India is out to threaten Pakistan both militarily as well as from within by encouraging divisive tendencies in Pakistan. Such apprehensions on the part of Pakistan are not only baseless but totally devoid of reality. There is no possible reason or motivation as to why India should suddenly change its attitude towards Pakistan when for the past two years we have worked constructively to settle several difficult problems peacefully and through direct talks with Pakistan. Anyhow, I am asking our Foreign Secretary, Shri Kewal Singh to put across our views regarding hostile propaganda in his reply to the message received from your Foreign Secretary on 27th July, 1974.

3. Our peaceful underground nuclear experiment cannot be held responsible for vitiating the atmosphere because we have not made any unreasonable demands of any kind on Pakistan since this experiment was conducted. On the other hand, taking into account some of the apprehensions voiced in Pakistan, our Prime Minister took the initiative of writing to Prime Minister Bhutto on May 22, assuring him that we remain fully committed to our traditional policy of developing our nuclear energy resources entirely for peaceful purposes and that the recant underground experiment in no way altered this policy. The Prime Minister further assured in this letter that there were no political or foreign policy implications of this test and we remained committed to settle all our differences with Pakistan peacefully through bilateral negotiations in accordance with the Simla Agreement.

4. We consider it singularly unfortunate, that despite our Prime Minister’s assurances, Pakistan should have unilaterally postponed the talks scheduled for June 10 to discuss the resumption of postal and telecommunication links and travel facilities between the two countries. Discussions on resumption of normalisation measures, envisaged in the Simla Agreement, have nothing to do with our peaceful nuclear experiment, whatever Pakistan Governments reservations on the subject. We take it that Pakistan Government also feels, as we do, that implementation of normalisation measures is for the mutual benefit of the people in the two countries and, therefore, this should not be made subject to political considerations and fulfillment of conditions which were not envisaged in the Simla Agreement.

5. On our part, we have publicly reiterated that India adheres to the Simla Agreement in which the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of each other, is clearly excluded. We have repeatedly stated that all differences between the two countries can be settled bilaterally through peaceful means in accordance with the Simla Agreement. As to the use of weapons, we have been consistently following a policy of opposing all weapons of mass destruction. In view of all this, we find it difficult to understand Pakistan's repeated assertions that there is nuclear threat from India when it is known fully that no such threat exists.

6. I have reiterated these ideas publicly in the remarks made by me yesterday in my speech before the Upper House of our Parliament, Rajya Sabha, in the course of winding up the debate on international situation. These remarks are reproduced below:

"I would like once again, Mr. Deputy Chairman, to say that there has been a suggestion that India should continue its initiative for the implementation of the Simla Agreement notwithstanding the unfortunate position the Prime Minister of Pakistan has taken. Several Hon. Members from the Opposition benches and also from this side made that suggestion. My response to this is that even though we have taken strong exception to some of the recent statements of Pakistani leaders, which are directed against India, we have made it clear repeatedly that we remain committed to all the provisions of the Simla Agreement, particularly those provisions which enjoinder on both India and Pakistan that they should respect each other's territorial Integrity and sovereignty and non-interference in each other's internal affairs. We also remain committed to the idea that there should be no threat of the use of force against each other and all differences should be settled through peaceful means bilaterally. In view of this fact and in view of the assurances contained in our Prime Minister's letter of May 22 to Prime Minister Bhutto, Pakistan should rest assured that the best guarantee for durable peace in the sub-continent is the Simla Agreement which should be observed by both signatories in the letter and spirit. The consequential proposition and line of action is clear; the parties should pick up the threads at the point at which unilaterally Pakistan called off the talks and we should start seriously implementing the other provisions of the Simla Agreement and should take steps for establishing durable peace in the Indian sub-continent.”

7. We earnestly hope that the clarification given in this letter and my remarks before the Rajya Sabha, reproduced above, would enable you to take an early decision to reschedule the talks on normalisation measures, earlier postponed at Pakistan's instance.

Yours sincerely.

Sd/- (Swaran Singh)

His Excellency
Mr. Aziz Ahmed,
Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs,
Government of Pakistan, Islamabad.

Islamabad, August 10, 1974.

Dear Sardar Swaran Singh,

I thank you for your letter of August 2, in reply to my letter of July 9, on the question of rescheduling of India-Pakistan talks.

2. We agree that one of the obvious steps that needs to be taken to create an atmosphere conducive to resumption of those talks is that all hostile propaganda must stop. I am not aware that the Pakistan press or radio has been guilty of such propaganda in recent months. However, it is not our intention to raise a controversy in this regard and, without waiting for Mr. Kewal Singh’s reply to our Foreign Secretary’s complaint about hostile propaganda Indian news media have recently indulged in, we have again issued order to our news media requiring them to ensure that the provisions of the Simla Agreement on this subject are scrupulously observed. I trust that your Government will also take necessary steps to that end.

3. In my letter of 9th July, I mentioned that your Prime Minister was reported to have stated that India would not use its nuclear potential for military purposes and I went on to suggest that, in order for us to be assured in this regard, there would need to be some concrete evidence to support that statement.

4. In your letter you have indicated no specific steps that you would be willing to adopt to reassure us and the world generally in respect of your nuclear programme, but have only restated your general “commitment” to your “traditional policy of developing nuclear energy entirely for peaceful purposes”. It was precisely in support of this kind of commitment that we had asked for same concrete evidence.

5. We intend to continue to seek the necessary assurances in this regard in all appropriate quarters. However, we consider that this need not hold up resumption of talks between the two countries aimed at normalizing the situation in the sub-continent. We also note that in your statement in the Rajya Sabha you have given the kind of public assurances I had asked for in my letter, namely, that you remain committed to those provisions of the Simla Agreement which enjoin on both India and Pakistan to respect each other’s territorial integrity and sovereignty, to refrain from interfering in each other’s internal affairs and not to use or threaten to use force against each other. We, therefore, suggest that India-Pakistan talks on restoration of communications and travel facilities may, if it is agreeable to your Government, begin in Islamabad on September 12.

6. I further suggest that it would help clear the atmosphere for the forthcoming talks if your letters of June 15 and August 2 and my letter of July 9 and this letter were made public if you agree, this may be done simultaneously in Islamabad and New Delhi on August 14.

Yours sincerely,

(Aziz Ahmed)

Telegram from Indian Ambassador in the US T. N. Kaul to Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh on his talks in the State Department.

Foreign Secretary from Ambassador

I expressed concern over recent action by Pakistan against Afghanistan including aircraft intrusions, and air force and troop movements. Also drew attention to disturbing troop movements along the Indian border. I said we hoped that BHUTTO was not trying to divert attention from his domestic difficulties by provoking military adventures. We had noted that while he was incorrectly accusing us of moving our troops, he had also expressed willingness to resume talks. SISCO said that they also were aware that Pakistan was now ready to talk. They had not troubled to analyse BHUTTO’s public statements.

They were keeping a close watch on the situation between Pakistan and Afghanistan. They were aware of “concern of Afghan friends”. They would like a period of quiet so that there could be concrete, discussions and had told both parties so. Afghanistan had told them that they were ready to talk but BHUTTO was placing pre-conditions. There was not as yet a sufficient framework for constructive talks. But they hoped that there would be no actions which would make the situation deteriorate.

Regarding Indo-Pak talks the US felt there was no need for them to take any initiative as this was being done adequately by the two sides LAINGEN mentioned that they had heard from their Embassy in Islamabad that Pakistan had proposed that talks should start on September 10. Please let us know whether this is correct and if any date has been finalised.

2. When I stated that it was unfortunate that Pakistan had delayed these talks unnecessarily by two months, SISCO said they could not be expected to disregard the explosion, and two months is a relatively short period. I also explained the recent concrete steps taken by us to improve relations with Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, Burma and Indonesia. I expressed the hope that it would be possible for Pakistan to understand the need to take part in this process of consolidating cooperation in the region. I again stressed the importance of arm’s not being injected into the region. SISCO observed that his understanding of the US national interest was that the US had to accept the geo-political situation on the sub-continent. India was the strongest power. He had never believed in the theory of equilibrium between India and Pakistan. It was obviously in the US interest to find out what the mutual interests between US and India were and then to build up to that. I said that I appreciated this. We were anxious to strengthen BHUTTO’S hands so that he could come more easily to settlements with us. We hoped that both the US and Iran could use their considerable influence with BHUTTO to move this process forward.

0855. TOP SECRET

Letter from Joint Secretary (Pakistan) in the Ministry of External Affairs A. S. Chib to the Deputy High Commissioner in the Indian High Commission in Bangladesh.

New Delhi, August 14, 1974.

My dear

You would have already seen copies of Foreign Minister’s correspondence with Mr. Aziz Ahmed dated 15th June, 9th July and 2nd August, 1947. I now enclose a copy of the latest communication dated 10th August, received from Mr. Aziz Ahmed in which he has suggested re-scheduling of the June 10 meeting in the 2nd week of September.

2. Bangladesh Deputy High Commissioner, Atual Karim, came to see me today and wanted to know as to what were the prospects for our talks with Pakistan. He had seen news reports to the effect that Aziz Ahmed had sent a reply to Foreign Minister’s message of 2nd August. I told Karim that generally the line taken by Aziz Ahmed was that the ‘concrete evidence’ wanted by Pakistan to reassure them regarding India’s nuclear programme had not been given but that he quite agreed that this need not hold up talks under the Simla Agreement. Karim asked whether Pakistan would not try to enlarge the scope of the talks to include the Kashmir issue in view of Mr. Bhutto’s remarks at Quetta. I told him that we were aware of Mr. Bhutto’s remarks but the letter received by us form Aziz Ahmed mentions talks only on communications and travel. I said we have no illusions about the fact that Mr. Bhutto may have suggested talks at this stage for tactical reasons while he continues with his aggressive posture towards Afghanistan and is also making all sorts of statements on Kashmir.
3. I asked Karim if Bangladesh had received any sounding from Pakistan about further talks with them. Karim said that unless Pakistan shows some willingness to have substantive discussions on the assets and liabilities question, they cannot discuss other issues such as reopening of trade. In fact there were legal difficulties. He said that there had been no soundings about further talks with Bangladesh. He then exchanged views with me about the internal situation in Pakistan particularly the anti-Ahmadiya agitation on which his view was that Bhutto is likely to declare the Ahmadiyas a minority community.

4. Towards the end, Karim asked again whether we were likely to accept the proposal for talks with Pakistan. I told him that Foreign Minister had returned only yesterday and a final decision on the subject would take some time. However, in view of the fact that we had all along favoured the idea of bilateral talks under the Simla Agreement, one couldn’t rule out talks. The main thing is that Pakistan had tried to tie up talks on normalization measures under the Simla Agreement have nothing to do with the nuclear issue. This does not mean, however, that we feel that Pakistan will now be more reasonable or sincere on the idea of normalizing relations with India.

5. I thought I would share this information with you as I have no doubt that the Bangladesh Government will draw its conclusions once we go in for talks with Pakistan. You will no doubt keep us informed about their thinking.

Yours Sincerely

(A.S. Chib)

Shri J.N. Dixit,
Deputy High Commissioner of India
Dacca.

Letter from the Pakistan Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi to the Indian Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh received through the Swiss Embassy.

Islamabad, August 19, 1974.

Dear Mr. Kewal Singh,

I received your reply of August 8, 1974, last week. Although in view of the correspondence between our ministers, a reply may not be necessary I am waiting to explain our position on the points you have raised, in the hope that this may contribute to a better understanding between our two countries.

2. I agree with you that no purpose is served by scoring points against each other in regard to hostile propaganda, by the official media of the two countries. I shall not, therefore, reproduce in this letter any of the numerous instances of attacks by All India Radio on the Government and Prime Minister of Pakistan. These will be forwarded by the Foreign Office for such action as you may deem appropriate. On our part, the Government has already taken steps once again to ensure that the provisions of the Simla Agreement in regard to cessation of hostile propaganda are scrupulously observed, as our Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs has already said in his letter of August 10, 1974, to you Minister for External Affairs. I would like to hope that the Government of India will do likewise.

3. In this connection, I wish only to bring to your notice that All India Radio has recently resorted to the practice of rebroadcasting false news items emanating from Radio Kabul about the internal situation in Pakistan. It appears to us that such dissemination of hostile propaganda of Kabul Radio represents a violation of Paragraph 2 of the Simla Agreement which requires the two governments to take all steps within their power to prevent hostile propaganda directed against each other. We would however, like to know your views in this regard.

4. In your letter, you have accused Pakistan of launching a campaign to denigrate India since the beginning of June. In support of this view you have quoted the Prime Minister of Pakistan to have said in his June 7 speech in the National Assembly that the “Indian commitment was not worth the paper it is written on”. I have had it checked from the record of the National Assembly that he did not make such a statement.

5. It appears that the Government of India has not appreciated the restraint with which the Government of Pakistan articulated the anxiety that was bound to arise in Pakistan in the wake of the Indian nuclear test so close to its border. Particularly in view of the tragic history of conflict and confrontation and the unresolved disputes which have bedeviled relations between the two countries.
What Pakistan has said, in essence, is that there is no difference technologically between the testing of a nuclear device and the detonation of a nuclear weapon and, secondly, that the existing assurances of non-nuclear weapon states against attack or threat of attack by a nuclear power need to be strengthened. Pakistan’s view on the first point is in fact the basic premise of the non-proliferation treaty. India is entitled to its own view, but we hope you appreciate that we have a genuine difference of opinion with you on this point and expression of this difference cannot be considered by any means as denigration of India.

6. The second component of our position, namely, the need for stronger security assurances to non-nuclear weapon states, is equally unexceptionable. Recalling that India itself has in the past supported this demand and in view of its declaration that it does not intend to produce nuclear weapons, we hope that India may find it possible to lend its continued support to efforts for securing stronger security assurances for non nuclear states.

Yours sincerely,
A. Shahi.

Mr. Kewal Singh,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.

0857. Letter from External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh to Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmed.

New Delhi, August 20, 1974.

Dear Mr. Aziz Ahmad,

Thank you for your letter of 10th August in reply to my letter of 2nd August, which I have seen on my return from tour abroad.

2. I am glad to know that you have agreed that before talks are resumed, something has to be done to stop all hostile propaganda and that you have issued appropriate instructions. It goes without saying that such restraint has to be shown by both sides and to the extent that our official news media have been found wanting, we shall take similar steps.
3. The date suggested by you i.e. September 12, 1974 for the commencement of India-Pakistan talks is acceptable to us. As visualised in the Joint Communique issued between us on April 9, 1974, the forthcoming meeting can discuss and work out fresh Agreements, for the resumption of Postal and Tele-communication links and restoration of travel facilities. We shall inform you of the detailed composition of the delegation and the mode of travel shortly.

4. I also accept your suggestion that it would be helpful if my letters of June 15, August 2nd your letters of July 9 and August 10, are made public. To this may be added my letter of today. If you agree, We can release this correspondence simultaneously in New Delhi and Islamabad on Friday, 23rd August, at 12 noon.

5. I am confident that given adequate goodwill and spirit of accommodation on both sides, the coming talks would be successful and would pave the way for the implementation of other normalisation measures envisaged in paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement. Our success at these and subsequent talks would be hailed by millions in our respective countries who have for long looked forward to normal and good neighbourly relations between Pakistan and India.

With kind regards.

Yours sincerely,

(Swaran Singh)

H.E, Mr. Aziz Ahmed, Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs,
Government of Pakistan, Islamabad.

Joint Communique issued at the end of Foreign Secretary-Level discussions between India and Pakistan.

Islamabad, September 14, 1974

In accordance with the provision of the Simla agreement enjoining upon the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan to take steps progressively to restore and normalize relations, the delegations of the two countries met at Islamabad from September 12 to September 14, 1974, to work out agreements on the resumption of postal and telecommunication links and restoration of travel facilities.

2. His Excellency Shri Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary led the Indian delegation. He was assisted by representatives of the Ministry of External Affairs, Ministry of Home Affairs and the Department of Communications. The Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Agha Shahi, Foreign Secretary. He was assisted by representatives of the Ministries of Foreign Affairs, Interior and Communications.

3. The two sides concluded agreements on exchange of letter post Items and Postal Parcels, resumption of Telecommunication services and on issuance of Visas and Travel between the two countries. In regard to the Telecommunication Services it was agreed that the telecommunication system between the multi-exchange area of Bombay and the multi-exchange area of Karachi shall be linked by satellite circuits within a period of six months. In addition to the Agreement on issuances of Visas and Travel they concluded a Protocol on group visits to religious shrines in either country.

4. The leaders of the two delegations also availed themselves of the opportunity to discuss the implementation of the other measures mentioned in paragraph 3 of the Simla Agreement. It was agreed that the civil aviation delegations of the two countries should meet to discuss the 1971 case regarding over flights and the questions of resumption of over flights and air links between the two countries. It was further agreed that the representatives of India and Pakistan would exchange visits to explore possibilities of trade between the two countries on a mutually profitable basis. The two sides also agreed to examine steps to promote exchanges in the field of science and culture.

5. Shri Kewal Singh was received by His Excellency Mr. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the Prime Minister of Pakistan and by His Excellency Mr. Aziz Ahmed, the Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs. During these talks, views were exchanged on matters of bilateral interest. It was appreciated that obstacles and setbacks encountered in the course of implementation of the Simla Agreement would be overcome through patience and perseverance and the continued firm commitment of the two countries to the principles of peaceful co-existence, respect for each other territorial integrity and sovereignty and non-interference in each other internal affairs.

New Delhi, October 10, 1974.

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India have seen Pakistan’s Aide Memoire dated September 18, 1974, sent through Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi.

2. The Government of India are astonished at the show of concern expressed in Pakistan’s Aide Memoire regarding the discussions with Sheikh Mohammad Abdullah which are entirely an internal matter for India and in which Pakistan has absolutely no locus standi. As this is clearly an attempt to interfere in India’s internal affairs, the Government of India categorically reject Pakistan’s Aide Memoire.

3. The Government of India must point out that in fact it is Pakistan which has violated the Simla Agreement by bringing about a material alteration in the situation in Pakistan occupied territories of Jammu & Kashmir. Pakistan Government has recently imposed a so-called interim Constitution in the occupied territories whereby a Council is to be set up under the Chairmanship of the Prime Minister of Pakistan with nominated members from Pakistan’s National Assembly. Other features of the interim constitution also show that virtually all important affairs of Government in these occupied territories will be controlled by the Central Government of Pakistan, with a view to integrate these territories with Pakistan.

4. Close on the heels of this action has come the announcement by Prime Minister of Pakistan at Gilgit on September 24, bringing about the merger of Hunza and an end to its separate entity. It was also reportedly stated by the Prime Minister that the northern territories of Jammu & Kashmir under Pakistan’s occupation would be given representation in Pakistan’s National Assembly.

5. The Government of India while taking note of these developments wishes to bring to the notice of Government of Pakistan that their actions constitute a material and unilateral alteration in the situation and are thus in violation of Para-I (ii) of the Simla Agreement. In the circumstances, Government of India reserve the right to such further steps as are necessary through peaceful means to safeguard the well established position of India with regard to Jammu & Kashmir.

6. In view of the facts mentioned above it ill behoves Pakistan to suggest that the discussions going on with Sheikh Mohammad Abdullah will vitiate the atmosphere for the development of relations between the two countries. It would be most unfortunate if Pakistan once again tries to bring extraneous considerations to bear on the implementation of measures envisaged in the Simla Agreement and recently reiterated in Joint Communique issued at the conclusion of Secretary level talks at Islamabad on September 14, to bring about further normalisation between India and Pakistan. In such an event Pakistan will have to bear the responsibility for impeding this progress as it is fully aware that these steps are in the larger interests of the peoples of the two countries and are essential to establish durable peace.

Letter from Indian Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh to the Pakistan Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi.

New Delhi, October 21, 1974.

Dear Mr. Agha Shahi,

Kindly refer to your message dated October 9, regarding the understanding reached during the talks at Islamabad on September 14, on the following lines:

“In pursuance of paragraph 2 of the Simla Agreement in regard to the cessation of hostile propaganda, the two Governments agree that they will direct their respective Radio Broadcasting Stations to cease dissemination of any item hostile to the other country which reproduces or is based on reports in the domestic or foreign press or on foreign radio broadcasts.”

2. This is to confirm that beginning from the 1st of November, 1974, broadcasting stations of All India Radio will observe the terms of the Understanding contained in the paragraph reproduced above vis–a–vis Pakistan on the basis of reciprocity. Your letter dated September 14, on this subject and my reply would constitute a firm understanding between our two Governments.

3. I must, however, point out that in the last one month since we reached this understanding on September 14, there has not been the slightest let up in the anti–India broadcasts by Radio Pakistan. What is particularly disturbing is not so much the news items picked up from third sources but the commentaries regularly broadcast by Radio Pakistan which are directed to India’s internal matters. In the period since 15th September, your Radio commentaries have attacked us on subjects such as alleged starvation of “crores of people” in India; alleged atrocities on political prisoners in the jails of West Bengal and Bihar; India’s “annexation” of Sikkim; allegation that India’s “peaceful intentions” regarding the peaceful nuclear explosion, are aimed at misleading world opinions. Quite apart from these subjects, Radio stations located in occupied Kashmir, have been carrying on a propaganda campaign on the issue of talks with Kashmiri leaders such as Sheikh Abdullah. The comments on this subject, addressed to people in Jammu and Kashmir, are blatantly instigatory and inflammatory in nature.

4. We are separately sending you a list of such objectionable broadcasts by Radio Pakistan during the last one month. I am sure you would agree that the very purpose of our reaching a bilateral understanding as on September 14, will be defeated if Radio Pakistan continues to indulge in this kind of propaganda campaign. It is unrealistic to expect that if the radio stations of one side continue with hostile propaganda of this sort, the radio stations from the other would not try to pay back in the same coin. We would, therefore, sincerely hope that while issuing instructions on the lines of the September 14 understanding, you would also instruct your radio stations to stop all propaganda in the form of commentaries, etc., which amount to open interference in India’s internal affairs. Such propaganda, in any case, is in violation of the Simla Agreement.

Yours sincerely,
(Sd) Kewal Singh

Mr. Agha Shahi,

Extracts from the Telegram from Ministry of External Affairs to Heads of Mission abroad briefing them on the visit of U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

New Delhi, November 1, 1974

You must have by now read the Joint communiqué issued after Kissinger’s visit.

2. Following are the main points of our discussions which centered on bilateral relations, South Asia and neighboring countries, détente, Indian Ocean and world economic situation.

3. South Asia: We stressed the need for peace and stability, normalization of relations on the subcontinent, settlement of all differences with Pakistan through peaceful bilateral means without outside interference and promotion of cooperation among all countries of the area. We told KISSINGER good relations with India and other neighbors, However, we were disappointed at Pakistan’s hesitations and the slow pace of improvement at Pakistan’s hesitations and the slow pace of improvement in our relations. KISSINGER said that the US is strongly committed to supporting the Simla process and would like to see it expedited. US did not favour any outside interference in the affairs of the subcontinent.

4. The possibility of resumption of American arms to Pakistan was discussed in some depth. It was pointed out to KISSINGER that there was no threat to Pakistan's security from any country. In fact Pakistan was now militarily stronger than before 1971. Pakistan had received considerable military hardware from China and with the help of oil money of its Middle Eastern friends had acquired sophisticated weapons from several European countries. We left KISSINGER in no doubt that any induction of American arms into Pakistan directly or indirectly will not only come in the way of normalization of relations but will also cause fresh tensions in the region by encouraging it to follow adventurous policies towards its neighbours.

5. KISSINGER told us that the US did not believe in balancing Pakistan against India and had not made any attempt to establish parity. He repeatedly stated that the US had no intention in encouraging an arms race in South Asia.
He also assured us that there will be no secret or clandestine arms transfers to Pakistan.

6. Afghanistan: KISSINGER said that BHUTTO had complained that direct and Indirect support to Baluchi. We told KISSINGER that our impression was quite different. It was not Afghanistan but rather Pakistan which had taken recourse to military measures and had thereby complicated the settlement of Baluchi and Pakitoon issues. Pakistan Military moves and pressures along Afghan borders were a real cause of concern to the Afghan Government which wanted to resolve the issues by peaceful means.

7. Iran: KISSINGER welcomed the improvement in Indo-Iranian relations.

8. China: We drew KISSINGER’s attention to Chinese efforts to ferment subversion and create instability on the subcontinent and the Himalayan region.
KISSINGER said that in its relations with China, US will not do anything to jeopardize India’s security or interests. US was against giving China a free hand in Asia and will oppose any Chinese attempt to extend her influence beyond her borders to other areas. On Sino-Indian relations, KISSINGR’s assessment was that the trend of improvement, although temporarily interrupted by Chinese reaction to events in Sikkim, was likely to be resumed after some time.

9. Bangladesh: KISSINGER told us that Indian and American interests were parallel. It was totally against US policy to use Bangladesh against India’s interests. He categorically stated that the United States “will not encourage directly or indirectly any power to use economic dislocation in Bangladesh to get a foot-hold on the subcontinent”. He also expressed strong interest in the continuation of cordial relations between Indian and Bangladesh.
10. PNE: In spite of much speculation in the Western press that KISSINGER might try to pressurize India on the question of nuclear explosions, there was only a brief discussion on this subject. We informed KISSINGER of our policy against development of nuclear weapons and of using nuclear policy for peaceful purposes only. Both sides felt that nuclear energy does not contribute to any proliferation of nuclear weapons. You will have noticed from the Joint Communique that the United States welcomes India affirmation of the policy of using nuclear technology for peaceful purposes only. This is an improvement on earlier US position, though we shall have to watch their future moves carefully.

11. USSR: We told KISSINGER that Indo-Soviet Treaty was not an alliance and was not directed against any other country. KISSINGER said that Indo-Soviet friendship did not come in the way of better Indo-US relations. He had no evidence that India was pursuing a pro-Soviet line on issues of concern to US.

12. Indian Ocean: Differences on Indian Ocean as a zone of peace remain as before. We conveyed to KISSINGER our concern over the establishment of the US military base at Diego Garcia. He reiterated US view that this did not constitute a threat to India or any of the littoral states. He also said that this question had not been raised in his recent visit to Moscow.

13. Bilateral: Apart from the establishment of the Joint Commission to promote exchanges in trade, technology and education, etc. further high-level contacts are expected to continue when Foreign Minister visits Washington and President FORD comes to India next year. Both sides felt there was no conflict of interest between them and there was much scope for further strengthening, of their relations. KISSINGER said that the United States recognized India’s role as a major Power in the world and as a dominant power on the subcontinent. No outside force could change this position.

14. Assessment: Our assessment is that KISSINGER’s visit has contributed to better understanding between a better appreciation of India’s views on major questions of bilateral regional and international importance. KISSINGER’s reiterating of support for the Simla Agreement not equating Pakistan and India, assurances regarding not using Pakistan to counterbalance India, America’s disassociation from Chinese disruptive policies towards South Asia, Indo-US similarity of interests in the peace progress and stability of subcontinent as well as of Bangladesh recognition of the positive role of non-alignment in the world and American acceptance of our view that India-Soviet friendship is not an impediment to Indo-American relations are some of the gains of our talks. While it remains to be seen how the US policy will be conducted in Asia in coming month and years, we welcome the United States continuing awareness and recognition of the realities of the situation on the subcontinent as well as India’s role as a factor for peace and stability in South Asia. In talking about KISSINGER’s visit you should take particular care to stress that our relationship is based on equality and mutuality of interests. The improvement of our relations in not at the expense of either country’s relations with third countries. While his visit has created better atmosphere and removed some past misunderstandings, much will of course depend on concrete American actions especially in the sub-contentment.

INDIA – PAKISTAN RELATIONS
SECTION-I

POLITICAL.......CONTINUED
1975-1989
0862. Aide Memoire of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding Kashmir.

New Delhi, January 10, 1975.

Reference is invited to Government of Pakistan's Aide Memorie of November 25, 1974, received through the Swiss Embassy in New Delhi, on December 2, 1974.

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, must point out that in terms of the Simla Agreement, paragraph 4(ii), it is mentioned that in Jammu & Kashmir, the Line of Control, resulting from the cease-fire of December 17, 1971, shall be respected by both sides “without prejudice to the recognized position of either side”. It should, therefore, be clear that this wording fully safeguards India’s well-known stand that the whole of Jammu & Kashmir is an integral part of India.

The Government of India cannot also accept the views expressed in Pakistan’s Aide Memorie, that the amendments to the interim constitution of so-called Azad Jammu & Kashmir and the merger of Hunza with the Northern territories do not constitute a fundamental change in the situation. It is obvious that the setting up of a Council with the Prime Minister of Pakistan as the Chairman and a number of Pakistani Ministers and M.Ps as members is a major constitutional change envisaged under the interim constitution imposed in the occupied territories, and cannot be considered as a mere administrative arrangement. From any objective assessment, this step can only be considered as a measure for imposing full control of the Government of Pakistan on the occupied territories of Kashmir. The fact that recently for the first time, the Administration in Pakistan-occupied Kashmir has been given representation in Pakistan’s Provincial Coordination Committee further confirms this view.

New Delhi, the 16th January, 1975.
The Embassy of Switzerland, New Delhi may kindly transmit the following message to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, Islamabad:

BEGIN
No.P.II/412/26/74 4th January, 1975
Reference message from the Government of Pakistan dated the 5th December, 1974, regarding discussions held in New Delhi on post-war detainees and other assorted matters.

The proposals of the Government of Pakistan have been considered by the Government of India which has the following comments to offer:

a) The position as mentioned in clause 1 of the message of the Government of Pakistan is confirmed, i.e., the term “pre-war detainees” will apply to nationals of either country apprehended up to December 17, 1971. In view of administrative problems involved, it is suggested that these people will be repatriated by the 15th March, 1975.

b) The term “post-war” detainees will be applied to nationals of either country detained in the other from the 18th December, 1971 onwards. Obviously it is neither possible nor necessary to put a terminal date. For the sake of administrative convenience the term “Pakistan nationals” will be applied to those persons who have been so categorized by the visiting Swiss representatives. It is understood, of course, that in the event of repatriation only those persons will be offered who are acceptable to both countries.

c) It is confirmed that the two Governments will exchange the lists of post-war detainees as soon as possible. The lists are to be exchanged by the 1st April, 1975.

d) The Swiss Embassy representatives in New Delhi have visited a number of post-war detainees already. It is confirmed that visits will be arranged by the Swiss Embassy representatives to check all post-war detainees held in both countries. The reports will, of course, be rendered to the respective Governments.

e) The position regarding the exchange of photographs of persons classified as mental cases is hereby confirmed.

f) The government of India agree to the suggestions made in Para 6 of the message of the Government of Pakistan. The Government of India looks forward to the specimen copy of the prescribed form proposed by the Government of Pakistan. It is also confirmed that all said persons would be repatriated, if approved.

(g) The understanding detailed in Para 7 of the aide memorie is hereby confirmed.

February 19, 1975.

The Embassy of Switzerland, Pakistan Affairs Division, received the following message, dated February 19, 1975, from the Government of Pakistan:

"Reference Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi, Aide-memorie, dated January 4, 1975, regarding post-war detainees and other assorted matters. The Government of Pakistan has the following comments to offer:

1. As suggested in sub-Para (a) of the Aide-memorie it is agreed that nationals of either country apprehended up to 17th December, 1971, will be repatriated by the 15th March, 1975.

2. It is agreed that lists of nationals of either country detained in the other from 18th December, 1971, onwards, may be exchanged by the 1st April, 1975.

3. It is also agreed that only for the sake of administrative convenience the term "Pakistan nationals" will be applied to those persons, who have been so categorized by the visiting Swiss representatives. In fact, only such persons who had entered into India from former West Pakistan will be treated as Pakistan nationals.

4. It is confirmed that visits will be arranged by the Swiss representatives to check all detainees held in both countries after the 17th December, 1971. The reports will, of course, be rendered to the respective governments.

5. The contents of sub-paras (c), (f) and (g) of the Aide-memorie are noted. The specimen forms referred to in sub-parts (f) has already been sent to the Government of India with Government of Pakistan Aide-memorie, dated 2.1.1975."

New Delhi, February 25, 1975.

Dear Mr. Agha Shahi,

I am constrained to invite your attention to a commentary broadcast in Urdu from Radio Pakistan, Lahore, yesterday, 24th February, at 1755 hours, which contains material of a most objectionable kind and is an obvious violation of the understanding reached through exchange of letters between us on 14th September and 30th October 1974.

2. The commentary written by one Ali Rizvi of MASHRIQ contained observations such as “Bloody clashes have begun throughout Kashmir as a protest against the understanding reached between the Government of India and Sheikh Mohammed Abdullah”… “The Jehad of the Kashmiri freedom fighters has entered a new phase”… “This struggle has began in Srinagar, Anantnag and Udhampur through violent demonstrations. Even firing has been resorted to”.

3. Since no violent incidents of any sort have taken place, we naturally conclude that false and baseless allegations of this kind are being broadcast by Radio Pakistan to instigate such incidents across the line of control in Jammu & Kashmir. As you are aware, All India Radio scrupulously observed the terms of the Understanding and has not only eschewed comment on the internal situation in Pakistan but has withheld broadcasting news items put out by international press agencies and radio stations on incidents that have been taking place in the NWFP and Baluchistan. I trust, therefore, that on receipt of this message you would kindly take effective steps to immediately stop this kind of propaganda items on Kashmir being broadcast by Radio Pakistan. Unless this is done, we will have to draw the inevitable conclusion that Pakistan Government is no longer interested in observance of the Understanding reached between us in October last on non– dissemination of hostile broadcasts.

4. I shall be grateful for your immediate reply to this communications.

With kind regards,

Yours Sincerely

(Kewal Singh)

His Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi,
Foreign Secretary,
Government of Pakistan, Islamabad.

Rawalpindi, February 25, 1975.

Dear Madam Prime Minister,

I am taking the earliest available opportunity to write to you concerning the lifting of US embargo on arms supply to India and Pakistan which was announced last night.

2. I am sorry that public reaction in India to this development should have been so adverse. All it does is to remove a curious anomaly whereby we were unable to acquire from the United States the necessary replenishment for our defence equipment. I can assure you that there is absolutely no reason to believe that our demand for the removal of this anomaly indicated any departure from our resolve to further the process of normalization of relations between India and Pakistan in the building of a durable peace in this region. The Simla Agreement continues to govern our considered policy with regard to our relations with India and, as far as it is in our power, we will not allow ourselves to be deflected from the Simla process. We have no desire to get involved in an arms race in the sub-continent. We are convinced that an arms race would be fatal to our economic development and to all our efforts to satisfy the desperate needs of our people.

3. Despite the unfortunate controversy that has been started over the issue of the ending of the US embargo the fact remains that the basis for establishing lasting peace in the subcontinent will remain lacking if one of the countries in South Asia feels that it is militarily incapable of ensuring the protection of its independence and territorial integrity. Such a disparity in the matter of defence capability as between one country and another would continue inevitably to impart a basic fragility to any structure of peace. A sense of its own security is vital if a country is to contribute significantly to the promotion of durable peace in this strategically sensitive region.

4. As you know, in order to be durable, we envision peace in the subcontinent to be based on the equality of sovereign States, their complete and unquestioned territorial integrity, the peaceful settlement of disputes, the removal of inter-state suspicions and the rejection of hegemony and dominance by any power over this region. We are still hopeful that our two countries will cooperate in establishing these foundations of peace.

5. Your accord with Sheikh Abdullah seems to us to be designed to foreclose a settlement of the Kashmir dispute, which would reflect the wishes of its people and secure the consent of both India and Pakistan. We cannot but protest against this move. We remain convinced that since it does not change the character of the Jammu & Kashmir dispute, the goal of a final settlement, honourable and just, will continue to be pursued by both your Government an mine.

6. We are doing everything we can not to let developments such as these cause an irreversible set back to the process initiated by the Simla Agreement.
As a manifestation of this resolve I intend shortly to dispatch a delegation to India in order to try and conclude an agreement with regard to civil aviation so that one more step in the direction of normalization of the situation in the subcontinent will have been taken. Knowing your part in the conclusion of the Simla Agreement, I am confident that you will ensure that such an agreement is reached and that generally the process of normalization continues unhindered.

Yours sincerely,
(Sd)/- Zulfikar Ali Bhutto

0867. Letter of Pakistani Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi to the Indian Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh.

New Delhi, February 27, 1975.

Dear Mr. Kewal Singh,

Before receiving your message of 25th February, 1975, this morning we had learned of its substance via All India Radio broadcast where upon immediate investigations were made to determine the fact. We have been assured that Radio Pakistan has scrupulously observed the agreement between India and Pakistan regarding the cessation of hostile propaganda and the understanding on its elaboration you and I signed on 14th September, 1974.

2. We have also asked to see the transcript of the commentary to which you refer in paragraph 2 of your message and its violation of the existing agreement between two countries has taken place. Steps will be taken to prevent recurrence, as has been the practice in the past whenever one of the side has brought such alleged violation to the notice of the other.

3. Particularly in view of the previous practice the last sentence of the paragraph 3 of your message has caused us surprise and regret. From tone it appears that the Government of India does not consider that the observance of the agreement on cessation of hostile propaganda suit its interests at preset.
Such a decision would be unfortunate, considering the efforts both sides, have invested over the past three years to bring about cessation of hostile propaganda by their respective radio stations. Moreover, unilateral decision to terminate obligation under an international agreement on the bases of an alleged violation would be inconsistent with the recognized principles regarding validity of international agreement.

4. We might add that we, on our part, have on three occasions during the past fortnight brought to the attention of Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, instances of infractions by all India Radio of the agreement on cessation hostile propaganda, expressing the hope that the Government of India would take steps to prevent the recurrence of such instances, without holding out the sort of warning implied in your message.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

Agha Shahi

0868. Letter of Indian Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh to the Pakistan Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi.

New Delhi, March 1, 1975.

Dear Mr. Agha Shahi,

Thank you for your reply to my message of 25 February, which was received this morning. The reason why we had to brief the Press that I had sent a message to you on these lines was due to the fact that in the last four days Radio Pakistan has been repeatedly broadcasting false reports of alleged “bloody clashes” in Kashmir about which I had complained to you. Not only has this kind of propaganda been kept up but the Urdu commentary on 27 February went to the extent of describing Sheikh Mohammed Abdullah as a “traitor to the cause of Kashmiri people, a hater of Islam and lover of Hindus”. Some alleged old comments from the foreign press and old statements of Maulvi Farooq were used in commentaries to make it appear as if these were made in response to Pakistan’s call for Hartal. On 26th and 27th February, Radio Pakistan again spoke of “bloody disturbances”, “bloody clashes” in the valley and mountains of Kashmir, when no such incidents had taken place. All this constitutes hostile propaganda and is in violation of the understanding of October 30, 1974.

2. These are a few of the very recent examples. We are separately sending you, through Swiss Embassy, a lengthy list of violations in the last one month, which would, show you beyond any doubt that Radio Pakistan has not been observing the Understanding with any seriousness.

3. I appreciate your assurance in paragraph 2 that on seeing the transcript of the objectionable commentary referred to in my message of 25th February, you would take appropriate steps. On my part, I can assure you that once your instructions to Radio Pakistan are put into practice and its present campaign of anti-India propaganda of the kind mentioned above, particularly on Kashmir, stops, we shall on our part reciprocate in full measure. Meanwhile, so long Radio Pakistan continues this sort of campaign, it becomes necessary for All India Radio also to set the record straight.

4. We are most anxious that both sides strictly avoid any hostile propaganda as such propaganda is fatal to the promotion of goodwill and the growth of friendly feelings between the peoples of the two countries. I am aware of the fact that you were personally most responsive when at Islamabad, in September last year, I first made the suggestion for reaching a formal understanding in this regard. You can, therefore, rest assured that I am quite keen that this Understanding should be implemented strictly in the mutual interest of the people in both countries.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

(Kewal Singh)

Mr. Agha Shahi,
Foreign Secretary,
Government of Pakistan, Islamabad.

(PS: I have just seen your message of 28 February)
0869. Letter of Pakistan Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi to the Indian Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh.

Islamabad, March 4, 1975.

I am glad to note from your message of March 1 that the Government of India continue to be interested in the reciprocal observance of the agreement on cessation of hostile propaganda. We, on our part, not only remain committed to the provisions of the agreement and the understanding you and I signed on 14 September 1974 but shall also maintain efforts to ensure their observance.

We are awaiting receipt of the list of violations mentioned by you in paragraph 2 of your message and I can assure you that as in the past, in future, too, we shall investigate the charges and take appropriate action to prevent recurrence of violations where these may have taken place.

As I said in my message of 28 February we are sending to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, extracts of transcripts of AIR broadcast which constitute infringements of the India-Pakistan agreement regarding hostile propaganda. You will see that All India Radio has discarded all restraint and does not even desist from vituperations against the Head of the Government of Pakistan. For instance, in its Tabaera on 27 February at 2015 hrs., AIR said “There is one man rule in Pakistan. Government and the ruling party are the nick names of the whims and caprices of one person. Anyone who dares to speak against the Quaid’s opinion had to leave not only the Government but the party as well”. Similarly, in an English commentary at 2045 hrs on 27 February in its Spot Light Programme, AIR alleged: “Provincial Ministries of Pakistan are dismissed at the pleasure of Mr. Bhutto and opposition leaders sent to prison”.

We trust you will take action to restrain All India Radio from broadcasting such hostile propaganda.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

Agha Shahi

His Excellency Shri Kewal Singh,
Foreign Secretary,
Government of India, New Delhi.
0870. Letter of Indian Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh to the Pakistani Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi.

New Delhi, March 10, 1975.

Dear Mr. Agha Shahi,

Thank you for your message dated March 4, 1975. I am glad to receive your assurance that you will continue efforts to ensure observance of the Understanding on non-dissemination of hostile propaganda on radio stations.

2. I would like to assure you that we are totally opposed to any personal attacks being made against the Head of Government or other respected leaders of a neighbouring country in radio broadcasts. In the case of India and Pakistan, this is obviously against the spirit of the Simla Agreement and the Understanding formalized between us. I have made a note of the two instances mentioned in your message and have called for the full transcripts of the commentaries in Urdu and English. If there has been a lapse despite our instructions to the contrary, we shall take steps to ensure that there is no recurrence.

3. May I take this opportunity of mentioning again that the campaign of slander and personal attack against our leaders, launched by Radio Pakistan, still continues. I give below an instance selected at random from the press round-up broadcast by Radio Lahore on 2nd March, which is illustrative of the offensive manner in which our leaders including the Prime Minister are being described:

“The world-wide response to Premier Bhutto’s appeal has exposed to the world the Indira–Abdullah collusion and it has become clear that the future of 50 lakh Kashmiri’s cannot be decided by two expansionist and fortune-seeking brains.”

4. I am sure you would like to look into this, and ensure that such offensive references to India’s leaders, and propaganda about our internal affairs, do not recur on Radio Pakistan. On our part, as I have repeatedly sought to reassure you, we have been making all possible efforts to respect our understanding on the subject, and shall continue to do so.

Yours sincerely,
(Sd) Kewal Singh

His Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of Foreign Affairs,
Government of Pakistan, Islamabad.
Letter of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi to Pakistan Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

New Delhi, March 20, 1975.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

I have received your letter of the 25th February. We have given careful attention to your views on the US Government's decision to lift the arms embargo and on developments in the State of Jammu & Kashmir.

2. We welcome your assurance that Pakistan continues to look on the Simla Agreement as the basis for developing good neighbourly relations between our two countries. From our side, we feel strongly that the Simla process should not be impeded, much less suffer a set-back. The Agreement and the subsequent concrete initiatives demonstrate our sincere desire to build a new relationship of understanding, and cooperation. There should be no doubt regarding our firm intention in this regard.

3. However, in the background of the conflicts on the sub-continent, and the history of the use of American weapons against India, the US Government's decision to resume arms supplies has evoked strong public reactions in India. We have regretted this decision because it threatens once again to increase tensions in our region. We agree with you that each country must have legitimate concern for its security and for the means to protect its independence. However, you have talked about the disparity in defence capability between our two countries. On this matter we have to ask ourselves some searching questions. Is real stability to be based on parity of arms, without considering a country’s size, its land frontiers and coastline and diverse problems? Will not such a quest generate an unending search for and acquisition of weapons and lead only to greater tensions and weakening of economic endeavours? It would be illusory to think that such an arms race could be halted at some acceptable level. It is more likely to result in heavier burdens and impediments to the economic progress of our respective peoples.

4. We believe that a genuine and lasting sense of security between our countries can best emerge through self-restraint and a conscious effort to build mutual confidence. It can be facilitated by a firm commitment to non-aggression and to non-use of force, which was envisaged in the Simla Agreement. We are prepared to explore with your Government mutually acceptable methods of built-in safeguards to reduce tensions and to avoid the likelihood of future conflicts. Given an atmosphere of trust, such measures can go hand-in-hand with measures of economic cooperation.
5. Against this background, I cannot but express our regret that your Government should have wholly mis-interpreted the Accord reached with Sheikh Abdullah and his colleagues. I cannot see how this violates the Simla Agreement. This development is in accordance with the democratic process to which we are wedded. The people of the State have overwhelmingly welcomed Sheikh Abdullah and the new Government. Moreover, we feel that this Accord should facilitate normalization between Pakistan and India. The high level exchanges between our two Governments in November 1973 and January 1974, and your own suggestion of a line of peace in Jammu & Kashmir, encourage us to see this development as a help rather than a hindrance in the achievement of friendly relations. But in frankness I must tell you that we are deeply disturbed at the manner in which this step has been misconstrued by your Government and by the propaganda campaign and call for agitation and hartal across the line of control. This can only vitiate the prospects of early normalization.

6. Regarding Civil Aviation, we had invited your delegation to commence talks in New Delhi on the 20th February but this date was not convenient for your side. Your suggestion for an early meeting is being earnestly considered and I have asked our officials to try to arrange talks in the month of April, subject to mutual convenience. In the meanwhile, we hope that the atmosphere will be conducive for constructive talks.

7. We feel strongly that both our countries must desist from propaganda against each other. Nothing can be more damaging to the prospects of cooperation and the fulfillment of agreements already reached than the resumption of hostile public postures. From our side I can assure you we will do nothing to encourage suspicion and hostility towards Pakistan and I hope your Government will also exercise similar restraint.

With best regards,

Yours sincerely,

(Sd)

Indira Gandhi.
0872. Statement issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Sikkim.

Islamabad, April 11, 1975.

“The grave news of annexation by force of the State of Sikkim* by India must be a matter of great concern to the world and, in particular, to the States of this region.”

“India has once again, demonstrated its predilection for resorting to the use of force in ordering its relations with its neighbours instead of basing them on the principles of respect for territorial integrity of States and non-interference in their internal affairs.”

“This disturbing pattern of approach to relations with smaller neighbouring States must inevitably shake confidence in India’s commitment to a policy of building durable peace in the region.”

“Only last September India took action to erode the status of Sikkim by reducing it to what it termed an ‘Associate State’. India did so by an act of its parliament although the parliament had no legal competence, whatever to legislate for the Himalayan State. And now even the act of the Indian legislature has been negated through aggression against this small and defenceless neighbour.”

“What the world feared might be India’s real intention has been confirmed by the annexation of the State. There is a vast difference between actual practice and India’s professions of commitment to peaceful methods of settling disputes.”

* The spokesman was referring to the Sikkim State joining the Indian Union by an amendment of the Indian Constitution.
Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto to Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.

Rawalpindi, April 25, 1975.

Dear Madam Prime Minister,

I wish to thank you for your reply of 20 March 1975 to my letter of 25 February, 1975.

2. My letter pledges the resolve of the Government of Pakistan to promote the Simla spirit. It is, therefore, a matter of satisfaction to read that your administration is likewise determined to remove all impediments that may inhibit the implementation of the Simla Agreement.

3. It was, and it still remains, our hope that such an attitude would govern the pronouncements of your Government and media. The adverse reaction in India to the lifting of the United States arms embargo would have been perhaps understandable if the decision discriminated against India and benefited only Pakistan and, even more important, if it deflected U.S. from the course of dialogue and negotiation or had resulted in any change in our settled policy to continue steadfastly to work for durable peace in the subcontinent.

4. You will no doubt recall the circumstances which led the United States to impose the embargo. Since then we have extended recognition to Bangladesh as a sovereign state and have concluded and signed several agreements with your country. Would it not have been contrary to logic and reason for the embargo to continue when the events which led to its imposition in the first place are so much behind us.

5. If I spoke of the disparity in the matter of defence capability between our two countries, it was also to underscore the point that, given its preponderant military strength India had no reason to expect threat from Pakistan. In such a desperate situation, however, it is only natural that the relatively smaller country would cast about for means to assure its own defence and security. This impulse operates almost independent of the geo-political considerations to which you have alluded in your letter. Even if these considerations were held to be of absolute validity, they would still not add up to the propositions that Pakistan should be left militarily helpless. We in Pakistan, by adopting measures to attain a needed degree of defence capability certainly do not have any desire to generate an arms race in the region. We know the futility of such an endeavour. Nor we are prepared to pay the price in human misery that such an attempt will entail.

6. The accord reached between you and Sheikh Abdullah has caused concern to our people because they had hoped that any steps you chose to take in this regard would be in accord with the Simla Agreement. It, therefore, inevitably follows that a line of peace in Jammu and Kashmir cannot be one that is arbitrarily imposed. It can only be a line that takes into account our recognized position on the principle of self determination, a principle to which both our governments are committed.

7. I welcome your suggestion to explore with us mutually acceptable methods of built in safe guards to reduce tensions and to avoid the likelihood of future conflicts between our two countries. I had already, in my letter of 25 February indicated our desire to see peace established in the subcontinent on the universally accepted principles of peaceful co-existence. I reiterate my hope that on these foundations we can erect an edifice of durable peace between our two countries and peoples.

8. It is against this background that we are studying the recent proposals of your Government regarding the arrival in New Delhi of a civil aviation team for Pakistan. We are anxious that these talks take place as soon as mutually convenient. That attempt to remove one more irritant from our bilateral relations can get under way.

9. Like you, we cannot also gain say the desirability, and indeed the urgency, of both countries desisting from hostile public postures. We reiterate our firm willingness to discharge the obligation undertaken by us in this regard. In fact we have, once again impressed upon our information media the imperative need for refraining from hostile propaganda as agreed to between our two Governments.

10. Recently, we have had the occasion to draw the attention of your authorities to several instances of hostile propaganda against Pakistan. It is my hope that your Government will take the step necessary to ensure that such instances do not occur.

11. In conclusion, Madam Prime Minister, I wish to reassure you our sincere desire to create an atmosphere that would be conducive to constructive and meaningful step being taken so that the process of normalization of relations between the two countries can continue a pace.

With regards,

Yours sincerely

Joint Communique issued at the end of the talks between Indian Foreign Secretary Kewal Singh and Pakistan Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi.

New Delhi, May 20, 1975.

At the invitation of Mr. Kewal Singh, Foreign Secretary, Government of India, His Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi, Foreign Secretary, Government of Pakistan, paid a visit to India from May 15 to May 20, 1975, to discuss the normalization of relations envisaged in the Simla Agreement. The delegation of Pakistan included senior officials from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Ministry of Fuel, Power and Natural Resources, the Civil Aviation Division, the Department of Civil Aviation, and a representative of the Pakistan International Airways Corporation. The delegation of India included senior officials from the Ministry of External Affairs, Ministry of Tourism & Civil Aviation, Department of Civil Aviation, representatives of Air India and Indian Airlines Corporation and the Department of Irrigation, Ministry of Agriculture and Irrigation. During his stay, His Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi was received by the Prime Minister of India, Shrimati Indira Gandhi and the Minister for External Affairs, Mr. Y.B. Chavan.

The two Foreign Secretaries welcomed the opportunity of meeting again after a lapse of about eight months to review the discussions on civil aviation matters including the 1971 cases pending before the International Civil Aviation Organization. Various formulations were discussed with a view to resolving this matter amicably so as to enable the resumption of air links and over flights between the two countries. Both sides felt that a resolution of this matter will facilitate further improvement of relations between the two countries. The two Foreign Secretaries agreed that there was a need for another round of talks before this matter could be resolved in a manner which is fully satisfactory to both sides.

At the initiative of the Government of India, the Government of Pakistan had earlier agreed to the exchange of views on various aspects of the Salal hydroelectric plant about which some objections had been raised by Pakistan. As a result of discussions in New Delhi, the two Foreign Secretaries instructed their respective senior officials in the two delegations concerned with this Project to discuss and satisfy the Pakistan side that the design of the plant was in conformity with the requirements of the Indus Waters Treaty. In this connection, it was also agreed that the Indian side will supply within one month from the date of receipt of the request, to the Pakistan officials such additional information relating to the design criteria of the Plant which has a bearing on the objections raised by Pakistan. The two Indus Commissioners will then meet and endeavour to resolve the matter within two months. The two Commissioners will keep their Governments informed of the progress made in this regard so that in case of difficulties fresh Government instructions can be given for their resolution under the Indus Water Treaty, 1960.

The two Foreign Secretaries recalled the commitment of their Prime Ministers to the Simla Agreement and emphasized their determination to carry forward, in a spirit of mutual accommodation and goodwill, the normalization of relations between the two countries. The opportunity was utilized for having an in-depth review of the various agreements signed since September 1974 in order to bring about a more meaningful implementation of these agreements. There was also a useful and frank exchange of views on matters of bilateral concern and of regional interest. It was acknowledged that hostile propaganda against each other is an obstacle in the way of attaining good-neighbourly relations and effective steps should be taken to implement the existing Understanding regarding hostile radio broadcasts. It was agreed further steps would be taken to curb all forms of hostile propaganda against each other.

“I find it is necessary to comment on Mrs. Indira Gandhi’s reported remark that recent developments* in India have brought the greatest happiness to Pakistan. She has suggested to her people to realize what that means. Mrs. Gandhi seems to be either grossly misinformed or is raising a smokescreen to cover the realities of India’s present crisis.”

“What makes her remarks more painful is that not one word has been uttered by any official spokesman or agency in Pakistan on recent development in India. We do not gloat over the predicaments of others. We take a serious and long-term view of such situation. Pakistan subscribes to the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of other states. We scrupulously adhere to it even in the case of India, despite India’s frequent violations of it in the case of Pakistan. The people of Pakistan have had enough trouble caused by external subversion and intervention. We realize only too well that such shortsighted and misconceived policies lead to calamitous results beyond the boundaries of the State against which they are employed.”

“India’s present problems are of her own making. To try to involve Pakistan in them is a crude, diversionary manoeuver that is bound to fail. The people of India cannot be so naive or innocent as to be misled by such stratagems. These are hoary tactics and they are doomed to miscarry.”

“Mrs. Indira Gandhi must know the Pakistan of today will not tolerate aggression or external interference. She would therefore, be well advised to concentrate her attention exclusively on India’s internal situation for the good of her country and its downtrodden and oppressed millions.”

“Whatever the state of affairs in India, Pakistan standard committed to the Simla Agreement. In this context, we are prepared to receive even tomorrow an Indian delegation to resume the suspended talks on civil aviation.”

“At the same time, we cannot lower our guard. We are resolved to remain more vigilant in order to defend the nation’s independence and territorial integrity. We have to be watchful lest Mrs. Indira Gandhi bedeviled and bewildered by the present crisis, seeks to extricate herself from this mess by embarking upon an adventurist course against Pakistan. Such a course was adopted more than three years ago. In the period of time which has elapsed since, the representative Government of the people of Pakistan has not remained dormant. Pakistan today is more united, stronger and more capable than ever before to meet any attack or aggression. Nobody should have any misapprehension on that score.”

Aide Memoire of the Ministry of External Affairs regarding some tendentious remarks by the Attorney General of Pakistan.

New Delhi, July 18, 1975.

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, and has the honor to state as follow:

According to reports appearing in the Pakistan press on the proceedings of the case against the National Awami Party, the Attorney General of Pakistan made the following remarks concerning India*:

(i) “On the other hand he (Khan Abdul Gaffer Khan) crusaded for the entire Muslim nation being left to the tender mercies of the Hindus who later proved to be proverbial wolf in sheep's clothing for the hapless Indian Muslim minority”;

(ii) “Mrs. Indira Gandhi told President Nixon that in the British division of the sub-continent Pakistan had most unjustly been given both Baluchistan and Pakhtoonistan”; and

(iii) It is an irony that whereas King Ahmed Shah Durrani had rushed to the rescue of Indian Muslim brethren from the Maratha hegemony the present day scions of the dynasty have not only been utterly apathetic to the suffering of the Indian Muslims, but had joined hand with the Hindus to undo Pakistan. NAP – Afghan - Indian collusion against Pakistan does not, of course, permit condemnation of India”.

3. The Government of India are greatly surprised to note that an official of the Pakistan Government of the status of Attorney General should have thought it fit to make tendentious and factually incorrect statements about India. For instance, there is absolutely no basis for attributing certain observations to the Prime Minister of India which she is alleged to have made to the former President of the U.S.A., Mr. Richard Nixon. To say the least, it is quite unethical that such a baseless allegation should be made against the Prime Minister of India during the proceedings of the Supreme Court in Pakistan. Government of India, therefore, takes serious exception to these remarks.

4. The other remarks of the Pakistan Attorney General regarding Indian Muslims and the majority community in India have an obvious communal tinge and lack any legal justification or propriety. There seems no reason whatsoever why such observations should have been made at all as they have little relevance to the case being argued by the Attorney General.

5. While drawing the attention of the Government of Pakistan to these instances which constitute a serious violation of the spirit and objectives of the Simla Agreement, the Government of India hopes that the Attorney General of Pakistan will be suitably advised not to make such subjective and factually incorrect observations against India or to unnecessarily drag India into a matter which is primarily of Pakistan’s domestic concern. Such unwarranted observations by a high official of the Pakistan Government are bound to cause misunderstanding between the two Governments.

6. The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, the assurances of its highest consideration.

0877. Aide Memoire of the Government of Pakistan regarding normalization of relations.

February 16, 1976.

The Embassy of Switzerland, Pakistan Affairs Division, has received the following message from the Government of Pakistan, dated February 16, 1976.

“The Government of Pakistan has in the past few months addressed a number of communications to the Government of India emphasizing Pakistan’s sincere desire for good neighbourly relations with India and outlining measures that would help to achieve that objective by removing existing impediments to normalization. For instance, Pakistan has already suggested a method of resolving the over-flights issue based on the formulation proposed by the Indian Foreign Secretary, which almost wholly accords with the expressed Indian position on this subject. Recently, Pakistan has also proposed that experts of the two sides meet to resolve the question of delimitation of the maritime boundary between the two countries. Further evidence of Pakistan’s desire to normalize and promote good relations with India is evident from the assurances given to Indian officials, during the recent visit of the Indian trade delegation, of Pakistan’s determination to bring about a greater balance in its trade with India, despite an acute shortage of foreign exchange.

Pakistan now proposes to go further in its desire to facilitate trade and promote travel between the two countries. It has decided to restore the rail links with India through the Wagah/Attari route. Action to restore this is now in hand.

This initiative is in accord with Pakistan’s settled policy to continue the process of normalization. We trust it will draw an appropriate response from the Government of India. It is also hoped that such evidence of Pakistan’s desire to continue with the normalization process will dispel notions, which of late have been gaining currency in Indian Government circles, that Pakistan is somehow dragging its feet over the implementation of the Simla agreement.”

Islamabad, March 16, 1976.

“The Government of Pakistan’s attention has been drawn to a statement made by Indian Foreign Minister, Mr. Y. B. Chavan, while replying to questions in the Indian Parliament on 12th March 1976, in which he accused Pakistan of displaying ‘contradictory attitudes’ which led to ‘serious doubts that Pakistan is genuinely interested in a normalization of relation’ with India.’

“These accusations have no validity in fact. There are three outstanding issues under the Simla agreement which remain to be settled between India and Pakistan, namely the establishment of diplomatic relations, the right to over-fly each other’s territories and the Kashmir dispute. On each of these matters a positive response is awaited from the Indian side. Pakistan proposed the re-establishment of diplomatic relations as early as 1972 and broached the subject on a number of occasions since then. India has shown no interest so far. Similarly Pakistan’s several compromise formulae for a mutually acceptable settlement on resumption of over-flights have met with no success. In October last year, in an attempt to resolve the matter Pakistan even showed willingness to accept a formulation for a settlement which was very close to India’s only to learn that India was no longer interested in the settlement of this issue at this stage.”

* Pakistan’s Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs, Mr. Aziz Ahmed, had on March 2, made a similar statement while speaking on an Adjournment Motion in the National Assembly regarding slow pace of normalization. He had also named the three outstanding issues – re-establishment of diplomatic relations, restoration of air traffic between the two countries and over-flights, and settlement of the Kashmir dispute, which he said were holding fuller normalization.

Opposing an adjournment motion sought to be moved by the Opposition’s Ahmed Raza Qasuri on the reported hostile propaganda campaign against Pakistan in the Indian Press and the Indian Government’s indifference towards issues with Pakistan, Mr. Aziz Ahmed had said while the Government of Pakistan continued repeating that relations with India were improving progressively, it was true that until nine months ago the two countries were proceeding satisfactorily in normalizing their relation step by step and the progress over the last four years in this regard was satisfactory.

He listed the areas where sufficient progress had been achieved and said: “the territories occupied by the two countries in 1971 were restored to the respective sides, the prisoners of war were released without any condition, steps were taken for the restoration of limited travel between the two countries, trade was resumed after 10 years, telecommunications and postal links and banking facilities were restored, visits to religious places on both sides were resumed and India also agreed to delimit maritime boundaries.”

Admitting that in recent times there had been some slowing down, he attributed this to India and its hostile propaganda against Pakistan.
"On the Kashmir dispute, Pakistan has been throughout ready for talks as provided in the Simla Agreement, but the Indian Government have not so far been willing to take up this issue. Pakistan has been keen to accelerate the process of normalization of relations and is ready to hold talks on any one or all of these subjects, as soon as India is willing to do so."

"The Indian Prime Minister, in an interview with the Indian weekly ‘Blitz’ of March 6, 1976 gave credence to false reports that Pakistan had undertaken clandestine shipments of arms to pro-Pakistan elements in Bangladesh. The allegation is totally without foundation."

"Notwithstanding these setbacks, for which India is responsible, it remains Pakistan’s desire and settled policy to pursue the path of normalization and promotion of friendly relations with India as laid down by the Simla Agreement."

Rawalpindi, March 27, 1976.

Dear Madam Prime Minister,

I feel it necessary to take the initiative to write to you on the question of normalization of relations between India and Pakistan. For a variety of reasons, this process appears to have come to a standstill. The mutual advantage for breaking the stalemate is self-evident. Despite the setbacks, the people of Pakistan stand committed to the objectives of durable peace between our countries.

2. It is regrettable that the process in part at least, should have been interrupted by our inability to reach agreement on the resumption of over-flights. We should have thought that the momentum of normalization generated by the agreements to restore other communications, would have facilitated an agreement on this issue. It seems pointless to enumerate here the various stages through which these negotiations have passed without achieving results.

3. On our part, we have earnestly explored the question of how we can increase our trade and have, in that context, restored the rail link with India at Wagah and have also agreed to delimit the maritime boundary between the two countries. We have, thereby sought to keep intact the process of normalization. However, so long as there is no progress on other outstanding issues such efforts can be only of partial value and attain peripheral results.

4. In order, therefore, to impart to the normalization process the impetus that it needs and in keeping with our sincere desire to improve relations with India we would be prepared to go to the length of withdrawing Pakistan’s case from ICAO. How else can the impasse be broken?

5. I trust that now the problem of over flights should stand resolved. This ought to enable us to turn our attention to the remaining issues envisaged in the Simla Agreement.

With regards.

Yours sincerely,

0880. Letter of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi to Pakistan Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

New Delhi, April 11, 1976.

Dear Prime Minister,

Thank you for your letter of the 27th March. You have referred to the present impasse in the normalization of relations between Pakistan and India. This stalemate is not of India’s making. We have been acting on our firm belief that the Simla Agreement enjoins us to persevere sincerely in our efforts towards the establishment of durable peace and harmonious bilateral relations between our countries. I welcome the prospect opened up in your letter of restarting the process of normalization of relations which would pave the way for reconciliation of relations and the promotion of peace and stability on our sub-continent.

2. I am glad to learn that you now find it possible to offer to withdraw the case pending before the ICAO. The Civil Aviation problem has indeed come in the way of the process of normalization and your willingness to withdraw it is helpful.

3. I am prepared to instruct our Foreign Secretary to get in touch with his counterpart in Pakistan and arrange for a meeting at a mutually convenient date for joint deliberations to discuss pending matters such as air-links between our countries, over-flights and the resumption of rail and road communications. We are prepared to go further and discuss measures for the restoration of diplomatic relations with your representatives.

4. On hearing from you, the schedule for holding such meetings, particularly those arising out of the provisions of the Simla Agreement, can begin. But, in the meantime, I think it is important to make renewed and purposeful efforts to improve the climate of our relations by firmly curbing propaganda which creates mistrust of each other, and desisting from steps which may be hostile to the interests of the other country. The recent statements and observations about India emanating from your side have caused us concern and have given our people the impression that Pakistan wants to arouse suspicion regarding India’s policies and intentions towards her neighbours. This is regrettable and hardly conducive to the fulfillment of the Simla Agreement to which you have referred in your letter. We are convinced that none of the countries on the sub-continent can benefit from tensions. In order to progress more purposefully towards the promotion of the welfare of our peoples, we should recognize the logic of our inter-dependence and the need for a cooperative relationship.

With regards,

Yours sincerely

0881. Letter from the Pakistan Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Islamabad, April 18, 1976.

Dear madam Prime Minister,

I thank you for your letter of 11 April.

I was impelled to write to you in an earnest effort to resume the process of normalization of our relations by resolving the impasse over the issue of over-flights and air-links.

Your response suggests that we should now be able to take another step towards that objective. We would welcome your delegation to visit Islamabad to conclude an agreement on restoration of over-flights and air-links and to discuss resumption of diplomatic relations and other matters mentioned in your letter. My Foreign Secretary has been instructed to contact his counterpart to arrange a mutually convenient date.

I agree that both countries should eschew hostile propaganda against each other. How can we not share the views that causes of tension in our relations should be removed?

However, I regret to note that you think that it is Pakistan which is at fault. On our side, we are not unmindful of a number of statements which have recently emanated from India and which cannot possibly help in creating a climate conducive to the fulfillment of the objectives of the Simla Agreement.

This notwithstanding, I believe that, given goodwill on both sides, we should be able to overcome impediments to the normalization of our relations as envisaged by that agreement.

With regard,

Yours sincerely,

0882. Letter from the Indian Foreign Secretary Jagat Mehta to the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan Agha Shahi.

New Delhi, April 29, 1976.

Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi

29th April, 1976

Dear Mr. Aga Shahi,

Please refer to your message of 23rd April. We agree that in the spirit of the letters exchanged between our two Prime Ministers, representatives of the two countries should meet and work out the modalities of normalizing our relations, as envisaged in the Simla Agreement. We are as keen as you are to move towards the resumption of over-flights and air services between the two countries. As stated by our Prime Minister, we further deem it desirable that in such a meeting, other pending issues, like restoration of rail and road links, acceleration of trade exchange etc. and the resumption of diplomatic relations can also be simultaneously examined and settled.

The timing of the meeting presents some difficulties for me. I have some longstanding engagements which include playing host to foreign visitors. As you may know, we have also made commitments for discussions with Bangladesh which are urgent and important. Much as I would wish to be able to have our meeting in the first week of May, it does not appear feasible. The Iranian Prime Minister is visiting India on the 10th May. A meeting could have been squeezed in the early part of the second week of May even though it would coincide with the visit of a Technical Delegation from Bangladesh. Depending on the dates when you are likely to return to Islamabad after your engagements abroad, may I suggest that our delegation plan to be in Islamabad for 3 / 4 days on/or after the 19th of May. This would incidentally allow time for preparations for purposeful deliberations. We certainly attach importance to the resumption of this dialogue, which we hope, will lead to early fulfillment of the steps envisaged in the Simla Agreement.

Yours sincerely,
(Jagat Mehta)
Joint Statement issued at the end of India – Pakistan Talks on normalization of relations between the two countries.

Pursuant to the letter written by Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto on March 27, and the reply of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi of April 11, the delegations of India and Pakistan met in Islamabad from May 12 to 14, 1976, with the objective of resuming normalization of relations between the two countries as envisaged in the Simla Agreement. The discussions were held in a frank and friendly atmosphere.

His Excellency Shri J. S. Mehta, Foreign Secretary led the Indian delegation. He was assisted by representatives of the Ministries of External Affairs, Tourism and Civil Aviation, Finance, Home Affairs, Railways, Shipping and Transport and Commerce. The Pakistani delegation was led by Mr. Agha Shahi, Foreign Secretary. He was assisted by the representatives of the Ministries of Foreign Affairs, Railways, Finance, Communications, Commerce, Interior, Information and Broadcasting, Law, Aviation Division, the Departments of Civil Aviation, Ports and Shipping and Pakistan International Airlines Corporation.

In regards to matters relating to civil aviation, the two delegations discussed the modality of withdrawing the cases and counter claim pending before the Council of the International Civil Aviation Organization and agreed to send a joint letter to the Council for the purpose. They further agreed to the resumption of over flights and the restoration of air links between the two countries. It was decided that expert delegations from the two countries will meet to work out the necessary details.

The two delegations agreed to resume goods and passenger traffic by rail through the Wagah/Attari border. In this connection the Pakistan delegation stated that the rail track on its side was already functional. The India delegation undertook to carry out the necessary repairs on its side as soon as possible.

The two sides recognized the advantage that would accrue to trade between the two countries with the resumption of freighting of goods by rail.

It was decided that the experts of the two countries should meet urgently to work out a detailed agreement regarding interchange, freight rating, compensation claims, custom formalities, the creation of a wagon pool, etc. for the goods and passenger traffic between the two countries.

The two sides agreed to grant multiple journey visas valid for one year to the members of the railway staff operating on scheduled services along the specified routes.
The two delegations agreed that goods meant for the other country could also be transported by road up to the Wagah/Attari border. For this purpose, they undertook to make necessary arrangements for the trans-shipment, warehousing, bonding and custom clearance, etc.

The two delegations discussed the question of early re-establishment of diplomatic relations between their countries. They agreed that each country should be represented by an Ambassador with supporting staff in the capital of the other country. In view of the problems which had been faced in the past in the functioning of their respective diplomatic missions, the two delegations re-affirmed their adherence to the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations 1961 to which they were party and agreed on a basis of reciprocity, to grant each other’s missions all facilities and courtesies for their normal functioning.

The two delegations reviewed the working of the Indo-Pakistan Trade Agreement of January 15, 1975, and the Shipping Protocol of January 15, 1975. They agreed that in terms of Article 3 of the Trade Agreement, in addition to state trading organizations, the private sector be also enabled, with effect from July 15, 1976, to participate in the trade between the two countries subject to the laws, rules, regulations and procedures in force in their respective countries from time to time.

The two delegations also agreed that the Joint Committee envisaged under Article 9 of Trade Agreement should be constituted immediately to review the working of that Agreement and that the first meeting of the Joint Committee should be held at the Commerce Secretaries’ level as soon as possible and, in any case, before the end of 1976.

The two sides decided that a further meeting of the respective shipping experts should be held, as early as possible, to review the Protocol on Shipping as provided in Article 22 of that protocol.

The two delegations reviewed the existing visa agreement for regulating travel between the two countries. They noted that the arrangements envisaged in that agreement were working satisfactorily and required no change.

The two delegations discussed measures for promoting cultural and scientific exchanges as envisaged in the Simla Agreement. They agreed that further discussions on these measures could be undertaken in due course.

The two sides held discussions on the question of the detainees and agreed that this humanitarian issue is needed to be resolved expeditiously. They also agreed to make efforts to locate persons still untraced and repatriate them with all possible dispatch in accordance with the existing working arrangements.

The leader of the Indian delegation, His Excellency Shri J. S. Mehta, was received by the President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan.

The Indian delegation warmly thanked the delegation of Pakistan for its hospitality.

We have studied with care the references to India in Prime Minister Bhutto’s speeches and press conference in Peking. The gesture of protest by our Charge d’Affaires at Prime Minister Bhutto’s statement during the banquet given by him was legitimate and justified. It should moreover have been entirely expected by Prime Minister Bhutto, as it had taken place once before in similar circumstances two years ago. Our representative could not but protest and express our concern if the Prime Minister of Pakistan chose once more to introduce discordant notes when the process of normalization between our two countries through direct, peaceful and bilateral contacts have just started. On India’s part, we will continue to strive sincerely for friendship and cooperation in the sub-continent which we believe can best be achieved without outside interference.

Letter from Foreign Secretary J. S. Mehta to Heads of Indian Mission abroad.

New Delhi, June 16, 1976.

Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi

J. S. Mehta
Foreign secretary

No.PI/103/57/74       June 16, 1976

Subject : Resumption of diplomatic and social contacts with Pakistani Missions abroad

My dear Head of Mission,

As you are aware, the Joint Statement signed at Islamabad on May 14, 1976 envisages the re-establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries. It was further agreed that each country should be represented in the other country by an Ambassador with supporting staff. These arrangements are to come into effect more or less simultaneously between the 17th and 24th July, 1976.

In view of the above developments, it has become necessary to revise the instructions issued in Ministry’s express letter No. DII-557(3)/73 of 31st October, 1973. It has accordingly been decided that normal protocol practice with Pakistani missions may be resumed. However, our approach should be based on a careful calculation of the extent to which the Pakistani Missions are likely to reciprocate as in practice do so. You may resume normal social contacts with the Pakistani Heads of Mission and at a lower level on the basis of anticipated or actual reciprocity. It follows that the Pakistani Heads of Mission and diplomats may be invited to our National Day functions and reciprocally Indian Heads of Mission and diplomats may attend Pakistani National Day Functions. However, no one should attend any Pakistani function directed against India such as the commemoration of the Defense of Pakistan Day which falls on September 6.

In order to enable the Ministry to monitor the extent to which Pakistani diplomats abroad are prepared to normalize contacts with their Indian counterparts, we would like to receive reports wherever there is a departure from the accepted protocol by the Pakistani Head of Mission/Diplomat.

Yours sincerely,

(J. S. Mehta)

Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto said Pakistan stood for normalization of relations with India but it could not brook any compromise on the fundamental Kashmir issue.

Pakistan, he said, had made it clear that “genuine and sincere normalization with India cannot come until and unless there is settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute on the basis of the right of self determination”.

Mr. Bhutto was speaking at a reception hosted in his honour by the Command and Staff College, Quetta.

Mr. Bhutto said Pakistan was not against the spirit of accommodation, adjustments and compromise, but, he pointed out there were certain fundamental issues on which a compromise could not be made. Kashmir was one such issue.

He said when compromise took place on fundamental issues, then, instead of solving the problems, it made the problems more complicated than before.

The Prime Minister said many issues could be solved on the basis of give and take which was part and parcel of civilized conduct. But this principle could not be taken to its logical conclusion in each and every aspect of human life affecting the vital interests of a nation.

On certain basic issues a compromise only lead to greater tension and disaster, the Prime Minister added.

He said States have tried to find compromises on fundamental problems, but instead of resolving the issues they had created greater complication and enlarged the area of confrontation.

Not quoting a contemporary example which might give rise to any misunderstanding, the Prime Minister referred to the past when the Munich compromise led to World War II. We do not have a Munich mentality, he stressed.

He, however, said Pakistan was not irrationally committed to certain matters. It had a practical approach while standing by its principles.

Pakistan, he said, believed that there was room for normalization. Normalization could take place without a settlement of the problem. But until the fundamental problem was resolved there could not be a move towards a progressive normalization leading to co-existence and co-operation the Prime Minister said.

Referring to those who called for taking the Kashmir dispute back to the United Nations, Mr. Bhutto explained the Government’s point of view on the matter. He recalled the experience of the past and said the United Nations for which Pakistan had all the respect and regard, had its limitations. “We have been to the United Nations”.

Mr. Bhutto pointed out that everyone knew how the power of the Security Council had been ineffective on so many issues.

Kashmir, he said, was the oldest issue before the United Nations. There were more documents in the archives of the world organization on Kashmir than on Cyprus or Palestine. The U.N. archives are all full with documents on the Kashmir dispute, he said.

In the context of lack of efficacy of the world body to implement its decisions, the Prime Minister made a mention of the veto power. He said even on those matters on which a veto had not been applied, mandate of the world organization were not implemented. These matters included the U.N. resolution 242 on Palestine.

Before a veto was applied on Kashmir, there were resolutions on the dispute by the world body, in 1948 and 1949, calling for a plebiscite. These resolutions were not implemented because one of the parties was not prepared to comply with them.

The Prime Minister said in spite of the well-known facts, some people here asked for going back to the United Nations on the question of Kashmir, shutting their eyes to the "very long" experience of the past.

The Prime Minister said Pakistan believed that bilateral negotiations must be given a chance as this was the most efficacious method of resolving dispute peacefully.

Noting the progress already achieved under the 1972 Simla Accord, Mr. Bhutto said all problems between Pakistan and India except the Kashmir dispute had been settled.

Now, an effort must be made to solve the Kashmir issue through bilateral negotiations, he said. However, he added, if these efforts failed “we can then consider other peaceful methods of settlement”. If necessary, Pakistan could also go to the United Nations, but “we will await bilateral negotiations”

As for India, he again stressed that a genuine effort should be made by both sides to solve the remaining problem through bilateral negotiations.
The Prime Minister emphatically said that no transit facilities had been given to India. The Indian Railway arrangements ceased at the border. Their operations did not extend to the Pakistani side.

He said that the whole approach of Pakistan was based on the “supreme interest of Pakistan and of the people of Pakistan”.

Pakistan, he said, had taken a rational approach in the world-wide perspective because no nation could move in a style completely isolated from the rest of the world. “We have to take into account the movement of the world”. The international climate and the various contemporary tendencies and propensities on the international scene had to be kept in mind.

Rawalpindi, August 11, 1976.

Prime Minister House

11th August 1976

Dear Madam Prime Minister,

I believe it is a matter of equal gratification to both of us that communications and diplomatic relations between our two countries are now restored. Once we reach a fair and honorable settlement of the major problem which has bedeviled us for more than a quarter century, I see no reason why our two countries should not be two mutually cooperative neighbours and, each in its own sphere, devote all our energies and resources to the battle against our common foes: hunger, ignorance and disease.

It is in this spirit and with the anticipation of fair dealing and amicable dialogue that I am writing to you about the treasure which is being unearthed in Jaipur under your Government’s orders. Considering that both our countries have taken the same view of the rights of the princely order and, with complete justification, abolished it as an appendage or association of the colonial regime, I am certain that no one can maintain the argument that your Government’s action involves confiscation of the private property of any individual or dynasty.
From all accounts, it is clear that the treasure is a historical inheritance of the subcontinent which was bequeathed to it by its pre-colonial sovereignties, especially the Mughal emperors in coalition with their Rajput allies. That, before or during the anarchy which ravaged the subcontinent and invited foreign domination, these assets were mis-appropriated and hoarded by a particular war-lord has no bearing whatsoever on their legal or moral ownership.

As your expedition of locating the treasure proceeds, I would urge you to remain cognizant of Pakistan’s claim to its due share of this wealth. This is an asset which was not known at the time of the partition between the two successor states (then called Dominions) of India and Pakistan. However, the order that was enforced with the agreement of both Governments, did not fail to provide that any property or benefits can be shared between them where such sharing is just and equitable. The historical provenance of this treasure, regardless of the location of its physical discovery, makes it the joint patrimony of our two countries and I am confident that, with an approach based on equity, we will dis-countenance any usurpation and amicably arrive at a formula for the division between us.

I trust you will appreciate that we would not wish this matter to be handled in a contentious, far less acrimonious, manner. I suppose that both our countries dispose of enough moral resources not to allow every claim to develop into a dispute but to settle it with fairness, vision and maturity.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

Zulfikar Ali Bhutto

SHAH NAWAZ sent for me this afternoon to convey preliminary findings of their hijacking investigations. The culprits claimed they acted in protest against (a) “demise of democracy and detention of 50,000 political prisoners”, (b) “denial of rights to Kashmiris” and (c) “treatment of Muslims in India.” Pakistan had suppressed this part of the report when announcing decision to try the hijackers lest we thought Pakistan was encouraging anti-Indian propaganda. In fact, Pakistan was anxious to avoid anything that would not promote friendly relations and therefore “as a gesture to India” none of this would be allowed to come out. HYAT MEHDI, also present added further explanation that Pakistan had taken this decision because recently statements had been made at the United Nations “such statements have to be made” but Pakistan was genuinely wanting to promote good relations and to demonstrate this to us; he seemed to be implying that this “gesture” was intended as a sort of balance for the less amicable actions in New York.

2. I said we had throughout greatly appreciated the tact and skill with which Pakistan had handled the whole unfortunate affair and would certainly appreciate this further cooperativeness we had refrained from asking any questions about hijackers till now not only because it was Pakistan’s right and responsibility to take preliminary steps, now completed, but because we were sure the investigation was in good hands and we would be told in due time. We were obliged now to be told what were the mad ideas by which the culprits were possessed. However, I wondered how the silence over their alleged motives could be maintained when the case came to trial; would it be held in camera? SHAH NAWAZ said he had not thought about this but HAYAT MEHDI said he had felt sure there were ways in which matters could be kept from the public. To my further questions SHAH NAWAZ replied:
(a) No date was fixed for the trial; I was left to think the laws’ delay might take considerable time.

(b) The Pakistani laws for breaking which the hijackers would be tried would be whole host of offences, from illegal entry to possession of weapons and intimidation of people; it was not quite clear whether piracy was cognizable offence in municipal law. (sic)

3. I deliberately refrained from asking for particulars about the hijackers as SHAH NAWAZ did not seem disposed to give any. I can revert to the subject if and when you want. I did however ask why the number of men to be tried was given as five when six had been taken into custody. Hilaly rang me back later to confirm that there had been an error and the correct number was six, all of whom would be tried.

0889. Letter from External Affairs Minister Y. B. Chavan to Pakistan Minister of State for Defence and Foreign Affairs Aziz Ahmad.

New Delhi, September 17, 1976.

Excellency,

I am writing to you to convey the sincere thanks of the Government of India to the Government of Pakistan for the co-operation extended to us in securing the safe return of the passengers and the crew as well as the Indian Airlines aircraft involved in the hijacking incident which took place on 10th September, 1976. I would particularly like you to convey my sincere thanks, to H.E. the Prime Minister of Pakistan, whom I troubled over the phone in your absence and who kindly assured me of every assistance from the Government of Pakistan in ensuring the safety of the persons on board and the aircraft.

For all accounts from our officers as well as the passengers who have returned, the Pakistan officials and authorities greatly exerted themselves and their eventual success speaks of their ability, tact and prudence. The passengers and crew also spoke warmly of the courtesies shown to them at Lahore airport by the Pakistan authorities. The co-operation in tackling this unfortunate episode was in keeping with the spirit of normalization and augurs well for the improvement of good neighbourly relations between our countries.

I understand that your Government is conducting a preliminary investigation on the identity, circumstances and motives of the hijackers. We hope the results of these investigations would be conveyed to us as soon as they are completed.

With the assurances of my highest consideration,

(Y.B. Chavan)

No.080. December 30, 1976

Foreign Secretary from Ambassador

Interview with BHUTTO referred to in my letter No. ISL/AMB/851/76 dated 21st December was given to me this evening. Lasted 80 minutes, mostly devoted to general comments on course of Indo-Pakistan relations, which can await reporting by beg, but following matters require urgent attention.

2. BHUTTO said visit opportune for enabling him to tell me “before you read it in newspaper or are told by AZIZ AHMED or AGHA SHANI” that hijackers of our plane were being released because thorough enquiries by two or three separate agencies showed them to be “nothing more then cranks”. He was advised Pakistan had fulfilled its international law obligations to us by returning plane and detaining hijackers pending investigations and was now free to do as it thought best. Not much had been allowed to appear in press but opposition was trying to make capital out of detention of “Kashmiri martyrs”, so BHUTTO decided best way to defuse issue was to free them.

3. I said I was certainly glad not to be left to learn this from press, but would like time to consult Delhi about what we might wish to do in this eventuality so unexpected after Foreign office had officially told me hijackers would be tried for breaking Pakistani laws. I had even been assured Pakistan was deliberately suppressing from media culprits’ allegations about acting in protest against emergency, etc. and none of these would come out even at trial. BHUTTO said I could discuss further with AZIZ or SHAHI as he did not know what I had been told but he had just “a couple of days ago” seen file that no case could be made out against hijackers in law so he had approved recommendation for their release. I said I understood legally Pakistan was free to do as it wished, but we were vitally interested party; we had not considered asking for return of culprits because Pakistan was taking legal action, but if Pakistan now changed its mind, even though we had no extradition treaty, we would surely want to cite what next step was appropriate in new circumstances. I added if Pakistan was wanting to be helpful about denying publicity to hijackers’ wild allegations about their motives, would not releasing them facilitate their falling into hands of that very opposition BHUTTO said he was trying to pre-empt? BHUTTO said “we will take care of that”, but if we asked for extradition, point would arise that they were Kashmiris, not Indians. I said Kashmiris were Indians under our law, upon which BHUTTO said that will raise “that whole issue”. I said it was precisely for that reason that I wondered if Pakistan could not keep the men in custody at least till I could consult Delhi. BHUTTO said he could not promise anything but I could talk to AZIZ or SHAHI, he had merely mentioned decision to me since I happened “by coincidence” to be with him and he did not wish me to think later he had kept it back from me.

4. As BHUTTO avoided further discussion, I shall tell AGHA SHAHI tomorrow that we understand Pakistan’s legal rights but new decision is contrary both to what we had been told Pakistan intended (including AZIZ AHMED’s statement to VISHNU AHUJA in Mexico that BHUTTO was willing to send the men back to India) and to (in) spirit of helpfulness to us displayed so far. I did not know what Delhi might wish, it might well be we would leave things entirely up to Pakistan but at least we should be given time to think over changed position, I have no doubt this is BHUTTO’s decision as part of his great concern to deny opposition any basis for accusing him of being friendly to India, and foreign here is in no position to change BHUTTO’s mind (even assuming it wants to and has not just been stringing us along all the time). BHUTTO has also obviously calculated whatever we do suits him: If we do not ask for return, he has achieved his immediate objective without controversy with us over Pakistan’s volte face; if we ask for ……………………………………….(more to follow)

New Delhi, December 31, 1976.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

I regret the delay in replying to your letter of the 11th August, 1976 in which you have specially mentioned the “treasure which is being unearthed in Jaipur”. I had asked our legal experts to give careful consideration to the claim you made on behalf of Pakistan. They are of the clear opinion that the claim has no legal basis. Incidentally, the “treasure” has turned out to be non-existent.

I fully share the gratification you have expressed at the restoration of the broken links between our two countries. We believe that with a spirit of understanding and goodwill it should be possible for us to enter into a cooperative neighbourly relationship for the benefit of our peoples.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

(Indira Gandhi)

Mr. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto,
Prime minister,

Note Recorded by Ambassador K. S. Bajpai on his meeting with Pakistan Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi on December 31, 1976.

Islamabad, January 1, 1977.

EMBASSY OF INDIA
ISLAMABAD

As reported in my telegram No.080 Mr. Bhutto informed me when I called on him on 30th December evening that he had approved the release of the hijackers of our plane; and when I sought to discuss the difficulties this would create, he advised me to go into further details with Mr. Aziz Ahmed or Mr. Agha Shahi. I accordingly phoned Mr. Agha Shahi first thing yesterday morning, repeated briefly what Mr. Bhutto had told me and asked to see him. He said he would call me as soon as possible and we met at 6.30 last night (31 December) for approximately 40 minutes. Director General Hayat Mehdi was also present.

2. Mr. Agha Shahi straightaway began by saying he had a talk with the Prime Minister, who had instructed him to explain in greater detail the Pakistani decision. In the first place, the hijackers all came “from your part of Kashmir”. The Pakistani authorities found that the hijackers were all naïve and even a bit simple, with only their ring leader showing any intelligence, and he had a personal grievance, claiming he had been dismissed from his job in Kashmir and jailed for some misdemeanor. This apart, they all claimed they had hijacked the plane to draw world attention to the Kashmir issue, which they felt was being forgotten, although the Kashmiri Muslim was being persecuted under Indian rule. Elections being imminent, the continued detention of these people would give the opposition, who had very little they could effectively project against the Government and who were looking for any stick with which to beat the Government, a real issue. Although the Pakistan government had tried to keep everything quiet, there was already criticism over the detention and any day now there might be an open demand for their release. This would force the Government into all sorts of explanations and release would appear to have been forced by opposition pressure. One thing Mr. Bhutto could not do was to plead Government of India’s case, so on full consideration he had decided to release the detainees before the opposition tried to raise the issue. Mr. Bhutto had, however, noted what I had said about the hijackers being more of a liability if they were freed, and had instructed him to examine the methods of keeping some restraint on them; he could not indicate what might be done but perhaps the court when releasing them could bind them over for good behavior. Mr. Agha Shahi would be holding a meeting of concerned officials to look into this problem and would do their best to avoid embarrassment. It had originally been intended to announce the release last night itself but in view of my talk with the Prime Minister and the impossibility of holding this meeting with all concerned officials before Monday, the announcement was being held over till Monday evening. Mr. Agha Shahi would be obliged if I could meanwhile explain the full position to my Government.

3. I said we had been assured by Mr. Shah Nawaz and Mr. Hayat Mehdi, when I was called by the former to the Foreign Office around October 12, that the hijackers would be tried for breaking the laws of Pakistan. Mr. Agha Shahi interjected that that was the original decision, which had even been publicly announced, but on further investigation it was found that this would create more difficulties because the ring leader said he would call defence witnesses “from your part of Kashmir” including Maulvi Farouq; he also said he had certain documents in a black box which in the hurry of the hijacking crisis handling, had not been taken into Pakistan custody and the relevance or value of which in a trial so long after the event was doubtful. So it was to avoid these complications that a trial was considered impossible, apart from the question of their claim of political motivations. Furthermore, it was found it would not be possible to hold the trial in camera and there would be a lot of publicity which was best avoided. I said we had also thought of all these dangers and I reminded Mr. Hayat Mehdi that I had asked in our October meeting how they could avoid publicity and had been assured that would be taken care of. Similarly, Mr. Bhutto had been much more categorical than the Foreign Secretary in telling me on December 30 that as far as the freed hijackers going around and saying things was concerned, “Don’t worry about that, we can take care of that.” Mr. Agha Shahi looked a bit staggered and said he did not know what exactly could be done, but was holding the meeting on Monday precisely to tie things up. I said the uncertainty on this point Mr. Agha Shahi now indicated made my original fears all the more justified, and it seemed to me that the hijackers at liberty would be more of a political liability in the sense Mr. Bhutto had in mind than if they were retained in detention. Mr. Agha Shahi said this had been carefully considered and it was felt the detention would give the Opposition an effective issue which they presently lacked. I said M/s Agha Shahi and Mehdi knew their country better than I did and Mr. Bhutto knew it best of all as he had his fingers on many pulses, but I had to be frank; I simply could not see the detention of these hijackers having any real effect whatsoever on the outcome of the elections. All Mr. Agha Shahi could say to that was that this was a matter which had to be left to Prime Minister Bhutto’s judgment.

4. I then reverted to the original assurances that these gentlemen would be tried, and referred briefly to the whole atmosphere in Indo-Pakistan relations since the normalisation steps were completed in July. We had been building up more cooperative and harmonious attitudes and trying slowly to extend the areas of cooperation. There were many who felt the pace was very slow and to them we had pointed out the positive features which had appeared since May, of which the most encouraging had been the tact the Pakistanis had displayed over the hijacking affair. The new attitude being taken by the Pakistani authorities on this affair would raise many suspicions in India. Just as Mr. Bhutto said there were people in Pakistan who found normalization inimical to Pakistan’s interests, we had our counterparts who were very dubious about Pakistan’s intentions towards India. The release of the hijackers would only add to the misgivings felt in India about the whole future of Indo-Pakistan relations. All of us who were trying to bring about a process of re-education so that people on both sides could look at each other afresh, would have a difficult time explaining the change in Pakistan’s position after the categorical assurances given by Mr. Shah Nawaz and Mr. Mehti about the trial and especially after Mr. Aziz Ahmed had told Mr. Vishnu Ahuja in Mexico that Mr. Bhutto was even willing to send the hijackers back. We had naturally considered asking for them at the initial stages after the hijacking, when we were trying to consider that course we could follow. We had simply put the whole thing out of our mind once the Pakistanis told us they had taken such a helpful decision about prosecuting the culprits. That still seemed the best decision, but if Pakistan were not going to try them, we might want to since they had broken our law.

Mr. Agha Shahi said, “That will be impossible, it will raise the whole Kashmir issue in a big way.” I said I was aware of the possibility and precisely for that reason thought that continued detention was the best solution. If the Pakistan Government thought otherwise, we should at least be given time to consider the position as it stood today. It might be that Delhi would leave things entirely in Pakistan’s hands. We recognized the legal position under the Tokyo and The Hague Conventions which gave Pakistan full discretion to do as it please, but I was sure the Pakistan Government were not unmindful of the effects of what they might do on the course of Indo-Pakistan relations. In any case, we had at Simla agreed to promote good neighbourliness and in that spirit alone it might become necessary to seek Pakistan’s cooperation in returning the hijackers to India. I could not say what Delhi’s final views might be because I was sure our people would be as taken a back as I was when Mr. Bhutto so unexpectedly told me the new decision.

5. Mr. Agha Shahi said he would like me to explain to Delhi how the Pakistanis were also under pressure of time, for the political reasons mentioned. AS he had already said, they had intended to announce the decision last night and had only delayed matters in deference to my talk with Prime Minister. They would certainly like me to explain the whole background to Delhi but hoped I could get their reaction by Monday.

6. I again repeated the objections to any change from the decision to detain and prosecute in Pakistan and urged that we be given further time to consider our course. I re-emphasized the surprise that would be felt in Delhi which had so far assumed the Pakistani position was as communicated to me by Mr. Shah Nawaz and as supplemented by Mr. Aziz Ahmed’s statement to Mr. Ahuja in Mexico that Mr. Bhutto was willing to return the hijackers. It was only right that we be given some time to consider the new position. After further discussion on this point, Mr. Agha Shahi said he would not like to put me to inconvenience, but since it was possible for me to go to Delhi on Sunday and come back by Monday, he would hold things till Tuesday evening. It was also arranged that I would be given the hot-line facilities to talk to the Foreign Secretary in Delhi.

7. I promised to try to get through to Delhi and then speak to Mr. Agha Shahi again. Mr. Hayat Mehdi, who then saw me out of the building, said to me that he could understand the new decision being unexpected, but would earnestly urge my explaining the whole background to Delhi, pointing out the domestic political complexities. He added, “you know, this is Prime Minister’s decision and there is really nothing we can do about it.” I told him I could not guarantee Delhi’s reaction but thought it would be very difficult for us not to ask for the return of the hijackers. Mr. Hayat Mehdi said they had considered that possibility from the very start and found it would simply not be possible, as the political repercussions in Pakistan would be enormous. I said in that case, how could Mr. Aziz Ahmed tell Mr. Ahuja in Mexico that Mr. Bhutto was willing to return the hijackers? (I deliberately pointed this out twice in my conversation with Mr. Agha Shahi, and both time he had simply looked at Mr. Mehdi and not said anything.) Mr. Mehdi said he had not thought it fit to comment when I had made this statement in my talks with Mr. Agha Shahi, but frankly he was very surprised to hear me say it; he could not imagine Mr. Aziz Ahmed saying it since he knew for a fact that the possibility had been very carefully considered and very emphatically discarded.

Record of the meeting between Ambassador K.S. Bajpai and Pakistan Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi.

Islamabad, January 1, 1977.

Foreign Secretary was assisted by Mr. Hayat Mehdi, Director General and the Ambassador was accompanied by Counsellor Singha.

2. Ambassador thanked the Foreign Secretary for the meeting. He recalled his earlier meeting with Prime Minister Bhutto on 30th December and with the Foreign Secretary on 31st December. Ambassador was surprised to hear from Prime Minister Bhutto that the Government of Pakistan had decided to release the hijackers. As there are grave implications of this decision on Indo–Pakistan relations, Ambassador contacted Delhi through courtesy of Foreign Office of Pakistan. Foreign Secretary of India was out of station, Ambassador was able to establish contact with Dr. I. P. Singh, Mr. Vellodi, Secretary and Professor Dhar Secretary to Prime Minister. As discussed with the Pakistan Foreign Secretary on 31st, the Ambassador disclosed his plans to fly to Delhi on Sunday the 2nd and proposes to come back to Islamabad on the evening of 3rd to keep within the deadline of Tuesday, the 4th when government of Pakistan propose announcing release of he hijackers. I added that I should not like to anticipate what Delhi might decide but I would be failing in my duty if I did not say I felt that Delhi would consider the Pakistani intention a serious set back to Indo-Pakistan relations.

3. Ambassador pointed out that hijacking was a very serious offence of concern to the international community. Several international meetings and conventions were held to tackle this issue and prevent such a crime. Pakistan had decided to put the hijackers on trial, so India was content to leave the matter in the safe hands of Pakistan. Pakistan Government’s decision to release the hijackers is exactly opposite position to the one they had adopted so far. This presents serious implications. The hijackers had committed offences in India under the Indian law and also in Pakistan under the Pakistan law. Pakistan is quite competent to take cognizance of the offences committed in her territory and proceed with the trial. If Pakistan does not want to put the hijackers on trial, India would perhaps like to proceed with the trial. In such a case India would request Pakistan for handing over the hijackers to her.

4. Ambassador pointed out that he did not know what exactly the stand that India will take, but it is clear that India is very much concerned with this new development. Time at his disposal in Delhi will be very short and therefore he has alerted Delhi on this issue. He hopes to come back on Monday evening with his Government’s instructions.
5. Ambassador drew Foreign Secretary’s attention to the various steps taken by the two countries in normalising and improving relations between them. Release of hijackers was a great setback to Indo-Pak relations, implications of which may not have been fully weighed before taking this decision. During his meeting with the Prime Minister, it was pointed out to him that decision to release the hijackers was taken on political considerations as the Opposition would have made it an issue during the forthcoming elections. Ambassador pointed out that the Opposition parties could use the released hijackers to their advantage in the same manner as they might have used their detention. He did not see much difference in the vote catching potentialities of these hijackers whether in detention or in freedom. Even if their release would make difference of few votes, it was not going to make any difference in the results of elections. On the other hand, their release would bring major upset in the growing relations between the two countries. By weighing the advantages of the release of hijackers and the continued improvement of relations between India and Pakistan, the balance was against their release. Ambassador requested the Foreign Secretary to point this out to the Prime Minister.

6. Foreign Secretary heard the Ambassador’s views with great attention and undertook to bring it to the notice of the Prime Minister. He, however added that even if India demanded return of the hijackers “we would be bound to refuse it”. He said that decision to release the hijackers was taken after great deliberations. There were two evil courses open to “us”. The first one was to put them on trial. If a trial is held, it was difficult to make it in camera and would have to be an open one. As state secrets or security of are not involved, trial would have to be an open one. In such a trial many complicated and explosive issues like the Kashmir problem and treat of Muslims in India would come up. Hijackers Abdul Hamid was in jail for three years. The hijackers may also call Maulvi Farooq as their witness. One of the hijackers was an AMC – Army Medical Corps. He was posted in Jabalpur and did duty of a stretcher bearer during communal riots there. Besides, further investigation would have required some help from India. Considering all these factors it was decided not to proceed with the trial, as it would only have provided publicity to all those charges and done much more harm to Indo-Pakistan relations. Detention of hijackers would draw considerable criticism. The Prime Minister Bhutto, in his political judgement, does not want to wait for the time when the demand of the release of hijackers is made by the opposition parties. Release of the hijackers at that stage would appear to be conceding the demand of the opposition parties. Prime Minister has therefore decided to anticipate their demand, release the hijackers and thus deprive the opposition parties of possible criticism of the government during the elections. Decision to release the hijackers was taken in order to defuse the matter and not to allow it to become a national issue. Foreign Secretary also pointed out that there was no consensus on the hijacking issue. Even in the UN when the resolution was moved, India had tabled an amendment for the Arabs which allowed for release of culprits on political grounds.

7. Ambassador therefore pointed out that besides the two courses mentioned by the Foreign Secretary, i.e., trial or release of hijacker, a third course was also available to Pakistan that of continued detention of the hijackers. This appeared to be the best course at present before the matter receives more thorough examination.

8. Foreign Secretary mentioned that their further detention appeared to be difficult. Mr. Hayat Mehdi at this stage pointed out that Government had already announced completion of investigations. Continued detention was be difficult in these circumstances.

9. Ambassador again emphasized the adverse effect release of hijackers will have on Indo-Pak relations. Domestic political advantages gained by their release are too small when compared with the advantages of continued improvement of relations between India and Pakistan. After release of the hijackers, they may be roaming around to be utilized by any political party for its advantage. Detention of hijackers would deprive the opposition of using these persons to their advantage.

10. Foreign Secretary thereafter mentioned that administrative steps would be taken to ensure that the hijackers after release were not free to roam about. They may be bound down for good behaviour. Foreign Secretary express his inability to be a judge on the political implications and that was left to the Prime Minister to make his own judgement.

11. At the end Ambassador again emphasized that the decision to release the hijackers had surprised him. Although he could not predict the course of action that may be taken by the Government of India, there was no doubt that this decision of Government of Pakistan would have serious implications on Indo-Pak relations. He wished such a decision was not taken. After he would come back from Delhi, he would get in touch with the Foreign Secretary.

Reference our discussions in Delhi yesterday. I saw Agha Shahi this morning and told him Pakistani views regarding release of hijackers have been very carefully considered at the highest level in our Ministry and also reported to the Prime Minister. I had personally tried to put across what Bhutto and Agha Shahi had told me. Even from the view that Pakistan was motivated by the best intentions, I was obliged to inform him that our best efforts to see their points left us unable to see any merit in or validity to them. In terms of law, in terms of the interests of the international community, in terms of the future of Indo-Pak relations, even in terms of the domestic political compulsions which Pakistan said she was hoping to deal with, we felt the only course was to stick to the decision Pakistan had originally taken to try the hijackers. This was what we had been assured that Pakistan would do. This we found was what Pakistan had also informed the I.C.A.O. in writing and I quoted from their letter. We saw no reason at all to change that decision now. They had said that they had completed their investigations and the change was considered necessary in the light of the further investigations, but we did not see how they had completed their investigations. Theirs had been a sort of ex-parte investigations. Since they had merely questioned the culprits; they had not even given the full particulars of the hijackers to us and we didn’t even get a chance to tell them anything we might be able to. As regards the point that we had not ratified The Hague Convention and that Pakistan had not yet undertaken the relevant domestic legislation (Agha Shahi interjected “We have no law about it”) I said the fact remained that we were both signatories and fully committed to its purposes and obligations. I reminded him that failure to try the hijackers would be an encouragement to others to think they could get away scot-free on similar offences. Finally, any other course would carry serious hazards for future Indo-Pak relations. In short, I was instructed by my Government to ask the Pakistan Government to reconsider its latest decision and keep to the original one.

Agha Shahi said it was true we have not been given all the particulars and that in that sense the investigations was not complete but enquiries with us could not lead to ant any evidences admissible in the court whereas calling of witnesses, including political personalities, would lead to complications.
However, since it was my Government's request that Pakistan Government stick to trial, he would report to this higher authorities. I said I would await a further call from him.

At the end, incidentally, to clarify what he had claimed about our alleged non-support of the German Resolution in the UN on taking hostages, I explained the position as I was briefed to by Dr. Jagota. Agha Shahi tried to maintain that we had not agree with the German text. I simply told that it was in any case an incidental matter and that the main points were that I had already put to him.

Foreign Secretary from Ambassador

My Savingram No.02-Sav of this morning. AGHA SHAHI met me again after two hours to say he had reported our discussion to his superiors and had been asked to convey the following:

(1) In first place, Mr. Bhutto had informed me of decision to release hijackers merely as a matter of “courtesy and decency” since I happened to be with him shortly before decision was to be announced and he did not wish me to think he had deliberately withheld information, but it had not been his intention that his gesture should be used to enter into negotiations on the subject. I said if this had not been Pakistan’s intention it should have been: Pakistan Government would surely have realized matter was of serious importance to us and if they were going to act unilaterally, leaving it for us to learn the decision from the newspapers, it showed very little regard for Indo-Pakistan relations. SHAHI then changed tack, arguing they had certainly wanted to let us know in advance and were happy to give us opportunity to consider their views so that we could understand they were acting with good intentions, but there was never any question of their changing their position.

They regretted that they had been unable to convince us of their bona fides but their decision had to be between a choice of evils and they were convinced release was least harmful way of dealing with a situation which was not of their own making. He, therefore, wishes me to inform Government of India that after considering what I had said they adhered to their decision on release.

I replied that this would be disappointing and disturbing to Delhi but if Pakistanis were adamant my Government had instructed me to say the culprits should be returned to us. Shahi said I knew their position on that; it would be impossible as it would create "a much more explosive situation" for them to deal with and do much greater damage to Indo-Pakistan relations; they were under no legal obligation, having fulfilled all that they were under by returning plane and passengers. I said on that we would have to disagree as we felt that they had both legal and moral obligations. However, without going over all the arguments on both sides, I would like him to take it that my present talk with him constituted an official request for the hijackers return. Was I to take it that his remarks constituted Pakistan’s official refusal? He said, “Yes.”

Shahi added he would like me again to assure Government of India that, unwelcome their decision might be to us, it was only course open to Pakistan in view of danger of domestic political exploitation of detention or of trial. I said on this question as on question of legal obligation we would have to disagree, as it seemed to us that leaving these gentlemen at large would provoke just as much, if not more, exploitation as continued detention. Indeed, I felt bound to re-emphasize as strongly as possible hazards to Indo-Pakistan relations arising from course Pakistan now preferred. It would cause deep concern in Delhi and could do incalculable harm to our future relations. Pakistan’s decision itself was an undeserved setback to our relations and extent of further harm the released criminals would cause remained to be seen. Shahi said, as promised, this aspect had been carefully considered by concerned Pakistani authorities, and he could assure us they “would not allow the men to be made into heroes”; they would be kept under careful watch and control. They would be kept away from the press but, ominously enough, Shahi said “one or two of the opposition might try to get at them” but the authorities “would do their best”. I repeated the hazards for Indo-Pakistan relations arising from this release and emphasized that the extent of harm to those relations would be directly connected with how the hijackers behaved. We noted the Pakistani assurances of concern for our future relations and the restraints they promised to impose on the culprits and we could only now wait and see, but we deeply deplored decision neither to hold trial nor return culprits.

0896. Statement by the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs on the decision of the Government of Pakistan to release the hijackers of the Indian Airlines Boeing Aircraft.

New Delhi, January 6, 1977.

The decision of the Government of Pakistan to release the hijackers of the Indian Airlines Boeing aircraft on the plea that sufficient evidence was not available to justify the institution of criminal proceedings against them is highly regrettable.

It is contrary to the assurances given by the Government of Pakistan to the Government of India and the Council of the International Civil Aviation Organisation.

The Government of Pakistan have also not agreed to the subsequent request of the Government of India to return the offenders to India to face trial.

The Government of India deplores these moves as they are not in consonance with the process of normalization of relations between the two countries which can be strengthened only on the basis of mutual trust and understanding.

Circular Telegram addressed to Indian Missions abroad briefing them on the facts of Pakistan decision to release the hijackers of the Indian aircraft hijacked in September 1976.

New Delhi, January 7, 1977.

No. 27600 January 7, 1977

MOST IMMEDIATE

Head of Mission from Foreign Secretary.

You must have received text of statement made by our official spokesman on decision of Government of Pakistan to release hijackers of Indian Airlines Boeing plane. Following is background of these developments:

On 30th December, 1976, Pakistan Prime Minister told our Ambassador in Islamabad, who had sought an interview in another connection, that he had approved recommendation of concerned authorities in Pakistan to release the hijackers as enquiries made by several agencies showed them to be “nothing more than cranks”. Bhutto added that he was advised that Pakistan had fulfilled its obligations in international law by returning the plane and detaining the hijackers pending investigations and was now free to do as it thought best. Subsequently, Pakistan Foreign Secretary, in giving further details told the Ambassador that elections in Pakistan being imminent, continued detention of hijackers would give Opposition, which had very little else to show against Government, a stick with which to beat the ruling party. Pakistan government, he added, had faced a good deal of criticism as hijackers are from Kashmir, but domestic compulsions were such that they could not keep them under detention any longer.

Ambassador while expressing disappointment at Pakistan going back on its assurances to us, sought time for government of India to give thought to this matter.

This questions was considered at the highest level and on our instructions our Ambassador urged Pakistan authorities to try the hijackers (as they had pledged to do), and in case they did not want to try them, to return them to India to face trial. Pakistan Foreign Secretary, with whom Ambassador had several meetings, informed him on January 4 that Pakistan Government were not in a position to accept our request. On January 5, Pakistan Radio announced decision to release hijackers as “sufficient evidence was not available to justify institution of criminal proceedings against them.”
Statement by our official spokesmen has been carefully warded to avoid repercussions that might be used to put blame on us or disturb process of normalization of relations. On our part, we do not want to take any further steps in this matter. However Pakistan’s action violates assurances given not only to us verbally but to ICAO in writing and shows scant regard which Pakistan has for international conventions on hijacking to which it is a party.

We would like you to apprise Government of your accreditation at a high level of these facts and clarify any distortion.

0898. SECRET

Record of the call made by Pakistan Ambassador in New Delhi Fida Hassan on Foreign Secretary.

New Delhi, January 11, 1977.

Ministry of External Affairs

The Pakistan Ambassador, Mr. Fida Hassan accompanied by Mr. Shahid Amin. Minister in the Pakistan Embassy called on the Foreign Secretary at 3.15 p.m. on 11.1.1977 at his request. Joint Secretary (Pak & Af) was also present.

After exchange of preliminary Courtesies, Mr Fida Hassan said that he had called on F.S. to discuss matters relating to the hijackers of the Indian Airlines plane. He said that he had seen many comments in the Indian newspapers on the on the decision of the Government of Pakistan not to institute legal proceedings against the hijackers. Some of these editorial comments were very strongly worded and negative in approach. He particularly mentioned the editorial on the subject in the National Herald. Mr. Fida Hassan added that this paper had a particular standing with the Ruling Party and hence had decided to discuss this matter with F.S. He also made a mention of an editorial in Urdu Pratap. Giving further details of these comments, Mr. Shahid Amin added that there were two aspects of the matter which had caused them some worry. In the first Place, the headlines in the news papers on the statement of the official spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs gave the impression as if something very drastic in Indo - Pak relations had happened. He added that the way the reports appeared gave the impression that the process of normalisation had received a serious setback. In the second Place the editorial comments added to this impression by taking a negative line.

This kind of impression Mr. Fida Hasson stated was contrary to what prime Minister Bhutto had told Ambassador Bajpai. The Pakistan Prime Minister, he said had impressed on the Indian Ambassador that in the interest of Indo-Pak Relations we should try to defuse this issue. Further, the Pakistan Foreign Secretary had assured Ambassador Bajpai that the hijackers will be restricted so that anything they say is not Publicised. In fact, no comments by them or on them have appeared. The Ambassador added that his Government felt that this issue should not be allowed to stand in the way of normalisation of relations and that press comments like those which appeared in India that it was a severe setback to relations were not proving helpful in this matter.

Foreign Secretary told the Pakistan Ambassador that as far as the substantive issue was concerned (as had already been explained to the Pakistan authorities), the Government of India could not but deplore and greatly regret Pakistan Government’s decision. We had expressed appreciation of the cooperation for the return of the passengers and the aircraft. We had noted Pakistan Government’s decision in accordance with the international conventions to try the hijackers. The decision to release them contrary to the assurances came as a surprise. This was discussed with our ambassador and he had been advised to inform the Pakistan Government that either they should be tried or returned to India for trial. After the Public statement of the Pakistan authorities announcing release of the hijackers, we considered it necessary to make our viewpoint clear, which was done in the statement of the official spokesman. In the nature of Indo-Pak Relations, concern at this decision and adverse feelings were inevitable and found expression in official comments. It was, however, not our Government’s decision to cause a setback to Indo-Pakistani relations. But this in a way would depend on the behavior permitted and the control exercised on the hijackers. The official spokesman’s statement did not say that these developments has caused a serious setback to the process of normalisation of relations. Foreign Secretary then obtained a copy of the exact statement and read it to the Ambassador and offered to send him a copy. The headlines and some further comments were made by the newspapers. The Foreign Secretary reminded the Ambassador that in such matters no censorship or control is exercised on the editors. Referring to the press comments which he had seen, F.S. said that not all the comments were negative. The editorial in the Times of India, which appeared on the previous day, sought to argue that though the decision of the Pakistan Government was regrettable, the process of normalisation should not be adversely affected.
As regards the Pakistan Government's desire to defuse this issue, the Foreign Secretary reiterated that Government of India had no desire to agitate this matter in the press. In this connection he added that it would in a sense depend on whether the Government of Pakistan themselves also exercised restraint on the press there. A lot would depend on the extent to which the hijackers are kept away from the press and the Opposition during the election campaign. Mr. Fids Hassan replied that he would convey this to his Government.

0899. Interview of Pakistan Prime Minister Z. A. Bhutto with the Indian Journalist Khushwant Singh as carried by Pakistan Times on January 14,1977.

Correspondent: First I would like to ask what are the concrete steps you have undertaken on your side to implement the Simla Agreement?

Prime Minister: The Simla Agreement is being implemented by one side alone. Both India and Pakistan have completed the process of settling issues which were taken up when our delegations met at Simla. The issue that remains is the basic one but all others have been resolved. Trade has been restored and people are now travelling between India and Pakistan. Normalization is in progress.

Correspondent: But in a very low key. There is much more scope for trade and exchange of people.

Prime Minister: It takes some time for trade to grow. After all we have not traded with each other for ten or eleven years. Now contacts are being re-established or new ones made between businessmen and traders. I am sure that they will find ways and means of increasing the volume of trade to the mutual benefit of both countries.

Correspondent: Would you say that there is any inhibition on your part to buy things which we can sell you cheaper than what you are getting from other countries?

Prime Minister: There should generally be no inhibition in buying from India goods and commodities of acceptable quality which are cheaper than those of other countries. But our trade policy cannot be change to have Pakistan dependent on one country only. We also cannot suddenly or completely sever our commercial ties with nations we have been trading with for years. These ties led to a diversification of our trade. We would like give up that general pattern. But, of course, prices are important. Also the quality of goods. But no, there is no inhibition, no directive against trade with India.

Correspondent: Is there any fear that Pakistan may become too dependent on India for the supply of any commodity?

Prime Minister: No, we have found that getting dependent on a country is a fear rather than a practical reality. After all, no country has really ever been suffocated when its source of supply has been cut off. At one time in 1965, to give you an example, our military supplies were completely cut off and an embargo was imposed on Pakistan. At that time we received military equipment only from the United States. But we found new source and we were able to get our military equipment from other countries. Of course, there can be a time lag but in these days of fast communications even that can be reduced. Getting used to new equipment and material is also a negative factor but that too can be overcome. We have experienced the consequences of exclusive dependence on any one country and learnt what to do when that one source dries up. So if a part of our trade with India consists of such purchase as iron or steel or tractors or some other commodities we shall not suffer from a mini-phobia of some dependence on India, especially when India too will be buying some goods from Pakistan. Should any strains develop in Indo-Pakistan relation we shall use our experience to re-adjust. In that sphere we can claim considerable know how.

Correspondent: Would you say when you said only one issue in the context of the Simla Agreement that you were referring to Kashmir?

Prime Minister: Yes, the dispute over Jammu and Kashmir is the only one that is left among those mentioned in the Simla Agreement which says that without prejudices to the position of either side and at an appropriate time, we will enter into bilateral negotiations on the issue. I have been asked this question about the remaining issue by a number of other journalists and commentators. I, in turn, frequently asked the more knowledgeable ones to identify the issue which still remained outstanding between India and Pakistan. Their answers showed that they were right on the target. There is, of course, the matter of the Salal Dam – and I hope that a satisfactory solution of it will be found – which in a way is an offshoot of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute, but the Salal Dam dispute has its own mechanism for settlement under the Indus Basin Treaty. So, strictly speaking, it does not come under the preview of the Simla Agreement. So, strictly speaking, it does not come under the preview of the Simla Agreement. I have been now telling my interviewers that all other problems that were outstanding at the time of the Simla Agreement and which we had pledged to overcome and resolve, had been settled. I would ask which one expect Kashmir, in that context, remained to be settled? And I told those journalists that Pakistan and India will discuss it at an appropriate time which, perhaps, would come when the other issues were out of the way. Well, those issues were now basically settled and we could now turn to the main issue. I used to say that we would enter into negotiations after our elections and the Indians elections. But that was before your government postponed your election by yet another year. I have not repeated this statement since then. We will have our elections sometime next year and the Government which will come to power with a fresh mandate from the people will be ready to begin negotiations. Well, I can certainly say that if my party is returned to office, our Government would be fully prepared for bilateral negotiations on Kashmir with your Government. That would be in full compliance with the Simla Agreement, both in letter and spirit.

Correspondent: Would you have any new proposals on Kashmir?

Prime Minister: No, why should we have any new proposals? The Simla Agreement recognizes our position. But when we enter into negotiations we shall hear what the other side has to say about the issue and about the commitments already made by us. If India feels that this basis does not suit her position, then it is for India to state what should be the basis. Pakistan’s basic position is what is internationally known to be our undeviating view on the Jammu and Kashmir issue. If India wants to get out of these commitments, it is for her to tell us. We have nothing else in mind. We can only see a democratic solution to the problem, based on the will of the people. Search me and you will find that I do not have any other satisfactory method of finding a solution.

Correspondent: Would you say that a sort of ‘no-war declaration’ would have any useful consequences?

Prime Minister: This was discussed at Simla. And we felt that a ‘no-war declaration’ can come only after our problems are resolved, when there are between us no disputes which might lead to war. But if a ‘no-war declaration’ is to be considered it can only be considered if there is a self-executing mechanism for the settlement of outstanding disputes like the one provided in the Indus Basin Treaty. In other words if bilateral negotiations fails we can then resort to good offices, to mediation, to arbitration, and finally, to the International Court of Justice. Only in that case, if under international law, a provision can be made, if a self-executing mechanism can be provide for the settlement of disputes in a ‘no-war declaration’, can we consider such a declaration. But if a mechanism for settling the disputes by a specified procedure cannot form part of a non-war declaration then agreeing to such an announcement would really mean the acceptance of the status quo in Jammu and Kashmir.

Correspondent: Let’s talk about your personal equation with Mrs. Gandhi.

Prime Minister: Well, I told you last night that she made a valuable and distinct contribution at Simla. She acted with courage and vision, and I believe that she has faith in the agreement and that she believes in the value of normal and friendly relations with our country. In the last five years, the process of normalization generally has gone quite satisfactorily and this has been due to the reciprocal desire of both our Governments to proceed with normalization. From this you can make you reduction of her outlook on the question of Indo-Pakistan relations.

Correspondent: And you said that you have invited her to visit Pakistan.

Prime Minister: Yes, of course, it was at Simla that I invited her to return my visit and subsequently also I have repeated the invitation to Mrs. Gandhi. But, now, I don’t know when our elections will be held. It will be some time next year and we will consider the matter after the election.

Correspondent: Do you think there is any possibility in the idea that there can be some kind of association between Pakistan, Bangladesh and India something in the nature of the European Common Market or some kind of most favored country treatment?

Prime Minister: I cannot, at this stage, say categorically if anything on the lines of the European model can emerge among our three countries in the foreseeable future because the conditions in Europe and the condition in our subcontinent are different. It took Europe a very long time to achieve the present equilibrium and to evolve to the present level and nature of relationship that is not deeply affected when differences on matters of great or little importance arise. This because Europe has attained a high degree of political maturity, not in the sense of being composed of ancient civilization and all that, but in terms of resolving their problems, in terms of accommodating each other. Europe as it now is the result of an evolution, a process that saw many accommodations being arrived at. It wasn’t just one accommodation that resulted in the evolution I spoke about. The objective conditions in Europe are different from those in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh. Our relationship is not yet mature. For instance, there is a different situation now between India and Bangladesh than it was two years ago. India now seems to be in the process of repairing relation with Bangladesh. The talks that are taking place on Farakka Barrage at the Ministerial level is an effort to remove the strains and misunderstanding that have cropped up in your relations with Bangladesh. So in the first place, the bilateral relations between Bangladesh and India have to be stabilized. The bilateral relations between India and Pakistan also have to attain a higher order of understanding and the bilateral relations between Pakistan and Bangladesh also require the adjustment on some matters. Only after we three have settled down in our present dealing with each other can we think in terms of greater collaboration among us.
Correspondent: Pakistan played a distinctive role in bringing China and the United States closer. Why shouldn’t you do that for us?

Prime Minister: In the case of Bangladesh?

Correspondent: No, India and China.

Prime Minister: I see. Well you have now exchanged ambassadors and this in itself show there is a marked improvement in your relations with China, and I feel that you are getting into position to have better relations with China, does not lie on initiatives, positive or negative, taken by Pakistan. Factors that determine the relationship of any country with three Great Power are altogether of different nature.

Correspondent: What message can I have from you on the Quaid Centenary? Can I quote you?

Prime Minister: Well I have said quite a bit on the Quaid in the last few days because we are in the final week of his Centenary. To you as an Indian, I would like to say that it is a wrong to think that the Quaid was either anti-Hindu or anti-Indian. The Quaid in the beginning of his career was known as the Ambassador of Hindu-Muslim amity and good-will, and it was later that he turned to Pakistan when he founds that he was not able to achieve his early objective. But you must remember that even after the creation of Pakistan he sincerely sought to have good and friendly relations with India. At the moment we are talking about normalization. The Quaid did not talk about normalization. He talked about friendly relations with India, and he was anxious to have friendly relations with India. He attached very great importance to relations with your country. If he had not died only a year after the establishment of Pakistan, this view would have become better known. His speeches in the Constituent Assembly were of a more secular nature. He also made efforts to keep the Hindus in Pakistan and not to let them migrate. When riots broke out in Karachi in January 1948 he was anguished. This aspect of the Quaid’s career has not been emphasized much but it is there. Although he was the architect and the founder of Pakistan, at no stage, in his great and distinguished career, did he ever harbor ill-will or malice toward India or toward the majority community of India. On the contrary he envisaged a kind of relationship which has developed now between Sweden and Norway, of two countries which could not live as one but in their separation they could co-exist on the basis of equality, and attain great friendship and amity. It has been said that at one stage he was even thinking of retaining his house in Bombay so that off and on he could go there and spend some month. This was his original idea before the great exodus started and the carnage and riots really ripped the sub-continent apart. There were many people who even tried to either suppress some of his statements calling for good relations with India. He called for good and friendly relations, notwithstanding the problems which arose over Hyderabad, Junagadh and Kashmir. It might be argued by some people that the Quaid might have felt this way before these international disputes arose; he tried to resolve them by trying to have negotiations with India. That sometimes a good part of history gets lost when events and actions are not reported in full.

0900. Record of the meeting of the Indian Ambassador K.S. Bajpai with Pakistan Foreign Secretary Agha Shahi.

Islamabad, February 1, 1977. (12.30 P.M.)

Embassy of India
Islamabad

Ambassador met with Mr. Agha Shahi today at 12.30 p.m. The talk lasted for about 45 minutes.

After a brief exchange on Mr. Agha Shahi’s recent participation in the Islamic Conference in Karachi and the Ambassador’s participation in the Envoys Conference in New Delhi, the Ambassador told him that he has been asked to mention that the historic agreement in May 1976 which led to the restoration of relations between the two countries had paved the way for gradual improvement of Indo-Pak relations. Obviously there are still some problems left but the May Agreement marked a new high in the relations between the two countries. In view of this, it has been distressing to read unpleasant things being written about us in Pak newspapers. He said that he did not want to start any meaningless exercise, like in the old days, of exchange of correspondence on propaganda. Of course, file on the subject of what we could legitimately take exception to is already quite thick. Also, there is the indirect sort of Press material as on developments like the Non-alignment meet and about the meeting in New York. Such material also indulged in criticism of India by selection. There is also the question of reproduction of other countries complaint or of what, for instance, the English Press have been saying about us. Ambassador pointed out that “we never see anything in India’s favour to balance all this,” but that meanwhile the needling goes on. He said that he was aware that sometime similar things occur on our sides also and that Pak Embassy in exercise of its duty points this out to the Government of India. But, said the Ambassador, he himself had been content to hope and wait for an improvement, to be reflected in the Press showing a greater sense of responsibility. But lately there have been a couple of things which have been particularly offensive to India. Referring to a recent Dawn article, by one A.T. Choudhury, on Indian elections, Ambassador emphasized that how we handle our electioneering is our own business.

But more than such articles is the problem of what the Pak Government itself has been saying. Referring to the White Paper on Jammu and Kashmir, the Ambassador said that while he agreed that every Government has a right to educate its own public, White Papers and like are really exercises which Govts. indulge in while in the midst of polemical warfare. India and Pakistan are not in the middle of any such warfare. But since the Government of Pakistan has found it worthwhile to release it, the Government of India has been obliged to study it. He said that the White Paper accuses India of fraud and conspiracy of never having acted honestly and of having reneged on its international obligations. This, pointed out the Ambassador, is not the language of reconciliation. It is uncalled for at the present time and is reminiscent of the cold-war days’ language. Ambassador said that we realize that Pakistan is in the midst of electioneering. But we do not accept the facts as presented in the White Paper. He said that we do not want to take this up in writing with the Government of Pakistan but that the Pak Government must bear in mind its possible repercussions in India. The Indian public opinion must not be ignored, especially when old quarrel are revived in this way. We hope that such things are not repeated and we must express our regret at what has been said in the White Paper. Ambassador concluded by saying that he was aware that the Foreign Office cannot necessarily control what is said in an election year. But we cannot but feel that the whole exercise has been concocted for election purposes.

Mr. Agha Shahi replied that the political leadership of Pakistan had given it a great thought before the White Paper came out. He said that it was realized that there are several things which would be highly unpalatable to Government of India. But "we have had a bitter dispute over which two wars have been fought".

"However, our Prime Minister thought- and this reflects the Foreign Office’s own judgment – that somehow the Kashmir issue should be insulated from the heat of election." He said that opposition has been charging the Government of having paid lip service to the Kashmir dispute. By publishing the White Paper, the Government has performed a highly educative function. He said that some of the facts were highly confidential but it was necessary to release them to the public. The White Paper has succeeded in bringing home to the public the facts about Kashmir and has that way ensured that exploiting Kashmir for election purpose is not right. It may be premature to conclude that the purpose has been served but there is every indication that the Opposition has steered away from Kashmir dispute. Otherwise there was every possibility of it being made the principal issue in this election year. People in Pakistan- even the intelligentsia – are simplistic. The White Paper has thus served a highly constructive purpose by ensuring that Kashmir is not precipitated as a major issue in the elections. As regards the content of the White paper, he was aware that there are certain sentences and phrases which would cause irritation in India. But he must assure us that Pakistan did not deliberately want to spoil relations with India. He said that the language of the White Paper, when compared to the language used in International forums in the past, is much more temperate and restrained.

He denied that the White Paper has been concocted for election purposes. He said that it had been compiled by highly responsible people. In the process, there was naturally some selection involved because it would otherwise have become unmanageably long. Mr. Shahi added “Please tell your Government that it is a healthy indication that the Opposition cannot attack Mr. Bhutto now”. He added, however, that “we cannot escape the facts and the history of the case.” As regards the need for the White Paper, Mr. Shahi reiterated that as Mr. Bhutto had himself told the Ambassador, “it is impossible in Pakistan to hold elections without one being called upon to explain one’s position on Kashmir.”

Ambassador said that he would be happy to accept what Mr. Shahi has said. He said that what we disagree about, first, is the language used. Certainly when compared to the past language, we are grateful for small mercies. We are aware it is not so sharp as it might have been, but the use of such language could have been avoided even for electioneering purposes. What is said in the heat of arguments in United Nation is different from what is reduced to cold print. More than the language used, we do not accept the White Paper’s facts. He said that Mr. Shahi spoke about the need for selection, but selection itself can be form of slant. We disagree on the facts selected. We are nevertheless grateful for the reassurance that Pak intention of releasing the White Paper is of a constructive nature.

Secondly, continued the Ambassador, we would be happy to be spared further pamphleteering which may unpleasantly drag us in. He said that as regards it being a necessity because of elections, we should have thought that Mr. Bhutto’s record spoke for itself in as much as his worst critic could not justifiably make the charge that he has been weak on Kashmir. Ambassador reiterated that we cannot but regret that we are dragged in this way. He also reiterated that it may have unavoidable consequences on Indian public opinion and that if these consequences are in the way of better relations between the two countries, the development would help neither country. He renewed the hope that further effusions of this nature will not be inflicted on us.

Mr. Shahi said that as regard the necessity of the document, there are many critics of Mr. Bhutto who are in the campaign. He said that he was aware that India thinks differently about it but Simla Agreement and its implementation had been an enormously uphill task in Pakistan. “Our politicians can be very perverse.” The White Paper had thus necessarily to be couched in a manner whereby it would be directed towards the arguments which are being put forward by the critics. The selection involved was unavoidable but, said he; the main need of continuity of the presentation has been scrupulously followed. There has been no slanting as such. As about India being dragged in, he said that this was inevitable and unavoidable because the principal international issue in Pakistan is Pakistan’s relations with India. He said that Mr. Bhutto has been educating the people of Pakistan that it is useful to have good relations with India. The people of Pakistan, especially in the Punjab, have strong feeling on the subject. He concluded by saying “I would think that it should be clears to you that in the short period of two month from now, we can resume the threads of our normal relations.”

Ambassador said that he had noted what Mr. Shahi said. He was aware of the compulsions of politics and that he had constantly borne in mind what Prime Minister had told him. India also looked forward to resuming the threads after the elections. But the White Paper is of major significance. And we also have elections in India and it may not always be possible to maintain restraint. So far we have been trying to maintain the position of not responding to things which are being said about us. Even about the White Paper, the matter is being taken up verbally only and will presumably be taken up by our Foreign Office with the Pak Ambassador in New Delhi. But, added the Ambassador, “I hope that the public silence of ours is not misunderstood as lack of public feeling.” Our Press may start saying anything about the subject. (At this stage, the Ambassador also mentioned that he had asked for a meeting with the Pak Prime Minister).

Ambassador said that he would like to mention to Mr. Shahi that while India is interested in developing relations with Pakistan over a wide spectrum regardless of differences in certain areas, there appears to be misconception in Pakistan that India is very very interested in this and that it is distressed when the movement is lacking. This wrong impression must be cleared for India is not impatient and is not in a hurry though, of course, objectively speaking it is of obvious interest to India to widen relations with Pakistan. This is the position that our Government has taken in the spirit of Simla Agreement. But it must be remembered that there are people in India also who view relations with Pakistan with a great deal of suspicion. India’s position should, therefore, not be taken for granted. Ambassador concluded by saying that Mr. Shahi had referred to the Simla Agreement, so he must add that “bearing in mind Simla, there is much in the White Paper that surprises us; that is of course, a part of the larger question and we will go into that later but I feel that I must mention it to you.”

Mr. Shahi said that we should show the maximum degree of understanding because of the election. He said that the Pakistan Prime Minister was trying his best to keep things from “boiling over”. He said that he was naturally the best judge of the situation.

As regards the general articles critical of India, he said that “we will have a look”. He suggested that the matter be taken up by the Indian Embassy with the Pak Foreign Office. He said that generally the Govt. Trust paper had shown restraint but some of the other papers, especially the “incorrigible” Nawa-ewaqt, were a big problem. Sometimes even the Govt. Trust papers were not amenable to Govt. guidance

Ambassador said that India has the same problem also. But that we did not intend to take up isolated cases of press comments because it would be futile, unproductive and be reduced to recriminations. Ambassador said that he is “dead set” against such taking up of individual cases. He concluded by suggesting whether it would be possible for Pak Government to review the advice on maximum restraint to Pak news media.

Record of Discussion of the call by Pakistan Ambassador
Syed Fida Hassan on External Affairs Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee.

New Delhi, March 31, 1977.

Pakistan Ambassador, Syed Fida Hassan accompanied by Mr. Mujahid
Hussain, Counsellor, called on Foreign Minister at 12.30 pm on 31st March 1977. Foreign Secretary and J.S. (Pakaf.) were also present at the meeting.

Syed Fida Hassan, warmly felicitated Shri Vajpayee on his assuming the office of the Minister of External Affairs. F.M thanked the Ambassador and said that he was new to the job and was trying to make himself up-to-date on various aspect of our foreign relations. However, he added, the foreign policy of India had followed a pattern which was more or less based on a national consensus.
Hence, there was not going to be a change in it. As far as Pakistan was concerned, he assured the Pakistan Ambassador that there was not going to be any change in India’s policy. India, he added, would persistently search for the avenues for further strengthening the process of normalization of relations with Pakistan. In fact, if at all any change may take place in this regard; it may be in the nature of our seeking closer friendship and co-operation with Pakistan.

Outlining the attitude of the ruling party towards foreign policy question, F.M specially pointed out that the Government of Pakistan should have no misgivings from the fact that he personally had belonged to the Jan Sangh Party. He added that the Jan Sangh party virtually did not exist as it had become a part and parcel of the new Janata Party. He said that the election manifestos of Janata Party and the Centre For Democracy had laid emphasis on having very close and friendly relations with our neighbours. In the emergence of the Janata Party, a new chapter has been opened and it had become necessary for our friends outside to realize the significance of this fact. F.M. added that unfortunately a kind of scare had been created about the role of Jan Sangh and other former opposition parties, which now constitute the Janata Party.

As for the future, F.M. went on to say that now that elections had ended in India and Pakistan, the time had come for both the countries to pick up the old threads and to resume the normalization process. F.M. pointed out that two rounds of talks had taken place on Salal Hydroelectric Project and was hoping that a third round to take place so that the matter could be settled soon. Pakistan Ambassador replied that he would remind his Government about their convenience for resuming the talks. F.M. assured the Pakistan Ambassador that the Salal Project was meant only producing electricity and he could assure his Government that India had no desire to disrupt the flow of the river. He expressed the hope that the Government of Pakistan would appreciate India’s need for this project so that an amicable solution could be found. F.S. remarked that the atmosphere in the previous round of discussion had been one of mutual consideration and understanding. He added that Pakistan’s attitude toward our problem with Bangladesh on Farakka had been correct and based on an understanding of our situation. He added that we very much appreciate this attitude based on the realization that such matters can best be dealt through bilateral negotiations. Pakistan Ambassador expressed his agreement with F.S adding that the Government of Pakistan valued bilateralism and there was no going back on it. Expressing his appreciation of this attitude, F.M. observed that only third parties benefit from such differences between neighbours. He added both India and Pakistan had a great task before them namely improving the lot of their poor people. Our limited resources should be directed toward this objective. The world was changing fast and it was necessary that countries like India and Pakistan realize that they do not pawn in the hands of big powers.
Before the meeting ended, the Pakistan Ambassador presented to Foreign Minister a set of publications containing Mr. Bhutto’s articles and speeches.

Foreign Secretary jocularly added that earlier our emphasis on bilateralism was noted by the Pakistan side and we were reassured that Bhutto had now blessed bilateralism.

0902. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto to Prime Minister Morarji Desai.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

I am taking the earliest opportunity after the victory of your Party in the recent General Elections in India to send as my Special Envoy, Mr. S. Shah Nawaz, who will convey to you my personal message of greetings on your assumption of the high office of the Prime Minister of India. I sincerely look forward to the opportunity your appointment as Prime Minister offers for realizing our common objective of establishing durable peace in our region, in accordance with the principles laid down in the Simla Agreement.

2. The manifesto of your Party projects a constructive and statesmanlike approach to the question of India’s relationship with its neighbours. In this context, your Foreign Minister’s statement that India would do nothing to “reverse the process of normalization”, is gratifying. These are significant factors which make me hope that the process of normalization of relations will now be taken to its logical conclusion. I feel that the time has come for both countries to bury the old, obdurate and tragic attitudes and to come to grip with reality.

3. The Special Envoy will be at your disposal for discussion of any bilateral or other matters which you may wish to raise. He will also explain to you our position on the convening of a Third World Summit.

4. Our proposal for a Summit meeting of the non-developed countries is a sincere effort to organize a common approach for the solution of a burning worldwide problem. Its inspiration is identical to that of your Party’s pledge to “work with other Third world nations to establish a new and just international economic order.” The proposal envisages a line of action in cooperation and not in confrontation with any developed or non-developed country. More specifically, I wish to assure you that there is nothing in this proposal which is at variance with the purposes of the Non-Aligned Group of countries. It is, therefore, my fervent hope that no credence will be attached to the deliberate misconstructions to which this proposal has at times been subjected and that you will extend to it your prestigious support. There is every reason for India and Pakistan to cooperate in promoting this initiative which is in the fundamental interest of the peoples of both countries.

5. Please accept my best wishes for your health and for the well-being and progress of the people of India.

Yours sincerely

Mr. Morarji Desai,
Prime Minister of India
New Delhi.

0903.

Record of the meeting between Foreign Secretary J. S. Mehta and Pakistan Additional Foreign Secretary Shah Nawaz on a visit to New Delhi as the Special Envoy of Pakistan Prime Minister

New Delhi, April 5, 1977.

Ministry of External Affairs
(Pakaf. Division)

Mr. S.Shah Nawaz, Additional Foreign Secretary in the Pakistan Foreign Office, who is here as the Special Envoy of the Pakistan Prime Minister, called on the Foreign Secretary on Tuesday April 5 at 11.00 A.M. in his office. Also present were Ambassador Bajpai, the Pakistan Ambassador, Mr. Hayat Mehdri (Director-General in the Pakistan Foreign Office), Mr. Zafar Hilaly (Director in the Pakistan Foreign Office) and the undersigned. Following is a summary record of the discussion:
Foreign Secretary: We are grateful that the Prime Minister decided to send you, even though at short notice. We have been pre-occupied with the non-aligned bureau meeting. However, the Foreign Minister has met the diplomatic corps, the press and some individual Heads of Mission including the Pakistan Ambassador.

Mr. Shah Nawaz: It is kind of you to agree to receive me at short notice, in the midst of your pre-occupations. This is an indication of your own friendship and goodwill for Pakistan. It is important that a meeting is taking place so soon after your new Government has been installed; we also have new Government in Pakistan. I hope the meeting will be fruitful. I have a personal letter from my Prime Minister to yours which I shall deliver myself. I am at your disposal for discussions on bilateral relations as well as the Third World Summit proposal which has been widely misunderstood.

Ambassador Bajpai: The call on the Prime Minister has been arranged for 2.30 p.m. tomorrow; that on the Foreign Minister at 4.00 p.m. tomorrow.

Foreign Secretary: The Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister have had no hesitation in receiving you. As the Foreign Minister has already told your Ambassador, our foreign policy basically remains the same, being a product of national consensus. Our relations with our neighbours have top priority. The Indian people welcomed the improvement of relations with Pakistan; we believe the Pakistan people welcomed it too.

Bilaterally, there is a basis for the Governments of India and Pakistan to increase co-operation. Stability in the sub-continent is of interest to each country. The sub-continent is in a way unique it differs from other newly independent countries because of a more developed infrastructure for industrial and agriculture progress. In India we have a somewhat bigger problem as we are well populated. However, in both countries, the people have contributed much more to their own progress than in other countries. In fact, our sharing of our resources and trained manpower with other countries can increase if we can avoid problems between ourselves. There has been progress on Salal which should be settled in time. The new Government will take sometime to settle in. As the Foreign Minister told the Pakistan Ambassador, Pakistan need have no fears because of his Jana Sangh background.

Mr. Shah Nawaz: We have seen the reassuring statements that have already been made about normalization. On behalf of my Prime Minister, I have to convey to you that Pakistan would like India’s faith and trust, and would not like the process of normalization to be hindered in any way. We hope we can fruitfully and honourably carry on our relationship on the successful implementation of the Simla Agreement, on which depends the progress and prosperity of both countries. The Government of Pakistan is totally committed to the Simla Agreement. Both our sides are committed to the final implementation of the provisions of the agreement and we hope we can move forward. We on our side are ready. India should have absolute confidence that, as the Prime Minister has said, Pakistan is keen that the relationship should develop on a straightforward basis. We should look afresh at all realities and base our attitude on them. These are our principles. We will no doubt find common ground for a fruitful policy in the future.

The Third World Summit proposal has been mis-interpreted and the previous Government did not appear to favour the idea. When Mrs. Gandhi met Mr. Agha Shahi (the Pakistan Foreign Secretary, in October 1976) she expressed a fear that this was a bid to start a rival to the non-aligned movement. There is not the slightest basis for this. The gap between the developed and the developing countries is very wide, even though some, like India have made greater progress. This is particularly so after the energy crisis. There has so far been no remedy. The developed world has been consulting within itself to stall the move of the developing countries towards establishment of a just economic order, as a change from the system we have inherited from the colonial past. The developing countries will not succeed through half-hearted, disorganized efforts and it would be unrealistic to expect the developed world to make any substantial concessions in this way. It is therefore, necessary to make them see reality. If the present idea had come from the non-aligned we would have accepted it. The Paris Talks have been a total failure. The developed world is not going to give up its economic advantages easily. It is going to try to divide the developing countries into smaller groups or deal with them on an individual basis. Third world countries have differences but the idea is to remove our disadvantages through a united approach. It is not designed to institutionalize the idea, but would be a one-time affair. How it develops would depend on those who would like to “steer” the movement - it is not really a movement in that sense. The majority will be non-aligned countries. We are ready to discuss thread-bare any suspicions, which there ought not to be. We hope you will support it, as from any angle, we cannot find any reason why you should not. The proposal ought to be welcomed.

Pakistan has sent special envoys to other countries. We find that most of them do see the point clearly and do not have any objections. But no country can take a decision on its own – it would have to be collective decision by all concerned. We hope you will give it deep thought, particularly during the bureau meeting. We firmly believe that if this does not crystalise today, it will have to in the future. Because of the wide ranging decisions required, they just have to be taken at the summit level. Thus, the political will will be properly expounded.
Modalities need to be discussed as we have no idea of the location, timing etc. At the moment it is being thought of as a one time – affair.

Mr. Hayat Mehdi: There is no intention of competing with any group, and we do not want it to be seen that way. The Prime Minister had written an article even before the Colombo Summit, but he withheld it from publication; the Foreign Office asked the Ambassadors not to lobby for it lest Pakistan be thought of as trying to up stage the non–aligned. When the developed countries are on the verge of fourth summit, we should at least make one attempt.

Foreign Secretary: The new Government has not had time to consider various policy questions. The earlier attitude of the Government, as stated by Mrs. Gandhi to Mr. Agha Shahi, as well as the prevailing feeling in the non-aligned bureau and at the Colombo summit, is that there is no need to analyse the world economic situation – it is well known. The question is not of understanding the problem but of how to over come it. When the non-aligned movement started, it was with a sense of a continuation of the political motivation of independence movements and with time there was an increased awareness of economic problems reflected further in the group of 77 and other specialized agencies. All the resolutions in these groups when put together show that the problem remains. While there is an awareness of a certain commonality, the problem is aggravated when various groups start competing with each other. While the question of a solution continues to baffle us, each country is trying its own methods.

Much will depend on us as our capability to co-operate with others depends on how we co-operate with each other. This is not sub-continental chauvinism but a belief that this would be part of strengthening the capability of developing countries.

Foreign Secretary: What is the summit membership you have in mind? In what way do we go beyond the UN or the group of 77, where the same problem is being analysed?

Mr. Shah Nawaz: It includes all Third World countries, not just the non-aligned. Also, it would be a meeting at the highest level. I agree with what you said, - the idea is not to go into confrontation - but there must be an effective way for a part of the world which is at a disadvantage to have a fruitful dialogue with the affluent. This would be a constructive dialogue not through confrontation but co-operation. A summit would ensure the absence of fragmentation which the developed countries would hope for, and incite by giving short-term help. The only way to deal with the powerful organization of the West on an equal basis would be unitedly. There can be no disagreement between the non-aligned and us on this issue. The best way to resolve the differences among the Third World countries would also be at the top. Thus, individual countries could see that answers to problems within the group and that today’s concessions would not be in their long term interests. We have concluded that without an approach at the highest level, we cannot challenge the developed countries.

Ambassador Bajpai: How will the composition vary from the group of 77?

Foreign Secretary: What about a summit level special session of the United Nations? It is an existing body which would provide for continuity, since the objectives are well known.

Mr. Shah Nawaz: Institutions do exist but the situation is so extraordinary that ordinary institutions will not do. We can cope with the situation at the moment but it requires quick action. A Third World summit would be a demonstration of the supreme political will and its determination; this would force the developed world to transform the picture. Existing institutions can be effective once the developed world sees the developing countries united.

Mr. Hayat Mehdi: A summit at the UN is a possibility but it could be a second step, as it would be open to the entire membership. There is a need to solidify our bargaining position first; if we go to the UN right away, our efforts would be futile.

Regarding membership, the modalities have been left vague as Pakistan does not wish to impose its own thoughts but would prefer a consensus. As for timing Pakistan is conscious of the need for thorough preparation and a definition of the objective. The summit would emphasise guidelines and solutions. Such an attempt would be fruitful only if the highest political will is involved; there are many sound declarations at a lower level without the total commitment of those who subscribe to them. This is an attempt to raise the level.

Mr. Shah Nawaz: We are open to questions and consultations. There is nothing controversial in the proposal excepting the idea itself, which should not be abandoned because of any suspicion or misinformation — that would be a tragedy.

Foreign Secretary: As Mrs. Gandhi told Mr. Agha Shahi, we have had reservations about duplicating institutions like the UN and the group of 77 but we have not canvassed against the proposal. We have to consider non-aligned opinion. But our reservations should not be seen as existing because the idea is Pakistan’s as we do not want this to be a complication in Indo-Pakistan relations.

Ambassador Bajpai: I want to clarify that Mrs. Gandhi did not tell Mr. Agha Shahi that we fear the proposal was to subvert the non-aligned movement, she said that members of the non-aligned movement had reservations. Also, that we were looking at it with greater sympathy because it came from Pakistan.

Mr. Shah Nawaz: We have talked about possible bilateral co-operation at a higher level. If we are seen pursuing this idea internationally, we would have an impact because it would be something rare.

Mr. Hayat Mehdi: It could even be held under the aegis of the United Nations. Pakistan is not capable of hosting such a meet. (In a subsequent light exchange on hotel accommodation, Mr. Mehdi said India had plenty of hotel rooms at holiday resorts and so could host the conference).

Mr. Shah Nawaz: The whole world has been talking about the recent democratic experience in our countries. In Pakistan, this was the first ever general election based on adult franchise. There is much excitement before, during and after an election. This is a cycle we have to go through. The west always looks at us either as novices or as people with devious minds, and emphasizes its own superiority in such matters. The western press has spread a lot of stories about the Pakistan elections; they have not yet done so about your because it does not suit them to do so now but they will in due course.

There are all kinds of accounts about the Pakistan elections, some of which your Ambassador must have heard. We would like to listen to our (your?) version, which is the correct version:

The Prime Minister took a big decision about holding the elections, because while they solve some problems, they create others. The Opposition challenged the declared results and walked out. Even before the results were announced they said they had won – this was rather startling. Until polling day on March 7, they declared their confidence in the Election Commissioner. When the results were announced they raised a hue and cry and decided on a boycott. The Prime Minister made several offers, explaining that this was the nature of democracy, but the Opposition refused to meet him. Their complaints are not based on facts. The Prime Minister has allowed eight tribunals, made up of High Court and Supreme Court judges, to investigate all complaints. The Election Commission has full powers to decide all cases suo moto. Where there are irregularities, it will disqualify the candidate, and even declare the opponent elected. Some irregularities inevitably happen, in India and in Pakistan. The Opposition presumed that it would get the votes because of the crowds it drew (during the campaign). The Prime Minister’s campaign procession in Karachi was the largest ever in the city, but the PPP lost there.

What is important to remember is that for the first time, there was an election in Pakistan conducted by a civilian Government on the basis of adult franchise and on the main plank of the PPP, involving social and economic development. For the first time and party eschewed any appeal to the most primitive feelings such as Islam in danger – these are old themes. The Opposition is basically led by people who want time to revive these old themes, whereas Mr. Bhutto stood by socialism and secularism, which they did not want.
The hard fact is that whatever impression India might have had about Mr. Bhutto, it is clear that it is his ideas and policies which hold the promise of a good, co-operative relationship between India and Pakistan.

Foreign Secretary: Every country determines its own system of government. In both countries, the governments are subject to the will of the people. We went to the polls simultaneously. Emotional issues were avoided. What India wants is a stable government with the support of the people. We have gone into the exercise and been strengthened in our internal and external policies.

Mr. Shah Nawaz: The Prime Minister is totally committed to a policy of normalization.

0904. Letter from Prime Minister Morarji Desai to Pakistan Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

New Delhi, April 8, 1977.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

I thank you for your letter of April 3, 1977, for your courtesy in sending it with the Special Envoy and for the sentiments you have expressed, which Mr. Shah Nawaz most ably elaborated.

I entirely agree that India and Pakistan must, as neighbours, make mutual efforts to develop trust, harmony and good-neighborly co-operation with each other. We have welcomed the normalization of our relations with Pakistan and as I assured your Envoy, it will be our purpose to give this process further momentum and content. The manifesto of my Party, to which you have referred, in this respect reflects the deep desire our people and Government have always felt to strengthen, above all, the depth and extent of friendship with those countries with whom we share a region and a community of interest in drawing closer together.

In public statements made soon after assumption of office, our Foreign Minister and I have made it clear that it will be our Government's firm resolve and policy to work for even better relations with Pakistan, and I take this opportunity to reaffirm this to you, without any reservations.
I am glad that you recognize that durable peace - I would go further and say permanent peace - in our region is India’s objective. It is enjoined on both our countries not only by the Simla Agreement but our cultural and ethnic bonds by the compulsions of geography, by our needs and hopes for the progress of our peoples and, I believe, by their ardent desire to live side by side in harmony and friendship. With your co-operation in pursuing it as our common aim, I am sure we can bring immense benefits to the peoples of our two countries.

I have noted your reference to your proposal for a Third World Summit. Your Special Envoy spoke to the Foreign Minister and me about this and has, I understand, discussed it in details with our Foreign Secretary, but we have yet to appreciate its full implications.

Your gesture in sending Mr. Shah Nawaz with the message of felicitations and good wishes was welcomed not only by the Government but appreciated by our people and our public opinion. In reciprocating your kind sentiments through this letter, which I am giving to our Ambassador to take from here, may I convey my best wishes for the prosperity and happiness for the people of Pakistan and for your good health and welfare.

Yours sincerely

(Morarji Desai)

His Excellency Mr. Z.A. Bhutto,
Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan.
Islamabad.
0905. Record of the Call by the Indian Ambassador K. S. Bajpai on the Pakistan Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

Islamabad, April 26, 1977.

Embassy of India
Islamabad

The Ambassador’s call on Prime Minister Bhutto, requested on April 12, materialized at 7.45p.m last evening. The call lasted just over half an hour.

2. The Ambassador said our Government has greatly appreciated Mr. Bhutto’s gesture of sending a Special Envoy to meet the new leadership in India. Mr. Shah Nawaz had been warmly welcomed, and the sentiments expressed fully reciprocated. Our Prime Minister had immediately given the Ambassador his reply with instructions to re-emphasize the view contained in it when delivering the letter to Mr. Bhutto. The Ambassador had therefore sought an appointment even though he realized how busy Mr. Bhutto would be.

3. Mr. Bhutto thanked the Ambassador for bringing the letter. He read it and said: “It’s a very nice letter” and expressed the hope that the sentiments expressed in the two letters would be “put into action”. The Ambassador said that was Delhi’s view too. He hoped Mr. Shah Nawaz would have felt and managed to convey the feeling of warmth and friendship shown in all his meeting in New Delhi. With any new Government, emphasis and nuances might differ but over the years a board consensus had developed over the essentials of our Foreign policies, and our Prime Minister and Foreign Minister have made it very clear that the new Government adheres to these essentials. Basic among them was our commitment and deep dedication to developing friendly relations with our neighbours and especially to further normalizing relations with Pakistan. This view was unanimously shared by all those who framed policies. Our Prime Minister had even spontaneously remarked that the term “durable peace” used in Mr. Bhutto’s letter might be substituted by the words “permanent peace” (Mr. Bhutto nodded). Delhi would quite frankly like to see the common sentiments recently exchanged translated into specific field of action of which there were several, both big and small, where progress could be made to mutual benefit – the small in some way could be even more important. We realized that in contemplating further moves, timing would be vital. We ourselves were in no hurry. We wished Pakistan to know for every step they took we would be glad to take one or even two, but we had no wish to force the pace and would move according to the timing that suited Pakistan.

4. Mr. Bhutto recalled his speech of March 28 in which he had said that Pakistan had planned new initiatives with the intentions of “accelerating” the process of normalization between two countries. He said he had heard from Mr. Shah Nawaz of the very friendly reception accorded to him in India, and of the uniformly positive and warm views expressed on Indo-Pak relations in every discussion and at all levels, especially during his calls on our Prime Minister and Foreign Minister. Pakistan was very appreciative of these friendly sentiments. This is a factor which “deeply encouraged us”.

5. The Prime Minister then asked for Ambassador's assessment of the recently concluded Indo-Pak Trade talks. The Ambassador replied that the discussions had proceeded smoothly. One difficulty felt by Pakistan related to one-way movement of goods traffic. Pakistan expressed anxiety to balance the trade. Ambassador said that it may not be quite practical or realistic to talk of balanced trade. The question really was one of whether Pakistan found it financially and commercially advantageous to effect imports from India. There were certain obvious benefits, such as short delivery periods, reduced freight rates and reducing the congestion on Karachi Port and substantial foreign exchange savings, which accrued to this country by trading with India. As an instance, Ambassador cited Pakistan’s need for tractors which India could fully meet; “we need only roll them across the border”. Ambassador reiterated that if Pakistan was interested in making purchases from us, we were available but it was for Pakistan to decide. We felt trade relations were an effective means of overcoming misconceptions and misgivings that have been entertained in either country about the other. We on our part would be glad to buy whatever we could form Pakistan though there was not much point in thinking of mechanical or arithmetical balance”. In any case, the difficulty might automatically resolve itself once cotton production revives in Pakistan.

Mr. Bhutto said that Pakistan was “all for promotion of trade”. He saw no reason why this country should not purchase an item like tractors from India. He did feel though that the two countries should try to achieve a balance to the extent possible.

6. Mr. Bhutto next asked Ambassador whether business communities in the two countries had established contacts with each other. Ambassador replied that contacts between the business circles had not increased in the manner one might have anticipated. Frankly speaking, he said, it was a “question of signals” from the top. While talk of ‘hostility’ to trade resumption was an exaggeration, we did experience a sense of “hesitation” on the part of many commercial organizations in Pakistan. The difficulty was that over the years many attitudes have developed on both sides. A fresh approach was needed. For this the tone had to be set by the leadership. “Everyone would then follow suit”. Mr. Bhutto nodded and emphasized that India need have no “doubts on this score” (of policy). He had in fact told the new Finance Minister to look into the question of intensifying trade and promoting business contacts.
7. Reiterating Pakistan’s desire for normalization Mr. Bhutto asked the Ambassador: “Where else can we expand cooperation?” Ambassador replied: “you name it - we will be glad to look into it”. He said that there were enormous areas in which cooperation could be envisaged. Mr. Bhutto asked “what specifically”. Ambassador said there were possibilities in the personal, cultural, scientific, economic even political fields if we looked ahead. There was the bilateral framework of normalization in accordance with the Simla spirit. Cooperation between India and Pakistan could be for the benefit of the sub-continents for the wider region in which we were and even in international fields and forums such as various UN and other Conferences where though we might have differences in particular matters there were broad areas of common interest and common approach. By intensifying cooperation bilaterally and internationally we could have a very good effect on the rest of the world.

8. Mr. Bhutto asked if any specific point of tension had recently arisen between our two countries in international forums. Ambassador replied that fortunately since the seal had been set on normalization last May, there had been no “sharp exchanges”. A few statements may have been made but generally matters had proceeded smoothly. Ambassador said he would like to take this opportunity to make the position clear on one point Mr. Bhutto had raised about which there were some misconceptions in Pakistan: there was some feeling, India was dragging its feet on Third World Summit proposal. Frankly there were misgivings in many quarters and in the Non-aligned Bureau there were such strong feeling that we had actually helped tone down the criticism of several of our friends to the idea. Mr. Bhutto would be aware that to many non-aligned nations the proposal was unwelcome; they felt the concept being propagated by Pakistan would dilute the non-aligned movement itself. We ourselves had not, as our Prime Minister said, grasped its full implications. There were also some reservations, not on Pakistan’s intentions but on the “effectiveness” of the proposal; some people feel it might be better to tackle the problems differently. Mr. Bhutto said if it were not an effective way of tackling the industrialized countries, why should so many of them be strongly opposed to the idea? Surely their opposition itself showed how useful the proposal was to the Third worlds interests. Ambassador said some countries felt that it only stiffened opposition to keep on having conferences and resolutions which the industrialized countries did not like. There had been so many, it might be better to work quietly now to put them into effects. This was, however, a matter of tactics. If we could work together on Pakistan’s idea well and good. In any event Ambassador assured Mr. Bhutto that the matter was not viewed by us as an Indo-Pak issue. On the other hand, we had looked at the proposal sympathetically precisely as it had come from Pakistan.
Mr. Bhutto affirmed that Pakistan had “no quarrels” with India on this point.

9. The Pakistan Prime Minister asked the Ambassador several random questions on India’s family planning programme, its effects on elections, food situation and crop prospects, price structure and stability and export trends. He raised the question of our potato and onion exports to West Asian countries. The Ambassador said he knew the shipment of these vegetables through Pakistan to Iran last year had aroused some controversy but he thought if something was good for the countries of the region, there should be no objection in Pakistan. There was even prosperity in it and nothing humiliating. Mr. Bhutto agreed that there was nothing humiliating in extending such facilities, but unfortunately, for some reason the matter had become a “highly sensitive” one in Pakistan. He thought, however, the problem could be looked into in due course and said we could rest assured that Pakistan would examine the problem. He concluded the discussions with the assurance that in further normalization, Pakistan would “bring thing to a good head”.

New Delhi, June 6, 1977.

Syed Fida Hassan, Pakistan Ambassador paid a courtesy call on the Prime Minister at 6.30 p.m. on June 6, 1977. The Pakistan Ambassador was accompanied by Mr. Sahid M. Amin, Minister in the Pakistan Embassy. During initial exchange of courtesies, Pak Ambassador said that he was grateful to P.M. for giving him time on the eve of his departure for London to attend the Conference of the Commonwealth Heads of Government. P.M. replied that he could see him whenever he liked. During the subsequent conversation, Syed Fida Hassan referred to the expectation aroused by the Commonwealth conference, particularly in regard to economic matters. India’s attitude towards the internal political situation in Pakistan was also discussed. The following is a gist of the conversation:
Pakistan Ambassador: The Government of Pakistan has watched the discussions in the North-South dialogue and is particularly disappointed to see that rich nations are chary in coming to the help of the developing countries. All this goes to show the need for concerted action by the developing countries. Our Prime Minister has already given his ideas on this matter in an article on what the Third World’s attitude should be. We have sent this article to your Government. The Special Envoy of Prime Minister Bhutto had also an occasion to discuss this matter with Your Excellency.

Prime Minister: I am aware of the discussions and the attitude adopted by the developing countries. We, on our part, have approached these problems without any expectations. Nor, have we any fears. We feel that our habit of dependence on the developed countries must go. This tendency to depend on others is the main malady of developing nations. While there is scope of logical reasoning, the developing countries should not bother too much about what help the developed countries are going to give them. We, in India, are happy to receive the help of developed counters. But, we are fully convinced that ultimately we have to help ourselves.

As regards the proposal for the Third World Summit meeting, we fear that such a gathering would become a Third Bloc, which would not be in the interest of the developing countries. However, we are not against dialogue. In fact, we feel that unless people meet and talk, misunderstandings are created. Personal talks between leaders are the best way to solve bilateral problems. No amount of indirect diplomacy can achieve what direct personal contacts can.

Pakistan Amb: I am very happy to hear Your Excellency’s views. In fact, our Prime Minister would be very happy to have the opportunity of meeting you for a personal discussion. We hope, he would do so as soon as our internal problems are settled.

Prime Minister: He is most welcome. Whenever he wishes to come, I would be very happy to extend an invitation to him. I am in no hurry. Let him take his time and come at his convenience. I hope peace will return in Pakistan soon. We want to have peace inside our neighbouring countries.

While on this subject, I must mention that I feel unhappy when we receive reports from Pakistan that there is a feeling there that India has changed its policy towards Pakistan; that we have some designs against Pakistan; that there are military movements along the border; that we are against Mr. Bhutto etc. I would like to assure you that all this is wrong. You should think what we would gain by such manoeuvres. What is happening in Pakistan is entirely your business. Why should I or any one else in this country say what kind of government the people of Pakistan should have? It is a matter for the people of Pakistan to decide. Our newspapers are free now and they write about things happening in Pakistan. But, they don’t represent the Government. In fact, they sometime write about me also in the same way. I would, therefore, like you to understand the situation.

I am sorry to hear some demonstrations which have taken place in front of your Chancery. I would like to state categorically that I don’t like these demonstrations. As you may be knowing, so many demonstrations take place in front of my house also. But, you should appreciate that under our laws we can take actions against such people only if they indulge in vandalism or make statements which are objectionable under our laws. We will take stringent action against such people whenever they act in this way. I would like you to appreciate that I have no sympathy for these demonstrators. They do not represent any body. Many people in India talk of human rights. My advice to them is that they should talk of human rights and should try to ensure the preservation of these rights only as far as this country is concerned. They have no business to call for the preservation of human rights in other independent countries. To doing so would be an interference in the internal affairs of those countries. Let me tell you that when Shri J.P. Narayan gave his statement about the treatment being meted out to B.P. Koirala by the Government of Nepal, we immediately disassociated the Government of India from this stand. The same will be our attitude towards all our neighbours.

As regards fears expressed in Pakistan about India having some designs against your country, I would like to say most categorically that this is completely wrong. We are neighbours. We want peace with all countries. But, the thing of utmost importance is that we must have peace in our own regions. I have no hesitation in saying that in this matter, India being the biggest country in this region, has the greatest responsibility. I am saying this not out of pride or conceit but it is a fact of life. It is the duty of India to make its neighbours feels safe and not to have any suspicions from it. We have the same attitude towards Pakistan. We would not like to give you any occasion to be suspicious of us. In fact, I would go to the extent of saying that you can always count on our help. I cannot say this loudly. I have no hesitation in saying that peace in this area depends more on India than on its smaller neighbours. But, this does not mean that only one country can bring about peace. Both the sides have to make an effort. It also does not mean that we would placate any one. We will not accept anything which is wrong.

Pakistan Amb: I would like to clarify that no one in the Government of Pakistan or the Ruling Party has made any such allegations. Of course, some newspapers did make some mention. As far as the Pak Government is concerned, we want that the provisions of the Simla Agreement should be fully implemented.

Prime Minister: I am aware that the Government of Pakistan has not made any such allegations. But, I know that it is quite tempting for some people in Pakistan to make such insinuations as a way out of the present internal problems. What should be realized in a situation like this is that some people in this country may retaliate and it may become difficult for us to control them.
You must have seen some days back a statement in the Press about ‘Akhand Bharat’. I would like your Government to know that such views do not represent the feelings of the Government. Even though what was meant by the term ‘Akhand Bharat’ in this statement was some kind of confederation between India and Pakistan, we do not approve of it. The idea of such a confederation between India and Pakistan is completely unacceptable to us. I would go to the extent of saying that I would not agree to any such confederation even if a proposal to that effect comes from Pakistan. We have agreed to the partition of the country and the creation of Pakistan. There is no going back now. In this connection, I would like to relate to you an incident. In 1964, Sheik Abdullah had suggested to Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru that the latter should propose some kind of confederation between the two countries to the Government of Pakistan. I was not in office at the time. But after hearing about this proposal, I immediately advised Pandit ji against it saying that such a move from us would be misunderstood. I am happy that Mr. Nehru agreed with my view and did not make the proposal. After all, we have to be correct in our behaviour. My Government is of the view that our neighbours should not be made to feel insecure. We on our part will try to make every effort to see that our neighbours do not suspect us.

I must admit here that I feel unhappy when I hear about effort being made by Pakistan to procure sophisticated weapons. I would only ask: Why do you want these weapons? From whom do you want to protect yourself? Or, against whom do you want to use these arms? We have no evil designs against Pakistan to make you feel the need of arm for your safety. On the other hand, India is ten-times bigger in man-power, as compared to Pakistan. In view of this situation, why should there be such an attitude of confrontation? I would like to tell you that I do not believe in protesting to countries which want to supply arms to Pakistan. I only ask them to see for themselves, whether it is correct for them to engage in this kind of business. We have told the Americans that if in their judgment they feel that they should supply arms to our neighbours, India would have to take necessary steps in self-defense. I for one have no fears from our neighbours. I would go to the extent of saying that we have no desire to possess atomic weapons, even if you produce such weapons.

Pakistan Amb: I am very happy to hear these remarks from you and I have, no doubt, that your views will carry a great deal of weight at the Disarmament Conference at the United Nations next Year.

Prime Minister: I hope they will take some action at the Conference instead of only talking. Our policy is clear. We have told the Super Power that they have no right to preach nuclear restraint to us as long as they do not apply it to themselves. The fact is that they are hypocritical about this matter. As far as we are concerned, we are very frank with them. I would like to mention to you that about ten years back, we had been offered a nuclear umbrella for giving up our option to conduct atomic tests for peaceful purposes. At that time, I had advised against our accepting any such umbrella. I had said that we should prefer to have our own nuclear weapon instead of coming under such an umbrella.

Pakistan Amb: I have taken a great deal of your time. Before I take your leave, I would like to assure you that what you have told me today would be greatly welcomed in my country. I feel greatly re-assured after hearing your views.

Prime Minister: Please convey my warm greeting and best wishes to Mr. Bhutto.

0907. Statement by External Affairs Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee in the Lok Sabha on the Pakistan Army taking over Power in Pakistan.

New Delhi, July 5, 1977.

Now that the point has been raised in the House, I would like to confirm that a Pakistan Radio announcement today quoted a statement by a military spokesman issued in Rawalpindi that the Armed Forces of Pakistan took over control of the administration of the country this morning. The spokesman stated that top political leaders belonging to the Pakistan Peoples’ Party including former Prime Minister Mr. Bhutto and PNA leaders have been taken into “temporary protective custody”. The spokesman said the situation in Pakistan is normal and peace and tranquility prevail everywhere.

While naturally we follow events in our neighbouring countries with interest, I would like to reiterate that these developments are an internal affair of Pakistan. India has consistently followed a policy of non-interference in the domestic affairs of others countries. The House is aware that after assuming office, this Government has publicly reaffirmed the policy of seeking good neighbourly relations with all countries in the region so that peace and stability may prevail in the sub-continent.
Record of the call made by the Pakistan Ambassador Syed Fida Hussan on the External Affairs Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee.

New Delhi, July 7, 1977.

Ministry of External Affairs
(Pakaf. Division)

The Pakistan Ambassador, Mr. S. Fida Hassan, called on the Foreign Minister on Thursday, July 7, 1977 at 4.30 p.m. at the Foreign Minister's office in Parliament House. He was accompanied by Mr. Shahid Amin, his Minister. J. S (EE & Pakaf) was also present. The call was arranged following a request from the Ambassador. Following is a summary record of the discussion:

Pak Ambassador: I would like to brief you on the changes in Pakistan. I saw your statement in Parliament. There has been a take over by Martial Law. At first, it was said that the army had taken over the administration; then, that there was martial law all over. The President will perform his usual function. Provincial Chief Justices have been appointed Governors. As Gen. Zia-ul Haq explained, this is a purely interim arrangement with the intention of holding elections within three month.

The Pakistan Government will continue to develop friendly relations with countries in accordance with the UN Charter.

As far as possible, the country will be run under the current Constitution with a military council of four, consisting of the Service Chiefs and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Committee.

Our Government wanted me to assure you that Pakistan will abide by the terms and conditions of the Simla Agreement. Our Foreign Secretary has spoken similarly to your Ambassador (the Ambassador handed over the text of Gen. Zia-ul Haq's broadcast of July 5, 1977).

As regards your Defense Minister's statements from time to time, such as his recent one implying some apprehension about the developments in Pakistan having same effect on India (the Ambassador was incoherent but was obviously referring to the Defense Minister’ statement in Lok Sabha on July 5, 1977), any apprehension of Pakistan trying to build up its arms supplies is totally misplaced. India need have no apprehension about the purchase by Pakistan of arms from America since we are only trying to replace old arms - no more. “Why should you fear?” The Prime Minister recently told me that India is 10 times the size of Pakistan and Bangladesh put together. There is, therefore, no cause for India to fear each time Pakistan tries to get arms to “redress its balance”. There is no question of Pakistan having any aggressive intentions.

Foreign Minister: The defense Minister’s statement was only a passing reference. He did say that it was an internal affair of Pakistan. But such events are bound to have repercussions because we are so close to each other. What happens in India does affect you: so also, what happens in Pakistan is bound to affect us.

The question of arms supply has been discussed many times. In spite of its size, India has had to face wars in the last 30 years. If new, sophisticated arms are injected into the area, there are bound to be apprehensions on both sides. If India were to get large quantities of sophisticated arms, Pakistan is bound to feel apprehensive of a build-up. We have made our position on Pakistan very clear and repeated the offer of a no-war pact, although it has not been taken very well in Pakistan.

Pak Ambassador: As the former Foreign Minister, Mr. Aziz Ahmed, explained, it should also provide for settlement machinery to take care of dispute like Kashmir.

Foreign Minister: Where is Mr. Aziz Ahmed now?

Pak Ambassador: He is not under detention. The former Minister and the leaders of the NA are probably in Islamabad. As you know, they are under “protective custody”.

Foreign Minister: That is what they said here about us also; Is Mr. Bhutto all right?

Pak Ambassador: Yes, he is being looking after.

Thank you for your sentiments. I would like to reiterate that India gets unnecessarily apprehensive on the question of an arms build-up. When I had called on the former Prime Minister, Mrs. Gandhi, she spoke of the same thing. I asked her for details, since a few days earlier, in a TV programme, the Director of one of your official defense institutes (Shri P.R. Chari, Director, Institute of Defence, Studies and Analyses), he had said India need not bother about the 80 million deals Pakistan had concluded with the USA. I told her this was how your own people felt and she agreed with me. Since arms are expensive the value of a deal should not bother you. If people ask why Pakistan should arm itself, it could be said that Pakistan is not receiving any arms. The arms it has are out-of-date and need to be replaced and, to a certain extent, modernized. This should cause no apprehension.
At a Foreign Secretaries' meeting, possibly between Mr. Agha Shahi and Mr. Kewal Singh, it was suggested that if India felt so strongly about the subject, why not discuss some ratio (of arms)? This offer could be considered once again. Time and again the press, your people and your government alarmed on the subject. They think, without reason, that both sides are arming themselves feverishly.

Foreign Minister: There were some reports in the American press about the US Government not agreeing to various proposals. The question asked here would be why should fighter planes be introduced into the region?

Pak Ambassador: Our planes are of a 20-years vintage. What is wrong with new planes? They are to replace the old ones.

Foreign Minister: There would be a demand here for our obtaining similar planes, and this itself would lead to an arms race.

Pak Ambassador: Something could be done about maintaining a balance between our two countries.

Foreign Minister: The offer can be considered, although while doing so, India's requirement on other frontiers should also be taken into account.

Pak Ambassador: These are details which could be discussed by both sides. Your resources are huge. “Why should you have any fear of Pakistan trying to upset the balance?”

Foreign Minister: I welcome your assurance that Pakistan will adhere to the Simla Agreement. At the same time I would like some further steps taken towards an accelerated growth of our relationship as part of normalization. There should be more exchange in the economic and cultural field. People are finding it difficult to visit their family members.

Pak Ambassador: Visas are issued in the normal course. There is some delay in the timing. So long as both sides have the intention of abiding by the Simla Agreement and work steadily towards it, it will open the door to better understanding in the future.

Foreign Minister: One matter has been of some concern to me particularly since many people have spoken to me about it since I took office. Some defense personnel involved in the 1971 war have been either captured or listed as missing. Some talks have been held at the official level. No exchange of figures known to either side has taken place. Some civilians are also involved.

Pak Ambassador: We exchanged lists of civilians from time to time. About two weeks ago India unilaterally sent back a number of Pakistanis. I am not sure if the defense personnel have been categorized as such. I will look into this personally.

Mr. Shahid Amin: Most defense personnel were repatriated long ago. We list missing individuals as unaccounted for. It is possible that there are similar cases of Indians in Pakistan. The matter has not been raised since the Embassy opened in New Delhi; it was perhaps discussed in Islamabad in May 1976. (List of missing defence personnel had been handed over at that time). If there are any outstanding cases we shall try to expedite them.

Pak Ambassador: There is no point in holding on to prisoners when there is a general agreement on their repatriation. I will let your office know of our findings.

Foreign Minister: When our Prime Minister met the Shah, they discussed the question of a railway line joining Bangladesh, India, Pakistan and Iran and going even further. We would like to see this happen. Economically our region should come closer together. If Europe can have a community, why can’t we in our region make such an effort? Yet, this cannot come about unless Pakistan agrees.

Pak Ambassador: All the countries have to agree. I shall pass on this point to Islamabad. “Why should it be summarily thrown out if India and the Shah like the idea?” the Foreign Secretaries can take it up at a meeting after the preliminary examination is over.

It was a pity that the Prime Minister could not halt at Islamabad following our former Prime Minister’s invitation. Mr. Desai had told me that it was good if meetings took place between heads of government. It was in pursuance of that comment that we informed Islamabad, but the invitation could not go out earlier because of other pre-occupation.

Foreign Minister: The Prime Minister’s schedule was fixed. He had to get back by the 17th for the budget.

Pak Ambassador: There is a standing invitation to the Prime Minister of India to pay a visit to Pakistan. The present Government has decided to hold elections by October and hand over power to the people’s representatives. It is a matter of just three months.

Foreign Minister: We are interested in stability in Pakistan. It is your concern as to what kind of Government there should be, although being a democracy we would like to see democratic governments all over the world. Our Ambassador has reported that everything is peaceful in Pakistan that life is normal and that travel across the border is preceding as usual. So, if politicians fight too much, they invite trouble.
Pak Ambassador: You in India have experienced political dog-fights but have managed to overcome your differences.

Foreign Minister: People should be allowed to choose freely. If there were no charges of rigging, there would have been no problem. In Jammu and Kashmir we opposed the National Conference, which won. We have accepted the results.

(In reply to a comment by the Ambassador, Foreign Minister informed him about the unanimity achieved over the nomination of Mr. Sanjiva Reddy as President. Foreign Minister observed that there was some poetic justice in this, given the chain of events that took place following the controversy over Mr. Reddy’s nomination in 1969)

Call by the Ambassador K. S. Bajpai on Chief Marshal Law Administrator General Zia-ul-Haq.

Islamabad, July 9, 1977.

Embassy of India
Islamabad

Ambassador was asked to see the Chief Martial Law Administrator, General Zia-ul-Haq, at 8.45 p.m. this evening. At the meeting, which lasted approximately 20 minutes, Mr. Agha Shahi, Secretary-General, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, was also present.

The gist of discussion was as follows:-

Gen. Zia: Mr. Agha Shahi has already conveyed to you our commitment to abide by all accords with India. I wanted to reiterate this assurance. Pakistan has to concentrate on its neighbours; India being the big neighbour, we want to convey to you the interim Government’s intention to continue development of relations on the basis of the Simla Agreement.

We have established a Caretaker Government. Our sole objective is to organize elections in three month’s time. We wish to implement what had basically been agreed to between the contending political parties. Fifty percent of the problem has already been resolved. So far, we have been very lucky: everything has been peaceful. We hope that 90 days will be enough.
We are very grateful for India’s reaction to the events in Pakistan. From the Statesman and other newspapers I have noted the statement made by your leaders on these changes. I have also noted there have been no troop movements on your side. India need have no apprehensions. You can convey to your Government that Generals are always the last people to want war, even though training for them is the main business of all soldiers. I am not a war-monger. You would note that the situation on the borders has remained peaceful. There has been no movement of troops on our side and we are very glad there have been none on yours. Everything has been normal, even traffic. Wagah has remained open.

Ambassador: I am sure Delhi will be as impressed as me when I convey the sentiments you have just expressed. Your assurance would be very welcome. You must have read about Ambassador Fida Hassan meeting with my Foreign Minister. The Government of India would like to fully reciprocate these assurances and to convey again that we only wish Pakistan prosperity and stability and a harmonious relationship between our two countries.

Gen. Zia: Yes, our desire is also to live as good neighbours.

Ambassador: It is no secret to yours Government authorities that Pakistan’s trials and tribulations of recent months have been a matter of great distress to us. It is, of course, inappropriate for me to comment on your internal developments. But it may not be tactless for me to say that the evidence of the wisdom of your action is the welcome accorded to it by your own people (General Zia nodded). We have noted that the situation is totally peaceful. This should augur well for the future. You have chosen to make the Military Administration an interim Government. It is entirely for you to decide what suits the needs of Pakistan. On our part, may I assure you, we are fully committed to a policy of friendship and development of cooperative relations with whatever Government Pakistan chooses. This policy cannot be better summarized than by a small incident: when my Prime Minister read the word “durable peace” in the letter taken by Mr. Shah Nawaz, he immediately remarked the term should rather be “permanent peace”: Our relationship should be “like a Hindu marriage – indissoluble.” Anyone who witnessed the feeling in India last July will testify to the joy felt by everyone at the old era having ended and at the establishment of the machinery for carrying forward the process of normalization. Now it is up to leaders like you and professionals on both sides to take further steps in this direction. We are convinced that there is a great scope for improvement of relations to our mutual benefit. We can also prepare to take necessary initiatives or to reciprocate to any proposals you might wish to make. But as I have said before, we are aware of some inhibitions on your side so we leave both the extent and pace of cooperation to you.
Gen. Zia: The Military Council desires to keep things moving in the right direction. We will act as best as possible in the spirit of the Simla Agreement and hope to hand over something better than what we found at the end of 90 days. The Military Council, of course, cannot take too many bold measures. We are a Caretaker Government, and it will be the responsibility of elected political leaders to determine basic policy issues, but whatever we can do in smaller ways we will.

Ambassador: The scope and framework of your activity is a matter of your choice and wisdom. We will march in step. I also want to assure you that if India can do anything to help Pakistan achieve the stability you seek, we are available.

Gen. Zia: Thank you.

Ambassador: You have so many responsibilities, we will not be meeting often.....

Gen. Zia: Any time....

Ambassador: So, my meeting with you this evening has given me the opportunity for one thought. I think it very important we understand each other. You had said that Armies were basically trained to fight...

Gen. Zia: But, as the Prime Minister said: “Politicians never want elections and Generals never want wars”, although both prepare constantly to these ends.

Ambassador: But, we sincerely hope we have turned our backs on wars. We know the respect the Army enjoys among the people of Pakistan and of its contribution, time and again, to serving the country.

Gen. Zia: We need all good wishes and moral support to complete our mission.

Ambassador: You have it from us. But we no longer know each other. Speaking frankly, I find one thing seriously lacking: we have no broad spectrum contacts now. In the fifties, there were much greater problems between us, but never a conflict. This was really due to personal contacts on both sides. Whenever a genuine crisis arose someone would catch a plane from Karachi to Delhi or Delhi to Lahore to discuss matter over with their counterparts and say Arey bhai aisee bhi kya baat hai. (Oh brother, what is this problem?) These talks prevented escalation of the difficulties. In the sixties, unfortunately, this relationship changed. Bilateral discussions became infrequent and contacts became limited to official. The danger is that, despite very fine officials on both sides sitting in our back-rooms we begin to imagine what the others intentions are; there is nothing like a dialogue.

Gen. Zia: Yes. Through discussion half the battle is over.

Ambassador: We should have dialogues at all levels: human, official, political, economic, cultural- even between the Armies.

Ambassador: Well, there is sometime talk about our cultural hegemony or economic hegemony, but we never even think of such things. I would like to assure you that we want to work with Pakistan as a separate sovereign State, whatever the Government it gives itself. That is your internal affair. Pakistan may adopt its own policies and go its own way. But, we hope you will go with us. We have had a very chequered 30 years’ history. We feel it important to take a fresh look at each other. Our countries have changed greatly. We hope that we can cease fighting yesterday’s battles.

Mr. Agha Shahi: May I raise an important humanitarian matter in the spirit of what you have just been saying? You might recall the Agreement last year on release of Indian and Pakistani nationals detained in either country. Pursuant to this Agreement, three batches each have already been repatriated. Recently, on 25th June, 139 Pakistanis were unilaterally released by India also pursuant to this agreement. I am glad to say that we have now prepared a complete list of Indians under detention in Pakistan. 200 cases have already been processed and will shortly be sent home, and we hope to repatriate the balance at an early date.

Ambassador: This is great news, not only for the families of the detainees, but also my Government. As you know, when our new Government came to power it decided unilaterally to release all your detainees.

Gen. Zia: These are the Human aspects of our relationship.

Ambassador: We are most grateful for your gesture. I hope it is symbolic of the new spirit which will further strengthen our relations.

I must not take up more of your time, it is already late. May I say you are setting quite a remarkable pace of activity, though I would rather work like you than the way we diplomats have to spend our evenings.

Gen. Zia: In the Army I have been used to it for the last 33 years. Now, of course, the task we have before us is of a far greater magnitude. I hope and pray we will be successful in accomplishing this task. Then we can devote our energies to our normal work.

Light conversation followed during which General Zia mentioned that he was born in Jullundur in 1924, received his training first at Mhow, then at Ahmednagar, from where he was commissioned in 1945. The General came to see the Ambassador off in his car and asked him to convey his greeting to the Prime Minister, Foreign Minister and General Raina.

Note by Foreign Secretary J. S. Mehta on the dinner hosted by the Secretary General of the Pakistan Foreign Ministry in honour of External Affairs Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee.

Pakistan Secretary General Mr. Agha Shahi had a dinner in honor of our Foreign Minister on 3rd Oct. Permanent Representative, Secretary (East), Mr. Vellodi and I were also invited. The atmosphere was very cordial. Recent developments in Pakistan and India were discussed. There was general satisfaction expression at the improved climate of relations between India and Pakistan. The hope was then expressed that improvement would continue. In the conversation we mentioned that there was scope for improved and greater facility for movement from Pakistan side, freer exchange on the cultural and sport side. Our public opinion had been restrained and friendly despite internal developments in Pakistan. In passing I also hinted that there was no reason for reaction if some other country’s representative happens to mention India’s size and alleged pre-eminent position. India itself does not advance such claims.

2. Agha Shahi also mentioned Ganga water issue and Bangladesh and congratulated the F.M. Referring to Salal, he said that the technical question which were mentioned in October 76 have now been made. They would have been happy to have further talks on the Salal question in March or April after the Pakistan elections.

3. As soon as political situation in Pakistan has stabilized, he would suggest when the talks would be held. We told him that we were willing to discuss but we did not remind them because we thought it may not embarrass him at this time.

4. In his conversation with me he had enquired about Indo-US bilateral discussions on Tarapur fuel. I told him that such discussions were continuing.

5. Mr. Akhund, Pakistan’s Permanent Representative indicated that they did not have much expectations and are not in favour of Brandt Commission.

Assessment of the situation in India-Pakistan Relations by the Ministry of External Affairs after the military take over in Pakistan.

New Delhi, October 6, 1977.

It has been our endeavour to reassure the present regime in Pakistan that development in Pakistan are entirely its own internal affair. We hope that Pakistan successfully tides over its internal crisis, so that the process of normalization of relations with that country can be resumed in order to establish lasting peace and encourage the growth of harmonious cooperative relations. We thought, like everyone else, that elections would be held in October; Gen Zia no doubt had his reasons for postponing them. Public opinion in India, meanwhile, has expressed the hope that Mr. Bhutto will be given a fair trial. As for the likely course of event in Pakistan, the indications are that the Army leaders would not permit the return to power of Bhutto and his party, primarily as it involves the question of their own survival. Thus, the possibility of elections being held would emerge only if chances of a PNA victory brighten. In the meantime, the Army may try to consolidate its hold over the country. The result of all these forces at work may be political instability in the near future.

2. We have sought to encourage the growth of bilateral trade unhindered by development in Pakistan. In implementing existing agreements and not hesitating to approach Pakistan over conclusion bilateral agreements wherever necessary (e.g. Agreement on visa facilities for airlines personnel signed on August 31 and the Telecommunications Agreement signed on October 1), we have sought to show that we seriously desire to maintain the momentum in the normalization process. Movement across the border by rail and road continued uninterrupted before and after the Army take-over in Pakistan. On the day of the take-over, the Foreign Minister made a statement in the Lok Sabha reiterating that this was an internal affair of Pakistan. While we naturally follow events in our neighbouring countries with interest, India has consistently followed a policy of non-interference in the domestic affairs of other countries.

3. The military regime in Pakistan has in turn, reassured us that Pakistan would honour past commitments and treaty obligations and would continue to endeavour to develop relations with us and abide by the terms of the Simla Agreement. This position has been conveyed by Gen. Zia-ul-Haq, Chief Martial Law Administrator to Ambassador Bajpai and by the Pakistan Ambassador to the Foreign Minister. As an indication of the mutual desire to continue the process of normalization, the military regime announced its decision to release 200 Indian detainees in Pakistan in reciprocation for our earlier gesture of releasing 200
Pakistan detainees. Recently, we have again unilaterally announced our willingness to repatriate another 500 Pakistan detainees from India.

4. India further demonstrated its goodwill for Pakistan by arranging for the quick return of all 4 passengers of the Cessna Skyhawk aircraft which crash landed in Indian territory on September 23. The damage plane has also been returned to Pakistan.

5. India has consistently believed that it is in its interest to have a strong and stable neighbour in Pakistan. As a continuation of the Government of India’s policy to normalize relation between two countries after signing the Simla Agreement, and in the process, to restore all severed links, the Government of India believes that logical progress in the same direction should lead to the further growth of good neighbourly relations and economic cooperation based on the logic of interdependence. It is in this spirit that the Government of India hopes that certain outstanding matters can be resolved once the internal situation in Pakistan attains a measure of stability. These issues include:

i) Transit Trade through Pakistan: During the Talks in Islamabad in May 1976, we offered to Pakistan transit trade rights through India to Nepal and Bangladesh, in return for similar rights for us to Iran and Afghanistan. Pakistan did not accept the offer even though there was considerable interest in it in both Iran and Afghanistan. We do not wish to pressurize Pakistan on this point and have left it to Iran and Afghanistan to use their good offices with Islamabad. Pakistan’s objections to the question on transit are in all probability politically motivated. However, it would be in the interest of all countries concerned and a progressive move towards détente in the region, if this facility were introduced. As of now, Pakistan is the only country holding out against it.

ii) Salal Hydro Electric Project: Under the Indus Water treaty of 1960, while India has the full use of the waters of the western rivers for non-consumptive purpose, it is obliged to adhere to certain design specifications provided in the Treaty, whenever facilities are set up for such use. The Treaty also allows Pakistan to raise specific objections to a design. Pakistan raised general objection to the Salal-hydro-electric project in J&K at the meetings of the Indus Waters Commission over the past few years. In 1976, Pakistan in fact wished to take the issue to a Neutral Expert, in terms of the Treaty. In the spirit of normalisation, India suggested one more attempt at the governmental level to resolve the issue. Two rounds of talks have been held and after detailed discussions Pakistan has come round to agree that the design has no harmful capacity and, in fact, does not deviate from the Treaty’s specifications. The differences have been considerably narrowed down and it is hoped that at the third, the matter can be settled.
Maritime Boundary: The settlement and demarcation of the maritime boundary between India and Pakistan assume a certain importance because both countries are going in for off-shore oil exploration. We are waiting for Pakistan to indicate when it will be ready to start negotiations.

Military Supplies:

5. During the recent past, instead of publicly taking up the question of the supply of military hardware to Pakistan with the United States and other Western countries, we have diplomatically appraised these countries of our concern. The present proposal under consideration of the US Congress seems to be limited to spare components, primarily for refurbishing old equipment. However, an ever vigilant eye on arms sale and supplies has to be maintained. With a military government in Pakistan, there might be an increased stress on the acquisition of sophisticated weapons. We were glad to note that the U.S. decided against supplying A-7 deep penetration strike-aircraft to Pakistan because it would mean the introduction of sophisticated weaponry into this area. We hope the US will continue to adhere to President Carter's policy of limitations on arms sales, since a reversal could only lead to strengthening of militarism in Pakistan and a revival of arms race in the sub-continent. India does not believe that a situation of confrontation in the sub-continent is in the interest of any of the countries in the region or of outside powers. As far as we are concerned, the Prime Minister told the Pakistan Ambassador in the course of a meeting on June 6, 1977 that India wants peace in the region and has no designs against Pakistan to make it feel the need for arms for its safety.

6. The assumption of power by the Armed Forces in Pakistan has, inter alia, led to a certain hardening of religious attitudes which, the Afghanistan Government have told us, have caused them concern. Iran too seems to have its apprehensions about such a stand. Rigidity based on religion in Pakistan would perhaps give countries like Saudi Arabia an opportunity to get involved in developments in the sub-continent. India hopes that whatever the influence working on the Government of Pakistan, the military regime will not be tempted to take a confrontationist attitude towards India.

7. The military regime in Pakistan remains committed to the installation of the nuclear reprocessing plant with French know-how. The French Foreign Minister has recently reiterated that France will adhere to its agreement with Pakistan.

8. While we have our misgiving about Pakistan's acquisition of the plant, we have not taken any public position on this matter. The Prime Minister in June also denied press reports stating that he had discussed the matter with French leaders. If the subject is raised, we need only say that India's position on the availability of nuclear technology for peaceful purpose to developing countries is well known. India is committed to harnessing nuclear energy only for peaceful purpose and believes that the proliferation of nuclear weapons is not in anybody’s interest.

India’s attitude to Pakistan remains one of patience, restraint, reasonableness and cooperation, based on the belief that there is no alternative to the peaceful and bilateral solution of problems and differences.

Note on the Chinese position on Kashmir.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

Note by Joint Secretary (Pakistan)

The statement of Chinese leaders on Kashmir on the occasion of General Zia’s visit to China this year and those made during Mr. Bhutto’s visit in May, 1976, differ in three important respects:

i) Whereas during the last visit Chinese Government supported the “struggle” for self-determination, this time they supported the “efforts”.

ii) On the previous occasion they supported the “right of self-determination”. This time they supported only the “exercise of self-determination.

iii) During 1976 the Chinese Government expressed their support for “the people of Jammu & Kashmir”. This time they supported “the Pakistan people” in their effort for exercise of self-determination by the people of Jammu & Kashmir.

2. In addition, after the visit the Pakistan Foreign Secretary told our Ambassador that reference to J&K in the statements of General Zia in Peking was only for the sake of form and record.

3. The above would show that on the both sides there has been a dilution of emphasis on Jammu & Kashmir.
Joint Secretary (North and East Asia)
Ministry of External Affairs
(East Asia Division)

Note by Joint Secretary (North & East Asia)

I place below a statement showing representative Chinese statements on Kashmir since 1957. (not included here) From a perusal of the same it would be obvious that on various occasions China has not only supported the right of self-determination of the Kashmiri people but also explicitly, Pakistani support to the Kashmiri people in the so-called exercise of this right, in the context of committed Chinese backing to various other Pakistani postures vis-à-vis India. At one stage the Chinese even viewed the question in terms of the Kashmiri people’s right to “national” self-determination, but this word has been omitted in more recent times. In other words, both in past and present statements, the essential Chinese stand which, to say the least, would embarrass India, has remained more or less constant.

2. Chinese responses during various high-level Pakistani visits to Peking have invariably kept in tune with the urgency and stridency of articulated Pakistani demands on those occasions. To the extent that on the recent visit of General Zia-ul-Haq, the Chief Martial Law Administrator, the Pakistani side made only a proforma reference to Kashmir, the result is that the Chinese have not made more enthusiastic noises than the Pakistanis.

3. Against the above background, the reversion to a formulation whereby the Chinese Government and people support Pakistan in their efforts for the exercise of self-determination of the people of Jammu and Kashmir, takes into account the present state of India-Pakistan relations and is in keeping with the Chinese understanding of the Simla Agreement. It may perhaps be interpreted as acquiescence in whatever India and Pakistan may agree upon ultimately. However I would submit that the tendency to read too much into the statement should be avoided at this stage, partly because so much has been said by China in the past including a statement as early as in 1975 that it is entirely up to India and Pakistan to reach a friendly settlement of the question through peaceful negotiations from which Chou-en-Lai stand there has been a vigorous pro-Pakistani shift. Subsequent events have shown that the Chinese have moved from this rather neutral position to a position of open hostility to India over the Kashmir question.
4. As for the use of phraseology such as “exercise” and “efforts” perhaps again one should not read too much significance. Particularly since the new Government assumed office in India, and in the context of visible successes of India’s policy of promoting better relations with immediate neighbours and removing past differences, it would appear too openly disruptionist, if Chinese pronouncements – as distinct from policies – did not take account of the more relaxed atmosphere in the sub-continent. Hence the speeches made on the occasion of Zia-ul-Haq’s visit by Chinese leaders take account, in their own fashion, of the trend towards improvement of relations between India and her neighbours in the South-Asian sub-continent. This is a tactical line which in addition is also in keeping with the improvement of the atmosphere in relations between India and China. To the extent that in past conflict-situations in the sub-continent China always came out second best, one may perhaps envisage that present Chinese policy would not favour an open conflict or eruption of tensions between India and Pakistan, till at least the time when the domestic situation in Pakistan improves noticeably. This tactical policy again may need to be examined further, if Bhutto re-emerges on the scene.

5. All-in-all, while it may be optically true that General Zia-ul-Haq’s visit went off on a lower-key that is usual for Pakistani visits, one should note that all that the Chinese needed to say vis-à-vis India has actually been said, either in direct or indirect terms albeit with a change in the style of presentation. Our Ambassador’s telegrams from Peking also would tend to see definite political gains for Pakistan from General Zia’s visit to Peking. We have had other reports that the Chinese have re-affirmed assistance to seven defence projects in Pakistan and we will have to await details of these before we can draw any firm conclusions about the continuing scale of Chinese military assistance to Pakistan. This issue would be an important touch stone before we can draw firmer conclusions of an abatement of Chinese political support to Pakistan.

New Delhi, February 5, 1978.

Excellency

I am taking the opportunity of sending this letter to you through our Minister of External Affairs.

As our Foreign Minister will explain, in the realm of our foreign relations we have placed special emphasis on the development of close and friendly relations with our neighbouring countries. In line with the policy, we have exchanged visits with many of our neighbours. The current goodwill visit of our Minister of External Affairs to Pakistan is not only an affirmation of this policy of the Government of India but is also symbolic of the improved state of relations between our two countries and of our desire to put them on a co-operative footing.

I feel that your visit to our country will be very timely and in pursuance of the same objective. I have great pleasure in extending a most cordial invitation to Your Excellency and Begum Zia-ul-Haq to visit India. I hope we would have the opportunity of welcoming you in India at an early date.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest considerion.

Yours sincerely,

Morarji Desai

H.E. General Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq,
Chief Martial Law Administrator and Head of Government of Pakistan
Islamabad.

Record note of discussions held during External Affairs Minister’s Call on Gen. Zia-ul-Haq, Chief Martial Law Administrator of Pakistan.

Rawalpindi, February 6, 1978.

Foreign Minister (Atal Bihari Vajpayee) called on Gen. Zia-ul-Haq, Chief Martial Law Administrator and Head of Government of Pakistan at 12.30 p.m. on February 6, 1978, at the latter’s residence in Rawalpindi. F.M. was accompanied by FS, Ambassador, K.S. Bajpai and JS (Pak-Iraf). On Pakistan side, in addition to Gen. Zia, the following were present:

1. Mr. Ghulam Ishaq Khan
   Secretary General-in-Chief
2. Mr. Agha Shahi,
   Advisor on Foreign Affairs,
3. Mr. Shah Nawaz
   Foreign Secretary
4. Mr. Naimuddin Sheikh,
   Director-General,
   South Asian Affairs,
   Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan
5. Mr. Shahid Amin
   Pakistan CDA in New Delhi

The following is a record of the conversation which lasted for about seventy minutes.

Chief Martial Law Administrator: We are, indeed, very happy that you are able to visit Pakistan. When we learnt from the Press that you would visit Pakistan whenever an opportunity arose, I immediately decided that we should invite you. I am happy that you accepted our invitation. This visit has been a source of pleasant surprise to the people in Pakistan, with the only exception of the politicians. With due respects to you, I would like to express a personal opinion about politicians out of power. My own view is that politicians in power have different ideas and views, those out of power are all part of the same species in every country.

F.M.: In my opinion, the explanation for this is that when in power the politicians represent the majority view which differs from time to time and place to place. Whereas, when they are out of power, they all suffer from the same problems.
C.M.L.A.: As far as the politicians in Pakistan are concerned, I often tell them that I am not their competitor. I tell them that it is those whom the people choose who have to lead this country. I particularly tell our politicians that they are supposed to guide the people and formulate public opinion. They are supposed to lead the people and not be led by them.

I had a very interesting talk with Prime Minister Callaghan of Britain on this subject during his visit to Pakistan. Mr. Callaghan told me that the basic principles which had guided him in 40 years of his political career were two – speak the truth and trust the people. I feel that these are the best guide-lines for any politician. Personally, I have tried to speak the truth and to trust my people.

F.M.: Excellency, Prime Minister, Shri Morarji Desai has asked me to convey his greetings and good wishes to Your Excellency.

C.M.L.A.: I am very grateful for Prime Minister Desai's kind sentiments. I appreciate very much his attitude towards neighbours and particularly to Pakistan. I am grateful for the perfect understanding shown by India towards the internal developments in Pakistan. The helpful attitude adopted by India has made our task much easier. India could make things very difficult for us. We, therefore, deeply appreciate the attitude of your Government. I had conveyed our feelings to Ambassador Bajpai. I had told your Ambassador that a soldier spends his whole life in the art of warfare. I have taken part in four wars. But, a soldier is the last person who wants war. A soldier always looks for peace. This is my attitude. Fortunately, the climate of the relations between our two countries today is totally different from what it had been for the last 30 years. Today, we are not only inter-dependent but there are many things in which we have a collective approach. The demand of the hour is to adopt an international approach and rise above narrow nationalistic considerations. No nation can thrive on pure jealousies. This is my view.

I told the Indian correspondents yesterday that people should not be so allergic to good relations developing between India and Pakistan. Pakistan was not carved out because of some accident of history. It came into existence as a result of a deliberate effort and on the basis of a consensus of the people in the sub-continent. It is true that some people were opposed to the emergence of Pakistan. But, by and large, there was a consensus. The case of Bangladesh is completely different. Bangladesh was born out of war. Even Israel's case is separate as it was created by force. Such being the genesis of Pakistan, why should not the people of Pakistan and India live in peace? My own view is that the people in both the countries have a constructive outlook towards one another. It is only the politicians who sometimes try to cash on the past history of conflicts between the two countries. The politicians in Pakistan very often speak without meaning anything. They claim that they are expressing the public point of view. Even if it is true, I tell them that public opinion itself should not be allowed to grow like grass. It should be trimmed and channeled along constructive lines.

As regards India, I am happy that our relations are on the way to normalization. I hope our efforts will succeed fully. I told your Ambassador sometime back that there are three things which are necessary in order to put our relations on a firm and friendly footing. First, there should be trust, second there should be understanding, and third, which is most important; there should be no mutual fear. On this third aspect, I am of the view that the initiative should always come from the bigger country. In our case, it is incumbent on India, being the bigger country, to take the initiative to eliminate fear from its smaller neighbours. I was very happy to learn from late Ambassador Fida Hassan that Prime Minister Desai holds the same view.

As for your current visit, I think we both have taken bold steps. There was one bold step from your side and another one from our side. You are aware of the commotion in our press for the last ten days over your visit. I had a meeting with our political leaders a few days back. They all started harping on the question of Kashmir. Many of them said that there was no sense in such visits unless the question of Kashmir is discussed and settled. I asked them; why are you so sensitive about Kashmir? How can you solve the problem without talking with India? I told them that the establishment of contacts and communications is the most important step for solving such problems.

F.M.: Excellency, we are aware of the commotion in your press. There has been a lot of speculation in the Indian Press also. In fact, at one time I was almost thinking of canceling my visit because of the embarrassment which was being caused to your Government and particularly to Your Excellency by my impending trip. But, I decided that it was a bold step on the part of both our Governments and we should not retrace it.

C.M.L.A.: We appreciate your gesture.

F.M.: I had a very friendly chat with Mr. Agha Shahi in New York in the course of which I had apprised him of the policy of my Government. I would like to reiterate that the Janata Government means what is says. Our Prime Minister has that reputation. I have visited a number of our neighbouring countries before coming to Pakistan. I availed of the opportunity in each case to assure our friends of our friendly feelings for them. I am happy to say that our assurance has convinced the neighbouring countries that I have visited.

C.M.L.A.: We in Pakistan believe in what your Government says. You have proved not only by words but by deeds during the last one year that you have goodwill for us.

F.M.: We know you have a difficult task at home and our efforts should be not to say anything or to do anything which makes it more difficult.
C.M.L.A: I know it and we are grateful for it. Coming to the question of the ways and means for pushing further the process of normalization, I feel that there is a communication gap between our two peoples. This, I feel, should be bridged. For example, why should we not exchange our newspapers? I mentioned this to your journalists yesterday – let there be a free exchange of newspapers. In fact, it should be possible for people in either country to buy any newspaper from the other country.

F.M.: This is a very good suggestion. In fact, we on our part are ready to go in the field of establishing contacts to any extent that you desire us to proceed.

C.M.L.A: We would also like that the journalists of either country should be located in the capitals of the other country. In fact, I was told yesterday that some of your journalists wanted to stay a few days longer in Pakistan. I told them that they all were welcome to stay and that we would arrange a tour for them to go around the country as our guests. I can say that this is my gift to them.

F.M.: This is excellent. Another problem which needs to be streamlined is that of visas. The present visa regulations are indeed difficult. We feel that these should be liberalized. We, on our part, have no reservation in this matter.

C.M.L.A: We have no reservation either.

From our side, there are two main issues about which people get excited – the first one is Kashmir. As I have already mentioned, I had told our political leaders that I will mention this matter to Mr. Vajpayee. But, I also told them that this was not an issue which could be solved quickly. There was no ready-made answer to this problem. In any case, I told them that we should not show any allergy to talk about it. Let the results not be as we want them to be, but there is no harm in talking.

The second problem is that of trade. Here, there is a lot of idle criticism, in our press which we try to answer in our own way. But, there are some genuine problems. I would particularly mention the case of some 6000 scooters and bicycles which have been imported from India. A private party has filed a writ-petition in the Lahore High Court against these imports on the plea that they would hurt the domestic industry. When I got the news of the writ-petition, I had the relevant facts collected and would like to mention these for your information. The bicycles made in Pakistan are available at a price of Rs.600/- as against Indian-made bicycles which cost only about Rs.250/-. I am told that even if we take off the excise and other taxes from our products, the price per bicycle would still come to Rs.450/-. You would see that this is a difficult situation. In fact, the protective arrangements we have set up for our industries are not able to cope with the situation created by imports from India. If we leave everything to our trade, of course they will be only too happy with all these imports. There are unscrupulous businessmen here as in India. But, the industry does suffer sometimes. I hope whenever our trade teams meet, they would take this problem into consideration.

We feel that the trade should have some kind of balance. If this could be achieved, it will open tremendous prospects for continued expansion. This would also show that there is inter-dependence between us.

F.M. I fully agree that the trade should not be one-sided. India has no intention of dumping anything in Pakistan for harming Pakistan’s industry in any way. I would like to assure Your Excellency that we will cooperate with you fully in this matter.

Agha Shahi: A meeting to review the Trade Agreement between the two countries is going to be held very soon. It may take place either later this month or in the next month. We have assured the politicians as well as others who have raised this matter that we would try to safeguard Pakistan’s interests during the forthcoming negotiations.

Ambassador Bajpai: I would only like to clarify here that all the exports from India are coming to Pakistan in accordance with your existing regulations.

C.M.L.A: We are conscious of that. But I hope you would appreciate that even though we do not have a trade arrangement which asks for balanced trade, the politicians and the press do raise their eye-brows when they find the imbalance to be so glaring.

F.S. I would like to mention here that before coming to Pakistan the Minister of External Affairs had exerted a good deal of pressure on his Cabinet colleagues to ensure that India is able to purchase more goods from Pakistan. In addition to this, the Government of India has under active consideration a proposal for effecting some liberalization in our global imports. If this takes place, Pakistan would also be able to benefit from it.

F.M.: I would like to inform Your Excellency that we have decided to buy some cotton from Pakistan, and we hope very soon the concerned people in the two countries would get together to thrash out the necessary arrangements. I had a talk with Shri Barnala, our Minister of Agriculture & Irrigation on this subject before my departure, and he has agreed to purchase some cotton.

Agha Shahi: You should do that soon because our cotton crop is selling very fast.

F.M.: I have also had a talk with Shri H.N. Bahuguna, our Minister for Petroleum.
He has said that if Pakistan could supply us gas in any form, we would be happy to import it.

C.M.L.A: I have told your Ambassador that we are agreeable to supply gas to you. We have got some new gas-fields. If it suits your Government, let the details be worked out.

Another item over which an agreement has been reached in principle for export to India is rock salt. But, unfortunately no concrete steps have been taken so far in this matter.

C.M.L.A: What I would like to impress upon you is that some concessions should be given by India to us. It will be most welcome.

Ambassador Bajpai: I would like to suggest that it would be better if suggestions for concessions came from Pakistan side. Otherwise, if we offer any concessions on our own, some people here may accuse us of a hegemonic attitude.

C.M.L.A: In addition to trade, there are other areas where there is possibility of a great deal of cooperation between our two countries. I have particularly been impressed by the phenomenal increase in the production of high-yielding varieties of wheat and cotton in India. For example, you are growing a lot of crops in Rajasthan which used to be a desert. If we could get a UN expert or even an Indian expert, who could advise us on this matter, we would be very grateful. We would also be happy to offer to you whatever experience we have been able to gain in the field of agriculture.

F.M.: We would be glad to welcome a delegation of your experts on agriculture. I would like to assure you that the Government of India would be happy to share their experience in this field with Pakistan.

C.M.L.A: Sometime back I received a copy of the Illustrated Weekly of India, possibly because it had a picture of mine. This issue had a very interesting article on the development of cooperative in India. I feel that Pakistan can learn a great deal from India in the field of cooperatives. I saw from this article that cooperatives have been more successful in States like Maharashtra, Gujarat than was in Uttar Pradesh. If we could get some information on this matter, perhaps we could consider adopting the same system.

F.M.: We would be happy to provide you whatever information you need. Perhaps when the Expert delegation comes from Pakistan, I am myself quite convinced that cooperatives are the only answer to the economic problems of developing countries. In countries like ours, both private and state capitalism suffer from major handicaps.
F.S.: In fact, I feel there should be greater contacts at various professional levels between the two countries and these should be publicized also.

C.M.L.A: A good beginning has been made in the field of Hockey. I would like to mention that it was my personal decision to make this suggestion to your Government. It was definitely a risk because there are many in this country who frown upon such contacts but I thought we must make a beginning.

F.M.: We are very happy. We hope that Cricket teams would also visit. Let us play cricket without politics.

C.M.L.A: Let us hope this will also happen.

F.M.: Excellency, there is a point which has been agitating our minds a great deal. As you might know, there are some Indian defence personnel who have been missing since 1971. The relations of some of these persons have been receiving information from Pakistan about their being alive in Pakistan. This is a humanitarian matter and I will certainly secure Your Excellency’s personal intervention in having these persons traced and repatriated. A lady, one Mrs. Tambe, came to see me a few days back. She believes that her husband is in some jail in Pakistan, as he has been seen by some one who has conveyed this news to her.

C.M.L.A: We have no intention of keeping any Indian under detention in Pakistan. I have told your Ambassador that as soon as these people can be traced, they would be sent back to India.

Agha Shahi: Sir, we have tried our level best. It is quite possible that their identities are not stated clearly. I have, therefore, asked that a Special Officer should be sent to all the jails in Pakistan to interrogate each and every Indian detainee in order to ascertain whether any of them belong to this category. Perhaps, the Army may also like to depute an officer with the team who may be helpful in locating the Indian defence personnel.

C.M.L.A: This is a good suggestion. I will give instructions that from the Army side also someone should visit these places of detention. I would like to assure you that we will do everything possible to have these persons traced. Take it from me that they will be released as soon as they are traced. Please let us have whatever other information you may have.

Agha Shahi: We have been given photographs but the problem arises because these photographs are by now quite old. I would, therefore, suggest that whatever other information is available, should be given to us afresh along with copies of photographs. If the persons concerned who are supposedly in detention in Pakistan could give their whereabouts, we would definitely have those places thoroughly searched.
As regards other detainees, a number of exchanges have taken place in terms of the Foreign Secretaries Agreements on this subject. We hope that the process of verification of detainees would be accelerated so that people join their families as early as possible.

F.M.: We also would like the Pakistani detainees in India to go back as early as possible.

We will give whatever information is available with us. Photographs and some other information have already been supplied to your Embassy in New Delhi as well as to our Embassy here. Nonetheless, we will give you again whatever information is available with us.

I would now like to hand over to Your Excellency a letter from Prime Minister Desai extending a most cordial invitation to you to visit India at your convenience.

C.M.L.A: There was no need of a formal invitation from Mr. Desai. I am at his disposal. (Davat ki kya Zarurat thi. Ham un ke khadim hain). (Where was the need for an invitation. We are your servants.) Please thank the Prime Minister on my behalf. I gratefully accept this invitation.

Record of discussions between External Affairs Minister Atal Bihari Vajpai and Mr Agha Shahi, Adviser on Foreign Affairs to the Chief Martial Law Administrator of Pakistan.

Islamabad, February 6, 1978.

[The talks were held at the Pakistan Foreign Office in Islamabad. The record is near verbatim.]

Ministry of External Affairs
(Pak-Iraf Division)

Agha Shahi: I have great pleasure in extending on behalf of the Interim Government of Pakistan, a warm and cordial welcome on your first visit to Pakistan. We are conscious of the importance of the occasion and its momentous nature because the last visit of an Indian Foreign Minister was in March 1966 when Sardar Swaran Singh came in the wake of the Tashkent Declaration. Since then till 1973, there was no contact until Mr. P.N. Haksar visited Pakistan as the Special Envoy of the Prime Minister. Your visit is, therefore, most welcome. It enables us to resume contacts envisaged in the Simla Agreement which is the basic instrument governing the relations between our two countries.

There is a new Government in India today and there has been a change of government in Pakistan. We congratulate you on the graceful manner in which you overcame your internal problems. The achievement of the Indian people has been justly acclaimed the world over. We have been deeply impressed by the successful transition in your country in accordance with the democratic process.

We were happy over this smooth change-over and took an early opportunity to establish contact with your government when Mr. Shah Nawaz visited Delhi as the Special Envoy of the then Prime Minister. His talks with Prime Minister Desai were considered highly positive and set the tone of our relationship. We deeply appreciated the sentiments expressed by Prime Minister Desai. We are also happy to say that the attitude of the Government of India to Pakistan has been in accordance with the principle of non-interference in internal affairs. This is also the principle that we scrupulously respected during the time of India’s internal difficulties.

Mr. Shah Nawaz’s talks with you created a good impression on us. We have greatly welcomed your statesmen-like approach to relations between our two countries. In the light of what I have said about the attitude of your government, therefore, your visit to Pakistan given us great pleasure.

I am also very happy to see my good friend Mr. J.S. Mehta with whom I have negotiated in the past. We have had our difficult moments which we surmounted in May, 1976. That was an important agreement leading to the restoration of air services, rail links, and resumption of diplomatic relations and the expansions of trade. Moreover, it was an agreement which was implemented according to schedule, without a hitch. Subsequently, I visited New Delhi in October 1976 for talks on the design of the Salal dam. The talks continued in a second round in Islamabad and we managed to close the gap between our respective positions very considerably. Having had first hand experience of Mr. Mehta’s negotiating ability and appreciating the spirit with which he has approached our discussions, I take particular pleasure in his presence. I also welcome Dr. I.P. Singh, whose responses to day-to-day dealings between our two countries augur well for Indo-Pak relations. Ambassador Bajpai has been working indefatigably to promote relations and is most ably representing and safeguarding your interests. I also welcome the other members of your delegation.

F.M. (Atal Bahari Vajpayee): Thank you for your kind sentiments and your warm welcome to this beautiful city. At one of my press conferences in India, I had expressed the desire to visit Pakistan. I am grateful to you for your kind invitation enabling me to come to your great country. We met in New York and discussed international issues and regional problems. We both touched briefly on bilateral questions. I carry a message of goodwill from the Government and people of India to the Government and the people of Pakistan. When Mr. Shah Nawaz visited New Delhi, we assured him – and I would like to reiterate that assurance – that India would like to have good neighbourly relations with Pakistan. The Janata Government has accorded top priority to fostering friendly relations with all neighbouring countries and Pakistan is a very important neighbour.

In pursuit of this policy, I have been to Afghanistan, Nepal, Burma and Bhutan. I am now here to reiterate that we want a strong and stable Pakistan. There should be no apprehension on your side on this ground. I should like to be very frank with you and your delegation and the other leaders whom I propose to meet. I did belong to a political party which wanted the re-unification of the sub-continent by peaceful means but that party does not exist any more. Here I represent a new party and a new Government. We have decided to have friendly relations with all countries on the basis of equality and reciprocity. We are large in size and population but we have no intention of playing the role of a big brother. As you rightly mentioned, we respect other countries’ independence, territorial integrity and right to have the political, social and economic systems which the people of these countries want. We hope to develop friendly relations irrespective of any ideological considerations.

There has been too much speculation about my visit. There has been a talk of having a South Asian Economic Community. I would like to state very clearly that I have not brought any proposals nor any package deal. We would like to develop beneficial bilateral relations. If countries in this region find it profitable to co-operate in certain fields, it will obviously have to be done with the willing consent of all the countries concerned. India, on its part, would like to have such co-operation among the countries in the region.

We have recently solved the Farakka problem, which bedeviled us for 25 years, on the basis of bilateral negotiations. Nepal wanted two treaties with India. The Prime Minister told them, you can have as many treaties as you like, provided there is an arrangement to ensure that the economic interests of either country are not harmed.

We would like to go ahead with the process of normalization under the Simla Agreement. The Janata Government stands by the Simla Agreement. As you rightly mentioned, after we resumed diplomatic relations, some further links have been established and the process of normalization has been going on. But, if you agree – and it is entirely up to you – the process can be accelerated.
Recently, some of your artists visited India and received an enthusiastic welcome. We would like such visits to take place more often. Here also, if there is agreement on both sides, then alone can such contacts be fruitful. There is going to be a Mushaira (poetic symposium) in Bhopal, on February 25, 1978, which I am inaugurating. The organizers wish to invite some poets from Pakistan. I would like to repeat the invitation although I do not know if any one will be going. These cultural contacts can be increased. Journalists from one country can go to the other. But, these are specific issues which I am not here to discuss. My visit is essentially a goodwill visit. I am glad to be here and am touched by the warmth of the sentiments you have expressed. I hope the visit would lead to a better relation between us.

As I mentioned there has been much talk about Asian Community. We want co-operation between the countries of the region. But, it is far from our mind to give any military and political over-tone to co-operation in the economic field. You have known of the proposal for Asian Collective Security. India did not accept it. We said that if all the countries involved decided to settle their disputes through negotiations in a peaceful manner, there would be no need for a formal agreement. That idea has not been pursued further. We have had discussions with the Shahanshah, who was here yesterday. We felt that if all countries in the region agree that coming together in the economic field is of benefit to all, then alone can such co-operation materialize. We are in no hurry. However, as developing countries, we do feel that if we tell the industrialized nations that they should help us, it is incumbent on us to co-operate among ourselves. Your Excellency was in Paris (FM later corrected this to say that he meant Mr. Aziz Ahmed, the then Foreign Minister) for the North-South dialogue. The whole question has now gone back to UN. Developing countries have to work in close co-operation to persuade the industrialized countries to see reason and to come to our help.

One question which is not bilateral is the preparation for the UN General Assembly’s Special Session on Disarmament. We would like developing nations, all non-nuclear-weapon nations, to consult each other and evolve a common strategy so that the Special Session leads to concrete results. We feel that if the Session is held only to make long speeches and express pious hopes without any decisions on concrete measures, the whole purpose would be defeated. We, therefore, regard the work being done in the Fourth Committee for the Special Session as very important. The USA and the Soviet Union are having talks in Geneva where China and France are not represented. These two countries will, however, be at the Special Session in New York. We are consulting other countries also.
India has unilaterally declared that it will not manufacture atomic bombs. We have not signed the NPT because we feel it is discriminatory and unequal. India would like to use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes and not lag behind in the field of technology. Regarding nuclear disarmament, we think all nations should renounce atomic weapons. There is no question of gangup but we would like to impress on the nuclear weapon States that they should do something concrete in this direction. I would like to invite your comments on this point.

I would like to thank you for your warm and kind hospitality. I never thought that I would visit Pakistan as Foreign Minister of India.

Agha Shahi: You are welcome here in any capacity. But you are still young. We look forward to your further successes.

What you have said about Indo-Pak relations is most welcome. As for press speculation, there was no reason to expect otherwise. This speculation which was based mostly on reports in the foreign media, seems to have ignited the press people in this country, leading to demands for a clarification about the idea of an Asian Common Market. We tried to tell them that there has been no concrete official proposal and that we do not know what it means. But, the papers said that the Pakistan Foreign office was very na"ive and ignorant. Then we thought that we would try to dispel groundless speculation and fears about your visit. We undertook briefings in Islamabad, Lahore and Karachi to have your visit viewed in the right perspective and to keep the atmosphere propitious for the success of your visit.

What you have said about India’s attitude towards the smaller countries which are its neighbours is very welcome. The Janata Government has shown by deeds that its professions are meant seriously and sincerely. We have welcomed the agreement on Farakka. It was a difficult matter and its amicable resolution has been very well received. Also, your agreement to Nepal’s request for two treaties shown an approach based on goodwill.

On international matters, we think your attitude to Asian Collective Security is very similar to our approach. We have been approached often for support for such an agreement. We thought that it would create unnecessary problems and compromise our friendly relations with other countries. India’s attitude on this question has been important and crucial. So, we can steadily forge ahead, working for the peaceful settlement of disputes. We also share this view through long experience of pacts; we are quite disenchanted with them. Therefore, we share your disenchantment with such proposals whatever quarter they emanate from.
We have been co-operating with your delegations in international forums. Our delegations co-operated well at the North-South dialogue. We have been disappointed with the attitude of the industrialized countries but feel we must persist. We are willing to go along to see if there can be any worthwhile results on a collective basis.

We are taking a good measure of interest in the Special Session in Disarmament. At New York, there is some difficulty about our extending co-operation because the non-aligned have formed a group by themselves. At the C.C.D. at Geneva, the non-aligned groups within the committee have included aligned countries; Pakistan and Iran are members. We have advised our delegation in New York to contact leading non-aligned members and urge that Pakistan and Iran also be allowed to join the group. We have almost identical stands. We have also submitted a working paper. We assure you of our readiness to co-operate.

Your assurances on the non-manufacture of nuclear weapons are very welcome. We have no reason to doubt your sincerity. The reasons for your not signing the NPT are understandable. There is no difference between us on this point. We would like you to give thought to our proposal for a multilateral declaration to this effect. Such a declaration would ensure greater stability since the situation in the individual countries could change with a change of Govt. A multilateral undertaking binds all successor governments. What is said unilaterally could be said multilaterally and this would be an advance.

You mentioned greater cultural contacts. I was glad to meet the Indian journalists here yesterday, for a frank, off-the-record discussions. I told them that if we can be safeguarded against being shown up in print on what we think, we can have a freer exchange of views. It is not possible to conduct diplomacy through the press. I told the journalists that we cannot possibly mention everything that we discuss as this would cause controversies. We have had discussion in frankness and on a basis of confidence. I have put myself in their hands. I had taken your press in confidence in the past and there has been no occasion to regret this. I have asked them to understand our point of view. They asked for permission to stay longer in Pakistan and we are giving active consideration to this request.

When Foreign Secretary Mehta and I signed our accord (in May 1976) it was on the understanding that we wanted to err on the side of caution on our side because of the state of feelings in our country. I am glad to say we have been able to take steps as the occasions have arisen; we will continue to do so. The latest is the decision on the hockey matches. I can assure you that this is an important gesture. But, we would like such things to appear, as they should, very normal. However, in the context of our relations, it is a very important gesture although there may be some controversy about who will win.
Ambassador Bajpai has had several meetings with Mr. Shah Nawaz, myself and the CMLA and we have all spoken very frankly and freely. We know you are dissatisfied with the speed on genuine grounds. But, please leave the pace to us.

Your visit is a revolutionary step. That we were able to arrange it with such complete smoothness is itself a great forward step after the Shimla Agreement. What you told Mr. Shah Nawaz as well as what Prime Minister Desai has said reflects your true desire to normalize relations with Pakistan. Your enunciation of wanting good neighbourly relations is reassuring.

It must be understood that you are a large country with a population of 650m, industrially advanced, and economically powerful, although this is not necessarily reflected in your per capita income which is low like ours. But, your industrial prowess and 'What not', the state of advanced technology and your strategic position, your weight and importance in international councils are self evident. We accept this, it is your due. But, regardless of our history and circumstances, the proximity of such a large country does create psychological reactions in smaller countries which are its neighbours.

When I was posted in China, I had heard Premier Chou En-lai say that according to their thinking they specially go out of their way to reassure their smaller neighbours since even without China doing anything these smaller neighbours get a feeling of fear. Chou said that this was the central doctrine of their policy towards smaller neighbours. I would say this is true, even when relations are at their best as they have been with us.

This holds true about a large country in any part of the world. If India is conscious of this – and Prime Minister Desai’s words show that he is of this thinking – then a psychological climate for the total normalization of relations would be assured.

In the past, while we did not wish to deny India’s importance and weight in councils, we found that some powers tried to enhance their relationship with India by making gratuitous statements on leadership in this part of the world. We appreciate that India did not allow itself to be carried away by such unsolicited testimonials. We have told these friends that such statements are not helpful in stabilizing the political situation in our part of the world. They are repugnant to the doctrine of relations based on equality and represent a retrogression to a position which existed before World War I, the residue of which was carried over to the eve of World War II. We appreciated your spokesman’s views. We are glad you did not misunderstand our statements.

The Shimla Agreement gives the basis for good relations between us, based on peaceful co-existence, sovereignty, non-interference in internal affairs and respect for each other as equals. This is the basic instrument governing our relations. We expect all countries to respect it.
In May (1976), we made important progress in the resumption of diplomatic relations which have been progressing very well. Air and train services have been resumed, we have made a beginning in having cultural contacts and in the field of support. We know there are difficulties regarding visas and travel. Here also we are taking steps and look forward to progressive liberalization.

I know this is a very sensitive subject. But, I feel our relations should be such that we can have discussions even on a sensitive subject in a spirit of goodwill and in an amicable manner. There are really two main issues. The first is resumption of negotiations on the Salal dam. I referred to this earlier. We had two sessions in October, 1976. We made considerable progress in bridging the gap. There were some outstanding difficulties. We on our part wanted to make sure of what steps we would need to take if there were agreement on the basis of the negotiations. We got our engineers together and they found that we would have to make modifications which may involve an expenditure to the tune of Rs. 22 to 30 crores. We thought we should call for a pause in these negotiations because of the elections round the corner. We feared that the Opposition would exploit the issue. So we postponed the matter till the elections were over. You know what happened thereafter. There was an upheaval. At first, the Government went in for a 90-day operation, but felt compelled to postpone the elections till October, 1978. If you are ready, we would be willing to resume negotiations on Salal from the point at which they were left off.

The second issue is inevitably Kashmir. Whenever we brief people to explain relations with India, they raise this issue. At the most recent occasion, three days back, the political leaders met Gen. Zia. They asked us a number of questions on the full implementation of the Simla Agreement. We told them that we had carried out the steps envisaged, that it was possible to have fuller implementation, and that it was our policy to enlarge the amplitude of the agreements reached. When we came to the final clause of the Agreement according to which both sides have to work for durable peace on the basis of peaceful settlement of disputes and the non-use of force and having regard to Prime Minister Desai’s desire for not only a durable but permanent peace, the political leaders urged us to invite your attention to that part of the final clause which envisages a meeting of the Heads of Government for a final settlement of Jammu & Kashmir.

We know it is a sensitive subject for you and for us. But we do believe we should try to turn our attention to this aspect of the Agreement which would open the way for permanent peace. We do not say that we in any way have reservations about having been able to leave confrontation behind or that we wish to qualify the Simla Agreement on the non-use of force. We emphatically reiterate that we will be guided by the Simla Agreement. Not only will the acceleration of our relationship be immeasurably fortified but the door would be opened to very many possibilities if we can in a spirit of understanding and with the desire to find solutions acceptable to both sides arrange a meeting of Heads of the two Governments to discuss the only outstanding issue between the two countries.

I know this is a goodwill visit and do not wish to mar the visit. What I have said is with all goodwill and friendship, but I am duty-bound to bring the concern of the people and the Government of Pakistan to your attention.

F. M. I welcome your offer to resume talks on Salal. I would like the details to be worked out by officials.

On the question of Kashmir, you have public opinion. We also have public opinion. I was in the Opposition when the Simla Agreement was signed. I led a procession in Delhi condemning the Agreement because we thought that some issues which could have been decided were left unsettled. My role is now reversed. I have to defend the Simla Agreement and I am doing so honestly. There is no alternative to peaceful co-existence. The Simla Agreement says that Pakistan and India will settle all disputes and outstanding issues in a peaceful manner, without use of force. I have gone through the record of the Simla talks and found that there was some informal understanding. There was much discussions on whether the Line should be called the Cease-fire Line, or the Line of Actual Control, because the words used were important. Ultimately the words used were Line of Control.

The Agreement also said the Kashmir question could be discussed. We know each other’s positions. The issue is sensitive. But, I would be very frank with you. If Kashmir is allowed to become a plaything of internal politics in Pakistan or India, it is not good. I would like to draw your attention to the fact that in our general elections, no bilateral issues relating to our relations with Pakistan were raised. We kept scrupulously aloof.

Unfortunately, Kashmir has become a political plaything in your country. This is to be avoided. Unless we prepare public opinion on both sides, try to guide it on the path of reason and understanding, any solution will be attacked by some elements as a sell-out. We had the Farakka agreement and there were accusations in Parliament although these were on a low key and we were able to convince the people.

At sometimes, the people will have to be told on either side that the issue has to be solved on the basis of realities. I met Sheikh Abdullah before coming here. He said how can discussions on Kashmir be held without the people of Kashmir being consulted. He also said that Kashmir is a part of India and we would sink and swim together.

I am not clear in my mind how we are to proceed on this question. If we raise false hopes, all that we have achieved over the last year in normalizing our relationship will be lost. But, talks can always be held. I have brought a letter of invitation from our Prime Minister to Gen. Zia-ul-Haq. If he visits India, any question can be raised.

But I would like to mention that if we go ahead in normalizing relations, this climate of trust and confidence is further improved, the exchange of ideas, people even goods, if Pakistan is ready for that; if not, we will not insist – takes place, then this question can be tackled. At the moment, I don’t see any solution apart from saying that we discussed the matter and disagreed. This is not going to help India or Pakistan.

I would like to thank you for talking in confidence with Indian journalists. Ambassador Bajpai says you have done a heroic job in convincing people that this is essentially a goodwill visit. If we march ahead on the road of understanding, every problem can be solved in an amicable manner.

Agha Shahi: Thank you. I think it is time to call on Gen. Zia. We have made a careful note of what you have said. I think perhaps given the nature of the subject, we might perhaps have a further exchange in the same spirit at that level.

F.M.: What do we tell the press?

Agha Shahi: That we discussed bilateral relations and some international questions.

F.M.: And if they ask about Kashmir?

Agha Shahi: Shall we not say anything now? What would you like to say? We must think of how to put it. But we could say, ‘please wait……till after the call on Gen. Zia’.

F.M.: We have to make some preliminary remarks. They are waiting outside.

Amb. Bajpai: We can’t avoid them.

Agha Shahi: Shall we say ‘Bang (snap of fingers), we discussed Kashmir?’

Amb. Bajpai: We could say that talks were held in a cordial atmosphere.

Agha Shahi: If they ask about Kashmir, let us say we discussed it and the two sides put forward their respective points of view.

F.M.: I agree.

Press Conference of External Affairs Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee at the end of his visit to Islamabad.

Opening Remarks.

Gentlemen,

I am happy to meet the members of the Press Corps in Islamabad. As one think of the ups and downs of Indo-Pakistan relationship, this is a historic visit. I have been greatly impressed by the warm cordiality of the reception which I have received. I find there was an appreciation of the Janata Government’s desire to maintain good relations and improve them wherever possible between us and our neighbours. Amongst them Pakistan, for obvious reasons, has special importance. I mentioned to the Foreign Affairs Adviser that it is true India happens to be a big country but its approach is not of a big brother. We want to improve relations on the basis of equality, non-interference and goodwill. This clearly implies respect not only for the sovereignty of each country but the right of each country to determine its own political and social system. We believe that through the resolution of problems and co-operation between us, we can accelerate the process towards the fulfillment of our developmental aspirations. Coexistence has to be on the basis of sovereignty. We recognize development and cooperation can only be with the consent of the countries concerned and with their acceptance that it would be of benefit to each one of them. Having visited other countries in our neighbourhood, and having made our desire clear from the very beginning that we want peace and friendship with Pakistan, I came here essentially as an emissary of goodwill. I had no package or specific items of agenda for this mission.

In view of our history, it would be naïve to deny that there are psychological problems which we have to recognize and face. Indeed, my attention was drawn to public opinion and some anxieties in the Press, about my visit and its purpose. Public opinion in India has also some anxieties about Indo-Pakistan relations. My own belief is that broad public opinion in both countries has welcomed the normalization of our relations and the restoration of several links between us. You will be aware that one of the most heartening things was that during the process of our General Elections, relations with Pakistan never became an issue or a subject of controversy. In the year 1977 there was also a political change in Pakistan but the fact that despite political upheavals in both countries, the climate of Indo-Pakistan relations did not receive a setback is a tribute to the maturity of our two peoples. This encouraged me to undertake this mission of goodwill.
The discussions that I have had, have been marked by great cordiality. It covered bilateral relations and also the international issues such as the North-South dialogue, special session on disarmament on which we have a broad similarity of approach.

During these discussions the Pakistan side referred to the Simla Agreement and we assured them that the Janata Government stands by this Agreement.

The Agreement which clearly indicates that both countries are committed to abjure the use of force continues to provide the basis for our relationship.

The question of Kashmir came up in these discussions. Both sides stated their respective positions and both sides recalled that the Simla Agreement commits us to good neighbourliness and durable peace and to endeavour to prevent hostile propaganda against each other.

Though there was no agenda, our discussions have been fruitful and constructively motivated. On behalf of our Prime Minister I transmitted a letter to the Chief Martial Law Administrator which formally invited him to visit India. I am glad to say he accepted the invitation in principle.

We noted there has been a significant improvement in our trade relations and recognized that it should and could grow in a balanced manner to mutual advantage and not to harm the economy of the other. The trade teams are to meet shortly, to review the agreement and to see how the two-way trade can develop in the future.

Both sides express the feelings that there should be a freer exchange of visits between the two countries. Visa procedures should be expedited and liberalized.

The Chief Martial Law Administrator has agreed that we should explore the possibilities for stationing journalists of the two countries in each other’s capital. I would also like to thank him for inviting the Indian journalists accompanying me to stay on and tour Pakistan. It was also agreed that the procedures to make available the newspapers of the two countries should be facilitated.

We welcomed the current visit of the Pakistan Hockey team to India and we hope that such exchanges of sports teams will become a regular feature of relations between the two countries.

We also recognize that it would be useful from the point of view of economic development of the two countries if experts and professionals have opportunities to meet their counterparts in the other country.

We also agreed to complete the process of exchanging the detenus between the two countries.
We have agreed to resume talks on the Salal Dam project from where they were left off in October 1976.

I have reason to believe that my visit here is in the spirit in which it was intended, as a gesture of goodwill towards a neighbour has been well worthwhile. Notwithstanding the difficulties which are a challenge to our wisdom, I believe, relations between Pakistan and India can continue to develop. The important thing is that we respect each other’s personalities and aspirations. For our part I am convinced that good relations are in our separate and common interest, and in the interest of the region as a whole. In this quest, we have the good wishes of our peoples and the whole world.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION: The Salal Dam on the Indian side of the Chenab has been the subject of various meetings. What are the prospects of an equitable settlement of the issue which would satisfy both India and Pakistan?

ANSWER: We have agreed to resume the negotiations at the same stage as they were left off in 1976. Let the teams meet and go into the details of the whole question.

QUESTION: Are you willing to remove certain misgivings which Pakistan has on Salal in your talks?

ANSWER: We have had no formal talks. But if Pakistan has any misgivings, we will take all steps to remove them.

QUESTION: The Simla Agreement says that Kashmir will be discussed by India and Pakistan. You said that the Kashmir issue was raised – have any points of agreement been arrived at?

ANSWER: I came on a goodwill visit. There is an interim Government in Pakistan. The question of Kashmir has defied solution for 30 years. No one expected it would be solved during a visit which has extended to three days. As stated, it was discussed. India and Pakistan put forward their points of view and there the matter ended for the present.

QUESTION: You mentioned exchange of journalists. Will Pakistani journalists – Kashmiri journalists – be allowed to go to Kashmir?

ANSWER: We will discuss that when you come to Delhi.

QUESTION: You said we are entering an era of cooperation. Do you think it is possible without the resolution of the basic dispute?
ANSWER: Even according to the Simla Agreement, the Kashmir issue is to be discussed after the normalization of relations. Some steps have been taken in that direction and they are welcome. Much remains to be done.

As a result of this visit, I hope a climate of understanding and trust which already exists to some extent will be further augmented; and in that climate India will be ready to discuss all the questions with a view to solving them of course.

QUESTION: If the initiative on Kashmir is left to India, from where would you start – the deadlock at the U.N., the Tashkent Declaration or the Simla Agreement.

ANSWER: If the matter is left to me, I would not like to approach it in the manner suggested in the question. I would not like to look backward but forward. Much water has flowed down the rivers of India and Pakistan since the Resolutions of 1949 in the Security Council. India stands by the Simla Agreement. We have discussed Kashmir. Even the Agreement provides that irrespective of the positions taken by both countries, the question will be discussed and a final settlement arrived at. I have no more to add to that.

QUESTION: What are the prospects for further cooperation for normalization vis-à-vis the aspects of establishing greater peace, especially because of the positions taken by India and Pakistan on the Indian Ocean?

ANSWER: The question of making the Indian Ocean a zone of peace is being discussed in the United Nations. It is a subject matter of negotiations between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. India would like all foreign bases to be eliminated from the Indian Ocean. The littoral countries are in a position to guarantee the freedom of navigation through the Indian Ocean but if a big power rivalry continues, tension will increase. Regarding the Indian Ocean, Indian and Pakistan hold almost identical views. We have been working in close cooperation at the U.N. I hope this question will figure during the Special Session on Disarmament about which I have had discussions with Mr. Agha Shahi.

QUESTION: What steps has your Government taken to remedy the grievances of Muslims in India?

ANSWER: I do not know what grievances you have in mind. I would not like to discuss the question of Muslims in India here, just as you would not like me to discuss the position of Hindus in Pakistan.

QUESTION: We have appreciated the appointment of a Minorities Commission and also the work of the Minorities Commission in U.P. many years ago. The question was in this context.
ANSWER: Thank you for the clarification.

QUESTION: There are winds of change blowing. Given your political background, your presence here has struck a happy note. But the views of a powerful political party in India which speaks of Akhand Bharat affects the political atmosphere since it has recognized Pakistan as the number one enemy of India.

ANSWER: I would like to reassure you that the Janata Government and Party recognize Pakistan as an independent sovereign nation with which India would like to develop friendly relations on the basis of sovereignty and mutual benefit. If you do not like the statements that are made, don’t publish them – this will help our cause (of developing friendly relations).

QUESTION: What are the prospects of the Janata Government, particularly in the forthcoming elections?

ANSWER: The Janata Government is only one year old and has four years to go. I hope you would like the Janata Party to win the elections.

QUESTION: Do you have anything to say on the Shahanshah’s visit?

ANSWER: The question of a new economic order was discussed in detail. The Joint Communiqué, after the Shah’s visit, makes a reference to talks held between Prime Minister Morarji Desai and the Shah. We do feel, industrialized nations have to do much more than what they have done so far to narrow down if not completely bridge the gulf between developed and developing nations. But in our talks with the Shah, there was particular emphasis on the point that if we want industrialized nations to help developing countries, it is incumbent on developing countries also to help each other. This is why we have decided to enlarge the area of cooperation with Iran in the economic field. India would like to enlarge such cooperation with other neighbouring countries.

QUESTION: Regarding the Indian Ocean Zone of Peace Proposal, apart from big power rivalry, could there not be balanced reduction of forces in the countries around the Indian Ocean? Also, could not the countries of South Asia renounce nuclear weapons?

ANSWER: I will answer the second part first. India has already declared that she will not manufacture atomic weapons. This was done unilaterally. Let others in the region also make such announcements. But when we talk of making a particular region a nuclear-free we give legitimacy to the stockpile of nuclear weapons in other regions. India stands for a nuclear weapon-free world. What is the use of declaring South Asia a nuclear-free zone if nuclear weapons are manufactured, assembled and transferred in our neighbourhood? I recently saw a report that Israel had been able to get nuclear weapons. Which are the countries which helped Israel and which are helping South Africa? Those who possess nuclear weapons should subject themselves to full-scope safeguards regarding the transfer of fissionable material to countries which want to go nuclear.

Regarding the Indian Ocean, we do have navies belonging to littoral countries which will be there to safeguard the coast-lines. They do not pose a threat to any neighbouring countries. India has a vast coastline and naturally requires a bigger navy, of course for defensive purposes and to keep trade going. But let the big powers agree to end their rivalry; then the littoral countries can meet to discuss all relevant questions.

QUESTION: Did you have any discussions on the Asian Common Market?

ANSWER: There was no discussion on what is known as the Asian Common Market. There has been discussion on extending bilateral cooperation, regional cooperation, but not on the so-called Asian Common Market.

QUESTION: Could you elaborate on regional cooperation? What is its scope?

ANSWER: That all countries in the region live in peace, have friendly relations and diversify their relations in various fields.

QUESTION: Was any Regional Economic Market discussed, instead of an Asian Common Market?

ANSWER: Trade between India and Pakistan has just begun. We would like to increase it if there is no objection from Pakistan. So the question of discussing a regional market did not arise.

QUESTION: In the context of South Asia, you mentioned normalization. Can you elaborate on it? We have diplomatic relations, we are trading, our hockey teams are playing one another. What do you think is going to bring a new dimension to normalization?

ANSWER: May I read from the Simla Agreement? There has been some progress. There is much to be achieved. For example, dissemination of information, the question of cooperation in the scientific field – there are many such issues.

QUESTION: Your Government was not in power when the Simla Agreement was signed. There is a feeling in Pakistan that the Indian Government has avoided talks on Kashmir.

FOREIGN MINISTER: Which Government?

QUESTION: The previous Government. The previous Prime Minister (of Pakistan) had asked for talks a number of times. We felt the former Indian Prime Minister was avoiding talks.

ANSWER: I would not like to comment here on the previous Government in India.

QUESTION: When the previous Government was in power in India there was a fear here that you had got nuclear capability. You have a new government. Have you done anything to allay these fears during your recent visits? What has the reaction been?

ANSWER: Prime Minister Morarji Desai has said that even if the whole world manufactures atomic weapons, India will not. This statement has been well received. There should be no apprehension in Pakistan.

QUESTION: In your introductory remarks, we welcome your statement that India’s approach is not that of a big brother. You talked of psychological cooperation which is really vital because we have had a very sensitive history. You claimed that by India’s settlement on Farakka with Bangladesh, the Janata Government is really trying to get the neighbouring countries to believe in its sincerity. In the case of Pakistan, with only one issue, we expected during this visit you would have discussions and arrive at some understanding to resume discussions. We are not satisfied.

ANSWER: Satisfaction is subjective. I am satisfied, I wish you were too.

QUESTION: I wanted to know if you have reached any understanding to resume discussions.

ANSWER: When two sides meet, each side is free to raise any question. This applies to the question of Kashmir also.

QUESTION: What about the obligation under the Simla Agreement? We cannot extend the accord over centuries.

ANSWER: So far as I know, there is no time frame for the Simla Agreement.

QUESTION: You said regarding Kashmir that both sides explained their stands. There has been a change of government in India. Do you visualize approaching any common point in both the stands to the problem?

ANSWER: There is one common ground, namely, that all issues are to be solved without use of force in a climate of understanding and trust.

QUESTION: Your party’s view on the Simla Agreement is well known—that it was a stab in the back. How do you reconcile this with what you are saying now?
ANSWER: There is no denying the fact that I was the person who led a procession in Delhi against the Simla Agreement and criticized the Agreement on the floor of the House. This I did as a member of the Bhartiya Jan Sangh which no longer exists. The people voted to power the Janata Party on the basis of a common programme. What I had said then was a minority opinion, obviously. The policy of the Janata Government is to stand by all agreements previously entered into. This is what we have been trying so far. I am prepared to forget the past. I would like you to do the same. My old party wanted India to manufacture atomic weapons. Again, that was a minority view. The Janata Party did not agree with that view. I have now accepted the view that there is no need to manufacture atomic weapons. There should be no misgiving on that ground.

QUESTION: Your Prime Minister is said to have offered to share India’s nuclear technology with Pakistan.

ANSWER: Has he? I have not seen any such report. But India is ready to cooperate anywhere in the world in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

QUESTION: What about joint ventures?

ANSWER: No, this was not discussed.

QUESTION: Have you received President Carter’s cold and blunt letter?

ANSWER: We received a very warm letter from President Carter last week. The subject matter was nuclear energy. But receiving a warm letter is no news; only a cold and blunt letter would make news!

QUESTION: I asked because of pressures Pakistan is facing about its reprocessing plant. Would you favour Pakistan receiving it?

ANSWER: I am certain Pakistan would be able to resist any pressure.

QUESTION: The Janata Party is said to be a disparate conglomerate.

ANSWER: When you come to Delhi. I will give you a special interview. We can discuss the question there.

QUESTION: Before you came to Pakistan you had hoped the visit would mark the turn of new leaf in Indo-Pak relations. Would you evaluate it now?

ANSWER: I would like the evaluation to be by the press. If tomorrow you say that a new leaf has been turned, then a new leaf has been turned.

Head of the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan
Islamabad,

28 February 1978

His Excellency
Mr. Morarji Desai,
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi,

Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

It gives me great pleasure to acknowledge your letter of February 5, which was delivered to me by your Foreign Minister Mr. Atal Behari Vajpayee during his recent visit to Pakistan, and to convey my acceptance of your kind invitation to me and to my wife to visit India.

We welcomed the visit of your Foreign Minister early this month and had a useful exchange of views with him. Our talks with him have further strengthened my belief that with goodwill and sincerity of purpose we can resolve all our problems and open a new chapter of friendship and cooperation based on a code of good-neighbourliness. It is my conviction that the growth of trust and confidence and the development of mutually beneficial relations between our two countries are essential for the realization of permanent peace and stability in our region. We were impressed by Mr. Vajpayee's constructive approach to problems and sincerely appreciate his contribution, both in his official talks and public declarations, towards the promotion of better political climate for the further development of relations between our two countries.

Mr. Vajpayee's visit has already yielded good results. Among these is the agreement to resume talks on the Salal Dam. My Adviser on Foreign Affairs, Mr. Agha Shahi will be visiting New Delhi on a mutually convenient date for this purpose. It is my earnest hope that his return visit would enable us to reach an equitable agreement on Salal and give an impetus to the continuation of a constructive dialogue between us.

Our resumed contacts in an improved atmosphere are largely due to your statesmanship and vision of friendly relations with neighbouring countries which we wholeheartedly share.
I look forward to the opportunity of visiting India on a mutually convenient date and to the pleasure of meeting you and exchanging views with you personally on all aspects of our relationship.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration and esteem.

Yours sincerely

0918. Speech of Indian External Affairs Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee in Parliament on his visit to Pakistan.

New Delhi, February 27, 1978.

Ever since the Janata Party assumed office last year, the major thrust of the Government of India’s foreign policy has been towards fostering the development of friendliest possible relations between India and her neighbours. It was on the basis of this policy that I had earlier visited Afghanistan, Nepal, Bhutan and Burma. The same policy motivated my goodwill visit to Pakistan from February 6 to 8, 1978.

I went with no agenda for discussion. My intention, as an emissary of goodwill, was to clear India’s desire for a relationship of peace and friendship with Pakistan, on the basis of respect for sovereignty, territorial integrity, non-interference in internal affairs and mutual benefit.

The past history of the relations between the two countries has created psychological problems which both sides have to recognize, to face and to attempt to resolve. I mentioned to Mr. Agha Shahi, Adviser on Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, that while it is true that India happens to be a big country, we want to improve relations between India and Pakistan on the basis of equality, understanding and goodwill. This clearly implies respect not only for the sovereignty of each country but the right of each country to determine its own political and social system. One of the most heartening features of our general elections last year was the absence of any controversy over our relation with Pakistan. During 1977, there were far-reaching political changes in Pakistan also. The fact that despite political upheavals in both countries, the climate of Indo Pakistan relation did not receive a setback is a tribute to the maturity of our two peoples. This encouraged me to undertake this mission of goodwill.

During my visit, I had discussions with Gen. Zia-ul-Haq, Chief of Army Staff and Chief Martial Law Administrator and Mr. Agha Shahi, Adviser on Foreign Affairs. Our discussions were held in a very cordial atmosphere. They covered bilateral relations, and also international issues such as the North-South dialogue and the U.N. General Assembly’s Special Session on Disarmament, on which we had a broad similarity of approach.

During our discussions, the Pakistan side referred to the Simla Agreement. We assured them that the Janata Government stands by this Agreement. In this context, the Pakistan side made a mention of Kashmir. Both of us stated our respective positions, while recalling that the Simla Agreement commits both countries to abjure use of force.

During my discussions with Gen. Zia, we noted that there has been a significant growth in our trade relations, and recognized that they should and could grow in a balanced manner to our mutual advantage. Trade teams of the two countries are to meet shortly to review the Trade Agreement of 1975, and to study how two-way trade can develop.

The two sides also had discussions on the need to facilitate a freer flow of people and information between the two countries. In this context, the Government of India are happy to note that there has been some exchange of artists, scholars and sportsmen. We were also happy to welcome Dr. Amir Mohammad, Adviser on Agriculture of Government of Pakistan on February 20, 1978. He is visiting a number of our projects during his stay in India. We hope that his visit will mark the beginning of exchange in the field of science and technology, so that experts in both countries can learn from each other’s experience.

During my discussions, it was also agreed that we should complete the process of exchanging detenus held in either country with utmost expedition. This is a humanitarian problem and we are interested in seeing it resolved as soon as possible.

Another point of agreement was that we would resume talks on the Salal Dam projects from where they were left off in October, 1976. A delegation from Pakistan is expected to come here for this purpose shortly. Dates will be fixed according to our mutual convenience.

On behalf of our Prime Minister, I transmitted a letter to the Chief Martial Law Administrator, formally inviting him to visit India. He accepted the invitation in principle, Sir, there was widespread speculation in the press about my visit before it took place. My own belief is that public opinion in both countries has welcomed the normalization of our relations and the restoration of the severed links. It is also my belief that there is a recognition in both countries that the pace in the development of our relations can and should be accelerated. We on our part are ready to go ahead. However, we recognize that such acceleration and further cooperation can be possible only with the consent of both the countries.

In conclusion, I would like to state that I am convinced that good relations between the two countries of the sub-continent are in our separate and common interest, and in the interest of the region as a whole. My visit to Pakistan was based on this conviction. I do not think I would be wrong if I say that the discussions I had with Pakistani leaders have led to a better understanding and have helped in the task of removing misapprehensions, promoting greater goodwill and better understanding between the two countries. With greater contact between the two peoples and the established Governments, there can grow a climate of trust and confidence in which problems can be solved and good neighbourliness can be patiently fostered. India stands ready to cooperate in the growth of such relations to the extent Pakistan is willing to go.

Foreign Secretary from Ambassador

SHAH NAWAZ sent me just now to complain against publicizing statement (his version was from A.I.R.) to North Korean Vice President that Foreign Minister had told Pakistan leaders U.N. Kashmir Resolution were obsolete and Kashmir was integral part of India. After dwelling at length on need to keep atmosphere free from acrimony and to progress on path of better relations on which Foreign Minister’s visit here had given such a good start, he said this was very sensitive issue with Pakistan public opinion, Pakistani press was deluging them with questions, AGHA SHAHI was leaving for airport en route to New York and would be bound to face press, so he wanted, apart from talking frankly to me on the issue, to warn me in advance that Pakistani views would have to be stated and we had “brought this on ourselves” by giving out Foreign Minister’s remarks.

2. I said I could not accept this argument. Ever since normalization we had very patiently avoided public controversies on Kashmir except when forced on us in the U.N. by Pakistan. Even when Foreign Minister came here, he had made plain to AGHA SHAHI how strongly he felt (about Pakistani harping on Kashmir) but had nevertheless exercised the greatest restraint in his press conference, precisely in order to help process of bettering relations. But as I had been consistently warning SHAH NAWAZ, we too had a public opinion which Pakistan seemed grossly to underestimate (which, by the way, is also why I have always urged that we in Delhi should protest to Pakistan about their statements on Kashmir. ) It was not Foreign Minister who had raised question of U.N. Resolutions, it was Pakistan. On our side we never even spoke about Kashmir during foreign visits. It was general ZIA who reverted to this unfortunate old practice in Peking and it was again ZIA who revived references to U.N. Resolutions when Bangladesh President came here. I had made it a point to convince SHAH NAWAZ then. Ever since Pakistani politicians and press had taken up this theme. It was not reasonable for Pakistan to keep repeating its position time and again and expect us to keep silent. We had done our best but persistent Pakistani reiteration naturally arouse questioning by our parliamentarians and press, so Foreign Minister had to make our position also clear.

3. SHAH NAWAZ interjected that whatever politicians and press here might say U.N. Resolution had not been invoked at any such high official level here as our Foreign Minister. I replied CMLA himself had reinvoked them, on which SHAH NAWAZ could only look away. He again talked of need to maintain right atmosphere and affirmed Pakistan was determined to do this, citing AGHA SHAHI’s visit to Delhi (which he confirmed for 10th April to 13th morning). A matter raised in Foreign Minister’s statement was best left for discussion at such meetings. Advance statements merely froze the situation and made for great difficulties for Pakistani reactions, which was why SHAHI would be forced to give Pakistani reactions.

4. I said SHAHI was accomplished diplomat and needed no guidance from me but all that needed to be said on questioning was that our Foreign Minister had merely restated India’s position while Pakistan had consistently reiteratet its own and both position were well known. SHAH NAWAZ said he did not know that SHAHI would say but he would have to take into account highly sensitive feelings of Pakistani public on this issue. As to that I said that repetition of Pakistani position without any reiteration of ours could arouse false expectations, so perhaps it was as well for Pakistani public to be reminded of realities. (In fact I am glad Foreign Minister has made our attitude clear again in advance of SHAHI’s visit.) As for press I repeated that there were many ways of handling such things and since Pakistanis said they wanted to avoid acrimony. SHAHI could easily keep things on even keel.

5. You will know soon enough what SHAHI says. This is to inform you of background, which certainly is not so straightforward as SHAH NAWAZ would have us believe. All this is part of preparations for telling us in Delhi Pakistani public opinion will not permit of advances in relations with us without movement towards Kashmir settlement (except that I do not rule out Salal progress).
Timings is also of some minor use in coinciding with judgement on BHUTTO.

0920. Statement by Pakistan Advisor on Foreign Affairs Agha
Shahi on the Statement by Indian External Affairs Minister
Atal Bihari Vajpayee on March 15, 1978 reaffirming Pakistan’s stand on Kashmir.

Mr. Agha Shahi Adviser on Foreign Affairs has reaffirmed that Pakistan’s stand on Kashmir remains unchanged.

Commenting on the reported statement of the Indian Foreign Minister, Mr.
Vajpayee on March 15, in his talks with the Vice President of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea that the U.N. resolutions on Kashmir have become out-dated and the new Assembly of the Indian held Jammu and Kashmir and the National Conference had declared this territory to be a part of India, the Adviser on Foreign Affairs, Mr. Agha Shahi stated that Pakistan’s stand on those two UNCIP resolutions remains unchanged.

In a statement issued here today, Mr. Shahi pointed out the Simla Agreement provides for bilateral negotiations for the final settlement of Jammu and Kashmir.
It is a matter of satisfaction that during his recent visit to Pakistan the Indian Foreign Minister affirmed that India was committed to honouring the Simla Agreement in all its provisions including that relating to the final settlement of Jammu and Kashmir, he added.

In regard to the basis of settlement, Mr. Agha Shahi said, the Simla Agreement safeguards the recognized position of either side on the Jammu and Kashmir dispute. Bilateral talks with India on a settlement of this dispute cannot therefore in any way erode much less amount to an abandonment of Pakistan’s stand on the two UNCIP resolutions of 13 August 1948 and 5 January 1949 which call for demilitarization of the state and a plebiscite to determine its future affiliation with Pakistan or with India.

He emphasized “this right of self-determination enshrined in the UN Resolutions is an inalienable right of the people of Jammu and Kashmir. It is not a right that can lapse or become out-dated merely because it has remained unenforced over a period of time. Nor can any pronouncements by the assembly of Indian held Jammu and Kashmir or the National Conference have the effect of invalidating or derogating from those resolutions.

SECRET
Letter from Ambassador K. S. Bajpai to the Ministry of External Affairs regarding the records of External Affairs Minister’s discussions in Islamabad during his recent Visit.

Islamabad, April 2, 1978.

Ambassador of India
Islamabad

NO.ISL/AMB/475/78
April 2, 1978

Dear Leila

I have been wanting to send you some slight modifications or additions to the records of the talks in the Foreign Office here and with the CMLA when FM came here. These records are already excellent and whatever points I recollect somewhat differently are really quite minor, but I am sending them nevertheless, because they do perhaps illustrate something further of the flavour of the talks. In particular, I think the way FM replied to Agha Shahi’s reference to Kashmir is of some importance: my recollection is quite clear that he was very forthright, and I believe my version bring this out a little more. I might also say I am quite sure about the sequence of comments at the very end about what to say to the press because I would never dream of suggesting that the talks were held in a cordial atmosphere because I know this is one thing the Pakistanis avoid doing and I was struck by the unexpected suggestion from Agha Shahi. I think perhaps in the last minute hurry, his remarks and mine have been put in the reverse order.

2. Also of some importance are the remarks by Gen. Zia that he had publicly acknowledged his appreciations of the correct attitude taken by India towards Pakistan’s internal developments. In fact, as I had suggested before, we might get our Missions in the Gulf to confirm whether anything appeared in the papers on the lines of Zia’s claims.

3. Most important of all is what Zia said of there being two main problems between India and Pakistan: Kashmir and the mis-trust. This point is not in the record, so I am specially bringing it to your attention. The record has slightly telescoped the discussion and on page 6 it states: the second problem which he only spelt out briefly but which he specifically mentioned was the mis-trust. The record should begin on the page 5 as follows:

“From our side there are two main issues. One of course is Kashmir, the other the mistrust and misunderstanding that exist between us and comes in the way of our dealing with anything else. There are two things about which people get excited - the first one is Kashmir ……”

The rest of the records stand as it is with the clarification what is referred to on page 6 as the second problem is not the second of the two main issues Zia referred to at the beginning in his remarks but the second point of which people are excited here.

4. All the changes are indicated by underlining.

Yours sincerely,
(K.S. Bajpai)

Mrs. L.K. Ponappa,
Under Secretary (PAKIRAF)
Ministry of External Affairs,

   F.M. I welcome your offer to resume talks on Salal. I would like the details-like timings to be worked out by officials.

   F.M. At sometime, the people will have to be told on either side that the issue has to be solved on the basis of realities. I met Sheikh Abdullah before coming here. He said how can discussions on Kashmir be held without the people of Kashmir being consulted. He also said that Kashmir is a part of India and ‘we would sink and swim together’.
   You say this has to be discussed. Of course anything can be discussed, but I must tell you frankly, I am not clear in my mind how we are to proceed on this question. If we raise false hope, all that we have achieved over the last year in normalizing our relationship will be lost. But, talks can always be held. I have brought a letter of invitation from our Prime Minister to General Zia-ul-Haq. If he visits India, any question can be raised. But frankly we must proceed on realities.

   Agha Shahi: Shall we say ‘Bang (snap of fingers), we discussed Kashmir’?
   Ambassador Bajpai: If they ask about Kashmir, we can say it did come up and the two sides put forward their respective points of views.
   Agha Shahi: We could say the talks were held in a cordial atmosphere.
   F.M. I agree.

C.M.L.A. I am grateful for Prime Minister Desai's kind sentiments. I appreciate very much his attitude towards neighbours and particularly to Pakistan. I am grateful for the perfect understanding shown by India towards the internal developments in Pakistan. The helpful attitude adopted by India has made our task easier.

I said this publicly during one of my visits abroad, I think it was in Abu Dhabi, and some of our own people were very worried and asked me why have I said this, and I said why not, it is a fact.

India could make things very difficult for us. We, therefore, deeply appreciate the attitude of your Government. I had conveyed our felling to Ambassador Bajpai. I had told your Ambassador that a soldier spends his whole life in the art of warfare. I have taken part in four wars. But, a soldier is the last person who wants war. A soldier always looks for peace. This is my attitude. Fortunately, the climate of the relations between our two countries today is totally different from what it had been for the last 30 years. Today, we are not only inter-dependent but there are many things in which we have a collective approach. The demand of the hour is to adopt an international approach and rise above narrow nationalistic considerations. No nation can thrive on pure jealousies. This is my views.

F.M. Excellency, we are aware of the commotion in your press. There has been a lot of speculation in the Indian press also. In fact, at one time I was almost thinking of cancelling my visit…

C.M.L.A. But why? You are welcome any time.

F.M. … Because of the embarrassment which was being caused to your Government and particularly to Your Excellency by my impending trip. But, I decided that it was a bold step on the part of both our Government and we should not retrace it.

C.M.L.A. I know it and we are grateful for it. Coming to the question of the ways and means for pushing further the process of normalization, I feel that there is a communication gap between our two people. This, I feel, should be bridged. For example, why should we not exchange our newspapers? I tried to read your press and our Foreign Office send me copies, but they are always old and I said to them why the hell can’t I just go out and buy me copies instead of waiting for them to send these to me? I mentioned this to your journalists yesterday- let there be a free exchange of newspapers. In fact, it should be possible for people in either country to buy any newspaper from the other country.

C.M.L.A. We have no reservation either.

From our side, there are two main issues. One of course is Kashmir, the other the mistrust and misunderstanding that exist between us and comes in the way of our dealing with anything else. There are two things about which our people get exited- the first one is Kashmir....

C.M.L.A. In addition to trade, there are other areas where there is possibility of a great deal of cooperation between our two countries. Recently we had a visit from the new Vice President of the World Bank, Ernest Stern. He told me about some of your projects which have been so successful in agriculture and I told our Agriculture Adviser: “you have to go and have a look at these.”

Amb. Bajpai: FM may be interested to know that we have told Dr. Amir Mohammad, the Pakistan Agriculture Adviser, that he would be most welcome and we are working on a visit by him

C.M.L.A I have particularly been impressed by the phenomenal increase in the production of high-yielding varieties of wheat and cotton in India. For example you are growing a lot of crops in Rajasthan which used to be a desert. If we could get a UN experts or even an Indian expert, who could advise us on this matter, we would be very grateful. We would also be happy to offer to you whatever experience we have been able to gain in the field of agriculture.

Press interaction of Agha Shahi before his departure for Pakistan.

New Delhi, April 12, 1978.

The Foreign Affairs Adviser to the Pakistan Government, Mr. Agha Shahi, told a crowded press conference at New Delhi on April 12 that an agreement in principle had been reached with India on the design and the construction of the Salal dam and experts were busy drafting the accord, which he hoped to sign before leaving for home.

He said it was his belief that with the growth of mutual trust and confidence, it should be possible to strive for a just settlement of the Kashmir dispute, the only unimplemented provision of the Simla Agreement. The final settlement of this dispute would complete the process of normalization between the two countries which was so essential for peace, security and prosperity of the region, he added.

He also disclosed that ground was being prepared for the visit of Gen. Zia-ul-Haq to India.

Mr. Shahi said he had also exchanged views with President Sanjiva Reddy, Prime Minister Morarji Desai and the Speaker of the Lok Sabha.

The talks had been held in a friendly and relaxed atmosphere and he had discussed various bilateral questions as well as international and regional matters of mutual interest, he added.

SALAL DAM ACCORD IMPORTANT

Pakistan attached a lot of importance to the agreement on the Salal dam since it would prove that, given the political will and sincerity of purpose, all problems between the two countries, however intractable they might appear to be, could be resolved.

SUMMIT MEET MORE APPROPRIATE FOR KASHMIR ISSUE

On the Kashmir question, he said the commitment of both the countries to find a solution had been reaffirmed and with the improvement of relations, it would be possible to discuss a just settlement in a tension free and amicable manner. Neither side presented a formula for this, but he thought it was more appropriate to discuss it at a meeting of the heads of Government.

TRADE

With regard to trade, he said both sides had agreed that the relations in this sphere should be so developed as to be equally beneficial to both. A trade delegation from India would visit Pakistan shortly to review the volume of trade.
IDENTICAL VIEWS ON A NUMBER OF ISSUES

Mr. Shahi said the U.N. special session on disarmament and various proposals of particular interest of India and Pakistan were also discussed substantively and it was gratifying that the position of the two countries was identical or very close in significant respects on a number of issues. He looked forward to constructive cooperation between the two countries at the forthcoming U.N. session.

NUCLEAR NON-PROLIFERATION

The two countries had discussed the subject of non-proliferation and needed to strengthen the security of non-nuclear States. Specific measures ought to be adopted by the international community for a stronger sense of security and to reduce, if not totally avert, the danger of proliferation, he added.

INDIA NOT SEEKING HEGEMONY

Mr. Shahi disclosed that they had also exchanged views on the proposed purpose of the acquisition of deep-penetration strike aircraft by India, and said, "that we discuss such a matter is indicative of the progress of our relations."

Pakistan, he said, was satisfied that India was not trying to strive for any position of leadership or hegemony. His country accepted that the Government of India was sincere in its profession of sovereign equality of all nations and wanted to conduct relations with the surrounding smaller States on that basis.

REPATRIATION OF DETENUS

Pakistan and India had also agreed that all measures be taken as expeditiously as possible to solve the humanitarian problem like the verification of the antecedents and repatriation of detenus held by the two countries since 1971.
0923. Press interaction of Prime Minister Morarji Desai with Pakistani Journalists*.

New Delhi, April 13, 1978.

Prime Minister Morarji Desai has declared that he is ready to solve all problems with Pakistan, including Kashmir, in a reasonable manner, Talking to Pakistan journalists at New Delhi on April 13, Mr. Desai said, “I am ready to discuss Kashmir and I have invited Gen. Zia-ul-Haq to India for this purpose, but I will not be drawn into a public controversy over this issue”. The interview lasted about an hour.

When reminded that India was a bigger country and it was for her to create confidence in her neighbours, Mr. Desai said he agreed with this, but that did not mean India should be stupid. He said Pakistan posed no danger to India. India’s problem was China and “you have been victims only because you dislike us. Why don’t you become friends, then you don’t have to go anywhere else.”

INDIA NOT TO PUT UP WITH TRICKS

When it was pointed out to him that there was a time when Pakistan had proposed joint defense of the sub-continent but India had spurned the offer, he said, “I don’t want to apportion blame but I am determined not to give you a cause for complaint. But I am not going to put up with any kind of tricks, that, I can assure you. “If you are unreasonable, I am not going to accede to it and if I am unreasonable you should not agree to it. But we must solve problems by discussions and talks. There is nothing which cannot be solved. After all what was the bone of contention between the two countries?”

Plea against becoming tools in hands of others

He said if the two countries came to an understanding with each other, he would not worry about the whole world. “But you don’t realize that. This region is a most critical region in the world and tactically it is in the best position. But if we are divided amongst ourselves, then everybody plays us against each other and like fools we became instruments, as we have done in the last 1,000 years. We must get out of that.”

Mr. Desai was told that suspicions could be removed if the basic cause, namely Kashmir, was solved. He said he thought differently but had never said “no” to that. “I have never shirked to discuss it. I can only disagree and say I am sorry and I will go on discussing till I am convinced or you are convinced. Why do you quarrel if I don’t agree? Do you mean to say it will remove suspicions if I accept your demand? I cannot say either you or I am right, but let us discuss."

CALL FOR FREE MOVEMENT, FREE TRADE & NO SUSPICION

He said he would like to see the day soon when a man from Pakistan came to India without let or hindrance and \textit{vice versa}. He wanted free movement, free trade and no suspicions. He however added, he would not fall into a suicidal trap. “In the name of bigness you cannot make me do something which will hurt my country and hurt you ultimately. If Pakistan is hurt I am also hurt, but you don’t see that if we are hurt you will also be hurt. You delight in hurting us. We are being defamed all over the world by you.”

Mr. Desai said it was asserted in America that if India was the leader, there was danger in Pakistan. But, he added, India did not want to be the leader anywhere. “We want to be equal. In another breath, you tell me I am big and great, therefore, I should do this. This is irreconcilable.”

CO-OPERATION IN INTERNATIONAL FIELD

Asked about co-operation between India and Pakistan in the international field, particularly at the next U.N. special session, he said if the two countries were friends there could be co-operation at all levels, even on the question of nuclear non-proliferation. Interests of the two countries were the same. He had been fighting against nuclear weapon all his life and he wanted to end them as quickly as possible.

Regarding the evolution of a common strategy at the U.N., he said: “Where have we talked? Unless Heads of Government discuss, how can I say anything? I would like to do that.”

ON INDO-PAK TRADE

Regarding trade between India and Pakistan, he said: “That depends on you. If you choose to buy at higher cost from another country, who am I to tell you? Indian things are bound to be cheaper. Your balance of payments will be more unfavourable by getting things at a higher cost from outside. I am not forcing anything on you. I will import from you in preference to others, but you must shed suspicions. Let there be completely free trade but that can happen if there are no suspicions. You will be compelled to remove suspicions by my behaviour. I am not asking for responsive co-operation. I will co-operate in any case.

INDIA WILL NEVER ATTACK PAKISTAN

For the first time after 30 years, an understanding between the two countries was being brought about, and that to him was a cause for satisfaction. “Whatever happens on the other side, I will be a friend and if this is reciprocated, it satisfies me," he added.

Told that the Indian expenditure on defense had alarmed some people in Pakistan and caused concern, Mr. Desai said: “Are you not responsible for it? Let me talk to you very frankly because I won’t say that to Mr. Agha Shahi. Let me assure you, we will not assault or invade Pakistan under any circumstances. But if we are invaded as it happened in the past, do you mean to say we would sell ourselves?” On being told that was a question of interpretation, he retorted: “I am prepared to go before any judge and will accept the verdict of any agency whom you name. It is for you to take up the challenge.”

ON INDIA-CHINA RELATIONS

Talking about China, he said India could not have complete friendship with China unless the territories occupied by China were given back. About 14,000 square kilometers of Indian Territory were under the occupation of China as a result of the Sino-Indian war. India wished to solve this problem peacefully and the Chinese had said that they would discuss it. If the Chinese gave him their hand he would extend his arm, but he would not make an appeal because India was an aggrieved party. “I told them: Show me where we have made a fault and I will show you what you have done,” he said.

Asked if he was hopeful about negotiations with China, Mr. Desai said China was a country very few could understand and one had to very cautious about it.
Record of discussions between External Affairs Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee and Foreign Affairs Advisor to Pakistan President Agha Shahi at their meeting at the United Nations.

Mr. Agha Shahi started the discussions asking for Foreign Minister’s assessment of the recent developments in Afghanistan. Foreign Minister said that the coup came as a surprise. He said that there was no doubt that the present leaders of Afghanistan are Marxists but he said that what is important is that we should try to make a correct appraisal and not to overreact to these developments. Mr. Agha Shahi said that while Pakistan Government had taken the stand that what happened in Afghanistan was an internal affair, some of the pronouncements of the present leaders of Afghanistan had caused considerable concern to the Pakistan Government and even the public in Pakistan was exercised over them. Mr. Agha Shahi said that in the view of the Pakistan Government, all the efforts that his Government has made over the past few years with the previous Government of Afghanistan appear to have been nullified. Mr. Agha Shahi referred to the references made by the present leaders of Afghanistan to the issues of the Pakhtoon and Baluchi people had created problem for the Government of Pakistan. In particular, he referred to the statement made in the U.N. general debate on 6 June by the Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Afghanistan, Mr. Amin when, after referring to the desire of the Government of Afghanistan for the expansion of friendly relations with India, he went on to speak about the need to ensure friendly relations between Afghanistan on the one side and Iran and Pakistan and China on the other. Mr. Amin also said that the issue of Pakhtoon and the Baluchi people should be sorted out on the basis of their will and historical background by means of understanding and peaceful political talks between Afghanistan and Pakistan. Mr. Agha Shahi went on to say that this is precisely what his Government had been striving to do with the previous Government of Afghanistan and he did not think that it was appropriate for Mr. Amin to bring the issue before the United Nations even though it was in the course of a statement in the general debate relating to disarmament. Mr. Shahi said that although members of his delegation had advised him against it, he had found it necessary to reply to Mr. Amin’s statement and in his statement. Mr. Shahi did refer to the readiness on the part of Pakistan to continue the talks with a view to the settlement of outstanding differences between their two countries in accordance with the five principles of peaceful coexistence, as laid down in the Pakistan-Soviet Union Communiqué of October 1974 and the Pakistan-Afghanistan joint communiqué concluded at Kabul in June 1976.
Foreign Minister said that the Afghans were a proud people and he felt that if India and Pakistan could consider seriously the question of cooperation with Afghanistan in the economic area it would help in not forcing Afghanistan to act too close to the Soviet Union. If one were to overreact or get panicky, it would undoubtedly lead to result that we want to avoid. The Government of Afghanistan, immediately after resumption of office, had come out very clearly on their intention to adhere to a policy of strict non-alignment. Mr. Shahi said that the Afghan Statement in the general debate recently was entirely pro-Soviet Union and he did not think that there was any doubt about their close alignment with the Soviet Union. Foreign Minister said that much would depend on Pakistan’s reaction. He went on to say that Government of India was extremely concerned to know about reports that had appeared in Pakistan to the effect that Afghanistan had become a Soviet satellite and between Afghanistan and India which was very close to the Soviet Union through the Indo-Soviet Treaty, Pakistan was being sandwiched. Mr. Shahi said that this was certainly not the official position and one could not prevent newspapers coming out with such stories.

Mr. Shahi said that there was some criticism in Pakistan about the undue haste with which India recognized the new Government of Afghanistan. Foreign Minister said that there was nothing surprising in this. The new Government of Afghanistan had approached the Government of India in the matter through our Ambassador in Kabul and, after giving careful consideration to whole aspects of the situation, the Government of India had decided to accord the recognition. Foreign Minister added that while we had to guard against Afghanistan not going reactionary, it would be most unfortunate if the Government of Pakistan were to use the development in Afghanistan to seek, under CENTO aegis, further arms assistance from the West. He said that it was the earnest hope of the Government of India that the developments in Afghanistan would not in any way cause the reversal of the normalization process that had started and that was making good progress between India and Pakistan.

Foreign Minister then referred to a report that he had received to the effect that the Pakistan Embassy official in Washington, had spoken to certain Senators asking them to oppose the supply of the enriched uranium for Tarapur. Mr. Shahi said that he had been informed about this and after making a very detailed enquiry into the matter he was in a position to say that this report was totally wrong. What really happened was that Embassy official had mentioned to the Congressmen that when the United States was considering supplying uranium fuel for Tarapur it was difficult for the Government of Pakistan to understand why the US Government should be opposing the sale of the reprocessing plant by France to Pakistan. Foreign Minister said that it was quite possible that it might have been put in a different way. In any case he hoped that such misunderstanding will not occur again.
Returning to the issue of Afghanistan, Mr. Shahi said that it was easy for the Government of India to deal with the change in the Government in Pakistan (Afghanistan?) because relations between India and Afghanistan have always been very friendly. In the case of Pakistan it was difficult because relations had not been very good in the past and a move had been initiated by the previous Government of Afghanistan to remedy the situation and it was the view of the Pakistan Government that such efforts had suffered a serious setback.

Turning to Indo-Pakistan relation, the Foreign Minister said that he was extremely unhappy that the trade talks did not make any headway and he was particularly unhappy because this was one of the issues that had been discussed during his last visit to Pakistan. Mr. Shahi said that the Government of Pakistan was currently reviewing this problem. However, he asked the Foreign Minister to be assured that the Pakistan Government had no second thoughts about anything that had been discussed during Foreign Minister’s visit to Islamabad early this year.

The discussion then led to the Pakistan’s proposal for the setting up of a nuclear-weapons-free zone in South Asia. Foreign Minister said that he was extremely unhappy and deeply concerned to hear that Mr. Shahi in his statement in the general debate had indicated that the countries of the region had agreed to the proposal or something to that effect. This was not factually correct. The Government of India had agreed to examine the suggestion which was made by Mr. Shahi during his visit to Delhi recently. It was most unfortunate that Mr. Shahi found it necessary to refer to this in his statement in the general debate and also to imply that India had accepted this proposal which certainly was not the case. There was considerable public criticism and concern over this and he said that the Government of India would find it extremely difficult under the circumstances to pursue the proposal. Mr. Shahi said that he had not said in his statement anything to the effect that India had accepted this proposal. In fact, he had repeated what he had said in the General Assembly last year. Foreign Minister said that he had seen the text of Mr. Shahi’s statement and it was quite clear that the impression that the statement created was factually incorrect.

During the discussion, Foreign Minister also referred to the reported exodus from Pakistan of a large number of Hindu Families. Mr. Shahi said these reports were exaggerated and that he would look in to this on his return to Islamabad.

Islamabad, June 29, 1978.

Commenting on an All India Radio report regarding India’s protest over the construction of the Karakoram highway, a Foreign Office spokesman recalled that India had made a similar protest in 1969 which had been rejected by Pakistan in the following terms:

“The State of Jammu and Kashmir has never been recognized as a part of Indian territory of India and, therefore, the Government of India have no locus-standi to lodge any protest to the Government of Pakistan in respect of this matter”.

Reiterating the internationally recognized status of the state of Jammu and Kashmir as disputed territory, the Spokesman said that the future of the states remains to be determined in a free and impartial plebiscite, as provided for in the relevant UN resolutions.

Referring to the All India Radio’s claim that there was no question of self-determination for “an integral part of India”, the Spokesman said that neither was the territory of the state of Jammu and Kashmir an integral part of India nor could the inalienable right of self determination for the people of Jammu and Kashmir be abrogated or invalidated by India’s unilateral declaration.

September 1, 1978.

Bilateral relations, with particular reference to trade and Kashmir, were discussed between the Chief Martial Law Administrator, Gen. Mohammad Zia-u-Haq and the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, at Nairobi on September 1, 1978.

The two Chief Executives had gone there to participate in the last rites of Kenyan President Jomo Kenyatta.

General Zia-ul-Haq described the meeting as a “beginning of the dialogue” and said that the talks, which lasted about 45 minutes, were held in a very friendly atmosphere. “Mr. Desai, is a very seasoned politician,” Gen. Zia-ul-Haq said, adding that, in very brief words, what he had told the CMLA was, that India was anxious for normalization of relations with Pakistan. “A strong and stable Pakistan is in the interest of India”, Mr. Desai had told him.

Both leaders explained their views on trade between the two countries and although no details were disclosed, Gen. Zia said that the discussions were held in a “very friendly atmosphere” and Mr. Desai was accommodating.

Asked whether Mr. Desai had renewed his invitation to him for a visit to India, Gen. Zia-ul-Haq said that “he, in fact, asked me about this… He told me that whereas he wished that I should visit India, he knew my difficulties and did not want to press on this.”

Asked further, Gen. Zia-ul-Haq said he would visit India when circumstances permitted, and when it would appear that his visit would benefit both sides. The relations between the two countries were such that his visit to India at this stage would not convey the correct impression.

What would be achieved if he went to India was the question which had to be evaluated fully, Gen. Zia explained. The type of relations between the two countries had created a peculiar situation in which the people were expectant and wanted concrete results and achievements, and not simple visits.

Answering another question, he said Kashmir constituted the real problem between India and Pakistan and something had to be done on that behalf. The record of the past 30 years of relations between the two countries had created a lot of misunderstanding and lack of confidence. What was needed was the removal of suspicions about India. As a senior partner, India should take the initiative in removing these suspicions. If that was done, the climate could be improved, which was in the interest of both the countries.
In reply to another question, he said Mr. Desai had not made any mention of the Karakoram Highway. When his attention was drawn to the statement* of Indian Foreign Minister, Vajpayee, Gen. Zia said he too had not mentioned the K-K Highway during his visit to Pakistan. And on being told that Mr. Vajpayee had made a statement in the Indian Parliament, Gen. Zia said he had done that in his own country and added smilingly, “Politicians have their problems”.

His talks with Mr. Desai could be considered “exploratory” and he had enjoyed them, Gen. Zia said and added that they had met first at the funeral and later he had gone to Mr. Desai’s hotel.

Record of discussion between External Affairs Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee and Pakistan Foreign Minister Agha Shahi at the United Nations.

Permanent Mission of India to the UN
New York

No.NY/PM/151/19/78

After enquiring about FM’s premature return to Delhi, Mr. Agha Shahi observed that it appeared that FM had become a lynchpin for the Janata Party. He stated that Pakistan’s relations with the Janata Government were good and he expressed satisfaction over the fact that our PM had met with the Pakistani President, Gen. Zia at Nairobi. The two leaders had held cordial conversations. Others instance of improving bilateral relations was the current visit of the Indian Cricket team to Pakistan which had engendered lot of enthusiasm among the Pakistani public. An Indian trade delegation was also due to visit Pakistan very shortly. The Pakistani Permanent Representative noted that it was after sixteen or seventeen years that the two countries were playing cricket with each other. FM expressed the hope that we should continue to play cricket with each other.

2. The Pakistani Foreign Minister enquired as to FM’s assessment of the evolution of the situation in Afghanistan, a country which he had recently visited. FM replied that the new Afghan Government appeared to be facing some difficulties, but since the Pakistan President had also visited Afghanistan recently, the Pakistan side would also have an assessment of the situation. Mr. Agha Shahi referred to the fact that when Gen. Zia visited Kabul, there has been no substantive talk between Pakistan and Afghanistan. Pakistan had told Afghans that it had no differences with the latter but if Afghans had any differences, Pakistan was prepared to talk about them. Mr. Shahi then again asked about the situation within Afghanistan. FM replied that there appeared to be a struggle going on between the Khalq and the Parcham parties. Mr. Shahi said that he was under the impression that the Khalq was on top and in this context referred to the recall of several Afghan Ambassador who had belonged to the Parcham Party. FM observed that it appeared that the Afghan Foreign Minister Mr. Amin was the strong man behind the Government. Mr. Shahi agreed with this assessment and referred to the tremendous boost given to Mr. Amin in the Soviet Media.

3. Prefacing his next question with the remark that FM need not reply if he did not want to, Mr. Shahi asked about FM’s assessment of Afghan’s intentions towards Pakistan. He enquired whether FM thought that the new Afghan authorities wished to discuss bilateral issue with Pakistan or whether they would “heat things up for us”. FM replied that when he was in Kabul, the Afghan authorities had told him that they were willing to negotiate their differences with Pakistan. Mr. Shahi indicated that negotiations on the basis of Afghan’s demands regarding Pakhtoonistan and Baluchistan would not be acceptable to Pakistan. FM added that the Afghans had told him that their revolution had not been accepted by some neighbours and that trouble was being created on their borders. The Afghans did not specifically mention Pakistan by name, but obviously they were referring to Mr. Shahi’s country. Mr. Ahga Shahi strongly denied any intention on the part of Pakistan to create trouble for Afghanistan. Such action by Pakistan would only prove to be counterproductive. Pakistan was in fact bent over backwards not to offend the Afghan Government. Pakistan had already received thousands of refugees from Afghanistan across her borders at considerable cost to herself. However, Mr. Shahi went on, Pakistan was coming to the conclusion that whatever friendly gestures it made, they would have no effect on the Afghan authorities. If Afghanistan raised bilateral issues in their statement to the Plenary of the General Assembly (scheduled to be delivered on October 3) Pakistan would be constrained to raise the issue of nationalities in Afghanistan in its own statement. Afghanistan’s talk about “the national destiny of the Pakhtoon and Baluchi people” was nothing short of a territorial demand. Mr. Agha Shahi had told the Afghan Foreign Minister, Mr. Amin, the last time they met in UN, that Pakistan was willing to discuss any differences which Afghanistan may feel it had with Pakistan. He had requested Mr. Amin not to agitate international fora. Mr. Shahi, however, observed that Mr. Amin was a very rigid and determined man.

4. FM said that the Afghans say that they were not raising any new issues. These issues have been raised by previous Afghan Governments. Mr. Shahi replied that nevertheless, Pakistan was disquieted by the Afghan attitude. FM observed that the new Afghan Government was still in the process of formulating its views and that it still did not know its own mind. However, FM had not the impression that the Afghans wanted to quarrel with Pakistan. Mr. Shahi said that the Afghans kept raising issues thus compelling Pakistan to react. FM advised Mr. Shahi not to react to Afghan statements. Mr. Shahi said that he was compelled to react because of the Pakistani public opinion. Referring to the statement made by Afghanistan at the last GA session, Mr. Shahi said that mild reaction had been criticized in Pakistan.

5. Still on the Pak-Afghan relations, Mr. Shahi claimed that Pakistan had made a grand gesture by arranging Gen. Zia’s visit to Kabul. The Afghans had accepted the visit but had informed Pakistan that they were not willing to discuss substantive issues. Nevertheless, Pakistan went ahead with the visit.

6. The conversation then turned to bilateral matters. Mr. Shahi enquired whether FM was with the opening of an Indian Consulate in Karachi. Observing that India did not want any “special treatment”, FM enquired whether it would be Consulate-General or merely a Consulate. The Pakistan PR confirmed that it would a Consulate-General. Mr. Shahi expressed the view that gradually “things were falling into place” with respect to Indo-Pak relations. All Pakistan wanted was to ensure that Pakistani interests were not harmed, for example, in trade matters. Referring to the forthcoming visit of the Indian trade delegation to Pakistan, Mr. Shahi said that all would depend on the negotiating skill of the Indian trade delegation to persuade the Pakistani side to expand trade. FM confirmed that India too did not want to harm Pakistani interests. He acknowledged that some forward movement had been registered in Indo-Pak relations recently. However, on the question of trade, Pakistan was giving discriminatory treatment to India by insisting on State trading, unlike with other countries. In this context, he referred to the fact that Pakistan was not a socialist State. Mr. Shahi placed the blame for State trading on the allegedly bad experience on Pakistan’s private importers in their dealing with exporters. Secretary (East) observed that this question had also come up during the meeting between our PM and Gen. Zia. The latter had put forward the same argument which was not convincing. PM had told Gen. Zia that while the individual complaints of Pakistani importers could be investigated, such complaints could not justify a general policy decision regarding State trading. Mr. Shahi again asserted that the insistence on State trading was not politically motivated but was a result of the “tremendous agitation” of Pakistani private traders. The Pakistan Foreign Office had in fact recommended that private trade with India should continue, provided that the interests of Pakistani private traders were not jeopardized. He again reiterated his view that all would depend now on the negotiating skill of the Indian trade delegation which was due to visit Pakistan.

7. FM then raised the subject of the continuing restriction on the circulation of Indian newspaper and periodicals in Pakistan. Mr. Shahi appeared not to have the latest information on the subject but asserted that leading Indian newspapers like the “Statesman” and “Times of India” were to be found in Pakistan, for example in Karachi hotels.

8. Mr. Shahi then expressed his sympathy about the recent floods in India. FM confirmed that the floods had been unprecedented and that the property damage had yet to be estimated, although fortunately, the loss of life and crop damage had not been severe.

9. During an ensuing discussion regarding the date of the Pakistani statement of the Plenary, Mr. Shahi observed that he had to postpone his statement from October 2 to October 4 because of the non-aligned meeting scheduled for October 2. (The Pakistani delegation had quietly attended the non-aligned Foreign Minister meeting today and were seated among the Observers, without, however, a name plate). In this context FM enquired whether Pakistan had taken any decision to leave CENTO. Mr. Shahi stated that Pakistan was in consultations with “regional friendly countries,” which also belonged to CENTO and had received contradictory advice from them. For the moment, the Pakistani Foreign Office was making a detailed study, which will be put up to the Pakistani leadership, when completed. Mr. Shahi had told the Soviets, during his recent visit to the Soviet Union, that Pakistan was reviewing its membership of CENTO. He had also told the Soviets not to pressurize them on the subject as such pressure would provoke a reaction in Pakistan and would be counter-productive. His talks in the Soviet Union had been fruitful and in this context he mentioned Soviet assistance in the setting up steel mills with a Soviet investment of about $ 240 million over 5 years. In the context of Soviet-Pak relations, Mr. Shahi observed that the USSR was also influenced by its close friend in Kabul. He had requested the Soviet authorities to help Pakistan by counseling moderation of the Afghan leaders. Similarly, he requested FM to counsel moderation to the Afghans, because of our close ties with that country.

10. FM observed that the question of guest status in non-aligned conferences was likely to be raised in Havana. He confirmed that the question of guest status for Romania and Portugal might also come up. Some delegations wanted the “guests” to clarify their intentions about their membership of military alliances. In this context, FM recalled that he had been criticized by certain circles in India for not opposing Pakistan’s attendance in the Belgrade Conference as guests. Even during his visit to Kabul, the Afghan Foreign Minister had asked why India had not opposed Pakistan’s attendance. This lack of opposition to Pakistan's attendance had been cited by the Afghan side as one of the “minor differences” between India and Afghanistan. The other minor differences being that India had opposed the inclusion in the Belgrade Declaration of the idea that the Socialist bloc was the natural ally of the non-aligned countries. Mr. Shahi observed that all this proved that the new Afghan Government had not received enough exposure to the non-aligned Movement.

11. Mr. Shahi then enquired as to the number of countries which would participate at the Havana Summit Conference of non-aligned countries. FM stated that in his view most countries would participate though at different levels. In this context Cuba had adopted a low posture in the past few months to ensure the success of the Havana Summit.

12. The meeting ended with the exchange of the usual pleasantries.

Record of discussions between the Indian Ambassador in Islamabad and Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shah Nawaz.

Embassy of India
Islamabad

Foreign Secretary Shah Nawaz met the Ambassador on December 7, 1978 at 6.30 PM. Mr. Khalid Mahmood, Director-General (Sub-continent) was present. The following is a quasi-verbatim record of discussions.

SHAH Nawaz: I am sorry I have asked you to come here at this late hour but you must have already seen in this morning’s newspaper the headlines about the statement of your Foreign Minister which has caused us great concern. The language is harsh and almost threatening. This sort of thing causes a disturbance in relations. It becomes necessary to give a reply. The statement is intemperate in parts, causing great concern to us. It says Pakistan is playing with fire and warns of disastrous consequences. The Adviser has had to issue a statement in reply. We thought we should inform you about this statement so that it does not come to you as a surprise.

AMBASSADOR: Thank you. (then after reading the statement, copy attached-Annexure): Well Mr. Foreign Secretary you must decide what you have to say in terms of what you feel necessary to safeguard your interests and also I hope in terms of what serves Indo-Pakistan relations. All I can say is that the statement of your Adviser is uncalled for. I must say that the reference "India’s professions of friendship" in the statement is unfortunate and gives a totally wrong picture. I have only seen parts of the statement of my Foreign Minister as appeared in your press. Have you got the full text?

SHAH NAWAZ: No but we have what was given by All India Radio. You have seen our papers, our people are upset, we have to tell them our views.

AMBASSADOR: I would rather we could have gone into all this when we had seen the full text of the statement. I have only seen a version in your paper quoting AIR. I will be able to comment more fully after seeing the complete text but I can say straightaway my Foreign Minister’s statement has to be reviewed in its full context. That is the context in which it was made and also of your President’s statement on November 27. I have already spoken to you about that (Mr. Shah Nawaz nodded). We realize that political compulsions make it necessary at times to make statements but I do not know why the President had to say what he did. It should not surprise you if we have to reply. You say the tone of my Foreign Minister’s statement is threatening and intemperate. What precisely is there in it that you find so?

SHAH NAWAZ: You and we have our stands on this issue. It is well known to each other. Both are entitled to state their stand. But it is one thing to express and articulate the differing positions, but stating it in such a way that it contains an element of threat as for instance Pakistan is playing with fire and there will be disastrous consequences is something which is both threatening and the language is intemperate.

We want good relations and have been trying to normalize them. It is not that what we have stated is new. Our stand is well known to you and it does not call for any abrasive comments.

Ambassador: This is your views. You have been mentioning my Foreign Minister’s referring to disastrous consequences. I repeat, you have to see it in the right context. He was replying to a calling attention motion about an absurd report somebody has compiled in the UN. It called for a reply that led to other aspects, and that is where your statements harping on self-determination had to be dealt with. We still have not got the text of his statement......
(At this point Mr. Shah Nawaz read out the AIR report of Foreign Minister's statement).

AMBASSADOR: As I have told you, I would like to reserve a fuller discussion on the subject after we have received the full text but I want to reiterate that we stand fully committed to the Simla Agreement. Till recently that was your position but you have now started reviving the UN Resolutions. This is something different and new. Continuous reference to UN Resolution of late is a new aspect.

SHAH NAWAZ: I know your stand and our stand and the different nuances. What is causing trouble and anxiety to us is the element of threat posed in the statement- if we start any adventures etc.

AMBASSADOR: I am afraid the element of threat has a different meaning for us in the context of the misadventures of the past.

SHAH NAWAZ: That is all a matter of the past.

AMBASSADOR: Insha Allah: But you must remember that there are people in India who want to feel sure it is not a matter of the future, and when you raise the issue unnecessarily we have to reassure them. I have stressed this to you time and again. You should not misunderstand or under-estimate public in India. We put up with a lot but that does not mean you can keep on provoking us. We have been extremely long suffering but what happens, you take advantage of that. You have been raising the matter in the UN for the last two years without our exercising the right to reply. We try to allow for you but you make no allowance for our opinion. You know how deeply distressed my Foreign Minister was about that reference which was made in the speech welcoming him on his visit here and how he controlled himself without in any way replying to the points raised. You remember the long discussions we had with you on this subject at lunch in my house, but still you pay no heed. It is a matter of trying our patience again and again.

SHAH NAWAZ: The statements in the UN that you have referred to were restrained.

AMBASSADOR: We appreciated it, and ignored it.

SHAH NAWAZ: We have had occasions in the past to discuss the statements which your Defense Minister, Jagjivan Ram made which were couched in terms which we found unacceptable. The press took note of it but we did not raise it officially.

AMBASSADOR: We had discussed that and I had explained to you.

SHAH NAWAZ: But this is worse. The language is strident?
AMBASSADOR: In what way is it strident?

SHAH NAWAZ: References to playing with fire is a touchy subject and has potential for creating problem.

AMBASSADOR: References to self-determination are also touchy. This is what our FM was trying to tell you, it has problem for you. But talking of problems between us, you have said before we have agreed to solve them under Simla. Certainly but lately you talk in different terms, which could mean a change in your policy. For all our problems, the relations between us have been in a very good tone. Now we have just created a wonderful atmosphere after the cricket tour. General Zia himself said so. So why did he have to say all that about Kashmir all of a sudden? And why do you for the last several months move away from the Simla Agreement and talk only of UN Resolutions which you know are unacceptable to us?

(Mr. Shah Nawaz made no comment and there was silence for nearly a minute).

Anyway, the remark in the Adviser’s statement to which I referred earlier, about "professions of friendship", it has sarcastic connotations, which is rather unfortunate considering the various steps that we have taken to normalize relations, as we will certainly continue to try to do.

SHAH NAWAZ: Professions are good if they are matched by performance.

AMBASSADOR: Have you any doubts? I have already explained to you that the reference to Kashmir by your leaders has been taken note of by the public opinion in India, and we had to deal with it.

SHAH NAWAZ: Shall we just say we wish your Foreign Minister had not made this statement?

AMBASSADOR: We should rather say we wish your President had not made it necessary for my Foreign Minister to make this statement.

SHAH NAWAZ: We should try to avoid these statements.

AMBASSADOR: Well, we could argue on that endlessly, but as a Lucknowi I must say “Pahlay aap” (You first). It is most important that we continue with the process of normalization and improvement of our relations. We have, however, noted a change in nuances of your statements. Instead of the Simla Agreement you have now started going back to the UN Resolutions, which is something not acceptable to us. For our part we will nevertheless carry on because that is our policy and our Foreign Minister’s statement is within that policy. Only don’t misunderstand or take advantage of our patience.

SHAH NAWAZ: But this statement can be interpreted as a threat…..

AMBASSADOR: Interpretation means interpretation. We can all read meaning we want to but should not pick out parts and misconstrue, we should look at
On December 18, President Zia told newsmen in Multan that he was satisfied with the explanation given by the Indian Ambassador to the Foreign Secretary when he was summoned to the Foreign Office on December 7. He pointed out that politicians often said certain things only to divert the attention of their people from their immediate problems, he stressed that the nature of Indo-Pak relations was such that “we start taking notice of even minor and inconsequential incidents and utterances; and added: “our nation is too touchy about our relations with India. I called our Ambassador in India and had discussions with him on the issue.” He, however, made it clear that Pakistan was not so weak as to be cowed down, but some things had to be dealt with through diplomatic channels. The Kashmir issue was a reality and Mr. Agha Shahi had recently raised it at the UN, he added.
The Pakistan Ambassador, Mr. ABDUL SATTAR, called on Foreign Minister on December 30, 1978 at 4.30 p.m. at his own request. The Ambassador was accompanied by Mr. MUJAHID HUSSAIN, Minister, Pakistan Embassy. Foreign Secretary and Ambassador BAJPAI were present during the meeting. The following is a quasi-verbatim record of the meeting. Nearly all of Foreign Minister’s remarks and some of Mr. SATTAR’S being translations from Urdu:

Mr. ABDUL SATTAR: Sir, I will be leaving for Islamabad next week. I hope this visit would enable me to give Islamabad an accurate summary of the relations between our two countries. I have already informed Islamabad what Foreign Secretary had kindly conveyed to me the other day, that there is no change in India’s policy towards Pakistan and that the process of normalization of relations with Pakistan would continue.

When I was in Islamabad from December 9 to 14, I had a chance to meet President Zia, Mr. Agha Shahi and others. Sir, unfortunately the report which appeared in the media over the discussions in Parliament had suffered a great deal in compression. The reports were all too brief and misleading. I may say that the perspective of the debate in Parliament was lost in the media reports. I have not myself been able to follow the full text of the discussions in Parliament, but I gather that the warning to Pakistan that it would be playing with fire was first made by Mr. KARAN SINGH….

Mr. SATTAR: Much of it was in Hindi which I could not follow, but we have gone through it with those who know. The question now would be as to what might be done in Pakistan to rectify the misleading conclusions drawn by our press on the discussions in Parliament. It is my feeling that it will be very difficult to undo the damage caused by our press reports. I wish we could get back on the rails and move forward in the direction of building goodwill and preparing the ground for further normalization of relations between our two countries. The question is how is this to be done?

Foreign Minister: In my mind it is another question that arises: why are you referring to Kashmir in this way? You keep repeating it, that causes its own reaction, but you no longer repeat it even in the Simla context. You have for some time now been talking only of the UN resolutions. When you take that stand, you say there is nothing harmful in it; but if we say what our views are, you get all upset. I suggest to you this is a delicate matter for us too.

Mr. SATTAR: Reiteration by the two countries of their known positions on bilateral issues should not really constitute set-back to the process of normalization of relations. The obligations of the two countries on the basis of Simla Agreement as regards the Line of Control are very clear, but without prejudice to these obligations, both the countries are free to restate their respective positions provided the statement are mere repetitions of known position. What Mr. AGHA SHAHI said was in measured terms. On your side there have been many statements by your Defense Minister which we have not taken up. We have said it is part of the domestic needs.

Foreign Secretary: We are talking of what is spoiling the atmosphere of relations between the two countries if there are unnecessarily frequent references by Pakistan to the Kashmir question, then unfortunately there is bound to be reaction here.

Mr. SATTAR: I do not know how frequent the repetitions of our known positions on Kashmir have been. Mr. AGHA SHAHI’s statement in the United Nations in October and President Zia’s speech in November have been two recent references made by our Government on Kashmir. I may state that neither of the references signify any change in Pakistan’s known position on Kashmir. They merely reiterate the known position. Therefore, if in response to these statements, the Government of India felt obliged to merely reiterate its position, there is no harm.

Foreign Minister: But where does it all lead to? It is true that in the Simla Agreement there is reference to recognized positions. If you feel you have to repeat yours, it is all right up to a point; but how many times? If you keep on raising it, it looks like a campaign.

Mr. SATTAR: If we look at the record of the last two years, there has been no campaign.

Foreign Minister: Yes, yes.

Mr. SATTAR: As far as I can recall, our leaders have only made a few statements on particular occasions.

Foreign Minister: But this time you did not even wait to see what I had said. Your Adviser issues a statement straight away - alien domination - back to the UN resolutions and then everyone starts strongly attacking us in your media.
Mr. SATTAR: The Adviser’s statement was in the context of the AIR reports.

Foreign Minister: But you keep on emphasizing your position again and again. You even equate it with the Palestinian issue. You are trying to excite the Muslim Countries.

Mr. SATTAR: You are referring to what General Zia said in the Rabita Conference in Karachi on July 6. That was not an official statement and he did not draw any parallels between the two issues.

Foreign Minister: But he spoke of the two issues in the same breath.

Mr. SATTAR: Sir, I would say he referred to the two issues in the same statement but there was no attempt to draw any parallel between the two issues and that was six months ago...

Foreign Minister: We have said anything. We do not want any setback in our relations, but, like you we too have a public opinion. You pick out Kashmir. You may not repeat it every day but it is again and again.

Mr. SATTAR: We have not been able to see eye to eye with each other on a number of issues. It is 6 ½ years since the Simla Agreement was signed. During this period the Government of Pakistan has taken a number of steps towards improving relations with India and we too have not wanted any set-back.

Foreign Minister: Trade has been a set-back. Actually it is against Simla.

Mr. SATTAR: Sir, I agree on trade. Unfortunately the hiatus in the question of bilateral trade certainly constitutes a set-back to our efforts to improve relations. The Government of Pakistan have nevertheless taken a number of steps towards improving relations with India. Sir, you are aware that the two sides have often not been able to move forward the way we both want. There are heights in the forward movement as well as depressions, but between the heights and set-backs there is a plateau. We have laboured to move step by step along this middle course. In the meantime if the positions of the two countries on bilateral issues are restated by either side, it should not be considered by the other side as a set-back to the forward movement.

Foreign Minister: You no longer mention you want to proceed with normalization in accordance with Simla- it is only UN, UN.

Mr. SATTAR: But we have also said we want to implement Simla Agreement.

Foreign Minister: That has been afterwards. Several times in the last year or so there has been no such reference. Now-a-day you are going on along the line of UN Resolutions.
Mr. SATTAR: I can assure you that my Government's commitment to the Simla Agreement remains constant. We are committed to carry it out.

Foreign Minister: What we feel is we should work in the Simla spirit. Take a small thing like cricket. It did good but you go and declare a national holiday. Then your Captain says on TV— with so many of our Muslims listening—that all Muslims had prayed for you. I emphasis these are small things, we should forget them but the public here notices.

Mr. SATTAR: I can understand the reactions here. I would only say the reaction in Pakistan to the success of the Pakistan cricket team in the series over India is a special thing. I may point out that in the World Cup Hockey Tournament in Buenos Aires though we did not even play with India, the success of the Pakistan team was celebrated with a public holiday.

Foreign Secretary: But the Indo-Pak cricket series was not a tournament. It is a question of reaction in Pakistan. That is the point Ambassador Bajpai: I am your witness that the Pakistan Government did not announce the holiday in deference to public demand. In fact there has been public criticism. I happened to be giving my reception in Lahore. Gen. AZHAR came and said Gen. Zia was looking for your Captain to speak to him from Pindi. Your Captain came later to my room so I took the opportunity to ring up Gen. Zia and congratulate him. He then told the Captain about the holiday. I remember your own people were surprised. Some of your players even said “Goodness, if we lose does it mean a day of mourning”. So I say I am your witness that this national holiday was not in any sense of national triumph, it was just one of those thing.

Mr. SATTAR: In Pakistan, there are perhaps too many holidays. Sir, let me not be misunderstood. Unfortunately it is still true that sports exchanges between India and Pakistan are not taken by the Pakistan public as games. In the 50's, I recall, the conditions were much worse. Any sports event involving Pakistan and India were viewed by people as virtually wars between the two countries. I can say that, comparatively, the present attitude is quite reformed. Sir, I hope you are also aware of the reports of the tremendous amount of goodwill generated by the visit of the India cricket team. There were unfortunately moments such as Sahiwal and last hours of Lahore test. But the gains of the cricket tour were much greater. Our President made it a point to witness each of the cricket tests. Everyone I know in the Government wanted the tour to be a success. Mushtaq Mohammed was perhaps not as persuasive and endearing as Bishen Singh Bedi. Nevertheless, I think that the desire behind the cricket series was positive and the overall contribution of the series was to promote goodwill between our two countries.
Ambassador BAJPAI: There is no doubt that the cricket series was a tremendous success at the people-to-people level. It was remarkable not only that all the people from India - not only the team but those from Amritsar - complete strangers met with so much of warmth and goodwill, but also that 20 Indians could go round for two month all over Pakistan, even those areas of Pakistan where feeling towards India are normally exacerbated, without any incident.

Foreign Minister: That is it, at the people-to-people level the relations are by and large unexceptionable. Mrs. SHER SINGH, wife of the Minister of State for Defense, was telling me how well she was treated even by people she did not know.

Mr. SATTAR: The support we received from the President to enable people to come from India to witness the test matches was great. I recall when I first mentioned the matter to Ambassador BAJPAI about letting people go across, he feared it would be an impossible in the beginning but the fact that it finally came through, of course thanks to the help from the Government of India, only shows the genuine desire of Pakistan Government to increase people-to-people contacts between India and Pakistan. The Maharaja of Baroda is back in Karachi. Dr. CHANANA, MP has expressed a desire to visit Pakistan. We have a Justice here now on sightseeing.

Sir, I will submit for your consideration that reiteration by Pakistan on known positions on bilateral matters should not be construed by India as a desire to provoke a set back.

Foreign Minister: It is the manner in which it is done; the incessant repetition and the manner.

Mr. SATTAR: I am afraid we have certain pressures on us. Take Nawa-i-waqt. I can assure you that when I saw the newspaper reports on December 7, regarding the discussions in Parliament, they did not register with me as something to provoke any reaction in Pakistan. I feel easy in mind that you desire to continue building up of the relations with Pakistan. May be it was in the frame of mind that I reacted to the newspaper reports of the 7th. But in Pakistan, people draw different conclusion from the media reports. Some people felt provoked enough to react to the reports, particularly to the All India Radio broadcast. The AIR report was in some ways even inaccurate.

Foreign Minister: The AIR broadcast was over three week ago, but still your papers are going on. Cooperation can only be by agreement. I have always said you set the pace. But don’t let internal politics enter into Indo-Pakistan relations. That way as you have Nawa-i-Waqt, we also have Opinions. We have parliament, you heard what Dr. KARAN SINGH said....

Mr. SATTAR: I have told my Embassy we must in future follow Parliament proceeding more carefully. Dr. KARAN SINGH of course is personally involved.

Foreign Minister: .... no, but there must be limits.

Foreign Minister: What was the reaction in responsible circles in Pakistan? What was the conclusion reached in Government circles? I would say that in the totality of the relations between our two countries, there is always a possibility that something can produce reactions in either side. If responsible circles take into account this possibility, there can be a judicious avoidance of behaviours which may cause reactions.

Mr. SATTAR: But that does not mean that we should accept the inevitability of reactions and set-back in our relations. Sir, your first statements in Parliament on December 6 was unexceptionable. But the speeches made by certain members after that only led to the reactions in Pakistan.

Ambassador BAJPAI: When I met Mr. SHAH NAWZ, I urged him to wait for the text of the discussion in Parliament before officially reacting to the media reports. The problem is that by issuing an official statement you have given an official imprimatur to the reports and reactions of Pakistani newspapers such as Nawa_i-Waqt. I conveyed to SHAH NAWAZ SAHIB that the Minister had merely said that since our two countries consist of plural societies with many such cultures, any talk of self-determination is a very dangerous thing.

Mr. SATTAR: You know what they say about our Foreign Ministry statement?

Ambassador BAJPAI: I know, that it was too mild.

Mr. SATTAR: The accusation of the public is that the Foreign Office statement was too mild. On December 7, the Foreign Office started getting telephone calls asking for the official reaction to the reports of the discussion in Indian Parliament. The Pakistan Foreign office could not plead that the text of the discussion in Parliament was not available in Islamabad. People who telephoned to the Foreign Office were themselves drawing the attention of the Foreign Office to the All India Radio reports on the matter. I agree that All India Radio does not represent the Government of India. But sometimes in all countries the version broadcast by national radios are understood as government versions. Similarly in Pakistan, for instance, there is always a misunderstanding that the Pakistan Times represents the Government of Pakistan though the paper is not necessarily reflective of Pakistan Government policy, it is only owned by the National Press Trust.
Foreign Secretary: I would submit what you really have to consider is what in effect is the Government of India’s present policy towards Pakistan. This is the question to which you will yourself have to prepare an answer. There is a direction in the total way the relations have been built up by the Government. In the hope that set-backs to the Government’s efforts to improve relations with Pakistan will be minimized, we have said that whether in economic, cultural or political matters, we are willing to respond to the extent Pakistan is prepared to go, but not wanting to appear to be pushing forward. The Minister has said it so many times that it is up to you to set the pace of our relations, we are ready to wait.

Ambassador BAJPAI: We do not want to press you.

Foreign Secretary: Yes, we do not want to be seen pressing. On our side we continue to try to improve relations. You are aware that as regards Afghanistan, from the beginning we explained to you our position and we have stood by it. Even in regard to the Durand Line.

Foreign Minister: Yes, you can imagine my going to Afghanistan and advocating the Pakistan cause; you remember what I said about the international frontier and what criticism there was. Afterwards the Afghans even said this was the only matter of differences between India and Afghanistan.

Foreign Secretary: That and the support we gave you on the Non-Aligned Conference.

Foreign Minister: Yes. You can see then the Soviet Bloc question enters into it. We welcomed you as guests. We have said if you want to leave CENTO and be full members we will welcome it. I still have expectations on Indo-Pakistan relations. But I must tell you frankly that the expectations have not remained what they were 20 month ago.

Forgive me, but we must be clear on the governmental net. We thought things were going well. Our Prime Minister confirmed this after his talks with General Zia. General Zia himself said so, but then he makes that statement on Kashmir. Something keeps happening which raises doubts. We would like to move forward but how can it be in this way?

Mr. SATTAR: Sir, I have been in my own way very much involved in India-Pakistan relations. We have to be some times extremely thick-skinned. Unfortunately, the history of our relations is such that it is natural for people to revert to criticism and protest. The alternative of trying to reverse the past needs patience and perseverance. Sir, your own contribution to building up the relations between our two countries was monumental in its proportions. Your visit to Pakistan brought about a metamorphosis in attitudes in our country.

You disarmed everyone during your visit. I hope the positive trends in our relations will ultimately prevail over the negative legacies. Our path is no doubt difficult, but I am definite that the Government of Pakistan wants to move forward in the process of normalization of relations. I hope you will also strive to guide your government to move forward in the relations with our country. There will be compulsions from time to time may be mistakes from time to time constituting set back to the trend of our relations.

Foreign Minister: I have been feeling that there has been too much harping over Kashmir in Pakistan and that is not good for our relations. When I spoke, there was no need to satisfy the opposition that was not at all in my mind, but what had been said on your side on Kashmir was in my mind. I don’t want to go on to the Kashmir question - we know the position. When I said so in Islamabad they said they did not know anything about Simla. Today you say your stuff every day. Now Mr. BHUTTO even attacks me you must have seen the summary in our press of his rejoinder to your White Paper which has been put out.

Mr. SATTAR: That has not been put out officially.

Ambassador BAJPAI: It is circulating in Pakistan.

Mr. SATTAR: This is a three hundred page document smuggled by YAHYA BAKHTIAR. The Pakistan Supreme Court took serious views of the smuggling out of the document by YAHYA BAKHTIAR. But yet, as Mr. BAJPAI says it is circulating. In the document, BHUTTO has not only referred to Kashmir but has spoken of various other things as well. He has given another statement during his personal appearance before the court to supplement the submissions of his counsels, where he states that he had forecast in 1977 the specter of present difficulties for Pakistan. He claims he had even forecast your statement of December 6. BHUTTO is facing the death sentence on NAWAB MOHAMMAD AHMAD KHAN’S murder case, and his defence has not been confined to this specific case but in the context of an international conspiracy to oust him from power.

Foreign Minister: And also to oust Mrs. GANDHI and Mrs. BANDARNAIKE.

Ambassador BAJPAI: In all fairness I must tell you that on the basis of the Pakistani reaction to what has been attributed to us; I have had to tell my Government that any possibilities for steps to improve relations will now have to be kept in abeyance for some time. It is undeniable that what has happened constitutes a major set-back to our relations. You asked how the adverse change in atmosphere could be set right. You know the limitations on our functioning. Since your media needs persuasion, it might behove your government to try, as only through a conscious effort on your part can it be put right.

Mr. SATTAR: I would agree with you if the responsibility for what happened rested entirely on the Government of Pakistan.
Ambassador BAJPAI: I am referring to what can be done with your media.

Foreign Secretary: What the Minister has said is that ultimately this is a complex matter of many factors and you must view things in their totality.

Mr. SATTAR: I had simply seen the papers of the 7th and left for Islamabad on the 9th. Even though I had not met anyone in Foreign Office here, it was my presumptuous conclusion that my discussions in Islamabad contributed to some extent in enabling our Government to view the events in perspective. I must admit that my contribution stood confined to a very limited circle. My limited objective presently would consist in rectifying to the extent possible the incorrect impressions formed first in Islamabad.

Foreign Secretary: Why are we isolating this incident? My submission is to view the incident in the totality of our relations. Secondly, it is the considered policy of our Government to improve the climate of relations in the region. The total evidences of this policy are there for you to see. You can yourselves put together these evidences which are pretty clear and credible.

Foreign Minister: You must have heard what I asked the Bangladesh Foreign Minister to convey.

Mr. SATTAR: Sir, there were many things in your last statement of December 7, which I wish had made headlines in newspapers rather than the first. The report of your message of goodwill to Pakistan conveyed through the Foreign Minister of Bangladesh has certainly contributed positively. While reporting your second statement, Nawa-i-Waqt felt that the line it was going to sell on Government of India’s policy towards Pakistan was being undermined. It also referred to your message through Bangladesh Foreign Minister. It argued that what it had first attributed to you was India’s true policy and the latter views were just cover. But the fact that it has been reported has had a positive effect.

Foreign Minister: You refer to the press and public opinion. There are also those who help form opinion. You see ours. You see here there is no anti Pakistan feeling. But can I say the same of Pakistan?

Mr. SATTAR: I would submit that the tortured history of India Pakistan relations calls for a great deal of perseverance on both sides in their efforts to normalize the relations. Sir, as a leader of your people, you are in a position to make a positive formal contribution to the growth of relations. Your visit to Islamabad virtually transformed the image of the policy of the Janata Government in the Pakistani people’s minds. It is my hope that the perspective created during your visit would ultimately prevail. I think if we maintain the general perspective, we can withstand the minor set-backs from time to time. I must say that the reaction of the India newspapers to the whole matter was remarkable. Except from Amrita Bazar Patrika, the Indian newspapers have not picked up the treads of Pakistani press. Fortunately, the more significant sections of the Indian press have ignored the Pakistani press.

Foreign Minister: Please tell Agha Shai Sahib that, and tell him that what is going on inside over there and of course equally what goes on inside here must not be allowed to cast any shadow on our relations. Secondly, on Kashmir. We have not done anything. There is talk of creating distractions on the borders. We expects the same attitude from Pakistan you should not do anything. We have to remember what has happened in the past.

Mr. SATTAR: Sir, I am very much grateful to you for giving me so much of your time in spite of your terrible preoccupations.

Record of the Call by Pakistan Ambassador Abdul Sattar on Foreign Secretary Jagat Mehta.

New Delhi, January 30, 1979.

Ministry of External Affairs
(Pak-Iraf Division)

The Ambassador of Pakistan, Mr. ABDUL SATTAR, accompanied by his Minister, Mr. MUJAHID HUSSAIN, called on the Foreign Secretary at 11.45 hours on 30th January 1979. The call was at the request of the Pakistan Ambassador. JS (Pak-Iraf) was also present.

2. The Ambassador began by conveying his appreciation for the special reference to Pakistan made in our Press Release dated 26th January, 1979, on felicitations received from foreign governments on the occasion of our Republic Day.

3. The Ambassador then referred to the recently held Conference in Pakistan of Pakistani Envoys posted in the Middle-East. The Ambassador said that the Conference was primarily engaged in an appraisal of Pakistan Government’s policy consequent upon the regional developments. The developments in Iran constituted a major theme of discussion at the Conference. The future course of developments in Iran is evidently unpredictable and it is the hope of the Government of Pakistan that the situation there would stabilize and Iran would continue to make progress. The Ambassador said that Pakistan, being a recipient of substantial credits from Iran, is directly affected by the stability of Iran. (In this connection, the Ambassador revealed that during 1974-76 Pakistan had received from Iran credits amounting to $586 million) The Ambassador said that the outside world could at best merely watch and wait for the situation in Iran to stabilize. Mentioning that much of the information available in Islamabad on the Iran developments is speculative in character, the Ambassador said that according to this information the Administration in Iran stands virtually paralyzed. Referring to Ayatollah Khomeini, the Ambassador said that Khomeini’s following is not necessarily a fanatical religious following. When forums of public discussion were unavailable in Iran, the mosque became a rallying point. The feeling in Islamabad is that it would be incorrect to conclude that the agitation under way in Iran is controlled by obscurantist elements. There are liberal elements in the agitation and it remains to be seen how the balance is going to be struck between the various elements.

4. The Ambassador stated that the Envoy’s Conference discussed at considerable length Pakistan’s relations with Afghanistan. From April onwards, the Government of Pakistan has followed a correct and helpful policy towards Afghanistan. Pakistan has been helpful in whatever is possible in its relations with Afghanistan, particularly on the question of transit facilities. The Ambassador referred to his discussion with Foreign Minister on January 19, 1979, and said that during the meeting Secretary (West) conveyed the impression that there was some problem regarding the movement of food grains from India to Afghanistan. The Ambassador said that he has checked the position with Islamabad and if there is any problem in the movement of food grains from India to Afghanistan, the reasons for that cannot be attributed to any decision taken in Islamabad. Ambassador said that Secretary (West) had also mentioned that during the recent visit to India of the Afghan Deputy Planning Minister, the possibility of movement of goods from India to Afghanistan through the port of Karachi came up for reference. The Ambassador said that this is a matter which has to be taken up with Pakistan by the Afghan Government. There has been an unprecedented rush for Karachi port, especially because of the massive import of food grains and cement by Pakistan of late. The Ambassador said that if Afghan Government discusses the matter with the authorities in Pakistan, the latter would explain the position.

5. The Ambassador continued that during the Envoys’ Conference, it was made known to all the envoys that some problems have arisen out of the flight of some thousands of people from Afghanistan into Pakistan. The Ambassador said that Pakistan hopes that the Government of India would appreciate the futility of sealing the Pakistan-Afghanistan border. According to the estimates in Islamabad, two weeks ago, approximately 20,000 Afghan refugees have so far crossed over to Pakistan. The Government of Pakistan is trying its best to ensure that the hospitality meted out to the Afghan refugees is not abused by them to go back and engage in anti-Government activities in Afghanistan. The Ambassador said that the Government of Pakistan has been trying to persuade the refugees to go back to Afghanistan.

6. The Ambassador said that what has caused concern to Pakistan is the absence of reciprocity on the part of Afghanistan. The Afghan Government is unfortunately high-lighting the differences with Pakistan and does not show any appreciation of Pakistan's helpful attitude. Afghanistan, in fact, tends to view the helpful attitude of Pakistan Government as a matter of right rather than discretion. It is the hope of the Government of Pakistan that there would be amelioration in the attitude of the Afghan Government. The Ambassador said that even though anti-Pakistani propaganda has not been in high gear over Kabul Radio, it has been rather strident in fora of various kinds and in public meetings in Afghanistan.

7. On a query from Joint Secretary (Pak-Iraf) about reports of clashes in areas of Afghanistan bordering Afghanistan (Pakistan?), the Ambassador said that the stories datelined Peshawar which have appeared in world press, are exaggerated versions conveyed to the foreign press corps in Pakistan by some motivated people. Ambassador said that according to the information available with Pakistan Government, clashes have taken place in Afghanistan all the same. While it is not known how serious the clashes have been, the assessment in Islamabad is that the Afghan Government is fully in control of the situation. There are various internal questions which the Government of Afghanistan has to address itself to, but there is no doubt in Islamabad that the Government has full control over the developments.

8. The Ambassador concluded with the hope that the Afghan Government would appreciate Pakistan's helpful policy of not interfering in the internal affairs of Affairs of Afghanistan. A certain amount of weapons is available with the tribals inhabiting the Pak-Afghan border, but the policy of the Government of Pakistan towards Afghanistan has been totally correct.

9. The Ambassador stated that there was no discussion during the Envoys' Conference on the relations with India. Happily, the consensus in Pakistan has been that normalization of relations with India serves the interests of both countries and that Pakistan should try to maintain the process of normalization. The Ambassador said that, nevertheless, both the countries should have a better understanding of each other's viewpoints. There has been a certain amount of concern in Pakistan to the reports of comments made in India about the acquisition of arms by Pakistan. India is aware that Pakistan does not have capacity for indigenous production of arms. The indigenous contribution has been in fact less than 50% of the total defence needs of Pakistan. In the situation, Pakistan is compelled to buy from time to time various weapons from abroad. The Ambassador hoped that Government of India would see that Pakistan has to take into account its defence requirements. Therefore, when Pakistan acquires weapons from abroad, that should not tell on the mutual confidence between the two Governments. There is a belief in Pakistan that India desires to see Pakistan militarily helpless and without the capability for its defence.

10. The Ambassador hoped that there would be an opportunity for the leaders of the two countries to meet in the near future. He said that Mr. Agha Shahi has expressed the hopes that perhaps an opportunity would be provided when he could have a meeting with Foreign Minister in some third country.

11. Foreign Secretary thanked the Ambassador for his account of the recently held conference in Islamabad. Foreign Secretary stated that the Government of India has been watching the developments in the region with concern. India has an interest that the situation does not remain troubled for too long. It is our feeling that the developments in each country has a certain internal logic and there is causal link or connection between Iran, Afghanistan & Pakistan. But it does add up to a common apprehension of instability. Foreign Secretary said that India & Pakistan have shown a certain maturity in their dealings with each other. It is our desire that neither country should do anything which would create anxieties to the other.

12. Foreign Secretary referred to the developments in Afghanistan. Foreign Secretary said that our position on the developments in Afghanistan is well known. We hope the Afghan Government would continue its policy of non-alignment and diversification of its relations. India’s relations with Afghanistan are purely bilateral in nature and have no motives vis-à-vis Pakistan. In fact, our differences with the present Afghanistan Government consist in our attitude towards Pakistan. Foreign Secretary referred to the recent mid-term review of the progress of the Fifth Indo-Afghan Joint Commission. Foreign Secretary said that the discussions were functional and economic in nature. Foreign Secretary went on to say that we have our own limitations in giving aid to Afghanistan. But our aid to Afghanistan has some significance in that it shows that Afghanistan desires to diversify its relations. In so far as Afghanistan’s relationship with the Soviet Union is concerned, it has always been of a special nature. Foreign Secretary said that he would even hazard a guess that there may be differences between Afghanistan and the Soviet Union and that the differences may be even on the attitude to Pakistan.
13. Foreign Secretary referred to the thesis expounded by certain quarters that South Asia is the underbelly of the Soviet Union and therefore, the region of South Asia should be militarily bolstered by western countries against the Soviet Union. Foreign Secretary said that if one analyses the developments in Iran and Afghanistan, it is evident that the problem in these countries has been socio-economic-political. The answer to such a problem is certainly not in military terms. India does not believe that the answer to this problem is in gun-boat policy. India wishes that the situation in the region lends itself to frank discussions between India and Pakistan. In this connection, Foreign Secretary hoped that the time would soon be propitious for the Heads of Government of India and Pakistan to meet and discuss matters of common interest. We perceive that the logic of future in South Asia is in the direction of a rational allocation between productive and unproductive requirements by all the countries of the region.

14. Referring to Pakistan-Afghanistan relations, Foreign Secretary said that Pakistan’s relations with Afghanistan should in no way be linked to Pakistan’s relations with India. On our side, it shall be our earnest endeavour to improve relations with Pakistan. Foreign Secretary categorically stated that India would not want to contribute to Pakistan’s internal and external difficulties or see them exacerbated. India hopes that Pakistan would fully recognize this as a major contribution by India.

15. Foreign Secretary stated that there is a considered rationale in India’s policy towards China and in Foreign Minister’s forthcoming visit to that country. Foreign Secretary dispelled any attempt to draw the analogy of Indo-Soviet relations and stated that Indo-Soviet relations have their own rationale.

16. The Pakistan Ambassador enquired whether India felt that any of the Super Powers is trying to mould the situation in the region to its advantage. Foreign Secretary replied that this would be extremely unlikely and difficult. In fact, there are different lobbies within the Super Power. Besides, there is the question of strategic balance between the two super powers and the peculiar community of interests between them. Foreign Secretary referred to the Soviet warning against interference by any outside power in Iran. Foreign Secretary said that U.S.A. may be extremely anxious about the situation in Iran, but is in no position to control or modulate the developments. The primary concern of USA would be stability in the situation. The Soviet Union has not added to the stability either.

17. Pakistan Ambassador referred to the press reports of the discussions during the recent meeting of Parliament’s Consultative Committee. The Ambassador mentioned that during the meeting, according to press reports, some MPs had spoken of Pakistan as a surrogate of USA in the subcontinent. The Ambassador went on to say that Pakistan itself recognizes its modest position on the globe of the world. Pakistan is fully aware of the desirability of not coming in between the two Super Powers. The Ambassador said that while he could understand the political motivations of some MPs to make such sweeping statements, he would acknowledge that at the responsible level in India there is a desire that such talk should be avoided. Foreign Secretary agreed that at the responsible level, leaders in both the countries have already confounded war-mongering. However, it would require constant vigil to proceed with the setting up of a relationship of mutual benefit between the two countries. It cannot be over-emphasized that such an endeavour is in the larger interest of both the countries. Foreign Secretary again referred to the futility of viewing security problems more in terms of acquisition and possession of military arms. If there is one lesson to be drawn from the developments in the region, it is that the problem of security for each country is basically the matter of political or economic strength at the grass-roots level. This holds good for India or Iran, and even for Pakistan.

(At this point, Foreign Secretary had to leave the discussions for another engagement. The Ambassador, however, continued his discussion with JS (Pak-Iraf).

18. The Ambassador referred to certain problems being faced by the Pakistan International Airlines in its operations in India. He said that when recently PIA asked for permission from the State Bank of India to make remittances of its revenues to Pakistan, they have been told to produce from the Income-Tax authorities a certificate on their financial operations in India for the current period as well as for the pre-1965 period. However, PIA’s records for pre-1965 period have all been taken away by the Indian Custodian of Enemy Property, who has not so far cleared PIA’s accounts. The Ambassador said that, on the other hand, the Pakistani Custodian of Enemy Property has already cleared the Indian Airlines’s accounts. The Ambassador said that when PIA and Indian Airlines resumed their operations in the two countries, the understanding was that the pre-1976 claims of the two countries would not be linked with the current operations. The Ambassador said that the Pakistan Government would be taking up this matter with India very soon. JS (Pak-Iraf) agreed that the 1976 understanding was that the present operations of the two Airlines would be independent of the pre-1976 claims. He said that the matter would receive the attention of the Government.

Foreign Secretary has approved the issue of this note.

No. 3/103/6/79

(M.K. Bhadra Kumar)
Under Secretary (Pak)-P.
I wish to report to the House on my visit to the People’s Republic of China, which had to be postponed at the last minute in October, 1978 because of medical advice. The mutually convenient dates for the visit had been fixed over six weeks ago. The House will recall that I had made clear that I was accepting the invitation of Foreign Minister Huang Hua to visit China in the spirit of adherence to our Government’s policy of non-alignment and to explore the possibilities of improving bilateral relations with all countries without jeopardizing well-established friendships. My visit and my conversations were entirely in keeping with this declared policy and objective. While exchange of views on international issues were always intended to figure in the discussions, the primary focus of my visit was on the difficult and complex questions which be set relations between India and China.

On the subject of the situation in the sub-continent, which was discussed at considerable length, I explained that, with full deference to the independence of our neighbours, we have sought assiduously to resolve outstanding problems. I spoke of our attempts to create a climate of confidence between the nations south of the Himalayas, which on the one hand, would lead to an optimization of our respective national development and cooperation between neighbours, and, on the other, could reduce and, hopefully, end, the long story of great power involvement and competition in the problems of our region. A stable and cooperative South Asia, I urged, can be an example and an asset to the world. Against this background, I described in detail our strict and scrupulous policy of non-interference in internal problems and the steps taken to improve relations with Pakistan. Even while we do not object to normal bilateral relations between Pakistan and China, the prospect of improvement of India-China relations would be impeded if their relations adversely affect our legitimate interests.

In this context, I summarized the origin and the long history of our differences with Pakistan on the question of Jammu and Kashmir. I informed the Chinese leaders that under the Simla Agreement, to which both countries are parties, we are committed to the final settlement of the Kashmir question through bilateral discussions. It has been the considered view of the Government and all sections of the people in India, that unlike the stand taken by Chinese in the fifties, the attitude adopted by the People’s Republic of China in the last decade and a half had been an additional and unnecessary complication to the prospects of Sino-Indian relations. In this connection, I also reiterated our concern at the construction of the Karakoram Highway across territory which formed part of the State of Jammu & Kashmir.

The Chinese Government showed understanding of our policy towards Pakistan and our neighbours and expressed, both in public and in our conversations, appreciation of our efforts, and indeed, the rationale and success of the policy. The Chinese leaders noted the facts of improved bilateral relations between the countries in this region and the propitious climate of co-operation which now prevailed in the sub-continent.

New Delhi, April 2, 1979.

The Adviser for Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, informed His Excellency the Ambassador of India in Islamabad on 16 June, 1978 of Pakistani desire to join the Non-aligned Group. Already Government of Pakistan was giving serious consideration to the question of withdrawal from the Central Treaty Organisation.

2. The Adviser had in fact intended to raise this matter with His Excellency Mr. Atal Bahari Vijapayee, the External Affairs Minister of India, when they met in New York on 8 June, 1978. However, lack of time on both sides did not permit him to bring up the matter at the meeting. Later the Permanent Representative of Pakistan to the United Nations conveyed the Adviser’s message on the subject to the Minister for External Affairs of India. He explained that Pakistan’s admission to the Non-aligned Group as an observer would facilitate the process of Pakistan’s disengagement from CENTO. The External Affairs Minister referred during the conversation to the applicability of criteria of membership even in respect of observer status.

3. In the light of the consultations with India and other non-aligned countries Pakistan decided to apply at that stage for association in an appropriate capacity.
4. The Government of Pakistan has expressed appreciation for the welcome India extended to Pakistan as a guest at the Belgrade Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-aligned countries. It also noted the observation made by the External Affairs Minister of India, expressing the hope that Pakistan would go on to detach itself from the military alliance system.

5. On 12 March 1979 the Government of Pakistan announced its decision regarding Pakistan’s withdrawal from CENTO. Pursuant to this decision, participation by Pakistan in the activities of the organization has ceased.

6. The Pakistan Adviser for Foreign Affairs has since addressed a letter to the Foreign Minister of Sri Lanka informing him of Pakistan's effective termination of its membership of CENTO, as a further reflection of its total solidarity with the aims and objectives of the non-aligned movement, thus meeting the existing criteria for membership of the movement.

7. The Pakistan Adviser informed the Ambassador of India in Islamabad on 28 March 1979 of the formal request Pakistan has already made for admission to the non-aligned movement.

8. The Government of Pakistan solicits the support of the Government of India for a favourable decision on Pakistan’s request for membership to be considered at the meeting of the Coordinating Bureau of Non-aligned countries scheduled to be held in Colombo next June.

0933. RECORD OF THE CALL OF PAKISTAN AMBASSADOR ABDUL SATTAR ON FOREIGN SECRETARY.

New Delhi, April 12, 1979.

Ministry of External Affairs
(Pak-Iraf Division)

The Ambassador of Pakistan, Mr. Abdul Sattar, at his request called on the Foreign Secretary on Thursday 12th April 1979 at 1800 hrs. The call lasted 45 minutes.

2. The Pakistani Ambassador began by saying that he had gone to Pakistan, on the 7th of April, to attend to some personal matters. He had also spent a couple of days in Islamabad where the Pakistan Foreign Secretary had asked him to rush back immediately to Delhi to convey certain messages personally to our Government through the Foreign Secretary.

3. The Ambassador then said that the Government of Pakistan deeply appreciated Government of India’s policies followed during “the recent difficult days” in Pakistan. This was especially so in view of the heavy public and other pressures on the Prime Minister and his colleagues to make statements on internal developments in Pakistan (The Ambassador did not specifically refer to the Bhutto affairs, though this clearly is what he had in mind).

4. The Ambassador then handed over a copy of the notification on Pakistan’s withdrawal from the Central Treaty Organisation (CENTO). (A copy of the notification is attached—not included here). The Ambassador said that CENTO had ceased to exist as three members had withdrawn from the Organisation and had served notice of their intention not to participate in any further meetings or activities of the Organisation.

Pak – Afghan Relations

5. The Ambassador thereafter turned to events on the Pakistan- Afghan border and expressed the anxiety of his Government at these developments. Afghanistan’s recent allegations, that Pakistani troops, some times even dressed as Afghans, raided Afghan posts were false, unfounded and baseless as were the earlier charges that Pakistan was giving military assistance and training to Afghan dissidents. The Government of Pakistan has strictly followed a policy of non-interference in the internal affairs of Afghanistan. The events inside Afghanistan are its own affair. Thousands of Afghan refugees, who have come across the border, are only being given assistance of an humanitarian nature.

6. On being queried by Foreign Secretary whether the 35,000 Afghan nationals presently in Pakistan, were not distinct from those who traditionally moved across the border in the normal course, the Pakistani Ambassador said that Parvindas moved across the borders in different seasons but that they were different from the refugees who were presently in Pakistan. It was difficult to say exactly how many refugees were in Pakistan as it was not possible to take a census. In any case, the assistance being given to them was only humanitarian. Contrary to allegations, the Pakistani authorities were not permitting any anti-regime or counter-revolutionary activities by Afghan refugees which were directed against the Kabul leadership. Many foreign correspondents were given freedom to report news from Pakistan. Some of these correspondents met refugees who gave highly exaggerated stories of the happenings on the border. The responsibility for such dispatches, based on interviews with Afghan refugees, cannot be taken by Pakistan Government.
Nevertheless, the Government of Pakistan, as a further gesture of goodwill towards Afghanistan, has tried to dissuade journalists from reporting and covering events in Afghanistan from Pakistani territory. In this context, the Pakistani Ambassador mentioned that Rajinder Sareen, of Public Opinion Trend Analysis and News Service, is shortly visiting Pakistan. He would also be advised not to cover Afghan events while in Pakistan, but to do so by going to Kabul.

7. The Ambassador further stated that the Government of Afghanistan is aware of Pakistan's various concrete gestures to prevent the situation from deteriorating further. Despite Pakistan's gesture of goodwill, it is difficult to understand why Kabul wishes to escalate the situation and transfer the responsibility for this to Pakistan. Kabul has not restrained from launching false allegations against Pakistan. They fear that these allegations were merely a device to divert attention from the internal problem in Afghanistan. The Government of Pakistan fears, and has reasons to believe, that Afghanistan has escalated violence on the border of vitiate relations between the two countries, which may lead to hostile actions on the border. Reports have been received in Islamabad of Afghan preparation to launch attacks at different points on the Pakistan-Afghan border, possibly to coincide with the first anniversary celebrations of the Afghan regime, commencing from the 27th April. Such actions would severely strain Pakistan's policy of restraint that has so far pursued, despite Afghani provocations.

8. The Pakistani Government greatly appreciated our Foreign Minister's statement, last May, in regard to the Durand line and India's decision not to include adverse references to Pakistan in the joint Indo-Afghan communiqué which was issued following our Foreign Minister's visit to Kabul in May 1978.

9. The Pakistani Ambassador then said that Islamabad had received reports that the authorities in Kabul were exerting pressure on our Ambassador there to persuade Government of India to put military pressures along the India-Pakistan border and the line of control of Jammu and Kashmir, so that Afghanistan can undertake military activities with impunity along the Pakistan-Afghan border. The Pakistani Ambassador said that their reports would suggest that our Ambassador in Kabul had been approached in this regard by Afghan officials at various levels. Pakistani apprehensions had been further corroborated by reports received of some military movements along the line of control of Jammu and Kashmir which did not appear to be of an 'ordinary or routine' nature. Foreign Secretary said that he was not aware of any unusual military movements in Jammu and Kashmir and that military movements, if any, must be of an ordinary and routine nature. Some times movements did take place but these were related purely to internal security or reshuffle of troops on ordinary duties.
10. The Pakistani Ambassador continued the conversation by saying that Afghanistan was trying to prepare the ground for invoking the Treaty of Peace and Friendship with the Soviet Union. He referred to the troubles in Herat and said that it was conceivable that Afghanistan might try and externalize her domestic difficulties. It was all the more necessary, in this context, for the Government of India to pursue her well established policy of non-interference. Any other policy would be a set back to relations between India and Pakistan and the prospects of further normalization between the two countries. In essence, the message which he wished to convey was that New Delhi should exercise its influence, as far as possible, to ensure peace and stability in the region.

11. Foreign Secretary asked the Ambassador whether the newly appointed Pakistani Ambassador in Moscow, while giving President Zia’s letter to Mr. Kosygin, had briefed the Russians on Pakistani thinking with regard to Afghanistan. The Foreign Secretary said that a Pravda article had voice great concern at the organized support and training given to Afghan refugees in Pakistan. The article would suggest that the trouble in Afghanistan was not so much internal as external. FS then said that there was no reason to doubt that the Government of India would not continue to follow its well known policy of non-interference towards Pakistan and that problems between Pakistan and Afghanistan were to be resolved bilaterally between the two countries. India’s policies did hope for the promotion of regional stability but this was consistent with non-interference. FS then said while he had noted all that the Ambassador had said, he hoped that the position had also been suitably explained to the Soviets.

12. Foreign Secretary then enquired whether any of the Afghan refugees had returned to their country. The Ambassador replied that Pakistan would be happy if they all went back and in fact the Government of Pakistan was trying to encourage them to do so. The Durand line is not guarded throughout its length and for historical reasons the border has not, and possibly will not, be easily sealed. Foreign Secretary then referred to various reports that have been published, such as the Pravda article on assistance being given to Afghan refugees by Pakistan, USA, Iran and China. He wondered whether the situation could not be diffused? The Ambassador, while categorically denying these reports, said that messages had been sent to Moscow to explain Pakistan’s genuine interest in not allowing the situation to deteriorate or the violence to escalate in this area. Confidentially, the Ambassador mentioned that the disturbances in Herat were apparently aimed at the Soviet Union and anything between 20 and 100 Russains had been killed. Many families of the Russains had been sent back to the Soviet Union. In Afghanistan apparently there was a growing dislike for the Soviet Union. However this was an internal affair of Afghanistan.

13. The Ambassador then wished to explain why it was not easy to control the activities of the refugees as a great many did not live in camps, where the Pakistani Government could control their activities, but lived outside with friends or tribal relations. On being asked by FS whether refugees possessed modern weapons, the Ambassador replied emphatically in the negative. He did add that in the tribal belts, people traditionally carried guns on their shoulders but these were old and obsolete. In response to another query, the Ambassador replied that there was no question of the refugees possessing modern weapons such as semi-automatic guns, etc. Certain limited smuggling in weapons did take place but reports to this effect had been highly exaggerated, as a result of irresponsible reporting by journalists. Mark Tully of the BBC was such an example. He had said that prayer meetings were being held all over Pakistan, after Bhutto's execution, which could be the spark that lights the fuse...

14. In conclusion, the Pakistani Ambassador said he had been asked to enquire from Foreign Secretary if it would be possible for FS to visit Islamabad at his convenience. Alternatively, the Pakistan Foreign Secretary, Mr. Shah Nawaz, could come to Delhi. If the idea appealed to Foreign Secretary, then the Ambassador would be happy to pursue it with Islamabad. However, if FS felt that the matter should pend a while, then he could leave it for the present. There was no fixed time frame for such a visit but as there were various matters pending discussion between the two countries, a visit would be useful. Foreign Secretary replied that G.O.I. would consider the suggestion at a suitable opportunity.

Record of the Call by Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shah Nawaz on Prime Minister Morarji Desai.

Prime Ministers’s Office

Pakistan Foreign Secretary, Mr. Shah Nawaz, called on the Prime Minister of 31. 5.1979. He handed over a letter from President Zia, a copy of which has been sent to Foreign Secretary and Ambassador to Islamabad.

2. Prime Minister said that he was not happy about the mention in the letter regarding the communal situation in India. Prime Minister said that this was propaganda being carried on in Pakistan and asked how many Muslims had gone over to Pakistan or Bangladesh because of the allegations about insecurity of Muslims in India. The fact of the matter in regard to the riots at Aligarh and Jamshedpur was that the first offensive action was started by the Muslims themselves. This has not been mentioned in India as it is the policy of the Government not to aggravate any communal situation. Prime Minister expressed unhappiness that in international forums also, Pakistani representatives go on making propaganda against India on this question.

3. Pakistan Foreign Secretary said that he was sent here by the President of Pakistan to express the latter’s thanks for the attitude taken by the Prime Minister on the question of punishment to Mr. Bhutto. President attitude, Prime Minister said that he took the decision as a matter of principle even though the decision was criticized in India.

4. As regards the communal question, Mr. Shah Nawaz said that President Zia had asked him to convey how much he appreciates Prime Minister’s policy in regard to minorities. Pakistan believes that this is a matter which is entirely an internal affair of India. However it is only in the context of the desire to develop friendly relations with India that concern is expressed on these matters. Prime Minister wondered how there can be development of friendly relations if propaganda is carried on by Pakistan against India day in and day out. At Islamic meetings, Pakistani representative always talks about these matters. Mr. Shah Nawaz said that it is not that the Government feeds the public with such reports; the Government cannot prevent news of communal riots reaching the Pakistani public. Prime Minister said that he was not talking about news reaching Pakistan. What he was talking about was the line taken by the official representatives of Pakistan at international gatherings. Mr. Shah Nawaz said that they would look into what the Prime Minister has said. Prime Minister said that this is always the response whenever he has raised the matter in the past, but it seems that nothing is done and there is no improvement. Prime Minister said that he would like to know whether any Indian representative had carried out propaganda against Pakistan in any international forum and asked why Pakistan cannot reciprocate the Indian attitude.

Prime Minister recalled that the Pakistani representatives have been carrying on propaganda that India should not be helped in regard to the Rajasthan Cannal project because it is a political project and not an economic project. Prime Minister wondered why such an attitude was taken and falsehood propagated. While the attitude of the Prime Minister himself is not determined by such matters, people in this country notice these things and then raise the question as to why India should behave properly while Pakistan continues such tactics. Even on the Kashmir issue, President Zia keeps on saying things which are not calculated to improve relations. As regards Mr. Aga Shahi, he never seems to open his mouth without condemning India. There is enough material which can be produced in evidence of what the Prime Minister said but the Prime Minister did not wish to go into details. The usual cautious attitude of President Zia is thrown to the winds whenever he talks on Kashmir. It is quite possible that these utterances may please Pakistani people, but it is the duty of the leaders to try and change public opinion and not to feed it to the detriment of Indo-Pakistani relations.

6. Pakistan Foreign Secretary said that the public opinion was a legacy of the past and it is this legacy created by the predecessors of the Prime Minister which is making it difficult to improve relations. Prime Minister said that he did not want to go into the past because then he would also have to raise such matters and actions of the Pakistani leaders which had brought about this legacy. He recalled that President Zia had told him that the Pakistani rulers in the past had built up an atmosphere of hatred and that he wanted to change that. Prime Minister felt that it would be easier to talk to President Zia (who) had told him that the Pakistani rulers in the past had built up an atmosphere of hatred and that he wanted to change that. Prime Minister felt that it would be easier to talk to President Zia on these matters if only he were to accept the invitation and visit India.

7. Pakistan Ambassador said that with the help of India it might be possible for the Prime Minister and President of Pakistan to meet in Havana. Prime Minister asked the Ambassador how President Zia could go to Havana until Pakistan is admitted. As of now, Pakistan is not a member of the non-aligned movement. Mr. Shah Nawaz said that President Zia will come at the right time to India and the ground has to be properly prepared before president Zia can visit India. Prime Minister said that his regret was that there was not enough desire in Pakistan to develop closer relations with India. He did not agree with the argument about proper preparation for the visit. Prime Minister said that in India we do not need to have the ground prepared as in any case it is the political leaders who give the lead in this regard. Ambassador Bajpai intervened to say that President Zia had respect for the Prime Minister and has paid great tribute to the Prime Minister in a recent statement on the question of communal riots in India. Prime Minister said that his desire is to have complete freedom and relation with Pakistan so that trade grows freely and there are no visas and there is freedom of movement between the two countries. The main responsibility for achieving this must lie with the Government and Government leaders. Mr. Shah Nawaz said that the Prime Minister's correct policies had profound impact on the minds of the people in Pakistan. Efforts are being made by the Government over the last couple of years to improve relations and he was happy to say these efforts are bearing fruit.

8. The Pakistan Ambassador recalled Prime Minister's conversation about Mr. Agha Shahi and said that Mr. Agha Shahi had told him that he has constantly endeavoured to promote relations between India and Pakistan and he did not know why India thought differently about him. The Ambassador asked whether there are new reports which had come to the Prime Minister’s notice. Prime Minister said that there were continuous reports about what Mr. Agha Shahi had said but he would not wish to go into details.

9. As regards the allegation about feeding wrong information to Ayotullah Khomeini, only a delegation led by Mr. Agha Shahi had met him and that delegation could not have said anything of the kind alleged by us. In fact, it is Pakistan’s desire that India should succeed in achieving its objective of bringing about communal harmony. Prime Minister said that recently at the Islamic Conference in Morocco also, the Pakistani representative made these allegations against India. This was perhaps done to create embarrassment to India amongst its Arab friends. However, India is on friendly terms with the Arab countries. Even Libya which is so religious-minded, believes us when we say that we are only interested in communal harmony.

10. Prime Minister then spoke about the sensitive issue of nuclear weapons. Pakistan keeps on talking about a nuclear free zone in South Asia. It is not possible to understand how such a zone can be nuclear free if the rest of the world is not. Prime Minister made it very clear that India will not agree to any nuclear free zone in South Asia. India has already declared unilaterally its desire not to use nuclear energy for military purposes. Pakistan should also make such a declaration. Prime Minister wondered what Pakistan means by its proposal for a joint declaration. Obviously this is intended to bring about inspection of India’s nuclear facilities by Pakistan and others. It is a clever policy of the United States to try and introduce full scope safeguards for nuclear facilities in India through backdoor methods. Prime Minister made it clear that India cannot agree to such proposals particularly when other nuclear-weapon posers like the USA continue to make atomic weapons of all kinds and refuse inspection.

11. Prime Minister said that President Zia had written to him that Pakistan is not interested in making nuclear weapons. Prime Minister is prepared to believe what the Pakistan President has written on the nuclear weapons issue. Therefore, Prime Minister did not understand why extraneous issues like nuclear free zone and joint declaration are sought to be introduced.

12. On the question of Pakistan’s admission to the non-aligned movement, Prime Minister referred to the bilateral defence treaties which Pakistan has with the United States. Mr. Shah Nawaz said that, the 1959 treaty with USA was only bilateral and many countries in the non-aligned movement have such treaties. He also referred to the Indo-Soviet friendship treaty in this regard.

13. Prime Minister said that the Indo-Soviet treaty was a friendship treaty and was not even remotely a defence pact. It would be clear if they study the provisions of the treaty, which in any case was entered into by the previous Government. It is quite possible that other countries in the non-aligned movement might raise the question of Pakistan’s defence treaty with America. It would not be possible for India to join with Pakistan to defend Pakistan’s position in regard to these treaties. Pakistan did not denounce the treaty. As a matter of fact, it was Pakistan’s alliance with USA in the 1950s which has created problems between India and Pakistan. Prime Minister said that he must be truthful and wanted to point out that he could not join Pakistan in defending treaties at the non-aligned movement.

14. Mr. Shah Nawaz said that this treaty is not operative, as India knows very well. As a matter of fact, the United States, apart from helping Pakistan, is only putting pressure on Pakistan. Prime Minister said that in that case they should resist the pressure.

15. Prime Minister than spoke about the need to maintain good relations between Pakistan and Afghanistan. It was true that there was trouble in Afghanistan, but how does that concern Pakistan? Several Afghan nationals have come into Pakistan and Pakistan is helping them against the Afghan Government.

16. If Afghanistan is at fault in many ways, Pakistan is also at fault. Prime Minister said that he was expressing these views because he believes that Afghanistan, Pakistan, Iran and India must work together to achieve peace and development. Nothing should be done by any one which would aggravate the situation. Prime Minister also made it clear that Pakistan should have no apprehension that India would work against Pakistan if Afghanistan started anything against Pakistan. Prime Minister also emphasized that there was no question against Pakistan. However, he also wanted to make it clear that if Pakistan tried any tricks India was capable of finishing off Pakistan.

17. Prime Minister also spoke about Khan Abdul Gaffar Khan. Pakistan was not restoring his passport to go for medical treatment abroad. Khan Abdul Gaffar Khan had mentioned to us that in fact India is the only country which will accept him without passport.

18. Mr. Shah Nawaz said that the factual position is different from what Gaffar Khan may have told us. The fact of the matter is that both Russians and Czechs have refused to give him visas and that is why Gaffar Khan’s passport is lying with the Pakistan Embassy in Kabul. Pakistan is prepared to issue him passport any time.

19. Prime Minister said that both in Afghanistan and Iran the internal troubles would go on for quite some time because the changes in the Government have taken place as a result of violence. However, outside countries should stay away from what is happening internally. Mr. Shah Nawaz said that Pakistan was also of the same view. However, the frontier was so difficult between Pakistan and Afghanistan that they cannot prevent people crossing over and coming into Pakistan. They did not wish to push these people back to certain death. Prime Minister said that if they create trouble against the Government of another country, then they have to be pushed back. He gave the example of Tibetans in India who were given refuge here but they were not allowed to do any propaganda against China. Similarly, Prime Minister had seen to it that the Bangladesh refugees in India did not carry on any activities against the Bangladesh Government.

20. Mr. Shah Nawaz said that this was the right policy and Pakistan was also following similar policy in regard to Afghanistan. However, the number of refugees was on the increase because of the difficulty of the terrain and it is for Afghanistan to stop their nationals coming into Pakistan. Even if Pakistan deployed its entire army it would not be possible for Pakistan to push back the refugees.

21. Prime Minister then enquired about the situation in Pakistan. Mr. Shah Nawaz said that Government had decided to hold elections in November. Elections would be both general elections and local elections. November 17 was the date for holding general elections.

22. Before the meeting ended, Mr. Shah Nawaz clarified that the letter sent by President Zia was written before Prime Minister's letter was delivered by the Ambassador to President Zia.

(Prakash Shah)
Joint Secretary
4 June 1979
Record of the Call by Pakistan Ambassador Abdul Sattar on Foreign secretary Jagat Mehta.

New Delhi, June 16, 1979.

Pakistan Ambassador Sattar called on Foreign Secretary on June 16 at his request. He was accompanied by Mr. Mujahid Hussain, Minister in the Pakistan Embassy. Joint Secretary (Pak-Iraf) was also present. The meeting lasted for about 45 minutes.

2. The Ambassador conveyed the greetings and thanks of the Pakistan Foreign Secretary, Mr. Shah Nawaz, for the generous hospitality that was extended to him and his delegation during their recent visit, both in Delhi and in Bombay. The Ambassador expressed the view that the visit was an important step and was extremely useful. In retrospect they were very grateful for the fact that the time was given for Mr. Shah Nawaz before the Non-aligned Bureau meeting in Colombo and before our Prime Minister's visit to the Soviet Union. This gave Mr. Shah Nawaz a chance to speak to PM about Pakistan's case before he went to Moscow. F.S. agreed that a lot of ground had been covered at the talks. This was a new habit and a good beginning. He also told the Ambassador that he had seen Mr. Agha Shahi briefly in Colombo. The Ambassador then handed over a letter from President Zia to our P.M. which, he said, expressed thanks for the gift of fruit which was sent to the President and his family through Ambassador Bajpai. He said that he had requested this meeting with FS to ask for a briefing on the discussions held in Moscow.

3. FS told the Ambassador that as he could well imagine, at this time the USSR was greatly exercised about Afghanistan. This question figured in the talks as also in President Brezhnev's speech and finds mention in the Declaration. FS said that the Soviets had told us, probably what they told Pakistan also, about their concern at the support, interference etc., from Pakistan territory to the opponents of the regime of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan. As they had cautioned Pakistan that this support must stop, they mentioned this to us also and that they would not let down the Afghan regime.

4. Referring to the fact that there was no mention about South Asia in the Joint Declaration (this matter had been raised by Mr. Mujahid Hussain with JS (Pak-Iraf) earlier), F.S. said that our exercise had been to condense a much longer draft into a short and more concise statement. The omission of South Asia and the efforts being made to bring about better relations with neighbouring countries had been noted earlier and did not need reiteration. President Brezhnev had spoken about the subject in his banquet speech. Returning to Afghanistan, FS said that in the Soviet view developments in Pak-Afghan relations were not satisfactory. Their view was that if there was no outside interference from Pakistan territory, the situation would stabilize. Mr. Brezhnev had even recalled the situation in 1927 when they had trouble in Central Asia due to the action of neighbours. The Soviets had told us that they had talks with the Government of Pakistan on the question of Afghanistan and felt that this action from Pakistan territory must stop and repeated that they could not be indifferent to it. They also expressed the view that India should try to exercise a restraining influence. P.M. explained to the Soviets our policy towards Afghanistan. We had been quick to establish diplomatic relations with the Afghan Government and desired to continue our on-going economic relations. We treated the Pak-Afghan problem as a bilateral matter. The Joint Declaration made three points on Afghanistan:

(i) The desire to develop friendly relations with DRA;

(ii) Support the aspirations of the people of Afghanistan for the preservation of their national independence and development; and

(iii) Opposing any interference by outside forces in the internal affairs of Afghanistan.

5. FS said that after PM left Moscow for Leningrad, he had stayed on in Moscow and had official level discussions on various matters with Sudarikov, (Head, South Asia Division of the USSR Foreign Ministry). He had reiterated India's approach to this matter at greater length. He got the impression from Sudarikov that it was recognized that there was an internal problem in Afghanistan. FS said that the rulers of Afghanistan were in the best position to understand the character and personality of the Afghan people. If there was outside support, “Where would it come from?” F.S. said that he informed the Soviets briefly of what Shah Nawaz had told him, viz., that the Pakistan Government stated that they were not giving any support to anti-regime elements and the difficulty of the terrain and the border. The Afghan Government also desires to sort out relations with other countries. He had got the impression that the USSR may have in mind some sort of summit-level talks between Afghanistan and Pakistan. From our side, we were trying to maintain our traditional relations with Afghanistan, which were open and largely economic and not ideological. But we would be happy to see stability in our region.

6. Ambassador Sattar said that even in public statements and also in private meetings, as FS has just informed him, the Soviets had asked India to exercise a restraining influence. This itself may not be as significant as the previous impression which had prevailed in Pakistan and which he had an occasion to mention to FS in April. (He was referring to the Pak concern that India might step up pressure on their border). FS mentioned that the Soviets had not spelled out as to what exactly they thought India could do to exercise a restraining influence.

7. Ambassador Sattar then mentioned the Soviet suggestion, as reported, that India should play a role in helping the Afghan regime to stabilize. FS said that his answer had been that no fault could be found with our correct relations with Afghanistan, nor objection to our response in promoting economic cooperation. Ambassador Sattar then mentioned the report of Mr. Phadnis in the Hindustan Times, stating that in meetings with Mr. Brezhnev, PM had said that the Afghanistan regime should increase its own acceptability with the people and not merely blame things on Pakistan. FS said that while he could not comment on the report of Mr. Phadnis, he did feel that the Soviets also recognized that the Afghan regime had, perhaps, moved too fast. They had also, of course, said that they would not be indifferent and would stand by the Afghan Government. Such phrases were subject to different interpretations but should, of course, be carefully noted.

8. Ambassador Sattar said that there had been talks with the Russians in both Islamabad and Moscow. President Zia had recently received the Soviet Ambassador. He went over the problem with him and told him that the crux of the problem lay in Afghanistan. Pakistan had to face the consequences of it. There were 100,000 refugees from Afghanistan in Pakistan. The bulks were located in campus distant from the boundary. The Ambassador said that there was a section of refugees who had moved from the Afghan tribal belt to the Pakistan tribal belt among their own tribes. The tribal belt was long and the terrain was very difficult. There were long-standing traditions of hospitality among the tribal. Some of the refugees had brought along their families, cattle, etc. and did not want to move into camps. He said that they had told the Soviets that if they expected them to use force to compel the refugees to move from the tribal belt to the camps, this was beyond the capacity of the Pakistan Government and would involve serious difficulties. The Ambassador stressed that they were trying to explain this candidly to the Soviets. They were told by the Soviet Ambassador that the Pravda article of May 23 was based on solid and irrefutable evidence. Following the article Agha Shahi had ordered a thorough check to be made into each allegation. In the article it had been alleged that Pakistan was training commandos and that there were training camps in Peshawar and Naushera. A thorough check had been made and it was found that there was absolutely no basis for this. The Afghan Government had also recently charged that the frontier militia of Pakistan was involved in clashes inside Afghanistan. Ambassador Sattar said that this militia was very lightly armed and is a law and order force in this tribal area. In fact, this force was a method of giving subvention and employment to the tribesmen. It was a disciplined force under the control of the Pakistan army. In any case there were no incursions across the international boundary. Since the Soviets did not appear to accept the Pakistani explanation, President Zia had suggested to the Soviet Ambassador that he should visit the area personally but had not responded. The President had also suggested the appointment of a Pak-Afghan group which could give a joint report after visiting the areas. He said that to this also there had been no response yet from the Soviets. Pakistan was also willing to have a high-level meeting with Afghanistan. There had been talks between the two sides and President Zia had visited Kabul last year. There had also been exchange of ministerial visits. Pakistan was willing to discuss the matter with the Afghans at any time.

9. FS said that Sudarikov had been aware of the Pakistan suggestions to send someone to the area.

10. Ambassador Sattar said that they really did not know how to convince the Soviets. Kosygin is reported to have told the Indian correspondents that after a revolution there was always a struggle between the progressive forces and the forces of regression. He said that such a process was happening in Afghanistan and, therefore, to imply Pakistani responsibility seemed to be a contradiction in terms.

11. FS expressed the view that even if the Soviets acknowledge that there is an internal problem also in Afghanistan, they have the suspicion that it is the encouragement and support from Pakistan territory which, according to them, if not is responsible, adds to the problem. Whether, in their view, this is the primary reason or a marginal reason one cannot say, but they keep on talking about this. Occasionally they mention Iran also but mostly it is Pakistan. FS said that as far as India was concerned, we had explained our position to the Soviets in terms which were not contradictory to what we had told Pakistan. Broadly, we have always said that this problem was bilateral but it did have an effect on the stability of the region and this stability is a policy goal with us. The Ambassador stated that they also shared this goal. Pakistan had hoped that, particularly after the recent moves by Pakistan (withdrawal from CENTO, application to join the Non-aligned Movement etc.) a foundation could be laid for strengthening relations between Pakistan and the Soviets. But this new complication had arisen which they could not control. He said that for the first time in 32 years of relations with Afghanistan there was a continuing influx of refugees into Pakistan from that country. Pakistan wished that the Afghan Government would stop the exodus and attract the refugees back. However, only they could take the necessary decisions.

12. Ambassador Sattar informed FS that, according to Radio Pakistan, the statement of our Prime Minister on this matter, as reported, had been commented on favourably in Pakistan. It had contributed to the consolidation of the trend for reduction of suspicion and the creation of greater mutual confidence. PM’s press comments given for the record (not the report of Mr. Phadnis) were seen as articulating an appreciation of a complicated and difficult situation and different from the partisan approach of the Soviets. This difference in approach had made a profound impact. FS said that he was glad to note this.

13. The conversation then turned to the recent non-aligned Bureau meeting in Colombo. FS mentioned that Kampuchea and Egypt had been difficult problems. The Non-aligned Conference was not a place where national policies got changed. The acid test was that if the cohesion of the movement was to be maintained, then it should not be loaded beyond what it could bear. The international problems of common concern, of course, merited our attention, but by bringing up intra-regional problems into open discussion, the atmosphere was vitiated. FS said that the Ambassador might have seen our Foreign Minister’s statement in the plenary in which this was reiterated. In Havana there would be plenty of problems to cope with. FS said that we have supported the basic elements of the Arab position on the question of the peace agreement, and that position seemed to have broader support at the Conference. But there had been opposition on the question of suspending Egypt from the movement, particularly among the Africans. Ambassador Sattar expressed the opinion that, perhaps, since the OAU summit meeting was to take place before Havana the position might be clarified. He agreed that when bilateral matters were raised it became a nuisance for other countries who had to take positions. He said that he did not know if Pakistan made a statement on this subject at Fez but in any case Egypt did not attend to contest.

14. FS then mentioned the fact that the Islamic Conference had observer status in the Non-aligned Movement but the problem was to define exactly its link or role in the Non-aligned Movement. We must not be misunderstood. We supported the PLO but consistent with our Constitutional philosophy we feel that religious organization had a separate role to an international body like Non-alignment. Ambassador Sattar interjected to say that the visit by our FM to different Arab countries just before the Colombo Bureau Meeting must have helped to remove any misunderstandings. FS said that we were trying our best to improve our relations with the Arab world as with Pakistan. We respected the Islamic faith. But when there had been some communal incidents here and these attracted public attention in such international fora as the Islamic Conference, that certainly provoked reactions in our free press and Parliament. There was always a danger that this sort of thing could cause a setback to the climate of relations, be it with Pakistan, Arab countries or other Islamic countries. No one condoned such incidents but this was used by others to create complications. There had been a suggestion of an institutional link between the Islamic Conference and the Non-aligned Movement. However, the rationales of the two were different. There were a lot of reservations about this at Colombo.
15. Before concluding, the Ambassador asked to be forgiven if he presented a personal thought on this matter. He said that we were all very jealous about our internal affairs, particularly between Pakistan and India because of the long history and great sensitivity. We had to strive hard not to step on each others toes. But quite apart from India and Pakistan, when humanitarian situations arose he wondered if it was necessary to be overly sensitive. He recalled that in 1977 he had a talk with Mr. Rajeshwar Dayal at the Human Rights Commission in Vienna where the latter had asked him about the Ahmadiya minority of Pakistan. He thought that this was a perfectly legitimate concern in that forum. The Ambassador thought that the expression of an international interest in a humanitarian matter should, in fact, strengthen the hands of governments. FS said that he took the Ambassador’s point but when governments get involved there has to be a shrewd judgment that the expression of thought did not become politically counter-productive.

Letter from Ambassador K. S. Bajpai to Foreign Secretary Jagat Mehta.
Islamabad, August 2, 1979.

Ambassador of India
Islamabad

My dear Foreign Secretary,

This is in continuation of my telegram No.169 dated July 31, 1979, regarding the Pakistan Foreign Office’s interest in comparing notes with us in preparation for the Non-Aligned Havana Summit.

2. As reported in my letter No. ISL/AMB/456-A/79 dated July 27, 1979, the Pakistanis are very keen to have an assessment of the attitudes of our new Government towards Pakistan. In sum, over the last two years they had come to the conclusion that their eastern front would not present any problems to them in the foreseeable future and they are extremely anxious to reassure themselves that this will continue to be so. General Zia made it a point to speak to me at the Chinese Army Day Reception last evening on precisely this point: it was to the effect that while the change of Government was entirely an internal matter for us, the process was impressive, he had developed great respect for our previous Prime Minister and had telephoned him to wish him well after he had resigned, but he was sure our new Prime Minister* would continue the policy of good-neighbourliness and he had also telephoned him to convey him regards and good wishes. His telephoning in addition to sending a message is a reflection of his keenness to keep up an easy atmosphere on his Eastern Front.

3. From various officials who have talked to me off the record, it is clear that the authorities here are eagerly watching out for signals of what policy they should expect from us. I have, of course, been emphasizing the points made in your circular telegram No. 24361 dated July 29, and these are generally appreciated. However, there is a feeling that Indo-Pakistan relations have always been a special feature in the foreign policies of both countries, and that they are more susceptible to changes at least of emphasis, with changes of regime. I have an impression that this approach for consultations in preparation for Havana is not unconnected with the desire to find out how we are going to deal with Pakistan in the future – i.e. the extent to which we respond will be interpreted as indicating the extent to which a continuity of approach in the broader sense can be expected. It is even possible that, if they get enough encouragement, the Pakistan Foreign Office might like to use this idea of consultation on the Non-Aligned Summit as a cover for sending an envoy to Delhi to make a more general assessment of our attitudes in much the same way as the then Additional Foreign Secretary, Shah Nawaz, came to us in April 1977. But for the fact that he has just been to Delhi already, Shah Nawaz might very well have undertaken this mission himself. Our friends here always continue to be wary of appearing to their own hard liners to be taking too many friendly initiatives towards us and they are, therefore, unlikely to broach the suggestion of any visit on their own, but they seem to be fishing for possibilities. I cannot be sure that they would actually come, and since you will, in any case, all be meeting each other at various levels in Havana, they might be left to take their soundings on bilateral relations with us there. But would Government be interested in making a special gesture by responding to this request for exchanging ideas in advance of Havana to invite Pakistan to send Saqib or some other senior official to Delhi for this purpose? It would mean acceptance of the Pakistani claim that their admission is now a settled fact, but even the Afghans here tell me that they are reconciled to that, so that by itself is not too important a consideration. The real question is how far we would like to go to show friendship at this stage. You might like to consider the possibility and let me have Government's views.

With best respects and regards,

Yours sincerely,

( K.S. Bajpai )

SAVINGRAM

From :  Indembassy Islamabad
To :  Foreign New Delhi
No. 176-SAV August 12, 1979.

Foreign Secretary from Ambassador

Called on SHAH NAWAZ this morning pursuant to his having expressed wish at casual encounter few days ago to have a talk with me. It turned out his interest was in assessing likely course of political events in India and new Government's attitude. I said SATTAR must already have briefed him fully, that while all sorts of guessing games were going on about developments after Parliament reconvenes, his Government would be well advised to note that our new Government has taken firm grip of affairs and to deal with it as durable and decisive administration which in foreign policy would be guided by the consensus that had developed over several years. I reemphasized the commitment to work with neighbours for ever better relations and all the points already put across in terms of your telegram No. 24361 of 29th July.

2. On my side I draw attention to following two points: (a) AGHA SHAHI had spoken in UN Committee about our communal situation with his customary skill but criticisms by a Pakistani on such a sensitive issue were bound to affect climate of bilateral relations, as the projection of SHAHI's speech in Pakistani media all too unhappily showed. General ZIA himself had paid tribute to our previous Prime Minister’s efforts to help minorities and it was well known that this one of highest priorities of our new Government – indeed it was one of the major factors leading to division of former Janata Party. It was most unfortunate that Pakistan’s Foreign Affairs Adviser should take up the question at this time. A defensive SHAH NAWAZ said these things were not coordinated, it was only coincidence and SHAHI had only said minorities could not feel confident of securing rights if groups wedded to ideas of religious superiority exercised Government power. I said I would not like to go into situation in Pakistan but this SHAHI observation applied to virtually all Pakistani Political Parties, some lately in Government; to reciprocate SHAHI’s friendly advice, our Government felt it best Pakistan did not make unnecessary references to our communal problems lest this provoke questions about plight of minorities in Pakistan and thus spoil atmosphere.

(b) Spate of dispatches and articles in Pakistan Press in last few days (as separately telexed) dealing with U.S. Congressman ZABLOSKI’S letter to VANCE had played up Pakistan's security needs and grievances on nuclear issue. These were bilateral matters between Pakistan and USA but it was regrettable that we were being unnecessarily dragged in, both as a potential danger to Pakistan because of our alleged instability and as a greater offender on nuclear matters. Such irresponsible comments were unfortunately being made by Pakistani diplomats in Washington and other Western capital also. We knew Islamabad was preparing for important U.S. Congressional Delegation but there was no justification for dragging us in ways which could make for difficulties in our relations with the U.S.A. Pakistan well knew problem we were having with Washington in nuclear fuel supplies for Tarapur: we had never done anything to embarrass Pakistan’s negotiations with USA or France (though we had our own anxieties about Pakistan’s programme) and found it incompatible with Pakistan’s declared policy of normalization with us for her to misrepresent India as violating American laws on the subject. As for our being a threat to Pakistan, history of relations in last several years spoke for itself, I had already conveyed our new Government’s commitment to policy of seeking cooperation of neighbours, specially Pakistan, for improving relations. I was authorized formally to assure his Government on this, and all the propaganda about us was not only wholly unjustified, it could unnecessarily come in way of better relations. SHAH NAWAZ expressed gratification at reiteration of our approach to Pakistan, professed to want to work in same way and rather lamely suggested dismissal of what their diplomats might be saying as merely the sort of concerned speculation inevitably when Governments of important countries change.
We need not make too much of these two matters, but with our friends here it is always advisable to register our reproaches as otherwise they tend to take advantage of our tolerance. I suggest some views be conveyed to SATTAR in Delhi.

3. Turning to subjects of common interest, I asked about Afghanistan and RCD.

(a) SHAH NAWAZ confirmed dates for SHAHI’s visit to Kabul had now been worked out (August 19) but was extremely sceptical of outcome. He complained of new points of friction, notably charges of Pakistan complicity in Bala Hissar incidents and “kidnapping” of Pakistan Embassy Clerk now being paraded as opting to live in Afghanistan. His assessment was that doubtful loyalty of army was adding to Khalq regime’s instability, it was difficult to explain to their own people how army units could mutiny and Pakistan was being used as traditional whipping boy. In such circumstances there was little prospect of thaw (though I got impression Pakistan was keen on seeking it to try and preempt possible Afghan objections to their entry at Havana; Afghan Ambassador here assures me Kabul will not raise obstacles, he is not well informed but Russian Ambassador confirms him). Interestingly, SHAH NAWAZ opined that recent Cabinet changes in Kabul were to prevent any army coup, adding he thought possibility increasingly unlikely as Political Commissar and indoctrination systems have been very effectively developed and Government seemed to know very quickly what any unit might be thinking. Pakistan attitude remains this strange mixture of fear that comments are in charge for keeps and hope that they can be destabilized.

(b) On RCD he confirmed what I reported in telegram No. 173 dated August 6, Pakistan Government were trying to prolong matters in keeping with accepted procedures for joint agreement on termination, but he had little doubt that given attitudes it would eventually be terminated.

4. SHAH NAWAZ showed further interest in comparing notes on Non-aligned subject. Grateful, if you have considered my letter No. ISL/AMB/469/79 dated August 2. Perhaps at this stage it is best simply to talk to SATTAR in Delhi. SHAH NAWAZ asserted ZIA would “definitely” attend Havana (there has been much speculation here that he wouldn’t) and was eager to meet our Prime Minister there, as SHAHI (due back here today) also would be to meet Foreign Minister.

(巴基斯坦与印度事务司)

2. 阿卜杜勒·萨塔尔大使提到印度总理查朗·辛格在独立日的讲话，他希望巴基斯坦的反应能够有节制。J.S(Pak-Iraf)表示，他看过两篇报道（其中一篇刊登在《纳瓦伊·瓦克特》上），这些报道对讲话表示批评，但指出讲话也是为国内听众准备的。阿卜杜勒·萨塔尔大使希望双方都能保持改善印巴关系的势头。

3. 阿卜杜勒·萨塔尔大使提到有关巴基斯坦核计划的报道，他遗憾西方媒体夸大了巴基斯坦的核意图。他在今年7月访巴基斯坦期间，已经得到了充分的说明。巴基斯坦外交部发现这些报道是美国的犹太人团体一手策划的，他们不仅担心巴基斯坦制造核武器，还担心核武器会落入巴解组织之手。他希望巴基斯坦总统和前总理之间的对话能够继续并保持。
4. Ambassador Sattar then dwelt on Agha Shahi’s statement in the UN Human Rights Commission against racial discrimination. He mentioned that he himself had represented Pakistan in the Commission two years ago and some delegates had expressed extraordinary and almost hostile curiosity about the status and problems of minorities in Pakistan and Mr. Rajeshwar Dayal, the Indian delegate was also present. At that time no special note was taken of this attitude on the part of certain delegates, but this time the matter has been brought out into the open and it is in the press. Ambassador Bajpai has already discussed this matter with the Pak Foreign Secretary and Ambassador Sattar hoped that the explanation given to him satisfied F.S. The Human Rights Commission was a forum for objective discussion on human rights questions such as the status of minorities etc. No resolution was to be adopted nor was any follow up action to be taken and, therefore, a statement made by the Pakistani delegate as a member of this commission need not have been blown out of proportions and taken very seriously.

5. FS thanked Ambassador for his explanation and agreed with him that credit for bringing about an improvement in Indo-Pak relations was naturally an effort on both sides. There had been a growing recognition that promotion of good relations between India and Pakistan was in the mutual interest of both countries. The improvement in our relations was beyond the expectations of outside powers. They have generally welcomed the comparatively friction free climate in this region. FS recalled his personal experience of this process of improvement of Indo-Pak relations in the last 3 years. Given the historical background of these relations, it required sensitive antennae, extreme caution and restraint in handling such negotiations. The old habit had been to score a point against the other. If the process of improvement required restraint and letting such temptation to countenance the other, where no serious immediate interests are involved, we have to let it pass. Without such sensitivity and restraint the improvement in the climate of Indo-Pak relations would receive a gratuitous set back. In India there has been on the whole satisfaction, indeed at times enthusiasm, at the improvement of Indo-Pak relations. The two countries have such a lot in common and we must recognize the long-term logic of trust and beneficial cooperation. This approach characterized Mr. Vajpayee’s visit to Pakistan, Mr. Agha Shahi’s visit to India and the useful dialogues at various levels between the two countries. There was need for a careful husbanding of relations.

6. The basic message of the new government has been that there will be continuity in our foreign policy. Our endeavours to foster ties of friendship with our neighbours will continue. Our approach has the benign support of the international community. Even if there are some countries that do not favour an improvement of relations, it is certainly in the interests of India and Pakistan themselves to continue with the policy of normalization or relations.

7. So many events have taken place in these seven years since 1971-72. Many of them could have constituted a set back but both India and Pakistan did not allow that to happen. In fact, we recognize that whether it is Pakistan or any other neighbour, there is a need for sensitivity to the other country’s feelings, public reactions and policies. In this context, even normal reactions become a point of political friction. How much trouble can be taken to score a point becomes more important than can be emphasized. India and Pakistan have similarity of interests in economic matters in the international fora and they can cooperate to advantage. They both belong to the group of 77. Even while there is an element of competition, as exporters we have a common economic interest. Our situations are so similar and our approach on world economic problems is akin to each other. The logic of cooperation and mutual understanding is inescapable.

INCOMPLETE

0939. Briefing by Foreign Secretary on the meeting between External Affairs Minister Shyamnandan Mishra and Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq.

Following is gist of briefing given to press by Foreign Secretary on Foreign Minister’s meeting with President Zia:

President Zia-ul-Haq of Pakistan received Foreign Minister today at his Villa in Havana. In a friendly conversation in Urdu which lasted about 40 minutes they discussed bilateral relations, development of nuclear energy by the two countries and prospects for bilateral trade. Foreign Minister briefed Zia about the proposed Indian elections and observed that the Indian and Pakistani elections might once again coincide. President Zia urged that India should not be deceived by reports in the U.S. press about Pakistan seeking to manufacture an Islamic bomb. Referring to his letter to Prime Minister Charan Singh Zia said that he had reaffirmed that Pakistan’s nuclear programme was entirely for peaceful purposes. His unilateral declaration that Pakistan would not manufacture nuclear weapons was on the advice of Prime Minister Desai who suggested that just as India declared its renunciation of nuclear weapons, Pakistan should also make its intentions clear. Prime Minister Desai had said that such declarations would amount to same as joint declaration. He said that Pakistan neither had the intention nor the resources to develop a nuclear device. He said that being a soldier he loved peace more than anyone else and did not think that force should be used. On trade President Zia said that it was India’s turn to send a trade delegation to Pakistan to discuss improvement of bilateral trade and it was in the interest of two countries that trade should be developed at the earliest. When it was pointed out to him that what India sought was non-discriminatory trade relationship, President Zia said that no discriminatory measures would be taken against India. He hoped that it would be possible for India to send a trade delegation as soon as possible.

Foreign Minister clarified that what Prime Minister said at the Red Fort was that India might reconsider its nuclear policy if Pakistan manufactured nuclear weapons. If Pakistan did not go in for nuclear weapons, there was no need for India to review its policy*. He said that while there were many reports about Pakistan’s nuclear intentions all over the world there was no such report about India and this should be adequate assurance to Pakistan that India's intentions are entirely peaceful. Foreign Minister promised to look into the question of trade and agreed with President Zia that it was imperative to improve trade relations in the interests of the two countries.

IMMEDIATE

Foreign Secretary from Ambassador.

Called on SHAH NAWAZ yesterday pursuant to desire he had expressed to see me and also to register points discussed with you in Delhi. Meeting interesting mainly for comments on Afghanistan which I have telegraphed separately, but he started by giving me opportunity to express our views on ZIA’s Havana references to Kashmir, which were coincidentally reiterated by him in Morning’s headlines. SHAH NAWAZ said he had originally wanted to review developments in India, both sides had done much to improve relations to their present satisfactory condition and he hoped nothing would be said or done that would cause any set-backs to these relations. I said those were our very views, our Government’s commitment to continuity of essentials of our foreign policy, especially good-neighbourliness had already been publicly declared and officially conveyed, we had also been encouraged by what ZIA had said in his meeting in Havana with Foreign Minister, who had been impressed by his sincerity and common-sense approach. (SHAH NAWAZ interrupted to say it had worked both ways, ZIA having been most favourably impressed by our Foreign Minister). Unfortunately there seemed to be considerable difference between intention and practice:

(1) Kashmir reference regrettable for 3 reasons; forum in which it was made (in which SHAH NAWAZ had assured us it would not, and ZIA himself acknowledged it should not be raised); effect of such retrogressive references on bilateral relations; and repercussions in India, where we were about to have elections and where statements by Pakistan leaders were bound to cause counter-statements by our leaders. SHAH NAWAZ sought our tolerance for compulsion of domestic situation but agreed that all three points had validity and offered to arrange for me to convey them to ZIA personally. I said we did not want to make this into a big issue, you had planned to speak to SATTAR but as he was here on leave I simply giving Delhi views, which were likely to be strengthened by ZIA’s call yesterday for “reviving” Kashmir issue. SHAH NAWAZ professed not to have seen this but said it would be all the better if I spoke to President. I said I might have letter for him later this month and would defer pleasure till then. Discussion on this point concluded with SHAH NAWAZ hoping Indo-Pakistan relations would not be exploited in elections in either country; sharing his hope, I pointed out that the fact that this had already been done on the Pakistan side should be treated as preempting any objections he may feel obliged to raise if people on our side followed suit.

(2) Trade, Technical level exploration of possibilities of signing a new agreement had been held without any real movement on Pakistani side to reduce, much less to end, discrimination against us. This too was not in tune with ZIA’s own attitudes as originally conveyed when our Commerce Secretary called on him last year and as reiterated by him to F.M. In Havana, SHAH NAWAZ on this too pleaded for tolerance of domestic compulsions. I said we had offered full self restraint in controlling exports unwelcome to Pakistan, real proof of improving relations would be to give us a chance to prove we wished no harm to economy but only mutual benefit and development of vested interest in good relations, and we would now leave it to Pakistan to pick up threads when they felt ready (I later had chance encounter with Pakistan Commerce Secretary who expressed wish to review position with me shortly).

(3) On various lesser matters there had lately been more negativism on Pakistan’s side than we had been experiencing previously. Routine discussions between authorities of two Governments dealing with P&T, Civil Aviation, Railways, due under existing agreements had been cancelled or not fixed. Our staff was being put to great difficulty by rejection of our requests for houses here (prior clearance is required and has been denied in increasing numbers, nineteen so far; there has also been oppressive increase in surveillance). We would not like to read too much into this; basically in present circumstances best policy was to live patiently with existing level of relations, but experience showed that unless both Governments kept up positive efforts towards forward movement there was tendency here to slide backwards. We intended no complaints but since he wanted review of our relations I was merely mentioning this so he might see there was no deliberate backward movement but merely coincidence. He hastened to assure me there could only be fortuitous coincidence and no change in policy of friendliness. Indeed, he hoped we could have the next round of bilateral agenda-free horizon tour with your returning his visit to Delhi soon. I said we all looked forward to that but you had a very heavy schedule and, as SHAH NAWAZ agreed, next round at Foreign Secretaries’ level might best be fixed after both countries had completed their respective electoral processes. Cordial discussions then went on to various multilateral matters.

2. We happened to meet socially last evening when SHAH NAWAZ took me aside to say he had spoken to ZIA, it would be useful if I could convey all the same points to him personally and he would be happy to receive me. I said there was no particular urgency and we might leave it till he was freer and I might have something more to convey. (ZIA is presently flying around the country as though he were running for office. Local bodies poll shows PPP exercising strong appeal, which is what worried regime, though motions towards general elections are still being taken). SHAH NAWAZ mentioned a few other points on which I am writing to you. If PM’s letter has been finalized, I can deliver it to ZIA and discuss these other aspects without touching on the main subject of the exchange of letters.

SECRET/PERSONAL

Letter from Ambassador K. S. Bajpai to Foreign Secretary Jagat Mehta.

Islamabad, September 26, 1979.

Ambassador of India
Islamabad

My dear Foreign Secretary,

Please refer to my Savingram No. 198-SAV dated 26.9.79, on my meeting with Shah Nawaz.

2. Apart from our free and friendly talk in his office, we had a more private discussion when he took me aside at the Saudi National Day reception that evening reiterating his Government’s desire to pursue amity with us. He said they greatly hoped a strong Government would emerge from our elections. I asked what the programme here was, which he misunderstood as applying to himself, confiding that after eight years he wanted to get away and hoped to do so but nothing was final. Proving to respect this confidence I clarified my query had referred to the electoral arrangements here. He said “let us see what happens tomorrow” and then hastened to add “the President really wants to have general elections but after all they are not an end in themselves. Lots of people are saying we had one general election and ended up with the division of the country; if we have another we may end up with further division.” We agreed that it was important that in neither country should electoral compulsions be allowed to cause complications for Indo-Pakistan relations. In this context I stressed the need to avoid references to individuals. Zia’s September 23rd Gujranwala statement had repeated the claim that he had succeeded in reopening the Kashmir issue with our previous Foreign Minister who had to concede the need to do so after first refusing to. I said if our previous Foreign Minister felt obliged to rebut this, which was in any case not true (Shah Nawaz nodded agreement when I recalled the correct position regarding that visit), an unnecessary controversy could ensue. Shah Nawaz admitted he had not considered that aspect but agreed that both sides should be extra careful to avoid such complications like this. It was at this point that he said he had already spoken to the General and reiterated I should see him. I repeated there was no urgency and we could look into the possibility later.

3. Shah Nawaz then spoke further about Afghan affairs, making more categorical his view that the Russians were behind it. I simply said this was not our impression and it was best to get more authentic facts. He then went into a long account of Afghan history saying its people had no sense of being a nation and anyone who tried to fence it into a mould of modern nationhood always came a cropper. The way he spoke gave rise to a suspicion that he might be sharing a common Pakistani hope that Afghanistan might fall apart. Westerners here often speak of the possibility of a division. Incidentally, some Western diplomats here say they learn from Kabul that Tarrakki was an increasingly uncontrollable alcoholic and this had been causing problems of erratic behaviour, even at Havana. The Pakistanis do not seem to have any such impression; I wonder if we have anything to this effect in Havana.

4. Shah Nawaz then asked again about another bilateral session at Foreign Secretaries’ level. I have an impression that our friends here are wanting to discuss the nuclear issue. That is a matter we too have to devote our mind too but we have to see what happens politically here as well as wait for our elections before we can really discuss anything of consequence. I take it that is our view but I thought I should give you the full picture of Shah Nawaz’s thinking.

Yours sincerely,

( K.S. Bajpai)

0943. Statement by the Spokesperson of the Pakistan Foreign Office on relations with India.

Islamabad, January 1, 1980.

A Foreign Office Spokesman said that the Indian Ambassador was called to the Foreign Office this evening and his attention was drawn to Prime Minister Charan Singh's statement of 31st December reported by All India Radio, expressing concern over the reported U.S. decision to lift the arms embargo against Pakistan and his apprehension that the arms will be used against India.

It was pointed out to the Ambassador that far from desiring conflict or confrontation, Pakistan had been consistently seeking improved relations with India and other neighbouring countries and remained firmly committed to this policy, it was, therefore, a matter of deep regret that the Government of India continued to cast doubts on Pakistan's peaceful intentions and to oppose Pakistan's efforts to acquire even a minimum defensive capability. On the other hand, India itself was embarked upon a major programme of modernization of its armed forces and was engaged in acquiring the most sophisticated weapon systems from various sources. In his latest statement, Prime Minister Charan Singh himself had favoured strengthening of India's defence forces in a "big way" and said that the prosperity of a developing country was linked with a secure border. It was pointed out to the Ambassador, that this consideration was equally valid in Pakistan's case.

The Ambassador was reminded of Pakistan's long standing offer to enter into negotiations with India for a mutual balanced reduction of forces.

The Ambassador was reassured that Pakistan would continue its efforts to build better relations with India and other neighbouring countries on the basis of the principles of sovereign equality, non interference in each other's internal affairs and peaceful settlement of differences. The hope was expressed that India would fully reciprocate Pakistan's sincere desire for good neighbourly relations and regional harmony and eschew negativism in its attitude towards Pakistan.

Record of the meeting between Pakistan Ambassador Abdul Sattar and Foreign Secretary.

New Delhi, January 7, 1980.

Ministry of External Affairs
(Pak-Iraf Division)

The Pakistan Ambassador, Mr Abdul Sattar called on Foreign Secretary on 7th January 1980 at 5.30 p.m.

2. Ambassador Sattar began by thanking the Foreign Secretary for receiving him and said that he wanted to have a further dialogue on the matters discussed at an earlier meeting with FS. He said that he had spoken to Islamabad after his telephonic conversation with FS but he had not received a specific reply, possibly because the Pakistan Government was at present engaged in an intensive examination of developments in Afghanistan and the implications thereof. In addition, the visit of Lord Carrington was also engaging the attention of Pakistan Government. On 7th morning Ambassador Bajpai met Pakistan Foreign Secretary, Mr. Shah Nawaz and the telegram about the call had as yet not been received by Ambassador Sattar. However, he had sufficient information from Islamabad to talk to FS about some matter that had been discussed in their earlier meeting.

3. The first point he sought to make was about the sequence of events that precipitated the induction of Soviet troops into Afghanistan. He said that President Zia had asked the Soviet Ambassador in Pakistan on 28th night the specific question that at whose invitation had the Soviet troops been sent to Afghanistan. The Soviet Ambassador had answered that it was at the invitation of Mr. Babrak Karmal that Soviet troops had been sent. FS said that this information was very interesting since the Soviet Ambassador here had mentioned that the Soviet troops had been sent at the invitation of the Afghan leadership.

4. Ambassador Sattar then dwelt on the reasons for the intervention. The Pakistani perception was that the Soviets had not intervened earlier to crush the insurgency because they had expected that the Afghan army would be in a better position in winter to achieve successes against the rebels. Though the Afghan army had met with some successes in October, the situation deteriorated rapidly and from early November to December there were substantial defections to the rebel side from within the Afghan army. Simultaneously, the strength of the insurgency in different parts of Afghanistan especially in the north-west provinces (and not only in those areas bordering Pakistan) increased and this created an apprehension in Kabul that if the Afghan army were to disintegrate, the insurgents would take over. There was, in Pakistan’s view, a rift developing within the Peoples Democratic Party of Afghanistan and this rift was not healing in spite of best attempts by the Soviets. FS asked Ambassador Sattar what he meant by the north-west provinces. Ambassador replied that he was referring to the provinces adjoining the USSR border.

5. Ambassador Sattar then said that Soviet Union had in recent statements accused Pakistan of not only allowing insurgents to use its territory for anti-Afghan activities but also of allowing US and Chinese aid to insurgents in their fight against the Afghan regime. In the past the Soviet press had made such accusations but the emphasis had tended to disappear especially as their was increasing awareness in Moscow that the insurgency problem was not the creation of Pakistan and that Pakistan was neither the main cause nor even one of the causes of the insurgency problem. But now the Soviets were constantly highlighting Pakistan’s role in Afghanistan’s developments and had made these accusations against Pakistan at the United Nations Security Council. In fact, the Indian press and Amrita Bazaar Patrika in particular, had reproduced the Pravda article alleging that “the bulk of weapons being used by mercenaries were in Pakistan’s territory”. It appeared to the Government of Pakistan that it was an ex-post facto justification for developments in Afghanistan which were essentially triggered off by internal factors.

6. Ambassador Sattar then spoke about resumption of arms supplies to Pakistan since this subject had also been discussed by him earlier with FS. He assured FS that the American announcement had been made without consultation with Islamabad. There was disappointment in Islamabad that India had reacted the way it did to this report without checking its veracity and without taking into consideration the “miniscule quantum” of the arms aid proffered by the US. Even if the report was correct, given India’s desire for normalization and improvement of her relations with Pakistan and given India’s own satisfactory position on the defence front, India need not have reacted unfavourably to the American offer. India did not take into consideration Pakistan’s defence perceptions on account of the change in the strategic environment in the region or the fact that Pakistan had no indigenous defence capability even to produce artillery items or tanks. Each country’s defence needs were based on its own perception of its security environment and though Pakistan did not aim at a defence parity with India, it did want to equip itself adequately against foreign aggression. Ambassador Sattar hoped in this context that the Pak Foreign Secretary could come to India or FS could go to Islamabad and hold early consultations on the evolving situation in the region in the light of Pakistan’s concern for its integrity and security and India’s perception of its own national interests. This dialogue would be based on common concerns and shared perceptions about the region. He wanted FS to dispel any apprehensions that FS may have, that Pakistan was preparing for any confrontation with India.

7. FS replied that Ambassador Sattar’s assessment of the situation in Afghanistan was broadly in line with our own assessment. There was, however, an additional reason that could have contributed to the course of Soviet action and that is the Iranian situation. He considered that it would be a grave matter if the USSR was to move further into Afghanistan and augment its present troop strength or if USSR were to move into Pakistan. This serious concern had prompted the Indian reaction to Soviet action in Afghanistan. India was against the induction of super power rivalry in the region and FS was gratified to find that India and Pakistan had common understanding and no difficulty on this questions.

He also expressed his gratitude for the clarification that the United States had made the announcement about the resumption of arms supplies to Pakistan without consulting Pakistan. He agreed with Ambassador Sattar that each country must judge for itself what its legitimate defence needs were but the US arms aid announcement drew Pakistan into a confrontationist situation which was none of its making. FS felt that both India and Pakistan could work together in diffusing the situation in Afghanistan and keep away from confrontationist situations. FS then asked Ambassador Sattar whether the Government of Pakistan had made any public statement assuring that it had no intention of helping insurgents in Afghanistan. Ambassador Sattar replied that Pakistan’s Permanent Representative to the UN, Mr. Niaz A. Naik had made a statement in the Security Council about Pakistan’s policy of scrupulous non interference and neutrality – a policy which Pakistan had followed consistently even when faced with the problem of refugees since early 1979 when the refugees from Afghanistan had started coming in great numbers.

8. FS enquired whether the Pakistanis had had any contact with the new Afghan Government. Ambassador Sattar replied that there had been no contact as yet and then enquired about India’s policy of recognition. FS said that it was India’s attitude to treat changes of government within a country as an internal matter and, therefore, we did not go through the process of recognition all over again on account of such changes. Ambassador Sattar recalled that when President Daoud was overthrown India had recognized the Taraki regime. FS clarified that this was only in response to a message from the Afghan Government. Ambassador Sattar recalled that Pakistan was one of the earliest Islamic countries to recognize the Taraki regime and Pakistan has indeed sought to treat all changes in governments as an internal matter of Afghanistan. But now a different situation had been created in Afghanistan because of the induction of foreign forces. Pakistan had hoped that the Government in Afghanistan would be based on the wishes of the Afghan people but that was not to be.

9. Pak Ambassador then asked FS what the provocation could have been for the induction of Soviet troops into Afghanistan at this time. If it was the concern about the situation in Iran and the USSR wanted to protect its interests there, it could have tackled the Iranian situation through its forces along its border with Iran. Why was it necessary for the USSR to move into Afghanistan to deal with a possible US threat to its interests in Iran? There must have, therefore, been some other consideration prompting Soviet moves. FS replied that most of the USSR’s troop concentration has been in the northwest and the USSR has not been intending to pose a threat to Pakistan and this had been reiterated by Voronstsov, the Soviet Ambassador here. The primary concern of the Soviet Union was to deal with the internal situation in Afghanistan and an additional reason that could have prompted the Soviet action was USSR’s apprehension that the US was intending to carry out pre-emptive strikes on Iranian oil fields which would amongst other things affect Soviet Union’s economic interests for it bought sizable quantities of gas from Iran. Soviet action may, therefore, be seen as intended to forestall any punitive action that the US might undertake. Ambassador Sattar commented that American views had evolved over the two months spanning the Iranian crisis. In November 1979 in a display of strength and in an effort to solve the hostages, substantial naval presence of US and its allies was perceptible in the Persian Gulf region. This was in addition to the forces stationed in the Mediterranean Sea. In fact, Ambassador Sattar had heard that there was “an Armada” of about 70 to 80 US, British and French ships and aircraft carriers with about 200 aircraft, in the Gulf region around that time. But since then the US seems to have had second thoughts and its concern for the interests of its allies prevailed. Moreover, there was the USSR factor which had deterred the USA from implementing any such idea.

FS felt that USA was not really thinking so much about USSR’s reaction as about the reaction of its allies. US itself did not need Iranian oil as much as its allies. Moreover, USA had in recent times put forward a rather dangerous concept that oil is a human resource and should be freely available to all and then it had also floated another equally dangerous idea of a rapid deployment force consisting of several divisions in Europe capable of being airlifted to any point on the globe to deal with the third world countries. FS said that he could not be very definitive about the role of the Iranian crisis on Soviet action in Afghanistan and he was just postulating a theory. FS then thanked Ambassador Sattar for transmitting his message and hoped that the Pakistan Foreign Secretary would make it convenient to come to India even if he himself could not leave India at this juncture. Ambassador Sattar then recalled Ambassador Bajpai’s suggestion to Pak Foreign office that Mr. Shah Nawaz could come as a special Envoy, presuming of course the ability of the Indian Government to receive a special Envoy so soon after it takes charge. Ambassador Sattar felt that even though going by strictly protocol considerations it was FS’s turn to visit Islamabad, should not be allowed to obstruct or hinder an ongoing dialogue between the two countries. FS agreed with this and stated that he wanted to emphasize the fact that increasingly, both India and Pakistan were going to be under tremendous pressure to contend with the USSR and it was India’s considered view that we should resist these external pressures. For this, close bilateral consultations were necessary so that bilateral and regional problems could be solved by discussion among ourselves without the super powers meddling in our affairs. Ambassador Sattar replied that developments in Afghanistan had introduced an undesired complication in the mainstream of Pakistan’s foreign policy which it had been developing for the last many years. Pakistan had made a conscious effort to avoid cold war confrontation and move towards non alignment, a fact which was recognized by India recently. Even after the Afghan revolution in 1978, Pakistan continued to follow a policy of non interference and non alignment and hoped that its entry into the Non-Aligned Movement would have a positive impaction in its relations not only with other Non-Aligned countries but also with the Soviet Union but unfortunately this did not happen and the situation in Afghanistan had a spill over effect in the form of Afghan refugees pouring into Pakistan. In the past, Pakistan had repeatedly told the Afghan Governments to seal its borders with Pakistan, since Pakistan itself was in no position to do so specially in the face of Afghan obstructionism. In the past if Pakistan did set up any posts in the border areas adjoining Afghanistan, the Afghan Government would raise a bogey about Pakistan wanting to have a strangle hold on the region and thereby creating complications in Pak-Afghan relations. In spite of interference by Afghanistan in Pakistan’s tribal areas, the Pak Government had had no problems with its tribals on the Pak-Afghan border and if today Pakistan had little or no control over movements of people in its borders with Afghanistan, it was because Afghanistan had itself through out discouraged the policy of establishing military presence in the border areas. In fact, at one time the strength of the Pakistan army in the NWFP was as low as one division. FS replied that the induction of fresh arms into the region was no answer and if Pakistan wanted to move any of its divisions to its border with Afghanistan it was free to do so and the Government of India was willing to give an assurance that India would pose no military threat to Pakistan. Ambassador Sattar thanked FS for this assurance but he requested him to understand the long term defence needs of Pakistan since Pakistan had no indigenous arms manufacturing capacity. FS stated that be that as it may, the US statement, made unilaterally, did not augur well for the future of this region and gave the impression that Pakistan was being rearmed as a retaliation to the induction of Soviet troops into Afghanistan. Moreover, Pakistan could not possibly expect to use these arms against the Soviet troops in Afghanistan. Ambassador concluded by saying that the American record of arms supplies to Pakistan had not been a good one and in fact India’s persuasions in this regard had often held sway and prevented arms supplies to Pakistan and the American announcement though made at the time of the Soviet action in Afghanistan was long overdue.

We are conscious of your personal contribution towards the conclusion of the Simla Agreement and feel confident that during your new term of office normalization of relations between Pakistan and India would be further accelerated. I assure you of our full cooperation in these endeavours and of our sincere desire to carry forward the process of improvement of relations for the mutual benefit of our two countries and the promotion of peace and harmony in our troubled region.

0946. Letter from Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi to Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq.

Dear Mr. President,

Thank you for your kind message of felicitations and good wishes on my assuming the office of Prime Minister of India.

The tremendous support which the people of India have given to me and to my Party in our election reflects their desire for economic development in an atmosphere of peace and stability. This implies good relations with our neighbours.

I fully share your wish to accelerate the process of normalization between our two countries. The Simla Agreement was based on the belief that the manifold economic and social problems which beset Pakistan and India need our entire attention, and that cooperation rather than confrontation would strengthen our countries and help to keep them free from foreign influences. Hence I am glad to note in your letter your own commitment to the Simla Agreement. Your cooperation is essential to keep alive the letter and spirit of that agreement and to take positive steps for its fuller implementation, which would enable our respective peoples to derive the maximum benefit from it.
Because of the importance I attach to better understanding and more fruitful links between India and Pakistan, I should like to refer to some recent developments in our region which have far-reaching consequences for our two countries. It is of vital importance that our Governments have a clear understanding of each other's thinking. Much is being said and apparently considered, which could seriously affect our existing relations as well as the prospects of improving them in the future. I believe it is imperative for our Governments to discuss these matters before any decisions are taken which could irrevocably damage the interests of our region and, indeed, of the world as a whole. Your Government has recently renewed the already existing invitation to our Foreign Secretary to visit Pakistan. We gladly accept. However a number of high foreign dignitaries are visiting New Delhi, so he cannot leave the country before early February. If your Government finds it convenient to send a representative for talks in India before then, it would be most useful and most welcome.

Thank you for the good wishes which you have sent for the Indian people and for myself. I reciprocate these fully.

With regards,

Yours sincerely,

(Indira Gandhi)

His Excellency General M. Zia-ul-Haq,
President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan,
Islamabad.
0947. Letter from Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq to Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.

Islamabad, January 19, 1980

The Islamic Republic of Pakistan
Islamabad

19 January 1980

Her Excellency
Madam Indira Gandhi,
Prime Minister of the Republic of India,
New Delhi.

Dear Prime Minister,

I was happy to be able to receive Ambassador Bajpai at his request on January 17 when he delivered to me your letter of January 15. During the exchange of views that followed after I had read your letter, I gave expression to my immediate reactions which must have been conveyed to you already.

Your message which I greatly appreciate reflects, nevertheless, certain misapprehensions and misgivings in regard to Pakistan indicating a preoccupation with the past rather than with the new realities. In our perception these realities and the prospects for our region in the wake of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan should create points of convergence rather than divergence between our two countries. It was for this reason that we entered into consultations with the Government of India through Ambassador Bajpai without delay. I am in full agreement with you that our bilateral consultations on the vital developments in our neighbourhood should be a continuing exercise so as to enable us to explore ways and means of removing misunderstandings if any and enlarging the area of cooperation between our two countries.

It has been my constant endeavour during the past two years to promote friendly relations with India and to carry forward the process of normalization of relations in accordance with the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement for which you, Madam Prime Minister, can take credit. You might agree that these efforts which I am happy to say were reciprocated by the previous Governments in New Delhi have not been unproductive. I sincerely hope that we can by joint effort clear the ground for building a lasting relationship of trust and confidence between Pakistan and India which is so indispensable for the security of our two countries and the peace and stability of our region.

It is a matter of regret that both your Government and mine have been and are so preoccupied with important engagements of a bilateral and multilateral nature that it has not been possible to undertake bilateral consultations except through the diplomatic channel. I assure you that considerations of protocol have not been a deterring factor with us. My Adviser for Foreign Affairs and Foreign Secretary are irredeemably committed right up to the end of this month and are unable to leave Islamabad even for a day. I am glad that your Foreign Secretary will be able to visit Pakistan in the first week of February and we are looking forward to an exchange of views with him.

I would like to reiterate the assurance which may have been conveyed to you by Lord Carrington that the current exchanges of views between us and some of our friends and any decisions which may be taken will have relevance only to our security concerns arising out of the recent developments in Afghanistan and should in no way be a source of anxiety to India. We can discuss this and other matters of common interest in the forthcoming talks with your Foreign Secretary as well as in the talks at higher levels which can follow by mutual agreement.

In the meantime I would like to assure you once again of our desire to explore together with you all available ways and means of improving our relations on the basis of what you have described as a clear understanding of each other's thinking. We are fully conscious of the need for developing the best of relations with India and visualize equally clearly the imperatives of safeguarding the interests of our region and world peace.

As I told Ambassador Bajpai we are neither in competition with India nor wish to promote a state of confrontation with it. I am, however, constrained to point out that some of your recent statements in regard to the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan and the prospects of an appropriate increase in Pakistan's defence capability in that context have not been reassuring. You, Madam Prime Minister, in particular, have a unique opportunity to create a feeling of trust and confidence in Pakistan, a smaller neighbour, whose strength and stability is in the interest of India's own security.

With profound regards and best wishes,

Yours sincerely

General (M. Zia-ul-Haq)

Assessment by Indian Ambassador K. S. Bajpai of the present state of India-Pakistan Relations.

Islamabad, January 30, 1980.

Since the May 1976 Agreement restoring all the links (including diplomatic missions) severed in 1971, Indo – Pakistan relations have remained on a comparatively even keel but without much forward movement. There was more public euphoria in India regarding the potentialities for normalization than either objective reality or the strong reserve on the Pakistani side justified, but to begin with the hope of greater cooperation was encouraged by deliberate, if limited, efforts on both sides, both to avoid acrimony and to look for positive measures for increased contacts and better understandings. There has been a marked absence of friction, and even when we have disagreed, the tone of our exchanges – and, indeed, of our relationship as a whole – has been infinitely more harmonious than almost ever before.

2. Circumstances in both countries helped give a feeling of a healthier atmosphere even though problems remained. The efforts of the post- March 1977 Government of India to acquire a new image of good neighbourliness came to coincide with the fall of Mr. Bhutto, and the subsequent eagerness of General Zia to appear keen on better relations with us. Symbolic of the urges at work on both sides was the agreement on the Salal Dam: the basics of this had actually been worked out between the two previous Governments towards the end of 1976 but Mr. Bhutto was at that time going in for his elections and was worried about exposing himself to the criticism that he was going “soft” towards India; in particular, he was subject to the pressures of his own Army commanders that any concessions to India on Salal effected their tactical capabilities in the Akhnur sector. However, when the Army leaders themselves took over, they found it easier to approve the Agreement which was signed in 1978. It is arguable whether what made the agreement acceptable to Pakistan was not the assessment that it was getting a better deal than it might do by going in for the third party arbitration provided for under the Indus Waters Treaty, but certainly the negotiations over Salal, by avoiding this third party intervention, gave a boost to the prospects of improving relations purely bilaterally.

3. Just before the Salal Agreement our then Foreign Minister paid a visit to Pakistan which left an excellent impression. The period of the visit and the agreement probably represent the high watermark of optimism in regard to Indo-Pakistan relations. Delhi was certainly very clear even then about the limitations, and in the field our approach was we could live with the level of relations achieved, that it was our duty to keep pointing out possibilities of advance, however small, whenever they came to our attention, but considering the inhibitions on the Pakistani side we were content to leave the pace and scope of further cooperation to Pakistan. By and large, throughout this period, public opinion in Pakistan has been far more ready for advances in Indo-Pakistan relations than the Government has been ready to risk. Partly, it is inevitable that 30 years of negativism should leave their mark on the “Establishment” here, most of those in a position to influence decisions having thrived by showing how tough they could be in dealing with India; partly like all Governments in this country, even Bhutto and, far more, the Zia regime succumbed to the blackmail of what, for short, might be called the Nawa-i-Waqt lobby with its base in the Punjabi ruling hierarchy and strong support in the middle class elements in the principal Punjab towns. (influenced particularly by the Punjabi immigrants from India who are totally opposed to any cooperation for fear that it would eventually lead to a blurring of the divisions between the two countries, and so undermine their grip on the levers of power in Pakistan) — basically the Zia regime and its civilian and military advisers have been over-fearful of being accused of “selling out” to India. The regime was specially frightened in trying to save himself, Bhutto might also arouse his constituency to criticize the Zia regime on this score. There has also been a burning compulsion in the regime (specially in Zia himself) to demonstrate a capability for doing better than Bhutto ever did in safeguarding Pakistan’s interests and even in cutting a figure internationally.

4. The outstanding illustration of how all these fears and aims affect the conduct of policy is undoubtedly Zia’s decision not to visit India. Soon after he came to power, he went running to as many capitals as were ready to receive him, and showed real eagerness to visit Delhi, but was prevailed upon to try and get us to agree beforehand on a discussion on Kashmir. His hawks (including in this instance specially his Foreign Affairs Adviser Agha Shahi) persuaded him that unless he could come back from a Delhi visit claiming to have reopened the Kashmir question, or at least achieved a definite advance in that direction, he would be vulnerable both to public criticism and even to the intrigues of his ill-wishers within the Government.

5. The fact is that Zia’s a basic aim has been to keep India believing in his good intentions because he has been afraid we might interfere in the affairs of Pakistan at a time when the country has been under great strains and his own position susceptible to many challenges. While it may seem surprising to us in India that Pakistanis could have been afraid of our, as they put it, repeating the Bangladesh type of intervention, i.e. finding an excuse, while there was political turmoil and military ineffectiveness – of maneuvering for the further break-up of Pakistan this nightmare continues to haunt even otherwise sensible men in Pakistan and Zia has wanted to make quite sure of not giving us any excuse for turning against him and going on to any such adventure. For most of the last 3 years, the coincidence of the good neighbourly initiatives of the Government in India with the need felt by Zia to placate us has given a promising appearance to Indo-Pakistan relations. Other considerations apart, the severe limitations of that promising appearance have been evident from the basic difference in approach by the two sides: we on our’s have been interested in promoting more people–to–people contacts, whereas the Pakistanis want to limit them as much as possible.

6. Cultural and academic relations provide one example of the difference in approach. Nothing frightens the Pakistani establishment and the Nawa-i-Waqt lobby more than the thought of the Pakistani mind being exposed to the “hegemony” of our ideas and experiences. To some extent this is understandable: casting around as they are for a sense of identity, and determined to make it as different from India as they can, the last thing the Pakistanis want to be reminded of a common history and common culture etc.
To show our comprehension of their sensitivities, we have tried to encourage just one way traffic– the Pakistani artists, scholars, etc. being given opportunities to come to India without our insisting on reciprocity; but negativist elements have managed to find means to prevent even this e.g. by not giving passport endorsements for India to their people.

7. During the last 18 months or so, there has been a distinct increase in this negativism towards India, in various ways, most importantly in relation to Kashmir and in the June 1978 decision to ban Trade. Annexure A (not reproduced here) recounts the evolution of Pakistan’s efforts to supersede the Simla approach to Kashmir by reviving the UN Resolution and generally internationalizing the issue. Annexure B (not reproduced here) summarises the position regarding trade, on which Pakistan insists on excluding India for any of the over 400 items any importer can freely import from anywhere else in the world. Annexure C (not included here) lists some of the miscellaneous way in which the Pakistani authorities have prevented even minor and completely harmless steps from being taken. There remains still a considerable potential, even in terms of public opinion in Pakistan, for greater positive inputs into, as distinct from lip service to normalization with India, but those opposed to it manage to retain the ascendency.

Letter from Pakistan President General Zia-ul-Haq to Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.
Islamabad, February 17, 1980.

The Islamic Republic of Pakistan
Islamabad
17 February 1980

Her Excellency
Madam Indira Gandhi,
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi

Dear Madam Prime Minister,

I wish to thank you for your letter of February 2 which was delivered to me by your Foreign Secretary, Mr. R. D. Sathe. He has no doubt conveyed to you my immediate reactions as well as the outcome of his talks at the Foreign Office and with the Minister of Finance and Commerce. I am satisfied that these talks were held in a constructive spirit and have contributed towards a better understanding of our respective points of view. The positive trend of these talks holds the promise of substantial progress in our bilateral relations provided external developments are not allowed to impede the process.

Our position in regard to the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan is founded in principles universally accepted as the basis of international peace and security. We do not seek confrontation with any country, nor to speak of a super power. Nor can we remain a silent spectator when a neighbouring state, which was independent and non-aligned long before Pakistan and India gained freedom, is subjected to military occupation and loss of sovereignty.

The Soviet action in Afghanistan has dealt a shattering blow to those who place their faith in non-alignment as a means of safeguarding national independence and international peace. The military penetration of a country so strategically situated as Afghanistan threatens to revive cold war and to subject our region in particular to super power rivalry. For all these reasons, Pakistan joined other members of the world community, including most of the non-aligned states, in calling for the immediate, total and unconditional withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan.

Your Foreign Secretary informed us of some of the initiatives your Government is taking to secure the withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan. We wish you success but doubt if Moscow in its present mood would yield to persuasion alone. Nevertheless, we sincerely hope that the efforts being exerted by our two governments, each in its own way, would achieve the objective in view and restore the foundations of peace and stability in our region.
We cannot ignore the implications of Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan for the security of Pakistan and the region. This subject was discussed in some depth with your Foreign Secretary. Here I would like to express appreciation for your reaffirmation that in making arrangements for the security of our country, we can proceed on the basis that "India presented no problem to Pakistan". The converse is implicit in the facts of the situation. I can assure you in categorical terms that Pakistan has no intention to present a problem to India.

You, Madam Prime Minister, have said yourself that every country has the right to take necessary measures to ensure its security. Pakistan has not questioned or protested against India's programme of modernization and upgrading of its military forces and its commitment to an expenditure of billions of dollars on the purchase of sophisticated weapon systems from abroad while possessing a formidable indigenous capacity of its own for the production of arms. We have neither the resources nor the capacity to engage in an arms race with India. We are not in competition with India and do not seek conflict with it. Contrary to your information, Madam Prime Minister, we are not engaged in any "major rearmament programme". We seek an augmentation of our defence capability in accordance with our legitimate security needs. We have neither the desire nor the capacity to acquire and maintain a defence establishment which could in any way be a source of concern to India.

Madam Prime Minister, the objective factors do not for a moment justify India's frequently articulated fear of a threat to its security from Pakistan. Indeed, such apprehensions have validity only in reverse. Nevertheless, as a measure to reassure each other a proposal was discussed with your Foreign Secretary in regard to the level of forces which each country should maintain on the basis of an agreed ratio. I trust that the idea of consultations between our military experts on this matter would commend itself to you.

In these circumstances India's reflective opposition to any suggestion of acquisition of defence equipment by Pakistan embitters feelings in Pakistan and raises questions in regard to India's intentions. It is distressing to find assertions in the Indian press that there has been an adverse change in India's security environment on account of the possibility of acquisition by Pakistan of a credible defence capability in the wake of Soviet action in Afghanistan. We wonder why is it not possible for the leaders of opinion in India to accept the fact that the adverse change in the security environment of both India and Pakistan is directly and exclusively attributable to the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. I sincerely believe that India would be well advised to create a better image by demonstrating that it shares Pakistan's legitimate concerns about its security. This would necessitate a realistic reappraisal of India's traditional attitudes and the adoption of a positive approach towards Pakistan.
I must repeat that we cannot build a new relationship of mutual trust and confidence on the foundations of the bitter experiences of the past which for us include the loss of half the country. India would be committing a historic mistake if it remains chained to the deadweight of ill-founded memories which would distort its vision of the future and retard the development of friendly and harmonious relations between our two countries to which we look forward with hope.

As regards the mention of Kashmir in my statement at the Islamic Conference, I sincerely hope that India would not be over sensitive on this issue. While we are fully committed to the implementation of the Simla Agreement in letter and spirit, there is nothing in the Agreement to preclude reference to this issue in any forum. Pending a final settlement on Jammu and Kashmir the provisions of the Simla Agreement do not prejudice the recognised position of either side. References to the established positions need not, therefore, create any apprehensions in the minds of the peoples of the two countries, as both are pledged not to resort to the use or threat of force for the settlement of bilateral differences.

I look forward to the continuation of the dialogue between our two governments, confident in the belief that it will serve the best interests of the peoples of the two countries.

With profound regards

Yours sincerely

(General M. Zia-ul-Haq)
SECRET

Savingram from the Indian High Commissioner to Pakistan K. S. Bajpai to the Foreign Secretary Ram Sathe reporting on his talk with President Ziaul Huq and other senior officers of the Pakistan Foreign Office.

Islamabad, February 27, 1980.

From: Indembassy Islamabad
To: Foreign New Delhi

No. 33-Sav February 27, 1980

Foreign Secretary / JS Pak Iraf from Ambassador.

ZIA spoke to me briefly (at a small reception he had) on February 24, about wanting to continue dialogue with us following your “very encouraging” talks here, but expressed himself “concerned” by what looked to him to be our support of Soviet charges that insurgency in Afghanistan was due to activities from Pakistani side. I said the whole world had noted from the course of GROMYKO’S visit that almost for the first time in our long years on very close friendship, we had been unable to agree with USSR on a major issue, Afghanistan; for Pakistan press to misrepresent us as “colluding” with Soviets was nothing short of perverse, and if ever Zia and his officials had doubts about us despite all our assurances, there was obviously a major communication gap. He agreed, and indicated that he was hoping to send SHAHI to carry on discussions.

2. Pursuant to this meeting, I was called to the Foreign Office last evening for over an hour’s full dress session with SHAHI, SHAH NAWAZ, and whole India Division jointly. SHAHI elaborated ZIA’s remarks into long complaint on 2 points: that India was equating alleged help from Pakistan to what was actually purely spontaneous insurgency in Afghanistan with Russia’s massive intervention there and that we were keeping up a campaign against Pakistan limited attempts to improve defence capability, as though this and not the Soviet invasion of an independent, non aligned country was the cause of tension in the region. He protested in particular to some press reports of speeches by PM in U.P., which Pakistani Embassy had evidently telexed from Delhi. Our attitude greatly “perturbed” his Government who wondered why talks you had with ZIA, him and SHAH NAWAZ plus exchange of letters between ZIA, and PM, all so encouraging had had such “an ephemeral effect”. Pakistan had been looking forward to continued discussions either at Foreign Secretaries' level or even raising them to his own but there seemed to be a change in our attitude.

3. I said the only report I had seen of PM’s speeches was what appeared in Pakistan Press and he would forgive me if I preferred to wait for a more authentic version than that before answering him. I then countered that the only change since your visit had been the deliberately organized campaign in Pakistan press to misrepresent us as a threat. SHAHI and SHAHNAWAZ both tried to convince me that there was no organized press campaign. Only a natural fear generated by what was being said on our side.

4. I dismissed this as incompatible with what I knew of Pakistan and repeated that there seemed to be a calculated effort not only to prevent Pakistani people from knowing our true position but to revive their animosity and fear against us. This made us wonder what sort of relationship with India, Pakistan Government really wanted. SHAHI claimed it had been repeatedly made clear that Pakistan wanted to enlarge areas of cooperation and had made specific proposals for talks on military levels so that a new era of confidence could dawn. I reminded him you had already noted it; we had also made it clear that because of importance we attach to Pakistan this was the first country with whom we had held talks, we were engaged in similar consultation with other countries and our intention was to pick up threads with Pakistan after we had completed these other consultations.

5. There was a good deal of special pleading about impossibility of Pakistan being a danger to India, vulnerability of this country to pressures from North-West, hesitations about getting involved in Western alliances. When SHAHI argued we should not worry about what little America looked if giving (which, he claimed, Pakistan had not even decided to accept). I pointed out: (a) Pakistan was itself arguing it needed infinitely vaster quantities; and (b) why did they ask BREZENSKI to extend 1959 Defence Agreement to apply not only against Russia but against India? It was this sort of mentality that made us wonder about Pakistani intentions.

6. All this was incidental. Ostensible reason for calling me was to convey to Delhi that Pakistan sincerely wanted dialogue but our attitudes were worrying, but real aim seemed to be to press the idea of talks on arms ratio. SHAHI mentioned this at least three times, and added that it should be between the military experts. I remain of the view that we must not get involved in this but we need to give an answer terms of which I will discuss in Delhi.
Quasi-Verbatim record of the talks between President Zia-ul-Haq and Special Envoy of the Indian Prime Minister Swaran Singh.

Islamabad, April 2, 1980.

Gen Zia: I have heard and read so much about you but only found out today that you were from Jullundur.

S. Swaran Singh: People in Jullundur remember you. You studied in St. Stephen College.

Zia: Yes. I went to Government High Schools in Simla and later to St. Stephen's College.

S. Swaran Singh: There was one other school.

Zia: That was Bishop Cotton. I was amongst the proletariat. Later I went to St. Stephen.

S. Swaran Singh: When were you there?

Zia: 1940-44. How was your visit to Hasan Abdul and how were the arrangements?

S. Swaran Singh: Quite satisfactory. You Minister in charge of Religious Affairs was there. He is very much respect by the pilgrims. He gave a speech and he spoke from his heart.

Zia: He is an old politician.

S. Swaran Singh: (Laughingly). You think politicians are not good.

Amb. Bajpai: At the airport I saw Yusuf Haroon.

Zia: He met me.

S. Swaran Singh: I find people from Jullundur have earned repute here. There was Justice Sharif who later became Chief Justice.

Zia: He is dead now.

Amb. Bajpai: The Present Chief Justice is also from Jullundur.

S. Swaran Singh: There are many others – Sajaad Haider, Justice Sharif Amin-ud-din, well known criminal lawyer, his son Bashir who later became a judge.
Ghulam Ishaq: He was Chief Justice in Peshawar. Now he is in Lahore.

S. Swaran Singh: I will try to look him up.

Zia: We will trace him for you.

Amb. Sattar: Our protocol is already trying to arrange meetings with those persons whose names you had mentioned in Delhi.

S. Swaran Singh: How time passes. I came to Pakistan last in 1966.

Zia: I thought you had been here later also.

S. Swaran Singh: Many believe that I have spent half my life here.

Amb. Bajpai: I actually started my career, in real terms, with Sardar Shahib in 1962 during the negotiations with Pakistan.

S. Swaran Singh: We have been arguing a lot over the years but that does not solve any problem. His Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi and I have argued several times at different forums. I wonder at times whether it was worthwhile.

Well Sir, I have come her to your Excellency to expose myself to the different thing here, primarily with a view to strength relations in concrete terms. I have not come with any specific proposal. I feel that we owe it to the younger generations that we should leave relations between India and Pakistan in a neater form. As Defence Minister I had to go to the so-called forward areas and I used to see young boys staying there in the perpetual snows. Sometimes I wonder whether we are going to leave these boys always perched at the height or reverse that trend. There is a genuine desire in India to reverse that trend. The process started with the Simla Agreement. I do not want to go into the details but there is an uneasy impression that we would have done more. There is a psychological moment in history and we must try to take advantage of the feelings of the people. There is an urge amongst the people for peace, cooperation and understanding. That becomes the solid basis for building the structure of peace on the wishes of the people. I have a feeling that moment has arrived. When ordinary people come as yatris, whom I saw today, I found that the ease with which they move in the bazaars and the welcome which they get from the local populace are very clear signals. I saw friendship in the eyes of the people who were all round. I am sure Pakistan friends would get the same impressions on their visits to India.

When some sort of uneasiness starts there is a feeling that we must help each other and our relations should not cause worry to each other when you or we are in trouble.
I have been asked by Shrimati Indira Gahdni to tell your Excellency that the Indian people desire a relationship of stability, peace and cooperation with Pakistan. We felt a sense of disappointment when conjectures were made on the basis of some of her statements. Statements made at Divisional or District Headquarters at times get misreported because the reporters in small towns do not understand the nuances. The positive step we feel is to generate mutual trust.

If at your level and at the level of our leadership, there is a genuine and mutual desire to maintain peace, all other things will fall in proper perspective. We do understand that you have some immediate problems. We have tried dispassionately to understand your reactions. We realize you know the essence of the problems and we do not wish to do anything to add to your worries. We only wish to act in a way to assure you and your colleagues that India would do nothing to cause you any embarrassment or anxiety. One way of course is to catalogue complaints and worries and make statement which only lead to an unending process of having to explain and defend. We should rise above these peripheral issues and go to the heart of the problem. We on our side feel that Pakistan is stable and would like to assure you that it is not only good neighbourly act to see a strong Pakistan but because it is also in our interest. Therefore, when some people or newspapers say that India is interested in maintaining pressure to take advantage of Pakistan's problems it is not correct. We get worried as certainly we do not have any such intention. It is in that spirit that we want to approach our relations. We should have that confidence. If there is a grievance we should analyze it. If we can have that kind of relationship then all problems can be resolved. I am realistic enough. We have to accept some differences in approach and in the manner of articulation that our assessment of situation may on occasions have genuine differences, but these are not matters which should divides us. There may be differences in approach and manner of articulation. For example, Afghanistan – our Prime Minister has said frequently that we are totally opposed to the presence of foreign troops in any country.

Whatever may be the differences they can be solved. The parties directly involved will be able to find some kind of a solution. The problem is how should we act so that you are convinced that India is not a source of worry for Pakistan. So if there is anything that I can contribute to this process, as my friend your Finance Minister this morning told me that as I am not in the Government I should give my opinion to both sides. Often the things which divide us are magnified in the press and in other forums. For instance, I met some journalists at an informal meeting and the British correspondent appeared only interested in highlighting our differences. We are accustomed to this and know how to deal with it. We alone can find an answer to our problems. The Simla Agreement had provided for various steps for normalization of relations in economics and other fields. When we say we want to strengthen our economic relations it is not just the economic aspect that we have in mind. In the best of circumstances trade between India and Pakistan would be only a small percentage to the overall trade of either country. What we want is a friendly neighbour. Whether we need cement, cotton or any other thing we should be able to ask you for it. Similarly if you are interested in something you could approach us. What is required is the strengthening of mutual confidence.

Zia: Sardar Sahib you have undertaken a very noble mission. It will contribute to better understanding. Mr. Bajpai was present at different meetings I have had with people in the last 2 ½ years. I first met Vajpayee when he came here. Later I met Mr. Desai in Nairobi. I have also met Mr. Jagat Mehta and Mr. Sathe and other leaders. I told Mr. Vajpayee that I am a soldier and that as soldiers we are trained all our lives for that one occasion (war) which might never come and which we pray will not. I told him that I am a soldier of peace and wish to offer my hand of friendship. Then I met Mr. Desai. I greatly appreciate him and always go went to my feeling. I was impressed by the sincerity of his purpose and forthrightness. I have met a large number of world leaders but Mr. Desai has left a deep impression on my mind. It is a pity that I could not go to India in response to his invitation or that he could not come here because of various compulsions in our countries.

We never protested to Mr. Vajpayee or Mr. Desai or even to Ambassador Bajpai when you signed the Jaguar deal. In fact we never said a word. I do not know if it has been conveyed to you. All I had said to Mr. Sathe, when he was here recently, was, what was keeping India and Pakistan apart; peoples who have lived together for centuries. Though I believe in the “two nation theory”, because it was on the basis of this that Pakistan was created, yet I said that France and Germany or Germany and British, who have fought wars against each other for centuries, were today part of the same community. We created two countries from one on the basis of a political decision by an agreement. Some unpleasant things followed but the basic point is that the decision was reached by agreement. I told Mrs. Gandhi that as architect of the Simla Agreement, she should take more constructive steps. If with Mr. Desai we had moved forward one step, it was our expectation that Mrs. Gandhi should go four leaps. However, what we find now is that when the US offered us $200 million aid, which we have not even accepted, there was a hue and cry in India. Even if the aid was accepted it would have bought us only 12 aircraft or 24 helicopters or a few guns, but this has been projected as a threat to India. As regards developments in Afghanistan there are differences in our perceptions. Mrs. Gandhi’s statements before the election were different from those after she took over. She had said that Russian interference in Afghanistan cannot be accepted but after assuming Premiership there was a sea change. Whether it was the local press reports or our mis-readings, this is what reached us loud and clear. We have since exchanged some letters. The regional powers like India who know the facts should have no difficulty in understanding the situation. I am glad to know from you about your viewpoint and through you would urge Mrs. Gandhi to use her influence on the Soviet Union. I told this to the Cuban Foreign Ministers. I said that President Castro, as President of the 6th session of the non-aligned conference and as a friend of the Soviet Union, should use his influence to end the aggression on a non-aligned and Muslim country. My feeling, Sardar sahib, is that there is so much we can do. If we do not, posterity will never forgive us for failing to bring India and Pakistan together and to live like a family of nations in the region. I recall that as a youngster when my brother and I fought, it was I as the elder one who took the initiative to shake hands. I told Mr. Sathe and earlier Mr. Vajpayee that Pakistan is a comparatively small country and is not in competition with India. We would like to work shoulder to shoulder with India. Small countries have complexes. I will give you an example, the President of Djabouti which has a population of 2 ½ to 3 lakhs, was here recently and we gave him the welcome of a Head of State. The newspapers here brought out special supplements and in one of them there was a mention of different political parties and about the party to which the President belonged. When I went to call on him, he was furious and was packing to leave.

S. Swaran Singh: I can assure you we won’t do that.

Zia: I apologized and told him that we will get the newspaper reports rectified. What I was trying to tell you was the feeling of smaller countries. I also told Mr. Sathe that if you object to our acquisition of $200 million, please take into account that Pakistan is a country of 340 sq miles and has a population of 78 million and I asked him to judge and assess as to what should be Pakistan’s requirement for her defence which would not be considered a threat to India. I said I was not joking and asked him to examine this. I took out my Atlas but I cannot do that to an elderly and respected leader like you. Mr. Desai had even said that Pakistan can no longer be a threat to India. Today we are half of our previous size. Our country was dismembered in 1971. Then the Prisoners of War returned and the Simla Agreement was signed. We are willing to discuss but India cannot have a veto on our defence.

S. Swaran Singh: No one can.

Zia: But I am serious. Relations in the past have been established on trade. The British and the Moghuls came for trade. As regards our economic relations the impression should not be given that India is only looking to Pakistan as her market. I had told Mr. Vajpayee if I was in his place I will buy, if nothing else, some Pakistani brooms and dump them in the ocean just to help Pakistan export. There may be some kind of imbalance of trade though this is not an important aspect. We have so far been debating about trade in the public and private sector and there are different view points. The basic thing is confidence. The people of our two countries want to see better relations established and the quantum of misunderstanding of the past 32 years wiped away.

S. Swaran Singh: Thank you Excellency for your assuring statement. I am impressed by the candour and sincerity with which you have put forward Pakistan’s view point. I would like to say that in the set up which we have in India varying statements are made by politicians. We, in the Congress were most happy that Morarji Desai and Mr. Vajpayee carried out the policies incorporated in the Simla Agreement.

The important point is that on the basic question of our relations with Pakistan there exists a national consensus, which want stability and good relations with Pakistan. As a Government and nation we are genuinely keen to have friendly relations. However, you have mentioned certain basic matters. As far as security is concerned we are interested in seeing your security strengthened. We want to see the stability and not the disintegration of Pakistan and would be willing to make any contribution necessary to safeguard this. Take security itself. Even though I am not a soldier, I have had the privilege of dealing with security and defence. There is a basic change in the geopolitical situation. We in India were accustomed to 2 ½ fronts, which after 1971 has been reduced to two. In all our strategic thinking we have never contemplated redeployment of our troops from our Northern border, even in the 1971 conflict. Earlier you had only one front.

Zia: Now we have two.

S. Swaran Singh: It takes time to adjust to new development. We know, as a matter of fact, that in 1965 and 1971 when things were boiling you withdrew your divisions from your Western frontier. Zahar Shah told us and later Daoud told us the same thing. Now a situation has arisen where we can do for you what the Afghans then did for you. If your Eastern front is secure you will get much more security than what $200 million can buy. Like this you can get a billion dollar. Therefore I would appeal to you that this adds much to your security. You had mention your asking Mr. Sathe to examine your defence requirements. We cannot assess your security requirements. You have to examine the implications yourself. When you acquire arms or when we do so, some hardheaded generals on the other side will magnify the threat and produce a bill which is out of all proportion. If we have received Jaguars, your people in-charge of security will take that into consideration just as our will take that into consideration just as our people took your acquisition of Mirage planes 8 years ago. As far as I remember we never criticized your acquisition of the Mirage planes but we did get worried when the Americans supply arms. Their intentions are different and they usually create different kind of problems. Only an American General told me that they have so far weapons dumped of which they have no account and that they can give 200 of an item against payment for 100. It is junk for them but it becomes potent when it reaches India or Pakistan. We get worried at this business of US aid. We did not say anything when you were acquiring tanks but when super powers get involved new dimensions are introduced. Can the 200 million dollar US arms assistance be regarded as a token or is it something more? As sellers and purchasers the Americans are hard and difficult bargainers. I agree that if it did not cast a burden on us it was different when it is $200 million in the first year, it can be 300 or 400 and more later what the Americans give you we are not entitled to ask though we might come to known later on.

Agha Shahi: The Americans have told you about it.

S. Swaran Singh: Even if they say we won’t believe them. We are concerned because of the additional burden which would be imposed on us. Cannot the same strength be achieved by talking to us? You can remove your Divisions from our frontier.

Zia: It is idea but it is question of basic confidence.

S. Swaran Singh: Building confidence is what we must do.

Zia: We have known about your deal of $2.6 billion with the Soviet Union. We agree that you are larger in size and you have larger requirements but we are reminded of the connivance with the Soviet Union which halved Pakistan. That is history which is difficult to forget even though we are trying to do so but these are bitter memories. How can Pakistan go to India and say that as we have been attacked by Afghanistan, we would like to with draw Divisions from the Indian frontier. Sardar Sahib you are an honest and sincere politicians and you know the meaning of speaking the truth.

S. Swaran Singh: It is very important.

Zia: That is right.

S. Swaran Singh: We do appreciate it. I am speaking the truth to you and not diplomatically. We do realize you have a problem. You are the best judge of how to deal with it. If you do not feel confident about India and take advantage of what is offered how can India feel confident of you.

Zia: We are threatened. In the present circumstances Pakistan must be strengthened.
S. Swaran Singh: Threats change.

Zia: I must say that we have heard from authentic sources that Mr. Desai refused to put pressure on us when asked by the Soviets to help ease the difficult situation in Afghanistan. Yet we were not sure whether another attempt at dismembering Pakistan would not be made and if in view of the different statement made what would be India's reaction this time.

S. Swaran Singh: If we cannot convince you of your genuineness then there can be no meting point. Please do believe me that I do not speak out of charity or in moral terms although I believe in morality. You must believe us. It is sheer self-interest that we need a strong Pakistan. Today Afghanistan is in difficulty. How can a country like India ever wish to dismember Pakistan?

Zia: It is heartening to hear that.

S. Swaran Singh: I would like to check on what Mr. Morarji Desai did. India and the Soviet do not always agree. I do not want to bother you about what we talked to the Soviet Union but if your advisers have shown you what appeared even in the western Press on Gromyko's visit to India, you would notice that they reported that India and the Soviet Union did not agree on the Afghan situation. For instance, if we continue to believe that any strengthening of Pakistan is aimed against us, or Pakistan feels that if we will take advantage of the Afghan situation against Pakistan, then there can be no trust. This leads to over-insuring ourselves all the time and eventually canceling out each other. Our relations with China at present are reasonably good but as you rightly said, one has to prepare for a contingency though we should not over-insure. For God's sake do not take these strategic deployment of troops in your calculation today which was made at a time of confrontation between the two countries. I would like to mention one idea. Can you readily recall any other instance similar to the withdrawal of every single Indian soldier from Bangladesh as quickly as we did? You also refer to our being an elder brother. Being elder has several problems – Nazre buddoor – because there are countries which do not want India to be strong. Contrary to what Kissinger had said that it was because of American pressure that deterred us from moving into West Pakistan. There was no such pressure. You refer to collusion between the Soviet Union and us in Bangladesh. On the contrary many commentators of the time mentioned that the Soviet Minister was in India putting pressure on us not to go beyond a point. He was there but there was no pressure. In war you do not listen to friend or foe. The American Fleet had come and made noises but that is all. Some say the Russians gave a warning to them. This is also not correct. We are at a crucial stage and must think that our future strategy should be based on confidence on each other.
You wanted to know if there was some way to discuss the level of troops. We would have to make an assessment about the threat. If you look at historical events – there is only one example of such talks, the MBFR negotiation at Vienna. These have only become possible after several other agreements. They began only because Willy Brandt signed the Moscow agreement guaranteeing the post war boundaries. The recognition of GDR, Warsaw Agreement between Poland and Germany any basic agreement on quantum of troops must be preceded by detente. The SALT I & II negotiations followed thereafter but in the eight years little progress has been achieved. So if I may say, take our two areas i.e. India and Pakistan. If the feeling continues of a threat from each other than where is the common meeting point as neither will agree on the quantum of the threat faced by the other from a third side, like the threat to India from China. It is, therefore, necessary to create conditions to understand the new geopolitical situation which will enable talks about force reduction. To be able to assess realistically the threats that we face and there after to reduce our forces would be ideal. But would our Generals on either side agree to the threat faced by other? I had a difficult time controlling them when I was in the Defence Ministry.

Zia: Thank you for your words of wisdom. There are two or three points which I would like to make straight from my heart. However, deep the affection may be of a father for his son, a mother for her daughter, a husband’s for his wife, or vice-versa, words must accompany action before that action there must be a verbal expression. It is heartening that the Government of India wishes to assure us not to worry about our eastern frontier. This had been conveyed to us first by your Ambassador and then by Mr. Sathe. Mr. Desai had also mentioned this, and now, I am glad to hear it from you. It would be a discourtesy on my part not to believe you. Sardar Sahib I believe you that India wishes to assure us not to worry about the Eastern border but at the same time this love and affection must be expressed, if not publicly, at least privately. There should not be conflict. In the last 24 years at time I had mentioned Kashmir but had also said that we are not in competition. The words that I now hear, whether misreported or not, do not convey the same feeling.

Sardar Swaran Singh: Security or Kashmir?

Zia: We are not touching Kashmir, If we could be assured of India regarding our security then we would say three cheers for India?

S. Swaran Singh: It is a positive suggestion. We will have to see how to implement it.

Zia: Regarding Simla Agreement…
S. Swaran Singh: Ambassador Sattar and I were there and know every word of it.

Zia: Laymen like me have read the Simla Agreement and even I feel that it in no better nor verse than a no-war-pact. Under the circumstances there is no justification for an arms race. India’s requirements are for India to decide. Pakistan has no right to ask questions. As far as Pakistan is concerned, I can assure you what we acquire is for our minimum defence requirements and nothing more.

S. Swaran Singh: The US aid offer has not been accepted.

When I was leaving Delhi some one asked me if I would be discussing the US offer and I said that the question does not arise as it has already been refused.

Zia: I told Brezenzski that we wanted to buy security for Pakistan and not the hostility of our neighbours or the animosity of the Soviet Union.

S. Swaran Singh: There should be a relationship of trust and confidence and not of taking advantage of the difficulties other might face with regard to a third country. This is the basic of good neighbourliness. There should be no doubt in either of our minds that India would like to take advantage of your present difficulties.

Zia: There should be a firm basis for a tension free relationship.

S. Swaran Singh: I am sorry we could not find it.

Zia: There must be some expression.

S. Swaran Singh: That we can arrange but this emboldens me to say that it was Mr. Agha Shahi who mentioned that he sought clarifications from the USA on the 1959 Agreement covering India. This is against the very spirit of the Simla Agreement.

Agha Shahi: Sardar Sahib there is misunderstanding. The 1959 Agreement is against Soviet controlled aggression. I have publicly said that I did not envisage India being controlled by the Soviet Union. My clarification about Soviet controlled aggression was that suppose Afghanistan attacks us how can it be established that it is a Soviet controlled aggression.

Zia: Regarding Pakistan India can play a positive and significant role.

S. Swaran Singh: We know our limitations and cannot play a role that may not be there.
When the Cuban Foreign Minister came here you had said that you would prefer the initiative from Dr. Castro in his capacity as the President of the non-aligned Conference.

Zia: We had told them that as President of the Non-aligned Bureau as a friend of the Soviet Union, he could use his influence.

S. Swaran Singh: I get the impression that you would have preferred the initiative by Cuba as President of the NAM. We have offered the Soviet Union one or two alternatives for an honourable withdrawal. We had suggested an international peace force of Islamic countries or non-aligned countries or countries of the region including India or even the UN. We had told them that they could seal the border.

Zia: What hurt us were the statements from India that this situation has resulted because of Pakistan’s interference in the affairs of Afghanistan.

S. Swaran Singh: I do not see that.

Zia: We got it loud and clear here.

S. Swaran Singh: There was the statement of the French President and our Prime Minister on Soviet intervention.

Zia: Your statement in the UN.

S. Swaran Singh: The 12th January statement?

Zia: Yes.

S. Swaran Singh: That is when Chaudhuri Charan Singh was the Prime Minister.

Agha Shahi: We believe it was approved by her.

S. Swaran Singh: The statement was made on January 12. Shrimati Gandhi was sworn in on January 14. At that time she was busy selecting colleagues and I can tell you that in politics that is a very difficult thing to do. Subsequent statements have been more carefully worded.

Zia: That is very reassuring. We are grateful.

S. Swaran Singh: Our intention is not to embarrass by issuing one statement after another which may not help.

Zia: If this is the reality you must speak out.

S. Swaran Singh: We have conveyed clearly to the Soviet Union what we felt. We have said so publicly too.
POLITICAL RELATIONS:1975-1989

Zia: At present there are 90,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

S. Swaran Singh: As many?

Zia: 10 Divisions.

S. Swaran Singh: The internal situation seems to be bad. We feel sorry for the brave Pathans.

Zia: What is worse is the ruthless manner in which it has been done, leading to bloodshed and the pounding of small hamlets.

S. Swaran Singh: It is very said. The Afghans have suffered throughout history.

Zia: They have been subjugated.

S. Swaran Singh: We had to persuade the King of Afghanistan and use all our diplomatic skill for Babar’s tomb to be cleaned. We thought we had a historical obligation to do so and it was with great difficulty that they agreed to this partially. I am only mentioning this to show their independent character.

Shah Nawaz: Yes, they do not like the Moghals.

S. Swaran Singh: (Pointing towards Agha Shahi) How do we put this across?

Zia: At a press conference or through a carefully considered statement.

S. Swaran Singh: I always want to end on a positive note. There is one other point I would like to appeal to you on purely humanitarian considerations. Before I came a large number of parents of defence personnel came to see me. They ardently believe that their sons are alive despite what the Pakistan Government had said. Foreign Minister has answered Parliament questions in this regard and the matter has been taken up with you in a formal manner. I am reminded of a statement made by General Manekshaw who once told me that whatever other faults Generals may have there is one thing about them that they feel strongly about and that is that after laying arms they treat POWs well and their blood boils if any harm is done to these people. I earnestly appeal to you, and I do not want you to give a reply straightaway, but I would be most grateful if you could do whatever possible. There have also been a large number of reports in the Indian press.

Zia: I saw a report sent to me by our Ambassador.

S. Swaran Singh: We have got the names. We could probably have a secret arrangement for their return. If we have any such personnel in India, I do not know. If we do we would also return them to you.

The modalities can be worked out.
Bajpai: Sir, as I have said before to Mr. Shah Nawaz and even you. It is for the first time that the leadership in our two countries has no personal acquaintance with each other. It is vitally important to have such personal contact. There is no one better to initiate the process than Sardar Sahib. Although we can argue whether enough has been done for normalization since we put the seal on that process 4 years ago, we can all agree that the tone of relations between the two countries has been very even. It is a pity that an event of common concern, which should have brought us closer, has created misgivings. There have been so many things said here that the return of Mrs. Gandhi means danger for Pakistan, that our views on Afghanistan means we are ganging up with Moscow to undo this country, that we are opposing a single gun being acquired by Pakistan – because we mean to overload it – all such nonsense is being spread. I thought a visit such as is this one with quiet diplomacy, outside the normal diplomatic channels, would be the best starting point to remove these misconceptions as well as broader the range of contact, for the future. I think we will all agree from the way these talks have gone that it has indeed proved such a starting point (Zia nodded). It is therefore important - I do not wish to go into painful aspects of our relations – but this is the third time you oblige us to take issue with you about the Indo-Soviet Treaty. I do not like past pointers but it is important for the future that the leaders of Pakistan realize their own responsibility for 1971.

Zia: Of Course, but...

Amb. Bajpai: It is dangerous to blame these things on others - if you continue to do so, you will continue to misunderstand the true nature of Indian policies. You will continue to hold back the development of our relations, I fear you may even continue to make mistakes in handling your own affairs.

Agha Shahi: The Soviet Union always gives so much emphasis to the 1971 Agreement.

Agha Shahi: Yes, it causes us great concern.

S. Swaran Singh: I was the signatory to this Treaty on behalf of India, and I will not take much time to explain this. Have you seen the text?

Agha Shahi: We have it.

S. Swaran Singh: I was referring to the President, whether he had seen it. This Treaty has no relevance for the 1971 war. Nothing in Bangladesh was developing when we started discussing the contents of this Treaty. This was one of the best guarded secrets. It took us almost 3 years to hammer out the contents of this treaty. Now that it is history I can tell you that Marshal Grechkov, as Defence Minister, in a casual meeting when I was also Defence Minister, floated the idea and said that relations between our countries had become so diverse that a statutory basis should be given for evolving bilateral relations in different fields. It has no relevance to development in Bangladesh.

Agha Shahi: That was in respect of the origin of the Treaty.

S. Swaran Singh: After a year or so I came again to the Foreign Office and told our Ambassador in Moscow to start discussing the details of the treaty. There was no military content in it and it was sheer coincidence that it was signed in 1971. This treaty is very different from other treaties signed between the Soviet Union and other countries. Are we prepared to sign a similar treaty?

Agha Shahi: There is military content in the Treaty.

S. Swaran Singh: That is not correct.

Agha Shahi: Article 9.

S. Swaran Singh: Article 9 only refers to the two counties consulting each other. There is no military content in it.

Agha Shahi: It does mention that the two countries would consult each other in order to remove any threat.

S. Swaran Singh: We have never invoked the terms of this treaty. I should also like to assure you that there is not a single piece of armament that we have received from the Soviet Union as aid. Everything we have got has been paid for, and through our nose. We had to go to the Soviet Union because, during Nehru’s time, we drew a complete blank when we approached the United States, U.K. and France. I repeat that we never received anything from the Soviet Union as aid.

Agha Shahi: But you received financial credits.

S. Swaran Singh: At times we pay them from our rupee account.

Amb. Bajpai: For sometime news reports have been floating that India and the Soviet Union have been negotiating arms supplies. Figures have also been mentioned. We do not know where this figure of 2.6 billion has come from.

S. Swaran Singh: Read the Treaty. We are prepared to sign the same treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation with you.

Zia: To supplement the Simla Agreement.

Amb. Bajpai: Coming from you, Sir, the offer looks more authentic but I had offered the same to them earlier also.
Zia: Yes.

S. Swaran Singh: There has been a certain feeling built around signing a no-war pact. We can think of an alternative.

Amb. Bajpai: I had suggested a non-belligerency pact.

S. Swaran Singh: We should be able to have a system where our Foreign Offices can contact each other, pick up the telephone and speak, if necessary.

Shah Nawaz: Last year we stared the practice of periodic consultations and the first meeting took place at Foreign Secretaries level in May and the second round when Mr. Sathe came here.

Zia: I have telephoned Mrs. Gandhi Twice.

S. Swaran Singh: We should spare you and the Prime Minister of this and leave it to our Foreign Offices. Developments in Iran are moving fast.

Zia: We have told the American that the use of force in Iran would be unproductive.

S. Swaran Singh: It is a typical case. In spite of the advice of their friends the Iranians have refused to give up the hostages. If Iran refuses to release the hostages then how can the Soviet Union be expected to withdraw from Afghanistan. The Soviets are much more hard headed. There was the Castro initiative also.

Zia: I was talking to the Soviet Ambassador, just the other day when he suggested a dialogue with the Afghans. I told him that after taking over the regime I shook hands with Daoud, later I went to Kabul and met Terraki and Amin and Agha Shahi was about to go to Kabul when the present regime took over with the help of Soviet tanks.

S. Swaran Singh: We can understand.

Zia: Babrak Karmel came on Soviet tanks. I told Ambassador Aximov that the key to the situation is in Moscow and not in Kabul and therefore we would wish to talk to the Soviet Union.

S. Swaran Singh: I wanted to tell you purely in confidence that the Soviet Union told us of a large number of incursions and we suggested that for them the best thing is to talk directly to you.

Zia: They should talk to us but the insurgency is in Herat and other places.

S. Swaran Singh: They have named the places, pinpointed areas and given dates. They might be having some documentary evidence, including photographs.

Zia: It is a Soviet way of pressurizing. We also know them. The trouble is taking place in Ghazni, Bamiyan, Central Afghanistan, Bhadakshan, etc.

Agha Shahi: Places adjacent to the Soviet Union.

Lt. Gen. Arif: The Main spots are south of the Oxus River and Herat.

Zia: I have agreed to permit an international body to inspect every inch of Pakistani soil and see whether or not we are training the rebels. Would anyone else like to supplement.

Ghuam Ishaq: I met Sardar Sahib this morning and had a very useful talk.

Shah Niwaz: We are meeting again in the Foreign Office tomorrow.

0952. Note Verbale from the Ministry of External Affairs to the Embassy of Pakistan in India expressing concern at the statement of President Ziaul Haq at the OIC.

New Delhi, May 21, 1980.

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan in New Delhi and has the honour to express its grave distress over certain portions of the inaugural address delivered by H.E. President Zia-ul-Haq at the 11th Session of the Islamic Foreign Ministers’ Conference on 17th May, 1980.

2. His Excellency referred in the earlier portion of this Address to certain problems which, according to him, were facing the Islamic world, in the following words: “Our Qubla-e-Awwal is under alien occupation, Arab lands have been usurped, Palestinian refugees are deprived of their just rights, Iran continues to face threats and there is massive presence of foreign troops in Afghanistan”. Later, the President painted out that as it has not been possible to cover all issues in his brief address, he was drawing the attention of the Conference “only to some vital and fundamental problems”. After mentioning some of the problems, he referred to “the long out standing and unresolved problem of Jammu and Kashmir”, as “yet another vital issue” facing the Islamic world. He then expressed his conviction that the honourable delegates would review all the vital problems facing the Muslim world.
3. It is obvious that the efforts of the President of Pakistan to project the “problem of Jammu and Kashmir” as an Islamic problem was to take the question once again outside the bilateral and into yet another multilateral sphere, specifically the Islamic Conference. The Government of India cannot but express surprise over this development as being contrary to Pakistan’s earlier of-repeated commitment to adhere to the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement. The Government of India must point out that while in bilateral Indo-Pakistan discussions, forums and dialogue, Pakistan has emphasized this commitment, in other forums, and especially in multilateral forums where those present are not involved with any aspects of this matter, or with the bilateral Indo-Pakistan dialogue, Pakistan has sought to portray one aspect of the Simla Agreement as a communal matter. This is not acceptable.

4. During recent months the Government of India has sought to further a dialogue which the Government of Pakistan itself has acknowledge as constructive and useful. The visits to Islamabad by the Foreign Secretary of India, Shri R.D. Sathe, and the Special Emissary, Sardar Sawran Singh bear testimony to this. In point of time, it is noteworthy that these visits took place after the Extraordinary Session of the Islamic Conference that was held in Islamabad in January 1980. Indeed, some optimism was generated over a possible agreement emerging in due course.

5. The latest statement of His Excellency the President of Pakistan reflects an unfortunate incompatibility with the principles of bilateralism for normalising relations and for solving outstanding problems. The Government of India would like to point out that the manner in which Jammu and Kashmir has been referred to in the Islamic Conference may have a negative impact upon Indian public opinion with regard to efforts to normalize relations between the two countries.

6. The Ministry of External Affaire avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, the assurances of its highest consideration.

The Embassy of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, New Delhi 0953. Statement of Foreign Minister of Pakistan Agha Shahi on arrival at Delhi airport.

New Delhi, July 15, 1980.

It gives me great pleasure to come to New Delhi once again with my colleagues and I wish to thank the distinguished Foreign Minister of India, H.E. Mr. Narasimha Rao for his invitation which has made this visit possible. Had mutual convenience permitted, I should have come earlier for an exchange of views with the distinguished Foreign Minister of India on recent developments of common concern to our two countries. My last visit to India was in April 1978 in my capacity as the Adviser for Foreign Affairs when the Salal Agreement was successfully concluded. In the meantime, important developments have taken place in our region and exchange of views have been held between our two countries at the level of Foreign Secretaries. In February and April this year, we had useful talks in Islamabad with Foreign Secretary Saths and Sardar Swaran Singh. We greatly appreciated Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's gesture in sending these distinguished visitors to Pakistan to enable the two sides to hold talks on the important developments in our region and to try to further improve our bilateral relations. With the visit of Foreign Secretary Shah Nawaz to New Delhi in May last year, our two governments took an important step in institutionalizing the exchange of views at the Foreign Secretaries level on a regular yearly basis. I welcome the opportunity which our present visit will provide for useful and constructive consultations on the far-reaching implications of the critical events in an area which historically and geo-politically is inextricably linked to the peace and security of our region. During official discussions, we shall also review the progress achieved in the normalization of relations between our neighbouring countries. With the consistent approach, securely rooted in the principle of peaceful co-existence, it would be possible to promote the recent trend towards the building of mutual confidence and understanding of our respective points of view on matters of common concern and indeed to move forward in resolving differences and securing the objective of permanent peace envisaged in the Simla Agreement. I feel greatly honoured by the presence of heads of diplomatic missions of countries, members of the Islamic Conference who have taken the trouble of coming to the airport to receive me and the members of my delegation.

It is a matter of sadness to us that our visit is taking place at a time of personal bereavement for Prime Minister Indira Gahdni who has borne the irreparable loss of her beloved and talented son Sanjay Gandhi in the prime of life. She has borne a suffering with remarkable courage and fortitude. President Zia-ul-Haq has felt deeply aggrieved at the tragedy which overtook the Prime Minister’s family. Indeed the tragic news of Sanjay Gandhi’s most untimely death was received with shock and dismay all over Pakistan. I express once again our profound feelings of sympathy and heartfelt condolences to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi as well as to Mrs. Maneka Gandhi and other members of the bereaved family.

Thank you.
He also explained that the Islamabad resolutions of the Islamic Conference envisaged an international conference under the auspices of the United Nations or otherwise, it could be held under the aegis of the Non-aligned Movement. The non-aligned world would not be excluded from such a conference. “It was important to include these countries in the proposed conference because we cannot rule out the possibility of super-Power understanding and a division of the world into spheres of influence and another Yalta being sprung upon the smaller countries of the world.”

When pressed further on this question, Mr. Shahi said: “The Soviet Union has, in the May 14 proposal demanded that guarantees be given to Afghanistan about non-interference in its internal affairs. Naturally we expect that we be given reciprocal guarantee of non – interference. It is also the Soviet proposal that the guarantee be endorsed by the United States which means that it envisages a role and a commitment from the super – Powers. How and through what modalities can this commitment be given?

“Perhaps an international conference can be called. We do not say that the conference should be limited to the two super – Powers because all the five permanent members of the Security Council could participate in it and the neighbouring countries and the non-aligned States could also attend the conference”.

No Common Strategy

Asked if his visit to New Delhi had in any way helped to solve the Afghanistan question, he said he had found a common perception of interests of the region. The talks with the Indian leaders had helped him and given him encouragement but he would not go beyond saying that.

When asked if Pakistan and India had worked out a common strategy to solve the Afghan crisis, he said no such exercise had taken place. The first task he said, was to understand each other better and to ascertain if the approach was correct. As a result of the Pakistan team’s visit to India the activities of the Standing Committee of the Islamic Foreign Minister’ Conference were understood better.

Forces Ratio Issue not Pressed for the Present

When asked about the military expansion of India, he said he had conveyed Pakistan’s stand to the Indian Foreign Minister. Pakistan felt that the ratio of the military might of the two countries should be worked out. Mr. Narasimha Rao thought that the first phase was to build confidence in the peoples of the two countries. Pakistan felt that the proposal was itself a confidence-building measure, but since India did not wish to plunge into a discussion on this subject, the proposal was not being pressed for the present. Pakistan would revert to it at the appropriate time.

No proposal regarding joint defence between India and Pakistan came up for discussion.

He contradicted Press reports that Pakistan had sent two Divisions of its army to Saudi Arabia to protect the Royal family.

No N-Bomb Plan

Asked how far was Pakistan from producing an atom bomb, he said: “At an infinite distance because we are not manufacturing an atom bomb”.

With regard to bilateral relation, he said the process of normalization was proceeding. Pakistan was ready to expand commercial relations on the principle of mutual benefit. Travel between the countries had increased manifold and contact through diplomatic channels was continuing. Further, it had been decided that consultations between Pakistan and India would be held regularly. He said he had given an invitation to the Foreign Minister of India to visit Pakistan.

No Intention to Internationalize Kashmir Issue

A questioner pointed out to Mr. Shahi that in violation of the Simla Agreement, Pakistan was raising the Kashmir question in international forums. He said the Simla Agreement stipulated that India and Pakistan would endeavour to solve the question of Jammu and Kashmir through discussions. So far, he said bilateral discussions were not being held.

When Pakistan explained its foreign policy in international forums, it had to mention Kashmir as it was an important subject. Internationalization meant that the issue was referred to a tribunal as a body ending up with a resolution or a recommendation. That Pakistan had not done and certainly she was not debarred from making general statements regarding her foreign policy.

No talks on Bangladesh Move for Regional Summit

Regarding the Bangladesh proposal for a regional summit, he said this subject was not discussed with the Indian leaders. “We are awaiting certain clarifications from the Bangladesh Government as to the agenda of the summit and if it would include political or economic questions and we need to be provided with explanatory memoranda about, what could be discussed. We think thorough preparations were called for if any worthwhile results are to be achieved”, he said.

New Delhi, July 17, 1980.

In response to an invitation from the Indian Minister for External Affairs, Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao, the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Agha Shahi, paid an official visit to New Delhi from July 15 to 17, 1980. He was accompanied by Mr. S. Shah Nawaz Secretary – General, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Mujahid Husain, Director General (South Asia), Mr. Qazi Humayun, Director (India) and Mr. Niazullah from the Officer of the Foreign Minister.

The discussions between the two Foreign Ministers were held in frank and friendly atmosphere. The talks extended over two sessions and covered bilateral, regional and international matters of mutual interest. Both sides found the discussions very useful and have agreed to continue the dialogue. Mr. Agha Shahi extended an invitation to Shri Narasimha Rao to visit Pakistan which was accepted with pleasure.

The Foreign Minister of Pakistan called on the Vice – President Shri M. Hidayatullah, and Prime Minister, Shrimati Indira Gandhi. He handed over a message from President Zia-ul-Haq to the Prime Minister. It was also agreed that the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan would have their next round of discussions in New Delhi at a mutually convenient date in the near future.

Statement by External Affairs Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao in the Lok Sabha on his Talks with Foreign Minister of Pakistan.

New Delhi, July 18, 1980.

Sir, as the House is aware, the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, His Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi paid an official visit to India from July 15 to 17, 1980. We attached considerable importance to this visit coming as it did at a time when the situation in our region has been a cause of concern to all of us. In fact, ever since this Government came to office we have had continuing dialogue with Pakistan on our evolving bilateral relations as well as the general situation in this part of the world. The House will recall that our Foreign Secretary visited Islamabad in early February, within a month of this Government assuming office. The process was continued with a visit, in April, of our former Foreign Minister Sardar Swaran Singh to Pakistan as a Special Emissary of the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister also had an opportunity of meeting the President of Pakistan when both of them were in Salisbury to attend the independence celebrations of Zimbabwe. These high level exchanges have been useful in giving each a clearer understanding of the other’s views and perceptions. In this context, the visit of Mr. Agha Shahi was both timely and welcome.

Afghan Settlement

Mr. Speaker, Sir, it was only natural that the situation in our region in general and in Afghanistan in particular figured prominently in the discussions that I had with my Pakistani colleague. As the House is aware, this Government has right from the beginning consistently emphasized that the difficult situation in Afghanistan could be resolved only through political means. Our effort has been to defuse tensions so that Great Power confrontation can be kept out of our region.

It was a matter of satisfaction to us to hear from the Foreign Minister of Pakistan that he too was in favour of a political settlement. In our wide-ranging consultations over the last several months we have discovered a growing consensus towards seeking negotiated political settlement of the situation in Afghanistan. We continue to hope that the efforts in this direction would lead to the emergence of the contours of a political solution that would take into consideration the genuine interests and concerns of all parties involved notably the people of Afghanistan. What is of the utmost importance is to begin the process of consultations amongst the countries most directly involved. While sharing this, Mr. Agha Shahi expressed the constraint viz. that according to him, in terms of the resolutions of the Islamic Foreign Minister’s Conference of May 1980 the three-man Standing Committee set up by the Conference could not initiate any dialogue in a manner that would amount to a recognition of the present Government of Afghanistan. We reiterated our views on the urgent need for the dialogue. There was a detailed discussion on this and other aspects of a possible process of negotiations.

Furthering Friendship

In my discussions with Mr. Agha Shahi I reiterated the firm commitment of the Government of India to the Simla Agreement which provided the framework for normalization of relations between our two countries. It has been this Government’s endeavour to further the Simla process and to create a climate of confidence. We have taken many steps to translate the principles laid down in the Simla Agreement into action but some still remain to be taken.
I expressed our desire that further movement in this direction should be accelerated and hoped that the Government of Pakistan would reciprocate this desire. In this context we would like to see more cultural exchanges between the two countries and the facilitating of greater people to people contact. In addition, I drew Mr. Agha Shahi’s attention to the opportunities of economic collaboration between our two countries that are waiting to be explored and called for strengthening of trade links. I am glad to say, Sir, that Mr. Agha Shahi’s response on these aspects of normalization of relations between the two countries was positive.

I was assured by Mr. Agha Shahi that there were no political inhibitions in regard to the expansion of Indo-Pakistan trade. The dialogue on trade relations is to continue shortly; talks are also likely to be held to finalise arrangements which would enable tourists from each country to visit the other. There is now a distinct possibility of more places of pilgrimage in each country being thrown open for visit by people of the other and also of an improvement in the facilities for travel between the two countries.

Cultural Exchanges

The need to increase exchanges in the cultural fields was also acknowledge on both sides. Possibilities of exchange in the near future, of Indian and Pakistan prisoners presently under detention on both sides, are also improving. I am confident that the peoples of our two countries would heartily welcome the restoration of normalcy in our relations and establishment of an environment of peace and friendship.

During his stay in Delhi, Mr. Agha Shahi called on the Prime Minister twice. On the first occasion, he conveyed condolences on behalf of President Zia-ul-Haq and the people of Pakistan, on her recent bereavement. During his second call, there were discussion on several international and regional issues as well as on matters of bilateral interest and it was agreed, _inter alia_, that all possible steps should be taken to facilitate further implementation of the provisions of the Simla Agreement.

Mr. Speaker, Sir, the Foreign Minister of Pakistan in his banquet speech made a reference to the proposal of his Government to hold talks at the level of military commanders on mutual reduction of force levels. This question had been discussed in great detail during the visit to Pakistan of Sardar Swaran Singh last April and our views, which were conveyed to the Government of Pakistan then, reiterated by me in our present talks. I impressed on Mr. Shahi once again that no question of this nature could at all arise unless and until, according to the common satisfaction of both countries, the requisite amount of trust and confidence have been created between them. Moreover, it would neither be realistic nor feasible to make it a purely military exercise, but must reflect a shared political perception and understanding of each country's security needs by the other. Exercises of this nature undertaken elsewhere in recent years corroborate this conclusion.

Reference to Kashmir

As regard Kashmir, the Foreign Minister of Pakistan referred to it in his banquet speech in the following terms:

“We are firmly committed to the full implementation of the Simla Agreement in all its provisions and are confident that the process would be carried to its logical conclusions with a just and amicable settlement on Jammu and Kashmir which will usher in a new era of harmonious relations and fruitful cooperation in a wide field”.

It was pointed out during our talks that references to Kashmir in international fora by Pakistan even though they state that it is in accordance with their understanding of the Simla Agreement do not help to create a better atmosphere.

It is in the above overall context, Mr. Speaker, Sir, that one should assess the outcome of these talks. The talks did bring out the difference in perception known to exist between the two countries. Nevertheless, on several matters of common interest as well as of regional importance, the area of agreement was also not inconsiderable. In any event, the frank exchange of views was mutually beneficial. The talks were conducted in an atmosphere of utmost cordiality. Therefore to describe the outcome of our talks as a failure or a break down, I submit, would not be correct. We look forward, with cautious optimism, to progressive improvement of our relations.

Mr. Speaker, Sir, it is the Government of India’s conviction that a harmonious relationship between India and Pakistan is important for the peace and well being of South Asia. Towards this end, we intend to continue our dialogue with the Government of Pakistan and I have gladly accepted the invitation extended by Mr. Shahi to visit Pakistan at a mutually convenient date. We have also agreed that, before my visit, the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan would visit India for the next round of regular official level consultations.

Interview of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi to a group of visiting Pakistan Journalists.

New Delhi July 18, 1980.

Q: Regarding the Indo-Pakistan talks Mr Agha Shahi had said that a rapport between the two sides had been established but the Indian newspapers say again that it was a futile exercise. What are your views?

A: Our Foreign Minister has replied to that in Parliament today – it was a useful meeting.

Q: What do you think can be done to diffuse the situation arising out of the super Power rivalry in the region?

A: We have always said that if we are strong in ourselves and if we can co-operate, then what others do does not matter.

Q: Do you think there is ground for a common approach?

A: There has really been ground for a common approach. That is why we took the initiative for talks. There are basically the problems of giving a better standard of life to our peoples – the others would keep their hands off.

Why Mix up Afghanistan with Indo Pak Ties?

Q: This sentiment is reciprocated in Pakistan as well. But the point where we are bogged down is Afghanistan. How do you think a negotiated settlement can be brought about, where in the rights of the Afghan people are respected?

A: Firstly why should we be bogged down on Afghanistan? How does it in any way hamper our bilateral relations?

Q: Is there no possibility of a common approach?

A: No two countries can always think alike on all issues. I want to divide the two things. On the one side, there is the question of better relation with the people of Pakistan which, I think, can be achieved through trade, better communications, more exchanges. Perhaps you know that artists, journalist, sportsmen, all these people are anxious to have these exchanges. Then the industrialists. On the other hand, there is Afghanistan, which is a different problem. I don’t think we should mix up the two. We have already stated our views very clearly which has been appreciated all over the world. The proof of it is that a lot of people have changed their views. Those who had reacted very sharply in the beginning have come round to the point of view that it does not help to go to the brink of war and there should be a discussion and every effort to find a way out. Now, I have expressed it to your Minister also that had they taken this approach in the beginning I don’t think we would have reached the present dead lock, but the initial reaction was such that it only gave the feeling to the Soviet Union that they were being encircled and therefore there was the necessity for them to be firmer. Now what can be done at this moment is very difficult to say.

Islamic Conferences & Afghan Issue

Q: Would you appreciate the efforts of the Standing Committee appointed by the Islamic Foreign Ministers Conference in this respect and if not would India take an initiative and secure the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan?

A: Unfortunately, the Islamic summit went beyond Afghanistan and talked about all kinds of other things.

Q: Not the Standing Committee…

A: The conference as a whole did it. But…

Q: If you don’t accept the initiative being taken…

A: It is not a question of not accepting the initiative. We are interested in what is going to achieve the desired results and if any of these initiatives are going to achieve the desired result, then we welcome the initiative, but so far that has not happened.

Q: Would India not try for the pullout of Soviet troops from Afghanistan?

A: We are no closer than anybody else. We are good friends of the Soviet Union because we have tried to be friends with all the countries in the region and even far off. Some have responded, others have not. The fault is not ours. We tried to befriend China throughout and in fact it was in my former regime that you known with Pakistan and China we established diplomatic relations and took some initial steps for better relationship. So we are constantly trying for friendship with everybody. If they don’t respond that is not our fault. So far as the Soviet Union is concerned, they would naturally look at what they consider to be in their national interest. And if you see what has been happening in this region and what is happening in the Indian Ocean. We may or may not approve of it. It does not mean that I am supporting what they are doing or what the others are doing. But if other presences increase in the area, it is not right to expect that the Soviet Union will no react or try to do whatever they think is necessary for their protection of security. I want to make it clear that we have not supported their presence in Afghanistan. Not that I am telling you. We have directly told Mr Gromyko and others, but as I said we have to see the situation in the context of what else is happening.
Q: Do you really think there is a Pakistan-China - US axis which has made the position of the Soviet Union difficult?

A: It is not important what I think; it is important what they think and certainly they have been very worried since the USA-China collaborations. They were obsessed with it just as China is obsessed with them.

Q: Would then the initiative not lie with the Non-Aligned Movement? India is an important member of this group.

A: The non-aligned could take the initiative. Some discussions were held in various places like Salisbury and Belgrade but one must be sure that something will come out of it rather than just a meeting especially if it ends in an acrimonious debate. That would not be worthwhile.

On Military Preparations

Q: May I ask a question which is rather sensitive. One finds that defence preparedness in India causes apprehensions in Pakistan and vice versa. How do you think the fears of the two countries can be allayed?

A: I should really look at the matter objectively. We are spending much less as compared to our size, population, borders, land and ocean and the dangers which are not imaginary but which we have faced in the past. You probably known that Pakistan is spending double of its GNP or the per capita expenditure and we have faced aggression. Who is going to attack Pakistan? On the other hand every time that Pakistan has received or bought large amount of sophisticated weaponry those within Pakistan who are not happy about normalization, what the Americans call hawkish people, they get stronger by this. This is our worry.

Step-By-Step Approach only way not

Q: How then can the fears on both sides be allayed?

A: This can be done by a step by step approach. If there is greater friendship and cooperation. If you get to know each other better it leads to greater understanding and friendship and this is how the fears will go. If such relationship is established there would be no cause and our own attitude has always been constructive and friendly. Earlier I mentioned to you the speech of our Foreign Minister in Parliament.

Q: So it is a step by step approach?

A: How else can you do it?

Q: What about two military commanders getting together and deciding the ratio of armed might so that the finances are available for the uplift of the people?

A: We are spending very little money as compared the threat we face. But you see Pakistan is not the only factor as I said earlier. Our land, sea and ocean frontiers are very vast. Besides, the size of our army has not increased. Right now, we are facing a barrage of things on defence in the debate which is on in Parliament.

Q: There is a feeling that India adopts double standards. Whenever Pakistan tries to procure arms there is an uproar in India, but it is all right when India has a massive deal with the Soviet Union for arms.

A: We have not had any huge amount of dole. You see, unfortunately, some of our people like a lot of publicity and it is put out in such a way that when there was one deal it was put out as if there were several deals. It came out on several days and so on. But all we are doing is to replace some of our old things. And it was nothing new it was something that was going on for quite sometime. You have to see the needs of the country. We have not been able to fill the gaps in our defence due to financial reasons.

On Tourism & Trade

Q: With regard to tourism, India sanctions very small amount for her nationals visiting Pakistan while Pakistan sanctioned foreign exchange to the extent of Rs. 150 million in one year for her nationals to visit India.

A: I am sorry I know nothing about this. (the Indian Ambassador to Pakistan intervened to say that the question had cropped up in the recent talks between two countries and the Indian authorities were looking into it.)

Q: The suggestion about the military commanders meeting remains unanswered.

A: I did refer to it.

Q: In the field of trade what are India's expectations because there has been an expansion in this area?

A: I don't think there has been much expansion and our information is that Pakistan has been willing to buy things from else where even though they are more expensive.

Q: The import of iron ore from India is a big order.

A: That is the first break after a long time.
Q: Pakistan would like to export some semi-finished or finished goods but India already manufactures them and there is where the problem arises and the balance of payment gets upset.

A: I am sure a solution to this can be found if you talk to the concerned ministries.

No early plans to visit Pakistan

Q: Is there a possibility of your meeting Gen Zia-ul-Haq?

A: In the near future I am not going anywhere at all. For the time being our Foreign Minister has accepted the invitation to visit Pakistan.

Q: One last question. Do you have a message for the people of Pakistan.?

A: Firstly I have received a large number of condolence messages from the people of Pakistan. I would like to express my deep gratitude, it is obviously impossible for me to reply to each individually. I also wish to reaffirm my strong feeling of the need for friendship and better relations between the two countries. And my good wishes to the people of Pakistan. I feel concerned over their welfare.

0958. New Delhi’s reaction to the Pakistan expression of concern for the communal violence in Moradabad.

New Delhi, August 29, 1980.

Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi accused Pakistan on August 29 of interfering in India’s domestic affairs by organizing protests in that country against the Indian communal riots.

A spokesman of the Ministry of External affairs told reporters at New Delhi on August 29 that Mrs. Gandhi had made the remarks during a meeting with visiting Japanese Foreign Minister Masavoshi Ito.

Mrs. Gandhi expressed her unhappiness at the manner in which Pakistan had acted, which “we feel is not conducive to communal harmony in India,” the official said.

The spokesman also said that India had protested last week to Pakistan over its public statement expressing concern over “anti Muslim violence” in India.
Earlier, Mrs. Indira Gandhi was quoted by Indian newspapers as having said that she suspected foreign forces behind the Muslim rioting. She did not name the countries involved.

Pakistan’s Ambassador in New Delhi, Mr. Abdul Sattar has denied the allegation that Pakistan was interfering in the internal affairs of India.

In a statement issued on August 30, the envoy denied that Pakistan had taken any step which could be termed as an interference in India’s internal affairs.

The Pakistan Governments has also denied Indian Press reports to the effect that it had taken up the issue of anti-Muslim riots in India at the international level or that it had made any preparations to lodge protests about them, a statement issued in Islamabad on August 30 said.

Reacting to the Indian protests the Pakistan Government told India that it would continue to endeavour for the maintenance of a tension-free atmosphere conducive to further progress in the normalization of relations between the two countries. In its response to Indian Foreign Secretary R.D. Sathe’s communications through the Pakistan Ambassador in New Delhi, the Pakistan Government reportedly said that it was inspired by the conviction that good neighbourly relations between Pakistan and India were in the interest of both the countries and their peoples.

Mr Sathe conveyed Government of India’s strong feelings over the reactions in Pakistan to the recent communal disturbances in India. Reacting to the Indian letter the Pakistan Government claimed that it adhered to the view that the commitments of the two countries to the principle of non-interference in each other’s internal affairs remained a pre-requisite for good-neighbourliness and durable peace between them. Pakistan came round to the view that it was obvious that the disturbance in Moradabad and some other places in India as well as the measures to restore law and order and prevent recurrence of such incidents, were an internal affair of India. Pakistan however maintained that given the history of Pakistan-India relations and the links between the people of the two countries, public reactions to the loss of lives in disturbances were natural and spontaneous. The Pakistan Government did not instigate or fan such reactions. Sections of the Press and leaders of public opinion might at times express themselves strongly in Pakistan as in India. It would, however, be a mis-judgement to ascribe inspiration for such expression to the Pakistan Government. To obviate misunderstandings, each government must inform itself of the freedom of expression the people and the Press enjoyed in the other country and the limitations on the capacity of the Government to control expressions of opinions.

Pakistan Government maintained that it was not aware of any international conspiracy aimed at the Indian Government. Certainly, it would not associate itself with any attempts against the stability and security of a neighbouring State. Nor had it an interest in creating difficulties for the Indian Government.
New Delhi, October 21, 1980.

Question: Would you say that there has been a set-back in the bilateral relations with Pakistan?

Prime Minister: Well, it is unfortunate that President Zia has gone against the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement in raising Kashmir (issue) and, when we had the trouble in Moradabad, by trying to make it a major international issue. Such things do not help relations between nations; especially, it had a big effect on our own people here.

Question: In this connection the general question all over the world is that Pakistan is going to explode a nuclear device in three years’ time. If it happens, do you think the Government of India will revise policy of using nuclear power for peaceful purposes?

Prime Minister: President Zia keeps on denying it. Shall we take his word for it or not?

Question: You have to decide it.

Prime Minister: We have already. Our policy with regard to nuclear weapons is very clear. We do not think that they (nuclear weapons) will help in any way.

Question: Do you take his words for it?

Prime Minister: I do not think I like saying that someone in not telling the truth. We will leave it at that.

Question: (Inaudible)

Prime Minister: What poses a threat is the greater involvement of all the powers in the Indian Ocean and in the region, because the thing did not suddenly begin or the threat did not begin from the Soviet troops’ entry into it. For instance, long before that, there was a lot of activity in the Indian Ocean and there was Western activity in various other countries, and at that time also, we thought that this would lead to further involvement of others as well. This is what is happening. It is a kind of escalation. If someone enters an area, somebody feels that he has also to enter it.
0960. Letter from Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq to Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.

Islamabad, November 12, 1980.

Islamic Republic of Pakistan
Islamabad
03 Muharram-ul-Haram 1401 AH
12 November, 1980.

Her Excellency
Madam Indira Gandhi,
Prime Minister of the Republic of India,
New Delhi

Dear Madam Prime Minister,

I was happy to have the opportunity of meeting you in Salisbury last April and had hoped that our meeting would result in a better mutual understanding of our respective points of view and would serve to accelerate the pace of normalization of relations between our two countries. I, therefore, sent Foreign Minister Agha Shahi to New Delhi in the following July with high hopes. It was a matter of regret that despite our best efforts and those made by your Foreign Minister Mr. Narasimha Rao, the visit received a setback by the negative treatment it received from the local press. Nevertheless, I am looking forward to the future with hopes and expectations of better relations between us. In our assessment the recent regional and international developments also demand such an approach from both of us for the common good of India and Pakistan.

There is little need to dwell on these developments in regard to which detailed exchanges of views have already taken place between our two sides at various levels since February last when your Foreign Secretary visited Islamabad. In my letter of 17 February I have also drawn your attention to the opportunity these developments have created for bringing us closer.

It is in the mutual interest of our countries to bring to an end a lean period in our relationship for which I cannot find an adequate explanation; nor do I wish to seek one in view of the over-riding need for both of us to concentrate on the common objective of improving relations between our two countries undeterred by temporary setbacks. The progressive positive trend of Indo-Pakistan relations spread over a period of last few years should encourage us to look optimistically towards the future.

The recent communal disturbances in India and yours reaction to my mention of the question of Jammu and Kashmir in some of my public statements ought not to be allowed to cast a shadow on our bilateral relations. Our attitude on both these matters had been fully explained during the official talks between our delegations and also in my personal letter to you to which I have already referred. I assure you that we regard the unfortunate communal disturbances in India as your internal affair though these have an inevitable impact on the atmosphere of our bilateral relations for reasons with which you are so familiar. As regards the question of Jammu and Kashmir, I need not discuss it in this letter because each of us is well aware of the view point of the other.

It is my sincere hope that despite any temporary setbacks we will not lose sight of the great imperative of improvement of relations between our two countries. There is need for developing an awareness among the peoples of our two countries of our common concerns arising out of the grave developments in Afghanistan, the Iran-Iraq conflict and other recent events which have profound repercussions on the security of our region. I also seek your understanding of our own efforts in these directions which no doubt will serve a common interest.

I take this opportunity to extend to you my very best wishes for your personal health and well-being on the happy occasion of your birthday which falls on November 19.

With profound regards,

Yours sincerely,

(General M. Zia-ul-Haq)

SECRET

Letter from Indian Ambassador in Pakistan Natwar Singh to Foreign Secretary R. D. Sathe on the situation in Pakistan.

Islamabad, January 4, 1981.

Ambassador of India
Islamabad

No. ISL/AMB/16/81 January 4, 1981

Subject: Indo Pak Relations: Hard Times not great expectations.

After eight months in Islamabad I have come to the melancholy conclusion that Pakistan is a politically retarded country. The great Russian writer, Boris Pasternak wrote that, “the true measure of country’s civilization is the kind of men it produces”. Right now the shining lights of the Pakistani political firmament are president Zia-ul-Haq and Foreign Minister Agha Shahi – The two form a perfect pair of the tweedle dum and tweedle dee of pretentious silliness. Yet, both seem to know how to exploit time and circumstance. Paralysis of the nations’ political life has been exploited to his advantage by Zia, a top level schemer and operator. Zia, with his Islamization and Shahi with his sales-cackle (anti Indianism is the main product) have all but taken 80 million gifted people for a ride. The submission of 80 million Pakistanis by a military cum bureaucratic clique which is plainly driving them to disaster calls for some explanation.

2. From its very inception Pakistan has lived on myths and with one or two exceptions there has been a certain scum quality about Pakistani political and military leadership. One has only to read the utterances of Pak leaders to get a confirmation of this. No great vision has occupied their minds, no soaring idealism has marked their policies, no homage has been paid to those higher values of life and liberty which alone distinguish us from the wolf pack. For almost 30 years men full of cunning in ways and means of clinging to power, have sat like a blight over a long suffering people who have been allowed no say in moulding their destiny or an opportunity to elect their rulers. The breaking down of institutions, which would ensure a free and full democratic existence, has been deliberate. The contract between the government and the people has been broken time and time again. Retention of power has become the goal. But power without purpose is a panacea for disaster as the rise and fall of Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto shows.

3. Islamic World stretches from Morocco to Indonesia. It has a vague and fragile unity. It has however, one element in common – non-representative governments headed by un-attractive dictators. Malaysia is the only exception. But powerful forces are at work in the Islamic World. One hopes, one prays that these forces will ensure that emergence of timely representative governments in these countries.

4. Ruskin said, “Great nations write their autobiographies in three manuscripts, the book of their deeds, the book of their words and the book of their art. Not one of these books can be understood unless we read the two others, but of the three the only trustworthy one is the last.” Pakistan has yet to write these books. It can only do so if it comes to terms with itself, jettison its mythological baggage and make an honest effort to evolve national ethos, in which friendship with India has a central place and which is a true reflection of her genuine heritage and past, a heritage and past which it shares with us of which we are rightly and humbly proud.

5. But one must not mix hopes with facts. We are required to deal with the reality, and the reality is a nation in abeyance, a country in suspense. We are, for some time more, condemned to transact business with an unrepresentative Government, at the helm of which is a man who has run out of ideas but not out of luck.

6. When the sun went down on 1980, President Zia was firmly in the saddle and had rendered all his political opponents inoperative, his military rivals ineffective, and this he had achieved without even solving a single national problem. Immense good luck, combined with well concealed cunning and well practiced humility, saw him home and almost dry. He is not popular and knows it. He is not endowed with a sharp, quick brain or a masterful personality, yet, he has come to dominate Pakistani national life. It speaks volumes for Pakistani polity. He is riding a tiger and knows it. He presided over a corrupt, but not a tyrannical administration. His very mediocrity is an asset in the prevailing climate of Pakistan. No alternative or acceptable instrumentality is forthcoming. So long as such a situation continues, President Zia has the situation well in hand.

7. 1980 was a good year for him. He became legal tender in the Islamic world after being an outcast throughout 1979 following the hanging of Mr. Bhutto. Outside the Islamic world too, he is no longer unwelcome. The international community (USA, IMF, The World Bank, etc.) have pledged him vast amount running into billions of dollars as aid, credits and loans. The General is not unaware that an injection of such large funds must lead to inflation, but economics has never been a strong point of the Pakistani establishment. He is insensitive enough to take a rebuff. He was shown scant respect by the Iranians, but took it in his military stride. Only a limited man would have made the speech that President Zia did make at the United Nations in New York of 1st October, 1980. But if he is genuinely sincere about anything, it is his religion. To an outsider he appears a devout Muslim, who prays five times a day and leads a simple, almost austere life. A lot of people in Pakistan are impressed by his life style, which contrasts favourably with Mr. Bhutto’s flamboyance.

8. What can we expect from him on the Indo-Pak front? Is he genuine in his pronouncements about his desire to have friendly and cooperative relations with India? Does he really believe what he says? I really do not have the answer. But here we should pause and examine Pakistan’s past record and President Zia’s record. There we get no comfort and President Zia’s enthusiasm for the Janata Government makes me wonder whether he has any understanding of the Indian scene. So, I for one am not willing to give him the benefit of doubt. On the contrary, I feel reasonably sure that he and the people around him will miss no opportunity to create problems for us, to embarrass us in the non-aligned group, to question our secularism, or to carry on an anti-India tirade. References to Kashmir in international forums will continue, lip service will be paid to the Simla Agreement, trade will not increase, nor frequent cultural exchanges. The media will keep denigrating us and publishing all kinds of lies about India. We should not be surprised if Zia exploded his Islamic bomb this year. We should give some thought to the line we should take, if an explosion does take place. Having done our PNE, we shall naturally have to be careful about how we react. We shall of course then have a chance to expose Pakistan’s past military adventurism and ask if Pakistanis can be trusted to behave in a responsible manner in this regards. If all this were to change then the days of dictatorship in Pakistan would be numbered. Good and normal relations with India would mean a whole lot of people in the military, bureaucratic business establishment finding themselves without jobs – a prospect that they will resist to their dying day.

9. So what do we look for in 1981 as far as relations between India and Pakistan are concerned? “Hard Times”, not “Great Expectations”. Indications are that the Reagan administration will tilt towards Pakistan, CIA activities will increase, a stalemate in Afghanistan will suit Zia, as will the Iran-Iraq conflict. Pakistan’s economic situation looks promising in the short term. (No one has any long-term view on matters of substance.)

10. The departure of Zia would not make much difference, except perhaps a slowing down of Islamization. His replacement would not be an elected representative of the people, but another military man. Given the choice, I would rather deal with him than another tin pot General.

11. What should our response be? We should neither expect too much, nor despair of getting anything at all. We should take what we can get when the atmosphere is favourable. We should remain unimpressed in the face of verbal professions of friendliness. We should endeavour to make the weight of our influence felt steadily among the people of Pakistan over a long period of time in the directions which best suit our interests. For this, we need to follow a policy of Benign Neglect of the Zia Government and of Genuine Concern for the people of Pakistan.

12. I enclose the following reports* for 1980.

   ii) Annual Economic & Commercial Report
   iii) Annual Publicity Report
   iv) Annual Consular Report

Quasi-verbatim record of meeting of Indian Ambassador K. Natar Singh with the President of Pakistan, General Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq.

Islamabad, January 10, 1981.

(Meeting arranged at the request of the Ambassador to hand over letter from P.M. The meeting took place from 1915 hours to 2020 hours. It was attended by Mr. Riaz Piracha, Pakistan Foreign Secretary, and Qazi Humayun, Director (India) in the Pakistan Foreign Office)

Ambassador: It was extremely kind of you to receive me when you are so busy on the eve of your departure to five countries tomorrow morning. I am most grateful. I just wanted to hand over to you this letter from the Prime Minister which is in reply to your letter.

President: You are always welcome. You were away to India—on work/holiday.

Ambassador: Holiday to begin with, then I was inducted in connection with Brezhnev’s visit; as a result I had six days’ holiday only.

President: Yes, you were away when I saw your outgoing Defence Attache. I though that…

Ambassador: Yes, he was deeply honoured and touched by your gesture.

President: I wish I could have met the new one but he could not come because he was unwell.

(Reading the letter*)

Ambassador: The main para on page three is the hard core of how we feel.

President: It is kind of her, especially the sentiments in the last paragraph.

*The Official Spokesperson of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs said in New Delhi on January 12, that in her letter to President Zia-ul-Haq, Mrs Gandhi had said that the people and Government of India and she personally stood committed to the promotion of friendship, understanding and cooperation between the two peoples.

Mrs Gandhi said: “Friendly relations between the two countries are important for the well-being of our two peoples. They are also major factors in establishing peace and stability in this region. Therefore, guiding these relations on constructive line is not only a vital responsibility of our two governments put also imperative necessity for progress and prosperity of our two peoples.” Her letter was in response to the greetings Gen Zia sent to her on her birthday on November 15 last.
Ambassador: Our attitudes have not altered. They are here reiterated.

President: The last para is most encouraging, but the letter shows some hesitations, some suspicion, some misunderstandings.

Ambassador: Sir, with you at the helm of affairs, we should now be able to look forward to removing all doubts. My Prime Minister has given her clear assurances.

President: I am most grateful to her, but I note that she has been unhappy with my references to Kashmir. Every time I have made a statement on Kashmir, you have taken objection. I don’t understand this. Sincerely speaking, I think I have followed the Simla Agreement. We do not know whether there was any other understanding other than the record of the Simla Agreement that we have. Was there anything else in the Simla Agreement because Madam Gandhi, if I may use the word, seems to be very allergic to the very reference to Kashmir. We agree with her; we agree on what she says that the problem of Kashmir could only be dealt in terms of the Simla Agreement. To that extent, let me assure you that we have followed the essence and letter of the words and spirit of the Simla Agreement. The Simla Agreement provides for a bilateral solution without prejudice to our respective stands. But on your side whenever...

Ambassador: If I may respectfully say so, Sir, reference to Palestine and Kashmir in the same breath at the U.N. by you is not in keeping with the spirit of the Simla Agreement. There was understandably strong reaction to your U.N. reference in India.

President: But these are problems of the whole world, of the Muslim world. I only brought them to the notice of the Assembly. The Simla Agreement does not prevent us from mentioning Kashmir in international bodies. As I said, the Agreement was without prejudice to our respective positions to be settled bilaterally without resorting to force. Simla Agreement is the basis on which I want to promote our relations.

Ambassador: This is the bedrock on which our relations are based. The Simla Agreement does not say that Kashmir has to be mentioned. We do not refer to the problem internationally. We have learnt from our experience in the past twenty odd years before the Simla Agreement that the problem is better left to be settled bilaterally rather than internationally. We went to the U.N. as an aggrieved party in 1948. Just as you have your compulsions; we have our own.

President: Quite right, but what do you want us to do?

Ambassador: The Simla Agreement provided a method which, as I said, was based on our past experience. We should follow this method. If I may respectfully say, in the Non-aligned conference next month, when your Foreign Minister speaks, a reference to Kashmir should be avoided. This will be noted by us and our people. This could be a beginning.

President: But I mentioned it in Havana.

Ambassador: Yes, but you are Head of State and we could not stop you. People there were rather surprised because not only were you joining Non-Aligned countries for the first time, but you were also aware that bilateral problems are not usually raised in this forum. However, this is in the past. You are now at the helm of affairs. You are in supreme control here. You can help in creating the right kind of atmosphere.

President: I have done whatever. I could on our part. But 80% of the action is from India. I have always said this and I still say: you are a bigger country; you have a bigger role to play. We are not in competition with you. We are fully willing to accept you as a bigger State. What we do not want is to live under the umbrella of Indian security. She has also herself mentioned that she is committed to the independence and sovereignty of Pakistan.

Ambassador: I was reading yesterday some of the works of Pandit Nehru. He said that Indo-Pak relations overshadow our domestic and foreign policies. These relations can be very close or very hostile. When we consider the question of Pakistan we have to look at it as a whole. We have to keep in mind the past because what we say now has grown out of the past. Our relationship is unique. Smt. Gandhi is committed to good relations with Pakistan. You do not have a Parliament to worry about, You do not have pressures from politicians. We do. The present Government has extended its hand of friendship.

President: As I said, I am prepared to go more than half way. I genuinely want good relations with India even at the cost of annoying some of my friends here. We have done a considerable amount. I succeeded in breaking the ice with Morarji Desai, but I am sorry to say I have not been able to establish rapport with Madam Gandhi. When I met her at Salisbury, I tried to explain to her, but she has continued with her suspicions and reservations. What can I do to have them removed? I refer to Kashmir you object to it. You talk about our arms purchases, which is not there. You blame Pakistan for tilting towards West and America.

Ambassador: Sir, this is because of sound historical reasons. As I was telling Mr. Agha Shahi the other day, military governments in Pakistan in the past have always had good relations with Republican Governments in the USA. Tension during these periods have risen.

President: But we are a Non-Aligned country now. We have withdrawn from the CENTO. We refuse to take military assistance from the Americans.
Foreign Secretary: Sir, If I may interrupt. (Turning to Ambassador) What is your thinking? Where do we now go?

Ambassador: What is yours? As I was saying, next month you are going to the Non-Aligned Foreign Ministers’ Conference in Delhi. The formulation of your Foreign Minister’s speech, the words he uses will be heard by us with great interest. He would be listened to not only by us, but by others. He will be among the most important Foreign Ministers there. What he says will be of great importance and can give the direction of Indo-Pak relations for sometime to come. In July, it was a pity that all the good result achieved was lost because of bad staff work on both sides. I take part of the blame. We should have exchanged the two speeches. The Press went to town next day. We really could have sorted it out and this entire misunderstanding need not have been there. The talks had gone well and our Foreign Minister in his speech said nothing controversial.

F.S.: We gave you our speech in advance.

Ambassador: No, No. This was not done as speeches on both sides were not available, if I remember correctly.

President: The question which the Foreign Secretary just now asked you is a good one. You said that we should avoid reference to Kashmir in the Non-aligned Conference. In what other manner, what other way, can we remove your suspicions?

Ambassador: You are the Head of a State. I am a mere Ambassador. But may I take your reaction to Moradabad. No responsible Party, person or paper defends communal disturbances. We condemn them and feel ashamed when these take place. Our Press exposes them. But Moradabad did not begin as a communal riot. It soon accumulated communal overtones. It is not merely a matter of shame for the Government but also all thinking Indians. At the same time, it is a reality which we have to face. There are the problems of 80 million Muslims, not merely the Muslims but also the Harijans. Hindu society unfortunately was stagnating for more than 2,000 years. Buddhism was the first reformist movement. Then once again, it went to sleep till the advent of Gandhiji. Harijans continued to be exploited. But we still have problems and it will take many years to rid society of these evils. Our problems are not simple and the scale is continental. When riots took place in Jamshedpur in 1978, Sir, you did not say a single word, but on Moradabad you did.

President: I was extremely careful.

Ambassador: But in the case of Moradabad, the Foreign Office issued a statement which was really an interference in our internal affairs. You would recall that Smt. Gandhi opened her Independence Day speech at the Red Fort with a reference to Moradabad. We all felt very bad.

President: But still it was an internal matter of India.

Ambassador: I was then in Lahore. Actor Mohammad Ali came to me and I told him we do realize his feelings. I asked him if he did have any relatives in Moradabad. He said he had some. I sent an officer to Amritsar to telephone Moradabad. We do realize that there are deep feelings and emotions aroused on this side. If you had a large number of Hindus in Pakistan and they were victims of communal frenzy then there would be reaction in India. Running a Secular State is a difficult task. Running a Federal State like India is even more difficult. But there is for us no substitute for secularism. This is a delicate and sensitive matter and we request your understanding. Some residual problems of partition will take long to wither away.

President: You must have noticed that I did not utter a single word. I recognized it as an internal matter of the Government of India. The Indian people have to live in harmony with each other. You have 80 million Muslims, I have 80 million Muslims. You have your problems and I have my own Problems. Here also I have problems of minorities. So I said who I am to interfere in your internal affairs.

Ambassador: But you Foreign Office issued a statement.

President: That was after great pressure was put on us.

Ambassador: What is worse was the projection in your Press. This really had an adverse effect in India. It was suggested by your Press – Government controlled Press – that you take the matter up in Islamic Organisation and internationalize it. The fury of the Press was indeed surprising and continued for almost six weeks.

But talking of the Press, I saw yesterday in the television, Mr. Suleri’s interview and must say, I was pleasantly surprised. If people like him could go and see things for themselves, then the atmosphere could improve.

Foreign Secretary: But see what Kuldip Nayar has written in his latest book.

President: Yes, this has really made me worried.

Foreign Secretary: We really feel that all this objections of yours on Kashmir, on our arms procurement etc. are really the symptoms of a deeper malice.
What is important is not merely removing the pain, but to remove the disease.
Suppose we remove these problems, will the doors open up? What you are saying of Kashmir, reaction to communal problems, etc. appears to be really what is only on the surface.
President: You must understand our fears. We have to live together in equality, mutual respect. We naturally have our apprehensions of our bigger neighbour.

Ambassador: Solutions are not easy and need good-will and right policies. Your joining the Non-Aligned Movement has been a good decision. We have always felt that necessity of Pakistan being a part of the movement. But you had a different outlook in the 50's and 60's. You took a particular turn which we thought wrong and injurious. So we welcomed your joining the Non-Aligned Movement. Our Additional Secretary has just arrived. I received him at the airport. He has come to discuss the draft of the document for the Non-Aligned Foreign Ministers' Conference. This is really a welcome development. India and Pakistan joining together in trying to work out non-aligned declaration in respect of the problems faced by the world. This did not happen five or ten years before. It is a small advance. It is a healthy development. We took the initiative for this.

President: Yes, it is a very healthy development.

Ambassador: Yes, this can mark the beginning of cooperation between our two countries in this forum. From here we can expand the area of our cooperation. We have a long way to go. This is a very long haul. Such cooperation can only be for the good.

President: I do admit that the Indian Government has taken many important steps like increasing of visits and more visas by opening of your Consulate in Karachi; all this does help to remove misunderstanding. But India has got to take the bigger step being the bigger country. I am committed to friendship with India and there is no going back on it. But in my heart there are also the fears of our past experience and of the future. We cannot forget what happened in Bangladesh. We have also fears of the motives of the Soviets from Afghanistan. But I want to live in peace; we must live like good neighbours. You are the bigger, larger and more developed nation. We are not in competition with you. We want to live in peace. I am prepared to do whatever we can. The Indian leadership must also appreciate this.

Ambassador: We do not want to keep anyone under our umbrella. What happened in Bangladesh was due to historical reasons. It was a result of certain polices—unacceptable policies pursued here by certain personalities. But you know the facts. I don’t have to go into details, but your Provinces have never had the kind of provincial autonomy and federal structure we have tried to work. That leads to your problem of national identity.

As regards Soviet Union, when Brezhnev came, I was in Delhi. He represented his point of view; spoke about the help being given to Mujahideens particularly by Pakistan. Mrs. Gandhi explained our position. She said that we were aware of Soviet difficulties and their origins. But their policies in Afghanistan caused practical difficulties for us and within the non-aligned movement. Some political advance was imperative. Our relationship with the Soviet Union is mature enough and deep enough not to result in misunderstanding from such statements. Mrs. Gandhi expressed her view in a frank manner. The position she adopted form the very beginning was that condemnation will not help. You have tried it and it has not worked. We must try to find a political solution, which will enable them to get off the hook. But at the same time she clearly stated that India was opposed to the induction of foreign troops and outside interference. President Reddy said the same thing. It may be said that we may have had some influence in making the Russians accept the Secretary-General’s representative and you have announced that you are willing to talk to Karmal's party and not the Government in power. But there is no difference between the party and the Government. This is mere semantics.

President: Yes, very little difference.

Ambassador: Mr. President, I am only just an ordinary Ambassador. You are representative of a great country. The 750 million people must learn to live in peace and cooperation with each other. Geography has put us together. We cannot alter geography. We must try to develop good relations through efforts on both sides, which can be only achieved through understanding and patience. In your vision of a future Pakistan, good relations with India should be the central feature.

President: Ambassador Saheb, what would you like us to do about Kashmir?

Ambassador: The Simla Agreement has provided us with the answer. I can assure you, Mr. President, the Simla Agreement was not popular in India. Even within her Government and her Cabinet, there was opposition. But Mrs. Gandhi was extremely clear about the need for reconciliation and to find a solution bilaterally. It was an act of great statesmanship. She started the healing process. The only way that the solution could be found without resorting to force by talks between Pakistan and India.

President: The Simla Agreement is very clear. It says that we are committed to resolve the issue without prejudice to our respective positions and without resort to force. We really want to abide by the Simla Agreement. But from your objection it seems… as I said, if there is anything unwritten in the agreement, which we do not know and which we are not abiding by, please tell us.

Ambassador: No., there is nothing. However, if I may be allowed to suggest with all humility, since your reference to Kashmir in various international organizations has not helped, for whatever reasons it may be, our over sensitiveness or otherwise, you can consider another line. Since the line you have adopted has not provided the right results – you might try an alternative line, not mention Kashmir.

President: Well, one can talk more on Kashmir, but it is, I am afraid, not the only issue. Reading this letter from Mrs. Gandhi I have a feeling that this is not the only issue that is agitating her. She said she has done more than she could. I say I have done everything and yet we still have our problems. Obviously, somewhere it has gone wrong. At Salisbury I tried to explain to her. I told her that the moment the Indian leadership comes to accept the existence of Pakistan, will the problems be over. You have to accept us as an independent sovereign nation.

Ambassador: Mr. President what you are saying is exactly what the Prime Minister has stated in the letter.

President: In her letter apart from the Kashmir she has spoken about the critical reference in the press. Mr. Ambassador, apart from the Trust papers, the press is really independent. Frankly they cannot be controlled.

Ambassador: We have the same problem. We also have the opposite of the Nawai Waqt. But no responsible person in India opposes good relations. In Pakistan you have a problem regarding provincial autonomy, your system is centralized. Ours is not. You had problems in the past and even now when one goes to Sindh there are people who talk about the control of the centre. In India problems are also difficult. There are great complexities, for example, the Assam problem.

President: Yes I do admit you are a bigger country with bigger problems but because of the complexities India has to (be) a secular country.

Ambassador: No one will argue that problems in India will not have immediate reaction in Pakistan and vice versa. We have faced these reactions in the past and we will continue to do so in the future, but it is necessary that we should create a climate free of tension.

President: Any practical approach to the problem of our relationship?

Ambassador: We have long historical links. We cannot forget this. We need patience and good will. Confidence building takes time.

Foreign Secretary: Well Mr. Agha Shahi will go to Delhi next month. Let us see if he can develop more ideas regarding cooperation. It will be good if he can develop some contacts with his counterpart at least to erase the bad taste of the last visit.

Ambassador: I am at your service, to do whatever little I can.
President: Ever since Madam Gandhi has taken power I have not uttered a single word against her. My objective has been to bring about better understanding between our two countries. Even when Mr. Desai was there, things were certainly improving. With Mrs. Gandhi, whom I respect as the architect of the Simla Agreement, I really wanted to have a clean and better understanding. I took care never to interfere in your internal affairs except during Moradabad when I was under great internal pressure. Frankly speaking, I cannot demand nor can I expect that Madam Gandhi, as the leader of a democracy, not make comments on Pakistan, a military government. But to continue to comment as in the past on so many occasions or as she did in the last interview regarding our tilt to Times of India – this is not fair. Who are we tilting towards? We are a non-aligned country and have withdrawn from alliances.

Foreign Secretary: She has issue several statement about you by name.

President: I don’t mind; I do understand.

Foreign Secretary: No, but she should not. Yours is one way of looking at it.

President: I really don’t understand why she talks about the tilt. Then there is constant criticism of our nuclear programme. She was asked about our programme, she said “I only hope nothing”. We have been repeatedly saying Pakistan really has nothing.

Ambassador: All this is due to your historical relationship with the Republican Party in the States, Pakistan followed a particular policy.

President: But in 1981, it is not conceivable that we are tilting towards the Americans. We left the CENTO, we joined the non-aligned movement. Please see our record.

Ambassador: I shall faithfully convey your feelings.

President: I don’t understand why you are so sensitive on Kashmir. Only once after six occasions did I refer to Kashmir. Where is the set back really?

Ambassador: In trade. Now the ball is in your court.

President: Show some flexibility and you will find us not wanting. We have given you a list and you must tell us what you want.

Ambassador: Mr. President I don’t think you have been advised fully. We have given a package.

President: But I have responded fully saying that such and such in the package is acceptable and such and such is not. I have agreed to you in principle. I have said in principle why should we buy the same thing from elsewhere when we can get it cheaper, just half an hour away.

Ambassador: The fear that you will be overwhelmed by the Indian economy is totally unfounded. This concept of balance of trade that we have between the two countries is also not logical. By trading with us, we can help you to reduce your overall balance. We want to start with four or five areas but we are getting bogged down by details. If there is the will there is the way. As is the case of the iron ore deal. We can cooperate in the other areas too like cement and fuel from you. Or you can procure scooters from us instead of importing from Italy - from Amritsar at much cheaper price. But the problem is that those who are earning the commission are opposed to this and it will take away his annual trip to Europe. And he would hardly be interested in going to Amritsar.

President: No, no, our people love to visit your country.

Ambassador: It is unfortunate that due to historical reasons, industrial development did not take place in this region, as it did in some other parts of undivided India. But even in India, there are backward areas like Bihar whereas Maharashtra is industrially very developed. If it meets with your approval, I can work out package and show it to the Foreign Secretary.

President: I am all for it. If we can get our requirements from each other why should we patronize others.

Ambassador: We can be of great help to you in certain area, for example, medium scale industries. Similarly, you can be of benefit to us. We can save transport costs and learn from each other.

Foreign Secretary: Given the history of our past relations and differences, it will be fair to presume that any trade between the two countries must be basically balanced. This is necessary in order to prevent a backlash. One year the balance will be slightly in our favour and the next year in yours. And in due course, a pattern will emerge. In the beginning, we cannot start with a built-in system of imbalance.

Ambassador: No, when our former Commerce Secretary Shri Krishnaswamy Rao Saheb, who is now Secretary to the Prime Minister, was here, he proposed a package based on such principles which could not have adverse effect on your own industries in any way. The method which he suggested would have been beneficial to you, without causing any harm to your industry or economy. But you did not accept it.

President: Yes, we can do something.

Ambassador: If Japan and USA can be the biggest trading partners after fighting a war, if France and Germany can join the same economic community why can we not trade with each other?

Foreign Secretary: Unfortunately, because unlike these countries, we carry out our “dosti” and “dushmani” at the same time. Well Sir, I was just telling the Ambassador that I must have a long talk with him.

Ambassador: I don’t believe in scoring debating points. All that I believe is that if we can contribute a little to the process of normalization, it may perhaps be worth it. Our children may see that we at least made an effort and might deserve a footnote in some book of history.

Foreign Secretary: I have therefore suggested that after I return he joins with me while I play golf and we have a long chat together.

(After this Ambassador and President spoke about the St. Stephens Centenary. The President agreed to give permission to ex-students to go to Delhi and suggested that in Islamabad the Ambassador has a dinner for Stephenians which the President will himself attend. The meeting ended with Ambassador wishing the President a happy journey, which he said he will again do formally at the airport ceremony next morning).

Interview of President Zia-ul-Haq with Indian journalist Inderjit

March 1981

Q: Mr. President, how do you view the present state relations between India and Pakistan? Have these suffered any deterioration in past few months? If so, what has caused the setback?

A: My answer, I hope, will not surprise you. I think the relationship has improved in the recent months in the sense that we seem to have greater understanding at the leadership level at my level and at your Prime Minister level because of exchange of some notes and letters. A few months back we had some deterioration in the relationship because of certain event. But that seems to be behind us and I feel that in view of what is going on at present, the chances of improving the relationship are better than they were some time back.

Q: The press in your country has recently talked loudly of a military build up across the border. Even now there are reports in the Indian press of heavy concentration of Pakistani force along with Jaisalmer and Barmer districts of Rajasthan. There is no build-up on the Indian side. What is the reality on your side?

A: There is no build up whatsoever on the Pakistan side also. Amazingly it is not the Pakistan press which started talking about the build-up either on the Pakistan side or on the Indian. Somehow the scare, if you permit to use the word, was spread buy the Indian press. I really do not know the reasons for it. Nor do I know the force behind this. All of a sudden, we found that the Indian press was giving news items of heavy concentration of troops on the Pakistan side but nothing on the Indian side. This is all utter fabrication. There is no truth of concentration on the Pakistan side. Leave alone concentration, there is no truth even of any movement close to the border.

Q: Would you say, Mr. President, there was no concentration over the last few months at all?

A: None whatsoever. But as you are aware, there is during the winter months, some movement of troops on a minor scale along the borders near Sialkot, Lahore, Bahawalpur, Sulemanki, on both sides. In act, the concentration on the Indian side is much greater this year. But these are annual exercises. Both sides have contacts at various levels and are aware of the nature of the movements.

Q: Mr. President, do you agree that such reports create a war psychosis even when the leaders of the two countries have reportedly declared that they stand for peace and friendship? Do you think some kind of a permanent arrangement needs to be made to ensure against the build-up of such a dangerous war psychosis in future?

A: Very right. I must say that when reports of troops concentration started coming out in the Indian Press, I felt jittery, as I did not known anything about the reported movement. I think it is the responsibility of the Press on both sides to create better understanding and more confidence and not spread unnecessary rumours, scares and false reports. But I agree it would be better for India and Pakistan to come to some understanding so that such rumours and false news could be exposed and reality made known to both sides.

Q: What kind of arrangement could there be?

A: Well, the whole thing starts from a lack of trust. We must not forget that we, India and Pakistan have fought three wars. I only hope that we have both realized the futility of wars. There is realization of this in my mind. I would not mince words if I have to say to my own people that wars do not solve political problems. Political problems must be resolved through political means. In this year of the Lord 1981, might should not be right and therefore, we must have a better understanding. We must create more confidence in the minds of not only the people but also at the governments' level.

I suggested one thing to Sardar Swaran Singh when he was here. I said to him: Tell us, whether Pakistan should have a force for its own security or not. Should India have a force for its security or not? And if you come to the conclusion that there is justification for Pakistan to have an armed force for its own security, then ask your experts to tell us what should be the strength of our forces considering the defence requirements of a country like Pakistan and its geographic borders. I would accept their assessment and not debate it. In the process you may probably ask our reaction if you were to say all right, Pakistan should have this much and Indian that much. I said have as much as you like, I am not concerned. But I would be very much concerned when 18 divisions face Pakistan. We have then to think twice as to what all this exercise is about. But I made this offer.

Unfortunately, we had no reaction at first. The reaction that came much later was 'No'. India said, this is not a fair proposition. Because, Pakistan should have what Pakistan thinks necessary and India should have, what India thinks necessary. Then I said, if that be the case, why should India get allergic to Pakistan’s stress on its legitimate defence requirement. Here again, I proposed that if you want to know what we have and what we do not have, please come and ask me. I will tell you exactly what we have. And what you have I will not challenge.
Indian is a big country. Pakistan realizes this. Pakistan was dismembered in 1971. You know and I also know this. But looking at the facts of the matter today, Pakistan is a small country, with India as its next door neighbour. Some 35 years ago, we were one country. But for good, obvious and legitimate reasons we decided to part company as friends and live separately as good neighbours, friends and brothers. We have since fought three wars.

We very humbly suggest to you and through you to the people of India that it is about time that both countries decided what was good for them. As for Pakistan, I can say there is no doubt in my mind that the good of both the countries lies in peaceful relationship, in mutual understanding, confidence, and respect.

Pakistan is a small country, India is a bigger country. Pakistan today does not consider itself in competition with India. We can not. We are 80 million people, India is 650 million people. India is a bigger partner in this. It has a clear role to play and we grant it that much. But I think there is need for a batter understanding and more confidence. I am sure sooner or later these will come.

Q: These are excellent thoughts, Mr. President. I recall having a chat with Sardar Swaran Singh on his return. He and many others in the country felt that any discussion in regard to the defence forces of the two countries would have to be preceded by some political understanding. Is that what he said to you?

A: No, he did not say so. We were discussing bilateral relations and came to the question of defence forces. This is what I offered unilaterally, as an idea. However, I agree that every thing must emerge from a political understanding and it is political understanding which will bring about better military understanding, and more confidence is each other.

Q: India and its leaders opposed partition for long. Eventually, however, they accepted the creation of Pakistan. Today they wish Pakistan well and want it to be strong and stable and prosperous. Yet, many in Pakistan still seem to feel that India wants to undo partition. What is the basis for this Pakistani fear when India has nothing to gain from it? What, Mr. President, is your own perception? Do you believe that India poses a threat to Pakistan?

A: There is a doubt in the minds of the people of Pakistan, I must admit. They feel that perhaps Indian leadership or a segment of the Indian public has not reconciled to the idea of Pakistan. Whether they are right or wrong and what are the causes, you can debate for the next umpteen years. The answer will not be found. Many books have been written and many more will be written. For instance, what started the 1971 war? But its results are there. History will say that Bangladesh was created in 1971. Good luck to Bangladesh, they are our brothers. Our friends, and good luck to India. We wish them as well. But I wish that the people of India have the same feelings towards Pakistan. I am very grateful to some Indian friends who have said that we want to see a strong, stable and prosperous Pakistan. But once bitten, twice shy. In 1971 as a result of Indo-Soviet collusion Pakistan was dismembered. So this tiny little country in comparison to India is now a little scared about what is left of it. India is rich in history and is 5000 years old. Pakistan came into being only 35 years ago and is a young, budding nation anxious not to get hurt.

Q: Thank you very much, Mr. President. Much will be written on the issue of Bangladesh. Friends in Pakistan entitled to hold the view that India deliberately dismembered Pakistan in collusion with Russia. We on our side feel we did not dismember Pakistan. We had a problem on our hands and wanted a solution. We feel we should accept the reality of today. Without going back into the past. This would create the kind of atmosphere required for greater understanding, and greater trust. Do you agree?

A: We should stop living in the past. The sooner we forget it the better for both Pakistan and India. I am trying to do this every time. I speak to my friends, editors, and countrymen. And, this is my prayer to my Indian friends also. Let us forget the past, start a new chapter and let us have a real good friendship between India and Pakistan.

ON MILITARY TIES WITH USA & 1959 AGREEMENT

Q: In this context, I refer to some new misgivings in India. In 1959 Pakistan had reached an understanding with the US under which Washington had assured all help in the event of any threat to its integrity and security. According to recent reports, Islamabad now seeking full and prompt US support in the event of an attack from my quarter. Does this mean that you apprehend the possibility of an attack from India?

A: Pakistan has many neighbours. We have in the east--India, in the northeast--China, and in the north -- Russia. Wakhan area is now under the Soviet Union.

Q: Is it true that they have moved into that area?

A: Sir, it is true. So we have the Soviet Union as our neighbour with 80,000 troops in Afghanistan. Then we have Iran. Now, when I say this, there is meaning behind it. When we talk to the United States in this context, then we should be asking for a security against Iran. Do we? Against China? We have perfect relations with China. The 1959 agreement is an executive agreement and, if I may clarify, it was only meant for a particular contingency. It was of no use to us in our conflict with India in 1965 and 1971. So as far as this treaty or agreement is concerned it is null and void. It is of no use to us.
You have a relationship with the Soviet Union. It is meant for particular contingencies.

We have now asked the USA to please identify its interest in our region. It is not for Pakistan to identify the US interests. In fact we have asked them to decide for themselves what interest they have in the area which now comprises Pakistan and what they are prepared to do to safeguard those interests. If they are prepared to safeguard their interests, they ought to give that much of support and security to Pakistan, provided our interests also coincide. We are not asking for an outright military assistance or any other programme or any other agreement or treaty, nothing of the sort.

Q: Not a military pact?

A: No sir, Otherwise by now Pakistan would have received not only $200 million but much more than that from the USA. We rejected that not because we knew that it was not liked by India. We thought it was not in Pakistan's interests to enter into a military pact against anybody which is not in the interest of Pakistan. We have received no response to this from the US as yet.

Q: When was the proposal first mooted?

A: I gave this to Mr. Brazinski (early last year) and repeated it in my meeting with President Carter. It has been taken up at the foreign ministers' level. We have had no contacts of importance with the new Administration. But we have also tried to convey to them through diplomatic channels.

SIMLA ACCORD AS GOOD AS A NO WAR PACT

Q: Indian has sought to set at rest Pakistani doubts about Indian intentions by offering a no-war pact on more than one occasion. However, according to Indian leaders, the proposal has been tuned down by Pakistan each time. Do you Mr. President, think there is need for a no ware pact between the two countries and, if so, what would be the best way to go about it?

A: In the last three and a half years, we have received no suggestion as such. But a number of journalists and friends have often asked me this question. My answer has always been that the Simla agreement is virtually a no-war pact if we can implement it, both in letter and in spirit. But recently I read somewhere, I do not know where it is right or wrong, that Mrs. Indira Gandhi has totally ruled out a no-war pact. So you know it is not only our reaction, she also feels the same way.

Q: Many people in India feel and talk about a no-war pact because they feel that there seems to be some crisis of credibility via-a-vis the Simla agreement.
Therefore, one wonders whether a no-war pact in the present situation would not help the situation.

A: You have a point. But history shows us that pacts are not worth the paper on which they are written if the spirit behind them is not there. And if you want to have good relationship then you do not need a no-war pact. I feel we should really be concerned with developing a good understanding between us rather than having an agreement on paper. We hope Mrs. Gandhi is as keen as I am that we should really make a breakthrough for better understanding between the two countries.

ON JOINT DEFENCE FOR THE SUB-CONTINENT

Q: Some people have not only been talking of a no-war pact but also of joint defence for the Subcontinent. At one stage the proposal had been made by President Ayub, but it had been turned down by Pandit Nehru who said: “Joint defence against whom”? Have you given any thought to this or do you think it is not necessary?

A: If at that time the question was joint defence against whom, the same question is valid even today. Take NATO, it is a joint defence against somebody. Then there is the Warsaw pact. So, pacts like this are against common threat perceptions and common enemies. I think Pakistan and India are not facing the problem of having to stand together against a common enemy. Somebody considered an enemy by India is perhaps friendly to Pakistan. We should forget who is a friend and who is an enemy. We should come to an understanding leaving the past behind and try and open new eras.

NO PAK ARMY DIVISIONS IN SAUDI ARABIA

Q: All major sources of world information seem agreed that your country has entered into a secret deal with Saudi Arabia for the supply of two Pakistani army divisions for a payment of $800 million annually. According to some reports, these divisions may not be sent to Saudi Arabia but would be kept in readiness in Pakistan as a rapid deployment force. What, Mr. President, are the facts?

A: It is totally false. You ought to known us better. We are not mercenaries. We have an understanding not only with Saudi Arabia but 27 other countries, Islamic and non-Islamic, where we have some training missions, military missions, air force — some army, some combined together — and it is in that respect that we have some elements in Saudi Arabia on training assignments. And that is about all. A rapid deployment force kept in Pakistan for Saudi Arabia is meaningless. Who is going to move these two divisions? Neither we nor Saudi Arabia have the means of conveyance. Against whom would these be meant? All these are real conjectures. The Saudis have also denied these reports.

Q: How many people do you have in Saudi Arabia, Sir?

A: We have about 1,500 to 2,000 people. Most of them are engineers trying to improve Saudi roads and irrigation canals. And may be 200 of other personnel for training the infantry, artillery and armoured troops. This is about all.

Q: Following the Taif summit you were reported to have said that if there was any threat to Saudi Arabia, you would personally lead its defence. This statement has been viewed by some analysts to argue that if General Zia is going to rush to the aid of the Saudis, he will have to have some force already in Saudi Arabia for its acclimatization. Would you like to say something on this assessment?

A: I did not know that people read so much between the lines. Yes, I did say so. This shows my personal regard and concern for the people of Saudi Arabia. I said that if there is any kind of threat to the security of Saudi Arabia, and Pakistan is asked to help, I will lead the force myself. I will go along with it to fight if necessary. This is only my sentiment. It does not mean that I have 2000 troops there which General Zia-ul-Haq would lead in battle. No such things.

However, if there was any threat to the security of Saudi Arabia, by God, I will be the first man to go to its aid even at the expense of the Security of Pakistan.

Q: Threat to the security externally or also internally?

A: We do not interfere in internal affairs. We have our own problems. Saudi Arabia has its own just as India has its own problems. We should not think about the internal problems of any country.

Q: I am glad you answered this question, Mr. President, because people thought that you had made some kind of personal commitment to the present regime there. And even if they had some trouble internally you would rush to their aid.

A: But they have no trouble. They are a very solid, stable dynasty. The amount of work that they are doing for their country, I don’t think anybody else could do. I wish them all the best and I wish the people of Saudi Arabia all the best.

Q: There have been reports in New Delhi to suggest that Pakistan has, in addition, agreed to undertake responsibility on additional payment for the defence of Kuwait, UAE, Qatar, Bahrain, and Oman. Is there any truth in these reports about the creation of a new military grouping between Pakistan and the oil-rich Arab States.
A: This again is totally false. There is no such understanding or even talk about it. The security of the Gulf is the responsibility of the Gulf States and of nobody else. Pakistan has no intention of involving itself with anybody else in a military pact or anything like that.

Q: Some misgivings have been caused by a recent study on Pakistan by the prestigious American organization, The Rand Corporation. It has come to the conclusion that top military brass and some leading people in Pakistan are of the view that India has been and will always remain the principal threat to Pakistan. Do you accept this perception?

A: Partly they are right, because you go by record and you go by history. Rand Corporation cannot predict and I hope they do not predict. They have concluded on the basis of history that the principal enemy of Pakistan is India. Pakistan has good relations with China and can have a working arrangement with the Soviet Union. Iran is its perpetual ally. So who is left? It is India. We have had three wars and therefore they have come to that conclusion. But we should not go entirely by their study. They carried out the study in Iran, and they mixed up everything in that. And the result that came out was totally different.

So all I can say is that Rand Corporation can have their study and utilize it to their best advantage. We will draw different conclusions and live as I said not as somebody else wants us to but as we want to.

Q: Mr President, do I then take it that you do not consider India to be the main threat?

A: Militarily speaking, I will not write it off, because there is a history behind it. There is a deployment of troops. Today unfortunately, 80 per cent of the Indian troops are facing Pakistan. All your important installations cannot reach China, they can only be utilized in this region. We hope that they are for the defence of your country, but these are the factors which create suspicious and which create threat and which one cannot take lightly. If we are going all out for a good relationship, then does the other side also want the same thing?

I must tell you very frankly that when I met Mrs. Gandhi in Salisbury in April 1980, I asked her: "What are you afraid of? Pakistan is a small country."

She said: "No, you are the major threat to India. Because you have attacked us three times before."

I said, "Madam, it might have been at that time. But you have reduced us to half and dismembered us. How do you consider Pakistan a threat to India? I want to assure you that irrespective of the threat that you may see, Pakistan wants to be very friendly with India."
So between India and Pakistan this jigsaw puzzle will continue until such time that we really decide and try and remove the elements which create not only misgivings but elements which create unnecessary doubts and suspicions.

ON KASMIR, SIMLA ACCORD & INTERNATIONAL FORUMS

Q: May I now turn your attention to the Simla Agreement. Many in India feel that this accord provided for a de facto solution of the Kashmir issue along the line of actual control resulting from the ceasefire agreement of December 17, 1971. The agreement, it is further argued in India, virtually gave the line of control the status of an international border. Mr. Bhutto, it is said, wanted time to formalize this understanding and hence the reference in the agreement to “a final settlement” of the issue. What is Pakistan’s position now on this?

A: We have tried to find out whether there was some secret understanding between Pakistan and India at the time of the signing of the agreement. We have tried to probe. In fact I asked a very direct question and we sent out queries at diplomatic level to know whether there was a secret understanding. Because according to us the Simla agreement is what it appears to be. It is very elaborately described agreement. And according to it line of control is no more than a line of control.

Q: Has the line of actual control not been invested with the status of an international border? In the sense that this line of control shall not be changed through the use of force by either country?

A: No sir, no. It is a ceasefire agreement which has resulted in a line of control. It does not replace the international border. It further states that both sides agree not to alter the position by resort to force. But it is not necessary that we accept it. It only provides that if there is a doubt we will not go to war on that issue. But it does not stop either side, as it very clearly says, to take the issue to any forum that they like, subject to the understanding of the agreement and to the respective positions taken by both the sides. In other words the Simla agreement does not say that Pakistan will not talk about Kashmir at any other place except in the presence of the Indian Prime Minister or when Indian and Pakistani teams are present. It is unfortunately a hurdle in the relations between Pakistan and India. But it is a political problem and I say we should solve it politically be it now, next year or later. India being a bigger partner should have greater flexibility, should make the bigger gesture. If it can accommodate the UN General Assembly resolutions on the issue and resolve it, a very big step would have been taken in the normalization of relations.

Q: You are talking in terms of going back to the UN resolution.

A: Yes, our position has never changed. Simla agreement has not replaced the resolution of the UN. It has only brought about the modus operandi for solving problems including that of Kashmir. Let us try bilaterally first. If there is any problem and you are not satisfied, let’s take it to the UN, the non-aligned movement or any other forum.

Q:  The Simla agreement provided for resolving all outstanding disputes bilaterally. Specifically, the agreement provides for resolving disputes “between the two countries by peaceful means, mutually agreed upon, between them.” So the whole exercise was then to pull issues out of international forums and sort them out between ourselves.

A:  That was the spirit, except in respect of Kashmir. It says very clearly in para 4 of the agreement that with regard to Kashmir, not withstanding the position maintained by either side, the Kashmir problem should be resolved peacefully. But again the exact words are not before me. Our position on Kashmir is that we abide by the UN resolutions, and we hope that some day India would also abide by them.

Q:  This raises altogether a new point in the sense that one has been expecting discussion on bilateral basis. When do you think you would like to discuss the issue?

A:  Since it is a very crucial issue, I think we should solve the smaller problems first so that the field is clear. Once we have solved the minor problems, removed misunderstandings and misconceptions, then we should talk first bilaterally about the Kashmir issue.

Q:  In other words you accept the broad approach of the Simla agreement which provided for resolving the differences between the two countries “by peaceful means through bilateral negotiations or by any other peaceful means mutually agreed upon between them.”

A:  We maintain that all issues should be resolved bilaterally, including the Kashmir issue. In case we cannot find some solution then our basic stand is that the Kashmir issue should be resolved in the light of the UN resolutions. Let us clear the smaller hurdles first, clean up the slate and then take up the major issues bilaterally, and see what we can do about them.

Q:  In this context, considerable misgiving has been created by the fact that the Kashmir issue not only continues to be raised repeatedly at various international forums, including the Islamic Summit, but it has been equated with the Palestinian question. Further, it has been argued that the issue concerns the Islamic ummah (world). New Delhi feels that these statements are contrary to the letter and spirit of bilateralism in the agreement. One can understand your reference to it at the United Nations. But when it is posed as an issue facing the ummah and bracketed with Palestine, it causes some pain to people in India. Do you agree that these references are contrary to the spirit of the Simla agreement?

A: Even in the Islamic conference, we did not raise the issue. It was mentioned in my speech in a particular context. But Pakistan did not try to raise the issue in any resolution seek its inclusion in the final communiqué. This was on our initiative and you should give us that much of credit. As regards United Nations, I mentioned it in the context of the inability of the UN to solve problems like Palestine and Kashmir.

Q: That was a sophisticated way of putting it. The important thing is that you brought up the issue. In the case of the Islamic summit was it necessary to mention it in your statement?

A: It was very necessary. I was quoting the problems facing the Islamic world and the Muslim world. For the Muslims of Pakistan and Muslims of Kashmir, this is a burning problems or at least a burning issue. India should not be so allergic if Zia-ul-Haq mentions about Kashmir in one context or the other. We don't want to provoke India for no rhyme or reason. Whenever we have mentioned Kashmir, we have done so in a very careful manner.

ON BILATERAL TALKS WITH VAJPAYEE, MORARJI DESAI & MRS. GANDHI

Q: Would it not be better if this issue was raised by your Foreign Minister or by yourself at the summit if you did want to take it up bilaterally rather than raise it in a way that leads to misunderstanding?

A: We have raised this issue bilaterally in the sense, that we have discussed it at the foreign ministers’ level and at my level. At some stage or the other, we have got to sit down and really see how we can solve the problem.

Q: You said you discussed it at your level too. With whom?

A: I mentioned this to the then foreign minister, Vajpayee when he came. We had a good and a very frank discussion. I spoke about Kashmir also to Mr. Desai when I met him in Kenya. And I think I mentioned it to Mrs. Gandhi also at Salisbury.

Q: What was the response of the three separately?

A: Vajpayee was very understanding. He Put forward India’s arguments. But he accepted that this was a problem which we must resolve and resolve peacefully and this is what we recommended. Mr. Desai, I must say is a very able statesman. Also, mercifully and sympathetic. He agreed there was a problem and said that we were at liberty to raise it and come to certain conclusions, which would be better for both the countries.

Mrs. Gandhi was, however, extremely allergic. I think she also said: “Why do you keep on raising it?” I explained that it was written in the Simla agreement and we were going by the agreement. It was a very warn dialogue otherwise, but interjected by a few spurts of allergies here and there.

Q: Mr Desai and you are known to have talked to each other on some occasions. Did the question of a summit meeting between the two of you ever come up?

A: Before I left for Jomo Kenyatta’s funeral. I sent a message to Mr. Desai that I would like to meet him. The response from his side was warms. In fact, Mr. Desai was kind enough to ask me as to when I was coming to Delhi and I told him, “Sir, at the first available opportunity.” And this is my intention also. Whenever I feel that my visit of New Delhi would be beneficial to the relationship between our two countries I will be there in no time.

PROGRESS IN IMPROVING TIES IN OTHER SPHERES

Q: The Simla agreement was signed eight years ago. Among other things, it sought to progressively restore and normalize relations between the two countries step by step in various fields: communications, air links and over flights, travel facilities, trade and co-operation in economic fields and exchanges in science, culture and sports. Are you satisfied with the progress achieved so far? If not, what needs to be done?

A: In a way, I am satisfied. There is progress. But I am not fully satisfied. We can do a lot more and in this respect we should strive. He flights are there, travel facilities are there, trains are running. In 1976-77 only a few thousand persons came from India. In 1979-80, there were a quarter million visitors.

Q: The progress is generally halting. A cultural delegation was supposed to come to Pakistan from India. The idea was accepted in principle almost about a year ago. New Delhi has been waiting for a green signal from your side. But nothing has happened.

A: We are all for improvement even in the cultural field. I am a great lover of music of qawwali and ghazal. But there are a few constraints. Tomorrow we can ask for a cultural troupe. It would comprise Lata Mangeshkar and others. But it would create a sensation. I do think this is not the right time for such a sensation in Pakistan. Neither the dancers nor the girl singers for us. But other cultural activity must go on.
Q: What about the rail link between Khokrapar and Barmer in Rajasthan? This was to be restored quite some time back. And yet there has been no movement. This is a great disappointment to the people of Bombay.

A: There is some problems about the rail communication. Otherwise, we have no serious objection to it. I know there is a requirement for the Khokrapar link. We examine it and wherever we can improve the relations we shall certainly do so.

ON ROLE OF INDIAN & PAK MASS MEDIA

Q: Do you think that enough has been done under the Simla agreement to prevent hostile propaganda and to disseminate such information as would promote the development of friendly relations between them? New Delhi is particularly unhappy about the way recent communal incidents in Moradabad and elsewhere were projected in Pakistan both officially and in the press as being “anti Muslim.” This, in turn, provoked strong reaction in India. Would you like to comment?

A: The projection that we received here was that there were communal riots. All the reports emanated from the correspondents or the news agencies. We had no correspondent of our own at that time. When something happens then everybody starts sensationalizing. May be your own papers start from there. It is picked up by our papers. It is the Press which splashes these things. I blame the Pakistan Press equally.

Q: Many in India seem to feel that your Press has full freedom to write only in regard to India. It can go to town on communal issues or whatever stories they wish to pick up. Do you think some friendly advice could be given to the Press in your country in the context of the Simla Agreement?

A: Quite right. I think one should be more careful on such issues. I meet prominent journalists and editors practically once a month and I see in them a genuine desire of restraining themselves in Pakistan not only regarding the news about India but other news also. But some times something goes wrong somewhere.

ON TIES WITH MUSLIM COUNTRIES, CHINA & INDIA

Q: There is a view in India that Pakistan is currently more interested in identifying itself with the Islamic countries and not with secular India, ignoring history, geography and the common background. We do concede that Pakistan was founded on the basis of Islam; nevertheless the people in India would like to know where does its interest lie primarily with the subcontinent or with West Asia?
A: With both. If you think that Pakistan has decided to align itself totally with the West Asian Countries or the Islamic countries, you are wrong. We are very closely associated with China and we feel that our association with India should also be as close. To correct the impression. Pakistan's policy is that it must align itself with the Muslim countries because Pakistan is basically a Muslim country. But being part of the subcontinent. Pakistan is equally clear that it must have good relations with India as much if not better than what we have with the other countries of the region

ON PAK NUCLEAR PLAN

Q: You have denied that there is an effort to build an Islamic bomb and yet literature on the subject gets published time and again in the foreign press. The American government had reacted in a certain way, the Canadian government has come out with certain facts. And, doubt get created when you go for enriched uranium which is really not required for your own purposes of power generation. Doubts also arise when one finds that the whole exercise is not under the Atomic Energy Commission but under the Defence Ministry.

A: First of all, it is not under the Defence Ministry. This is false. But as in your country and in mine, the defence personnel get seconded to various places. Our nuclear installations and facilities are not under the Defence Ministry and are not affiliated to them even in the remotest manner. They are under the Atomic Energy Commission which is an autonomous authority and which I am looking after. I am the chief executive and the head of the Atomic Energy Commission and its facilities. Our programme is peaceful. We consider it our right to acquire nuclear technology because that is the only alternative to developing countries to fill the gap of its energy requirements. The only alternative for us is to acquire nuclear technology for peaceful purpose for our own requirements, not for defence requirements. Enrichment of uranium is a technology which is more for peaceful purposes than for anything else.

Q: Does Pakistan now believe in peaceful nuclear explosion? India, it may be recalled, has all along argues that peaceful nuclear explosions are to be distinguished from the weapons programme, Pakistan for its part; has always disagreed with this approach. Has Pakistan now changed its views on peaceful nuclear explosion?

A: We have not said so. We have not considered any explosion peaceful or non peaceful. We are not for the creation of a device which has to be exploded whether you give it the garb of a peaceful explosion or a military explosion. So, therefore, I would still reiterate that our programme is peaceful and it is for the acquiring of technology and towards that end whatever is necessary, we will do.

Q: Following the Chinese nuclear explosion, many in India had advocated a bang, if not a bomb. Some of us wonder if you are thinking in terms of at least an underground nuclear explosion (if not a bomb)?

A: We have a very modest programme of trying to enrich uranium by centrifugal process. We are in a very elementary stage. This, incidentally, will not give you a bomb. There are many other things required to produce a bomb which are not looking into. We are only looking for acquiring enriched uranium facilities so that we can have a light water reactor. And since we know that it is not possible for Pakistan to acquire or order off the shelf light water reactors or heavy water reactors or have uranium enriched from elsewhere, Pakistan will have to stand on its own feet. It is in an effort towards that to be independent and also to acquire the technology. It is a very modest programme.

SOVIET PRESENCE IN AFGHANISTAN A THREAT TO ENTIRE REGION

Q: How do you, Mr. President, view the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan?

A: It has brought about a great qualitative change which India accepts. I think we should view this with great concern when 80,000 troops come and occupy a country and install a local regime then it is for India and Pakistan both to see the implication of such a move.

Q: Does the Soviet presence in Afghanistan constitute a threat to Pakistan? Or does it also constitute a threat to the entire subcontinent. How do you propose to meet the threat or do you feel that the sub continent needs to view it collectively and also meet it collectively?

A: It is a threat to the security of the region as such because we cannot take individual countries. Today it is Afghanistan. Iran is next door and it is as great a threat to Iran as to Afghanistan. It is also a threat to India and a threat to Pakistan. The borders will then not be at the Oxus river or at Landikotal. They will be at Wagah. So it is a threat to India as well. I think we ought to view this problem regionally as well.

Q: But how do we meet it?

A: We have to meet it on two counts. It is a military problem but we known that neither Pakistan nor India would like to solve it militarily. Therefore it is more of a political problem which should be solved politically by making Soviet Union realize that what it has done is wrong. Therefore they must vacate the country, restore the status of Afghanistan to that of a non-aligned Muslim country, withdraw its troops and let the people of Afghanistan decide their own fate. And let these 1.5 million refugees who are at present on Pakistan soil return to their homes and hearths with honour and dignity.

Q: Two short supplementaries: Is it true that you are willing to have UN observers posted along the Afghanistan border to prove to the world that you are not sending in the freedom fighters. Second, have the Russians really moved into the strategic Wakhan area or the corridor of Afghanistan?

A: First, yes, I made the offer of UN observers a year ago to the Soviets and the Afghans. I said, if anybody wants to come to our borders and see if any Pakistanis are being sent from Pakistan and who is arming them? I maintain that the freedom fighters are not going from Pakistan. They are inside Afghanistan and the greatest activity is being generated now not near the Pakistan border but near the Russian border. My offer is still open today to anybody who wants to come and see.

Second the Russians have really moved into Wakhan. There are approximately 5000 Soviet troops located in Wakhan today. They have built a bridge over the river which is there and they are building a road now to link it up with the main centre of communication. We have also heard that there are some ground to air missiles as well as heavy artillery in the area, which was bounded earlier by the Soviet Union, China and Pakistan.

ON NEED FOR S. ASIAN REGIONAL FORUM

Q: President Ziaur Rahman of Bangladesh had proposed a regional forum for the countries of the subcontinent. Pakistan is reported to have accepted the idea in principle. Especially as our region is alone without any grouping to promote greater mutual co-operation. What are your own views in the matter, in the light of the highly encouraging experience of the EEC. Do you favour a summit on the subject and if so how soon?

A: We have been very clear on this. When President Zia-ur-Rahman talked to me I said it was a very good idea. But I also said that we ought to proceed very cautiously because all of a sudden six Heads of States assembling together somewhere will not solve any problems and then somebody would be allergic that so and so would not raise this question. Pakistan will not raise the Kashmir question. Bangladesh will not raise this. India will not demand that, Sir Lanka will not do that end so on. I said we ought to proceed very cautiously. It is a better that some groundwork is done. And that is possible if the talks start at a lower level. You know it took the EEC and the ASEAN countries 10 years to become viable groups. We ought to have some arrangements in the region because there is a vacuum. Perhaps we should proceed very cautiously at the foreign secretary’s level to be followed by the foreign ministers and once the necessary ground work has been done then the Heads of State should sit down, have a nice meal, have a friendly chat and solve all the problems. The foreign secretaries are due to meet early in April. We favour the get-together.

ON INTERNAL POLITICAL SITUATION

Q: Finally, the internal situation. When do you propose to implement your ideas about restoring popular democracy in your country? What if any, are the reasons for the delay?

A: The present conditions in the country do not favour such an exercise. There is trouble brewing on the western frontier. With the situation in Afghanistan, the 1.5 million refugees on our soil and with political parties being dormant, no elections can produce any clear cut results.

Elections are not an end in themselves, they are only the means to an end. I feel that at the present moment, these will not give the desired result. Some elections for the time being. Nevertheless, from the very beginning I have been saying that we are for democracy with Islamic values. And there is no fundamental conflict between Islamic values and generally accepted democratic values. In fact, Islam is much more democratic than the so called western democracy. Because Islam lays down that everyone is accountable. You can catch a Head of State outside his house and ask him, “what have you done?”

I envy India in one respect. Whatever form of democracy is practiced there, it has been going on for the last so many years— from the days of the Government of India Act of 1935 (the first elections to state legislatures were held in 1937 under the Act) and even before that. Then, in India there is not one but three generations who have grown in democratic tradition.

But it has not been so in my country. The Father of the Nation died early. Then the Prime Minister was assassinated. Then there was a political turmoil. Next, there was the first term of martial law, then the second term and now this is the third term of martial law. In other words we have not had viable institutions.

It has been our effort to get the whole thing institutionalized. And the first thing we have done is to establish democracy at the lower level. After 15 years, we have had elections to local bodies. They are functioning very effectively for the last one and a half years. This is the foundation on which a democratic structure has to be built. Elections will be held in due course. For the time being, I am for greater participation of the people at various levels.

Since I cannot hold elections, I have got to do something by which the people can participate. The Cabinet is already there. Instead of the elected Assembly, I am now bringing in a nominated Assembly by having people who are elected representatives, such as the doctors of the medical association which elects its executive body. The Council will for example have representatives of labour, teachers, engineers and students. I will have them all assembled, from committees and let them advise the government. They will act as the spokesmen of the people. They will act as a bridge between the people and the government and allow us to move to a point when we could hold elections. And then there could be a peaceful transfer of power from the military to civilians.

MRS GANDHI’S GESTURE RECIPROCATED

Q: To concludes, Mrs. Gandhi recently sent you a warm personal letter in which she assured you that India respects the integrity, sovereignty and independence of Pakistan. What is your message for her and for India and its people?

A: In the first place. I must thank your Prime Minister, Mrs. Gandhi for a very warm and friendly message. We are very grateful and we reciprocate it wholeheartedly. I also wish to take this opportunity of conveying through you, my love and affection for the people of India and my very best wishes. I look forward to visiting your great country at the first opportunity I can get. I hope you will be kind enough to convey my message to the people of India.

We on this side of the border have a lot of goodwill, a lot of affection for them. We have also a few stains as well which require to be washed away. But when given the present atmosphere, environment and goodwill on both sides, I see a very bright future for both India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, April 3, 1981.

PAKISTAN

Now, finally or may be pre-finally Pakistan. It is known that I made more than a dozen statements in regard to Indo Pak relations during the last one year. On an average, at least one statement was made every month. Month to month, we were making new statements in the sense that we were reviewing the situation as it went on evolving. We did not make the same statement over and over. We have sent our envoys. The Foreign Minister of Pakistan also came here. We have had visits, we have had discussions here elsewhere, at the United Nations and other places. In relation to the actual meeting and contacts, I do not think that anything more could have been done. All that is physically possible to increase contacts, increase the frequency of discussions, increase the efforts to understand each other, have been done. I am not sure that anything more could have been done. Now, what is the real question? The real question is that Pakistan has to make up its mind. Ultimately, it is that simple because as I stated just a few days back in a statement in answer to a Calling Attention Motion, the attempt now is to suck Pakistan into something. Is Pakistan prepared to be sucked into it? Is Pakistan prepared to keep out of it? Is Pakistan prepared to play the role of a non aligned country, pure and simple? This is the real question. I did mention this in my statement. I made a guarded statement, yes, because things are fluid. At least on that day things appeared to be fluid. I did not want to say anything which would have the effect of pushing Pakistan into something. So, while we protested, while we expressed our concern to the authorities of the US Administration this very day — 31st March — our Ambassador is to meet Gen. Haig — we have not relented on our efforts. We have done everything that is possible to make them understand that this does not merely involve giving a few weapons to Pakistan. This goes much farther. This means creation of tensions. This means a new arms race in this region. This means a set back to the normalization of relations between Pakistan and India and it has so many repercussions. We have told the U.S. so, we have told Pakistan so. And, we are hoping against hope, because during the last three or four days, even that hope has dimmed a little, but we are still hoping that wiser counsel will prevail. However, I would like to submit to the House that if Pakistan insists on being armed to the teeth and the US Administration insists on arming Pakistan to the teeth once again, well all I have to say is that it is Pakistan’s teeth. I have nothing more to say on that. But so far as India is concerned, I would like to assure the House that we shall continue to be vigilant, we shall continue to be aware of what is happening and we shall continue to be aware of what we have to do in relation to what is happening.

Shri Chandrajit Yadav: Are you proposing to meet Mr. Haig or are you asking the Ambassador to meet him?

Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao: This question was put to me the other day. We don’t run like that. The point is that there is a setting in which two Foreign Ministers can meet. I have said that meetings will take place in due course. But I must say that any panic displayed on behalf of the Government of India would be counter productive.

Shri Chandrajit Yadav: It is not out of panic. It is a serious situation.

Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao: Absolutely, I am serious about it. I have said so. I have not ruled out meetings. I have not ruled out discussions. I have not ruled out any of those things. But the point is, there is always a setting, a kind of preparation that has to be made. It is not as though they do not know our concerns. It is not as though they are studying this problem for the first time. These decisions are made deliberately and it is not as if they do not know what India stands for. But still all efforts will be made. This promise, this commitment, I would like to reiterate to the House.

0965. Interview of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gahdhi to M.B. Naqvi of the Pakistan daily Muslim, 2 May, 1981.

Question: Madam Prime Minister, may I begin by asking you about your vision of the future of India and its place in the world?

Answer: Indian has always played a role of peace. That is vision. First of course we have to solve our own problems. Some of those solutions are dependent on peace in the world. I hope that India will always play such a role.

Question: What kind of a role would you favour for your country with special reference to the evolution of desirable state of affairs in the immediate region that we are living in?

Answer: Well the same. You known in the immediate region we have very similar problems of poverty, economic backwardness, the need for economic development, as keeping our personalities. So it stands to reason that unless there is peace and unless there is understanding between us this tremendous task becomes very much more difficult.

Question: May I at this stage refer to the changing patterns of power relations in the world? Isn’t here a need to redefine the concept and practice of nonalignment? There is a feeling that it is sort of becoming ineffective if not irrelevant. Is not there a need to make it very positive, a compelling force?

Answer: Who thinks that it is becoming irrelevant?

Question: Madam, it is the impression one gathers from the world press.

Answer: The world press has always been against non-alignment. Since the very first meeting they have ridiculed it. They did everything possible – those who wrote and who were behind them – to sow dissension among our peoples. But the movement has survived all that. At the time of the very last meeting of the Foreign Ministers of non-aligned countries which was held in Delhi, also the world press had prophesied that this would be the end of the movement. On the contrary there was a consolidation. We came up with a statement which though not satisfactory to all, as indeed no statement can be, was acceptable to all and it has been praised by both blocs, East and West.

Question: I would very largely agree with you, Madam Prime Minister but still the fact that the nonaligned movement has not been a conspicuous success. On two issues that our region particularly has reason to be apprehensive: One is Afghanistan and the other is the Iran-Iraq war.

Answer: Surely, what movement has or what person has succeeded? Now if you think that somebody else has greater success, then you can say that the nonalignment had not succeeded. But as of now the non-aligned group is far closer to success than anybody else. Besides the objective of this group is not to take particular problem like these.

Question: What about that part of the question about making it a little more active and positive?

Answer: You know that in some years the movement had become a little more divisive and therefore weakened. This was the gain of the last conference of Foreign Minister, that once again there was a feeling there is a consolidation and that a base has been built for further action.

Question: Madam Prime Minister, by all accounts the international situation in southern areas of Asia is precarious where all manners of tension and great power rivalries obtain. Without asking you to futuristically delineate the various possible scenarios, may I request you to outline the role India can and should play to defuse and improve the situation in the three or four sub regions?
Answer: As I said earlier, India has been consistently playing the role of peace and we are greatly interested in peace in our region certainly in Asia as well as in other parts of the world. One of the reasons for the birth of the nonaligned movement was this – the tension between certain power groups and big power rivalries. This is why we feel that the non-aligned movement is as relevant today as its had ever been, if not more so because it is something that tries to defuse these tensions.

Question: At this point, Madam Prime Minister, I would like to bring in the specific question of Indo-Pakistan relations. How do you view the prospects of these relations in the long-term. In the medium term, in the current situation?

Answer: I would not prophesy. I can only say that I have very sincerely hoped that the Simla spirit will not only survive but will grow because I think that is the only basis for peace in this region in the larger term of the word. As I stated in reply to your earlier question that we have largely similar problems. We are also being used directly or indirectly in other peoples’ quarrels. And we as voices of the people of the sub-continent and of Asia as a whole can only be felt by the rest of the world only, if there is much greater understanding and cooperation between ourselves.

Question: In the present situation what is your assessment of the Simla spirit? Is it any stronger today?

Answer: I think it is a bit weak at the moment. This is why we have asked our Foreign Minister to go there.

Question: May I ask a little question, indiscreet one I suppose for a pressman? Is he going with something positive?

Answer: I don’t know what you mean by positive. I hope we never think of something negative. There is no specific proposal.

Question: What concrete steps, Madam Prime Minister, can be adopted by your Government?

Answer: We are constantly trying to see that the climate does improve.

Question: Does that answer Madam Prime Minister include the steps that you propose to take in the immediate future?

Answer: Steps can only be mutual. We can talk to the Government of Pakistan. I do not think one can just mention something in the air here.

Question: Before going on to the various specific problems to be resolved between India and Pakistan, I would like to interpose Madam Prime Minister, the Afghanistan Problem. The Russian intervention there has in the view of many students of strategy greatly altered the security perception throughout South Asia. I know of Pakistan where it has. How about India’s security perceptions? Have they been affected if at all?

Answer: Well only in general sense, that any tension which is closer to us affects us. If you mean by this question that you think that Soviet Union is going to attack Pakistan, well I do not agree. But we have made our views very clear what we think about any intervention in any country. But usually people from the West pick out the Russian intervention. Now, how many other interventions have there not been by others. What is happening in the Indian Ocean? You cannot separate one particular event, however bad or unfortunate it may be, from the others because it is a long history of each person trying to go one step further. And this sort of thing is not happening only is Asia, it is happening in Latin America also.

Question: So it is. What I was interested in was that one has read in various books on the subject that from the very strictly defence point of view the peninsular India or the historical India was always regarded as a sort of unit wherein the inroads by foreign forces by forces I do not mean military forces, were regarded as detrimental to the security interests of the area. Does that view still hold ground in India?

Answer: I haven’t quite understood. But if we face whatever dangers there are together we will be stronger.

Question: You mean the countries of the Sub-continent?

Answer: All the countries. Well I would say all of Asia really, if that was possible. If it is not immediately possible perhaps sometime it will be. But you see any kind of attempt at just being against something always brings a reaction and that is why the world is in the present position.

Question: I do not have any military moves on the part of…?

Answer: No. I also do not speak of any military moves. Even otherwise if you have any kind of combination that people can think is against some kind of grouping or alignment, then it gives an excuse to other people to do what is not desirable militarily or otherwise.

Question: Well a corollary to the question Madam Prime Minister, is where do you fit Pakistan into this larger picture of the present security environment of this part of the world?

Answer: Well I have always said that we want a stable and strong Pakistan. This applies to all the other countries which are our neighbours. One of the aims of the non-aligned movement is that each country should be strong and stable in itself and safeguard it independence.
Question: You have mentioned, Madam, a while ago about the desirability of having a strong and stable Pakistan. Taking Pakistan as it is, what would you like to say or do which would contribute to the strengthening and stability of Pakistan?

Answer: I do not think that we are in a position to do much. This is something which your own Government and people must think out. The way we have built our strength was not to the liking of may people outside but it is succeeding for us and our main point was that we should be self-reliant.

Question: I am conscious that a number of Indian writers and politicians have been emphasizing the threat that Pakistan would become stronger, I am referring to the arms purchased by Islamabad. Do you think that a few more planes and guns in Pakistani hands would pose a threat that would override all basic, strategic and long term advantages of befriending Pakistan as a trusted, friendly neighbour essential to India’s long term interests?

Answer: We think that Pakistan as a trusted, friendly neighbour would be a very great advantage to India and I think to Pakistan also. I have never criticized merely the arms that Pakistan is getting. But what are the motivations at this point, and also how will those arms be used. Why are people worried? When I have spoken on this subject I have always put it in the larger framework that we do not want an arms race. Today the armament industry seems to be dominating all other industries in many parts of the world. This is a danger. Confrontation is there in many parts. In our neighbourhood there is actual war to which you referred earlier and there are many other tensions. Now at this point, if there is increase in arms it obviously increases tension.

Question: In the case of Pakistan the reason I known of is that they have ante deluvian arms and they need to replace some and even these are likely to be coming to them if at all sometimes two years from now or so. And the quantum is for all other world to see.

Answer: Well, that we do not know. Everybody does not always known what is happening.

Question: Does that warrant in your view the amount of reaction that it has elicited in India?

Answer: You known most people think that the reaction has been very mild. Even the Americans felt so. On the other hand when something has happened in India, the Pakistan Press and quite responsible people have gone absolutely over board in projecting it, well in not a very correct light. I am not saying that we should respond in the same way and we have not. But I do not think that Pakistan’s getting very sophisticated weapons at this time is going to strengthen Pakistan in any way at all.
Question: At the point, Madam Prime Minister, I would like to bring in the question of the nuclear bomb and the capabilities. Indian newspapers are full of stories of the Pakistani Bomb or Islamic Bomb, the source of which in my view is dubious. But as a point of departure one can assume that as a result of the nuclear research programme it can sometime in future acquire what is called a capability to explode a nuclear device. Would that in your view be synonymous with possessing the bomb?

Answer: No. Just an experiment would not. Whether the sources are dubious or not, I cannot say. But the information is not that there will be nuclear capabilities but actually making of bombs. Now that does change the overall situation and again leads to tension and so on and we know that there are a lot of people interested in this.

Question: Do you mean outsiders?

Answer: Also outsiders, I think.

Question: Madam Prime Minister, now what would Pakistan’s possession of nuclear capabilities such as India has possessed since 1974 do to the Indo-Pakistan relations? Could it not be made an occasion for to try and hammer out a new relationship of trust and cooperation for larger needs that you have in mind. The basic assumption I am making is that you can’t on account of Pakistan having followed a policy, you do not favour, afford not to record Pakistani cooperation in the common concern of South Asia and forcing it to look for friends in distant places.

Answer: I am very sorry but that is not factually correct. It is quite true that we do not favour military dictatorships and things like that. But we believe in co-existence. We have not let this stand in the way of attempting friendship with Pakistan. Perhaps, you will remember that it was I who took the initiative at that time. It was an extremely difficult time in which to propose one that we should have a unilateral withdrawal from Pakistan and later on to invite Mr. Bhutto here. It was not a popular thing to do, either amongst the people or amongst the politicians. Even those who are today championing the cause of Pakistan somewhat loudly – and I can put it what way none of them wanted it at that time. But it is because I kept this aim which you have mentioned, that we have common concerns and friendship is the basic necessity that I stuck my neck out so to speak, and I still think, still thinking. It was the right thing to do. As a result of that effort we have diplomatic relations with Pakistan and we have not gone as far as we have hoped but certainly relations are better than they had been before that.

Question: No what I had in my mind on the nuclear question is that it is likely to have some consequences in the relationship. Would that be not an occasion for you to make some such similar try?
Answer: There will be occasions all the time. Why do you have to wait for something to happen? The occasion for something to try for friendship is a continuous process.

Question: True. It is very true. But that might be a little more compelling action when the need for such need might be recorded with greater degree?

Answer: You see, earlier you mentioned our reaction in India and it is true that amongst the people the reaction is very sharp. We had a hard time in Parliament as well as Consultative Committees and various other Committees of Parliament, but your own Government's pronouncements as such make it very difficult. At no time we could stand in the way of any of Pakistan's legitimate needs of defence or anything else. It is because they get combined with a particular attitude that misgivings and apprehensions arise in people's minds.

Question: May I just add a little? Am I right in concluding that you would respond favourably if there were some kind of an initiative from Pakistan for a greater understanding?

Answer: It is not a question of initiative. It is a question of attitude.

Question: Well Madam, rightly or wrongly the impression that has spread in Pakistan that you are somewhat cold and distant towards Pakistan and that you are only concerned with making India a great power. This had fuelled the old mistrusts and fear of India's true intentions. How do you wish to dissolve this feeling?

Answer: As I said, if this was true, why would we have taken all the trouble (of returning territory and POWs). At that very moment, hardly anybody stood with me when I said that we must have peace with Pakistan. We thought that it was an opportunity which we should take. But I almost alone stood out against it at that time. Now if I had any evil intention towards Pakistan, why would I not have taken that opportunity to do something when I had it? Moment of one can say the greatest bitterness in Pakistan and here a feeling of triumph and so on (and which I do not share because I said that these are passing matters). But at that moment I stretched out a hand of friendship and that remains. Furthermore I have said many many times I do not believe in this idea of great power or any type of power.

We are trying to strengthen India in very possible way but only so that we have the capability of solving the problems of our own people. We feel our independence is not complete till we have given the people more economic independence and the opportunity to grow to their full stature and we find that the experience of other countries show that you cannot do it unless you have a base of self reliance. This is why we are working so hard towards it.
Question: Do you think that you will take an initiative that would appeal to the popular imagination in Pakistan? I take it that you wish to see good relations between India and Pakistan. Is it not time for you Government to take some bold steps to improve this climate?

Answer: Well if you suggest something we will see if it can be done.

Question: There could be some unilateral move even if the other side is not coming up with a concrete proposal.

Answer: But just saying something and not getting it done does not always help the situation. This is why we are trying to keep the dialogue going in the hope that something will emerge from the dialogue something helpful.

Question: Well, on the subject of improving the climate of relations in the region, I would like you to give your ideas on the subject of a political solution of the Afghanistan crisis. What in your view should be the way that Pakistan should go about this business and what initiatives can Indian take, if things were propitious and how these things can be made propitious?

Answer: I am afraid this is a very difficult question because Afghanistan has got bogged down. I think if people had seen it in right perspective it would have been easier to solve. But, as I said, most countries look at it as an isolated case. We do not see a similar out cry about similar situation in other parts of the world. Now all we can do and which we are doing is to talk to various people and to try and keep in touch with situation. The Soviet say Pakistan started interfering first and is encouraging infiltrators and so on. They even said that if only Pakistan stops interfering, they will be able to come out. I know that Pakistan has denied interference.

Question: Madam, giving the power equations between Soviet Union and Pakistan is it conceivable that Pakistan would like to do that kind of thing?

Answer: Well, they are not directly fighting with the Soviet Union, are they? And I don’t think in the heart of hearts they think there is a danger of the Soviet Union retaliating in militarily or any other way.

Question: I foresee any number of options open to the Soviet Union which can be very hurtful to Pakistan short of any military action. Without any military action they are in a position to make life very difficult for Pakistan. And anyone who does that ought to know what the possibilities are. Which is one reason why I think that a political solution…

Answer: We all want a political solution.

Question: A slightly more active role from you might be helpful.
Answer: Well, we are being as active as we can.

Question: Here, may I take an overview of the economic solution that obtains in India and also in the region? India’s achievements in this field are spectacular and yet the problem of people living below the poverty line is far from being solved. It is defyng solution. Similar is the case with other sub continental countries. There is much talk of economic cooperation in the region which will make a greater contribution to the prosperity of all. What are the economic concomitants to such a cooperation and how does your Government propose to create those conditions in which regional cooperation may really have a chance?

Answer: Firstly, I would like to say that the problem of poverty is not defyng solutions. One the contrary, we are reaching out to the people. Only, it takes time. We have nothing like the poverty that we used to have. And I have traveled a very great deal and especially when I was out of power I had to go mostly by road. So I went to quite remote places and I saw nothing that I had seen even ten year earlier. So these problems are being solved. But of course with every day, people’s awareness is more sharp and they want that we should go much quicker. They want more things. Their needs are increasing also day by day. Whereas people once were content with one meal a day, it is insufficient now. It is not sufficient and rightly so. But it is not true to say that poverty is defyng solution. Unfortunately, in between when there is any kind of other trouble the poor suffer more. Sometimes there is a slackening. Sometimes people in authority are not so interested in these programmes. But the problems are so gigantic. In Asia and Africa and Latin America there has been tremendous interference from outside and that is continuing. It takes different forms and now they are much more subtle than they used to. There are groups of people who indulge in activities that retard progress and which divert money from the basic things to just ensuring normalcy. But economic cooperation is essential and that is why in the non-aligned movement previously we had been laying far greater stress on the economic aspect. This was a way of binding people together. It was after wards when more politics came in that the movement weakened and the differences in people’s views came to the fore. I think that many of us in the developing world are in a position to help other, although we need help ourselves and in the Non-aligned movement it is our policy to strengthen these economic links.

Question: I was more particularly interested in the political pre-conditions that go with regional economic cooperation. You did mention obliquely the foreign influences that are keeping the people disunited and away from cooperation. Are there not other requirements of a political nature?

Answer: Obviously, if there was political understanding economic cooperation would be much closer. But I would say that the right way to find out what ever cooperation there is then try to enlarge.
Question: I was thinking of the possible framework within which economic cooperation could be pushed forward, expanded as well as intensified.

Answer: That is something that can't be done just unilaterally. It is something that has to be worked out inch by inch.

Question: True, but some kind of original inspiration or vision can be held out before working towards it begins?

Answer: You see, first the Government of Pakistan must also feel that our interests are largely complementary. Unfortunately they have always regarded us with suspicion, as you said. Now it is true we are a big nation but size can be a liability. It is not always strength.

Question: There could be ways.

Answer: We are always searching for those ways.

Question: There have been many statements in India about the clouds of war lowering over the horizon of South Asia. This kind of talk is creating an altogether a new fear psychosis in Pakistan where India's position towards Pakistan’s purchase of arms is misunderstood as a desire to keep Pakistan weak and vulnerable. How will that help India unless it is a way of papering over domestic crises? Also the overall security environment seems to have gravely worsened.

Answer: I don’t know about Pakistan, but I can assure you there is no desire for papering over any domestic crisis. We have to deal with each as it arises and solve the problems which give rise to them. Therefore, that is no way so far as we are concerned. So far as the talk about clouds of war, they are not found in India. India has been visited by a very large number of statesmen and officials from foreign countries and I can tell you that all of them have expressed their deep concern over this. Not between India and Pakistan, but the whole world. There does seem to be a greater concentration in our region because of the one war that is already being fought. There also are so many outstanding problems from before. Because you say that India’s remarks about Pakistan arms are being misunderstood, it is for you and for the Government of Pakistan to clear this misunderstanding. A country cannot be strong merely by the accretion of arms. Strength is in the people. I do not want to quote historical examples. You can have all other strength but if the foundation of a strong people is not there, then it does no help. In fact it can become a danger to the country itself. This is how we see the situation. We don't want this area to be caught up in global strategy and global rivalries. We think that is a greater danger. We are not afraid of Pakistan having arms, or Pakistan attacking us.
We can deal with it. But when once Pakistan becomes a part of these strategies then I think it become much more dangerous.

Question: The misunderstanding I was referring to was that an impression has gathered that...

Answer: But I think the impression is deliberately created.

Question: But it is widespread enough. Our people get hurt that the Indian Government doesn’t let the Pakistan people decide what level of arms they need and want to have.

Answer: Now, how we are interfering with your decision? We are giving our point of view as we give on many issues. But after all, it is for you to decide. We are just saying that experience has shown that this is not strengthening the country. And I would like to assure the people of Pakistan of the fund of goodwill which exists in India towards them, as any Pakistani visitor can see for himself. I can also assure you that this extends to the Governments. The Government has a feeling of goodwill and concern for the people of Pakistan and, as I have said in reply to several of your questions that we feel that a stable Pakistan and the progress of the people is as much in India’s interest as it is in Pakistan’s.

0966. Statement of External Affairs Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao on arrival in Islamabad.

Islamabad, June 8, 1981.

I am grateful for the warm welcome extended to me and to the members of my delegation. My feelings on arriving in your beautiful country are a pleasing mixture of joy and anticipation. To avail myself of your kind invitation is, for me personally, an event that delights. I bring you the greetings and good wishes of our beloved Prime Minister, Shrimati Indira Gandhi, and the greetings of the millions of my countrymen who look to the people of Pakistan with affection and goodwill and who share the belief that India and Pakistan wish to build a splendid edifice of amity and cooperation.

In the last thirty odd years, we have had a chequered relationship now cordial, now strained – a mixed phenomenon of complexes affirmatives and doubts. This could now be consigned to the past, if we so wish. India wishes this sincerely. Let us give ourselves a chance.
We made a good beginning when we signed the Simla Agreement in 1972. The Agreement was more than a theoretical framework for peace; it was an impetus to greater friendship. Its spirit, to my mind, is much more comprehensive than the clauses contained in it. It flows invisibly like the well known “gupt vahibi” river Saraswati at the confluence of the rivers Ganga and Jamuna, and several other such confluences. We have come some distance since the Agreement was signed and there has been appreciable progress in what we have undertaken. But much remains to be done.

Ever since Shrimati Indira Gandhi returned to the helm of affairs in our country, we have, under her direction and guidance been working to improve Indo-Pakistani relations. We had the privilege, of welcoming Foreign Minister Agha Shahi to India last year. His visit gave an opportunity for both sides to understand each other a little more and appreciate each other’s perceptions. I trust that my visit will further this process.

INDIA’S COMMITMENTS TO FRIENDLY RELATIONS

India’s commitment to friendship with Pakistan incorporates its support for Pakistan’s well being and growth. Our Prime Minister has had occasion to underline this, and I take this opportunity to state unequivocally that we are committed to respect Pakistan’s national unity, territorial integrity, political independence and sovereign equality.

This is why we welcome your stated adherence to the creed and principles of non alignment. Commitment to the non-aligned cause has been a cardinal tenet in India’s foreign relations, and we are convinced that in a world beset by suspicion and confrontation, non alignment is the only guarantee of independent and meaningful action. Our support for your non aligned status is a necessary corollary of this conviction.

Let me also add that our friendship will be a two way current and between equals. I have had occasion to state this in the past, and I repeat it now: we are by no means insensitive to your concerns. We wish you well. As our Prime Minister said recently political independence is not complete till we have given the people more economic independence and the opportunity to grow to their full stature. We believe therefore that your stability and strength contribute to the well-being of the region in which we all live.

India and Pakistan must together have a more munificent vision for the future. We have shared traditions going back thousands of years. Consequently we have shared strengths and frailties too. This shows that cooperation between us makes good sense. We worked and are still working in close cooperation in many fields – to take a few examples; effort to eradicate apartheid; commitment to the establishment of a just and equitable international economic order; cooperation in international cultural, educational and other fora. Our work at the recent Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-aligned countries in Delhi achieved an acceptable objective without either of us claiming to have done any favour to the other. There is much more that can be done. And we believe that our cooperation can transcend or be made to transcend, whatever differences we might happen to have. I am sure we can take these differences in our stride as we go along, without permitting them to hold our countries to ransom.

Cooperation is possible, as I said, in many fields. Let us, to begin with, learn from each other. No nation is omniscient. You have at least as much to give us as we might have to give you. Let our people understand the variety and depth of all that exists in both countries. They are likely to find, after all, that to a large extent they dream the same dreams.

I have come to Pakistan, then with this belief in mind that we, on our part, shall work to deepen our friendship and cooperation with you hoping for a completely free and voluntary response from you.

I am looking forward to my talks with my colleague the Foreign Minister and other colleagues besides paying my respects to His Excellency the President. I hope my stay in this country will be pleasant and fruitful and compensate for the inconvenience in the hot summer which I am inflicting on my hosts in receiving me.

Thank you.
Joint Statement issued at the end of the visit of External Affairs Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao to Pakistan.

Islamabad, June 10, 1981.

The Foreign Minister have had two rounds of formal talks and number of informal discussions. During his stay in Islamabad Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao was received by the President of Pakistan, Gen Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq. Shri Narasimha Rao also met the Finance Minister Mr. Gulam Ishaq Khan. These exchanges have resulted in much closer understanding of each others viewpoints which provides a good basis for the further improvement of bilateral relations.

The talks were frank and constructive, and were held in a relaxed and cordial atmosphere.

Keeping in view the shared desire to improve relations between the two neighbours, it was felt that the process of confidence building called for patient and continuous effort. They noted that the strengthening of friendship between India and Pakistan served the interests of both peoples and was indeed a geopolitical imperative. They recognized that the news media on either side had a vital role to play in promoting better understanding between the peoples of the two countries.

Reaffirming their commitment to the Simla Agreement both sides noted that this agreement constituted a firm foundation for the preservation of peace and improvement of relation between the two countries. They noted that the Simla Agreement rules out the use of force or the threat of use of force between the two countries, and provides for peaceful settlement of all issues.

There was an in-depth discussion on bilateral matters between the senior officials of the two delegations. Further positive action in a number of areas was agreed upon with a view to expanding mutual cooperation.

There was a general exchange of views on various international issues including the Iraq-Iran War, the situation in the Middle East, the question of Gulf Security and the establishment of a zone of peace in the Indian Ocean. The views of the two sides on these subjects broadly coincided and the Foreign Ministers decided to keep in touch with each other in regard to future developments.

Both sides strongly condemned the Israeli aggression in Lebanon and the attack on Iraqi nuclear installations which have created an explosive situation.

With regard to the situation in Afghanistan the two Foreign Ministers reaffirmed their adherence to the declaration of the Non Aligned Foreign Ministers meeting in New Delhi in February 1981. They stressed that efforts should continue to be made to arrive at a comprehensive and just political solution of the Afghanistan crisis.

Both sides reiterated their policy of using nuclear energy for peaceful purposes. They called upon all nuclear weapon states to engage in serious discussions on nuclear disarmament.

The two sides reaffirmed their adherence to the principle of Non-alignment which rules out participation in military pacts. Both sides agree that each country had the sovereign right to acquire arms for self defence. In this context they explained to each other their parameters of their defence acquisition and decided to remain in touch with each other on a continuing basis.

The two sides have agreed on more frequent exchanges of views at various levels. Mr. Narasimha Rao has invited Mr. Agha Shahi to pay a visit to India before the end of the year. The invitation has been accepted with pleasure.

0968. Address of Minister of External Affairs P.V. Narasimha Rao to Pakistan Institute of International Affairs.

Karachi, June 11, 1981.

Mr. Chairman, Sir, You Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi, Ladies and Gentlemen, Sisters and Brothers.

It is indeed an honour for me to be invited by you to speak to the Pakistan Institute of International Affairs, which was inaugurated by that close associate of the Quaid-e-Azam, Nawabzada Liaquat Ali Khan. It is a measure of the breadth of vision of the Quaid-e-Azam and the Quaid-e-Millat that within six months of the creation of Pakistan they should have set up this Institute of high academic standing to interpret Pakistan to the world and the world to Pakistan. Earlier today, I placed a wreath on behalf of the Government and people of India at the Mazar of the Quaid-e-Azam. As I did so, I recalled Mahatma Gandhi’s letter to the Quaid in January, 1940 hailing the title conferred upon him. On this occasion I am particularly happy that H.E. Mr. Agha Shahi is present here. I have perhaps been causing him great inconvenience by dragging him wherever I go! He has been gracious enough to put up with this inconvenience and accompany me throughout my visit to this country. This has made it possible for us to talk informally and in a relaxed atmosphere. I am grateful to him.
Mr. Chairman, Sir, Pakistan and India met their tryst with destiny as independent nations within twenty four hours of each other. In his very first statement as Prime Minister of independent India, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru declared that "we look upon the world with clear and friendly eyes". I bring today to my friends in Pakistan that same message. I also bring to you the message of our Prime Minister, Shrimati Indira Gandhi – "We have common concerns and friendship is the basic necessity".

There can be no doubt that while our fight for freedom was on, it was for the whole country as such and generally understood and felt on that basis. Naturally, therefore, as the struggle advanced to more and more decisive stages and as more and more signs of success appeared on the horizon, the emerging two dimensional concept of freedom came to be attended with controversy, whose intensity increased correspondingly with the overall quick tempo of the phase immediately preceding independence. Yet, after the crescendo, when freedom came as a fact, controversy gave place to conciliation. To be sure, it was gradual, even painful, this process of tapering off of tensions; yet it brought about a new atmosphere of normalcy in general, barring of course the specific problems that had surfaced meanwhile.

It may not be out of place to point out here that, in many ways, the partition of the country was debated and implemented in a manner which was entirely familiar to the common people of India. The concept of partition among co-sharers or co-inheritors was and is so much a part of our tradition that many persons from outside the sub continent, who had wanted a perpetual attrition at the people's level between the two countries, were rather unpleasantly surprised at the comparative ease and speed with which both countries, soon after the fact, plunged headlong into their respective internal problems – barring, I repeat, the specific issues that had been thrown up between them. Partition no longer remained an issue as such, just as in the face of the impending monsoon, partition of the ancestral land between two farmer brothers concluded during the preceding summer months no longer remains an issue. Their hope and effort directed towards the future. Their efforts depended on the monsoon, not against each other. So was, by and large, the case with the people of India and Pakistan.

New Relationship

Further, Mr. Chairman it is not our practice in this part of the world to hark back again and again to the circumstances of one's birth. Millions of people cannot even remember the dates of their birth accurately. No authentic data is available about the dates and places of birth of almost any of our saints, savants, kings, heroes and others held in the highest esteem in our history. We are essentially a forward-looking kind whose mind is conditioned to thinking of the hereafter.
Therefore, there seems to be on reason whatever why, in our mutual relations also, we should not come to concentrate on the future, instead of the past. And, in any event, those whose memories are still entangled in the partition are fast disappearing from the scene. For the new generations emerging and to emerge hereafter, India and Pakistan are two distinct and separate entities, totally independent, completely at liberty to attain whatever destinies they choose for themselves, deliberately and unfettered by any of the features of the past, taking it or leaving it, or any of it, as they wish to. Points of commonality need not in any way bind either country down to any particular relationship, other than what both consciously and in their respective interests choose to make of them. The pre-partition generation with its admixture of nostalgic and bitter sentimentality, has no right to condemn the coming generations to adhere to unwanted identities. In a word, the future on both sides must be free and based on interest and reason – and not on emotion.

I wish to reiterate, Mr. Chairman that these new premises of our existence are already being tacitly accepted, and I am absolutely certain that a new and fresh relationship is emerging between the two countries, based on objective realities, and not on notions. Even notices have begun to be conditioned by realities. It is not difficult to see that both countries can and should now co-exist, since in the world of today the only way to exist is to co-exist. It is high time that a clear-mined awareness of this new future is heralded and fostered continuously between India and Pakistan.

May I therefore, submit very sincerely that those who are still trying to see, or make others see, sinister designs in our two countries, aimed at each other’s existence are, to say the least, be credited with the perspicacity to know that there is not a single problem of hers which will come any where near solution by the undoing of Pakistan. And as for the fantastic fear that India wants to gobble up Pakistan, I can only say that those who are plugging this line are doing injustice to Pakistan and India both.

Pakistan’s Stability Important

No, Sir. Nothing is farther from India’s mind than this course. Alarmists and opponents of Indo-Pak friendship will. I am afraid have to concoct something more plausible than this worn out theory. And that something is just not there. We, on our part, are fully convinced that we have an abiding interest, even a vested interest in the stability of Pakistan. It is sometimes pointed out, with some justification, that this picture of India depicted in acquisitive juxtaposition to Pakistan can be traced, at least partially, to external sources. But that is all the more reason why we should shun it with greater determination since it is an insult to our intelligence. Our attitudes towards each other should freely evolve on the basis of our direct and clear perception of each others interests and motivations based on direct contacts and direct exchange of views. We should develop an individual and, if necessary, a joint capacity to resist the negative impact on us by external trends, external elements and extraneous factors.

Coming back to the point that I was making about India’s acknowledging Pakistan’s separate and permanent identity as an abiding interest of ours. I do not think that this elite audience would expect me to catalogue the reasons for this interest in any great detail. I would, therefore, like to state categorically, on behalf of the Indian people and India’s Prime Minister that India has, and will always continue to have, full respect for the sovereignty, territorial integrity, stability and independence of Pakistan. When this is stated by Smt. Indira Gandhi, I hope it will be realized that there is no voice louder and clearer and no resolve more dependable. It would be my first and foremost concern to set all minds at rest on this score. Our respective successes and failures are and will continue to be entirely our own. We could profit a lot by not putting the blame for them on each other.

Thus, having disposed of this basic aspect, and unmoved by sentiments or bias, if we approach our problems as well as the scene around us and generally in the contemporary world, as two independent sovereign States with the given geo-political situation, I am sure we can work out a whole gamut of sensible relationship based on our respective perceptions. Such relationships will alone endure and we shall have a pragmatic framework of improving upon them, to the extent we both consider such improvement mutually beneficial.

Let me repeat, quite candidly that between sovereign States’ improvements of relations has to stem from a mutuality of desire; it is not possible to achieve this unilaterally in a vacuum, howsoever desirable it may be otherwise. States should be mature enough to absorb possible ups and downs in their relations and nothing should prevent them co existing peacefully for some time on a low profile of relations, meanwhile working silently for forging a framework of better relations, to emerge at a propitious future time. It is not unusual to find next door neighbours not being on taking terms for a while but neighbourliness prevails in the end. This is the experience.

I shall now briefly advert to the geopolitical situation which both our countries find themselves in. The extent, to which they share perceptions on the situation, is again a matter of their compulsions. Mr. Chairman, it is said quite emphatically that the world has traveled from bi-polarism during the past three decades. This trend is indeed unmistakable; but equally unmistakable is another trend namely that the world, while tending to become multi-polar, is at the same time being subjected to bipolar pulls in a variety of ways. I shall not go into the details of the methodology of these pulls and the intricate and subtle motivations induced; they are all well known. It so happened that almost from the beginning of the bipolar race, some prominent leaders like Nehru, Tito, Nasser etc. strongly felt the illogic and irrelevance of the emerging polarization from the standpoint of a vast majority of mankind, just freed from the shackles of imperialism and colonialism, and finding itself faced with their accumulated need and problems hungering for urgent solutions. They had the vision to speak up for this dumb chunk of humanity called the Third World and conceived of the Non-aligned Movement. Since then, more and more “poles”, major and minor, have appeared on the horizon from time to time. Despite the short term question marks about their viability, independence and effectiveness, I believe no one doubts the conclusion that they have come to stay and that a return to the classic bipolarism of the late forties and early fifties is quite unlikely. The present scenario is, therefore, one of a painful, even perilous transition.

Cooperation in World Affairs

Where do India and Pakistan stand in this crucial transition? It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, this in the emerging multi-polar situation, South Asia is bound to be an important “pole”. Its size, location, resource and over-all potential compel it to play a no lesser role. There is no running away from it. This role, naturally and inevitably, entails the fulfillment of certain pre-requisite conditions. In the first place any “pole” properly so called, in a multi-polar system, should make conscious and strenuous efforts to minimize the specter of dependence behind and move in the direction of self-reliance. Obviously this self-reliance would not be absolute; it would be viewed in a new context of interdependence and complementarity. Can a new relationship of this kind be forged in South Asia? We need to examine this not from the limited stand-point of individual or even collective gains of the countries in the region, but in the truly global context of real multi polarity. To the extent this new relationship is strengthened, multi polarity, and along with it the political substance of Non-alignment is promoted, at least in the negative sense of making the old type of bipolar blocism more difficult and less meaningful. I suggest, Mr. Chairman that India and Pakistan could seriously think of their role – joint or separate, as they may choose – in this emerging context. I emphasise joint or separate because I think both are conceivable in a framework of accepted objectives and coordinated actions. What is important is that a beginning be made in the process of understanding the new context in all its ramifications. We have recently witnessed an important and interesting phenomenon of countries of our region manifesting their desire to work together for their common good. I refer to the meeting of the seven Foreign Secretaries of the South Asian countries in Colombo to consider the proposal of the late President of Bangladesh to establish a framework for regional economic cooperation. Perhaps we should expect to see more such initiatives being considered and it is in this context that I invite the attention of one and all, especially intellectuals, to this issue. The matter has become particularly relevant after Pakistan has joined the Nonaligned Movement. This has come as a happy augury.

I now come to another, but allied topic of Economic Co-operation among Developing Countries (ECDC) and Technical Cooperation among Developing Countries (TCDC). It has been my happy experience during the past one and a half years, that on matters concerning the future of developing countries, both inter se and vis-a-vis the developed world, as also on the new International Economic Order and the strategies for the Development Decade, India and Pakistan have held almost identical views and worked in close-co-operation. This, again, was no doubt the result of decisions arrived at independently; what is important is that the decisions coincided in the way they did. It is possible to pursue this modus operandi further and in more diversified fields of endeavour. I propose that deeper thought be given in both countries to this activity which will perhaps outstrip everything else in importance in the near future. It will be mutually beneficial for both countries to play, and be seen to play the role which must legitimately belong to them.

On issues like those of the Middle East, South Africa, Namibia and several others, India and Pakistan are already in tune with each other and with the general consensus of the Non-aligned Movement. I have no doubt that in the years to come both our countries will be called upon to become more active on such vital issues. This is yet another opportunity to work in close cooperation in world affairs, given the will to do so.

Mr. Chairman, I shall touch upon a few issues on which our countries have not been in total agreement, although this phenomenon has been depicted as a measure of difference which is hardly justified by the factual position. I do consider it important to put these issues in proper perspective, especially before a gathering such as the one I am addressing.

Afghanistan

I shall, with your permission, start with Afghanistan, in view of its vital nature to Pakistan as well as to India. It all started on 27th December, 1979 when we in India were in the thick of elections of Parliament. By about 9th or 10th of January, 1980 results came in and our Party got an overwhelming majority. The Government was sworn in and our Party got an overwhelming majority. The Government was sworn in only on 14th January. It was during this interregnum that we inherited this problem. A resolution was tabled in the UN General Assembly calling for immediate, unconditional total withdrawal of foreign troops from Afghanistan. From the other side, the Soviet Union said that they had been invited by the leadership in Afghanistan and that they would not remain there longer than necessary. They also made accusations of interference in the internal affairs of Afghanistan from across the borders and fomenting of insurgency etc. This was the scenario three or four days before our Government was formally sworn in.

We took stock of the situation and concluded that there was no hope of the implementation of the resolution in the terms in which it was couched. At the same time, we reiterated inter alia, our stand that we are opposed to the presence of foreign troops and bases in my country and expressed the hope that the Soviet Union would not violate the independence of Afghanistan. Mr. Chairman ever since that time started India's stand urging for a political solution with all the other concomitants clearly spelt out, including of course, withdrawal of foreign forces. Mr. Chairman, during the past sixteen months, we have doggedly stuck to that line, in the face of insufferable calumny, misrepresentation, distortion and a vicious smear campaign. The public statements of the Prime Minister and my own statements, speak for themselves and they are all public property. In particular, it may be noted that while in the initial stages we were subjected to the treatment I have just described our consistent stand did result in the gradual acceptance of the need for some kind of dialogue to resolve the problem. This is evident from the progressive modification of resolutions adopted and statements made over the last year.

On this occasion, I thought I owe it to myself and the cause, to bring out the above essential acts concerning India's stand on Afghanistan. However, I have desisted from mentioning many other aspects and subsequent facts because I do not intend to ruffle feathers and I want the issue to be settled under any of the initiatives known to have been taken already. Whatever the Agency, it is the result that matters. While it is encouraging that a political solution is now apparently favoured all round, it is regrettable that the time taken ostensibly in the quest for the solution is being promptly and assiduously utilized for purposes such as escalation of Great Power presence in the region on a permanent basis, leading to a vicious circle which no one seems to know how and where to break. I invite your pointed attention to this aspect which on no account should be swept under the carpet. The views of India and Pakistan on this issue while not being identical throughout, have not been diametrically opposite either and have in fact tended to come close to each other as time passed and events unfolded. They eventually converged on the New Delhi declaration which as you know, was based on consensus, like all such declarations. In the ultimate analysis each country' attitude should be judged by its commitment to that declaration. For my part, I am prepared to state categorically that India reaffirms her support for the relevant paragraph of the Declaration of the Non-Aligned Foreign Minister's Conference held in New Delhi in February 1981. And I am glad to add that both Mr. Agha Shahi and I have reaffirmed this in our Joint Press Statement issued yesterday.

No Basic Differences

These, then, are the issues on which Indian and Pakistan have somewhat different perceptions. No one can say they are too many, none too deep. Nevertheless, there seems to be an unfortunate tendency in both countries to play up the differences rather disproportionately all the time. I have often wondered why this should be so. Could it be a part of the overall effort to establish separate identities? Could it be a bundle of complexes developed on both sides, to the effect that any emphasis on similarities may prove unpopular? In that case how and why did such emphasis become unpopular? Could it be merely a hangover we are not able to get over? It is possible, Mr. Chairman that it may be a combination of all these and several other factors which has led to the playing up of differences. Be that as it may, I think it is time to realize that just like differences, similarities too cannot be wished away; so also complementarities. It is of course open to us to ignore them and go our separate ways, regardless of the cost of duplication, avoidable wastage, inconvenience of fixing up alternatives etc. Such a cost is known to have been accepted by sovereign States at times for countervailing reasons. What I wish to submit Mr. Chairman for the consideration of the people of Pakistan is that in our case there are no such countervailing reasons. The logic is overwhelmingly in favour of coming closer.

The stark reality which confronts the two of us is that we are both poor, and that for both countries, poverty is the main enemy. Hence our shared interests in the New International Economic Order. Hence too, the interest in our countries in the adaptation and application of scientific knowledge and technological known-how in the essential task before us; the betterment of our living conditions and the augmentation of the welfare of our peoples. I would, therefore, suggest that we move towards free exchanges in the economic field. I also believe that if we were to promote thoroughgoing academic exchanges, the greater cross-fertilization of ideas would gradually and irreversibly lead to a more sympathetic and mutual understanding at a deeper and more profound level.

Simla Agreement

We have in fact been attempting to do this since the commencement of the Simla process. The process of normalization envisaged in the Simla Agreement means and can only mean – the intensification of interaction at all levels between our peoples and Governments and with a view to evolving an integrated, realistic and mature relationship.

We are happy to note that in the field of intellectual and cultural contact, we have received in India scores Pakistani writers and poets, journalists and commentators, musicians and other artistes. I would like to express my gratitude for the warm and enthusiastic welcome which you, in turn, have invariable reserved for Indian artistes and intellectuals and sportsmen visiting your country.

Our Destinies Are Inter – Linked

India’s desire for close and friendly relations with Pakistan is founded on a realistic appreciation in India of Pakistan’s inherent strength. In terms of population, Pakistan is one of the big countries in the world. Out of the 160 countries or so of the world, Pakistan comes in among the first ten or twelve. Apart from a large and skilled population, Pakistan has impressive natural resources, ranging from some of the most fertile land in the world to valuable mineral deposits. There is also much to admire in the economic progress you have made in the past three decades. These potentialities strengthen prospects of cooperation between Pakistan and India. Our own experiences and experiments in the spheres of agricultural research, development of resources of energy including solar energy, and intermediate industrial technology have been satisfactory and useful. If you are persuaded that this Indian experience is relevant to your needs and conditions and could contribute to strengthening your economy, we would be only too ready to share it with you.

It is our belief that the countries of the subcontinent constitute a fraternity, whose destinies are interlinked. This is what led our Prime Minister to tell The Muslim newspaper the other day.

“We feel that a stable Pakistan and the progress of its people is as much in India’s interest as it is in Pakistan”.

In conclusion, I would venture a few words about my vision for the future of Indo-Pakistan relations. I have referred to the Simla Agreement. Both our countries acknowledge that it provides a framework, a basis for expanding our relations, for encouraging our common endeavour for peace and stability so essential for the well being of our peoples. It would be our endeavour that attitudes and actions flowing there from contribute through varying vicissitudes, to the process of normalization; to strengthening the bonds of friendship; to adding positive and creative dimensions to our mutual understanding. I am trying to look beyond the stage of normalization and aim at positive friendship based on active co-operation born of genuine mutual trust. I think we have to undertake a deliberate and conscious transformation of our respective psyches. I am conscious that this will be a gradual process. But all progress will depend on the cultivation of grace under pressure, empathy in adversity and a capacity to discern the positive and work for it in the face of limitations. My visit to Pakistan in intended to lay emphasis on this spirit.

It has been a privilege to be amidst you. I must convey my appreciation for the patience, with which you have heard me. Your valuable time that I have taken is in the expectation that, given the importance and impact that this institute has in your country, the suggestions that I have made will reach the people at large since the success of relations between governments and states is ultimately measured at the bar of public opinion. I convey to you the greetings of the people of India and their firm commitment not only to nurture but also to improve and expand friendly relations with Pakistan. I shall be returning to Delhi in a few hours. I would like to thank you and through you the citizens of Karachi and the Government and people of Pakistan for their warm hospitality.

I would like to add a few words at this point. Over the last three days I have had very cordial discussions with the Foreign Minister and the President of Pakistan. Some people ask, “What have you achieved?” My answer is that what one achieves through such meetings is not something cut and dried; but what we have achieved is, from our point of view extremely important, something which makes the way clearer. It is not a question of understanding between Agha Shahi and Narasimha Rao. We are only two individuals. We represent two great countries. We have approached our task with full sense of responsibility and humility. It has been the tradition in our part of the world for thousands of years, to work without expectation of reward. There is no reason to be daunted by what has not been achieved. But, in all humility, we have a right to claim and do claim, to have achieved something.

I believe that my visit at this time was very necessary. In the recent past, there has been some danger of our relations sliding back. We have succeeded in averting this danger and arresting this trend. I have requested Mr. Agha Shahi to visit India soon. In the Press Statement, the date set has been the end of this year. To my mind, this is the outer limit. If it is possible, given his and my own busy schedules to accommodate the visit earlier, it is necessary to do so, in the interest of Indo-Pak relations. I am glad to say that, in our informal discussion Mr. Shahi has agreed to this suggestion. We have come to an understanding which is very hopeful for both countries.
I am grateful for the all round friendly welcome, which is seen among every section of the people – unconnected with the Governments – during the brief period of my stay. I go back with the high hope that these positive trends will be strengthened in the future. We know that there are many forces which do not want our countries to be friends. That is why it is all the more important that we try our hardest to develop our friendship.

In conclusion, I would quote the words of a great poet.

"Meera paigham muhabat hai Jahan tak ponchhay"

“my message is love,
Wherever it reaches”

Opening Statement

I have had a very pleasant and meaningful visit to Pakistan. I would like to thank my friend, Mr. Agha Shahi for making my visit purposeful. I am also grateful to his Excellency President Zia-ul-Haq for the positive direction that he has given to the visit. Our basic positions have been outlined in the joint press statement which was issued yesterday. Although after the statements was issued, we have been traveling to Lahore and Karachi together, I have hardly anything to add to the joint statement except to say that we have since explored further possibilities of meetings, sooner than was envisaged originally. No dates have been fixed but I am glad to say that we were able to come to some understanding that the meetings could be held sooner. In my address to the Pakistan Institute of International Studies, I outlined in clear and unemotional terms, the rationale of Indo-Pak cooperation. I can only hope that this spirit will find reciprocation. Cooperation between our two countries makes sense. We have many things in common but I have refrained from over emphasizing commonality because as two sovereign nations, it is up to us to exercise and choose on which the common factors are to be built up and which of them to emphasize. I would like to express through you my deep gratitude to all those people who attended my reception yesterday. They were representatives of a large cross-section of the people of Pakistan. I could not talk to them individually. But from their warm smiles, I could feel that there was friendship and affection in the air. I will carry back these pleasant memories to India and I hope we will be able to build up our future relationship on them. It is the responsibility of the media in both countries, and if fact of Government and people as well, to keep this atmosphere of goodwill and friendship alive. I do hope that wherever I went, I was able to convey this message. An elderly gentleman complained that my stay in Karachi was very short but I told him that this need not be the only short visit that I would pay to Karachi. I could come back here for many such short visits as part of frequent exchange of visits between India and Pakistan. So, thank you and God bless you all.

Question: Sir, it is evident from the joint press statement that it is fair to assume that a change of heart has taken place on both sides with Pakistan side understanding some of India’s positions and India has also conceded Pakistan’s right to fulfil its genuine needs. Sir, perhaps India has understood that if Soviet military aid to India does not lead to its alignment, US aid to Pakistan will not mean Pakistan being sucked into becoming a part of US strategy.

Answer: We have had discussions on all these matters. Both of us are satisfied with our talks. As for as change of heart if there are any thoracic surgeons, let them examine whether there has been any change of heart.

Agha Shahi: We are willing to subject ourselves to open heart surgery.

Question: What is the position on Indo-Pak trade?

Answer: I can only tell you that if possibilities for greater and mutually beneficial trade are thrown up, we would not be found wanting.

Question: Has India’s friendship with the Soviet Union proved an obstacle in Indo-Pak normalization?

Answer: (Pointing to Agha Shahi) He has not told me that and as I have already stated earlier, we have no complaints.

Question: Pakistan has not been happy with India’s stand on Soviet troop presence in Afghanistan. What is your view?

Answer: We have had detailed discussions on this and there is a complete understanding of our view point.

Mr. Agha Shahi: On this question, we have ourselves passed the stage of condemnation and we do not expect our friends either, to condemn.
Question: Don’t you think that the Congress Party in India is too dependent on one person i.e. Mrs. Indira Gandhi?

Mr. Agha Shahi: This is the internal affairs of India and such question need not be entertained.

Answer: No, I do not mind answering this question. Smt. Gandhi is our national leader, she is leader of the Parliamentary Party and she is also the leader of the party. However, elections and a democratic style of functioning is a very much part of Congress Party ethos. Party elections are held just like parliamentary elections and delegates select their party leadership. I am myself an elected Working Committee member and democratic procedures laid down in the Constitution of the party will continue to be followed.

Question: Was there any agreement on the question of arms acquisition by Pakistan? Has your visit solved all Indo-Pak problems?

Answer: We have discussed this matter at length and our joint statement also refers to this. The important thing is that the dialogue must go on. We are not claiming we have solved all our problems. This cannot be so in the course of one visit but we are willing to move towards solving them patiently and in a atmosphere of goodwill and friendship Question: The Simla Agreement rules out the use of force. In this context is India willing to sign a no war pat with Pakistan?

(FM invited his counterpart Mr. Agha Shahi to handle the question).

Mr. Agha Shahi: The Simla Agreement pledges both countries to non-use of force. In other words both countries will not go to war. As for non aggression pact we have taken an important step forward. The first round is over and let us continue on our course. There is still a long way to go and there is no cause for euphoria. At the same time I would not say that we have taken only a step in thousand mile road. We hope to continue discussions so that these could ultimately lead to an entente cordiale of co-existence. You cannot discuss all issue in one meeting.

Question: Sir, whenever Hindu - Muslim riots take place in India it causes concern to the people of Pakistan. What are you doing to remedy this situation?

Answer: It is the concern of the Government of India and the people of India more than that of other countries. We have large minorities but everyone including the majority community wants to live in peace. But now and then incidents do occur which vitiate the atmosphere. Government has been and will be prompt in quelling such disturbance wherever and whenever they arise. We hope that the atmosphere will go on improving. We cannot afford such vitiation of the atmosphere but in a vast country like India local problems tend to trigger off such incidents. I would, however, like to assure you regarding Government of India’s efforts in the direction of preventing such incidents and taking remedial measures, when they do occur. I would only request you that if there are misleading report about such incidents an attempt should not be made to blow it up. The media would be doing great service to harmony in both countries if it makes some efforts to show understanding for the problems that we face.

Question: In your speech to the Institute of International Studies, Karachi you spoke of promoting understanding between the two countries but don’t you think that India as a bigger neighbour has a greater responsibility towards promoting such an understanding with her smaller neighbours?

Answer: Why talk of big and small countries? Sovereignty has no size. What we stress is sovereign equality and in this the question of size does not matter at all. There are small, medium and big nations. But sovereignty is inherent in all nations and it does not vary with the size of the nation. When I talk of understanding between India and Pakistan such an understanding cannot be defined but only understood.

Question: Did you have any discussion on the Kashmir question and have you reached any understanding on resolving it?

Answer: The Simla Agreement is all comprehensive and we are both committed to abiding by the Simla process on this as on other matters.

Question: What other question have you discussed?

Answer: At the official level there have been a breakthrough on many fronts.
His Excellency the President has indicated to me that Pakistan would participate in the India International Trade Fair to be held in November/ December. This is of great significance because Pakistan’s participation would help in removing the ignorance that there is about each other and it would be an eye opener for both sides.
Text of Statement issued by Pakistan’s Foreign Minister in response to the observations made by Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.

Islamabad, July, 10, 1981.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi’s gesture to send Foreign Minister Narasimha Rao to Pakistan last month was greatly appreciated by us. His visit at the time was particularly welcome because our exchange of views with him served to clear many misunderstandings and to prepare the ground for better relations between our two countries. The joint Press statement issued at the conclusion of Mr. Narasimha Rao’s talks in Islamabad reflected the hopes of the two sides and the progress that was made in reaching mutually agreed conclusion on some important matters. We took a very positive view of Mr. Narasimha Rao’s visit and have sincerely tried to build constructively on the foundations of goodwill and understanding created by his visit.

We greatly appreciate the fact that in her wide-ranging Press conference on external and internal issues on July 10, the Prime Minister of India also took an equally positive view of Mr. Narasimha Rao’s visit it to Pakistan for which she also took justifiable credit. We would like to assure the Government and people of India that we fully reciprocate Mrs. Gandhi’s assurances of goodwill and friendship for Pakistan and at the same time, we would like to reiterate that Pakistan has neither the intention nor the capacity of harm India in any way whatsoever. We have enough problems, both in the economic and security fields, which have no relevance to our relations with India, which occupy our full attention and claim the commitment of our total resources.

We can only afford to think in defensive terms and have no desire to acquire an offensive capability against any of our neighbour, much less India.

IAF’s Strike Power Greater Than PAF’s

The prospects of Pakistan’s acquiring a strictly limited number of F-16 aircraft over a period of five years from now, however, has conjured up fears which are entirely imaginary. With due respect to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, it is travesty of facts to attribute to Pakistan’s limited and long deprived Air Force, a strike capacity three times that of India’s Air Force. The correct arithmatic about the relative strength of the two air forces in known to India. It works out roughly to a ratio of 5 to 1 in India’s favour, with the prospect of India being able to maintain and increase its overwhelming superiority indefinitely. India is welcome to do so. It is our hope, however, that in an atmosphere of good-neighbourly relations and in response to common concern, India will keep its powerful air armada as far away as possible from our frontiers.
No Seeking of Military Parity with India

As far as deep penetration strike aircraft are concerned, Pakistan has no such aircraft in the real sense of the term, considering India’s territorial depth. On the other hand, most of India’s strike aircraft can cover the full breadth of Pakistan from readily available bases all along the length of the Indo-Pakistan border. It was India which introduced a new weapons system into the region by contracting to acquire 200 Jaguar deep penetration aircraft. We assure the Prime Minister and people of India once again that Pakistan is not in an arms race nor does it aspire to military parity with India. Pakistan genuinely wishes to live in peace and amity with India. Relations between the two countries will improve in proportion to the goodwill towards each other and respect for realities to be shown by the leaders of the two countries.

0971. Address by Foreign Secretary R. D. Sathe at the National Defence College.

New Delhi, September 4, 1981.

There are two views about neighbours. One is that one should maintain correct relations but not become familiar with them because this could lead to your neighbours beginning to use your house as their own. This would in turn lead to loss of your privacy, quarrels because in his welfare lies your own welfare. For example, if your neighbour’s house catches fire, your house is bound to be licked by the flames; if your neighbour’s family is struck down by a disease, your health could also be endangered. The choice of the correct attitude is indeed a difficult one to make. In the conduct of international relations we face the same problem. As far as India and her neighbours are concerned, it is just not possible to be indifferent or merely correct in our relations with one another. We have too many ties of history, ethnicity, blood relations, culture and commerce that bind us together. Our problem is compounded by the difference in size, capacity, levels of development etc. between ourselves and our neighbours. Now no one can be keenly unaware of the difficulties and obstacles that stand in the way of our achieving what might be called an organic equilibrium with our neighbours. Our relations particularly with Pakistan therefore assume an exceptionally important role. The historical legacy of partition and the mutual recriminations that accompanied it; the irreconcilability of the two-nation (and now three-nation) theory with the existence of a large body of Muslim in India; the complexes, doubts, suspicions and fears arising out of the last three conflicts; the problems and tensions of economic development and so forth — these are some factors that inhibit free flowing and natural contact between India and Pakistan. The most formidable problem, and one which calls for a multi-prong diplomatic effort on our part, is the frequently negative role of what some scholars of international relations have called “the intrusive system” in other words, the role of the major global powers. Unfortunately, these powers have exacerbated atomisms in our region and worked against regional cohesion in their search for spheres of influence. Their inputs into countries of this region — and this is particularly true of Pakistan - have been instrumental in raising the volatility of an already weak region rather than assisting in the economic development and well being of its peoples. In the Indo-Pak context in particular, the intrusion of outside powers debilitates the already weak stimulus for friendship. It became difficult to break past habits of adversary posturing. Our efforts at working out a viable, tension-free relationship has borne some fruit, but clearly we are some distance away from a state of mature understanding rising above our legacy of “shared differences.”

2. How do we see our relations with Pakistan evolve in the troubled strategic environment of the 80s? For the 1970s, with the Simla Agreement of 1972, we had a framework for the conduct of our relations. We have to some extent come nearer the goals of normalization laid out in that agreement. Its emphasis was on restoring normalcy and making a new beginning. Some steps have been taken towards the restoration of normalcy through the re-establishment of air, sea, rail, road, telecommunications, trade, postal and diplomatic links and cultural and people-to-people contacts. We have also had 10 years of peace. This is no mean achievement. But in the present day changing geo-political configuration, we cannot afford to rest on our oars and must work towards a new beginning. Our commitment to the Simla Agreement remains unshaken, of course. It is an impetus to peace and understanding that deserves continued emphasis. My point however is that we should be innovative in our relationship so that the burdens of the past do not always catch up with us and make the going ponderous and cumbersome.

3. In the geo-strategic sense, we regard Pakistan as an integral part of sub continental security. We have therefore repeatedly pointed out to Pakistan that we are committed to respecting its territorial integrity, national unity, political independence and sovereign equality. We believe that a secure and stable Pakistan is in our national interests. It is also our desire to establish a durable frontier of peace and friendship with Pakistan. We are convinced of the imperatives of cooperation with Pakistan in other areas but the moot question remains; Is Pakistan ready to change the focus of its threat perception from India to the dangers arising out of a divided, mutually antagonistic sub-continent rendered vulnerable to great power rivalry and the competitive military build up of the great powers in the Indian Ocean region? In these two years, I am afraid Pakistan pronouncements on the subjects have been couched in different language while addressing different audience. The signals to the west are that Pakistan has become a frontline State and must have the wherewithal to ward off the threat from the North-West. The Pak-US Joint statement (June 15, 1981) at the end of U.S. Under Secretary of State Buckley’s visit in June stated that the two sides had “discussed the serious threat to the region posed by the presence of foreign troops in neighbouring Afghanistan…” one can imagine that the Chinese were given a similar argument during the visit of Premier Zhao Ziyang to Pakistan. Exactly the reverse has been stated by the Pakistan Foreign Minister to domestic audiences – that the Soviet Union does not pose a threat to Pakistan. The Soviet Deputy FM Firyubin was told the same thing with the addition, for good measure, that the real threat is from India and that whenever Pakistan talks of hegemony, it means only India. Almost in the same breath, Pakistan has subscribed to the joint press statement issued during our Foreign Minister’s June visit to the effect that “the strengthening of friendship between India and Pakistan served the interest of both peoples and was indeed a geo-political imperative”. I am afraid there is more than a hint of ingenuity in all this. One could go further and say that there was a case of downright dishonesty on the part of Pakistan. But the contradictions scarcely conceal the fact that the main, if not the only, focus of Pakistan’s threat perceptions continues to be India. In this context, it is going in for a major re-armament programme with U.S. assistance; this is naturally a matter of concern to us. It is not merely that the $ 3 billion or more worth of military and security related economic assistance that Pakistan would be receiving from the USA over the next five years, beginning in 1983, and cash sales of some equipments including F-16 aircraft on an urgent basis would pose a significant threat to India. Most of you are experts here and world know what the implications of the proposed arms package are for the military balance between India and Pakistan. As a diplomat, I can only point out the dangers of such large scale injection of sophisticated weapons into the Pakistan military machine. It only strengthens the impulses for confrontation rather than friendship, for impulses and for mis-representation rather than understanding. Moreover and this, again, is well known to you – it becomes necessary for us, whenever Pakistan introduces new level of weapons sophistication into the region, to match these purchases with similar levels of weapon systems as a defensive measure. Though we do not question Pakistan’s right to acquire weapons for legitimate self-defence, we do have misgiving about any attempt to dilute our own security concerns. Also, it is necessary to consider the effect of this on the mood and climate that is necessary for moving on from a stage of normalizing our relationship to a stage of positive interaction and cooperation which does not admit of mutual suspicion or fear.
4. An argument that Pakistan is fond of using in defining the parameters of its standing and relationship vis-a-vis India revolves around India’s largeness, greater resources, industrial infrastructure and superior military might. Pakistan claims that a country which is 1/9th India’s size with hardly any economic resources and industrial infrastructure, and with 1/8th India’s population can in no way pose a threat to India. At the same time, there is an attempt to use this very argument to portray the picture of hegemonistic and expansionist India. On the other hand, there is at every occasion a self-conscious reiteration of Pakistan’s sovereign equality – a case of wanting to project handicaps to obtain benefits and still retain the trapping of power. The question is: how do we deal with these complicated processes of thinking and perception? As it happens, in the wake of the dismemberment of the British Empire in South Asia, India was the core nation and Pakistan was one of the breakaway states. We have not only long ago accepted post Independence realities but have also worked hard to instill confidence in our neighbours about our intentions, our capabilities and our priorities. We would be deluding ourselves and others if we try to shy away from the fact that we are a regional power, and in spite of the many flaws in our system, we have made considerable economic and socio-political gains in the years since independence. It is a function of our status as a regional power as well as our responsibility to project ourselves in this region with restraint and firmness. There is no question of our being hegemonistic and we have all along fought against any attempt by one country to dominate another. This is quintessential to our policy of Non–alignment. Our priorities are economic development and freedom from social conflict, for which an atmosphere of regional peace and harmony are essential pre-requisites. This is the central factor that governs our attitude towards our neighbours especially Pakistan.

5. Our land borders with Pakistan are almost entirely demarcated and there are no major areas of dispute. There is the problem about Pakistan occupation of a part of Jammu & Kashmir and we are committed to resolving the problem through negotiations and bilateral discussions without recourse to the threat or use of power. At Simla, both sides agreed that difficult problems of this sort will not be put away but that their resolution could be postponed until such time as a right climate was created on both sides for a reasoned resolution of differences. Thus, while we are committed to the Simla process to resolve the Kashmir question, there can be no meaningful discussion till such time as both countries in their individual and combined judgement think that the climate is ripe. This is a point we have impressed on Pakistan again and again; both sides should refrain from investing the Kashmir question: or any other question, for that matter – with hostile, emotional, religious, social, cultural or any other symbolism. Only then can problems cease to be irritants and become amenable to solution.
6. The presence of more than 80 million Muslims in India and their integration in India society sometimes create a feeling of insecurity in the minds of some Pakistanis. As a result, there are attempts by them to reap propaganda benefits out of any communal disturbances that take place in India because such incidents contribute to the self-confidence of those who denigrate India, and provide, at the same time an oblique and rather twisted rationale for the existence of Pakistan. An attempt is often made to invoke the Nehru Liaqat Ali Pact of 1950 in this regard and the Pakistan government has often chosen to comment on happenings in India. Pakistan has also complained in several Islamic fora against India and this has constituted an irritant in Indo-Pak relations. Apart from the legalistic argument that the Nehru-Liaqat Ali pact has no validity and the Pakistan Government has no locus standi for interfering in the internal affairs of India, the main question that must be faced is how long Pakistan will continue to need this argument for sustaining itself, and what the cost will be to Indo-Pak Government-to-Government and people-to-people relations. Apologists for Pakistan cited Pakistan's search for an identity as a reason for Pakistan's insistence for exploiting the communal troubles in India. This, to say the least is a most extraordinary excuse, if, after 35 years of separate existence, Pakistan still finds it difficult to establish its own identity.

7. The arms question which is ultimately related to Pakistan's perception of its relationship vis-à-vis India, has already been discussed at length. While there is no need to be alarmist, Pakistani actions obviously call for countervailing measures, even though the cost of such measures is burdensome and better avoided. Our size and exaggerated reports about our military capabilities need not on the other hand blind us to the realities of our strategic position vis-a-vis Pakistan. You would be in a better position than me to make an assessment in this regard since you are aware of the concept of the space force ratio and weightage that should be given to strikes capability and fire power over numbers in any evolution of relative force levels. But even without being a defence expert, it would seem to me that Pakistan's defence capability is not inferior to India's as is claimed by Pakistani authorities. Pakistan has come a long way since the division of military men and materials in 1947. Today, there is parity on our western borders. Even if forces deployed along our other extensive borders and in the interior of the country are taken into account there would be parity in respect of armour and near parity in respect of other constituents of the defence forces. Of Course, the space-force ratio, fire power and strike capability have to be evaluated appropriately. We must not lose sight of the relative size of the economies of the two counties. Pakistan spends 31.3 percent of its total budget on defence which works out to 7.4 percent of its GNP. As compared to this Indian defence spending is 17 percent of its total budget and 4.5 percent of its GNP.
8. These facts notwithstanding, Pakistan has tried to score a propaganda point by raising the question of mutual reduction of force levels. Our reaction has not been negative. We have told them that we will discuss the question provided we are convinced that it will be useful. We have pointed out that such talks are productive when there is a measure of mutual confidence. We believe that the objective situation for such mutual confidence should be promoted. And this is precisely change of heart of Pakistan’s part rather than mere verbalization and a change in Pakistan’s political economic and strategic perceptions of India resulting in its positive response to our efforts to cooperate and reduce tensions.

9. Several reports have been appearing about Pakistan’s efforts to acquire nuclear weapons capability through the building up of plutonium reprocessing plants as well as uranium enrichment facilities. Many of these reports speak of basement nuclear weapons capability for Pakistan within a year or two. This is obviously a matter of concern because India has in no way initiated this process nor contributed, in any way to Pakistan’s quest or power through nuclear weapons capability. A demonstration of its nuclear weapons capability or even publicizing its basement capability might be utilized by the leaders of Pakistan to win them popular support within the country as well as monetary support from some countries abroad. Apart from that it would be both a psychological and material advantage against India. What can India do in such circumstances but to hope that reason will prevail over the destructive and self-aggrandizing urge?

10. Earlier in my talk, I had spoken about the need to build up those aspects of our shared heritage that bring us together. We are in a unique situation with Pakistan, as with some of our other neighbours, of sharing not only land, sea and riverine borders but also ethnicity, language, religion and culture. People on both sides of our borders are also bound in ties of kinship. While these factors of commonality need not be over emphasized, they are the points that can lend weight to the Government on both sides to bend their energies towards working out a stable relationship between the two countries in the interest of the two peoples. Our efforts in the direction of promoting these contacts will continue.

11. There is, in our view, tremendous scope for the expansion of Indo-Pak trade and given the similarity of problems faced by India and Pakistan and the complementarity of the skills and industries developed by the two countries, there are good possibilities of economic cooperation. Pakistan has certain inhibitions in allowing free flow of trade in the private sector between the two countries. In time, we hope, through negotiations, to remove these inhibitions. Meanwhile, our attempt is to promote a better understanding of trade prospects amongst trading and industrial circles in both countries. In this context, the participation of Pakistan in the India International Trade Fair, 1981, and representing Pakistan Chambers of Commerce, are positive development.

12. I have tried to outline for you the components that go into making or marring our efforts at improving the overall content of our relationship with Pakistan. We are convinced of the need to minimize tensions and differences and maximize areas of agreement. That is the goal that we have set for ourselves in the coming years and in the pursuance of this goal, we will stress imagination, patience, hard-work, flexibility and goodwill. We are willing to do what we can and trust that Pakistan will respond in a meaningful manner.

0972. Statement issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs regarding supply of arms by the United States and offer of India of mutual guarantees of non-aggression and non use of force

Islamabad, September 15, 1981.

Our dialogue with the United States has taken a positive turn with the recent visit to Pakistan of Mr. Peter McPherson, Administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, and Mr. James Buckley, U.S. Under Secretary of State who brought with him a personal letter addressed to President Zia-ul-Haq by President Reagan.

The programme of U.S. economic assistance to Pakistan over the next five years, was discussed in details with Mr. McPherson and his delegation and mutually satisfactory agreement subject to congressional approval, was reached.

Similarly, talks with Mr. James Buckley were also concluded on a positive note. As is known, an agreement in principle had been reached during Mr. Buckley’s earlier visit in June in regard to the acceptability of the US economic and military sales package which was offered at the time.

Soon after Mr. Buckley’s visit, a Pakistan military delegation visited Washington to discuss details of the military sales programme to Pakistan.

During these talks, certain issues relating to the delivery schedule of some essential defence items, had remained unresolved. During his recent visit, Mr.
Buckley clarified these issues to our satisfaction. As a result of our detailed exchange of views with him on this occasion, we were able to convey our formal acceptance of the US package as modified and revised in the consultative process which has now been completed.

Accordingly, these proposals will be put before the Congress as required by the US legal procedure. We have been greatly reassured the fact that the US Administration fully understands our essential concerns and that there is a genuine desire to build a new relationship between our two countries on the basis of trust, mutual respect and sovereign equality.

Non Aligned Policy Not Compromised

We wish to reiterate that our acceptance of the US package does not affect in any way our commitments as a member of Islamic Conference and the Non-Aligned Movement, our well-known position on major international issues in regard to which our foreign policy has consistently maintained a principled stand.

Similarly, the development of bilateral relations with the United States will not affect our relationship with any third country.

On ties with India

We would like to reaffirm, particularly in regard to our relations with India, that there would be no weakening of our efforts to develop a relationship of mutual trust and confidence with this important neighbouring country. We are not in competition with India in an arms race and the modest quantity of arms that we may acquire during the next five years is solely meant to achieve partial replacement of our obsolete defence equipment. All we propose to do is to acquire a minimum defence capability to ensure the security of Pakistan in the context of the regional situation which is far from reassuring.

Although, it is Pakistan as a small country which needs assurances from its larger neighbours in regard to its security. Particularly from India, which, despite its overwhelming military superiority, has embarked on a programme of acquiring the most modern offensive weapons including Jaguars, MIG-23’s and MIG 25’s and Mirage-2000 aircraft, in large numbers from Western sources, and on concessional terms from Soviet Union, we are prepared on our part to do whatever we can to promote mutual confidence. We would like to convey the assurance that in expressing our desire for a friendly and tension free relationship, we are not indulging in a propaganda exercise.

If India is inclined to banish its unfounded fears and is ready to grasp the hand of friendship which we extend, it shall not find us wanting in fully reciprocating any gesture on its part for establishing good neighbourly relations.
On our part we are prepared to enter into immediate consultations with India for the purpose of exchanging mutual guarantees of non aggression and non use of force in the spirit of the Simla Agreement.

0973. Statement by the Official Spokesman on Pakistan’s Admission in Commonwealth.

New Delhi, September 18, 1981.

As far as the question of Pakistan’s readmission in the Commonwealth is concerned I can do no better than mention what the Prime Minister stated on September 17 in an interview to Mr. Michael Richardson an Australian journalist representing the newspapers, The Age. The Prime Minister had emphasized that there has to be certain criteria with regard to membership of the Commonwealth and certain objective considerations for any country wishing to reenter the Commonwealth after leaving it on its own. The Prime Minister stressed that the question of entry or admission of any country into the Commonwealth has to be on the basis of unanimity. Secondly membership of the Commonwealth is based on an expression of public opinion. There is no forum in Pakistan which can express itself on this question. The Prime Minister further mentioned that it has been India’s experience that Pakistan has used all such international forums repeatedly to raise bilateral issues. She stressed that these are the considerations which should affect the question of Pakistan’s reported desire to rejoin the Commonwealth. The Prime Minister also added that in India’s assessment no new development has taken place since Pakistan opted out of the Commonwealth which could be the basis for that country’s wishing to re-enter the Commonwealth.
0974. Aide Memoire of the Embassy of Pakistan regarding some remarks about the Prime Minister of India at a Seminar in Lahore.

New Delhi, September 30, 1981.

AIDE MEMOIRE

It may be recalled that on 12 August 1981 Foreign Secretary, Government of India, Informed the Ambassador of Pakistan of disrespectful remarks about the Prime Minister allegedly made by Maulana Abdul Sattar Niazi at the Seminar of Foreign Policy held in Lahore last July, in the presence of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan.

2. The protest was brought to the notice of the Government of Pakistan. The Pakistan Foreign Minister has also seen its contents.

3. The Pakistan Foreign Minister does not recall hearing the impugned remarks. The Minister has further stated that had he heard any such remarks, he would have surely deplored them. Mrs. Indira Gandhi, the distinguished Prime Minister of India is held in high esteem by the Government and people of Pakistan.

4. It may be added that Maulana Abdus Sattar Niazi is in no way connected with the Government of Pakistan. No major newspaper in Pakistan reported the remarks to which exception was taken. The weekly which quotes him as having made the remarks has insignificant circulation. Its relevant issue has not come to the notice of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan. Moreover, the authenticity of the alleged remarks is doubly doubtful: The Indian disseminator of the remarks acknowledges that he published an “edited” version in English of the text of the speech made in Urdu.

5. It may be further added that while the Government of Pakistan categorically deplors any show of disrespect towards the Prime Minister of India and leaders of other countries, some of the major Indian newspapers, including an organ of the political party in power, have published obscene and vituperative cartoons and comments against the President of Pakistan.

No. 171, October 9, 1981.

Foreign Secretary from Ambassador.

Mrs. THATCHER spent 16 hours in Pakistan and by her bellicose rhetoric endeared herself to her hosts. ZIA gave her Head of State Welcome and accompanied her to Peshawar and refugee camp. She gave ZIA and his Government a clean chit. This Certificate was anxiously and assiduously sought by ZIA. Mrs. THATCHER conferred legitimacy on his Government. He has, now for the West, become legal tender and main prop in the region.

In her banquet speech she vigoursly attacked Soviet Union adding that she spoke on behalf of 10 E.E.C. members. It was a confrontational performance. Zia also very critical of Soviet but used politer terminology. Surprisingly Soviet Ambassador who was on same table as me did not walk out.

On India ZIA spoke of a setback in bilateral relations. Pakistan efforts to improve relations with India would continue but Pakistan had every right to arm itself and Pakistanis never objected to others buying arms. Kashmir was not mentioned.

The British Prime Minister Mrs. Margaret Thatcher paid a 15 hour visit to Pakistan, on her way home from the Commonwealth Summit in Melbourne. During her brief stay, she visited an Afghan refugee camp near Peshawar. President Zia gave her a ceremonial 19-gun salute welcome. He was with her throughout her stay.

2. In her talks with President Zia, Afghanistan figured prominently.

3. At a press conference, the British Prime Minister said that the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan had given a new dimension to Britain’s relationship with Pakistan. She said that every country had the right to defend itself against potential aggressors and observed that the acquisition of arms by Pakistan was not “war mongery” but rather “peace mongery”. She denied that the EEC had proposed any fresh initiative on Afghanistan. Responding to a question, she said that the U.S. was very sympathetic about Pakistan’s needs for military equipment and other western countries should also have the same view. If Britain was approached, she would be ready to assist and without much delay. She said that the international community greatly appreciated Pakistan’s conduct in securing the release of Indian plane along with hostages which was hijacked to Pakistan.

4. Earlier at the banquet held by President Zia in her honour, the British Prime Minister said that the 10-member states of the European Community supported Pakistan over Afghanistan. She said she could state that because at present Britain held the Presidency of the EEC. President Zia in his speech while outlining his country’s position on the problem of Afghanistan, referred to bilateral relations with India. He said that Pakistan wanted to usher in a new era of friendship and cooperation with India. Pakistan has had some success in this regard over the past four years and there had been some forward movement in the normalization of bilateral relations. However, of late, “this process has suffered a set back. I would not like to go into the details of the latest strain but would only confine myself to saying that as with other countries, our independence is very dear to us. Wile we recognize the right of other countries to buy defence equipment for safeguarding their independence and territorial integrity and to enter into agreement with Great Powers, we also consider ourselves fully entitled to take necessary steps for the security and defence of our country." It is understood that initially the draft of the President’s speech was milder in tone while referring to his country’s point of view on Afghanistan. However, at the last minute, President Zia thought it fit to make it more hard-hitting on the Afghan and the Soviet Union.

5. At the refugee camp in Peshawar, Prime Minister Thatcher conveyed her sadness and anger over the plight of Afghan refugees and hoped that their cause would finally triumph. According to press reports, she, however, ignored a request made on behalf of the refugees by an Afghan elder for “modern and sophisticated weapons” to fight the ruthless enemy in Afghanistan. She announced at the camp, another installment of aid to the Afghan refugee programme of Pound 2 million.

6. The visit by local accounts was a success and a feather in the cap of President Zia. Pakistan's point of view on the Afghanistan problems as also on her acquisition of U.S. arms was fully and forcefully supported by the British Prime Minister. More importantly, the Zia regime was conferred by the British Prime Minister, on behalf of the Western nations, legitimacy it had been assiduously seeking.

7. The brief visit took place amidst much fan fare and publicity. The controlled media were harnessed fully.

Excerpts from the Record of Discussion between Secretary (East) Ministry of External Affairs Eric Gonsalves and U. S. Ambassador-at-Large General Vernon Walters at the State Department.

[Ambassador and Counsellor (Political) were also present. Howard Schaeffer, Director, NEA was present on the U.S. side.]

2. Welcoming Secretary (East) to his office, General Vernon Walters recalled their meeting when Secretary (East) was in Washington in the early 1970s. Walters said that he knew that there were differences in perception on a number of issues between India and the U.S. The U.S., however, was fully cognizant of the fact that India is the largest democracy in the world. It was only, therefore, natural that the U.S. valued its relations with India.

3. Referring to U.S. relations with Pakistan, Walters said that the Pakistanis had learnt a lesson in the last war and could not now constitute a threat to India.

Pakistan was fully aware of the fact that they could not regard themselves as a potential rival to India. Secretary (East) responded that he would partially agree with Walters. It had to be borne in mind that the Pakistanis had just not adjusted themselves to the reality that they were one tenth the size of India. There were also strands of thinking in Pakistan which called for a settling of old scores.

4. Dwelling further on our perceptions, Secretary (East) said that it was not our view that Pakistan should not modernize its armed forces. What we objected to was the supply of very high technology weapons which could cause problems for us. Secretary (East) also said that there seemed to be an oversimplified view of India's threat perceptions in the United States. He acknowledged that while we are trying to improve relations with China, we still do have two live borders and substantial number of troops to be deployed on our borders with China. Secretary (East) also referred to the exaggerated reports by Administration spokesmen about our defence capabilities. He said, for example that it was claimed by Administration spokesman that India need not worry about F-16s because we had a large number of Mig 25 aircraft, when Administration officials were fully aware of the fact that we had only a few Mig 25 reconnaissance aircraft. Walters acknowledged that the Mig 25 was essentially a reconnaissance aircraft with limited interceptor capabilities.
Secretary (East) also drew attention to the political implications of the supply of aircraft like the F-16 especially after its use against the Osirak reactor in Iraq. Bombay was now within the range of the Pakistan Air Force, naturally calling for action within India for an appropriate response.

5. Walters acknowledge that India did face a problem in view of the fact that it had to respond to public pressure, being a democracy.

Record of Foreign Secretary R. D. Sathe's talks with the Secretary General of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs Shah Nawaz in New York.

New York, November 20, 1981.

FOREIGN SECRETARY'S OFFICE

During my visit to Kathmandu I had the opportunity of a frank-heart-to-heart talk with Riaz Piracha, the Pakistani Foreign Secretary, about Indo-Pak relations. He had suggested that I should have a similar talk with Shah Nawaz when I visited New York for the debate on Afghanistan in the UNGA. On my arrival in New York, I was told that Shah Nawaz had been enquiring from our Permanent Mission about the date of my arrival etc. in New York. Accordingly, I sought him out and arranged to have lunch with him in a down-town restaurant at which no one other than the two of us were present. The following is a resume of our talks.

2. I started off by saying that Indo-Pak relations have reached a new low and that the causes for this are to be seen in the manner in which the Pakistan have handled Indo-Pak relations in the last few months. Much was expected of FM's visit to Pakistan last June. FM had taken very great pains in the drafting of his speech for the Pak Institute of International Affairs. India's policy towards Pakistan had been set out with precision and clarity. It had been much appreciated in India, Pakistan and abroad. Yet within two days of our departure, Pakistan announced that substantial progress on the American arms and aid package including the purchase of F-16 from the US had been made. This had been a virtual slap in our face. Shah Nawaz said that he had told us during our talks in Islamabad that negotiations about the sale of F-16 were going on. I said I did not recollect that any specific mention of such talks was made during our visit though we were already aware that these negotiations had been going on since March 1980 and we had come to Pakistan in spite of this knowledge. Surely, I asked, Pakistan could have waited a little time before making an announcement on a matter which had caused so much apprehension in India. I went on to say that since the agreement to sell aircraft was still to be debated in the US Congress, the announcement could hardly be considered as anything but a stratagem to ensure that an improvement in Indo-Pak relations did not gain too much momentum. Shah Nawaz denied that there were any mala fides on Pakistan's side in this matter. I countered by saying that if there were no mala fides on the Pakistan's side then there must have been mala fides on the US side. I said that we were convinced that the US appeared to be dead set against Indo-Pak friendship and indeed it was this aspect that was the main... cause of our worry: namely, that Pakistan was inclined to follow the US lead rather willingly – particularly in regard to American strategic perceptions. Shah Nawaz protested that this was not the case at all and that Pakistan’s security was a matter of national concern and no government in Pakistan can overlook the threat that the 85,000 Russian troops in Afghanistan posed or the burden of the 2.5 million refugees that Pakistan was being forced to look after. I said that the so-called threat to Pakistan from the Soviet presence did not seem very credible to us as Pakistan had not done anything to meet that threat and it was clear that Pakistan was acquiring arms only to strengthen herself vis-à-vis India. Shah Nawaz replied by saying that Pakistan’s defence forces were equipped with mostly outdated weaponry and what Pakistan was going to get over a period of 5 years was hardly likely to pose a threat to India. He said it would be madness on the part of Pakistan to challenge India and he was unable to understand how a few F-16s could possibly pose a threat to India. I said that since 1971 Pakistani defence forces had grown in size, they had acquired arms from China and France and we had not protested. We were protesting now because firstly, through the acquisition of US arms Pakistan was willy-nilly being dragged into US strategic perceptions; secondly, because the Pakistanis were acquiring a variety, and a quantity, of sophisticated arms which would upset the delicate balance which exists on the sub-continent; and lastly the rate at which these acquisitions could be introduced into the Pakistani inventory would put an enormous economic strain on us in order to maintain parity. Once again Shah Nawaz tried to refute this by saying that the arms would pose no threat to India, that it would be suicidal for Pakistan to take on India etc. I pointed out that the size of a country had not deterred smaller countries from attacking bigger ones and whatever the Pakistanis may say, the wars of 1965 or 71 were hardly of our making. I added that it was a well-known fact that Pakistan was very close to acquiring a nuclear weapon and this in combination with the delivery capability of the F-16 was surely a threat no neighbour of Pakistan can ignore. Shah Nawaz tried to deride this by saying that a few F-16s could hardly make a difference. I said that even one F-16 was dangerous enough since it could jam our radars with its sophisticated avionics and then push any number of planes through the hole which the F-16 would have punched in our radar screen. If the planes were to carry nuclear weapons it did not require too much imagination to understand why we were so agitated about the F-16 deal. I said that it would be idle to think that we would keep quiet over this matter.

3. I then turned to the propaganda war that Pakistan had let loose against India and particularly against Mrs. Gandhi. I said that the manner in which the Pakistani proposal about a non-aggression pact and the solving of all problems without recourse to force in the spirit of the Simla Agreement had been made could not be taken as anything but a propaganda gimmick. I said that not only the manner in which the offer was made was ill conceived but it violated a principle that was agreed upon, namely, that important matters such as force reductions etc. should not be aired in public but be discussed through diplomatic channels. I said that Mr. Agha Shahi in spite of agreeing in June 1981 not to talk about force reductions in public, had referred to this matter in seminars and the Press more than once. I said even if Pakistan was serious about the September 15th offer why was it dragging its feet in communicating the offer through diplomatic channels? I said President Zia had said as long ago as the beginning of October that the offer would be communicated in writing and not long ago Riaz Piracha, the Pakistan Foreign Secretary, had also told me that he would ensure that a note was sent to us very soon after his return to Islamabad from Kathmandu. I said we are still waiting for such a proposal. Shah Nawaz said that the idea of offering India a non aggression pact was mooted by him some time ago. It was asked as to how a small country like Pakistan could offer such a pact to a larger and more powerful country like India. This question was hotly debated but it was decided that there would be no harm in Pakistan making such an offer since it was in any case meant to allay the unreasonable fears of India. Just when everything was ready for the offer to be made, the US-Pak negotiations on the arms and economic aid package were being finalized and it was decided, therefore, that the announcement on the US-Pak negotiations should also include the Pakistani offer of a non-aggression pact with India. I said that Shah Nawaz's explanation may well be the correct one but we could hardly overlook the fact that the announcement coincided with the opening of the UNGA, the CHOGM in Melbourne and the beginning of the Congressional hearings on US aid to Pakistan. I said that the manner in which the whole episode had been handled had left a bad taste. Shah Nawaz reluctantly agreed that the matter could have been better handled and promised that the offer would be sent to us in writing very soon and, upon my urging, also agreed that it would be accompanied by some more details of Pakistani thinking.

4. Our conversation then turned to Afghanistan. I asked Shah Nawaz whether Pakistan contemplated any new steps to resolve the Afghanistan question. He said that it would be up to the Afghans and Russians to make the next move. I said that I should have thought that the next move would come from the Pakistanis considering that they had just succeeded in getting a resolution passed on Afghanistan in to UNGA with such an overwhelming majority. Shah Nawaz said that, on the contrary, it was now up to the Afghans to make the next move and that he was willing to stay on for some time if there was some hope of the Afghans relenting on their present postures. I said that I had had talks both with Secretary General Waldheim as well as with the Afghan Foreign Minister Shah Mohd. Dost. Waldhem, I said, had told me that at the beginning of the GA he had been able to arrange some kind of “proximity talks” between himself, Agha Shahi and Shah Mohd. As a result of the talks it had appeared to him that a situation was being reached when talks on the political solution of the Afghan question and the question relating to the return of the refugees from Pakistan could be taken up simultaneously. Waldheim was hoping to start the process now that the UN resolution on Afghanistan was out of the way, but was disappointed that Agha Shahi had gone away. I said that Shah Mohd. Dost had also voiced his disappointment over Agha Shahi’s sudden disappearance from New York. Shah Nawaz said that it was wrong to interpret Shahi’s absence as a deliberate action to avoid discussion of the Afghanistan problem. Shah Nawaz said that he had Ministerial rank and he was willing to stay on in New York as long as it was necessary in order to discuss the problem but added that the initiative would have to come from the other side. I said that in my opinion such an attitude would be rather unfortunate as all have to work to find a solution. I said that last year soon after the UNGA resolution had been passed, several promising opportunities were presented for solving the Afghan question. Unfortunately none of these had been successful. In the meantime the people of Afghanistan had been subjected to another year of turmoil and discomfort. I said that with the onset of winter the fighting between the Government troops and the rebels would be less in intensity and the next three months would be conducive to achieving some kind of breakthrough. I said that there was not much time to be lost and I hoped that every one concerned would apply their minds seriously to finding a solution. The only comment Shah Nawaz made was that the winter months are also the time for more refugees to come to Pakistan from Afghanistan. I retorted by saying that if Pakistan did not do anything would the world not say that Pakistan really wanted all the Afghans to come over to Pakistan? Shah Nawaz said that appeared to be the tactics of the other side and thereby to create a situation were Pakistan would be broken up. He said that he heard that this was also the aim of some others. In view of the fact that Shah Nawaz was clearly implicating India, I challenged him to say whether he had India in mind. He retracted to the extent of saying that he had merely heard this to be one of the aims of certain people who were inimical to Pakistan unity. I assured him that India was convinced that Pakistan’s unity was in India’s interest and that there need be no apprehension about India’s intentions vis-a-vis Pakistan.

5. Shan Nawaz then said that President Zia and he personally had worked very hard and very sincerely towards bringing about some kind of an understanding between India and Pakistan. Shah Nawaz asked whether it would be of any use for President Zia to make the offer of a non-aggression pact in writing to Mrs. Gandhi. I said that correspondence between the leaders of the two countries is always useful but it would be better if the normal channels were used for discussion of this question for the present. The heads of government can be brought into the picture subsequently. We agreed that the talk which we had had was a useful one and that more such talks on a one-to-one basis would be useful. Shah Nawaz offered to meet me again should this become necessary. We agreed that it would be preferable not to have the meetings in New Delhi or in Islamabad as such meetings tend to attract too much attention. It was agreed that London might be the best place for us to meet as both of us had suitable alibis for visiting London.

Call on Prime Minister by Ambassador At-Large of Pakistan
(5.45 p.m. on the 14th December in Parliament House)

PRIME MINISTER’S OFFICE

Record of Discussions

Mr. A.K. Brohi, Pakistan’s Ambassador At-Large, called o PM on the 14th December at 5.45 p.m. in Parliament House.

2. Referring to his stay in India 20 years back as Pakistan’s High Commissioner, he referred to an incident when he had visited Jabalpur after the riots there. Questions had been asked in the Indian Parliament about his trip, and Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru had described him as a friend of our country, adding that his presence here was the only compliment paid to us by Pakistan. Later, Panditji had telephoned him to enquire whether this public description had created any difficulties for him vis-à-vis his own Government. Mr. Brohi conveyed to PM the greetings of his President, and said that he had come for the Rotary meeting, to talk about the need for peace in our region. He had a lot of respect and admiration for India, and said that he was not probably a typical representative of his country. Acrimony, ifs, buts, and suspicion had marred our relations, which could have been avoided. General Zia had told him that it would be a good thing for him to go to India. He had replied that there were so many misunderstandings between the two countries. General Zia had told him that in his own case, he had the reputation of being an honest man. General Zia had given a message for the Conferences, and with fervor and prayer, he had expressed the hope for better relations in our region. He had come to India with much love, if love could be accommodated in politics and in diplomacy. No one could exhibit hatred for for 24 hours. PM remarked that far from it, we were working to promote good relations. Mr. Brohi said that PM was the exception. PM replied that she had referred to "we" and not herself.

3. Mr. Brohi went on to say that we had not tried to be positive, and we had sacrificed ourselves on the altar of synicism. He wanted to say with all forvour and honesty that even in a world composed of nation states, the people of the Sub-Continent had played a unique role together in its culture and history. What was a political partition, was not such a surgical operation as it had been construed. We and our children could reverse the trend. He knew he spoke with sincerity, though not perhaps with great deal of logic. He did not want to go back from the meeting with PM with sorrow in his heart. He did not have much influence, since he was not in the political mainstream. He was a Rector of a university, and a staunch upholder of Indo-Pak friendship. He wanted to be accepted as a man of honour. It lay in PM.s power to bring us redemption, and this was a great cause to fight for.

4. PM said that we were fully committed to peace and to better relations with Pakistan. We had close links, and common problems. It made no sense at all that we should fight. We were so much absorbed in the tasks of economic development, that the burden of military expenditure was worth avoiding. Peace between us was not only an ideal, but also a practical necessity. If only India and Pakistan could hang together, we would be so much stronger and would have an impact on the world. But we had been on the wrong track. India is not to blame for this. We were making major efforts to improve relations, but there should also be some response on the other side. She did not know what more we could do. It made no sense to fight in today's world, where problems are vast. She also felt that no matter what happened we, both India and Pakistan, got the worst of it. Mr. Brohi remarked that our destiny was one and indivisible. The word "partition" was a wrong way of describing what had happened. PM said that all that belonged to the past. We were separate countries, and we accept this. Cooperation between us had to be as between two sovereign nations.

5. Mr. Brohi remarked that perhaps his attitude on this was stupid, but he felt that we should also show that although relations are between two independent countries, there is much which influences us together. It should be like the relationship in a family, where each son gets a share, without having to claim it from a third person. He believed that human and personal relations were vital. His own words would not have only a dictionary meaning, if he was accepted as an honest man. He gave two examples, adding that he was not good at explaining himself. When he had been Minister for Religious Affairs, people had sought his help to obtain visas to visit religious centres in India. The fervour with which people wanted to go equalled that which they had for the holiest places. Secondly, the great masters who influenced him, and he would not name them all, were from this part of the world. He did not know Bengali, but he had read every line written by Tagors. For him, this land had a kind of sanctity.

6. PM said that during the 1965 war, when she had been Minister for Information and Broadcasting, and had visited some of the areas where fighting had taken place, she had been told that even in the midst of fighting, people on both sides had shouted queries to one another, asking about one or another living in such and such village. There were so many links between us.

7. Mr. Brohi said that he prayed that India should grow from strength to strength and that it should progress. No evil should scar its face and in the years ahead. Many the forces which had taken us the wrong way, take us along the right one. If he could leave this thought with PM, as from one who was identified with India and had walked its streets, he would be happy, because in a sense a part of him was here. He wanted to mention one last point. In the last 400 years, the growth of religious knowledge in Islam had been of a substantial character. However, this had come not from Al-Azhar, not from Damascus, not from Jordan, but from our region. There were many people in his country who wanted to sit at the feet of the masters in India, who were carrying on this work. This was part of our own links, though we were independent. He thanked PM for receiving him and added that if there was anything he could do to further the cause of friendship, he would do it.

8. The meeting ended after customary courtesies.

Prime Minister's Office
U.O.No. PMS-31384 dated 16-12-1981
After exchange of pleasantries, FS mentioned about his being away on leave. The Ambassador jokingly commented that he was thinking that he is making a clandestine trip somewhere. FS stated about bad health and about his personal bereavement. The Ambassador offered him his condolences. Thereafter, FS mentioned that the Ambassador’s note to FM containing the instructions to the Soviet Ambassador in Islamabad was read with great interest by him. He observed that Pakistan was very much on the Soviet as well as on the Indian mind. He noted the mention of the role of India and the Soviet Union for peace as a distinctive feature of the note. Because of this note, FS expressed his interest in exchanging views in some details since with FM, perhaps there was not enough time for the purpose.

Stating the background to the recent developments in Indo-Pakistan relations, FS stated that there is lot of speculation in the press regarding the present state of Indo-Pakistan relations. He mentioned the no war pact offer of Pakistan and stated the initial response of the Indian Government to it. The press release of 15th September to the Government of India about arms acquisition indicated that no-war offer was in fact an addition to their public justification of the acquisition of American arms. The Indian Government felt that a press release cannot be a basis for official negotiations and the Indian spokesman reacted accordingly. Then came Zia-ul-Haq’s statement of 24th October that very soon something in writing would be communicated to the Indian Government laying out Pakistan’s concept of a no-war agreement. On 22nd November, there was a third person note from the Pakistan side which made essentially the same points. The Indian Government reacted in public and in Parliament on Pakistan’s proposals. He felt that Pakistan was talking at different times, in different voices on the subject. The Government of India has, however taken this offer seriously because the offer is from a Government which is not totally irresponsible. The Indian side felt that it will look at the proposal with seriousness of purpose as is expected of a serious Government not given to diplomatic ploys. A lot has appeared in the press during the last ten days criticizing the Government’s position on it and there had been a feeling in the public that the Government was adopting the right attitude earlier. Coming to the recent visit of India’s Ambassador in Pakistan, FS stated that to put the Ambassador’s mind at ease, Mr. Natwar Singh was due to come to India on the 9th December but he postponed his visit in view of FS’s illness. The Ministry carries on frequent consultations with the Indian Ambassador in view of his nearness. Taking advantage of his presence in New Delhi FS said that a letter is being sent through him to Pakistan’s Foreign Minister. The letter is brief and in three parts: a) Mr. Agha Shahi is not well and it wishes him speedy recovery, b) there was an earlier agreement that Mr. Agha Shahi will pay a visit to India and hope was expressed that he will come some time; c) Seasons greetings to the Foreign Minister. Now, the Ministry is awaiting the Pakistani response and watching whether Pakistani leaders are happy to receive the Indian message. FS felt that it was better to talk in person rather than over the radio waves. During Mr. Natwar Singh’s visit, seriousness of the Pakistani offer was examined and there have been some recent high level Indian statements on the current state of Indo-Pakistan relations. FM made statements on the 25th November, on the 11th December in Lok Sahba and then in Rajya Sabha on the 17th December. PM also made a statement in Dehradun. It does emerge from the statements of our leaders that the Indian side is showing preparedness to look at Pakistan’s proposal.

The Indian approach is to examine it on the basis of the Simla Agreement and that the primary need for both Governments is to attend to the needs of the people in a tension free atmosphere. The Indian sides would insist on a commitment to certain principles, like the Panchsheel and that whatever be the disputes between the two sides, they should be solved only by peaceful methods. Nonalignment is a principle which is accepted both by India and Pakistan and that it was the Indian wish that there should be no involvement in big power confrontation (the Soviet Ambassador reacted to the phrase “big power confrontation” in a somewhat negative manner). In future these principles will be the basis for whatever relationship can be struck between the two countries and would form the touch stone for all proposals for improvement of relations. In that context, FS observed that the Soviet note was a very interesting one, and there are certain points on which he would be interested in the Ambassador’s comments.

The Ambassador interjected to state that the note has not yet been delivered to President Zia but it certainly will be. President Zia-ul-Haq is avoiding meeting with the Soviet Ambassador in Islamabad because the Ambassador’s instructions are that the Soviet feelings must be communicated to President Zia himself. AS (UN) found certain elements in the note of great interest. He noted that Pakistan is talking of Indo-Soviet relations in certain ways but this relationship is a factor of peace in Asia. Another interesting point was the Soviet reference to their dialogue with the Pakistanis in August. The third interesting feature of these instructions was the mention of the flexibility displayed by the Afghan Government and the lack of response by Pakistan to the August proposals of the Afghan Government. AS was interested in knowing as to what precisely triggered off this note and also as to what really went right or wrong in August at the time of Soviet-Pakistan negotiations. The note speaks of Pakistan eroding her relations with the Soviet Union. It appeared to AS (UN) that the Soviet-assisted steel mill was indeed the only thing “for the present.”

AS (UN) further drew the Ambassador’s attention to an article in the Far Eastern Economic Review by a journalist, Lawrence Lifschuts, on the American military strategists’ view of Pakistan’s relevance to future US plans. The Ambassador state that as far as the August negotiations are concerned, nothing special happened except for the Soviet effort to sell to the Pakistan side the Afghan proposals. AS (UN) observed that that was the time when the Soviet Government talked to the Pakistanis about the Durand Line. The Soviet Ambassador stated that his leaders were very sore with Pakistan for their prevarication. The Soviet leaders were particularly sore about January when the Pakistani leaders suggested that they were prepared to sit down for talks with Afghans without Iranian participation. This observation was made by President Zia himself to the Soviet Ambassador in Islamabad. Later, a denial by the Pakistani leaders of such a commitment caused great heart burning in Kremlin. President Zia’s commitment was taken very seriously at the highest level in Moscow and their exasperation and anger was immense. In Moscow, he was even described as a “senseless character.” At that time, the Soviet Government sent a note to Islamabad. Then, in August, the Soviet efforts were turned down by the Pakistani leaders, and now, his Government feels that the only method which could work would be to alternately put pressure on Pakistan and to release it. So now, the Soviet Government wanted to put some pressure on them because the Pakistani leaders think that they are a very clever lot. The Soviet side is telling them that they will have to pay very dearly for this unreliableness. FS asked whether this pressure will affect economic relations between the two countries. The Ambassador answered that the steel mill is the only contact point between the two Governments at the moment and it will continue to remain so. They are interested in inviting a high power delegation for the opening of the mill but that is not the case. In any case, there are no new programmes envisaged at present. FS asked whether this was the first Soviet demarche. The Ambassador stated that the Soviet Government had tried earlier to bring them to the negotiation table but they were bent on making evasive manoeuvres. Now the Soviet side is putting the blame squarely for the present state of relations on the Pakistani leaders. FS asked whether he expected that this would lead to an increase in activity from the Pakistan side. He noted that previously, there was no mention of the role played at the authorities in Pakistan. In this note, however, the Pakistan Government has been specifically blamed for its role in the interference in Afghanistan’s affairs. The Ambassador agreed and said that the earlier protestations of the Pakistani leaders about their non-involvement are now being rejected openly. The Soviet side is telling the Pakistani leaders that their Government was very much involved in external interference in Afghanistan, and the Soviet Government considers them responsible for it. AS (UN) queried the Ambassador as to what was the Soviet leverage with Pakistan. The Ambassador stated that it was close to zero. The Soviet Government can only shut down the steel mill but they don’t care for it. The Soviet leverage is of a purely verbal form or its capacity for creating disturbances close to the Pakistan border. AS (UN) further observed that he can understand that the PM and FM are interested in studying the seriousness of the Pakistani leaders. The Ambassador retorted that the Soviets knew that they were not serious. Diplomatically, however, it is an interesting move, and one does not know whether they thought of it themselves or somebody else inspired them. FS stated that the Pakistani leaders claim that the move has been considered for some time but as it is, the idea is very vague. The phrase “no-war pact” has been used in the communication to us coupled with the view of exchanging mutual assurances of non aggression and the non-use of force in view of the Simla Agreement. FS stated that he found the note from the Ambassador very interesting and was grateful to the Soviet Government for keeping the Indian Government informed about their dialogue with Pakistan. The Ambassador stated that he will inform the Ministry about the reaction of President Zia as soon as the Ambassador has met him. FS queried the Ambassador whether in his view, the Pakistani Foreign Minister will come to India or not. The Ambassador felt that he certainly would since this is a joint venture of Pakistan and the US to convince the Indian leaders that the arms being acquired by the Pakistan Government are not against India. It reminds him of the duplicity of Hitler’s Germany and the signing of the non-aggression Pact between the Soviet Union and Germany. It is a cynical proposal for the public. FS stated that it was indeed a good diplomatic move, and he felt that Pakistani’s bluff will have to be called. Frankly speaking the people in Pakistan are bearing an enormous defence burden with 7 per cent of the GDP is publicly declared to be diverted for defence. Even if they get armaments, the total cost to the economy of Pakistan will be enormous. The Ambassador did not agree and said that the cost would not be felt by the Generals in Pakistan. FS stated that when FM went to Pakistan, the atmosphere created by his statements and his visit was exceedingly good and in many ways very heartwarming. So much so that when Buckley was coming to Pakistan for talks, FS felt, he did not have a brief of F-16 but feeling that the atmosphere in Pakistan was good and the need for the two countries to eschew war was widely felt, he pulled out of his hat F-16s which FS thought he was not authorized to do. His reason for saying that was that he did not get the quid pro quo which were the objectives behind the US moves towards Pakistan – as it came out in the Senate hearings. The Ambassador said that his guess was that Mr. Agha Shahi will come with a beautiful draft since that is the logic of the Pakistan and American moves. The US does not want a conflict with India because that may lead to their losing Pakistan. They are only interested in preserving Pakistan in its present state. They have an interest in getting from Pakistan a military base in the Indian Ocean and another one in Peshawar for the Rapid Deployment Force. The no-war pact is not the matter; what they are interested in is the continuation of the military regime there. The General, if he wants, can any time strike at India in Kashmir or any other place of his choice. But, for the time being, he is not going to lose anything by behaving like a “peace-loving General.”

FS asked him as to what kind of proposals Pakistan’s FM may bring. The Ambassador stated that on Kashmir, he did not expect anything new but everything else he may be prepared to accept. If the Indian side proposes anything of substance in Kashmir, the Pakistani side will reject it. FS thought that the fact of good relations between India and Pakistan would automatically loosen contacts with the US. Pakistan claims to be afraid of India and the Soviet Union and that the two countries may get together against Pakistan. However, it was his belief that if Pakistan comes to agreement with Afghanistan, just like India, then the kind of relationship it has with the US will be less close. It would be in our mutual interest. Since India is not a global power, it is much easier for her to talk to Pakistan and vice versa, thereby loosening her contact with the Americans. The Ambassador stated that he understood FS’s logic but that there was only one condition on which this can work. Their fears of Soviet or Indian attack are not real fears because the Soviet Union is prepared to accommodate their sensitivities. It is prepared to give guarantees and in other improved relations with them. But the Pakistani leaders have no such interests and President Zia is very good at political gambles. He wants to neutralize the Soviet Union and he seems to be winning on all these fronts. FS disagreed and said that Zia-ul-Haq is not winning and he has 2 million refugees on his hands. The Ambassador said that he was not feeding them; it is the American money. FS countered by saying that feeding apart, the refugees will be troublesome and they are going to move southwards slowly and slowly. The Ambassador jokingly commented that President Zia will manipulate that they came to India instead. FS said that that was not the case but that being the kind of people they are, they can create problems for the stability of society in Pakistan. The Ambassador agreed and said that there could be a Kurdistan in Pakistan. FS said that they were worried and increasingly so now. The Ambassador differed and said that they are only moderately worried and not so much about them at present. And then the General will be gambling for higher stakes when he gets the bomb. “Generals everywhere love bombs.”
FS changing the subject, requested the Ambassador to give some information on the current situation in Poland…………………………

SECRET

Letter from the Embassy of India in Moscow to the Ministry of External Affairs on Soviet – Pakistan Relations.

Moscow, January 12, 1982.

Embassy of India
Moscow

R. Sen,
Counsellor (Pol)
No. MOS/POL/104/4/82 January 12, 1982

My dear,

On the eve of Foreign Minister Agha Shani’s scheduled visit to India at the end of this month, we thought you may like to have a resume of Soviet – Pakistan relations as we see them from Moscow.

2. Pakistan’s internal and external policies had been severely criticized throughout last year, except for a very brief lull prior to the Non-aligned Foreign Ministers’ Meeting in Delhi, at the time Pakistan showed some signs of its willingness to come to the negotiating table with Afghanistan. This criticism continues unabated in the New Year. To give you an idea of the scope and intensity of the criticism of the Pakistani regime, I enclose five articles which appeared in a span of four days last week in the PRAVDA, KRASNAYA ZVESDA, SOVIETSKAYA, ROSSIYA and SOCIALIST INDUSTRY (not included here). Even when President Sadat was on the scene, General Zia had the dubious honour of being the most criticized leader of a developing country in the Soviet media. After Sadat’s assassination, he has the spotlight of Soviet criticism even more to himself.
3. Our Embassy in Islamabad had reported that after Deputy Foreign Minister Firyubin’s visit to Islamabad in end August 1981, the Pakistani Press had been told to refrain from criticizing Soviet leaders by name. This consideration has certainly not been reciprocated here. In fact, General Zia is rarely referred to as President of Pakistan. He is described most charitably as merely “the General” but more often as the “head of the Military administration,” the ‘Head of the military dictatorship’ or sometimes just simply as the “Pakistani dictator”. Unlike the late President Sadat, General Zia is not just severely criticized but often ridiculed. Not only his policies but his personal integrity are called into question. In end December last year, TASS went out of its way to quote an Italian magazine PANORAMA, which referred to General Zia setting a personal example of the widespread corruption in his country and refers to him as one of the wealthiest persons in Pakistan. Similarly, the government he heads is rarely referred to as the “Pakistan Government” but usually as a “military” or “reactionary regime”.

4. The legitimacy of the Pakistani government is questioned not just by the terminology used to describe it. There has been sustained criticism of the tightening of the “screws of the dictatorial authoritarian rule” in Pakistan by the banning of political parties, the constant postponement of elections, the muffling of the press, the mass arrests and suppression of popular opposition. General Zia’s recent decree on the formation of the Federal Advisory Council was also predictably termed as a “farce” and a “new political trick” to put the lid on the opposition and to blunt the democratic movement. The economic situation is also described here as being in a mess with Zia surviving essentially on funds made available by the United States and its allies such as Japan, reactionary Arab countries as well as the IMF and World Bank. This, in turn, is seen as increasing the Western hold on the present Pakistani regime. The Soviet Union’s sympathies with the political opposition in Pakistan became clearly evident particularly after the hijacking of the PIA aircraft to Kabul. Since then the Soviet media have often indicated support, in general for the Movement for the Restoration of Democracy and, in particular for the PPP.

5. The Soviets have publicly accused the United States of envisaging a role similar to that of the late Shah of Iran for General Zia. They privately point out that Zia should draw his own conclusions from what finally happened not only to the Shah but also to Sadat. At the same time, it may not be in the Soviet interest to see Zia removed in the wave of an Islamic fundamentalist movement as in the case of Iran. This would make the Soviet presence in Afghanistan more difficult in the long run though, as in the case of Iran, there would be short term Soviet benefits from a backlash of anti-Americanism that would be almost inevitable in such a movement. Given the limited influence of leftist political forces in Pakistan, the best Soviet bet would appear to be in a return to power of the PPP. A factor to be kept in view by us is that Soviet occupied Kabul could increasingly play the role of a major centre for sustaining not only the Al-Zulfikar group but other secular opposition forces in Pakistan.

6. If the present stalemate continues, the Soviets may also be tempted to demonstrate to Pakistan that insurgency is a game which two can play by encouraging the secessionist sentiments among the Baluchis and Pushtuns. The revival of such nascent tribal nationalism may not, however, be in the long term Soviet, or for that matter, our own interests since their destabilizing impact may be difficult to contain.

7. In private conversations, such as your own talk with Valkov, the Soviets have tried to fathom how General Zia has managed to defy all predictions by surviving for so long. They ascribe this not to any statesmanship or charisma but to his “cunning” manipulations of differences in the political opposition, taking advantage of events such as the hijacking of the PIA aircraft, the lack of any outstanding political personality around which the opposition could rally and the careful nurturing of his main constituency, namely, the army. Yet they seem to feel that the present regime is inherently fragile.

8. While General Zia’s domestic policies have been criticized fairly severely, it is his foreign policy which attracted the strongest Soviet attack. At the highest level, Brezhnev did not make any reference at all to Pakistan in his address at the 26th CPSU Congress in February 1981. In a speech at Tbilisi on 22nd May 1981, however, Brezhnev expressed his annoyance at Pakistan’s “stubborn refusal” to come to terms with Afghanistan. A few days later, while speaking at the Mongolian Party Congress, Politburo Member Gorbachev had also criticized Pakistan primarily in the context of its attitude towards Afghanistan. In the Soviet media, however, the criticism of Pakistani foreign policies had been much wider and far more intense. As Valkov indicated to you, the Soviets are increasingly expressing their skepticism of Pakistan’s non aligned credentials. They portray Pakistan as becoming a “tool for expansionism for American militarists” acting in concert with Chinese “hegemonists” in the area. As Sergei Bulantsev said in a TASS commentary on 26th December 1981, “Islamabad pays for American weapons not only with dollars but also with the country’s sovereignty.”

9. The arms deal with the United States has been criticized on several grounds, including, among other factors, the following.

i) It is not prompted by the security concerns of Pakistan but Sino-American strategic interests in South and South-West Asia, which are not parallel any longer but coincide.

ii) It has a destabilizing impact since the arms to be supplied exceed Pakistan’s real needs. By upsetting the existing balance in South Asia, the injection of American arms to Pakistan would inevitably lead to an arms race.

iii) The American arms would pose a threat to Afghanistan, Iran and, above all, to India. Experience had shown that Pakistani guns had been turned only in one direction – towards India. Simultaneously, the Soviet media has been reporting “feverish” intensification of Pakistani military preparations “along the line of control dividing the Indian State of Jammu & Kashmir.”

iv) The arms supply would be a prelude to the establishment of American naval, air and electronic espionage bases primarily a part of the proposed Rapid Deployment Force. Gwadar and Peshawar have been specifically mentioned as sites. This would pose a threat to India as well as to Iran since these bases will be linked up with the secret US contingency plan code-named “Operation Tripwire” aimed at Iran which has been disclosed recently by The Times of London.

v) The military and economic assistance is not only aimed at buttressing the present Pakistani regime but serves, in fact, as further encouragement for the suppression of the popular democratic movement in that country.

vi) It is an encouragement and even endorsement of the Pakistani Programme to acquire nuclear weapons (In has been noted that the F-16 aircraft are capable of carrying nuclear payloads).

vii) It is aimed at “complicating” the political solution of the Afghanistan question.

10. On the other hand, the Chinese military assistance to Pakistan and its collusion with the United States is said to be prompted, inter alia, by the desire:

i) to keep the pot boiling in Afghanistan.

ii) to goad Pakistan into a confrontation with India “the main obstacle to Chinese hegemony in South Asia” (The visit of the Chinese Chief of Army Staff, Yanz Dazhi, was projected as intending to “beef up” Pakistani strength on the Indian border besides coordinating assistance to Afghan rebels).

iii) to give China access to the Indian Ocean, including the Persian Gulf. (US Pacific Fleet Commander, Admiral Robert Long’s visit to Pakistan in November is linked with the earlier visit of the Acting Commander of the PRC Navy, Liu Da sheng).
11. While highlighting the threat posed to India by these developments, the Indian concern has been portrayed against the larger backdrop of enhanced US military presence in the Indian Ocean. Chinese military activities in POK and in Tibet, the participation of "external forces" to destabilize the situation in north-eastern India as well as in fostering communal tensions etc. Thus, while the Soviet message to Pakistan is that its present policies are against its own interests, the message to India is to underline the extent of the common security interests of India and the Soviet Union in the wake of the recent developments as well as the convergence of interests of the two countries in bringing Pakistan to the negotiating table with Afghanistan.

12. There seems to be a school of thinking that the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, in the wake of the revolution in Iran, has considerably increased the Soviet stakes in reaching an accommodation with Islamabad since these developments have further enhanced Pakistan's strategic and political importance to the Soviet Union. It has been claimed that in the present circumstances, the Soviet may not be averse to making certain "concessions" to Pakistan at the cost of India and that, in the event of an Indo-Soviet (Pakistan) conflict, we may not even be able to count on Soviet support. This, in my view, conveys a totally misleading picture and is contrary to our assessment in Moscow of Soviet interests and motivations.

13. The American geo-strategic perception of Pakistan has essentially been in the context of its interests in the Persian Gulf and the Middle East. The developments in Iran, the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and the recent death of Sadat have further sharpened this American perception of Pakistan. On the other hand, the major factor affecting Soviet perceptions in Asia is undoubtedly China and hence the importance of India and Vietnam—very much in that order—as forces to contain and dilute Chinese influence in South and South-East Asia. Added to this is India's sheer size and potential, its economic infrastructure, its political stability, its standing in the Non-aligned Movement and other international fora, its pre-eminence as a major power in region as demonstrated in 1971 and, above all, the steady, continuous and dynamic growth, without any serious setbacks in Indo-Soviet relations since the mid-1950's. In fact the recent developments in Iran as well as in Afghanistan have further increased the Soviet stake in its relationship with India—a relationship which has no parallel in terms of its history and its present importance in Soviet relations with any other developing country in the world. In the present context of the siege mentality which is increasingly becoming evident in the Kremlin, the relationship with India has assumed even greater importance. While this would be true even in objective circumstances, the personal factor also plays a role. The Soviets virtually utilize every opportunity not only to highlight Brezhnev's personal contribution and, by implication, his personal stake in friendship with India but his warm relationship with our Prime Minister. The closest parallel is the relationship with Schmidt (Chancellor of West Germany). Hence the importance attached to Brezhnev’s visit to India in December 1980. A commemorative stamp was issued not only on the occasion of that visit but also to mark Brezhnev’s brief talk with our Prime Minister on the troposscatter link inaugurated in November 1981.

14. In spite of the above, the Soviet would obviously like to have good bilateral relations with Pakistan. They need not always view their relations with Pakistan through the prism of India’s perceptions. They also probably recognize that, given their present relations with China, the major potential leverage they have on India is Pakistan. Ideally they would like the spirit of Tashkent to prevail over that of Simla. However, in the present circumstances in the region and in the larger global context, it would be most unlikely and uncharacteristic of the conservative Soviet leadership to consider any move in Pakistan which would cause misunderstanding in India, let alone alienating India. A reorientation of Soviet attitudes towards India and Pakistan could only come about if there is a major break through in our relations with China.

15. The Soviet Union would obviously like to use whatever influence it can bring to bear on Pakistan to blunt its strategic consensus vis-a-vis United States and China. However, the Soviet leverage in Pakistan is mostly the stick and very little of the carrot. They can only hint that there are limits to their patience and threaten to play the Baluchi or Pakhtoon cards or consider hot pursuit and preventive strikes of Afghan rebels in Pakistani territory. They can try to make Pakistan realize the dangers of getting caught in the cross-fire between the super-powers. By way of economic inducements they can never hope to match what the West is offering Pakistan. In fact, their ability to grant any large credits for new projects will be severely limited by their enhanced obligation in Poland in addition to their existing responsibilities elsewhere. It is also unlikely that they will, at the present stage, repeat what they tried to do in the late 60s, namely, offer arms to Pakistan, recognizing that Zia’s main power base is the army. Their earlier tentative move in this direction which was effectively aborted by us, was essentially a hangover from their Tashkent euphoria. In any case, Article X of the Indo Soviet Treaty prohibits them from entering into any obligations with another state “which might cause military damage” to us.

16. General Zia was reported to have sounded Deputy Foreign Minister Firyubin about arms supplies in August 1981. Firyubin’s reported negative response (without consulting Moscow) was predictable in the present circumstances. During President Brezhnev’s visit to India in December 1980, the Soviets had, on the other hand, pressed us for a reference to Indo-Soviet cooperation in the field of defence in the Joint Declaration. This reference was finally dropped at our insistence. However, President Brezhnev in his Vigyan Bhavan speech stated: “We regard as a very important field of our relations assistance in strengthening India’s defence capability… We conceal from no one that we wish to see friendly peace-loving India strong and capable of successfully defending its independence and promoting the cause of peace in Asia.”

17. What other inducements could the Soviets offer Pakistan? It has been said that they had tried to send “signals” to Pakistan on the status of Jammu and Kashmir. We had noted that Zia’s speech at the United Nations in 1979, including his reference to “self-determination in J&K, was carried in the Soviet Press. We also observed certain departures from normal Soviet reporting on the status of J&K. The worst reference was in IZVESTIA item on 23 December 1980 where POK was described as the “territory of Jammu and Kashmir occupied by Pakistan” and differentiated from the rest of J&K which was termed as “the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir”. There have been a few other references which were not totally satisfactory from our point of view, namely that they did not clearly spell out that the whole of J&K is a part of our territory and that POK is under illegal occupation of Pakistan. We did not ignore these “lapses” and brought them squarely to the attention of the Soviet authorities - and rightly so. I also recognize that such “lapses” are not always innocent, though TASS has been known to make serious errors even while reporting the Soviet position on Afghanistan. After all, if the Soviet Union could call into question the status of Tibet and if Prof. Kapitsa could state emphatically that China should not take Soviet support for the Chinese position on Taiwan “for granted” why should we expect the Soviet position on J&K to remain frozen for all times? A reappraisal, however, if it comes will be only in the context of a major breakthrough in our relations with China which changes the entire geopolitical picture as seen from Moscow. Soviet media have incidentally described the Pakistani offer of a No-war Pact as a propaganda ploy and “a convenient screen for continuing its aggressive arms build up, implementing its nuclear programme and turning Pakistan into a US military vantage point.”

18. The Soviet ‘lapses’ in reporting the legal status of J&K have to be seen not only in the chronological perspective, but in the context of the essential thrust of the reports. All the recent references to J&K have been in the context of severe criticism of Pakistan and its aggressive activities in POK. For every ‘lapse’ we could locate there are at least a score of other reference which would fully satisfy the most discriminating of our legal pundits. The standard Soviet reference to POK is “the part of the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir under the illegal occupation of Pakistan”. The Chinese have also been accused of gross interference “in favour of Pakistan” by referring to “relevant UN resolutions” in the context of J&K.
19. The Soviet have also indicated their willingness to reaffirm their clear cut position on J&K by including Krushchov's speech in Srinagar in December 1955 in the proposed joint publication of documents on “Soviet - India Relations – 1947 – 1980” under the auspices of the two Foreign Offices. They have been reminding us about this for a year now but our response has been inexplicably delayed. Could you please have our reply expedited? You file No WI/303/1/81 – EE refers.

20. The second carrot which is said to have been dangled before Pakistan is the Afghan recognition of the Durand line. Here again I would agree with Nirupam that we need not exaggerate the importance of the signal to Pakistan on the Durand Line in the Afghan statement of January 1981. Nirupam had rightly pointed out that, while Afghanistan had stated that it had no territorial claims against, or political dispute with Pakistan, it had left the door open for political differences by a revival of support for the Pushtun demand for self-determination.

21. Thus, while the Soviets have little room for manoeuvre in Pakistan without annoying India, the Pakistanis too seem to be finding it difficult to reassure the Soviets about their intentions or even their independence of action. The Pakistanis, have, of course, made several symbolic gestures to the Soviets. Zia has been going out of his way to call the Soviet Ambassador over for meals and calling personally at the Soviet Embassy after failing to turn up at the Soviet national day reception in November last year! Soviet officials claim that they are not impressed by such gestures since they apparently feel that these have been at least partially motivated by Zia’s desire to play the Soviet card to extract the best terms and expedite delivery schedules for American arms. Firyubin also made it a point (on instruction from Moscow) to visit Delhi immediately after his visit to Islamabad.

22. A normalization of Soviet – Pakistani relations is difficult to imagine without Pakistani recognition of Karmal or whoever is put in his place by the Soviets. And even if the Pakistanis have the desire or political cohesion and strength to take this step, they would certainly alienate the Americans, the Chinese and many of their friends in the Islamic Conference. The prospects, therefore, are that the present chilly relations between Soviet Union and Pakistan are likely to continue.

With kind regards.

Yours sincerely

(R. Sen)

Shri M.K. Mangalmurti,
Joint Secretary (EE)
Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi.

Excerpts from the Statement of Pakistani Foreign Minister Agha Shahi delivered before the Federal Council.

Islamabad, January 12, 1982.

- It is a great pleasure for me to be addressing the first session of the newly-constituted Majlis Shoora. I have no doubt that this Majlis will come to occupy an extremely important place in the political landscape of our country. The constitution of the Majlis Shoora has been a long and exhaustive exercise in which the President has tried to ensure that representatives of all parts of the country and of different segments of the people are included to work for the best interests of Pakistan. I am confident that your deliberations of various aspects of the national policies of Pakistan, including its foreign policy, will prove extremely useful to the Government in carrying out its responsibility of safeguarding the sovereignty and security of the country and promoting national cohesion and the well-being of our people.

- It is highly appropriate that the very first area of our national concerns to be taken up by this august assembly should be that of our external relations, for progress in other fields is possible only in an environment of peace, security and stability. I, therefore, feel privileged to be addressing you today on the principal relationships of Pakistan in the external sphere. In doing so, I shall focus attention on those problems and issues that are in the forefront of the concerns of our people on account of their bearing on our independence, security and territorial integrity.

On Permanent Nature of National Interests

- The national interests of a country do not change with changes of government or regime. Such interests are of a permanent nature. They postulate the element of continuity in the formulation and conduct of relations with other countries more especially with those which are neighbors. This element of continuity is manifest in the course of Pakistan – China relations over two decades. Despite changes of government and regime in both countries, their friendship and cooperation have continued to develop and prosper.

- Our ideology, and notably our commitment to Islam has always led us to cultivate close fraternal relations with the counties of the Muslim world. Then there are the policies and drivers of the Super Powers from which we cannot isolate ourselves, and beyond our bilateral equations with individual countries, lies a whole range of activities in multilateral organizations designed to promote international cooperation, further economic and social progress and above all to maintain peace on the basis of respect for the independence and sovereignty and the territorial integrity of States and observance of respect for the equal rights and the right of self-determination of peoples.

- The making of Pakistan’s foreign policy is thus a more complex matter than might appear at first. We may be quite clear about our goals and objectives, but the road to their attainment is frequently beset with formidable difficulties resulting from the pursuit of their own interests and policies by other nations.

- Changes of leadership and revolutionary upheavals in the countries around us often create new situations and pose unforeseen challenges. The attitudes of neighbouring countries are also an important factor and constitute a major preoccupation in defining our external relations. Super Power rivalry impinges on all parts of the globe. The challenges that policy makers face become more complicated and the dilemmas they confront more daunting because the international situation remains constantly in a state of flux and the element of unpredictability of events is inherent in such a state of affairs.

- Pakistan’s geo-strategic situation is such that ever since its birth it has faced a succession of challenging situations. In this context, the Jammu and Kashmir dispute, the 1965 War and the 1971 Catastrophe, come at once to mind. In recent years, crises and problems in our region proliferated in such a way as to make us a focal point of world attention. In the resultant situation, the conduct of our diplomacy has become a fundamental element in our quest for security and survival as a free nation.

- In today’s presentation I should like to brief you on Pakistan’s external relations by elaborating on the President’s address to the nation on 24th December 1981, which constitutes an authoritative statement of our foreign policy.

On Afghanistan Situation

- The Key issue which continues to be of the deepest concern to us is the situation in Afghanistan, arising from the military intervention of a Super Power in a neighbouring country, with which we have close ties of history, faith and culture and with which we share a 1,400 miles long border. I need not go into the history of this crisis but would like to underline that Pakistan’s principled deposition on the problems of Afghanistan has been consistently upheld and supported by the international community.
The principles to which Pakistan adheres have been reflected in the resolution adopted by the Islamic Conference during its various sessions since its special emergency session in Islamabad and meeting of the Non-aligned Movement and of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

- The resolutions and decisions adopted by these organizations have called for the withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan, observance of respect for the Non-aligned and independent status of that country, the reaffirmation of the right of the Afghan people to determine their own political and socio-economic system free from coercion and outside interference and the return of the Afghan refugees to their homes in safely and honour.

- The international community has accorded ever increasing support for the principled stand which Pakistan adopted without the slightest hesitation as soon as the massive induction of Soviet troops into Afghanistan took place in December 1979.

- Honourable members are aware of the growing number of votes that we have been able to attract for the resolutions on Afghanistan at the successive sessions of the General Assembly of the United Nations. The first resolution on this issue was adopted by the General Assembly at its special emergency session on 14th January 1980, with 104 votes in favour, 18 against and 18 abstentions. This number increased to 111 votes in favour, 22 against and 12 abstentions during the regular session of the General Assembly in November 1980, and at its recently concluded regular session, the General Assembly adopted the resolution on Afghanistan by 116 votes in favour, 23 votes against and 12 abstentions.

- Consistent with this expression of the will of the world community, Pakistan has taken further initiatives on the basis of the four principles laid down by the international organizations that I have named above. We have informed the Secretary-General of the United Nations that we stand ready to enter into negotiations on this basis under his auspices without prejudice to the position of non-recognition of the Karmal regime until the foreign forces withdraw as enjoined upon by the Islamic Conference resolution of January 1980.

- The possibility of trilateral talks between Iran, Pakistan and the representatives of the ruling political party of Afghanistan (first suggested in June, 1980, by the Standing Committee of the Islamic Conference), under the auspices of the UN Secretary General, is still being explored. The Kabul authorities indicated in their 24th August 1981 proposals their willingness to enter into these trilateral talks, but Iran has declined to participate. Pending the commencement of trilateral talks, Pakistan has agreed to hold indirect talks on the substantive issues of repatriation of refugees, withdrawal of foreign troops, guarantees of non-interference and so on, with the representatives of the ruling Peoples’ Democratic Party of Afghanistan through the intermediary of the Secretary General of the United Nations or his personal representative. In fact, much indirect talks have already commenced thanks to the interest shown by former UN Secretary General Waldheim and his then personal representative, Dr Perez de Cuellar, who has now succeeded Dr. Waldheim.

- After his first visit to Kabul and Islamabad in April 1981, Dr Cuellar informed us of the Kabul authorities’ willingness to discuss first the question of the return of Afghan refugees to Afghanistan. We agreed to the suggestion because, having given shelter and assistance to these refugees in an Islamic spirit and purely on humanitarian grounds, we have no desire to make political gains out of this colossal human tragedy by obstructing in any manner whatsoever their repatriation on an entirely voluntary basis.

- The massive influx of refugees whose number has by now swollen to 2.5 million (25 lakhs) continues to place great strains on our limited resources. Despite generous international assistance, we have to meet 40 per cent of the total cost of maintaining the refugees which now runs at more than Rs.4,000 million a year. Furthermore, we are of the view that negotiations for the return of refugees must inevitably lead to consideration of the question of withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan within an agreed time frame, which is the central issue to be addressed in negotiations for a political solution of the Afghanistan crisis.

- Last October, following my talks in New York with Secretary General Waldheim and Dr. Cuellar, the Karmal regime communicated to the UN Secretary General its official statements in regard to the terms and conditions it has laid down for the return of the refugees. The UN Secretary General has forwarded these statements to us, and we are now required to bring them to the attention of the Afghan refugees in order to ascertain their reaction for transmission to the UN Secretary General.

- I should like to make it clear once again, that having offered the Afghan refugees shelter on our soil out of considerations of Islamic duty and humanity; we have no intention of forcing them to go back to Afghanistan against their will. It is for the refugees themselves to decide whether or not they consider that the Karmal proposals promise the conditions conducive to their return to their homes in safety and honour.

- We look forward to the resumption of shuttle diplomacy by the UN Secretary General’s personal representative through visits to Islamabad, Kabul and Teheran. We also remain open to the initiation of appropriate procedures for speeding up the indirect negotiations while pursuing our efforts to bring about direct trilateral talks between Pakistan and Iran and the representatives of the People’s Democratic Party of Afghanistan under the auspices of the Secretary General of the United Nations.

- The Secretary General remains the sole hope for a viable negotiating process in view of the rejection by the Soviet and the Karmal regime of earlier proposals. These included the initiatives of the Islamic Conference, acting through its Standing Committee of Foreign Ministers, and of the European Economic Community, first for a neutral Afghanistan in return for Soviet withdrawal, and later for an international conference in two stages to negotiate a political settlement and to guarantee its implementation.

- The recent Iranian proposal for the replacement of Soviet troops by a peace-keeping force comprising contingents drawn from Islamic countries has also been summarily turned down by Kabul and Moscow.

- There is widespread doubt that the Soviet Union will ever withdraw its occupation forces from Afghanistan. However, the position proclaimed publicly by the Soviet Union is that its forces will be pulled out in agreement with the Kabul authorities provided affective guarantees of non-interference in the internal affairs of Afghanistan are given and implemented by the concerned authorities including Pakistan. Public declarations to this effect have been made by President Brezhnev and Foreign Minister Gromyko and reiterated emphatically to me twice by the Soviet Foreign Minister in my talks with him in New York.

- It is an established fact that resistance to the Karmal regime and the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan is entirely indigenous in character and that Pakistan is the victim and not the instigator of the tragic events in Afghanistan in the wake of the Soviet military intervention in that country. Nevertheless, Pakistan has expressed its readiness to participate in discussion on guarantees of non-interference to satisfy the Soviet condition for a negotiated political settlement leading to the withdrawal of the Soviet forces.

- We have informed the UN Secretary General accordingly and made it clear to him that we would be ready to discuss guarantees provided these are taken up in conjunction with the withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan under an agreed timetable.

- It is obvious in the final analysis that the crisis created by the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan can be resolved only by the withdrawal of Soviet forces.

On Proposed US-Soviet Summit

- We realize that a political solution of the Afghanistan problem can come about only when the international climate is propitious. We, therefore, favour moves for a reevaluation of tension in the relations between the Soviet Union and the United States and welcome the projected summit meeting between President Reagan and President Brezhnev sometime this year.

- We hope their talks will lead to an agreement on how to deal with major international issues including the revival of détente and progress towards nuclear disarmament. At the same time, we trust that any mutual accommodation they may eventually be reached by the two super powers would be based on the principles of respect for the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of States and not on a division of the world into new spheres of influence.

- The world today is not what is was when the Yalta Accord was reached in the closing days of the Second World War and imperialistic deals today are repugnant to the spirit of our times and intolerable to the Third World.

On ties with Soviet Union

- As a result of the situation in Afghanistan, Pakistan’s relations with the Soviet Union have been subjected to serves strains. Pakistan opposition to the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan, an opposition based on the rules of international law and behaviour set forth in the United Nations Charter, the principle of the Non-Aligned Movement and the Charter of the Islamic Conference, is resented by the Soviet Union which has contravened a basic principle common to all of them namely the duty to refrain from military intervention in other countries.

- The decision to uphold this duty of States under international law was taken by Pakistan in full consciousness of the risk of incurring thereby the displeasure of a Super Power. We considered it imperative to adopt this course because it is only through an acceptance of and adherence to the binding rules of international law and justice that the nations can preserve their independence and sovereignty.
In spite of the strains that have developed in Pakistan–Soviet relations as a result of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, Pakistan is maintaining a constant dialogue with the Soviet Union.

We have taken into account the statements of the Soviet authorities setting forth the reasons for their military intervention in Afghanistan as well as their demand for guarantees of non-interference before they agree to withdraw their forces from that country.

It is obvious, however, that it is beyond Pakistan’s capability to seal a 1400 miles long border with Afghanistan which runs through some of the most rugged and inaccessible terrain in the world to guarantee against trans-border movement.

The President of Pakistan has discussed this matter in September 1979 at Havana with the late Nur Mohammad Taraki who had conceded that the border could not be sealed from either side.

Notwithstanding the situation in Afghanistan, I am happy to inform the Federal Council that economic cooperation between the Soviet Union and Pakistan is being maintained and further expanded. The Soviet Union has extended valuable assistance to a number of large projects including the Karachi Steel Mills and the Guddu Thermal Project, and has agreed to assist in the implementation of new large-scale development schemes.

The President has stated on a number of occasions that Pakistan and the Soviet are neighbours and we must continue to seek good relations with this super-Power.

Now that we are a Non-Aligned nation, the complications in our relations with the Soviet Union arise primarily from the situation in Afghanistan. However, it is our conviction that the interests and aspirations of the countries and the people concerned with the Afghanistan problem are not irreconcilable.

It will be our continuing endeavour, with the support of the international community, to find a peaceful and equitable solution of this grave and tragic situation, through the good offices of the Secretary General of the United Nations.

Relation with India

I now turn to our relations with India which have acquired an added importance in the context of recent regional and global developments. The situation around us has undergone drastic and fundamental changes.

- It is the foremost duty of the leadership in both the countries to address themselves to the new situation before it is too late. The obsolete and rigid moulds of thinking must be discarded. The times demand new and bold solutions for the old problems.

- We in Pakistan are deeply conscious of the need to respond to the imperatives of the grave new situation which is constantly unfolding around South Asia. And we hope that India, as the largest country in our region, is also engaged in a similar exercise.

- Consistent with its policy of good-neighbourliness towards all countries in the region, President Zia-ul-Haq's Government has endeavoured to establish and promote friendly and tension-free relation with India. In the Simla Agreement of 2nd July 1972, Indian and Pakistan agreed to turn their backs on the conflict and confrontation of the past.

- Only a lasting peace between them will enable the two countries to devote their precious resources to the eradication of poverty, ignorance and disease and to the building of secure foundations for a new and better life for their peoples.

- The edifice of permanent peace between the two countries can be raised only on the basis of sovereign equality, justice and respect for the principle of non-interference in each other's internal affairs.

- A beginning has already been made in the opening up of new prospects for mutual understanding and co-operation by the peoples of the two countries.

- Travel and communication facilities have been enlarged and exchanges in the field of sports and culture have been greatly increased.

- Large numbers of Indian citizens thronged to the Pakistan pavilion at the Delhi Trade Fair last month to acquaint themselves with the capabilities and achievements of our young nation. There they had a glimpse of a new Pakistan and were deeply impressed.

- We are prepared to proceed further in all fields where progress is possible. We would welcome expansion of bilateral trade on the basis of equality and mutual benefit. We are equally ready to further improve facilities for travel and communications. During 1981, over 110,000 Indian citizens visited Pakistan.
We are opening a Consulate General in Bombay in the near future which would inter alia provide greater facilities for the travel of India’s citizens to our country. These measures and others to follow would, we hope, improve the prospects of better relations in the political field.

On India Reaction to U.S. Arms for Pakistan

- Unfortunately, the course of good relations between the two countries on the political plane continues to be obstructed by the bitter legacy of the past which creates fears of traps and deceptions.
- There is certainly no justification for such apprehensions and suspicions on the part of India which is by far the largest country in our region and need not fear a threat to its security from Pakistan.
- Last year when Pakistan, faced with a deteriorating security situation in the region, entered into an agreement with the United States which would enable it to acquire a modest quantity of military equipment to replace some of its obsolete weapons and that too by means of cash purchases or credits at high rate of interest over a period of five years, India’s reaction was inexplicably hostile.
- There was talk of war in India loud enough to reach our ears. The suggestion that Pakistan could ever acquire the capability to commit aggression against India was totally unfounded and failed to carry any credibility.
- The whole world was aware as were the people of India that Pakistan faced a difficult situation and, far from harbouring any aggressive designs against any of its neighbours, was desperately trying to strengthen its defences in the face of accumulating dangers.
- The world also knew that India’s armed forces were several times larger than Pakistan’s. That India’s indigenous arms industry produced an impressive array of modern armaments and that it had been embarked for years upon the acquisition of large quantities of the most sophisticated weapons system from the Soviet Union, at highly concessional prices and credit terms, as well as from Western countries.
- A substantial part of the supplies from abroad include Jagur deep penetration and strike aircraft, MIG-23s and MIG-25s. T-72 tanks and missiles, etc., have already reached India. Additional military equipment, including it is believed MIG-27s, will be delivered over the next few years. Furthermore, India is negotiating a $3 billion deal for the purchase of 150 Mirage-2000 aircraft from France. All these acquisition will ensure India’s continued military preponderance in the region.
On Kashmir & Simla Accord

- Coming to the question of Jammu and Kashmir, our position of principle and our commitment to its peaceful settlement have been misconstrued and misrepresented in India. If only this basic problem could be resolved the situation in the region would be entirely transformed. We have consistently maintained that the Jammu and Kashmir dispute must be resolved through peaceful means in the spirit of the Simla Agreement and in the light of the relevant UN Resolutions on the subject. The relevant provisions of the Simla Agreement commit the two sides equally to seek a solution of the dispute through bilateral negotiations without prejudice to their recognized positions on this issue.

- Since the conclusion of the Simla Agreement no initiative has been undertaken for settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir question. Negotiations on this problem can best take place in a climate of friendly relations between the two countries. Various factors including global developments leading to different geo-political perceptions and policies on the part of the two countries, primarily in regard to the foreign military intervention in Afghanistan have exerted a negative influence on the climate of bilateral relations.

- Pakistan remains firmly committed to the Simla Agreement and believes there is nothing in that agreement to derogate from the rights and privileges of either of the two parties, under the United Nations Charter. When we refer to Kashmir in international forums, while the dispute has not been addressed in accordance with the procedure laid down in the Simla Agreements, it should not be misinterpreted or misconstrued in India as a bid to deviate from that accord.

On No-War Pact Offer & Other Moves

- Apart from the other steps to improve relations with India mentioned earlier, we have, in view of the Indian suspicions and talk of war, taken a number of steps in the hope of reducing tension and preparing a congenial atmosphere for promoting peace and good neighbours.

- Sometime back, we had made an offer to India to discuss the ratio of military forces to be maintained by the two countries to prevent an arms race. More recently, in September last to be precise, we proposed immediate negotiations on the exchange of mutual guarantees of non aggression and non use of force in the spirit of the Simla Agreement.

- This proposal was well received all over the words. Having initially reacted with skepticism, the Government of India has now responded with a proposal containing some positive features. At the invitation of India’s Minister of External Affairs His Excellency Mr. Narasimha Rao, I will be visiting New Delhi towards the end of this month for initial discussions on a non-aggression pact.

- In the meantime, both sides are engaged in seeking clarifications through diplomatic exchange. We shall approach these negotiations in a spirit of sincerity and good faith, aware of the fact that their successful conclusion could constitute an historic achievement.

- We shall make every effort to overcome differences so as to conclude a non-aggression pact which would not derogate from the independence and sovereignty of Pakistan and would serve to reinforce the provisions of the Simla Agreement on the non-use of force and peaceful settlement of disputes between our two countries.

- The non-aggression pact would neither add to nor subtract from the provisions of the Simla Agreement in respect of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

- The central objectives of the agreement we have proposed to India are two-fold. Firstly, the two countries should exchange mutual guarantees of non-aggression and non-use of force, and secondly, they should reaffirm their solemn commitment to resolve disputes and differences, present or future, exclusively by peaceful means.

- Pakistan would be prepared to exchange views on these as well as any other related elements deriving from the principles accepted by the world community of States as the basis of international relations, such as the five principles of peaceful co-existence.

- The Majlis will no doubt appreciate that the conclusion of a non-aggression agreement will be a farsighted decision on the part of both Pakistan and India. It could help banish fear and suspicion, provide opportunity for the promotion of goodwill and co-operation without any derogation whatsoever from the principle of sovereign equality, and one may hope, usher in an era of genuine friendship between the two counties.

- The positive impact of such a transformation in the political climate of South Asia would not be confined to this region alone. It would extend its stabilizing influence not only to the adjacent areas but also contribute to the abatement of super-power tension and confrontation. It is, therefore, to be fervently hoped that all the great powers will make a positive evaluation of our efforts and will view the conclusion of a non-aggression pact in no way contrary to their interests but as a significant contribution to the strengthening of regional security and to peace and détente.

- Besides India and Pakistan, the South Asian region includes Bangladesh, Bhutan, Nepal, Sri Lanka and the Maldives Islands. A proposal for regional cooperation among all these South Asian counties was put forward by the late President Ziaur Rehman of Bangladesh in May 1980.

- The Foreign Secretaries of these counties have so far held two meetings and have identified areas for possible regional co-operation in the fields of tele-communications, meteorology, agriculture, rural development, health, population, scientific and technical co-operation, transport and postal services.

- Pakistan has participated actively in both meetings. A third meeting will be held at the same level in Pakistan this year which is likely to be followed by a conference at the Foreign Ministers’ level.

- There is little likelihood of political co-operation on a regional basis in view of the differing perceptions of geo-political developments in adjacent regions and the existence of certain disputes and differences. Nevertheless, it is our hope that co-operation in the economic and technical fields mentioned above would promote greater harmony among the countries of South Asia and also provide a forum for the consolidation of relations on the basis of sovereign equality by dispelling notions of primacy or supremacy voiced from within the region or injected from without.

On Relations with USA

- It is not by coincidence that I turn to our new relationship with the United States which has been forged in the aftermath of the developments which have taken place in South West Asia.

- The United States has now more fully perceived that Pakistan has had the courage and far-sightedness to take a position in principle on the Afghanistan crisis, the resolution of which, in accordance with the Principles of the United Nations, the Islamic Conference and the Non-Aligned Movement, is vital to the security and stability of the Gulf region.

- The vital economic and strategic interests of a great many countries of the world in the uninterrupted and secure flow of the oil from the Gulf countries are self-evident.

- Pakistan has thus acquired a new strategic importance in relations to the security of the Golf. Consequently, its independence, territorial integrity and genuine non-alignment have gained an added dimension in the world’s perception.

- It is for this reason that the Reagan Administration came forward with a more realistic offer on an economic aid and military sales package to Pakistan to help strengthen its security and economic viability.

- I do not have to go into the details of the $3.2 billion assistance agreement concluded with the United States. The nature and composition of this package, equally divided between economic aid and military sales, extending over a 5-year period, and the terms for the repayment of the 14 percent interest loans to cover the military sales component was fully explained by me in the public seminars held at Lahore and Karachi last year.

- The question raised at those meetings, namely what is the quid pro quo for this United States economic aid and military sales package, whether Pakistan would not be expected to grant bases to the United States, or provide similar facilities to the Rapid Deployment Force, or be expected to align itself with the United States in a regional strategic consensus directed against the Soviet Union or act as a conduit for supply of arms to the Afghan Mujahideen or soften its support to the just Arab cause and the Palestinian self-determination and so on and so forth, were addressed in a frank and forth-right manner in those seminars. Also questions about the dependability and durability of the US connection were raised and debated on those occasions.

- In respect of one issue, however, namely Pakistan’s modest and peaceful nuclear programme of research and development, I frankly told the nation that the United States was likely to stop the flow of economic assistance and military sales if Pakistan were to carry out a peaceful nuclear explosion. Last month US Congress enacted a law to this affect.

- I need only emphasize that the prolonged negotiations preceding the conclusion of the agreement were undertaken with the sole objective of ensuring that the terms of the final agreement were fully consistent with our status as a member of the Islamic Conference and the Non-aligned Movement. The agreement was signed only after we were satisfied that these essential conditions of ours were met. You would recall that earlier in February 1980 when an offer of $400 million assistance over a two year period was brought by Dr. Brzezinski, President Carter’s National Security Adviser, we rejected it because we had little time to examine the offer and ensure that it contained no features repugnant to our non-aligned status.
No Pak Bases Offered to USA

- Members of the Federal Council can reject, with confidence, any suggestions or insinuations from interested quarters to the contrary. We are fully aware of the unwarranted campaign, which allege that in return for the US aid package the United States demanded concessions such as bases on Pakistan’s soil and that the demand was met. Such suggestions are totally baseless. The President set the record straight in his address to the nation on December 24 and categorically rejected such insinuations.

- Pakistan remains first and foremost a Muslim and non-aligned country and the recent military sales and economic assistance agreement signed with the United States will, in no way, affect its policies. Pakistan’s commitment to the Islamic cause, whether in Iran, the Middle East or anywhere else, which is the sacred legacy of the Quaid-e-Azam and which is embedded in the profoundest depths of our national consciousness is, and shall always remain the inspirations and the cornerstone of our foreign policy.

On Indian Ocean & Gulf as Zone of Peace

- Pakistan is equally committed to do all that lies in its power to reinforce the structure of peace and tranquility in our region. We want to see the Indian Ocean and the Gulf region transformed into a Zone of Peace, free from the tensions of Superpower rivalry and confrontation. We are also opposed to the creation of spheres of influence and hegemony in the region.

On ties with China

- In the pursuance of these objectives as well as in the immediate context of Pakistan’s national security, Pakistan has a reliable friend and partner in the great People’s Republic of China. Friendship with China, as the President has often said, is an abiding feature of our foreign policy. This is so because of a shared commitment to principles and a continuing convergence of interests.

- Our relationship with China has proven its strength and durability. It has remained above change while changes have occurred in the internal and external environment of the two countries. Whether it has been in the field of defence or that of economic development, China has stood by Pakistan as a dependable and generous friend. In concrete terms, China’s commitment to Pakistan’s security and welfare is exemplified in the establishment of the Heavy Mechanical Complex, the Heavy Forge and Foundry, the Tank and Aircraft Rebuild Factories and, last but not least, the great Karakoram Highway which links the two countries in everlasting friendship.

On Nuclear Non-Proliferation & N-Deal with France

- Pakistan has also made constructive proposals in the international discussions for a genuine reduction of both nuclear and conventional weapons on a world-wide as well as regional basis.

- Pakistan’s record in the field of non-proliferation of nuclear weapons is second to none. However, despite the various initiatives that we have taken at the United Nations to halt the spread of nuclear weapons, an unprecedented campaign has been launched against our peaceful nuclear programme and tremendous pressures have been brought to bear on Pakistan to give up its right to obtain nuclear technology for peaceful uses. This august house will recall that Pakistan had contracted with France for the supply of a reprocessing plant which would make Pakistan independent in nuclear fuel. However, under pressure from the United States, the then President of France Mr. Giscard d’Estaing broke a solemn agreement and refused to honour the French commitment to sell reprocessing plant to Pakistan. The United States also imposed economic sanctions against Pakistan. Our modest research and development programme in the nuclear field has been subjected to criticism abroad despite the fact that there is ample economic justification for this programme and although we have reiterated at the highest level on a number of occasions that Pakistan does not intend to acquire or manufacture nuclear weapons.

- The pressures being brought to bear on Pakistan have been discriminatory since many other counties which are placed in similar circumstances are not being subjected to such pressures. The cynicism of the former United States Administration was evident from the fact that one of their spokesmen openly stated that they would apply different standards to different countries.

Pak N-Plan De-linked From US Package

- During our recent negotiations for the arms sale and economic aid package with the US, we had been assured that Pakistan’s nuclear programme would be de-linked from the package. However, the law as finally enacted by the United States Congress provides for the termination of economic assistance and military sales to Pakistan in the event of Pakistan conducting a peaceful nuclear explosion. Pakistan has repeatedly affirmed that while it is not prepared to compromise on its sovereign right to acquire nuclear technology for peaceful purposes, it has no intention of developing nuclear weapons.

Mr. Chairman, Members of the Federal Council, I have taxed your patience in an efforts to give you as full and frank a picture of the state of Pakistan’s external relations to the distinguished members of the Federal Council as I could in an open public debate. As you know, the people of Pakistan, well informed through the foreign policy speeches and Press conferences of the President, official statement as well as impromptu seminars such as addressed by me in Lahore and Karachi last year, have given proof of their maturity by the understanding they have shown of the policies that are being followed. We are now entering a new phase of the consultative process with the inauguration of the Majlise Shoor which I have the honour of addressing today.

The desires, the sentiments, the thoughts, the views and the preferences of the people of Pakistan can now be articulated in the Federal Council. The Honourable Members thus have a great opportunity to act as a channel of communication between the Government and the people not only in purely domestic matters but also in the field of foreign policy. The advice and views that you may choose to put forward in the future would fill an existing void. However, the opportunity goes hand in hand with an onerous responsibility. That responsibility demands that matters of foreign policy which have a direct and immediate bearing on our relations with foreign countries and our national security are handled with due care and circumspection.

The conduct of our foreign policy and the pattern and strategy of our diplomatic activities have achieved a character and quality of their own. Both in the pursuit of the national objectives of safeguarding the political independence, state sovereignty and territorial integrity of Pakistan and the espousal of principles having a general application to situations affecting peace and security, our efforts have received wide recognition. In an extremely difficult situation such as that we continue to face, the policies and the approach by the periodic Conferences of our Envoys have served to ensures our security and enabled us to navigate through the swirling storms that have engulfed our region.

Wala Tahinoo Wala Tahzanoo Wa Antumul Alouna In Kuntum Momineen
(So lose not heart nor fall into despair, for ye must prevail if ye are true in faith).
0983. Report of Official Level Talks between the delegations of India and Pakistan on January 30.

New Delhi, January 30, 1982.

The officials of the Indian and Pakistani delegations met nearly for two hours on 30th January, 1982 and considered bilateral issues.

The Pakistani delegation expressed itself in favour of increased contacts between the two countries at various levels. The Indian side agreed and emphasized the importance of people to people contacts. It was agreed that there was an imperative need to take such action and conclude such agreements as would facilitate this common objective of the two Governments.

The Pakistani side announced that they have obtained approval for regular visits to Katas Raj and Hayat Pithafi out of a list of eighteen additional shrines suggested by India. The Pakistan side agreed to review the possibilities of opening up the remaining shrines. The Indian side welcomed this decision of the Pakistan Government.

The Indian side enquired about the various proposals which they have made to Pakistan in the fields of communications, postal rates, tourism, border ground rules, demarcation of the maritime boundary, etc. The Pakistani side state that the proposals were still under examination by their authorities. It was agreed that, keeping in view the common objectives of both Governments, urgent action be taken to complete the examination and implement appropriate measures.

In the context of liberalization of visa policy, the Indian side pointed out that they had already started issuing visas for four places instead of three and requested implementation of the decision by the Pakistani side. The Pakistani side agreed to check the position in this regard.

The Indian side renewed their proposal for an agreement for free exchange of books, newspapers and periodicals and an annual cultural exchange plan to step up cultural contacts. The Pakistani side stated that it would examine these proposals.

In respect of missing Indian defence services personnel, the Pakistani delegation reiterated its proposal for inspection in both countries by the International Committee of the Red Cross. The Indian side suggested that the two Governments offer facilities on a reciprocal basis to relatives of missing persons to carry out on the spot investigations. It was agreed that the matter will continue to be kept under consideration.

As regards the problems of the dues owed by the Airlines of the two countries, the Indian side proposed the conclusion of a double taxation avoidance agreement which would be applicable to the two airlines with retrospective effect. The Pakistani side promised to have the proposal considered.

In regard to trade, it was recalled that there had been no official negotiations on the new trade agreement since the technical talks in Islamabad in November, 1980. However, Pakistan’s major participation in the Indian International Trade Fair, 1981 had projected Pakistan’s export capacities to India. The visit of the Federation of Pakistan Chambers of Commerce & Industry Delegation to New Delhi in November 1981 had also contributed to a greater understanding of Pakistan’s export capacities and import requirements.

Informal discussions have taken place during the visit to India of the Secretary to the Government of Pakistan in the Ministry of Commerce as well as with Pakistan’s Minister for Export Promotion. Both sides reiterated their well known positions. The Indian side offered to negotiate appropriate safeguards for Pakistan’s industry and its trade balance with India provided Pakistan agreed to resume trade on a non-discriminatory basis. The Indian side suggested that trade talks could be resumed on this basis.

Both sides discussed that need to prevent hostile propaganda against each other. In this connection, the Pakistani side reiterated its invitation to the Indian Minister and Secretary of Information and Broadcasting to visit Pakistan, specially with a view to discussing possibilities of coordination between newspaper organizations of the two countries. The Indian side agreed that such visits may take place at mutually convenient times. It also reminded the Pakistani side that Pakistani text books contained certain anti-Indian passages which have a highly undesirable effect on impressionable students. The Pakistani side agreed to have the matter examined.

Record of the Meeting between External Affairs Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao and Agha Shahi, Foreign Minister of Pakistan.

New Delhi, January 31, 1982.

[Mr. Agha Shahi and I met in my room for about 70 minutes this morning. No aides were present.]  (The note is recorded by Mr. Rao himself)

2. Mr. Agha Shahi started the conversation by referring to his meeting with Shri G. Parthasarathy this morning and how he explained to the latter, Pakistan’s point of view on the U.S. Congressional legislation regarding arms assistance to Pakistan. According to the U.S. law, they have to invoke the provisions of the Foreign Assistance Act and make amendments there in order to authorize any such sales. However, whatever the legislation might say, one has to judge the transaction by the joint statement issued by him and the U.S. Secretary of State after their talks at the political level. In this statement, Mr. Agha Shai said, it was clearly stated that there was no question of Pakistan becoming part of any U.S. consensus nor did U.S. expect any bases etc. from Pakistan. Mr. Agha Shahi went on to say that he was engaged in consolidating Pakistan’s non-aligned position which he though was understood and appreciated in Western Europe and also to some extent in the Soviet Union. So far as the U.S. is concerned, he said that some sections of the U.S. Administration understood it while in some others, particularly in the Pentagon, there were reservations. In any case, he had himself told the American Administration that it would be good for both sides that Pakistan maintains friendly relations with the U.S. but is not too close to it since such closeness would inevitably lead to complications.

3. Responding to this expose, I told Mr. Shahi that I had no reasons to disbelieve him. Yet the task of convincing all sections of people and Parliament in India on this score would not be easy. The importance of U.S. legislation cannot be minimized because, in the first place, it is that legislation which regulates the assistance to Pakistan and, further, there is an inexorable logic of that legislation which cannot be ignored. This being the position, unless a sustained effort is made in earnest on both sides, Pakistan’s position will continue to be difficult to sell to the people in India.

4. Thereafter I asked him. In passing, the significance of General Arif and Shabzada Yaqub being included in this delegation. He explained at length that he had himself asked for the inclusion of General Arif because he thought that the point of view of the Foreign Office could be better appreciated in the military circles if General Arif is exposed to the discussions and is able to report to the President and the Military Generals personally. As far as Shabzada Yaqub is concerned, he said he was a senior General and a diplomat and he, i.e. Agha Shahi, had taken his assistance on previous occasions also. He also said that he had kept General Arif with him on several earlier occasions.

5. Mr. Agha Shahi said that while he was trying to strengthen the position of Pakistan as a non-aligned country, it would be difficult for him to sell anything in his country which would look like a formulation derogatory to the question of bases and facilities. He said that while there was no question of giving any of these to the U.S., it would not be proper to spell out these things in so many words in the agreement. Instead, he would prefer a more general formulation accepting the principles of non-alignment.

6. I responded by saying that while I agree that we should not include phraseology which cannot be acceptable to Pakistan, at the same time, we should make the formulations in such a way that they are not seen in India as lack of progress and as the Indian Government having been caught on the wrong foot. He agreed with this view.

7. In regard to a draft agreement, he said that he had a draft ready although he had given the press a different version. I immediately told him that we also had a draft ready but in case we exchange the drafts, both would willy nilly be committed to the phraseology and content of the respective drafts and when these become public, it would be very difficult to make any headway in the formulation of an acceptable draft. He agreed with this view and said that we may instead discuss the Aide Memories already exchanged and, in view of the trend of discussions, if we felt that a draft could be attempted, we could do so at the end of the discussions.

8. It was decided that the discussions should take place in a framework of more restricted delegations consisting of three on each side, besides the Foreign Ministers. It was decided to have these discussions from 3.00 PM to 4.15 PM this afternoon and, if necessary, to have another sitting tomorrow before Mr.
Agha Shahi leaves New Delhi. It was also decided to have an agreed version issued to the press at the end of these discussions.

0985. Joint Statement issued at the end of the visit of Pakistani Foreign Minister Agha Shahi.

New Delhi, February 1, 1982.

The Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Agha Shahi, visited New Delhi from 29 January to 1 February, 1982 in response to the invitation extended by the Minister of External Affairs of India, Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao, to continue the dialogue between them on matters of mutual interest to the two countries.

Mr. Agha Shahi was accompanied by Ambassador Sahabzada Yaqub Khan and Lt. Gen. K.M. Arif, Chief of Staff to the President of Pakistan, as well as officials of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Mr. Agha Shahi, accompanied by the members of his delegation, witnessed the ceremony of the Beating of the Retreat marking the culmination of the Republic Day celebrations. Mr. Agha Shahi also attended the ceremony organized at the Gandhi Samadhi at Rajghat on 30 January. He called on the President of India, Shri N. Sanjiva Reddy and the Vice-President of India, Shri M. Hidayatullah. He was received by the Prime Minister, Shrimati Indira Gandhi on 31 January.

The Foreign Ministers had several rounds of formal talks and informal discussions in an atmosphere of frankness, warmth and cordiality.

Reviewing the situation in the region and important international developments since their last meeting, they shared a similarity of views on many issues, including Israel’s policy of brazen expansionism, the extension of Israel’s laws to the captured Syrian territory in the Golan Heights, the attacks on Palestinian refugee camps and the attack on the Iraqi reactor at Baghdad.

With regard to the situation in Afghanistan, the Foreign Ministers noted the recent moves to initiate a dialogue for a political solution of the problem and expressed their hope for early progress in the matter. In this context, they reaffirmed their adherence to the Declaration of the Non-aligned Foreign Ministers’ meeting in New Delhi in February 1981.

The proposal for the conclusion of an agreement on nonaggression and non-use of force between India and Pakistan was discussed in detail by the two Foreign Ministers. The Foreign Ministers noted with satisfaction that the air had been sufficiently cleared to facilitate specific consideration of the elements which could constitute the substance of such an agreement. A measure of mutual understanding was reached on a number of these elements. The Foreign Ministers agreed that officials of the two countries will meet in Islamabad before the end of February 1982 in order to continue their exchange of views on the contents of the proposed agreement. The two Foreign Ministers agreed that the conclusion of such an agreement would make a positive contribution to peace and stability in the region.

Both sides recognized the need to maintain bilateral contact on a frequent and regular basis at various levels. The Pakistan side welcomed the proposal made by the Prime Minister of India to establish a Joint Commission to review and promote Indo-Pakistan relations.

The Indian side welcomed the announcement by the Foreign Minister of Pakistan that, in addition to the shrines covered by the 1974 Indo-Pakistan Protocol, the Government of Pakistan would open two more shrines namely Katas Raj in the Punjab and Hayat Pitafi in Sind to pilgrims from India.

The two Foreign Ministers recognized the desirability of further action to pursue their common objective of promoting contacts between the peoples of the two countries. In this spirit, they discussed several bilateral matters.

As regards the missing defence personnel of the two countries, Both sides recalled that searches of jails made in the past had failed to locate such persons. Expressing sympathy for the distress of the affected families, they agreed to make fresh efforts to locate the missing personnel.

The Foreign Minister of Pakistan thanked the Indian Minister of External Affairs and the Government of India for the generous hospitality extended to him and to members of his delegation. The Pakistan Foreign Minister extended an invitation to the Minister of External Affairs of India Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao, to pay a visit to Pakistan at his convenience. The invitation was accepted with pleasure.

Joint Press Conference addressed by the Indian and Pakistan Foreign Ministers.

New Delhi, February 1, 1982.

Addressing a joint Press conference with Indian Foreign Minister Narasimha Rao at New Delhi, Mr. Shahi summed up his talks with Indian leaders by remarking that Pakistan and India had reached an area of commonality and would now try to achieve satisfactory mutuality.

Replying to a question, Mr. Shahi said their talks were in no way discouraging in relation to Pakistan’s proposal for non-aggression pact. Of course, there were difficulties but “we shall spare no efforts to achieve the objective.”

Answering another question, Mr. Shahi said the time needed for concluding the non-aggression pact would depend upon the progress in the next round of talks to be hopefully held in the middle of the current month.

He told a questioner that regardless of their political opinion, the people of Pakistan were in favour of peace and no-war pact with India and recalled that the Federal Council of Pakistan recently extended its support to the non-aggression pact proposal.

Replying to another question Mr. Shahi said in discussion of specifics of the elements of non-aggression pact, they reaffirmed the Simla Agreement and the purposes and principles of the United Nations Charter and obligations thereunder.

Indian Assured of Pak Sincerity

When a questioner pointed out that at one stage the Indian side considered Pakistan’s offer as a trap, Mr. Narasimha Rao said during the last three days, they had had discussion on all the points. He, however, denied that he had ever described the Pakistan offer as a trap, although the statement had been attributed to him. Anyway, he said, they had already reached the stage of discussion of the specifics. Continuing of these discussions would lead the two countries to a point where the object of Mr. Shahi’s current visit might be achieved.

Mr. Shahi added that he had assured the Indian side that Pakistan’s offer had been made in all sincerity and good faith and he hoped India was convinced that the proposal was genuine and bona fide.

Answering another question, Mr. Shahi said while coming to India he had stated that he was coming for initial talks. Obviously, the matter of such a fundamental importance would require extended dialogue to bring about meeting of minds.

Asked whether India and Pakistan shared common perceptions of the situation in the region, Mr. Shahi said: “We have discussed the question of bilateralism as dealt with in the Simla Agreement will be faithfully respected." Both Pakistan and India subscribed to the Non-Aligned Havana summit declaration and the Delhi declaration of Non-Aligned Foreign Ministers conference held in February last. The question was finding an appropriate formulation.

Asked to comment on the reported offer of Mrs. Indira Gandhi to sign a treaty of friendship with Pakistan, Mr. Shahi said Pakistan regarded this statement as expression of goodwill on the part of Mrs. Gandhi and shared her desire to live in peace. Pakistan also welcomed Mrs. Gandhi’s statement that India would never attack Pakistan. The substance and central provision of a non-aggression pact, by whatever name it might be called, was renunciation of force and peaceful settlement of the disputes.

Answering a question on the Kashmir dispute, Mr. Shahi recalled his statement issued on the eve of his departure for Delhi and reiterated that such a pact would neither add to nor subtract from the provisions of the Simla Agreement.

The Simla Agreement contained comprehensive guidance for regulating relationships between the two countries. In the course of time, it was discovered that these provisions and imperatives need to be reaffirmed and re-verified, “We believe that the non-aggression pact will strengthen the Simla Agreement", he added.

On other bilateral issues

Replying to a question about the promotion of better relations between the two countries, Mr. Shahi said the first step was the consolidation of peace and to establish tension-free relations and other matter would be taken up subsequently.

An Indian trade team would, however, be visiting Pakistan shortly to step up volume and value of trade between the two countries.

Asked as to what effect the acquisition of arms by Pakistan would have on the conclusion of the non-aggression pact, Mr. Shahi said they had no bearing on such a situation.

Pakistan and India had had considerable exchange of views on the matter. It was not accepted by anyone in the world that such a treaty or arrangement deprived any country of its sovereign rights to provide for self-defence.

Asked if any discussion was held on the withdrawal of troops from the borders in view of the non-aggression pact proposal, he said they had not yet come to discuss this matter.

0987. Press Conference of Pakistani Foreign Minister Agha Shahi on return from New Delhi.

Lahore, February 1, 1982.

The Foreign Minister of Pakistan and India have reached a measure of mutual understanding on a number of elements which could constitute the substance of the proposed non-aggression agreement between the two countries, said Agha Shahi quoting the Joint Press statement issued at Delhi and Lahore after the conclusion of talks between the two countries.

The two Foreign Ministers noted with satisfaction that the “air had been sufficiently cleared to facilitate specific consideration of the elements which could constitute the substance of such an agreement.” It was stated that the proposal for the conclusion of an agreement on non-aggression and non-use of force was discussed in detail by the two Foreign Ministers.

The result of the first round of talks with Indian leaders were “more or less in accordance with expectations”, Mr. Shahi said, but also struck a note of caution by saying that he would not like to raise hopes as in such negotiations, there were always slips between the cup and the lips.

He had asked the Indian leaders not to suspect the bona fides of Pakistan out of sheer distrust and place before him any evidence of facts to show their fears.

Indian Approach Serious

Observing that “he cannot say what there had been in their hearts”, Mr. Shahi said the Indian leaders had seriousness of approach and had committed to a second round of talks from the point the both sides left their discussions at New Delhi on February 1.

By the middle of this month, a high–level official team of India would visit Islamabad to continue discussions.

On Mrs. Gandhi’s Move for Friendship Treaty

Replying to a question about the Indian Prime Minister’s proposal for a treaty of friendship with Pakistan, Mr. Shahi said Mrs. Indira Gandhi had told him when he called on her that she had made the remark to the Pakistani newsmen because the Indo-Soviet Treaty of Friendship was always flung on her face. She had said that she was also ready to have a treaty of friendship with Pakistan. The Indian side seemed to have taken up the idea.

But “whether you call it non-aggression pact or no-war pact, a peace treaty or friendship treaty, central to any of these treaties or agreements will be proposition that the two sides renounce war to settle their disputes and adhered themselves to non-aggression and to exclusively peaceful settlement of disputes.” Mr. Shahi added.

The heart of the matter proposed by Pakistan, he said, was the consolidation of peace to stabilize the relations between the two countries and the situation in the region.

On Kashmir

Referring to the Kashmir dispute, Mr. Shahi said he had made it clear before leaving for India that nothing would be added to or substracted from the provisions of the Simla Agreement in regard to Jammu and Kashmir. It was a disputed territory and the dispute was yet to be settled. He did not think there was any disposition on the part of India to challenge the proposition that the dispute remained to be settled and this was stated in the Simla Agreement.
India’s claim that the state had acceded to it was an old position and "you know Pakistan’s position which has been reiterated several times and it was at variance with the Indian claim."

On move for Indo-Pak Joint Commission

RePLYING to a question about the Joint Commission Mr Agha Shahi said Pakistan was already thinking of setting up an institutional machinery to bridge the communication gap between the two countries. One of such gaps was in respect of arms supply to both the countries. The Indian thought that Pakistan was going to get massive armaments whereas Pakistan knew that India was obtaining military supplies manifold of Pakistan’s arms purchases.

Pakistan thought that face-to-face talks were always useful to bring down tension and to minimize misunderstanding if it was not possible to prevent them from arising. "We were already prepared for the idea of proposing an institutional machinery and in our conversations with India, we raised this question."

When he called on the Indian Prime Minister, she asked him how the talks were going and observed that it would be a pity if nothing came out of the talks.
She then suggested the establishment of a joint commission. "Here was situation in which both sides were thinking of the need of establishing an institutional machinery to bridge the communication gap whenever it may arise."

To a question about the possibility of a summit meeting of the two countries, he said such a conference needed good preparations because such conferences must produce positive results. Mere holding of meetings could be counters productive.
A summit meeting between Pakistan and India could take place whenever the ground was considered to have been sufficiently prepared for the meeting, he added.

“Possibly, I cannot predict,” was his reply to a question whether it would be a long road for signing an agreement.

On Indian Attitude to Afghanistan Issue

As a correspondent asked about the Indian attitude towards the Afghanistan issue, Mr. Agha Shahi said he hoped the Indian attitude would be positive in the light of the joint statement because India had reiterated the position adopted by the Non-Aligned Foreign Ministers’ conference held in February last in New Delhi.

On Trade Relations

Replying to another questions, he said the trade relations between the two countries were also discussed and Pakistan had pointed out that now the ball was in the Indian court and they could send a delegation to further pursue the matter.

The issue between the countries was whether trade with India should be thrown open to the private sector in Pakistan. It was a matter for experts’ consideration. He hoped India would send a commercial delegation to pursue the question further.

Record of the briefing given by Foreign Secretary R. D. Sathe to the Soviet Ambassador Y. M. Vorontsov on the visit of Pakistani Foreign Minister Agha Shahi.

New Delhi, February 10, 1982

Foreign Secretary’ Office

Mr. Yuli M. Vorontsov, the Soviet Ambassador, was called to the Ministry by Foreign Secretary to be briefed on the visit to India of the Pakistan Foreign Minister, Mr. Agha Shahi.

2. F.S. Began by mentioning Agha Shahi’s press conference at Lahore, in which the latter had stressed that the so-called no-war pact proposal of Pakistan was made in all sincerity. He had stated that Pakistan would abide by all the provisions of the Simla Agreement, and that in offering the pact, it had no intention of abridging or expanding the Simla Agreement as far as the Kashmir issue was concerned. He clarified that the pact was not intended to halt progress in, or change the spirit of, the Simla Agreement. In Pakistan’s assessment, the time was now appropriate for the proposal that they had made. Agha Shahi had remarked at one stage that it was ironic that a small country like Pakistan had to make such an offer to a much bigger country like India. This, however, was not a credible argument, FS pointed out adding that we had told Pakistan in no uncertain terms that India had taken the initiative in the matter on several occasions ever since 1949 and that it was Pakistan that had turned down our proposal every time. Of late, moreover, Pakistan was arming itself with sophisticated weaponry that gave it a distinct offensive edge vis-à-vis India. Agha Shahi had noted the misgivings expressed in the Indian Press on the Pakistan offer but reiterated that the offer was not a “trap”. Ambassador Vorontsov remarked that the Indian Press seemed satisfied at the outcome of the discussions.

3. On the question of American arms to Pakistan FS went on to say, Agha Shahi clarified that Pakistan would not provide military bases or other military facilities to the U.S. in return for the arms, nor would they be involved in America’s “strategic consensus” in West Asia. It was unthinkable, Agha Shahi averred, that Pakistan could join the United States in an active partnership that included Israel. Pakistan attached great importance to non-alignment.

4. As far as India was concerned, FS said, our stand on both the no-war proposal and US arms to Pakistan has always been clear. While we were surprised that the Pakistanis had originally chosen to make their no-war pact offer at the fag end of a public statement on the acceptance of US arms, almost as an after thought, we were nevertheless willing to look at it seriously. We were sincere in wanting friendship and cooperation with Pakistan and did not wish to engage in scoring propaganda points. Our Prime Minister had in fact told Pakistani journalists that India would never attack Pakistan, no-war pact or no pact. The Pakistani side, according to Agha Shahi, appreciated this assurance from our Prime Minister.

5. During the visit, India proposed a Joint Commission to promote bilateral relations in various economic, commercial and other fields on the basis of mutual understanding. The two sides will meet again perhaps towards the end of February to hold further discussions.

6. The Ambassador asked whose initiative it was to draft a no-war pact. F.S. explained that India had produced several drafts in the past and that, on this occasion, the Pakistanis had brought a draft with them. Our reaction was that, at the appropriate time, a joint exercise in drafting could be undertaken. During Agha Shahi’s visit, there was, in fact, a stage when an attempt was made to do some drafting, but since this required more time, it is expected that it will be taken up at subsequent meetings. The Ambassador would recall, said FS, that the joint press statement issued at the end of the visit had stated that the air had been cleared sufficiently to enable further discussions on the proposal.

7. Ambassador Vorontsov revealed that the British High Commissioner had been emphatic in claiming that there were no drafts. F.S. said that had Pakistan produced a draft, we also would have had our own draft to put forward. This, however, had not become necessary. There were, on the other hand, discussion on the point that each side had put forward as basis for negotiations on the proposal. There was similarity of views in most cases except on the following three points:-

i) the primacy of the Simla Agreement and the reference to be made to the UN Charter. Pakistan’s stand did not appear consistent with its obligations under the Simla Agreement;

ii) India was keen to reaffirm the concept of bilateral negotiations to resolve disputes whereas Pakistan seemed chary of accepting this and insisted on the right of referral outside the bilateral context; and

iii) Pakistan’s definition of non-alignment was, in our view, unsatisfactory and did not subscribe to one of the cardinal principles of non-alignment, namely, prohibition from granting military bases/facilities to foreign powers.

8. Agha Shahi’s programme in India had included calls on the President, Vice President and Prime Minister. He also visited Raj Ghat. These were gestures meant to create an impact in public. Agha Shahi seemed to have enjoyed his stay and appeared satisfied with the frank nature in which the talks were held. The plenary sessions were short, and informal negotiations were preferred. A lot of ground was covered but a great deal more remains to be tackled.

9. F.S. asked the Ambassador whether he had any further information about what Agha Shahi had mentioned regarding the possibility that Iran would agree to participate in the tripartite talks on Afghanistan as well as Iran’s willingness to have the UN Secretary General also participate in these talks. The Ambassador sounded doubtful about Iran’s readiness in this regard, his feeling being that Iran would tend to stick to the Islamic Conference formula notwithstanding the involvement of the UN Secretary General. He promised, however, that he would try and get further details from Moscow. On F.S.
remarking that Agha Shahi seemed hopeful about the tripartite talks, the Ambassador felt that the picture was still uncertain. F.S. also asked about the USSR Pakistan dialogue on the subject; the Ambassador promised to obtain the Information from his Government.

10. F.S. went on to refer to Agha Shahi’s claim that it was at Pakistan’s insistence that the Islamic Conference at Taif had asserted that the security and stability in the Gulf was for the Gulf countries, and not for others, to ensure. If this was correct, F.S. said, it might tend to counter allegations that Pakistan was involved in an American strategic scheme in the area.

11. Reverting to Afghanistan, F.S informed the Ambassador of Agha Shahi’s stand that the Babrak Karmal regime in Kabul must take appropriate measures to ensure the return of the Afghan refugees in Pakistan. Pakistan itself did not want to approach the refugees with any Afghan proposal on the subject because they might be misunderstood. They would, therefore, prefer that some other agency talks to the refugees in this regard.

12. Ambassador Vorontsov enquired whether PM’s offer of a friendship treaty with Pakistan signified a broader approach on India’s part. Our thinking, FS said in responses, was that the two countries should involve themselves, in due course, not merely in a negative exercise such as a pact on the avoidance of war, but also in a more positive endeavour to bring themselves closer to each other. As far as PM’s offer was concerned, she was responding to a query on India’s Friendship Treaty with the Soviet Union: in the course of her reply, she had pointed out that if Pakistan insisted on referring in oblique terms to the Indo-Soviet Treaty, She was willing to have a treaty of friendship and cooperation with Pakistan as well. Such a treaty would not impair the independent character of our foreign policy and our adherence to the principles of non-alignment. Pakistan still seemed hesitant at the idea of such a treaty, particularly in the light of the atmosphere inside Pakistan. Agha Shahi confessed that the connotations of such a treaty in the minds of the people of Pakistan would be politically different from a no-war pact. Ambassador Vorontsov observed jokingly that if Pakistan feared a bilateral friendship treaty, perhaps it could think in terms of trilateral one. Pakistan continues to have certain apprehensions with regard to India’s capability, he added, particularly in the field of trade. F.S. agreed with this, and referred to the surprised manner in which Pakistan had accepted the Indian proposal for a Joint Commission – they had not expected such a proposal from us. Pakistan sometimes laboured under the massive misapprehension that whatever India did was detrimental to Pakistan. They felt that trading freely with us might destroy their industry. We had pointed out to them that if they trade with India as a part of Pakistan’s trade with the rest of the world, the basis for such misgivings would disappear. For example Pakistan does not have a scooter industry and can quite profitably import scooters from India. In such cases, there would be no question of destroying any Pakistan Industry. At the moment, Pakistan imports scooters from Italy without any adverse effects; why not save on freight and time by getting them from India? The Pakistani attitude in these matters was unfortunately negative. It therefore, becomes necessary for the two countries to work towards creating an atmosphere of confidence. Giving a simile, F.S. said that without the foundation being laid, one could not talk of putting the roof over a building.

13. F.S. referred at this juncture again to the possibility of talks on the Afghan question. Iran appeared to be willing to receive the UN Secretary General’s representative, FS said, and if Iran does participate in the tripartite talks, the prognosis might be somewhat encouraging. Ambassador Vorontsov felt that even if the Soviet Union were prepared to go ahead with negotiations, Pakistan and Iran would in all likelihood stick to their original unacceptable ideas. There was a brief reference here to the recent Gromyko - Haig talks; Ambassador Voronstov said that the Americans were more interested in talking of Poland rather than Afghanistan.

14. In conclusion, F.S. mentioned to the Ambassador that he was the first envoy to be briefed on the Agha Shahi visit. Ambassador Vorontsov expressed his gratitude at this and commented that India’s stand during the visit had been very imaginative and that India had in fact scored points vis-a-vis Pakistan.

Director (FSO)
Letter from Joint Secretary Ministry of External Affairs C. R. Gharekhan to Heads of Indian Mission abroad informing them the details of the talks with the Pakistan Foreign Minister Agha Shahi.

New Delhi, February 10, 1982.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

Dear Head of Mission,

This is further to Foreign Secretary’s circular telegram No.36707 of February 2 on Agha Shahi’s visit. I thought I should give you some more information about the talks for your personal information.

2. Agha Shahi was accompanied by two Generals, Yakub Khan and Arif. The former, a retired General, is Ambassador in Paris and is tipped to succeed Agha Shahi in a few months time. The latter is Chief of Staff to Zia and is regarded as the second most powerful person in Pakistan. Both these gentlemen have assisted Agha Shahi during his negotiations with the Americans. The presence of these two acted as somewhat of a damper on Agha Shahi’s otherwise flamboyant and over-confident style. The tone that Agha Shahi adopted during the meetings was soft and almost ingratiating.

3. The Pakistani team had brought with them the draft of an agreement on non-aggression and non-use of force. We also had prepared a draft treaty on peace, friendship and cooperation. We thought and still think that as far as the non-aggression aspect is concerned, it is adequately taken care of in the Simla Agreement. Therefore, if a new agreement is to be signed, we should go beyond the Simla Agreement, taking care to safeguard the integrity and continued applicability of that agreement. We felt a no-war pact should be accompanied or immediately followed by other confidence building measures particularly in the field of trade, tourism etc. so that the people of the two countries develop a vested interest in peace.

4. We also had to keep the propaganda or the public relations aspect in mind. From this point of view also it was better for us to offer a comprehensive friendship treaty rather than just a non-aggression agreement which is essentially negative in character.

5. At her meeting on the 30th January with the Pakistan journalists accompanying Agha Shahi, PM was asked about our friendship treaty with the Soviet Union. PM immediately responded and offered to sign a similar treaty with Pakistan if they wished. This was a spontaneous reaction to a question by Pakistani journalists and was not designed to disrupt the negotiations on the no-war pact. PM further declared that pact or no pact, India would never attack Pakistan.

6. During the course of our preparations, we had come to the conclusion that we should propose the establishment of a Joint Commission. PM had approved of the idea and herself put forward the proposal to Agha Shahi on the 31st January. Agha Shahi was somewhat taken unprepared for this but immediately conveyed his acceptance, after an almost imperceptible affirmative nod from General Arif.

7. The general feeling in India as well as in the Pak and international media is that India has more than neutralized whatever propaganda advantage Pakistan had derived from her move last year. All the members of the Parliamentary Consultative Committee, at its meeting on the 4th February, applauded the Foreign Minister on his handling of the Agha Shahi talks.

8. As far as the substance of the proposal is concerned, there are still wide differences between the two sides. It is not difficult to agree on most of the concepts such as, adherence to non-alignments, peaceful and bilateral settlement of disputes, the continued validity of the Simla Agreement etc. However, when it comes to putting these concepts into treaty language, sharp differences arise. There was no serious attempt at drafting anything during the visit. However, we had a 90 minute meeting at official level to find out whether we could agree on the formulations of any of the concepts. We are insisting on including a paragraph whereby both countries would be prevented from granting bases or base facilities of any kind to an outside power. The Pakistani team simply would not agree to such a paragraph, though they are willing to have a general worded article on non-alignment. Similar, Pakistan regards the UN Charter as the basis for Indo-Pak relations whereas we would like to accord this role to the Simla Agreement. We did not even touch on the provisions relating to bilateral settlement of disputes. It is our intention to insist that all our differences should be settled exclusively through bilateral negotiations. Pakistan is not likely to agree.

9. The Kashmir issue was not discussed as such. Agha Shahi reiterated what he said in public, viz., they would not like to add anything to or subtract from the provisions of the Simla Agreement on J&K.

10. The official level team led by the Foreign Secretary will go to Islamabad later this month or early in March to start the negotiating process for the draft treaty. We expect that the negotiations will not be easy. We intend to insist on our point of view on all issues which are of vital interest and concern to us, such as, bilateral settlement of disputes, denial of bases or base facilities to outside powers, non-involvement in confrontation of big powers, etc. The progress in the talks, consequently, will depend on the willingness of the Pakistani side to accommodate our concerns. We cannot afford to agree to anything which will go against our interests.

11. I should repeat that the contents of this latter are only for your personal information.

Yours sincerely

0990. Statement of External Affairs Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao in Lok Sabhs on Pakistan Foreign Minister’s Visit to India.

New Delhi, February 19, 1982.

Mr. Agha Shahi, the then Foreign Minister of Pakistan (He had in the meantime been replaced by Shaibzada Yaqub Khan) paid a visit to New Delhi from January 29 to February 1, 1982 in response to the invitation extended by me during my visit to Pakistan in June last year. He was received by the President, Vice-President and Prime Minister and had several rounds of formal talks and informal discussions with me.

During Mr. Agha Shahi’s visit, we reviewed important international developments, since our last meeting and had detailed discussions on areas of bilateral cooperation. It was recognized that bilateral contact at various levels need to be maintained on a frequent and regular basis. In this context the Prime Minister proposed the setting up of a Joint Commission to review and promote Indo-Pakistan cooperation. This suggestion was welcomed by the Pakistani side. I am sure the House will agree that this is a positive development in Indo-Pakistan relations. The Prime Minister also underlined India’s peaceful intentions towards Pakistan by saying at the special press interview given to Pakistani journalists, that pact or no pact, India will never attack Pakistan.

Opening of Shrines

The Government of India has expressed its appreciation for the decision of the Pakistan Government to open two additional shrines, viz. Katas Raj in the Punjab and Hayat Pita in Sind to pilgrims from India. On its part, the Government of India has initiated several proposals aimed at facilitating travel between the two countries and increasing contact in the cultural economics, scientific, technical and communications fields. We hope that the Pakistan authorities would examine these proposals and that forward movement in these areas will be possible in the near future. I also raised the question of the missing Indian defence personnel who are reported to be in Pakistani jails for more than a decade. The Prime Minister herself mentioned this subject to Mr. Agha Shahi. We were told that there are no Indian defence personnel in Pakistani jails. However, the Pakistani side agreed to make renewed attempts to search for such personnel.

In depth Discussions

Mr. Shahi’s visit afforded the first opportunity to hold direct and in-depth discussions on the proposal for the conclusion of an agreement on non-aggression and non-use of force between India and Pakistan. The House will recall that I had made a statement on this subject on November 25, 1981, in which I had explained at length the history of the proposal and Government of India’s approach to it.

In order to promote a dialogue on this subject, the Government of India took the initiative of presenting an aide memoire to the Government of Pakistan on December 24, 1981 outlining some of the elements which could be incorporated in the substance of such an agreement. This was followed by an aide-memoire which the Ambassador of Pakistan handed over to me on January 12, 1982, containing Pakistan’s ideas on the subject.

Mr. Speaker, Sir, I wish to inform the House that after the discussion between the two sides, we are now in a position to undertake specific consideration of the elements which would constitute the substance of a no-war pact or an agreement on non-aggression and non use of force. It has been agreed that the officials of the two governments should hold further discussions at an early date. A delegation led by the Foreign Secretary is expected to go to Pakistan in the first week to March for this purpose.
Letter from Pakistan President General Zia-ul-Haq to Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.

Islamabad, February 21, 1982
The Islamic Republic of Pakistan
Islamabad

26 Rab-us-Sani 1402 AH 21 February 1982

Her Excellency
Madam Indira Gandhi,
Prime Minister of the Republic of India,
New Delhi.

Dear Madam Prime Minister,

After his return from New Delhi, Foreign Minister Agha Shahi has briefed me fully about his cordial meeting with you on January 31. He also conveyed to me your personal good wishes for which I am most grateful and which I heartily reciprocate. I was happy to learn that you had decided to lend the weight of your personal prestige and authority to ensure the success of the negotiations for the conclusion of an agreement on non-aggression and non-use of force between Pakistan and India.

Not only did you convey to Mr. Agha Shahi your sense of goodwill towards Pakistan and dedication to the objective of lasting peace and friendship between our two countries, but made a positive suggestion for the establishment of a Joint Commission to review and promote bilateral relations. Happily, the same spirit of mutual understanding and accommodation imbued the talks which were held between Mr. Shahi and Mr. Rao and at other official levels. It is my hope that a process which has begun so positively would gain further momentum during the forthcoming talks with foreign Secretary Sathe in Islamabad.

The goals towards which these talks are directed is a noble one and could if achieved produce an unprecedented transformation in the quality of our bilateral relations and consequently a profound impact on the entire regional situation.

It is my conviction that the fulfillment of these aspirations, is well within our reach if we grasp the opportunity which has presented itself to us and, in laying the foundations for lasting peace and good neighbourly relations, avoid the pitfalls we would undoubtedly encounter. It is necessary, in my view, therefore, that during the forthcoming negotiations, our teams remain on the straight path leading to our common goal and while settling the details, would not, as it is said, miss the wood for the trees.
Our immediate objective is to make a sound beginning with a mutual commitment to quintessential principles which would govern the conduct of our relations in the future. The principles of non-use of force and peaceful settlement of disputes are by no means startlingly new. However, our mutual reaffirmation of these principles in a basic document would in itself be a historic achievement in the context of the conflicts and tensions which have conditioned our reflexes and at a moment when the regional situation demands harmonious responses from us.

While I am aware of the opportunity which has presented itself to us, I am equally aware of the circumstances, internal as well as external, which could make us lose it. To demand too much of a situation which is circumscribed in scope by circumstances beyond our control, at present, is to wreck our prospects in advance. It is my fervent hope, therefore, that our teams would be specifically instructed to achieve what is possible and not to kill the opportunity before us by striving for the maximum. I assure you that the approach reflected in our proposed draft is guided solely by this consideration.

I have done what I could in a situation which is full of difficulties and complexities, and leave the final success of the negotiation ahead of us in your safe hands.

It might please you to know that, in the meanwhile, I have already issued instructions for the opening of two additional shrines, namely, Katas Raj in the Punjab and Hayat Pitafi in Sind to Yatrees from India, and for a reduction of the existing postal rates between Pakistan and India by 15 per cent. It is my hope that in the field of bilateral trade also, we might be able to make progress on the basis of mutual benefit. This matter will receive further attention after your Government's formal reaction to the proposals already conveyed by our side has been received.

With Profound regards,

Yours sincerely

(General M. Zia-ul-Haq)
Statement by External Affairs Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao in Lok Sabha in response to Calling Attention Motion on Kashmir issue raised by Pakistan at Human Rights Commission.

New Delhi, February 25, 1982.

[Following is text of the statement made by the Minister of External Affairs, Shri P.V. Narashima Rao, in the Lok Sabha on February 25, 1982 in response to Calling Attention motion regarding the reported statement of the Head of Pakistan delegation raising the issue of Kashmir at the meeting of the U.N. Human Rights Commission at Geneva recently and the reaction of the Government of India there to.]

At the 38th session of the U.N. Commission on Human Rights now in progress in Geneva, the Pakistan delegate, Mr. Agha Hilaly, spoke about Jammu and Kashmir while intervening on an item relating to the right of self-determination. He also made a reference to UN resolution in this context. Mr. Hilarly then went to the extent of equating Kashmir with the Palestinian and Namibian issues. In an obvious reference to the successive general elections held in Jammu and Kashmir, Mr. Hilarly said and I quote, “No elections held under foreign military occupation or alien domination can be considered as a genuine exercise of the right of self-determination”.

Atmosphere Vitiated

As I had informed the House on February 19, our discussions with the Foreign Minister of Pakistan during his recent visit to India had created an atmosphere conducive for further talks on the specifics of a no war pact and a treaty of peace and friendship. I have to admit however, that, the atmosphere has been vitiated by the subsequent objectionable statement in the Human Rights Commission made by Mr. Hilaly.

Mr. Hilaly raised the Kashmir question during the consideration of an item dealing with the application of the right of self-determination to peoples under colonial or alien domination or foreign occupation. It is preposterous to suggest that such a situation obtains in Jammu and Kashmir, which is an integral part of India.

In fact, the section of the people of Jammu and Kashmir who have the misfortune of continuing to live under Pakistan’s illegal and forcible occupation are denied their legitimate right to unite with their brothers living in freedom and dignity in India, and to enjoy their right to franchise. It is Pakistan and not India, which defied UN resolutions and did not fulfill its obligations.
Simla Agreement

Under the Simla Agreement, India and Pakistan have undertaken to settle their differences bilaterally and through peaceful means. This commitment is equally applicable to Jammu and Kashmir. Therefore, whenever Pakistan raised the so-called Kashmir question in international forums since the conclusion of the Simla Agreement, we have objected to and protested against such references as violations of the Simla Agreement. The authorities in Pakistan, therefore, have been fully aware of the strong feelings among the Indian people on this matter. It is in this context and in the context of the declared intentions of the governments of the two countries to improve their relations that by his reference to Jammu and Kashmir in a contentious manner in the Human Rights Commission the Pakistani delegate has done a disservice to the proposed Foreign Secretary level talks.

Visit Postponed

We have carefully studied Mr. Agha Hillaly’s statement. It is inconceivable that so senior and experienced a diplomat, who has served as his country’s High Commissioner to India, could have made such a statement without the prior approval of the Government of Pakistan who could not have failed to anticipate the strong reaction in India. Therefore, we feel that the visit of our Foreign Secretary to Pakistan should be postponed for the time being. We shall await Pakistan’s reply. We have conveyed this to the Pakistani Ambassador in Delhi.

The Government of India have, all along, demonstrated their desire for genuine friendship to the Government and people of Pakistan. India’s peaceful intentions have been expressed in unequivocal terms time and again, the most recent instance being the Prime Minister’s statement that Pact or no Pact, India will not attack Pakistan. This continues to be our policy.

[A day earlier, on February 24, Mr. Rao making this statement in the Rajya Sabha had an additional sentence at the end which read: “As stated earlier, the Secretary level talks have been postponed for the time being. Government hope that the atmosphere will improve so as to enable talks to be resumed.”]
Statement issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on India’s decision of defer the visit of Indian Foreign Secretary to Pakistan.

The Governments of Pakistan announces with regret that the Government of India has deferred the visit of India’s Foreign Secretary Mr. Sathe to Islamabad which was to have taken place from March 1-4. The reason given for the postponement of the visit is that at the recent meeting of the Human Rights Commission in Geneva, the delegate from Pakistan had mentioned Jammu and Kashmir in his statement on the item regarding self-determination.

The Pakistan delegate indeed made a reference to Jammu and Kashmir in his statement on the item regarding self-determination. While referring to the recognition and progressive exercise of the right of self-determination during the past three decades, he expressed the hope that the dispute regarding Jammu and Kashmir could be similarly resolved. This statement by the delegate of Pakistan occasioned an immoderate response from the delegate from India who put forward the unacceptable view that the Simla Agreement provides for the resolution of all disputes between Pakistan and India within a bilateral framework.

In his statement the delegate from India also said that the Pakistan delegate’s reference to Jammu and Kashmir would violate the atmosphere at this sensitive stage of Indo-Pakistan bilateral discussions. Soon after his statement, the Pakistan Ambassador in Delhi was called to the Foreign Office and a protest was conveyed to him by India’s Foreign Secretary. That protest has now been followed by the announcement of the postponement of Foreign Secretary Sathe’s visit to Islamabad.

A striking feature of this development is that the factual position warrants neither the acrimonious statement by the delegate from India at the Human Rights Commission, nor the protest lodged by New Delhi, nor of course the postponement of the Indian Foreign Secretary’s visit on his account.

The Statement by the delegate from Pakistan had no new features and was moderate reiteration of Pakistan’s position on Jammu and Kashmir as recognized by both India and Pakistan under the Simla Agreement and as reaffirmed from time to time by Pakistan’s delegates in international forums. Even in the exercise of his right of reply the delegate of Pakistan refrained from competing with the delegate from India in the use of abrasive language. Thus neither the protest lodged by India nor the deferment of the Indian Foreign Secretary’s visit to Islamabad can be attributed to the exchanges in the Human Rights Commission.
The Government of Pakistan is committed to the objective of establishment of lasting peace and good–neighbourly relations with India. It believes that no other consideration should be permitted to impede the continuation of the Indo-Pakistan dialogue which began with so much hope and which holds so much promise for the future relationship between the two countries. It hopes that the unexpected postponement of Mr. Sathe’s visit does not constitute a set back to the process of dialogue and that it would be possible for his visit to take place before long.”

Meanwhile President Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq said at Lahore on February 27 that it would be premature to comment on the cancellation of the Indian Foreign Secretary’s visit to Pakistan since nothing had so far been officially conveyed to Pakistan by the Indian Government. Talking to newsmen at the Lahore airport he said one should be very careful in making comments or saying anything which could harm the relation between the countries concerned. “Let us hope for a positive response from across the borders.”

Pakistan was making concerted efforts to establish honourable relations with its neighbours, including India, he said and added that it was in favour of establishing such relations with its neighbours as were free of tension and based on principles of non-interference in each other’s internal affairs.

He, however, made it clear that the stand of the present Government on the issue of Kashmir was the same as before, and its reiteration on some forum was nothing new. He did not see any reason for the cancellation of the visit. “Let us wait for the official version”, he said.

In reply to another question, he said there was no truth in the propaganda that India had laid certain conditions for entering into a no-war pact with Pakistan. Foreign Minister Agha Shahi and his Indian counterpart had held very smooth and normal negotiations and he was hopeful that something positives would come out of it, he said.
Interview of the Official Spokesperson of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs to the Pakistani Urdu daily Jung on the question of postponement of the Indian Foreign Secretary’s visit to Islamabad.

New Delhi, March 6, 1982.

Q: Is it not true that your Government was looking for an excuse to postpone the talks with a view to arresting their progress?

A: No, that is not true. It is misleading and mischievous to doubt the sincerity with which we were participating in talks with Pakistan on an agreement on non-aggression and non-use of force or a friendship treaty. The talks were postponed because Mr. Agha Hilaly gave a statement at Geneva which has vitiated the atmosphere for talks. The responsibility for the postponement, therefore, lies only with Pakistan.

Q: Are you not astonished at your Government’s decision?

A: We expected that the Pakistan Government would cooperate with us in keeping the atmosphere conducive to continuing the delicate and sensitive talks, but the way the Pakistani delegate raised the Kashmir issue at the Human Rights Commission and the manner in which he did that was wholly unexpected and very unfortunate.

Q: The Kashmir issue has all along been in the news. What was it then that made you blow up Mr. Hilaly’s reference to it at Geneva into such proportion as to make it a justification for postponing the talks?

A: An able and experienced diplomat like Mr. Hilaly could not have failed to realize what effect his raising of the Kashmir issue at the Human Rights Commission in Geneva would have on Indian public opinion at a time when the Indian Foreign Secretary was about to visit Pakistan. The manner of his speaking was also unnecessary, untimely and painful. We are constrained to come to the conclusion that he was making the statement under instructions from his Government. That is the reason why we were forced to postpone Mr. R.D. Sathe’s visit to Islamabad.

Q: Was it decided at the Delhi talks that the Kashmir issue would not be raised in any forum under any circumstances?

A: It was the leader of the Pakistan delegation, Mr. Agha Shahi, who said before, during and after his Delhi visit that the proposed non-aggression talks would not affect the position of Kashmir as contained in the Simla Agreement and that there would be no addition to or substraction from it.
Q: Do you think that the postponement is for an indefinite period?
A: As our Foreign Minister has told Parliament, the doors have not been closed on further talks. But he also explained in the Parliament when and how the talks would be resumed. It all depends on the Pakistan Government's reply.

Q: Have you talked to the Pakistani Ambassador, Mr. Abdul Sattar, about it? What is his opinion? What assurances has he given?
A: Mr. Abdul Sattar was called to the Foreign Office on February 24. We hope he will soon inform us of his Government's reply. It is not common practice to have any diplomatic conversation published in the Press.

Q: Do you think that the relations between India and Pakistan have deteriorated? Our Ambassador was called to the Foreign Office and a strong protest lodged with him against the raising of the Kashmir issue at Geneva. He was also told that Pakistan was occupying Indian territory in Kashmir and that India was awaiting its return by Pakistan. In our opinion, this strong protest was unnecessary and indicates the designs of your Government. Your Comment?
A: Pakistan has, indeed, spoilt the relations with India on basic issues. We hope it would reconsider them and decide what steps it would take and what kind of statements it would issue in future. Mr Hilaly did not, unfortunately, take into consideration the effect his statement would have on Indo-Pakistan relations, particularly at such a delicate stage when talks for a non-aggression pact were in progress between them. Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has repeatedly emphasized that India would never attack Pakistan, pact or no pact. This statement reflects India's policy on almost all Indo-Pak relations.

Q: You have said that the postponement would have far-reaching benefits. What do you mean by that?
A: If the present postponement helps clarify the issues, restore the atmosphere prevailing during the Foreign Ministers’ meeting at Delhi, and helps us understand each other’s sentiments, it will create confidence among both of us, which will be a concrete basis for future talks.

Q: Would you make some concrete suggestion as to what should Pakistan do for a resumption of the talks?
A: We have told Pakistan of our disappointment cause by Mr Hilaly’s statement. We are now awaiting Pakistan’s reply. The decision about the new date for the Indian delegation’s visit to Pakistan would depend on Pakistan's reply, its contents and tone.

◆◆◆◆◆
Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan has said that that Pakistan is always ready for talks with India on the question of non-aggression pact.

Mr. Yaqub Khan, however, added that Pakistan could not accept the condition that it should not raise the Kashmir issue at any international forum.

Commenting on Indo-Pak relations he said it was not Pakistan that had put an end to the talks on the non-aggression pact. It was on the other hand, India which had postponed that talks (on the ground that) a Pakistani representative, Mr. Agha Hilaly, had mentioned the Kashmir issue at the UN Human Rights Commission. Pakistan could not, however, accept India’s argument that it could not even raise the Kashmir issue at any international forum under the Simla Agreement. Pakistan had been raising the question all along. As far as the talks on the question of non-aggression were concerned, India would always find Pakistan ready and willing for the resumption of talks whenever India felt that the time was suitable for these because “we want to have good relations with India”.

India’s Prime Minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, could play a very decisive role in improving Indo-Pak relations for she would not be challenged by any body in India, he said.

Immediate success of talks Ruled out

Asked about the chances of the success of non-aggression talks, he candidly said there was no hope of any immediate result… as it was an intricate matter and the path led through a craggy and rugged high land since Indo-Pak ties had been marked by extreme bitterness in the past. “As we go on removing doubts and misunderstandings, the psychological climate will go on improving and we shall reach our goal step by step,” he added.

Discussing the situation around Pakistan, Mr. Yaqub said the entire region, including the Middle East, Central Africa and South Asia, was full of tension and they were sitting at its mouth. That was why Pakistan was trying not to make any provocative move which might further increase the tension. Patience demanded that at least India and Pakistan should create a climate of mutual trust so that the shadow of tension did not fall on the new generation. Even while holding on to their principles, he said, they could increase the cooperation with India in various spheres. Asked if these aims were not contradictory, the Sahabazada said it was just possible that they could improve their friendship even while sticking to their principles. Any friendship that was not based on trust and mutual respect could not be lasting or prove beneficial. Nor could relations be improved by giving up principles.

On steps to improve climate for Indo-Pak ties

Asked about the steps that were necessary to improve the climate for mutual trust, he said there should be mutually beneficial trade between the two countries, which should not put either of them to a loss. There should also be exchange of cultural delegations; but Pakistan could not allow music and dance troupes which were against the spirit of its society and environment. “We have no objection to exchange of newspaper representatives and as far as the issuing of visas is concerned Pakistan is already providing all the facilities to India, he said.

On ties with USA

Asked about the relations with the USA, he said the USA had not imposed any preconditions. (to its aid)... It valued Pakistan’s Islamic and non-aligned identity and believed that Pakistan’s polices were in the interest of the region’s security.

 Asked if the USA was not possibly using Pakistan for bargaining with the Soviet Union on the Afghanistan issue, he said the possibility of a fresh Yalta could not be rejected straight away.

It was futile to expect that the things would remain static. The present state of Pak - US ties might continue so long as the USA had its interests in the region, “but if in the future, a Yalta type situation develops, we cannot sacrifice our principles today for the sake of future possibilities.”

No Military Bases for USA

Asked if the USA would pressurize Pakistan to have its conditions accepted, Mr. Yaqub Khan said the USA had neither asked for military bases nor was Pakistan willing to provide these.

On Soviet Cooperation

Commenting on Pak-Soviet relations, Mr. Yaqub Khan referred to the Karachi Steel Mill, Guddu thermal power station and a Soviet–aided tractor plant and said: “We should not forget that we have the best bilateral economic relations with Russia.” It was important for Pakistan to improve its relations with the Soviet Union for it was a neighbour Pakistan valued...

On Mrs. Gandhi’s Visit to Saudi Arabia

Replying to a question on Mrs. Indira Gandhi’s visit to Saudi Arabia, he said the Pak-Saudi relations were strong and he had no apprehension that her visit would have any adverse effect on these.
0996. Statement by External Affairs Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao in the Lok Sabha regarding reported announcement by Pakistani President appointing Observers from “Northern Areas” to the Federal Council.

New Delhi, April 15, 1982.

On April 4, 1982 the Pakistan President Gen. Zia-ul-Haq is reported to have made an announcement appointing three observers from “Northern Areas” on the Federal Council.

This is the first time that the Pakistan Government have given such a “representation” to the areas which are juridically and constitutionally part of the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir. Our CDA in Islamabad has already lodged a protest over the matter with the Pakistan Foreign Office.

President Zia-ul-Haq is also reported to have made a statement on April 12, 1982 in which he declared Gilgit, Hunza and Skardu in Pakistan-Occupied northern Kashmir as parts of Pakistan. He is also reported to have stated that the three territories are part of Pakistan and not “disputed areas” – a description which the Pakistan Government has, without any justification, been giving to Kashmir.

The Pakistan CDA in Delhi was summoned to South Block on 13-4-1982 and was asked to give us an authentic version of President Zia’s statement on the subject. He was told that Government take serious objection to Gen. Zia’s reported statement. Our well known position, viz., that juridically areas mentioned above are part of the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir, was reiterated to the CDA.

We shall await the authentic version of the position of Pakistan on this question.
0997. Message from Pakistani Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan to the External Affairs Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao and handed over to him on April 26, 1982 by the Pakistani Ambassador Abdul Sattar.

I greatly appreciate your message of felicitation on my appointment as Foreign Minister and consider your personal cordiality and goodwill a valuable asset for the continued development of Pakistan – India relations which are fundamental to peace and progress in our region.

I recall with pleasure the meeting we had last January in New Delhi which confirmed my esteem for your positive contribution to a constructive dialogue between our two countries. Your visit here in June 1981 left a deep imprint on every one you met.

Global developments and especially the strained security environment in our region make it imperative for Pakistan and India to strive constantly for better understanding. To that end maintenance, indeed intensification, of the bilateral discussions between our two countries is indispensable.

Your statements in regard to the future of the agreed talks on the substance of the non-aggression pact proposal have helped towards the creation of an atmosphere conducive to the resumption of postponed talks on the substance of the proposal. On our part, we too have worked towards the same objective.

I would like to assure you once again that the non-aggression pact proposal was conceived by the Government of Pakistan as a means of fostering mutual confidence which is a pre-requisite for the acceleration of the process of normalization and improvement of relations between our two countries.

To that end every contribution I can make will not only serve the aim of my Government but would also be a source of personal satisfaction to me*.

◆◆◆◆◆

*While handing over the message, the Pakistani Ambassador told Mr. Rao that as far as Pakistan was concerned there was no question of one proposal (on non-aggression pact) but contingent on the other and reiterated that Pakistan was committed to what had been agreed to in the joint press statement of February 1982 and that there was no rethinking on their part.
Record of a meeting between Secretary (Pak-Iraf) K. Natwar Singh and Pakistan Ambassador Abdul Sattar.

New Delhi, May 22, 1982.

Ministry of External Affairs (Pak–Iraf Division)

Secretary (Pak-Iraf) said that Ambassador Sattar would be pleased to know that lease documents of Jinnah House are nearing completion and that he will have the answer in a day or two. He said that the lease will be hopefully to Pakistan Ambassador’s satisfaction and would be on the lines that he would be pleased to see. At any hand he said after the Ministry (ies) of Law, (and) Works and Housing and our L&T (Legal and Treaties) Division have examined it we would give it to Pakistan Embassy to have a look at it.

Regarding his recent visit to Kabul, Secretary (Pak–Iraf) said that this visit was purely for economic and technical reasons but inevitably there was some political attention also. He said that we were not looking at it like that but there is always unavoidable publicity to this aspect of the visit. After giving a brief resume of our economic and technical assistance to Afghanistan, Secretary (Pak – Iraf) said that his general impression about the internal political situation in Afghanistan was that Babrak Karmal’s position is better than it was six months and much better than what it was a year ago. Babrak Karmal seems to have consolidated his position. However, this he said does not mean that his dependence on outside help has diminished altogether. On relations with India he said he found tremendous goodwill in Kabul for India.

Ambassador Sattar said that he wondered what was our trade balance like with Afghanistan. Secretary (Pak-Iraf) said that the balance is in Afghanistan’s favour. They export dry fruit through Pakistan and our things go to Afghanistan through Karachi. He said there were many delays in transit in Karachi.

Ambassador Sattar said that a year ago visit to Kabul showed a pre-occupation with internal political situation. He asked Secretary (Pak-Iraf) whether he felt that the situation now was perceptibly better. Secretary (Pak-Iraf) said that all the people he had met in Kabul sounded reasonably confident and that naturally before his visit all this was taken into consideration. He said our Ambassador recommended that our help in areas like ICH etc. will benefit Afghan people and it is important to note that the present regime seemed confident of absorbing more aid and economic help, Secretary (Pak-Iraf) said no doubt the opposition to the regime is continuing but it is more of sporadic actions rather than a sustained and organized resistance. He pointed out that even in terms of frequency of incidents they are not as many as they were a year ago. This is what he was told. He did not go out of Kabul.

Ambassador Sattar said that some circles in Afghanistan people opposed to the present regime felt that there should have been greater support from India to their cause. In view of this he said he wondered what was Secretary (Pak-Iraf)’s assessment of the effect of Indian policies on Afghanistan. Secretary (Pak-Iraf) said that in his assessment right from Foreign Office to the President he had found appreciation of India’s stand and its policy of non-alignment. They had pointed out that interference from Pakistan continued but that it was less so from Iran. Secretary (Pak-Iraf) said that his own feeling was that Soviet Union is keen that Geneva talks take place because this establishes a certain scenario and that they would like the talks to take place.

Secretary (Pak-Iran) then asked Ambassador Sattar what were his expectations with regard to the Geneva talks. Ambassador Sattar said that it was a beginning which Pakistan wanted to make much earlier. In December 1980 Agha Shahi thought that we had reached a certain understanding with the Soviets through our discussions in New York with Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko and also through talks in Islamabad. He said at that time they had thought that indirect negotiations would be possible. However, the basis of that agreement, he said, seemed to collapse in face of contradictory interpretations from both sides. Pakistan felt that they were getting out of step with Iran. In their view they felt they had no arguments against Iran’s stand that a political solution of the Afghanistan problems is essentially an internal one. Therefore, the presence of resistance leaders was vital to the realization of a genuine effort towards settlement of this question.

He said that Iran had all along felt that both Pakistan and Iran had a marginal role to play but now things have progressed, Pakistan and Iran can play a role to the extent that Afghans would want them to do. At the same time, he said, they also knew that the Afghans would want guarantees of non-interference. On this he said Pakistan would like some resolution of this contradictory talk by Afghanistan, whereby on the one hand they talk of interference from Pakistan side and on the other hand Pakistan Government denies that it is not interfering in Afghanistan. Ambassador Sattar said that they are keen for this clarification in order to deny Afghanistan this propaganda advantage. On their side, he said, they would like to ask the Afghan as to how do they expect to assure Afghan refugees so as to ensure the return of 2.7 million Afghan refugees. Secretary (Pak-Iraf) pointed out that this figure was disputed and that the figure was 1 ½ million last year. Ambassador Sattar tried to explain that the present figure was based on the findings of UNHCR who have an elaborate system of working out this calculation.
Ambassador Sattar said that Pakistan is anxious that conditions in Afghanistan should be conducive to the return of the Afghan refugees if that happens then Pakistan has nothing to object. Even now, he said, they don’t object to the internal situation obtaining in Afghanistan but what they are insisting on is the withdrawal of foreign forces which he said must be a material fact at Geneva because it is materially linked with the return of refugees to Afghanistan and so long as foreign forces are there, they will be disinclined to return. Ambassador Sattar said that when they discuss this question they would be anxious to known the Afghan view on this and they would also like to know from them as to what guarantees would they want from Pakistan. On this naturally, he said, there will be a discussion and a debate on priorities. However, he said he would like to assure us that Islamabad is not interested in a debate and that they are aware that they must move simultaneously on all points and that at some point there must be some dialogue between the regime and the refugees and the resistance groups and that all this will have to be linked up together. He said that Pakistan had counselled Iran to try and begin the process as they cannot hope to solve problem without talking to adversaries.

Ambassador Sattar said that first meeting at Geneva would be a preliminary meeting. Mr. Diego Cordovez will have to determine the situation and then propose a continuation of the talks either in Geneva or New York. Iran has suggested that after the preliminary round Mr. Cordovez should visit the three capitals. Ambassador Sattar said that this is a hopeful scenario because if progress is achieved then there might be direct talks in New York. He said they have not ruled anything out and that they have been promoting the idea with a serious purpose in mind. He said Pakistan would like Russians to know that they genuinely want a political settlement in Afghanistan but for that withdrawal of foreign forces must also be discussed. He said Pakistan also wants to tell them that they are not aligned in any grouping in the context of a great power conflict. He said they were not interested in discussing the nature of Afghan regime internally. They know that Afghanistan had all along been friendly with the Soviet Union. He said they have pitched the expectations at a reasonable level and they want to assure Moscow that they are in no way supplanting Soviet influence in Kabul with Pakistan influence. Pakistan is not interested in any particular ideological complexions for the regime nor are they interested in a fundamentalist regime in Kabul. What Pakistan is interested in is to help to restore a common situation, vital to achieving this is the withdrawal of the Soviet troops he said.

Secretary (Pak-Iraf) thanked Ambassador Sattar for his views on the forthcoming Geneva talks and then turned to the questions of piracy of books in Pakistan. He said that it was now time that we reached some agreement on piracy of books. Ambassador Sattar said that the National Foundation in Pakistan is their agent for import of books from India but unfortunately administration in various organizations is not so efficient. He said that President himself has asked why these books from India do not come as he is personally inclined to encourage import of books for Pakistani students on international affairs, technical matters, medical and engineering subjects. Ambassador Sattar said that there is goodwill for the idea to encourage trade in books but that the necessary channels do not exist. Secretary (Pak-Iraf) said that we too have a National Book Trust which is riddled with the same problem. The best way in this situation would be, he suggested that have a meeting of our publishers along with some representatives from academic establishments. Ambassador Sattar said that this was a very good idea and he will take it up with Islamabad. He said that it has been his recommendation also that books must be included in the list of items to be imported from India.

Secretary (Pak-Iraf) concluded by saying that a meeting of publishers, representatives from respective Education Ministries and universities should be convened at an early date. Ambassador Sattar expressed his full support for this suggestion and promised to take it up with the concerned Pak authorities.

0999. Letter from Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi to Pakistan President General Zia-ul-Haq.

New Delhi May 25, 1982

Excellency,

I could not reply to your letter of February 21 earlier as we have been fully preoccupied with the Budget Session of Parliament and Assembly elections in different parts of our country.

My message of goodwill to Pakistan and faith in the objectives of lasting peace and friendship between our two countries was not a passing phase but is rooted in our well-considered policy. I have emphasized time and again that we want a sovereign, independent and stable Pakistan. We believe that peace between India and Pakistan is not a distant ideal to talk about, but a practical necessity. It was in this spirit that I indicated to Mr. Aga Shahi and his colleagues that India and Pakistan should consider signing a Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation. I did so because we wish to strengthen the concept of a 'No War Pact' by other confidence building measures which would provide the necessary underpinning for a secure foundation for friendship between our two countries. As a first step I proposed the setting up of the Joint Commission.

Mr. Aga Shahi's prompt acceptance of my suggestion encouraged us to hope for a new beginning in our relations. Unfortunately, within days of the conclusion of his talks in India we found certain disturbing trends in Pakistan indicating a reversion to past attitudes and prejudices. The statements of your representative at the Human Rights Commission in Geneva came as a shock to us and it was, therefore, with great regret that we had to postpone the Foreign Secretary's visit to Islamabad. The recurring refrain in the statements by prominent persons in Pakistan about India's alleged hostile intentions and the misrepresentations in your Press even about the objectives of my recent visit to Saudi Arabia have cast a shadow on the prospects of the normalization of relations.

Certain statements which you are reported to have made to Indian Journalists also caused us concern. You have been quoted as saying that while you are prepared to discuss all differences with India bilaterally, you would not discuss Kashmir because you consider it an international issue. We consider any such stand as contrary to the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement which is the bedrock of our bilateral relations. I am sure, you will agree that nothing should be said or done by either side to dilute this Agreement, the tenth anniversary of which falls on the 2nd July.

We may have serious differences in perception and approach. Nevertheless, we should persevere in our efforts to restart the process of negotiations and as a first step I propose that the Joint Commission should meet soon. I believe that a meeting of the Joint Commission will be fruitful and could pave the way for resuming discussions on the Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation and on a 'No War Pact'.

With warm regards

Yours sincerely,

(Mrs.) Indira Gandhi

His Excellency General M. Zia-ul-Haq
President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan

Pakistan Foreign Ministers’s Call on FM

Sahabzada Yaqub Khan called on FM at his villa on 31.5.82. He was accompanied by Niaz Naik and the Pakistani Ambassador in Mexico, who is also accredited to Cuba. Secretary (ER) and AS (UN) were also present from the Indian side.

2. Yaqub greeted FM very warmly. He expressed happiness at seeing FM again and expressed the hope that the personal friendship between the two would grow apace with the improvement of bilateral relations.

3. Talking of the Iran-Iraq war, Yaqub said that Pakistan’s endeavours were to persuade Iran to limit the war to her own frontiers; this was in everybody’s interest. He had put this across to Velayati (Iranian Foreign Minister) earlier in the day. The latter had declined to either confirm or deny statements made in Tehran to the effect that the war would not be carried into Iraq. Velayati had given Yaqub an account of the damage inflicted by Iraq in terms of men, materials and infrastructure. Reparations therefore constituted an essential element in their position. They also wanted the aggressor punished and were determined to see Saddam out. A section of illiterate people seemed to be agitated that, in spite of reverses, Saddam had still not been dislodged.

4. FM observed that an alternative leader would have to emerge first. No country would willingly throw itself into anarchy. If Saddam’s ouster became an issue in itself, things were not going to be easy.

5. Yaqub said he had told Velayati that nothing should be done to provoke intervention from outside. Velayati, in his customary cool and unruffled manner, had been non-committal. It was difficult to say how events would evolve, in view of the internecine pulls and pressures within the Iranian leadership.

6. FM said that, ultimately, Khomeini’s word would prevail. It was necessary to maintain some friendly pressure on both sides, now more than ever before, with a view to finding a solution.
7. Turning to the bilateral aspects, Yaqub said that there were so many fields in which India and Pakistan could work together. There was similarity of views on so many issues including regional issues. He said he looked forward to the day when this similarity of approach could be concerted into action, “to become a very positive influence.”

8. FM said that the next meeting of Foreign Secretaries was scheduled to be held in Islamabad in August. This would be a significant meeting, wherein the progress already made in that forum could be carried further. Yaqub agreed that this was a good forum.

9. The meeting ended with usual pleasantries. The two ministers decided to remain in touch.

2. Secretary General Shah Nawaz began by extending a warm welcome to Secretary Natwar Singh as also Consul General G. Parthasarathy whom he had met in New York. The Secretary General expressed his happiness over the appointment of Shri Natwar Singh as Secretary incharge of Pakistan affairs at the Indian Foreign Office. He said Secretary Natwar Singh knew the situation in the sub-continent very well. It was a source of satisfaction to Pakistan that Secretary Natwar Singh had been specially chosen by the Prime Minister as Ambassador of Pakistan two years ago as he enjoyed her complete confidence. As a result, he added, he was sure that there will be no break or hiatus in Indo-Pak relations.

3. He recalled the fact that the President had received Secretary Natwar Singh immediately on arrival. The conversations with the President were detailed and covered a lot of ground. En passant he remarked that Secretary Natwar Singh talks with the President had been so wide ranging and detailed that the Foreign Office was in a sense "pre-empted" as the pace and direction had been already decided upon.

4. Secretary General Shah Nawaz then gave a brief resume of the Indo-Pakistan talks of Pakistan's offer of a non-aggression pact. He said after an interval which was characterized by a lack of progress, he was hopeful that these discussions would move forward after the arrival of Secretary Natwar Singh. The talks could be now resumed and expanded. A serious effort had to be made by both countries to do whatever is possible so that close and cooperative relationship can be built up.

5. He recalled the continuing dialogue with breaks now and then, between the two governments on bilateral relations. He referred to his meeting in February 1980 with the then Foreign Secretary Shri Sathe. The talks which subsequently blossomed into one between Foreign Ministers of the two countries covered not only bilateral matters but also regional concerns that both countries shared. There was then a useful exchange of views on Afghanistan. These talks indicated that both countries have large preoccupations and indivisible interests. These meetings also succeeded in establishing a machinery for consultations on regular basis between the two Foreign Secretaries on bi-annual basis. There were also subsequent discussions at the level of Foreign Ministers. Pakistan has reiterated its faith in the Simla Agreement. These deliberations were the first important steps taken by the two governments after the Simla Agreement. The Simla Agreement had to be further fortified and strengthened. Secretary General Shah Nawaz then referred to the various meetings held for South Asian regional cooperation. Pakistan had supported the holding of these meetings. The next meeting he said, would be held in Islamabad in August this year.

6. He then referred to Pakistan’s offer of a non-aggression pact with India. In this context he recapitulated its history. Shah Nawaz said that the proposal for a non-aggression pact had been put forward by Pakistan in September last year. When India had suggested a formal note be given in November, this had been immediately done. Foreign Minister Agha Shahi was invited to visit New Delhi. His visit in January February, yielded good deal of optimism and a lot of ground work was prepared. Some new ideas were brought up at Foreign Minister Agha Shahi’s meeting with the Prime Minister. When the P.M. proposed the establishment of a joint commission to oversee bilateral matters, as a token of goodwill Pakistan had responded positively on the spot. All this indicated Pakistan’s confidence and respect for P.M. and its own sincere desire to have positive relations with India.

7. Secretary General Shah Nawaz then said that he would like to do some plain talking. There was need for it. This was, by itself not unusual in view of special relationship that India and Pakistan had. In fact both sides were quite used to such conversations. He then referred to the letter from the P.M. He added that as regards the contents of the letter, Pakistan will not be found wanting in a positive response to it. He then traced the chronology of the Pakistan’s no – war pact offer. He said that when the Pakistan delegation went to India in January – February this year, they had carried with them a draft agreement on the conclusion of non-war pact. The Indian side felt that an exchange of drafts could take place at a latter stage. It was his view that it would have been better if the drafts had been exchanged at that time. The draft proposals from the two sides already contained elements which India had in mind – joint commission, friendship treaty, etc. Shah Nawaz added that the Indian side would have seen the embryonic ideas in what could be referred to in a Joint Commission or treaty of friendship in the formulation proposed in the Pakistani draft. In fact he would now like to hand over the Pakistani draft which incorporates what both India and Pakistan have given consideration to. Secretary General Shah Nawaz then handed over to Secretary Natwar Singh a draft. While handing it over, the Secretary General said that the Pakistan approach has been to place Indo – Pak relationship on a firm foundation which can sustain all detailed proposals. Conceptually he envisioned a pyramid like approach built on a firm foundation and flowing from the following (i) Simla agreement (ii) meeting of Foreign Secretaries for regional cooperation (iii) Non-aggression pact. As opposed to this India had “venture concept”. Amplifying he said India’s conception seemed to be that of a pyramid upside down; quoting India’s interest in a Joint Commission “as an example of such an approach”. He then appealed to the Indian side that it should consider the Pakistani proposal carefully and in its entirety, which he thought could transform the whole atmosphere of relations.

As regards India’s proposal for a joint commission the Secretary General did not envision any great problem. In fact it could be taken up simultaneously with the no war pact offer. However, Pakistan would like to have a framework for the joint commission like the composition level at which meetings would be held etc. He added that as for the dates of meetings these by themselves should not pose any problems. There was no objection to the idea of a friendship treaty. The question to be answered was when and how to reach at it. He then requested Secretary Natwar Singh to scrutinize Article iv of the Pakistan draft which “contained all these ideas.”

Secretary Natwar Singh in his reply said he was honoured to have received such a reception. The special gesture of being received by the President and Foreign Ministry officials and the Secretary General and Foreign Secretary so soon after his arrival had deeply touched him personally and he was conscious that it was a manifestation of regard for his Government. He reciprocated the sentiments expressed by Secretary General Shah Nawaz in his introductory remarks and assured the Pakistan side that India was committed to building good relations, given the special links between the two countries in the light of past history. He added that while one could regretfully live without friends one could not live without neighbours and Pakistan is our most important neighbour. P.M. herself was committed to improvement of Indio-Pak relations particularly since 1972. The rationale for it was a simple one, namely to enable both countries to work for the progress and welfare of their people. Indo – Pak relations had regional and also global ramifications. Good relations and peace between the two countries was imperative. While there were some common problems and regional problems, one had to attach the utmost importance to bilateral relations. The friendship treaty was offered was not to score a point, nor was it an exercise in one upmanship. It was the genuine expression of India’s desire for friendship with Pakistan and meant to eliminate all elements that cause hostility, doubt and friction.

It was agreed by both sides that the ideas (Joint Commission and Friendship Treaty) are not mutually exclusive but complementary. The level of the Joint Commission could either be official or Ministerial. Sessions could be alternatively at Delhi and Islamabad. As regards dates, India was open to suggestions and would go along with what Pakistan had in mind.
Coming to the Pakistan draft which was handed over to him, Secretary Natwar Singh said that the Government of India will give its considered views on the draft. It would need serious consideration at the highest level, which would be given to it.

Spelling out his views on the Joint Commission in greater detail Secretary Natwar Singh said that it would be useful to have meetings at official and Ministerial levels alternatively in Islamabad and Delhi. He added that the fields which the Joint Commission would cover should be spelt out. It was important that meetings of the Joint Commission should not be regarded as just routine but it should be an effective instrument to deal with Indo-Pak matters.

Secretary Natwar Singh concluded by saying that we would also like to have Pak views on the Joint Commission and we could have a meeting in July or in September after this Regional meeting of Foreign Secretaries.

Secretary–General intervened to say that if the atmosphere was not conducive then India and Pakistan got (get) into trouble. Secretary Natwar Singh then drew the attention of the Secretary General to the decrease by 15% by Pakistan in postal rates after India had unilaterally taken such a decision adding that such an important decision which affected so many peoples was unfortunately not given enough prominence in the Pakistan press.

10. Secretary–General then sought India’s support for Pakistan candidature to the Security Council. Pakistan had expressed its interest in putting forward its candidature in 1979. He said there was no other contestant for the seat till Sri Lanka entered the field recently. Discussions were going on between the Pakistan Government and the Sri Lankan Government to try to withdraw in favour of Pakistan. He said that when India puts forward its candidature, India will be supported by Pakistan. He hoped India would support Pakistan’s candidature and also appealed to India to use its good offices to ensure that the seat is not contested by Sri Lanka.

Secretary Natwar Singh then referred to P.M. visit to Saudi Arabia. He said that he had earlier briefed Ambassador Sattar about the visit. Shah Nawaz, however, expressed his interest on hearing Secretary’s assessment of the visit. Secretary said that for the first time a visit of this importance had taken place since 1956 when Prime Minister Nehru visited Saudi Arabia. King Saud had returned the visit in 1957. A large delegation accompanied the P.M. Prime Minister had been received well by the Saudis and we were quite satisfied with the results. Secretary Natwar Singh added that P.M. did not go to Saudi Arabia to destroy any existing friendship but to build new ones. The discussions were not only on bilateral relations but on regional developments also. Economic ties with Saudi Arabia had expanded and both countries were keen to strengthen.
these ties to their mutual benefit. P.M. had expressed to Saudi Arabia India's desire for good relations with Pakistan. Afghanistan and Iran – Iraq war were also discussed. The Indian side viewed the Iran – Iraq war in the wider context of developments in the region, namely activities of super powers. P.M. had also emphasized that while we did not approve of what had happened in Afghanistan, Soviet action had to be seen in the light of overall developments in the region and the American military build – up in Diego Garcia and elsewhere. Secretary Natwar Singh then referred briefly to the visits of Chairman Arafat of the PLO and Foreign Minister Velayati of Iran.

As regards his visit to Afghanistan, Secretary Natwar Singh said that even before embarking on the trip he knew the Afghan Government would attach much more political importance to his arrival than we did. His instinct that he should go was, however, proved right after 3 days of stay in Kabul. The discussions were purely economic in nature. Before December 1979, there were 150 Indian experts working in various fields. Only 29 of them remained because of disturbances in the countryside. Increased economic cooperation as also revival of the joint commission were discussed with the Afghan side. He had carried a letter from P.M. to President Karmal. This was in response to a letter that Mr. Karmal had sent to P.M. through Foreign Minister Dost seeking a revival in economic cooperation. In responding we had carefully considered the implications on the feelings of the people of Afghanistan. It was our view that economic cooperation in areas like health and education would be welcomed.

Replying to a question, he said life during the day was quite normal, with bazaars and shops open. The Soviet presence was noticeably absent during days though streets were lined with Afghan soldiers. However, at night there was a visible Soviet presence. Again replying to a question, he said that President Karmal had been in Office for the last 2 ½ years. With this asset he was able to ensure a measure of continuity as, at least superficially, he had patched up differences between the Panchamites and the Khalqs. There was a certain element of stability which was not there 2 ½ years ago. But Mr. Karmal was still dependant on the Soviets and did not head a popular government. President Karmal in his talk with Secretary Natwar Singh had viewed the Geneva talks as a step forward. He appeared to be keen on political solution, which point was also emphasized by Secretary Natwar Singh. However, Karmal was keeping his fingers crossed on the Geneva meeting to which Secretary General Shah Nawaz replied that as far as Pakistan was concerned the meeting was on.

Secretary Natwar Singh said that he had asked President Karmal about the extent of Mujahideen operations in Afghanistan. He was told that their operations were sporadic. Secretary said that he had reliably learnt that Soviet troops in Afghanistan had not behaved badly in conducting themselves in Afghanistan. There were for example, no reports of molestation etc. They also did not pose a burden to the Afghan people as their entire supplies came from the Soviet Union.

Giving his point of view, Secretary General Shah Nawaz said that the facts on the ground do not give the impression that Afghanistan is settling down. With the advent of spring, the Soviets intensify their offensives against the Mujahideens. However, with the approach of summer, the Mujahideens regroup and attack the Soviets. Pakistan also had played a very delicate role with regard to captured Soviet soldiers. The Mujahideens had been complaining that if Pakistan released them to the Soviets, they would come back to fight against them. A via media had been found and Pakistan had now begun handing over the Soviet soldiers to the international Red Cross. These soldiers would have to stay in Switzerland for about two years before they are released. Recently, these soldiers were handed over to the International Red Cross.

Secretary Natwar Singh commented that one could not possibly wish the Russians away. What was really needed was a political solution. It would be a mistake to underestimate Soviet determination to stay a long time to achieve their objectives in such situation.

1002. SECRET
Record of the farewell call made by the Pakistan Ambassador Abdul Sattar on Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi.
New Delhi, June 9, 1982.
Prime Minister’s Office
Record of Discussions
The Pakistan Ambassador, Mr. Abdul Sattar, was accompanied by his wife.

2. The Pakistan Ambassador said that it was not only an honour and privilege to have served in India, but was also the fulfillment of his career. President Zia had told him that his future work would involve continuing association with relations with India. He would continue his efforts to ensure that the future of India-Pakistan relations was better than the past. PM remarked that she was with the Ambassador on that.

3. Mr. Sattar said that he had spent 4 years in India and had been treated with great affection, goodwill and friendship. He also deeply appreciated the cooperation and assistance received from the Government of India. In the past 2½ years there had been ups and downs, but the direction of relations had been set out at Simla. Shri Natwar Singh had visited Pakistan recently carrying PM’s letter; this opened the way for the resumption of the dialogue. They were carrying out many changes in the Foreign Office and President Zia was in Saudi Arabia with the Islamic Conference mission, and would thereafter go to New York for the Special Session of Disarmament. Next month would also see the talks in Geneva on the Afghan situation. Therefore, discussion on dates could take place shortly after that.

4. PM said that the Ambassador was aware of her views on relations with Pakistan. It was high time that we put an end to confrontation. She was always a little sad to hear comments in Pakistan that she had not reconciled herself to the creation of Pakistan. Here in India she was often blamed for the opposite.
The situation of the two countries was so similar that cooperation should be established, not only between us but in the entire subcontinent.

5. The Pakistan Ambassador said that there was a new situation in our region which compelled Pakistan, and he hoped India also, to re-appraise attitude. There were forces at work in the world which were extremely dangerous for our aspirations for a better life. He had always felt that the sea change in the attitude of Pakistan, its people and the Government, was not fully appreciated by people in India, except by those who took the trouble of going around in Pakistan to see the situation. He had tried his best to encourage distinguished Indian journalists to go to Pakistan. Mr. Rajendra Sarin had recently spent 4 weeks in Pakistan meeting about 150 people, taping interviews, with personalities covering the Government, the media, politics, etc. He had met people entirely on his own. There were also others who had made some visits, meeting people without prior notice or appointment. They had also talked to those opposed to the Government. They confirmed his own assessment that the people of Pakistan wanted a change in the tone of relations. The second point not fully appreciated was Pakistan’s grave concern over the events in Afghanistan. For them the presence of Soviet forces in Afghanistan was a vital change in their security environment. One could speculate how long the Soviet Union would stay, but the fact of their presence was new, and this was reflected in a shift in Pakistan’s perceptions and thinking. This had also given an impetus which was beneficial to Pakistan - India relations. The task was how to channelise this. The leaders had a most important role. There was no significant opinion in Pakistan that PM was not reconciled to the existence of Pakistan. PM remarked that despite this there were frequent press statements, and also statements by leaders.

6. The Pakistan Ambassador said that they had censorship, but their press was not the hand-maiden of the Government. About 6 weeks back Jung had written an article in the Lahore edition which had greatly upset him. It had compared Hindus to cockroaches. On his own, he had written to the Chief Editor of the Newspaper, because this paper had the highest circulation in Pakistan, about 400,000. The Chief Editor had sent him a reply that he had felt outraged when he had seen the article, but there was young editor in fact his son, who, out of ignorance, had accepted an article written by some unknown person. On his own the Chief Editor had taken action to ensure that the article was not carried in the editions in other cities such as Karachi or Islamabad. Neither in the publication of the article nor in his decision not to carry it in other editions, was their Government direction. There were individuals who had not updated themselves but there was substantial change. He himself had visited India before his posting to New Delhi, but he too had noted a similar change in India. In the past when Pakistanis came to India people talked to them and looked to the past. PM said that the Ambassador was right. The Ambassador went on to say that when he visited India he had no past experience or knowledge to talk about. The affection which he had received in India was prospective in direction in the sense that it looked to the future. It was an asset for the leaders of the two countries and people wanted better relations. PM remarked that Ambassador would have seen for himself that he had many friends in India. Begum Sattar said that they had encountered much love and affection.

7. The Pakistan Ambassador said that the Disarmament Session at the UN was likely to be overshadowed by other events. PM said that the situation was being aggravated elsewhere. The ambassador said that the US was unwilling to exercise restraint on Israel and this had been evident over the last 30 or 40 years.

8. PM remarked that the present regime in Israel had gone beyond all limits. And yet there were people in the US who wrote to her how she could shake hands with Arafat; The Pakistani Ambassador said that Israel lobby in the US was so well organized that they would not let anything pass. He referred to his own experience of the US when someone had spoken to him about the Arabs and he had asked whether that person was speaking as a US citizen or as a Jew, because then he would also reply as a Muslim. PM said that if Israel did not have full support they would not have been so reckless throughout.

9. Ambassador Sattar took leave of PM reiterating again his deep thanks for the privilege that he had been given to work in India and the cooperation extended to him. PM asked him to convey her good wishes to President Zia.

Statement of the Official Spokesperson of the Indian Ministry of External Affairs on the leakage of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi’s letter to Pakistan President.

New Delhi, June 9, 1982.

The spokesman regretted that the contents of Mrs. Indira Gandhi’s letter* to President Zia-ul-Haq had been reported in an Indian newspaper from Chandigarh, but asserted that the leakage “had not taken place from our side”. Expressing surprise and distress at the publication of the letter, he said “we wish to embark on serious discussions with our neighbor” on improving relations and it has not been “our intention to indulge in a propaganda exercise.”

The spokesman said such discussion could not be seriously carried on through the press whether in India or in Pakistan. He said the correspondence between the heads of government was of a confidential nature and matters touched upon in Mrs. Gandhi’s letter were of great importance to the relations between India and Pakistan.

The spokesman said India will communicate its detailed comments on the draft in due course and at an appropriate stage.

* According to media reports Prime Minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, in her letter to President Zia-ul-Haq had said India believed in friendship, peace and cooperation with Pakistan, not only as a matter of policy but also as a necessity. Gen Zia has not sent any reply to Mrs. Gandhi’s letter but he has reportedly made it clear to Mr. Natwar Singh that Pakistan was keen to pick up the thread from were it was left in February as soon as possible. In the two-and-a-half page letter, Mrs. Gandhi has also lamented Pakistan’s practice of diluting the Simla Agreement and cited two examples of Pakistan not respecting bilateralism as enunciated in the Simla Agreement.

One example given is that of Mr. Agha Hilaly’s comparison of Kashmir with Palestine and Namibia at the Human Rights conference in Geneva and the other in Gen. Zia’s Press interview with Kuldip Nayar in which he had said: “On Kashmir, this ‘bilateralism’ (that is, confining the matter between India and Pakistan) is not the understanding: on other things this is an understanding”. Mrs. Gandhi said that these things do not conform to the Simla Agreement provisions. They should be avoided. She had particularly dwelt on Mr Hilaly’s observations to point out that these vitiated the atmosphere which the talks on the non-aggression pact between the two countries had created. Mrs. Gandhi however, emphasized in her letter that until a non-aggression pact is reached, steps should be taken to build up confidence. She mentioned the setting up of joint commissions between the two countries.

It may be recalled that Gen Zia had some time ago said that the constitution of joint commissions should follow a no-war pact. Mrs. Gandhi also complained in the letter that the Press in Pakistan has tried to run down her visit to Saudi Arabia and attributed motives. Meanwhile President Zia-ul-Haq stated that Indian Prime Minister, Mrs. Gandhi’s letter in response to Pakistan offer for non-aggression pact was a source of great encouragement. Addressing a Press conference on his arrival at the Islamabad airport on June 9, on the conclusion of his six-day visit to Saudi Arabia, Gen Zia said it was a step in the right direction for normalization and expansion of bilateral relations. Replying to a question that the comments in the Indian Press about Pakistan’s draft on non-war pact verged on rejecting it, the President observed that the negotiations have been conducted through diplomatic channels. It would be difficult to say whether the press comments are in consonance with the spirit of the negotiations. He added that the letter did not make any mention of Afghanistan. Mrs. Indira Gandhi’s letter was an expression of good wishes and for expansion of bilateral ties. There were some suggestions for progress in this direction, he added. Commenting on the recent statement of Indian spokesman on the need for changes in Pakistan’s non-aggression pact draft, Gen Zia said that Pakistan did not send any such draft officially to India but the Government would consider his statement.

1004. Statement by Official Spokesperson of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the proposed Agreement.

Islamabad, June 28, 1982.

The Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India are expected to meet in Islamabad next August for bilateral discussions, a Foreign Office spokesman stated at Islamabad on June 28, 1982.

Dates for the meeting were, however being worked out, he added.

Disclosing that Pakistan’s Charge d’Affaires in New Delhi has been given on June 26 a draft agreement on a Joint Commission for Economic, Trade Scientific, Technical and Cultural Co-operation, the spokesman said the text was expected to reach Islamabad shortly.

“It will receive the earnest consideration of the government”, he added.

The spokesman also said that a draft of the proposed non-aggression and non-use of force agreement had been handed over to Mr. K. Natwar Singh, Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs of India, when he visited Pakistan on June 1 and the Pakistan Government had been informed that the draft was receiving careful and serious consideration of the Indian Government.

Recalling that the agreement on the meeting of Indo-Pak officials to continue the exchange of views of the proposed agreement had been reached at the meeting of Foreign Ministers on February 1 last, he said that some of the elements of the proposed agreement were also discussed during the former Foreign Minister, Mr. Agha Shahi’s visit to New Delhi last January.

Pakistan looked forward to the visit of Mr. M.K. Resgotra Indian Foreign Secretary, he added.
He also recalled that during Mr. Agha Shahi’s visit to India, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi had proposed the establishment of a joint commission to review and promote bilateral relations. Pakistan had welcomed the proposal, but no discussion had so far taken place on the substantive aspects of this matter.

1005. Statement to the Press by Pakistan Foreign Secretary Niaz A. Naik at the end of two-day talks with the Indian Foreign Secretary.

Islamabad, August 8, 1982.

The Indian Foreign Secretary, H.E. Mr. M. Rasgotra, and I had most useful talks during the last two days in an atmosphere marked by mutual goodwill and cordiality. We have exchanged views on a number of international issues of common interest to both. As was expected, much of our time was devoted to bilateral matters. We greatly value the spirit of such discussions which facilitate better understanding of each other’s perceptions. On many international issues our views are same. We have been profoundly impressed by Mr. Rasgotra’s deep understanding and by his lucid exposition of views of his Government. We took the opportunity to review recent developments in regard to the situation in Afghanistan and especially against the backdrop of recent Geneva indirect discussions aimed at political settlement in Afghanistan. As you are aware, both Pakistan and India adhere to the declaration of the Non-Aligned Foreign Ministers meeting of February 81 and the Havana Declaration of June 82 which discussed the tragic situation in Lebanon resulting from the Israeli aggression, un-ending agony of the people of West Beirut and the travail of the Palestinians pitted against the overwhelming Israeli armed might and brutality has evoked profound feelings of outrage. More effective restrictions need to be imposed on the Israeli policy of aggression and expansionism.

In regard to the Iran-Iraq war we shared the wish that this protracted conflict between the two neighbouring Non-aligned countries would end and thus spare the people of the two developing countries further loss of life and property.

We expressed our disappointment over the lack of progress in the North-South dialogue and shared the imperative need to launch urgently the Global Negotiations on International Co-operation.

In regard to the bilateral matters, an exchange of views took place against the background of the discussions between the Foreign Secretaries of the two countries last January. We gave our draft of the Non-aggression Pact to India on 1st June. Towards the end of the same month, India sent us a draft agreement on the establishment of a Joint Commission. Now Mr. Rasgotra has given us the draft of a proposed Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation between India and Pakistan — an elaborate and multifaceted proposal which will require study.

We look forward to further exchanges of views. The Foreign Secretary of India has extended an invitation to me to visit India which I have accepted with pleasure. The Government of Pakistan desires good-neighbourly relations with India and we believe that its objective can be achieved on a step-by-step basis.

SECRET
Letter from the Indian Ambassador K. D. Sharma to Secretary (Pak-iraf) in the Ministry of External Affairs Natwar Singh regarding the visit of Foreign Secretary to Pakistan.
Islamabad, August 15, 1982.
Ambassador of India
Islamabad
No. ISI/162/5/82, 15 August 1982.
Dear Natwar Singh,
Foreign Secretary’s recent 6-day visit to Pakistan ended on a reasonably happy and satisfactory note. A clear desire that there should be no breakdown in the dialogue was discernible on the Pakistani side. No doubt on a cue from the Government, the press was also pre-disposed to presenting the ongoing talks in a positive light. The clearest and most notable reflection of their basic thinking came out when FS asked President Zia during his call on the latter on the evening of 12 August whether he should go back and report to the Government that the Indian draft of the Friendship Treaty was off the table as far as Pakistan was concerned. Zia was at great pains to reassure FS that he would not wish that things be seen in that light.

2. FS would be giving his final assessment of the talks and the road further from here. But I thought I should give a brief factual account of the main details of the talks held during his visit. In addition to his meetings with Zia, Yaqub Khan, Commerce Minister Ghulam Ishaq and others, FS had three formal sessions with Pak Foreign Secretary Naiz Naik in cordial atmosphere.

3. The first session on 11 August morning was devoted to discussing regional and international issues. FS briefed Naik on PM’s visit to USA, specifically mentioning that her remarks on Pakistan were only made when specific questions were put to her and at no stage was any campaign carried on against Pakistan. Naik appreciated the briefing. In addition the Iran-Iraq conflict, the Middle East situation, Kampuchea and Afghanistan were discussed. Niaz Naik briefed FS about the discussions held with Iranian Deputy Foreign Minister Shaikhul Islam who arrived in Islamabad on August 12, 1982. According to Naik, the Iranian leader appeared to be out of date in respect of latest developments and did not, for instance, know that Iraq had already opted out as far as the VII Nonaligned Summit was concerned.

4. In response to Naik’s queries, FS clarified to him that we were not acquiring any arms from the USA as had been suggested is some American Press reports which had been prominently covered in the Pak Press. FS apprised him of the background to the visit of French Foreign Minister Cheysson in the context of the uranium deal.

5. The other two sessions were dominated by bilateral issues. Before discussions on Joint Commission, Friendship Treaty and No-war Pact, FS raised several pending bilateral issues including missing Defence personnel, return of hijackers, our proposal for a draft on consular access, cultural exchanges, tourism protocol, anti-India references in Pakistan text books, surveillance of the Mission in Islamabad and various pending agreements on which Pakistan has been dragging its feet.

6. Pakistanis raised three additional points, all of which had been anticipated: (i) Hostile propaganda by respective radios and TVS. We told them that more important than radio broadcasts, which were heard by a few, was coverage in the domestic press which was read by many; (ii) Ground Rules: Their insistence was that till the new rules could be negotiated, the old rules should remain in force. They were told clearly and firmly that the 1960-61 Ground Rules were invalid and ceased to exist since 1971; (iii)
Jinnah House: It was mentioned to FS that President Zia had personally asked Niaz Naik to raise this subject. FS told him that details were being worked out.

7. There were separate discussions at Joint Secretary level on details.
8. Naik spoke about their No-war pact offer, referring to the high degree of expectation after the joint statement issued at the end of Agha Shahi’s visit to Delhi and reiterated that Pakistan did not wish to erode the Simla Agreement. FS began by saying that he would be less than honest if he did not refer to the doubts in India about the timing of their proposal after their agreement on acquisition of F-16 planes and their package deal with the Americans. Notwithstanding this, the Pak proposal had been examined carefully and FS drew Naik’s attention to the Progress since Simla Agreement, particularly after Pakistan’s joining the Non-aligned Movement which should reinforce their belief in bilateral settlement of disputes. FS referred to the need for confidence building measures. Commenting specifically on the Pakistani draft, FS said: (i) There were doubts among some people in India whether Pakistan was trying to blur the issue in relation to the ‘line of control’ and if the intention was to apply the No-war Pact to ‘line of control’ also or only to the international border. Interestingly, Naik in his reply did not comment on this point. (ii) There was excessive emphasis in the Pak draft on UN Charter and FS reminded the Paks that despite both India and Pakistan being signatories to the UN Charter, there had been three wars since our signing it and hence the need to resort to bilateral settlement of disputes; (iii) The Pak draft downgraded the Simla Agreement, particularly the concept of bilateralism enshrined in it.

9. Niaz Naik and Sattar expressed their known views on UN Charter and bilateralism. Pakistan’s concept of bilateralism, as elucidated by Satter, was that improvement of relations between India and Pakistan should not effect relations with third countries and repeatedly drew our attention to the fact that the first draft of the Simla agreement had referred to the exclusive settlement of disputes by peaceful means but as this had not been acceptable to Pakistan, in the final agreement the word “exclusive” was deleted. It was explained to them that their interpretation was not acceptable to us and indeed the results of pursuing bilateralism since Simla had been more fruitful than non-recourse to this principle earlier.

10. FS explained to the Pak side that a fruitful approach out of the present situation, when a number of ideas which all had their intrinsic merits had been put forward, would, as PM had put it in her letter of 25 May 1982 to Zia, be that “as a first step (I propose that) a Joint Commission should meet soon” which could pave the way for embarking on discussions on a Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation and on a No-War Pact. FS suggested that this approach would also conform to the “step by step” pattern that Pakistan had in mind and would be a concrete beginning in giving a mutually beneficial, constructive turn to Indo-Pak relations and inducing an ambient climate in which further progress would be facilitated.
11. Niaz Naik referred to the need for enlarging our draft on Joint Commission and spoke of consultative machinery so that not only the Foreign Offices but officials from other departments, including Defence, could also meet periodically. He felt the mandate of the Joint Commission as proposed by us was restrictive and said they would be submitting soon some changes. FS told him that enlarging the concept of the Joint Commission was not being excluded and we would be willing to examine any changes they suggested.

12. Friendship Treaty: At the afternoon session on 11 August FS handed over our draft on Friendship Treaty. In the final session Niaz Naik quoted from President Zia’s letter that we should not strive for the maximum but try and achieve what was attainable. While mentioning that they had not examined our draft in detail, he described it as a multi-faceted document which sought to attain the maximum. He insisted that we should give priority to discussing the No-War Pact and the Joint Commission. Naik quoted his Foreign Minister Yaqub as telling him that the No-war Pact and the Joint Commission proposals were like Ganga and Yamuna, which would meet at some point in the natural order of things. Later, when relations further improved, the Friendship Treaty could be examined. FS told Naik that while a beginning could be made by agreeing to the Joint Commission, we should give equal attention to all drafts before us. Both Niaz Naik and Sattar referred to some aspects of our Treaty draft and commented on the aspect of bilateralism and commitment to Non-alignment. They felt that the focus of discussion should remain on earlier drafts and multiplicity of drafts could lead to confusion. Towards the end, FS again emphasized the need for early conclusion of the Joint Commission and examination of both drafts simultaneously. He referred to the reasoning behind the Prime Minister’s proposal for a Friendship Treaty and how it could contribute to improving the relationship.

13. The Pakistanis appeared to be taken by surprise by our putting on the table a well considered draft of a Friendship Treaty. It would now be difficult for them to get propaganda mileage on their No-War Pact offer. As regards the Joint Commission though earlier they had described our draft as “unexceptionable and a fine draft”, they have now referred to a consultative machinery. They also did not give their detailed comments which they have reserved for the future. It could be that they are not keen on an institutionalized arrangement which could discuss improvement in bilateral relations in different fields like trade, commerce, culture, tourism etc.
14. Both sides seemed quite happy to agree to the next meeting of Foreign Secretaries taking up all matters on the table, at the next round of talks. Naik accepted with pleasure FS’s invitation to visit Delhi at a mutually convenient time.

Yours Sincerely
(K.D. Sharma)

Letter from Ambassador of India in Pakistan K. D. Sharma to Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs.
Islamabad, August 26, 1982.

No. ISL/AMB/206/82 26 August, 1982

Dear Natwar Sahib

Abdul Sattar handed over to me this morning an aide-memoire regarding certain aspects of the recent hijacking attempts on an Indian Airlines aircraft. The ‘gripes’ listed out in the aide-memoire are already known to us and it does appear that as Sattar knew I was going to hand over a protest Note to him he wanted to make the score one-all.

2. I enclose a copy of the aide-memoire given by Sattar. The point made by Sattar about “Alpha Control” Amritsar giving suggestive guidance to the pilot of the hijacked aircraft has some validity and I was going to write about it to you any way. In an emergency like the one that developed, one would wish a clear and sane line of thinking and action to obtain and the impulse for “all concerned” to come up with half-baked and distracting suggestions, however well-meant, needs to be curbed. This matter needs to be looked into and after it has been duly considered by the Government if there is anything to be conveyed to the Pak authorities, this could be done,

3. Regarding the statement made in the penultimate paragraph, “…at no point did the concerned authorities accord landing permission to the Plane”, the fact of the matter is that at 1407 hours Sattar told me on the phone that the control tower at Lahore had been instructed that in an absolutely desperate situation the plane should be permitted to land. The Pak authorities however, are keen that this word does not get out as it would encourage possible future hijacking attempts. We should perhaps have no quarrel with this view.

4. The real problem on the Pak side, however, does seem to be that in the first hijacking attempt in September last year and in the third one last week, the Government of India, in their view, has not sufficiently thanked them for what they consider as sincere, all-out cooperation. Sattar told me that he had been sent for by Foreign Secretary immediately following the termination of the hijacking attempt in last September and told that a formal note conveying Government of India’s thanks to the Government of Pakistan would be sent and possibly PM would telephone president Zia to convey her personal appreciation. Sattar said that neither of these things happened. In this context I would submit that a suitable message from PM’s Office or form FM would be useful and the small gesture would yield rich goodwill harvest.

Yours sincerely

Aide Memoire

Three incidents in less than a year of forced entry by Indian Airlines planes into Pakistan have caused mounting concern to the Government of Pakistan. The dangers inherent in such and their potential for creating misunderstanding between the two countries not to mention the losses inflicted on civil aviation in Pakistan make it necessary for the Government of Pakistan to request that the Government of India take effective measures in order to prevent recurrence of such incidents.

In September 1981, when a hijacked Indian Airlines plane landed at Lahore, a resourceful operation by a special task force succeeded in freeing the plane without any damage to the aircraft or injury to any Passenger or crew.

Twice since then planes of the Indian Airlines have similarly entered Pakistan airspace and sought permission to land at Lahore. According to the information radioed by the captains of the planes they were under dire threat from hijackers aboard the aircraft. By the grace of Allah, the action taken by the concerned Pakistan authorities succeeded on both occasions to frustrate landing by these aircraft at Lahore airport.

The actions of the Government of Pakistan have been guided throughout by a desire to discourage and deter the crime of hijacking. At the same time, the Government of Pakistan has been mindful of the safety of the planes and their passengers and crew. It is, however, concerned at the lack of full cooperation by authorities on the Indian side, particularly in the incident on 20 August 1982.

While the Indian Airlines plane was hovering over the Lahore airport, at 1340 hours PST, a transmitter in India identifying itself as Alpha Control Amritsar, radioed a message to the Captain of the plane instructing him to land at Kacha surface along the runway and ignore the consequences of defying the Pakistan authorities. This action of the Indian authorities was improper and constituted an inadmissible interference in the efforts of the Pakistan authorities to frustrate the design of the hijacker.

The Government of Pakistan also noted that at about the same time All India Radio broadcast a false news item alleging that the Government of Pakistan had granted permission for the hijacked Indian Airlines Plane to land at Lahore. The Government of India is aware that it conveyed to the Government of Pakistan, through Mr. K. Natwar Singh in New Delhi, and H.E. Mr. K.D. Sharma, the Ambassador of India in Pakistan first a request for refusal of landing permission by the Pakistan authorities and then another request that the Plane might be allowed to land because it was running out of fuel. The Government of Pakistan was mindful of these requests but at no point did the concerned authorities accord landing permission to the plane.

It may be recalled that on September 29, 1981, an IAC flight with 111 passengers on board and crew of six was hijacked to Lahore while flying from New Delhi to Srinagar. The hijackers belonged to Khalistani movement demanding acceptance of their demand which included establishment of Khalistan as an autonomous Sikh State. However, the Pakistani authorities succeeded in securing the release of the aircraft and the passengers, who were returned to India safely. But the Pakistan Government did not accept the Indian request for the return of the hijackers to India saying that the Tokyo Convention of 1963 which was in force at that time between the two countries did not provide for the extradition of the hijackers. In the present case which occurred on August 4, 1982, an IAC flight with 126 passengers on board and a crew of five, also from New Delhi to Srinagar was hijacked to Lahore, where it was refused landing permission and thus the attempted hijacking was foiled. India thanked the Pakistan Government for its timely action in foiling the hijacking. The External Affairs Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao in a letter addressed to Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan expressed his Government’s sincere appreciation for the willing cooperation extended by the Government of Pakistan in helping to foil the attempt at hijacking. Mr. Rao also conveyed his thanks to the Lahore Airport authorities, security personnel and others concerned who acted promptly and efficiently in assisting officials of the Indian Embassy to avert what might have become an extremely critical situation.
The Government of Pakistan takes a serious view of the improper and inadmissible instructions given by the Indian authorities to the captain of the plane while it was in Pakistan airspace, to defy the orders of the Government of Pakistan. Similarly it takes exception to the false news broadcast by All India Radio. The Government of Pakistan expects that the Government of India will take immediate corrective action against responsible for these highly objectionable action.

I understand from a extremely reliable source that YAQUB KHAN the Pakistan Foreign Minister arrived at Beijing on 2nd September accompanied by an official, probably from the Pakistan Foreign Ministry.

YAQUB KHAN’S visit has been arranged very hastily and probably reflects a shared Sino-Pak desire for consultations following our protests against the 22nd August Protocol on the opening of the Khunjerab Pass. It may also be related to preparations for President ZIA’s visit to China in October.

YAQUB KHAN’S presence here has so far not been disclosed.

Separately we have learnt reliably that Dr. QURESHE described as Head of the Pak Atomic Energy Establishment has extended his visit to China and is still around. He arrived here about three weeks ago on an unpublicized trip.

Record of the meeting between External Affairs Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao and Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan.

Permanent Mission of India
New York

The Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan called on F. M. at his suite at UN Plaza Hotel on September 30, 1982. the meeting had been requested by the Pakistanis. It lasted only 20 minuets and could best be described as a courtesy call.
Yaqub Khan expressed satisfaction that the VII Summit would be taking place in a neighbouring country. The fact that Delhi was to be the venue would give impetus to strengthening of amity and cooperation among the South Asian countries. Pakistan had supported the proposal to have the Summit in India. FM thanked Yaqub Khan and said that we could not have expected the Pakistanis to do otherwise. He informed him that the Summit was likely to be held from March 7 – 11 and that the meeting of senior officials would begin on 1st March. We would only get about two to three months to prepare for the Summit, after the completion of ASIAD. (Asian Games)

There was a brief discussion on the situation in the Middle East. Yaqub Khan characterized the Fez Declaration as a great achievement, particularly after the apprehensions expressed that the Lebanese crisis would lead to further rigidity in the Arab Stand. Public opinion in the US had also been outraged by the Beirut massacres. If the US Govt. could somehow appear to be distancing itself from Israel, chances of a settlement would improve. However, no body could expect the US attitude to be transformed overnight. There were some reassuring elements in the Reagan Plan. An attempt should now be made to ‘pull’ the Reagan Plan in the direction of the consensus achieved at Fez. The continuance in office of Begin and Sharon was an obvious obstacle. However it would be interesting to watch internal developments in Israel particularly in the light of the building opposition to the Begin regime.

Yaqub Khan briefly referred to Afghanistan. He said that he was due to meet Gromyko the following day and Afghanistan was likely to be discussed. FM asked whether there had been any forward movement in Geneva. The Pakistani FM characterized the Geneva talks as useful, adding that he was hopeful of further progress. Under Secretary General Cordovez was expected to visit the areas again in November. FM expressed satisfaction that Geneva had been a move in the right direction. He underscored the need for an early settlement.

Yaqub Khan also mentioned that he would be going to Washington from New York.

The rest of the time was spent in casual conversation about food grain production in Pakistan, floods in India etc. The meeting concluded with usual pleasantries.

* Non-aligned Conference
1012. Joint Press Statement issued on the visit of Pakistan President General Zia-ul-Haq.

New Delhi, November 1, 1982.

His Excellency the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India, assisted by their respective Foreign Ministers met at Rashtrapati Bhavan this morning. The talks were held in an atmosphere of cordiality*. Bilateral matters were discussed. Regional and global issues were also reviewed.

The two leaders agreed to the establishment of an India-Pakistan Joint Commission. Accordingly, they issued instructions for the rapid conclusion of modalities and formalities in this regard. In pursuance of this decision, officials of the two countries will meet in New Delhi in December 1982. They will also consider the Pakistan draft of a Non-Aggression Pact and the Indian draft of a Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation.

The two leaders looked forward to continuing their discussions at the time of the Non-Aligned Summit meeting in New Delhi in March 1983.

* Gen Zia-ul-Haq later told Pakistani newsman accompanying him on the tour of ASEAN countries aboard his plane on way to Bangkok that he had found Mrs. Gandhi warm and cordial in attitude and that the atmosphere of the talks was excellent. He had told Mrs. Gandhi that a study of the Pakistan draft on non-aggression pact and the Indian proposal of a treaty of friendship showed that they were almost identical, except for a few clauses in the Indian text on the question of economic ties. He said he had informed Mrs. Gandhi that if India was not too happy with the expression of no-war pact, they could call it by any other name. However, the idea was to remove such hurdles as had been responsible for wars and bitterness between the two countries. He had also extended an invitation to the President of India and Mrs. Gandhi to come over to Pakistan. He had also invited Mrs. Gandhi’s son, Mr. Rajiv, to visit Pakistan. They had also discussed the problems of South-East Asia and regional cooperation and reviewed international issues, including Afghanistan.

He had also told the Indian Press after the talks that it was a great pleasure to have held a meeting with Mrs. Gandhi and that, he hoped the next round of talks would be better. The meeting would pave the way for a better understanding between the two countries. Pointing out that this was his second meeting with Mrs. Gandhi the first being at Salisbury, he said “I have found her open-hearted and cordial... It was a pleasure to have such a cordial meeting with her today”. Gen Zia also said that he had met people of different classes after his meetings with President Zail Singh and Mrs. Gandhi and noted that he had found a desire for friendship between India and Pakistan on their faces. Replying to questions Gen. Zia said he had briefed Mrs. Gandhi on regional co-operation and also informed her about his visit to China. He had not, however raised the Kashmir issue because “we chose to talk on better prospects first”. Mrs. Gandhi had also said that on certain issues, the position of the 1014. Statement by the Minister of External Affairs P.V. Narasimha Rao in the Rajya Sabha regarding the visit of General Zia-ul-Haq, President of Pakistan.

New Delhi, November 4, 1982.

His Excellency General Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq, President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, spent nearly four hours in Delhi on November 1, 1982 en route to Indonesia. He was accompanied by four Ministers – Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Mr. Ghulam Ishaq Khan, Minister of Finance and Commerce; Mr. Mohyuddin Baluch, Minister of Communications; Lt. General Saeed Qadir, Minister for Production, Railways and National Logistic Board; Lt. General K.M. Arif, Chief of Staff to the President; Mr. Niaz Naik, Foreign Secretary and other officials.

2. During his brief halt in Delhi, President Zia-ul-Haq called on our President. He had an hour’s meetings with the Prime Minister Shrimati Indira Gandhi at which the Foreign Ministers of the two countries were also present. Simultaneously, my colleague the Minister of State, Shri A.A. Rahim, led a team of officials for talks with Mr. Ghulam Ishaq Khan, his ministerial and official colleagues.

3. I am placing on the table of the House the joint press statement issued on the conclusion of the visit. It mentions that both the counties agreed to the establishment of an India-Pakistan Joint Commission. Accordingly the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister have issued instructions for the early conclusion of modalities and formalities in this regard. In pursuance of this decision, officials of the two countries will meet in New Delhi from December 22 to 24. They will also consider our draft of a Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation and Pakistan’s draft of a Non-aggression Pact.

The establishment of Joint Commission would give an impetus and content to the bilateral relations between the two countries. As the House is aware, Prime Minister had made this suggestion when the former Pakistan Foreign Minister called on her on January 31 this year.

4. In spite of the informal nature and short duration of the visit, it was natural that such a visit should have evoked interest in both countries. Discussions between the Prime Minister and General Zia were held in a cordial atmosphere. In addition to bilateral matters, regional and global matters were also briefly reviewed. As the House is aware, General Zia will again be coming here in March 1983 for the Non-aligned Summit, when these discussions will be continued. On November 2, a Protocol on Consular Access was signed in New Delhi between the two governments. A copy of the Protocol is placed on the Table of the House.

5. The brief transit visit of the President of Pakistan was characterized by warmth and cordiality. It is our sincere desire, which Parliament and the people of India share, to strengthen good neighbourly relations with Pakistan in the interest of both countries.

SECRET

Minutes of the meeting of Secretary (PC) Ministry of External Affairs Natwar Singh with Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan.

Islamabad, January 18, 1983.

Embassy of India

Islamabad

Following were present:

INDIAN SIDE

K. Natwar Singh, Secretary (PC)
Shri K.D. Sharma, Ambassador of India
Shri S.K. Lambah, Joint Secretary (Pak-Iraf)
Shri S Dubey, Joint Secretary (AD)

PAKISTANI SIDE

Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, Foreign Minister
Mr Niaz Naik, Foreign Secretary
Mr Shahriyar Khan, Additional Secretary (UN)
Mr Qazi Humayun, Director (India)

Following were the main point mentioned during the discussions:

Sahabzada Yaqub Khan considered the agreement reached at the last meeting of the Foreign Secretaries in December and the conclusion of a Joint Commission as a historical event and a fresh chapter.

Secretary (PC) expressed his gratitude for the warm welcome. He said that good neighbourly relations were a two way exercise and indeed the temperature of Indo-Pak relations was good. He conveyed the regards of the Prime Minister and discussed the future of Indo-Pak relations as no longer lying in the past.

He said the discussion could possibly focus on the Non-aligned Summit, agenda items on its agenda, logistics and bilateral matters. In addition, the composition of the proposed sub-commissions could be decided upon and list of prisoners exchanged. Replying Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said, ”As regards the sub-commission, we accept your proposal and you may take it as agreed from our side.”

Secretary (PC) described this as a very good and a positive decision. He said that both sides could also discuss Pakistan’s No War Pact offer and the Friendship Treaty offered by India.
Sahabzada Yaqub Khan conveyed Pak support for efforts to make the Summit a success. He said that at the time the venue was shifted to Delhi, he had told the Iraqi Foreign Minister Hammadi that New Delhi was a suitable venue.

He referred to Nehru, Tito and Nasser as the leading lights of the Non-aligned Movement and said that there was no doubt that the spirit of the Non-aligned Movement would prevail.

He said that there were issues on which the views of India and Pakistan—national or Non-aligned—were identical. There are some others on which there could be differences of nuances.

He noted that India will not mix up its national position with that as the Chairman of the NAM Summit.

He then mentioned briefly:

Kampuchea: Although there may be differences in perceptions a formula should be found which is satisfactory and he said that the Pakistan Delegation during the discussions will act positively.

Afghanistan: One should stick as closely as possible to the formula which was agreed upon at the Non-aligned Foreign Ministers Conference in Delhi in February 1981 and which was later accepted in Havana in June 1982. There need not be any anxiety on this account.

Middle East: Views were identical

Iran-Iraq: Pakistan was deeply interested because General Zia in his individual capacity and Pakistan as member of the OIC Contact Group on Iran-Iraq had been playing an active role.

Latin America: Western Sahara, Namibia and Chad: He foresaw no difficulties.

Bilateral relations were improving gradually and steadily. Exchange of views good. Secretary (PC) at this stage referred to the surveillance on the Indian Mission in Islamabad.

Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said that this could be discussed in greater detail at General Arif’s dinner later in the evening. He would like to offer helpful hand. He then said that hostility and mistrust of the last 36 years cannot be changed overnight. He referred to the need for restraint on both sides and hoped that the different agencies of the Governments would modify their positions.

Bureaucracies were conservative and hence it took time to sort out matters. In a way this was good because revolutionary bureaucracies create problems.
He said that the results will not be immediate or spectacular but knowing the views of ‘our principals’ the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India he hoped that all problems would be solved.

He said that military and authoritarian regimes are at time more receptive to the views of the people. They keep their antennas open and he was gratified that the people of India and Pakistan desired peace. Ambassador K.D. Sharma remarked that US-USSR relations in spite of confrontations have not had these kind of problems.

Sahabzada Yaqub Khan replied that they behave in a more mature manner. Yaqub Khan then referred to the exchange of list of prisoners which would be taking place during the forthcoming talks.

Pak-US Relations: Yaqub Khan then dwelt on Pak-USA relations. He said that the connections between USA and Pakistan in the Dulles, Cento era had produced an impact on Pakistan, India, US and world affairs. This relationship later became virtually non-existent. The relationship is now being revived. But this relationship is qualitatively different from that of 1953. It required an initial effort. The revival of this relationship had created certain feelings even in Pakistan and USA. Hence, it was understandable that there should be suspicion about it in India. He described the new Pak-US discussions as a modest relationship. In the new set of circumstances the two images coincide and even cause anxiety.

Sahabzaa Yaqub Khan then told Secretary (PC) that Pakistan should be judged by what they do and not necessarily by what they say. Pakistan had purchased F-16 planes with 14% interest as she would not like to be dragged into any alliance. There were some hostile minds which even referred to India as being a satellite of USSR, a surrogate. These are misconceptions with which he does not agree but certain sections did unnecessarily refer to them.

Secretary (PC) thanked Shabzada Yaqub Khan, the distinguished soldier and distinguished diplomat for his philosophical, clear and precise expression of views. He said there were refreshingly new and heart warming and he was glad to hear this from a person in such a high position not in his capacity as the Foreign Minister of Pakistan but also from the point of view of intellect.

Sahabzada Yaqub Khan repeated that Pakistan should be judged by its actions recently in international forums. He said he would not specify the period but referred to recent months (reference obviously being to the period since he has been Foreign Minister of Pakistan).

Joint Secretary (Pak-Iraf)
1016. Statement issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs at the end of two day Visit of Secretary Ministry of External Affairs to Islamabad.

Islamabad, January 19, 1983.

H.E. K Natwar Singh, Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India and Secretary-General designate of the seventh non-aligned summit being held in New Delhi in March 1983 completed two days of talks in Islamabad today. Yesterday, he was received by the President. Earlier in the morning he had called on the Foreign Minister Sahibzada Yaqub Khan. Foreign Secretary Niza A. Naik gave a lunch in his honour on 18 January in the Foreign Office which was attended, among others, by Secretary Interior and Secretary Culture and Tourism. COS to the President hosted a dinner for Mr. Natwar Singh the same evening. Mr. Natwar Singh would be visiting Karachi for one day before returning to New Delhi on 20 January, 1983.

Mr. Natwar Singh held three rounds of the talks with the Foreign Secretary during the course of which matters relating to the forthcoming non-aligned summit, bilateral issues and other subjects of mutual interest were discussed. During his call on the President Mr. Natwar Singh conveyed a message of good wishes from Prime Minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi. The President heartily reciprocated these sentiments and reiterated his Government’s determination to persevere in its efforts to strengthen friendly relations between the two neighbourly countries. The President assured Mr. Natwar Singh the Government of Pakistan’s full co-operation in ensuring the success of the non-aligned summit. The Non-aligned Movement would be further strengthened so as to play its rightful role in promoting peace and security in the world and making a much-needed contribution of a new international economic order based on justice for all.

The discussions were held in a cordial and friendly atmosphere and it was agreed that the two countries would work together to ensure the success of the summit. It was agreed that the political and economic problems being faced by non-aligned world need to be considered in depth.

In reviewing bilateral matters, the two side exchanged further lists of prisoners and discussed modalities and procedures to ensure their expeditious identification, determination of their national status and their timely release on completion of their terms of imprisonment. The exchange of information in this respect is to be completed by 1 March 1993.

The Pakistan side has offered to permit Indian pilgrims to visit Katas Raj Shrine in district Jhelum on an annual basis.
In their meeting in New Delhi in December 1982 the two Foreign Secretaries had initialed an agreement for the establishment of a Joint Commission to promote co-operation in agreed areas during Mr. Naik's Visit to India last month. During the current visit, it was agreed in principle to establish three sub-commissions each covering a basket of subjects. The first meeting of the joint Commission will follow the signing of the Joint Commission agreement which is scheduled to take place in early March at the time of the non-aligned summit.

The First meeting of the Joint Commission would take place in Islamabad. The Foreign Minister of Pakistan has extended a cordial invitation to the Minister of External Affairs of India, Mr. Narasimha Rao. The dates of the visit would be fixed through diplomatic channels.

There was a further general exchange of views on the Pakistan draft of a non-aggression pact and the Indian draft of a treaty of peace, friendship and co-operation. It was recognized that the two proposals contained a number of common elements. It was further agreed to continue these discussions with a view to narrowing down differences so as to facilitate work for the drafting of a mutually acceptable text.

1017. Press Briefing by Secretary Ministry of External Affairs K. Natwar Singh.

Islamabad, January 19, 1983.

The Indian External Affairs Secretary, Mr. Natwar Singh, said at Islamabad that there were two major areas of differences in the respect of Pakistan's proposals for non aggression pact and India's offer of a treaty of peace, friendship and co-operation, which had not yet been overcome.

These related to the question of foreign military bases and interpretation of bilateralism as a means of settling disputes, he told a Press conference at the Islamabad Airport before his departure for Karachi on way back home.

He was asked to identify differences which stood in the way of the conclusion of the two proposed treaties separately or the fusion of the two into one by incorporating common points.

He said India and Pakistan would continue discussions on the two proposals, but these discussions would have to wait the conclusion of the seventh NAM summit.
Conceding that settling differences over the two proposals was a long drawn process, he said: “But we don’t want it to drag on endlessly.”

Common Approach on Issue

Mr. Natwar Singh said besides discussing the two proposals in his talks in Islamabad, he was also briefed by the Pakistan side on President Zia-ul-Haq’s recent visits abroad.

Mr. Natwar Singh said his country and Pakistan held similar views on most subjects expected to form the agenda of the seventh non-aligned summit to be held in New Delhi in March.

Asked to identify the subjects on which the two sides had similar views, Mr. Natwar Singh mentioned among others, Namibia, the Middle East, Lebanon, Israel, South Africa, disarmament and the new international economic order.

If the delegations of India and Pakistan co-operated and worked together, which he hoped they would, their joint contribution would have a good influence on the outcome of the summit.

He said he was greatly encouraged by what the President, the Foreign Minister and the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan told him about the summit. They assured him that Pakistan would work to ensure the success of the summit.

Mr. Natwar Singh said though India and Pakistan had different approaches on the substantive aspect of the Kampuchean question, they agreed to keep the Kampuchean seat vacant under the formula adopted at the Havana Summit. Only the summit could alter this formula.

On Afghanistan, he said he had extensive and useful discussions with the Pakistan Foreign Secretary who explained to him the Pakistani stand on the question. The Pakistani side told him that Pakistan would keep India informed about the discussions, the United Nations Secretary-General’s representative on Afghanistan, Mr. Diego Cordeovez, would have in Islamabad later this month.

Mr. Natwar Singh said it was, however, India’s expectation and hope that the scenario of United Nations General Assembly was not repeated in the summit (an obvious reference to the debate on Afghanistan in the world body in November last). “If we reproduce what happened in UNGA then we can’t go forward (on the Afghanistan question)”.

It would be wise (for the summit) to stick to the formulations (declaration) agreed upon on Afghanistan in the conference of Non-aligned Foreign Ministers held in New Delhi in 1981.
India, Mr. Natwar Singh said, wanted that the hands of United Nations Secretary-General should be strengthened in his effort to find a political solution. India stood for broadest possible consensus on Afghanistan which, among other things, should result in restoration of the non-aligned status of that country and took care of the best interests of the people of Afghanistan. Mere condemnation of countries would not help in finding a political solution.

Mr. Natwar Singh said it was very clear that the Non-Aligned movement was interested in helping a process through which a political solution was achieved in the best interests of the people of Afghanistan.

29 January, 1983

Her Excellency
Mrs. Indira Gandhi,
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi,

Madam Prime Minister,

I thank your Excellency for your kind letter of November 17. It gives me great pleasure to accept the invitation extended to me to attend the forthcoming Non-aligned Summit which is scheduled to be held in New Delhi from March 7 to 11, 1983.

We are most appreciative of the offer made by the Government of India to host the VII Non-aligned Summit Conference at such short notice and may I assure you of Pakistan's full cooperation in making the Summit a success in the interest of the Non-aligned Movement and all its member States.

In view of the difficult international situation faced by the Non-aligned countries, as evidenced by the all too frequent violation of the fundamentals of inter-state conduct, it is essential for the Non-aligned Movement to renew its resolve to uphold the principles of peaceful co-existence, non-aggression, non-intervention and the non-use of force in international relations. Pakistan remains fully committed to the principles and purposes of the Non-aligned Movement and will continue to act with resolve towards the attainment of its aims and objectives.

Secretary Natwar Singh must by now have informed you of the useful talks that took place during his recent visit to Pakistan. In light of these discussions, I am confident that our two delegations would be able to work closely with each other on a number of important issues of mutual concern during the forthcoming Summit in furthering the cause of the Non-aligned world.

I keenly look forward to meeting you at the Summit and continuing our exchange of views on matters of common interest which we had initiated on so positive a note during my brief stopover in New Delhi on November 1 last year.

With profound regards,

Yours sincerely,

General M. Zia-ul-Haq

On Indo-Pak Ties & Kashmir

Mr. Chairman, since the cooperation of the non-aligned members is a movement and movement takes impetus from its members and members individually and collectively have an obligation, I feel it necessary that I should lay down Pakistan’s obligation and it is for this reason before this distinguished gathering I would also like to refer to the improvement in the climate of relations between Pakistan and India. We, in Pakistan are profoundly gratified that the development of our bilateral ties, which is vital to the stability of our region, has got off to an auspicious start following my meeting with Madam Gandhi last November. I Reacting to Pakistan President Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq’s reference to Jammu and Kashmir at the non-aligned summit, an Indian delegation spokesman said at New Delhi on March 9 that as far as India was concerned, the question was one of the “return of Kashmir territory under Pakistan’s occupation”. The spokesman told newsman that Gen Zia had every right to state his point of view. India was committed to discuss the matter within the framework of the Simla Agreement which “precludes raising of bilateral matters in international forums,” he added.

On the other hand Pakistan’s Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, however rebutted India’s taking exception to the mention of the problem of Jammu and Kashmir by Gen Zia. When his attention was drawn to the Indian reaction by newsmen, Mr. Yaqub Khan said what Gen Zia had said was a fact. No one should take exception to the mentioning of a fact. While mentioning the Kashmir issue, Pakistan had not made any departure from its known stand. The mentioning of the problem should be read in the context in which it was stated, he said. It was “our cardinal desire to promote relations with India on good-neighbourly and solid basis,” he added. There was nothing wrong in mentioning a thing which “we believe is a fact.” Mr. Yaqub said there could be no cause of either surprise or concern for India because the mentioning of the Kashmir problem by Gen Zia was accompanied by a sincere gesture of friendship and goodwill. To take any other view of this mentioning of the Kashmir problem would be rather unwarranted, he said.

On Nuclear Threat

The most serious and all pervasive threat to the security of the world stems from the awesome nuclear arsenals held by some States. The immediate task before the international community, as also the Non-Aligned Movement, is to initiate measures to contain, and ultimately eliminate, the threat of nuclear annihilation. We must seek to persuade the nuclear powers to divert the vast and invaluable resources, presently being squandered in the acquisition of yet more sophisticated and destructive weapon systems, towards the economic development and prosperity of their own peoples and, indeed, of the rest of mankind. The choices are stark and it must be our endeavour to ensure that the world chooses peace over war, development over destruction, and accommodation over confrontation.
We believe that the message of this summit to the rest of the world must be that non aligned countries will strive for cooperation rather than conflict that we expect our partners in the industrialised world to share in equal measure the responsibility for ensuring a dignified life, free from want, deprivation and exploitation for the whole of mankind.

My country pledges itself to the fundamental principles of non-alignment and reaffirms its determination to the members of this conference and to the rest of the international community, to promote the objectives of peace, amity and goodwill which alone can provide the environment conducive to the orderly development of all nations of the world.

1020. Record of the Call by Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq on Prime Minister Mrs. Gandhi.

New Delhi, March 10, 1983.

Prime Minister's Office

Call on PM by President Zia-ul-Haq of Pakistan. (9 a.m. on 10th March at Vigyan Bhavan)

RECORD OF DISCUSSIONS

President Zia complimented PM on the very successful conduct of the Conference and paid a rich tribute to Indian role both at the Conference and in the Non-aligned Movement. PM thanked the President for his kind sentiments and said that the real success of the Conference will have to be judged by its results. She hoped that something positive will come out of the conference. President Zia thanked PM for arranging a trip to Agra for his family.

2. President Zia expressed his hope that, with the signing of the Joint Commission as desired by PM, we will now move on to the next stage in Indo-Pak relations. PM said that the doors (of bilateral relations) have to be opened one-by-one. President Zia said that the he wished to raise two minor points which he might as well raise with PM, even though they could be taken care of in the Joint Commission. These points relate to the improvement in telecommunications between the two countries and the reduction in postal rates. The postal rates were reduced by 15% last year, but they are still high. Pakistan is prepared to reduce them further but Secy (PC) pointed out that we ourselves had proposed this reduction earlier.

3. The two leaders then proceeded to Committee Room ‘B’ to witness the signing of the Joint Commission Agreement by the two Foreign Ministers.

1021. Extract from speech of External Affairs Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao in the Lok Sabha while discussing the Demand for Grants of the Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, March 24, 1983.

Then sir, the question of neighbours. Questions have been asked about our relations with Pakistan. I would like to submit to the House that the friendship treaty which we have proposed and the no-war pact which they have proposed are both under consideration.

Dr. Subramaniam Swamy: For how long?

Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao: As long as they are not sorted out.

The Joint Commission has been agreed to and in spite of the fact that all the Heads including our Prime Minister were breathlessly busy during the Summit... (Interruption).

Mr. Speaker: You would not mind that he is impetuous because he is still young.

Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao: I do not mind.

Shri Satyasadhan Chakraborty: What was the reaction of Pakistan to our suggestion that Pakistan should not offer any of its occupied territory for military basis to foreign powers? What was the reaction of Pakistan?

Dr. Subramaniam Swamy: Under negotiations?
Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao: I would like to inform Prof. Chakraborty that when we have given them a draft for a friendship treaty, naturally that would contain elements which he is referring to and when I say that it is still on the table under discussion.

Dr. Subramanian Swamy: Under negotiations.

Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao: Therefore it is still under discussion. If we had not had these differences in perception there would not have been any need to continue the discussion still. It so happens that both, in their no-war pact and in our friendship treaty, there are certain common elements but there are certain elements on which agreement could not be arrived at so far. Therefore, they are under discussion. The Joint Commission has been established. We are going to have the first meeting of the Joint Commission by mutual convenience at the earliest possible time.

Then, a question was raised about cultural and trade relations. I would like to inform the hon. Member who raised this question that we on our part are prepared for an enlargement of trade relations, are prepared for an enlargement of cultural relations but it so happens that from the Pakistan side there has been reluctance for what they may consider good reasons, we will not go into that since they are a sovereign country but they have so far not shown the readiness to expand trade relations except on a government-to-government basis. Recently they have exempted a few items but even on those items no trade has really been expanded or enlarged. So, that seems to be the position but I hope that with the Joint Commission having taken off it should be possible, it would be possible, to go afresh into these questions. Wherever there is a hitch, we could look into that and see what can be done. The idea of having a Joint Commission was that wherever progress is not up to the mark, not satisfactory, we should at once pay some special attentions to those areas and see that relations between the two countries are developed as both the countries want to develop them. Of course, the question of induction of arms is there. That is coming in the way of rapid normalisation, improvement of relations; that creates tension; that creates suspicion. A mini-arms race has started in the sub-continent. All these fall-outs are there. We cannot wish them away. We take note of them. We tell them again and again that this is unnecessary, they need not embark on this, but they seem to have ideas evidently and therefore, we will have to live with this dialogue with them and we also have to take into account that in our neighbourhood all this escalations of tension as a result of sophisticated arms is taking place and we have to ask ourselves as to what we should do to meet the situations This position will continue.

Dr. Subramainam Swamy: Much more reasonable, this time.

Islamabad, April 14, 1983.

Islamic Republic of Pakistan
Islamabad

29 Jamadi-us Sani 1403 AH 14 April 1983

Her Excellency
Madam Indira Gandhi,
Prime Minister of India
New Delhi

Dear Madam Prime Minister,

I should like to convey to Your Excellency my profound gratitude and appreciation for the cordial welcome and generous hospitality extended by you and the people of India to myself and the members of my delegation during our memorable stay in the beautiful city of New Delhi.

I should also like to offer to Your Excellency my personal congratulations for the great success of the largest ever summit Conference of the Non aligned Movement which it was India's privilege to host, a fact which was all the more remarkable considering the limited time available for completing the mammoth physical arrangements that it entailed. May I acknowledge that the momentous impact of the Summit was as much a result of the meticulous preparations undertaken by the Government of India as it was a tribute to yours personal qualities of leadership which played such a pivotal part in the triumph of our collective endeavours.

Since its inception over two decades ago, the Non aligned Movement has made remarkable progress in the realization of its objectives and now constitutes one of the most influential forums in the world. Following the New Delhi Conference, the Non-aligned countries can take due pride in the fact that the Movement has been strengthened and now constitutes a more potent force for peace than ever before. Doubts and fears regarding the fundamental unity of the Movement have been set at rest. The credit for successfully steering the course of the Conference away from sterile debate and into constructive channels, which hold greater promise for the future, is due in large measure to Your Excellency's personal efforts.

It was a particular pleasure to meet Your Excellency again and to witness the signing of the agreement to establish the Pakistan - India Joint Ministerial Commission, which in my view, is an event of historic import and far-reaching significance. I am confident that the formation of the Commission, headed by our respective Foreign Ministers, will provide the impetus for strengthening our bilateral relations and exploring the potential for enhancing our cooperative ties in a number of spheres. It will also foster greater confidence and trust between our two countries and, in the process, promote the peace and stability of our region to the mutual benefit of our two peoples.

I have no doubt that as Chairman of the Non-aligned Movement, Your Excellency's wise and dynamic direction would create yet greater cohesion and unity in the Movement enlarge cooperation amongst its member states and enhance their capability to rise to the challenges faced by them and the Non-aligned Movement itself.

May I assure, Your Excellency of Pakistan's unstinted support and cooperation in furthering the cause of our Movement and freeing our people from economic and political dominance, leading to a new world order which would fulfill the fundamental needs and, indeed, reflect the highest ideals of the human race.

With profound regards,

Yours sincerely

1023. Media briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office on the Indian allegation of Pakistan interfering in the internal affairs of India.

Islamabad, May 26, 1983.

Strongly reacting to attempts being made in India to falsely implicate Pakistan in India’s internal problems, Pakistan scrupulously adhered to the principle of non-interference in internal affairs in its relations with India and also with all other States.

The spokesman said in a statement that “not only are the allegations being made against Pakistan absolutely baseless, they are also regrettable” as they tended to vitiate the atmosphere of Pakistan-India relations on the eve of first meeting of the Joint Commission, beginning in Islamabad on June-1.

The spokesman noted that apart from “irresponsible accusations” in some Indian newspapers, a member of Indian Parliament was also reported to have said that Pakistani officials and leaders of a ‘Jatha’ of Sikh pilgrims had recently held “closed door” meetings. The delegation of Sikh pilgrims who visited Pakistan in April last were accompanied, as usual, by Indian officials and sought meetings with Pakistani leaders to express thanks for facilities extended to them and to discuss matters relating to the maintenance of their shrines, he said.

“The Indian Ambassador or another official is invariably present during these meetings”, he added.

2. There was no fixed agenda for the meeting. The Foreign Ministers took up bilateral, multilateral and regional matters.

A: Bilateral

(1) No War Pact.

3. Pakistan Foreign Minister reiterated the Pak offer of the No War Pact. He said that this was made in all sincerity to create a better mutual understanding between the two countries. There were some differences of interpretation of the Simla Agreement. But these matters could be resolved by merging together the mutually acceptable elements of the Pak offer of No War Pact and the Indian offer of the Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation. He said that the Joint Commission, which was an element of the Treaty, had already begun its operation. But its progress would pick up with a climate of better mutual understanding and trust. Pak Foreign Minister wanted guidelines to be given to the senior officials so that they could expedite their work. He suggested the third week of August 1983 as the possible period for these talk on the two drafts.

4. F.M. clarified that the Joint Commission was not conceived in isolation but was a part of an overall political process. The two countries were involved in the multi-faceted dialogue and the progress of the discussions depended not on the lack of the intent but on various factors. F.M. said that what was important was that the process was continuing. A mutually convenient date for the meeting on the two drafts could be decided later. Secretary (PC) suggested that dates could be determined during the SARC meeting of the Foreign Secretaries of seven South Asian countries or before if possible.

(2) Visits of Senior Officials

5. Pak Foreign Minister wanted the asymmetry in the exchange of senior official to be rectified. He said that there were many outstanding invitations to Indian Officials. Secretary (PC) stated that the Indian Minister of Information & Broadcasting and Secretary (I&B) would be visiting Pakistan.

(3) Missing Defence Personnel

6. F.M. told the Pak Foreign Minister that despite repeated promises, the Pakistan had not been able to trace any of the missing Indian Defence personnel. He said that the Indian parents were very keen to follow up on the various bits of information which they possessed. They had, therefore, requested to be allowed to go and identify their sons who might have remained under mistaken identities so far. F.M. wanted this proposition to be considered on its merits since it would at least settle the matter definitively for the parents.

7. Mr. Abdul Sattar, Additional Secretary, suggested that perhaps the parents could visit Pakistani jails with a representative of the Indian Embassy, as visits by the Embassy representatives were already envisaged for civilian prisoners under the Consular Protocol. The Pak Foreign Minister conveyed his understanding of the anxiety expressed by F.M. He suggested that this matter could be discussed further with Gen. Arif and that Mr. Sattar could take it up with the Interior Secretary as well.

(4) Hijackers of IAC Plane

8. F.M. pointed out that promises made by Pakistan for the return and later for their speedy trial had remained unfulfilled. The Pak Foreign Minister said that the trial was all set to commence. It was delayed so as not to vitiate the atmosphere at the time of the Joint Commission meeting. F.M. rebutted this by saying that it could really have been started earlier for atmospherics. Mr. Abdul Sattar mentioned the likely inflammatory effect of the possible statements by the hijackers during the trial on the current situation in the Indian Punjab. F.M. told him that this could not be avoided and he reminded the Pakistan side that in fact India had originally proposed the return of the hijackers to India.

(5) Impact of Media Coverage

9. The Pak Foreign Minister pointed out that in recent days the atmosphere had become less than conducive. Pakistan press had written about several of these matters and the Indian Ambassador had protested against some of the press coverage. He said that the Pakistan Government had tried, in a spirit of understanding, to exercise restraint on the Pak Press, but it did not always succeed. He assured F.M. that the Pakistan Government would continue its efforts.

(6) Jinnah House

10. The Pak Foreign Minister said that Pakistan has repeatedly mooted this point and President Zia had also taken it up with P.M. He said that Pakistan has appointed a Consul General in Mumbai and thereafter wanted an early understanding from the Government of India on the lease of the Jinnah House. He assured F.M. of the Pak intention not to use the Jinnah House as a centre of any undesirable activities.

11. F.M. replied that we would revert to this question later.

(7) Communications between India and Pakistan

12. F.M. referred to the difficulties in getting connections through between Islamabad and New Delhi. The Pak Foreign Minister agreed with him completely and said that President Zia had also talked about it. Ambassador Piracha suggested that out of the existing 12 open channels, five were still unutilised and, therefore, two of these channels could be easily utilised for 24 hour telephone links between the two Foreign Offices and their respective Embassies without any additional cost to either Government.

B. Multilateral

(1) Afghanistan

13. The Pak Foreign Minister briefed F.M. on the present stage of the Geneva Talks and on his recent visits to various capitals.

14. As regards the indirect Geneva talks, the Pak Foreign Minister said that while there has been substantial progress towards achieving a comprehensive settlement, there were still several points on which detailed discussions had not yet taken place. Some of these points related to the termination date for the withdrawal process of the Soviet troops, consultations for the return of the refugees and the nature and scope of the international guarantees. He said that there was simultaneity in the commencement of the withdrawal of Soviet troops and the provision of guarantees by Pakistan of non-interference and non-intervention in its future conduct. He clarified that these guarantees did not mean a Pakistani admission in interference in the past in Afghanistan and did not envisage that Pakistan would somehow manipulate or stifle the internal resistance of the Afghans against an unpopular Government. Another aspect of the Geneva Talks was that some countries felt that whatever agreements might be arrived at in Geneva might still leave room for their non-implementation in actual practice.

15. As regards the consultations in various countries, the Pak Foreign Minister said that the international guarantors had not yet been specified, though Afghanistan and the Soviet Union had spoken of the United States as a possible guarantor. In Beijing, he found support for the Pakistan approach at the negotiations. He said that China has also expressed itself publicly on this question at the U.N. General Assembly session. In London, he removed doubts and misgivings that arose from the briefing given by Diego Cordovez. He put the record straight on the Pak position. He explained to the British that meaningful progress was made in the negotiations. He also told them that a political settlement was necessary since the Soviets could not be pushed out of Afghanistan by Pakistan or by anyone else, and therefore one had to take them at their word and try for a comprehensive settlement. In Paris, he talked to Cheyson. He did not elaborate, except saying that both U.K. and France had taken active interest in the question of Afghan refugees. In the U.S.A., he had full-scale discussions with Schultz and Bush. The United States also supported the process of negotiations. He said that it was wrong to consider that the U.S. did not want the Soviets to get off the hook. In fact, the U.S. Administration wanted to reduce tensions in the region and work for peace and stability.

16. Pak Foreign Minister told F.M. that he had given virtually the same kind of briefing in all places as given to us. More details were given in China and the United States as they were potential guarantors. On a question from Secretary (PC), Pak Foreign Minister replied that a written document did exist and many of its parts had been filled up and perhaps Diego Cordovez was thinking about this document when he talked of 95 percent progress. The Pak Foreign Minister also agreed with Secretary (PC) that the Iran factor remained another problem.

(2) Implementation of NAM Summit decisions

17. F.M. explained the various initiatives taken by India to implement the decisions of the NAM Summit. In this context, he explained in details the progress made on the following three points:
(a) Transmission of the New Delhi Message and other documents to all countries outside the NAM.

(b) Transmission of the concerns of the NAM countries on economic issues to the developed countries' leaders. He mentioned in this context the positive statements made by Mitterand, Trudeau and Nakasone at the Williamsburg Summit.

(c) Transmission of the NAM economic decisions to G-77 meeting in Buenos Aires, and their utilisation for the preparations for the forthcoming UNCTAD meeting at Belgrade.

(d) The progress made so far in the NAM decisions to call for the 37th session of the U.N. General Assembly to meet at the level of Heads of State in order to give a meaningful push to important issues like disarmament, peace and economic co-operation. In this context, F.M. also requested the Pak Foreign Minister to take up this issue during his visits to various countries because of the importance of disarmament and economic co-operation. He also suggested full co-operation and co-ordination between India and Pakistan on these issues of common concern.

C. Regional

F.M. stated that India looked forward to the August meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the seven South Asian countries. He expressed his hope to see the Pak Foreign Minister in New Delhi. He was happy that the Foreign Ministers' meeting was being preceded by full preparations. To a question form Mr. Abdul Sattar, F.M. stated that the objective of the SARC F.Ms' meeting would be not only to launch the integrated programmes in different fields but also to take up programmes of truly regional interest, which were not really bilateral or trilateral. He said that some such areas had already been identified and others could be identified at the forthcoming Foreign Secretaries' meeting of the SARC countries at the end of July 1983. F.M. informed the Pakistan side that we had earmarked Rs. 5 million exclusively for the SARC efforts.
1025. Record of the discussion between Foreign Secretary and the Ambassador of Netherlands.

New Delhi, June 22, 1983.

Ministry of External Affairs
(Europe West Division)

Call on the Foreign Secretary by the Ambassador of Netherlands on 22 June, 1983.

The Ambassador of Netherlands called on the FS on 22.6.1983. He told FS that he has been asked by his Government to convey their apology for not being able to receive the FM at the Hague. This was due to the short notice and unavailability of their Minister on the days proposed for the FM's visit. He suggested that new dates for the visit could be finalised soon. FS said that we would look into it.

FS mentioned that PM had met the Netherlands’ Prime Minister Mr. Lubbers at Belgrade. FS also mentioned his acquaintance with Mr. Lubbers from the time he was in The Hague.

Ambassador said that six months ago when he had come and met Secretary (PC) he had been told that relations between India and Pakistan are uneasy at the best of times. He said that after the meeting of the Joint Commission this should have changed.

FS said that given the past history there is a degree of unease between the two countries at all times. Bilateral issues are magnified and this upsets people and muddies the relationship. Even simple statements get unduly magnified. He mentioned that PM’s statements during J&K elections should be seen in the context of Pakistan repeatedly raising the Kashmir issue internationally even after the Simla Agreement. However there is a positive trend in our relationship in the last two years and the Joint Commission is a major positive step.

FS said that the atmosphere at the Joint Commission meeting was good and there was a progress in many fields. However, in the area of trade there was no progress. This is possibly due to political prejudice on their side. However, we shall not make this an issue and shall be patient. We will offer economic cooperation where they desire it. In other fields such as consular, cultural, scientific etc. there was progress. What is more important is that the Joint Commission provides a forum for regular and automatic meetings for resolution of bilateral problems.

FS said that he would be meeting the Pakistani Foreign Secretary at the end July during the South Asian Regional meeting in New Delhi. This shall be followed by a meeting at FM's level in August. The exact time-table is still to be decided.

Ambassador then raised the question of larger issues connected with the two proposals made by either side. FS in reply said that progress on this will necessarily be slow. He said that we have information that they are assisting the protagonists of the so called Khalistan Movement. Possibly there are some factions in Pakistan who always wish to create trouble for India. Since there is a lack of democratic process in Pakistan the contradictions between positive and negative elements do not get ironed out and there is no consistent policy vis-à-vis India. We hope the positive elements like those encouraging the Joint Commission will come out on top. It is in this context that we have spoken of foreign interference in our internal matters. FS pointed out that Khalistanis are also getting material and monetary help in countries where they have parked themselves. However, FS mentioned that there is an improvement and in the framework of the SARC we are cooperating.

The Ambassador once again came to the two proposals and said that they have to be moulded into one. He said that he understands there are differences on the question of foreign bases in the context of non-alignment and Pakistan does not want to discuss this issue. FS in reply said that what was a confidential discussion has been commented on by Pakistani officials including President Zia in press conferences. This he thought was not correct. FS said that if Pakistan has philosophical problems on the question on bases we are ready to discuss it. But if it does not wish to discuss it for other reasons then it is serious. FS said that the Simla Pact was in fact a no war pact and a pact for bilateralism. This could have been build upon. FS agreed with the Ambassador saying that the relations are going in the right direction but slowly.

FS said PM's visit to Europe was good. We have no bilateral problems with the countries that she visited. It was a good-will visit and there was happily a lot of sympathy and understanding of India in those capitals. FS also mentioned that PM had met the Swedish Prime Minister Mr. Palme for two hours and that they are good old friends.

Record of Indian Ambassador in Pakistan’s call on the Foreign Minister of Pakistan Sahabzada Yaqub Khan.

Islamabad, August 23, 1983.

Embassy of India
Islamabad

Ambassador called on Sahabzada Yaqub Khan on 23 August at 3 P.M. Ambassador presented to the Foreign Minister a copy of the Atlas on Mogul India, which has been published in India. The Foreign Minister called it a remarkable historical document and thanked the Ambassador for this gift of a treasure house.

2. The Foreign Minister thanked the Ambassador for the arrangements made during his visit to Delhi for the SARC Meeting, for meeting various leaders. He found the SARC Meeting satisfactory because everyone showed interest in this mechanism which took some of the shocks very well. This showed the potentialities for future cooperation, especially in view of their common purposes, ancient history and heritage. He said it was strange that while there were various groupings in the world, our region of about 1 billion people had complete darkness. The regional cooperation, he felt, would give a force to all our countries to make our voices heard on international issues. Talking of Pakistan’s position, the Foreign Minister said that Pakistan was conscious of its Western orientation (i.e. towards Middle East and the Persian Gulf) but it also had an Asiatic personality which had begun to assert itself. He said that Pakistan was at the cross-roads of two regions and the recent visits of President Zia had taken account of this factor. The Foreign Minister concluded his statement by saying “I am a soldier and Mr. Ambassador you are a diplomat. You will, therefore, understand these ideas much better”.

3. Ambassador took this opportunity of the briefing on SARC to inform Sahabzada Yaqub Khan on India’s dialogue with Sri Lanka regarding the ethnic trouble there. Among other subjects which were discussed at the meeting, included the following:

UN Summit: Sahabzada said that President Zia had not yet decided whether he would attend the UN General Assembly session. He said that they would like to know how things stood about the attendance of other leaders before they took a final decision. Ambassador said that he would send to the Foreign Minister the response which had been received so far. (Immediately after return from the meeting, we received a telex on the subject from Delhi and forwarded it to the Foreign Minister’s Office).
While on the subject, Shabzada went on to state that during his visit to New York for the UN GA session, he would take part in the dialogue on Afghanistan. He said that the postponement of Cordovez visit to the region in September was not at the Pakistani initiative. Pakistan, according to him, had suggested 7 to 17 September as dates for the visit but, perhaps, there were some difficulties regarding the availability of the Afghan Foreign Minister and some other things also came in the way.

Visit of relatives of missing Defence Personnel: Ambassador reminded the Foreign Minister about his recent discussions in Delhi where a figure of about 5 relatives had been mentioned. Ambassador said that we were waiting for a final reply to our suggestion to send 6 relatives on 12 September. Sahabzada said that there should be no problem in making the number six.

International Centre for Genetic Engineering and Bio-technology: Ambassador gave a brief idea to the Foreign Minister about India’s candidature for the venue of this Centre. As Pakistan is also a candidate, Sahabzada did not see any difficulty in Pakistan delegation to the Madrid Meeting taking the line that the Centre should be located in a developing country.

Visit of delegation from the Lahore Chamber of Commerce: Ambassador reminded the Foreign Minister about their earlier discussions on the likely postponement of the visit of the delegation from the Lahore Chamber of Commerce. The Foreign Minister said that one should not read any other meanings in the decision of the Pakistan Government. He said that it was a bureaucratic problem and had nothing to do with the policy angle. He noted that ultimately the visit would take place.

Follow-up on the discussions at the last Indo-Pak Joint Commission Meeting: Ambassador said that at the first Joint Commission Meeting the work of the Second Sub-Commission on Trade stood out particularly because it achieved no results at all. Perhaps Foreign Secretary Niaz Naik wanted to take a meeting of the concerned Secretaries in the Pakistan Government. Ambassador reminded the Foreign Minister that perhaps such a meeting could now be organised and this could be followed up by a visit of the Pakistani Commerce Secretary to Delhi or that of the Indian Commerce Secretary to Islamabad. However, such a visit should be kept out of the direct purview of the Sub Commission. Sahabzada agreed with this approach and said that we should examine ways and means to overcome the problems while showing full understanding for each other’s view points.

With a view to ensure regular coordination in monitoring of the implementation of agreed conclusions of the Joint Commission, Ambassador suggested that we might reenergize the periodic consultations between the Director General (South Asia) assisted by officials from the various Ministries of the Pakistan Government on one side and officials of this Embassy on the other. Sahabzada said that he would certainly look into this useful suggestion.

Pakistan’s protest on the screening of Film ‘Akraman’ by Pakistan? (Amritsar)T.V. on 14 August 1983: Sahabzada enquired if Foreign Secretary Naik had already spoken to the Ambassador about the movie shown on Amritsar TV on 14 August which presented Pakistan as an aggressor country. Director (India) Abbas Zaidi added that a Note had just been sent out to the Indian Embassy. Ambassador said that he had not heard about it and he assured the Foreign Minister that he would personally refer the case immediately to Delhi on receipt of the Note giving the details of the film.

With reference to information of media, Ambassador briefed the Foreign Minister about one of the decisions of the recent meeting of the Indian envoys in South Asia under which it was suggested that the respective Ambassadors should speak to the concerned News Agencies not to give a negative coverage about developments in the other country but to also try to cover some positive aspects. Ambassador said that he had already spoken to the PTI correspondent in Islamabad and he requested Sahabzada Yaqub Khan to see whether Ambassador Piracha could also speak to APP correspondent in Delhi on these lines.

At the end of the meeting, Sahabzada requested Ambassador to convey his greetings to our Foreign Minister.

1027. Statement issued by the Pakistan Foreign Ministry regretting the statements of Indian leaders expressing concern on developments in Pakistan.

Islamabad, August 27, 1983.

Statements* of the Indian Prime Minister and Foreign Minister regarding matters that are the internal affairs of Pakistan are as regrettable as they are hostile. By making utterances that obviously constitute interference and in the same breath professing a desire not to say anything that might be so regarded, the Government of India has adopted an inconsistent and contradictory attitude that is bound to damage mutual understanding and confidence.

Non-interference in the internal affairs of other states is an obligation under International Law and the United Nations Charter. In the Simla Agreement Pakistan and India specifically recognised that principles of respect for each other’s sovereignty and non-interference in internal affairs were pre-requisites for good-neighbourliness. Only this month in a declaration issued in New Delhi the Foreign Ministers of the South Asian countries reiterated commitment to these fundamental principles.

* The statement was referring to the observations made by the Indian leaders about the agitation in Pakistan particularly in Sind for the restoration of democracy and arrest of political leader particularly Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan. The Indian Ambassador in Pakistan K.D. Sharma reacting to the Pakistani statement said that there was a need to understand the statements of Prime Minister and Foreign Minister in a proper perspective. These statements were out of concern about tension in a neighbouring country. He said India was interested in having cordial relations in every sphere of life with Pakistan. That was why India had presented the draft of proposed cultural agreement but because of Pakistan’s non cooperation no final decision in this connection had been taken so far. He told the daily Jung that if “people’s rights are usurped in any country around India, we will not keep quiet nor will we close our eyes to face the realities.” The Ambassador said his country respected democratic instutions and “we propose that all neighbouring countries should take effective steps for the restoration of democracy.” In the statements of Prime Minister and External Affairs Minister concern had been expressed not only about events in Sind but also about conditions prevailing in other areas. The reaction of the Indian leaders was according to the principles of general philosophy,” he said.

On 27 August the Indian Ambassador KD Sharma was called to the Pakistan Foreign Office and thereafter in a statement issued by the Indian Embassy said that he explained to the the Pakistan Foreign Secretary that expression of Indian concern should be seen in the totality of circumstance that have given rise to it. A large number of people in India, both inside and outside the Parliament, have been watching with concern the developments in this neighbouring country. The statement of the Indian Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister only gave expression to the ‘popular sentiment’. Ambassador Sharma further said that another equally important aspect in such matters was that there was a political and humanitarian dimension. Both the Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister had clearly stated that there was no desire to interfere in the internal affairs of Pakistan. But that we in India could not shut our eyes to the human dimension of the problem on which there was widespread concern in India and elsewhere. It was not, therefore, justified to construe this expression of concern as an interference in the internal affairs of Pakistan.
Obviously mere lip-service to these principles is not enough. Observance of these principles in practice is indispensable to the realisation of the objectives of normalisation and establishment of good-neighbourly relations. Violations of the principle can only undermine mutual confidence and trust and damage and vitiate the trends towards better understanding and cooperation between neighbourly states.

On its part the Government of Pakistan has scrupulously observed the principle of non-interference and exercised utmost restraint even when public opinion was exercised about events in various parts of India. This policy cannot succeed if it is one-sided. Only when restraint is reciprocated can we hope to evolve a future of harmony and cooperation in place of the conflict and confrontation that marred bilateral relations in the past.

1028. Statement issued by the Ministry of External Affairs on the reports alleging that Indian Prime Minister was proclaiming a new doctrine.

New Delhi, August 30, 1983.

Government have seen press reports alleging that the Prime Minister, Shrimati Gandhi is proclaiming a new doctrine justifying interference in the affairs of neighbours. There is no question of any such doctrine. Government are scrupulously following India’s traditional policy of non-interference in the internal affairs of other countries. This is particularly so in relation of her neighbours.

As recently as the 1st of August, while inaugurating the meeting of Foreign Ministers’ on South-Asian Regional Co-operation, the Prime Minister re-affirmed this policy in the following words.

“Subscribing to non-alignment, we respect the right of every country to choose and follow its own form of government without interference from others.”

India is a democracy. Our solicitude for democratic values and form flows from our own commitment to these values and our political and social system.

Prime Minister’s remarks on the developments in Pakistan were made in a strictly domestic context of explaining or assessing events which might have repercussions for us. This was a response to our own political processes and a statement of our values. It is not interference. Criticism of Prime Minister’s remarks to a Party meeting on these developments is therefore ill founded and misplaced.

Government have taken several initiatives to promote dialogue and discussion with India’s neighbours on a basis of independence, sovereign equality and non-interference.

Such a dialogue was initiated by the Prime Minister with Pakistan also. What was said by the Foreign Minister in parliament and the Prime Minister at a party meeting is in no sense an attempt to influence internal developments in Pakistan or their future course. The Foreign Minister’s statement was made in response to expressions of concern in our Parliament over the fate of Khan Abdul Gaffar Khan. He is the sole surviving leader of our Independence movement, a close associate of Mahatma Gandhi, Pandit Nehru and the Present Prime Minister. He remains a revered figure for our people.

1029. Statement by the Pakistan Foreign Office on the Indian explanation of Prime Minister’s Statement on the question of Indian interference in Pakistan’s internal affairs.

Islamabad, September 1, 1983.

The Indian Foreign Office spokesman’s illogical explanation that last week’s statements of the Indian Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister about the situation in Pakistan did not amount to interference in Pakistan’s internal affairs, is unconvincing and unacceptable to Pakistan.

Inconsistent with the internationally-accepted meaning of interference, the novel Indian explanation is at variance with India’s own past position.

New Delhi has in the past objected to expressions even of humanitarian sympathy by foreign governments with victims of violence in India. On her own part now, the Indian Prime Minister has gone so far as to comment at her own level on the situation in Pakistan in a manner that is tantamount to support for agitation against the Government of Pakistan. She even referred to a number of individuals who are citizens of Pakistan. Obviously, the Government of India has no locus standi or legal basis to speak in respect of persons who are not its nationals. New Delhi has advanced fallacious argument that India’s ‘solicitude for democratic values’ flowed from its political and social system. Pakistan itself is committed to Islamic values and norms. But obviously it is inadmissible for any country to try to export its own ideology or system.

"Pakistan reaffirms its commitment to the principles of inter-State relations, principles which derive not only from international law and treaties but also from bilateral agreement. In the interest of strengthening mutual understanding and cooperation, it is indispensable that restraint should be exercised, this would also enable both countries to continue their efforts towards evolving a tension-free and durable relationship.

1030. Statement issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on set back to India - Pakistan relations.

Islamabad, September 10, 1983.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan, is amazed at the attempt by the Indian Ministry of External Affairs to transfer responsibility for the recent setback to the process of normalisation of relations between the two countries. Any fair-minded and impartial observer can see that this unfortunate development was sparked by the statements of the Indian Prime Minister and Foreign Minister on the situation in Pakistan. These statements were in clear violation of the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of other countries.

Convinced that good-neighbourly relations between Pakistan and India serve the best interests of the two countries and their peoples, the Government of Pakistan has exercised utmost restraint. It cannot fail to point out however, that leaders and spokesmen of the Government of India and of the ruling party continue to issue hostile and provocative statements.

For instance, on September 3, the Indian Minister for Industry, N.D. Tiwari made unwarranted and propagandistic comments in a message to a meeting held in New Delhi to discuss the situation in Pakistan. Besides violating the principle of non-interference, this message by a Minister of the Government of India constituted official encouragement to a hostile campaign against Pakistan. Also, a General Secretary of the ruling Congress-I, C.M. Stephen issued a statement on August 31 which was tantamount to support for anti-Government agitation in Pakistan.

Taking exception to the statements of the leaders and spokesmen of the Government of India, the Government of Pakistan has expressed the hope that India will refrain from pronouncements that violate sacrosanct principles of relations between independent and sovereign States.

The Government of Pakistan has also expressed the hope that the Government of India will direct its official media to cease hostile propaganda against Pakistan as required under the Simla Agreement.

On its part, the Government of Pakistan remains committed to the development of good-neighbourly relations with India on the basis of the United Nations Charter, the principles of peaceful co-existence and bilateral agreement*.

* This statement was issued by Pakistan’s diplomatic missions in other countries to the diplomatic missions of various other countries to give it the widest publicity abroad.

Later President Zia-ul-Haq asked Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan to try to meet Indian Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi at the UN General Assembly in New York during his stay there and make it clear to her that the hostile attitude which India has of late adopted vis-à-vis Pakistan may affect the relation between India and Pakistan, a Foreign Office spokesman said at Rawalpindi. India Foreign Minister Narasimha Rao would also be informed of Pakistan’s reaction during his expected meeting with Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, the spokesman said. Referring to the statements and comments by certain Indian leaders and newspapers, he said the Indian public opinion wanted to normalise relations with Pakistan. While Pakistan had been doing efforts to normalise ties with India, the latter’s reaction was not encouraging, he added.
1031. Letters exchanged between Indian Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi and President Zia-ul-haq on the detention of Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan.

New Delhi, August 26, 1983 and Islamabad, September 14, 1983

TEXT OF MRS GANDHI’S LETTER

Prime Minister of India.
New Delhi

August 26, 1983

Dear Mr. President,

I am sure you know that Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan occupies a special place in the hearts of the Indian people. He is regarded as a true Gandhian and in fact was known as the Frontier Gandhi.

Our Parliament is greatly agitated at his detention. Our people and Parliament are deeply concerned because of his advanced age and poor state of health. We certainly do not wish to interfere in the internal affairs of Pakistan, but I have been asked by all sections in our Parliament to convey their concern to which I add my own, to you in the hope that Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan will be released.

With regards,

Yours sincerely,

Indira Gandhi

TEXT OF ZIA’S REPLY

President of Pakistan.
Islamabad.

06 Zil Hij 1403 A.H./14 September, 1983

Dear Madam Prime Minister,

The text of your Excellency’s letter of August 26 was received in Islamabad on August 29, after I had left for a visit to Turkey. Prior to my departure, I had also seen reports of your statement in which mention was made of the internal situation in Pakistan as well the steps taken by the Government of Pakistan in respect of some of its own nationals.
In keeping with the spirit of sincerity and cordiality which should characterize relations between our two countries and Governments, I must point to the inconsistency between the reaffirmations of the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of Pakistan and a distinct lack of regard for that very principle implicit in the statement to which I have referred. I might add that some of the statements of leaders of the Government of India also tend encouragement to anti-Government elements in Pakistan. The principle of non-interference, indispensable for the promotion of good-neighbourly relations, has been scrupulously observed by Pakistan both in letter and in spirit in this context. My Government has consistently been at pains to explain the obligations that devolve upon it to those elements of public opinion in Pakistan that are exercised by events in India.

We sincerely hope that your Government will join us in strengthening mutual confidence in the interest of promoting greater understanding and enhancing co-operation between our two countries.

I wish to assure Your Excellency that on our part we remain committed to the development of friendly relations with India based on the universally recognised principles of sovereign equality and mutual benefit.

With profound regards,

Your sincerely,

General M Zia-ul-Haq
1032. Statement on the meeting between the Leader of the Indian delegation to the United Nations General Assembly session G. Parathasarthy and Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan.

The heads of delegations of Pakistan and India to the UN General Assembly discussed for 90 minutes on September 28 the present state of relations between their two countries.

Officials said Pakistan’s Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan and Mr. G. Parthasarathy*, Foreign Affairs Adviser to the Indian Prime Minister, conferred without their aides.

A statement issued after the meeting, held in Mr. Parthasarathy’s UN Plaza Hotel suite, said they had had a “free and frank” discussion. The statement did not, however, mention specific subjects.

It said the two chief delegates expressed “their respective points of view on bilateral issues.”

“They also exchanged views on the regional situation and the issues before the General Assembly”, the statement added.

This was the first high-level contact between India and Pakistan since their relations turned sour in the wake of some recent developments. Mr. Yaqub Khan declined to answer questions from waiting reporters as he left the hotel.

“I have nothing to add to the statement that has been made” he said.

Note Verbale of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Embassy of India in Pakistan regarding some demonstrations in front of the Pakistan Mission in New Delhi.

Islamabad, October 3, 1983.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of India and has the honour to state that on September 30, 1983, a demonstration was organised in front of the Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi by a group of women under the leadership of the Deputy Chairman of the Delhi Metropolitan Council, Mrs. Tajdar Babar who is a prominent member of the Congress(I) Party. About 300 demonstrators erected a tent in front of the main gate of the chancery and shouted slogans against the Government of Pakistan. The demonstration lasted 7 hours during which water and refreshment were provided from a vehicle belonging to New Delhi Municipal Corporation parked outside the Embassy.

The Government of Pakistan wishes to express to the Government of India its serious concern over the demonstrations sponsored by the ruling political party in India or persons connected with organs of government. The Government's concern was earlier conveyed to His Excellency the Ambassador of India on September 26 after the Delhi Congress (I) Party staged a demonstration outside the Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi. In the present case the Delhi Administration also provided physical assistance and support for the demonstration.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs must point out that under the Vienna Diplomatic Convention the receiving state is under a special duty to take all appropriate steps to protect the premises of a diplomatic mission against any disturbance of the peace of the mission and impairment of its dignity. In the instances cited, the ruling party and the local administration have in fact sponsored and organised activities in violation of the provisions of the Vienna Convention.

The Government of Pakistan expresses the hope that the Government of India will take steps to prevent the recurrence of such demonstrations against the Embassy of Pakistan.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Embassy of India the assurances of its highest consideration.

The Embassy of India,
Islamabad

On October 5 the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs issued the contents of this note in the form of a statement for general information.

New Delhi, October 13, 1983.

An Indian Foreign Ministry spokesman denied at New Delhi on October 13, 1983 that India was planning to attack Pakistan.

The spokesman also denied that the Indian Prime Minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, had met some exiled Pakistani leaders in London during her stopover there en route to New Delhi from New York and had told them that India was ready to attack Pakistan.

1035. TELEGRAM

From: Indembassy Islamabad
To: Foreign New Delhi

MOST IMMEDIATE

No. 185. October 25, 1983

Secretary (PC) from K.D. SHARMA

Additional Secretary ABDUL SATTAR called me to the Foreign Office to-day and protested against anti-Pakistan references made during the Vishwa Sindhi Sammelan in New Delhi. SATTAR showed me a special supplement on the Sammelan brought out by the organisers containing an article by Acharya BHAGWANDEV Congress (I) M.P. He read out portions derogatory to ZIA (who is called a Rakshaa (devil) and exhorting Sind to become a part of India). SATTAR said that it was particularly regrettable that the President and Prime Minister of India were associated with the inauguration of such a conference.

2. SATTAR said that two years ago when Government of India were apprehensive about an anti-India Conference of Sikhs during a visit to Pakistan of a Sikh Jatha (group), Government of Pakistan had assured India that such a meeting would not be allowed. SATTAR added that both India and Pakistan were party to a 1981 U.N. Declaration on the inadmissibility of intervention and interference in the affairs of other states.

3. According to SATTAR this process of daily objectionable statements or articles against Pakistan by various Indians was encouraged by the initial statements of the Indian Foreign Minister on 2nd August and Prime Minister on 26th August. He said that Prime Minister was a respected leader of the non-aligned community and one could expect it of her to restrain her own party MPs.

4. After the verbal protest, SATTAR handed over an Aide Memoirs and its main points are given below:

The Government of Pakistan protests to the Government of India against continuing violations by India of the universally recognized principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of States......

............. Mr. BHAGWANDEV, a member of Indian Parliament belonging to the ruling Congress (I) Party, made highly offensive and objectionable remarks at a Sindhi conference held in New Delhi on October 18-19, 1983 which was inaugurated by the Prime Minister of India and addressed else by the President of India. He used disrespectful indecent and scurrilous language about the President of Pakistan advocated support for the overthrow of its Government and, referring to Sind, declared that the “time was ripe for this part of Pakistan to become a part of India....

.............such activities by a member of Parliament belonging to the Party in power and the official encouragement to these activities implicit in the presence of the President and Prime Minister of India at the conference clearly violate the universally recognised norms and principles of international law......

.............The Government of Pakistan reminds the Government of India of its duty to ensure that its territory is not used in any manner that violates the sovereignty, national independence, territorial integrity and national unity or disrupts the stability of another state......

.............The Government of Pakistan expresses the hope that the Government of India will ensure observance of these established principles which is indispensable to the realisation of the objectives of good-neighbourly relations, strengthening of mutual confidence and promotion of cooperation between the two States. The Government of Pakistan reiterates its commitment to these objectives.

5. In reply to SATTAR's charge I gave him the background of the conference as one of the various international cultural conferences held periodically to highlight and consolidate the rich heritage of different Indian languages. I also protested to SATTAR against the string of symposia being organised in various cities of Pakistan such as Sukkur, Hyderabad, Lahore and Karachi on the subject of the alleged Indian interference.

K.D. SHARM from NATWAR SINGH

Your telegram No.185 October 25.

2. When you see SATTAR next, please tell him that we reject every single point made in the aide memoire he gave you. We are astonished at ill-tempered tone of that document.

3. Shri BHAGWAN DEV is a Member of Indian Parliament and what he says in no way reflects views of Government. Our official spokesman said so to press the other day. The assumptions made in aide memoire do little credit to its authors. They have no basis in fact.

4. The policies of Government are made by Government and not by individuals or private organisations. You might remind SATTAR that having spent four and a half years in India he ought to know how we function.

5. Today JS (Pak-Iraf) told RIAZ KHOKHAR that; (i) Even before SATTAR had spoken to you, our official spokesman had mentioned that these statements reflected the view of an individual and not of the Government of India. (ii) The Indian Press has not taken any note of this statement, and it has appeared nowhere except paid advertisement supplement of the newspapers. (iii) It is, therefore, difficult to understand why the Pakistan Government and media are playing it up. KHOKHAR said he was aware of these facts and would be conveying them to his Government.
6. We have been noting unbridled language being used about India in Pakistani Press and Government inspired stories that are being put out. While noting contents we have, by and large, ignored them because we do not think that Martial Law regime has any serious intention of curbing these elements. Mere verbalising about intention to have good relations with India is not sufficient. On all substantive bilateral matters Pakistan has come in way of progress.

1037. Press Release of the Indian Embassy in Pakistan rejecting Pakistani protest on Sindhi Sammelan in New Delhi.

Islamabad, November 1, 1983.

The Indian Government has rejected the recent Pakistan protest in regard to the World Sindhi Sammelan held at New Delhi on October 18 and 19 last.

According to the release, the World Sindhi Sammelan was purely a cultural event, which had been mooted long before the present political disturbances started in Pakistan.

“It was organised by group of Sindhi scholars in India in their private capacity. The remarks made by the various participants including Acharya Bhagwan Dev, Member of Parliament, as has been reiterated by the official spokesman of India in New Delhi, represent the personal views of the participants and not the official policy of the Government of India. The policies of the Government of India are made by Government and not by individuals or private organisations”, the release said.

“The presence of the President and the Prime Minister of India at the World Sindhi Sammelan must be understood in the proper context. India is a secular country and the Government leaders quite often inaugurate or briefly attend the cultural functions of all religious and linguistic communities. Numerous similar functions have been held in past years and a Hindi Sammelan, an international Urdu conference and the 3rd World Punjabi writers conference are scheduled to be held in India in the near future”.

Letter from the Ministry of External Affairs to the Heads of Mission abroad regarding political situation in Pakistan.

New Delhi, November 2, 1983.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No. J/102/11/83 November 2, 1983

My Dear Heads of Mission/Post,

We have kept you informed about the developments in Pakistan. Foreign Secretary had in his telegram No. 34487 dated August 27, explained to you the background in which PM and FM made their statements and Secretary (PC) vide his telegrams No. 34994 dated September 5 and 34949 dated October 4 had briefed you on the situation in Pakistan.

2. Zia continues to be in control. The army is still supporting him and Punjab is not opposing him though there have of late been some indications of the movement gaining ground in this crucial province. Zia’s capacity to withstand the pressure of the MRD (Movement for the Restoration of Democracy) movement remains intact. At the same time the MRD by continuing the agitation for long have demonstrated their capacity to sustain and even escalate it. Zia has also started exploring the possibility of political dialogues to gain breathing time but has met with no success. Even if he succeeds in defusing the present situation, his position is likely to be vulnerable. The information given below in respect of the current situation in Pakistan might be of help to you in your discussions on this issue. In an evolving situation you would naturally supplement them with additional facts/assessments as and when necessary.

(i) The MRD agitation, launched on 14th August, 1983, has now been sustained for over 10 weeks. Though confined mostly in Sind, it represents a popular upsurge for the restoration of democracy in Pakistan. Demonstrations and strikes have been taking place all over the country, particularly in the interior of Sind. The Wadheras (landlords) of Sind have been in the forefront of the agitation. Movement is attracting sectional groups like students, lawyers and labour. There have been clashes between demonstrators and the authorities, bomb explosions and sabotage of transport links.

(ii) Violence reached a pitch during the local body elections in Sind and Punjab (28th September to 2nd October) in which about 50 people were reportedly killed.
(iii) The agitations have also begun taking their economic toll. The disruption in transport links has led to price increases and scarcity of food items and other products.

(iv) A number of police deaths appear to have had an adverse impact on the political loyalty and morale of officials in Sind. A sizeable number of policemen and other officials are reported to have resigned and some have even joined demonstrations. Many are being transferred. The army is, however, still presenting a united front.

(v) Curbs have been placed on public assembly, carrying of arms and the press. Military courts have been handing out severe punishment to the agitators including rigorous imprisonment, lashes and fine. The regime, to begin with proceeded very cautiously and use of force had been in a controlled fashion but of late there are reports of more force being used by the army. Harsh methods being employed by the army include cutting off particular areas for search-and-destroy operations.

(vi) Almost all major political parties have joined the movement. Exception are pro-Zia Jamaat-i-Islami, Pagaro faction of Muslim League and the ambivalent Jamaitul-Ulemai-Pakistan. Even these parties, within themselves are divided and some of their factions, particularly Sind based, are sympathetic to MRD. Other parties like the Jiye Sind Movement and Sind Awami Tehrik, while participating in agitations, have held themselves apart from MRD since they do not believe in the possibility or desirability of a solution within the Pakistan framework. They are hoping, with some justification, that the sullen discontent produced by the crack down against the populace will strengthen Sindhi nationalist forces.

(vii) There have been large-scale arrests in Pakistan. All top political leaders of MRD are under detention. In addition to Benazir Bhutto and Air Marshall Asgar Khan, who had been under arrest for a few years, other leaders including Jatoi, Mazari, Wali Khan and even Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan have been under detention. Opposition claimed that the total number of persons arrested is well over 10,000. In fact, the Pakistan Government admitted in an official statement on October 23, that in Sind alone 4070 persons had been arrested out of whom 1783 are still in jail. The spokesman further admitted that 52 persons had been killed out of whom 8 policemen and 1 army man. If this is the figure given by Pakistan Government for Sind alone, the total number is naturally much higher.

(viii) Pakistan Government was taken by surprise by Movement’s intensity but recovered quickly to move army units into position. At least 11 districts in Sind were handed over to direct army control. The role of the army in trying to crush the movement has made it even more unpopular.
(ix) Pakistan authorities have floated the idea of a dialogue with political parties. However, on substantive issues Zia seems to be in no mood to seek an accommodation with political opponents apart from offering a few cosmetic changes to his 12th August proposal. Even the politicians belonging to right-wing parties supporting him or who are not constituents of MRD like Prof. Ghafoor of JI and Maulana Noorani of JUI have express disappointment at the results of their dialogue with Zia.

(x) The crucial test is the impact of the movement in Punjab which has so far been relatively quiet. The reasons for this (a) attitude of JI (b) 80% of Pak army is composed of Punjabis (c) economic advantages of the remittances have been felt most in Punjab and (d) big presence of army; 4 of the 7 Corps of Pak army are in this Province (Lahore, Rawalpindi, Multan and Mangla). In spite of these elements there have of late been indications of the movement gaining some ground in this crucial province. There was a big demonstration in Lahore on October 26. Recently, Zia held local body elections in Pakistan. According to A.T. Chaudhury, a leading Pakistani columnist, who was known to be pro-Zia, polling has been low against tall official claims. In 1979, polling in similar elections was 76%. In the elections held last month, Polling in Sind, according to A.T. Chaudhury, was between 10 to 15% or even 5%. In Baluchistan 20%, in NWFP 30% and in Punjab over 35%. It will thus be seen that even in the Punjab the number of persons who took part in polling was half of the figure of 1979. The people of Punjab are thus not in any way with Zia. There have been reports of anti-Punjab sentiments beginning to surface in Sind in a big way.

(xi) Pak Government is attempting to divert attention by giving the impression that the movement is really for Sindhesh and has foreign backing. Pakistan press has been carrying inspired articles alleging that terrorist are crossing border from India and that training camps existed in India. Labour Minister, Ghulam Dastagir Khan stated on 23rd August that the agitation in Sind is aimed at creating a “Sindhesh” and was “at the instance of their Foreign Masters”. Zia declined to contradict Dastagir and reiterated that foreign influences could be at work. He repeated this in Ankara. Pak. Defence Minister charged expatriates sitting in a neighbouring country trying to worsen the situation. These allegations were made prior to PM’s and FM’s statements. It is interesting to note that no criticism of these statements has been made by the political parties forming part of the MRD. Subsequently, the Pakistan Government started an orchestrated press campaign against alleged Indian interference and several official comments including statements by different minister were made.
Recently, in his interview to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation’s programme ‘Journal’ on October 10, which was repeated in an American TV Programme of October 20, ‘On Democracy in Pakistan’, Zia has repeated his baseless charge of Indian interference in that in the same interview, he conceded that they have no proof of it but did not leave the possibility of India not being involved. Any allegation of Indian involvement can best be met by quoting Zia himself that they had no proof.

(xii) Pakistani leaders and controlled media have been trying to project the statements made by PM and FM as interference in Pakistan’s internal affairs. These attempts did not have any desired effect since the Pakistani elements both within the country and abroad welcomed our concern. As you have already been informed: (a) these statements cannot, in any way, be considered as constituting any kind of interference in Pakistan’s internal affairs; (b) these statements reflected genuine concern among Indian people, Parliament and Press at the situation in Pakistan (c) PM’s statement was at the meeting of the Congress (I) Parliamentary Party; (d) they were made in a strictly domestic context of explaining or assessing events which have repercussions for us; (e) India has always been following her traditional policy of non-interference in the internal affairs of other countries particularly its neighbours; (f) FM’s statement in Parliament and PM’s letter to Zia were in response to expression of concern in Parliament and outside over the fate of the veteran freedom fighter Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan; (g) PM has previously also interceded with Zia on humanitarian ground in connection with Bhutto’s hanging, Mrs. Bhutto’s incarceration and earlier detention of Ghaffar Khan; (h) Government have taken several initiatives to promote dialogues and discussions with Pakistan.

(xiii) On the other hand, Pakistan has been actively assisting and encouraging extremist elements of the Khalistan movement in Punjab.

(xiv) The US attitude towards the Zia regime continues to be one of full support, as symbolized by Defence Secretary Weinberger’s recent visit to Pakistan and the fresh announcements of military supplies. However, many Pakistan observers feel that the US is making the same mistake as in Iran. Demonstrations have exhibited anti-US overtones.

Yours Sincerely
(S.K. Lambah)

1040. Press Release of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs denying that Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan made any remarks about a possible attack by Pakistan on India and Foreign Minister’s press conference.

Islamabad, December 28, 1983.

The Pakistan Foreign Office said in a Press release on December 28 that some of the remarks attributed to Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan in a NAWAI WAQT of (28/12) report by Kuldip Nayar had been quoted either wrongly or out of context. The earlier report in the daily had quoted Mr. Yaqub Khan as having said that Pakistan apprehended an attack from India “because we feel that the Indian rulers may opt for such an adventure in an election year.”
Clarifying the factual position, the Foreign Office Press release said that in response to a question about the possibility of an Indo-Pak war, Mr Yaqub had told the correspondent that there was no question of a Pakistani attack on India because such a clash would destroy both the countries. As for as the Indian intentions were concerned, it was not for him to express any opinion on these, Mr Yaqub had said.

On being referred to the large-scale Pakistani military exercises recently, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan had explained that the holding of such exercises by both the countries was a normal practice and there was no justification for getting an impression of war preparations from these, the Press release said.

According to the NAWAI WAQT (28/12) report from its special correspondent Kuldip Nayyar, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan had expressed the apprehension of an Indian attack on Pakistan and told the correspondent in an interview that the recent military exercises in Pakistan had been held to keep the country prepared for meeting such an eventuality “because we feel the Indian rulers may opt for such an adventure during their election year.”

Pakistan could never commit the folly of attacking India “because we know that a war between the two countries would destroy both of them. On the contrary, we fear an attack from India anytime,” he added.

Sahabzada Yaqub also clarified that Pakistan’s non-aggression pact applied to Kashmir too. “We want to rule out war and wish this (the Kashmir) issue to be resolved peacefully”, he said.

Asked about the recent Gilgit banquet* in honour of foreign diplomats, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said it was not aimed at hurting anybody’s sentiments. Pakistan had no option but to have friendship with India, he said and added that the two countries should bilaterally settle their issues because history would never forgive them if they did not resolve their disputes.

Replying to a question about the trial of the hijackers of Indian plane, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said they had told India that if they tried the Sikh hijackers in Pakistan, that might be viewed as intended to disturb the conditions in (Indian) Punjab. Although the Indian Government said it would not mind that Pakistan decided against trying the hijackers at the moment because it thought it might be blamed for interfering in Punjab affairs, since its involvement was already suspected.

Replying to another question, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said there was no truth in the reports that Pakistan was imparting training to Sikh extremists at Sialkot, Faisalabad and Multan. “We cannot take any step that harms Pakistan’s interests,” he added.
Asked about the allegation that India had helped the Sindhis during the MRD agitation, he said Pakistan had no concrete evidence of Indian interference in Sind, but Mrs. Gandhi’s sympathetic remarks and the statements of her Foreign and Home Ministers gave the impression that India was providing some help to them.

About the recent military exercises, he said these were of a routine nature. Although they had been held this year on a larger scale than in the past, these had been held at places far from the Indian border.

He also insisted that in view of the present Middle East situation, it was necessary for India and Pakistan to get closer to each other.

Emphasising that Pak-Indian relations were important for the stability of the region, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said the question of removing the restrictions on passenger traffic and visits between the two countries would be settled at the meetings of the joint commission set up in June last. The Indian Trade Secretary had been invited for a meeting of the concerned sub-commission, but there had been no response to it in spite of several reminders. The Foreign Secretaries of the two countries were to meet informally first at New York and then in Islamabad, but there had been no progress “and we are still awaiting these negotiations.”

Replying to a question about granting permission to Indian journalists to visit Pakistan like their Western counterparts, the Sahabzada admitted that a different policy had so far been adopted vis-à-vis Indian journalists, but he hoped the joint commissions would agree on some procedure about this matter. The question of the exchange of newspapers was also before the commissions, he said.

On being told that the people in both the countries wished for some concrete steps for easy travel, trade and communications between them, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan appreciated the sentiments and said “We should bury mutual hatred or else history will never forgive us.”
1041. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office regarding Pakistan’s involvement in Sikh agitation.

Islamabad, April 19, 1984.

A spokesman of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs has contradicted the allegations made by the Indian Home Minister April, 18, that Pakistan was implicated in the Sikh agitation.

In a statement issued in Islamabad on April 19, the spokesman described the allegations as totally untrue and baseless.

The statement said: “Pakistan desires tension-free and good-neighbourly relations with India and continue to scrupulously follow the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of States.

“The Indian Home Minister reportedly stated on April 18 that arms were reaching Sikh extremists from Pakistan and that the extremists had contacts with Pakistan. The government of Pakistan rejects these unfounded allegations.

“The Government of Pakistan express the hope that statements adversely affecting the atmosphere of mutual trust and confidence between the two countries will be avoided”.

President Zia-ul-Haq said in Lahore on April 18 that Pakistan was not in any way involved in the internal affairs of India. He described such reports as mere propaganda.

When a correspondent invited the President’s attention to reports quoting Indian Government leaders in Parliament, including the Home Minister, that Pakistan was involved in escalating the Sikh movement in Punjab, Gen Zia said Pakistan did not believe in Machiavellian policies or interfering in the internal affairs of any country.

He pointed out that they had always stood by principles and would continue to respect the norms of international politics.

Record of official talks between Foreign Secretary M. K. Rasgotra and Pakistan Foreign Secretary Niaz A. Naik.

Embassy of India
Islamabad

The first round of official talks between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan was held on May 20, 1984 at 11.40 A.M. in the Pak Foreign Office. The Foreign Secretary, Shri M. Rasgotra, was assisted by Shri K.D. Sharma, Ambassador of India to Pakistan, Dr. J.S. Teja, Additional Secretary (Pol) and other senior officials. The full composition of the Indian delegation can be seen at Annexure ‘A’. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary, Mr. Niaz Naik was assisted by Additional Secretary, Mr. Abdul Sattar, Pakistan Ambassador to India, Dr. Humayun Khan and other senior officials. The full composition of the Pak delegation can be seen at Annexure ‘B’.

2. The Pakistan Foreign Secretary in his opening statement stated that the government and people of Pakistan and the President of Pakistan personally were animated by the desire to promote friendly and tension free relations with India. They were gratified by India’s reciprocal response to this desire. Pakistan believed that relations between the two countries should be based on the principle of peaceful coexistence and the spirit of the Simla Agreement which envisaged a step by step approach to improving bilateral relations. He noted that substantial progress had taken place in the recent months in the improvement of relations between the two countries which was a tribute to the sagacity and vision of our leaders. The establishment of the Joint Commission symbolized the hope and aspirations of our peoples. Niaz Naik stated that exchange of views held in the spirit of mutual respect, in a frank and sincere manner would be useful for improving relations between the two countries. The two countries should avoid any act that may impede that process and emphasize positive elements. The chequered history of relations between the two countries made it necessary for them to identify areas of mutual cooperation. While on some issues the two countries had “ostensibly dissimilar approaches”, efforts should be made to narrow down such differences. Niaz Naik then referred to the Indo-Pak Joint Commission and said that President Zia had readily agreed to the proposal for its establishment. It was a matter of gratification that its first meeting was held in Islamabad within three months of its being set up and then the Sub-Commissions met again within a short time. He added that Pakistan was making preparation for the next session of the Joint Commission to be held at New Delhi.
3. He spoke of the need for codifying the principle of non-use of force in a pact or a treaty. Niaz Naik said that was important to grapple with weightier issues of peace and friendship. He stated that they had pondered for a long time on how to reconcile the ostensible differences of approach and strike a balance between bilateral engagements and international commitments. He added that Pakistan would discuss these issues in a friendly and cordial manner.

4. Pakistan Foreign Secretary then referred to the appointment of Dr. Humayun Khan, Pakistan’s Ambassador to India and said that they appreciated that he could meet the Foreign Secretary even though he had not presented his credentials. Dr. Humayun Khan, Niaz Naik stated was personally selected by President Zia and he enjoyed his confidence. They hoped that he would be helpful in building bridges of understanding between the two countries.

5. Foreign Secretary in his presentation said that he owed a word of apology to Mr. Naik as he could not visit Pakistan last year. 1983 was an extraordinary year and India was pre-occupied with several Conferences and other diplomatic activities such as NAM, SARC, CHOGM, consultations at New York among the Heads of State and several other international and domestic issues. He expressed profound gratitude at the fact that Foreign Secretary Niaz Naik volunteered to visit India in February 1984. The Udaipur visit, Foreign Secretary pointed out, had become a landmark—something like Camp David without the negative aspects and controversies attached to it. There were warm hearted and open talks. Foreign Secretary reiterated the commitment of the people and Government of India and the deep personal commitment of the Prime Minister, Smt. Indira Gandhi for the joint search in seeking a peaceful, stable, good neighbourly, creative, friendly and cooperative relationship with Pakistan. The establishment of the Joint Commission, he added, was a creative step and it had made a good beginning. There is great appreciation in India at what has been achieved following the meetings of the Joint Commission. While these achievements were not massive, a good beginning had been made. Foreign Secretary stated that we had prepared an agenda for the next session of the Joint Commission. The dates for the Joint Commission meeting could be finalized through consultations. He reiterated that we had a profound sense of respect and deep affection for Pakistan and were looking to a relationship free from tensions and mistrust.

6. Foreign Secretary said that there were differences of perceptions on some matters but then no two countries in the world, in a similar context, had complete identity of views. Referring to Niaz Naik’s observation about the “ostensibly dissimilar approaches” Foreign Secretary said that there were a few matters, indeed vital matters on which the two countries had different approaches. We recognized that India and Pakistan were two separate and different countries though they shared certain common objectives and ideals. FS stated that he would like to assure that India’s effort was to seek to understand Pakistan’s approach. He had come with a directive that nothing need be excluded from discussion. The two sides could discuss the two drafts for the Non-aggression Pact and the Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation and also various aspects of bilateral relations, including confidence building measures so that a relationship of amity, goodwill and good neighbourliness could be developed. FS suggested that one or two officers on each side could be earmarked to discuss these measures in detail.

7. Niaz Naik said he was glad that there was convergence in the approach of the two sides. He suggested that the “spirit of Udaipur” could be carried forward. He also stated that when Foreign Secretary would meet President Zia the next day, the latter would assure him of Pakistan’s sincere desire for friendly relations and cooperation with India. He informed FS that his Foreign Minister, Yaqub Khan had wished that the meeting between the two Foreign Secretaries to be successful. Niaz Naik then made a few general observations on confidence building measures. He said that while some of these were earlier discussed at Udaipur and had also been put into effect, others needed reiteration. He made the following points:

a) Leadership on both sides should make statements highlighting positive aspects of Indo-Pak relations.

b) The information media on the two sides could play a more positive role. A beginning could be made if the official organs eschewed acrimonious and hostile projections of each other’s viewpoints which put spanners into the normalization process. He also said that the Pakistan Government was happy that the Indian Minister for Information and Broadcasting would be visiting Pakistan soon. The Ministers of India and Pakistan could address themselves to this vital issue.

c) More visits should take place at all levels, including at the highest level and at political, official and working levels. He pointed out that the recently held visit of the Indian Agriculture Minister had created a positive impact and had produced an atmosphere of amity. His visit indicated that the two countries were determined and committed to improve their relations. Naik stated that during the Agriculture Minister’s visit, it was decided that the protocol for cooperation in agricultural research would be signed between the two Agriculture Ministers. He said that President Zia had agreed to send Agriculture Minister, Vice-Admiral Janjua to India for this purpose. Niaz Naik then mentioned about the outstanding invitations to the President, Prime Minister and Shri Rajiv Gandhi.
d) Niaz Naik also suggested meetings between the representatives of the defence establishments. He pointed out that while flag meetings/local commander level meetings were taking place, visits between the heads of defence institutions such as Staff College, Quetta could also take place. Niaz Naik then informed Foreign Secretary that they had reserved the first ten days of August for the visit of their Foreign Minister to attend the next session of the Joint Commission.

8. Foreign Secretary said that in his Judgment, the most effective confidence building measure was the establishment of the Joint Commission. Foreign Secretary stated that we had kept whole of August free for the next session of the Joint Commission. He handed over the draft agenda for the Joint Commission meeting and said after consultations with the concerned authorities, the Pakistani side could give its response. Foreign Secretary also said that if the Pakistan side could indicate the exact dates in the first ten days of August, then perhaps the dates for the Joint Commission meeting could be finalized and announced during this visit. Referring to the role of the media, Foreign Secretary said that during the first six months of the current year, Pakistan side would have no complaint against the Indian official media. Explaining the recent statements given by the Defence Minister, Foreign Secretary said that it was necessary to keep in mind the context in which these statements were made. There was a Parliament in India which had three sessions annually. In our Parliament, the MPs put questions on a number of occasions on the same subject and the Ministers were obliged to give a response. Giving an example, Foreign Secretary said that in the Parliament a MP stated that Pakistan was acquiring the latest arms and asked whether India was ready to meet the threat posed by these arms. The Defence Minister could not but say that Indian forces were ready to counter any threat from Pakistan. Elaborating further the Foreign said these statements were carefully drafted and the intention was not to cause any harm or suspicion. No ill-will or malice was intended and Pakistani side must appreciate the underlying spirit behind these statements. Giving another instance of a question put to Shri Rajiv Gandhi in the Lok Sabha by a Member of Parliament purporting to be sympathetic to Pakistan; Foreign Secretary said that the MP told Shri Rajiv Gandhi that he (Shri Rajiv Gandhi)had stated earlier that Pakistan was going to attack India by the end of the year, Foreign Secretary said that Shri Rajiv Gandhi denied having ever made the statement which was attributed to him and said that he could not be held answerable for unfounded press reports on such matters. Foreign Secretary added that the press in India was totally unfettered and quite often reflected the viewpoints of the opposition. Not that this had affected the Party in power which was strong and was confident about the support of the people in the forthcoming elections. Foreign Secretary suggested that it would be useful if the Pakistan Ambassador in Delhi went through the transcripts of Parliamentary proceedings. If the Ambassador had any misgivings about any statements, he was free to meet him and discuss matters.

9. Talking about the increase in tempo of visits, FS said that visits which had taken place had gone off very well. Information Minister, Shri Bhagat was ready to visit Pakistan. If it was convenient to the Pakistan side, he could visit Pakistan between July 7 and 11. The first half on July was convenient to him. FS told Niaz Naik that we were awaiting a visit by the Pakistan Planning Minister Dr. Mahbubul Haq. Regarding the other political visits, Foreign Secretary said that our leaders were pre-occupied with a number of important issues including the election processes. Shri G. Parthasarathi looked forward to visiting Pakistan during this year, sometime between October and December. FS stated that we were keeping under review the possibility of a visit by Shri Rajiv Gandhi. He assured Niaz Naik that political leaders in India would be interested in visiting Pakistan as they felt that the relationship with Pakistan was very important.

10. Turning to the role of media, FS said that if Pakistan side coolly examined the matter, it would find that they had few complaints. Our official media, to the extent that it was official, was under advice. It was, however, not possible to expect the media agencies to conform to any rigid control. Narrating an incident of the recent kidnapping of an American couple in Sri Lanka, Foreign Secretary said that we could not force our radio to broadcast a certain appeal to diffuse that crisis as it was not totally under government control.

11. FS told Niaz Naik that we would like to have more books from Pakistan. We were not interested in books indulging in propaganda against the Pakistani political system or the Pakistan President but in creative literature. Such books generated a lot of understanding and whatever Pakistan Government could do in this regard would be greatly appreciated in India. Referring to an earlier incident in which the Pakistan Government had raised objections to distribution of newspapers by the Indian Consulate in Karachi to the Karachi Press Club, Foreign Secretary said that there was no intention on our part to violate any Pakistani regulations. Our newspapers published all kinds of news critical of our Government. Given the stated desire of the Pakistan Government for increased exchanges of books, periodicals and newspapers, there was really no reason why Pakistani Journalists should not read Indian newspapers. He was indeed surprised that Pakistan Foreign Office had raised objection on this matter. FS also stated that we had made proposals about the removal of travel restrictions and exemption from police reporting and the ball was in Pakistan’s court. FS then referred to the statement by the Pakistan Labour Minister in the newspaper, “Dawn” of 27 April in which he had commented on the “plight” of Indian Muslims. Explaining the situation, Foreign Secretary said that Indian Muslims had the same opportunities and problems as people of other communities. India was a secular state and the state was the protector of all religions. Adding further, FS said that he had no grouse about such statements but he thought he would mention it because these statements did not make positive impact.

12. Thereafter, FS said that certain steps by Pakistan Government had caused suspicions in our minds. He mentioned about the different measures taken by Government of Pakistan for absorption of Northern Areas. In this context, he referred to the advance notification by Pakistan Government to the IFRB about coverage of Pakistan’s broadcasting and tele-communication satellite. The notification contains a reference to the Northern Areas as among the coverage areas. FS described this as a provocation and referred to our note of December 23, 1983 conveying our objection. He said it would be appropriate if the words “including the N.A. of Kashmir” could be deleted from Pakistan’s notification to IFRB.

13. Referring to Niaz Naik’s observation regarding visit by defence representatives, FS said that he had noted the Pakistani suggestion. FS expressed satisfaction at the fact that the Establishment Secretary of Pakistan was visiting India and hoped that he would have a good visit. FS informally suggested that there could be contacts between the “Agencies” of the two countries. He asked Niaz Naik to give some thought to this idea.

14. Niaz Naik said that Dr. Mahbubul Haq was keen to visit India after Ramzan. His visit could be useful in exchange of views between the two countries on international economic situation and the measures that they can take in regard to the North-South dialogue. Niaz Naik also underlined the need for frequent contacts between media representatives of the two countries. In this context, he referred to the seminar organized by The Muslim in February last and described it as a welcome development. About the proposed dates for Information Minister Shri Bhagat’s visit, he said that he would check the convenience of their Information Minister and confirm the dates. (subsequently, Pakistan side confirmed that July 7-11, 1984 would be convenient for the visit of the Indian Information Minister). Regarding FS’s suggestion for freer exchange of books and newspapers, Niaz Naik said that they were under instructions from President Zia to examine this matter on the basis of priority and to deep it on the agenda for the next Joint Commission meeting.

15. Talking about the visit of Establishment Secretary, Niaz Naik explained to FS that Pakistan was trying to revise the training procedures for important administrative services and in this regard a Committee of Five Federal Secretaries had been set up. Niaz Naik further stated that FS’s idea of contacts between the “other Agencies” was a good one and jokingly said that let James Bond on the two sides also visit each other. In this connection, Niaz Naik referred to the visit of their Interior Secretary and the DIB to India after NAM for discussions on a particular subject. Coming back to statements by leaders, Niaz Naik said that if there was a negative content in the statements of Indian leaders the newspapers in Pakistan start responding to them. Positive statements from the official sources on one side and negative statements by the press created doubts in the minds of the people. He said that as far as Pakistan Government was concerned, it mostly tried not to respond to such statements. He hoped that now that the Lok Sabha session was over, the frequency of such statements would go down. Referring to statements by Indian leaders about the acquisition of arms by Pakistan, Niaz Naik referred to the understanding reached between the two FMs in 1981 about the sovereign right of the two nations to determine their defence requirements. Responding to our proposal for exception from police reporting for visitors staying for less than 14 days, Niaz Naik said that they were examining the matter and to start with certain categories of people like businessmen, media representatives could be accepted from police reporting. He suggested that this matter could be discussed further in the Sub-Commission meeting.

16. Rounding up the first session, FS said that Foreign Minister was greatly looking forward to his meeting with Sahabzada Yaqub Khan. Foreign Secretary also conveyed appreciation of the Government for Pakistan Government’s decision to send Dr. Humayun Khan as their Ambassador.

17. Khaled Ali, Director General, External Publicity on the Pakistan side stated that Pakistan was bending over backwards to implement the Simla Agreement in regard to the role of media. Pakistani newspapers were regularly publishing dispatches carried by Indian newspapers and that to some extent informed the Pakistani readers about developments in India. He added that negative statements by the Indian leaders get lot of publicity in the Pakistani newspapers as they try to project their own point of view on such matters. Khaled Ali further stated that he had a record of the objectionable statements made by AIR on Pakistan’s nuclear programme, exercises conducted by the Pakistan Armed Forces etc. FS suggested that this could be discussed between JS (XP) and Khaled Ali and the latter could also give copy of statements considered objectionable to JS (XP).

Record of the meeting of Foreign Secretary M. K. Rasgotra with General K. M. Arif, Vice Chief of Army Staff of Pakistan.

Embassy of India
Islamabad

Foreign Secretary called on Vice Chief of Army Staff General K.M. Arif at his residence at 6.45 PM on 21 May 1984. The meeting lasted 35 minutes and would no doubt had gone on for longer if FS did not have to leave for his meeting with President Zia scheduled for 7.30 PM.

2. FS gave a resume of the talks that he had been having with Foreign Secretary Niaz Naik. He emphasized that Government of India at the highest level was fully committed to exploring every possible avenue of establishing friendly and mutually beneficial relations with Pakistan. He said that unfortunately there were some people in both countries who for a variety of reasons chose to project events in negative fashion. As an illustration, FS referred to an incorrect and misleading report that had been published in some of the Indian newspapers some time ago about certain views attributed to Shri Rajiv Gandhi on Indo-Pak relations. FS remarked that this matter came up in the Indian Parliament also on 9 May and Shri Rajiv Gandhi intervening in the debate clarified that the newspaper reports about certain remarks allegedly made by him were incorrect. FS in conclusion stated that India desired good and friendly relations with Pakistan and had no other interest in its internal developments except a “positive” interest.

3. General Arif thanked FS for briefing him about Government of India’s latest thinking and policies. He said that Pakistan also had no interest in exacerbating or escalating tension between the two countries. In fact with this end in view he had conveyed two specific suggestions through the Indian Defence Attaché in Islamabad Brigadier Khanna to the Indian Chief of Army Staff. These suggestions were that both sides should make all possible efforts to (a) keep the borders tension-free and (b) keep each other informed well in advance of troop movements near the border. General Arif said that he was keenly awaiting the response from the Indian side to these suggestions.

4. FS remarked that he was sure that General Arif’s suggestions would be carefully considered in positive light. He said that in this connection he wanted to mention that the Indian defence authorities had proposed a ‘flag meeting’ with the Pakistani counterparts in relation to some incidents that had recently occurred in the Siachen Glacier area in Jammu and Kashmir.
5. General Arif in response said that he did not know of any such suggestion from the Indian side but he would have the matter immediately looked into. His own view was that in all such cases of tensions or incidents on the border, meetings between the local Commanders must be immediately arranged so that the level of tension does not escalate, as indeed he had remarked earlier.

6. The meeting ended with the usual courtesies. General Arif warmly thanked FS for the gift that he had given him.

1044. SECRET

Minutes of the meeting between Foreign Secretary M. Rasgotra and Dr. Mahbabul Haq, Pakistan Minister of Planning and Development.

Foreign Secretary called on Dr. Mahbubul Haq in the latter’s office at 3.15 PM on 21 May and was with him for little over an hour.

2. Dr. Haq welcoming Foreign Secretary and thanking him for his visit remarked that while the talks between the two Foreign Secretaries could continue to tackle and decide upon the issues affecting the “larger destiny of the two nations”, resolute effort should be made by both sides to bolster bilateral economic cooperation. He remarked that he saw a bright future for SARC. His own assessment was that SARC had ahead of it even a brighter future than EEC. He pointed out that whereas the OECD countries were currently able to achieve a growth rates in most of only 2 to 3 per cent, the growth rates in most of the countries of South Asia and South-East Asia were above 6 per cent. Also a point not to be forgotten was that the South Asian countries between them comprised a market of 1 billion people.

3. Commenting on the point quite often made that there were no basic complementarities between the economies of the South Asian countries, Dr. Haq remarked that this was a totally erroneous view. He said that before the division of Pakistan into two countries 14 years ago, the economics of the two wings of Pakistan were heavily inter-dependent. If that was the basic situation then, how could it now be said that as between these Asian countries there were no complementarities or possibilities of mutually beneficial and fruitful economic cooperation. The same, Dr. Haq said, applied to other South Asian countries also. The Minister remarked that the trouble was that there were too many complexes and imaginary fears that opening out the national economies to the other countries of the region would lead to their domestic economies being overrun. Dr. Haq said that this was an absurd, view.

4. Foreign Secretary said that he completely agreed with Dr. Haq’s analysis.
He said that we should remove these old cob-webs. He said that economic cooperation between the South Asian countries was vitally important. FS said that he fully agreed with Dr. Haq that while discussions between the two Governments on political matters were proceeding, spade-work to identify areas of economic cooperation and establish institutional arrangements through which the countries of the region could benefit from each other’s experience, should be taken in hand and pushed through with vigour and a sense of dispatch. FS said that we were looking forward with interest and eagerness to Dr. Haq’s visit to our country.

5. Dr. Haq responding said that he would be delighted to visit India and sit down not only with the Government leaders but also with economic planners and thinkers for a comprehensive exchange of views and ideas. He said that the second half of August would suit him best for a visit to India. FS remarked that soon after his return to Delhi he would check with, our Minister for Planning whether it would be convenient for him to receive Dr. Haq in late August. Dr.
Haq and FS agreed that it would be a welcome day when visits by Indian and Pakistani Government leaders and other important personalities to each other’s country become “no special news”!

6. Dr. Haq gave a fascinating analysis of the way the banks and other financial institutions of developed countries exploit the weak bargaining position and staying power of the developing countries and keep them tied hand and foot and perpetually at their mercy. He cited the example of Brazil who despite having a perfectly sound economy found itself under such international financial pressure.

7. The meeting ended with usual courtesies and with FS remarking that we in India would be looking forward to Dr. Haq’s visit in a couple months’ time.

SARC:

Opening the discussions Foreign Secretary Shri Rasgotra said that he had already had some brief discussions with Mr. Naik on matters pertaining to SARC. The SARC was now entering an active phase of implementation. However he had noted that instead of seeing concrete results emerge, there seemed to be a series of meetings after meetings. While he was not impatient, he was keen on seeing concrete and visible results emerge from these meetings. Foreign Secretary said that the meeting of the Steering Committee had gone off successfully. We particularly note that an interest is now being taken on North-South issues as the issues pertain to common problems faced by all the SARC members. Foreign Secretary added that the Technical Committees are doing the best they can, but it is important that concerted efforts are made to see that positive results emerge.

Foreign Secretary said that we are not clear whether the Maldives Government would be preparing any background papers for the forthcoming Foreign Ministers meeting. It would not be appropriate for us to prepare these papers for meetings in Maldives because we would be handing over our present responsibilities. One of the most important items on the agenda at the meeting of the Foreign Ministers in Maldives will be the possibility, timing and venue of a summit level meeting of the South Asian Countries.

Foreign Secretary told Mr. Naik that he would appreciate if Mr. Naik would let him know his view on this question in strict confidence. He would like to know whether the Pakistan side felt that time is ripe for a summit meeting. Bangladesh is keen on holding a summit meeting. They are also keen on putting together an organization and a secretariat. Foreign Secretary added that our Foreign Minister has told the Foreign Secretaries of South Asian countries in Delhi that we would be prepared to have a summit as soon as we are ready with something, which we could put up at the summit. The prime mover of the summit idea is Bangladesh. Foreign Secretary told Mr. Naik that he would be grateful if he could give us his perceptions on the future development of SARC, especially on the question of an organization and secretariat.

Foreign Secretary said that there have been talks about additional areas of cooperation. Largely out of regard for the views which had been expressed by Mr. Naik, we had gone along with his suggestion that it is important to strengthen existing areas of co-operation. Foreign Secretary added that we are happy at the creation of a South Asian Council for Co-operation in Trade and Industry. There is interest in trade and commercial circles about developing co-operation on a regional basis in trade and industry. While we have encouraged these initiatives by industrial and trade circles, we have been careful not to give them undue hope. Mr. Naik said that from the beginning the Pakistani approach had been one of not being over-ambitious. The SARC countries should learn from the experience of others. Pakistan had some experience of regional co-operation because of its association with the RCD. Regional co-operation should start on a realistic and pragmatic basis. Initially only those proposals which are capable of implementation with existing resources should be taken up. Initially the measures for regional co-operation should have a visible impact on the lives of the peoples of the seven countries. This would create a general climate of confidence. It was for this reason that the initial areas identified for co-operation included communications, telegraphs, etc. SARC had so far developed on a sound and realistic basis. None of the member countries had been over-ambitious. There was an awareness of resource constraint and other problems.
Naik said that at Male the seven Foreign Secretaries should have a close look at the implementation of the short-term recommendations made by them. The countries which are the focal points of various areas of co-operation should submit reports on their implementation. The Technical Committee should be given clear directions on matters like symposia, seminars, deputation of experts, etc.

Naik said that the Foreign Secretaries are preoccupied with so many other things that they cannot keep track personally of the various stages of implementation of proposals for co-operation. He added that there is a Directorate in the Pakistan Foreign Office dealing with SARC. He was of the view that the departments in the Foreign Ministries dealing with matters pertaining to SARC in the seven member states should keep in close touch. All the countries had set aside substantial budgetary allocations for implementing programmes of co-operation, particularly India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Nepal and Sri Lanka. If it is found at the meeting of Foreign Secretaries that high level discussions are required, then proposals could be submitted to the Foreign Ministers.

Naik said that it was his view that at Maldives the first item on the agenda would be a review of the implementation of proposals for co-operation. If SARC had a Secretariat, the Secretariat could review the progress of implementation of the proposals for co-operation and put up recommendations to the Foreign Secretaries. Since there is no Secretariat at present, he would suggest that India as host for the last meeting could prepare a paper on review of the implementation of proposals for co-operation and submit it at the Foreign Secretaries meeting. Naik paid particular tribute to a report prepared earlier by Additional Secretary Shri I.S. Chadha.

He added that it is beyond the resources of Maldives to prepare such a paper. When he had met the Maldives Foreign Secretary Zaki recently, Zaki had informed him that he was looking forward to assistance from India or Pakistan in this matter. Naik suggested that some of the officers from India or Pakistan could go to Male in advance to advise the Government of Maldives on this and other matters. He suggested that it would be useful if Additional Secretary I.S. Chadha could be deputed for this purpose.

Regarding Foreign Secretary's comments about additional areas of co-operation, Naik said that the common consensus is that we should first consolidate and implement existing areas of co-operation. We could later consider expanding these areas of co-operation. We had recently included "Information" which was a "vital" issue. More substantial areas like trade and industry could be taken up later - step by step.

Naik said that it was decided at New Delhi that the Foreign Ministers were to determine the possibility, timing and venue of the South Asian summit. The Pakistani position was that the summit must be carefully prepared. It would be counter-productive if there was not careful and adequate preparation. We would have to first determine what we are going to present to our leaders for discussion in the summit. The Foreign Ministers have launched a programme of action and it is important that this should be implemented.

Referring to the question of a summit meeting of South Asian countries, Naik said that a number of factors would have to be taken into account. It would in any case not be practicable till the end of 1985 as leaders of some countries would be preoccupied with the election process. The Pakistani view was that if, everything goes well in implementation of existing programmes, the earliest a summit could be held was between September and December 1985 or early in 1986. A summit meeting cannot be held earlier. Except for Bangladesh, who was keen on an earlier summit, the other countries appear to be agreeable to this suggestion.

Naik said that before the summit, Ministerial level meeting would have to be held at least once or twice and the Foreign Secretaries would have to meet perhaps more often. Bangladesh is keen that the summit should be held in Dacca. It would be necessary to ascertain which other countries are interested in hosting the summit when the Foreign Ministers meet in Male. It was evident that given their limited resources Bhutan and Maldives would not be able to host this summit. Naik added that Bangladesh could be asked as to why they feel the summit should be held in Dhaka. Bangladesh Government could also be asked what they expect the summit to achieve. He added that though Pakistan had an open mind on the venue, the views of all countries should be ascertained. The discussions on this subject should be a “friendly” exercise. Naik said that they had not yet considered what the summits should do. The summit could perhaps consider the launching of an organization and the issue of Declaration by the seven as mentioned by Bangladesh. These matters would, however, have to be given a little more thought.

Naik said that the South Asian countries were gradually moving towards establishing some kind of a Secretariat. India was presently having the responsibility of coordinating the activities of the group. The Secretary General of the Secretariat could perhaps prod the member countries into implementing the decisions taken. The South Asian countries could also build up their own archives and the member Governments could send ideas to the Secretariat for circulation. Naik added that a number of foreign Governments and multilateral organizations have shown growing interest in the SARC because of its size and potential. A Secretariat could become the focal point for dealing with SARC. Foreign Secretary said that it is not surprising that foreign Governments have shown interest in the development of SARC because of the great potential for economic co-operation in the region. He recalled that Dr. Mahbubul Haq had earlier stated that the GNP of the seven SARC states is over $200 billion. Naik commented that this GNP was more than the GNP of all the African countries (excluding the OPEC countries). The external agencies would naturally like to deal with the Secretariat.

Foreign Secretary enquired where the Secretariat should be located. Mr. Naik said that the Secretariat would demonstrate the extent of our co-operative effort to the outside world. ASEAN has a Secretariat and the EEC has annual consultations with ASEAN. Organizations like ITU, UPU could be encouraged to give funds for programmes for co-operation in consultation with the Secretariat. He added that to begin with, the Secretariat should be very very small one with a maximum of seven officials, one from each country. The senior most could be Secretary General. Perhaps instead of having a permanent Secretary General, the post could be rotated every two or three years alphabetically. In response to Foreign Secretary’s question about where the Secretariat could be located, Naik said that the Secretariat could be initially shifted amongst the countries, depending on the country from which the Secretary General comes. This, however, would become a cumbersome process as the work of the Secretariat grows. At that stage it could be located in one of the countries. It was, however, important that it should be centrally located, which ruled out Bhutan and Maldives. The other countries could be considered for locating the Secretariat. The Secretariat should be small and efficient and the Secretary General should be in touch with the Foreign Secretaries.

Naik reiterated that Pakistan is committed to SARC. Both Prime Minister Nakasone and Vice President Bush had enquired about SARC. It was evident that people are beginning to take note of its development. The development of SARC presents marketing opportunities to countries like Japan. More importantly, they feel that SARC reinforces good neighbourly bilateral relations. There is thus both political and economic interest in its growth. Therefore the Pakistani view that SARC should grow in a gradual but effective manner. Naik said that Shri Chadha had presented an excellent paper in New Delhi and it would be useful if he could prepare a similar paper for the meeting in Male. This issue could be discussed further. Foreign Secretary said that he shared Mr. Naik’s perceptions. Naik said that in the capitals of the seven SARC countries the Foreign Secretary or Additional Secretary in charge of SARC should keep in touch with the SARC Ambassadors. Ambassador mentioned that he was keeping in close touch with SARC. Ambassadors in Islamabad looked forward to encouragement and support from Mr. Naik and Mr. Sattar. Mr. Naik assured him that such support would be certainly forthcoming.
Foreign Secretary said that we were keeping in close touch with SARC Ambassadors in Delhi. Sattar said that Pakistani Ambassador in Tokyo had reported that Ambassadors of seven SARC countries had jointly called on the Japanese Foreign Minister to discuss issues of common concern like aid and trade. Likewise, PRs in New York have also held at least one meeting. It would be useful if the Foreign Secretaries could encourage their Ambassadors to do this. Foreign Secretary said that some of the Indian Ambassadors had addressed him on this issue and he had told them to go ahead. F. S. said that he would write to our ambassadors on this. He said that he had started in New Delhi meeting SARC Ambassadors and senior officials over lunch at least once a month.

Joint Commission

Referring to the meeting of the Joint Commission, Naik said that August 6 to August 9 would suit the Pakistan side. These dates had been fixed after taking into consideration the flight schedules to and from Delhi. Foreign Secretary said that if the work was done well, then three days should be enough. It was decided that the spokesman would announce that evening that the Joint Commission would meet during the first ten days of August.

Sattar said that he and his colleagues had studied the agenda presented earlier by the Indian side. Their scrutiny revealed that there are some new items on which they would have to consult other Ministries. The agenda was, therefore, generally acceptable though the wording of some of the items could perhaps be changed. He referred to item one in the agenda on Sub Commission II regarding the provision of “negative list” by the Pakistan side for private sector imports. Sattar said he would have to consult Commerce Ministry about this. Ambassador said that he had spoken to the Pakistan Commerce Secretary earlier who suggested that the “negative list” approach would be considered by them.

Foreign Secretary said that Indian Commerce Secretary had told him that he would welcome “negative list” from Pakistan side. India was keen that its experts should not hurt Pakistan’s domestic industry.

Naik then went on to the procedure adopted with regard to meetings of various Joint Commissions in Pakistan. He said that in the case of Joint Commissions with important countries like India, the coordinating Ministry is the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

The Foreign Minister presided over co-ordination meetings in which other Ministries were represented at Secretary level. Based on the recommendations of these meetings, a summary is submitted to the President and his general acceptance is sought. Likewise, the summary of the decisions arrived at was submitted to the President at the conclusion of the Joint Commission meeting. The Finance Ministry was naturally kept closely associated. F. S. said that India also more or less followed the same procedure. Important Joint Commissions in India are under Chairmanship of Foreign Minister. Most of the meetings are taken by him and Foreign Secretary at which Secretaries from other Ministries are present. Foreign Minister and he then meet the Prime Minister and brief her about the issues involved. MEA keeps track of implementation of its various decisions.

Naik said that the Pakistan Ambassador is always actively involved in the work of the Joint Commissions. He added that at the technical level it is good to maintain continuity and representation so that personal rapport develops between officials dealing with specific subjects. Foreign Secretary said that we had an open mind to all such suggestions.

Missing Defecne Personnel

Foreign Secretary then referred to the question of missing Defence personnel. He said that a large number of relatives of these people had met Foreign Minister. We had earlier received an encouraging response from Pakistan Government. The relatives had asked for visits to some jails where prisoners are kept. Naik recalled that Foreign Minister told him just before the Udaipur talks that Major Suri’s father wants to visit all jails in Pakistan. Joint Secretary AP said that the request was for visits to only those jails where Indians are kept. There was, however, now some apprehension that Major Suri may have been detained as a Pakistani prisoner. Sattar said that the Pakistan side had examined the request of Major Suri’s father. They could state that no one arrested in 1970-71 except those under life imprisonment, is now in jail. If the prisoner is a security prisoner he is identified. In this case the Pakistan side knows that he is not a Pakistani. There are no Indian prisoners arrested in 1970-71 presently in Pak jails. All of them including security prisoners were released in 1973-74.

Sattar said that three names were given to the Indian side by Indian prisoners who had been recently released as being Indian defence personnel in custody in Pakistan. Pakistan side had, however, not been able to identify these three individuals. There are, however, some persons with similar names. They are security prisoners.

Sattar added that the two sides should agree on a reciprocal basis to facilitate access to security prisoners. It would be very difficult to meet the request of Major Suri’s father to visit all the jails unless it is on the basis of reciprocity. Sattar said that when he was Ambassador in India he had received a number of requests from Pakistanis for access to jails in India where they felt their relatives were under detention. He had however not taken up this matter with the Government of India. (Sattar had earlier implied that the Indian side was taking up issue, of missing defence personnel without proper examination whenever such a request was received from the relatives of the defence personnel.)

Joint Secretary AP said that the request of Major Suri’s father should be seen in the context of the agreement between the two Foreign Ministers that he should be granted all facilities to try and locate his son on humanitarian considerations. We had pointed out the difficulties to Major Suri’s father but he had asked that the photograph of Major Suri may be compared with those of security prisoners held by Pakistan side. Joint Secretary AP later reiterated to Director General Dehlavi that as the request of Major Suri’s father was because of special humanitarian considerations and had been agreed by the two Foreign Ministers, the case should be considered in that context. If Pakistan side had similar problem of access on humanitarian grounds we could consider. In any case if Mr. Suri was allowed to see only those prisoners who had completed their prison term and were about to be repatriated, JS (AP) pointed out. Joint Secretary AP also mentioned that the lists provided by us included names of security prisoners. This list be kept in mind while list of Indian prisoners is compiled by the Pak side. It emerged that the list being prepared by Pakistan authorities did not contain list of security prisoners.

Mr. Sattar raised the question of the 119 Pak prisoners whose whereabouts after completion of sentences were not known. JS (AP) said that this point had been discussed at length at Mr. Delhavi’s office and mentioned that in 1981 there had been a similar instance involving over sixty Indian prisoners who were in Multan jail. JS (AP) said we wanted to devise procedures that prisoners are repatriated on completion of their sentences and we were waiting for suggestions from Pak side.

In response to a query by Ambassador Humayun Khan, Mr. Sattar said that circular letters had been sent out in 1974 to all provincial governments and it had been confirmed that no prisoner called Major Suri was held in any of the jails. JS (AP) said that Major Suri had written a letter in 1977 and that his handwriting had been checked and confirmed. Mr. Sattar said that the army does not maintain jails and all other jails had given in writing that Maj. Suri was not held in custody.

Foreign Secretary said that we had given all information and suggested that the matter be kept under review.

Foreign Secretary said that the question of surveillance of Indian Embassy personnel was considered at some length at Udaipur. He asked Naik whether it would be possible to make life easier for Indian officials in Pakistan. Naik said that surveillance could not be discontinued altogether. It should however, not hamper the movements of the Ambassador or any of his officials. He had taken up this issue with the concerned agencies in Pakistan after the Udaipur talks and it was his impression that things have been eased.

Ambassador contradicted what Naik said. He alluded to a recent visit of his to Lahore where he met three people - Mumtaz Daulatana, Arif Nizami and Mian Muenddin. As soon as he got into his flag car he was followed by five people in a Jonga jeep and a Motorcycle. The motorcyclists even entered Daulatana’s residence and had to be asked by the servants there to leave. Ambassador also alluded to recent instances of intimidating surveillance of First Secretary Ravi Nair.

Foreign Secretary said that both Foreign Offices should ask the concerned agencies to take care to avoid any intimidation to Ambassador or other officials. He had been emphasizing this in his discussions with the concerned authorities in India. Foreign Secretary asked Consul General about surveillance in Karachi. Consul General remarked that in general the surveillance in Karachi was not as intense as in Islamabad. He would however like to mention that one of his officials, Consul J. P. Mukherjee had been subjected to intense surveillance and even invasion of his privacy in his residence. This had naturally made the official feel intimidated. Sattar said the matter would be looked into.

Referring to his own experience in Delhi Sattar said that over the years there were persons outside the gate of the Embassy. They had interrogated some Pakistanis to which he had taken objection. Sattar also alluded to the presence of a “tea shop” just outside the Chancery premises of the Pakistan Embassy and adjacent to the wall of the Pakistan Embassy. He said that it was well known that this “tea shop” was run by Indian agencies. He expressed the hope that its location would be shifted some distance away. Foreign Secretary said that he had not asked for complete removal of surveillance but it should be in a more civilized way. He asked the Pak Ambassador if he had any problem.

Pak Involvement in Punjab

Foreign Secretary said that he had spoken to Naik about Pakistani propaganda on the “Khalistan” issue. Foreign Secretary then handed over to Naik a book printed in Lahore with the cover and the contents in Urdu and Gurmukhi “Khalistan”. Foreign Secretary said he was shocked by the contents of this book which were both insulting and offensive. The book was then handed over to Naik. Foreign Secretary also asked Naik to tell him the present position about the hijackers and the activists of the JKLF. He said that we had received some threats from JKLF activists from some capitals. He asked Naik if he could let him know how JKLF activists operate. He would particularly welcome any information that Naik may have on whether the JKLF are hatching any conspiracy against Indian Missions and personnel.

Replying to Foreign Secretary, Naik said that Foreign Secretary had also spoken about the objectionable contents of the book “Khalistan” to President Zia. President Zia had assured Foreign Secretary that there was no involvement of Pakistan in developments in Punjab or with Sikh extremists.

Foreign Secretary requested Naik to bring the contents of the book he has handed over to him to the notice of President Zia. He said that people in India are generally getting tired of terrorist activities in Punjab. There are no supporters of “Khalistan” in India. It is acknowledged that Sant Bhindranwale had some supporters. But the Government of India was quite confident of handling this issue. The Government had shown considerable restraint in use of force not out of weakness but out of a desire to find a political solution. It could deal with the issue more firmly quite easily. However, when there is propaganda from Pakistan on developments in Punjab it is only natural that we get concerned.

Training Camps in India for Pak terrorists

Foreign Secretary told Naik that he had looked through the map he had given to by Naik in Udaipur giving the location of alleged terrorist training camps in India. Foreign Secretary said that he had spoken to the highest authorities in the country and he could categorically inform him that there was no such camp anywhere in India. He added that when Naik came to India he would be quite happy to take him to these locations so that he could satisfy himself that there was no truth in what was being said about the existence of the camps in India.

Foreign Secretary also said the Sri Lankans had on the basis of some press report alleged there was some camp for training of Tamil extremists near Kumbakonam. We had told them that there was no such camp in India. There were, however, 30,000 Tamils in India.

Cooperation between Intelligence Agencies

Naik said that he had referred Foreign Secretary’s suggestion about cooperation between the agencies of the two countries to President Zia. President Zia had welcomed the suggestion. He said that we should now recommend to our Governments how we could proceed further in this matter.

Links of Pak Embassy in London with Sikh Extremists

Referring to allegations of involvement of Pakistan Embassy officials in London with Sikh extremists, Naik said that he had asked Additional Secretary Sattar to look into the matter and it had been ascertained that Embassy officials in London had no contacts whatsoever with Sikh extremists. The Embassy in London does however have to deal with Sikhs holding Indian passports who want to visit Pakistan for pilgrimage. Naik also denied Sikh leaders from abroad (he was evidently referring Dhillon and Parmar) had met President Zia. He said that President Zia had clarified to him that he only receives Sikh pilgrims in the presence of Indian Ambassadors or Charge d'Affaires.

Trial of Hijackers

Referring to the question of hijackers Naik said that the question of putting them on trial was only one of timing. Pakistan side felt that if the trials were started today, people in India and Pakistan and abroad would feel that they were exacerbating matters. Foreign Secretary said “Please return them to us and we will take care of them”. Naik reiterated that the trial of hijackers at present may strain the atmosphere. we are to hold the trial”, he said.

Naik’s Visit:

Foreign Secretary then asked Naik when he would be able to visit India for continuing the dialogue. Naik said that he could visit India in the third week of July for 18 to 21 July. Foreign Secretary confirmed that these dates were acceptable.
1046. Statement issued at the end of talks between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan.

The Foreign Secretary of India M. K. Rasgotra paid a visit to Pakistan from 19 to 23 May at the invitation of the Pakistan Foreign Secretary Mr. Niaz A. Naik. The two Foreign Secretaries resumed their discussion that took place in Delhi and Udaipur last March on various aspects of Indo-Pakistan relations.

During his visit, Mr. Rasgotra was received by the President of Pakistan Gen. M. Zia-ul-Haq. He handed over to the President a letter from the Prime Minister of India, Mrs. Indira Gandhi.

The two Foreign Secretaries held several rounds of talks in Islamabad and Murree. During the talks, which were held in a cordial and constructive atmosphere, they reaffirmed the importance both governments attached to developing and maintaining friendly and good-neighbourly relations.

In the course of the visit, a Protocol on group tourism was signed by the two Foreign Secretaries. Letters were also exchanged amending the Visa Agreement of 1974, to ease procedures relating to travel between the two countries.

The visit to Pakistan of the Indian Minister for Information and Broadcasting Mr. H.K.L. Bhagat is scheduled to take place from July 7-11, 1984. During his visit Mr. Bhagat is expected to discuss matters relating to media cooperation between the two countries with the Pakistan Information Minister Raja Zafarul Haq.

On May 24 the Pakistani daily Muslim quoting London Times reported that President Zia-ul-Haq had in an interview expressed Pakistan’s deep concern over the concentration of Indian troops along the Indo-Pakistan border and said that the steps taken by India during the last five or ten years had intensified Pakistan’s apprehensions regarding its security vis-à-vis India. He said India had concentrated three-fourth of its troops in areas adjoining Pakistan. Similarly, Pakistan had also spread its forces along its borders as a precautionary measure. Pakistan had not, however, established bases on the borders, while India had a concentration of a number of military posts, cantonments and new airports in recent years. “This”, he said, “has created a situation we consider alarming to our security”. He had sent a message to the Indian Prime Minister more than a year ago to reduce the number of Indian forces deployed on the border with a view to creating confidence in Pakistan, Gen. Zia said. In response to such a gesture from India, Pakistan would also have removed its forces. However, he regretted that Mrs. Indira Gandhi had never responded to that suggestion. Refuting the allegation that Pakistan was sending commandos to the northern areas, he said the area was unpopulated and hilly and there was no logic for India or Pakistan to send their commandos there. Briefing on the developments regarding no-war pact, Gen. Zia said Indian were demanding written assurances from Pakistan that it would resolve bilateral problems through mutual forums only. He opined that such demands were unnecessary and a curb on the independence and sovereignty of Pakistan. “Are my words not sufficient?” he asked.
It was agreed that the second meeting of the India–Pakistan Joint Commission will take place in New Delhi in the first part of August 1984. The delegations will be led by the two foreign ministers.

Detailed consideration of the two drafts of the non-aggression pact and friendship treaty took place, as a result of which a considerable measure of convergence of the viewpoints of the two sides had been achieved.

Mr. Rasgotra extended an invitation to Mr. Naik to visit New Delhi. Mr. Naik accepted the invitation with pleasure. The visit will take place from July 18-21, 1984 when discussions will be resumed.

1047. Press Note issued by the Embassy of India in Islamabad regarding declaring Punjab as ‘Restricted Area’.

Islamabad, June 4, 1984.

The whole of the state of Punjab in India has been declared as a ‘restricted area’. As such, no foreign national can enter the state of Punjab without a special permit, even for transit.

In order to facilitate the transit of Pakistani nationals through Punjab after they enter India through the Wagah – Attari check-post, a special endorsement is being made on their visas. Pakistani nationals are, however, required to travel through Punjab by the shortest route within the minimum necessary time. Foreign nationals, (including citizens of Commonwealth countries) other than citizens of Pakistani are advised that entry into India will not be permitted to them by the land route through the Wagah – Attari check-post. Such foreign nationals desirous of visiting India are requested to arrange for their travel from Pakistan to India by air for landing at Bombay or Delhi airports.

The entry of all Pakistanis into the Indian state of Punjab from Pakistani soil has been prohibited with immediate effect, 1048. Statement issued by the Government of Pakistan denying that it interfered in the internal affairs of any State.

Islamabad, June 10, 1984.

“The Government of Pakistan, strictly adhering to the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of other States, has scrupulously refrained from any action or words which might violate that principle. It is, therefore, particularly surprised and concerned over the allegations made by the commander of the Indian military operation at the Golden Temple, which appear designed to externalize and divert attention from an internal crisis.

The Government of Pakistan has not been provided any information by the Government of India about the two Nahangs killed by the Indian Army who are said to have been identified as Pakistanis. Nor has it been told of the passports reportedly bearing Pakistani stamps said to have been found at the Temple and their connection if any with the fighting. Similarly, for the arms found at the Temple, which are said to have been smuggled through Pakistan, that allegation is totally speculative and irresponsible.

Considering the positive and constructive nature of the ongoing dialogue between the Government of Pakistan and the Government of India with a view to establishing normal good-neighbourly and co-operative relations between the two countries, the Government of Pakistan hopes that such attempts to vitiate the atmosphere for narrow and monetary propaganda gain will be eschewed.”

1049. Media Briefing by the Indian and Pakistan official spokespersons after talks between the Information Ministers of the two countries.

Islamabad, July 8, 1984.

Officials spokespersons of Pakistan and India told journalists at a news briefing that the two ministers agreed that cooperation between media of the two countries should be enhanced to create conducive atmosphere to promote friendship and peace in the area.

Raja Zafarul Haq and Mr. Bhagat agreed that media of the two countries should eschew hostile propaganda against each other.
“Media has played a positive role in promoting the relations between the two countries, but they need to do much more,” the Pakistani spokesman said.

The spokesman said the ministers had agreed that media of the two countries should strive to establish friendly relations between the two countries “on the basis of sovereign equality and peaceful coexistence.”

To enhance cooperation between media of Pakistan and India, they agreed that additional correspondents should be posted in each other’s country within a very short period. In fact, they agreed that within a month, correspondents of RADIO PAKISTAN and ALL INDIA RADIO should be posted at New Delhi and Islamabad to represent their respective organizations, the spokesman said.

It was also decided that another correspondent, either from a new agency or a newspaper, would be posted in each other’s country.

The ministers also agreed that Indian and Pakistani journalists should pay frequent visits to each other’s country.

The Pakistani spokesman noted that a large number of Indian journalists had visited Pakistan recently. He said the Indian Information Minister had informed his Pakistani counterpart that a group of 12 Pakistani journalists would be invited to visit India on behalf of the Press Club of India.

Radio and TV organizations of the two countries will exchange programmes and decide within two months that programmes they needed from each other.

It was felt that officials of the two countries should pay frequent visits to each other’s country, and personalities in the field of journalism, radio and television should have close contacts.

The ministers also agreed that officials of the two countries would meet after every three months to review media cooperation and relations between them. They would discuss how to promote cooperation and reduce hostilities, he said.

The Indian spokesman said his country also desired to promote media cooperation between India and Pakistan to establish peace and friendship in the area.

“We want to go a very long way, the longest way possible in media cooperation,” he quoted from Mr. Bhagat’s speech at the lunch Raja Zafarul Haq hosted in honors of the visiting Indian Minister.

The Indian Minister was on an official visit to Pakistan from July 7 to 13, 1984. Addressing a press conference the Indian minister HKL Bhagat said that the Indian draft of a Cultural Agreement was already with Pakistan. The areas of understanding arrived at during his visit will be incorporated in the draft before it was finalized.
ON TIES WITH INDIA

Now, I will talk about India. It is our firm belief that in an atmosphere of confrontation, mistrust and suspicions, neither regional stability could be attained nor progress could be made in any direction in its true sense. A lot of efforts have been made by us in the past few years to improve relations with India, and these efforts have not gone waste. There has been an exchange of many delegations on official and non-official basis. A Joint Commission has been established. The draft of our No-war pact and the Indian Peace and Friendship Treaty are under consideration by the two governments and I hope that after further negotiations, an agreed document would be finalised. It is our earnest desire that the two countries should forget the past bitterns and usher in an era of confidence, cooperation and mutually beneficial relations so that the people of both countries utilize their resources and energies for their welfare and amelioration.

INTERFERENCE IN INDIA’S INTERNAL AFFAIRS DENIED

It shatters our good wishes and sincere efforts when some responsible elements of the Indian leadership accuse Pakistan of interfering in their internal affairs. If we view the past and present history of both the countries, we find contrary evidence. However, this is not the occasion for reviving the old bitterness nor countering the allegation. Therefore, I would barely say that interference in other’s affairs is totally against our policies. To act like this is against our nature. Our attitude of non-interference towards the present state of affairs in Indian Punjab and Kashmir presents a fresh vindication of our stand. Three/four day ago when the Indian Airlines plane along with 255 passengers was hijacked to Lahore, our reaction was extremely positive. At this critical juncture, we utilise our best abilities and it is blessing of Almighty Allah which enabled Pakistan to successfully and honourably carry out this difficult task.

As you know, in the last seven years we have never taken advantage of the difficulties of anyone and we have no such intention in future. May god bless us to solve our problems and to keep our house in order. We do not interfere in other’s affairs nor shall we allow other to interfere in our affairs. The Indian Secretary, Foreign Affairs, Mr. Rasgotra recently paid a visit to Pakistan which was quite successful. During the visit, further progress was made toward the finalization of the agreements and the overall impact of his visit was very good.
However, sometime later, the situation in East Punjab caused some differences but I would like to reiterate that it always has been and, Insha Allah, will be the policy of Pakistan not to take advantage of other’s difficulties. Pakistan is an Islamic country and Islam teaches not to take advantage of others’ difficulties. On the other hand, Islam stresses that as peace-loving country, we should live in love and amity, It is, therefore, impossible and inconceivable that Pakistan would interfere in India’s internal affairs. Do you think Pakistan has such effective resources to exploit the Sikhs in East Punjab that Sir, India should construe them as an interference in its internal affairs. It is impossible.

ON RECOVERY OF WEAPONS WITH PAK & CHINESE MARKINGS IN GOLD TEMPLE

I was saying to a gentleman some days ago that from your side and from the Indian side allegations were being mad against us. They may have some reason for all this, but we are unaware of their compulsion. All that has been said up till now and what has been published in newspapers and the statement issued by Indian leadership show that the allegations, about the weapons of Chinese make and ammunition bearing Pakistan Ordnance Factories stamps were found from Darbar Sahib. In addition, an examination of the dead bodies of two Nihangs revealed that they were Pakistanis. I will ignore the latter part of their statement but I would like to say something about the first two things. Thirteen years ago, when India committed a naked aggression against East Pakistan, the state of affairs in Pakistan was such that our own misdeeds had recoiled on us. East Pakistan was separated and it became Bangladesh. Whenever I have talked about Bangladesh, I have always said that we have no grudge against them and we always pray that may almighty Allah shower His blessings upon Bangladesh, bless the country with progress and enable them to stand on their own feet. But you should know that certain facts cannot be erased from the memory just because 13 years have passed. The people who trained the mukti-Bahini at that time have now joined the Sikhs in their agitation.

One of them is Brig (Retd) Shah Baig Singh. He is one of those who instigated the people in East Pakistan against the Government of Pakistan, trained them attacked Pakistani territory in collaboration with them and when the Indian forces entered into East Pakistan, guided them towards their targets. Now, the same people were assisting Sant Jarnail Singh in Darbar Sahib. At that time, about 60,000 Pakistani troops surrendered. They were equipped with Chinese weapons. Besides, an Ordnance Factory was installed in East Pakistan with the collaboration of China. I asked some friends who came from India whether those weapons which the Indian forces took away from the Pakistani forces were returned to Bangladesh. All those weapons were taken away by the Indian forces. And Bangladesh also alleged that the Indian experts took away much of the Ordnance machinery with them after dismantling it. So 60,000 Chinese weapons were taken away by them (Indians).

After 14 years, when Shah Baig Singh is found dead along with Sant Jarnail Singh in Darbar Sahib, it could be assumed that some of Sikhs in Bangladesh were brought to Darbar Sahib (sic). All the allegations against Pakistan are totally baseless. It is unfair to Pakistan. It is wrong to shift responsibility of one’s internal difficulties to another country. I hope the Indian leadership will take note of the statement made from Pakistan at all levels, from my level to the diplomatic level, emphatically denying the Indian accusations. Our relations with Indian are of a special nature. I have told my Indian friends time and again that we are engaged in this exercise for the last 37 years. However, history has recorded faithfully and we also witnessed the impression the Indian leadership had about Pakistan before its establishment. We know that the Indian leaders were doubtful about the creation of Pakistan. However, Pakistan came into being with the blessings of Almighty Allah.

CALL TO FORGET PAST & IMPROVE TIES.

It exists and will continue of exist, Insha Allah. I also told my Indian friends that it is part of our history that some of you were not ready to concede to the existence of Pakistan, but by the Grace of Allah, Pakistan came into being and fought three wars. However, that has become a matter of the past. Let us now live like good neighbours because if we continue to repeat the past there can be no friendship between Pakistan and India. I have pleaded that such history be put aside, though we can learn a lesson from it. So let us cultivate good relations. If we continue leveling allegations against each other, then progress in this direction will be difficult. We hope that the Indian leadership will appreciate the desire of Pakistan and will honour it and will respond to it in a positive manner. So, we expect that relations between Indian and Pakistan will improve. We are pursuing efforts for improving relations for the last seven years and quite often the Indian response to it has been positive and we hope this process will not be damaged due to the recent allegations. I do expect that Pakistan and India will continue to try to cultivate better relations as good-neighbours.

ON PAK NUCLEAR PLAN POLICY

We have repeatedly given assurance of our peaceful use of atomic energy, but some of our friends still think that Pakistan is interested in making an atomic bomb and that Pakistan’s nuclear programme is against peace, and therefore no opportunities should be provided to her to promote this programme. Recently again, Senator Cranston of the United States said that Pakistan is getting Plutonium from the Karachi Nuclear Power Plant and has set up a plant at Kahuta where uranium is being enriched and that Pakistan has the capability and the Pakistani engineers possess the competence to produce the atomic bomb. The Government of Pakistan on several occasion, has categorically rebutted these allegations. It must, however, be clarified that we need atomic energy for peaceful purposes and to have it is our right. Almighty Allah has no doubt blessed us with capable scientists and innovative brains and we also have the capability, but we are against stockpiling of atomic weapons, which may lead to nuclear war.

We are against proliferation of nuclear weapons and in this regards we have made many proposals which show that Pakistan is for peace and disarmament. We are ready to accept measures which are necessary to contain nuclear

A couple of months later when reports form the U. S. sources said that India was considering pre-emptive strikes of Pakistani nuclear installations, President Zia, while addressing a press conference on September 17 in Islamabad, said that he hoped India would do nothing that would hurt bilateral relation and become a “prelude of war”. He also said that Pakistan had sought clarification about the reports which had emanated from U. S. sources. Gen. Zia however, firmly rejected the presumption that the reports were being deliberately circulated by U. S. intelligence agencies to pressurize Pakistan to lease military bases to U. S. “We have neither been approached by the US nor are we willing to give such bases to any foreign power”, he added.

Gen. Zia, however parried a question about shifting the date of his promised elections because of the current supposedly unsatisfactory situation on the borders with a counter-question: “How do you presume I consider the border situation unsatisfactory?” There was no cause for any serious concern so far as the eastern border with India were concerned. He, however, conceded that on the western border, there had been “aggressive actions” by Afghanistan.

Replying to a question about Indo-Pak confrontation in the northern Siachin Glacier region, Gen Zia referred to “occasional exchanges of fire” between the two sides facing each other there, but said there had been “plenty of moves on both sides at diplomatic and other levels to defuse the situation”. It was an un-demarcated area and in Pakistan’s view, the line of control lay much beyond the Siachin Glacier. India, however, had a different point of view. Local commanders had met once to settle things by negotiations and another such meeting at that level would again be held soon. Pakistan continued to emphasise on India that the situation could deteriorate and, therefore, it was important to settle matters by mutual negotiations.

On the whole, Gen Zia maintained, Pakistan’s “peace offensive” for good-neighbourly relations with India continued, though in such matters results were not sometimes achievable promptly.

Questioned about possible Israeli-Indian collusion to destroy Pakistan’s nuclear installations and the precautions taken by Islamabad against such an eventuality, Gen Zia said Pakistan had taken all necessary measures of protection but in such matters, it was not possible to ensure 100 per cent security.

He, however, hoped India would not take any action which could hurt India-Pakistan relations. Such actions could be a prelude to war, he added. So far as Israel was concerned, he said, he would not comment on its grouse against Pakistan as Pakistan had taken a consistent and principled stand on the Palestine issue for the last 37 years.

In reply to another question, Gen Zia said no fresh date had been fixed for the resumption of the India-Pakistan dialogue on a non-war pact. The July round was put off on Indian initiative and it was then indicated that a fresh date would be settled in September. proliferation. But it is strange that only Pakistan is asked to sign the Non-Proliferation Treaty, while other countries like South Africa, Israel, India and many others who have attained nuclear capability are never asked to do so. Why this discrimination? This is clearly a travesty of justice and fair-play. The argument boils down to this: Since these countries possess it, so we cannot say anything to them. But since you do not possess the atomic weapon therefore we will use pressure against you.

We have conveyed it to them if they can make India, which has a number of nuclear power plants and has already exploded a nuclear device, sign the Non-Proliferation Treaty, Pakistan will also sign it. To this, we did not receive any reply.

We have told India that if she has doubts about our nuclear programme, we may enter into an agreement to sign the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. We even offered India mutual inspection of atomic installations in the two countries but we never received a reply. As far as Senator Cranston’s allegations are concerned, we have told our friends to judge us from our past conduct and statements. Look into the explanation which we have given. We have always maintained that Pakistan’s programme is totally peaceful. As you know I have said it many times that Pakistan has succeeded in enrichment of uranium and with the blessings of Allah there are only a few countries in the world who possess this capability. But it is like a sword which is a weapon but can also cut your throat. There is no such thing as a peaceful nuclear device or non-peaceful nuclear device as claimed by the Indian side with reference to nuclear energy. We say that Pakistan has not any programme of military nature, nor intends to have one in future. Our programme is only for peaceful purposes and no one can stop us from that. With the blessings of Allah, Pakistan will be able to meet its energy deficiencies through nuclear energy. I hope that after my today’s statement such allegations will stop coming up. I want my friends to know that relations among countries are very important and very delicate.

Excerpts relevant to ‘India – Pakistan Relations’ from the Speech of Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan on Pakistan’s Foreign Policy in the Majlis-e-Shoora (Federal Council).

No subject has had a more vital bearing on Pakistan’s foreign policy than our relation with India. The state of relations between Pakistan and India directly affects not only the peace and stability of the region but, more importantly, it is an essential factor in the realization of the hopes and aspirations of the peoples of both countries for a better life.

Guided by these considerations the Government of Pakistan has constantly sought the establishment of tension free and good neighborly relations with India in spite of unfortunate history. We believe that this objective should be pursued on the basis of the principles of peaceful co-existence. To that end the Government of Pakistan has taken major and substantive initiatives.

In recent years exchanges with India in diverse fields have greatly increased. Discussions and dialogues have been intensified in order to bridge gaps in communications, remove mistrust and foster understanding. In September 1981, Pakistan put forward the proposal for an agreement on non-aggression and non-use of force. Our President visited New Delhi in November 1982 and decided with the Indian Prime Minister to establish a Joint Commission with the twin purposes of strengthening mutual confidence and promoting cooperation.

No objective observer can deny that significant progress had been achieved in reversing the trends of the past and setting in motion a process which is positive and beneficial not only for the peoples of the two countries but also for the peace and stability of the region. Yet, we cannot afford to be complacent. The foundations that have been laid are not yet strong enough to withstand excessive stresses and strains. Given the history of mistrust and suspicion, it is unfortunately too easy for the normalization process to falter and stumble.

The last few months have witnessed both positive and negative developments in our relations with India. In the month of May some encouraging progress was made in developments in our negotiations aimed at the integration of our draft of the non-aggressions pact with the Indian draft of a friendship treaty. Assurances were conveyed to us that the Government of India was not only committed to the process of normalization but was keen to promote good neighborly relations and establish a cooperative and constructive relationship with Pakistan. In June this year however some unfortunate statements were made in India which sought to implicate Pakistan in the crisis in Indian Punjab. There was not a shred of concrete evidence to warrant the charges. Indian leaders wrongly took umbrage at the coverage of the Amritsar crisis by our Television and Radio. Our media reports were based on factual news provided by reputable international news agencies. As you are aware, both countries are committed to the prevention of hostile propaganda and during the Indian Information Minister’s recent visit it was suggested that the two Governments should evolve a code of conduct for the official media of both countries.

Some members have expressed concern about recent clashes in the Siachen Glacier Valley in the Northern Areas. The Government of Pakistan shares their concern. I want to inform the Majlis that the Government has evoked established procedures for a negotiated settlement of the problem. A flag meeting between the local commanders of the Pakistan and Indian forces was held last week. Efforts are continuing to prevent further incidents and to find a mutually satisfactory solution of the problem. At this point let me make it clear that while Pakistan scrupulously observes the established norms and recognized principles of good-neighbourly relations among sovereign states, it expects India to do the same. We have emphasized this point in discussions with India as without reciprocity we cannot hope to achieve the results which both sides desire. We respect India’s independence and integrity, we expect India to respect ours. We do not interfere in India’s internal affairs, we expect India equally to refrain from interfering in ours. We do not object to India’s acquisition of military equipment for self-defense, we have no intention to resort to the threat or use of force for settlement of outstanding differences, we expect India to adhere to this obligation in accordance with the UN Charter and the Simla Agreement.

The Government of Pakistan is faithful in the implementation of its international obligations, as was demonstrated again in its handling of the hijacking incident involving an Indian airliner on July 5. As a party to the anti-hijacking treaties, Pakistan made assiduous efforts and, by the Grace of Allah, its authorities succeeded in securing the unconditional release of the passengers, the crew and the plane.

Hijacking of plane is condemned by the world community as a crime and Pakistan is bound by international law to prosecute the hijackers. Thus, the Government of Pakistan will do so in accordance with our laws as the President has already announced. The members of Majlis-e-Shoora share, I am sure, the Government’s gratification about the satisfactory outcome of what could have been a tragic incident. I hope further that they will take pride in the noble and humanitarian gesture of the Government in sending the innocent passengers back to India.
The members of the Majlis are no doubt aware that, at the request of the Indian Government, the meetings of the Foreign Secretaries and the Joint Commission have been postponed. It is our hope that these visits will be rescheduled at early and mutually convenient dates so that the dialogue on the non-aggression pact and friendship treaty proposals can be resumed and progress can be made in the various fields under the Joint Commission.

The Government of Pakistan remains firm in its determination to develop normal good neighborly relation with India. We do not allow difficulties to deter us of obstacles to deflect us from the course of our policy. The ebb and flow of events cannot dislodge a policy that is firmly anchored in principle and designed with due deliberation to serve the supreme interests of the Nation.

National interest requires careful calculations of consequences and implications. Policy cannot be allowed to become hostage to slogans. There is no question of the Government being apologetic or submissive. It will never allow any compromise of the Nation's dignity and honour. But we must not take a sentimental or superficial view. We must be cognizant of our vital and long-term interest. We must be constant in policy and consistent in action. Finally we must always remain on our guard. I want to assure the honorable members, that Insha Allah, Pakistan will never permit any harm to its dignity, independence and integrity.

Letter from Ministry of External Affairs to Heads of Mission regarding Pakistan’s encouragement to terrorism in India.

New Delhi, September 18, 1984.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

S. K. Lambah
Joint Secretary (AP)

My dear Head of Mission/Post

President Zia has been claiming that Pakistan is on a “peace offensive” in its relations with India. In fact, Pakistan has been encouraging terrorism, extremism, and hijacking in India. Their on-the-record actions have been totally inconsistent with their professed desire for friendly relations.

2. In the present context of Indo-Pak relations, three tests could be applied to verify the sincerity of Pakistan’s claim that it seeks peaceful and friendly relations with India. These are Pakistan’s reaction to (i) Punjab developments/hijacking (ii) Communal disturbances in India and (iii) improvement of bilateral relations. On the basis of their performance in the recent past, Pakistan has failed in each of these three tests.

3. The projection of recent developments in Punjab, by the Pakistan official media including Pakistan television was distorted, mischievous and malevolent. As for the print media, which is not allowed to report political developments even in their own country, leading newspapers were allowed to go to town. President Zia and some of his senior ministers made gratuitous, highly objectionable and provocative statements. The unmistakable image that emerged was of a deliberate attempt to exploit the Punjab situation and inflame the emotions of our Sikh community with a view to inciting separatism, communal disharmony and disaffection. Pakistan’s behavior in this regard was clearly inconsistent with their claim of following a policy of non-interference in regard to the activities of the extremists in Punjab. It is now becoming more and more clear that Pakistan is training terrorists, supplying them arms and facilitating their crossing the border.

4. Pakistan’s record in dealing with incidents of hijacking* of Indian planes has been dismal. India has eight neighbours but the hijackers of half a dozen hijackings in the last 14 years chose Pakistan as their destination obviously

* In 1984 there were two hijacking incidents—one in July and another in August.
because they have felt assured of assistance. An attempt was made to exploit the hijacking of the Indian Airlines Airbus in early July to propagate separatist sentiments among the Sikhs. Extensive use was made by the Official media to lionize the hijackers. Their attitude in regard to the hijacking of the Indian Airlines Boeing 737 on 24th August was totally unhelpful. They have so far neither returned to India nor put on trial the hijackers involved in September 1981 and July 1984 hijacking incidents. A comparison of the manner in which the latest hijacking of an IAC aircraft was handled by UAE authorities on the one hand and Pakistan on the other gives evidence of unprecedented help to hijackers by Pakistan.

5. The Pakistan media had shown some initial restraint when communal disturbances broke out in Maharashtra in mid May. Soon thereafter, however, the reporting of communal incidents in the Pakistan media, as in the past, was mischievous and slanted. Communal incidents, for which anti-social elements from different sections of Indian society are responsible and which take place for varied reasons, are invariably characterized as “anti-Muslim” or “Muslim-killing” riots. For the first time ever and almost three weeks after the communal incidents occurred in Maharashtra and at the height of army action in Amritsar, President Zia chose to address a letter on the subject dated June 9, 1984 to the Prime Minister. While the Prime Minister sent a suitable reply, one could not fail to note the timing and content of Zia’s letter.

6. Zia’s record of performance in regard to the process of normalization started by the Simla Agreement of 1972 has been far from satisfactory. The following developments during Zia’s tenure are illustrative of this; (i) trade in the private sector which had been resumed in 1976, was stopped by Zia in July 1978 in his first import policy statement; Zia has not been able to advance even a single economic rationale for the restrictions imposed on imports from India. (ii) provocative comparison of Kashmir with Palestine and Namibia started in international fora; (iii) Pakistan’s response to our proposal for cultural agreement has been negative; (iv) Pakistan has not agreed to our various proposals for liberalizing travel between the two countries; (v) they have not agreed even to the reopening of Khokraper - Munabao check-post which is provided for in the 1974 Visa Agreement; (vi) consistent with their policy of discouraging people-to-people contact, they are not permitting newspapers and periodicals of each country to be read in the other; we have repeatedly made proposals for exchange of books/newspapers/periodicals; (vii) no progress has been made about improving economic relations because of Pakistan’s negative attitude. A visit of a delegation of industrialists and officials to explore prospects of industrial cooperation, even though it has been agreed to in the meeting of the Joint Commission, has not so far taken place; and (viii) they have not responded to our proposals of expansion of lists of religious shrines for visit by pilgrims.

7. I have given these specific instances so that whenever necessary in your discussions you can expose the so-called ‘peace offensive’ which Zia claims to have launched vis-à-vis India.

8. Even if we take their much-trumpeted no-war pact offer, which was made in the context of an agreement for the supply of sophisticated weapons by the United States, you will observe that, after proposing the no-war-pact, Pakistan has taken several steps in respect of Kashmir which were provocative and avoidable. We would have hoped that after proposing the no-war pact at least status quo would have been maintained in respect of Kashmir which I would like to mention for your background information: i) making references to Kashmir in various international fora; ii) nomination for the first time of members from Northern Areas of Pakistan Occupied Kashmir in the Majlis-e-Shoora (the nominated legislature); iii) opening the Karakoram Highway to foreign tourists (26.1.1982); iv) signing of various agreements with China involving POK; (v) holding of a dinner by President Zia in Gilgit in Pak Occupied Kashmir for the Islamabad-based Heads of Diplomatic Mission (November 1983); vi) glorifying Maqbool Butt, a man condemned for criminal activities, as a “martyr in the cause of liberation of Kashmir”.

9. Pakistan has been following a ‘go-slow’ policy on various matters pertaining to our bilateral relations. Pakistan’s response has been lukewarm to proposals made by us to give content of our relations and to facilitate growing contact and cooperation. Even in regard to the implementation of agreed decisions, they have been dragging their feet. Lip-service paid by Pakistan to terms like “peace-offensive” carries little evidence of its sincerity by its actions. Foreign Secretaries level talks and meeting of the Joint Commission have been postponed at our instance as we felt that Pakistan should have some time for cool reflection on their objectives. Foreign secretary’s telegram No.34467 dated July 19, 1984 refers in this connection.

10. We, however, remain committed to the search for cordial and cooperative relations in the spirit of the Simla Agreement. As you know following are among the initiatives taken by India to improve Indo-Pak relations: i) establishment of Indo-Pak Joint Commission, ii) conclusion of a Protocol on group tourism; iii) offer of a Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation; iv) proposal for cultural agreement v) proposal for nondiscriminatory trade relations. We have even indicated our readiness to place voluntary restrictions on exports which could cause damage to Pakistan’s own domestic industries and vi) various proposals to ease travel between the two countries.

Your Sincerely
S. K. Lambah

1053. Note from Intelligence Bureau on hijacking of IAC flight 421 from Lahore to Karachi and Dubai.

New Delhi, October 11, 1984.

Intelligence Bureau
(Ministry of Home Affairs)

Subject: Hijacking of Indian Airlines flight IC-421 (Boeing 737) to Lahore-Karachi-Dubai on August 24/25, 1984, by Sikh extremists.

This is in continuation of our U.O. of oven number, dated August 27, 1984 regarding hijacking of Indian Airlines flight 421 from Chandigarh to Lahore-Karachi-Dubai on August 24, 1984.

2. The seven hijackers of the Indian Airlines flight who were brought back to Delhi from Dubai on September 3, 1984, were interrogated in Delhi. A report on various details of the conspiracy is enclosed herewith (Not available). Salient points which emerged during interrogation are as follows:

(1) The hijacking was a pre-meditated and pre-planned operation of determined and dedicated Sikh youth. The motivation for the hijacking as disclosed by them was to seek revenge against the Army action in the Golden Temple and other “atrocities” against the Sikhs.

(2) Apart from the seven hijackers as many as seven other persons including Harjinder Singh, an AISSF activist, Harmohinder Singh Dhillon, a contractor of Chandigarh, Surinder Singh Rana @ Kuldip Singh since identified as Rajinder Singh Rana, Inderjit Singh, an ASI of Police (presently posted at Police Lines, Ropar), Daljit Singh, r/o Boor Majra, Swaran Singh (lame Sikh), an employee of Education Department of Punjab Government and Barn Singh actively associated in “talent spotting” of volunteers for the conspiracy. However, Harmohinder Singh Dhillon, Rajinder Singh Rana, Inderjit Singh, ASI and Daljit Singh, r/o Boor Majra were the key figures who pro-vided the back-up, financial and other support and played an active role in galvanizing the seven Sikh youth, all in the age group of 19 -- 20 years in the conspiracy to hijack an Indian Airlines Aircraft to Lahore. Following the return of the hijackers from Dubai, except for Rajinder Singh Rana, Harmohinder Singh Dhillon and Harjinder Singh (who have since gone underground), all others have been arrested. Another Akali activist, namely, Hardeep Singh, a detenu in Burail Jail, Chandigarh, was responsible for introducing Kamaljit Singh Sandhu, the leader of the hijackers, Devinder Singh and Amrinder Singh to Harmohinder Singh Dhillon, contractor of Mohali for rendering the required assistance and support in the hijacking plan and other anti-national activities. Ram Singh was arrested by the CBI on September 21, 1984. He disclosed that one Daljit Singh, s/o Gurdev Singh of Boor Majra had introduced him to Rajinder Singh Rana. Daljit Singh left for Abu Dhabi on September 13, 1984 in connection with his employment in some private firm.

(3) Disclosures made by Kamaljit Singh Sandhu, Davinder Singh @ Shanty and Amrinder Singh @ Montu (all hijackers) revealed that the hijacking independently contemplated on the one hand by Kamaljit Singh Sandhu and on the other hand by Davinder Singh @ Shanty and Amrinder Singh @ Montu towards the end of July, 1984, primarily to seek revenge against the Army action in the Golden Temple and also on account of personal frustration of Sandhu from alleged police harassment in a murder case. Sandhu initially discussed his hijacking plan which was to facilitate his escape to Pakistan with Harjinder Singh, an AISSF activist who approved the idea and promised to introduce Sandhu to another person harbouring similar plans. Sandhu and Davinder Singh @ Shanty first met at the Gurdwara in Sector - 19, Chandigarh on June 2, 1984 and continued to maintain contact since then through a common friend Kuldip Singh, who too had become privy to the conspiracy at that time. On August 12, Sandhu, Davinder Singh @ Shanty and Amrinder Singh @ Montu met at the residence of H.S. Dhillon and discussed their preliminary plans for the retaliatory action including hijacking of an aircraft. Earlier, with the two revolvers and ammunition provided by H.S. Dhillon, Davinder Singh @ Shanty, Amrinder Singh @ Montu, Avtar Singh and Tajinder Singh (all hijackers) looted a local Hindu of Rs.700 -- 800/- which was handed over to Dhillon. Thereafter, Surinder Singh @ Rana whose identity has since been established as Rajinder Singh Rana along with Sandhu emerged as the principal organiser in the unfolding conspiracy. It was he who along with Sandhu mooted the plan to hijack the Chandigarh-Delhi flight on August 15 but this could not materialise as air tickets were not available on that day. Rajinder Singh is also understood to have received Rs.2,700/- from Inderjit Singh, ASI (since arrested on September 25, 1984) and handed over the amount to Sandhu on August 13 at a pre-arranged R.V. near the Thermal Plant at Ropar. During this meeting, Rajinder Singh also introduced Surinder Singh (hijacker), Gurmukh Singh, Avtar Singh and Ram Singh, all residents of village Sohana, to Sandhu and Davinder Singh @ Shanty. Amongst this selected lot, Gurraukh Singh and Avtar Singh of Sohana dissociated themselves subsequently. Thereafter, Surinder Singh (hijacker) induced Man Singh Bagga (hijacker) a person from his own village to join the group. Tajinder Singh, an associate of Davinder Singh @ Shanty joined the lot as the 7th hijacker on August 23.
On August 22, Sandhu, Davinder Singh @ Shanty, Amrinder Singh @ Montu visited the IAC office at Chandigarh separately and purchased seven tickets of which five were in assumed names for the flight from Chandigarh to Jammu on August 24.

(4) Pakistan’s complicity in the handing over of the pistol to the hijackers at Lahore has been established beyond doubt in the interrogation of the hijackers. Sandhu consistently maintained during his interrogation that he had briefed his accomplices on August 23 prior to the hi-jacking of the aircraft that they would not carry any fire arm with them from Chandigarh but attempt the hijacking of the aircraft by innocuous articles like a camera, syrup bottle etc. and improvise these as “weapons” and “explosives during the flight. This significant disclosure stands fully corroborated by the observations earlier made by the passen-gers and crew of the hijacked aircraft regarding the subse-quent ‘arming’ of the hijackers at Lahore. Sandhu’s admi-ssion in this regard is explicit and unequivocal. Accord-ing to him, a Pakistani official clad in Salwar Kameez had handed over to him a pistol with a magazine containing nine bullets, a separate pack containing 25 bullets and. 8 cartridges of .38 calibre. Sandhu further pointed out that the Pak official had even briefed him to explain if required that the pistol was smuggled to the aircraft by bribing an offi-cial at the Chandigarh airport. Besides this active and open connivance in prolonging the hijacking emergency by Pakistan, further details of Pakistan’s involvement in its planning and execution could be known only after the appre-hension of Rajinder Singh and H.S. Dhillon, who had master-minded the entire conspiracy.

(5) Interrogation of the hijackers has not revealed any failure of security arrangements at Chandigarh airport.

(6) During the interrogation, the main hijackers, namely, Sandhu, Davinder Singh @ Shanty and Amrinder Singh @ Montu remained resolute and firm in their dedication to the cause of the Sikh Panth. They showed no compunction or guilt for the serious criminal act committed by them and expressed their readiness to face the extreme penalty for the same.

(7) The attraction of Sikh youth in their early twenties who were motivated and fed on communal and reli-gious diatribe of hard-core Sikh extremists for seeking revenge against the alleged atrocities against Sikhs, por-tends possibilities of similar terrorist attacks on our civil aviation, necessitating utmost vigilance and caution in the implementation of all anti-hijacking and counter- sabotage measures at all airports in the country.

1054. Statement issued by Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs denying Pakistan’s hand in the Punjab terrorism.

Islamabad, October 27, 1984.

“The allegation, reportedly made by a district police chief in East Punjab that two Sikh terrorists had ‘confessed’ they had been ‘trained in Pakistan and provided arms to assassinate some Indian leaders is a complete fabrication’. Pakistan has adhered to the principle of non-interference in the affairs of other States and rejects these absurd allegations which are also reprehensible because they vitiate the atmosphere of Pakistan-India relations.

In the interest of tension-free and good-neighbourly relations the Government of Pakistan hopes that Indian officials will desist from concocting such stories as attempt to involve Pakistan and which have no truth in them whatsoever.”

1055. Message of President Zia-ul-Haq to President Giani Zail Singh on the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

Islamabad, November 1, 1984.

Excellency,

The Government and people of Pakistan and I personally are deeply shocked and grieved by the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Ghandhi and condemn this dreadful act of violence.

Illustrious leader of the people of India, throughout her life Mrs. Gahdni served her country with great devotion and distinction. She was an eminent statesman of world stature. Under her leadership India was in the vanguard of nations committed to the establishment of a new international order. As Chairperson of the Nonaligned Movement she toiled hard to promote the noble objectives of the movement.

Mrs. Indira Gandhi played a crucial role in the evolution of Pakistan - India relations. Her valuable and decisive contribution to the process of normalization and establishment of good neighbourly relations will be long remembered by the peoples of our two countries, who continue to carry high hopes and expectations for peace and stability in the region.
On behalf of the Government and people of Pakistan and on my own behalf I wish to convey to Your Excellency and to the Government and people of India and to Mr. Rajiv Gandhi and other members of her bereaved family our sincere and profound condolences and expressions of sympathy.

General M. Zia-ul-Haq

1056. Message of Condolence from President Zia-ul-Haq to Shri Rajiv Gandhi.

Islamabad, November 1, 1984.

Excellency, you have been called upon to assume the high office of Prime Minister of India under tragic circumstances. To your personal grief have been added the heavy responsibilities of State and the challenge of leading the people of India on the road to progress and prosperity.

For the task ahead of you, I wish to extend on behalf of the Government and the people of Pakistan, and on my own behalf, our sincere good wishes for your success.

I would also like to assure you of the full support of the Government of Pakistan in efforts to build relationship of trust and confidence between our two countries and create a secure and tranquil environment in our region.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

President Zia also visited the Indian Embassy and offered his condolences to Ambassador K.D. Sharma. The Federal cabinet also met to condole the death of Mrs. Gandhi and decided to observe a three – day mourning.

Sahabzada Yaqub Khan briefing newsmen after the meeting said the assassination of Mrs. Gandhi was a tragic and grievous event and a dreadful act which must be roundly condemned.

“In her death our neighbours, the people of India, have lost a leader of international stature who served her country with distinction and devotion”, Sahabzada remarked.

He said the Government and people of Pakistan joined the Government and people of India in mourning with them on their irreparable loss.

The Cabinet extended heartfelt sympathy with the bereaved family in their hour of sorrow.
1057. President Zia-ul-Haq’s visit to Delhi to Attend Mrs. Gandhi’s Funeral:

President Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq said at New Delhi on November 3 that he and the new Prime Minister, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, had assured each other of “our commitment” to the normalization of relations and achieving a good neighbourly status between Pakistan and India.

Talking to newsmen on his arrival to take part in the last rites of Mrs. Indira Gandhi, he said he had spoken on telephone to Mr. Rajiv Gandhi and although it was not an occasion when he could expect a response from him in the political sense, yet he had been positive and friendly in his attitude.

This was for the first time that a Pakistan President had personally come to attend the funeral of an Indian Prime Minister. On both of the last two occasions—in case of the death of Jawaharlal Nehru and Lal Bahadur Shastri—Pakistan was represented by its Foreign Ministers.

Sympathy & Support for India Reaffirmed

Gen Zia expressed the hope that the process started by Mrs. Gandhi would not only continue but also be expedited.

On his previous visit to this great country, he said, he had had the honour to meet Mrs. Gandhi. She was no more but today, “We have come to pay our tributes to the departed soul of the great leader of India and also to re-affirm our sympathy and support to the Government and people of India in this hour of their grief.”

Accompanying Gen Zia were Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, Finance Minister Ghulam Ishaq Khan, Foreign Secretary Niaz A. Naik and Additional Foreign Secretary Abdul Sattar.

Gen Zia-ul-Haq described Mrs. Gandhi as a leader of great stature who had served her country with great distinction and said: “Our hearts go out to Mr. Rajiv Gandhi and we pray for strength to him to guide the destiny of this nation with greater distinction”.

He said he had come to attend the last rites of Mrs. Gandhi and share sympathy and re-affirm that Pakistan would continue to extend cooperation and friendship and offer unstinted support in the process of normalization of relations and acquisition of good-neighbourly relations between Pakistan and India.

The Pakistan delegation was received at the airport by the Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs.
Rajiv’s Initial Response Loving & Encouraging

Taking to newsmen at the Islamabad airport before his departure for New Delhi by a special plane, Gen Zia said “I wish I had gone in better circumstances.” He said he was going to attend the last rites of Mrs. Gandhi to show to India that the people of Pakistan shared their grief.

Replying to a question he said the response of the new Indian Premier in his telephonic conversation with him on October 31 night was quite loving and encouraging. He had rung him up to offer condolences.

Gen Zia-ul-Haq met Mr Rajiv Gandhi and President Zail Singh on November 4. Gen Zia and Mr. Gandhi discussed matters of “mutual interest” for some time.

Zia’s Call for Better Relations

Gen Zia-ul-Haq later told the Press that his country looked for a fresh, dynamic approach to relations with neighbouring India under its young Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

Mr. Gandhi, born only three years before the bloody 1947 partition of the British ruled sub-continent, was not part of the prejudices of that time, he said and added: “It is natural to expect a fresh, young, dynamic approach to a chronic problems.”

Pakistan was anxious that a recent nosedive in relations between India and Pakistan should halt, he said.

“We want peace…” I have come here “to re-affirm not only desire to normalize relations but to further improve them. It is in the interest of both our nations to be as good friends as possible,” Gen Zia added.

He, however, pointed out that relations could not be improved by a dramatic gesture by either side, but only through talking out problems.

He rejected Indian suggestions that Pakistan had played a part in the unrest caused by Sikh extremists.

Describing his contacts with Mrs. Gandhi as interesting and encouraging, he said he had great respect and regard for her. “Mrs. Gandhi is gone, She has gone into history,” Gen Zia added.
1058. Assassination of Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi and reaction in Pakistan.

Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan visited the Indian Ambassador’s residence and signed the condolence book on the death of Mrs. Gandhi. He also expressed his condolences to Ambassador Sharma.

He was accompanied by Mr. Niaz Naik, Mr. Abdul Sattar and Chief of Protocol, Zamir Ahmed.

Mr. Ghulan Ishaq Khan, Dr. Mahbubul Haq, Minister for Planning and Development; Lt. Gen Saeed Qadir, Minister for Production; Vice Admiral Mohammad Fazil Janjua, Minister for Food and Agriculture and Dr Mohammad Asad, Minister for State for Petroleum and Natural Resources also visited the residence of Mr. Sharma, and signed the condolence book separately.

They expressed their deep sense of shock and grief over the tragic assassination of Mrs. Gandhi.

Federal Minister for Information and Religions Affairs, Raja Mohammad Zafarul Haq, also visited the residence of the Indian Ambassador and signed the condolence book. He remained there for some time and offered condolences to Mr. Sharma.

Khawaja Khairuddin - (MRD) leader described Mrs. Gandhi’s assassination as “a great tragedy” and said that her absence from the world political scene would undoubtedly have a deep impact on Third World politics. Khawaja Khairuddin, who along with three others had been externed from Peshwar, was talking to newsmen at Mr. Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi’s Islamabad residence. Malik Qasim has also expressed his sense of sorrow and grief over Mrs. Gandhi’s assassination, saying that her death had deprived India as well as the Third World of a luminous political figure.

PNP, Socialist Leaders Condole Death

At Lahore Syed Qaswar Gafdezi, Secretary – General of the defunct Pakistan National Party (PNP) and Mr. C.R. Aslam, President of the defunct Socialist Party (PSP) have expressed grief and sorrow over the assassination of Mrs. Gandhi.

In a condolence message sent to Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, Mr. Qaswar Gardezi said Mrs. Gandhi’s death had deprived India and the Third World of a great leader and stateswoman. He strongly condemned her assassination as a heinous act.

Mr. C. R. Aslam said Mrs. Gandhi had played an important role in establishment of peace in Africa and Asian countries, especially in this region. She had fought sectarianism, terrorism and imperialist forces and the same forces were responsible for her assassination. He hoped her successor would follow the footprint of Ms Gandhi to achieve the objective of Non-aligned Movement, restore global peace, and promote democracy and secularism.

Benazir Bhutto’s Tribute to Mrs. Gandhi

Muslim (2/11) in a report from London said: Mrs. Benazir Bhutto, acting chairperson of the PPP, issued a statement which said that the “tragic assassination of Mrs. Gandhi is a loss not only for India but for all those who believe in democratic and constitutional rule.”

“For decades Mrs. Gandhi dominated the politics of her country, first as a freedom fighter against colonialism and then as a thrice – elected Prime Minister of the largest democracy in the world. Mrs. Gandhi kept heterogeneous India united and gave it a sense of self-respect and pride. She moved against poverty and encouraged technology”, the statement said.

Miss Bhutto’s statement recalled that in 1972, Mrs. Gandhi had joined the Prime Minister of Pakistan to build peace and put an end to the conflict that had marred relations between the two countries. It continued: “Begum Bhutto and I offer condolences to Rajiv Gandhi and members of the family, to the Congress and people of India”.

The statement ended with the words: “In this hour of darkness and despair, I’m sure the Indian people will rise to defend democratic rule in their country and by so doing pay the greatest tribute of their assassinated leader”.

Karachi Shocked, Assassination condemned

A Dawn (1/11) report from Karachi said: The news of Mrs. Gandhi’s assassination was received with a sense of shock.

Reactions gathered from politicians, public and social welfare leaders were unanimous in condemning the dastardly attack and in sharing grief with the Indian neighbours.

Mazari, Ghafoor Decry Terrorism

Sardar Sherbaz Mazari (NDP leader) said the tragedy was too poignant for words; it must be condemned by every sane and right minded person to whichever country he or she might belong. What made it all the more tragic was that a head of an elected government had been murdered? Problems were not solved in this cowardly way, he said. “We condemn the dastardly assassination of Mrs. Gandhi in strongest possible terms and share grief and sorrow with the Indian people”, Mr. Mazari observed.
Prof Ghafoor Ahmad (Jamaat Islami leader) said the trend towards terrorism was most reprehensible. “We are with our neighbour in their hour of unspeakable grief.”

Mr Mahmum Azam Farouqi said killing of adversaries on political or other considerations would not help matters, more so in a democratic set up.,

Rana Zafarullah Khan also said that the assassination should be condemned by everyone. For India it was a great tragedy; for the rest, including Pakistan, it was a loss of a leader who had served her country and people with a single-minded purpose.

Mr. Mushtaq Mirza said the Indian tragedy would have worldwide repercussions.

Mrs. Mumtaz Noorani, President of the Democratic Women’s Association said Mrs. Gandhi had a unique personality. “She inspired women with confidence in themselves and was respected despite political differences.”

Prof Shah Faridul Haq said the assassination of an elected Prime Minister was a matter of sorrow for all democracy–loving people.

Ghaffar Khan extremely Upset

At Peshawar, meanwhile, the aged Khudai Khidmatgar leader, Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan, now confined to bed at his Walibagh residence, 20 miles from Peshawar, was extremely upset when the news of Mrs. Gandhi’s assassination was broken to him. The veteran leader, who had been a close associate of the late Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, father of Mrs. Gandhi, in the pre-Independence period, expressed great shock over the assassination. He called the assassination “murder of democracy” and second great tragedy in this part of the world after the assassination of Mahatma Gandhi, to whom Badshah Khan remained very close throughout the struggle for independence from British rule in the sub-continent.

Badshah Khan said he had no words to condemn the dastardly assassination and added, “members of the Nehru family were the shining stars in the sky of democracy in the world.” With Indira, for whom he had a very soft corner in his heart, perhaps the last of the stars had disappeared, he added with a choked voice, grief written large on his face.

He said he would have very much liked to attend the funeral of Mrs. Gandhi but for his physical invalidity and continued illness.
1059. Statement issued by Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs denying the Indian charge that Pakistan encouraged the pilgrims to indulge in anti-Indian activities.

Islamabad, November 18, 1984.

About 2,500 Sikh pilgrims came to Pakistan earlier this month on the occasion of the birth anniversary of Guru Nanak. The main function was held on November 8, at the sacred shrine in Nankana Saheb, the birth place of the founder of Sikh religion.

More than two-thirds of the pilgrims came from India. All of them sponsored by the Government of India, they were accompanied by 30 officials of the Indian Government. In addition a number of officials of the Indian Embassy joined the escorts.

As in the past, Sikh pilgrims included nationals of Afghanistan, Canada, United Kingdom, United States, etc. Their number was, however, smaller this year than in the past.

In view of the tension in the Sikh community, the Government of Pakistan took special precautions. We asked the Government of India to reduce the number of pilgrims and to thoroughly brief them. Nationals of other countries who contacted our embassies were advised to consider postponing pilgrimage till next year. The President of Pakistan himself made a publicised appeal to all pilgrims to bear in mind the sanctity of the occasion.

Considering the background, the pilgrimage went off smoothly. There were no serious incidents. We were gratified.

All the precautionary measures taken by the Government of Pakistan were in fulfillment of its obligation as a responsible state. We did not anticipate any expressions of gratitude by the Government of India.

We are, however, surprised and dismayed that official spokes-man and media, of the Government of India have leveled a number of baseless allegations against the Government of Pakistan. For instance, The Indian spokesman accused Pakistan of “bring-ing together” supporters of the Khalistan movement at Nankana Saheb. The allegation was manifestly false: Pakistan did not bring or invite any pilgrim.

Equally false was the charge that pilgrims were encouraged by Pakistan to indulge in an anti-India tirade. On the contrary, the Government of Pakistan had counselled the pilgrims to refrain from political activities.
The scuffle between O.P. Tandon, a minor Indian official who escorted the pilgrims from India, and three Canadian pilgrims, has been exaggerated and distorted by Indian spokesman. The incident which took place inside a shrine on November 10 at 9.30 p.m. was promptly investigated by a magistrate. It did not involve any injury or hurt. Nevertheless, Tandon was informed he could stay back for a court hearing if he wanted to pursue the matter. He decided to go back with the pilgrims on November 11. Incidentally Tandon did not hold any diplomatic status. He had a pilgrim’s visa.

Consistently with its long-established policy of promoting normal, good-neighborly and cooperative relations with India, the Government of Pakistan has continued to demonstrate its goodwill in words and action. The meeting between our President and Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi on November 4, encouraged hopes of a constructive and positive evolution in bilateral relations.

In the circumstances we can only regret that some circles in India indulge in attempts to spread misunderstanding and vitiate the atmosphere. We are dismayed, at their emphasis on minor and isolated incidents which betray their negative attitude. We hope the Government of India will see the matter in perspective and recognise that the Government of Pakistan has acted in proper and scrupulous manner.

* On November 17, the Pakistan Foreign Secretary Niaz A. Naik in a letter to his Indian counterpart M.K. Rasgotra expressed Pakistan’s disappointment over the accusations made by the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs on this issue. Pakistan Spokesman informed the media that Naik had told Rasgotra that “not only that this charge is false but that is viewed by us as an outrageous attempt to besmirch Pakistan’s name…It is unfortunate that New Delhi seizes on minor incidents to indulge in distortions and false propaganda which can only vitiate the atmosphere of bilateral relations.”

Embassy of Pakistan

New Delhi

No. Pol. IV/3/84 November 26, 1984

The Embassy of Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, and has the honour to recall that Mr Riaz H. Khokhar, Minister of this Embassy, in his meeting (on November 23, 1984) with Mr. S.K. Lambah, Joint Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, had drawn the latter’s attention to the press reports alleging that a pistol was handed over to the hijackers of an Indian Airlines plane during its stop-over in Lahore in August 1984. These reports had also alleged that the pistol had been despatched to the Government of Pakistan by a West German supplier in September 1975. Mr Khokhar had requested Mr. Lambah to provide precise particulars of the weapon, name of the supplier, the date of the consignment and the name of the consignee.

The Government of Pakistan has taken a serious view of the allegations mentioned above which have appeared in the Indian press, reportedly, based on “reliable sources”. The Embassy shall, therefore, be grateful if the requisite information could be provided to it urgently to enable the Government of Pakistan to conduct an investigation into the allegation.

The Embassy of Pakistan avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs the assurances of its highest consideration.

Montreal, December 17, 1984.

December 17, 1984

Excellency,

I have the honour to state that a Boeing 737 aircraft VT-EFK belonging to the Indian Airlines Corporation was hijacked during a scheduled flight from Chandigarh to Jammu (flight No. IC – 421) on August 24. 1984. The hijackers forced the Commander of the aircraft to take it to Lahore, Pakistan, where it landed at about 0945 hours (IST) on the same day. The plane was refueled at Lahore and allowed to take off from there at 1915 hours (IST) and, after being refueled again by the Pakistan authorities at Karachi, Pakistan, finally landed at Dubai, UAE. The hijacking was terminated at Dubai with the active help and assistance of the UAE authorities and the cooperation of the Government of USA.

2. The Pakistan authorities handed-over a pistol and some ammunition to the hijackers at Lahore airport on August 24, 1984. This fact was initially reported by some of the passengers of the aircraft, including foreign nationals and these reports were also carried by the international media. This was confirmed by the subsequent debriefing of the crew of the aircraft and passengers as well as investigations conducted by Indian authorities on the return of the hijackers who were repatriated by the UAE authorities to India.

3. The UAE authorities later handed-over to the Government of India the pistol recovered from the hijackers. Since it was found to have been manufactured in F.R.G., its particulars were communicated by the Central Bureau of Investigation of the Government of India to Interpol Wiesbaden, FRG, who were requested to make the necessary enquiries. The following reply has been received from Interpol FRG:

Begins:

“Reference your telegram No. 681 of 18.10.1984 concerning hijacking of an aircraft committed on 24.8.1984 by Kamaljit Singh Sandhu and other persons. Please be informed that pistol make Walther P. P. Calibre 7.65 No 445 901 was produced by the firm ‘Walther GMBH’ P.O. Box 4325 Karlstrasse 33, D-7900 ULM and delivered on 22.9.1975 together with 74 other pistols Consignee C.A.O., P.O. Box 1040, Islamabad, Pakistan. Interpol Wiesbaden. Ends.

4. Pakistan has shown scant respect for the various conventions which relate to the orderly conduct of international civil aviation. It may be noted that in respect of the earlier hijackings of September 1981 and July 1984, Pakistan has so far unfortunately neither sent back to India nor put on trial the fourteen hijackers involved.

5. Regarding the hijacking incident of August 24, 1984, direct and circumstantial evidence conclusively establishes that instead of terminating the offence at Lahore, Pakistan authorities deliberately contributed towards escalating the offence. They went to the extent of aiding and abetting the hijackers by providing them with a pistol and ammunition which act seriously jeopardized the lives of the passengers and the safety of the aircraft. The arming of hijackers with an offensive weapon is an unlawful act unprecedented on the part a contracting state of ICAO in the history of civil aviation.

6. Pakistan is a contracting party to the Chicago, The Hague and the Montreal Conventions. The basic aim and objective of the Chicago Convention is to ensure safe and orderly growth of international civil aviation. The Hague and Montreal conventions recognize that hijacking and other unlawful acts against the safety of civil aviation jeopardize the safety of persons and property, seriously affect the operation of air services and undermine confidence of the peoples of the world in the safety of civil aviation. These conventions provide for specific obligations on the part of contracting states for the suppression of such acts. The active assistance provided by the Pakistan authorities to the hijackers and the abetment of the offence constitute flagrant violations of the basic objectives and purposes of the Chicago Convention and the fundamental aim and objective of the ICAO to insure the safe and orderly growth of international civil aviation throughout the world.

7. The Government of India wishes to bring these facts, in particular the handing over of a pistol and ammunition to the hijackers, to the attention of the Council of International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO), with a view to ensuring that there is no recurrence of such reprehensible acts in the future. It is requested that this information is circulated to the members of the ICAO Council and to other member states of ICAO. The Council may wish to consider appropriate measures in the light of the situation caused by the action of a contracting state endangering innocent lives and jeopardizing and undermining international confidence in the safety of civil aviation.

8. Please accept, excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Representative of India on the Council of ICAO

Press Release issue by the Embassy of India in Pakistan containing the Statement of the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs.

Press Release

No.33/84 19 December 1984

Reports have appeared in sections of the Pakistani press about a statement made by the official spokesman of the Government of India on 18 December 1984. The following is the authentic text of statement made by the official spokesman on 18 December 1984:

“In a Communication on to the President of the Council of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) in Montreal on 17 December 1984, the Government of India has provided evidence about the handing over of a pistol and ammunition by Pakistan authorities to the hijackers of the Indian Airlines Boeing 737 aircraft on 24 August 1984 at Lahore airport. The communication complains of Pakistan’s encouragement to and cooperation with hijackers.

The letter from the Representative of India to ICAO quotes a report received from INTERPOL, Federal Republic of Germany, confirming that this pistol along with 74 others was supplied to Pakistan authorities by the manufacturers “Walther GMBH” on 22 September 1975. As soon as the pistol recovered from the hijackers was given to the Government of India by the Government of the United Arab Emirates, a reference was made to INTERPOL as the pistol was found to be manufactured in the Federal Republic of Germany. The fact of the pistol having been given to the hijackers by Pakistan had been immediately reported by passengers including foreigners. This was later confirmed by debriefing of the crew of the aircraft as well as the investigations conducted on the return of the hijackers who were repatriated by the United Arab Emirates authorities. This was the only fire arm the hijackers had with them. The dangers posed to the lives of innocent passengers by this irresponsible and reprehensible action of Pakistan are obvious.

The communication to ICAO points out that the arming of the hijackers with an offensive weapon is an unlawful act unprecedented on the part of any Contracting State of the International Civil Aviation Organization, in the history of civil aviation, and is a grave violation of the Montreal, The Hague and Chicago Conventions as well as the objectives of the ICAO.

The ICAO Council has been requested to take appropriate measures so that there is no recurrence of such reprehensible acts.”

Dear Tikki

When we met on 24 December we talked about the residential status in the UK of Dr. J. S. Chauhan and his immunity from deportation, and you asked if I could let you see the relevant provisions of our law.

The British Government's powers to deport persons who are not British citizens are set out in Section 3(5) and 3(6) of the Immigration Act, 1971. This Act came into effect on 1 January 1973. Section 3(5) (a) provides for deportation of persons who have been in breach of the conditions attached to their stay in the United Kingdom. Section 3 (5) (b) provides for deportation, at the discretion of the Home Secretary, of persons whose presence in the United Kingdom is deemed not conducive to the public good. Section 3 (5) (c) provides for the deportation of the relatives of a deported person. Section 3 (6) provides for the deportation of an adult who is convicted of an offence punishable by imprisonment and whose deportation is recommended by the Court.

However Section 7 of the same Act exempts from all these powers of deportation anyone who was a Commonwealth citizen "ordinarily resident" in the United Kingdom on 1 January 1973 and who has, at the time the powers might otherwise be used, been "ordinarily resident" in the United Kingdom for the previous five years.

Dr. Chauhan was a Commonwealth citizen and "ordinarily resident" in the United Kingdom on 1 January 1973. Despite absences from time to time he has in law remained “ordinarily resident” there ever since; this is because he has never left the country for as much as two years at a stretch. He is therefore by law exempt from deportation from the UK on any grounds.

I enclose copies of the Sections to which I have referred. Do please let me know if there are further details you would like. I should be most interested to hear if you have any comments.

With best New Year wishes

Yours ever

Robert

Dear Robert,

Thank you for your kind letter of January 4 regarding the residential status of Dr. J.S. Chauhan and the Photostat of the clauses of Immigration Act. 1971 which define the scope of deportation powers of the Government under it. I shall have them examined by somebody qualified in legal matters of this kind and write to you again, if necessary. But I must confess my immediate reaction is rather like that to Mr. Bumble when he remarked that “if the law says this, then the law is an ass.”

To be serious, many of us are deeply disquieted by the bizarre state of affairs where a democratic Government – and one, moreover, armed with the Prevention of Terrorism Act – finds itself unable to take any action whatsoever against open incitement to violence against a friendly Government and its leaders. I am sure that in the hypothetical event of the situation being reversed, the British Government and British people would have a just cause for grief and concern if anybody whatever his or her residential status, were allowed with impunity to incite to violence people of British origin in India against the British Government and its democratically elected leaders. At least I find it difficult to believe that it is beyond the resources of the British Government to deal effectively with a mischief which cannot but adversely affect relations between our two countries and people which are otherwise prospering and developing so well.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

Mr. T. N. Kaul

25 January 1985

Dear Tikki:

I promised you a proper reply to your letter of 8 January concerning Chauhan.

There are perhaps two points of importance: the Immigration/ residence status of someone who like Chauhan has lived in the UK for many years; and the question of prosecution for criminal actions. They are of course separate.

The 1971 Immigration Act imposed restrictions on new immigration to the UK, and at the same time deliberately set out to reinforce the existing safeguards for those immigrants already in the UK. It was seen as essential, both for community relations and for the sake of natural justice towards those who had had entered the United Kingdom during the period before the restrictions were imposed, that anyone who had been legally admitted to the UK and lived there for a suitable period (generally five years) should not be subject to harassment or deportation, and should have an absolute legal right to live in the UK on the same basis as an indigenous UK citizen. The Act in which these safeguards are enshrined benefits hundreds of thousands of immigrants to the UK. I doubt whether Mr. Bumble would have thought it an asinine one. I have no doubt that any attempt by Her Majesty's Government to amend it in order to weaken these safeguards would be rejected by parliament, though it would of course be enthusiastically supported by Enoch Powell. This would be even more true in the case of measures intended to have retroactive effect.

The other question is that of criminal prosecution. The necessary condition for initiating a prosecution is that \textit{prima facie} evidence exists which would be likely to result in a conviction. In the view of the prosecuting authorities this is not at present the case. Transcripts of Chauhan's public utterances do not contain words which our prosecuting authorities consider would be likely to result in a conviction for incitement to violence, or indeed any other offence against UK law. Espousal of a separate Sikh state – which Chauhan has always been careful to say should be achieved by peaceful means – is not in itself an offence. In Britain you can by the same token peacefully advocate a separate Brittany or Corsica; in America you can advocate a separate Northern Ireland; and in India (I assume) a separate Tamil Eelam.

You say that the British Government should be able to deal effectively with this mischief. But we can only act where the law is likely to uphold us (as it did in the Jasbir Singh case). The prevention of Terrorism Act which you mention is a case in point: the powers it confers (exclusively limited to the Northern Ireland context) are highly restrictive, and do not, for example, enable the British Government to prevent IRA spokesmen from making broadcasts over the BBC which are highly offensive to many British people. The British Government are well aware of the deep concern on this issue in India. There is no intention on our part to encourage Sikh extremists in the UK, indeed very much the contrary: even apart from their external implications, they are doing great damage to the fabric of our society. Mrs. Thatcher's own position has been unambiguously stated, and her support for the unity of India is hardly in question. If evidence comes to light which seems likely to secure a conviction, the offenders will certainly be prosecuted. But the actions of the Government are constrained, as in any democratic society, by the legislative framework. Any attempt by the authorities to cheat on that would be rapidly detected and defeated: and it would of course enlist for the Sikh extremists, who are now a tiny and unpopular minority in Britain, the automatic support of all the many defenders of individual liberty against the State. Even after 350 years John Hampden remains a powerful rallying cry.

With warm regards

Yours ever

Robert

D. Letter from T. N. Kaul:

February 12, 1985

Dear Robert,

Thank you for your letter of 25 January, I appreciate the British legal point of view though, I am given to understand that even eminent British jurists are of the opinion that a very strong case can be made out legally against Chauhan and others. Speaking for myself, I would much rather recommend prosecution of Chauhan, etc, even at the risk of the British Courts discharging or acquitting them. It would at least show the bona fides and anxiety of the British authorities to bring such people to book. Of course, the prosecution will have to be launched properly and a strong case made out.

I do not share the view that if the Court discharges the accused or acquits them or gives them the benefit of doubt, it would weaken India’s case or further encourage the extremist. I do not think prosecutions are always launched only if they are likely to secure a conviction. Surely, there is nothing illegal in a Government launching a prosecution against those of its residents or nationals who indulge in acts hostile to a friendly government and preach violence. Prosecution by British authorities would have, at least, a deterrent effect both on Chauhan and his associates and those who may sympathise with them, John Hampden notwithstanding.

The above are my personal views and I have not consulted my Government in this regard. I am writing to you as an Indian citizen and a friend of your country in the interests of further strengthening friendship and understanding between our two nations.
With kind regards

Yours sincerely

Editor's Note: T. N. Kaul had on February 2 sent the High Commissioner’s letter of 25th January with a draft reply to Foreign Secretary Romesh Bhandari and asked: “Please let me know whether you would like me to make any amendment in the draft reply”. Mr. Bhandari only made some editorial changes and left the substance intact.

1067. Experts from the Interview of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi with Nisar Osmani of the Pakistani daily Dawn as carried by the paper in its issue of 12th January 1985.

(The Interview was in two parts-oral and written)

Oral:

Question: You belong to the post-partition generation, if I may say so, and are said to have a fresh outlook. Do you propose to take some initiative for the resumption of talks between India and Pakistan at secretariat and ministerial levels?

Answer: We would like the talks to resume. But we sometimes get the feeling that Pakistan is not very serious about the whole thing, because although you talk very much, your actions do not match your words. So that sort of thing puts us in a bit of an awkward position. If your actions could match President Zia’s statements, we would have no difficulty in resuming negotiations at all. In fact, there would be no problem at all.

Q: If I remember correctly, that bilateral talk went very well both at Jaipur and Islamabad, and they were to be resumed some time in July last but were abruptly suspended. I believe....

A: As you know, we have not been too happy about two particular incidents and a lot of minor things. One was the hijacking. We believe we have positive proof that a weapon was given by the Pakistan security forces, or somebody else, to the hijackers while they were on your territory. The second relates to various incidents which we believe took place at Nankana Sahib and which we believe were wholly avoidable. And, lastly, you have tried the hijackers of your own aircraft, but not those who hijacked our aircraft.

Q: I think that this should not pose any problem, because you as Prime Minister have shown keen interest in normalization of relations and Gen Zia also sounds genuine when he talks of friendship between the two countries.

A: But he must make that percolate all the way down.

Q: Just to create a congenial atmosphere for high level talks and perhaps at the summit level later, don’t you think that the dialogue could begin at the Secretaries level?

POSITIVE INDICATOR FROM PAKISTAN CALLED FOR

A: Yes, but after these sort of negative actions, we would like a little bit of a positive indicator from Pakistan. I have made it very clear in many speeches that now that I am very committed to the SARC objectives and greater regional cooperation within the sub-continent in every aspect – cultural, commercial and economic – we will do whatever needs to be done. We have so many development problems in India, which you have in Pakistan also. Really, none of us has had the time and the money to waste on confronting each other.

Q: Are you hopeful and optimistic about the prospects of normalization of relations between the two countries?

A: I am hopeful, yes.

ON AFGHANISTAN

Q: Afghanistan is an issue of vital importance for the maintenance of peace in the region. Do you think that in your capacity as the Chairman of the NAM, you can play a role in the settlement of the issue?

A: We could play a role, but the position is very complicated... so unless we can satisfy both (sides) it will be very difficult to try and get action from anyone independently.

TEXT OF WRITTEN INTERVIEW

(The following is the text of the written question answer interview)

Question: As the major power in the region and the Chairman of the Non-Aligned Movement, India has a vital role to play to promote peace in the region. Do you visualize better relations with neighbours, particularly with Pakistan, and what steps do you propose to take to improve ties with Pakistan?

Answer: As a founder-members and current Chairman of the Non-Aligned Movement, it is our constant endeavor to do everything possible to strengthen the movement and its role in support of peace, independence, disarmament and development.

We view ourselves as an equal member in the comity of nations. This perception applies to our neighbours. I believe that the strict observance of the principle of complete non-interference in one another’s internal affairs and cooperative co-existence alone can ensure peace, security and prosperity in our region as well as in the whole world.

India has always believed in, and worked for, cordial, cooperative and mutually beneficial relations with all its neighbours. While it is natural that sovereign nations should have occasional differences of view, our relations with neighbours are by and large good. My government will work for strengthening them further.

We appreciated President Zia-ul-Haq’s coming to Delhi last November to share our grief and sorrow. I had a long meeting with him and we discussed bilateral relations.

However, I will not hide my concern at the induction of arms in Pakistan and in the region. The people of India are also worried at moral and even material help which the Sikh extremists seem to be getting from Pakistan. There is also a general heightening of tensions in our part of the world. All this compels us to spend more on arms, where’s we would prefer to devote our scarce resources for development. We are also concerned about reports of Pakistan’s preparations for making a nuclear bomb. Although India has the capacity, we are using nuclear energy only for peaceful purposes. We have nothing but goodwill for the people of Pakistan. Throughout her lifetime Prime Minister Indira Gandhi had steadfastly worked for friendly and harmonious relations with Pakistan. It was at her initiative that the Simla Agreement was signed, which resolved some of the outstanding problems between our countries. Later, she offered a treaty of peace and friendship and proposed the setting up of a joint commission which, happily, has already come into existence.

Q: Sir, in which field do you visualize better understanding between the two countries?

A: I would like to see a beginning in cultural exchanges, fruitful cooperation in the fields of information, exchange of books and newspapers, mutually beneficial trade and economic relations, improved transport and communication facilities and greater exchange within the SARC framework. Of course, as I said earlier, non-interference in internal affairs is the very foundation of good neighbourly and cooperative relations.

Q: Does your government propose to take some initiative to resume negotiations between India and Pakistan to discuss bilateral issues?

A: We are desirous of the best possible relations with all our neighbours, and this applies to Pakistan also. We shall continue taking initiatives to promote understanding and good relations between our two countries. I would like to see a new atmosphere in our relations on the basis of complete non-interference and mutual trust. Affirmations of friendship are welcome, but they must be matched by actions.

ON INDIAN POLL RESULTS & PUNJAB SITUATION

Q: Do you think election results have given a new strength and vigour to the cause of secularism?

A: Yes, certainly. The voters have overwhelmingly reaffirmed their commitment to secularism by voting for Congress programmes and policies rather than on other narrow considerations. Obviously, the Congress could not have received such an overwhelming mandate without support from all communities.

Q: Soon after the election results, you indicated that you would be giving priority to problem in the Punjab. Are you confident that a mutually acceptable solution will be found?

A: Yes. Matters pertaining to the Punjab are already receiving attention. I have set up a high-level panel to look into the problem. I am confident that we shall be able to find satisfactory solutions to all legitimate issues and grievances of all sections of our people. We have a democratic system, as you know. The recent verdict of the people clearly indicates that they will not accept any impairment of our country’s unity and integrity. The people of India are for an effective functioning of a secular and democratic polity in which people of all faiths and political persuasions enjoy equal rights as citizens of India. In our system, all issues and differences must be resolved only through the established democratic and constitutional processes.

Q: The opposition has been literally routed in the election. Don’t you think that is a bad omen for the future democracy in India?

A: The people of India have adopted the democratic way of life in the complete sense, and have demonstrated more than once their ability to effectively and decisively use the ballot to assert their supremacy. The commitment to freedom and democracy here is very strong, it is irrevocable. In the past, our electors twice voted governments out of power at the centre and on numerous occasions in the states. The recent elections have once again proved the strength and vibrance of our democratic institutions. The opposition has lost many seats. In a democracy, you cannot treat the verdict of the people in a free and fair elections as an ill omen. My party and my government are totally committed to democracy and the democratic process. Naturally, it is for the opposition to go to the people with their programmes and policies. However, in a democracy once a verdict is given the opposition is expected to extend constructive cooperation to the government in tackling national issues.

1068. Aide Memoire handed over by Ambassador S. K. Singh to Pakistan Foreign Secretary Niaz A. Naik.
Islamabad, February 19, 1986.

Aide Memoire

Activities of Sikh terrorists abroad especially those who are no longer Indian nationals have been causing concern to the people and Government of India. The matter was mentioned by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi personally to H.E. the President of Pakistan in New Delhi, on 17 December, 1985.

2. The President had kindly assured Prime Minister of Pakistan’s full cooperation in the efforts to countering the illegal activities of these misguided elements.

3. This matter was discussed between the Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India when Shri Romesh Bhandari visited Pakistan from 17 - 22 January, 1986. Shri Bhandari had handed over two lists to H.E. Mr. Niaz A. Naik, one of 7 extremists presently in Pakistan who may be returned to India; and two, of 66 extremists settled abroad whose entry into Pakistan could be banned, if deemed appropriate by the Government of Pakistan.

4. The Government of India would be grateful if the Government of Pakistan could kindly indicate their thinking and response in respect of these two lists.

5. It may be recalled that from time to time the Government of India have been providing to H.E. the Pakistan Ambassador in New Delhi certain lists and data in the context of the illegal activities in Pakistan of some extremist Sikhs. It may be helpful to get some indication of the thinking of the Pakistan Government in that context too.

6.  The Sikh extremists abroad have provided the impression that they are receiving support and assistance from the Government of Pakistan. Pardesi – Panjab; a Gurmukhi weekly being published from Toronto reported (November 22-29. 1985) that any Sikh who crossed over to Pakistan from India was immediately given a subsidy of Rs.1000/ per month by Pakistan Government. Adding that such immigrants are looked after well, the news-item claimed that a large Sikh army was being trained in Pakistan. This army, the report said, was meant for confronting India. Again in its January 3, 1986 issue the Pardesi - Panjab reported that Pakistan army officials had started accelerating the process of training Sikh terrorists. The report added that Pakistan had established two military training camps, one at Renkira near Haji Pir pass and the other at Chirat. The report said that field intelligence unit of Pakistan army were training 200 terrorists in each camp. The Sikh youths were being trained in sabotage, subversion and assassination tactics. This news story, as far as is known, has not been refuted by either the Pakistan Consulate General in Toronto or the Embassy in Ottawa, or indeed the Government of Pakistan.

7. In a similar manner, Lakhbir Singh, Coordinator, International Sikh Youth Federation (ISYF) stated publicly to a congregation at Hamilton Gurdwara in Ontario in Canada on 19 January that the President of ISYF, Mr. Satinder Pal Singh Gill was in Pakistan to coordinate the defence of the hijackers, and support the activities of Panthik warriors in Punjab. Satinder Pal Singh Gill, he said, meets and guides the youths who come to Pakistan for training. It may be mentioned that Satinder Pal Singh Gill is one of those Canadian Sikhs who had assaulted two senior diplomats of the Indian Embassy, Islamabad, on November 25, 1985 at Dera Sahib, Lahore. He also stated that Babbar Ajaib singh Bagri was to visit Pakistan very soon for helping Satinder Pal Singh Gill.

8. Information has also been received indicating that Gajinder Singh Gandham, Gurjit Singh Chahal and Pavitra Singh Mann are amongst the Sikh youths who had undergone training in Eagle Combat and Bodyguard Training School in Vancouver last year. They too have reportedly left for Pakistan, with the intention of sneaking into Indian Punjab and Delhi through Pakistan. These persons have got a background in gun running, and other terrorist activities.

9. The Government of India have information that certain other extremists from Canada are trying to slip into India through Pakistan, in view of their inability of securing Visas for India. We would like to bring this information to the attention of the Government of Pakistan so that they could request their concerned authorities to be alert and so that these plans of the extremists are frustrated.

1069. SECRET

Record of the talks between Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and President Zia-ul-Haq.

PRIME MINISTER’S OFFICE
(Record of Discussion)

PM called on President Zia on the 13th March 1985 at the Pakistan Embassy in Moscow.

Zia conveyed “heartiest congratulations” on PM’s victory in the Assembly elections. He said that Pakistan also has had elections which, through the grace of God, passed off successfully.

PM said that we appreciated that the trials of the hijackers had started. Zia said that the law will take its own course. Under Pakistan’s laws, the only two alternatives are life or death, once the accused are convicted. The senior most Sessions judge of Lahore is in charge of the trial. He is a very competent person. The trial is going on smoothly. It is an open trial.

President Zia said that the Indian Embassy in Islamabad has given a long list of 8-10 people whom India would not like to be permitted to come to Pakistan. He assured that one or two will never be allowed to come, but about others it may be difficult to ensure. Ganga Singh Dhillon had come but had remained in Karachi.

PM said that we are thinking of sending Foreign Secretary to Pakistan. Zia said that he would be most welcome at any time. To use army terminology, we have to remove road blocks in the way of our relations. On his side, Zia said that he has started with the trial of the hijackers. India, for its part, could start with sending the Foreign Secretary. Thereafter, there will be NAM Bureau meeting in Delhi which Foreign Minister Yaqub will attend.

Zia conveyed his sympathy at the Bhopal tragedy. Foreign Minister Yaqub referred to the pending proposal made by Pakistan for exchange of visits of senior army officers. President Zia said that while we cannot have completely friction-free relationship, we certainly can have more understanding between the two countries. PM commented that the atmosphere among the peoples of the two countries is certainly much more relaxed.

Zia said that there already is a framework of regulations to deal with incidents on the border. Flag meetings take place and the two army chiefs have direct hot line connection. What is required is a little more openness.

Raksha Mantri (Defence Minister) said that the intensity of border firing has increased recently. Zia asked whether R. M is referring to Azad Kashmir. The latter answered in the affirmative. Zia said that the principal cause for the incidents is the straying of cattle.

PM asked President Zia about the new leadership in the Soviet Union. Zia replied that in the last days of the Brezhnev era collective leadership “had evolved. Gorbachev may want to concentrate authority in his hands. He is a well educated person with degrees in agriculture and law. Pakistan delegation has been specifically analyzing the change from the Afghan situation point of view and has come to the conclusion that there will be no change.” Zia added that Pakistan believes that India can play a much more positive role in the Afghan problem.

Continuing, Zia said that he has talked to the Soviet Ambassador in Islamabad. He also talked to Andropov about the Afghan problem. Pakistan has told the Soviet leaders to come and see for themselves the situation in Afghanistan and in the bordering regions of Pakistan. The insurgency is really inside Afghanistan. There are 3 million refugees in Pakistan. India can take a position not to annoy the Soviet Union or to spoil its relations with the Soviet Union but to help in finding a face-saving formula. If the Soviet Union is willing, talks in Geneva can be very productive.

Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan said that the Afghans want direct talks with Pakistan as a means to expedite progress. At Geneva III the Afghans suggested a bilateral draft agreement on non-interference. The Afghans obviously want to sign a bilateral agreement with Pakistan because that would amount to recognition. Pakistan has told the Afghan authorities that Pakistan is willing to sign a bilateral treaty but only after the comprehensive agreement dealing with all aspects of the Afghan problem is concluded. Pakistan is not by itself but is a part of OIC which has taken a strong position at Pakistan’s behest. Pakistan cannot resile from that position. What the Afghans are asking for is recognition without withdrawal. They are trying to weaken Pakistan. An agreement without the total package will be fragile. Pakistan has made a big concession by agreeing to sign a bilateral agreement which would imply recognition, after a comprehensive agreement is signed.

Raksha Mantri agreed that this is a new development. Shri Natwar Singh commented that the recognition question was laboured too much by Pakistan; in fact Pakistan has de facto recognized Afghan regime because there is an Afghan Embassy in Islamabad and a Pak Embassy in Kabul.

President Zia said that it is the Afghans who are fighting the Soviet troops inside Afghanistan. Pakistan accepts that the Soviet Union cannot afford to have a hostile Afghanistan. But Afghanistan is a nonaligned country. There are 150,000 Soviet troops on Afghan territory, which is not a comfortable position for Pakistan. The Soviets tried to seal-off the border for two months. There are a number of air and ground violations, border villages and refugee camps in Pakistan have been bombed. The Soviet Union thinks that the refugee camps are training camps, but this is not true.

President Zia profusely thanked PM for his kindness in coming to the Pakistan Embassy to call on him. PM was accompanied by Raksha Mantri P.V. Narasimha Rao, Chairman Policy Planning G. Parthasarathi, Minister for Steel K. Natwar Singh, Ambassador Nurul Hasan, Foreign Secretary Romesh Bhandari and the undersigned. Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan and the Pakistan Ambassador in Moscow were present on Pakistan side.

Joint Statement issued at the end of the visit of Indian Foreign Secretary Romesh Bhandari to Islamabad.

Islamabad, April 6, 1985.

Pursuant to the decision taken in the meeting between the President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, General Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq and the Prime Minister of India, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi on March 14, 1985, the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Romesh Bhandari, visited Islamabad for official discussion from April 4 to 6, 1985.

During the course of his stay in Pakistan, Mr. Bhandari was received by the President of Pakistan, General Mohmmad Khan Junejo. Mr. Bhandari also called on the Chairman of the Senate, Mr. Ghulam Ishaq Khan, Minister for Foreign Affairs, Shabzada Yaqub Khan and Minister of Finance, Planning and Economic Coordination, Dr. Mahbubul Haq and had wide ranging discussions on a number of bilateral, regional and international issues with the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan, Mr. Niaz A. Naik.

Mr. Bhandari conveyed message of good wishes from the Prime Minister of India, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, to the President of Pakistan, General Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq and the Prime Minister, Mr. Mohmmad Khan Junejo. The President and the Prime Minister reciprocated the sentiments expressed by the Prime Minister of India. The President reaffirmed the abiding commitment of the Government of Pakistan to the development of tension-free and good neighbourly relations between the two countries.

In his discussion, Mr. Bhandari referred to the commitment of the Prime Minister of India, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, to the strengthening and further improvement of relations with Pakistan as with other neighbourig countries. It was the conviction of the Prime Minister and Government of India that India and Pakistan should endeavour to forge a peaceful, cordial, cooperative and harmonious relationship on the basis of sovereign equality, non-interference and mutual benefit, free of mutual suspicions and mistrust, in keeping with the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement.

The Foreign Secretary of Pakistan, Mr. Niaz A. Naik, reiterated the resolve of the Government of Pakistan to develop friendly, cooperative and good neighbourly relations with India on the basis of the universally recognized principles of peaceful coexistence and the Simla Agreement. He expressed the readiness of the Government of Pakistan to widen and strengthen the areas of cooperation between the two countries.
The Foreign Secretaries agreed that various measures will be taken to diversify and strengthen cooperation in a number of fields and to create an atmosphere of mutual confidence, harmony and trust. They reaffirmed the priority both the governments attached to the common objective of development and maintaining friendly ties between the two countries.

The Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, informed Mr. Romesh Bhandari that in response to the invitation of the Government of India, he would be visiting New Delhi later this month in connection with the ministerial meeting of the non-Aligned Coordination Bureau on Namibia. During his visit to New Delhi, the Foreign Minister of Pakistan will hold discussions with the Indian leaders on measures to enhance bilateral cooperation in various fields and on regional and international issues of mutual interest.

During his call on the Minister for Finance, Planning and Economic Coordination, Dr. Mahbubul Haq, the Foreign Secretary of India conveyed an invitation from the Deputy Chairman of Planning Commission of India, Dr. Manmohan Singh to Dr Mahbubul Haq to visit India. The Minister accepted the invitation with pleasure. The dates of the visit would be finalized at an early and mutually convenient time.

Mr. Romesh Bhandari extended an invitation to the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan, Mr. Naik, to visit India to continue their discussions. Mr. Naik accepted the invitation with thanks. It was agreed that the dates of the visit of Mr. Naik to India would be finalized during the forthcoming meeting of the Foreign Secretaries of the SARC countries at Thimpu in May, 1985.

The Foreign Secretary of India thanked Mr. Naik and the Government of Pakistan for the gracious hospitality extended to him during his stay in Pakistan.
We have been taking certain initiatives in our region. We feel that it is important that we develop the best possible relations with all the countries in our region keeping our own basic ideologies, our basic policies intact and not deviating from them. We are following this course. We have taken certain initiatives, with our Foreign Secretary going to these countries. And we hope these visits will help to develop better social and cultural relations between these countries and us. We have to see that the relations in our region grow deeper and that real cordiality is established in the region. It is not enough – just Government getting together and signing agreements or pacts. We need something much more long-lasting and deeper in the interests of all of us.

Our Foreign Secretary has recently returned from Pakistan. There has been some comment about his visit and what was spoken there and what was done. I think, a few things need to be clarified.

Discussions have been started. But I should like to make it very clear that the talks that we are referring today are not talks on the ‘no-war pact’ or on a peace agreement or at that level. We are talking of improving relationships, improving exchanges between our two peoples, improving the cordiality between the two countries, because that is what will improve the atmosphere which can lead to a basis for a proper understanding between our two countries.

I have met President Zia on two occasions – once in Delhi in November and once in Moscow. On both occasions we had very cordial talks. President Zia was very forthright in what he wanted to do to improve relations between our countries. Unfortunately, after the first occasion we had the incident with the jathas visiting Nankana Saheb in Pakistan. After the second talk, we read an interview that he had given to a journal, which again was totally contrary to what he had spoken about. This is just to bring these facts to your notice. We are worried about their feverish purchase of arms and weapons which we feel are well beyond their just requirements. Today we believe that the USA is spending the maximum amount it has ever spent since the Vietnam War drew to an end on armaments: and, as you know, these go through Pakistan. We cannot be fully sure of how much goes where. The sums involved are very large.
We do not like what we see about their nuclear programme. We have still no indication that they are not making a bomb. We know that they are getting aircraft, they have got aircraft, which have the capability of carrying nuclear weapons. Just a few days ago, the President of Sri Lanka visited Pakistan. And we were disturbed that he should have brought up the Jammu and Kashmir issue while he was in Pakistan. Simultaneously there is a forum being set up in the United Kingdom which is also opening this issue. I wonder if these are a coincidence.

1072. Statement by Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan on return from New Delhi.

Islamabad, April 22, 1985.

Foreign Minister of Pakistan Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said that he is hopeful about positive trends in bilateral relations between India and Pakistan. He made this statement while talking to newsmen at Islamabad on return from New Delhi on April 22 after holding bilateral talks with the Indian leaders during his stay there in connection with the Ministerial meeting of the Non-aligned Movement on Namibia.

Shahabzada Yaqub said that he held meetings in an extremely cordial and friendly atmosphere with Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, Minister of State for External Affairs Khurshid Alam Khan, Education Minister K.C. Pant and Prime Minister’s Foreign Policy Advisor G. Parthasarathy.

He said he had conveyed messages of good wishes from the President and Prime Minister of Pakistan to Mr. Rajiv Gandhi. He had also conveyed to him that both the Pakistani leaders viewed with satisfaction the positive developments that had recently taken place in Indo-Pak relations. “I reaffirmed our desire to develop tension-free, good-neighbourly and cooperative relations between the two countries”, he said.

JOINT COMMISSION MEETING FIXED

During their discussion, the two sides had agreed that the next meeting of the Pakistan-India Joint Ministerial Commission be held on June 27-29. This, in his view, was a positive and concrete step forward.
The four sub-commissions, he said, would meet simultaneously to consider way and means to expand contacts and to review prospects of strengthening relations in a number of fields including trade, culture, travel, tourism, and information. Other exchanges, including Finance Minister Mahbubul Haq’s visit to India and Foreign Secretary Niaz Naik’s return visit would take place as soon as mutually convenient dates were finalized, he added.

DESIRE FOR BETTER TIES SHARED BY BOTH

He had also taken the opportunity of paying a courtesy call on Defence Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao and of holding informal meetings with a cross-section of leading journalists and intellectuals. “These meetings strengthened the view that in spite of differences of perception on several issues, the desire for good-neighbourly relations between the two countries was shared by both sides”, Mr. Yaqub said.

ON NAM MEETING

Talking about the NAM meeting on Namibia, he said it had also considered the Non-aligned plan of action on the critical economic situation in Africa and adopted unanimous declaration on both these issues.

He said he was sure the just cause of the people of Namibia would be enhanced by the meeting in New Delhi. He was equally hopeful that the action plan would help Africa, both in the short and long term to overcome grave crisis that it faced today. The New Delhi meeting was held in a most cordial atmosphere and Pakistan had had the privilege of being elected its Vice-Chairman.

He had taken the opportunity of having discussions with the Secretary General of the Organisation of Islamic Countries Syed Sharifuddin Pirzada and Foreign Ministers of other non-aligned countries who were present in New Delhi.

RAJIV WANTS STEADY PROGRESS IN TIES

Asked if he had brought any message from the Indian Prime Minister, Shahabzada Yaqub said that Mr. Gandhi had reciprocated the good wishes of President Zia and Prime Minister Junejo. Mr. Rajiv Gandhi had also expressed his desire to see a steady progress in the relations between the two countries.

NO FRESH PROPOSAL ON AFGHANISTAN

Asked if Indian External Affairs Secretary Romesh Bhandari who recently visited Afghanistan had brought any proposal to solve the Afghanistan problem, Sahabzada Yqqub said he had not brought any formal proposal for the solution of the problem, but he had conveyed his impressions to Pakistan about his discussions with Karmal regime on the Afghanistan question.

Excerpts from the speech of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi in the Rajya Sabha.

The utmost importance in any foreign policy must be given to our neighbours. And we have been paying a lot of attention to how we can improve our relations with our neighbours. But no matter what some Members might feel, the thing of prime importance is India’s integrity, unity, the ideology and the principles we stand for. These cannot be compromised. Our relations with many of our neighbours are good. Unfortunately with certain countries they are a little strained. We are keen that we build up SARC and make it a useful forum for discussions at technical levels among experts of the seven countries. Later this year we will be having a summit conference of the SARC countries in Dhaka and I hope to be able to attend that conference.

Pakistan is a country that we have been historically having problems with. I just heard a Member say that we should take many actions unilaterally, open up various areas, give concessions. We have offered all this to the Pakistan Government. Unfortunately, they have not been able to reciprocate. We have offered to open up trade, to open up visits by visitors and tourists, but it must be on a reciprocal basis. We are all aware of what is going on that border – the activities that are taking place – and I find it sad that a particular Member has to refer to this sensitive area in that manner. Pakistan is holding the trial of our hijackers. We are hopeful that the trials will be just and the guilty will get the correct punishments. We have seen in an earlier trial in Pakistan, what sort of punishments they give for hijacking. We hope that they will not change the rules of the game just because the hijackers come from another country. We are watching this and the trial is proceeding at a good speed.

At the end of June we will have a Joint Commission meeting with Pakistan and we hope this will help to improve our relations. But there are two factors which affect our relations with Pakistan. One is their feverish accumulation of weapons. It was pointed out in this House that our armed forces may be – I do not know whether the figure is absolutely correct – three times the size of Pakistani armed forces. But I would like to point out to you, Sir, that our border is much more than three times the size of Pakistan’s border. What we have to consider is the number of armed forces that we can put on that particular border, what our commitments on all the other borders. When we look at that, the number is not very different. We are equally matched. What we object to is the sudden influx of very sophisticated weaponry, a generation of technology much ahead of what both the countries had when they started acquiring this weaponry. We have had to match that and we have matched that. There will be no compromise on India’s security; we will see to that. But our objection is not on the increase of tension. Our objection is on the increase of expenditure which we would much prefer to divert towards our poor people for uplifting them and for anti-poverty programmes. Unfortunately, because of the threat, we are not able to do this. We have to divert it for weapons and non-productive expenditure.

The other very crucial factor is their nuclear programmes. We are very unhappy that certain major powers have made an exception in removing Pakistan from the list of countries of which Symington Amendment applies and we take this as a direct help in their nuclear programme. We have no indication at present on how advanced their programme is? We have also no indication that they are not proceeding towards making a nuclear weapon.

I have met President Zia once in Delhi then again in Moscow and we had, Sir, cordial meetings. We discussed various aspects, bilateral issues, other world issues, and I found him very forthcoming and positive. Unfortunately, this positiveness has not seeped down to the lower levels of his bureaucracy. When our delegation went last November to a gurdwara in Pakistan, the way the Pakistan Government handled that was extremely disturbing to us, and we had brought it to their notice. Then, again, after my second discussion with him, I found that he had given an interview to a Canadian newspaper, which was totally contrary to what he had told me. So, these are factors which we must take into account. It is easy for Members to say, without having to carry the responsibility of the security and integrity of the country, take unilateral stands and do this and do that. But we must remember that India comes first. We will not compromise on that.

PRESS RELEASE

No. 18/86. June 30, 1986

Alleged Report of Training Camps

Report Denied

A report in a local daily on June 14, had said that Pakistan Rangers were training Punjab terrorists in Government Guest Houses in some of the major cities of Pakistan.

This is an entirely baseless, totally false and malicious concoction. To allege "covert" use of Government Guest Houses as terrorist training camps is, to say the least, utterly ludicrous.

In consonance with her desire to develop good neighbourly relations with India and in conformity with its practice of strict observance of the principle of non-interference in other countries’ affairs, Pakistan is in no way involved in India’s internal problems.

1075. Joint Press Statement issued at the end of the visit of Pakistani Foreign Secretary Niaz Naik to New Delhi.

New Delhi, August 1, 1985.

The Foreign Secretary of Pakistan, Mr. Niaz A. Naik, paid a visit to India from July 29 to August 1, 1985 at the invitation of the Foreign Secretary of India, Shri Romesh Bhandari.

Mr. Naik was received by the Prime Minister of India, Shri Rajiv Gandhi, the Chairman, Policy Planning Committee, Shri G. Parthasarthy and the Minister of State of External Affairs, Shri Khurshed Alam Khan. He had wide ranging discussions on a number of bilateral, regional and international issues with Shri Bhandari.

Mr. Naik conveyed cordial greetings and good wishes from the President and the Prime Minister of Pakistan to the Prime Minister of India who reciprocated the sentiments.
The Foreign Secretaries noted with satisfaction that meetings at different levels between the two countries were becoming regular and frequent. The President of Pakistan and the Indian Prime Minister had met in Moscow last March and would have opportunities for further meetings during the 40th anniversary session of the United Nations next October and at the South Asian Summit in December. The Foreign Minister of Pakistan had visited Delhi twice and held talks with the Indian leaders in April and July 1985 and the Foreign Secretaries of the two countries had met four times this year. These meetings contributed positively to the promotion of better understanding and confidence.

There was a candid review of various aspects of India-Pakistan relations in a cordial and constructive atmosphere. They reaffirmed the importance both Governments attach to the common objective of developing and maintaining friendly ties between the two countries on the basis of sovereign equality, non-interference and the mutual benefit. They also discussed the implementation of the decisions taken at the second meeting of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission.

The two Foreign Secretaries availed of the opportunity to further exchange views on the Indian proposal for a Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation and the Pakistan’s proposal for a non-aggression pact. Both sides sought further clarifications and agreed to continue efforts aimed at the conclusion of a comprehensive treaty between the two countries.

It has been agreed that exchange of Ministerial level visits would further contribute to promotion of mutually beneficial cooperation in areas of common interest. Mr. Niaz Naik renewed the invitation of his Government to Shri Khurshed Alam Khan, Minister of State for External Affairs, to visit Pakistan. The invitation was accepted with thanks. Mutually convenient dates for the visit will be finalized through diplomatic channels.

Mr. Naik extended an invitation to Shri Romesh Bhandari to visit Islamabad. He accepted the invitation with pleasure. The visit will take place at a mutually convenient date.

The Foreign Secretary of Pakistan thanked for the hospitality extended to him and members of his delegation during their stay in India.

1076. Aide Memoire handed over by Foreign Secretary to Pakistan Ambassador in India.

New Delhi, August 18, 1986.

The Government of India have noticed that Sikh extremists are able to use the Pakistan media with impunity. Recently, on 13th August 1986 the Jang newspaper had carried an interview given by Satinder Pal Singh of the International Sikh Youth Federation (ISYF). The Canadian Sikhs awaiting trial in Lahore for the assault on the officials of the Indian Embassy in Islamabad were also present when the interview was given. In this interview Satinder Pal Singh threatened Indian leaders including President Giani Zail Singh and Prime Minister Shri Rajiv Gandhi. Similarly, the Nawa-i-Waqt newspaper of August 12, 1986 had publicized a provocative statement by Dr. Jagjit Singh Chauhan, a London-based Sikh extremist. Dr. Chouhan was quoted as holding out threats to the lives of President of India and other Indian leaders.

The Government of India is deeply dismayed at the fact that the Government of Pakistan is allowing the use of its soil and media to those extremists who are openly preaching assassination of India’s Head of State and Head of Government. The Government of India hopes the Government of Pakistan will not permit such acts in future.

1077. Media briefing by Official Spokesman of Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Islamabad, August 26, 1986.

A Foreign Office Spokesman told newsmen in Islamabad on August 26 that Pakistan had no objection to India’s sealing off its border with Pakistan “unless it impinges on Pakistan’s security”. He said India had a right to take appropriate steps to prevent illegal border crossing. Answering a question about infiltration into Sind from across the border during the recent past, the Spokesman said Pakistan had not lodged any protest with India in this regard. When asked to confirm reports of illegal infiltration from India, the Spokesman said he would neither confirm nor deny these reports. In fact, he pointed out, Pakistan had proposed taking joint measures with India in this regard.
He said Pakistan strictly believed that there should be no interference in the internal affairs of any country, particularly in South Asia, in the interest of peace and stability in the region. This principle should be scrupulously adhered to by each country so that the trends set in motion for developing and building regional cooperation in South Asia are not obstructed. Pakistan, for its part, wanted to pursue this policy to maintain friendly relations with all countries, he said.

The Spokesman did not agree with a questioner that the process of normalisation of relations between Pakistan and India had been deadlocked. It had been decelerated a little but dialogue between the two sides was continuing. Meetings had taken place between the officials of the two countries and there had been a forward movement in this respect on Pakistan's initiative. Pakistan had expressed the desire to import certain goods from India in the private sector, whose list was being enlarged. Another important development, he said, had recently taken place towards opening of a second rail route between the two countries through Khokhrapar to facilitate movement of people between the two countries.

Foreign Secretaries of the two countries had recently met at Dhaka. Pakistan wanted to speed up this process, he said.

Asked if there was a possibility of Prime Minister Junejo meeting Mr. Rajiv Gandhi at the NAM conference at Harare, the Spokesman said there was a desire for such a meeting on both sides but no scheduled meeting was expected to take place. He said Mr. Junejo and Mr. Gandhi had briefly met in Stockholm early this year. He added that there was no fixed agenda for meeting between Heads of Government in a third country. Naturally, he said, if such a meeting took place, normalisation of relations between the two countries would form the basis of talks. There was a desire on both sides for taking measures for improving their relations, the Spokesman added.

Mr. Junejo, the Spokesman said, would avail himself of the opportunity of meeting as many world leaders as possible. For this, he said, indications were that some of the leaders personally would contact the Prime Minister for a meeting between them at which matters of common interest would come up for discussion. "However, no specific meeting with any foreign leader as yet been firmed up", the Spokesman said.
Dear Mr. President,

I have received your letter of the 12th August.

Your Foreign Secretary Mr. Niaz Naik conveyed to me your greeting and good wishes which I sincerely reciprocate. I believe he had very useful discussions with Shri Bhandari and other officials.

It has always been the endeavour of the Government of India to build a relationship of trust and confidence with all our neighbours. This is particularly true of Pakistan since, unfortunately, the history of relationship between our two countries is marked by several armed conflicts and other periods of tension. This atmosphere of distrust can be eliminated if there is genuine desire to do so on both sides.

Over the years there has been a growing feeling of uneasiness in India about Pakistan's nuclear programme. Declarations of peaceful intentions on the one hand and persistent reports and news of a contrary nature on the other have not, on the whole, helped in clearing the air.

Consistent with our respective positions on the issue, expressed from time to time, I think both our Governments should devise confidence building measures so that bolder initiatives such as contacts at the technical level, etc., could be considered in due course.

I too look forward to our meeting in New York and, later in the year, in Dhaka.

With warm regards,

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- Rajiv Gandhi

His Excellency
General Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq,
President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan,
Islamabad.
Pakistan is a country with which we would like to be much more friendly. It is not just a question of détente; we want to go much further, to entente. Fundamentally, our regional security lies in all the countries in the region building together, not confronting each other. Our security lies in building affection between our people, which is naturally there, building goodwill, warm friendly neighbourliness between our people.

Although we would like things to go in such a direction, we do live in a very real world where hostilities have taken place. We have to defend ourselves, guard our borders, we must be awake and ready for any such eventuality, to guard against surprise attacks, to be ready for unwarranted instusions, and our forces must be fully prepared. But true security will only come in dialogue, in interaction -- and it is not necessarily related to the strength of the armed forces. Hence, our non enthusiasm for a limited arms control, the No-War Pact, talks on deployment and various suggestions of inspecting facilities. We feel they are not adequate to defuse tension; much more and much more deep action is required for people to people contact, for the friendliest inter-governmental relations, and truly cordial and friendly relations in our daily interaction. During the last Joint Commission with Pakistan we were willing to go to very great lengths to normalize the state of relations between our countries. We were only limited by what Pakistan wanted to do and how far they wanted to go. That door is still open. We are willing to go very much further.

The problem that is vexing us today is the development of a Pakistani nuclear weapon. We have ourselves had the capacity of developing nuclear weapons for 11 years, but we have not used this option. We have demonstrated that even if we have the capacity we have the will for not proliferating the nuclear arms race. It is possible. We have done it. Unfortunately, Pakistan seems to be developing a nuclear weapon. We can debate on how advanced they are on this development, whether they already have one, whether they are on the verge of having one, or whether they will have one in the coming months. We can also debate on whether technology, which we believe is mostly taken from other technologies, needs to be tested, and whether they will actually test a weapon or whether they will opt for it not to be tested. We can debate whether they have got a particular technology which had certain defective components and they are now only rectifying those shortcomings by trying to smuggle in various components from some other countries, which means they will not, of course, be testing the whole weapon as a weapon to see that each component is functioning properly.

The real question, apart from these, is what will it do to our region? And, perhaps of a much more serious nature, what will it do to the balance of power in the world? We know and are fairly sure that the programme has been financed not solely by Pakistan but also by other countries. Will this mean that the weapon will be available to these countries? How will these countries use the weapon? And it is again not just a question of having a nuclear weapon. A nuclear weapon is a very dangerous tool in the hands of an unstable country. If governments change, if a system of command and control cannot be established that is totally foolproof, the danger of inadvertent use of the weapons increases. If such a weapon came into the possession of countries whose history shows us that they do not have the technical capacity for command and control of such weapons, countries whose history shows us that they are not in a development phase which has given their political system adequate stability, again it increase tremendously the dangers of inadvertent use of weapons. If a nuclear weapon comes in our region, it will make it very difficult for us to build a détente or go further with it on the road of friendship. Pakistan must desist from developing such weapons.

1080. Media Briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Islamabad, October 15, 1986.

A Foreign office spokesman expressed on October 15 deep sense of disappointment at the baseless charges and propaganda campaign by New Delhi to implicate Pakistan in the situation in Punjab.

In a Press briefing at the Foreign office on October 15 the spokesmen said that the so-called evidence collected by the Indian Government was nothing more than flimsy, hypothetical, and fanciful tales collected by the Indian police authorities “from persons of highly dubious credibility,” he added.

He maintained that Indian information relied on alleged statements by Sikh detenues in prison. The information given by these Sikhs, particularly the names of alleged Pakistani involved, is not recognized by the authorities in Pakistan, except the names of a couple, who are established smugglers and traffickers, the spokesman said.
Giving some more examples, the spokesman asserted that the credibility of such allegations could be checked by anyone.

To a query he retorted that Pakistan did not have a single Sikh prisoner in its jails except a few who were behind bars on charges of smuggling. He also categorically denied that any Sikh had been given asylum on Pakistani territory.

The spokesman was also critical of the fact that India which had entered into many arms deals during the last six years with the Soviet Union, Britain, France and Germany had been attacking Pakistan for its modest purchases of equipment to replace the outmoded ones.

He pointed out that whereas Pakistan had scrupulously avoided creating a furor on this issue on the basis that every country had the sovereign right to purchase armaments, India had spared no opportunity to condemn Pakistan.

He observed that if there is an arms race in South Asia, it is confined to one country alone. Pakistan he reminded did not have the resources to indulge in an arms race of this order. Explaining his point he said that during the last six years Pakistan had only purchased 40 aircraft whereas India had bought air force planes in hundreds during the same period.

When asked if Pakistani authorities had arrested 26 Indian nationals from Sind allegedly involved in the recent wave of unrest in that province, he said he did not even know the source of this news item.

However, he pointed out that Pakistan had proposed to India the holding of a meeting of representatives on their issues of illegal border crossing from both the sides. “But they did not respond”, he accused.

He, at the same time asserted that Pakistan sincerely wished to restore conducive atmosphere between the two counties and said that Pakistan believed that the young Prime Minister of India would improve relations. When asked about any progress made on the issue of the barrage being built by India on the Jhelum, he said it was understood by Pakistan that its commissioner is in active contact with his Indian counterpart on the Indus Basin Treaty.
1081.  SECRET

Record of the meeting between Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and President Zia-ul-Haq. New York, October 23, 1985.

PRIME MINISTER’S OFFICE

Record of PM’s meeting with President Zia in the latter’s suite at the Waldorf Towers New York on the 23rd October 1985.

President Zia was accompanied by his Foreign Minister Sahebzada Yakub Khan and Foreign Secretary Niaz Naik. PM was accompanied by External Affairs Minister Shri Bali Ram Bhagat and AS (PMO) Shri C.R. Gharekhan.

President Zia received PM with a two-handed handshake at the door of his suite and conferred similar honours on Foreign Minister and the undersigned. During the photo opportunity, he spotted a photographer clad in a saree and said that he had never before seen a photographer in a saree. The lady turned out to be a US based journalist working for “India Today”.

Zia: Press is always asking me whether I am going to meet Rajiv Gandhi. I replied: Yes, yes. Let me first compliment you on the successful elections in Punjab.

PM: Thank you. I understand your constitutional amendment was also through last night.

Zia: Yes. We don’t have a party system in Pakistan. In fact each member is a party unto himself! I told the National Assembly: “Just decide by yourself and let me know”. It all ended up very positively. We have taken a lot from your constitution.

The election in your Punjab was a very bold step. We were praying very hard for its success. We hope that from now on you will not blame us for anything.

PM: Some people are continuing to come from across the border. They have even given interviews to magazines.

Zia: Honestly speaking, I do not believe in these things. I asked your Ambassador S.K. Singh, please tell us who these persons are. I assure you that Pakistan has no interest at all in interfering in the Punjab. Why should we have any such interest? More so, since we want to develop good relations with India. I assure you that Pakistan will not interfere in Punjab even in its wildest imagination. We do not want to indulge in allegations and counter-allegations.
At one time you spoke about some incidents in November last year when Sikhs from India had come for pilgrimage to Pakistan. It was the first time that India had sent non-Sikh officials in its delegation. The non-Sikh official started searching the baggage of a Sikh from Canada which led to some trouble. For the last 7 years I have made a habit of receiving a delegation of the Sikh pilgrims, always in the presence of your Ambassador. On one occasion, Mr. Sharma did not come. We did not make a formal demarche about it, but we told Mr. Sharma that it was not fair. If he had told us, we would rather have cancelled the meeting.

PM: What is the position about the hijackers?

Zia: The proceedings against one batch of hijackers have concluded. Another batch will start shortly. I shall inform you personally as soon as the case is concluded. The trial has been held in camera and in low key. We have prevented persons from UK, Canada, etc. from coming and testifying. I hope that in the next two-three weeks, we shall have a final judgment. We intend to carry it out as you would wish us to.

PM: I wish to talk to you very frankly. There is another issue. I am not convinced that you are not making the (nuclear) bomb. You have made a lot of suggestions. Our people feel that you have already got the material and that you can take it out and hide it.

Zia: It applies to both countries.

PM: But we know that we are not doing it.

Zia: We are not indulging in any military purpose activity in the nuclear field. We should together find a regional solution. We are ready to do anything you might suggest. You tell us. We leave the solution to you. That is how we can show our sincerity. We have only one small Kahuta Plant. We are prepared to agree to the safeguards, but on a reciprocal basis. Both you and we have said that NPT is discriminatory. But we are prepared to sign it together. We have an NPT, a bilateral NPT of our own. We are prepared for mutual inspection. We are ready for a joint renunciation of nuclear weapons or for South Asia as a nuclear-free-zone. Anything that you are ready to consider. You suggested technical level contacts.

PM: Let us first -start building up confidence.

Zia: Pakistan is ready to go to any length for it.

PM: We have absolutely no interest for going in for nuclear weapons. Every argument is against it - cost, complications of COI, etc. Our whole foreign policy will be affected. We don’t want it at all.
Zia: Through you, we want to derive confidence. Pakistan is ready to go to any lengths to cooperate with India under your able leadership.

PM: Let us work it out. We should open up people to people contacts — trade, culture, tourism, etc.

Zia: As far as trade is concerned, the ball is in India’s court. As you know, we have state control, unlike in India. We sent you a list of 40 items. But you have not reacted.

At PM’s instance, the undersigned stated that the position was not quite as President Zia had indicated. A list of 40 items given by Pakistan does not contain much promise of trade. I explained that Pakistan was asking India for a special import policy in respect of Pakistan. We cannot do so because of GATT regulations. We already have one regime for developing countries as a whole and cannot have special regime for Pakistan.

Zia: India can add items to Pakistan’s list.

Both PM and Zia suggested that perhaps this could be taken up within the framework of SARC. The undersigned pointed out that India had always been willing to bring trade under SARC, but it was Pakistan which was objecting to it. At this stage Yakub Khan looked enquiringly at his Foreign Secretary who confirmed what I had said by saying that Pakistan wanted to move cautiously in the matter.

Yakub Khan: Talking quite frankly, it seems that there is some objection at the technical level in Pakistan. Commerce and trade should really be instruments of political policy.

PM: We have to take a political decision.

Zia: We have to. We are very sincere.

PM: I wanted to talk to you about one other point.

A lot of People from Bangladesh cross over to Pakistan from India. The number runs into thousands. Would you like us to stop this?

Zia: We have requested the Indian authorities to stop it. It is not only the Biharis but there are also Burmese.

PM: Can we cooperate on it? They are transiting through India and creating problems for us also.

Zia: For the most part, they are women. They indulge in all kinds of practices.
It was agreed that the two Foreign Secretaries, will meet in New York and discuss this matter.

Zia: We have had 3 wars. We must try to build confidence between the armed forces of the two countries. We have made a number of suggestions for contacts at institutional level, for example, between the military academies of the two countries. We should start exchanges at any level.

PM: I have no information about this. We shall look into it. I like the idea.

Zia: There is also the situation in the Siachin Glacier where our troops are eyeball to eyeball. You will find that Pakistan is willing to go to any length for friendship.

The meeting ended with the usual exchange of pleasantries.

(C.R. Gharekhan)
Additional Secretary
1.11.1985
Zia: It would be a great pleasure indeed. We are working out the details.

Foreign Secretary: Shall we then take it that you will come to Madras and Kalapakkam?

Zia: It depends on when I am able to leave Male. We shall check our programme in the Maldives and come back to you.

It was agreed that an announcement be made that Zia would visit India, without specifying Madras or Delhi, on December 16 and he will spend a night in Delhi.

PM: There is one small problem which I wanted to mention to you. We have been having small incidents in the North. I don’t believe that they have been deliberate. One aircraft has been flying very regularly. Our people want to shoot it down, but I told them: “For Heaven’s sake, don’t.” Can you find out about it?

Zia: Mr. Bhandari spoke to Niaz Naik about it. I have been told that the aircraft is supposed to be flying over Siachin. I presume India’s complaint is that it is over-flying Indian air space. Of course, we consider it our own air space. I do not want to go into allegations and counter allegations. But there have been 7 air violations from the Indian side. We did not complain about them because the future of the area has not yet been decided.

PM: I am telling you about this because our Parliament is starting from today and we will have lots of questions.

Zia: You can tell them that you have taken it up with Pakistan. We also have questions raised in our National Assembly.

I feel that we are having unnecessary tension over Siachin. The line has been demarcated everywhere except in this area. If we can undertake demarcation in this area also, it would be a great help. We have agreed to start talks on the maritime boundary. There is also a small portion on the border in the Rann of Kutch which remains to be demarcated. All these can be defused without much problem. In Azad Jammu & Kashmir, our contention is that the boundary runs in one particular direction whereas your people say that it goes the other way. Can we not sit down together and talk it over? Our aim should be to defuse and deescalate as much as possible. I am grateful for your personal response. I believe that political will is there in both sides.

PM: Yes, the political will exist. We should just pick up the phone and talk to each other whenever there is a problem.

Zia: Some of the press emphasizes the negative points. I saw M.J. Akbar’s article in the ‘Sunday’ in which he spoke about clouds of war. I asked him “Why don’t you see clouds of peace”. I was very glad at your statement in Bombay.
that you are prepared to discuss everything and anything with Pakistan. It has had a very good effect in Pakistan.

(At this stage Mr. Noorani, MOS for Foreign Affairs, joined the meeting. Introducing him, Zia said that Mr. Noorani is a thoroughbred politician and that he (the President) is very grateful to have had Mr. Noorani’s cooperation for over seven years.)

Zia: I am looking forward to my visit. We are also greatly looking forward to your own visit to Pakistan whenever you wish – January, February or any other time.

PM: We will try to work out something when you come to India.

Zia: Mr. Bhandari’s suggestion is very good. The two Foreign Secretaries are going to meet in January. They should workout something and resolve many issues. Your visit should be the climax and should pave the way for good relations. You can come even for a short time.

Noorani: You will see, Sir, that there is a tremendous fund of goodwill for you among the people of Pakistan. You are very popular among the young people.

PM: Sometimes there is tremendous curiosity among the people because of lack of familiarity. This is why I am very keen on increasing contacts among the peoples of our countries.

Zia: I am also looking forward to the SARC Summit. Some pressman asked me “Will you take up Kashmir in SARC”? I told “No”. He asked “Have you given up your position on Kashmir”? I told him: “No, I have not given up my position, but in SARC we have agreed that only regional issues of common interest will be raised, not bilateral differences.”

PM: This is a good thing.

At this stage, one of Zia’s aides brought what Zia called a transparency but it looked like a sketch map of Siachin area. Zia explained to PM the lines claimed respectively by India and Pakistan. He then suggested that the two sides can sit down to decide which side the boundary runs. He added that there have been at least 106 expeditions by Pakistan in this area. The two sides may decide on status quo ante or anything else. There is only snow in that area and is certainly not worth fighting for.

Zia: expressed his sympathy at the floods in Tamil Nadu.

1083. Letter from United States President Ronald Reagan to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

When you visited Washington in June 1985, our discussions marked a new step forward in relations between the U.S. and India. We both resolved to make the most of the opportunity to seek further progress. There are many ways to do so, and our governmental agencies have been hard at work toward this goal. Yet, I also think that regular correspondence on important issues between the two of us is essential. It is with this thought in mind that I am writing to you now on two subjects: Afghanistan and U.S. security assistance to Pakistan.

Your contacts with the Soviets on the Afghan problem after your visit to Washington last year were most welcome. Your remarks in Harare that you wished an end to intervention and interference in Afghanistan by all parties indicates your continuing concern with this important problem. I believe your upcoming discussions with the General Secretary could help to advance the process toward a settlement and hope you find occasion to raise the issue.

In repeated conversations with the Soviets this year, we have made clear to them our interest in a comprehensive settlement of the Afghanistan crisis. A military solution is simply not possible. We do not seek "to bleed" the Soviets in Afghanistan by prolonging the war. We have no designs on Afghan territory and recognize Soviet interests in a secure southern border just as we recognize Afghan desires for self-determination. We have indicated our willingness to serve as a guarantor of a comprehensive settlement. Our objective is clear, namely to restore Afghanistan's non-alignment, independence and territorial integrity through the prompt and complete withdrawal of Soviet forces.

Our resumed arms sales relationship with Pakistan, as you know, is directly affected by escalating Soviet military action in Afghanistan and a corresponding increase in military pressure on Pakistan. Soviet and regime cross-border violations of Pakistani airspace and territory have increased by 150 percent over last year, with a total of 650 incursions already this year. This provocative action has in turn stimulated Pakistani interest in an enhanced early warning capability on its western border. No decisions have been made as to what mix of systems would best suit Pakistan's needs. But let me assure you we will keep in mind your government's concerns as we move to a decision on this.

Quite obviously, the prompt and complete withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan is in the interest of the entire region, including India -- an interest strongly shared by the United States. I believe that a political settlement is within reach, if only Moscow will agree to a realistic timetable for withdrawal. The current Soviet proposal of a three to four year timeframe is untenable and appears designed to legitimize a prolonged occupation and to achieve a thinly-cloaked military solution. That the Soviets have not yet put aside hopes for a military solution is suggested by their phony "withdrawal" of last month. As you know, Soviet units were introduced for the sole purpose of withdrawing them in front of the cameras.

Currently, the UN-sponsored negotiations are stalemated over the length of the Soviet withdrawal timetable. The last round of talks in August produced no forward movement on this key issue and no subsequent round has been scheduled. I urge you to use your talks with the General Secretary to discuss the need to hasten resolution of this issue which is of such great concern to people everywhere.

Warm regards,

Ronald Reagan

His Excellency
Rajiv Gandhi
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi.

SECRET

Record of the meeting between Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and President Zia-ul-Haq.

Record of discussion between PM and President Zia at Karatoa Guest House on December 7, 1985. at 5.45 p.m.

General Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq of Pakistan called on the PM on December 7, 1985.

Following were present:
PM: General Zia
EAM: Sahabzadah Yaqub-Khan Foreign Minister.
M. Dubey, Addl. Secretary (SA)
Dr. Mahbubul Haq, Finance Minister.
2. Following is a brief record of discussion after exchange of courtesies.

PM: We have seen reports that an amount of Rs.20 lakhs has been set aside in a special fund for the liberation of Kashmir. (General Zia repeated this to Finance Minister Mahbubul Haq).

Dr. Mahbubul Haq: They cannot do it without my permission. There are other ways of utilizing funds. I would like to see them for better purposes like trade promotion.

General Zia: We should be able to tie-up some arrangements for cooperation in different sectors before your visit to Pakistan which can take place at your convenience.

Initially I had suggested 16th December as the date of my visit to India. While doing so I did not realise the significance of the date.

PM: It was not our suggestion.

General Zia: Unofficially I can tell you that it does not matter at all for me on which date I visit India. It is only some people who mentioned to me about it. It perhaps speaks of the psyche of the two nations that when you were being questioned about the visit you explained it......To tell you frankly it did not affect me but now the Governments of Sri Lanka and Maldives have finalized my programme. I will be reaching Delhi on the 17th around noon and propose to leave for Islamabad in the evening.

PM: You could stay in Delhi for the night.

Gen. Zia: I don’t mind if you say so. However, my daughter is getting married on the 18th. (Pointing towards his Ministers) I have not yet told my colleagues about it,

PM: (laughingly): In that case I withdraw my invitation.
Gen. Zia: My wife will be returning from Sri Lanka on the 10th to make arrangements and I will be reaching just before the wedding.

PM: The other areas which you mentioned this morning (in the SARC context) about cooperation amongst women in the region is interesting it will be a pity if not fulfilled.

Gen. Zia: We should give guidelines to the Foreign Ministers. Tomorrow we will give a one page note on this subject specifying the areas of interest. The women component of each country must be encouraged. I discussed this with Begum Inayatullah who is our Minister for Population Control. She was very enthusiastic about this idea and told me that it was even being discussed in the context of the Islamic organization. Recently a delegation of women entrepreneurs from India visited Pakistan. When they met me they asked if I have anything in mind about women in SARC. I told them that when they return, they should seek an audience with Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and ask him to support my suggestion.

Dr. Mahbubul Haq: We were impressed by the progress made in training of women in India for different sectors.

Gen. Zia: When this delegation met me I had carefully gone through the names of the members and their interests. I found that one of them was dealing with administrative training. When I asked her about her work, she gave me a detailed account of her activities.

(EAM handed over a note to PM).

PM: As you know we have invited Khan Abdul Gaffar Khan for the Congress Centenary Celebrations. We want to send a small plane to bring him to India.

Gen. Zia: We will send him; you return him. We gave him permission immediately when he asked before I left. I met him two years ago. He is very old now.

(It was agreed that the Pakistan Government will give a plane to send Khan Abdul Gaffar Khan to India for the Congress centenary celebrations and he will return in an Indian plane).

7.12.1985
The Government of India have repeatedly been raising with Pakistan, both in writing and orally, the question of the latter’s involvement with Sikh extremists. In this context, specific reference may be made to the Note handed over in New Delhi to His Excellency Mr. Sahabzada Yaqub Khan the Pakistan Foreign Minister in July 1985, the Notes handed over by the then Foreign Secretary to the Pakistan Ambassador in New Delhi in November 1985 and to his counterpart in Islamabad in January 1986, the Aide Memoire handed over by the Indian Ambassador to the Pakistan Foreign Secretary in Islamabad in February 1986 and the Aide Memoire handed over by the Foreign Secretary to the Pakistan Ambassador in New Delhi in June 1986. Our serious concerns in the matter have also been conveyed to Pakistan at the highest level by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi in his various meeting with President Zia as well as most recently in his discussions with Prime Minister Junejo at Bangalore.

It is unfortunate that despite the fact that Pakistan’s involvement with Sikh terrorists has placed in jeopardy the normalisation of Indo-Pak relations, the Pakistan Government continues to aid and abet their activities whilst at the same denying any involvement. Pakistan’s denials about its assistance to Sikh extremists are unacceptable in the face of the abundant evidence furnished to it, pointing to the contrary. Similarly, Pakistan’s contention rejecting the evidence furnished to it as untenable on the grounds that it has been obtained through interrogation does not carry conviction as such evidence has not just been derived by interrogation of a few persons but by interrogation of scores of individuals.

As elaborated in the communications under reference, India has definitive evidence that Pakistan has been providing sanctuary to hard-core Sikh terrorists whose names are appended at Annexure I, and has been assisting them in motivating and in giving arms training to Sikh youth for terrorist activities in India. These terrorist leaders are located in safe houses under tight security where hundreds of Sikh youth from India have been taken in small batches for indoctrination and training. Pakistan has not only been bearing the cost of maintaining these safe houses but has also been providing financial and other assistance to these terrorists.

Pakistan’s support to the cause of ‘Khalistan’ is well established. In this context, it may be mentioned that Manvir Singh, a self-Styled General of the so-called ‘Khalistan Commando Force’ has revealed that before the announcement of ‘Khalistan’ was made by the 5-member Panthic Committee on April 29, 1986, the issue was thoroughly discussed. According to Manvir Singh, while he and some other had objected to the immediate announcement of 'Khalistan' and had favored its announcement on the occasion of Diwali, 1986, late Balbir Singh and Gurjit Singh – husband of a niece of late Bhindranwale – who had recently returned from Pakistan, threatened that in case such an announcement was delayed, Pakistan would stop giving them any aid including arms. Manvir Singh also disclosed that the Pakistan authorities had sent a message to Gurjit Singh asking the extremist leaders to send a responsible leader, preferably the Chief of Damdami Taksal to Pakistan to unite various groups and group leaders of Sikh youth in Pakistan under one leadership. Disclosures made by other noted terrorist leaders also corroborate not only Pakistan's inspirational but also their operational support to Sikh extremists. Appended at Annexure II are hand-written statements along with English translations of noted terrorist leaders, namely, Sarabjit Singh, Mohkam Singh and Charanjit Singh, which bear out the foregoing.

There is incontrovertible evidence that Pakistan has been regularly supplying weapons to Sikh extremists and instigating them to indulge in terrorist activities in India. A large number of these weapons have been recovered from the Sikh extremists who have confirmed that these were supplied to them by the Pakistan authorities. An illustrative list of specific instances of arms supplied by Pakistan is enclosed at Annexure III.

Pakistan's involvement with Sikh terrorists is further corroborated by the following which it may be pointed out has been obtained on the basis of evidence other than that Secured from interrogation:

a) Hijacking Since the incidence of extremist activities in Indian Punjab, as many as four IAC aircraft have been hijacked by Sikh extremists and all of them were diverted to Pakistan. While one was denied permission to land and returned to Amritsar, three actually landed in Pakistan. Out of these three aircraft, one in August 1984, with the connivance of the Pakistan authorities, was allowed to leave for Dubai after being refueled in Pakistan. It was clearly established that the Pakistan authorities had handed over a pistol and ammunition to the Sikh hijackers of the aircraft. The Transfer was witnessed by some passengers including foreign nationals. Moreover, it was confirmed by Interpol (FRG) that the pistol (Walther PP 7.65 MM Sl. No.445901) recovered from one of the hijackers was part of a consignment supplied by the FRG firm Walther GMBH to the Chief Administrative Officer, Government of Pakistan, P.O. Box 1040, Islamabad (Pakistan) on 22nd September, 1975.

Hijackers of the IAC aircraft hijacked to Pakistan in September, 1981 and July, 1984 were tried in a Special Court at Lahore. While the Special Court has passed sentences on the hijackers, the judgements were suspended by the Lahore High Court in February 1986. The Government of India hopes that judicial action in this matter would be completed at a very early date as promised by Prime Minister Junejo to the Prime Minister of India during their discussions in Bangalore.

b) Visit of Sikh extremists to Pakistan The Government of India have from time to time been requesting the Government of Pakistan that they should prevent entry of Sikh extremists to Pakistan. Despite these requests it has come to note that the following Sikh extremists were allowed entry into Pakistan recently even though their names figured amongst the list of 66 Sikh extremists which the Government of India had forwarded vide its Note of January 1986 for exclusion from Pakistan:

i) Dr. Harjinder Singh Dilgir – April 1986
ii) Jagdev Singh Nijjar – April –May 1986
iii) Ganga Singh Dhillon – June 1986
iv) Tarsem Singh Purewal – June 1986
v) Joginder Singh Malhi – November 1986

This clearly demonstrates Pakistan’s links with Sikh extremists abroad and its steady interaction with them.

c) Treatment of Canadian Sikhs who attacked diplomats On 26th November, 1985, six to eight Canadian Sikhs assaulted Indian diplomats on liaison duty with a jatha of Indian pilgrims at Lahore. Though the assailants were arrested on November 28, they were released the same day and once again assaulted Indian diplomats on liaison duty with another Sikh jatha on 12th June, 1986 at Lahore. This attack took place in the presence of the Pakistani police and civil personnel who refused to intervene. Pakistan’s involvement in the incident is quite clear since the assailants were the same as those in the November 1985 incident and since well in advance of the jatha’s visit, the Indian Embassy had specifically requested the Pakistan authorities to ensure the security of the officers on liaison duty. Following the June incident, the assailants were arrested on 15th June, 1986. The leisurely pace of proceedings against the assailants and the leniency with which they are being treated corroborates the view that the attacks the Indian diplomats were under taken with Pakistani connivance and encouragement.

d) Anti-Indian demonstrations during visit of jathas Pakistan regularly utilizes the visits of Sikh jathas from India in connivance with foreign militant to subvert Sikhs for attempting/ loyalists and propagating communal hatred. Despite requests to the contrary by the Government of India, Pakistan permits Sikh extremist elements from third countries to visit Gurudwaras during visits of such jathas. Even during the visit of the last Sikh jatha to Pakistan in November, 1986, there were about a hundred Sikhs from other countries including about 60 from UK. As many as 15 to 20 of the foreign Sikhs belonged to the ISYF. Amongst these were Joginder Singh Malhi, President, ISYF, FRG, Joginder Singh from Canada and Sumand Singh from UK. These extremists elements together with local Pakistan Sikhs like Shyam Singh from Sind raised pro-'Khalistan' and pro-Bhindranwale slogans and succeeded in aborting the proceedings on 16th November at Nankana Saheb. With Pakistani connivance these elements sought not only to prevent the presentation of saropas to Indian Embassy officials but also to subvert Indian pilgrims.

e) Pakistan media role The Pakistan media has been extremely supportive of the emergence of so-called ‘Khalistan’. Pakistan T.V. has in the past indulged in distorted and mischievous projection of developments in India with the obvious intention of inciting communal disharmony amongst Sikhs and Hindus and inflaming emotions of Sikhs particularly after operation ‘Blue Star’. The Pakistan Press has similarly given extensive coverage to inflammatory statements by Sikh extremists. A Compilation of these press reports is appended at Annexure IV.

f) Pakistani links with Sikh extremists abroad There is much to suggest deep-rooted and continuous Pakistani collusion with Sikh extremists abroad, particularly in U.K., Canada and USA. The Pakistani ethnic media in these countries, taking the cue from Pakistan, has frequently been carrying interviews of Sikh extremist leaders, Pakistani newspapers like JANG and WATAN, which are also published from London, maintain close contacts with extremists like Jagjit Singh Chauhan and give wide publicity to their statements. The Pakistan Embassy in U.K. has also been very active in supporting Sikh extremist newspapers The enclosed letter at Annexure V addressed to Mr. T. Purewal, the Editor of extremist newspaper DES PARDES is illustrative of the financial support provided by Pakistan to such organisations and of Pakistan’s long standing links with them which in this case go back at least to 1981. It would by apparent from the foregoing that both on the basis of evidence derived from interrogation reports and that available from other sources it is clear that Pakistan has been continuously aiding and abetting Sikh terrorist activity directed against India. The Government of India cannot but view these actions on the part of Pakistan with grave concern and reiterate that they constitute a major stumbling block in the normalisation process between the two countries. Mere denials of non-involvement with such activity cannot be accepted at face value in the context of the overwhelming evidence to the contrary and must be matched by deeds. Accordingly, it is hoped that Pakistan would at least take the following initial steps in this matter as a concrete manifestation of its seriousness to resume the normalisation process:

i) The Pakistan Government should make a public announcement at the highest level denouncing the concept of “Khalistan” and deploring all terrorist activities and in particular those directed against India, ii) Desist from maintaining safe houses and running training camps for Sikh terrorists, as also from providing them with financial and other assistance, including weapons;

iii) Repatriate to India all Sikh youth receiving training in Pakistan and particularly those extremist leaders who are identified at Annexure I;

iv) Prevent entry of all Sikh extremists to Pakistan particularly those identified in the Government of India’s Note of January 1986;

v) Ensure Speedy implementation of the sentences already awarded by the Pakistani Special Court to the hijackers of the two IAC Aircraft;

vi) Ensure that visits of Indian pilgrims to Pakistan are not used for subverting them and for inculcating Pro-‘Khalistan’ sentiments. Particular care should be taken that no extremist elements are allowed to enter the Gurudwaras; and

vii) Ensure that the Pakistani media is not used for propagation of Pro-‘Khalistan’ sentiments and hatred against India.

New Delhi, December 12, 1985.

Aide Memoire

Subject: Illegal border crossings from Pakistan into India

The size and nature of illegal border crossings in recent times from Pakistan into India is causing concern. Elements detected in such illegal crossings include terrorists motivated and trained in Pakistan, espionage agents, drug traffickers, criminals, smugglers and carriers of fire-arms. In addition, persons who have completed their prison term in Pakistan and Bangladeshi nationals are also being pushed into India. Many instances have also come to notice where terrorist elements after committing heinous crimes in Punjab are being granted safe passage and shelter in Pakistan. These illegal crossings have been creating strains and disrupting law and order in some border States adjoining Pakistan.

2. Such illegal crossings though noticed along the entire Indian border with Pakistan, have assumed disturbing dimensions in the States of Punjab and Rajasthan. During 1985-86, over 5800 such infiltrations were detected in Punjab and over 2700 in Rajasthan.

3. The following areas are being used by Pak posts to cause infiltrations into India:

Punjab Sector

4. Hundreds of Sikh youth have been identified who after having been motivated and imparted training in Pakistan were infiltrated by Pakistani authorities into India. Most of these elements were escorted up to the border by the Pak Rangers in their vehicles. The others were sent escorted by couriers.

5. Some Sikh youth who went to Pakistan were accorded a warm reception on arrival and provided safe passage. An announcement was made by the then DC Sialkot in the bordering villages in May 1984 that Sikh crossing into Pakistan should by cordially received. In 1984, Some Pakistani newspapers had also reported that some Sikhs had come to Pakistan. This was not contradicted by Pakistan authorities. However, till now no list of Indians who crossed into Pakistan has been furnished to the Government of India which should normally have been done.

6. During the meeting of Foreign Secretaries held in January 1986 at Islamabad, it was agreed that civilian detainees who completed their sentences would be repatriated on a reciprocal basis by 31st March, 1986. It was further decided in the meeting of Sub-Commission IV of the Indo-Pak Joint Commission held in Islamabad from 3 -- 6 February, 1986 that the lists of such prisoners would be exchanged between the countries by 24.2.86. In pursuance of this decision, though Government of India handed over a list of Pakistani Prisoners in its custody, a list of Indian prisoners in Pakistan is yet to be received. Pakistan have also not provided Consular Access as per the schedule and the Consular Access due on 20.8.’86 has not been provided so far. Meanwhile, a large number of Indian national along with some foreigners were illegally pushed back into India recently. The detected cases of such push back in July 1986 stood at 220 while between October and November, 1986 over 300 persons were made to illegally cross the border. This includes many Indian prisoners who were provided Consular Access and in respect of whom repatriation proceedings were pending.

7. Bangladeshi nationals in large numbers are being pushed into India from Pakistan though on the Indian side vigorous action is being taken to hold back Bangladeshi nationals who are determined to sneak into Pakistan. The genesis of such crossings relates to the problem of Bihari Muslims stranded in Bangladesh and once the Government of Pakistan and Bangladesh settle it, the situation relating to the illicit traffic of Bangladeshi nationals is likely to improve.

8. With a view to effectively controlling illegal trans-border movement along the Indo-Pak border, it is suggested that
(a) the practice by Pakistan authorities of pushing back into India, through various points on the border, of Indian nationals including convicts who have completed their jail sentences should be stopped. Such persons should be handed over to the Government of India either through the Embassy of India at Islamabad or to the Indian Border Security Force at some designated posts.

(b) the two sides should work out a system of regularly exchanging information regarding terrorists, smugglers, criminals, drug traffickers and other elements indulging in illegal border crossings as also infiltration routes most commonly used by them.

(c) the two sides should identify the border criminals and exchange all available background information about them like descriptive rolls, photograph, hide- outs, contact men, routes taken etc. and make concerted efforts to check their illegal activities.

4. Shri G. Parthasarathi, Chairman, Policy Planning Committee. MEA.
5. Shri Romesh Bhandari, Foreign Secretary.
7. Shri M. Dubey Additional Secretary (SA), MEA.

After a brief discussion with all members of the delegation, the two delegations, withdrew to the panel room. PM and Gen. Zia stayed on with one aide each (Shri C. R. Gharekhan, AS (PMO), and, Mr. Abdus Sattar, Additional secretary. PM and Gen. Zia joined in the talks later towards the end. Following is the brief record of discussion in the panel room:

DR. MAHBUBUL HAQ:
Prime Minister has given us a six-point progamme. Where do we start from?

FINANCE MINISTER:
The menu is with you. Choice is yours.

DR. MAHBUBUL HAQ:
Let us start with the areas of cooperation. We would like to make progress step by step in such a way that we take care of each other’s sensitivities. There are five areas in which cooperation is possible in the economic sector. These are: (I) doubling or trebling trade through public sector. At present the combine trade in the public sector between the two countries is around $ 50 million. We could increase it to two to three times in the next year or so. (II). Resumption of trade in the private sector. Here, to begin with, we could start this trade in selected items to avoid adverse effect on both countries’ economies. The list could be worked out by the officials. It can be expanded over a period of time. We should also have a time-table for expansion. (III). Possibility of establishing at least one joint venture on both sides. It should be symbol of cooperation. We will have to involve the private sector as it is they who will have to undertake these ventures. This is the minimum. We can have more joint ventures if possible. (IV). Extension of links through tele-communication is vital. For instance, we should have direct dialing connecting our large and important commercial centers. (V). Frequent exchange of delegations of businessmen, industrialists and youth.

These are five broad areas. We can add or subtract. There are no limitations. From our side, besides the Finance Minister there will be Secretary General (Economic Affairs), Secretary Commerce, Secretary Finance and officials of the Foreign Office. This is our mafia for such discussions. You can nominate your team. We could agree on some tentative dates. Early January will be suitable. We can adjust. (Pointing to Finance Minister) we look forward to seeing you in Islamabad. We are open to suggestions in this economic package/mechanism which has been suggested.

FINANCE MINISTER:

Your last visit enthused us. We would like to increase economic cooperation. We can hardly disagree with the points you have mentioned. We would like to reinforce them. As regards the quantitative increase of two or three times that you have suggested, we feel it is modest. We could increase still more. There is no debate on quantity. It must grow. We endorse all these suggestions you have made. It will be good to have joint ventures in 1986 which should not merely be tokens but must contribute to the development of our economies. Communications are equally important. If trade has to grow, so should such links. No trade can grow without communications. Delegations are equally important. We would like trade to start in the private sector on a non-discriminatory basis. We must work out areas of cooperation. This will be the test of our sincerity.

Dr. MAHBUBUL HAQ:

We can discuss private trade further during our discussions in January. I agree that ultimately we have to move towards a negative list. As more confidence grows and people are not worried about competition, we could; but we should make a start. There are, what I call, exaggerated fears in this respect but I hope sagacity and goodwill will prevail.

FINANCE MINISTER:

Every country has to take care of its interests. We agree with that. There should be no fears; we should take concrete decisions.
DR. MAHUBUL HAQ:

Thank you. Shall we now move to other areas?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER:

Having established a lead in economic and trade matter, we now move into other areas. I would like to mention to you frankly some inhibiting factors and irritant in our relations. Speaking realistically, they come in the way of improved relations. Briefly they are: (I). Pakistan’s stand on extremists has been worrying us and it comes up regularly both in Parliament and Press. It is a negative factor. We have given lists to you. There is a widely held belief here and we have hard evidence about your support to extremists. We do not wish, at this stage, to talk about allegations, denials and counter allegations. These are not helpful. It is important to build confidence in both countries. We want it to be a thing of the past. (II). J & K is another sector which I want to refer to. Under the Simla Agreement, we have agreed to settle our disputes bilaterally. We, however, find that Pakistan has been trying to internationalize the issue. There have been reports of an international conference on J & K. Statements made by your leaders and the allocation of Rs. 20 lakhs in the budget of POK for the so-called liberation of Kashmir. This has been mentioned by PM to Gen. Zia in Dhaka.

Dr. MAHBUBUL HAQ:

If anyone can liberate J & K with 20 lakhs, good luck to him.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER:

I wanted to mention this to you because it is a matter of concern. (III). Another area of worry to us is the excessive surveillance of our Missions in Pakistan. The reports I heard about it are very unpleasant. Our Ambassador in Islamabad has also given to me a first-hand report on the subject. Apart from the incident of the beating up of our officials about which I had to speak in our Parliament, there are also other problems. As regards this matter, I told Parliament that leaders at the top could not like such things to happen but somehow this has not percolated to the middle level. Do damage.

Then we go to the positive side. Trade has already been dealt with. As regards Culture, we should have a Cultural Agreement. It would be good to sign one at the earliest so that there can be a composite programme of contacts. From this should follow flow of newspapers, periodicals, journalists. We would like people-to-people contacts. In fact the President himself had mentioned people-to-people contacts. We would also like measures to be taken to facilitate travel which could include opening of check posts. Here I have in mind the Khokharapar-Monabo check posts which have been provided in the 1974 Visa Agreement. And, removal of other cumbersome procedures. We would like to see the elimination of police reporting for visitors who come for less than fourteen days. One important point which I wish to mention to you is the question of missing Defence Personal. I would like you to consider it because any action in this respect will create a good climate. It will have more than required impact. I raise it to you purely as a humanitarian issue and kindly treat it as such. There is also the question of repatriation of civilian detainees who have completed their sentences. We would also like to define more precisely the obligations on both sides in respect of pilgrims visiting each others’ country.

ZAIN NOORANI:

I would like to begin by expressing regret at the unfortunate incident involving beating of two officials of the Indian Embassy in Nankana Sahib. You were good enough to say that you had informed even Parliament that the leaders were not involved in such an incident. It happened spontaneously and Pakistan had no control. True, they were released on bail and this caused irritation to our Indian friends but they were rearrested. There should be no cause for concern.

There was a reference to surveillance. This was brought informally to my notice by your Ambassador but he told me that he was not doing it formally and that this would be settled between him and Additional Secretary, Sattar. These are irritants and kindly consider that there may be some irritations to our Ambassador. Both Foreign Secretaries could discuss this whenever they meet. We need not create a bubble in the air.

Again and again there is a reference to Pakistan’s assistance to extremists. Pakistan has not been helping extremists. We are against it. Yes, you have provided us a list which gives evidence obtained by you from people who have been arrested. I will not go into details. I will refer to the Samba trial in your own country and leave it to you to judge. Confessions after arrest have their own connotations. You may see what your own Indian newspaper like ‘Indian Express’ has written on this subject. Your own public takes this with a pinch of salt. It is difficult to always believe any such evidence.

We are in favour of freer travel. We would like complications to be removed. Here, while talking of freer travel, I would like to refer to the Jinnah House. You had at one time agreed to give it to us for the residence of our Consulate General. The British Deputy High Commissioner in Bombay who was staying there was also persuaded by us to vacate which he did. Later on we were told that this could not be given to us. We were then asked to select a place. We did select one and agreed to the terms and conditions but when we sought permission, we were told that the Provincial Government is not in favour as it is in a crowded locality. We were told to open our office in a building on the 18th floor near Nariman Point. Firstly, the cost was exorbitant and secondly it is difficult to function a Visa Office from the 18th floor. I have spoken about this to your Ambassador in Islamabad. He told me that he will be going to Bombay and try to sort it out. Since we were talking of facilitating travel, I thought I should mention this to you because a Consulate is very important for us to enable us to issue visas to people from that part of India who has now to come all the way to Delhi. We need a building; not on the 18th floor of Nariman Point; but in a central place, say near Crawford Market. This I think is another area which could be discussed when the two Foreign Secretaries meet.

There has been a reference to pilgrims. We have noted it. We should consider measures for improvement. But, tell me how it can be done. Pakistan Police does not enter the Gurudwaras; even Hindu temples our local police would not enter. They do not go to the Mosques also. They avoid entering such sacred places.

About allocation of funds for liberation of J & K, there is no truth. The Finance Minister has already denied it. There is no truth that we are organizing an international conference on J & K.

We have several times checked the details of the missing Defence personal since 1971. The Chief of Staff to the President will have something to say on it. But we have not been able to locate anyone of them. About civilian detainees, you owe 35 prisoners to us. We released a batch of 35 and you have not sent any. (It was explained that under Indian rules all our prisoners are released immediately and are not detained in jails even a day longer. In Pakistan, however, Indian prisoners continue to languish long after completion of their sentences.)

DR. MAHBUBUL HAQ:

I think the overall effort is to improve the atmosphere. There are irritants. We should get them under control and not dramatize them. Wherever there are problems, we should try to sort them out. May I suggest that we think of some measures to overcome these problems. For instance, you have mentioned extremists. We have denied. Can we think of some measures like, for instance, (a) an Extradition Treaty. This can help. You have mentioned about our giving assistance to extremist we think there are Al-Zulfikar hardliners who have been trained in camps here. (b) A Treaty on Hijacking and anti-terrorism could be thought of. This is a matter which has been taken up in the context of SAARC. Maybe we could pursue it bilaterally. (c) Civil Detainees who have completed their sentences should be repatriated. (d) We could even consider new Travel routes. As our Minister for State for Foreign Affairs has said, we can consider opening of Khokhrapar-Monabo check post. We could also think of eliminating police reporting for visitors who come for 14 days and less.

President himself had mentioned surveillance as a constraint. We should try to do something. Overall, we should be able to look at the picture in a positive way rather than as a negative. We could consider a series of such instruments.

ZAIN NOORANI:
The Foreign Secretaries could also consider this.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER:
We should think of a calendar of activities. The Foreign Secretaries could take further action. This could also be considered at the meetings of the sub-Commissions.

NIAZ NAIK:
I would like to make two points. As regards the Cultural Agreement, a draft had been finalized during the meeting of the Joint Commission held in Delhi on July 2-4. Both countries would require Cabinet approval. We are trying to complete the necessary formalities and these can be signed at subsequent meetings of the sub-Commissions. As regards the amount of Rs.20 lakhs in the budget of 'Azad Kashmir', we have examined this. There is an allocation of this amount in the 'Azad Kashmir' budget but it is for internal tourism, publicity and investment. I thought I should explain this so that there is no misapprehension.

DR. MAHBUBUL HAQ:
You are safe if someone is trying to liberate J&K with such a small amount.

FOREIGN SECRETARY:
It clears the air.

NIAZ NAIK:
The sub-Commissions can consider other matters including civilian detainees. We can agree.

FOREIGN SECRETARY:
This is a goodwill measure. No useful purpose is served in their languishing in Pakistani jails.
NIAZ NAJ:
As regards missing Defence personal, the matter has been raised on different occasions. It had also been mentioned to Genl. Arif. We have looked into it and do not find anyone of them here.

DR. MAHBUBUL HAQ:
We can understand the plight of the relatives. They never give up hope. They think these missing Defences personal are still there.

JOINT SECRETARY (AP):
The relatives feel that they are not held as missing Defence personal but could be in Pakistani jails as Indian security prisoners held on some other charges.

NIAZ NAJ:
As regards the list of extremists, you had at one time given us a list of ten people. We banned their entry into Pakistan. There was another list of five given to us. We have warned some other personalities that if they come to Pakistan, they will be denied entry. In Dhaka PM gave another name. We asked Islamabad for a report. So far I have only got an interim report and we will try to give you details soon Mr. Gharekhan had given us the particulars.

I find there is too much for the Foreign Secretaries. We will try to sort these things out. There is one other factor which I want to mention, i.e. merging of the two drafts. When Mr. Rasgotra came to Pakistan in May 1984, we made remarkable progress and worked out the operative part of an agreement. There were only two aspects of the Indian draft which remained to be resolved e.g. bilateralism and bases.

[AT THIS TIME PM AND GEN. ZIA ENTERED THE ROOM AND JOINED THE DISCUSSIONS.]

PRIME MINISTER:
We have talked about a lot of things. There is no real problem. We have worked out a time-table. Gharekhan and Sattar are working out as to what should be told to the Press whom we will be facing in a short while. We talked about extremism, Kashmir, the nuclear issue. President Zia gave me a list of 139 people, who, he said, have been trained in India. I do not think we are doing any such thing but we will check.

GENERAL ZIA:
We should work out the modalities.
PRIME MINISTER:
There is concern about the missing Defence personal. We should do something and try to close the issue; as far as possible, try to satisfy the people. President Zia also raised the question of trawlers.

FOREIGN SECRETARY:
There were two trawlers which we have returned to Pakistan about six weeks ago because immediately when they were caught, we found that they had come into our territorial waters by mistake.

PRIME MINISTER:
I also mentioned to President Zia about two Sikhs being shot. He told me that there was also a reference in the Pakistani newspapers which did not mention them as Sikhs but said that these were persons with ‘kirpans’.

GENERAL ZIA:
Mr. S.K. Singh must have also seen the report.

AMBASSADOR S. K. SINGH:
Yes, Sir.

PRIME MINISTER:
President Zia said that there were about fourteen Sikhs in Pakistani Jails.

GENERAL ZIA: This is correct. They are being tried for illegal entry into Pakistan.

PRIME MINISTER:
We also talked about the problems of the Embassy staff. We should sort them out.

FOREIGN SECRETARY:
We should satisfy each other. The harassment of one of the wives.......

AMBASSADOR S. K. SINGH:
I did not raise it officially with the Pakistan Government.

PRIME MINISTER:
This could be an isolated case but we must ensure that these things do not happen.
About Siachen Glacier, President Zia showed me a map.

GENERAL ZIA:
The Ceasefire line which is now called the Line of Control was demarcated up to point 9842. And, it was mentioned that it will go North to the Glacier.

PRIME MINISTER:
We have agreed that the Defence Secretaries can have talks on this.

GENERAL ZIA:
About temples in Pakistan, PM raised it. We try to maintain them as far as possible.

PRIME MINSITER:
Let us maintain that these confidence measures percolate downwards.

GENERAL ZIA:
As PM has said, it is very important to take measures to create confidence. These should go down and percolate to the individuals in the bureaucracy.

(Laughter)

FOREIGN SECRETARY:
We are also bureaucrats.

PRIME MINISTER:
You are at the top of bureaucracy.

FOREIGN SECRETARY:
We could finalize the various schedules.

DR. MAHBUBUL HAQ:
The high-level meeting under the Finance Ministers could take place from January 5-7. There was discussion about other schedules and it was decided that the Foreign Secretaries could meet in the third week of January.

PRIME MINISTER: We do not have to worry about the dates on which there are commercial flights. We will put a plane at the disposal of the Finance Minister. In any case he has to pay for it.

(AT THIS STAGE GENERAL ZIA LEFT FOR SAYING HIS ‘NAMAZ’)

FOREIGN SECRETARY:
The Sub-Commissions can meet by end of January or beginning of February. The Joint Commission at Ministerial level can meet at the end of February or early March.
EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER:
First week of March will be better as we will be having the Budget Session.....

PRIME MINISTER:
You do not worry about the budget. We will make sure that External Affairs demands are kept in mind by the Finance Minister. You can go to Islamabad.

DR. MAHBUBUL HAQ:
What about your own visit Sir?

PRIME MINISTER:
We must see how it all goes on and watch the results of the meetings of the Finance Ministers, Foreign Secretaries, the sub-and-Joint Commissions.

AMBASSADOR HUMAYUN KHAN:
The Press will be looking for some indications. All this will be diluted if there is no reference to your visit.

DR. MAHBUBUL HAQ:
We could say that all this would culminate in your visit.

PRIME MINISTER:
Yes, we could do that. We can move forward on different subjects in the economic field, including trade in the public sector, private sector and remove all obstacles.

FINANCE MINISTER:
There are no obstacles in respect of private trade with Pakistan as far as we are concerned. There are no bolts on our doors.

DR. MAHBUBUL HAQ:
On the economic front, we would like to take steps forward and consolidate and then build on them. What will the foreign secretaries discuss?

FOREIGN SECRETARY:
We will discuss travel, surveillance of Missions, extremism, border, detainees......

[GENERAL ZIA RETURNS]
(The schedule of different meetings was mentioned:-

I. Finance Ministers to meet in Islamabad from Jan. 5-7.
II. Foreign Secretaries to meet in the third week of January.

III. Sub-commissions to meet in Delhi & Islamabad in the last week of January and first week of February.

IV. Joint Commission at Foreign Ministers’ level to meet in Islamabad in the last week of February.

GENERAL ZIA:
Thank you very much and we also look forward to seeing you.

PRIME MINISTER:
We will not take this visit as a full visit.

[At this stage, as both Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha were in session, PM asked EAM to go to Parliament and make a short statement on the visit in both Houses before any announcement was made at the Press Conference.]

SECRET
Record of the discussions between Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and President Zia-ul-Haq after the rest of the two delegations withdrew for separate discussions.

New Delhi, December 17, 1985.

PRIME MINISTER’S OFFICE
The following is the record of PM's talks with President Zia after the rest of the delegations on the two sides withdrew to the Panel Room for concurrent discussions.

Abdus Sattar, Additional Secretary in Pak Foreign Office and the undersigned were present during the talks between the two leaders.

PM raised the question of the missing defence personnel

Zia: I have gone into this question three times. When Natwar Singh was Ambassador, he had raised it with me. We created the necessary facilities for your Embassy to go to any jail and identify the people concerned. We asked for photographs and particulars. We got these in respect of some. We formed a team. Natwar Singh and others went from jail to jail and found nothing.

Sattar: All the Indian prisoners were assembled in the Multan Central Jail and it was there that the relatives of the missing persons were taken.

Zia: We have no prisoner of war. We had 35 POWs but I released them in 1978 as a gesture of goodwill. We had no response from India to that gesture.

There are three categories of prisoners in Pakistan. One consists of ordinary criminals. They are tried according to Pakistan Penal Code and released when their terms are over. The other category is of security persons, agents of each other. The third category is of people arrested for border violations, of whom there are 18 with us. We have no other prisoners. We are prepared to go to any extent to satisfy you that we do not have missing defence personnel in Pakistan.

PM: According to us you have 43 of them. Can we set up a small group to go into it?

Zia: Yes, certainly, anything you say.

PM: Do you also have a similar list?

President Zia’s first reply was that there were no Pakistani POWs in India. He then corrected himself and said yes we have a small number.

Sattar: Under the 1973 Agreement, all POWs were released on both sides. Therefore, there are no POWs on record.

PM: We should devise some method whereby we can settle this matter conclusively. We get lot of questions in the Parliament and we have to satisfy the parents and relatives.

The undersigned mentioned the specific case of Major Suri.

Sattar: I have myself been dealing with the question of missing defence personnel since 1972. We asked all the jails in Pakistan and have got certificates from them that there is not a single Indian defence personnel.

PM: We should try and close the issue once and for all. There should be finality about it. I am sure that we can work something out.

Zia: Anything you say.

PM: It could be something like the case of two ships which disappeared off the Sri Lankan coast sometime ago. There is absolutely no trace of them. Naturally the wives and other relations of the people who were on the two ships have been badgering MPs and others. They say that the ships were hijacked to Sri Lanka. We asked the Sri Lankan Govt. and they told us that the ships were not with them. Later we realized that some astrologer had told the relatives that the ships were in Sri Lanka.

Zia: This is a humanitarian question, Sir, and we are prepared to do anything to satisfy the relatives.

Sattar: On the same level of humanitarianism, some of our fishermen were caught about a month ago allegedly fishing in Indian waters. We had also caught a few Indian fishermen but repatriated them through the Indian Consulate General in Karachi.

PM asked the undersigned to make enquiries about this matter. I checked with JS (AP) and reported back to PM and President Zia. PM said that there would be no problem in this matter.

While I was away, PM had raised the question of J&K.

Zia: We will not do anything on J&K to pollute the atmosphere. We want goodwill. We will abide by the Simla Agreement as far as J&K is concerned. We have checked. No money has been provided in Azad Kashmir’s budget for the liberation of J&K.

PM: Our source was your newspapers.

There is one other problem. We are still not satisfied about the Sikh militants. We are sure that the training is going on, perhaps not in the specific camps but in some other manner. Our people say that they can show you exactly where the training is going on if it could be arranged without notice.

Zia: Anything you say. We are ready for anything, with notice, without notice.

Regarding the pilgrims, I should like to explain to you. This problem has arisen before also. I have said that Pakistan will not close its doors to the yatris. We have even opened half a dozen Hindu shrines.

PM: It was raised in our Parliament though I don’t know anything you can do about it. It is said that the Muslim shrines in India are in good shape. This is obviously so because they are being frequented all the time. But the Hindu shrines in Pakistan are reported to be in bad shape. I am not blaming anyone because obviously if the temples are not in use, not alive, they will not be in good shape. So this is not an accusation. May be we can help in maintaining the temples.
Zia: If they tell us which temples are not in good shape, we will have them repaired. I have myself visited a few temples. We have enough money. But we will have no objection if the Hindus want to repair the temples themselves. We will do it without anything.

On Sikh yatris, this was the second incident. It is difficult for us to say no to the yatris. We won’t stop them. The lists the yatris are supplied to us by Govt. of India and we give visa to those recommended by Govt. of India. Therefore, if some militant chaps come over from India, you please stop them. As for foreign Sikhs, we have no hold on them if they come from UK, Canada or USA because there are no visa restrictions in respect of them. This time two Sikhs militants were coming from Canada. Your Embassy had informed us about them in advance. So we stopped them and sent them back on the same plane. I told S.K. Singh that this is not your job or the Embassy’s job. (Zia was talking about liaison officers.) Why not the GOI put 20 or 50 Sikhs as liaison officers. S.K. Singh sent non-Sikhs as liaison officers and they got beaten up. Any Sikh who does not behave, we will deal with him. We confiscated cassettes though some might have slipped through our hands. You can put Sikhs for surveillance. But non-Sikhs will be like red herrings. Law and Order is Pakistan’s responsibility. Leave it to us and I assure you that there will be no political activity and no political speeches. I strongly recommend that in the next Jatha you put your own people. You can have one or two Sikhs in the Embassy. It will be much better. I assure you that it will be my responsibility if anything objectionable takes place you can blame me.

Regarding training, I am prepared to accept any challenge in whichever way you suggest. Quite sincerely, we are not doing anything. Even if we train 200-300 people how does it matter? I cannot be doing such things when I am anxious to have good relations with India.

PM: Can we have joint exercises?

Zia: Anything you suggest.

PM: We shall think of something.

Zia: I used to see Sikh Jathas four times a year. The Indian Ambassador was always present. I would have tea with them. This time S.K. Singh came and said: Please do not see them. So I said OK. I was in Islamabad but I cancelled the meeting. We will also think of what can be done. But we are prepared to accept anything that you might suggest.

The undersigned left the room for about 5 minutes to make a telephone call to RRM (Minister of State for Defence) Shri Arun Singh as directed by PM.
When I returned, PM told me that they were talking about how the positive attitude from the top level could filter down to lower levels.

_Zia:_ Message will go down from my side to our agencies. There will be no unnecessary harassment of your staff. Usually this starts from low levels. (Pointing to Sattar) He himself has been a victim of that.

_Sattar:_ I always told my Indian friends that they should really compare the Pakistan Embassy in Delhi to the Indian Consulate General in Karachi. I had people posted at my residence in tents for two years but I never complained about it. There have been one or two incidents in Islamabad and we were shocked. The wife of one of your officials reported obscene gestures by an intelligence agency official.

_Zia:_ I told SK that this is simply not possible. I personally summoned the Chiefs of the two intelligence agencies and asked them to investigate the matter. They told me that no one from the intelligence agencies had done any such thing.

At this stage I got a note from DS (MS) reporting that Sultan Mehmood from POK was intending to raise the Kashmir issue at the International Court of Justice at The Hague and he himself was planning a visit to 12 European capitals to mobilise public opinion in favour of Pak stand on Kashmir.

PM read out the relevant extracts to President Zia.

_Sattar:_ It is not possible for private individuals to raise any matter at the International Court. The undersigned pointed out that Sultan Mehmood was also planning to visit various European capitals in this matter.

_Zia:_ I should like to explain to you about the Sikh incident on the 26th November in the Lahore Gurdwara. Zia then read out verbatim from a note and continued: SK was advised not to go to Lahore because we apprehended some trouble. But he decided to go. It is the non-Sikhs who are the red rag. This can easily be eliminated.

_Sattar:_ I should like to mention that the Pakistan Govt. issued an official statement deploring violence against the Indian diplomats.

_Zia:_ We also have a list of people whom my people say your people are training. One of them is Al Zulfikar, which is a terrorist organization. It was formed in India in June 1980. Khar has been visiting India. Shahnawaz Bhutto has also been visiting India. On occasions, they have even been treated as guests of the Govt. of India.

_PM:_ I do not know anything about this. I am sure this is not true. In any case, this could not have happened during the last one year.
Zia: Shahnawaz Bhutto's last visit to India was in early February 1985, when he passed through and stayed for two days in India. Khar came to India in March-April this year and had a meeting with your R&AW people.

PM: Even if we wanted to do something what is the need for these people to come here. In any case, if this is true, we will put an end to it.

Zia: I have a list of 60 persons who have received training in India. We can pass on the list though we have not given it to your people so far. There is another list of 139 people. I hope that in the spirit of goodwill, India will reciprocate Pakistan's gestures.

PM: Certainly. I did not know about it before, but now that you have mentioned it, I will look into it.

Zia: Regarding the Siachin Glacier, we have already agreed that the Defence Secretaries should get together. Both sides should withdraw and sit down and see where the line should be. I looked into the 1972 Agreement. The records show that when the two sides reached NJ 9842, they thought that there was only snow beyond and there was no need to demarcate the line on the ground. I summoned the two officials who were concerned with those negotiations and this is what they told me.

PM: According to us, the line from NJ 9842 moves northwards.

Zia: OK; whatever it is, let them sit down.

Zia: Regarding the Foreign Secretaries' meeting. We should pass down instructions to them to try and merge the two drafts. Two clauses in your draft are objectionable. We are both nonaligned countries. Why should we include a clause which says that neither country will give bases to third countries? We are nonaligned and it is assumed that we do not give bases.

PM: We don't mind stating that we will not give bases.

Zia: But it undermines the sovereignty. There is also the question of bilateralism. The Simla Agreement refers to UN Charter. What you have now proposed is not in the spirit of Simla Agreement.

PM: The bases question is important. We have no hesitation at all in signing an agreement committing ourselves not to give bases, any type of bases, air, naval, etc. There is also one good reason for this clause. The agreement must reflect the security of the region. Any foreign bases will disturb the security.

Zia: Why should Pakistan allow bases? It undermines our sovereignty. This is a purely psychological point.
PM: Let the two Foreign Secretaries talk about this.

At this stage the leaders decided to join the rest of the delegations. They asked Mr. Sattar and the undersigned to draft few points which could be given to the Press.

1089. Statement by External Affairs Minister B.R. BHAGAT in Lok Sabha/Rajya Sabha on the visit of Pakistani President General Zia-ul-Haq to New Delhi.

New Delhi, December 17, 1985.

The President of Pakistan, His Excellency General Mohammad Zia-ul-Haq, paid a brief visit to New Delhi today, the 17th December on his way home from an official visit to several countries in the region.

The President of Pakistan and our Prime Minister held talks on various matters of mutual interest. The talks were held in an extremely cordial atmosphere.

The two leaders reaffirmed their determination to move rapidly towards complete normalization of relations between the two countries and, to take positive and constructive action in coming weeks.

The following decisions were taken:

(i) Finance Ministers of the two countries will meet in Islamabad from the 5th to 7th January, 1986 to consider agreements on expansion of trade and economic relations.

(ii) The Foreign Secretaries of the two countries will meet in Islamabad in the third week of January, 1986 to continue discussions on a comprehensive Treaty and to discuss other confidence building measures.

(iii) The four Sub-Commissions set up under the Indo-Pakistan Joint Commission will meet towards the end of January early February 1986 to finalise their work. The full Joint Commission led by their respective Foreign Ministers will meet towards the end of February, 1986.
The two sides have agreed to work out an agreement where by each will undertake not to attack the nuclear installation of the other.

A cultural agreement will be signed between the two countries.

All the above measure will culminate in our Prime Minister’s visit to Pakistan during the first half of 1986.

Excerpts from the speech of Pakistani Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan initiating the debate in Parliament on Foreign Policy.

Initiating the long-awaited foreign policy debate in the Parliament on December 24, Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said that Pakistan's intent was not to suggest the nature of government in Kabul because it recognized that the Soviet Union "has a legitimate interest in expecting that any government in Kabul should be friendly towards it and should be mindful of its security interests as well as those of other neighbours".

"Pakistan has no easy options", Sahabzada Yaqub Khan somberly warned, saying "I do not wish to minimize the risks or costs attached to the pursuit of our present policy, but let me assure you that it is the only policy which offers a reasonable prospect for finding a settlement that safeguard Pakistan's interests."

"In the situation in which we find ourselves, there are no risk-free courses, there are courses that are less or more hazardous….. In the options that face us there are no right answers, there are answers that are better or worse".

AFGHANISTAN POLICY NOT UNDER U. S. PRESSURE

Mr. Yaqub Khan strongly repudiated suggestions in some quarters that Pakistan was under United States pressure to pursue its present policy on Afghanistan, describing the allegation as "shameful and groundless", and said Pakistan continued to remain non-aligned and had offered no bases to the USA or any one as quid pro quo.

He defended Pakistan's consistent policy of withholding recognition of the Karmal regime in Kabul by refusing to hold direct talks with its representatives and said a resort to direct talks with Mr. Babrak Karmal at the present time would not change the objective situation in Afghanistan nor lead to the withdrawal of Soviet troops and return of the refugees.

On the other hand, a deviation in the policy would legitimize the present situation in Afghanistan, including the presence of Soviet forces as a fait accompli.

He, however, pleaded for continuing the UN-sponsored talks with a certain amount of flexibility and said he was certain that the House extended full support to the objective of reaching “a just, honourable and implementable political settlement of the Afghanistan problem”.

ON TIES WITH INDIA

While dealing with India, Mr. Yaqub Khan’s prepared statement struck a more sanguine note when he said that “during the last eight years our efforts at normalizing relations with India have made significant and encouraging progress”. He expressed the hope that speedily the two countries would be able to conclude a bilateral treaty to reinforce their solemn commitment to the principle of non-aggression and non-use of force.

He recalled that President Zia-ul-Haq’s stopover in New Delhi on December 17 last, “opened up window of opportunities” and had vindicated the Pakistan Government’s policy towards India. As a first significant step in that direction, the two countries had decided to sign an agreement not to attack “each other’s nuclear installations.”

He also enumerated the series of meetings planned in the coming months between the officials of the Pakistan and Indian Governments to follow up attempts to expand trade and economic ties, carry forward dialogue on a comprehensive agreement based on Islamabad’s non-aggression pact offer and India’s proposed treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation and hold discussion on Siachen glacier issue and to discuss land and maritime boundaries, finally leading up to a visit to Pakistan by the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, in the first half of the next year.

“All those who aim to serve the interests of the people should, therefore, be happy at the unfolding prospects of better relations between Pakistan and India”.

SUBSTANTIAL PROGRESS MADE

Reviewing Indo-Pak relations, Sahabzada Yaqub said Pakistan sought peace with honour, entailing mutual respect, sovereign equality, justice, strict adherence to principles of non-interference in each other’s internal affairs, renunciation of use or threat of use of force and settlement of disputes through peaceful means, as reflected in the Simla Agreement.
He noted that “substantial progress” had been made in advancing the cause of normalization at the Joint Ministerial Commission meeting held in July last. “Our President’s peace offensive is recognized as an eloquent symbol of Pakistan’s perseverance in pursuit of a laudable objective”, he said.

PAK N-PLAN ONLY FOR PEACE
Describing the allegations about the nature of Pakistan’s nuclear programme as “baseless”, Mr. Yaqub Khan said the programme was strictly peaceful.; That was why Pakistan had proposed a series of equitable and non-discriminatory measure at bilateral, regional and global level, by which Pakistan and India could assure each other and the world that they would not acquire or develop nuclear weapons.

The principle of sovereign equality and equal rights of all free and independent states had guided its approach to the question of limitation and reduction of military weapons.

INVOlVEMENT IN INDIAN PUNJAB TROUBLES DENIED
Pakistan was unswervingly wedded to the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of any country, including India. Allegations emanating from New Delhi about its involvement in the disturbances in East Punjab were completely unfounded and baseless.

ON SIACHEN GLACIER
About the Siachen Glacier, he said that although this region had always formed part of the northern areas of Pakistan, Indian troops had infiltrated into the region in 1982 and 1983, as a result of which some minor firing incidents had taken place.

ON PAK-SOVIET RELATIONS
Referring to the Pak-Soviet relations, Shabzada Yaqub Khan regretfully noted that “our sincere efforts” at developing ties with the Soviet Union had not progressed as much as Pakistan would have wished.

Being aware of the central importance of cordial and friendly ties with a neighbouring Super Power we will never permit ourselves to be drawn into confrontation with the Soviet Union.

Pakistan greatly appreciated and valued Soviet cooperation in the economic field and “we have sought to isolate our differences over Afghanistan from the course of our bilateral relations but this unfortunately had not proved possible”, he said.
NO ABANDONMENT OF NON-ALIGNMENT

Pakistan, he said, had neither abandoned nor intended to do so its firm adherence to the principles of non-alignment. “Pakistan had granted no bases to any foreign powers on its soil, nor will it do so. Pakistan belongs to no security bloc or security consensus”. It had scrupulously eschewed involvement in East-West rivalry and wished to continue this policy.

Pakistan’s security and progress were also largely dependent on the maintenance of a climate of peace and tranquility in the South Asian region. The requirements of regional peace and stability made it imperative for Pakistan and India to establish tension free, good neighbourly and cooperative relations. This had assumed even greater urgency, with foreign military intervention in Afghanistan, he said.

ON SINO-PAK TIES

Discussing the Sino-Pak relations, Mr. Yaqub Khan said Prime Minister Mohmmad Khan Junejo’s selection of China for his first official visit abroad illustrated once again that friendly relations with China constituted one of the pillars of Pakistan’s foreign policy.

“China has been a steadfast friend, constant in support and a modal neighbour”, he said adding that China upholds the principles of respect for the political independence and territorial integrity of States.

“China is a pillar for peace and justice in the world and Sino-Pak friendship had been a major positive factor in our endeavour to maintain territorial integrity and safeguard independence”, he added.

These discussions were intended to contribute to the process of normalizing relations and promoting understanding and cooperation between the two countries, set in motion by Prime Minister Shri Rajiv Gandhi and President Zia-ul-Haq. These discussions related to the fields of telecommunications, shipping, air links, industrial joint venture and trade.

5. The discussions were held in a friendly and cordial atmosphere. The two sides reaffirmed their commitment to take appropriate step to further expand and strengthen economic co-operation between the two countries.

6. The following decisions and understandings were reached during the meetings of the two Finance Ministers. An attempt will be made to implement decisions/understandings in all these areas and to finalize, wherever appropriate, texts of agreements, before the forthcoming visit of the Prime Minister of India to Pakistan:

(i) Telecommunications

(a) Direct dialing

Direct dialing services between the two countries should be started before the end of 1986.

(b) Telex facilities

The present telex facilities linking the two countries should be further expanded on the Lahore-Amritsar route.

(ii) Shipping

The amendments to the Shipping Agreement and agreed upon in the last meeting of the Joint Commission should be finalized as soon as possible.

(iii) Air links

Representatives of the two national airlines should meet at an early date to explore the possibilities of increasing the frequency of services on exiting and introducing more wide-bodied aircraft to cope with the growth in traffic.

(iv) Trade

7. The two sides agreed that there was considerable scope for the expansion of trade between India and Pakistan in the mutual interest of both the countries.
They also reaffirmed that their objective is to conduct this trade in conformity with the commitments, obligations and safeguards under the GATT.

8. It was agreed that efforts should be made to at least double the trade in commodities being traded by the public sector agencies of the two countries, during the current year.

9. In private trade, Pakistan agreed to make an immediate beginning by opening its private sector trade in 42 commodities given in the list. It will also set up a special committee to consider additional items for inclusion in private trade and to finalize these items within a month.

10. Pakistan proposed that as a pragmatic approach the expansion of private trade should be taken up in phases, building up a momentum towards a pattern of two-way trade which would be in conformity with the principles of the GATT while fully safeguarding local industries. Both sides agreed to continue further dialogue on the matter.
(v) Industrial Joint Ventures

11. Both sides agreed that setting up of joint ventures in the two countries would be an important means of promoting industrial collaboration and trade between the two countries. This process will be facilitated by setting up a joint business committee of the Federations of Chambers of Commerce and Industry of India and Pakistan. Such a Committee would also help in promotion of trade flows.

12. Representatives of the governments should meet as early as possible to formulate specific guidelines that would govern such Joint ventures arrangements. The two countries should also encourage investments by each other’s entrepreneurs in their export processing zones within the framework of the rules and procedures that apply to these zones.

(vi) Exchange of delegations

13. Both sides agreed on the need to encourage greater contact through exchange of delegations of trade, businessmen and industrialists, scholars and students, and professional groups with a view to promoting greater understanding and cooperation, especially in the economic field.

(vii) Follow-up action

14. It was decided to set up a special committee of senior officers to be nominated by the two Governments to take follow up action on all the matters mentioned above. The committee would meet in February 1986.

Joint Statement issued at the end of the visit of Foreign Secretary Romesh Bhandari to Islamabad.

Islamabad, January 21, 1986.

Pursuant to the decision taken in the meeting between the President of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, General Mohmmad Zia-ul-Haq, and the Prime Minister of India, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi on December 17, 985, the Foreign Secretary of India, Mr. Romesh Bhandari, visited Pakistan at the invitation of the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Niaz A. Naik, for official discussions from January 16 to 21.

During the course of his stay in Pakistan, Mr. Bhandari was received by the President of Pakistan, General Mohmmad Zia-ul-Haq, and the Prime Minister of Pakistan, Mr. Mohmmad Khan Junejo. Mr. Bhandari also called on the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, Minister for Finance, Planning and Economic Co-ordination, Mr. Mahbubul Haq, and the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Zain Noorani, and had wide ranging discussions on a number of key bilateral issues with the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan, Mr. Niaz A. Naik. The two Foreign Secretaries also exchanged views on international matters of mutual interest.

FRIENDLY SENTIMENTS RECIPROCATED

Mr. Bhandari conveyed message of greetings and good wishes from the President of India, Giani Zail Singh, and the Prime Minister, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, to the President of Pakistan, General Mohmmad Zia-ul-Haq, and the Prime Minister, Mr. Mohmmad Khan Junejo. These sentiments were warmly reciprocated by the President and the Prime Minister of Pakistan. The President recalled the recent meeting he had with the Prime Minister of India in New Delhi which was held in a very relaxed and cordial atmosphere and had yielded substantial and positive results. While stressing the necessity of implementing these decisions in letter and spirit, the President reaffirmed the abiding commitment of the neighbourly relations between the two countries.

The Foreign Secretaries reiterated the resolve of their respective Governments to establish harmonious and cooperative ties on the basis of the time-tested and universally recognized principles of peaceful co-existence namely, sovereign equality, independence, non-interference in internal affairs, territorial integrity, justice and mutual benefit. They also reaffirmed the commitment of their Governments to the Simla Agreement.

ACCORD ON DESIRABILITY OF WIDE-RANGING TREATY

The Foreign Secretaries agreed on the desirability of concluding a comprehensive treaty based on Pakistan’s proposal of a non-aggression pact and India's offer of a treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation expeditiously. While observing that agreement on a number of provisions of the two drafts had already been reached in May 1984, they had a detailed discussion on certain important issues. The two sides explained their respective points of view on those issues and made proposals for achieving a merged comprehensive treaty. These proposals will be examined by the two Governments.

VERBAL ACCORD TO BE PUT IN WRITING

Recalling the understanding reached between the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India during their discussion in New Delhi, on December 17, 1985, prohibiting attack on each other's nuclear installations and facilities, the Foreign Secretaries agreed to solemnize this verbal accord through a written, legally binding agreement. The two sides exchanged drafts for the proposed agreement which have been merged. They agreed on the substantive elements of a unified text. There will, however, be further discussion on certain technical details.

The Foreign Secretaries noted with satisfaction the progress that had been made in implementing the decision that had been taken at the second session of the Pakistan-India Joint Commission in July 1985. They decided that the four sub-commissions would meet in the first half of February 1986. The third meeting of the Joint commission is scheduled to be held in Islamabad in March/April, 1986.

FURTHER CONFIDENCE-BUILDING MEASURES

Stressing the need of taking confidence building measures and of further promoting goodwill and amity, the Foreign Secretaries agreed as under:

— A concerted attempt would be made out of humanitarian considerations to locate the Indian defence personnel missing since 1971. The modalities would be finalized during the meeting of the concerned sub-commission.

— Civilian detainees who have completed their sentences would be repatriated on reciprocal basis by their countries by March 31, 1986. The modalities would be finalized during the meeting of sub-commission IV and the exchange of civilian detainees would take place at the Wagah-Atari check post.

— The cultural agreement, which had already been initialed, would be signed during the next meeting of the Joint Commission.
— Exchange of books, periodicals and newspapers would be discussed during the next meeting of sub-commission III.

SATISFACTION AT PEOPLE-TO-PEOPLE CONTACTS

The two Foreign Secretaries expressed satisfaction at the increase in people to people contacts between Pakistan and India. They also decided that specific proposals for easing travel would be considered during the meeting of the joint commission. In this context, the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan indicated that the Government of Pakistan is actively examining the possibility of opening the Khokhrapar route.

The Foreign Secretaries also exchanged views on the ministerial level meeting of SAARC countries to be held in Pakistan March/April regarding multilateral trade negotiations and international economic issue.

The discussions between the Foreign Secretaries was held in a cordial and relaxed atmosphere. They had a candid and constructive exchange of views which was conducive to a better understanding of each other’s perceptions.

Mr. Bhandari extended an invitation to Mr. Naik to visit New Delhi. This was accepted with pleasure. Mutually acceptable dates for the visit will be finalized through diplomatic channels.

The Foreign Secretary of India thanked the Government of Pakistan for the gracious hospitality extended to him and members of his delegation during their stay in Pakistan.

No.11  January 19, 1986

EAM from Foreign Secretary

I had very extensive talks yesterday with my counterpart along lines of directions given by C.C.P.A (Cabinet Committee on Political Affairs) I shall report personally on all issues involved.

2. Last night Pakistan Muslim League adopted resolution on Indo-Pakistan relations under chairmanship of Prime Minister JUNEJO. This stated that -

(i) The Kashmir issue should be tackled only on basis of UN resolutions.

(ii) Pak Government should conduct negotiations with utmost care keeping in mind historical factors.

(iii) Pakistan should not be converted into a captive market for Indian products.

3. This morning when I called on JUNEJO, I began by telling him that the three facets of their Muslim League resolution had caused us serious disquiet particularly as our two countries were already engaged in a process of normalization which gathering momentum. This process was the common desire and objective of leaders of both countries. JUNEJO himself had been a supporter of this. I, therefore, sought clarifications from him as this resolution, particularly the reference to Kashmir, was bound to be viewed adversely in India.

4. I recalled that President ZIA had stated in New Delhi on 17 December that J and K question would be dealt with in accordance with Simla Agreement. Subsequently, however, there had been a reference by YAQUB KHAN both to the Simla Agreement and UN resolutions. Now Muslim League resolution referred only to UN resolutions, as if Simla Agreement was no longer valid and recent past was somehow erased.

5. Regarding past history I said that this was a factor we too bore in mind. It was precisely this factor that had led us to follow a cautious path and a step by step approach, but we wished to learn from the past and move forward from confrontation to cooperation. This was something that the peoples of both countries seemed to want. My meetings with Pakistanis from all walks of life in Lahore, Islamabad and Peshawar had reinforced this impression.
6. In response, Junejo said that in the nine months he had been in power, he had personally been supportive of normalization process. Pakistan was not hiding anything and had placed everything on record. The past should not be forgotten, nor should we ignore other resolutions apart from Simla Agreement. If reference was made only to the Simla Agreement, the people Pakistan would ask what had happened to the other agreements.

7. In my meeting with YAQUB KHAN I was given a lengthy explanation, the gist of which was that this resolution should not be seen in isolation. Government’s policy was as reflected in JUNEJO’s statement in the National Assembly on 28 December, in which he had referred to both the Simla Agreement and the UN resolutions.

8. Finance Minister MAHBUBUL HAQ started by saying that he was as disturbed as I was by the resolution. He reiterated his firm belief that there was a genuine desire for normalization and agreements reached between him and our Finance Minister must be pursued. Adverse reactions in Pakistan were from those circles that either had vested interests or were ill-informed.

9. During my meeting with President ZIA, and that exclusive lunch that followed, he himself raised this subject. He said that we should not take PML resolutions seriously. Democracy in Pakistan was in its infancy and the exuberance was perhaps uncontrolled. He wished to assure Prime Minister of his continuing commitment to normalization. He was very satisfied with the visits that had taken place between the two Finance Ministers and the two Defence Secretaries. He was looking forward to PM’s visit.

10. I spoke to ZIA frankly, even bluntly. I told him that Pak Muslim League resolution would be viewed with disquiet and concern in India. It was bound to attack all those who are opposed to government policy towards Pakistan. As such, I insisted that Pakistani Government itself at highest political level should clarify PML resolution. He took note of this.

11. I also discussed other issues including Pakistan’s assistance to extremists, about which I shall report personally. Zia informed me in confidence that hijacking case judgement hopefully will be announced tomorrow.

12. This evening, NIAZ NAIK told me that ZIA and JUNEJO had discussed our reactions to PML resolution. They appreciate adverse implications and had agreed that JUNJO should make a statement in National Assembly within next few days in which record should be set straight. It was good that I was here when this resolution was passed and published. I was able to react sharply and immediately and at highest levels. This has had impact.
Statement by the External Affairs Minister Bali Ram Bhagat in the Lok Sabha in response to a Call Attention Notice regarding “Reported Statement by Official Spokesman of Neighbouring Country on Recent Disturbances”.

New Delhi, February 25, 1986.

In a statement made in its Senate on February 20, 1986 regarding some recent disturbances in India the Pakistan Minister of State in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs stated that the people of Pakistan cannot remain indifferent to the plight of human beings, particularly those with whom they share bonds of religion, culture and family ties. Similar statements were made by the Government of Pakistan in its National Assembly on June 12, 1985 and in their Senate on July 9, 1985. In addition there have also been other objectionable statements.

We have noted with concern the above tendency of the Government of Pakistan in recent years to make unwarranted references to and take an unhealthy interest in the minority communities in India. While professing adherence to the principle of non-interference, these references cannot but be regarded as a blatant interference in our internal affairs.

Honourable Members would also recall that in the historic Simla agreement, India and Pakistan mutually agreed that adherence to the principle of non-interference in internal affairs is a prerequisite for reconciliation, good neighbourliness and durable peace between them. While making a statement in their National Assembly of Pakistan in July 1974 when the Sadar Bazar riots took place in Delhi, the then Government of Pakistan stated that under the Simla agreement it would be treated as an internal matter. The attitude of the Government of Pakistan is now at variance with the earlier stand.

The Government of India have on several occasions made it clear to the Government of Pakistan that such statements are contrary to the Simla Agreement and not conducive to the promotion of harmonious and good neighbourly relations. On our part, we have refrained from commenting on reports of sectarian riots, denial of democratic rights and restriction on freedom of religious worship to minority communities including the Ahmeidas in Pakistan even though there has been public concern voiced on these developments in India and elsewhere. It is our hope that the Government of Pakistan will take due note of these facts and desist from such actions which cannot but adversely affect our efforts to develop friendly and cooperative relations with Pakistan.

1095. Statement by the Pakistan Minister of State in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs that it was the responsibility of India to look after its citizens.

Islamabad, February 27, 1986.

The Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Mr. Zain Noorani said that it was the responsibility of the Government of India to take appropriate measures to ensure the safety and security of its citizens and punish those guilty of crimes of violence resulting from communal riots in the recent past.

He was speaking on identical adjournment motions moved by five members expressing their concern over the frequent anti-Muslim riots in India and forcible taking over the mosques by the majority community.

Mr. Zain Noorani opposing the admissibility of motions on the plea that these related to a matter over which Pakistan had no control, referred to his statement he had made in the Senate some time back and to which the Indian Minister of External Affairs had objected.

The Minister of State recalling the broad facts of his earlier statement said a district court in Uttar Pradesh in a judgment on February 1 legalized conversion of a mosque into a temple. The mosque had been built 450 years ago during the reign of Emperor Babar.

This judgment he said pained and outraged the Indian Muslim community and a procession was taking out in New Delhi on February 14 which was subjected to lathi (baton) charge and firing. Incident of violence against Muslims were reported from other places including Srinagar and Sehore near Bhopal, he said.

Mr. Noorani said the Muslim Majlis-e-Mushawarat a representative body of Indian Muslims belonging to different political parties submitted a public memorandum to the Prime Minister of India. It pointed to the injustice of the judgment which had been celebrated as victory by Hindu communities in some places and it appealed for judicial probe into anti-Muslim violence.

The Minister of State said in the statement in the Senate he also reiterated the position of the Government of Pakistan on communal violence in India. The Government adheres to the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of other states. We recognize that it is the responsibility of the Government of India to take appropriate measures to ensure the safety and security of its citizens and punish those guilty of crimes of violence. That our people cannot remain indifferent to the plight of human beings, particularly those with whom they share bonds of religion, culture and family ties is a statement of fact and cannot be considered to constitute an act of interfere in the internal affairs of any country."
Mr. Noorani said while it was not necessary to say anything more on the reports from India the commitment of the Government of Pakistan to good neighbourly relations with India impelled me to correct the misperceptions manifested in the statement given by the Minister of External Affairs of the Government India in the Lok Sabha on February 25.

While objecting to the statement and terming it as contrary to the Simla Agreement the Foreign Minister of India took credit for refraining —and I quote him— from commenting on reports of sectarian riot, denial of democratic rights and restrictions on freedom of religious worship by minority communities including Ahmadis in Pakistan.

Now this statement, he said were a classic example of making a comment and disavowing it at the same time. It not only makes false allegations but also expresses subjective view and opinion. For instance the allegations of restriction on freedom of worship for minorities in Pakistan is entirely baseless.

As for the Simla Agreement Mr. Noorani said the Government of Pakistan was committed to it in letter and in spirit. We are aware that the Simla Agreement reaffirms the principle and we scrupulously eschew any act of interference in the internal affairs of India, he said.

He said mutual goodwill and friendship demanded understanding and tolerance. The interest of the people of Pakistan in reports about the conversion of a mosque into a temple and about violence against Muslims was natural. An affirmation of this interest cannot reasonably be categorized as an act of interference. This interest was natural and mutual goodwill and friendship between Pakistan and India demanded that it should be so accepted, he said.

SECRET

Record of the meeting between Indian Ambassador in Pakistan S. K. Singh with Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan.

Islamabad, February 28, 1986

MEETING WITH FOREIGN MINISTER SAHABZADA YAQUB KHAN, ASSISTED BY FOREIGN SECRETARY NIAZ NAIK AND ADDITIONAL SECRETARY ABDUL SATTAR - 1230 to 1350 HRS - 28 FEB., 1986

The Foreign Minister summoned me to the Foreign Office for this discussion on the eve of my departure for Lahore en route New Delhi. He began by saying that he had called me after a detailed discussion with his Prime Minister, Mr. Junejo, and under his instructions. The Prime Minister had first felt that he should talk to me but as I was leaving this evening and P.M. is busy, he felt that he should communicate, in detail, through the Foreign Minister. However, he would be meeting me at the Hockey match and may mention something.

2. Sahabzada Yaqub Khan said that it was wrong to draw any conclusion that Prime Minister Junejo did not hold the same views as President Zia on the subject of Indo-Pakistan relations. The President’s views reflected the total commitment of the Pakistan Government to improve relations with India. The Prime Minister is fully behind this.

3. President, Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan, the latter said, are all upset at the rough passage our relations are having just now. Mainly due to Foreign Minister Bhagat’s statements. Of course, Sahabzada appreciates our Foreign Minister’s letter indicating that he would be free for the Joint Commission meeting after May 7. He recognizes also that Sub-Commissions I & II meetings must be completed. This cannot be done until their Committee of Secretaries, under the terms of the Agreed Minutes between our two Finance Ministers (dated 10 January 1986) has been to India for a meeting with their counterparts. The process of the meeting between the two Defence Secretaries has not come to an end. Mentioning Siachin in the middle of it has caused them concern, also saddened them. Question in Sahabzada’s mind is: are we to draw the conclusion that India is moving away from the process of normalization commenced after the December 17 Zia-Gandhi meeting?

4. This raises the question of confidence. We have built up these consultations, discussions, negotiations so painstakingly and now suddenly the process thus built up seems to be collapsing or at least tapering off.

5. We are so concerned and anxious that within the last 24 hours, it has been decided that the Foreign Minister and the President — each one of them should speak to the Indian Ambassador separately so that he could communicate faithfully, during his consultations in Delhi, to the Indian leadership the feelings, the anxieties, the hopes, and the expectations of the Pakistani leadership, Government and indeed the people.

6. He said that they devoutly hope that this conclusion will be proved false when I return from Delhi.

7. We are anxious to know what we can do to dissipate the clouds that seem to have come so suddenly over our relations. Perhaps a free and frank dialogue is required immediately.

8. Certain anxieties and perceptions seem to exist and persist, in Delhi. In this context, two issues come to one’s mind: One, the Sikh problem and two, the statements of Minister of State Zain Noorani on the communal troubles in India.

9. Taking up the second problem first, he said that in political functioning of a Legislature, interaction of Opposition members with a Government Minister was inevitable. Such Ministerial statements should be seen as part of a debating process rather than an indication that established policies were being changed. Indeed, both of us know that there are good and patriotic Indians and good and patriotic Pakistanis who do not agree with what our two leaderships are currently engaged in; i.e. a deliberate movement towards easier and more normal relations in every field. He recalled in this context his own statement, made in the Senate while Indo-Pakistan trade was being discussed when he had said that overall Indo-Pak relations cannot be normalized unless there is normal trade; and that Pakistani media or Legislators or business must not shy away from purposeful, meaningful contact with India and Indians. That way would lie problems and continuing hostility. Greater contact, more collaboration, healthy competitions are all required.

10. He said that when he as Foreign Minister, and as a friend of India, and as a patriotic Pakistani states something, he wishes to be taken seriously and considered truthfull; not hypocritical, not false. “Mine is not a charade,” he said with considerable passion. He added that he considers it important that he should have the feeling that whatever he says to his Indian colleagues is taken seriously.

11. Discussing Pakistan Muslim League resolution (which he sometimes kept calling manifesto and sometimes resolution) he appealed that India should go by what Government leaders say through Diplomatic channels or in public, not by these resolutions and manifestoes. He asked me to reassure Foreign Minister Bhagat that there was no reversal of Pakistani policy.
12. Discussing the Sikh issue, which he called the most important factor between us, we must not leave any stone unturned to assure you that we are not involved. He kept asking what is the help Pakistan can give to the Sikhs. What is Pakistan's capability? What can be the ramifications of this problem? Then he mentioned the Pakistan court verdict against the hijackers and called it draconian and a measure of Pakistan's fairness. I pricked the balloon by reminding him of the handing over of the pistol to the hijackers by a senior Pakistani official. He did not contradict me. He merely said that that problem is behind us. He then said that he has noticed that whenever the Sikh problem is close to solution, Indo-Pak relations improve; whenever the Sikh problem deteriorates, so do the Indo-Pakistan relations.

13. He then said that he was authorized to make the proposal to me formally that our two Intelligence Chiefs should meet away from the glare of publicity, quietly, and come up with some suggestion. He then went on to tell me a long story of how both the DIB (Director of the Intelligence Bureau) and the Chief of the Inter Services Intelligence are senior Army officers who have earlier served under Sahabzada Yaqub Khan. They have given their personal and solemn assurances to Sahabzada “on the basis of a life time honour that they are making no intelligence efforts in the direction of Indian Sikhs.” I asked him promptly whether it meant that they were making some such efforts in respect of American, Canadian or British Sikhs. He laughed and said this is not so. I have cross-examined them myself.

14. Fundamentally he said please ask my friend Mr. Bhagat to ask himself the question: Is Pakistan Government playing tricks with India? Does Pakistan wish to have tension-free relations with India? What is the motivation of Pakistan in seeking good relations with India? Is it only that as the difficulties of their situation vis-a-vis Afghanistan have become worse, they have sought good relations with India? Is it only a device? Is it only temporary, good or fair relations Pakistan is seeking with India? Thus, are the Pakistanis perpetrating a big hoax on us? Have they built up a beautiful plan of deception and are working it out meticulously? Are they likely to, or capable of attacking India cunningly as soon as India’s guard is lowered?

15. He said Pakistan Government would like India to examine the hypothesis on which such doubts can be based or should be based.

16. In the end he requested me to submit to PM and EAM his respects and the suggestion that the leaderships of the two countries must be capable of absorbing shocks for unless the two Governments prove themselves capable of absorbing shocks, such is the history and background of our relation-ship, that we are bound to be deflected from our course. Let that not happen for future generations in both the countries shall not pardon us if we fail once again this time.
17. My discussion with Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, Foreign Secretary Niaz Naik and Additional Secretary Sattar was a long rambling one of almost 80 minutes. I tried not to be argumentative, but I made my own points. Both Niaz Naik and Sattar also interjected from time to time. The atmosphere was somewhat impassioned. I made following basic points:

(i) So far we have received only general disclaimers from Pakistan about any assistance to Sikh extremists. No concrete answers to the data and fact-based evidence given by us. Pakistan has never agreed to say or do anything which would show to the extremist Sikhs in Canada, USA, UK and India and elsewhere that they can no longer expect any help from Pakistan. The connection between JKLF & the Sikh extremists was a potent one.

(ii) On the question of Pakistan’s effort to move towards nuclear weapons capability, we keep receiving disturbing and disconcerting hints from some of Pakistan’s better friends. We are not quite satisfied that Pakistan has any explicable use, in foreseeable future, for its enriched uranium which is being-stockpiled, except in a weapons programme.

(iii) In the matter of communal tensions and trouble in India, and rights and position of our largest minority, we don’t like Pakistan’s interference. We do not need their advice or pontification. Most of all, our Muslim minority is upset with them and we oppose their meddling on this account.

(iv) In every democracy the ruling Party’s resolutions and manifestoes are the basis for formulation of policy. Here we are being told that policy on the question of relations with India had been framed prior to the Muslim League resolution. Therefore, India should understand that that policy continues and the Muslim League is not a material factor. We would like to believe this.

(v) The statements of the POK leaders are continuing as virulently as ever. Nothing has been done to bring them in line with the over all atmosphere of amity.

(vi) Introduction of next generation of arms, ammunition and defence equipment by Pakistan continues. This causes us anxiety.

(vii) In such minor and petty contexts as the recent effort of Pakistan to screen Indian diplomatic bags, little prejudices come to the fore, e.g. the argument that India is somehow involved with Al-Zulfiqar and, therefore, while other foreign Missions in Islamabad can be let off from the requirement of screening, the Indian Mission cannot be. (He immediately proceeded to say that he had already got this sorted out. Niaz Naik also confirmed this.)

(viii) Making empty allegations like India assisting Afghanistan militarily was, if they would ponder over it, as unfair for them to do as it was unwise.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1097. Message from Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi given orally at slow speed to Ambassador S. K. Singh at 3.45P.M. at Lahore.

Lahore, March 1, 1986.

Conveys his warm personal regards and best wishes to P.M.

2. It has taken our two countries a long time to break the ice. I feel that what your Prime Minister and I did on 17 December, 1985, did not merely break the ice, but also started melting it.

3. As you know, in several recent public statements I have said that the credit for this goes to statesman-like vision of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

4. Our understanding of December 17 was not a small or ordinary one. Our meeting was not a protocol requirement or social chit-chat. It was a deliberate effort made by us to chalk out a schedule for improving our relations. We did this as we were convinced that this was in our mutual interest.

5. It is difficult to improve our relations; much easier to spoil the atmosphere or to throw a spanner in the works to cause damage.

6. I convey to your Prime Minister my assurance that there has been no change of policy in Pakistan, due to transfer of power from military to civilian hands. I continue to be the Head of State. Of course, this recent transfer of power has meant more political activity and some decision-making by the Prime Minister. However, policies cannot change unless I too agree. In respect of our relations with India, I assure you the policy remains what it was on the day I met the P.M.
7. In India you have had greater experience of political functioning. And surely you know that manifestoes and resolutions do not run or ever make policies. [Here I interrupted him and said that no leader of a political party, in a democratic country would subscribe to this theory].

He went on; In my personal view, through manifestoes and party resolutions, politicians give certain indications to their people. Some political people even fool their own people. I do not ask you to forget the recent Pakistan Muslim League resolution on Kashmir, but I request you to ignore it, in today’s overall context. The overall context is my statement of 17th December 1985 on the relevance and importance of Simla Agreement so far as the Kashmir issue is concerned; statements of our Mr. Junejo and Sahabzada Yaqub Khan in the National Assembly in December when both of them mentioned U.N. resolutions but laid emphasis on Simla Agreement. Please consider all our actions so far, after my meeting with your P.M.

8. I would like your P.M. to identify any concrete problems. Not the statements of politicians, not the articles in newspapers, but any concrete matters and tell me which things he feels are going wrong between us. I assure your Prime Minister with the fullest authority as Head of this State that we have not changed our views; we have not changed our policies. Our perceptions are not changed. Political regimes keep saying, various things which, in terms of policy, need to be ignored and disregarded.

9. Both of us must be far more careful. We must not hurt the process we ourselves started. If this process is hurt or stopped, the consequences may be such that I shudder to think of them. We must move purposefully towards peace and normalization.

10. I know you have doubts because of the Pakistan Muslim League resolutions. I realise that Prime Minister Junejo is the President of Pakistan Muslim League. But please do not think that he is opposed to the policies which Prime Minister Gandhi and I initiated on 17th December. If he was opposed to these how would he, at the same time, go ahead and make a public announcement of the opening of the Khokharapar-Munabao route. It is not in our mutual interest to misunderstand each other or to perceive each other’s motivations hastily and wrongly.

11. Now this is the overall background. I have my own convictions. And, therefore, I ask you to request your Prime Minister to give this entire matter his personal attention. Careful attention. Statements like the one made by Foreign Minister Bhagat on Siachin are not conducive to good neighbourliness. Yes, if the continuing dialogue between us on Siachin had broken down, God forbid then may be a statement like this could be made. But just after the first meeting between the two Defence Secretaries, and even before the second meeting takes place, this kind of statement causes doubts and suspicions.

12. Both of us know, many aspects of these political questions are based on psychological perceptions. I do recognize, at the same time, that neither Pakistan nor India should be sensitive of certain type of statements, certain type of publicity you have mentioned and criticized Pakistan statements on communal riots in India and on Indian assistance to Afghanistan. Let us not misperceive each other. We must respect your sensitivity but there are problems of our National Assembly raising these matters.

13. I know also that a lot of people in India think, and also say so, that Pakistan is aiding and helping the Sikhs, and by doing so Pakistan has already gone away from the letter and spirit of Simla Agreement. But please believe me we are not helping the Sikhs. In fact, we are doing many things to ensure realization of our policy of supporting the unity and integrity of India. The Sikh problem is an internal problem of India. Only India can solve it. We wish to have nothing to do with it.

GIST-OF DISCUSSION IMMEDIATELY AFTER MESSAGE WAS DICTATED:

Here the dictated message meant for P.M. ended and he said that he was thinking of ringing up P.M. on his return to Islamabad, and if he does, he would inform P.M. that of this message given to the Ambassador.

2. In the ensuing discussion, I took up his remarks about assistance to “Sikhs”. I said that we had given them a lot of data and details many names and concrete evidence. Pakistan has just continued to make general disclaimers and disavowals. No concrete response on the concrete details and points has been made. He said that the proposal made yesterday by Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan to me, had been made with his approval. “We make the proposal,” he said, that “the two Interior Secretaries should meet early and quietly or secretly. Or may be the two Directors of Intelligence Bureaus should meet; or perhaps both Interior Secretaries as also DIBs should meet and satisfy each other.” His own preference, he said, was for the two DIBs meeting. Additional Secretary Abdul Sattar joined in and said that at this point in time it would be best if the two DIBs meet. If necessary the two Interior Secretaries could come in later. No publicity is necessary. The meetings could take place in Vienna or Geneva or Singapore, Hong Kong or Tokyo, or anywhere else, without publicity or fanfare. President Zia said that I should discuss this with P.M. and he himself would accept whatever is the P.M’s preference.
3. I said all this was all right but there is need for Pakistan to make a public statement or gesture, and ensure that it gets global publicity. This public statement must indicate the whole wide world that whatever may have been their earlier policy or practice, they shall not help Sikh extremists and that they are pledged to take harsh action against Sikhs who try to use Pakistani soil to hurt India's sovereignty, unity and integrity. A long discussion followed. President Zia talked about the Sekhon case and the case of Bhindranwala's nephew who had not been permitted to enter Pakistan. I then asked him why those opportunities were not used for publicizing this healthy Pakistani policy. A lot of people feel that Pakistan does not wish to appear anything but a power looking benevolently at extremist Sikhs. This must be changed. He said this matter of publicity deserves their detailed attention. After my return from India, if I do bring any specific ideas from P.M., he would look at these with open mind and sympathy.

4. In this context, he enquired whether it would be useful for their ambassador in Delhi, Dr. Humayun Khan, to go and see Chief Minister Barnala and reassure him of Pakistan's policy in this matter. Additional Secretary Sattar gently opposed this. He said that yesterday Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan had told Ambassador S.K. Singh that they had given strict instructions to all their Embassies and Ambassadors, especially in the West, not to have any dealings with Sikh dissidents, extremists etc. Indeed, not to receive any Sikhs at all, or to be seen with them. The same instructions have gone to Dr. Humayun Khan. President Zia asked me to give this matter further thought because he felt that may be somebody should explain the attitude of Pakistan Government to Chief Minister Barnala, who has been giving statements critical of Pakistan Government's attitude on this matter.

Points made by President Zia before Dictating his Message for Prime Minister

1. He said that he has been concerned and worried about the deterioration in the atmosphere between our two countries and Governments. He feels that Foreign Minister Bhagat's recent statements have caused anxiety in Pakistan. He knows that India's belief or assumption that Pakistan has been and is helping the Sikh extremists is at the root of these misunderstandings currently developing between our two countries. He recalled that when P.M. mentioned this matter to him, in Delhi, in December 1985, he (Zia) had indicated that there was a perception in Pakistan that India had been assisting Al-Zulfiqar. He said he had also told P.M. that these misunderstandings or misperceptions were bound to dissolve once a climate of faith and trust had been built up. I responded by mentioning the statements of Mr. Noorani about India assisting Afghanistan militarily; communal riots in India; threats from POK leaders of what could be done by them in the Indian State of J&K, etc. I said all this is part of a chain or a circuit. It depends on him how we should break this circuit. It would be necessary for Pakistan to make some statement, some gesture to re-assure us, and to indicate that they were friends of India and not prepared to get mixed up with groups and countries involved in creating disturbances. The attempt to insist, as Mr. Noorani has done, in his second statement, that somehow it is the right, as also the duty of Pakistan to pronounce upon the communal situation in India, is totally unacceptable to all Indians, more particularly to all Indian Muslims.

2. President Zia then said, “I tell you that the Sikh problem is internal to India. It is your problem. As President and Head of State of this country, I must tell you also that we have never wished to fish in troubled waters or to seek benefit out of the Sikh problem. We have nothing to do with it. We have never helped the Sikhs. I do realize how certain Agencies in all our countries, make long-term plans take long-term measures, and in doing such things, they wish to be able either to turn the tap off, or re-open it. So, I would not be surprised if you had that impression. But I tell you this is false; this is wrong. Unlike in many other societies, we in Pakistan keep a close control over these things. Of course, after the transfer of power, these people report to the Prime Minister. But even so, they “also report to me. I have had long-term control over these people and I tell you that I shall not permit certain things in the matter of Sikhs. I shall not permit them to hurt the long-term interests of India. Even if relations between India and Pakistan were to deteriorate, I give you my solemn word that we shall never do this. Now what else do you want me to say.”

3. So I reminded him that in an earlier discussion in Rawalpindi, he had once asked me whether I would favour his ordering his Armed Forces guarding the border, to shoot down smugglers and other miscreants. I had said then that miscreants do not like to be killed; but if this were to happen, it would serve notice to the whole world that Pakistan meant it when it said that it was against Sikh extremists creating problems in India.

4. He then started a long explanation about how difficult, almost impossible it is to close this border and how many villages on either side of the border are running a kind of unofficial economy of their own. Against this background, he cannot guarantee if some Sikhs from time to time, enter Pakistan. But he would like to assure India that Pakistan Government or any of their Agencies are not involved in any mischief or misdeeds. -He recalled how in one or two recent instances, our P.M. had informed them that he was ordering the closure of the border. Pakistan had cooperated and agreed with the action taken by India.

5. He then said he has been upset and worried. He wanted to explain orally the various aspects of this and he would give this message at slow speed so that I could take notes & pass it on to P.M. from him.

Oral Message from Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi to President Zia-ul-Haq.

Our Ambassador in Pakistan has delivered your message to me.

As I have told you on earlier occasions, it is India’s earnest desire to build cooperative and cordial relations with Pakistan on the basis of sovereign equality, non-interference and mutual trust. It is our policy as also our firm resolve to take forward the process of achieving durable peace between Pakistan and India. It is in line with this consistent policy that we worked out with you on December 17, 1985 a series of steps to move towards normalization between our two countries. It has been our expectation that Pakistan would be animated by the same spirit.

It was with this objective that we cooperated with you and took the initial steps of sending several high level delegations for discussions on a number of issues. However, two out of four sub-Commissions of the Joint Commission are yet to meet. The Committee of senior officials, as agreed during the visit of our Finance Minister to Pakistan, also has not met so far. We are waiting for an indication from your side as to when they should meet. All this has delayed the meeting of the Joint Commission to be held at Foreign Ministers level.

We are preparing to send you our suggestions for finalizing the draft regarding non-attack on each other’s nuclear installations and facilities.

I share your feeling about the need to move forward in the normalization process. However, developments have taken place in Pakistan which have vitiated the atmosphere and have come in the way of process.
We are deeply concerned by some of the statements and resolutions relating to Kashmir and minorities in India. We cannot disregard them as you have suggested, as these have been made by responsible Government leaders and others. Regrettably your own speech of March 5, in Islamabad is at variance to what you had stated in New Delhi on December 17, 1985. Its tone and contents have agitated our public opinion.

I had raised with you the question of allocation of funds in the POK budget for liberation of Kashmir. We were subsequently told on December 17, 1985 by your senior advisers that this amount was for publicity, investment and internal tourism. We remain unconvinced because Mr. Sikander Hayat had again mentioned on January 12, 1986 that Rs.20 lakhs were earmarked as token money for "liberation" of Kashmir which could be enhanced according to requirements and he also referred to streamlining the "liberation" movement.

You had given me an assurance that you will take all measure to stop assistance of any kind to the Sikh extremists. From the information we have, this assurance has not been implemented. This is a vital matter for our security and at this moment it is of basic importance for improving our relations.

In your message you have mentioned that you shudder to think of the consequences if the process of normalization is hurt or stopped. I am intrigued by this and wonder if it is meant as a threat. This is a serious matter and I hope you will tell our Ambassador what you meant.

We on our part will persevere in efforts to bring about normalization but this can only succeed with your active and sincere cooperation.

Briefing Note for the Government of India by the Indian Ambassador in Pakistan S. K. Singh.

We have again arrived at a point where it is necessary to take stock of the pluses and minuses of the line followed during the last four months or so and decide both our direction and the pace to be maintained.

2. This is a period of flux in the domestic politics of Pakistan. We should determine whether in this situation we may expect greater flexibility or greater rigidity from Pakistan. One thing is clear. If the negotiations process has to be meaningful we should be prepared for give and take ourselves and not expect that we shall lay down our terms and, after some talk Pakistan will accept these. We must also be clear as to whether we should go about these negotiations in a leisurely, easy-going manner or try to telescope it all between now and whenever PM decides to make a state visit to Pakistan. We also must be clear whether a firm and tough stance will gain us our objectives, or a visibly friendly, flexible style. Our present style will not do. It is one quarter friendly, one quarter tough and one half uncertain, even mysterious.

PAKISTAN—INTERNAL

3. Pakistan politics is in a flux. Zia-Junejo equation is still evolving. The survival of either is tied up with the other and yet there are differences of opinion and style, as also tensions between their two personal offices. Zia is the stronger power center of the two; but Junejo has greater possibility of starting to break the crockery and glassware. Until now it has been clearly understood, between them, that Defence and Foreign Affairs will continue to be handled directly by Zia. It is well-known that Zia did not agree to Junejo’s idea of functioning on the basis of party (Muslim League). Zia has felt free to criticise the party system as also parliamentary system of Government. Junejo recognizes that on the one hand Zia is the President and therefore, his boss; but on the other hand Zia as Chief of Staff is responsible to Junejo, the Defence Minister. The Society as a whole is brittle. Their claim that democracy has been restored is erroneous. What they have resumed is political functioning. The real power continues to reside in the military. Luckily for both the military and the politicians, the Opposition Parties (PPP and others members of MRD etc.) are still outside the new power structure are themselves divided, disorganized and fractured.

4. Zia has the confidence and backing of the USA. Junejo and they do not fully understand, nor do they admire him. They have a large lobby in the present Cabinet but they disapprove of Speaker Fakhr Imam and his wife Abida, and they are bound to try and hurt them politically.
5. The Soviets have made some headway in building up a small but vocal lobby, demanding a change in the Government's Afghanistan policy. They are, once again, busy building up support for themselves amongst the students and in the tribal belt.

6. The pro-India lobby has grown and become a little vocal, a little less frightened. The current process of normalization has helped this lobby, which has real grass roots support. A return to confrontationism between Pakistan and India would drive this lobby back into its frightened and sullen silence.

INDO - PAKISTAN

7. A very large majority of Pakistanis would like normal relations with India. There are certain influential segments of the educated middle class which have doubts about their ability to forge normal relations based on equality with India. Many do not understand that what they have been motivated by the Anglo-Saxons to purse is parity with India, not equality. I have gradually come to the conclusion that Zia does not wish to push himself, or our leadership, into a corner where war or hostilities become inevitable. The top echelons of the military also do not want any trouble with India. However, both amongst the middle level officers in the Army, and in the bureaucracy there are many who feel that any normalcy with India is bound to become subservience to India. The old Muslim Leaguers joining Junejo's official party are also afraid of a subservient relationship with India. But the younger, new entrant into Junejo's Muslim League tend to support a rational and balanced approach towards India.

8. Examined below are some of the specific issues, under discussion/negotiations between the two countries.

NUCLEAR:

9. After the 17 December 1985 meeting between our PM and President Zia this issue has been hardly mentioned in the Pakistan media, or Parliament. They do not realise that India is miles ahead of them in this field. I am convinced that Pakistan's clandestine quest for a weapons capability continues, with some surreptitious support from both China, and certain source in the West. They do have considerable sympathy and respect for this programme in many Islamic countries. Even others in the Non-aligned group tend to look upon them, in this context, as the little David standing up to the Indian Goliath. We have to determine whether we gain more by making public criticism, or by lobbying, persuasion and negotiation. We must not allow the nuclear question to become in the popular Pakistani view a symbol of their masculinity. Instead, if we were to formulate something on India and Pakistan cooperating in the quest of more sophisticated technologies and pursuit of excellence we could deal with a more rational Pakistani public opinion. The greater the self doubts within Pakistani society we create in this context, the longer we can delay Pakistan moving aggressively towards an open weapons programme. The Soviet Ambassador informed me that his American counterpart spoke to him on the Pakistan nuclear programme last week, in great confidence. He said that this is one area in which Pakistanis have tended to follow their own line despite the strongest American pressure. The Soviet Ambassador added that in this context the two of them did not discuss the assistance China has traditionally provided to Pakistan.

10. Open and public pursuit of general normalization of relations with Pakistan would also help make them in the nuclear context act with greater rationally.

PAKISTAN ASSISTANCE TO SIKH EXTREMISTS:

11. We should have no doubts about Pakistan’s serious involvement in this matter. Their efforts and plans have, for long, in this matter, been orchestrated with those of various departments of dirty tricks run by Western agencies (UK, USA, Canada, FRG etc.). The concept of Khalistan, with a view to destabilizing a strategic border region of India, has been an important element in keeping India on the defensive. For the dissidents, militants, radicals and extremists amongst our Sikhs, Pakistan has been over the years a conduit of Western assistance as also an original source of support, back up and training. Pakistan has certain advantages in this context: contiguity on borders; Punjabi language; old family ties and associations; Sikh shrines located in Pakistan which are regularly visited by Sikhs every year. The security agencies of Pakistan are not likely to throw away advantages gained by them over the years, or surrender the leverage they have built up.

12. In case this thesis is accepted, the options before us are: diplomatic persuasion and political pressure; outright threat of grave consequence; or making our friendship attractive for them. Somehow we have to ensure that their involvement is forced to be kept at a low level. Simultaneously we must whittle away their credibility amongst both foreign and Indian Sikhs. We must gain time to set our own house in order. A continuing, broad spectrum dialogue with Pakistan; from time to time forcing them to take certain overt actions against Sikhs, is to my mind a good policy for us. However, we should ponder what their psychological response will be if we build up a situation of confrontation with Pakistan, in this context. They would then feel free to assist the Sikhs even more blatantly than they have done, I suspect since the late sixties. We must be clear, if we wish to take a tough line with them. We should be prepared for the ultimate in toughness, i.e. open hostilities with them. Pakistan had built up a certain credibility within several groups of Sikh extremists. This, to my mind had dwindled somewhat between 17 December and now. We must not allow this to go up again. Our Prime Minister level pressure on Zia must be maintained. We must keep asking him to provide evidence of his sincerity. It is my perception that Pakistani assistance to Sikh extremists has become more discreet and cautious.

13. Our own security agencies should be requested to evolve deterrent tactics, to enable us to ensure that Pakistanis stick to whatever political commitments they make to us in these matters. Perhaps our security agencies can also work out some quid pro quo arrangements to be presented to Pakistan. High level political pressure at PM and EAM levels, must accompany a process of overall normalization. It should be remembered that Pakistanis too suspect our involvement with certain Al Zulfiquar elements. There was some talk of examining whether an extradition treaty between India and Pakistan would be useful in this context. Has this been examined or followed up?

JAMMU AND KASHMIR:

14. Whenever internally our state of Jammu and Kashmir had been quiet and peaceful and working towards prosperity, Pakistanis have felt discouraged. Whenever there have been internal problems in that State Pakistanis have tended to make both propaganda and mischief.

15. One cannot but wonder how much more serious the situation of propaganda-cum-mischief by Pakistan would be today if we were not involved in a process of normalization. Certainly the Pakistanis would have been more raucous and difficult than they today are. I understand that the Pak occupied Kashmir leaders had a meeting with Prime Minister Junejo on 26 February for discussing certain steps they should take inside the Valley. As far as I have learnt the decision, for the present, is not to do anything adventurous. We should inform Pakistan that if the Simla spirit of bilateralism is flouted by Pakistan, the results could be grave.

INDUCTION OF MORE NEXT GENERATION WEAPONS FROM THE USA:

16. Pak Finance Minister Wattoo is in Washington negotiating the next phase of US defence and economic aid to Pakistan. The likelihood is, I believe, a marginally increased assistance. They are likely to get forty to sixty additional F-16, AWACS or a feebler substitute. It may be recalled that on the last similar occasion India had criticized USA and Pakistan sharply and publicly. It did not help. This situation will perhaps change only after the end of the Reagan era. The pro-India lobby in this country also provides the core group for the anti-US lobby. We must strengthen that core group. This can be organized against the background of this process of normalization; and not in case we move towards a phase of tough and confrontationist policies.

TRADE:

17. A subterranean debate has been going on both within the Government here and the Pakistan society at large as to how broad minded they can afford to be in opening private sector trade with us. The lobby hostile to trade with India is tenacious but a lot of the people involved feel that Pakistan cannot afford to go back upon its pledged word. We need to remain patient, and in the unlikely event of Pakistan trying to wriggle out of the terms of the agreed Minutes on Trade matters, dated January 10, 1986, we should remind them as also the wide world that they are just not trustworthy.

SIACHIN:

18. During the next round of talks between the two Defence Secretaries (scheduled for March/April 1986 in Delhi) we must move on to bargaining and negotiating of the type we failed to do last time when we were content to listen to their case and state ours. In his Karachi speech to the Pakistan Institute of International Affairs, President Zia made certain significant points on this issue:

(i) Siachin area is barren. Nothing grows there. Our respective claims were never defined properly. Pakistan assumed that since all of Baltistan belonged to it, and, this too is a part of Baltistan, it was their real-estate.

(ii) The one question requiring an answer is what direction the line going North from point NJ 9482B, should take.

(iii) Both Pakistan and India have claimed that over the years they were both able to send expeditions into this area.

19. We did not, last time, move towards bargaining. This time we must. During the January 1986 talks between the Defence Secretaries Pakistan kept talking of justice and equity.

20. We need to see how we can, without compromising our security, arrive at a \textit{modus Vivendi} which will not make Pakistan look like a total loser.

COMPREHENSIVE TREATY OF PEACE, FRIENDSHIP & COOPERATION:

21. Before June, July or August whenever PM finally decides to visit Pakistan we must have another round of talks on the comprehensive Treaty. During these talks we should ensure that Pakistan move towards new formulations on Bases and Bilateralism, instead of sticking to our original one, and present it as something of a take-it-or-leave-it.

KHOKHARPAR OPENING AND EASING OF TRAVEL FACILITIES BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES:

22. On both points, over the last two years or more India has been far more forthcoming than Pakistan. Indeed Pakistan has been difficult. Just as Pakistan showed some signs of flexibility, our people, under instruction from Delhi, became shy, even a little rigid. Pakistan has promptly become a little more forthcoming. India is too major a power, and too large a country, to go back on its words and policies in such contexts. More normal relations and greater movement between our two countries, I am persuaded, will be more beneficial to India than to Pakistan. Once bilateral trade opens, easier travel will help the expansion of our exports.

1099. Statement by Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan in the National Assembly on proposed Indo-Pakistan Accord against raids on Nuclear Installations.
Islamabad, March 6, 1986.

Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan told the National Assembly on March 6 that even without a written agreement, an understanding between Pakistan and India, prohibiting attack on each other’s nuclear installations, was on record and contained in a declaration jointly made by the Pakistan President and the Indian Prime Minister in Delhi on December 17, 1985.

Speaking on a privilege motion he said: “As for the proposed agreement between the two countries on the subject, the members must be aware that the Foreign Secretaries of the two countries met in January, 1986, in Islamabad and arrived at a common draft. In this draft, there was no difference between the two sides in regard to the substance of the proposed agreement. Only a couple of sub-paragraphs in the preamble remained to be finalized.

Sheikh Rashid in his motion had referred to the statement made by Mr. Yaqub Khan while speaking during the debate on foreign policy in the House and said the Minister had given a wrong impression that India would not attack Pakistan’s nuclear installation under an agreement between the two countries.

Mr. Yaqub had also given an incorrect impression about the agreements between the two countries on the question of the Siachen Glacier and the Indian Prime Minister’s visit to Pakistan.

YAQUB’S STATEMENT

Sahabzada Yaqub contradicted the contents of the motion and said the allegation made by the member in his motion was incorrect, unwarranted and unjust.
He said, “What I actually said can be easily verified with reference to the statement I had the honour to make on December 24, 1985, at the commencement of the debate on foreign policy, in the Parliament. I shall quote here from my statement:

“The two countries have decided to sign an agreement not to attack each other’s nuclear installations.

“The Defence Secretaries of the two countries will be meeting shortly in order to discuss the Siachen Glacier.

“These significant developments are to culminate in the visit to Pakistan by the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, in the first half of 1986.”

All the above statements were made in the context of the meeting between the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India held in Delhi on 17 December, 1985, and these statement were based on the declaration made by the two leaders at their joint Press conference held at the conclusion of their meeting.

In alleging that I sought to mislead this august House, the honourable member has relied on a newspaper report of the statement said to have been given by the Foreign Minister of India in the Lok Sabha on the Siachen Glacier. Had the honourable member taken the trouble to verify the report or even waited for a few days, he would have discovered that the Press report on the basis which he decided to impugn my veracity was denied by the Indian Ministry of External Affairs. Actually, what I stated on 24 December, 1985, has already taken place, namely, that the Defence Secretaries of the two countries had a meeting in January 1986 in Islamabad to discuss this issue. They agreed to meet again and the next meeting is expected to be held in a month or so, although the specific dates have not yet been decided.

As for the proposed agreement between Pakistan and India prohibiting attack on each other’s nuclear installations, the honourable member must be aware that the Foreign Secretaries of the two countries met in January 1986, in Islamabad and arrived at a common draft. In this draft, there is no difference between the two sides in regard to the substance of the proposed agreement. Only a couple of sub-paragraphs in the preamble remained to be finalized. These, however, do not relate to the substance.

Even without a written agreement, the understanding between Pakistan and India on this subject is on the record and is contained in the declaration jointly made by the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India in Delhi on 17 December 1985.
As regards the visit of the Prime Minister of India in the first half of 1986, this, too, was announced at the joint Press conference of the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India on 17 December, 1986. The question of dates for this visit has not yet been taken up between the two governments. This will be done at the appropriate time subject to the mutual convenience of the two sides, as is normal for such high level visits.

I am fully conscious of the dignity of our august Parliament and the privileges of its honourable members. It has been my constant endeavour to keep my colleagues in the Parliament fully informed of the various aspects of our foreign policy and I would be more than happy to welcome appropriate opportunities for a discussion of all matters of substance, whenever these are raised, according to the rules of procedure”.

Speaking on two adjournment motions, tabled by Maulana Kausar Niazi and Mr. Tariq Chaudhry with regard to the Indian Foreign Minister’s statements of February 25 and 26 in the Lok Sabha, Mr. Yaqub Khan said the Government too had felt concerned at the reported statements in question and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs had carefully examined the texts of these. The Government had, however, taken appropriate steps to convey its views to the Indian Government in clear terms.

According to the text received from New Delhi, he said, the Indian Foreign Minister had referred to Pakistan’s Parliament as “a semi-elected Assembly”. He deplored the aspersion and believed that on mature and cool reflection, the Indian Foreign Minister would regret having used such language.

The accusation of interference in India’s internal affairs repeated by the Indian Foreign Minister were as false and baseless now as they were when first made by the Indian Government in 1984, Mr. Yaqub Khan said and added that unfortunately, whenever the situation within India received some setback, there was a tendency in New Delhi to externalize the problem and find scapegoats.

The Pakistan Government continued to adhere scrupulously to the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of other States; he said and rejected the Indian Foreign Minister’s allegations outright.

Mr. Yaqub Khan differed with Senator Maulana Kausar Niazi’s view that the statement of the Indian Foreign Minister virtually put an end to the expectations in regard to the agreement between Pakistan and India prohibiting attack on each other’s nuclear installations and said that in fact, an understanding on this subject had been reached at the initiative of India, during the meeting between the Pakistan President and the Indian Prime Minister on December 17 last. The two leaders had announced this understanding at their joint Press conference after the meeting.
Even without a written agreement the understanding was on record. Furthermore, the draft of the substance, at the meeting between the Foreign Secretaries of the two countries in January 1986, only a couple of sub-paragraphs in the preamble remained to be finalized. These, however, did not relate to the substance. The Indian Foreign Minister was not, therefore, correct in stating that there are “difference of perceptions” between the two countries on this subject.

In regard to the Siachen Glacier area, Mr. Yaqub said Pakistan rejected the Indian claim that this area was a part of Jammu and Kashmir. The Pakistan position had been and was that this area had historically been under Pakistan’s control. Therefore, the Indian decision to send forces into the Siachen area was inadmissible. In any case, the two Governments had agreed to hold negotiations on this despite. The Defence Secretaries had already met in January and another meeting was due to be held in April.

“It is our view that neither side should prejudice the outcome of these talks by issuing provocative statements,” he added.

In conclusion, he said, he would like to reiterate the commitment of the Pakistan Government to “the policy of establishing good neighbourly, tension-free and cooperative relations with India commensurate with our sovereignty and dignity. In our opinion such relations would serve the best interest of the nation and would also contribute to peace and stability in our region. The realization of this objective requires, however, reciprocity and scrupulous adherence to the universally accepted principles of inter-state relations.”

Mr. Yaqub Khan said he did not agree that the statements of the Indian Foreign Minister could question the validity of the policy of Pakistan. Pakistan shall persevere in its policy because this policy was right and because it served the best interest of Pakistan. Of course, Pakistan shall take every possible step and observe every precaution to protect its national interests.

The Pakistan Government was in touch with the Indian Government to convey its views and seek clarifications. Therefore, at this stage, he did not think that public interests would be served by the adjournment of the House to discuss the statement of the Indian Foreign Minister. “I hope, therefore, that the distinguished Senators will not press their motions.”

(The motion was not pressed after Mr. Yaqub’s statement.)

Record of the discussions when the Pakistan Prime Minister Junejo called on Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi in Stockholm on March 15, 1986.

Prime Minister's Office

Prime Minister Junejo called on PM in Stockholm at the City Hall where PM and a very few other leaders had been given office rooms. The meeting was not arranged before PM's departure for Stockholm but was fixed after PM arrived in Stockholm. It lasted between 10 to 15 minutes. Almost the entire conversation was in Hindustani.

Junejo was accompanied by Sahebzada Yakub Khan and Foreign Secretary Niaz Naik. Our Ambassador in Stockholm Shri Oza and the undersigned were present.

Junejo told PM that he was most grateful that PM could find time to receive him.

PM told him that what he and President Zia had started in December last year should not slacken. Two - three things are of concern to us. We had decided President Zia and I - that we should put the Kashmir question more or less on the back burner and that neither side would raise it except in terms of the agreed formulations (implying Simla Agreement). But the way Pakistan has been raising the Kashmir question so frequently disturbs our people.

Junejo: Our National Assembly has been talking about the Kashmir question. When members raise it we have to say something. There is no change in the stated position of the Pak Government.

PM: It would not matter if some odd member of the Assembly spoke about it. But your own ruling party keeps bringing it up.

Junejo: As you can appreciate, our difficulties are that we get faced with adjourned motions, etc. Therefore, we have to say something. Government strictly sticks to its known position. The elections that we had were not on party basis. Now; we are trying to form a party and to enforce party discipline. Once we can do that, it would be in order to expect them to behave coherently and with discipline. This is our practical difficulty. You have an established party and your members carry out your directives. I hope that in near future we too shall have a disciplined party. This is the main difficulty and you as politician will be able to appreciate it.

PM: The other problem is about the allocation of a sum of Rs.20 lakhs in POK's budget for the liberation of J&K.
Junejo: I never heard of it. (Yakub Khan explained to him briefly what it was about.) This is utterly ridiculous. Please disregard it completely.

When PM told him that Sikander Hayat had talked about it and the reports had appeared in Pakistan press, Junejo said: Sikander Hayat might have said it. But at our level, there is absolutely nothing and I never even heard about it. What can be done with 20 lakhs?

PM: I agree that not much can be done with 20 lakhs. But the amount is not important. It is the fact that there is a specific provision in your budget which is of significance.

Talking about trade, PM said that two of the sub-commissions have yet to meet.

Junejo: I am keen that things should move between our two countries. I made the announcement about Khokhrapar. Even on trade, your Finance Minister had come to Islamabad.

PM: But things have not moved since!

Junejo: This may take some time. But we are on the right lines.

Junejo: Newspapers keep raking things up. They say that you are now not intending to come to Pakistan.

PM: Even in December I had said that something concrete must come out of my visit to Pakistan; otherwise there would be big disappointment. It has to be a big step forward. So the timing of the visit can be decided only when things are ripe.

Junejo: It is true that your visit should result in substantial progress. We shall work for that whenever you agree to come.

PM: I can come even without any notice. But the important thing is that something must come out of it. We should cool-off irritational points.

Yakub Khan: There has been a delay on our side about trade. We shall take the matter to the Cabinet.

PM: You can ask your Ambassador to coordinate with Gharekhan.

Record of the discussions of the meeting when Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan called on the External Affairs Minister on the sidelines of the meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the Non-aligned countries.

New Delhi, April 15, 1986.

Following were, present:

INDIAN SIDE. PAKISTAN SIDE.
1. EAM 1. Sahabzada Yaqub Khan
2. JS (AP) 2. Mr. Niaz A. Niak, Pak. Foreign Secretary.
3. JS (XP) 3. Mr. Humayun Khan, Ambassador of Pakistan.
4. Mr. Tariq-Altaf, Counselor, Pakistan Embassy.

At the outset, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan pledged the cooperation of his delegation for the success of the current NAM conference and praised India’s role and leadership of the movement. A brief discussion followed on the Iran-Iraq conflict which it was felt could be a major problem facing the current meeting of Foreign Ministers and nonaligned countries.

BILATERAL MATTERS:

Yaqub Khan stated that:

1. Their policy has not changed though there have been some deceleration in the pace. But he said Pakistan was keen to maintain the rhythm of forward movement. There have been some problems which should be overcome.
2. He referred to changes in the Pakistan Cabinet. Both the Finance Minister and the Commerce Minister had changed. Inter-departmental consultations were progressing and their commitment to the enlargement of the list in respect of items to be traded with India remains. They hoped to get Cabinet approval soon.
3. As regards enlargement of lists, he said, they remained committed to the concept although the list may not be “as satisfactory as both of us wish it to be.”
4. They would be suggesting dates for meeting of Sub-commissions I & II very soon. He did not wish to suggest exact dates at this stage but was hopeful that these meetings could be held soon so that the Joint Commission can meet sometime in June.
5. He indicated that Pakistan Government would suggest meeting of Defence Secretaries to be held in May. He said it was not possible to do it earlier as their Defence Secretary had been busy.
6. On Khokhrapar-Munabao, he said, that Pakistan had already suggested a meeting to discuss details between Railway officials of both countries. After mentioning the above points, Yaqub Khan said, that he wished to make a reference to some other matters of bilateral interest. He referred to the following:

(a) There had been reference to amounts having been earmarked in the so-called Azad Kashmir budget for the liberation of Kashmir. Although, he explained, that Azad Kashmir was not a part of Pakistan, they had made enquiries and were told that Rs. 1.88 million had been earmarked in the budget (POK) for such purposes as preparation of biographies of prominent Kashmiri leaders, history books and for research grants.

(b) He referred to our statements that we had evidence about Pakistan’s involvement with extremists. He wished to clarify that he had personally spoken to their intelligence agencies and was convinced that there was no Pakistani involvement. He described the situation as a conflict of perceptions. He referred to the Pakistani proposal for a meeting of Directors of Intelligence Bureaus and/or Home Secretaries to discuss the matter. He said Pakistan was open to suggestions from India on this aspect. He made a reference to the trial of Sikh hijackers and said that their petitions were at present before the court. Pakistan had taken several precautions and had in some cases not allowed Sikhs from other countries to enter Pakistan or to visit their shrines. He was glad that the pilgrimage of the present jatha was proceeding satisfactorily.

Yaqub Khan mentioned that there are people in both countries who had different perceptions. For instance, he said, that both in respect of Afghanistan and the developments which took place in Sind in Pakistan, there are some in India whose sympathies are not with the Pakistan Government, but with the dissidents. He stated that Government of Pakistan was against terrorism and was not helping any Sikh terrorists.

(c) On Kashmir, he reiterated that he their commitment to the letter and spirit of the Simla Agreement. He referred to the PM Junejo’s statement of December 28 and said Pakistan’s position has not changed. Referring to the PML party resolution, he said, that political-parties including the Congress Party at times pass resolutions which may be different from Government policy. What is important is how it is translated by Government into action. He requested EAM not to give too much importance to the party resolution instead emphasis should be on the Government stand. He repeatedly said that Simla Agreement was not being set aside and if there was any delay it was purely due to procedural problems.
AFGHANISTAN

1. Yaqub Khan referred to the earlier discussions with us and he said that they had kept India informed of the progress of their dialogue with Afghanistan through the UN Secretary General’s personal envoy.

2. They were in touch with the Soviet Government.

3. In response to a question he confirmed that during the last shuttle of Cordovez the Afghan side had given their draft of the 4th instrument. Pakistan had rejected the draft.

4. He hinted that this was because the timetable for withdrawal of Soviet troops in the Afghan draft was not specific.

5. He confirmed that Cordovez will be coming to Delhi in the next two days and will give his draft of the 4th instrument to both Pakistan and Afghan Foreign Ministers so that they can examine it before meeting in Geneva on May 5. He explained that ground rule for the Geneva Conference was that no country would give its draft. Hence the Afghan draft is being redrafted by Cordovez to be given to both countries as his draft.

6. He saw some positive signs at this stage.

7. He would be having detailed discussions on Afghanistan when he meets Chairman (PPC) on 17th. He added that if necessary Foreign Secretary, Niaz Niak, would have a special meeting with Foreign Secretary on Afghanistan.

During the discussions, Yaqub Khan mentioned that Pakistan did not wish to increase friction with India and had decided not to comment on charges regarding nexus between Pakistan and Sri Lanka or issue a rejoinder on statements regarding Pakistan’s nuclear programme as they felt this would further vitiate the relations between the two countries.

EAM, in response, made the following points:

1. Reaffirmed desire for friendly and cooperative relations with Pakistan on the basis of sovereign equality, non-interference and mutual trust.

2. It was the Prime Minister’s policy to improve relations with all neighbours particularly Pakistan.

3. We have always considered a stable Pakistan in our interest. It is our hope that Pakistan would also consider a stable and united India to be in their interest.
4. As regards Pakistan’s assistance to terrorists several concrete instances/evidence/lists had been provided to Pakistan from time to time. He drew his attention to recent statements made by the Chief Minister of Punjab, Sardar Surjit Singh Barnala, in which he mentioned that much of the trouble was being created by terrorists being sent from Pakistan rather than those who had been released from jails. Similarly, reference was made to the statement in Parliament by the Minister of State for Internal Security regarding training camps and other assistance being given by Pakistan to extremists.

5. The Punjab issue is being settled in India in accordance with democratic norms and by a government elected by the people of Punjab. It will be desirable if no assistance is given to extremists by Pakistan.

6. The same point was made to the British Foreign Secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, during his recent visit to India.

7. There is no objection in principle to the meeting of the Joint Commission but dates for this can only be considered after the two sub-Commissions and the meeting of senior officials on trade has taken place. Pakistan has to suggest dates.

Joint Secretary (AP)
Call on Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi by Sahebzada Yakub Khan Foreign Minister of Pakistan.

New Delhi, April 17, 1986. (1645 hrs.)

PRIME MINISTER’S OFFICE

Pakistan’s Foreign Minister called on PM on the 17th April. He conveyed warm greetings from President Zia and Prime Minister Junejo which PM reciprocated.

Mr. Yakub Khan said that the press in both countries distorts the reality of the relations between India and Pakistan. It is true that there is a certain amount of deceleration, but he was not too pessimistic. There has been a delay on Pakistan side on some matters.

PM said that we should have a frank and informal talk and evaluate from where we started and where we stand now and how to proceed further. This should be done in a constructive spirit and not in the spirit of recrimination.

Yakub Khan said he fully agreed with PM. There should be sincere sensitivity for each other’s point of view. PM said that we prefer to have a strong Govt. in Pakistan. It is in the long term interest of India. Yakub Khan said that PM has shown great courage of leadership. He referred to the conditions in Pakistan in 1971 and said that at that time the public opinion in West Pakistan was strongly in favour of military action against East Pakistan. He himself was one of the very few who held a different view. General Yahya Khan acted on the strength of that public opinion, but the same public opinion later on condemned Yahya Khan. True leadership demands that the leaders sometimes have to lead and direct the public opinion instead of being always led by it. He added that he admired PM in this respect.

Yakub Khan said that there have been some procedural difficulties in fixing the dates for meetings of sub-Commissions I & II. There have been personnel changes in Pakistan. All these problems will be smoothened out and dates fixed in the near future. Thereafter the Joint Commission can meet.

Yakub Khan said that they in Pakistan are sincerely concerned over PM’s concerns about Pakistan. Yakub Khan said that he knows that PM believes in what he says. What is important is PM’s perception rather than reality. He had spoken to both the intelligence agencies. He told them that “even if we have to lie, we must know the truth first”. Both the agencies had confirmed to him that they (are) not doing anything. The question is how to bridge this gap of misperception. He is open to any suggestion. India could interrogate Pak agencies concerned.
As a Govt. there is no strategic decision in Pakistan, there cannot be any, to fish in East Punjab it would be a folly of the highest order.

On Kashmir also, the Minister said, India need have no anxieties. The item on funds for liberation of Kashmir was ridiculous. If the Pakistan Govt. really wanted to liberate Kashmir, it was hardly likely to give any publicity to it.

The Minister assured PM that Pakistan remains fully committed to the spirit of the Simla Agreement.

On Afghanistan, the Minister said that he had briefed Shri Parthasarathi about the latest situation in complete confidence. There are signs to feel a little more positive or optimistic. Cordovez would be coming to Delhi on the 18th.

PM suggested that the Minister may have another round of talks with EAM. (This took place today.)

Summary Record of the discussions between Chairman of the Policy Planning Committee of the Ministry of External Affairs G. Parthasarathy and Pakistan Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan.

New Delhi, April 17, 1986.

The Foreign Minister of Pakistan Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, accompanied by Pak FS Niaz Naik and Ambassador Humayun Khan, called on Chairman (PPC) at 1600 hours on 17th April. FS and JS (AP) were also present during the meeting. The discussions mainly revolved around Afghanistan.

Sahabzada Yaqub Khan informed Chairman (PPC) that the UN Secretary General’s Special Envoy Cordovez would be coming to New Delhi on 18th April with a draft for the 4th Instrument (dealing with relationships) which would be shown to Foreign Ministers of Pakistan and Afghanistan. During Cordovez’s recent visits to Kabul and Islamabad the Afghanistan side had given a draft for the 4th Instrument, which was rather surprising because generally Afghanistan and Pakistan refrained from giving draft of any document to Cordovez who prepared draft documents himself on the basis of inputs received from the two sides. Cordovez had shown to Pakistan the draft document given by the Afghan side but it had been rejected by Pakistan because Afghanistan had given this draft document to Cordovez against the ground rules of these talks and also because the contents of the Afghan draft were unacceptable.

When Chairman enquired about the contents of the draft document given by Afghanistan to Cordovez, Yaqub Khan said that these talks were confidential but, nevertheless, Pakistan wanted to keep India informed about the progress of the negotiations. He informed Chairman (PPC) that the Afghan draft envisaged an absurdly long time-frame of 4 years for the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan. This time-frame was unrealistic and unreasonable, and, therefore, unacceptable to Pakistan. Cordovez’s shuttle diplomacy, however, managed to overcome the impasse that had developed over the format of the Geneva talks. This impasse had developed because of the insistence of the Afghan side that the 4th document could be finalized only through direct talks between Pakistan and Afghanistan. This was not acceptable to Pakistan which took the position that if the other three documents could be more or less settled through proximity talks, there was no reason why the 4th document should also not be settled through similar talks. Yaqub Khan went on to say that if Pakistan entered into direct talks with Afghanistan even before Geneva talks had reached a successful conclusion it would involve Pakistan conferring legitimacy upon the Karmal regime without gaining anything in return. He said that after a settlement had been worked out through the Geneva talks, Pakistan was ready not only to engage in direct talks with Afghanistan but was also ready to sign a bilateral agreement with whichever Government was in power in Kabul at that time. Yaqub Khan added that as a result of Cordovez’s shuttle diplomacy it was agreed that Geneva-VII would commence on 5th May as proximity talks. However, once the documents were ready Pakistan was ready to enter into direct talks with Afghanistan. He also said that it was Pakistan’s understanding that there would not be an 8th round of Geneva talks; the seventh round would be the last round. If Geneva-VII was interrupted, it would be resumed at a later date.

When Chairman (PPC) enquired whether the Afghan draft envisaged phased withdrawal of Soviet troops, Yaqub Khan first said that he was not sure because he “had not studied the Afghan draft very carefully”. However, after consulting Niazi Naik, he confirmed that the Afghan draft involved withdrawal in phases: about 1/3rd or so of the troops were to be withdrawn in the first year and this process was to be completed in 4 years. He also added that Gorbachev had also talked of phased withdrawal of Soviet troops.
Yaqub Khan went on to say that Pakistan was going to the next round of Geneva talks with optimism and a constructive attitude. However, since it was dealing with a super power it had to exercise some caution. He asserted that Pakistan did not want to become an instrument of either super power. He said that it was at times argued that the USA was putting pressure on Pakistan to slow down the Geneva talks, but if USA wanted to sabotage these talks, instead of bullying Pakistan, it could have easily obstructed the finalisation of draft document relating to international guarantees. The draft document regarding international guarantees had already been approved by both the USA and the USSR and the document was also acceptable to Pakistan. This document could, therefore, be regarded as more or less settled, Yaqub Khan said. He added that while Pakistan was keeping in close touch with the USA regarding Geneva talks, it had also kept its diplomatic channels open with the Soviet Union.

Remarking that India was very keen that these talks should succeed, Chairman (PPC) asked whether Cordovez would be bringing a fresh draft to New Delhi. The Pak FM said that Cordovez would have prepared his draft on the basis of the Afghan draft and Pakistan’s response to that draft. He acknowledged that the views of Pakistan and Afghanistan on the time-frame were still widely apart; while the Afghan side had proposed withdrawal of Soviet troops in 4 years, Pakistan had in mind a time-frame of 4-6 months.

In response to a query from Chairman (PPC), Yaqub Khan confirmed that Pakistan envisaged the return of Afghan refugees to Afghanistan during this time-frame of 4-6 months. Chairman (PPC) remarked that these refugees would be going back with their antagonism towards the Afghan Government and the situation at that time would be rather tricky. Yaqub Khan admitted that this would be a major problem. He also said that Pakistan had to consult the refugees. He felt that it would not be possible for the present Government to survive. However, Pakistan had informed the Soviet Union that it recognized that whatever Government came to power in Kabul should be friendly to the Soviet Union. At the same time, the USA also wanted neutralization of Afghanistan. There was need for setting up some kind of re-conciliation Government in Kabul which was acceptable both to the Afghans and the Soviet Union.

When enquired about the modalities for the return of refugees to Afghanistan, the Pak PM said that he recognized that it would be a messy affair unlike the withdrawal of Soviet troops which could be a neat surgical operation. He added that the 3rd instrument worked out through proximity talks provided some role to the UN HCR for the return of refugees. It provided for agreements between Pakistan and the Red Cross as also between Afghanistan and the Red Cross. There was also provision for setting up of a mixed commission to supervise the return of refugees. Chairman (PPC) referred to his experience as the Chairman of the International Control Commission for Indo-China and remarked that it was a very complex operation. Yaqub Khan said that the experience of the International Control Commission for Indo-China would be rather useful in the context of the return of Afghan refugees and asked whether the papers relating to that conference were unclassified. Chairman (PPC) told him that those papers had already been published.

There was a brief exchange of views on the bilateral relations. Yaqub Khan told Chairman (PPC) that the dates of the sub commissions would be finalized soon. He also said that information regarding the inclusion of additional commodities in the list of commodities which could be traded through the private sector would be given to us shortly.

Record of discussion between Foreign Secretary A. P. Venkateswaran and Pakistan Foreign Secretary Niaz A. Naik.

New Delhi, April 18, 1986. (11.45 AM)

The following were present:

1. Foreign Secretary 1. Mr. Niaz A. Naik, Pakistan Foreign Secretary.

Niaz Naik offered his felicitations to the Foreign Secretary on his new appointment and emphasized the vital role which Foreign Secretaries play in bilateral relations between the two countries. He referred to the meeting his Foreign Minister had had with PM the previous day and with EAM and Chairman (PPC). He described the “temporary setback” in relations due to administrative and procedural problems. He hoped that the sub-commissions and meeting of Senior Officials would meet soon as they had expected that the recommendations from their various Ministries would go up to the Pak. Cabinet for approval soon.

He made the following other points:

i) Cultural Agreement: Pakistan Cabinet has approved the Cultural Agreement. It was their feeling that this should be initialled at Foreign Minister's level during the forthcoming Joint Commission meeting and signed during the Prime Minister's meeting by which time a cluster of agreements would be organized.

ii) Agreement on non-attack of nuclear facilities: He mentioned that we could either delete or retain the paragraphs in square brackets.

iii) Friendship Treaty and non-Aggression Pact: He referred to substantial progress made in this respect in the earlier meetings in 1984 and the revised Pakistani formulations on bilateralism and bases given in January, 1986.

iv) Meeting of Defence Secretaries: He regretted that the dates April 15-18 were not convenient to them, but were now suggesting a meeting between May 20-22.

v) Sikh extremists: Pakistan was aware, Niaz Niak said, of India's concerns and perceptions, There was a need to "bridge the gap" between differing perceptions by sitting across the table at any level. He reiterated the proposal for a meeting between Home Secretaries and/or DIB's. (Directors of the Intelligence Bureau of the two countries) The overall supervision could be of the two Ministries of Foreign Affairs. Foreign Secretary mentioned that Pakistan's assistance to extremists was a major hurdle in our efforts to build mutual trust.

Pakistan's Nuclear Programme: Foreign Secretary said that another matter which he wished to discuss with him was the Pakistan's nuclear programme. FS mentioned the following:

i) Reports about the non-peaceful nature of Pakistan's Nuclear Programme have come from their closest friend and ally the USA.

ii) Pakistan is the only country to have received a waiver from the Symington amendment.

iii) A recent report in the London Confidential Economist mentioned that Pakistan is now enriching Uranium beyond 30%.

It was natural for India in view of this, FS added, to feel concerned.
Niaz Niak described Pakistan’s Nuclear Programme as modest and said that they themselves had been surprised at the reports emanating from USA which he attributed to amongst other things, the Jewish lobby. At one stage when he referred to Dr. Kissinger, FS added that Dr. Kissinger would not do anything to hurt Pakistan. Niaz Niak further mentioned that the US media had given undue publicity to the hesitations on nuclear power reactors, safeguards for the Chashma project, clandestine purchases alleged to be made by Pak businessmen some of whom had been acquitted in American and Canadian courts. There was also, he said a fear amongst the Jewish lobby that the R & D in respect of Pakistan’s nuclear programme could be shared with the Arabs. Niaz Niak said that it was a surprising thing that USA should make such allegations despite sophisticated satellites at its disposal. And if Pakistan can continue with its non-peaceful nuclear programme despite those satellites, he said, Pakistan deserves to be given credit. He again mentioned that Pakistan’s programme was peaceful and enrichment of Uranium did not exceed even 5%. He made a reference to the visit of the Pakistan Atomic Energy Chairman Munnir Ahmed Khan to Kalpakkam and hoped that such contacts would continue.

Pakistan – Sri Lanka nexus: Foreign Secretary referred to reports during President Zia’s visit to Sri Lanka of 15,000 Sri Lankan soldiers being trained in Pakistan. Niaz Niak said that the figure did not exceed 300/250 and they were being trained in open institutions, Ambassador Humayun Khan intervened to say that India should not expect Pakistan to have the same viewpoint on the Sri Lanka situation as India. Foreign Secretary said that he had raised the matter because reports about Pakistan’s training Sri Lankan soldiers in large numbers had not been contradicted. In this connection he also referred to the Sri Lanka-Israel connection.

Afghanistan: On Afghanistan F.S. referred to reports about the US decision to give stinger missiles to the Afghan rebels. He said that these can be given only with Pakistan’s assistance or at least if Pakistan was to turn a blind eye. Niaz Niak referred to discussions on Afghanistan with Chairman (PPC) and said that there were different shades of opinion in the US Congress and some of them were responsible for such news publicity. He added that Pakistan had shown “maximum restraint on such inflow. If we did not, things would have been difficult”.

Niaz Niak mentioned that Pakistan had been in touch with the Soviet Union on the Afghan issue both through the Soviet Ambassador in Islamabad and more particularly through Pakistan’s Ambassador Shahid Amin in Moscow. He repeated what Sahabzada Yaqub Khan told Chairman (PPC) that their Ambassador in Moscow Shahid Amin had been kept fully informed as a result of which it was possible for him to be effective in discussing this issue with the Soviets.

China: F.S. requested for a briefing on China and referred to the substantial cooperation between the two countries in various fields. He also referred to reports about 150 Chinese made F-6 aircraft being used in the Pakistan Air Force.

Niaz Niak responded that China had been closely watching Indo-Pak relations and described Chinese policy as one of peace and not one of confrontation.

On Karakoram highway he said that from 1st May it will be open to tourists of third countries at China’s request. The Chinese, he said, have realized the potential of tourists and necessary economic infrastructure (which he described as roads, restaurants etc.) had been built. He described this as a part of China’s strategy of opening up to the outside world.

Hot line: F.S. said that the Hotline established between the foreign secretary’s office and between the Indian Ambassador in Pakistan and between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan were not working due to some procedural problems on the Pakistan side. Niaz Niak agreed to look into it.

   2. Mr. Niaz Niak, Foreign Secretary.

3. JS (AP), MEA

4. Mr. Tariq Alataf, Counselor.

EAM said that he had requested the Pakistan Foreign Minister to come and see him once again so that they could discuss some aspects of our relations. The discussions however began with the Iran-Iraq dispute. It was agreed that complete consensus was not possible on this aspect. As regards the Libyan crisis EAM mentioned that there was a move afoot to send five or seven Foreign Ministers to Tripoli and New York. He asked Sahabzada Yaqub Khan if he would also like to visit. Yaqub Khan mentioned that as EAM will be going, another representative from the same area may not be necessary.

Bilateral Relations:

EAM said that it was not as a complaint but more in sorrow that he was mentioning some aspects of our relations which had not been moving satisfactorily. (At this stage EAM handed over to the Pakistan Foreign Minister the attached note. (not included here))

Pakistan Foreign Minister’s comments on the note given to him

Sahabzada Yaqub Khan made the following comments:

1. He enquired from Pak Foreign Secretary Niaz Niak about 7 Sikhs alleged to be in Pakistan whose return we had sought. Niaz Niak said that their enquiries had revealed that they were not in Pakistan. When Yaqub Khan said that we again check, it was pointed out to him that it had again been done and our information revealed that these seven extremists were still in Pakistan. Yaqub Khan at this stage said that he well make another check.

2. With regard to meeting of Sub-Commissions 1 & 2 he said these should meet in a matter of weeks. He appeared to be a little confused about the meeting of senior officials.
When Niaz Niak gave him the details, he said that this would also meet soon.

3. Kashmir: Yaqub Khan said that the PML Resolution had been superseded by the statement of the Chief Executive (Prime Minister Junejo) of December 28.

4. On minorities he said that Pakistan had some problems because of its concern for Muslims all over. His attention was drawn to the strident statement of Minister of State Murwat. At this stage EAM mentioned that in spite of the systematic destruction of temples in Sind India had restrained from making any statement. Yaqub Khan said that they had taken note of it.

Meeting of Home Secretaries/ DIB’s

EAM mentioned that the President of Pakistan had suggested to the Indian Ambassador that there should be a secret meeting between Home Secretaries and/or DIB’s of the two countries in a third capital to discuss the issues regarding Pakistan’s assistance to terrorist. We were considering the proposal but now, unfortunately the BBC has quoted the Pakistan Foreign Minister referring to this proposal. Earlier the Ambassador of Pakistan had in as early as mid-March mentioned this to Shri Subramaniam Swamy and it had appeared in Indian papers. Our doubts, therefore, have been confirmed in respect of this suggestion. Yaqub Khan was apologetic and said that he was not aware that this proposal was to be treated as a secret one. Ambassador Humayun Khan added that Pakistan had gone public on this long ago. Yaqub Khan said that in view of this, this proposal can be considered later.

Extremist Sikhs appeared on Pakistan sponsored TV programme:

EAM mentioned that on Saturday, March 29, 1986, the Pakistan ethnic television programme on Channel 47 in USA interrupted its normal news programme at 12.30 PM and showed Mr. Baldev Singh, Secretary, Sikh Cultural Centre, New York giving his version of the situation in Punjab. Since the Pakistani programme is wholly financed by the Government of Pakistan it is unfortunately to be presumed that they would have given their approval to Mr. Baldev Singh’s espousing the cause of so-called ‘Khalistan’. Yaqub Khan said that he was not aware of it, will look into it but if it had happened it was due to “local enthusiasm”.

(S.K. LAMBAH)
JOINT SECRETARY (AP)
18.4.1986.
Solarz asked PM for his perspective about Pakistan, in particular after Benazir’s return and the response that she had received from the people. He asked whether return to genuine democracy in Pakistan would be in India’s interests.

PM said that we would very much prefer return of genuine democracy in Pakistan because the people of Pakistan are very positive towards India just as our own people are positive towards people of Pakistan. Democracy will help ease problems. Naturally, there would be the usual allegations, accusations, etc., but less than under military dictatorship.

PM said that he had talked to Zia six times during last year. At the December meeting in New Delhi, a 2-1/2 to 3 months time frame had been drawn up to normalize relations. But Pakistan had suddenly frozen. Junejo had agreed with PM in .Stockholm that Pakistan had slowed down. PM told Junejo that India would be ready whenever Pakistan was ready to resume normal pace. So far there has been no response. Perhaps this was natural since Pakistan was going through a turbulent period. President Zia must be under all kinds of pressures. Benazir is definitely one of the problems for Zia. Some of the noises that he had been making, for example on Kashmir, could and should have been avoided since they make things difficult for us. For example, Pakistan’s budget officially contains a provision of Rs.20 lakhs for the liberation of Jammu Kashmir. President Zia had denied this all along until the December meeting when he admitted it. The amount in itself is not big but the significant thing is that it is openly included in the budget. This kind of thing creates tremendous problems for India in Parliament and in public opinion.

Solarz said that he had just come from Pakistan where President Zia had reaffirmed his interest in normalizing relations with India. Foreign Minister Yakub Khan had told him that improvement of relations with India was a strategic decision for Pakistan. Solarz had dinner with Benazir two nights ago. He had also met her in Washington. She was also equally determined to improve relations with India. She told Solarz that the generational affinity between her and Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi might make things easier. Solarz told PM whether prospects would be better with Benazir.
PM said that he did not know Junejo well. Junejo was still new and was not allowed to operate freely. PM said that we could equally deal with either of them. But Zia would not allow Benazir to come to power. Benazir was still not good enough to throw Zia. She was not pulling all the groups with her so far. Perhaps she might succeed in doing so in future. She may have 30-40 million people with her, but the other side can also mobilize 30-40 million people. She might have to change her methods basically. If she could do that she would be a very good leader. PM repeated that we could equally deal with Zia.

Solarz said that the US has three alternatives in dealing with Pakistan.

1. Benign neglect
2. Encourage the Govt. there to avoid a major confrontation and chaos and re-imposition of martial law
3. Encourage Benazir to slow down and wait till 1990.

Pakistan’s was a fledging democracy; the martial law had been lifted and elections had taken place.

PM pointed out that Pakistan’s elections were not proper elections like in the US or in India.

Solarz agreed that the elections were not held on party basis, but still they were fair. Zia and Junejo had said that even PPP would be permitted to contest elections if it was properly registered and even to assume power if it won.

PM said that elections in Pakistan could happen like the Bangladesh elections. What was Zia’s perspective if Benazir came to power? She was sworn to revenge.

Solarz said that Benazir had told him in very categorical terms and in the presence of other people that she would not seek revenge for her father’s execution. She would not even insist that Zia should leave before the elections.

PM repeated his view that he did not think that Zia would allow Benazir to come to power.

PM said that the other negative aspect is that Zia and the army always has this feeling that India defeated Pakistan in the Bangladesh war.

Solarz asked PM whether he would like the US to encourage early elections in Pakistan.

PM replied that would help.

Regarding US arms sale to Pakistan, Solarz said that a new six year package has been proposed by the Administration, starting in 1987. The US Congress will have decisive say. So long as the Soviet troops remain in Pakistan (Afghanistan), it would be unrealistic to expect the Congress to reject it. But the Congress could make it clear that the arms were meant only to deal with the threat from the west and must be deployed only on the Afghan border. He asked PM whether such a stipulation would help India.

PM said that it would not make much difference. The fact was that the arms and troops were deployed along borders facing India. But it would help if the type of arms supplied to Pak could be restricted to only those that could be used against the Afghan soldiers. (PM said that A 10 would have been better for use against Afghanistan border.) The stinger missiles appear even on our borders.

The US Ambassador said that Pakistan had denied the report about stingers. Solarz suggested that perhaps there would be some advantage for India if it is clearly laid down in the legislation that the arms were for use only against threat from Afghanistan. PM wondered whether it would not be much better if the Soviets were made to pull out their troops faster from Afghanistan.

Solarz said that at the last round of proximity talks in Geneva, the Soviets had proposed a four-year period for withdrawal. They were prepared to reduce the period to 3-1/2 years. Yaqub Khan had felt incensed and had threatened to walk out. The Afghan people would never accept a 3 or 4 year time limit. Except the question of time frame and who will verify the various agreements; all other issued had been settled. The agreement had been reached on the instruments on mutual respect and non-interference, on US and Soviet guarantees regarding non-interference and non-assistance to the Mujahideen in the context of an overall settlement and on return of refugees. But the key instrument is the one on withdrawals. Pakistan had proposed a 3-6 month time frame which it was prepared to extend to 9 months and conceivably to one year, but no more. Afghanistan had proposed joint verification by Afghanistan and Pakistan, but Pakistan wanted UN supervision. Coming back to the US arms supplies to Pakistan, Solarz repeated that so long as the Soviet troops were in Afghanistan, the Congress could not turn down the arms request. But the Congress could make it clear in the legislation that the arms were to be used only on Afghan border.

PM said that that would not make a material difference. But if the Congress could limit the types of arms to be supplied, that would be of help. For example, the legislation could specify that only those arms which could be used in that particular terrain should be supplied. Solarz said that he would strongly try for that.
Turning to the nuclear issue, Solarz said he understood reasons why India would not sign the NPT or accept Pakistan's proposals on nuclear weapon free zone or on bilateral inspections. He asked whether PM could consider bilateral agreement with Pakistan undertaking not to explode nuclear devices and not to develop nuclear weapons. PM said we could think about it. PM added that we have known from a very high source in the US Administration that the US is convinced that Pakistan is developing the weapon capability and that the US could not prevent it.

Solarz said that his own impression, following high level briefing in Washington, was that Pakistan is proceeding fast towards the capability to produce fissile material, but Pakistan has not built a weapon yet. Pakistan does not have any present intention to make weapons, but has either already crossed Rubicon or will do so fairly soon as far as fissile material production is concerned, Pakistan has sufficient capacity at Kahuta. Pakistan would then be in a position to make several “bombs. This would surely be a matter of major concern to India. Under the US laws, all aid would be stopped if Pakistan either exploded or possessed a nuclear device.

PM asked him as to why could the Congress not withdraw the waiver of Symington Amendment.

Solarz said that they might do that, but there would be a major controversy around it. If the Congress does not withdraw the waiver, it would be because it would complicate the US Afghan policy. The US has managed to induce Pak not to explode a device so far, but the US cannot stop them from collecting fissile material.

PM said that India do not want to get into this race. It would be much too expensive not only in terms of money but also in terms of our entire foreign policy, etc. As far as our own fissile material is concerned, we have used it up in our reactors.

Solarz said that India has un-safeguarded fissile material sufficient to make weapons if it chose to do so. PM had said that India has used up the material. Was not there some way to establish confidence in each other so that Pakistan could be sure that India has no stockpile and India could be sure that Pakistan does not produce fissile material? Neither side would accept the others statement at face value. He asked whether India could prove that it had used up the fissile material. The records could always be doctored.

PM said that it should be possible to establish this point. After all, the scientists would know how much material has been produced and how much used up.

Solarz referred to threat to India from China and said that any arrangement with Pakistan about not stockpiling fissile material could be terminated in case a threat from China develops. India could always invoke state security reasons and inform Pakistan about it. Thus, India would not be permanently closing its option. Solarz added that an offer of this kind by India would generate great pressure on the super powers to conclude a comprehensive test ban treaty.

PM suggested that it may be worthwhile for USA to make a counter offer to the Soviet Union in response to Mr. Gorbachev’s various proposals for disarmament. This way the onus could be shifted on to the Soviet Union. It would also give the Six Nations something to shout about. India did not want to embarrass the US. But Gorbachev readily agrees with whatever the Six Nations propose and even more than that. Solarz said that it was a very constructive suggestion and he would take it back with him to Washington.

Solarz asked PM whether there was any major problem in Indo-US relations. PM said that on the whole the relations are quite good. There had been good progress on several fronts and there was political will on both sides. We were somewhat upset on the Libyan affair. We have no love lost for Col. Gaddafi. He had given money for Pakistan’s nuclear bomb. But what worried India was the fact that the US was getting pushed into taking independent action on its own. The US seems to feel that the whole world is against it. The Americans feel isolated. This was very dangerous not only for the US but for the whole world.

Solarz said that he shared PM’s concerns and asked what should be done if there was compelling evidence.

PM said it was very difficult question to answer. Terrorism had to be tackled politically as well as through tough law and order measures.

Solarz asked whether it made any sense if economic and diplomatic sanctions, and civil aviation boycott were to be imposed. PM answered in the affirmative, but pointed out that the sanctions must apply to everyone and there should be no double standards. For example no less an organization than BBC had been used to announce an award of £50,000 for the assassination of the late Prime Minister. What sanctions would be imposed against the BBC?

Solarz informed PM that the US Congress would be adopting tough measures sometime in June imposing sanctions against South Africa. PM welcomed this development.

1107. Aide Memoire handed over to the Pakistan Ambassador in India by the Indian Foreign Secretary regarding exchange of security prisoners.

New Delhi, May 28, 1986.

The Protocol of Consular Access signed between India and Pakistan on 2nd November, 1982, covers the question of exchange of civilian prisoners between the two governments; the Protocol, however, does not cover the security prisoners detained in both the countries. In the past, the question of the exchange of security prisoners has also been separately taken up and a few notes also exchanged.

2. Attention of the Government of Pakistan is invited to their note No. Ind/4-1-35/82-85 dated 10th April, 1986 regarding exchange of the three Pakistani prisoners, Syed Zulfikar Ali, Syed Tariq Masood and Mohammad Siddiqui, against three Indian prisoners, Roshan Lal Jalla, Mangat Ram and Lachman Singh, son of Rur Singh. As a meaningful move in this direction, to bring about an exchange of security prisoners, the Government of Pakistan is requested to convey its approval for the exchange of prisoners mentioned above. The stand taken by the Government of Pakistan that Lachman Singh is a condemned prisoner and hence not available for repatriation, is not sustainable in view of the fact that Lachman Singh was offered for exchange by the Government of Pakistan itself in 1980.

3. It may be pertinent to mention that in contrast to the practice followed by Pakistan of condemning security prisoners, as against the Indian practice where there is no such punishment meted out to security prisoners, condemned prisoners should also be considered for exchange against these prisoners in India who have been sentenced to long-term imprisonments, since charges framed against them would be on similar lines for similar offences.

4. Further, many of the Pakistani long-term prisoners in India are likely to be detained for a longer period since there are other cases/charges also pending against them. In view of this, long-term Pakistani prisoners in India have to be treated on par with condemned Indian prisoners in Pakistan.

5. The question of the release and repatriation of Mr. Ravindra Kaushik is now pending with the Government of Pakistan. As conveyed earlier, it is requested that Mr. Kaushik may be repatriated on humanitarian grounds. The Government of Pakistan may on its part like to suggest a suitable Pakistani prisoners whom they desire to have in exchange of Mr. Ravindra Kaushik Letter from the Embassy of India to the Ministry of External Affairs regarding Ambassador's meeting with Agha Hilaly, former Foreign Secretary of Pakistan.

Islamabad, October 13, 1986.

Ambassador of India
Islamabad

No. ISL/AMB/287/86 13 October, 1986

My Dear F.S.

Agha Hilali’s name is not new to you. He is the elder brother of former Foreign Minister Agha Shahi. He was Pakistan’s High Commissioner in Delhi; Foreign Secretary of Pakistan; has been used by President Zia, off and on, as his Special Envoy. You may recall his rumpus in Geneva in the UN Human Rights Commission, with Shri Bali Ram Bhagat.

2. He lives in Karachi; and visits Islamabad from time to time for attending meetings of the various quasi-official originations where he is a member of the Boards of Governors or Directors. He insisted on seeing me today, just before returning to Karachi.

3. He began by protesting a little too much, and a little too shrilly, that he was talking to me on his own and not on behalf of Zia or the Foreign Minister. However, as the conversation went on, one was able to recognize bits and pieces of one’s own remarks in recent talks with Foreign Secretary Abdul Sattar, and/or President Zia. Indeed towards the end of our discussion he pretty nearly confessed that during the last three days he had met all the major policy makers in the area of Indo-Pak relations.

4. He was with me for almost two hours. He covered almost all major facets of Indo-Pak relations, including the internal situation in Pakistan which should not be ignored. The principal aspects covered were: the nose-dive that Indo-Pak bilateral relations have taken recently; P.M’s Harare statement; various allegations and innuendos suggesting Pakistan’s complicity in the assassination attempt against our leaders made at Rajghat on October 2; the role of our Consulate General in Karachi in the deterioration of our relations; prospects of the re-opening of Indo-Pak trade; recent Pakistani pronouncements on the Kashmir issue; internal situation in Pakistan, and the role of the Pakistani bureaucracy and military hierarchy in this; Zia-Junejo relations.

5. I must not inflict upon you the tiresome details of this discussion; what he said and what I said. Suffice it to say that the discussion was brisk, animated and frank. No conclusions were arrived at. Towards the end when he found that he had not been able to persuade me to accept his thesis he suggested that both sides must stop making mutually damaging, critical and accusatory statements. Then we can patiently wait for the internal situations in the two countries improving.

6. I must catalogue certain important points which were made:

(i) Zia had felt personally hurt by PM’s Harare statement. During the hijacking drama, while both PM and Zia were in Harare, Zia made a conscious effort to show his sincerity, and deference to PM, by keeping him fully informed and briefed as frequently as possible. Several of his advisers there, and his critics at home, then, and later, have tended to blame him for having behaved with PM as a ‘vassal’ and not as a self-respecting Head of State. After PM’s Harare statement, Zia felt that perhaps his attitude of sincerity had been mistaken by India as a sign of weakness.

(ii) As Indo-Pak relations have deteriorated the political lobby in Pakistan which favours revival of the Kashmir issue as an ‘active dispute’, has gathered strength and momentum. (I told him that his statement was factually wrong; and that even a casual check would demonstrate that all this was deliberately started by Resolution of 16 January 1986 on Kashmir. That this was passed under the Chairmanship of Prime Minister Junejo, and the day before Foreign Secretary R. Bhandari’s arrival in Islamabad should make everything clear to everybody). He said that while our relations remain as poor as they are today the lobby of Pakistani diehards for the liberation of Kashmir will get stronger. Much against my wishes, I told him that in that case we will have the patience to wait for a couple of centuries for their impatience to settle down.

(iii) They count Chairman, Policy Advisory Committee, Shri G. Parthasarthy; Minister of State Shri K. Natwar Singh; and yourself as amongst those who feel that friendship with Pakistan is neither necessary nor a desirable policy. I tried to persuade him that this assessment is wrong, and that the facts on which they base it even wronger. I reminded him of all that Shri Parthasarthy and Shri K. Natwar Singh had tried to do as Envoys to Pakistan, of his own friendship with them etc. and as regards you, I said that you were objective and brought to this issue an unprejudiced objectivity and freshness of views. He replied that President Zia felt that in the earlier period of his administration, our present Prime Minister had been following his own instincts but now certain strongly anti-Pakistani advisers had surrounded him.
(iv) The Zia-Junejo tensions were relieved somewhat in April and May’86 by the return to Pakistan of Benazir. This had brought Zia and Junejo back together. But it has always been a curious co-existence. Each one knows that he may not survive without the goodwill of the other. Pir of Pagaro’s influence on Junejo is anti-Zia. Their two personalities and their wave-lengths are very different one from the other. Junejo is fiercely hostile to civil servants who, he feels have ignored or defied him; or shown greater deference to Zia than to himself. Niaz Naik was a victim of this. But for assiduous pleading by Zia, on his behalf, he would not even have got Paris. Sattar apparently maintains equi-distance, or a show of equal loyalty and equal deference to both these two principals.

(v) On the Sikh issue, several of Zia’s advisers feel that India expects too much from them, and demands too much. As an example he mentioned our having sought, at PM’s level, the return of Dr Arjinder Pal Singh Sekhon. Zia’s initial response had been sympathetic and positive. But then he found all this would lead to complications and he wriggled out of it. Pakistan, said Hilaly, must never be made to feel that India treats her “as a Provincial Government within the sub-continental system”. New Delhi should never appear to order Pakistan around. Some Pakistan policy makers feel that India treats them with scant respect; and their gestures of friendliness are given no credit. India makes demands and when these are not met India gets peevish, irritable, often angry. I told him that occasionally we find it difficult to make Pakistanis take Pakistan seriously; so full of psychological complexes they appear to be.

(vi) He ended by saying; “Please help us by persuading your leaders and your Government to stop involving us in all your troubles – Khalistani extremists in Punjab; assassination attempts against your leaders; by your home grown terrorists; a tragedy like the PAN AM hijack attempt etc.” Let us wait for greater political clarity on both sides; and in the meanwhile cease fire in respect of anti-each-other public statements and propaganda.

7. I have been getting similar impressions from other important sources. I think time may be coming for us to sit down with them, on an authoritative level, to settle a few ground-rules. I should be grateful for your comments and instructions.

Yours sincerely

(S.K. Singh)

Shri A.P. Venkteswaran,
Foreign Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi
Pakistan has deplored the logic of the rationale given by India for the construction of the naval base on its Arabian Sea coast, a Foreign Office spokesman said at Islamabad on October 29, 1986.

Briefing newsmen at the weekly Press briefing, the Spokesman said that as one of the neighbours, Pakistan could not be fooled by India's self-serving logic which could not conceal the design formulated by Indian strategists to control the ocean from Aden to the Straits by constructing such a huge base, the third such towards south of Pakistan.

Answering questions on the possible implications for Pakistan the spokesman said the Pakistan government had lodged no protest and raised no hue or cry over this because every country has the sovereign right to build such base on its territory.

The spokesman said the naval base, which would be third, the two others being at Bombay and Cochin, would be the most sophisticated and would cost India about Rs.17 billion.

Favourite Indian Bogey

He recalled that while speaking at the ground breaking ceremony, Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi had sought to justify the Indian naval build up by resorting to the favourite Indian bogey. “He would like the people of India and the world to believe that India has to build the third base, south of Pakistan, because Pakistan is to acquire some ships,” the spokesman said, adding, “what we may acquire is yet to be decided.”

But, he said, India had already obtained another carrier and several frigates and submarines, professing all the time its commitment to making the Indian Ocean a zone of peace.

Asked a comment on India’s denial about grant of permanent facilities to Soviet Navy Ships at an Indian port, the spokesman said there was certain mystery about this between India and the Soviet Union. “Our statement was based on the information that we had received,” he said.

Sikh Agitation

Replying to another question, the spokesman said that in spite of Islamabad’s requests, India never supplied list of names of those persons whom New Delhi either detained or allegedly killed, for illegal border crossing, alleging that they were Pakistanis involved in the Sikh agitation in Indian Punjab.

The spokesman reiterated that Pakistan did not provide refuge or assistance to any Indian Sikh who might be involved in the agitation in India. Not even a single Pakistani had been identified by the Indian government in response to the Pakistan government’s query, the spokesman said.

1110.  Press Conference of Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo on his return to Islamabad after his meeting with the Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi on the sidelines of the SAARC Summit.

Islamabad, November 17, 1986.

Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo on November 17 expressed his satisfaction over his talks with Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi in Bangalore on the occasion of the second SAARC summit.

Addressing a Press conference on his return from Bangalore after leading Pakistanis delegation to the summit, he described his discussions with Mr. Gandhi as purposeful and said these would no doubt serve to clear the air between the two countries.

Talking in the context of slowing down of process of normalization of ties between the two countries, he said in recent months the relations between the two had suffered a setback on account of certain ill-founded misgivings.
However, he said Pakistan attached great importance to its relations with India and wanted to improve them further.

On Good-Neighbourly Relations

He said that Pakistan remained committed to seeking good neighbourly relations and cooperative bonds between the two countries. “I am confident that given political will and sincerity of commitment we can achieve this objective,” he said.

He said that Pakistan earnestly hoped that the Indian leadership would respond to Pakistan’s various initiatives. “Together in peace and harmony we should be able to defuse tension and create suitable climate for accelerating the process of normalization between India and Pakistan to the mutual benefit of their peoples,” he added.

About his meeting with Mr. Gandhi, he said they had met a second time after his first contact with him in Stockholm in March last. During their over an hour’s meeting in Bangalore they discussed almost all matters of bilateral interest in a frank and cordial atmosphere. He found him friendly, affable and responsive, Mr. Junejo remarked.

Resumption of Indo-Pak Dialogue

He said that at his meeting with Mr. Gandhi, he emphasized the importance of resumption of the suspended Indo-Pak dialogue and recalled the proposals Pakistan had already made in that direction.

Both the sides, according to him, agreed that there were a number of difficult and delicate issues but both had to persevere in efforts for better understanding.

Besides, they also recognized the need for cooperation in measure to be taken by both sides to seal the border against smugglers, drug traffickers, terrorists, criminals and illegal immigrants.

Mr. Junejo said Foreign Minister of the two countries also held two rounds of talks. The Foreign Secretaries of Pakistan and India also met separately. This gave him and the Foreign Minister and the Foreign Secretary an opportunity to have extensive and in-depth discussions on bilateral issues with India.

On Indian Troop Deployment

Answering a volley of questions about recent large-scale Indian troop deployment on Pakistan’s border, he said Mr. Gandhi categorically denied such a large-scale movement of Indian troops.

He told newsmen that he had also taken notice of such a movement which was played up by foreign media. This naturally caused concern to the government, as well as the people of Pakistan.

He said during his meeting with Mr. Gandhi this issue also came up for discussion, besides other matters. Mr. Gandhi had told him that there was no substance in such reports. There was no unusual movement of Indian troops, he told him and added that normally Indian army went for winter exercises during this time of the year but troop movement even for this purpose were yet to take place. He had to accept this assurance of Mr. Gandhi, Mr. Junejo said.

Adherence to Existing Understanding

He said the Indian Prime Minister had also assured him that for an unusual troop movement existing understanding of prior notification by either side would be adhered to at local commanders’ level.

Mr. Junejo said in his address to the SAARC summit he had made a suggestion for prior notification of troop movement of significant nature by member countries to one another.

He replied in the affirmative when asked if Mr. Gandhi also raised the question of acquisition of Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) by Pakistan from the USA.

He said he told Mr. Gandhi that Pakistan needed such a surveillance system in view of situation on its western borders. Talks were still continuing with the USA for the acquisition of such a system, about which a decision had yet to be taken.

On Drug Trafficking

He told a questioner that the issue of drug trafficking also had come up for discussion in his meeting with Mr. Gandhi. Pakistan, he had told him was seriously tackling this problem and had curtailed poppy-growing to a great extent.

He told another questioner that the matter regarding posting of observers to watch troop movements on the common border between India and Pakistan was not broached by any side.

Questioned if the Kashmir issue was also touched at his meeting with Mr. Gandhi the Prime Minister replied, “Yes”.

He said he had told him in very clear-cut terms that this question had to be resolved in accordance with the Simla Agreement.

Mr. Junejo agreed with a questioner that during the recent past in skirmishes on the cease-fire line, there had been civilian causalities on the Pakistan side. Pakistan would not tolerate such a happening, he said.

On Training of Sikh Terrorists

In replying to another question he said Mr. Gandhi had also brought to his notice the issue of training of Sikh terrorists by Pakistan. He denied this and told him that Pakistan had a similar grouse against India of sending subversive elements to Sind.

They agreed that both the countries should discuss this matter at experts’ level to find the truth behind such allegations and counter allegations.

The Prime Minister was flanked by Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan and Information and Broadcasting Minister, Ch. Shujaat Hussain at his Press conference.
Saarc Summit an Outstanding Success

He also said that the second summit was an outstanding success. He said the declaration of the summit reflected the determination of the members to collectively seek a better future for the people of South Asia.

The two-day summit which concluded earlier on November 17 reaffirmed a commitment to regional cooperation, he added.

The summit declaration bears eloquent testimony to our determination to effectively carry forward the process of regional cooperation, he said.

Expressing his satisfaction with the summit, he said he was sure it would help create better understanding among the members. Solid steps had been suggested to strengthen cooperation which would augur well for the people of South Asia.

1111. \textit{SECRET}

Note by Ambassador S. K. Singh summarising the discussions he had with External Affairs Minister.

New Delhi, November 22, 1986.

Ministry of External Affairs

As desired by EAM, I summarise below, the points I mentioned to him on November 22, 1986.

(i) The Secretary level meeting in Lahore in early December 1986 will require somewhat detailed preparation. We will need to think out our strategy on all these complex issues: controlling illicit crossings; drug trafficking; smuggling; and terrorism along the border. We also need to determine before the meetings with Pakistan, what precise objective we seek to achieve;

(ii) The Foreign Secretary level meeting, before the end of December 1986, will deal with the normalization process between the two countries. Before getting into this we should recognize that the current internal political situation in Pakistan is such as not to permit that country to take any hard or firm decision;
Our negotiations need to receive political level guidance about the use of the Pakistan factor during the forthcoming State Assembly Elections; more specially in the state of Jammu & Kashmir, Haryana, Himachal Pradesh and Kerala;

Between December 17, 1985 (when P.M. had received President Zia in Delhi), and now the internal political situation in Pakistan has become blurred, as the country is passing through a period of internal political flux. Junejo’s party, the Pakistan Muslim League is cohesive neither in the Centre nor in the four Provincial State Assemblies. Punjab (accounting for 58% of the population and 60% of the resources of the entire country) is going through a period of political uncertainty. In both Sind and NWPF, the law and order situation has deteriorated. Zia–Junejo personal equation has several question marks around it. The two mass-based parties Banezir Bhutto’s PPP and Khan Abdul Wali Khan’s ANP out side the Government, show signs of fraying at the edges. For the present, however, Zia’s hold over the armed forces is firm and unchallenged. Once this changes, the situation will deteriorate visibly;

The dilemma of the Pakistan – U.S. relations is that while Pakistan Government elite and bureaucratic – military establishment are delighted to be dependant upon the USA, Pakistani masses are suspicious of and hostile to the USA;

Americans in Pakistan confess that they need Pakistan more than Pakistan needs the USA. The principal reasons for this are: (a) USA must have Pakistan’s total support and commitment for their Afghanistan policy. This includes also the U.S. policy vis-à-vis Soviet Central Asia; (b) the Gulf and West Asia policies of the USA, are dependant, to an extent, upon Pakistani armed, personnel (or mercenaries) serving in that region; 27,000 Pakistani soldiers are stationed in Saudi Arabia alone, and another 10 to 12 thousand scattered all over the rest of that region; (c) Indian Ocean Policy of the USA also insists on the availability of the Karachi Port and Qassim and Gwadur Ports; (d) storage facilities in Pakistan are essential for the heavy equipment, arms and ammunition for the use of US Central Command personnel.

Pakistan has gone back on its word to India, between December 1985 and now, on two issues. President Zia had said in his Press Conference, at Palam Airport on December 17, 1985 that issues that divide India and Pakistan should be set aside, and cooperation built up on issues that can bring us together. Further that Kashmir problem should be settled in due course, and on the basis of Simla Agreement. Even before a full month had passed, Prime Minister Junejo had erased this statement through passing a Muslim League Resolution stating that the Kashmir problem demands an early solution on the basis of the U.N. Resolutions. Similarly, the Agreed Minutes signed by the two Finance Ministers (Shri Vishwanath Pratap Singh and Dr. Mububual Haq) on 10th January 1986 laid down specifically that a delegation of senior Secretaries from Pakistan would visit India within a month i.e. before February 10. This has not happened until now. This delegation was to have expanded the list of items for trading between the private sectors of the two countries; discuss and settle infrastructure for trade (payment arrangements; clearance arrangements; banking; transportation, including civil aviation, shipping etc; communications including telex, direct telephone dialing etc.) and establish one joint venture on either side within 12 months. Pakistan has avoided doing anything on all these aspects. They have been asking us to negotiation and settle the trading list in the sub-commission on Trade and Economic Cooperation. The obvious question that arises in our mind is, How serious is Pakistan in making commitments to us? What we need to pursue is not an expanded list of trading items from Pakistan but mutual faith and trust with them. And this needs to be reiterated to them in each of our meeting with them.

3. Perhaps we need to be patient with Pakistan on broader issues. My assessment is that Pakistan does not wish to give up its irredentist posture about Kashmir. The Shariah Concept of a tooth for a tooth and an eye for an eye, makes them yearn for some sort of revenge for 1971. They are not prepared to forget 1971. They insist on parity with India on as many aspects as possible. Their constant thirst for sophisticated American arms and equipment, latest generation lethal weapons, and nuclear weapons capability all stem from this quest for parity. We will, therefore, need to be patient, perhaps even for some more decades.

4. In the meanwhile, however, India must continue to try to be both generous and understanding on aspects of every day co-existence with them as neighbours. People to people contacts; easier visa policies; closer and expanding cultural exchanges; expanded transport and communication links, all these must be encouraged. It is along this line of thinking that we should insist on building up a genuine and continuing, ever expanding relationship of economic cooperation with them.

Summary record of the meeting convened by the External Affairs Minister on Home Secretary’s visit to Pakistan for discussing Indo – Pakistan cooperation in controlling illicit crossing, drug trafficking and terrorism along the border.

New Delhi, December 9, 1986.

EAM convened a meeting in his Office at 7.00 P.M. on 9.12.86 regarding the Home Secretary’s visit to Pakistan in order to discuss Indo-Pak Co-operation for controlling illicit crossing, drug trafficking, smuggling and terrorism along the border.

2. A list of those present is appended. (not included here)

3. Home Secretary explained that on each of the issues to be discussed namely, drug trafficking, smuggling, terrorism and illicit crossing, he proposed to present to the Pakistan side an AIDE MEMOIRE detailing our misgivings and making concrete suggestions for action to ameliorate the situation. Draft copies of each Aide Memoire were distributed for perusal during the meeting. In regard to the Aide Memoire on terrorism a view was expressed that on account of the paucity of concrete evidence, it may perhaps be better to confine oneself to an oral discussion of the issue rather than to present an Aide Memoire. It was, however, felt that on balance, it would be more appropriate to present the Aide Memoire on terrorism as failure to do so could be exploited by Pakistan. Suggestions were made for improvement of each Aide Memoire and particularly that in respect of terrorism. It was decided that redrafted versions of all the Aide Memoire would be put for approval to P.M. prior to the Home Secretary’s departure for Pakistan.

4. Reference was made to the telegram sent by our Ambassador in Islamabad alerting us to the possibility of the Pakistani side suggestions during the visit that Indo-Pak Border Ground Rules should be reformulated. It was noted that while Pakistan had merely wanted to update the 1960-61 Ground Rules and to retain the military provisions of these rules, we had consistently maintained that the Ground Rules of 1960-61 were no longer valid following the 1971 conflict. We were not in favour of retaining the military provisions of these Ground Rules as these went against us. We had, however, formally proposed to Pakistan that we were ready to cooperate in drawing up a framework for dealing with border problems like straying of cattle, smuggling, unauthorized movement of nationals of either country across the border, border crimes etc. It was felt that in case this issue was raised, we may reiterate our position on these lines and should not in any case agree to the Ground Rules of 1960-61.
5. On the suggestions of Director General (Revenue Intelligence), it was decided that we should ask our Ambassador in Pakistan to request the Pakistan side to include his counterpart in the delegation.

6. It was decided that Home Secretary and Foreign Secretary should see the video film which had been prepared on terrorism with a view to decide whether the same should be shown to the Pakistani side.

7. There was a detailed discussion on the Pakistani proposal of joint patrolling. It was felt that in case the Pakistanis made this proposal we should elicit fuller details of the same in the first instance and in any case propose intensified patrolling by them. There was also a detailed discussion on whether or not we should offer to the Pakistanis the possibility of their examining terrorists who had been interrogated by us. It was decided that this offer should not be made but in case the Pakistanis made such a request we could indicate that this would be considered by us.

8. The meeting terminated at 8.45 p.m.

1113. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.
Islamabad, December 19, 1986.

PRIME MINISTER

16 Rabi-us-Sani 1407 AH
19 December 1986

His Excellency,
Mr. Rajiv Gandhi,
Prime Minister of Republic of India,
New Delhi

Dear Prime Minister,

I would like to thank you for the welcome and the hospitality so consistently extended to me and to the members of my delegation during our visit to Bangalore to attend the Second SAARC Summit.
The painstaking arrangements made by the Government of India for the SAARC Conference contributed in no small measure to its success. We have come away impressed by the quiet efficiency at all the functions and the zeal and dedication of all those associated with the organization of the conference.

The Second SAARC Summit was indeed momentous and an important milestone in our common endeavours for expanding regional cooperation. Your Excellency’s contribution to our deliberations and the efficient way in which you presided over the Summit is a tribute to your capability. The retreat to Nandi Hill was as pleasant as it was enjoyable. It provided us almost useful opportunity of an informal exchange of views on matters of common interest.

May I also once again extend my warmest felicitations to your Excellency on your assumption of the Chairmanship of SAARC for the next year. We look forward to working in close conjunction with you in furthering the noble objective of regional cooperation. I take this opportunity to assure Your Excellency that Pakistan will contribute to the fullest extent in the implementation of SAARC programmes.

It is with great pleasure that I recall our most useful meeting on November 16 which enabled us to discuss in a constructive and candid manner, important bilateral issues. I am confident that, given goodwill and mutual understanding, our two countries will generate mutual trust and confidence and pave the way for accelerating the process of normalization. I would also like to reiterate my Government’s commitment to the establishment of good-neighbourly and tension-free relations with India. This would not only serve the best interests of our peoples but would also contribute to regional peace and stability.

We look forward to Your Excellency’s visit to Pakistan both as the Chairman of SAARC and as the Leader of a great neighbouring country with whom we are determined to build bridges of understanding and mutual trust.

Please accept, Excellency, my best wishes for your personal well-being and for the ever growing progress and prosperity of the people of India.

Yours sincerely,

(Sd/-)

4. The talks were held in a cordial and frank atmosphere with both sides reiterating the resolve of their respective Governments to establish good neighbourly and cooperative relations between the two countries on the basis of the principles of peaceful co-existence, namely, sovereign equality, independence, non-interference in each other’s internal affairs, territorial integrity, justice and mutual benefit. They also re-affirmed the commitment of their Governments of the Simla Agreement. They agreed that the problems discussed could find resolution on the basis of good faith and mutual trust.

5. On an issue raised by the Home Secretary of India; the Interior Secretary, Government of Pakistan affirmed that his Government is opposed to all forms of terrorism in Punjab and elsewhere. In this context the Government of Pakistan reiterated that it does not and will not provide any support to terrorist activities directed against India. The Home Secretary, Government of India gave similar assurance in this context.

6. The two sides discussed the entire range of illegal cross-border movements and specific remedial measures such as joint surveillance of the border and a joint mechanism with solemn and binding obligations, on a reciprocal basis, against allowing the use of their respective territories for any acts or activities directed against internal peace, stability and territorial integrity of the other state. They recognized the need for evolving a common approach to resolve this problem.

While agreeing to hold further discussion on these issues, both sides decided, as an immediate step towards controlling illegal border crossings, to strengthen cooperation between their Border Security Forces.

8. The two Secretaries reviewed the situation on the ground as it exists along the border, and agreed that the Ground Rules evolved in 1960-61 need to be reformulated. This Committee will study the two draft proposals in this behalf which had been exchanged in 1981-82 by the two sides, take into account the developments and evolution between then and now and expeditiously draft new ground rules for the consideration of the two Governments.

9. Both sides welcomed the decision taken at the Second SAARC Summit for the establishment of a Technical Committee on Prevention of Drug Abuse and Drug Trafficking in the region. They also reaffirmed their determination to combat this evil on a bilateral level, within the framework of the Joint Ministerial Commission. Both Sides agreed to implement the decision taken at the last meeting of Sub-Commission IV in this regard.

10. It was decided to constitute a Committee to combat narcotic trafficking and smuggling with the following membership:

INDIA: (1) D.G. Narcotics Control Bureau; (2) D.G. Revenue Intelligence; (3) Representative of Border Security Force; (4) Representative of Finance Ministry; (5) Representative from Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Both sides agreed that the Committee will meet periodically in order to evolve a common strategy to undertake concerted action to counter and eliminate these activities and to exchange information relating to drug traffickers and smugglers operating from either side of the land border. The two sides agreed, in this context, to exchange operational information and intelligence. They agreed that information would be supplied which may require follow-up action in either country on a basis of urgency.

11. It was agreed that the two Secretaries shall continue to remain in touch.

1115. [SECRET]

Record of discussions of the meeting between Foreign Secretary A. P. Venkateswaran and Pakistan Minister of State, Zain Noorani.

Islamabad, December 27, 1986.

Foreign Secretary called on Pakistan's Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Zain Noorani, in the latter's office in Islamabad on 27.12.1986. After the usual round of pleasantries, the discussions proceeded on the following lines (A list of these present is appended):

F.S. 2. I would like to convey to you at the outset that we want not just a working relationship with you, but also a friendly relationship. We want to do everything at all levels to build such a relationship and remove the clouds which appear from time to time. For this, I have come here with the blessings of our Prime Minister, Foreign Minister and the entire leadership of the Government of India. Just before this meeting, I had one and a half hours meaningful discussions with my friend Mr. Abdul Sattar, the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan. We had useful discussions on several areas and we will continue these in the afternoon.

Pak MOS. 3. The thing which I would like to ask is that in our bilateral relations, why do we make a little progress and then take some steps backwards? I am sure you must have come with the offer of several Pacts, but my suggestion is that all these Pacts should be shelved. The leaderships of our two countries should not make any statement for one year and this by itself would help to improve the relations.

F.S. 4. I welcome the statement from you, especially since as far as our bilateral relations are concerned, we have always found you to be hitting a lot of sixers.
POLITICAL RELATIONS: 1975-1989

5. Yes, you must also realize that I have to face a lot of googlies.

6. I would like to point out that whenever our Minister of State, Mr. Zain Noorani, has been in charge of this Ministry; none of the adjournment motions which have been tabled have been admitted.

7. Yes, none of these have been admitted when I was handling them. Of course, a lot of subjects came up in debates about which there is a lot of concern in our National Assembly and they are always with some basis. (F.S. pointed out that they were rarely with adequate basis).

8. Coming to another subject, I still maintain that your Prime Minister should visit Pakistan. If he can visit so many other countries, then why not Pakistan? If he comes here, he will see how much love and affection people have for him. He could come preferably to sign the Agreement, but even otherwise he could visit us. Don’t you visit your friends?

9. I will certainly convey this to our Prime Minister. Not that he does not want to come but I will convey it to him.

10. Turning to SAARC, I would like to compliment you on the success of the recent SAARC Summit. Please be assured that we will cooperate fully with you in SAARC.

11. Would you be coming for the Kathmandu Conference?

12. Our Foreign Minister will come.

13. I think you will agree with me that the SAARC spirit is there to stay. It has become an enduring feature of this region.

14. Now coming to another matter, I would like you to do something about the frequent allegations about Pakistan which we find your leaders and your press make from time to time. They have said that they would take action for smashing the training camps on our territory. You would never have to worry if there are no training camps on your territory. The recently concluded meetings of Home Secretaries have had a very positive outcome. The release that was issued, said that Pakistan is against all kind of terrorism in Punjab and also elsewhere. This is most important factor in our perceptions of you. As you recall, our former Prime, Minister was assassinated by Sikh terrorists. Our present Prime Minister has also received many threats from terrorists and on 2nd October, an attempt was made on his life. This is a vital matter. I suggested to Mr. Sattar and I again suggest to you - would it be possible for the Government of Pakistan to issue a statement that it is against the concept of Khalistan which is directed against the integrity and sovereignty of a friendly neighbouring country like India. Such a statement from you would be received well in India and it would open up many avenues for you not just as regards bilateral cooperation, but also multilateral cooperation. It would generate an enormous fund of goodwill for Pakistan.

Pak MOS. 16. (Avoiding any direct answer to the question) - How does it help us to assist the Sikhs? Why do you think that it is in our interest to help them in this manner? As regards the assassination attempt on your Prime Minister, we found that the blame was again being put on Pakistan. But think for yourself, if we had really been involved, would we have done it in this way - with a country-made pistol. I will be very frank with you and say that the common man in Pakistan believes that there was no real attempt on your Prime Minister's life and that it was just a stage-managed business to serve as an excuse to make allegations against Pakistan.

17. Again you have been asking us to return some terrorists who you think are in Pakistan. You gave us some lists of Sikhs to be returned to you. These people are not with us. The lists were also most unconvincing and contain just a few common Sikh names without any details or descriptions. Even if these people were in Pakistan, how could we find them without the details being provided? Again you gave us some names of foreign Sikhs from USA, Canada etc. whom you wanted us to prevent from entering Pakistan. We have stopped them and your Embassy knows about the action taken by us in this regard.

18. I am glad that the Home Secretaries' meeting went off well. But look at what all has been written in the Indian press about it. Journalists wrote that you people have shown us videos of the training camps in Pakistan for Sikh terrorists. Did you really show us such videos? All that the videos showed were couple of Sikhs talking during interrogation. You know what we think about such interrogations. But I wonder why such items were put out in your press.

F.S. 19. You should not think that we had officially put out such items. The press does such things on its own.

Pak MOS. 20. It is in the interest of neither India nor Pakistan to have suspicions about one another. Your government talks about normalizing cultural relations, trade etc. All these will not normalize relations if there is a suspicion and bitterness in the political relationship. We are prepared to put aside some major disputes like Kashmir for the time being. Our President has said that such major issues would be taken up later. But other steps like Sub-Commission-meetings, Joint-Commission-meetings etc. should be held and there should not be gaps in this process. Whenever there are gaps, the common man feels despondent.
F.S. 21. The despondency arises on our side also because we find that Pakistan is not abiding by its commitments. Let us look at the decisions of the meeting between the Finance Ministers. You had agreed to give us a list of additional items for inclusion in private trade. You also agreed to the decision that a Committee of senior officials would meet in February for reviewing the progress of the decisions taken by the two Finance Ministers. Later, you started saying that you would not be able to participate in the meeting of the senior officials; so we said that at least you should give us a list. This also your government was not prepared to do. Your Ambassador in Delhi said that we could glance at the list, but he could not give it to us. The Joint Commission and Sub-Commissions should have their meetings, but these meetings should produce results. The initial steps which have to be taken to make these meetings result-oriented, such as the list of additional items should be acted upon. Otherwise, there is despondency in India. I have told my friend Mr. Sattar that Pakistan is importing a large number of items we can supply many of these of the same quality at cheaper prices. Why can't our suggestion be acceptable to Pakistan?

Pak MOS. 22. We could try to persuade our Commerce Ministry, but side by side you and Mr. Sattar must also sit down and move forward on other matters. You must let us know what the items you want to be imported are. For food grains, there must be a separate list. Food grains can move only against foodgrains, such as, rice against wheat. Anyway, practical efforts have to be made in the right direction and we must all take such steps. Let us wish you and Mr. Sattar success in your talks here.

(The meeting, which had lasted about 35 minutes, then came to an end).

SECRET

Record of the meeting between Foreign Secretary A. P. Venkateswaran and Pakistan Foreign Secretary Abdul Sattar.

Islamabad, December 27, 1986.

The two Ambassadors (Pakistani Ambassador in Delhi and the Indian Ambassador in Islamabad) were present.

2. The two Foreign Secretaries agreed to take up purely bilateral issues during this meeting; deciding to take up international and regional issues in the full delegation meeting.

3. Mr. Sattar said that he would like Additional Secretary Najmuddin Shaikh to brief Shri Venkateswaran about the Afghanistan negotiations, during the working lunch.

4. On bilateral issues, he said that at least on one issue, any one issue selected by our F.S., they should endeavour to make significant progress so that this meeting can be advertised as a successful one. He suggested that concrete progress could be recorded on any of the following:

   i) Draft Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation;

   ii) Draft of the Agreement on non-attack on each other’s nuclear installations;

   iii) Scheduling of the Joint Commission;

   iv) Setting the dates etc. for the meeting of the two Surveyors General, preparatory to the Sir Creek delimitation;

   v) Tulbul project on the Wullar Lake;

   vi) Political aspects of Siachin specially emphasizing preventive diplomacy for preventing untoward future developments.

5. Mr. Sattar said that the problem in Siachin had arisen due to the absence of the Line of Actual control. For 30 years neither side had stationed any troops in the area, and then suddenly it erupted into a major problem and something of a dispute.

6. Our FS emphasized that sometimes a gap in understanding aggravates old problems and creates new ones. He, therefore, wished to devote this meeting to ensuring that each one of them understood fully the other’s positions. He emphasized that speed in settling problems is not as important as ensuring that solutions were durable.

7. Mr. Sattar stated that the understandings arrived at between the two Interior Secretaries should now be implemented fully and speedily.

8. Mr. Sattar went on to confess that perhaps India feels let down in the matter of trade. Also India feels that Pakistan has been interfering in her internal affairs, especially in respect of the development in the Indian Punjab. On the latter issue a dialogue had commenced between the two Prime Ministers; and has been followed up by the meeting between the two Interior Secretaries.

9. Analyzing the two Clauses of the draft Treaty on Peace, Friendship and Cooperation (on Bilateralism, and on Bases), he suggested that on Bilateralism the formulation already used by the two sides in the Simla Agreement may be used once again. As regards the bases or Non-alignment Clause, he said that their formulation had been provided to Foreign Secretary Bhandari in January 1986. The latter had promised to have it examined. Therefore, the Pakistani side continues to await hearing India’s views.

10. As regards the Agreement on Non-Attack on Nuclear Installations, the leaders of the two sides have already announced that the agreement exists, and that it needs now only to be formalized through formulating the text of the Agreement. In other words, an understanding is there that we have agreed, and now we should conclude a formal agreement. He said that the only disagreement, in this, is on the two preambular sub-paragraphs. Even if these two paragraphs were to be removed or reformulated, one could live with the rest of the text.

11. He flagged the point of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi’s commitment made, in Bangalore to Prime Minister Junejo to visit Pakistan during 1987 as Chairman of SAARC. Whatever the framework of the visit, it will inevitably also become a major bilateral occasion. After all, an Indian Prime Minister will be visiting Pakistan after a gap of 27 years. Both sides must utilize it for good purpose. Some agreements must be kept ready for that purpose i.e. that visit.

12. On trade, he reiterated what he had said to Foreign Secretary Venkateswaran in their talks in Nandi Hills, i.e. that some progress must now be made. Perhaps, it could be done through Pakistan making an unilateral announcement. He recognizes that there will not be a quantum jump resulting from such a step. He suggested that in the public sector trade between the two countries, there is considerable scope for augmentation.

13. He then insisted that there should be no further delay in convening the sub-Commission meetings, so that the way to the holding of the Joint Commission meeting is open. He also said that in respect of joint ventures being established in the export zones of both sides, every encouragement should be given by the two Governments to the private entrepreneurs of the two sides.

14. On Tulbul he said that the Pakistan Cabinet was exercised about this, even though basically it is a technical matter. The two Indus Commissioners should continue discussing this in accordance with the Indus Basin Treaty. They have already met earlier in December and will meet again in January 1987. He underlined the concern of the Pakistan Government, and appealed that India should not present them with a fait accompli on Tulbul.

15. Reverting to Siachin he asked for some concrete suggestions from the Indian side so that the problem could be solved.

16. Responding to Mr. Sattar's comments, our Foreign Secretary pointed out that the Simla phraseology has already existed for almost a decade and a half. We should be moving forward on the question of bases and of bilaterism. Therefore, some fresh thinking needs to be done. On the question of bases especially while Pakistan is prepared to refer to the principles of non-alignment in a general sense, we feel, we should work towards a clearer focus, a sharper and more definitive purpose. This is our bilateral agreement and here in the matter of bases we must be clear where we are going. In every agreement between any two sovereign States, clearly some little modicum of sovereignty has to be voluntarily surrendered. This is done always for value received. If we are prepared to fore-swear for the future or forever certain involvements then we must both be prepared to make a common commitment against having foreign bases on our soil. Similarly in respect of bilaterism both our countries need to be a little more specific. Every effort should be made to have the minimum of ambiguity.

17. As regards non-attack on nuclear installations both sides have wholeheartedly subscribed to this. Pakistan, we feel, is moving towards a nuclear weapons option. We feel that we can arrive at a mutually acceptable bilateral agreement; however, Pakistan must understand that India has refused to sign the NPT not because of any considerations involving Pakistan but rather for basic and fundamental reasons. The agreement regarding non-attack on nuclear facilities is a first step. We should discuss this entire matter in greater depth and with great candour.

18. In the matter of trade and economic cooperation, F.S. said Pakistan imports various items from diverse sources. These imports have been going on for a long time and have shown no deleterious effect on Pakistan’s economy. In case the idea is to resume trade with India, and build up significant economic co-operation with India, Indian exports should be permitted to enter Pakistani market in exactly the same way as from other countries. If we can compete with other countries on quality and price, we will survive in the market otherwise not. Resuming trade with us would be a gain for the people of Pakistan. Discussing the list of additional items which had been shown by Ambassador Humayun Khan to Foreign Secretary in Delhi he called the list “most unappetizing”. He added that our business Sector has much clout in our society and specifically in our Parliament. He said that dates for the meetings of the Sub-commissions can certainly be settled and also for the Joint-commission but there should be some discussion about what one wish to achieve through the Sub-commissions and Joint-commissions. In this context he welcomed Foreign Secretary Sattar’s proposal to make a unilateral announcement of the list of items. He said that joint ventures could be of the type that both countries would be enthusiastic about buy-back arrangements.

19. On Tulbul F.S. said, there is need for year-round navigational continuity. There is no desire to deprive Pakistan of full flow of water and the full quantum. The two Commissioners should be instructed accordingly. There is nothing very complicated or difficult in this context. We are committed to not permitting any loss of water to Pakistan.

20. On Siachen he said that it is unwise to be in the situation we are. It is silly to look at each other eye-ball to eye-ball in that area. We can agree to give each other no provocation and should move towards immediate cease-fire. The situation must not be permitted to aggravate any further. We certainly do not want any confrontation.

21. On the meeting of the two Surveyors General, in the context of Sir Greek there should be no difficulty on moving concretely and quickly on this point.

22. He said that instructions from our Prime Minister were to move ahead positively in as many areas as possible.

23. Mr Sattar promised to brief our Foreign Secretary in detail on the rationale of their attitude on bilaterism and bases; also on Pakistan’s nuclear policy.

24. Our Foreign Secretary said flatly that Pakistan must first of all do something on the terrorist’s front. He also advised Pakistan to distance itself from Khalistan or Sikh issue.

Record of discussions at the First Session of the India-Pakistan Foreign Secretary level talks.
Islamabad, December 27, 1986.

Foreign Secretary Sattar

We welcome you and the members of your delegation. The visit is somewhat belated but we are happy you have found time to come. Your visit would contribute to the evolution of Indo-Pak relations. I share desire of the peoples of two countries for friendly, good neighbourly and cooperative relations. We have made great progress in bilateral relations since the Simla Agreement was signed. There have been no great leaps but the progress has not been disappointing. We can take satisfaction that the last 14 years have been productive. But the achievements have not been consonant with expectations. Your visit gives us the opportunity to discuss issues in our bilateral relations not only in terms of atmospherics but also concrete steps that can be taken.

Foreign Secretary Venkateswaran

This is my first visit to Pakistan. I reciprocate your warm sentiments. You are held in great regard in India and remembered fondly in Delhi.

I have come with instructions from my Government to move forward as much as we can. The situation between us is not that difficult. Even more than being friends we should seek to be brothers. We have discussed a number of bilateral questions this morning. Your perceptions have been valuable. I found Minister of State Zain Noorani most charming and enjoyed the meeting with him this morning.

It is essential that our two peoples get to know each other better and dispel images built for them. In order to facilitate movements of people - there are so many divided families as also friends and pilgrims who wish to visit each other. We are willing to send our railway delegation to come to Pakistan at any time convenient to you. We are willing to sign the Agreement to reopen the Khokhrapar-Munnabao rail-route as early as possible. I have been asked by PM to convey this. I shall be mentioning this to H.E. Prime Minister Junejo when I call on him tomorrow. I thought I would inform you now so that you could mention it to him. Perhaps he would have a response that I can convey to my Prime Minister.

I have generally outlined our position this morning regarding the two Drafts on the Friendship Treaty and the Non-attack on Nuclear Installations Agreement. Further discussions can take place between our colleagues.
Foreign Secretary Sattar

I agree that further discussions can take place between our colleagues but I would like to explain to you the rationale of some of the positions taken by Pakistan on the two agreements.

First, in regard to the non attack of nuclear facilities, I believe that the two sides have more or less reached an understanding on the substantive part; there are one or two points to be taken care of in the Preamble. I am sure my colleagues can take care of this quickly.

Second, in regard to the No War Pact/Friendship Treaty. There are two outstanding points. One on resolution of disputes bilaterally and the other relating to bases.

In regard to the first, we have suggested lifting bodily two sub-paragraphs of the Simla Agreement relating to resolution of bilateral disputes. In 1980-81, when The No War Pact was offered, there was an impression that Pakistan was resiling from the Simla Agreement. Hence we agreed to the Preamble carrying a reference to the Simla Agreement. In the main body, we can reiterate our commitment to the Simla Agreement and peaceful resolution of bilateral disputes. If there is any other way to remove the perception that Pakistan is resiling from Simla Agreement we could consider it. But it is not desirable to use this Treaty to incorporate interpretation of one or the other side in regard to provisions of the Simla Agreement. The concept of bilateralism put forward by India evokes images which are avoidable. In fact the word is not used in the Simla Agreement. We should not sidetrack issues. The formulation used should not compromise the position of either side.

In regard to the clause relating to bases there can be a legitimate question regarding why Pakistan refuses to agree to this clause when it says it has no intention to give bases. Let me explain, it is the legitimate object of any country to safeguard its territorial integrity and sovereignty. Positions can change. Periodic reappraisals have to be made. But security perceptions govern policies. In the 70s there was no prediction of Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. Similarly there can be other reasons for change in environment. It is not desirable that the Treaty should preclude reappraisal of policy by Pakistan. Alignment cannot be seen in black and white terms. In some cases alignment has worked. For example USSR and Eastern Europe are aligned; West European countries and the United States are members of NATO. Alliances are not immoral or unethical. Alliances have safeguarded peace and security in Europe.

At this point we do not believe that alliances would safeguard Pakistan’s security. We got out of CENTO and SEATO because we concluded that they were not serving the purpose of safeguarding our security. We have served non-alignment and we will contribute to strengthen it. But one does not know what would happen in future.

We have had recent exchanges with USSR. These have been good. We hope they would contribute to solving the Afghan problem and strengthening bilateral relations. But reappraisals are continuously taking place. What kind of signal would we be sending to USSR we were to give up this right of reappraisal. It is our view that retaining this option restrains USSR. For practical as well as policy reasons it is not in Pakistan’s interest to give up the option of reappraisal. Doubts do arise but the events of recent past show that Pakistan should not give up this option. We would like to assure you that we have no intentions of giving bases to any country. In fact, Article 51 of the UN Charter gives each country the individual and collective right of self-defence. The clause relating to the bases is a violation of this right conferred under the Charter.

Ambassador Humayun Khan

If I may - The drafting exercise began in 1984. In regard to the bases, we are proposing bilateral obligations to be undertaken by the two sides. The proposed formulation of Pakistan i.e. non-use of one’s territory for activities directed against the other country should take care of India’s concerns.

Foreign Secretary Venkateswarn

It is 14 years after Simla. We would like to focus clearly on the basis of our new Treaty. If any conflict arises between us, the Treaty falls. The entire context is our relationship. The dynamism you have referred to therefore would not be upset. There is a little surrender of sovereignty on both sides, but the argument in regard to giving up options is perhaps a little over stated. Both India and Pakistan are non-aligned. We need not be too hung up on Simla. This is a new document. Both sides have to defend it to the public and the Parliaments.

I would like to refer here to a recent report relating to the P-3 Orion flights from Pakistani bases. There is an apprehension in India on this matter. The Treaty is intended to achieve greater sense of security, trust and confidence.

Abdul Sattar

Revised paragraphs were submitted in January, 1986. It was our impression that these formulations represent progress over the previous text. We hope that a response would be forthcoming.

In regard to P-3 flights, let me say that there are no bases on Pak territory. The bases are available elsewhere. These aircraft cover Arabian Sea. On occasions, twice or thrice in 1985 (I do not know the 86 figure) there were requests for landing and refueling. It is wrong to describe them as “spy” planes as has been done by some journalists like Lifschultz. There are no bases, no facilities in Pakistan. The concept of “spy” planes is wrong. The Oceans are international waters. No International Law is violated by aircraft flying over them and taking photographs. It is not as if Pakistan has provided bases or facilities for illegal activities. There is no espionage in one’s territory. Facilities have been accorded to naval ships also which visit Pakistan’s ports. No military facilities have been provided; US and UK ships are provided same facilities as ships from say Indonesia.

To get back to the bases clause a bilateral treaty cannot be used for circumscribing actions against a third country. Pakistan’s security concerns relate not only to India. We are faced with real threat now. It is not legitimate that a policy reappraisal should be precluded. We have no intention of giving bases or facilities. Should the security environment change and circumstances change, however, we should have the option of deciding what to do. Belonging to an alliance is not a crime nor illegal. We would like to continue to follow the policy of non-alignment. But misconceptions persist. Our revised formulation should take care of India’s apprehensions.

Humayun Khan

We are looking for peace and cooperation. The agreement should improve the prospects of durable peace. Our perceptions and policies are the same at the moment and the principles of non-alignment would take care of them. But why bound us down vis-a-vis a third country? What advantage is there in tying down Pakistan’s freedom of action vis-a-vis third countries in a bilateral document?

FS Venkateswaran

There is a mutuality of interest. This is not a unilateral demand; we also accept the reciprocal implications for us. We must discuss further to find mutually acceptable formulations. In the context of past happenings we are particularly interested on this clause. A closer debate needs to be done.

JS (XP)

If I may add, Sir, to what you have said. We have our bilateral problems. They get exacerbated by the involvement of Great Powers in our neighbourhood. There are concerns in our Parliament about the military presence of Great Powers in the neighbourhood. The provision we have made in the Treaty about bases is because of these concerns. It is our view that by making it clear that we will not provide bases, we will send suitable signals to the Great Powers. These Great Powers will realize that we do not wish to get involved in their rivalries.
Abdul Sattar

Given its size and power India can be non-aligned. Others have to safeguard their security through whatever legitimate means are available. There is no advantage for India to bind Pakistan down permanently to non-alignment. If you were to visit Lahore and Karachi you would find the view that India wants to impose its policy and perceptions on its neighbours. Why should we bind ourselves down to Indian perceptions? Whether or not Pakistan is non-aligned depends upon circumstances. For example, there is an opinion in Pakistan that the Indo-Soviet Treaty is detrimental to Pakistan. We need to examine the security environment and come to legitimate answers.

The cross border attacks from Afghanistan have doubled; air violations have trebled. We are seeking a political and diplomatic solution to the Afghan problem. But who knows what will happen. It is not possible for Pakistan in view of present circumstances to abandon the path of reappraisal. As regards abandoning a Treaty, this can be done if one has the power. Can Afghanistan abandon its Treaty with the Soviet Union of 1921? (FS interjected to say that Iran had abrogated its Treaty with Soviet Union). The Treaty should be related to our bilateral relations. It should not be in regard to policies towards third countries.

In regard to the nuclear issue. Our leaders have publicly proclaimed the understanding reached on 17 December, 1985 in regard to non-attack on nuclear facilities and installations. We must see if the Preamble can be agreed upon.

In regard to our nuclear programme, what can be done to clear misapprehension in India? Recently Congressman Solarz was here. He said he had discussed two commitments in Delhi. One was that neither India nor Pakistan would conduct tests and second both could pledge in first use of nuclear weapons. He felt he had got some positive response in New Delhi.

FS Venkateswaran

Solarz mentioned these ideas as his concepts. As neither side has nuclear weapons, pledging non first use would be a travesty. In regard to not conducting any tests we listened to Congressman Solarz. What did you say about his first idea?

Abdul Sattar

We said that probably his perception of the thinking in New Delhi was wrong.

FS Venkateswaran

Probably?
Abdul Sattar

In 1978 the then Prime Minister Morarji Desai had made a statement in the UNGA. Subsequently he made another statement in the parliament refuting his position. In 1980-81, the then prime Minister of India had also made certain statements. I told Solarz that India’s perceptions were different from the ones he had claimed them to be. But we are prepared to be on record that the two sides would not conduct tests. (Earlier, Sattar had said that Pakistan side had only listened to Solarz’s proposals; FS, therefore, interjected to say that Pakistan had indeed made a response also).

Abdul Sattar

Is it possible to evolve a way? Can we consider some such formulation: “Pakistan and India do not have nuclear weapons. Nor do we have the intention of producing nuclear weapons. In any case we will not use nuclear weapons against each other”.

(Ambassador Humayun Khan, interjected to say that even if we do not have nuclear weapons, we might buy them though)

I believe that the two sides should have more information. Let people of India and Pakistan get together and talk. Even your Defence people can come; this is an area where we have many misconceptions.

Foreign Secretary Venkateswaran

I agree that, there should be more such interaction. Why has Pakistan not subscribed to the Partial Test Ban Treaty?

Abdul Sattar

We have signed the Treaty but not ratified it. We have done some research in the Foreign Office on the reasons. Our researches are not very complete. The only explanation that emerges is that we have not ratified it because we are in favour of complete test ban. But we are contemplating ratification. I may tell you that everyone in the Government who has been consulted is in favour of ratification.

Foreign Secretary Venkateswaran

Your proposal in regard to non-use of nuclear weapons is interesting. We will carry this back for further consultations. In regard to AWACS what is your position?

Abdul Sattar

Let me say that we must think of some forum for discussing acquisition of military equipment. Our acquisitions have a fall out for you and vice versa. We must discuss these. For example why is Pakistan interested in AWACS; also why India purchased half a dozen different kinds of planes.

We feel necessary to acquire some kind of capability to deal with the average of two air violations a day we are unable to cope with them. The violations are up to 20 miles. We are only able to detect the violation post facto. The notice is inadequate for scramble time has. In just one case has Pakistan been able to shoot down an Afghan airplane inside our territory. We have a strict policy of no-retaliation.

We have considered various alternatives:

(a) Ground-based radar-these are ineffective in the mountainous terrain.

(b) Hawkeye-these were tried but found ineffective due to the nature of the terrain.

(c) Aerostats - these have been tried and are still under consideration. If they work these would be a cheap solution. Some further tests are planned. But they are rather vulnerable.

(d) AWACS-there are different kinds of capabilities: (i) surveillance; (ii) command and control. It is our understanding that the multipurpose AWACS are extremely expensive. Saudi Arabia has paid US $ 1.25 billion per plane. Our total package is US $ 1.7 billion spread over 6 years. It is about US $ 290 million per year. The average rate of interest for the 81-87 package is 10% depending on when we sign the Agreement.

The current package would support about 250 tanks at US $ 4 million per piece. The AWACS with just surveillance capability would cost US $ 850 million. We have not yet decided what to buy. Congressman Solarz heads the Asia Pacific Sub Committee. He is going to be investigating our needs for this. He will be asking questions. Perhaps the Government of India should understand US military legislation better.

Foreign Secretary Venkateswaran

Well you are right; we have not found the need because we do not purchase any military equipment from the US. But pending your purchases of AWACS, we have seen reports saying that US will supply facilities operated by the US. Are these correct?

Abdul Sattar

The Pak answer is no. The E2C were tested by Pak pilots. We decided; “Our own people would operate the aircraft when they got them”. You have raised the questions of apprehensions in India. If India was the objective of our purchase, E2C would serve the purpose of monitoring the facilities across the Pak-India border. But not for the terrain for which we need them.

Foreign Secretary Venkateswaran

What about AWACS?

Abdul Sattar

We have to test them. We don’t need them against India.

Humayun Khan

Has the IAF thought of buying such a system?

FS Venkateswaran

No. But if you proceed on these lines you will compel us to go in that direction. Hence we would like to avoid escalation.

Abdul Sattar

Yes. This is also our desire. But how can we implement it? Our impression is that Pakistan has not triggered off any arms race in the sub-continent. We did purchase 40 F-16s. But GOI decision to purchase Mirage, Jaguar, Mig 25, 27, 29 were based on many different reasons of modernizing the air force. India has other concerns, we acknowledge, Pakistan also has other concerns.

FS Venkateswaran

We can chronologically establish that many of our purchases were triggered off by your purchase of F-16. Only, the delivery time of these planes was quicker than in the case of Pakistan. I may tell you that we have many concerns. In our North East we have a neighbour who, you may recall, in 1979 crossed an established demarcated, delimited border with Vietnam to “teach a lesson” to the latter. As it happens no one knows who taught whom a lesson. But it is known that Deng Xio Peng had to make a self-criticism for his part in this act. That act sent vibrations in India. We too have a border problem with China. But even if we came to an agreement would China respect that.

Investing in Defence means diversion of resources. We cannot afford that. We want to invest every available rupee in development. But if our neighbours introduce new levels of weaponries and new technologies, it is difficult for us to avoid investing in defence. Such heavy investments are difficult for us and we would wish to avoid them. There a need for greater understanding on this subject.
Abdul Sattar

Is there a possibility of professional level exchanges on these subjects? I agree that acquisition of capabilities does (create) apprehensions. If there is a professional-level forum information and perceptions can be exchanged.

FS, Venkateswaran

This only indicates the need for a Friendship Treaty. This would remove apprehensions and provide greater sense of security. In regard to the suggestion for a forum which would be confidential and informal we would carry this back for further consideration.

After the discussions were concluded for the day, Ambassador S.K. Singh briefly referred to the statements which have appeared in the Press attributed to NWFP Governor Fida Mohammad Khan (The Muslim of 17 December and 27 December, 1986). The Governor spoke of the 40 crore Muslims of the Sub-continent, and that a time would come when they would demand an Akhand Bharat. He exhorted the younger generation to avenge Mrs. Gandhi’s boast allegedly made in 1971 that after the fall of Dacca the Hindus had avenged 1100 years of excesses at the hands of Muslims. The text of the Muslim item was read out by Foreign Secretary. Ambassador said that these were not helpful. Foreign Secretary Sattar made a lengthy explanation. He said that the Foreign Ministry has very little control over such statements. But the Indian side should realize that many things were said by leaders on both sides. They said these in the local context. Perhaps Ambassador should visit Peshawar and talk to the Governor.

JS (XP)

There is one more matter, I want to bring up. This is about the TV coverage for the World Cup in cricket which India and Pakistan are jointly hosting next year. Some foreign TV networks have said that they doubt whether we can coordinate efforts to put out a good TV coverage.

Pak FS

We must cooperate for this. We will tell our TV people.

Amb. Singh

Yes, Gen. Safdar Butt and Mr. Salve can also coordinate this

(The meeting ended at 17.40 hours)
1118. Press Conference of Indian Foreign Secretary A. P. Venkateswaran.

Islamabad, December 28, 1986.

Substantial progress was made at the talks between India Foreign Secretary, Mr. A.P. Venkateswaran, and the Pakistan Foreign Secretary, Mr. Abdul Sattar, on the issue of protection of atomic installations. Both sides agreed to refrain from attacking each other’s nuclear installations and only few technical problems were to be solved.

This was stated by the Indian Foreign Secretary at a news conference in Islamabad on December 28. Mr. Abdul Sattar, who was also present at the conference, said that he was satisfied with the talks and the progress made during the negotiations was up to expectations.

The Indian Foreign Secretary said that detailed talks were held on bilateral relations as well as regional and international situation.

He said that the two sides reiterated their intentions to speed up the progress of normalization in accordance with the Simla Agreement and with the understanding reached during the talks between the Prime Ministers of the two countries recently.

He disclosed that the next round of talks between the two Foreign Secretaries would be held early next year in New Delhi. He said that meetings of the Joint Commission and the two sub commissions would be convened as soon as agreed during the current talks.

He also disclosed that the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, would visit Pakistan by the end of next year.

He said that the Kashmir issue would be discussed after certain irritants were removed. He hoped that the move to create a proper atmosphere for the removal of ‘irritants’ between the two countries was made at the negotiations.

Conceding that the pace of normalization was very slow he, how ever, said that “certain hitches take more time for removal,”

Referring to the draft proposals on non-attack on each other’s nuclear installations, he said the issue was discussed in detail though certain technical aspects were still to be decided upon.

When asked about those technical details, he said in view of the on-going negotiations, it was better not to bring them up in the Press conference.

Intervening, Mr. Abdul Sattar said that an “agreement in principle” was already reached between the two Heads of State on December 17, 1985.
When asked about the Indian troop movements near Pakistan’s border, he said there was a misperception on the issue. He clarified that Indian forces were not taking part in exercises near the Pakistan border as commonly stated. On the contrary, he maintained, India firmly adhered to the agreement reached between the two countries regarding informing each other of the troop movements close to the border.

Similarly, he also explained in answer to a question that India had never held itself as a dominant regional power. These terms, he maintained were used by others and not by the Indians themselves.

Referring to the reopening of the Khokhropar rail link, he said a delegation from India was to come to Pakistan two months ago but unfortunately it could not do so because of certain reasons. “Subsequently, we decided to approach the Pakistan government regarding the time suitable to it for the signing of the Agreement,” he said.

When he asked about the construction of a barrage by India on the Jhelum river, he said that no violations of the Indus Water Treaty had been made by his country.

Mr. Abdus Sattar, who is to visit India early next year, according to the time decided between the two Secretaries, stated at the end of the press conference that intensification of dialogue between the two countries had taken place in an attempt to emerge out of the unfortunate past. He said the Pakistan government did not expect miracles to take place but rather wanted that progress should be made, which he claimed was achieved at the meeting.

Referring to his meeting with Prime Minister Junejo, Mr. Venkateswaran said Mr. Junejo made a comment humorously that “it looks to him that when politicians meet, they reach agreement immediately and when bureaucrats start handling it they run into difficulties.” Replying to a question whether India would abide by the agreement after signing it, even if it continued to doubt Pakistan’s peaceful nuclear programme, Mr. Venkateswaran said; “obviously”.

Asked if they discussed the supply of modern arms to Pakistan, Mr. Venkateswaran said: “We have much better understanding of each other on this issue.” He said they had discussed the matter because the acquisition of sophisticated weapons by one side had led the other also to buy modern equipment. This had encouraged an arms race in the region. He said his country did not favour this and wanted to minimize such possibility.

[The Indian Foreign Secretary met the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Zain Noorani, on December 28. According to a Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman, the present talks between the Foreign Secretaries followed the] understanding reached in Bangalore in November between Prime Minister Junejo and Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi to resume periodic Secretaries-level consultations which provided sharing of perceptions on current issues of common interest as well as exchanging view on specific bilateral questions.]

SECRET

Record note of meeting between Foreign Secretary A. P. Venkateswaran and President Zia-ul-Haq on Sunday, 28th December, 1986 at the President’s Residence in Rawalpindi.

Foreign Secretary called on President Zia-ul-Haq at the latter’s residence in Rawalpindi on Sunday, 28th December, 1986 at 6.40 PM.

President Zia: Yours is an extremely short visit. I wish you could have stayed longer.

F.S: My visit is indeed too short. It was originally planned to have been for 5 days, of which 2 days would have been spent in Islamabad, one in Lahore and two in Karachi. I had, however, to cut short my visit as I was required to be back in New Delhi on Monday.

President Zia: Next time you must stay longer and spend at least a couple of days more in order to visit other places.

F.S: After having enjoyed the warm and lavish hospitality of Foreign Secretary Sattar and through him of the Government of Pakistan, I look forward to visiting your country again.

President Zia: It has been our pleasure to have had you in Pakistan.

F.S: The highlight of my visit to Pakistan has been my call on you. Just before leaving for Pakistan on Friday, our Prime Minister expressly asked me to convey his warm personal regards to Your Excellency.

President Zia: I would, in return request you to convey my regards to Prime Minister Gandhi.

F.S.: I warmly remember my meeting Your Excellency at Harare. Though these meetings were clouded by the Pan-Am hijacking, we do greatly appreciate your having taken the trouble of briefing us about the unfolding events.
President Zia: It is indeed a fact that I personally briefed Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi about the hijacking.

(Pause ........)

I am told that your discussions with Foreign Secretary Sattar have gone off well. It is important that such exchanges should take place from time to time.

F.S.: I thank you. If we work so hard without results, both of us deserve to be sacked.

President Zia: There are two or three areas of definite progress in our relations. When I met Mrs. Gandhi in 1982 and proposed to her the No-war Pact/Declaration, I recall the discussions we had. From our side, besides myself, there was Sahebzada Yaqub Khan and from your side, there were Mrs. Gandhi and Mr. Narasimha Rao. There were others present in the next room like Mr. Natwar Singh and Mr. Parthasarathi. We were told that either the Indian proposals be accepted or there would be nothing else. There was heated argument. Madame Gandhi suddenly proposed that we accept the setting up of a Joint Commission. I immediately, on the spot, accepted the idea and then urged acceptance of the No-war Pact. Madame Gandhi indicated that progress on the No-war Pact could be made after the Joint Commission. I see no reason why good ideas like this should not be implemented and why we should stop talking to each other when there are differences. The Joint Commission should be activated and we should not stop talking.

F.S.: If the understandings that Foreign Secretary Sattar and I have arrived at are implemented, then it should be possible to set the Sub-commission meetings and the Joint Commission meeting underway fairly quickly.

President Zia: I hope you will not mind my saying so, but Mr. Rajiv Gandhi seems to have been in a hurry in criticizing us on the Pan-Am hijacking incident. You are convinced that we are assisting Sikh terrorists and we feel that you may be involved in the Pakhtoonistan and Sind movements. In this context, it is a very good idea that the two Prime Ministers make a statement denouncing secessionism. This would be an important confidence-building measure. I am sure, therefore, that you would recommend it to your Prime Minister.

F.S.: I certainly shall convey your feelings in this matter to the Prime Minister. Prime Minister Junejo had suggested that Foreign Secretary Sattar and I should work out a statement before my departure, in this regard, but since you feel that a statement of this nature should be at a higher level, I will convey the same to our Prime Minister.

President Zia: Please do convey my regards to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and President Zail Singh. The President is indeed a most lovable person.
We in Pakistan want normal and good relations with India. Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, came to office not by choice - it so happened. For us, he is a symbol of peace. There is no reason, therefore, for us to create difficulties for him. It is unthinkable that an Islamic country like Pakistan could even consider an attack on his person. We wish him a long life in the interest of Indo-Pak relations.

We sincerely hope that he will visit Pakistan at least in his capacity as Chairman of SAARC.

F.S.: The Prime Minister will visit all SAARC countries.

Accordingly, he would come to Pakistan before the end of 1987, thus setting at rest a matter of unnecessary controversy. I will certainly convey your warm sentiments to him.

President Zia: I had thought during my visit to New Delhi on 17th December, 1985 that we had solved all problems between our two countries. Ambassador S.K. Singh was there and is aware of the then prevailing atmosphere.

(Some jocular conversation followed with President Zia suggesting to the Ambassador that he should take up golf and the utility of the game in judging character).

F.S.: I realize, Your Excellency, how valuable your time is, but I would be grateful if you could let us know how you see things evolving, particularly as an elder statesman.

President Zia: I am not qualified to speak as an elder statesman. I am, however, an optimist. The worst problem from Pakistan's point of view is the situation in Afghanistan. In our region, however, SAARC, which is only two years old, is a positive development. We hope it will make us forget our differences.

In Afghanistan, the only ray of hope is the overtures made by the Soviet Union. There are indicators that the Soviet leadership is totally different from that in the past. Gorbachev is emerging as a different personality from the one I had met in my first meeting. At that time, he was very tense. He does not appear to be the same person. Either he has reformed himself or has learnt the techniques of international diplomacy. We appreciate India's role. India did not openly denounce the Soviet involvement in Afghanistan as we did, but played a positive role from behind the scenes. If Gorbachev is right and the Soviets withdraw, leaving Afghanistan an independent and neutral state, it would be a wonderful development - a miracle of the 20th century.

While a solution is possible in Afghanistan, I see no end to the Iran-Iraq conflict.

F.S.: I had met President Assad just before Harare. The Syrians being close to Iran and being Arabs are well-placed to assess the possibilities of a settlement.
in this conflict. He, however, indicated that there was no possibility for mediation and that one would just have to allow the conflict to continue.

President Zia: Though Iran is much more under President Khameini, the Iranians are not ready to sit down for discussions with Iraq.

F.S.: The new exposures on Irangate have, in our view, strengthened the less compromising groups in Iran.

During his visit to India, Gorbachev had stated that the Soviet Union would like to withdraw from Afghanistan as early as possible subject to the following two conditions:

1. It should not lead to the emergence of an unfriendly regime in Afghanistan; and
2. A reasonable timeframe should be agreed, and not a 3-4 month timeframe which was unrealistic.

It is clear that the Soviet Union now has a very different image. Their presence in Afghanistan affects this image adversely and they want to rectify the situation. They will not insist on the existence of a Marxist regime in Afghanistan. They would be satisfied with a government which is not hostile to the Soviet Union. It is also our impression that while they feel that a 3-4 month timeframe for Soviet troop withdrawals is not realistic, a 3-4 year timeframe is also not their ultimate demand. They would be willing to settle for a substantially shorter timeframe. I feel that a one to one and a half year timeframe would be reasonable and practical. Having peace in this area is essential. Nobody wants a continued Russian presence in Afghanistan - certainly not India.

During their visit to India, the Soviets also floated the Asian-Pacific security concept, which stems from the ideas propounded by them in the seventies. At that time, they had not fleshed out their ideas, but now they have done so and their thinking in this regard rests on the pattern of the European Conference on Security and Cooperation, evolved over the years. In our view, the situation in the Asian-Pacific region is not the same. While Europe was able to agree to these ideas over a considerable period of time and with the advantage of greater homogeneity and stability, in the Asian-Pacific region, which consists of three different civilizations, is plagued by three wars and innumerable border problems. Therefore, this is just not possible at this stage. Prior to Gorbachev’s visit, I had spoken to Mr. Vorontsov, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, and explained this to him. I had further indicated that the South East Asian countries will not go along with these proposals at this point of time. In these circumstances, the Soviets did not make heavy weather of this issue during Gorbachev’s visit as Brezhnev had done in 1973. The Asian Pacific Security concept differs from the earlier Soviet proposals in the sense that while the latter had no framework and excluded both China and the USA, the present proposal rested upon a recognizable framework and included both these countries. As a result of China’s inclusion, the Chinese have maintained a neutral posture, and said that they were studying the proposal.

President Zia: I feel that the SAARC concept should be expanded to south-west Asia and its scope should be extended.

F.S.: Two ASEAN members - Thailand and Indonesia - have expressed a desire to cooperate with SAARC. However, since SAARC is in its infancy, it would perhaps be inappropriate for it to extend itself at this stage. We could of course welcome cooperation from others where there is a mutuality of interests.

President Zia: Once the Soviets definitively decide to withdraw their troops from Afghanistan, there should be no difficulty in drawing up a mutually acceptable timeframe for the same. The timeframe indicated by us represent only our initial position, as is also the case with the timeframes indicated by the Soviets.

Pakistan realizes that the Soviet Union cannot accept a regime in Afghanistan which is hostile to it. At the same time, there are as many as 3 million refugees from Afghanistan in our country. The Soviet Union has to take the initiative and generate confidence in order to resolve the situation.

F.S. Sattar: The crux of the issue is how a government of national unity can emerge in Afghanistan and how accommodation could be reached between the Afghan government and the opposition. At present, there are 3 million Afghan refugees in Pakistan, 2 million refugees in Iran and half a million elsewhere. 30% of Afghanistan's population is out of the country.

F.S.: All indications appear to suggest that the Afghan Government is genuinely trying to promote national reconciliation.

It has been most gracious of Your Excellency to have received me. In conclusion, I would just like to mention that I have conveyed our interest in the re-opening of the Khokhrapar-Munabao rail link to both Prime Minister Junejo and Foreign Secretary Sattar. There was some delay in this matter on our part, but now we are ready to re-open this link. I understand that due to the recent developments in Sind, there may now be some delay on this matter from your side. We would, however, like you to examine this issue speedily and sympathetically since it would help in promoting people-to-people contacts.

President Zia: We will certainly look into this and you may rest assured that the Government of Pakistan will take a political decision.

The meeting terminated at 7.30 P.M.
Record of Foreign Secretary A. P. Venkateswaran’s meeting with Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo at the latter’s residence on Sunday, 28th December, 1986.

(Foreign Secretary called on Prime Minister Mohd. Khan Junejo at his residence in Rawalpindi on Sunday, 28th December, at 5.40 p.m. A list of those present is attached.)

F.S.: I have been in Islamabad for two days. It has been a very pleasant experience and the discussions have been most useful. I would like to convey to you the warm greetings of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

P.M.: How is the Prime Minister?

F.S.: He is very fit and very active.

P.M.: I recall asking your Prime Minister as to how he kept so very busy and active. He indicated that it had become routine and one just had to do it.

F.S.: It is important though that there should also be time for leisure. The speed and intensity with which our Prime Minister works keeps all of us very active and on our toes.

P.M.: It all depends on how you make yourself available. In India, over the years, division of work has been well evolved between the Prime Minister, Ministers and the Secretaries. This is not the case in Pakistan and the Prime Minister had just to make himself available for too many engagements.

F.S.: It is most gracious, Your Excellency, to have found time to receive me.

P.M.: When I heard that you are coming, I made it clear that I must meet you. During my visit to Bangalore, I felt that it was important that the Foreign Secretaries should meet, that they should look into the problems and find solutions. Similarly, we are happy to have received your Home Secretary.

F.S.: We appreciate the outcome of the meeting of the Home Secretaries not only because the result of that meeting was good and it promoted better understanding, but also since it appears to have led to the establishment of a personal rapport between our Home Secretary and your Interior Secretary. Our Home Secretary mentioned to me that not only was his counterpart a most competent official, but also a fine man.
(Exchange between Prime Minister and Ambassador S.K. Singh about latter's health took place at this point).

F.S.: You are aware, Your Excellency, of the results of the meeting of the Home Secretaries and, in particular, about the joint press release. The latter has helped a great deal, in particular, the reference therein to Pakistan being opposed to terrorism in Punjab and elsewhere. In this context, I had suggested to Foreign Secretary Sattar that perhaps a similar statement could be made at a higher level to the effect that Pakistan does not accept the concept of Khalistan. A statement of this kind would do much to dispel charges of Pakistan's involvement with Sikh terrorism and, at the same time, strike a blow against terrorism. The entire issue arouses strong emotions in India. Particularly so since our leader had lost his mother through a terrorist attack and he himself is a target and under constant threat.

P. M.: This issue was raised with me by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. I told him that we were not involved with Sikh terrorists, but that India had camps for training terrorists for activities in Sind. In the context of these allegations, it was decided that the two Interior Secretaries meet at the first available opportunity. I appreciate your proposal about a high-level statement against terrorism. We don't mind. In Pakistan also, we have terrorist related problems in the Frontier and in Sind. Both you and Foreign Secretary Sattar should apply your minds to this matter and devise a suitable statement.

F.S.: In view of your agreement in principle to this idea, Foreign Secretary Sattar and myself will do something about it.

We greatly appreciate; the personal interest you took on the question of the re-opening of the Khokhrapar - Munabao rail link. Foreign Secretary Sattar has stated that this may now take a little longer in view of developments in Sind. It is unfortunate that we could not earlier conclude discussions on this issue and signature of the Agreement as the Leader of our delegation was suddenly indisposed. We are however, now ready to resume discussions on this issue whenever you feel that it is possible to do so, sooner rather than later.

P.M.: I am the person who announced our readiness for opening of this rail link. People from Sind have now to go to the North to cross over to India. We had proceeded with this issue at a good speed. At the last minute, your delegation could not come. We will now re-assess the situation and revert.

F.S.: Our Prime Minister had specifically asked me to raise this issue with you.

P.M.: The idea of re-opening the rail link was entirely my initiative. My people pressed me to do so and I argued in favour of the scheme on the grounds that there was no danger in opening up the rail link and that nothing adverse would happen thereby.

F.S.: I thank you for your support.

During our discussions, Foreign Secretary Sattar and I have covered a lot of ground. On economic and commercial matters, we have worked out a certain methodology which, if implemented, would facilitate progress.

F.S.: I would greatly value your suggestions on our bilateral relationship.

P.M.: Frankly, I had very useful discussions in Bangalore with Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. I felt that he was a leader who wanted to resolve problems and not create them. We have no involvement with Sikh terrorism. As far as Pakistan is concerned, incidents like those of 1984 should be resolved by India in its own way. India has all the support from Pakistan.

During my talks with Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, I asked him when he would visit Pakistan and he responded that let something substantial first emerge. But then, he indicated that since he was Chairman of SAARC, he would visit Pakistan in any case within a year. Both President Zia and myself have extended an invitation to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. We would be very happy to receive him in Pakistan, even if the visit is only in his capacity as Chairman of SAARC.

F.S.: Following the SAARC summit, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi had sent me a note indicating that during 1987, he would visit all the SAARC countries. As such, he would certainly be coming to Pakistan.

P.M.: SAARC has been very good for the region. My meeting with Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, which otherwise may not have been possible, developed because of SAARC. It thereby helped sort out many bilateral issues.

F.S.: I fully agree with you. Very often the real benefits of multilateral conferences are in the bilateral context.

P.M.: President Jayewardene expressed the same sentiment to me.

F.S.: I have invited Foreign Secretary Sattar to visit India by end March along with his wife. When he comes, we will continue our dialogue.

P.M.: He should certainly go along with his wife. He will be very busy in April, but could go either in March or May.

F.S.: March would be better climatically.

P.M.: Please, convey my regards to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and inform him that Pakistan sincerely wishes to resolve all problems with India. Frequent meetings between the Foreign Office officials would help settle all issues in a peaceful way.

(The meeting terminated at 6.10 p.m)

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Pak FS: Let us begin our discussion on the major issues today with the Joint Commission. The Joint Commission was established to strengthen cooperation in a variety of fields; various subjects were farmed out into four sub-Commissions. Over the years it has made valuable contribution. It is possible to have the view that progress has not been commensurate with expectation in one or the other area, but this should not be used to hold back progress on other areas. The Joint Commission should not be utilized as a pressure-lever to force progress in one or the other area; it is our perception that the people of India, want to use the Joint-Commission as a lever for increasing private sector trade. The Government of Pakistan favours the expansion of trade in such a way as to prevent the disruption of trade patterns as they have evolved in the last 30 years. Since at least two decades, India and Pakistan have not had normal trade relations. This has been so far for a variety of reasons. Pakistan is committed to a policy of step by step expansion of private and public sector trade. As agreed in the minutes of the Finance Ministers of the two countries in 1986, we have introduced private trade in 42 items; we also set-up a Committee for examining what additional items can be included in the private sector trade; it was supposed to do this work within a month. We took longer, but we have given a list of 150-160 items. You mentioned yesterday to our M.O.S. that you have given us a list of Items you intend to export. We will examine your list and see if it is possible to accommodate some of the wishes of Government of India. However, it is important to keep the process moving; there is a likelihood of the further expansion of trade as the experts of the two sides meet and talk over this with each other; it is important to keep the doors open. My authoritative information from our experts is that there is considerable scope for expansion of trade in public sector; we suggest that both sides should conduct an exercise to identify items of import or export interest by Public Sector Organization. Pakistan is prepared to send a delegation to India armed with lists of export and import interest. You could also ask your Public Sector Organizations to prepare corresponding lists; the two sides could sit down and match the lists. It was stated in the minutes of the two Finance Ministers meeting that the trade in Public Sector would be doubled. We are prepared to do this and are, therefore, proposing the meeting of Public Sector officials. It is up to you to decide whether it should be held before or after the sub-Commission meeting or the Joint Commission Meeting. We have no strong views in the matter. We only want the process to continue. The Joint Commission was set up at the initiative of the Indian Prime Minister in January 1982; we should make an effort for the continuation of that process.

F.S.: We already explained our views yesterday in the meeting with your Minister of State. We have no intention to upset your industry. We understand your concerns and we are prepared to accommodate them. As regards the modalities, a certain time-table was agreed upon during the Finance Ministers’ meeting. It stated that Pakistan would finalize additional items for inclusion in private trade within a month. The time table also said that a Committee of senior officials would meet within a month for reviewing the progress on various decisions taken. We can skip the meeting of the Committee of senior officials, but we can’t skip the process altogether. We have given to Pakistan our list of items of export interest, and, as I indicated yesterday, would be happy if you could consider this list.

Ambassador S.K. Singh: Pakistan’s global trade portfolio is of the order of 7 billion dollars; ours is 20 billion dollars. We have lived without trading with each other for a long time. We are not after your dollars. Over the next five years, even with assiduous effort, the trade between the two countries is not going to exceed 500-700 million dollars. In our contacts beginning with the visit of former Commerce Secretaries Krishnaswamy Rao Saheb and Abid Hussain, the focus was on economic cooperation and not only on trade. It was important to have faith and trust in each other’s intentions and to use this to build better people-to-people relations. We made a good start in the meeting of the two Finance Ministers on 10 January 1986. We agreed for a delegation of Secretaries from Pakistan to visit India; to set up a joint Business Council and double Public Sector trade. Our Finance Minister gave an assurance that we would make every effort not to hurt Pakistan’s industry. The idea was not to go for profits but economic cooperation. The question is why the 42 items were introduced by you? Some of our people including Members of Parliament had pointed out that while we were treating Pakistani on MFN basis, on the other hand Pakistan had put us in the category of Israel and South Africa.
The concession you made us in the meeting of Finance Ministers was to allow the import of 42 items by your Private Sector.

JS (XP): Earlier, these items were being imported by your traders through the TCP. The only concession you made at the Finance Ministers’ meeting was that you allowed these items to be imported directly by the private traders thereafter.

Ambassador S.K. Singh: Exactly, you allowed the import of these 42 items as a fig-leaf for us to show to our people that you have not put us in the category of South Africa and Israel. Our Public Sector can have any number of exchanges. But we must also ensure movement on private trade. Let us do things which will increase our faith and trust in each other's pledged words. The idea is not just trade, but the widening of people to people contacts.

Pak FS: My effort is to find the scope of movement forward. It is a fact that private trade was halted in 1978; we must avoid unnecessary emotionalisation of issues; we have not put India in the category of South Africa and Israel; we have not conducted any trade with these two countries while with India we have continued trade in public sector. In 1977-78 when private trade was open the turnover was under 50 million dollars, thereafter, when the private trade was closed, the turnover increased. I have not said that public sector trade is a substitute for private trade; public sector trade should continue to expand while avenues relating to expansion of private trade are explored. At the meeting of the Finance Ministers' we only decided that a Committee of officials would meet after a month to consider further expansion of private trade; we did set up a Committee though it took a little longer. We did not agree at the Finance Ministers meeting that the new list of items for trade in private sector would be according to India's preference; this was nowhere written. Our view is that if the dialogue continues, the list of items for private trade could be expanded after 6 months. As we gain confidence, we could explain to our industrialists that their apprehensions about trade with India were wrong. Let the officials of the two sides meet. The result we both desire can be achieved through a continuation of the exercise.

F.S.: You can identify those items which you are importing; perhaps we own export these if our quality and prices are found better by Pakistani importers. What would the gesture mean? It would indicate that you agree with us that trust and understanding should be strengthened.

Pak F.S.: If economic factor alone was the criterion for trade, then it would not have been halted in 1978. Why Pakistan could not continue the MFN treatment to India was, because there was a feeling here that we would be able to protect the interests of our industrialists through the public sector trade. Sooner or later, we would move to MFN. Lack of progress on one point should not preclude an advance in other areas of Joint Commission. Let us continue to achieve progress in trade as well in other areas.

F.S.: We agree that we should not hold-back progress in different areas but we should also avoid making the Joint Commission into a body of which some limbs work and some don't. If you wish, you could relax restrictions for a limited time and watch results. I am telling you in confidence that I have attended meetings in which officials from our Commerce and Finance Ministries have mentioned our big trade deficit year after year; they could point to us as to why we were importing more from Pakistan than we were exporting when we have such a large trade deficit. I would therefore suggest that sympathetic consideration be given to the items of export interest to India with a view to enlarging your list of items to be imported from India. We could forward a more detailed list and depending upon your response the Sub-Commissions could meet.

Pak FS: Regarding Wullar lake and Tulbul Project we should expedite the process of consultations and recommendations of the Indus-Waters Commissioners.

F.S.: I would request you to suggest to your authorities that they should look positively at this problem. We are not using Jhelum waters in consumptive fashion. The waters are not being held-up; as long as this is so, why should you have any objection.

Pak FS: In the case of Salal a compromise had been worked out at Governmental level; in the case of Tulbul such a compromise could also be worked out. We have reservations about the reservoir. It could result in diminution in the supply of water. Our fear is that you would present us a fait accompli; our Commissioner feels this project constitutes an infringement the Indus-Water Treaty.

FS: Since our Commissioners’ are already seized of this issue they may be directed to re-examine it and in case they are unable to come to an agreement, it could be resolved at Governmental level.

Pak FS: Regarding fishermen, we have examined your complaint we have none of them.

FS: Because you have pushed them across the border. This pushing is not a good thing; there is an established mode for returning them which ought to be followed.

Pak FS: This pushing is a terribly inhuman and improper practice.

FS: So let us agree that neither side will do this.

JS (AP): Consular access should also be provided as per agreement.

FS: There are some parties, especially, there is one Mr. Suri, who requires a visa to visit prisons in Pakistan to locate his son (one of our missing defence personnel.) We have received appeals from these persons. There are two representatives who want to visit Pakistan.

Pak FS: We would like to be given some notice for making arrangements; say about a week.
JS (AP): There are in fact four or five persons also relatives of missing defence personnel who want to come with Major Suri’s father.

Pak FS: We would do our best to satisfy them. Maybe we can organize surprise visits to different jails; otherwise they would be back with misgivings.

DG (SA): There is also one lady in a similar situation from our side; we hope we will get reciprocal facility.

FS: There are some additional points I want to mention. We want to undertake survey in Sir Creek Area in mid January/February with a ship probably Sandhyak; we just want to mention so that it does not cause any apprehension or alarm on your side (JS-AP explained the area in which the survey ship will operate).

Pak FS: This could create complications as the land boundary itself is not delimited and there are differences on this question; whether the Sir Creek Boundary lies on mid channel or entirely on one side of the Creek.

FS: There could be an early meeting of the Surveyors-General, or their representatives to sort out this issue. This could be held in February when the weather is more appropriate. (Both sides agreed to this).

In our discussions at Nandi Hills I had mentioned our readiness to reopen Khokharpur-Munabao rail route; you had mentioned that there could be some delay. As it is an important route for the people coming from or bound for southern areas in India or Pakistan it would be to our mutual benefit if we can finalize the date for signing the agreement.

Pak FS: We will ask our authorities. But there have been unfortunate developments in Karachi in the recent past; the authorities are agreed in restoring peace and calm in the area and this may take some more time. For reasons of our domestic political situation we will need authorization from a higher level; I will be grateful if you don’t press it.

FS: No, I will (not) press hard. You could consult your authorities and apprise us of your position.

I would like to discuss another matter - the circulation of objectionable material specially containing maps by the Pakistan Embassy in New Delhi. I have checked with Ambassador S.K. Singh. They are not doing any such thing, here.

Pak Amb.: Turning to JS (AP). Kindly, double check your source. I have made investigation in my Embassy and I find there is no distribution of objectionable material by us

FS: Some objectionable material including maps were distributed from the Pakistan pavilion at the Trade Fair. The issue figured in our Parliament. Our attention has also been drawn to the distribution of some objectionable material by the Embassy. Let us agree that our diplomatic missions shall avoid doing this in future.

Pak FS: We agree. We should avoid this and also avoid scoring points.

FS: We have discussed in the past that visitors having short term visas may be exempted from police reporting.

DG-(SA): We will try to resolve it at the next meeting of the Joint Commission.

JS (AP): All the decks are cleared from our side; we are prepared to proceed with this matter whenever you agree to do so.

FS: I should also mention that there have been considerable delays in clearing visas for the officials of our Missions and their domestic help; we would request that such cases may be cleared within a fortnight.

Pak FS: Many of these minor issues can be sorted out early if the atmosphere is good; there is a feeling among certain people in Pakistan, that promises made in the past such as on the establishment of a Pakistani Consulate have not been fulfilled. On the other hand you have a Consulate functioning in Karachi, whose activities go beyond permissible limits. Perhaps the Consulate could be advised to be more cautious especially during sensitive periods. I hope you will be mindful of the fact that many people here think that India has a unilateral advantage in having its Consulate in Karachi. We have requested for your assistance in opening a Consulate in Bombay; there is also a deep feeling that Jinnah House should be maintained properly; it had been promised to us but later we were told that we could not get it. It is up to you to decide what you want to do with it since it is your property. But there are deep feelings on this in Pakistan. We only want that it should be properly maintained since it is the only house that Quaid-e-Azam Jinnah had built with his own architectural design.

[SOME MATERIAL IS MISSING]

F.S.: I too would like you to invite you to Delhi for carrying forward this dialogue, but you should come before the summer sets in and while the weather is good. We would be looking forward to your visit in the near future.

(The meeting concluded with the usual round of pleasantries.

Dear Mr. President,

I sincerely appreciated the spirit in which you shared your thoughts with me on developments in Afghanistan and US security assistance to Pakistan in your letter of 21st November. I have benefited greatly from our correspondence and look forward to continued interaction on issues of mutual concern.

Our position in Afghanistan is, as you know, that the country should be allowed to chart an independent, nonaligned course, free from intervention and interference. I reiterated this to General Secretary Gorbachev. I also conveyed to him the gist of what you had written to me. The General Secretary left me with the impression that the Soviet Union would like to withdraw its forces in a realistic time-frame from an Afghanistan which would be nonaligned and not unfriendly to the Soviet Union. I hope that a peaceful resolution will not elude us for long. Quite apart from other factors, an early settlement would be in India's interest.

Pakistan has been exploiting the situation in Afghanistan to acquire higher levels and types of arms. Most of these have little or no bearing on any possible conflict on the Afghan border. I am glad that you have agreed to keep our concerns in mind on Pakistan's perceived requirement of enhanced early warning capability on its mountainous western border. There were disconcerting reports on the possible supply of AWACS aircraft to Pakistan. This would trigger a qualitative new phase in the arms race in our area and enhance tensions to dangerous levels.

In your letter which Secretary Weinberger carried during his visit to India, you had rightly pointed out that peace requires true nuclear restraints. We remain very seriously concerned at Pakistan's nuclear weapon programme. Pakistan's military controlled and clandestinely acquired nuclear weapons capability cannot be seen in a bilateral context with India. The risk of nuclear weapons proliferation in our region is posed by Pakistan and that is where it must be addressed.

I shared these and other concerns frankly with Prime Minister Junejo when we met in Bangalore last month. Notwithstanding provocations, we have decided to continue our dialogue for normalization of relations. We hope that as a result of recent talks Pakistan will cease its assistance to terrorists in India and start cooperating with us in curbing drug trafficking. These twin evils are often interlinked. Pakistan has accepted our suggestion that American Drug Liaison Officers could be associated in our bilateral consultations. This is an encouraging development. I hope that in the coming months we will see concrete manifestations of Pakistan's proclaimed intentions of building the trouble-free and cooperative relationship that we desire.

Your are aware of my views on nuclear disarmament. This naturally figured in my talks with General Secretary Gorbachev. I expressed our serious concern at the breakdown of the Reykjavik talks, which could have been a historic turning point in the post-war period. I also signed a joint declaration with General Secretary Gorbachev on a non-violent and nuclear-free world. This document embodies the principles we have been advocating over the years, even before our independence. I sincerely hope that these values will be accepted by all countries.

We attach great importance to our relations with the United States. We would like to strengthen our ties by expanding our existing cooperation and moving into new areas of cooperation in high technology and also in defence. After discussions which Secretary Weinberger had in India it may be possible for us to move further and establish greater linkages in the areas of defence cooperation and technology transfers. I understand that both sides have agreed on the need to have institutionalized focal points for clearance of defence technology transfers but the methodology has yet to be worked out.

Sonia joins me in sending Mrs. Reagan and you our warmest regards and best wishes for the New Year.

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- Rajiv Gandhi

Letter from Embassy of India in Pakistan to the Ministry of External Affairs.

Embassy of India
482-F, Sector G-6/4,
Islamabad

No. ISC/311/1/87 January 12, 1987

My dear Satish,

Yesterday when I met Shamshad Ahmed in the Pak Foreign Ministry in some other connection, at one point during our free-wheeling discussion of bilateral relations he raised with me the issue of what he alleged was a continued propaganda campaign by AIR, DOORDARSHAN and the press in India.

2. After mentioning the Sindhi language broadcasts on AIR and in particular several letters from readers which he maintained appeared to be spurious, he also said that Pak Government had gone out on a limb including a specific reference to Punjab in the joint press Statement at the end of the Home Secretary’s visit in December 1986. He claimed, therefore, that continued abatement to secession in Sind and propaganda inciting anti-Government protests and violence at this stage struck a jarring note. I told Shamshad that in fact JS (XP) had come during Foreign Secretary’s visit equipped with a sheaf of extracts from Radio Pakistan and PTV propaganda which were tendentious and often provocative. As an example, I draw his attention to the last 2 or 3 days during which Pakistan Times appears to have relapsed into its old ways of India-baiting.

3. Shamshad also told me that the Lahore Press statement jointly issued by both Governments had aroused criticism and many had questioned in Pakistan why the Government had accepted Indian allegations and our evidence charging Pakistan’s complicity in terrorist violence in Punjab. Describing the video tape we showed in Lahore during Home Secretary’s visit as a clumsy studio production, he said that the “evidence” had impressed no one in the Pak delegation or the rest of the Government.

4. After hearing him out, I felt constrained to speak to Shamshad in somewhat plain terms. I told him that the video film was not intended by us to pass muster with the jury in Cannes, and that the talks in Lahore were not a film festival. The message which we wanted to convey, I said, in case representatives of the Interior Ministry and intelligence agencies in the conference hall in Lahore had not already got it, was simply, we could cite specific details in the course of the testimony by captured Sikh extremists which would go some way in persuading Pak intelligence agencies, errant as they had been in the past according to the Pak Interior Secretary, that we were well informed on their complicity. It was incumbent, I said, upon the Pak Foreign Ministry and the rest of the Government to draw fair inferences from our presentation and reassess for themselves whether the Government of Pakistan wants to give up its policy of inciting violence in Punjab and aiding abetting extremist there, condemning bilateral relations to further deteriorate, or make a genuine and comprehensive effort to desist from past policy. As for evidence, I drew Shamshad's attention to Home Secretary's remarks, posing the question whether Pakistan expects our security forces to go into Pakistani territory in order to produce the evidence which they appear to be thirsting for.

5. Finally I told Shamshad that I was surprised and pained to see the ambiguity in his remarks -- which he promptly disowned -- and emphasized Home Secretary's statements to the media on his return to India, as well as Foreign Secretary's explicit observations in his talks here, that we would judge the Government of Pakistan not only by the assurances it had given, but by substantive actions it takes to prove its good intent.

6. You might like to bring this suitably to the attention of the Foreign Secretary and Home Secretary.

Yours sincerely

(A.B. Patwardhan)

Shri Satish Chandra,
Joint Secretary (AP),
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
My dear Kiran,

Please refer to your letter No. TRIP/P/103/4/85 dated 3rd January, 1987 regarding Pakistan’s involvement with Sikh extremists.

2. During Home Secretary’s visit to Pakistan, there was an in-depth discussion on Pakistan’s involvement with Sikh extremists. The Pakistanis, for the first time in formal disessions, admitted their involvement with the Sikh extremists, but indicated that these were things of the past and that they wanted to turn a new leaf. They also undertook, as would be evident from para 5 of the press release issued following Home Secretary’s visit, that they would not henceforth provide any support to terrorist activities directed against India. Thus, there was clear admission of guilt on the part of Pakistan in this matter during the extremely free and frank discussions between our Home Secretary and Pakistan’s Interior secretary. It may be noted that this admission was in discussions headed by the Home Secretaries (Pakistan foreign office officials were somewhat unhappy). The Pakistani denial of any involvement to the Foreign Secretary subsequently was in the nature of a proforma denial which Pakistan has constantly been making in this matter at the foreign office level. You may therefore, continue to make the point that the Pakistani side admitted some “wrong doing”. Naturally this point should be made only in discreet briefings as this admission was made in privileged bilateral exchanges.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

(Satish Chandra)

Shri K. Doshi,
Ambassador of India, Tripoli.

Summary Record Note of the meeting between Pakistan Ambassador and Foreign Secretary.

The Pakistan Ambassador accompanied by Counselor Kamran Niaz called on Foreign Secretary at 5.00 p.m. on Friday, the 16th January, 1987.

2. Ambassador S.K. Singh and Joint Secretary (AP) were also present.

3. After an exchange of pleasantries, the Pakistan Ambassador stated that it was important to keep the normalization process between India and Pakistan moving. It was in this context that he had come and had been authorized to hand over the list which in September he had only been permitted to read out. He hoped that this list would be kept confidential and particulars about it not leaked to the press as had been done on the previous occasion.

4. F.S. pointed out that it has been a great pleasure for him to have visited Pakistan. He was fully in agreement with the view that the normalization process which had been brought back on rails should be continued. He assured the Ambassador that there had not been any leak whatsoever about the list from the Ministry of External Affairs.

5. In response to a query the Pakistan Ambassador confirmed that the list handed over by him (copy enclosed not available here)) was identical to the list which had earlier been read out by him to the Foreign Secretary in September. This list contained only 15 to 20 items from the list of 233 items of export interest to India which had been conveyed to Pakistan in January 1986. India could certainly enlarge this list so that Pakistan could respond with a more meaningful list of items which it could import from India.

6. Foreign Secretary drew attention to the list of 233 item earlier conveyed by us and handed over another copy of the same (copy enclosed not available here)). He suggested that this may be re-examined and more items selected for import to Pakistan. Ambassador S.K. Singh pointed out that our handing over of such a list went against the principles of GATT as we were looking for unfettered trade with Pakistan. Our Commerce Ministry, therefore, was reluctant to hand over any further lists.

7. The Pakistan Ambassador stated that Pakistan was committed to work for MFN relations between the two countries. There were however, political and economic constraints. This had been clearly spelt out before Finance Minister V.P. Singh during his visit to Pakistan in January 1986. It was in this context that Pakistan wanted to adopt a step by step approach. 42 items were already imported in the private sector and this list would be steadily expanded. Indeed, with the list furnished by Pakistan as many as 300 items were being cleared for trade in the private sector. Even though list was not appetizing, it represented a forward step and further items could be added thereto. In this context the Ambassador indicated that he would recommend to his Government the furnishing of an additional list of items which Pakistan could import from India in the private sector.

8. The Foreign Secretary stated that if such a meaningful list could be furnished then it certainly would facilitate the convening of an early meeting of the Sub-Commissions.

9. The Pakistan Ambassador mentioned that it was extremely important to have the Sub-Commissions’ meetings before Foreign Secretary Sattar’s visit to India so that the Joint Commission could take place before the onset of summer.

10. In response to the Pakistan Ambassador’s observation that it was unfortunate that the press continue to make out that Pakistani intruders were infiltrating into India, Foreign Secretary spoke to the Home Secretary and the latter agreed that such publicity was not called for and he would ask the concerned Police authorities to exercise restraint. The Pakistan Ambassador also expressed unhappiness about statements made by General Wadhera on Kashmir. Foreign Secretary indicated that the Army had already been asked to exercise restraint in such matters.

The meeting terminated at 5.45 p.m.

Press briefing by the Official Spokespersons of the Indian External Affairs Ministry and the Pakistan Foreign Ministry on the question of deployment of troops along the India-Pakistan border.

India sealed its Punjab border with Pakistan in response to, what the Indian Defence Ministry said, “continued mobilization of Pakistan troops all along the western border”. The Spokesman of the Indian External Affairs Ministry said that a ‘Red Alert’ had been issued to army and air force, and simultaneously high level diplomatic moves were initiated by India on January 23 to secure “speedy de-escalation of the tense situation”. The Indian Minister of State for External Affairs Natwar Singh summoned the Pakistani Ambassador Humayun Khan to the Ministry to convey Indian concerns. The External Affairs Minsiter N. D. Tiwari talked to the Soviet Ambassador V. N. Rykov and the Minister of State for Defence Arun Singh met the American Ambassador John Gunther Dean to convey India’s concerns over the Pakistani moves. The Spokesman said while ‘Ted Alert’ had been ordered for the army and the air force, the Navy had been told to “keep its eyes open”.

Making a heavy weather of what was described by Pakistan as unprecedented concentration of Indian troops on its borders, Pakistan moved to undertake “minimum precautionary and defensive measures” but simultaneously expressed its readiness for “reciprocal step” to de-escalate the “artificial and unnecessary tension” “between the two countries”.

Pakistan Foreign Office spokesman told newsman that Pakistan’s defensive measures posed no threat to India while the latter’s concentration of estimated 200,000 troops along Pakistan’s border gave it a capability for aggression and that could not be ignored.

Rejecting the Indian demand for the removal of Pakistani troops near the border as “unilateral, unfair, inadmissible and unacceptable”, the spokesman, however, reiterated that “Pakistan was ready to enter into consultations immediately at any level with a view to reversing the spiral of escalation started by India’s decision to conduct military exercises of an unprecedented nature and size near Pakistan’s borders at a cost of nearly $ 250 million.

Pakistan had already briefed the envoys of some countries about the latest developments on the India-Pakistan border situation and instructions had been cabled to its UN Ambassador to brief others there, the spokesman said.

He said the suggested talks of de-escalation could be held at any level – Foreign Office, Defence Ministry or Director Generals of Military Operations.
"We are ready to give assurances that we have no desire to escalate tension. We hope India is ready to give a similar response and we are waiting for such a gesture", he added.

He said in fact the offer of such an assurance was communicated to the Indian side by the Director General, Military Operations, in a telephonic contact.

Replying to a question about the possible Indian motivation for the latest concentration of its troops, the Pakistani spokesman said: "It is difficult to know what is in the mind of the other side" but emphasized that the matter needed "careful examination".

He recalled Prime Minister Junejo’s statement at Bangalore some months ago that the two countries should enter into an agreement for prior notification of troops movements as we done by several European countries.

The Pakistani spokesman said that Pakistan was led to believe at Bangalore last November that the size of the exercises to be conducted by India would be curtailed but regretted that no such action was subsequently taken.

According to the spokesman’s estimate, it appeared more than half of the Indian forces have been concentrated either on or close to Pakistan’s borders if one were to take into account five brigades and other armored formation in addition to 200,000 troops already mentioned.

He noted that during exercise, the Indian forces normally remained headquartered in southern and eastern areas but this was not the case in the current situation.

Replying to another question the spokesman described the Indian assertion incorrect that Pakistani troops had moved opposite the Fazilka-Abohar sector. Pakistan did not yet know the size of the troops India was moving into Punjab. The Pakistan Ambassador was called by the Indian Foreign Office on January 23 and sought assurances from Pakistan. But, he said the Indian government ordered for the movement of troops into Punjab without waiting for Pakistan’s response to the message.

The spokesman categorically said, in reply to a question, that there was no "corresponding concentration of Pakistani troops" anywhere on the Indo-Pak border. The Pakistani Armed Forces, he said, were carrying out their exercises in their usual exercise areas and did not congregate into concentration anywhere on the border.

Some of the formations had completed their exercises and already returned to their usual positions, and others would do so on completion of their exercises. He also contradicted that the Pakistani troops normally completed their exercise in November.
He noted that according to indications, the Brass Tack exercises of Indian Armed Forces would continue up to March and thus, the concentration of Indian troops would also continue till that time. It was, therefore, inevitable that Pakistan took minimum possible defensive measures. He, however, denied that the Pakistan Armed Forces were on ‘red alert’, but, there was ‘greater vigilance’, he said.

He said that Pakistan was giving sincere assurance to India that it wanted peace and tension free relations with that country.

Questioned about Pakistan’s over optimistic posture towards India, the spokesman observed that this optimism was borne because of its desire to have good neighbourly relations with India. This, he said, was the intention of the Pakistan government and expressed the hope that India would also respond positively for the improvement of the situation. He said that over a period of time, there was a peace offensive on the part of Pakistan. Earlier on January 22 the Pakistan Spokesman dismissed Indian concern at the Pakistani exercises as “unwarranted” and said India, perhaps wished to divert attention from the “unprecedented multi-corps concentration of Indian troops in Rajasthan.”

1127. Statement by Pakistan Prime Minister on the developing situation on the India – Pakistan border.

Pakistan Prime Minister Mohmmad Khan Junejo, speaking on the deployment of Indian forces close to Pakistan’s border and resultant tension told a joint sitting of the two Houses of Parliament on January 25 that without raising any alarm, he would like it to be known that “an unusual situation has been built up on our borders.”

During the course of his 35 minutes prepared statement, the Prime Minister expressed the hope that the Indian government would quickly respond positively to Pakistan’s offer of immediate consultations to defuse the tension. It was reported that the Indian government had responded positively, he said, but added “we are waiting for its formal reply.”

He said that he could not as yet (January 25 noon) say that the situation was entirely normal. He stressed the need for being vigilant without doing anything to exacerbate tensions. “We do need to take precautions,” he further said and warned, “The situation does not permit complacency.”

Mr. Junejo, at some length, recalled the genesis of the present tension and pointed out that apprehending an undue rise in tension between the two countries as a result of unprecedented Indian military exercises close to Pakistan's borders even without a prior notification to Islamabad, he had proposed to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi in November in Bangalore the need to reduce the size and time of the exercises in the interest of continuing efforts of promoting good neighbourly relations.

He said that Mr. Rajiv Gandhi had indicated his intention to scale down the exercises. However, he further said, that did not happen and Pakistan had no option but to maintain full vigilance because legitimate apprehension and danger existed that such a large movement of Indian troops gave them a capability that could be diverted from the purpose of an exercise.

Strongly defending Pakistan's defensive military steps, the Prime Minister said India should not expect that in the face of heavy concentration of Indian military might close to its borders, scrupulous care was taken to avoid steps which might heighten tension between the two countries, he added.

He asked the members to make a dispassionate and objective assessment of the situation in the light of his statement while continuing a discussion on the issue at separate meetings of the Senate and the National Assembly in order to bring about a consensus on the subject as was implied in democracy.

He reiterated Pakistan's policy of striving to work for normalization of relations and developing good neighbourly relations with India on the basis of sovereign equality and mutuality of benefits. He said: “We believe that objective conditions exist for Pakistan and India to open a new chapter in their relations” in spite of the past vicissitudes.

He said that Pakistan had no desire to take advantage of internal problems of its neighbour, in an oblivious reference to Indian charge of Pakistan's assistance to the Indian Sikh extremists.

The Prime Minister assured Parliament that defence of liberty and integrity remained supreme with the government and said: “We have to remember that there is no greater guarantee of a nation’s security and the inviolability its of frontiers than its own unity and solidarity. ‘It is our covenant with Almighty Allah that we shall never be found wanting in the defence of our motherland,” he declared.

Meanwhile an announcement in New Delhi on January 25 said that it was proposed to hold talks with Pakistan to lessen the tension on the India-Pakistan border. The talks were proposed to be held in New Delhi and the Indian delegation would be led by Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs Alfred Gonsalves. Initially when the Pakistan Ambassador met the Indian Minister Natwar Singh the latter invited the Pakistani delegation for talks to defuse the tension. In a parallel move the Indian Prime Minister in order to help reduce the tension invited the Pakistani President Zia to visit India in March to witness the one-day cricket match in Pune. The invitation was sent through NKP Salve President of the Indian Cricket Control Board who was visiting Karachi on January 27 to attend the meetings of the India-Pakistan Joint Management Committee and the International Cricket Conference Management Committee. Mr. Salve had called on Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi before leaving for Karachi. It may be recalled that President Zia had asked Rajiv Gandhi to allow him to witness the match. Mr. Gandhi also conveyed to Pakistan that India did not want any tension on the border and did not want any escalation of tension by the deployment of the forces of the two countries. According to media reports Mr. Gandhi conveyed this message to President Zia through Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak who was in Kuwait where he and Zia were attending the Islamic Summit. Mr. Gandhi had also telephoned Prime Minister Junejo as part of his peace initiative. Regarding the proposed meeting of the Secretaries of the two countries to defuse the tension Junejo confirmed to the media on January 25 that it was the telephone of Mr. Gandhi on January 24 which facilitated a meeting of the Secretaries of the two countries on the border question.

1128. Summary Record Note of the meeting between Minister of State K. Natwar Singh and Pakistan Ambassador Dr. Humayun Khan.

Shri K. Natwar Singh, MOS (N) received the Pakistan Ambassador at 1.15 p.m. on Friday, 30th January, 1987. This was in continuation of PM’s and MOS’s talk with the Pak Ambassador on 23.1.87.

2. Ambassador Humayun Khan indicated that during his recent discussions with PM, the latter had suggestion that all channels of communications should be kept open between the two countries and there should be “a continuous feed into the system”.

SECRET
It was in this context that the Ambassador had suggested that the current operative channel notably the DMO’s hotline should be kept active. In this context the Ambassador also felt that both sides should exercise great restraint on the line of control in J & K where there were firing incidents every day. This would be a wise precaution. He had moreover already suggested this to his own Government.

3. Referring to Mr. Sattar’s visit, MOS (N) pointed out that we would like to confine this visit to sorting out the present tension on the border. No other matters would be discussed.

4. The Pakistan Ambassador requested for calls for Mr. Sattar on PM, EAM and MOS (n).

5. MOS (N) indicated that he would be happy to receive Mr. Sattar at 10.15 a.m tomorrow morning and thereafter he would be going to his constituency. EAM and PM were also likely to be away tomorrow.

6. Ambassador Humayun Khan stated that perhaps the calls could be arranged on Monday, 2nd February, 1987, prior to Mr. Sattar’s departure on that day.

7. In conclusion in response to MOS (N)’s inquiry the Ambassador indicated that the formal move for Mr. Sahabzada Yaqub Khan’s nomination as D.G. UNESCO would, probably be made in March. He indicated that Sahabzada Yaqub Khan was most appreciative of PM’s kind remarks about him in Bangalore.

8. The meeting terminated at 1.25 p.m.

Summary Record of the discussions between Pakistan’s Foreign Secretary Abdul Sattar and Minister of State K. Natwar Singh.

Pakistan’s Foreign Secretary Mr. Abdul Sattar called on our Minister of State for External Affairs Shri K. Natwar Singh at 10.15 A.M. on 31.1. 87 in the latter’s office. A list of those present is attached, the following is the summary record of discussion which took place:

MOS: I welcome you here this morning. We are happy that you have come to start the talk on the question of defusing tension at the borders, and I sincerely hope that you will be able to achieve progress in your task.

Pak FS: I would like to first of all to deliver a message from our Foreign Minister. This message is to the effect that we are keenly desirous for de-escalation. Let me state that we in the Foreign Office are not very knowledgeable about military affairs. However, we do have a mandate from our leadership to de-escalate the present situation. In this context we appreciate your own efforts, especially the meetings you had with our Ambassador: We greatly value your interest in Indo-Pak relations. Few people are more knowledgeable than you about the complex relationship between India and Pakistan, and we hope that the normalization process, the seed of which has been to a great extent planted under your care would be nurtured and allowed to grow under your able guidance. Our Foreign Minister wants me to convey that we will make all efforts to ease the situation at the borders and restore normalcy.

MOS: I would also like you to convey my respects to Sahabzada saheb. We are equally desirous of defusing the tension, I am happy that you and our Secretary had brief consultations last night, and I sincerely hope that any possibility of friction which exists can be removed. As regards the question of being knowledgeable about Indo-Pak relations, we ourselves hold you in your high esteem and it’s a damned shame that you are on the other side.

(Pak Foreign Secretary and Pak Ambassador laughed in appreciation) Good neighbourliness is a sentiment that we also cherish. As regards the situation at the borders you must go in to the details and the dimensions of the problem so that such escalation can be avoided in future. Your discussions will necessarily be very comprehensive and it is possible that the exercise which you start may not be over in this present round.

Pak FS: We are prepared to join you in de-escalating the situation.
MOS: What is the composition of your delegation? Whom have you brought along with you?

Pak FS: Let me confess that (we) were not very clear as to what the composition of our delegation should be. The impression we had and which was based on the conversation between our two Prime Ministers on 26th January was that Prime Minister Shri Rajiv Gandhi wanted the talks to be at the Foreign Office level. We checked through your Ambassador Mr. S.K. Singh in Islamabad and we were told that representatives from the Ministry of Defence should also be O.K. Therefore we have brought along with us Major General Raja Mohammad Iqbal who has been for some years the Additional Secretary in the Ministry of Defence. We have also brought Brigadier Riaz Ahmad, Director of Military Operations and Group Captain Syed Shahid Zulfikar Ali, Director of Air Force Operations. In addition, we have two representatives from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Tariq Altaf who is the Director on the India Desk and myself.

We would like you to instruct us about how we should conduct the meeting. We would also like you to let us know whether it should continue at the level of Foreign Secretary, or whether the level should be upgraded.

MOS: Our new Foreign Secretary would be taking over in the middle of February.

Pak FS: What about raising the talks to the Foreign Minister level?

MOS: We will see how these talks go and then decide whether there is any need to raise the level.

Pak FS: I must say that the process of lowering the tension has already started. In fact it started with the recent statement of your Prime Minister.

MOS: Also Prime Minister Junejo’s statement contributed in this direction.

Pak FS: Many of us in Pakistan are now feeling that if we had waited for another day, then may be the Joint Session of our Parliament which Prime Minister Junejo addressed may not have been necessary.

As I see the task before us involves a simple and straightforward exercise, though I may not be understanding the complexities involved. We have climbed up the ladder, and we should now climb down in a manner that is considered acceptable by both sides. We should not expect either side to incur risks that it would not be prepared to expect. It should be possible to prevent the past from pre-empting the future. We would depend on our professional colleagues from the Ministry of Defence, but so long as our own Governments are determined-as they are-we should not have difficulties in de-escalating the situation.

MOS: Do you also want to look beyond the immediate requirement and see how such escalations of tension can be avoided in future?
Pak FS: I have been reading suggestions in our own press in this context. However, we should first think of the immediate tasks we have before us and then take up the long-term tasks for it may adversely affect our efforts to tackle the task for the present. The Government of Pakistan has given me a task based upon the conversation between the two Prime Ministers on 26th January to de-escalate the tension. Therefore I would think of my task in immediate terms and may be the task relating to the future can be taken up at later-perhaps at Minister level.

MOS: In any case I wish you the very best during your stay here. I hope that you and our Secretary will have purposeful talks.

(The meeting terminated at 10.40 A.M.)

1130. Summary Record Note of restricted meeting between Pakistan Delegation led by Pakistan Foreign Secretary Abdul Sattar and Secretary Ministry of External Affairs A.S. Gonsalves.

Shri A.S.Gonsalves: As per the discussions held yesterday we are now prepared for talks at the military level.

Foreign Secy.Sattar: It is for decision whether the discussions by the military experts should be in respect of the whole border or should be on a sector by sector basis.

Shri Gonsalves: I think a sector by sector discussion would appear to be most appropriate approach.

Mr. N.N.Vohra: We may commence the talks from the Northern area. Once an agreement is reached in one sector, discussions could move on to the next sector. The first point in the discussions could be the Shakargarh bulge in which the forces of both sides are present. In regard to the remarks made by General Iqbal yesterday about a class 50 bridge in this area, I may point out that it is no more than causeway connecting Lassian Enclave to our territory. This causeway has been under construction for over two years and there is no bridge as such in this region.
Gen. K.S. Gill: It would be more practical to go for a sector by sector discussion. I may assure you that India would be ready to abide by any time-frame which satisfies Pakistan for de-escalation.

Mr. Vohra: I would specifically like to know what Pakistan would be prepared to do for redeployment of Army Reserve North.

Gen. Iqbal: The current tense situation has basically arisen because of exercise Brass Tacks which led to the relocation of Army Reserve North. The impression seems to have been created in India that precautions taken by Pakistan were more than were necessary. I may assure you that the movement of Army Reserve North was essentially defensive, in response to this state India had moved additional formations into the North by way of two Armoured divisions. De-escalation can be considered sector wise, While the Shakargarh area is sometimes viewed as one entity, it really comprised two areas-one abutting on Jammu and Kashmir and the other on Punjab. I feel that no additional forces should be inducted in these areas, no new developments like bridges should be allowed to take place, and additional formations should be removed.

Gen. Gill: In respect of Ravi-Chenab corridor forces on both sides should disengage and the forces of the sector should return to their peace time locations. We do not attach any military significance to the bridge referred to earlier. Additional forces which had moved into this area should be moved out of the sector. Army Reserve North would come within the scope of this withdrawal.

Mr. Vohra: I may mention that the bridge is in a state of disrepair and is not really meant for armoured movement.

General Iqbal: In the Shakargarh bulge, two commands are involved, namely India’s Northern Command and India’s Western Command. If India did not move its forces back East of the Ravi, it would be difficult for him to convince his authorities to re-locate Army Reserve North.

Break in note taking at 12.35 p.m.

Note taking resumed at 12.50 p.m.

Shri Vohra: For three days we have been talking in terms of the threat perception created by exercise Brass Tacks. We have clarified that there is no intention on our part to pose a threat. In practical terms the only way we can go about our task of de-escalation is on a sector by sector basis. We have to trust each other. If Brass Tacks is going to be the basis of all these discussions then it would be difficult to proceed further. It is in this context that we are proposing initiating discussions on the Chenab-Ravi sector.
Shri Gonsalves: We may, I feel proceed on a sector by sector basis and reach final agreement only when the whole totality is seen.

Gen Iqbal: The point made by the Pakistan side is not intended to stall the sector by sector approach. What is being stated is the relationship of reserves/ formations/state of alertness of various forces vis-a-vis others. When one side’s armoured units are out in the field it is difficult to keep the other’s in peace time locations.

Brig Riaz Ahmed: It is as a result of Brass Tacks that Pakistani armoured formations have been deployed. This is by way of a reaction. Of course, these deployments are not directly related to the area of the Indian exercises.

Shri Vohra: If Brass Tacks is worrying Pakistan, you should come out with your best suggestion about where you can deploy your Army Reserve North.

Gen Iqbal: suggests the meeting should break up in order to enable us to consider the matter further.

The meeting terminated at 1.15 p.m.

1131. SECRET

Summary Record of discussion during the call by Pakistan Foreign Secretary Abdul Sattar on Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

PRIME MINISTER’S OFFICE

Mr. Sattar thanked PM for finding the time to receive him.

2. PM said that he was glad that the talks on de-escalation had gone on well and resulted in a positive outcome. It should lead to further arrangements in other sectors for diffusing tensions.

3. Mr. Sattar said that the situation had been effectively diffused from the time PM spoke to Prime Minister Junejo. He requested PM to keep such a channel of communications open.

4. PM asked Mr. Sattar to convey his greetings to President Zia and also his thanks for the kinos which he has sent.
5. Mr. Sattar said that he had been asked by Prime Minister Junejo to convey his warm greetings to PM. He said that, thanks to PM's guidance, the present tension had been diffused. He recalled PM's remark on one occasion if India and Pakistan kept on getting at each other neither country will be able to make appreciable progress. He hoped that with PM's guidance and that of the Government of Pakistan, constructive measures would be able to prevent the recurrence of such tensions and also to build an edifice of cooperation based on trust and goodwill. It was difficult to construct such a structure on shifting sands.

6. PM said that some cement could be put into the sand. He added that we welcomed President Zia's visit. But the first day of a cricket match was not very interesting.

7. Mr. Sattar said that one-day matches were much more interesting. The recent tensions should not obscure the fact that much had happened in Indo-Pak relations since the Simla Agreement. There had been difficulties but India and Pakistan had come a long way in strengthening contacts and interaction at different levels. This is thanks to the leadership of the two countries. The Pakistan Government had to face problems now in keeping the critics in their Parliament at bay. Much of this criticism was not only unnecessary but ill-informed.

8. PM remarked that we could transfer some of our technology in this area to Pakistan.

9. Mr. Sattar said that immediately after his telephone conversation with PM, PM Junejo had called a meeting at which more than 200 Pakistani Members of Parliament were present. The effort was to immediately pass the word around so as to allay public apprehensions. Mr. Sattar was also asked to talk to a number of people in the border areas. He had also been asked by Foreign Minister Yakub Khan to present his compliments to PM.

10. PM enquired how Foreign Minister Yakub Khan's campaign for the UNESCO post was going along. He wondered why Mr. Yakub Khan wanted to leave Pakistan at this critical stage when he could contribute so much.

11. Mr. Sattar said that the most difficult adjustment which Foreign Minister Yakub Khan had to make was in dealing with the provocative and unfounded criticism in their Parliament. He had had a long innings in Government, this being his fifth year as the Foreign Minister. He would now like to have a break. He is very familiar with Paris not only having served there as Ambassador but having done a staff course in France.

12. In response to a query by PM, Mr. Sattar said that there had been some positive movement in the Pak-Soviet dialogue on Afghanistan. Now both Pakistan and Soviet Union were telling each other they recognized that the other side genuinely wanted a political settlement and that such a statement was in the interest of the two countries. They were both clear that the time-frame of troop withdrawals would have to be negotiated and that the Soviet withdrawal should not lead to large-scale bloodshed. One of the major issues which were not clear was how a government of national reconciliation should be set up. Moscow thought that Najib could provide the answer. Pakistan was not in the same league as Soviet Union in trying to influence a Government in Afghanistan. This issue would have to be tackled. Pakistan hoped that the proximity talks scheduled in Geneva from 25th February would make significant progress. But they recognized that this may not be the last round of talks since the fundamental question to which he had referred to had not been answered.

13. Reverting to Indo-Pak relations, PM said ways should be found on slowing down the arms race in the subcontinent. The acquisition of large quantities of sophisticated arms by Pakistan obliged us to make similar acquisitions. This affected the economic development of both countries.

14. Mr. Sattar said that he did not know how this could be done. But one could draw genuine lesson from the negotiations that had just been held. In spite of up gradation of arms every soldier hoped that these arms would never be utilized.

15. PM said that armed forces in India are under civilian control. This was much less so in Pakistan.

16. Mr. Sattar then talked of the changing value systems and the problems posed by the steady decline in the living standards of bureaucrats. He hoped that the major generational change in both countries by 1990 would have a positive impact on Indo-Pak relations. By that year all those who had graduated from school in 1947 and had memories of the portion trauma would have retired.

17. In response to a query from Mr. Sattar, PM said that dates should be fixed and the composition of the delegation finalized within a fortnight for the next round of talks in Islamabad.

18. The meeting lasted for 40 minutes. Those present at the meeting included Secretary Gonsalves, Ambassador S.K. Singh and the Pakistan Ambassador.

Appendix Four Maps

Note: We have seen various maps purporting to represent Indian and Pakistani deployments and plans. However, those maps were unavailable for reproduction at this time. The following map representations provide a general idea of the location of Brass-tacks (in Indian and Pakistani versions) and of the movement of Army Reserves South and North.
1133. Briefing by the Official Spokesperson of the Pakistan Foreign Ministry on the pullout of troops along the border.

Pakistan and India started on February 11 the withdrawal of their troops from the Ravi-Chenab corridor to peace time locations in pursuance of February 4 accord to de-escalate tension on their borders. The process is to be completed in this sector by February 19*, said the Spokesman of the Pakistani Foreign Office.

He told newsmen in Islamabad that over 75,000 troops on both sides would "pull-out" of the corridor, while a still larger number were to "pull back" to their peace-time locations within the sector from the forward positions, where they were concentrated because of recent developments.

To carry forward the process of pull-out to other sectors all along the border, the officials of the two countries will meet in Islamabad before the end of the current month. The spokesman said Pakistan was now awaiting Indian response to its proposal for an early meeting on the subject within this month.

Rejecting the view that the pull out from the Ravi-Chenab sector was more advantageous to India, the spokesman emphasized that the February 4 agreement in principle related to the entire border and Indian withdrawal from the Rajasthan area would be effected as soon as the Indian triennial exercise were completed by the first week of March.

The spokesman, however, recognized the concern about Indian concentration in the Rajasthan area and pointed out that Pakistan had also taken precautionary measures there which were in the knowledge of India. But, he repeated, both sides had derived satisfaction from the fact that it had been agreed that neither side would attack the other.

* A press note issued by the Indian Ministry of Defence on February 19, 1987 said: "The pull out of troops from the Ravi-Chenab corridor, as set out in the accord arrived at on February 4, 1987 after the first round of talks between Pakistan and India to de-escalate the situation on the border, has been successfully completed.

"Pakistan has confirmed the pull out of its Army Reserve North consisting of 6 Armoured Division and 17 Infantry Division to their peace time locations and has also disengaged its troops form the forward positions in the Shakargah Bulge.

"On India’s part, 6th Mountain Division has returned to its peace time location and the troops deployed on the border in the corridor have returned to their cantonments. The pull out of troops by either side was accomplished in a phased manner and was monitored by the Director General of Military Operations of both Armies who remained in frequent contact with each other since February 7, 1987 through the hot line."
There is apparently no significance attached to the fact that the pull-out started six days after the February 4 agreement as the original time-table to complete it within 15 days, i.e. by February 19, is to be adhered to. The programme of withdrawals had been worked out through constant contacts between the Director General of Military Operations of the two sides during the past week. Meanwhile, the Chiefs of the two countries’ Air Forces were also reported to be in touch with each other on de-activating satellite air-fields, and necessary action was being taken to that effect.

The spokesman explained that the pull-out was of the kinds one relating to forces which had been inducted in the Ravi-Chenab sector from outside recently and the other of those which had moved to forward positions from the cantonments within the area. For the first category the term “pull-out” was being used while for the latter type the word used was “pull-back”.

The spokesman said the only reason for Pakistan to move forward its troops was one of caution and at no point did it intend either to launch an attack or instigate any segment of the Indian population - a reference to the Indian allegation that Pakistan was supporting the Sikh secessionist movement.

New Delhi

February 19, 1987

Excellency,

I have the honour to forward the following message from the Prime Minister of Pakistan, His Excellency Mr. Mohammad Khan Junejo to Your Excellency:

Begins:

Excellency,

The Pakistan forces are today completing their pull-out in the Ravi Chenab sector as, I understand, are the Indian forces, in implementation of the Agreement of 4 February 1987. This, I believe, is an auspicious beginning for the realization of our common aim of defusing tensions.

On this occasion, I would like to convey greetings to Your Excellency and also to reaffirm my Government's determination to extend all cooperation in reaching agreement on further measures on pull-out of troops in other sectors. Their return to peacetime locations will surely contribute to the restoration of normalcy.

I entirely agree with Your Excellency's views, expressed to our Foreign Secretary that our two countries should also move forward, with the implementation of the decisions we took during our meeting at Bangalore.

With cordial best wishes,

Mohammad Khan Junejo
Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan*

Ends

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

1136. SECRET

Record of discussions between Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq and Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

PRIME MINISTER’S OFFICE

After an exchange of pleasantries, President Zia said that whenever PM and he had talked there had been good understanding. But he did not know what happened after that. Things seemed to slide back.

2. PM said that a dialogue had been started at various levels and these should be continued. In December 1985 a good package had been worked out. The progress was not good due to various reasons. But there was no point in a post-mortem. Threads should be picked up from where they were left and the normalization process should be continued. One of the major problems was continuing suspicion and lack of trust which contributed to tensions. Greater exchanges and promotion of people to people contacts by easing travel restrictions, flow of information and publications etc. could reduce tensions. There was also the problem of Sikh terrorists in the Punjab.
3. President Zia said that he knew what it meant to have such a problem. He agreed that the process of implementing the December 1985 package should be expedited. This should lead to the meeting of the Joint Commission. The standing committees which were set up after the meeting of the Interior Secretaries in Pakistan should also get to work. There should be liberal travel and greater exchange of visits. He had brought with him his Minister for the Interior, Mr. M.A.H.Khattak. He was himself surprised to learn that Mr. Khattak was visiting India now after a gap of over 40 years. Similarly Deputy Speaker Jogezi, who was around 45 years old, was visiting India for the first time in his life.

4. PM said that this was an important aspect. There must be interaction among people in influential positions. Such exchanges would help in removing suspicions.

5. President Zia said that two sub-commissions, one on “information and culture” and the other on “trade”, are due to meet. Whenever the Indian side was ready, he would dispatch the Pak teams to Delhi.

6. PM said that we were ready to meetings of both sub-commissions.

7. President Zia said he had brought Dr. Mehboob-ul-Haq with him. He will be made a Minister and will have both the Commerce and Planning portfolios. He realized that trade was one of the areas where India was not satisfied with Pakistan.

8. PM said that we were always prepared to have a safeguard to take care of what, from the Pak point of view, was regarded with apprehension. Our reading was that trade would have nothing to do with the feared disadvantage of the Pak industry vis-a-vis Indian industry. At the initial stage, Pakistan could allow Indian firms fair international competition on items which in any case are being imported to Pakistan under normal import licences.

9. President Zia agreed to this. He pointed out that even without any agreement and all the restrictions in force Indo-Pak trade in the private sector totaled around $ 42 million last year. Surprisingly the balance was in Pakistan’s favour.

10. President Zia said that the meetings of the Sub-Commissions in India would pave the way for the meeting of the Joint Commission in Pakistan at the level of Finance Ministers.

11. PM pointed out that he was now Finance Minister.

12. President Zia said that he would be overwhelmed to receive PM in Pakistan at any time and sincerely hoped that he would make a visit soon. But the meeting could be at the MOS level. When it was pointed out that the Joint Commission meeting was the Foreign Ministerial level, President Zia hoped that EAM would visit Pakistan.

13. PM said that EAM would visit Pakistan after the Sub-Commissions had met in India and cleared the way for the Joint Commission meeting.

14. At this point Additional Secretary Tanvir Ahmed and JS(R), PMO, left and there was a one-to-one meeting between PM, and President Zia.

15. President Zia referred to talks on Afghanistan with the Soviet Union and said that these had covered (i) Soviet withdrawal, (ii) status of Afghanistan as a “neutral” country, (iii) a “nationalistic” government in Afghanistan and (v) return of refugees. He referred to an Indian role in expediting a solution.

16. PM referred to the problems caused by Pak acquisition of sophisticated arms from the US, which compelled us to also raise the level of technology of our arms. President Zia said that out of the total US aid package of a little over $ 4 billion only around $ 1.5 billion were for arms, mostly tanks, ammunition and for airborne “surveillance”.

17. The total meeting was for around 35 minutes.

18. On the way to the airport on 22 February, President Zia assured PM that he would do all that is possible to ensure Pak cooperation in the areas of curbing terrorism, border ground rules, drugs trafficking and smuggling. [This would have to be followed up immediately with the Pak Ambassador for further actions that would put the terrorists in the defensive].

(R.Sen)

Joint Secretary
22.2.1987.
Press Conference of Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq on return from Jaipur (India).

President Zia-ul-Haq on February 23, 1987 proposed some kind of joint India-Pakistan 'package declaration', binding the two countries to the renunciation of any support for separatist movements in either country.

Addressing a news conference at Islamabad Airport after his return from Jaipur, (where he had gone to witness the India-Pakistan cricket match) Gen Zia said the proposed declaration could embody Pakistan's non-interference in Punjab while India should likewise declare its non-involvement with issue like Pakhtunistan or Sindu Desh.

He said he made this offer during his talks with the Indian leaders in New Delhi on February 21 while assuring them that Pakistan would never interfere in developments in Punjab. He said the assurance was given by him on his own initiative as the issue was not raised by the Indian side. He added that he told them that if India desired, some kind of 'package declaration' could be jointly issued by the two sides, hoping that his proposal would yield good results.

While conceding that in view of the brief and informal nature of his visit to India all the issue could not be solved, Gen Zia felt that it had been quite a success in further defusing tension between the two countries. In fact, he added, recent political contacts plus the February 4 accord on troops pull-out in one sector had gone a long way in minimizing the chances of any conflict between the two countries. He said all those who accompanied him had been particularly moved by the warm reception accorded to them both in New Delhi and Jaipur.

He said the Indian Prime Minister had noted that large scale Indian military exercises had aroused some misgivings in Pakistan. In order to dispel any apprehensions, he added, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi had now decided to invite all military attaches based in the Indian capital, including from Pakistan, to witness the last phase of those exercises.

Replying to a question, he said Pakistan was prepared to cooperate with India in curbing smuggling, narcotics and the movement of terrorists across the border.

Urging newsmen to take a balanced view of his visit, Gen Zia said that though it should not be blown up to conclude that all problems had been settled in a brief exchange of views, yet it would not be an exaggeration to say that considerable headway had been made in improving relations. There was a strong desire and a felt need on both sides to expand mutual co-operation in various fields so that their resources could be diverted to the welfare of their peoples. He hoped, the forthcoming visit of an Indian delegation on February 26 to discuss the pull-out of troops in other sectors would also succeed in the same manner as the earlier Gonslaves-Sattar talks in New Delhi.

When a newsmen pointed out that in his cricket diplomacy he had been engaged in defensive batting while the other side had hurled only bouncers, Gen Zia quipped amidst laughter: “But you have completely ignored Zia-ul-Haq’s sixer.”

Gen Zia said that it was his impression, following his visit to India, that both countries did not want war and wished to utilize their resources and energies for the welfare of their people.

He noted that the recent developments, resulting from the statesmanship of Prime Minister Junejo and Mr. Rajiv Gandhi and the Foreign Secretaries’ accord amply demonstrated that the tense phase of Indo-Pak relations had been resolved amicably.

“It will be, therefore, correct to conclude that the chances of war between the two countries have diminished,” he said.

He said he had been told during his visit to India, that the impression in Pakistan that India had not reconciled to the establishment of Pakistan was not correct. On the contrary, it was insisted that India wished Pakistan well, he said.

He, however, stressed that Pakistan stood for ties with India on the basis of sovereign equality.

On a question, about the reports regarding sealing of the Indo-Pak border, he remarked that the border was in fact practically sealed at present.

He told another questioner that the Indian Prime Minister did not make any reference to the alleged sabotage from Pakistan. But, he said, he took the initiative to assure him that Pakistan did not wish to interfere in the internal affairs of India. If India desired a declaration from Pakistan, he proposed to Rajiv Gandhi that it could come through a package, under which India should also declare that it had no link with the so-called Sindhu Desh and Pakhtunistan. Pakistan had no hesitation to say that the problem of Sikhs was an internal matter of India. He expressed confidence that such a package would help promote a better atmosphere between the two countries.

Gen Zia declared that Pakistan would never compromise on principles. It was the policy of the elected government not to interfere in the internal affairs of the other countries, nor would it allow any one to do so in its internal affairs.
He, therefore, questioned the logic of the allegations of Pakistan's involvements in any disruption in India.

Talking about the outcome of his two-day visit which was undertaken at the invitation of the President of the Board of Control for Cricket in India and which had been termed as "cricket diplomacy," he said the invitations had come at a time when relations between the two countries were marked by tension on the border and which later had been defused due to sagacity and statesmanship of Mr. Junejo and Mr. Rajiv Gandhi.

He said that important matters had come under discussion during his talks with the Indian leaders, which, he was confident, would have a positive bearing on the Indo-Pak ties.

He told another questioner that the Indian government had on February 22 announced constitution of the sub-commissions, on trade, culture and information as part of the Joint Ministerial Commission. He noted that these Commissions which had not met for the last one year would do so soon. This, he said, was also a positive move.

He said, in reply to another question, that Pakistan had a principled stand on Kashmir and wished the resolution of this dispute at the level which was agreed upon between the two countries.

Similarly, Pakistan looked towards a peaceful settlement of the dispute in keeping with the spirit of the Simla Agreement.

He told another questioner that his overall impression, and that of the members of his entourage, during the two days of visit to India, was that both countries wanted pleasant ties on the basis of sovereign equality.

Relying to another question, he referred to Soviet leader Gorbachev's statements during his recent visit to Delhi, and said that it was his impression that the Soviet Union not only wished to have good relations with Pakistan, but also desired good ties between Pakistan and India.

He expressed Pakistan government's determinations to promote good neighbourly relations with India on the basis of equality and mutual trust so that both the countries could divert their resources for the welfare of the people. "We are pursuing such a policy and shall continue to do so in future," he said.

Talking to newsmen in Jaipur before his departure for Islamabad, Gen Zia expressed the hope that the Soviet Union would back up Pakistan's initiative for a political solution of the Afghanistan issue boldly and added the recent initiative taken by Soviet leader Gorbachev was encouraging and had some basic ingredients of a good solution and Pakistan supports them fully. These proposals had the seeds of an early solution and required bold action on the part of the Soviet Union to implement them in the spirit in which these proposals had been made. He said Pakistan was very grateful to India for its support for a political solution of the problem.

Replying to a question about nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, Gen Zia emphasized that Pakistan was against nuclear proliferation but its approach to this question was based on principles.

In reply to a question about the understanding between Pakistan and India not to attack each others nuclear installations, he said the agreement was valid in every manner and even though it had not been formally reduced into writing.

He said Indian President Giani Zail Singh and Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi would be most welcome to visit Pakistan at a date convenient to them. He hoped the visit would help promote political and other aspects of Indo-Pak relations.

Meanwhile the Indian Ambassador, Mr. S.K. Singh, said that Gen Zia’s visit to India had lessened tension and helped bring the situation to normal. He added that he completely agreed with Gen Zia that the visit had ended the misunderstanding between the two countries and the situation would improve with further contacts.

He said the people of both countries wanted to live in peace and were opposed to war. He also expressed his happiness over the warm welcome given to Gen Zia in India.

Giving a resume of the visit of Gen. Zia, the media reported that the talks between him and the Indian Prime Minister focused on bilateral relations and matters of mutual interest, took place at a dinner hosted in President Zia’s honour by Mr. Gandhi. Senior members of Gen Zia’s entourage, including Punjab Governor Makhdoom Sajjad Hussain Qureshi, Interior Minister Mohammad Aslam Khattak, Punjab Chief Minister Nawaz Sharif, Deputy Speaker of the National Assembly Sardar Wazir Ahmed Jogeza, Dr. Mahbubul Haq and Senator Farudullah Khan also attended the dinner.

Gen Zia and Mr. Rajiv Gandhi expressed the hope that relations between the two countries would develop further in the spirit of the February 4 agreement signed between the Foreign Secretaries of the two governments.

Talking to Pakistani newsman informally after his meeting with Mr. Rajiv Gandhi President Zia described his meeting with the Indian leaders as extremely useful.
He said the Indian Prime Minister expressed similar desire for the promotion of friendly relations with Pakistan as were held by the latter. President Zia said that the Indian Prime Minister told him that Brass Tack exercises which had given rise to certain misgivings would be unfolded to foreign observers, heads of missions, and relevant attaches shortly after they were concluded to enable them to know about their correct nature.

Reporting on the arrival of President Zia-ul-Haq the media reports said that he received a cordial welcome from Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. As soon as Gen. Zia got off the ramp, he and Mr. Gandhi hugged each other and Mr. Gandhi presented Foreign Minister Narain Dutt Tiwari, Minister of State for External Affairs Natwar Singh, Minister-in-Waiting Ram Niwas Mirdha and Foreign Secretary K.P.S. Menon, to Gen Zia. Mrs. Sonia Gandhi received Begum Zia and members of the family accompanying Gen Zia. Speaking to newsman, Foreign Secretary KPS Menon described Gen Zia’s visit as being “unofficial, private and a cricketing one”.}

Summary of record note of meeting between Pakistan Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Zain Noorani, and Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs A.S. Gonsalves, Islamabad, February 27, 1987.

Shri A.S. Gonsalves, Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, called on Mr. Zain Noorani; Pakistan’s Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, in the latter’s office in Islamabad at 10-30 a.m. on Friday, 27 February, 1987.

After an exchange of courtesies, Mr. Noorani expressed happiness at the fact that Shri Gonsalves had been able to come to Islamabad before the end of the month as agreed to at Delhi. Shri Gonsalves responded that it had been felt that this visit would be most appropriate a few days after the pull-out in the Ravi-Chenab corridor as this would give both sides time to evaluate the completion of the de-induction. Moreover, an earlier visit had not been possible as there had been only one Secretary in the External affairs Ministry for much of this period.

Mr. Zain Noorani expressed some surprise at the appointment of Shri K.P.S. Menon as Foreign Secretary in view of the fact that he had, at the time of his appointment, only a few months to go for retirement. Shri Gonsalves pointed out that in India extensions had been given to officials on a number of occasions. Indeed in the Foreign Ministry itself as many as four Foreign Secretaries had received extensions.

Mr. Noorani complimented Shri Gonsalves on the role played by him in achieving the February 4 agreement. This agreement had been welcomed everywhere and was a credit to both the Secretaries, their delegations and above all, to the two Prime Ministers. He hoped that the ensuing talks would achieve meaningful progress as this is what the expectation of the peoples in both countries was. As far as Pakistan was concerned, he was confident that it had been recognized in India that it had no desire or interest in enmity with India. It wanted to have more than friendly relations with India and was, in fact, looking for fraternal ties.

Shri Gonsalves stated that there was no alternative for the two countries other than to have friendly relations in the context of the economic costs of an inimical relationship.

In a light-hearted vein, Mr. Noorani stated that in looking for improved relationships, both countries would do well to keep their respective ambassadors in the other country as well as Consul-General Aftab Seth well supplied with books so that they could keep themselves occupied in reading. Sometimes these representatives sent alarmist telegrams. Perhaps, if they were busy reading, they would not get so flustered.

(There was some banter at this point as to how the representatives of the two countries could be kept busy in various types of sporting activities)

Mr. Noorani stated that there were great hopes that the Sattar - Gonsalves team would pull off a further understanding during the upcoming second phase of discussions. It was hoped that these discussions would bring about a total withdrawal of troops. If there was any problem which required referral on the Pakistan side, he was sure that the Prime Minister would be available for advice and consultation. The Indian team must also have made similar arrangements.

Mr. Sattar stated that the Pakistan side had a greater advantage on this occasion as compared for the Indian side in terms of getting guidance since it was on home ground. It had been decided that discussions between the two sides would continue till results were achieved.

(At this point there was a brief discussion about the state of the communications system between India and Pakistan with Mr. Sattar making the point that Hot Lines were not really as useful as an overall improvement of the commercial communications network).
Shri Gonsalves made the point that both governments were fully committed to the de-escalation process. The Delhi agreement had given both sides equal satisfaction and it was his hope that further progress would be made. He pointed out that he had been most impressed with the manner in which the Pakistani delegation had been able to secure its instructions whilst in India. Indeed on many occasions it had been found that they could get their instructions quicker and more effectively in Delhi than was even possible, for the Indian delegation.

Mr. Noorani indicated that though Shri Gonsalves had come to Pakistan in another context, there were a couple of other issues which he would like to refer to. He wanted Shri Gonsalves to convey to the authorities in India that they must convince themselves that Pakistan was not involved in the troubles in Punjab or elsewhere in India and that it had no interest in these matters. When India was convinced of this, half the tension between the two countries would all be over.

Referring to the P.M.-Zia decision for the reactivation of the Joint Commission, Mr. Noorani stated that India should not make trade a question of prestige. In this context, he pointed out that he had suggested to Mr. Venkateswaran during the latter’s visit to Pakistan that if India did not find the list of 300-400 items furnished by Pakistan as adequate, it should give Pakistan the list of items which it felt should be imported by Pakistan. The same would be given favourable consideration in Pakistan. It was important to make a beginning in this matter and to build up an atmosphere of mutual trust.

Ambassador S.K. Singh, referring to the question of Pakistan’s involvement with Sikh terrorists, stated that it would be useful if the prosecution cases against the Canadian Sikhs could be withdrawn with a view to undertaking their expulsion from Pakistan. There was some discussion on this matter with Mr. Noorani stating that it was not enough that the Indian government agree to this idea as there was a possibility that the Indian press could be critical of such action. It was, however, felt that if an understanding could be arrived at between the two Ministries of External Affairs whereby their spokesmen could state that the decision for withdrawal of the cases against Canadian Sikhs and their expulsion had been taken in consultation, then the likelihood of criticism would be much diminished.

Mr. Noorani, in conclusion, indicated that the Sikhs in question to be debarred from entry to Pakistan were not sufficiently well identified and there was scope for misunderstanding. Ambassador S.K. Singh stated that most of the names communicated in this regard by the Government of India to the Government of Pakistan were all prominent Sikh extremists and there was little likelihood of any misunderstanding on this point.

The meeting terminated at 11.15 A.M.
1139. Summary record note of meeting between General Zia-ul-Haq and A. S. Gonsalves, Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs.

Shri A.S. Gonsalves, Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, called on President General Zia-ul Haq at the latter's residence in Rawalpindi at 7.00 P.M. on 28 February, 1987.

2. A list of others present at the meeting is appended. (not included)

3. After an exchange of courtesies Mr. Gonsalves mentioned that the first round of de-escalation talks had given satisfactions to all concerned. President Zia expressed the hope that the second round of negotiations in this matter would proceed even more smoothly than the first round. It was unfortunate that misapprehensions and misunderstandings had given birth to the tensions between the two countries. Mr. Gonsalves indicated that at the first round of discussions both sides had agreed quite rightly to initiate the de-escalation process along the border sector by sector. President Zia stated that he believed that while during the first round the de-escalation process had been started from the North during the second round it had been started from the South. He expressed the hope that Mr. Gonsalves would be able to visit Pakistan again. Mr. Gonsalves concluded by stating that the second phase of discussions would achieve the results expected from it.

4. Most of the meeting was made up of queries by the President about the antecedents of General Gill and Shri Vohra and of Jokes.

5. The meeting terminated at 7.30 P.M.

Summary record of meeting between Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo and A. S. Gonsalves, Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs.

Shri A. S. Gonsalves, Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, called on Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo at the latter's residence in Rawalpindi, at 8.30 p.m. on 1 March 1987.

2. A list of others present during the meeting is appended. (not included here)

3. Shri A.S. Gonsalves at the outset handed over a letter to Prime Minister Junejo from Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi indicating that this was a reply to Prime Minister Junejo's letter of 19 February, 1987. Shri Gonsalves mentioned that in his reply Prime Minister Gandhi had reciprocated the sentiments expressed by Mr. Junejo.

4. Prime Minister Junejo indicated that he was very happy that the first round of Sattar - Gonsalves talks had succeeded in defusing tension. He stated that consequent upon the escalation of tension, it was clear to him that talks between two sides were necessary to ascertain its causes and to defuse the situation. It was in this context that he had telephoned Mr. Rajiv Gandhi so as to facilitate a meeting between the two sides. He was glad that such a meeting had been arranged expeditiously and that it had cleared the situation. Subsequently when the pull out in the Shakargarh sector had been completed successfully as scheduled on 19th February he had thought it fit to send a message to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. The talks between the two sides resulting in the February 4 understanding was a major exercise and the present phase of discussions was merely a secondary step.

5. Foreign Secretary Sattar stated that this was why the press was not paying much attention to the present talks. Mr. Gonsalves interjected that this was all to the good and it revealed that real progress had been achieved.

6. In response to a query from the Prime Minister as to why he was not staying longer in Islamabad, Mr. Gonsalves stated that he was proceeding tomorrow to Lahore at the request of Foreign Secretary Sattar particularly as there were many people in the delegation who wished to go there.

7. At this point there was an exchange pertaining to Gen. Gill's association with Lahore. This was followed by an exchange about Prime Minister Junejo's imminent move to Islamabad from his present residence at Rawalpindi.
8. Prime Minister Junejo expressed deep appreciation for the sweets sent to him by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. He requested Mr. Gonsalves to convey his greetings to the Prime Minister.

9. Mr. Gonsalves stated that the sweets were a small token of the Prime Ministers regard for Prime Minister Junejo and that he too wished to convey the Prime Ministers greetings to Prime Minister Junejo.

10. Thereafter, there was an exchange of views about the Horse and Cattle show in Lahore.

11. Ambassador S.K. Singh mentioned that while there was little interaction between India and Pakistan in the field of horses in the previous years, there was an export of Pakistani horses to India in the current year. Prime Minister Junejo in turn indicated that while Pakistan may be exporting horses to India, the latter was exporting cattle to Pakistan. All this trade seems to be in the private sector with little governmental involvement.

12. Foreign Secretary Satter suggested that India should take greater care to control drug trafficking. While in 1986 Pakistan's share of heroin export to the UK was of the order of 10%, Indians share had risen to 29%. Mr. Gonsalves pointed out that while assessing India's share, it was important to note that India was only a transiting country and the heroin export originated in a country other than India. Mr. Sattar and Prime Minister Junejo referred to the numerous measures taken by the Pakistan Government to curb drug trafficking including the award of cash incentives and provision, of alternative employment opportunities to poppy cultivators. Mr. Gonsalves, however, mentioned that the incentives and alternative opportunities provided could not match the income from poppy cultivation. Accordingly, this was a difficult problem.

13. In response to queries, Ambassador S.K. Singh mentioned that hitherto poppy cultivation in India was highly controlled and was mainly for medicinal purposes. Most of the poppy production was disposed off under long term contracts. Poppy cultivation in India had however been adversely affected both due to the growth of synthetics and to the cancellation of many long term contracts. In these circumstances, poppy cultivation in India was going through a period of flux.

14. Mr. Junejo pointed out that many of the problems faced by Pakistan in regard to drug trafficking arose from Afghanistan's emergence as a point of entry. He made out that Afghanistan was not bothered in the least about controlling drug trafficking and, indeed, it was from that country that drugs were entering Pakistan. Notwithstanding all Pakistan's efforts to control drug trafficking entry from Afghanistan was proving to be a major problem. Drugs were a menace to society and even prominent citizens were falling prey to the temptation of getting involved in the drug trade.

15. In conclusion Mr. Junejo stated that while Mr. Gonsalves’s stay in Pakistan had been short but it had been extremely useful. The Foreign Office had been very happy with the outcome of the discussions. Mr. Gonsalves interjected that it was not only the Foreign Office that was happy, but other departments as well.

16. Foreign Secretary Sattar stated that the chief credit for the successful outcome of the talks went to General Iqbal and Mr. Vohra. Mr. Gonsalves stated that while they had undoubtedly contributed much to the successful outcome of the talks, it must not be forgotten that the credit went to the original directions received in the matter from the two Prime Ministers. Prime Minister Junejo proceeded, to make a number of references to the pressure for a peaceful settlement form the people on the borders, which had been evacuated in large numbers.

17. Thereafter, there was a brief discussion on fraud following Ambassador S.K. Singh’s remarks about his having been invited to Lahore earlier in the day for a function for presentation of an award to Sumita Patel by the Shaheer foundation, which had turned out to be a hoax. He mentioned that many prominent people had gone to the function including the Railway Minister only to find that none of the organizers where present. The P.M. offered to take action but the Ambassador suggested that the P.M. need not trouble himself with this issue particularly as the Railway Minister would be doing the needful.

18. The meeting terminated at 9.15 p.m.

1141. Letter from Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo to Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

PRIME MINISTER
15 Rajab 1407 AH

16 March, 1987

His Excellency
Mr. Rajiv Gandhi,
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi

My dear Prime Minister,

In various international organizations, non-aligned and developing countries are seeking to reform the present unequal framework of international relations inherited from the era of colonial domination. The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization is an important forum where the norms of a new and equitable world order are being evolved. The developing countries have a vital stake in influencing the outcome of this historic process within UNESCO.

Pakistan, therefore, attaches special importance to UNESCO's activities and programmes, particularly those of direct relevance to the developing countries. In recent years, we have closely followed the controversy created by certain quarters regarding UNESCO and endeavoured through conciliation and compromise to preserve and augment the role of this important multilateral institution.

As Director-General of UNESCO for nearly 12 years, Mr. Amadou Mahtar M'Bow, an eminent son of Senegal, has ably projected the aspirations of the developing countries. He has recently announced that he will not seek re-election to his office when his current term expires later this year.

Pakistan is convinced that the developing countries must maintain their stewardship of UNESCO. Desirous of serving their objectives and aspirations, the Government of Pakistan has decided to offer the candidature of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, Sahabzada Yaqub Khan, for the post of UNESCO's Director-General. I have, therefore, conveyed his nomination to the Chairman of the UNESCO Executive Board.

Foreign Minister Yaqub Khan has served his country with brilliance and unique distinction, as a soldier, a scholar and a diplomat. He is an accomplished man. He possesses vast knowledge in many diverse fields and is a linguist, proficient in several languages including English, French, Russian, German and Italian besides our national language, Urdu.

Sahabzada Yaqub Khan is familiar with the activities and problems of UNESCO, having served on two occasions as Pakistan's Permanent Representative to the Organization. With his proven administrative abilities, he is eminently qualified to head this Organization. I am confident that, as Director-General he will, by sincere endeavour and rational dialogue, succeed in enhancing UNESCO's capacity to serve the interests and aspirations of the developing countries.

I earnestly hope that the candidature of Sahabzada Yaqub Khan will receive Your Excellency's whole hearted endorsement. I look forward to your country's full support and assistance in the relevant bodies for his candidature as Director-General of UNESCO.
