15. All the sights here are now fixed on the Kashmir issue and Canal waters question is being openly linked with that Pakistani obsession. The financial problems may have been tied up in the tortuous minds of the Pakistan with the financial settlements flowing from any Canal waters’ settlement. This in a way, all these problems seem to have been mixed up together. When the Canal Waters’ question is sorted out, as it must be sooner rather than later, the process of de-linking could commence. My Australian colleague told me that the World Bank is getting increasingly dissatisfied with the Pakistan tactics and is threatening to pull out unless there is a greater sense of realism. He also noticed the attempt being made to link together issues which are essentially different and susceptible of solution only if taken up separately. He hoped that the Americans and others would adopt an attitude of greater firmness in helping to remove the obstacles which Pakistan is trying to create in order to squeeze out the last possible drop.

16. Pakistan has so far played down the failure of the talks. In fact the news that the two Ministers “agreed to disagree” came as an anti-climax to the hopes engendered by earlier optimistic reports in the Pakistani press. Shoaib himself has made a mild statement in answer to that made by our Finance Minister in Parliament. The Pakistanis will take the cue from this statement and try to emphasise the importance of current payments by India as against the instalments payable by Pakistan on the Partition debt. They are trying to separate the two issues in effort to show that Pakistan is the aggrieved party. We have necessarily to be on guard against such a campaign.

17. You may have seen the special press review which we have prepared on Shri Desai’s visit to Pakistan, a copy of which is enclosed for ready reference (not included).

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

No. 1(48)-FM/60-1406 Rawalpindi the 29th August, 1960

Dear Mr. Desai,

I thank you for your letter No. 1269-FM/60, dated the 9th August, 1960, to which I could not reply earlier as I was unwell for a few days.

I am afraid the controversy referred to in your letter was started by the Indian press. I found that a completely distorted picture was being presented deliberately in the various articles which appeared in a number of Indian papers. I was, therefore, obliged to clarify the position and give the correct facts. I would, however, like to add that what appeared in the press and has been attributed to me was not always a faithful record of what I said in this context, I am sure it must by your own experience that the press reports cannot be relied upon too literally.

I have always been anxious and I repeatedly said so during the course of our last meeting that we wish to arrive at a fair and just overall financial settlement between India and Pakistan. We have no desire to close the doors or to take a position which would rule out the possibility of reaching an agreement satisfactory to both sides.

I am looking forward to meeting you in November so that we could resume our efforts to find a solution for our outstanding differences.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

D.O.No. 1492 FM.60 September 14, 1960
Dear Mr. Shoaib,

Kindly refer to your letter No. 1(48) FM/60-1406, dated the 29th August 1960. I regret to learn that you were not well for some time: I do hope that you have now fully recovered in health.

2. I note that the Government of Pakistan have not taken an inflexible position which might endanger the success of further negotiations in regard to the financial matters between the two countries. I should like to express the hope that with the successful termination of the negotiations on the Indus Water Treaty, it will be possible for us to solve another vital sector of difference between the two countries.

3. In regard to the question of permitting remittance facilities to Indian industrialists and businessmen in Pakistan, which was the subject matter of the recent press controversy, you might recall that this question was discussed at Delhi but the discussion proved inconclusive. We have refrained from raising this again as we wanted the major issues relating to financial matters to be settled. It would, however, be useful if during our next talks this question could also be considered and settled.

4. As regards the schedule for these further talks, we shall be meeting in Washington in connection with the forthcoming conference of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund when we will have an opportunity of a general discussion on our further line of approach and the likely programmer of our next meeting. I do hope that during these discussions it will be possible to bring to a successful conclusion these long standing differences.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

New Delhi, December 1, 1960.

Sir,

I propose, with your permission, to make a short statement on my recent discussions with the Finance Minister of Pakistan on the outstanding financial issues between the two countries.

In the statement made by me in the House on the 30th March 1960, I had indicated that there would be further meeting between us to settle the issues on which it had not been possible to arrive at an agreement so far. Later, during the visit of the Prime Minister to Pakistan in September last in connection with the signing of the Indus Water Treaty, 1960, a reference was made by the Finance Minister of Pakistan to some of these outstanding financial issues. I had also a brief meeting with the Finance Minister of Pakistan at Washington and we both decided to discuss these issues further at New Delhi. During the recent meetings between us from the 23rd to 25th November and the series of discussions that the officials had, the outstanding issues were further narrowed down and both sides made aware of each other's point of view. An opportunity was also taken to review the post-partition claims of one country against the other, which had been left pending the determination of the Pakistan's debt to India and which will have to be fitted into the overall financial settlement.

While I share the general disappointment that the last round of talks has not resulted in a final settlement, I am not unduly perturbed by it. These discussions have been useful in clarifying the approach of the two countries in respect of various outstanding issues and have resulted, I believe in greater appreciation of each other's points of view.

Our talks have throughout proceeded in a cordial atmosphere and we have decided to meet again to find an agreed answer to the outstanding problems. This by itself is an indication of the desire on either side to conclude these protracted discussions to the satisfaction of both the countries. The programme for next meeting will be settled in consultation with the Finance Minister of Pakistan. The House will appreciate that I cannot, at this stage go into further details of our discussions. I would only ask Honourable

April 22, 1949.

An Act to Control the Admission into, and Regulate the Movements in India of Persons from Pakistan.

Whereas it is expedient to control the admission into, and regulate that movements in India of persons from Pakistan;

It is hereby enacted as follows:

1. Short title and extent.

(1) This Act may be called the Influx from Pakistan (Control) Act, 1949.

(2) It extends to the whole of India.
2. Definitions. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context, –
   (a) ‘Enter’ means to enter by water, land or air;
   (b) ‘Officer of Government’ means any officer of the Central Government or of a Provincial Government or of the Government of an Acceding State;
   (c) ‘Permit’ means a permit issued or renewed or the period whereof has been extended in accordance with the rules made under this Act.

3. Control of admission into India of persons from Pakistan. No person shall enter India from any place in Pakistan, whether directly or indirectly, unless –
   (a) He is in possession of permit, or
   (b) Being a person not domiciled in India or Pakistan, he is in possession of a valid passport as required by the Indian Passport Act, 1920 (XXXIV of 1920), or
   (c) He is exempted from the requirement of being in possession of a permit by or in accordance with the rules made under this Act.

4. Power to make rules. The Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, make rules
   (a) Prescribing the authorities by which and the conditions subject to which permits may be issued or renewed or the period thereof extended, the conditions to be satisfied by the applicants for such permits and the forms and classes of such permits;
   (b) Regulating the movements in India of any person who is in possession of a permit;
   (c) Providing for the exemption, either absolutely or on conditions, of any person or class of persons from the requirement of being in possession of a permit or from the operation of any rule made under this section; and
   (d) Generally, providing for any other matters ancillary or incidental to the carrying out of the purposes of this Act.

5. Punishment of offences.
   (1) Whoever enters India in contravention of the provision of section 3, or having entered India contravenes the provisions of any rule made under section 4, or commits a breach of any of the conditions of his permit, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.
   (2) Whoever, in any statement made by him in pursuance of any of the provisions of this Act or of any rules made thereunder, furnishes any information, which is false and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

6. Power of arrest.

(1) Any officer of police, not below the rank of a sub – inspector, any officer of the customs department of the Central Government or any other officer of Government empowered by a general or special order of the Central Government in this behalf may arrest without warrant any person who has committed or against whom a reasonable suspicion exists that he has committed an offence under this Act.

(2) Every officer making an arrest under this section shall, without unnecessary delay, take or send the person arrested before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case or to the officer in charge of the nearest police station, and the provisions of section 61 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (V of 1898) or of the corresponding law for the time being in force in the Acceding State shall, so far as they may be applicable apply in the case of any such arrest.

7. Power of removal. Without prejudice to the provisions contained in section 5, the Central Government may, by general or special order, direct the removal from India of any person who has committed, or against whom a reasonable suspicion exists that he has committed, an offence under this Act, and thereupon any officer of Government shall have all reasonable powers necessary to enforce such direction.

8. Protection to persons acting in good faith. No suit, prosecution or other legal proceeding shall lie against any person for anything which is in good faith done or intended to be done under this Act.

9. Repeal of Ordinance XXXIV of 1948.

(1) The Influx from Pakistan (Control) Ordinance, 1948, is hereby repealed.

(2) Notwithstanding such repeal, any rules made, action taken or thing done in the exercise of any power conferred by the Influx from Pakistan (Control) Ordinance, 1948, shall for all purposes be deemed to have been made, taken or done in the exercise of the powers conferred by this Act, as if this Act had commenced on the day such order was made or such action was taken or such thing was done.

You have drawn my particular attention to the difficulties created by the entry of Muslim newcomers other than those who are entitled to restoration of land and houses, and in this connection I have read your letter to Sardar Patel also. I quite appreciate your difficulty. It is quite clear of course that these persons are not entitled to any kind of relief.

You suggest a permit system. I am inclined to think that any introduction of the permit system might ultimately injuriously affect your interests. Such a permit system cannot be confined to Assam and East Bengal. It will have to extend to the whole of Eastern Pakistan, West Bengal, Assam, etc. that would create grave difficulties. I would prefer the use of the Undesirable Immigrants Expulsion Act to the introduction of a permit system at this stage. I imagine that even if you introduce a permit system, it would only be partially affected. To make it really effective requires a fairly big organization.

We have been getting accurate figures of the traffic between East Bengal and West Bengal. We have analyzed these figures and it appears that several thousands of persons come and go across the border daily. These are other than migrants. Some such traffic is natural between two bordering countries. It may be that some at least of the so-called newcomers to Assam may be part of this traffic and does not concern people who intend to settle. Have you any figures of Hindus or Muslims going from Assam to East Bengal? If we have the figures on both sides, then it is possible to check up and arrive at some conclusions.

At the present moment large numbers of Hindus are returning to East Bengal from West Bengal. The numbers so doing are remarkable and sometimes the excess of those going to East Bengal amounts to between two thousand and three thousand a day. There is thus a tendency, due to various reasons, for a flow back to East Bengal. If we take any step involving a permit system, this would have a serious effect in stopping these movements. It would also of course be said to be a violation of the Agreement of 8th April, 1950.

The matter is thus a very complicated one and we have to avoid taking a step which react on us injuriously. We shall consider it here more fully and then I shall let you know what our advice is. Meanwhile, please send me figures of migrations on both sides, properly analyzed, if possible.

Your sincerely

Jawaharlal Nehru
3373. Note from High Commission of India in Pakistan to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Karachi, October 31, 1951.

Office of the High Commissioner for India in Pakistan

No. C – 26/IHC/51 31st October, 1951

The High Commission for India in Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan and has the honour to state that in view of the action taken by the Punjab (P) Government to close the Wagah Lahore route to Indian nationals with effect from the 17th October, 1951, the Government of India propose to close the Ferozepore route to Pakistani nationals with effect from the 5th November, 1951. The action proposed to be taken by the Government of India arises from the latest restrictions imposed by the Government of Punjab (P) in consequence of which Indian nationals intending to proceed to West Punjab can use neither the Wagah nor the Hussainiwala route and are compelled to fly from Delhi to Lahore. The Government of India would however agree to the continuance of the hitherto existing arrangements under which Pakistan nationals were permitted to proceed to Lahore via Hussainiwala and Indian nationals were allowed to use the Lahore route.

The High Commission avails itself of the opportunity to renew to the Government of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

3374. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

Karachi, November 27, 1951.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations
Karachi

No: I (I).12/24/51 Dated the 27th November, 1951

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations present their compliments to the High Commission of India in Pakistan and with reference to their notes No. C-26/IHC/51 dated the 31st October, 1951 and 5th November, 1951 have the honour to state that the initiative for closing of the Wagah-Lahore route for the Pakistanis came from the Indian authorities themselves. This route was closed by them in August 1951, without prior notice and resulted in considerable dislocation of movement by the overland route.

2. The Government of Pakistan regret to note that the unilateral action by the Indian authorities was contrary to the spirit of the understanding reached at the Indo-Pakistan Permit Conference, which has since been ratified by both Governments. Article 15 of “agreements and conclusions” reached at that Conference provided that the Government of Pakistan would examine the position in regard to specifying points of entry and exist in Pakistan and if it was considered necessary to specify these points, lists of points suggested by each Government would be exchanged. This Government have not specified any such points and no list of points have been exchanged between the two Governments. The closure of the Wagah route to Pakistanis came to the Government of Pakistan as a complete surprise.

3. It was not till the 17th October 1951 that the Government of Punjab (P) decided to close the Wagah-Lahore route to Indian nationals. In doing so that Government were actuated by considerations of security.

4. As regards the suggestion that the Wagah route should be open to Indians and the Ferozepur route to Pakistanis, the Government of Pakistan feel that if a route is to be kept open, it should be open for the nationals of both countries. Having separate routes for the nationals of each country is inconvenient and unfair, particularly, when the Ferozepur route involves a much longer and circuitous journey.

5. The High Commission’s note No. C-26/IHC-51 dated the 5th November, 1951, has since been received intimating the categories of persons who will be allowed to use the Hussainiwala route. In view of this note, it is presumed that a restoration of the conditions obtaining before the closure of the Wagah route is no longer desired.

6. The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurance of its highest consideration.

No. F. 32/51 – Pak. I.

To : The High Commissioner for India in Pakistan,

Subject: Closure of the land routes between Punjab (P) and Punjab (l).

Sir,

I have the honour to refer to note No. I (l). 12/24/51 of 27.11.51 from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, to your address, forwarded to this Ministry with your Secret letter No. C – 26/IHC/51 of the 30th November, 1951 and to state as follows.

2. The statement of the Government of Pakistan that the initiative for closing the land routes between Punjab (India) and Punjab (Pak) came from the Government of India is completely incorrect. As is well known, at the time of partition, a large number of routes between the territories now constituting Punjab (P) and Punjab (l) were open to the travelling public. The main routes were between Lahore and Amritsar, Ferozepore and Lahore, and Suleimanki and Montgomery, and there were a number of lesser routes. Right up to August 1951 the Government of India had never imposed any restrictions whatsoever on the use of any of these routes, subject only to the permit being valid via that route and subject also to passage through a customs post. On the other hand, the Government of Pakistan or the Government of Punjab (Pak) have been gradually restricting the use of many of these routes. Entry by the lesser routes was closed in 1948 and 1949. In 1949 the Government of Pakistan also closed entry across the Suleimanki headworks, thus leaving only two main routes open, viz., Lahore – Amritsar and Lahore – Ferozepore. By a Press note issued by the Government of Punjab (Pak) in May 1951, the Government of Pakistan formally closed all land routes between Punjab (India) and Punjab (Pak) except the Lahore – Amritsar route. A copy of this Press note is enclosed for ready reference.

3. At the Permit Conference held in 1951 the Indian representatives took up with the representatives of Pakistan the question of the closure of all land routes except Lahore – Amritsar. They pointed out that unilateral action of this type was not desirable, since similar unilateral action by India might lead to the closure of all land routes. The Pakistan representatives agreed to reconsider the position and agreed that in case the Govt. of Pakistan felt that it was necessary to specify the point of entry and exit, the Government later would exchange with the Govt. of India lists of such proposed points with a view to coming to an agreement on the points to be specified. The immediate relaxation agreed to by the representatives of Pakistan was that the diplomatic and non-diplomatic staff of the Indian Missions in Pakistan would be allowed to use the Lahore – Ferozepore route. It was confidently (confidently?) expected by the Government of India that the Government of Pakistan would either withdraw the Press note of the Punjab (Pak) Government and thereby again open all the land routes between Punjab (India) and Punjab (Pak) or alternatively suggest to the Government of India the routes which should be specified for purposes of exit and entry. The Government of India are not aware that the Press note issued by the Punjab (Pak) Government in May 1951 has been withdrawn or that any additional route has so far been opened by the Government of Pakistan. Nor have they received from the Government of Pakistan any suggestion as to the points of entry and exit to be specified by both countries. In these circumstances the Government of India are unable to appreciate the attitude taken by the Government of Pakistan in paragraph 2 of their note under reference. It would appear from this note that the Govt. of Pakistan are of the view that while their notification of May 1951 continued to remain in force and even though they had taken no action to come to any agreement with the Government of India with regard to the points of entry and exit, the Government of India was debarred under the “agreements and conclusion” of the Permit Conference to take any reciprocal action. The Government of India are unable to agree with any such construction of the conclusions of the Permit Conference. Even so the Government of India did not desire to take any unilateral action in this matter, but their hands were forced by the further action taken by the Government of Punjab (P) in July 1951 mentioned below.

4. On 25th July the Chief Secretary to the Government of Punjab (Pak) informed the Deputy High Commissioner for India in Pakistan, Lahore, verbally that the diplomatic and non – diplomatic members of the Mission should not leave the limits of Lahore except after prior intimation to him, and that for the purposes of visits to India, the Lahore – Wagah rout could be used without prior intimation. The virtual effect of this was to close the Lahore – Ferozepore route to our Mission at Lahore in contravention of the assurance given at the Permit Conference. Further on grounds of security precautions, the Government of Punjab (Pak) laid down that Indian nationals, including those holding permits granted to them by Pakistan permit issuing authorities in India for the purpose of visiting various places in Punjab (Pak), would not be allowed to proceed beyond Lahore, except after receipt of special permission from the Permit office of the Punjab (Pak) Government at Lahore. This permission was not forthcoming except in special cases and a large number of Indian nationals were either held up at Lahore or had to return without visiting the places for which they held permits. Since both the above measures had apparently been taken in the interest of security, the Government of India did not consider it a proper case for lodging a protest. On their side, however, they also considered necessary, as a matter of security precautions, to close the Attari – Amritsar route temporarily to Pakistan nationals. This they did therefore early in August 1951 after prior intimation to the Pakistan High Commission at Delhi. For the convenience of the Pakistan High Commission and D.H.C. (Pak) at Jullundur and of Pakistan nationals in general the Government of India however kept open the Hussainiwala – Ferozepore route for entry into and egress from India.

5. The position at this stage therefore was that by unilateral action the Government of Pakistan had closed all land routes into Punjab (P) except the Wagah – Lahore one. So long as this route was kept open, however Indian nationals and diplomatic and non – diplomatic staff of Indian Missions could come and go to India from Lahore, and the Government of India did not consider it useful to protest against the closure of the other routes. On their side the Government of India closed only the Attari – Amritsar route and left the other routes and in particular the Hussainiwala – Ferozepore route open so that no difficulties should be experienced by Pakistan nationals in coming to or leaving India. It was unfortunate that due to the unilateral action of the Government of Pakistan only one route was open for Indian nationals, but due to the fact that at least one route was open to the nationals of both countries (viz. Wagah – Lahore for Indian nationals and Hussainiwala – Ferozepore for Pakistan nationals), their hardships were considerably mitigated.
6. The Government of India were, therefore, surprised when on the 15th October, 1951 the Punjab (Pak) Government decided further to close also the Wagah – Lahore route to Indian nationals. This meant the closure to Indian nationals of all land routes whatsoever. The Government of India drew the attention of the Government of Pakistan to this fact and pending their reply continued to keep open the Hussainiwala – Ferozepore route for Pakistan nationals. Since no reply was received for a considerable time, the Government of India had no option but to close the Hussainiwala – Ferozepore route also to Pakistan nationals, with certain exceptions including the diplomatic and non – diplomatic staff of the Pakistan Missions at Delhi and Jullundur.

7. The Government of India greatly regret the hardship being caused to nationals of both the countries wishing to visit the other country by reason of their inability to use any of the land routes between Punjab (India) and Punjab (Pak). The Government of India would suggest for the consideration of the Government of Pakistan that the latter should open any one route, to be designated by the Government of Pakistan, for the purposes of entry by land of Indian nationals from Punjab (I) into Punjab (P). If the Government of Pakistan are agreeable to this course, the Government of India would be only too glad to reopen the Hussainiwala – Ferozepore route for entry into and departure from India of Pakistan nationals.

8. I am to request that the above may be conveyed to the Government of Pakistan in suitable terms. A copy of the note sent to the Government of Pakistan may be endorsed to this Ministry.

Yours faithfully

Deputy Secretary

High Commission of India,
Karachi.

3376. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

Karachi, March 31, 1952.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations
Karachi

Subject: Land routes between Punjab (P) and Punjab (I).

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations Government of Pakistan, presents its compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan, and with reference to their Note No. C – 26 – IHC – 51, dated January 11, 1952, has the honour to say that while the Government of Pakistan think that no purpose would be served in continuing the controversy about the genesis of the restrictions resulting in the closure of the overland routes between India and Pakistan, they wish to reiterate that the responsibility for that, as for the introduction of the permit system itself, rests with the Government of India. Following the introduction of a permit system by India, Pakistan had to enforce a similar system. As the introduction of the permit system by India was on a unilateral basis, no understanding was reached between the two Governments on the routes to be followed by permit holders. In consequence the Wagah – Attari, the Ferozepore – Hussainiwala, the Sulemanki – Montgomery and a few lesser routes did exist in the initial stages of the permit system, i.e., the end of 1948 and the beginning of 1949. In actual practice, however, a majority of travelers took to the Wagah – Attari route and asked for permits by that route. A very few of them used the Hussainiwala – Ferozepore or other lesser routes. The number of such persons was so small that it was thought unnecessary to keep the less frequented routes open in view of the substantial cost of maintaining Customs and Immigration checkposts on these routes. In deciding upon the closure of these routes in 1950, Pakistan was in no way contravening any understanding or agreement with India, as no such agreement existed to that date. It was only during the Indo – Pakistan Permit Conference in June 1951, that the subject of routes was mooted by India. The agreement which was ratified on first October, 1951, prescribed the procedure which should govern future changes in the route. The changes effected in the position from that obtaining at the time of the ratification of the agreement were all initiated by the Government of India in disregard of this agreement. The agreement reached at the Conference did not imply the withdrawal of the press note of the Punjab (P) Government closing the routes other than Wagah. No such commitment had been entered into at the time of the agreement, nor was there any commitment... made for the opening of overland routes which were closed at the time that the agreement was ratified. There was also no occasion for this Government to suggest to the Government of India the routes for the purposes of exit and entry as no change in the status – quo was contemplated by this Government. On the other hand, the closure of the Wagah route was effected by the Government of India without any consultation with the Government of Pakistan who were informed of it by their High Commission in Delhi whose First Secretary was apprised of the decision in an interview by an officer of the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India. This closure of the Wagah route without any prior notice resulted in serious inconvenience to permit holders who were virtually stranded in India and had later to be evacuated to Pakistan by specially opening the Ferozepore – Hussainiwala route which had been closed for a considerable time to all except members of the staff of the Indian High Commission in Pakistan. Had not the Wagah route been closed all of a sudden by the Government of India, none of the difficulties now encountered would have arisen. The Government of Pakistan, therefore, feel that reversion to the conditions obtaining at the time of the permit agreement would be the right solution of all these difficulties.

They are in accord with the Government of India in appreciating the hardship which the closure of the overland routes must entail for the travelers between the two countries. The Government of Pakistan, therefore, express their willingness to the opening of both the Wagah and Hussainiwala routes to nationals of both the countries. They do not, however, subscribe to the principle that one route should be opened to nationals of one country and the other to those of the other country. This, as already indicated in their Note No. I (I) 12/24/50, dated November 27, 1951, is inconvenient and unfair, particularly when the Ferozepore route involves a much longer and circuitous journey. It is hoped that the Government of India would agree to the above suggestion or, in the least, to the restoration of the conditions obtaining before the closure of the Wagah route.

The restrictions on the movement of the diplomatic and non – diplomatic staff of the Deputy High Commissioner for India in Pakistan at Lahore have no relation to the general closure of routes to permit holders. These restrictions followed the general tightening up of security measures consequent upon the massing of the Indian troops at Pakistan borders.

The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of India the assurances of their highest consideration.

The High Commission for India in Pakistan, Karachi.

Note from Pakistan High Commission in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, April 8, 1952.

Office of the High Commissioner for Pakistan in India
New Delhi

No.F.13 (35) P/52- the 8th April 1952

The High Commission for Pakistan in India presents its compliments to the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi, and has the honour to say that the Government of Pakistan consider that the permit system in force between India and Pakistan is out-moded and experience has shown that it has not worked satisfactorily. In practice, the system has impeded travel rather than facilitate inter-communication between the two countries. The Government of Pakistan have, therefore, decided after very careful consideration to replace the permit system by the internationally recognized system of Passport and visas between the two countries. The introduction of this system will have the effect of regulating travel between India and both East and West Pakistan. The Government of Pakistan further proposes that the passport system should be introduced with effect from 15th May 1952. The permit system now in force in Pakistan will be simultaneously abolished. Under the new system every Pakistani national desirous of going to India and every Indian national will similarly have to be in possession of a passport duly visaed by the appropriate Pakistan authorities before entering Pakistan territory.

2. The Government of Pakistan hope that the Government of India will make the necessary arrangements in respect of their nationals to be brought into force on the same date, viz. 15th May 1952 after which date a passport and a visa will be necessary for Indian nationals to enter Pakistan.

3. In view of the large number of people who are likely to be effected by this system the Government of Pakistan will issue a restricted passport slightly different but distinguishable from the International Passport to enable their nationals to travel between Pakistan and India only. Till such time as these booklets are available in sufficient numbers, Emergency certificates (specimen enclosed) will be issued to three categories of persons:

(1) Category ‘A’ will include only cultivators and their labourers residing in the border Unions of East Pakistan and passports issued to them will be endorsed for movement to a specified border Union in West Bengal. The Border will be crossed at specified check-points.
(2) Category ‘B’ will include only persons residing in areas other than the border Unions of East Pakistan or persons in border Unions other than those mentioned in sub-para (1) above. Passport issued to them will be endorsed for travel to the States of West Bengal, Assam, Tripura and Bihar. The Border will be crossed only at specified check-points.

(3) Category ‘C’ will comprise residents of East and West Pakistan and their passports will be endorsed for travel to the whole of India.

4. Passports or Certificates will be issued on payment of Rs.3/- and will be renewable after 5 years. The Government of Pakistan propose to fix Re.1/- as fee for a visa (including multiple journey visa) valid for Pakistan.

5. The visa endorsement on passports will indicate the places to be visited in Pakistan on the basis of that endorsement.

6. Visas for entry into East Pakistan will have the following validities:-

   (a) One year for residents of the border Unions of West Bengal with no restriction on the number of journeys;

   (b) six months for residents of West Bengal, Assam and Tripura in areas other than border Unions, without restriction on the number of journeys;

   (c) for residents of the rest of India, the visa will be valid for the period stated in the endorsement.

7. Visas for entry into West Pakistan will be issued in the ordinary way and will be valid for the period stated in the endorsement.

8. The Government of Pakistan desire, for the convenience of Indian nationals wishing to enter Pakistan, to set up (subject to the Government of India’s approval) in addition to the existing Passport and Visa offices in their Missions in Calcutta, New Delhi and Jullundur, two more visa offices at Agartala and Goalpara in West Bengal. It may also become necessary, at no distant date, to set up (subject again to the necessary approval) a Visa Office at Jalpaiguri for the convenience of travelers from North Bengal, and at Dawki for travelers from Assam. The Government of Pakistan suggests that the Government of India may set up corresponding offices in East Bengal for the convenience of Pakistan nationals.

9. The Government of Pakistan will designate the District Magistrates and sub-Divisional officers in the Province of East Bengal as Passport and Visa Issuing Authorities to cater for residents in their respective Districts and Sub-Divisions and, in addition, passports for India will be granted by the Passport Officers at Dacca and in all Provincial capitals in West Pakistan.
10. The Government of Pakistan again express the hope that the Government of India will agree to the reciprocal introduction of a passport and visa system between India and Pakistan, designed to regulate the movement of bona fide travelers into both countries and would be grateful if the Government of India would convey their concurrence as soon as possible. Arrangements will then be made for a simultaneous announcement of procedure in Pakistan and India. It would, naturally be in the interests both countries to make the announcement as long as possible in advance of May 15 next, the dead line date for the introduction of the scheme by the Government of Pakistan.

11. The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Government of India the assurances of its highest consideration.

The Ministry of External Affairs,
Government of India,
New Delhi.

TELEGRAM

From : Hicomind, Karachi
To : Foreign, New Delhi.
No. 167. April 9, 1952

Mehta for R.K. Nehru.

I met Foreign Secretary Government of Pakistan at his request this morning. He handed over to me a Note* purported to be the decision of Pakistan to introduce system of passport and visa between India and Pakistan in order to regulate travel between India and both East and West Pakistan. They propose that the new system should come into effect from 15th May 1952 and from that date the present permit system to be simultaneously abolished. I understand that Pakistan High Commissioner at New Delhi will present a copy of that Note to you today. I am therefore NOT reproducing its text in this telegram.

* This was the same note which the Pakistan High Commission in New Delhi had given to the Ministry of External Affairs on the 8th April. Document No.3377.
I told Foreign Secretary that the Government of Pakistan’s action would be regarded by our Government as unfortunate and retrograde so far as the relations between two countries were concerned and I hoped that the memorandum did NOT represent their final decision. Foreign Secretary said that they had come to that decision after full consideration of the case. I also urged on the Foreign Secretary the desirability of preliminary discussion even a meeting between representatives of two countries, including those of the two Bengals before reaching final decision. The view adopted by Pakistan, I stated, would be contrary to the spirit of Prime Ministers Agreement and might deteriorate the position in East Pakistan and West Bengal where things are NOT too good even now.

Please intimate Government’s reactions and advice as to what reply we should give. Before leaving the Foreign Secretary I pressed him to tell his Government that their decision deserved reconsideration.

In view of this unexpected decision of Government of Pakistan I did NOT, as I had intended, talk to the Foreign Secretary about the re-opening of their Permit Office at Bombay. We could now have this done as a part of the new proposals.

3379.  TOP SECRET

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan M. S. Mehta to Pakistan Foreign Secretary M. O.A. Baig.

Karachi, April 9, 1952.

My dear Baig,

May I repeat what I urged on you this morning that, the decision of the Government of Pakistan contained in the Note which you gave me will have very unfortunate results? It would produce widespread hardship and even a sense of insecurity. A large section of the population in the two Bengals is poor and ignorant. They are not accustomed to the system of Permits and Passports, and the consequences would be felt as very vexatious.

The introduction of the new proposals would be a serious restriction in the freedom of movement between the two Bengals which was one of the chief objects of the Prime Ministers Agreement of April 1950. According to the present arrangements, people on both sides are free to go from East Bengal to West Bengal and vice versa. This has helped to establish a sense of security and confidence among the minority communities on both sides of the border. Apart from the violation of the Prime Ministers’ Agreement which, as you are aware, had created a good effect, the new proposals would certainly bring about a deterioration in the present situation, resulting in conditions of panic and instability which it is desirable to avoid. It might also bring about a large scale exodus of minorities from either side, the consequence of which could be serious indeed.

Then the enforcing of the new scheme would result in many practical difficulties. We would be exposing the common people to unnecessary harassment and hardships. The Government of Pakistan contemplates that the people intending to move from East Bengal to West Bengal and vice versa would be allowed to cross the border at specified check points. It would be most difficult to enforce these rules in the present state of things and in view of the numbers of people involved.

I may add that in stressing these obvious practical difficulties to my Government, I do hope that you would be able to persuade your Government to reconsider the whole question. Moreover, this is certainly the least suitable time for bringing about the introduction of Passport system between India and Pakistan.

Yours sincerely

No. 30368. April 10, 1952

For Mehta from R. K. Nehru,

Your telegram No. 167 of 9th April, Introduction of passport system between India and Pakistan, Proposals are under examination and we are consulting Minister of State and West Bengal Government. Meanwhile we would like you to take up this matter immediately with Pakistan Government drawing attention to the following points:-

1. We agree with Pakistan Government that everything possible should be done to reduce impediments to travel, and inter-communication between the two countries. We also recognize merits of passport system, but would strongly urge that local conditions and other factors be considered carefully before such proposals are put into effect.

2. As Pakistan Government are aware freedom of movement between East Pakistan and West Bengal is a vital part of the Prime Ministers Agreement of April 1950. Existence of this provision and its implementation have helped to restore sense of confidence and security among minorities in both East Pakistan and West Bengal. Thousands of persons of both communities have been taking advantage of these facilities. Economic and other ties between East Pakistan and West Bengal are so close that restriction of free movement CANNOT fail to have adverse effect on the normal life of both the countries.

3. Need for maintenance of confidence among minorities regarding freedom of movement between East Pakistan and West Bengal still exists. We should therefore strongly urge that modification of relevant provision of the Prime Ministers Agreement of 1950 should NOT be made without full consultation between two Governments. The Government of India are NOT aware of reasons which have led Government of Pakistan to take decision communicated in aide memoire. They are ready to discuss in fully cooperative spirit any circumstances that, in Pakistan Government’s opinion, justify change of present practice and to find agreed solution of such practical difficulties as may be found to exist. Meanwhile, they most strongly urge that present decision be NOT implemented.

4. We would particularly request that NO announcement may be made about the possibility of freedom of movement being restricted with effect from May 15th since this might create feelings of uncertainty on both sides of the frontier and lead to an immediate exodus with all its hardship, of large numbers of minority community from East Pakistan to West Bengal and vice versa. We would also like you to point out that the practical difficulties in the way of setting up a passport system, even in the modified form suggested by the Pakistan Government, are so great that it would NOT be possible to give effect to any such decision by May 15.

No.169. April 10, 1952

Mehta for R.K. Nehru.

Reference my yesterday's telegram No.167. I am waiting instructions.

In the meantime I heard last night from reliable source that Government of Pakistan NOT likely to alter their decision. They strongly feel that there is steady infiltration from West Bengal into East Bengal of persons with the object of sabotage, creating trouble and working for reuniting two Bengals. 90 per cent of East Bengal people said to be bitterly opposed to reunion and resent these attempts. I was told that Government of Pakistan’s present decision of introducing passport system is NOT based on recent disturbances at Dacca on language controversy. Some important elements in Government of Pakistan feel these disruptive and sabotage elements in West Bengal are NOT under the control of our Central Government and act without its knowledge. This is the ground of Government of Pakistan’s recent decision and for this reason they are I am told not repeat not likely to give up their stand. I am however making earnest efforts in that direction.

If these efforts fail we should urge Government of Pakistan NOT to introduce the system at this time which is most inopportune for bringing such an unpopular and complicated measure into force.

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan Mohan Sinha Mehta to Pakistan Foreign Secretary M. O. A. Baig.

No. HC/51/11 12th April, 1952

Introduction of Passport system between India and Pakistan.

My dear Baig,

I had forward to my Government a very brief outline of the note which you gave me on Wednesday last, 9th April, containing the views of the Pakistan Government on the subject noted above. I understand from you that the text of the note was presented to the Ministry of External Affairs at New Delhi by H.E. the Pakistan High Commissioner for India.

2. The proposals are being examined by the Government of India. It will involve consultation between the Ministries of the Central Government concerned and also with the Government of West Bengal. As soon as I receive the considered views of my Government, I shall communicate them to you.

3. In the meantime, I may say that the Government of India fully endorses the views of the Government of Pakistan that everything possible should be done to reduce impediments to and restrictions on travel and intercommunication between the two countries. The merits of the passport system are also recognized. At the same time, as I strongly urged on you at our meeting, local conditions and several other connected matters should be taken fully into consideration before the proposed change is brought into operation.

4. As you and the Government of Pakistan are well aware, freedom of movement between West Bengal and East Pakistan is a vital part of the Prime Ministers’ Agreement of April 1950. That provision had helped to restore a sense of confidence and security amongst the minorities in the two Bengals. Thousands of persons of both communities took advantage of those facilities. As is well known, economic ties between West Bengal and East Pakistan are so close that any restriction of free movement cannot fail to have an adverse effect on the normal economic life in these two parts of India and Pakistan.

5. The need for the maintenance of confidence amongst the minorities regarding freedom of travel and movement between the two Bengals is still clear. On behalf of my Government, I would therefore earnestly request you not to modify the relevant provision of the Prime Ministers’ Agreement of 1950 without full consultation between the two Governments. The Government of India are not aware of the reasons which have led the Government of Pakistan to take the decision communicated in the Aide Memoire you gave me on the 9th April. I am to assure you that my Government are quite ready to discuss in a fully cooperative spirit the circumstances which, in the opinion of the Government of Pakistan, justify a change in the present practice, and to help in finding an agreed solution of such practical difficulties as may be found to exist. Until such an agreement is reached, the Government of India strongly desire that the proposals received from the Government of Pakistan be not implemented.

6. The Government of India particularly request the Government of Pakistan not to make any announcement at this stage about the restrictions on free movement with effect from the 15th May since it might produce feeling of uncertainty on both sides of the frontier and even lead to an immediate exodus of large numbers of minority communities from East Pakistan to West Bengal and vice versa with all the attendant hardships. It is essential that the representatives of the two Governments jointly examine the practical difficulties and complications which would result in the introduction of the passport system even in the modified form suggested by your Government. It would therefore be obviously impracticable to give effect to this decision by the 15th of May.

7. I feel confident that the Government of Pakistan will again give to this matter full consideration so that nothing is done at this stage to create avoidable difficulties for the two Governments.

Yours sincerely

TOP SECRET

Karachi, April 12, 1952.

High Commissioner for India
Karachi

No.HC/51/11. 12th April 1952.

Subject: Introduction of modified system of International Passport between India and Pakistan.

My dear R.K.,

Please refer to my Top Secret Telegram No. 167 of the 9th April. I now enclose the Text of the Aide Memoire which the Foreign Secretary of the Government of Pakistan gave me that day. You must have received its copy already from the Pakistan High Commissioner at Delhi.

You may have also received by now my Top Secret Telegram No.169, dated the 10th April.

On the evening of the 9th April, I felt that I should repeat in writing what I had told Baig that morning about the proposals of the Pakistan Government contained in the Aide Memoire which he supplied to me. I enclose herewith a copy of that letter (No.HC/51/11).

Yesterday I received your Top Secret Telegram No.30368 of the 10th April. You will find that in general my letter contained most of the arguments and reasons against the proposals of the Pakistan Government which you have mentioned in this Telegram. I specially emphasized in the concluding portion of my letter that the present time was not at all suitable for the introduction of this big change regulating the movement of people between India and Pakistan.

I have today addressed another letter to the Foreign Secretary of the Pakistan Government embodying the views contained in your telegram of the 10th April. Since then I have also received your Top Secret Telegram NO.24250, dated the 11th April.

Yours sincerely

Sd/-M. S Mehta

Shri R. K. Nehru,
Commonwealth Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi.
My dear Puri,

I return herewith the papers which you left with me yesterday regarding the Pakistan Government's proposal to introduce a system of passport between India and Pakistan. On the policy aspect of this proposal I have no comments to make beyond those already communicated to our High Commissioner in Karachi in the telegram No. 30368, dated the 10th April, 1952. I confine myself in this letter only to the legal and administrative issues.

2. It will not be necessary to have any legislation passed, if it were decided to accept the proposal. Under the Indian Passport Rules, we have exempted persons domiciled in Pakistan and proceeding from Pakistan to India from the necessity to having passports. As a merely legal matter it will be simple enough to cancel this exception.

3. We could not use the argument that within the Commonwealth there should be no system of visas, which is an arrangement applicable particularly to foreigners. This argument has lost validity because Ceylon has introduced the system of visas.

4. Foreigners coming to India with visas are subjected to a number of restrictions under the Foreigners Act, 1946 and the Foreigners Order, 1948. These restrictions enable the Police to keep track of foreigners. The Foreigners Act, 1946, does not, however, apply to Pakistani citizens. If, therefore, it were proposed that we should have some means of checking the movements of Pakistani citizens coming to India with visas, the Foreigners Act will have to be amended. There is little doubt that the amendment would become necessary as otherwise limited visas would be quite meaningless.

5. The issue of passports and visas and their check at the frontiers is a job that is carried out by the State Governments acting as agents of the Government of India. The cost is borne by the Central Government. It would be necessary to consult the State Governments concerned as to what extra staff would be necessary and where for the purpose of issuing and checking passports and visas.

6. As I told you yesterday, I think it will be desirable as soon as a reply from Dr. Roy and Mr. Biswas is received to arrange a conference with the Chief Secretaries of West Bengal and Assam who are principally concerned so that both political and administrative implications of what Pakistan proposes to do may be thoroughly thrashed out.

Yours sincerely

201/DHC April 15, 1952
Dear Mr. Nehru,

Please refer to my last two fortnightly reports (dated 16.5.52 and 5.4.52) in which I have kept you informed of a suggestion made by the MORNING NEWS to “seal the border” and to impose the Permit System for travel between East Bengal and the bordering States of India – a suggestion which, according to our information, has already been taken up by the Provincial Government with the Central Government at Karachi. It was decided at the meeting held at Calcutta on 22nd March 1952 that the Hon’ble Mr. Biswas should address the Pakistan Minister of State for Minority Affairs asking for more definite information regarding the intentions of the Pakistan Government in this matter. As you know, the Hon’ble Mr. Biswas has already written accordingly to the Hon’ble Mr. Azizuddin Ahmed.

I now write to inform you that the MORNING NEWS on the 15th April has published on the front page and with banner headlines a news-item dated the 12th April from its Karachi correspondent stating categorically that the “Pakistan Government have decided to introduce Permit System to regulate traffic between East Pakistan and Bharat” and that “it is likely to take two months’ time to complete the necessary procedure before this system is imposed”. Earlier on the 5th April the same paper devoted an editorial on the “Permit System” criticizing the Hon’ble Mr. Biswas for his reported statement that “Pakistan could not take any unilateral action without consulting Bharat”. According to the paper, such a view amounts to interference with the internal affairs of Pakistan. It, therefore, commented that “we shall bury the Delhi Pact five fathoms deep as indeed Bharat has already buried it, if such attempts at outside interference in our internal affairs continue from Bharat”. The paper stated defiantly that “Pakistan shall not consult Bharat when it decides to impose a Permit System to check the entry of undesirable and hostile elements from Assam, Tripura and West Bengal into our province. The Bharat Government, of course, as a matter of courtesy will be informed of our decision when it is taken”. I enclose for ready reference a cutting of the editorial comments in question which you have probably seen already.

Yours sincerely

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan Mohan Sinha Mehta to Pakistan Foreign Secretary M.O.A. Baig.

Karachi, April 17, 1952.

No. HC/52/11 17th April, 1952

Subject: Introduction of modified system of International Passports between India and Pakistan.

My dear Baig,

I am surprised to find that while the subject is still under the consideration of the two Governments news has appeared in the papers this morning that the Pakistan Government intend to introduce the system of passports (and permits) between India and Pakistan. It is obvious from this news item that the source of its publications lay in Pakistan parliamentary circles.

As you know, I had written to you to invite the attention of the Pakistan Government to the serious consequences of introducing this change at this stage. In any case a thorough consideration and full discussion on it was called for before the new system could be introduced. The publication of the news at this stage is rather unfortunate. My Government at Delhi is placed in a very awkward position. They would not know what to do about it. Public opinion is bound to be inquisitive as to the attitude of the Government of India on this question and there would be a certain amount of anxiety in the two Bengals.

I would request you therefore not to let this matter be further discussed in the public and the Press until a meeting is arranged between the representatives of the two Governments to consider it including the officers of the two Bengals.

I am sure you will recognize that the time for the introduction of any change in the present system will have to be thought out very carefully. This would be desirable from the points of view of both the countries.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

D.O. No.402/HM
17th April, 1952

My dear Nehru,

Please refer to the correspondence resting with my Most Immediate, Top Secret D.O. No.402/HM dated the 15th April, 1952, regarding Pakistan's proposal to introduce the Passport System for travel between India and Pakistan. I have examined the matter further and discussed it with the Hon'ble Dr. B.C. Roy and his Chief Secretary. Enclosed is a copy of a Note prepared as a result of this discussion. Dr. Roy, who is going to Delhi today, is taking a copy of the Note for being handed over to you.

2. As has been stated in the Note, the introduction of a passport system for travel, in particular, between East Bengal and the Eastern Indian States of West Bengal, Assam Bihar, and Tripura, is not justified by the reasons given in the Note of the Pakistan High Commissioner. Presumably, Pakistan has other reasons for which she has been insisting on the proposal. The immediate object may be to stop the flow of returning Hindu migrants to East Bengal. Pakistan also does not want that Muslims from India should go and settle in East Bengal. Their long-range objective is, presumably, to isolate East Bengalees (Hindus and Muslims) entirely from India. By such isolation, they intend to stifle any progressive movement among the people of East Bengal generally, and, in particular, to produce a sense of helplessness among the Hindus there, thereby making them prone to be ultimately absorbed in the fold of Islam. I think we should, therefore, oppose the introduction of the proposed Passport cum visa system, so far as the State of West Bengal, Assam, Bihar and Tripura on our side, and East Pakistan on their side are concerned.

3. It is, however, more than likely that Pakistan will force this system on us. In that case, we have to take reciprocal action. Security reasons appear to be Pakistan's main ground for the introduction of the system in the East. If so, I see no reason why we should agree to provide special facilities for cultivators and agricultural labourers of the bordering Unions, as suggested by Pakistan.
under category “A” of their proposed classification. If anything, restrictions on their movements should be made stricter.

4. Assuming that we cannot stop Pakistan from introducing the system, we have to get ready for setting up a suitable organization on our side. This presupposes a lot of action, both legal and administrative. The Rules under the Indian Passport Act have to be amended and adequate powers taken for enforcing the system. Then, again, a large number of offices, both for issuing Passports and Visas and for checking, have to be set up. The Officers and the staff have to be trained in their work. The border between West Bengal and East Bengal alone is over about 800 miles in length. There are also the common boundaries between East Bengal on the one hand, and Bihar, Assam and Tripura on the other. I propose to meet representatives of the State Governments concerned either on next Saturday or early next week for examining the details. It is, therefore, clear that it will be impossible to set up the organization to be ready for work with effect from the 15th May, 1952. I shall let you know the result of the discussions as early as I can. In the meantime, I would suggest that Pakistan be moved at once to put off the introduction of the system, if at all, beyond that date.

***************

A Note of the proposal of Pakistan to Introduce passport system for travel between India and Pakistan.

The Note from the Pakistan High Commissioner does not logically make out any case for the introduction of the Passport System for travel between India and Pakistan. It states that the Permit System in force between India and Pakistan is out-moded, has not worked satisfactorily and has impeded rather than facilitated inter-communication between the two countries. The avowed object of substituting the Permit System by the Passport System is, therefore, to rectify the unsatisfactory arrangements and thus to facilitate inter-communication between the two countries. Travel between East Bengal and the Indian States of West Bengal, Assam and Tripura has hitherto been absolutely free and there is no Permit or Passport System in existence there. If, as stated, the object is to facilitate inter-communication, the local conclusion is that the present free movement should continue in the East and there should be no impediment created by introducing the Passport System. If the Permit System has been unsatisfactory and has retarded communication in the West, either the Permit System may be retained after rectifying the defects or some sort of Passport introduced for travel between Western Pakistan and India, but nothing appears to be necessary on the grounds stated, so far as East Bengal, West Bengal, Assam and Tripura are concerned.

2. The proposal will affect migrants from East Bengal in West Bengal, Assam and Tripura and those from these Indian States now in East Bengal. Under the Prime Ministers Agreement, for those migrants "there shall be freedom of movement and protection in transit" between East Bengal, West Bengal, Assam and Tripura. Many of these migrants are willing to return to their original homes. For that they want to study the conditions prevailing in their former countries and thus to move between the two countries rather frequently. Under the Evacuee Property laws in force in East Bengal, West Bengal, Assam and Tripura, those migrants, who return to their homes within 31-12-53 and want back possession of their property taken over for management by the Evacuee Property Management Committees, are entitled to get back possession. Insurmountable difficulties will be created in the way of those migrants if the proposal comes through. It will, therefore, amount to a unilateral modification of the Pact. So far as East Bengal and the three Indian States in the East are concerned, the proposal should, therefore, be abandoned.

Pakistan’s insistence for introducing the Passport System in spite of what has been stated above, may, therefore, be due to some other reason, namely, the question of security. Curiously, however, they want to make such movement comparatively easy for cultivators and agricultural labourers of the border Unions. From the point of view of security, the need for protection is greater in the border areas than elsewhere. In view, however, of the provisions of the Prime Ministers’ Agreement’ the Government of West Bengal are prepared to overlook this risk and continue the present system of free movement. If, however, Pakistan insists on and introduce restrictions, there should be no special facility for the cultivators, and the agricultural labourers of the border Unions. Perhaps, it may be desirable to make movement along the border stricter.

A distant objective of Pakistan may be to isolate East Bengal (Hindus and Muslims) from India. If isolation is effected, the Hindus in East Bengal will tend gradually to get included in the fold of Islam.

If the system is introduced it will be necessary to set up additional Visa Offices both in the Indian States of West Bengal, Assam, Tripura and Bihar and in East Bengal. Views about the additional stations in India suggested by Pakistan cannot be given without further consultation, particularly with the representatives of the Governments of Assam, Tripura and Bihar, whom, in addition to West Bengal, the Hon’ble Shri. C.C. Biswas proposes to call up for discussion in the next few days. As regards additional stations in East Bengal, it is suggested initially that there should be Indian Offices in East Bengal at Lalmonirhat for serving northern East Bengal, Kushtia for serving western East Bengal, Khulna for serving south-western East Bengal, Chittagong and Akhura for serving south-eastern East Bengal and Sylhet for serving north-eastern East Bengal.

Many preliminary steps have to be taken, such as setting additional Passport and Visa granting authorities, printing and supplying forms, amending the Indian Passport Rules, 1950, and several other things. It will be impossible after having taken all these steps to get ready for the introduction of the system by the 15th May 1952. It will appear that in eastern India four state Governments, namely those of West Bengal, Assam, Tripura and Bihar, are affected by the proposal. Arrangements have been made by the Hon’ble Shri C.C. Biswas for a conference of these States either towards the end of this week or early next week. We may not be able to get a clear picture of the difficulties involved and the time required for solving them till discussions have taken place in the proposed conference.

Will you kindly refer to your letter No.HC/52/11, dated the 17th April, 1952?

While I fully appreciate your point of view, I much regret that it is simply not practicable to stop either the public or the press discussions or speculating on such matters. You will be able to understand our difficulties, since you are aware of the unauthorized discussions and comments which are wont to appear in the press of all democratic countries, sometimes to the embarrassment of their own Government.

Yours sincerely

In another letter of the same date, Pakistan Foreign Secretary also informed the High Commissioner that there was no chance that the scheme can be “modified in substance” and “it was possible, though not probable, that the 15th (May) deadline might be slightly modified”.

D.O. No.406/HM 18th April, 1952

My dear Mr. Ahmed,

I think you for your Top Secret D.O. from Dacca No.HM/NGO/1/52 dated 18 April, 1952, in reply to my latter (D.O. No.391/HM) dated the 25th March, 1952. In view of certain unconfirmed reports which had reached us regarding the proposed imposition of a Permit System to regulate travel between East Pakistan and India, I had written to you to ascertain the intentions of the Pakistan Government on the subject. I purposely addressed you at Karachi as you were there at the time, and I naturally expected a much earlier communication in reply. I regret that your reply comes to me more than a week after the Pakistan Government had formally communicated to our Government their “decision” (and not a mere “proposal” as you suggest) to introduce the Passport-cum-Visa system.

2. I agree with you that the matter is now being dealt with between Karachi and New Delhi directly, we need not carry on a parallel correspondence between ourselves on the subject. You will, however, excuse me if I cannot accept the view which you have expressed in the concluding sentence of your letter that “the proposed measure is not intended to militate against the Delhi Agreement of April 8, 1950.” The terms of The Delhi Agreement guaranteeing freedom of movement from one side of the border to the other are so clear and unambiguous that a bare refutation that the introduction of a Passport-cum-Visa system will not militate against the Agreement is hardly convincing, and I must express my complete dissent from your statement.

Yours sincerely

M. O. A. Baig.

My dear Baig,

I think you for your letters No. 3834-FS/52* and No. 3620FS/52*, both dated yesterday and on the same subject.

I do not wish to conceal my surprise and disappointment at your reception to my No. HC/52/11, dated the 17th April. After the free and friendly talks which I recently had with you, I was encouraged to expect a more helpful attitude from you in this matter. After all it was not as though I was pleading for the consideration of purely Indian interests. My request was made from the point of view of both the countries. I do understand that democratic countries cannot prevent unauthorized discussions of and Press comments on public issues when they emanate from pure speculation. At the same time you will recognize the usual practice and the desire on the part of Governments to observe secrecy so long as the particular issues are under discussion at Government level. I understand that on this occasion information on this subject was given out by a member of the Pakistan Government. That was why I made that request to you. My Government has not issued any statement even after the publication of this news in the Press.

However, all this is too late in the day in view of the editorial in the evening paper yesterday and the leading article in another prominent daily this morning!

May I still hope that you will succeed in persuading your Government to arrange for the proper discussion of the whole subject by the representatives of the two Governments before making up their minds one way or the other and also not to fix the date for the introduction of the proposed change until the whole position has been carefully examined.

* Mr. Baig in his letter had told the High Commissioner that he cannot hold any hope to him that the Pakistan scheme of passport/visa would be “modified in substance”, while holding out the hope that it was “possible, though not very probable that the 15th May deadline might be slightly modified”. In his second letter he said that discussion of the subject in the media was inevitable process “of all democratic countries, sometimes to the embarrassment of their own Governments.”

 Document No.3386.
I hope to receive a favourable response from you in due course.

TOP SECRET

New Delhi, April 21, 1952.

The Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi, present their compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India and with reference to the High Commission’s note No.F.13(35)P/52 of 9th April 1952 regarding the introduction of a passport system between India and Pakistan have the honour to state as follows:-

1. The Government of India through High Commission in Karachi have made a representation on this subject to the Government of Pakistan. The Government of India have urged the Government of Pakistan to refrain from modifying the relevant provisions of the Prime Ministers’ Agreement of 1950 without full consultation between the two Governments. They have also assured the Government of Pakistan that they are ready to discuss with them in a fully co-operative spirit any circumstances which in Pakistan’s opinion justify a change in the present arrangements relating to travel between the two countries, and to find agreed solutions of such practical difficulties as may be found to exist. They have also pointed out that the practical difficulties in the way of setting up a passport system, even in the modified form suggested by the Pakistan Government, are so great that it will not be possible to give effect to any such decision by May 15th.
2. The Government of India have not yet had a reply to the suggestions made by them. Meanwhile they have examined some of the practical implications of the introduction of a passport system on the lines proposed in the Pakistan High Commission’s note. They have come to the conclusion that unless matters of detail are settled in advance in full consultation between the two Governments, many practical difficulties will arise and great inconvenience and hardship will be caused to bona fide travelers. Some of the matters which call for consultation are mentioned below:

   Category ‘A’ traffic, i.e., traffic confined to border unions in the two countries is extremely heavy. It does not follow any well-established routes. The border is crossed at hundreds of points for short visits. The Pakistan Government specified check points. Is this really feasible? If so, where should these check points be established? Obviously on both sides the check points must be on the same route. These routes must be fixed in advance and full publicity given. Should the Certificates carry a photograph of the holder and members of his family? If so, are facilities available to cultivators and others living in remote villages to get themselves photographed?

3. The Ministry of External Affairs have the honour to state that these are some of the points which need to be discussed by representatives of both the Governments before the present arrangements are modified. About the proposed change a representation has already been made by the Indian High Commissioner in Karachi. The Ministry of External Affairs would, however, strongly urge that the Government of Pakistan may be moved to agree to consultations taking place between the two Governments, preferably in Calcutta or Dacca so that matters of detail arising from this proposal may be examined fully and agreed solutions may be reached before any new arrangements are enforced.

4. The Ministry take the opportunity to renew the assurances of their highest consideration.

No. HC/52/11 21st April 1952

My dear R.K.,

I have sent you just now an urgent telegram in continuation of our telephone talk this morning. In case you have not already sent by this morning’s Bag the summary of the decisions arrived at in the Conference which the Prime Minister has with the Home Minister and Dr. B.C. Roy, please telegraph the main points considered at the Conference. On receiving your letter or telegram, as the case may be, I shall go and see the Foreign Secretary about it.

As I have already told you in a letter earlier that it is not safe or expedient to talk such matters over the telephone.

As you will see, I have already been urging the general necessity of having a Conference of the Representatives of the two countries including those of the two Bengals before a change is introduced in the existing Permit System, but I need some specific points of unchallengeable force to strengthen my argument in favour of a discussion and the consequent need for postponing the date for introducing the proposed Passport System.

I am enclosing herewith copies of my correspondence with Baig, the Foreign Secretary to the Pakistan Government, for your perusal and for the information of the Prime Minister.

Yours sincerely

(Mohan Sinha Mehta)

3393. Extract from the minutes of a meeting held at Calcutta on the 21st April, 1952.

It was agreed that the following assurances in writing on a reciprocal basis should be demanded from Pakistan in respect of migrants:

1. Those migrants who are not hit by the amended Pakistan Citizenship Act, 1952, but still retain their Pakistani nationality, and who happen to be present in India on the date of the introduction of the passport system, should be given liberal passport facilities to enable them to return to Pakistan.

2. Those migrants who are still in India and may not qualify for citizenship of Pakistan under the amended law should be treated as Pakistan citizens for the purpose of the passports which should be freely given to them.

3. Similarly, liberal visa facilities should be given to migrants who have acquired Indian citizenship but have properties or other interests in Pakistan, to enable them to make occasional visits for the purpose of managing or disposing of their properties or looking after their other interests.

* The level of participants and their identities could not be ascertained.
My dear

On the 10th April, we received a note from the Pakistan High Commission about introduction of passports between Pakistan and India, a copy of the note is attached. We immediately asked our High Commissioner in Karachi to make a representation about this to the Pakistan Government suggesting –

(a) that this would amount to a modification of the relevant provisions of the Prime Ministers’ Agreement of 1950 and that a modification of these provisions should not be made without full consultation between the two Governments;

(b) that if in the Pakistan Government’s view, there are any circumstances justifying a change of present practice, the Govt. of India would be ready to discuss them, in a fully cooperative spirit, with the Pakistan Government in order to find agreed solutions of such practical difficulties as might be found to exist; and

(c) that the difficulties which are likely to arise if a full-fledged passport system on the lines indicated in the High Commissioner's note is introduced, especially on the East Bengal border, are so great that the Govt. of India do not think it would be possible to give effect to any such decision by May 15th.

2. We have not yet had a reply from the Pakistan Government, but our information is that the decision taken by them will probably not be modified. The Hon'ble Minister of State and the Hon'ble the Chief Minister, West Bengal Government, have been informed by me of the new developments. The Hon'ble Minister of State is discussing this question with representatives of the Governments of States which border East Pakistan. A note containing some comments on Pakistan’s decision has been received from the West Bengal Government and a more detailed reply is expected soon from the Hon'ble Minister.
of State after he has completed his discussions with the State Governments. We have again asked the Pakistan Government (through our High Commissioner in Karachi and also through the Pakistan High Commissioner here) to agree to a meeting between representatives of the two Governments (i.e. India and Pakistan) to discuss matters of detail arising from this decision, so that practical difficulties may be fully thrashed out and agreed solutions may be reached before any new arrangements are made. There is still no reply from the Pakistan Government.

3. Since restrictions on movement between East Pakistan and your State may come into operation at short notice, I am writing to inform you of the developments that have taken place. The views and comments of the State Government on Pakistan’s decision have, no doubt, been placed before the Hon’ble Minister of State. I presume we will have before us, in the next few days, through the Hon’ble Minister, full details of the arrangements to be made in each State if a passport system is brought into operation by the Govt. of Pakistan.

4. Since the existing permit system may have to be substituted by a passport system at short notice, we shall be glad if the East Punjab Government will kindly give their immediate attention to this matter and suggest changes, if any, in existing arrangements on the border and elsewhere which may have to be carried out when the new arrangements come into force.

Yours sincerely

Note by the Commonwealth Secretary:

Dr. Mehta wishes P.M. to see the correspondence below. About ‘A’, the position is that Dr. Mehta had mentioned to me that he was expecting a reply from the Pakistan Foreign Office by the end of the week. Since there was no telegram from him, during the week-end, I asked him on Monday whether some further delay was anticipated. We did not discuss matters of detail on the telephone. From the correspondence attached, it will be seen that on the 18th, Mr. Baig informed the High Commissioner that Pakistan’s decision would probably not be modified in substance and while some change of date bringing the passport system into force was possible, though not very probable, a definite reply could only be given “after watching developments for the next week or two”. If this reply had been telegraphed to us, I would have mentioned it at the meeting in P.M.’s room on the 20th.

2. As regards ‘B’ without detailed information about practical difficulties (which is still awaited from the Hon’ble Mr. Biswas who is meeting State representatives in Calcutta), it is not easy to suggest “specific points” for discussion. A few points were mentioned by me during the meeting in P.M.’s room on Sunday and I have already written about them to Mr. Biswas, Dr. Mehta and the Pakistan High Commissioner who has communicated our request to Karachi for joint consultations between the two Governments. Copies of some relevant papers are placed below. I am keeping all 5 border State Governments (East Punjab, Assam, West Bengal, Tripura and Bihar) informed of the developments that have taken place.

3. Immediately on receipt of Mr. Biswas’ comments on the Pakistan note, an inter-Ministry meeting will be called. Since it is practically certain now that a passport system will come into force, I shall ask Home Ministry to assume responsibility for working out detailed arrangements in consultation with the State Governments. Questions of policy and matters requiring discussion with Pakistan Government or the Minister of State will, of course, be handled by E.A. Ministry.

(R.K. Nehru)

Note by Secretary General:
Reference Commonwealth Secretary’s note.

It is quite clear to me now that there is no hope of persuading Pakistan to abandon or modify their decision to introduce a system of passports. If the impression that we expect such modification as a result of the proposed conference is not removed, the chances are that there will be no conference. I suggest, therefore, that we telegraph to Shri Mohan Sinha Mehta that, unless he is satisfied that the principle of introducing the passport system is still open to discussion, he should make it clear to the Government of Pakistan that we need a conference, at an official level, to discuss ways and means of making a passport system workable with the maximum of efficiency and the minimum of hardship to migrants from both sides of the border. The points of detail mentioned in paragraph 2 of the aide memoire handed over by the Commonwealth Relations Secretary to the Pakistan High Commissioner here on the 21st April should be put forward by Shri Mehta as illustrative, not exhaustive, of the points of detail that have to be discussed. This telegram should be repeated to Shri C.C. Biswas and he should at the same time be asked to let us know without delay.

(a) what additional points of detail, if any, he would like included in the agenda and
(b) whether he has any view or suggestions regarding the venue of the conference and who should take part in it from our side.

G. S. Bajpai

Minute by Prime Minister:

Prime Minister’s Secretariat

Although it does appear that Pakistan is bent on introducing a system of Passports, I do not think we need surrender our position completely. The casual way Pakistan has dealt with us in this matter appears to me to be extraordinary. After their first letter to us, we immediately protested and asked for a conference. They delayed their replies and now they tell us that they will give a definite reply after watching developments for the next week or two. This is a very odd position to take up. I suggest that we telegraph to our High Commissioner in Karachi that as this matter affects a very large number of people in both India and Pakistan it cannot possibly be decided casually in this way and in any event a Conference is necessary even if some kind of a Passport system is to be introduced. Such a system cannot be introduced without discussing innumerable details and ways and means of making it workable without hardship to people from both sides of the border.
2. I do not understand what our High Commissioner means when he says that he needs some specific points of unchallengeable force to strengthen his argument. You may repeat what we have said already and add to it. It is patent to me that such a change requires careful discussion.

3. This telegram should be repeated to Shri C.C. Biswas and he should be asked for his views about the points mentioned above. I should have thought that the venue of the Conference should be Delhi.

4. We should certainly go ahead with our preparations and the Home Ministry as well as the State Governments of East Punjab, Assam, West Bengal, Tripura, and Bihar should be kept fully informed and asked to make their preparations.

3396. TOP SECRET

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan to Pakistan Foreign Secretary M.O.A. Baig.

Karachi, April 23, 1952.

No.HC/52/11. 23 April 1952.

Subject: Proposal of the Pakistan Government to introduce Passports between India and Pakistan.

My dear Baig,

This is continuation of my To Secret letter No. HC/52/11, dated the 19th of April 1952 on the subject of the Top Secret Memorandum No.D.106/Div.12 (Spl.Sec)/52 dated the 9th of April 1952 which you gave me on that day. It contained the Pakistan Government’s proposals to substitute a modified system of international passports between India and Pakistan. As I told you, the Memorandum came as a surprise to me and the Government of India too would also have the same feeling about it, because (a) it would be contrary to the spirit of the Prime Ministers’ Agreement of 1950 (vide Clause B (i) of the Agreement) and (b) a change of this type should have been decided upon after mutual consultation. I requested you to bring these points to the notice of the Pakistan Government, particularly because the people of the two countries would be put to serious hardship and inconvenience by the enforcement of the new proposals. In any case, the date proposed in Paragraph 10 of the Memorandum referred to above for the introduction of the new scheme would not be practicable.

It is therefore earnestly hoped that the Government of Pakistan are considering the suggestion made to you by me on the 9th of April and in my letters to you No. HC/51/11, dated the 9th of April, No. HC/51/11, dated the 12th of April and in the concluding portion of my letter No. HC/52/11, dated the 19th April. I am to assure the Government of Pakistan that the Government of India are willing and ready to discuss the whole subject in a cooperative spirit in order to realize the common objective of a rational, suitable and convenient system of regulating the movement of people across the borders from one country to another. It is, however, quite clear that there are numerous difficulties and questions of detail which call for careful examination. These problems affect both sides and it would be in the interests of the peoples and the Governments of both the countries to take all aspects of the case fully into consideration before reaching a final decision and bringing it into operation. For example, the selection of places for the establishment of check points will not be an easy matter. The checking staff will have to be maintained on both sides at each point. The border between East Bengal on the one side and Assam, West Bengal, Bihar and Tripura on the other extends over hundreds of miles and at present people are accustomed to cross without restriction from one country to another for short visits at innumerable points, hundreds in number. The division of intending travelers in the three categories enumerated in Paragraph 3 of the Memorandum of the Pakistan Government particularly in categories A and B will not be mutually exclusive in all cases. This is just illustrative of the complication involved in the proposed change.

It can easily be imagined that the change contemplated by the Pakistan Government would subject the people to many new rules and practices which might cause serious inconvenience to the people. To take another example, it would not at all be easy for the common labourer and cultivator to produce photographs for their Passports. In any case, the implementation of the decision will require the necessity of detailed administrative directions from the Central Government and these directives cannot be issued until the matter is fully examined. The question of staff and the administrative supervision will also need careful consideration before the new scheme is ready for being put into Then the decisions would have to be announced and explained to people concerned so that a sense of panic and insecurity is avoided and the new system works smoothly and with reasonable efficiency.

It would be desirable, indeed essential, that experienced officers of the two Governments of East Pakistan and the States of India named above, besides the representatives of the two Central Governments, should meet together and examine the practical difficulties involved and how best they would be met so that the common people could be saved from unnecessary hardship. I would therefore strongly urge on the Pakistan Government that they may agree to the proposal of having a conference between the representatives of the two countries to examine the whole question thoroughly in order that an agreed solution may be reached between the two Governments. The Government of India would be glad to arrange for the meeting to take place at Calcutta, but would be willing to send their representatives to Dacca if the Government of Pakistan prefer that place as the venue of the meeting.

It is quite clear that it would be quite impracticable to fix a date at this stage for introducing the new arrangements, not at any rate until the results of the Conference have been submitted to the two Governments. The Government of India fully endorse the view of the Pakistan Government that the announcement of the date for bringing the new system into operation should be made as long in advance as possible.

My Government would greatly appreciate a very early expression of the views of the Pakistan Government on this important subject.

With kindest regards,

Yours sincerely

IMMEDIATE

No. 30382 April 24, 1952

For Mehta from Nehru.

Your letter No. HC/52/11 of 21st, Passports.

P.M. has seen correspondence. In our telegram 30368 of 10th we strongly urged that modification of relevant provisions of Prime Ministers’ Agreement of 1950 should NOT be made without full consultation* between two Governments. Pakistan Government’s reply was awaited for many days. We now gather from Baig’s letter of 18th to you that he cannot give any hope that proposals will be modified in substance and that definite reply about date on which Passport system will come into force will be given after a week or two. We consider that since this matter affects a very large number of people in both India and Pakistan, it cannot possibly be decided casually in this way and that in any event a conference is necessary even if some kind of passport system is to be introduced. Such a system could NOT be introduced without discussing innumerable details and ways and means of making it workable without hardship to people on both sides. Some points mentioned in minutes of meeting held in Delhi on 20th, copy of which was sent to you. These points were repeated in a note sent to you with my letter No. 849/NGO/52 of 21st. List of points for discussion is illustrative and additional points will be mentioned after we have received Minister of State’s report on his discussions with representatives of State Governments.

2. In note referred to above I suggested Calcutta or Dacca as possible venue of conference. On further consideration it is suggested that conference should be held in Delhi.

[This telegram was repeated to the State Governments of East Punjab, West Bengal, Assam, Bihar and Tripura as well as the Deputy High Commissioners at Dacca and Lahore.]

* On the same day (24-4-52) the High Commissioner telegraphically informed the Commonwealth Secretary that the Pakistan Government had verbally conveyed their agreement to a conference but insisted that “their decision to introduce the scheme is final.”

D.O. No. 409/HM 24th April, 1952

My dear Nehru,

I am enclosing a Note (not available) summarizing the decisions of the Conference of State representatives and the Deputy High Commissioner, Dacca, which was held at my office on Monday last, the 21st April 1952. I placed before the meeting the note form you of the 20th April, which I had just received through Dr. B.C. Roy.

2. Pakistan’s decision to introduce the Passports cum Visa system without previous consultation with India was deeply deplored. The Conference strongly felt that we should not merely toe the line with Pakistan, or seek for minor modification of a system predominantly based on their proposals. We, on our part, do not wish to scrap the Prime Ministers’ Agreement regarding freedom of movement of migrants, nor to disrupt the close economic and social ties between East Bengal and West Bengal. We are fully conscious of the hardship which any such action will entail, apart from the risk of a fresh large-scale migration from either side which it would involve. If, however, we are forced by Pakistan to introduce restrictions on travel, we would have a system which must take the due account of our requirements and our interests, including the interests of minority of both countries.

3. Pakistan’s Note itself casts doubts on the bona fides of their move so far as travel to and from East Bengal is concerned. The alleged ground that the Permit system is out-moded and requires to be replaced by a Passport-cum-Visa system affording greater facilities of travel might apply as between West Pakistan and India, but could not be made an excuse for imposing restrictions on travel where none existed before. There can be no doubt that Pakistan’s main (if not their only) object is to restrict movement as between East Bengal and the States in India, and the disguise under which it is sought to be covered up is indeed very thin.
4. If Pakistan’s proposals were bona fide and intended to be fair to both sides, one would have expected them to introduce the passport system as recognised by international practice and convention. In that case, there should have been no occasion for any classification of Categories A, B, and C, as proposed by them. Category C should have been quite enough. The object of adding Categories A & B seems to be more in the interest of their own nationals, particularly of Muslim, who are to be found in overwhelmingly large numbers almost all along the border and who find it necessary to cross the border frequently for cultivating their lands or otherwise earning their livelihood. Indian Nationals requiring similar facilities for crossing into the border areas of East Bengal are far fewer in number. The economic interests of Indian nationals as well as of migrants from East Bengal take them far into the interior of the province, and under Pakistan’s scheme, visits to such areas will be greatly restricted under Category B. In these circumstances, the Conference saw no reason for providing special facilities under Category A, as the balance of advantage would lie predominantly in favour of Pakistan. If special facilities are at all called for, that should be in favour of minorities for the purpose of maintaining the right of free movement between the two countries, which was guaranteed to them under the Prime Minister’s Agreement.

5. Apart from other objections, Category A would be unworkable unless an elaborate system of check points was maintained to guard the border Unions of all sides, and not merely on the side adjoining Pakistan, in order to ensure that the holders of these special permits could not travel beyond the permitted area.

6. In the opinion of the Conference, about the only valid ground that could be reasonably put forward for introducing the Passport system between East Bengal and India would be security reasons. This ground was in fact suggested by Gurmani in his statement in the Pakistan Constituent Assembly, although no reference could be found in the Note handed over by Pakistan. If security be the reason, it is obvious that the restrictions in the border areas should be all the stricter. The refusal of special border permits would itself operate as a restriction. Further, tightening up can be achieved by greater strictness in the issuing of Passports and Visas to inhabitant of border areas.

7. I wonder if Pakistan would agree to our proposal for a conference even at this stage. In my opinion, a conference is necessary not so much to work out the details, important as this is, but for the purpose of examining the real basis of Pakistan’s proposals and their approach to the whole question, and whether or not it is their intention to scrap fundamental provisions of the Prime Ministers’ Agreement, thereby undermining the very basis of the mutual relations between the two countries.

8. From the enclosed Note you will see that the Conference dealt with the case of migrants who stand the risk of becoming Stateless, due to the recent amendment of Pakistan Citizenship Act. One or two other matters were also discussed, but are not recorded in the Note. One of these relates to Hindus from East Bengal who would come over to India with valid Passports and Visas and would not want to go back. Should such peoples be repatriated or given asylum? Another question is that relating to the granting of visas to Pakistan Muslims intending to visit Assam, in view of the special problems of that state and their law for the exclusion of undesirable immigrants. As you will appreciate, these are questions which require policy decisions by our Government.

Yours sincerely

3399.  SECRET

Letter from Deputy High Commissioner for India in Pakistan based in Lahore to the Ministry of External Affairs.

Lahore, April 24, 1952

Deputy High Commissioner for India in Pakistan
144, Upper Mall, Lahore

No.Sc.52/1/118 Dated the 24th April, 1952

My dear Puri,

Though I have had no authentic information on the subject from you, newspaper reports show that the Pakistan Government have apparently decided to introduce the permit system between East and West Bengal also. If this news is correct, I think a re-consideration of our entire present policy in the matter of issuing permits would be necessary. As you know, there has never been complete reciprocity on the Pakistan side in the matter of permits almost ever since the permit system came into force. As we have been anxious to prevent the introduction of the permit system between East and West Bengal, we had considered it inadvisable to take retaliatory measures against Pakistan in the matter of permits since such action might well have accelerated the introduction of the permit system between the two Bengals. We are no longer in that position now.

2. It was decided at the last permit conference held in June, 1951, that information should be exchanged between the Governments of India and Pakistan regarding details of permits granted by the permit issuing authorities of each Government. From copies of correspondence sent to me by the Rehabilitation Ministry so far, it appears that though we have furnished the necessary information, the Pakistan Government has not yet sent us the required statements. A study of the statements furnished by the two Governments alone can show authoritatively to what extent we have been more liberal in this matter of granting permits than Pakistan has been. I have, however, collected certain figures from our records here which throw some light on this point. Thus, since August, 1951, we have issued to Pakistan nationals 1757 temporary permits covering 1976 persons, besides 135 official permits covering 493 persons, total 2469 persons. As against this, during the same period, we have issued permanent return permits only to 1108 Indian nationals (680 Muslims and 428 non-Muslims) to go to India. From this it would appear that Pakistan permit issuing authorities have apparently issued temporary permits approximately to 1108 Indian nationals since August, 1951, to visit West Punjab, against 2469 Pakistan nationals issued temporary permits by us during the same period for visiting India.

3. Since August, 1951, severe restrictions have been placed on Indian nationals against their visiting West Pakistan. Indian nationals are not normally being allowed to visit any other place in West Pakistan except Lahore and Karachi, permits for other places being rendered invalid by a specific endorsement thereon at the point of entry into Pakistan. Until about October or November 1951, special police enquiries were made at Lahore to consider whether an Indian national, with a permit valid for a place outside Lahore, should be allowed to proceed there. Since then, Pakistan permit issuing authorities in India have apparently been instructed to consult the West Punjab authorities (and doubtlessly the other provincial governments in West Pakistan) before giving a permit to an Indian national to visit a place other than Lahore. In spite of many representations made by me to Majid, and also a personal approach made to Daultana, there has been no improvement in this respect. Apparently these instructions, restricting the visit of Indian nationals only to Lahore and Karachi in West Pakistan, are based on orders of the Pakistan Central Government. Very recently, an Indian businessman (a Hindu) was given a permit by the Pakistan High Commission to visit Lahore and Gujranwala. He was, however, not allowed to leave Lahore and had to go back without visiting Gujranwala. I have no doubt that similar instance will occur in future also.
4. Numerous difficulties are being placed on the very few Indian nationals who are living in places other than Lahore in connection with their work. Their permits are renewed only with the greatest difficulty and they are not allowed to leave the towns where they reside. A Parsee lady (an Indian national), whose husband is employed as Manager of a Pakistani-owned textile mill at Lyallpur, is permitted by the local S.P., by a written order, to travel only by a night train and without breaking journey en route, for her visits to Lahore to secure extensions of the Pakistan permits of herself and husband. Road journeys, even in areas so far as not treated as “closed”, are being rarely permitted to Indian nationals in the West Punjab.

5. Numerous difficulties have also been placed, ever since the tension last year, on Indian nationals in transit to Afghanistan through West Pakistan. Lately, these restrictions are also being extended to members of our Embassy staff in Kabul. I have taken up this matter repeatedly with Majid and have also written a letter to him recently. I have an impression that these restrictions, again, have been Centrally imposed and they are unlikely to be removed until the Centre says so.

6. There is a definite attempt to black out the whole of West Pakistan, except Lahore and Karachi, to all Indian nationals irrespective of their religion as the restrictions apply as much to Indian Muslims as to others. It is a matter for serious consideration whether we should continue to accept such one-sided restrictions being placed on Indian nationals while we continue to give permits to Pakistan nationals to visit India freely, without restricting them only to centers such as Delhi and Bombay. Whatever steps we take, careful publicity will have to be arranged in advance so that on the one hand what Pakistan has been doing may be exposed and at the same time the reason for our restrictive action may be made clear. Perhaps it may be useful to call Atal and myself to Delhi for a discussion with you and the officers of the Ministry of Rehabilitation before finalizing our future policy in this respect.

7. I am sending copies of this letter to His Excellency the High Commissioner as well as to Acharya at Dacca.

Yours sincerely

No. HC/52/11 24th April 1952

Subject: Proposal of the Pakistan Government to introduce Passports between India and Pakistan.

My dear R.K.,

Your Top Secret Most Immediate letters No. 238/CS/52, reached the 20th April and No.849-NGO/52, dated the 21st April. They came by a Special Bag via Bombay. Yesterday in the morning I tried to contact the Foreign Secretary. It seems he had gone out day before yesterday and returned to his office later in the morning yesterday. His time was so heavily booked that he could not see me the whole of yesterday. In order to avoid delay I sent him a letter marking it immediate. It reached him yesterday afternoon. A copy of my letter is herewith enclosed.

This morning I again rang him up and he received me at 12-30 P.M. In spite of what I had written to him yesterday, he started the conversation in the same strain, namely, the Pakistan Government had made up their mind to introduce the scheme of passports and it was pointless to hold a meeting to discuss the subject. He asked me what were the points which should be discussed at the meeting of the representatives of the two Governments, which I was urging on them. I told him that in my letter of yesterday I had suggested the points for discussion. Luckily I had made out a list of points which I thought should be discussed before the introduction of the new system was announced. I put that paper in his hands (a copy of the same is herewith enclosed). I added however that those were the points which occurred to me, but I was ignorant of the problems relating to the movement of people between East Pakistan and West Bengal, Assam, Bihar and Tripura. The officers serving in those States and East Bengal would probably be able to bring up many points and practical difficulties for discussion. There were numerous matters of details which would have to be examined before the scheme would be ready for enforcement.

Baig sent for the Joint Secretary Itaat Husain who has recently taken over this desk. We had some discussion after which they agreed that a Conference of the representatives of the two Governments might be held in the East. Itaat Husain was to get in touch telegraphically with East Bengal Government and would let me know whether the meeting should be held at Calcutta or Dacca. I am awaiting their reply on this point.

They would most probably send a man called Latif who is Officer on Special Duty in the Foreign Ministry and deals with this subject. Some of our Officers in the E.A. Ministry must be knowing him. He worked in the Secretariat before partition.

I.send you a telegram today at about 2 P.M. to say that the Pakistan Government have agreed to have a Conference on this subject.

Will you kindly arrange to select our representatives for the proposed meeting. It may perhaps be a good thing to send somebody from the Home Ministry and an Officer of the Ministry of Rehabilitation along with an experienced officer of the External Affairs Ministry. The West Bengal Government should be represented by an experienced officer of their State. If you think it necessary, please arrange for the representation of the State of Assam, Tripura and Bihar.

In the meantime, I understand that Mr. C.C. Biswas has also examined the question and he may have some points ready for consideration at the Conference. These may be obtained from him for the meeting.

This will be dispatched by the Bag tomorrow. If there is any point with regard to the proposed Conference which you would like me to take up with the Pakistan Government, kindly let me have a telegram on Saturday next.

In this connection Baig told me that an announcement should be made at once that it had been decided to introduce the Passport system between the two countries at a date to be announced later. I told him that this announcement had better be made after the meeting. His opinion was that there was no point in delaying the announcement. In fact, it would be an advantage in a way. A lot of steam is bound to be let off. There would be time for feelings to settle down. Besides, the officers who would meet in the Conference would have the public reactions in front of them at the time of discussions.

Yours sincerely

No.30357 April 26, 1952

For Hon’ble Mr. Biswas from Nehru.

Passports. Your telegram 1/HM of 25th. Since Pakistan Government has decided finally to go ahead with passport arrangements, there are two alternatives open to us: (a) we can take certain countermeasures without discussing matters of details with Pakistan Government. This may lead to conflict of arrangements in the two countries which is bound to cause hardship to citizens of both countries, (b) alternatively, we could try by means of conference at official level between two Governments to smooth out difficulties by discussing matters of detail, with a view to reducing conflict in passport arrangements to be made on either side. We have suggested the second alternative and Pakistan Government has verbally agreed to the holding of conference “for discussing implementation of the scheme”. We feel that it would be open to officials participating in this conference to discuss all matters of detail relating to the implementation of the decision to introduce passports between Pakistan and India. In our view, therefore, the effort to hold conference should NOT be given up. IENGAR, Home Secretary, with whom I have discussed, concurs. We are communicating our views to P.M. also.

Minutes of a meeting held on 28-4-52 at 12 noon in the room of Commonwealth Secretary to discuss Pakistan’s proposal to introduce Passport System for Travel between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, April 28, 1952.

Present:-

1) Shri R.K. Nehru, Commonwealth Secretary.
2) Shri H.V.R. Iengar, Home Secretary.
3) Shri C.N. Chandra, Rehabilitation Secretary.
After a general discussion it was decided that:

i) An Inter-Departmental meeting should be called on the 2nd May, 1952 at 11 a.m. to which the Chief Secretaries of the Government of West Bengal, Assam, Bihar and Punjab, the Chief Commissioner, Tripura, the Deputy Secretary, Ministry of E.A., Branch Secretariat, Calcutta and the Deputy High Commissioner for India at Dacca should be invited. This meeting should consider in detail the measures required to be taken by India in connection with the introduction of the Passport System.

ii) Certain detailed questions regarding control of Pakistan nationals visiting India under the new system should be studied by a representative each of the Ministries of Rehabilitation, Home Affairs and External Affairs.

iii) The Press Note to be issued by the Government of India on the 1st of May should be further considered by an Inter-Departmental meeting after the text of the proposed Pakistan Press Note has been received.

13. Shri C. Ganesan,
The Chairman extended a cordial welcome to the participants from out stations. He explained briefly the sequence of events since the receipt of Pakistan’s note of the 9th March, 1952, and stated the general political background of Pakistan’s decision. He initiated general discussion on the effect of the introduction of a system of passport and visas for travel between India and Pakistan, particularly in relation to the problem of minorities in the Eastern region. The general view was that the trend of movements in the last few weeks does not give a correct indication of the probable effect of the decision to introduce passports. Many people on both sides of the border still entertain the hope that after discussion the system may not be imposed or may be in a liberal form. The first reaction to the news of a definite decision to enforce the system is likely to induce Hindus in West Bengal to return to East Bengal before the border is closed in the hope of being able to do something about their property. After some time, however, the restrictions on travel and certain attendant consequences may encourage a further exodus of Hindus from East Bengal.

2. Category “A” Passports.

It was decided not to agree to a special and separate category of passports for people of the border Unions. In the first place such a special category of passports, valid only for movement in border Unions, will raise the question of checking of movement in between border Unions and the rest of the State; it will be obviously impossible to have two lines of check posts one behind the other. Secondly, the States of West Bengal and Bihar have not much to gain if people of their border Unions are given special facilities to visit border Unions in East Bengal. Pakistan, on the other hand, is most anxious to obtain special facilities for its own people in the border Unions because a larger number of Pakistanis work as casual and agricultural labourers on the Indian side of the border Unions and would not be interested in giving special facilities to Indian nationals who are not residents of the Indian border Unions. It was, therefore felt that there should be one single type of passport for all inter-State movements in the eastern region. This would ensure that as against the large number of visas which Pakistan would want for the people of their border Unions, India would be able to obtain a substantial number of visas for Indian nationals, particularly those who have business and property in East Bengal. The Government of Assam are interested in facilities for border people of the Khasi & Jaintia and the Garo Hills. These facilities could be provided for under Category B passports with multi-journey visas. The representatives of Tripura stated that the Indian nationals in the border Tehsils of Tripura were in no particular need of facilities to visit border Unions in East Bengal, but pointed out that about 34,000 acres of land in Tripura are cultivated by Pakistan nationals and many of whom are also required as labour for road projects and therefore for economic reasons, reasonable facilities would have to be given to such Pakistan nationals. It was decided that these facilities would be provided under Category B passports.

3. Category “B” Passports:

   (i) It was decided that it was not necessary to provide for visas for the whole of the province or State to be visited and that as in respect of West Pakistan and the rest of India, in the eastern zone also visas should state the place or places to be visited, which should invariably include the capital of the State to be visited. Subject to the above, in the conference with Pakistan, India should try to arrange that all residents of the Eastern Zone should get Category B Passports and the following facilities should be generally made available for holders of Category B passports:

   (1) Period of validity of visa to be one year.

   (2) Multi-journey visas.

   (3) Visas to be issued liberally.

In so far as Pakistan does not agree to these facilities they should be reciprocally refused to Pakistan nationals and not agreed to for any special category of Pakistanis, e.g. border people or seamen, etc.
(ii) The representatives for Bihar stated that traffic between East Bengal and Bihar was not very substantial and therefore Bihar could be excluded from the eastern zone. Equally Bihar would have no objection to inclusion if this was necessary in order to come to an agreement.

4. Category “C” Passports

It was decided that Category “C” passports should be distinguishable from both Category “B” passports and the ordinary international passports. Category “C” passports will then be used for:

(i) Visits of Indians to West Pakistan.

(ii) Subjects to Pakistan's agreement, for visits to India of persons not normally resident in East Bengal.

5. Period of validity of Category “B” & “C” Passports

It was decided that Category “B” passports should be valid for four years. Category “C” passports should normally be made valid for six months, but the same passport can be renewed from time to time for further visits up to a total of five years. In cases of necessity for longer stay in Pakistan, the Indian diplomatic missions in Pakistan could extend the period of validity of a Category “C” passport for the period necessary.

6. Issue of Category “B” passports:

(i) It was decided that these passports should be issued by District Magistrates in the State of West Bengal, Assam and Tripura, and if Bihar is included in the scheme for eastern region, also in Bihar. Initially at least the number of applications for such passports will be enormous and in order to obviate unreasonable delay, it will be necessary to issue a large number of passports without detailed enquiries. Two points arise from this. Firstly, persons who are not Indian nationals may try to get their Indian nationality established by obtaining these passports on the strength of false statements in their applications. Secondly, the jute, coal and other industries employ a large number of persons who are Pakistan nationals and it will be necessary to take measure to prevent these persons from being given Indian passports, unless as a matter of fact they come within the nationality provisions of the Constitution of India. It was therefore felt that the following precautions should be taken:-

(a) The form of application should include a questionnaire on certain points relating to nationality and domicile and the applicant must fill these up.

(b) The application should contain a solemn affirmation of the correctness of the particulars filled in.

(c) The application should be attested by a responsible person. The category of those who are authorized to attest an application should be large viz., all gazetted officials, honorary magistrates, chairman of union boards, practicing lawyers at district and sub-divisional courts etc., etc.

(d) In due course, legislative provision will have to be made that if a person is discovered to have made false statements in these applications, any passport granted to him may be confiscated and if the persons is not a national of India, a competent authority may direct his removal or deportation from India.

(ii) It was decided that instructions to district magistrates should be issued on the following lines:

(i) If the form has been duly filled in and attested and if the case appears to be bona fide, the passport may be issued without further enquiry.

(ii) In appropriate cases the district magistrate may insist on a sworn affidavit either by the applicant or by a respectable person known to the district magistrate.

(iii) In cases of real doubt the district magistrate may order an enquiry by the police.

(iv) No district magistrate should issue a category “B” passport to any person who is not normally resident in the district. Such persons must either apply to the district magistrate of the district of normal residence, or to the state govt.

(v) Migrants from east bengal who have, as a matter of fact, settled down in India and have definitely made India their home, may be issued category “B” passports without waiting for the formal acquisition of Indian nationality under the provisions of the Indian citizenship law which has still to be passed.

(vi) Subject to (v) above, in the case of persons who are of Pakistan origin, or who originated from other foreign countries, the passport should not be issued until a police enquiry has been made and it has been ascertained that the person has acquired Indian nationality under the provisions of the constitution.

(vii) Persons originally resident in India who had migrated to East Pakistan but had returned to India in pursuance of the Prime Minister’s agreement before the imposition of the passport system should be treated as Indian nationals.

7. Issue of Category “C” Passports.

Applications for such passports may be made to the District Magistrates, but the passport will only be issued by the State Government after receiving the report of the District Magistrate concerned, and after considering other relevant circumstances. A category “C” passport should invariably be issued after the usual police enquiry.

8. Forms for applications for passports.

Special forms of applications for Category “B” and C passports are being drawn up in accordance with the above mentioned decisions and will be forward to State Governments shortly.

9. Forms of passports:

(1) It was decided that the form for Category B and Category “C” passports should be the same but they should be distinguished by the following words:-

For Category “C” passports:-

“INDO-PAKISTAN PASSPORT”

For Category “B” passports:-

“INDO-PAKISTAN PASSPORT (EASTERN ZONE)"

(2) In the form devised by Pakistan it is proposed to certify a person not as a national of Pakistan (or of India) but only as a person (domiciled in Pakistan or India). This will lead to a dangerous position in several ways.

Firstly, it is possible that Pakistan nationals who come to India on such Pakistan passports may subsequently be disavowed by Pakistan on the ground that they are not Pakistan nationals under their Nationality Law and that Pakistan passport was only given to them as domiciled in Pakistan. Foreigners may be domiciled in Pakistan and a certificate of domicile therefore does not make it obligatory for the Government issuing the passports to take back the person covered by the passport as its nationals.

Secondly, a very large number of Pakistan nationals are working in various Indian industries or are otherwise at present resident in India. Although not qualifying for nationality under the Constitution of India, they can be regarded as domiciled in India and would thus, under the Pakistan Scheme become entitled to Category “B” or “C” passports to be issued by India. This must be avoided. Thirdly, unless a person is certified as national of Pakistan, there may be difficulty in applying the Indian Foreigners’ Act to such persons. It was therefore decided that we must insist on a certificate of nationality in the passports to be issued by Pakistan.

(3) The Pakistan form also provides for the same passport covering a whole family. This will cause considerable difficulty when a whole family comes to India and only one person or more return to Pakistan with the passport, leaving the others in India without any proof that they are Pakistan nationals. The families themselves will be put to great inconvenience in case like illness, etc., requiring a part to remain in India, while a part of the family returns to Pakistan.

In view of this it was decided that we should insist on a separate passport for each adult, but children under the age of 15 years may be included in the passport of either parent if traveling with them. Where children travel separately, they must have separate passports in accordance with normal international practice.

(4) There should be a column in the passport stating the validity of the passport and providing a page for renewals of validity. Further page should be provided for visas and for remarks of check-posts as to entry and exit.

(5) Specimen passport forms should be prepared on the above basis and discussed with Pakistan.

10. Photographs:

   It was decided that photographs should be required on all passports. If Pakistan raises the question of pardanashin (veiled) ladies, we should agree to exemption for Pardanashin ladies travelling with a male escort, but this should be used as a bargaining point to get some other concession from Pakistan. In no case should we agree to pardanashin ladies travelling on a passport without a photograph and without any male escort. It was felt that no special measure were necessary to enable Indian national in the Eastern Zone to obtain photographs.

11. Fees for passports:

   It was decided that the fee for a Category “B” passport should be Rs.2/- and that for a “C” passport it should be Rs.3/-. Renewal fee should be Re.1/- in each case.

12. Indian nationals in Pakistan on date of coming into force of the system.

It was estimated that as many as 70 or 80 thousand Indian nationals may be in Pakistan, particularly in East Bengal, on such a date. It was decided that the procedure to enable such persons to return to India should be simple and easy. Our Missions in Pakistan should issue to them not Indian passports (as these will involve detailed enquiries) but emergency certificates, forms of which should be supplied to them well in time.

The emergency certificate will bear the photograph of holder but the rest of his family need not provide photographs and should be entered on the back of the emergency certificate stating the name, age and relationship to holder of the certificate. It should be arranged between India and Pakistan that the holder of this emergency certificate will be allowed to leave the country in which he is without further formalities. The emergency certificate should be valid for one month.

13. Pakistan nationals in India on date of introduction of the System:

   It has been estimated that some 60 to 70 thousand Pakistan nationals will be in India on that date. Those who came from West Pakistan with permits under the Permit System, should continue to be dealt with under that system under the charge of the Ministry of Rehabilitation. Residents of East Bengal in India will, if they are Muslims, find no difficulty in obtaining from Pakistan missions in India the requisite emergency certificates for return to Pakistan. It is anticipated that East Bengal Hindus in India on that date may find considerable difficulty in getting these emergency certificates from the Pakistan Missions. It was recommended that as this problem will be short term but extremely urgent, each of the Indian States in the eastern region should appoint a number of officers to look into the complaints of Pakistan Hindus in India and assist them in getting the emergency certificates for returning home.

14. Liberality of visas in the Eastern Zone.

   As mentioned in para 3 above, every effort should be made to arrange with Pakistan for the liberal issue of visas by both sides in the eastern zone. The State Governments were in favour of the suggestion that initially each State Government should appoint a number of Passport Liaison Officers to look into complaints of Indian nationals in their States who have properties and interest in East Bengal and who find difficulty in obtaining visas from the Pakistan Missions in India.
15. Opening of Pakistan visas offices in India:

Attention of the States Governments was drawn to the fact that they will be responsible for finding accommodation and providing other facilities for such offices. At such places there should also be some accommodation to cope with the large number of Indian nationals who may have to stay there pending grant of visas. Subject to these considerations, we should ask for as many Pakistan offices as would be conducive to liberal grant of visas to our nationals. It was strongly suggested that Pakistan visa offices should be asked for on at least all the important routes leading into East Bengal so that Indian nationals do not have to travel to Calcutta, etc., to go to East Bengal and can do so by a more direct route. We should agree to post our visa officers in East Bengal only to the extent that Pakistan agrees to corresponding visa offices in India for such routes.

16. It was decided that arrangements should exist for persons from distant localities to apply to the Pakistan or Indian missions by post for visas. Whether in India such applications by post should, in case of special localities, be canalized through Liaison officers appointed by the State Governments under paras 11 and 12 above will be examined by the State Governments subsequently. It was decided to ask Pakistan for assurance on the lines of (1) and (3) of the recommendations made by the Calcutta meeting of April 21 against para 3 of the Pakistan note. It was decided not to ask for an assurance on the lines of (ii) of those recommendations, since it will not be possible for India to accept persons who are not Indian nationals under the Indian Constitution or the Indian laws.

17. Issue of visa to Pakistan nationals.

(1) It was decided that it was essential to regulate the movement of Pakistan nationals within India, subject only to such relaxations as may be mutually agreed between India and Pakistan. It was therefore considered that the Foreigners Act should be made applicable to Pakistan nationals. It was also felt that no advantage would be gained by making visas valid for journeys anywhere in India or in a particular State and that the visa should therefore state the place or places to be visited, since that is what Pakistan proposes to do. The Pakistan national should be registered as a foreigner at the first place of entry into India. It was suggested that in the case of those who hold multi-journey visas enabling them to come as almost daily for cultivation, etc., the form of registration should be of a separate colour or otherwise distinguishable so that fresh registration need not be necessary for each visit.
(2) It was agreed that initially our visas issuing authorities in Dacca should issue visas freely to Pakistan nationals until experience has been gained of Pakistan’s policy in the matter. In West Pakistan visas should be issued in accordance with considerations hitherto applicable to issue of permits.

(3) It was decided that visas should be valid for entry and exit by a specified route, but arrangements should exit for permission to depart by a route other than the one by which the foreigner entered.

(4) Forms for various types of visas are being devised and will be sent to our Missions in due course.

(5) It was decided that each applicant for a visa should also file with this application two copies of his photographs. The visas issuing authority will affix one copy to the application for visa and send the other to the Superintendent of Police of the district of the first place to be visited by the visa holder.

18. General:

It was decided that nothing could be done at present to help those Hindus from East Bengal whose circumstances made them diffident about deciding finally the question of the nationality they could adopt.

19. It was decided that India should impose her passport system on the same date on which Pakistan impose hers. It was pointed out that Indian nationals in Pakistan on that date, as well as Hindus in East Bengal who wish to migrate to India, could easily be covered by the system of emergency certificates issued under paragraph 12 above; which will not require any large scale arrangements. As regards Indian nationals wishing to visit Pakistan once Pakistan system comes into force they will not be able to visit Pakistan in any case whether or not we impose our system, except by complying with Pakistan’s system. Imposition of the requirement of passports and visas by India will thus prevent only the entry of Pakistan nationals, without holding up the return of Indian nationals or the migration of East Bengal minorities. The representatives from States said that the State Governments would be in a position, at short notice, to enforce the prohibition of entry into India without the prescribed documents. Arrangements could also be made, at short notice, in our missions to deal with (i) Indian Nationals, (ii) persons desirous of migrating to India and (iii) visas for emergent cases of Pakistan officers or nationals. Facilities for other Pakistan Nationals could then be built up as rapidly as possible.

3404. Press Note issued by Government of Pakistan for the introduction of Passport/Visa system for travel between India and Pakistan.

Karachi, May 5, 1952.

The Government of Pakistan have, for sometime felt that the permit system now operating between West Pakistan and India is outmoded and unsatisfactory. In practice, the system has impeded travel rather than facilitated inter-communication between the two countries. The Government of Pakistan have therefore, decided after very careful consideration, to replace the permit system by the internationally recognized system of passports and visas between the two countries.

The introduction of this scheme will have the effect of regulating travel between India and both East and West Pakistan. Under the new system Pakistan nationals desirous of going to India, will be granted passports and every Indian national will, similarly, have to be in possession of a passport duly endorsed by the appropriate Pakistan authorities before entering Pakistan territory.

The Government of Pakistan, for this purpose, will issue a special passport, distinguishable from the internationals passport, to their nationals, endorsed for travel between Pakistan and India only. Till such time as these passports are available sufficient numbers of emergency certificates will be exchanged for the special passports.

Special arrangement will be made for the issue of passports to residents of Pakistan who have to pay frequent visits to places across the border for business or other essential purposes.

The Government hope to announce shortly the date on which this scheme will come into force. The permit system now in force will be abolished.

The Government of Pakistan have carefully borne in mind the provisions of the Prime Minister’ Agreement of April 1950, while coming to a decision regarding the introduction of the passport scheme. In their view the scheme does not in any way violate any of its provisions. That Agreement was primarily designed to deal with an altogether exceptional situation arising from the widespread communal riots in West Bengal, Tripura and East Bengal. It provided for “freedom of movement and protection in transit” during communal disturbances.

The conditions which necessitated the adoption of this provision ceased to exist long ago. There is no longer any exodus of minority community from East Bengal. All genuine migrants have already returned to their respective homes and, if there are migrants who have not returned during the last two years they may he assumed to have no intention of returning.
Furthermore it was mandatory under the agreement for the Governments of East Bengal, West Bengal, Assam and Tripura to restore immovable property to the migrants provided they returned to their homes by December 31, 1950, and this period was subsequently extended to March 31, 1951. All migrants, who wished to return and to regain possession of their property, have already done so by that date.

The Government of Pakistan are, therefore, satisfied that no breach of the Prime Minister’s Agreement is involved in the introduction of the passport system. If, however, there are any genuine migrants who have delayed their return for valid reasons and who even now wish to return to Pakistan, facilities for them to do so have been provided in the new scheme.

Conference of representative of two countries will be shortly held at Karachi to consider practical ways of implementing the scheme so that the new arrangement may work and reduce all possible hardship or inconvenience to the people desiring to travel from one country in another to the very minimum.

No.24269. May 6, 1952

For Mehta from R. K. Nehru

Your telegram No.222*, dated 6th May, Passports. Proposal that you should represent us in talks was made after fullest consideration and with approval of Prime Minister who attaches utmost importance to conference because of very

* In his telegram the High Commissioner had said that while he would be available for consultations, it would be inappropriate for him to lead the Indian delegation to the conference. Despite this, the High Commissioner in reply persisted in his view that he should not lead the Indian delegation. He even suggested that while it was not necessary for Puri to come to Karachi, he could stay back in Delhi, the Commonwealth Secretary must himself come over. It needed a strong letter from Prime Minister to the High Commissioner to persuade him to change his mind.
large number of people who will be affected by its results. We see nothing inappropriate in our High Commissioner handling, with the assistance of competent advisors, issue of this importance. In similar situation, any other Government would entrust principal role in negotiation to its Ambassador or High Commissioner. In fact your non-participation is likely to be misunderstood both in India and in Pakistan. The alternative would be for me to come to Karachi. Since PURI is also going, this would mean that there would be nobody here, NOT only for dealing with normal work on Commonwealth Relations side but even to attend to references from Karachi that may become necessary during course of conference. We hope, therefore, that you will represent us, assisted by officers already named as advisers.

Date 12th May is most inconvenient to us because Government here will be changing that day. Possibly you did NOT realize this when you originally suggested this date to Pakistan. Moreover, since much detailed material, e.g. location and number of check posts and fixation of routes, essential for effective coordination of our arrangements with those of Pakistan, has still to be collected, we doubt whether we shall be able to complete our preparation in time for conference to begin on 12th. All that we ask for is a three-day postponement and there is NO reason why we should, in matter of this importance and complexity, be reluctant to press for change of date. Prime Minister is strongly of this view. exclusively between India and West Pakistan) has become outmoded and is not working satisfactorily.

2. The Government of India made an immediate representation to the Government of Pakistan against this decision. They pointed out that freedom of movement between East Pakistan and West Bengal, in particular, is a vital part of the Prime Ministers’ Agreement of April, 1950, and that the existence of this provision and its implementation has helped to restore a sense of confidence and security among the minorities. They drew attention to the fact that the bulk of the traffic between India and Pakistan takes place in this zone and that the economic and other ties between the two Bengals are so close that any restriction on free movement must have an adverse effect on the normal life of the people on both sides of the border. After stressing the need for the maintenance of confidence among the minorities, they strongly urged that modification of the provisions of the Agreement relating to free movement should NOT be made without full consultation between the two Governments, and that no decision should be taken to change the existing practice until such consultations have taken place.

3. The Government of Pakistan have not accepted this suggestion. They have, however, declared their readiness to discuss methods of implementing the decision at a meeting to be held at official level between the two Governments in Karachi. This meeting was suggested by the Government of India, though the venue proposed was Delhi. Since the decision of the Pakistan Government to introduce a passport system is final, the Government of India have been obliged to take up the question of introduction of suitable arrangements on their own side of the border. For this purpose, a meeting was called on the 2nd and 3rd May by the Ministry of External Affairs, which was attended by representatives of Home, Rehabilitation, States, Defence and E.A. Ministries and of the State Governments of West Bengal, Tripura, Bihar and the Punjab. (The Assam Government could not be represented, but their views were communicated by telegram). At this meeting, the Pakistan Government’s passport scheme was examined. This scheme divides all traffic between India and Pakistan into three categories:-

(A) Border union traffic between E. Pakistan and the adjoining Indian States, particularly W. Bengal;

(B) Traffic between E. Pakistan and the neighbouring Indian States NOT confined to the border unions, and

(C) All other traffic between India and Pakistan.

The Pakistan scheme provides for the grant of varying facilities to each category. Thus, labourers and cultivators included in category (A) are to be given multi-journey visas valid for one year; for category (B), the period is six months; while for category (C), the period is to be fixed in each case. All traffic, in the Pakistan scheme, is to be canalized through check-posts.

4. The following conclusions were reached at the meeting:-

(i) Border union traffic is largely confined to Muslims living on both sides of the border. Special facilities are justified, but they are equally justified in the case of category (B) traffic, where also visits across the border are frequent, because of the close links existing between E. Pakistan and some of the neighbouring Indian States. Special facilities for category (B) would benefit Hindus also, both in E. Pakistan and W. Bengal, since there are many Hindus living away from the border zone who have to travel frequently from one country to the other. It was decided, therefore, that in the Indian scheme the same facilities should be provided both for category (A) and for category (B) traffic. The two categories should be amalgamated.

(ii) Under the Indian scheme, therefore, there will be only two types of passports: one for Eastern Zone traffic and the other for traffic not confirmed to the Eastern Zone. Both types of passport will be different from the ordinary international passport. The Pakistan Government too has suggested a “modified” passport for Indo-Pakistan travel. “Special facilities” for Eastern Zone travel would consist of the following: (a) District Officer (instead of State Governments) would issue passports; (b) Visas would be given liberally, on a reciprocal basis; (c) Multi-journey visas would be given, etc, etc. all these facilities are matters for discussions with the Pakistan Government. The objective should be to facilitate travel between E. Pakistan and the Indian States in the Eastern Zone.

(iii) States Governments have been asked to prepare lists of routes and check-posts to regulate travel under the new system. The number and location of posts and the routes to be prescribed will have to be discussed with the Pakistan Government, so that arrangements on both sides may be co-coordinated as far as possible. State Governments have been asked to bear in mind that the Government of India’s intention is to reduce hardship as far as possible for people on both sides of the border. This means that a large number of routes will have to be prescribed and the number of check posts and patrol units may have to be increased — subject, however, to what is stated in paragraph 5(c) below.

5. It has been decided that the Government of India should participate in the meeting of officials to be held in Karachi to discuss methods of implementing the decision to introduce a passport system. The meeting is to be held on the 15th May. It has also been decided to ask the Indian High Commissioner in Karachi to conduct the negotiations with the assistance of the Chief Secretary, W. Bengal, a representative of the E.A. Ministry and a representative of the Assam Government. The High Commissioner will be asked to secure the Pakistan Government's acceptance of the Indian scheme as the basis for the new arrangements to be made on both sides of the border. He will be instructed, further, to make the following suggestions:-

(a) In addition to the special passport to be provided for Indo-Pakistan travel, the international passport should be recognized. This means that a Pakistan or Indian citizen who holds as international passport should be able to utilize this passport for Indo-Pakistan travel: he should not be required to take out one of the special passports if he is traveling between India and Pakistan.

(b) For traffic in the Eastern Zone visas should NOT be required. In case the Pakistan Government insist on visas (as they almost certain will, since their whole object is to restrict free movement between the two Benglas), then every effort should be made to ensure that on both sides visas are given with the utmost liberality, on a reciprocal basis, and reasonable facilities are provided for the obtaining of visas.

(c) An over-elaborate system of check posts and patrols on both sides should be avoided. It is in the interest of both Pakistan and India that cost should be reduced and minimum hardship should be caused to bona fide travelers.

(d) The new arrangements should be brought into force, on both sides, on the 15th July, 1952.

6. The summary is circulated for the information of Cabinet.

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan Mohan Sinha Mehta to Commonwealth Secretary R. K. Nehru.

Karachi, May 9, 1952.

High Commissioner for India 'Valika Mahal', Jahangir Sethna Road, New Town Karachi

No.HC/52/11 9th May 1952

My dear R.K.,

1. Since writing my last letter No. HC/52/11, dated the 7th May, I have received your letter No.31/82/NGO, dated the 6th May, with which you sent me the proceedings of the meeting which was held on the 2nd of May to discuss the subject of introduction of Passports between India and Pakistan.

2. That paper was of great help in clearing the position. I am dictating this brief letter just a few minutes before the Bag is to be closed. We have carefully considered the various points which were discussed in the meeting which you held there. We shall again examine them on the afternoon of the 14th instant when our representatives from India are also with us. The meeting with the Officers of the Pakistan Government will begin on the morning of the 15th May.

3. This gives us little more time and I hope you will send us a complete brief on the subject after consulting the Ministries concerned particularly the Defence, Home and Rehabilitation.

4. There are two or three points on which I would like to know the views of our Government, such as,

(a) Will it be preferred by us to insist on the use of international Passports between West Pakistan and East Pakistan for persons other than those covered by Category B on the one side and the whole of India on the other. This is a delicate point. It can be a double edged sword, cutting both ways. In the first place, the Pakistan people may not accept this formula on a basis of reciprocity. Whether they are willing to accept it or not, I shall like to hear as to whether our Government would like to press for such a liberal position. It involved a certain amount of risk from the point of view of security, transfer of property and other general considerations. Secondly, we should also remember that Pakistan is quite capable of accepting a liberal provision on the paper and then not working it in the same spirit in actual practice
(b) The presence in both countries of a certain number of persons, who have not finally accepted the citizenship of that country and would like to return to their original homes (India or Pakistan) will be a difficult problem as soon as the new system comes into force. What should be our policy with regard to such people? It is not free from difficulty and complications. Before accepting the applications for return to India, should they describe themselves as domiciled in Pakistan or nationals of Pakistan? This will cover all kinds of cases, desirable or otherwise. Would you leave them to be dealt with by a system of emergency certificates? Before issuing such certificates and at the time of considering their applications for repatriation, should we insist on their describing themselves or allow them to call themselves merely domiciled in Pakistan. Kindly let me have the views of the Government of India on this subject.

(c) We would like to press for direction to be issued by the Pakistan Government to their officers to be liberal in issuing visas. We know, and we shall tell them at the meeting, that they have not been very liberal in this direction in the past.

(d) I would like to ask them to let us open Visa Offices in at least the Capital of all their Provinces. On our side, we should be willing to let them open offices not only at Bombay, but, if they so desire, at Madras, Lucknow, Patna, Nagpur, Hyderabad etc. Do you think this is conceding too much? I personally do not, particularly because I am on my side very keen that we should have an opportunity of getting one of our officers posted at Peshawar and Quetta. They are not likely to concede this point. But I would like to have in my possession the views of my Government before I go into the Conference, with Pakistan representatives. What date shall we suggest for the enforcement of the new system. We should bear in mind that,

(1) A number of officials will have to be selected, appointed, and trained for this new duty. Their offices will have to be set up at the check posts which means selecting the check posts also and in this matter the two Provincial Governments of West Bengal and East Bengal will have to hold consultations. Then thousands of forms and a number of registers, and emergency certificates, besides passports will have to be printed and supplied to these officials. I would, if you agree, and the Prime Minister approves, like to suggest the date for the introduction of the change to be not earlier then the 1st July. However, if they make it 15th of June, we shall not refer this insignificant little point to you before accepting it. In the meantime,
I would like to have your opinion as to how long it will take the Ministries concerned to have their administrative machinery ready to function. That information should be the basis on which we shall meet the argument of the other side. Atal and I are of the opinion that before the date on which the new system will come into force, the present arrangements should continue. In other words, we do not wish to have for the interim period a third (tried) and modified system to be brought into force. That would involve unnecessary complications, confusion in the public mind and expenditure to the two Governments. On the date to be settled at the Conference, the new system of Passports should be brought into force.

(2) I would also like to put it to the Pakistan representatives that both countries should avoid delay and should not withhold transit visas nor should they impose any conditions in granting them to persons traveling from one part of one country to another, or from one country through a part of another country (India or Pakistan as the case may be) to a third country. We must get them to agree to this, because in the past they always have been putting difficulties in the way of people traveling from India to Afghanistan. This should also cover journeys from some points from West Bengal direct to Darjeeling passing through a corner of Pakistan.

These are the points which have occurred to us. I am pressed for time, but I hope your reply would consider any other matters which have not occurred to me.

I understand from this morning’s papers that Itaat Husain, Joint Secretary of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Pakistan Government, will be the leader of their delegation at the Conference.

In conclusion, may I again request you that all our officers are here by mid-day of Wednesday, 14th May. This is necessary, because I would like to have a full discussion amongst ourselves on that afternoon.

Yours sincerely

TOP SECRET

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan Mohan Sinha Mehta to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

High Commissioner For India
Karachi

No. HC/52/11 13th May 1952

My dear Panditji,

I am very glad to have your Top Secret letter* No.3849-P.M., dated the 9th May. I received it yesterday.

I fully realize that the proposal of introducing the international practice of Passports between India and Pakistan is very important. Since it will affect millions of people, we have to do our utmost to secure the best possible conditions of its working. I never underestimated the importance or the implications of this matter. I am also aware that when negotiations have to be conducted with another Government, generally the Head of our Mission in that country is entrusted with the duty of conducting those negotiations.

You know, however, that the Pakistan Government have already made up their mind to replace the present Permit System by Passports, and to extend it to East Pakistan also. I strongly put it to them that it was wrong for them to come to that decision without previous consultation with us. They, however, stuck to their view. I then pressed them to hold a Conference with our representatives to consider the implementation of the new proposals. They resisted this suggestion too, but at last relented after renewed pressure from my side. This conference, it has to be clearly remembered, is only to consider procedural matters and administrative arrangements for the introduction of the new system, and not any questions of principles or policy.

One of the reasons advanced by me in favour of the Conference was to bring into discussions officers of West Bengal and East Pakistan who are acquainted with the local conditions. I also urged on the Pakistan Government that their proposal would result in producing a sense of panic and insecurity among vast numbers of people in the two Bengals.

On this and other major aspects of the question we must be prepared to find Pakistan side obstinate. That would not however prevent us from putting our point of view as strongly and as effectively as possible. Taking however the broader aspects of this question and of Indo-Pakistan relations in general, we have also to avoid a complete break-down in the negotiations. That would produce unfortunate repercussions on a wider range. You know what I mean.

I had asked for the Secretary of the Rehabilitation Ministry, because
(a) I understand that Chandra himself is a broad-minded officer and would have been very useful here on personal grounds, and

(b) In working the Permit System (which corresponds to what would in future be visa issuing function) we are constantly dealing with the Ministry of Rehabilitation. It is they who generally do not realize our difficulties. They have often adopted an attitude which is apparently neither feasible nor reasonable. That affects the main objective of this Mission in improving relations between the two countries without sacrificing our essential interests.

I would like to invite your attention to another aspect of this matter. Generally, it is not the principles and decisions which are the cause of hardship and eventually of conflict. The spirit in which they are worked is the main question. This cannot be discussed at this stage. If we do so, we would be open to the charge, however unfair it might be, of imagining and forestalling difficulties before they are actually experienced. On paper the arrangements for the working of the Passport System would be on the usual basis of reciprocity. But we know from experience how they would be worked in actual practice.

It is true that in this peculiar position, the Pakistan side will be surprised that the High Commissioner should represent India, but that need not bother us. My point was the other one which I have explained above and in my letter to Ratan Nehru. We can quite understand your readiness to discuss things yourself when the importance of the subject matter requires it. But, you will pardon my saying so, you will confer with the Prime Minister of Pakistan and not with Joint Secretaries or Deputy Secretaries and secondly, we shall never let our prime Minister go and discuss anything but high questions of policy.

As desired by you, I am going to the Conference tomorrow and shall do my best to work according to the spirit of your instructions. Even before receiving your letter, I knew how you felt on this subject. It now explains your attitude even more clearly for which I am grateful.

Yours very sincerely

R.K. Nehru from Mehta

Passport Conference. I intend to tell Pakistani officers at outset that their proposed passport system violates Prime Ministers’ Agreement. If they desire it let them introduce it for West Pakistan and leave status quo in East West Bengal for the present. They are bound to oppose this but we shall resist.

If we fail to secure their concurrence I would ask for system of simple international passports with visas valid for whole country without restriction of place open to passport holders to visit. Would our Government — Home, Defence, Rehabilitation Ministers agree to this.

I would also ask for proper genuine spirit of implementation of new system. It would be test on number of visas given by them to Hindus. May we press for proportion of 50-50 East Pakistan side and 3 of our visas for their one on West Pakistan side.

Kindly telegraph reply and any other suggestions.

Note recorded in the Ministry of External Affairs on the above telegram of High Commissioner:

Commonwealth Secretary RK Nehru’s Note:

Dr. Mehta’s telegram reached me late last night. The conference is opening tomorrow and full instructions have already been sent to him. He is aware that these instructions have been framed in close consultation with States’ representatives and other Ministries of the Government of India and that the P.M.’s approval has been taken. It is surprising that at this late stage he should announce his intention of putting forward a scheme which is completely at variance with the proposals he has been instructed to make. We do not wish to introduce a full-fledged passport-cum-visa system between India and Pakistan, although we have suggested that those holding international passports should be able to use them on journeys between the two countries. Our special passports will be very much simpler and we should try to do away with visas altogether.

2. I propose to send the telegram attached to Dr. Mehta. Yesterday he wrote to me to say that he has asked Acharya, our Deputy High Commissioner in Dacca, to come over to Karachi as his adviser. I have said in a letter to him that it was P.M.’s intention that the body of adviser should not be too large since Ray and Puri are completely familiar with every aspect of the problem. I have pointed out that we do not consider Acharya’s presence to be essential, but since he has already been called in, we have noted the fact that he will be one of the advisers.

(R.K. Nehru)

S. G.

P.M.

Note by the Secretary General
I have somewhat amplified the draft reply. Dr. Mehta’s persistent preference for his own ideas is not particularly helpful at this late stage.

G. S. Bajpai
14-5-52

Minute of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru on the above telegram:
I do not quite understand our High Commissioner’s telegram.

2. He can certainly state that their proposed passport system violates the Prime Ministers’ Agreement specially in so far as Eastern Pakistan and West Bengal, etc., are concerned. If Pakistan repudiates this, as they are bound to do, the matter ends and I do not see how we can go on raising it. Our objection will have to be noted and we shall have to proceed to consider the matter further.

3. International passports may suit the Western area; though even there they would offer some difficulties. But in Eastern Pakistan, West Bengal etc., they would be a great burden. We can hardly ask all the thousands of people who travel from one country to another in the East to possess international passports. What we had suggested was some simpler form of passport or identity card. We had further suggested that visas need not be necessary. This is a much better way of putting our viewpoint than the High Commissioner’s.

4. If visas are considered necessary, then they should be liberally given and for longish periods. I do not understand what the High Commissioner means by a proportion of 50:50 and 3 of our visas for their one on West Pakistan. If visas are restricted it is hardly possible to fix proportions in numbers. If Pakistan behaves unreasonably we shall have to take such counter measures as we think proper.

For MEHTA from R.K. NEHRU

Your telegram 234 dated May 13th Passports Conference. Our instructions for this conference have been sent after close consultation with representatives of States concerned and Ministries of the Government of India and with the approval of Prime Minister. These instructions should be followed. If any new point arises, you will, of course, refer to us.

You may point out that proposed passport system is against letter and spirit of Prime Ministers’ Agreement. But there is NO need to have long argument on this issue. Our considered view has been that introduction of passport system would restrict freedom of movement between East Pakistan and West Bengal.
which is so essential to confidence among minorities on both sides of border. If Pakistan insists, then inevitably, we have to adjust ourselves to this decision and take necessary steps. We welcome assurance by Pakistan that their intention is NOT to restrict free movement but merely to regulate it. Passport or like arrangements should, therefore, be liberal consistent with the spirit of the agreement which both governments wish to respect. We should now try to work out arrangements on a reciprocal basis so as to minimize evils of new system. Merely to carry on controversy about basic issues is NOT likely to help at this stage.

Your proposal about international passports with visas is contrary to what we have suggested. To expect large numbers of peasants and ordinary folk in East or West Bengal to get international passports is to make it impossible for them to travel. Where there are such international passports, they can, of course, be used. For the rest, we should have some simpler method and, if possible, visas should NOT be necessary as between East Bengal, West Bengal, Assam and Tripura. If Pakistan insists on visas, some easy method should be evolved. We do NOT understand proposal to have a proportion of passports or visas. If Pakistan authorities function strictly in regard to these matters, we shall naturally react and take necessary steps on our side.

Please refer to our brief which PURI is taking today.

No. 241 May 17, 1952

From MEHTA for Prime Minster.

Passport Conference. During last two days we have been discussing special facilities necessary for residents of both Bengals, Assam, Tripura and Bihar. Pakistan's first suggestion was to give them only visas valid for six months for maximum of four journeys. After much discussion they have agreed to make it one year and have conceded also that at discretion of visa issuing authorities number of journeys permissible may be raised but only in special cases. They do NOT agree to any further liberalization for residents of East Zone as a whole.

2. While professing to regulation and NOT restrict movement Pakistan envisages considerable reduction in existing traffic, much of which it regards as spurious or superfluous. Pakistan have informed us that they will NOT now allow Indian visa offices in East Bengal except Dacca though they will if we so desire open a small number of visa offices in neighbouring Indian States. They have objected to our long list of routes to be kept open for travel in East Zone though list is proposed to be finalized in a separate meeting in Dacca or Calcutta next week subject to agreement on main arrangements. On the whole it appears that agreement or NO agreement they intend to curtail traffic substantiality.

3. Their only anxiety is to obtain for (a) cultivators and agricultural labourers and (b) artisans the following facilities viz. (1) visas valid for five years (2) for any number of journeys without limit and (3) free to cross border without going through check post.

4. They also propose special facilities additional to those in para 1 above for Government servants and certain categories of businessmen.

5. They insist on facilities in para 3 above. In accordance with decision of Delhi meeting 2nd/3rd May and our brief we said that we acknowledge need for special facilities for (a) and (b) of Para 3 but instead of limiting liberality to these 2 classes we should adopt general principle of visas without limit on number of journeys for all those classes which require them of which (a) and (b) of Para. 3 will be only 2 classes. This was NOT acceptable to Pakistan. We drew special attention to need of (c) persons having interest or drawing income from immovable property in the other country including pensioners (d) persons having near relations in the other country and (e) transport workers like aircraft or steamer crew. This last was acceptable to Pakistan but on (c) and (d) they have avoided any commitment although we stressed that these two classes already have rights sanctioned by concessions under the Delhi Pact of 1950 which in our view will be rendered nugatory without adequate travel facilities. Their whole effort is to secure the facilities mentioned in para 3 and avoid commitments on classes (c) and (d) above.

6. Although Pakistan profess that their proposals will NOT affect carrying out of the Delhi Pact of 1950 we are convinced that unless multi journey visas for minimum of one year (which Pakistan is willing to concede) but without restriction on number of visits (which Pakistan is not repeat not willing to concede) are specifically arranged for class (c) and (d) of Para. 5 various rights and concessions granted by that agreement and subsidiary agreement on property etc. will be largely rendered nugatory and a most serious situation will arise in West Bengal, Assam and Tripura. Since Pakistan does NOT agree to the general proposition advanced by us vide para 5 it will be impossible to secure these facilities for classes (c) and (d) later and we must expressly provide for them now. There is a chance that we may secure these by agreeing to Pakistan’s proposals in para 3 above. Equally we feel strongly that unless Pakistan agrees as to classes (c) and (d) of para 5 we should NOT agree to special facilities for classes (a) (b) of para 3.

7. In afternoon session today Pakistan announced the two concessions mentioned in para 1 above and emphasized that these were their final recommendations they can make to the Government of Pakistan and have asked for our reply. We propose giving them on Saturday morning (in anticipation of your approval of this course) a written proposal embodying both facilities in para 3 (for cultivators and artisans) and those asked for by us for classes (c) and (d) of para 5. As to Government officers we will propose visa free of cost and any formality for those traveling on duty with the Government of the other country. Those traveling in private capacity will have same facilities as the general public. We will agree to special facilities for businessmen with bona fide and established business in or with the other country and their employees and agents. We then propose to leave it to them to accept or reject our proposals as a whole.

8. In informal talk with leaders from East Bengal Hindus and Muslims we understand East Bengal Government will be facing serious difficulties if they are unable to secure concessions for cultivators and artisans which they have asked for and only this factor may enable us to obtain concessions for classes (c) and (d) of para 5. We feel therefore that if we adhere firmly to acceptance or rejection of our proposals vide para 7 as a whole where we concede all facilities asked for by Pakistan for their nationals, onus of rejection will be thrown on Pakistan who will find it difficult to justify a rejection and consequent breakdown. If however Pakistan representatives do NOT accept our proposals we shall stick to our stand. All of us including RAY are agreed on this course.

9. Pakistan proposes to conclude negotiations tomorrow and we must therefore make our above proposals soon after 1030 hours Saturday. This unfortunately does NOT give time for prior consultation with you. I will however telephone R.K. NEHRU at 1015 hours Saturday.

No.243. May 18, 1952

From Mehta for R.K. Nehru.

Passport Conference. Saturday morning we handed to Pakistan delegates our proposals for East Zone. Without further talk on East Zone at that stage, meeting proceeded to consider arrangement for Western side, transit facilities and miscellaneous provisions and substantial agreement was reached on most points.

2. Regarding date of introduction of passport system Pakistan Delegation said their Government had already decided on a date which India will be informed. We then took a firm line and told them that if they unilaterally imposed it before we are ready, we would be obliged to take suitable action on our side, for the consequences of which they would be responsible. We also made it clear that we will not repeat not accept issue of visas on “Emergency Certificates” as an intermediate step between existing arrangements and the proposed full-fledged passport system. This gave them a jolt and their attitude at once changed. They asked for our suggestions for date and we suggested 15th September, emphasizing desirability of simultaneous introduction on an agreed date allowing a reasonable period for preparation and finding us firm they asked if our arrangements could be completed by 15th August. We promised to consider it.

3. Our proposals for East Zone were taken up late afternoon. As anticipated Pakistan representatives strongly attacked classes (c) and (d) of para 5 of my telegram No.241 of 17th May. After some discussion they said they could NOT possibly accept inclusion in category A of these two classes and threatened a breakdown on this issue. We firmly told them that while we would deplore a breakdown we considered that the facilities asked for by us for these two classes were as essential as those for cultivators and artisans. While still NOT conceding our point they suggested continuation of discussions on Monday. We agreed.

4. RAY has left. He strongly advised against any compromise regarding the two classes wanted by us. According to him and other sources of information including high officials of Pakistan, Pakistan CANNOT afford to start off their system without our agreement about cultivators and artisans as season for Aman crop is now on and over two million East Pakistanis are dependent on land and employment on our side. This factor will last up to January 1953. Even some back bench members of Pakistan Delegation appear to regard some of their own proposals as illiberal. Therefore we feel that firmness on our part including threats of a possible temporary break is required to secure minimum liberalities we have been pressing for.

MOST IMMEDIATE

No. 245. May 19, 1952.

Passport Conference concluded today. We have agreed with Pakistan Representatives to release simultaneously following agreed Press Note at 11 repeat 11 a.m. Tuesday 20th May. Kindly release accordingly.

Begins. The Representatives of the Government of India and Government of Pakistan met in a Conference at Karachi from the 15th to the 19th May 1952, to discuss the details of the procedure to be adopted in regulating traffic between India and Pakistan under passport-cum-visa system decided on by the Government of Pakistan. The discussions proceeded throughout in an atmosphere of cordiality and frankness. Representatives of both Governments reiterated the desire of their respective Governments that whatever system of passport was adopted to regulate traffic between the two countries it should be so designed as to involve the minimum of hardship to bona fide traffic in either direction. In the light of this common objective the details of the system were fully examined and discussed. The views of the two Delegations were in accord on a number of these details, while in respect of others their views differed. Both Delegations will now report to their respective Governments. Ends.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
Record of Conclusions Reached at Indo-Pakistan Conference at Karachi on May 15-19, 1952 on the Subject of Passports and Visas

A. TRAFFIC OTHER THAN IN EASTERN ZONE:

1. Normally single-journey visas will be issued, valid for specified places and by specified entry and exit points. Period of stay will normally not exceed three months, except in special cases where longer period may be allowed at direction of visa issuing authority.

2. Provision will exist for issue, at discretion of visa issuing authority, for visas to be valid for a specified or an unlimited number of journeys during a specified period.

3. Persons who are employed in the other country by a Government, a Local Body, a company or a firm limited or registered in either country, a reputable industrial or commercial concern, banks or insurance companies, will ordinarily be granted visas valid for one year at a time and valid also for three journeys during this period.

4. Employees of air companies, railways, shipping companies, etc., providing transport links between the two countries who require to cross the border frequently in course of their duties, will be given multiple-journey visas valid for 6 months at a time.

5. Persons having a bona fide business in the other country and their employees and agents will be given multiple-journey visas valid for any number of journeys during a period of six months.

Cases of persons who do not have branches or other established business in the other country, but have only established import or export trade with the other country were reserved by Pakistan for further consideration.

6. Pakistan has decided that Indians entering Pakistan on visas will be registered under the Registration of Foreigners’ Act, 1939 and the rules thereunder. They do not propose to apply, however, the Foreigners’ Act of 1946, and provisions regulating entry, stay and activities, etc. of Indians and penalties for breach thereof will be provided for by a separate Ordinance.

India suggested that application of the Registration of Foreigners’ Act 1939 may be dispensed with. Pakistan agreed that registration may be dispensed with in the Eastern region, but did not agree with regard to West Pakistan. It was therefore agreed to apply the Act of 1939 on both sides, excluding the Eastern region.
India stated that they had not so far taken any decision whether to apply the Act of 1946 or to make separate legislative provision, and reserved their line of action on the point, but in either case facilities conferred by any agreement resulting from this conference would be made available.

7. India suggested abolition of personal attendance at police offices to report arrivals and departures, Pakistan could not agree to this entirely, but agreed that after first report of arrival, which will be made personally at office of S.P. of the district and where the traveler will be registered under Act of 1939, subsequent reports of arrival and departure at other places as also report of final departure from country may be made by a written communication. India suggested that initial registration under Act of 1939 should be done at check-post of entry, since it would be cashier to post specially-trained and extra-courteous staff at the 5 or 6 points of entry and exit between India and West Pakistan than at all S.Ps' Offices or all police-stations. In that case, personal attendance at police offices or police stations will not be necessary even on first arrival. Pakistan agreed to consider the suggestion.

8. (i) It was agreed to exempt from the Passport System (in the same way as at present from the Permit System)
   (a) recovered abducted women;
   (b) evacuees traveling in official convoys from the evacuee camps at Lahore and Jullundur.

(ii) Evacuees travelling otherwise than in (i) (b) above will travel on emergency certificates issued by diplomatic mission of country to which they are traveling.

B. GENERAL PROVISIONS:-

1. Diplomatic Missions in the other country:-

Officers and staff of such missions, their families and personal servants will be issued, free of charge and valid for one year at a time subject to their continuing in the mission concerned, multi-journey visas for any number of journeys valid for entry or exit through any route open to the public. Such visas will not be limited to particular places and the holders will not be subject to registration, reports of arrival and departure to the police and other similar requirements.

2. Government officials:-

(1) Government officials traveling on duty with a Central or State/Provincial Government of the other country or for meetings with officers of such Governments will be granted visas of the appropriate category free of any charge and free also from the provisions relating to registration, reports to police, etc.

(2) Officers not falling in the above category will get the same facilities on the facts of their cases as other members of the public.

3. Nationals in other country at the time of introduction of system:-

   (1) Those who wish to return home will be able to do so-
       (a) on the basis of their permits, if they come on a valid permit;
       (b) if they were not required to take permits on the basis of emergency certificates issued to them by diplomatic mission of country to which they belong.

   (2) All nationals of one country in the other country on date of introduction will be required to register under Act of 1939 within three months, unless they return home within that period.

   (3) Each country will issue to its nationals in the other country, who are there on date of introduction and wish to stay beyond 3 months from date of introduction, national passports within that period. Further stay will be subject to obtaining from the other country a visa or permission for longer stay.

   (4) In special cases where a person has been unable to obtain national passport within 3 months of date of introduction of passports due to reasons beyond his control, extensions of time will be given at discretion of country in which he is.

4. Pilgrims, parties of sportsmen and other similar parties:-

   Each person will carry his individual passport, on which visa will be given by other country. All facilities like escorts, special train accommodation, food etc. whenever arranged between the Governments, will continue.

5. Personnel and employees of Defense Services:-

   Arrangements made at this conference will not apply and travel by persons of this class will be regulated by such arrangements as may agreed upon separately by the Ministries of Defence of the two countries.

6. Seamen:-

   India promised to examine Pakistan’s proposal to treat Continuous Discharge Certificates as documents valid for travel between the two countries.

C. TRANSIT FACILITIES:

1. Nationals of one country travelling, thorough the other country, to their own or third country by a through aeroplane must have valid passports but will not require a visa.
2. C (1) will also apply if the plane is not through and a connecting plane has to be taken, provided the passenger holds tickets or irrevocable vouchers for the whole journey and the scheduled interval between arrival of one plane and departure of the connecting plane does not exceed 12 hours.

3. Visa will also not be required of a person traveling by a through train commencing and finishing the journey in the same country, provided that he does not detrain or break journey. Change from broad-gauge to meter-gauge at the same station will not count as a break of journey, nor failure to complete journey for causes beyond the traveler's control, e.g. blocked line, train accident, etc.

4. In all other cases of direct transit, a transit visa will be taken.

5. Persons arriving in India or Pakistan from a third country must obtain a visa for a visit or for transit as the case may be, except in cases covered by C (1) and C (2) above.

6. In case of an enforced halt of a ship or aeroplane during a journey not otherwise requiring a visa, a landing permit will be issued on deposit of the passport, to visit the port or city of call during the enforced halt.

D. EASTERN ZONE:-

1. It was agreed that in view of the Delhi Pact of 1950 and other special factors, special facilities for travel in the Eastern Zone must be provided. India proposed that for residents of the Eastern Zone there should be no visa. Pakistan did not agree.

2. The zone will consist of East Bengal on one side and West Bengal, Assam and Tripura on the other. The Delhi Pact of 1950 is not applicable to Bihar; on the other hand there is a common border between Bihar and East Bengal. Whether Bihar should be included wholly or only for traffic in border zone of wholly excluded can be decided after facilities for Eastern Zone have been agreed upon.

3. Pakistan proposed that, apart from border agriculturists, labourers and certain classes of artisans, residents of the Eastern Zone should have visas for one year valid for four journeys. India proposed that while any person considered undesirable may be refused a visa altogether or given a limited visa under conditions, others should be given a multi-journey visa valid for one year without restriction on number of visits. No agreement could be reached on this point.

4. Pakistan proposed that cultivators and agricultural labourers and artisans resident in the border unions should be given visas-

(a) valid for five years;
(b) for unlimited number of journeys;
(c) valid for opposite border Unions;
(d) valid for entry and exit without passing through other routes.

India felt that-
(i) Cultivators should include persons directly interested in cultivation of the land (as against mere receivers of fixed cash rent) e.g. those who cultivated through labourers or co-sharers, etc. (Pakistan agreed);
(ii) this class should not be limited to those resident in border unions only, but all those who had lands or were dependent on employment or exercise of profession in the other country; (Pakistan did not agree).
(iii) It is not feasible to restrict the visa to a border Union as such. It was agreed that area for which visa should be valid should be defined in terms of group of villages;
(iv) the number of journeys necessary would depend on the distance between the home and the place of cultivation or work. India would have no objection however to unlimited number of journeys for all, provided Pakistan agreed to the liberality proposed by India either as in para 3 above or as in para 5 below
(v) it is not possible for India to provide a second line of check posts between the border Unions in India and the rest of India. If people come in without passing through check-posts, it is not possible for India to ensure that the visa-holder will remain within the area near the border. However on this point also India was prepared to accept the risks involved and allow movement otherwise than through check-posts, on same condition as in (iv) above.
(vi) India would prefer visas valid for two years, but was prepared to agree to a five year visa on same condition as in (iv) above.

Pakistan was not agreeable to the proposal either in para 3 or in para 5 and no agreement could therefore be reached.

5. India proposed that multi-journey visas valid for one year and for any number of visits should be granted to residents of the Eastern Zone, who-
(i) had immoveable property in the other country, or had near relatives in the other country (near relatives were defined as paternal or maternal grandfather or grandmother, parents, brothers, sisters, children and grandchildren of the applicant);

(iii) had to travel frequently to obtain payment of pensions or other periodic payments in the other country.

Pakistan did not agree.

6. In connection with visa offices to be opened in the other country to cope with volume of traffic, Pakistan announced that the only Indian visa office in East Bengal will be at Dacca and their Government did not desire any additional visa offices in that province.

Pakistan offered to consider the opening in India of additional Pakistan visa offices, if India so desired. India will inform Pakistan of their proposals on this point later.

7. Lists of routes between East Bengal and India proposed to be kept available to the general public were exchanged. India wanted a much larger number of routes to be kept open than was proposed in Pakistan list. It was decided that separate meeting should be held at Calcutta or Dacca shortly to produce an agreed list of routes, if possible.

8. Pakistan offered the concession that if India accepted their views regarding paras 3, 4 and 5 above, they would agree to issue visas for four journeys in one year to those who had near relatives in East Bengal but were resident elsewhere than in the Indian States of Assam, West Bengal, Tripura and Bihar. India, while appreciating the offer, said they felt that the concession to travelers proposed by them in para 3, or at least as in para 5, were essential and could not be given up.

9. India proposed that without final commitment Pakistan's proposals in para 4 and India's proposals in para 5 may be tried for an experimental period of 6 months subject to a review thereafter. Pakistan did not agree.

10. India then suggested that for all the classes of persons in paras 4 and 5, the need for extra facilities should be generally acknowledged, but period of visa and number of journeys may be left in all cases to the visa issuing authority for an experimental period of six months. Pakistan did not agree.

11. India then suggested that in respect of all points on which agreement had been reached, minutes should be recorded and it should be recommended to both Governments to adopt these as an agreement. Points on which agreement could not be reached could be tackled again after some experience of actual working of the system. Pakistan did not agree.
12. At the stage of drafting of the minutes, Pakistan proposed that difference between Eastern region and other travel should be eliminated and all agreed points should apply to both. India protested that this had neither been proposed nor discussed earlier and the sole Indian representatives left to assist in drafting minutes could not discuss the merits of the proposal at that stage. It was then decided that it would not be possible to draft agreed minutes of the conference.

3415. Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan Mohan Sinha Mehta to Pakistan Foreign Minister Mohammad Zafrulla Khan.

Dear Sir Mohammad Zafrulla Khan,

I thank you for letter of the 28th May which I received late in the afternoon yesterday.

You were good enough to tell me when I met you on Sunday last that you would be willing to increase the number of minimum journeys of classes (i), (ii) and (v) of Group II, while I pleaded with you for multiple journey visas for them. I still wish it were possible for you to have accepted my suggestion for this class of travelers in the Eastern Zone, at any rate even on an experimental measure for a couple of years. I had given you my reasons. It seems that you are not willing to go to that extent. If that is your final view, I shall fall in with your wishes, provided, as you promise, the rules are worked in a liberal spirit and genuine cases are readily permitted larger number of visits for meeting their requirements. I understand that for classes (iii) and (iv) of our Group II, you will have no objection for allowing multiple-journey visas. On this there was no difference in the meetings of the two delegations.

We are convinced that the problems of the Eastern Zone are different from those of the rest of India and West Pakistan. This position should be recognized. It would therefore be all right leaving the provisions with regard to India and West Pakistan the same as were originally proposed by you. This should also avoid raising a fresh issue on which further consultation may be necessary causing delay and postponement of decisions.
In this and some other points I shall be glad to meet you tomorrow afternoon, Saturday, the 31st May, at 5-30 P.M., if that is convenient to you. It is obviously most desirable that there should be a spirit of accommodation on both sides in order that the proposed Passport system is inaugurated in an atmosphere of goodwill and understanding. I am sure that you feel the same on this important subject.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- M. Mehta

3416. LETTER FROM HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR INDIA IN PAKISTAN

Mohan Sinha Mehta to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and Prime Minister’s Comments on it.

High Commissioner for India
Karachi

No. HC/52/11. 20th May 1952.

My dear Panditji,

Our talks with the representatives of the Pakistan Government concluded yesterday. For four days we grappled with the problem and made earnest efforts to arrive at an agreement on all issues. Although many of the points were settled satisfactorily after accommodating each other’s views, on a few which we considered essential, the Pakistan Government did not relent. This is much to be regretted, but after what I heard from Ray, it would not have been right for us to yield to Pakistan’s view. I shall not bother you with details in this letter. Puri is returning to Delhi today and he will submit a full report to R.K. (Nehru) soon after his arrival.

There is one point, however, on which I am anxious to convey my felling to you without the least delay. I must, in fairness, admit that you were quite right in asking me to represent our Government at the talks. As the discussion proceeded, it became more and more clear to me that the Pakistan Government made a great mistake in leaving the Conference in the hands of a week Joint Secretary so far as their team was concerned. It is a relief to me to be able to see and say now that your judgment was right.

The results of the Conference would have been more positive and substantial if,

(a) the Pakistan Delegation had been represented at a higher level, and
(b) the Leader could keep the Chief Secretary of East Bengal (Aziz Ahmed) under control.

Aziz Ahmad was responsible for the inadequate results of the Conference and the long time it took in its discussions. He showed himself to be narrow-opinionated and rather biased. In his stubborn attitude to disregard the feelings, the needs and the hardships of the people on the Indian side, he did not realize how he was going to cause trouble and inconvenience to the people on his side of the border also. Poor Itaat Husain, the Joint Secretary, who led the Pakistan Delegation was utterly unable to keep Aziz in his place. In all matters it was the latter who conducted discussions from their side. I pulled him up often than his Leader, but it made no difference to his basic prejudice.

We had come so near to agreement that on more than one occasion I thought it would be achieved. Yesterday morning, in order to disarm their suspicion, I made an offer at the spur of the moment which, I thought, would close the discussions and resolve our differences. I asked them to accept our suggestion just as we had accepted theirs with the understating on both side that it was as a measure of trial for a period of six months with both side keeping their minds open and meeting again to review the position in the light of actual experience. From the faces of most of the Pakistani Officers, I could see that their reaction was favourable. But again the Chief Secretary of East Bengal remained an obstacle.

It was a great pity that when the distance between the two sides had come to be so narrow, they could not meet. I felt strongly desires of bringing this fact to Zafrulla’s notice. At the same time, it would perhaps have been a mistake to go out specially to meet him for this purpose. If I had done that it might have been possibly exploited to our disadvantage. However, luckily I met Zafrulla last night at a Party to which he and I had been invited by the Indonesian Minister. I utilized that opportunity of putting it across to him. He said he would carefully examine the position. He concluded by saying that all had not been lost, i.e. it was not too late to achieve the good purpose both sides have in view.
Another Minister of Pakistan whom I met at the same party was even more frank. It would amuse you to know – he did actually tell me in so many words – that there was no hope of the Conference succeeding with Aziz in it!

I am very glad that Puri came from Delhi. He knows the whole subject and was very useful. On the first day he proved a match for Aziz in tiring him out, but it is not for that reason that I am commending Puri’s work.

While the Conference did not achieve a full measure of agreement, I am satisfied that we were able to impress our point of view on the Pakistan Government clearly and emphatically, namely, we felt that the Passport system, if it had to be introduced at all, should be worked in the most liberal spirit so that the maximum number of people travelled from one side to the other with the minimum of restriction and hardship. In fact, these were the very words which I used in the concluding stage of the Conference. We may, however, well except that we would be misrepresented in the Pakistan Press as obstructionists in the way of liberal rules or for trying to secure unfair advantages for our people, but nobody who was present in the Conference room on behalf of Pakistan could honestly support that misrepresentation.

Yours sincerely
(Mohan Sinha Mehta)

Prime Minister,

***************

Minute by Prime Minister on the above letter:

I attach a letter from our High Commissioner in Karachi.

2. These talks have naturally been confined to East-West Bengal border. I suppose Assam was not represented and had little to say. I had a talk today with Shri Neogy, Chairman of the Finance Commission. He has just come back from an extensive tour of Assam including the border areas. He gave me a most distressing report of the state of Assam – Pakistan border in many places specially where the Khasi Hills touch Pakistan. Their whole trade was with Pakistan, chiefly in oranges. They used to receive rice etc., from the other side in exchange. All these people of the Khasi Hills are on the verge of starvation because of the stoppage of this trade. There being no proper communications, they cannot send their oranges or other produce elsewhere.
3. Shri Neogy spoke to me of other aspects of Assam’s present precarious position. He thought that we had not treated Assam liberally at all.

Commonwealth Secretary

Note by Commonwealth Secretary:

Assam was invited both to Delhi meeting and to the joint meeting in Karachi. Neither meeting was attended by Assam representatives. The conclusions reached at Delhi meeting were, however, agreed to by the Assam Government to whom a record of the meeting was sent. They pointed out that the Pakistan proposals would suit them, since they want a liberal system for their border people, but greater restrictions on traffic into the interior districts of Assam. They do, however, want free movement in the border zones since the people of the Khasi Hills, in particular, are dependent on the Pakistan border area for their livelihood. They decided, however, to accept our proposals for a uniform system for all classes of traffic, in the interests of India as a whole.

2. The difficulties which are being faced by the Khasi Hills people arise from the fact that exchange restrictions have been imposed by the Pakistan Government which prevent the border inhabitants on both sides from carrying on trades freely. There have also been many reports of police exactions and other forms of persecutions of our tribal people in Pakistan. All this has of course nothing to do with the passport system, but I propose to ask Assam to send us a full report on border inhabitants and to suggest methods of improving them.

3. About the passport conference I have had a separate letter from Dr. Mehta, more or less on the lines of his letter to P.M. A report on the Conference was submitted to me yesterday by the Deputy Secretary. I am getting a short summary prepared of the main points of agreement and disagreement. Copies will be sent to Dr. Mehta and I shall also place the report and the summary with my own comments before P.M.

SECRET

Letter from High Commissioner in Pakistan Mohan Sinha Mehta to Commonwealth Secretary R. K. Nehru.

High Commissioner for India
Jhangir Sethna Road
New Town, Karachi- 5

D. O. No. HC/52/11.
May 20, 1952

My dear R.K.,

Our discussions with the Pakistan representatives on the passport system dragged on for a rather longer time than we had anticipated. From the two telegrams that I sent, and from the third dispatched last night, you know the points of difference. Y.K. Puri is returning today and he will acquaint you with the details of the various points which figured in the discussions.

I wish, however, to describe to you very briefly the line we took in the discussions. The Prime Minister and you should know this. It is particularly necessary because of the special disadvantage under which we live and labour in Pakistan! Here the extent to which events and opinions can be misrepresented and facts distorted to suit a particular attitude is rather extraordinary. So far as Pakistan Press is concerned, we cannot do much to countenance this kind of deliberate suppression of truth.

In the opening phase of the Conference, I told the Pakistan Delegation that the Government of India were surprised at the unilateral decision of the Pakistan Government to introduce the Passport System. The Prime Ministers' Agreement was still in force and had not been repudiated. In international affairs an Agreement, a Covenant or a Treaty is not abrogated by one party without previous consultation with the other. On this occasion this usual consideration had not been shown. This was the formal side of the question which was not altogether unimportant. However, our objection related to the substance of the matter also. To introduce a system of passports and visas, where not even permit system was in vogue, did amount to a serious change. It was all very well to say that passports and visas would be available for all legitimate travel. The very fact that people will have to obtain those travel documents before they could cross the border for normal business would result in impediment, expenditure, waste of time and energy and no small amount of hardship. The explanation given by the Pakistan Government remained unconvincing.
Since, however, the Pakistan Government had made up their mind there was nothing left for us except offering them cooperation in working the system in the best possible way for the people in the two countries. It was in that spirit that we had gone to the meeting. It would guide our discussions with them.

I repeated that, in the first place, it would have been much better if the Pakistan Government had started the new system of Passports in West Pakistan to begin with. If they were not agreeable to do that, they should not have required the people to obtain visas as well. The system could have commenced with the introduction of passports only, as is the practice among Commonwealth countries (except South Africa). No serious consequences would have perhaps followed. On the other hand, millions of people most of whom happen to be poor, illiterate, ignorant and still closely related to each other by family ties, socially, economically and otherwise, would have had time to adjust themselves to the changed situation. We appealed to them to reconsider the position and not insist on passport-cum-visa. The volume of additional strain that it would throw on the administration of the States and Provinces concerned, would be indeed enormous, almost unbearable.

Since the Pakistan Government maintained that in their view their decision did not involve the violation of the Prime Ministers’ Agreement – the position which was obviously untenable – we would take them on their word. I hope, I said, that this statement of their attitude would be borne in mind throughout the discussions.

Another general point which we emphasized was that on this subject it was not as though the interests of Indians alone were affected. I felt strongly that the economic wellbeing and the general convenience of the people on both sides of the border called for a very liberal and far-sighted approach to this question. Political differences and administrative prejudices should not be allowed to bring distress and hardship to the people whose welfare the Governments are supposed to promote. For the same reason, it was essential that matters of policy, the rules and the methods of enforcing them, should be uniform for both sides and simultaneously introduced, unless there were compelling reasons to the contrary.

In the discussions, the most prominent person on the Pakistan side was not the Joint Secretary (Itaat Husain) who led their delegation, but the Chief Secretary of East Bengal, a man called, Aziz Ahmed. He was the Villain of the Piece and proved relentless, elusive, rather self-conceited and extremely difficult. He tried all manner of tricks and devices which prevented a complete agreement. Poor Itaat Husain was powerless in controlling him. On several occasions I had to pull him up, which I did in polite language but firmly and emphatically. Aziz at one stage said that if the two sides did not agree, both were free to adopt their own measures. They were determined, he said, to introduce the system without much delay and would not wait for India to fall in line. At that stage I had to pull him that while we also understood what the power and authorities of independent sovereign countries were, we would adopt a realistic approach to a subject which could not be worked smoothly without mutual consultations and an agreed arrangement. The consequences of one-sided action would be very serious. Every civilized Government would like to avoid such a contingency.

As you would see from the report that Puri would give you, at the final stages the differences between the two sides had narrowed down considerably. It was only, if I may say so, because of the needs of the middle-class people of the two Bengalis, Assam and Tripura, which we were not prepared to sacrifice, that a full settlement was not achieved. It would have meant a betrayal of these people. After conceding their demands with regard to what they called Category ‘A’, we earnestly asked them to accept our proposals with regard to the other classes of people which were listed by us under Group II (i), (ii) and (v). But we found Aziz stiff and unrelenting. At that stage, on Saturday morning, I had to tell this Civilian – which was rather undiplomatic – that if he wanted to squeeze out some people, would it not be tactically wise for him to apply the screw a little more slowly and make the change somewhat imperceptible. What would they lose by accepting our proposals in a region where hitherto people were moving without any permits or travel papers at all? Even this thrust did not produce any result on that man, although we could see from the faces of the other members of the Delegation how desirous they felt or arriving at an understanding with us.

Yesterday (Monday) morning at the concluding stage of the Conference I made, on the spur of the moment, a sporting offer. I thought they would take it not only for the sake of arriving at an agreement but also to save their face. I said that assuming that we had failed to convince them of the strength of our point, they should, for the sake of a good start in a harmonious atmosphere, concede our proposals in the same spirit of accommodation, as we had accepted theirs, and begin the new system on that basis. After six months the position should be reviewed by both sides with an open mind. In the meantime, we would understand that neither side was committed to the continuance of the agreement. This would mean very little risk for them. Even this did not bring about the desired result!!

I am sorry and was disappointed, that Pakistan representatives should have been so indifferently chosen and in particular their leadership should have been so weak and ineffective. I had a chance of speaking to Zafrullah last night. I was very glad to do so because I was almost certain that our point of view would be badly and incorrectly reported. Zafrullah concluded our talk on a slightly optimistic strain. He said he would carefully read the report and see what could still be done.
I hope the Prime Minister and you will agree that we could not have let down the West Bengal Government on a point which was reasonable and on which they felt very strongly. In any case, after having conceded almost all that the Pakistan Government were asking and securing a fairly satisfactory compromise on others, we could not have given up this important point. We should follow this up by correspondence in which we could again explain our position, reiterating our stand.

On the matter of the date of introduction of the new scheme, the issue of provisional certificates, check posts, registration and other arrangements, it is not necessary at all for us to be bullied into toeing their line. After all the consequences of unilateral action on their side will hit them hard too. If they chose to cut their nose to spite their face, we could not oblige them to prevent the direct results of their determination. Although the measure of hope had considerably decreased, I cannot help feeling that there is still a little chance of good sense prevailing at the higher level in Pakistan. We need not, of course, go by that hope. Our own plans should be made and arrangements organized quietly all the same. In the last resort in dealing with Pakistan we should combine firmness with fairness.

I have written a short letter to the Prime Minister which I hope you will see. I need not repeat what I have said there.

I shall await further communication from you on this subject.

Yours sincerely

For R.K.Nehru from Mehta

Passports. On ZAFARULLA’s call I met him this morning. He said that the difference between two sides on important grounds had narrowed down considerably namely category of cultivators in border areas and the middle class people in our group two. The needs of the two were surely NOT the same he said.

Speaking informally he asked if we would be satisfied if the minimum number of journeys for that class was raised from four to eight or ten each up to one month’s duration. Please telegraph your views immediately after consulting by telephone West Bengal*. The Minister for Foreign Affairs’ suggestion liberalizes position and makes bilateral cooperative working of the scheme possible.

Kindly also say if we would be ready to start the system by 15th August or 1st September.

* When consulted West Bengal replied as under:

We will accept for category A, group II, sub-group (1), classes (i) and (ii) visa for one year and normally for ten visits and maximum of three months stay during each visit and passage through check posts. Discretion should NOT be given to make number smaller than ten as the number of journeys normally to be given for a visa of above two classes under guise of any agreement to regard ten visits as "maximum". Ten should be the number to be normally given.

For category A, group II, sub-group (1), classes (iii), (iv) and (v) multi journey visa would be required. These three classes may have visa valid for one year.

For category A, group I, classes (i) and (ii) visa may be valid for three and not repeat not five years.

Earliest date for introduction of passports may be 15th August but 1st September would be more convenient.

No. 30407. May 27, 1952

For Mehta from R.K. Nehru.

Your telegram 261 of 25th May. Passports. We have considered Pakistan’s proposal. Our conclusions are as follows:

(1) We agree that classes (i), (ii) and (v) of our Group II should have one-year visas valid for NOT less than ten visits. Number may be increased in special cases at discretion of visa issuing authority. Maximum stay during any one visit to be fixed at three months, as against one month proposed by Pakistan.

(2) For classes (iii) and (iv) of our Group II, visas for one year without restriction on number of visits are considered essential.

(3) We agree to facilities asked for by Pakistan for border agriculturists, artisans and labourers: provided that the same facilities are extended to agriculturists of Khari and Jaintia Hills and Garo Hills in Assam whose main crops are fruit and vegetables, particularly orange and potatoes. The main markets for these crops lie across the border in adjoining plain districts of East Pakistan. Visas to those people could be limited to nearest suitable market centers across the border.

(4) For border zone people, we consider that three-year visa should suffice. However, if agreement is reached on other points, we shall agree a five-year visa.

(5) We would prefer introduction of new system on 1st September.

(6) Our understanding is that visa system will be administered liberally on a reciprocal basis. This means that on both sides adequate arrangements will be made for quick disposal of visa applications, that convenience of public will be considered in setting up visa offices, etc. and that NO one entitled to a visa or renewal of a visa will be denied such facilities.

2. Subject to agreement on above, please ascertain whether Pakistan confirms rest of the record of conclusions drawn up by us. Copy has been sent to you. Also please ascertain Pakistan’s views on points left over for further consideration: see paragraphs A5, A7 and D2 of record.

3421. Letter from Pakistan Foreign Minister Mohammad Zafrullah Khan to High Commissioner for India in Pakistan Mohan Sinha Mehta.
Minister for Foreign Affairs & Commonwealth Relations
Karachi
May 28, 1952

Dear Dr. Mehta,

Many thanks for your letter of 28th May, 1952*. I have given very careful consideration to the points that you mentioned to me during our conversation on 25th May. I am ready to consider some increase in the minimum number of journeys that a holder of category B visa may be permitted to make with a corresponding adjustment in respect of the period of stay during each visit. I am also prepared to give directions that in case of genuine need further journeys may be permitted and that this provision should be liberally construed and implemented. The working of these provisions may be reviewed at the end of a year and if any case of hardship is brought to notice suitable adjustments should be made to meet such cases.

I may point out that all these provisions should be applicable not only between India and East Pakistan but also between India and West Pakistan.

I trust that this might enable an agreement to be reached on the points left outstanding during the recent discussions between the two delegations.

I shall be very glad to discuss the matter with you for the purpose of arriving at concrete conclusions on the above points whenever it may be convenient to you.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- Zafrulla Khan.

His Excellency
Dr. Mohan Sinha Mehta,

* In his letter of 28th May to Mr. Zafrullah Khan Mr. Mehta has referred to his meeting with him on 25th May and expressed the hope that the differences between the two which had narrowed down considerably would be sorted out with his intervention.

In his telegram of 29th May to Commonwealth Secretary R. K., Nehru the High Commissioner conveyed Pakistan's willingness to "increase minimum number of journeys for category B visas with corresponding adjustment in period of stay during each visit but adds that those provisions should apply NOT merely to India and East Pakistan but also to West Pakistan". He recommended accepting the new offer. He also added that Pakistan was not "likely to concede unlimited journeys visas to group II (III) and (IV) transport workers and business men".

No. HC/52/11 30th May, 1952

My dear R.K.,

I enclose herewith copies of the letters* exchanged between Zafrulla and myself. They will explain things to you.

My telegram of last night have reached you this morning and I shall expect your reply some time this afternoon.

As you may have noticed, Zaffarulla has now introduced a fresh complication by suggesting to apply the provision for a large number of journeys to the holders of visas in our Group II to West Pakistan also. As I indicated in my letter of this morning to him, I shall resist this. But, if, in exchange for providing larger number of journeys to some people of West Bengal, as suggested by me, he insists on this clause, the scope of disagreement will grow and an agreed solution would be again out of reach. I shall wait for your reply. Now, unfortunately, the tables have turned against us. We had been pleading for a more liberal policy in the matter of visas. That has been our basic stand. It is now for the Prime Minister to consider this situation. While there is a certain amount of risk involved, I do not consider it serious enough to jeopardize the chances of an agreement on the scheme as a whole. After all, if the plan of Passports is brought into force without an agreement, we gain nothing. The Pakistan Government have their way all along and there will be an atmosphere of friction, even bitterness. We have therefore to look at the whole thing from a broader angle and in a far sighted spirit.

In conclusion I may repeat that I shall do my best to get suitable terms, but it may not be quite easy. During the last four or five days, we have had editorial articles in almost all the English Papers strongly supporting the

For Mehta from R.K. Nehru

Passports. Your telegram 265 dated 29\textsuperscript{th} May is NOT clear and requires further elucidation. We are perfectly prepared to liberalise provisions to facilities traffic between India and West Pakistan but it is obvious that these conditions differ from those prevailing in East Zone and it is on basis of special conditions prevailing in East Zone that we have thus far considered this question and come to certain provisional agreements. Thus category ‘A’ in East Zone has NO application whatever to West. Category ‘B’ also can only apply in part. We CANNOT therefore in any event say that identical provisions should apply to East Zone and the West. That would have little meaning and would only produce confusion.

We are perfectly prepared however to extend facilities of traffic between Western Pakistan and India to largest possible extent. We would suggest for this traffic that passports should be issued NOT only for single journeys but for multiple journeys during stated period and that this provision should be liberally construed to facilities traffic. This would apply to all classes of persons without distinction.
If we introduce special classes and groups as between Western Pakistan and India, this would produce numerous complications and would in effect hinder traffic. You can therefore make this proposal to Pakistan Government in regard to Western traffic.

We would like to have the same formula for category ‘C’ in Eastern Zone.

As regards transport workers, that is workers in railway trains, ships, airways, etc., they have to travel constantly between two countries and obviously special provision must be made for them as in carrying out their normal work whether in East or West. This was agreed to about West. It applies at least as much to East. This is NOT a normal case of visas being issued but special permits enabling them to function.

In regard to category ‘A’ border traffic, we would like to include petty traders living on the border such as milkmen, vegetable and fruit sellers, etc., doing petty business on either side of the border. They stand in the same position as agriculturists and the like on the border.

We presume that provisional agreements arrived at in regard to Eastern Zone stand and for category ‘B’ multiple journeys up to ten journeys a year with possible stay of three months is accepted.

R.K.Nehru from Mehta.

Met Minister for Foreign Affairs. Have secured agreement for multiple journey visas for our group II(III) and (IV) transport workers and businessmen.

For group II(I), (II) and (V) (property owners, relations and pensioners) Pakistan prepared to concede visas for minimum of eight journeys of two months duration and valid one year. Even this was obtained with difficulty. I pressed for liberalization to ten visas with three months duration but they were unable to go further. I got them to agree to issue directives for grant of visas for large number of visits in cases of genuine needs. Hope to get this publicly announced too.

Secondly these liberal concessions would apply to similar classes of people in West Pakistan also. For other categories C visa remains.

On other points general agreement reached.

Have obtained Pakistan’s full assurance to working visa system according to your desire expressed in sub-para (6) of your telegram No.30407 of 27th May. This will also form part of the joint announcement. Hope these arrangements will be approved.

IMEDITATE

No.30414.       June 2, 1952

For Mehta from R.K. Nehru

Reference my telegram 3079 of 1st June. Passports. It seems that you had NOT receive my telegram 3054 of 30th May when you met ZAFRULLA on 31st. we have considered your telegram 273 of 31st May. Our conclusions are as follows:-

(1) Under new proposal, property owners, persons with relatives and pensioners in East Zone will have eight journey visas of two months duration each for travel confined to East Zone. All others in East Zone, except border people, will have four journey visas, but in their case duration of each visit will be three months. We are NOT making an issue of this, but we feel that three months concession should apply to property owners, persons with relatives and pensioners also.
Pakistan’s proposal is that “similar classes of people in West Pakistan” should be entitled to the same concession, viz., eight journey visas of two months duration each, presumably for visits to any part of India. As we have pointed out, this attempt to equate concessions in East and West has NO particular meaning. We adhere to our proposal that, apart from special facilities for East Zone traffic, other traffic between the two countries should also have liberal travel facilities. Single or multiple journey visas for stated period should be issued and instructions should be given to visa issuing authorities to construe these provisions liberally. There must of course be complete reciprocity in this matter, which means that the same concessions should be available to our category ‘C’ in Eastern Zone and to any one in India outside the Eastern Zone who wishes to go to any part of Pakistan.

Petty traders, milk sellers and vegetable and fruit sellers in Eastern border zone should be included in border categories. It is NOT clear whether Pakistan has accepted this.

New system should come into force on 1st September and, subject to modifications suggested above, Pakistan’s views should be ascertained on points mentioned in paragraph 2 of my telegram 30407 of 27th May.

Replying to the above telegram on June 3, the High Commissioner Mehta said that “the substance of our demand has been conceded and Pakistan NOT prepared to go further. I strongly feel that we should now accept the agreement tentatively reached with Minister for Foreign Affairs on Saturday last as a whole. The alternative is breakdown with both Governments going their own way and undertaking arrangements with distrust and friction.” He desired that his suggestion may be placed before the Prime Minister.
To Mehta from Prime Minister.

I have seen your letter dated 2nd June and tabular statement. This statement is in places not clear as to what proposal has been accepted. Nor is it clear whether you put forward to Pakistan some of the proposals we communicated to you and which we considered important. We are going to consider your statement carefully and will let you know our reactions to it. Meanwhile we cannot agree to any final decisions being reached or any joint statement being drafted.

2. So far as category ‘C’ is concerned and more specially traffic between Western Pakistan and India, I am quite clear that proposal made by us is both more liberal and better.

3. Your tabular statement rather mixed up Western Pakistan and Eastern Pakistan though conditions differ between these two.

4. We are anxious to decide this question as early as possible and in a friendly way, but the matter involves large number of people on both sides and we have to be very careful about every detail. From past experience we had found repeatedly that agreements arrived at with Pakistan give rise to various interpretations and interminable argument. We must therefore avoid this by having a precise and clear agreement. If this cannot be reached now, it will have to be postponed and Pakistan representatives can come here to discuss it with us. In any event, we cannot sign any document till we have agreed to every single part of it.

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan

Nehru.

Karachi, June 4, 1952.

High Commission of India
Jhangir Sethna Road
New Town, Karachi

No. HC/52/11 4th June 1952

Subject: Passports.

My dear R.K.,

At the end of our talks on Saturday last, 31st May, Zafrulla mentioned one point which they would like to be accepted. It is this: Any person who takes out a Passport for a visit to the other country should not for that action be liable to be declared an intending evacuee under the Evacuee Property Law.

This proposal has two clear aspects:

(a) It is apparently a very innocuous suggestion and so it would be obviously unreasonable for either side to reject it.

(b) At the same time this provision should be more for the benefit of the Muslims in India and of no use to non-Muslims in West Pakistan. Of course in East Bengal it can be a very great safeguard for the Hindus on whom the East Bengal Government have been rather hard.

My own feeling is that we cannot turn down this proposal as it stands. We should accept it in a slightly modified form, namely, that by mere fact that a person takes out a Passport for a temporary visit to the other country for a temporary visit to the other country for a period to be specified and for the purpose to be stated in the visa, he will not for that action alone be deemed to be an intending evacuee under the Law. This will imply that if in addition to taking out a Passport, there is some evidence or activity to show that the intention is to use that temporary visit as a preliminary step towards permanent migration later on, the provision relating to intending evacuees would be brought into action. This could cover his activities in the other country, such as acquiring property, frequent visits for which there is no apparent justification etc. etc.
This is my view. I hope you agree. Please let me have your reply by telegram, if possible.

Yours sincerely

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan
Mohan Sinha Mehta to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

Karachi, June 5, 1952.

High Commissioner for India
Karachi

D.O. No. HC/52/11 June 5, 1952

My dear Panditji,

Your telegram No. 30415 of yesterday reached me this morning about two hours ago.

The points contained in paragraph 1 of your telegram would become clear if my letter of even Number dated the 2nd June is read along with the tabular statement which was enclosed with it. Then you will find that no proposals communicated to me from Delhi were omitted. If I am wrong, I would like to know specifically which are such proposals as have been omitted in the statement.

In order that the whole position is clear beyond any doubt or ambiguity, I am now sending herewith enclosed the draft of a Press Note (Not reproduced here) which embodies all the important points which were considered at the Conference and later between Zafrulla and myself. It is only at the draft stage and so far we have not shown it to Pakistan Government. If we receive a reminder from them, I shall send the Deputy High Commissioner to discuss it with them. I do not wish to be open to the charge of unduly delaying the matter. Discussions between the Deputy High Commissioner and the Joint Secretary in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs & Commonwealth Relations would not be final. It is possible that Pakistan might suggest modification in the language of our draft. In any case, they will have to take the approval of their Government before finally accepting it.

May I now repeat that not only the points urged by Ratan Nehru in his letters and telegrams have been included in this draft, but it also shows points of agreements which have been tentatively reached here between us.

You will find that the provision with regard to Category ‘C’ is embodied in paragraph 10. I may add further that with regard to this category, there was no dispute between the two sides even at the Conference. It is quite true that we must be very careful in the language in which the various points of agreement are described in order that we might avoid the possibility of misinterpretations or misunderstandings later. I have borne this point in mind.

Now it will be convenient for you to send me your views and final instructions, whether of language or of substance, by referring to the enclosed paper in which paragraphs and sub-paragraphs are clearly divided and numbered. I think this will save time and avoid unnecessary correspondence. In the absence of some such paper (until I had sent my tabular statement), there was considerable vagueness and even confusion in the letters and telegrams exchanged between the Ministry and myself.

On another point, which is apparently innocuous, the Pakistan Government have made a suggestion for our consideration and acceptance, namely, that a person in either country who takes out a passport for a temporary visit to the other country should not be, for that reason, declared an intending evacuee. I wrote a letter to R.K. yesterday on this subject which might have been submitted to you by now.

As I have already indicated in my letters and telegrams, the Foreign Minister of Pakistan has gone much further than his advisers wanted. I have come to know through a reliable source that he had to put down this opposition with tact and great firmness. From our side, the only points of difference which now remain are:

(a) A provision for a minimum of eight journeys with each stay allowed up to two months as has been conceded by them after considerable pressure, as against the minimum of ten journeys for the same class of people acceptable to us. I feel that the difference has been reduced almost to nothing and there is no justification for continuing the controversy any longer.

(b) The Government of Pakistan insist on applying the provisions we have secured for our Group II detailed in Paragraphs 6, 7 and 9 in the enclosed draft to West Pakistan also.
I know that we did not ask for it and I did my best to avoid acceptance of this proposal. But quite frankly, their proposal is more in keeping with your policy and the stand we took at the Conference, namely, a more liberal arrangement for the traveling public to go across to the other country for the satisfaction of their personal and domestic needs. With what consistency or justification can we now turn round and reject this proposal? I had made both these points clear in my communication to R.K. you might have seen them already.

Finally may I invite your attention to the concluding paragraph No.24 of the draft Note. We have been stressing these points. It is important to secure an official commitment of the Pakistan Government to the principle of reciprocity and the adoption of a liberal spirit in administering the visa system.

Yours sincerely

(Mohan Sinha Mehta)

Prime Minister of India,

MOST IMMEDIATE

No.30417. June 5, 1952

Mehta from R.K. Nehru.

Foreign Affairs Committee of Cabinet, which has been continually kept in touch with passport problem, met today and considered your letter of 2nd June. They agreed with telegram sent by Prime Minister to you yesterday.

2. We would like you to refer to recent telegrams sent by us and to our proposals made therein. We want to know precisely if these have been put to Pakistan Government and which of them have been accepted.

3. In regard to Eastern Zone, Group II (i), (ii) and (v), we are prepared to agree to visas for eight journeys, each visit up to two months. We should like to know clearly whether potty traders, milk sellers, fruit and vegetable sellers have been specifically included in border traffic.
4. Regarding traffic between India and Pakistan outside Eastern Zone, we see NO reason why property owners, etc., should have special facilities such as are given to certain groups in Eastern Zone. We have divided Eastern Zone into groups because of special conditions existing there. To apply these to rest of India and Pakistan is NOT desirable. We still think that we should have a simple clause dealing with this such as single or multiple journey visas which should be liberally granted to all classes of people.

5. Every part of the agreement must be on a reciprocal basis.

6. All agreed points in record of Karachi talks, copy of which has been sent to you, should be confirmed.

7. Before any settlement is finalized, the draft agreement or communiqué should be sent to us.

After receipt of the above telegram, the High Commissioner wrote another letter dated June 6, to Prime Minister which read:

My dear Panditji,

My d.o. letter No. HC/52/11 was dictated yesterday. Unfortunately it could not be dispatched yesterday. On account of bad weather conditions, there has been some irregularities in the coming in and departure of the I.N.A. planes which carry our diplomatic bags to Delhi.

This morning I received another telegram on this subject from Ratan Nehru. I enclose herewith a copy of my letter to him. This letter may kindly be read along with my letter of yesterday which I now see could not be dispatched yesterday.

I am glad that I anticipated the wishes of my friend Ratan Nehru in sending the major points in the form of a draft Note which, if complete agreement is reached, should be issued by the two Governments simultaneously.

***********

Letter from the High Commissioner to Commonwealth Secretary dated 6th June referred to in the letter to Prime Minister above:

My dear R.K.,

I have just now received your Secret telegram No.30417 date the 5th June. I shall deal with this message of yours paragraph wise:

Para 1. I have no comment except that it is satisfactory to know that my letter of the 2nd June was read to and considered by the Cabinet Committee.
Para 2. You refer to your recent telegrams and wish to know precisely whether your proposals have been put to Pakistan Government and which of them have been accepted. In the first place, your telegrams have been rather vague. So far as I can see, all the proposals received from you have been put before the Pakistan Government. Secondly, this will be quite clear to you by reading the Draft Press Note which was sent with my letter of yesterday to the Prime Minister. In order to make my position clear, I am sending herewith enclosed a statement containing references to your telegrams and the action taken by me along with references to the report sent to you about that action. This should finally dispose of your anxiety on this score.

Para 3. I am glad to know that you agree to visas for eight journeys, each visit for a duration of two months for Group II (i), (ii) and (v) for which we were very keen. May I add that, (1) this number of eight journeys is the minimum, and (2) I have secured Zafrulla's agreement to an undertaking by means of a public announcement that visas for larger number of journeys would be granted to all persons with genuine needs for them.

N.B. This was also included in my tabular statement and the Draft Note which was sent yesterday to the Prime Minister.

I am really surprised that you are still wanting to know whether petty traders, milk sellers, fruit and vegetable vendors have been specially included in the border traffic. Since you, the Prime Minister and the Cabinet Committee have, I have been assured, read my letter of 2nd June, I have only to refer you to the paragraph beginning at the bottom on the 2nd page with the words “with regard to para of your telegram” and ending with the words “the benefit of the liberal arrangement” on page 3 of my letter. This should have been read with the tabular statement, item (1), Colum 3 in which the very words contained in your telegram were reproduced. It refers to this class of people, milk sellers, petty traders, vegetable vendors etc. I have clearly stated in that paragraph of my letter of 2nd June that “the assumption was accepted”. I do not know how I could have made this point clearer. However, you will notice that this is also included in the draft of the Press Note sent along with my letter of yesterday to the Prime Minister. May I now repeat that I succeeded in getting our proposals with regard to milk sellers, vegetable vendors etc. accepted by the Foreign Minister of Pakistan.

Para 4. This is the crux of the whole problem now. When I wrote my letter to the Prime Minister yesterday, there were two major hurdles. Since receiving your telegram this morning, one is definitely out of the way (paragraph 3 of your telegram of yesterday with regard to Group II (i), (ii) and (v). Regarding the traffic between India and Pakistan, I know that we do not favour the special facilities to be extended to the Western Zone. I have already told you that the Pakistan Government are very keen on it and insist on its acceptance. I tried hard to avoid it, but without success. In any case, may I know what reasons can we advance in support of this position. Do we by taking up this attitude conform to our earlier plan to provide liberal facilities for people who wish to travel between the two countries? In any case, what is the reason which can be put across the table for not accepting the suggestion of the Pakistan Government? Besides, are there very serious risks which would oblige us to throw away the chances of an agreed arrangement for introducing the new system of Passports and visas for this particular point, now that the two sides have come so near to each other and during the two talks that I had with Zafrulla he has come forward appreciable distance to meet our point of view? It is now for the Prime Minister to decide. There is little hope of Pakistan withdrawing or modifying their stand on this issue.

Para 5. I have all along insisted on this principle and have got the Government of Pakistan to agree to the principle of complete reciprocity in the arrangements that would be put into effect with regard to Passports etc. I think this point also would become quite clear from the tabular statement sent to you at the end of the last week.

Para 6. This has been done. Again please see the draft of the Press Note accompanying my letter of yesterday addressed to the Prime Minister. In fact, this was exactly the purpose for which I had drawn up that tabular statement. In that I had not included only such of the points mentioned in Puri’s summary which had already been agreed upon. However, the latest draft Press Note is complete even from this point of view.

Para 7. This is exactly what I have already done. Please see my letter to the Prime Minister with which is enclosed the draft of the Press Note.

2. I hope this makes every point clear. If any other important matter has escaped my attention, kindly let me know.

Yours sincerely,

(Mohan Sinha Mehta)

Shri R. K. Nehru,
Commonwealth Secretary,
Ministry of External Affairs,
New Delhi.
Letter from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to High Commissioner for India Mohan Sinha Mehta.

New Delhi, June 8, 1952.

My dear Mohan Sinhaji,

I have your two letter of June 6th.

2. This matter of passports between India and Pakistan has been considered so important by us that at every step we have consulted that Committee of the Cabinet dealing with Foreign Affairs and have also kept in constant touch with Dr. B.C. Roy. Almost every message that has been sent to you from here has been sent after consultation with me or has been drafted by me.

3. This morning I sent you a reply to your telegram about Zafrulla's new proposal. This relates to some reference in our proposed passports agreement to passport holder not being penalized as “intending evacuee”. This is totally unnecessary, as it is obvious that this will not be so, unless there are some other grounds. The mere holding of a passport itself is acknowledgement of the nationality of that person and is a promise of protection. If he is guilty of something else, which brings in the mischief of the evacuee property laws, then it is for that reason that we may take some steps. Apart from this, as we have repeatedly pointed out, there are no evacuee property laws as between Eastern Pakistan and West Bengal, Assam, Tripura, etc. No question of “intending evacuees” can arise there.

4. As a matter of fact, we have decided to do away with “intending evacuees” even elsewhere and have drafted legislation to that end. We want to make the working of that law much simpler and to prevent hardship. I dislike these evacuee property laws intensely and I wish that we could settle this question with Pakistan and resume normal life. But Pakistan has put enormous difficulties in our way, simply because they fear that any solution might bring out the fact that they have got far more property in their possession than we have. If you look back to our previous suggestions to and correspondence with Pakistan on this subject, you will find that we have made numerous efforts. Finally we suggested the reference of the entire problem to a joint tribunal of the highest standing. If that joint tribunal disagreed, then we were prepared to refer matters of disagreement to a third party or to an international court. Pakistan however would not agree.

5. Anyhow we propose to take some action unilaterally to lessen the difficulties caused by the evacuee property law. I doubt if the present session of Parliament can deal with this matter, as it will not have time for that. But we shall certainly bring it up during the next session.
6. Zafrulla’s proposal, therefore, has no bearing on the passport issue. But there is some hidden mischief in it, because if once we agree to it, all kinds of new complications might arise in regard to property which is being controlled by custodians now. We are therefore entirely opposed to bringing in this matter in the passports agreement.

7. It is to avoid this property question from coming into our passports agreement that we have insisted on dealing with the eastern zone separately from the rest of India. There is that basic difference between the two and our trying to slur over it will create great difficulties and friction. We must acknowledge facts as they are.

8. The draft statement that you have sent will be carefully considered here. My first impression is that it could be shortened and made a little more concise. But we shall write to you more about this later. For the present, I shall refer to certain points that struck me on a first reading. This draft statement should not be shown to the Pakistan people till we have ourselves decided about it.

9. One fact that is obvious but still requires stating is that the normal international passports will of course be valid for travel between India and Pakistan. The passports we are talking about now are something in addition to these international passports and will be in a much simpler form. It is obvious that if complicated passports are to be issued in accordance with the proposed arrangement, then it will be difficult for many people to get them. We cannot expect ordinary folk to go about applying for and getting international passports or any other complicated form of passports. Presumably therefore, these will be issued. Some reference to these passports as simple and different from the international passports is therefore desirable.

10. In paragraph 5 or your draft, you refer to border unions. I thought that we had agreed previously that border unions, as such, should not be mentioned because they are not clearly defined. We should describe the area more precisely by mentioning villages etc.

11. In paragraph 11 of the draft, certain places in India and the eastern zone are mentioned where the Pakistan Government will establish their visa offices. These are Agartala, Goalpara and Jalpaiguri in West Bengal and at Dawki in Assam. There is no mention of where we will have our visa offices on the Pakistan side. This one-sided mention should not be made. Indeed we have not agreed to the places where visa offices should be situated. This matter will have to be taken up separately and discussed. The agreement need not be held up because of this. We do not propose to allow Pakistan to have a number of visa offices in our territory, if they deny us equal privileges in their territory.
12. We are agreeable to the Pakistan Government reestablishing their visa offices at Bombay. It is not necessary to mention this in the agreement, as it does not fit in with the text and we are not mentioning other places. But on this particular point, we can exchange letters, if necessary.

13. The main point, which has not yet been settled is referred to in paragraph 9 and 10 of your draft. I do not understand your difficulty in this matter. To us it is perfectly clear. Nor do I understand why you continue to say that we are illiberal and restrictive. The correct statement is that while we are somewhat restrictive in regard to particular groups for the rest of India and Western Pakistan, we are such more liberal in regard to all others, both in Western Pakistan and in Eastern Pakistan as well as the whole of India.

14. Paragraph 9, as drafted, applies to all residents of India and Pakistan, both in the East and West. We have been and are agreeable to this applying, as drafted, to the eastern zone, namely Eastern Pakistan, West Bengal, Assam and Tripura. If this is applied to the rest of India also, then the difficulties I have mentioned above about property owners and the evacuee property law come in. Apart from this, this treatment of the eastern zone on the same basis as the rest of India and Western Pakistan is unrealistic and ignores facts.

15. Paragraph 10 applies to all others, whether in the Eastern Zone or Western Pakistan and the rest of India. This is restrictive for all these people because it says that the visa will be only for a single journey. We say that the visa may be for a single or multiple journey for all these people. Obviously this is a much more liberal provision. Apart from this, it saves people from the trouble of trying to prove that they are in a particular group.

16. The provision of pensioners for the eastern zone has some meaning; it has practically no meaning elsewhere. The provision of relatives in the eastern zone applies to both Hindus and Muslims in East Bengal and West Bengal respectively. To mention relatives in the rest of India and Western Pakistan, in effect, means relatives of Muslims in India, as there are practically no Hindus left in Western Pakistan. We do not object to a liberal issue of passports to these relatives of Muslims of Western Pakistan. We provide for it by our suggesting that there should be single or multiple journey passports. But to lay this down specially for Western Pakistan would be largely a unilateral provision and may create difficulties for us on grounds of security and other. But our real difficulty is to introduce property owners, apart from Eastern Pakistan, as this may well bring us in some conflict with the evacuee property law.

17. Our proposal gets over all these difficulties and is much more liberal, so far as all persons are concerned. It is true that it is somewhat restrictive about a particular class in Western Pakistan or India (apart from the eastern zone).
But that slight restriction is much more counterbalanced by the wider provision we have made for everybody.

18. We attach importance to this matter and I see no reason why we should give in on it, because Zafrulla Khan insists on our doing so. I am perfectly prepared to consider the whole evacuee property question independently and to introduce liberal provisions reciprocally on both sides. But to say anything here, which indirectly affects that issue and possibly produces a confusion, is wrong.

19. These are my initial reactions to your draft statement. As soon as this statement has been examined with greater care, our further views will be communicated to you.

Yours sincerely
Sd/- J. Nehru.

No.30420. June 8, 1952

For Mehta from R.K. Nehru.

Your letter of 4th June. Passports.

ZAFARULLA’s new suggestion about passport holder NOT being liable to be declared “Intending evacuee” under Evacuee Property Law.

This has NO application whatsoever to Eastern Zone where there is NO Evacuee Property Law and NO “intending evacuees.” As a matter of fact even in other parts of India we intend amending Evacuee Property Law and doing away with “intending evacuees”. This legislation may take some months. We have already issued instructions to avoid such declarations as far as possible.

It is clear that a passport holder would be recognized as Indian or Pakistani national and consequently taking a passport for visit to another country could NOT by itself be any offence under Evacuee Property Law. Therefore ZAFARULLA’s proposal has NO meaning as it stands. But it may have some implications and in any event we are strongly opposed to any such proposal being included in Passport Agreement. That might immediately raise all kinds of complicated problems connected with Evacuee Property Law. In fact this proposal makes us suspect his other proposal of including property holders in Western Pakistan for special privileges.

Please therefore do NOT give any countenance to this new proposal.

SECRET

No.HC/52/11

Subject: Passports.
My dear R.K.
I have just now received both the telegrams, one from the Prime Minister, NO.21230, and the other from you, No.30420.
2. I shall wait for the “full reactions” from your end to the Draft Note sent by me. In the meantime, may I request you and the Prime Minister to consider the following:
1) With regard to Zaffrulla’s suggestion that Passport holders as such should not be liable to be declared as intending evacuees, the whole trend of your telegram shows that in view of the action contemplated by us, Zaffrulla’s suggestion becomes superfluous. But you conclude by asking me not to “give any countenance to this new proposal”. Now this requires elucidation. I can tell Zafrulla that while the Government of India would have the same views on this point as the Pakistan Government, they do not think it necessary to be included in the Draft of the Passport Regulations. This I was going tell him in any case. But do you mean further that you do not like the proposal and will resist even an understanding that the substance of it is unexceptionable. If this latter is your meaning, I am afraid the position becomes extremely difficult and one can only put such a suggestion with some strong reason to support it. That is why I had suggested a little verbal alteration in my letter in order to leave us to act in a spirit of reciprocity and also to safeguard our position when it became essential. It should be realized at your end that when you sit down to discuss a matter you have to find reasons, at least ostensible grounds, for resisting or rejecting a proposal.

It is obvious that this proposal has no reference to the Eastern Zone where Evacuee Law does not operate. Will you therefore consider this position and let me have your views on this point.

(2) With regard to paragraph 9, I am glad to know that the Prime Minister finds it liberal and acceptable. This removes a major hurdle out of the way.

(3) It is difficult for me to understand why we think that the proposals contained in paragraph 10 are more restrictive. When we had the Conference, Puri gave me to understand that so far as Category C (which is now represented in paragraph 10 of my Draft) of the original proposals of Pakistan was concerned, there was no objection. This was never a matter of controversy between the representatives of the two countries at the Conference. It was agreed that for the people other than those falling in Category A of the Pakistan proposals and of Group II of our proposals, the draft proposals which were placed as the basis of discussion before the Conference were acceptable to us. My paragraph 10 is not in any way different from those original proposals. If we have to raise this new controversy, we should (a) have reasons to support it, and (b) say in what definite respect we would like it to be modified.

In support of my impression and my memory with regard to this Category, I would draw your attention to paragraph 5 on page 3 of the Minutes of the Meeting held in the Ministry of External Affairs on the 2nd May 1952, a copy of which was sent to me with Puri’s endorsement of the letter from you to the Chief Secretaries of all Parts A and B States and the Chief Commissioner of Part C States, dated the 6th May 1952.

It will be noticed further that Category C is not mentioned as a point of difference in the record of conclusions of the Conference at Karachi last month drawn up by Puri and sent to me by you. May I further draw your attention to Paragraph 5
(1) on page 2 of the Top Secret Report on Passport Conference. This really corresponds to my paragraph 10 of the Draft Press Note sent to the Prime Minister with my letter of the 5th June. That sub-paragraph almost reproduces the provision in the form in which it is stated in the Draft Press Note. It concludes with these words “we have no particular objection to this.”

Moreover, in the Brief which you sent me with Puri for the Karachi Conference, I do not find anything which would indicate as though the provision stated in paragraph 10 of my Draft Note contains less liberal provisions than we had asked for or expected.

I therefore do not understand why the contents of paragraph 10 should cause any difficulty to us. It is possible that I have failed to grasp some aspect or implications of this particular point which are in your mind or that of the Prime Minister. I shall be glad and grateful if they are clearly explained to me, so that I can act accordingly. In any case, I feel that, taken the Agreement as a whole, we have secured from Pakistan much more than they were originally prepared to concede, also the substance of our demand and requirements has been adequately met. However, I shall be glad to be corrected.

(4) The one point which still remains unacceptable to the Prime Minister is the extension of the provisions of paragraph 9 to the Western Zone also. As I have already explained to you and the Prime Minister, I did my best to resist this demand of the Pakistan side, but they insisted that it should be conceded by us. They would not like to be exposed to criticism in their own country that so far as the needs of relations, property owners, pensioners etc. were concerned, the needs of the different zones were treated in a different way. They have no hope of getting our point of view accepted by their Cabinet. After having done our best to get that provision restricted to Eastern Zone only and failed, it is now for us to decide whether we would let the chances of an overall agreement be thrown away on account of differences on this particular point. The fact that the Pakistan Government have come round to accept our view on several important points which they resisted in the Conference will be clear to you on a perusal of the Draft Note sent by me with my letter of the 5th of June and the proceedings of the conference held at Karachi last month.

Yours sincerely

(Mohan Sinha Mehta)

Shri R. K. Nehru
Commonwealth Secretary
Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi.
My dear Panditji,

I am grateful for your letter of 8th June which arrived here by the Bag yesterday afternoon which explains your views on some of the points which remain unresolved on the subject of Passports. I eagerly await your further communication promised in your letter. In the meantime, I may briefly mention my own immediate reactions to your letter of yesterday. I shall deal with each subject separately.

2. It is clear to me that we should not introduce in the Passport Regulations references to their effect on the Evacuee Law. But, do we wish to resist Pakistan’s proposal itself on the merits? I hope that is not your intention. If we can tell the Pakistan Government that our own views with regard to the Evacuee Laws are and have been very liberal and that obviously a Passport holder as such would not, by that mere fact, be prejudiced with regard to his property rights, then we would add that this question should not be mixed with discussions on Passport Rules. I hope this is clear. If, we simply oppose their proposals, the suspicion would deepen and agreement may not be possible.

3. I realize that the Draft of the note has become somewhat lengthy. But this could not be avoided if all the important points had to be included. Personally, even with the risk of the statement becoming lengthy, it is desirable to make all the points of discussion clear beyond the possibility of doubt or ambiguity. If you, however, like it to be reduced, the long paragraph on transit visas could be omitted or abridged. It is not so controversial as the others. May I add that after receiving your last letter and one from Puri, I had to make one or two additions in the Draft. I guess you will approve them. For example, I have added the following short sub-paragraph (b) under paragraph 10: (The present (b) will become (c)).

This point is emphasized by you. If this goes through it should be satisfactory.

4. May we also add what you say in paragraph 9 of your letter about normal international passports? But it will require some explanation which might make it somewhat complicated. Moreover, I hope that even the simple form of passports which we give to our people would not be on a sheet of paper, but a little booklet with hard cardboard covers. The former will be damaged by constant handling. In any case, with the proposed visa system, the difference between the simple passport you have in mind and the ordinary international passport will be very little indeed.

5. Paragraph 10 of year letter: To describe the area by listing the villages would not be feasible. Their number will be in hundreds. We can avoid the expression ‘border Unions’ in favour of another general phrase, “areas”.

6. With regard to the Visa offices, the position is clear. The two Governments will allow the other to open only such Visa Offices within their territory as they like. The Government to East Pakistan are likely to be very restrictive in this matter. They will probably let us have it only at Dacca. But by retaliating on this point, we would only cause hardship to our people. We have to consider this point. So far as they are concerned, they cannot and would not press us on this point and we would be certainly free to do what we liked. I am looking at it from the point of view of the convenience of our own people. For this reason these four names were mentioned. On this point our freedom of action and decision remains unfettered. We can commit these names, but this will not affect Pakistan in the least.

7. I deliberately put in “Bombay” in spite of the fact which I myself realized that it was somewhat out of place. You will remember that Pakistan closed their Permit Office in Bombay at our request. You then wanted me to have it reopened. I did not take action, because at that time the prospect of discussion on the subject of Passports was in sight. Whether we achieve the purpose by including this in the proposed Press Note or by exchange of separate letters, Pakistan Visa Office at Bombay should be opened in the interest our own businessmen who are suffering serious inconvenience on account of the recent change.

8. Now I come to the main point which still remains a major difficulty in the way of settlement. While you consider my remark that our attitude is restrictive and illiberal in this particular respect to be wrong, you yourself concede its correctness later in paragraph 13 and 14. I mean exactly what you have stated, namely, we object to the extension of the liberal provisions made in paragraph 9 (desired by us originally for Eastern Zone only) to the rest of India and West Pakistan. Pakistan Government insists on this. We do not like it for reasons which suit us better, and would very much wish to avoid the extension of these facilities to West Pakistan. It is frankly an advantage to Pakistan and a certain amount of risk for us. But we cannot deny that our stand is less liberal and more restrictive. Secondly, we cannot advance any strong reasons in support of our position. Now I feel at any rate that my point has been clearly understand at your end. Pakistan is adamant on this. We have to make up our mind about it.
9. With regard to the people covered by paragraph 10, I do not quite understand your fears. In the first place, the needs of this type of people, apart from those covered by paragraph 9, will be fully met by the provisions made in paragraph 10. However, I have now added a sub-clause under this paragraph which would more or less meet your point. On this question I do not anticipate much opposition from Pakistan. As I have already told you, we never raised this point of multiple journey visa for this class of people in the past. So far as I remember, we did not even favour it. And finally let us also remember that after the large list of persons framed by us in paragraph 9, the number left to fall under paragraph 10 would be very small indeed.

10. I am sending a slightly revised Draft for your perusal. I have made only the following additions:

1. In paragraph 5(a) I have made two changes, namely, the substitution of the word “Areas” for “Unions”. Secondly after ‘Eastern Zone’, the names of the provinces and States concerned are mentioned.

2. A sub-clause has been added under paragraph 10.

3. A slight addition to paragraph 13 to indicate the need for individual passports even when husbands and wives travel together.

4. An addition has been made under paragraph 20 to apply its provisions to guides, witnesses and relatives in connection with the recovery of abducted women.

5. A new paragraph – now paragraph No.21 – has been added. This is to cover the additional corrigendum received from Puri on Monday last.

11. It makes the draft slightly longer, but the need for these additions is self-evident. It could be made more concise provided the points omitted are clearly understood by both sides.

12. While the presentation of our point of view to Pakistan should not suffer for want of patience or emphasis or strength of argument, I hope at the same time it will be recognized that the advantage of reaching an agreement, if possible, in a matter like this is indeed of great value. If the two countries go their own way and introduce the system of Passports and Visas and enforce their own regulations independently of each other without an agreement and after a breakdown of negotiations, the result would be very unfortunate from the point of view of public convenience on both sides, and further it will prejudicially affect the whole range of relations between the two countries covering all fields of contact, and they are many.

13. In conclusion, may I say we must not lose time. While I am waiting for final instructions from you, the lull in the discussions is not good for us. As I have already reported, we have secured the substance of what we had insisted on. Now Pakistan insists only on one point, unless they raise fresh troubles after the recent Conference of their departmental officers.

Yours sincerely
(Mohan Sinha Mehta)

Shri Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Prime Minister of India,
New Delhi.

***************

DRAFT OF THE PRESS COMMUNIQUE

A conference of the representatives of the Governments of India and Pakistan was held at Karachi from the 15th to 19th May 1952 to discuss the introduction of Passport-cum-Visas for travel between India and Pakistan as decided by the Government of Pakistan. The Conference was held in a cordial atmosphere and the various aspects of the system were examined and discussed.

2. Although, as has already been indicated in the Press Note issued by the Governments on the 19th May 1952, agreement was reached on most of the subjects, some important points remained on which further consultation and clarification was found necessary. The Foreign Minister of Pakistan and the High Commissioner for India in Pakistan met twice during the last week of May and considered these matters which could not be finally decided at the Conference.

3. This Note is being issued for public information; so that the conditions on which travel between the two countries will hereafter be regulated are as widely known as possible both in India and Pakistan.

4. From the date to be announced shortly it will be necessary to have passports and appropriate forms of visas for travel between India and Pakistan.

5.(a) It was agreed at Conference that multiple journey visas valid for five years will be issued for travel to place or places to be specified in the visa to cultivators residing in Border areas of the Eastern Zone (that is West Bengal, East Bengal, Assam, Tripura and Bihar) and having land across the border, and their labourers, and others normally working to earn their livelihood in the border Unions of the other country, including such people as milkmen, vegetable and fruit sellers etc. This facility will also extend to similar persons of Khasi, Jaintia and Garo Hills in Assam and to the border areas of Bihar who go to attend to, protect, collect or market their crops of fruits, vegetables or other produce across the border in the adjoining plains districts of East Pakistan.
There will be no regular checks or registration for persons in this category but passports will be liable to be shown on demand by authorized officials.

It is understood that should experience of the working of this special facility necessitate reconsideration, such review will be undertaken and the facility withdrawn or modified, if necessary.

6. Employees of railways, air or shipping companies etc. providing transport links between the two countries, who have to cross the border frequently in course of their duties, will be given multiple journey visas valid for one year at a time.

7. Businessmen who have a bona fide and established business in and with the other country and their agents and employees will also be given unlimited journey visas for place or place to be specified in the visas valid for one year at a time.

8.(a) Registration for these two categories mentioned in paragraphs 6 and 7 above will be at the points of entry and exit. There will be ordinarily no necessity of subsequent personal attendance or report at Police offices.

(b) Should experience of the working of this exception, however, necessitate a reconsideration of the facility, such review will be undertaken and the facility withdrawn or modified, if necessary.

9.(a) The following classes of persons will be entitled to have visas valid for one year for a minimum of eight journeys, the maximum duration of each journey being two months:

(i) Persons or their authorized agents having interests in or deriving income from immovable property etc.

(ii) Persons who have near relations in the Province, State or States in the other country.

(iii) Pensioners or other recipients of periodical monetary payments etc.

(b) These facilities will be available to residents of India and Pakistan who fall within the above categories.

(c) The above proposals are accepted with the understanding that (i) visas will be liberally and promptly granted, (ii) a larger number of visits than the minimum of eight stated above would be allowed to all persons with genuine needs and (iii) the working of the system is reviewed after one year in order further to liberalise this provision if it is found necessary.
10. (a) For persons falling in other categories, the visa would be made valid for a single journey by a specified route and for such period as may be indicated in the visa, with a minimum stay of three months.

(b) In case of genuine needs multiple journeys visas will also be liberally issued to this category of persons.

(c) For persons in these categories, registration will be at the point of entry and exit and subsequent personal attendance at police stations will not be necessary, unless an amendment in the entries made in the visa regarding the places of stay or points of entry or exit are desired.

11. The Government of either country will afford proper facilities to that of the other for opening as many visa offices as possible in their countries for the convenience of the traveling public. The location of these offices will be generally in the provincial capitals. Pakistan Government would re-establish their visa office at Bombay. The Government of Pakistan will establish visa offices at Agartala, Goalpara and Jalpaiguri in West Bengal and at Dawki in Assam.

12. The present arrangements will continue till the proposed passport system is brought into effect. There will be no other kind of interim arrangements.

13. When people travel in parties, such as, athletic teams, pilgrims etc. individual passports for each adult will be necessary. Husbands and wives too will carry separate passports. Children under 15 years old could travel on the passport of either of their parents.

14. The subject of registration of foreign passport holders and the question of penalties for the breach of Passport Regulations are being separately examined, and the rules which will be framed in this connection will, so far as possible, be based on reciprocity.

15. Provisions of Transit facilities:

(i) A person traveling with a valid passport by a through aircraft from either country to another portion of the same country but across the other country or from either country to a third country but across the other country will not need a visa.

(ii) The above will also apply to a person not traveling by a through aircraft but who is a through passenger and has to change aircraft in the other country. During the enforced halt between the arrival of one plane and the departure of the connecting plane, a landing permit would be issued on deposit of the passport.

(iii) A person holding a valid passport traveling by a through train originating in one country and terminating in the same country but passing through the other, will not require a visa. The passenger must not however detrain or break journey on the way in which case he will expose himself to the risk of traveling without a proper visa. It will not be deemed a break of journey to change from broad gauge to meter gauge and vice versa. Nor will it be regarded a break of journey if the passenger is unable to complete his journey for such reasons as a train accident, blocking of the line and other similar factors affecting the running of the through train.

(iv) Apart from the last three categories stated above, a person traveling through the other country or from or to one country to or from a third country, but through the other country, will need a transit visa.

(v) Persons coming from a third country to either India or Pakistan and wishing either to pass through the other country in transit or to make a visit to the other country in transit or to make a visit to the other country will be required to obtain visas for stay or for transit as the case may be.

(vi) Persons traveling from India or Pakistan to a third country and not requiring transit facilities through the other country, but merely making an enforced halt during the journey of the aircraft or ship by which they are proceeding will, for the duration of the enforced halt, be given a landing permit to visit or stay in the port or the town of call.

16. SEAMEN: It has been agreed to examine the cases of (a) signed crew and (b) signed but discharged crew with a view to considering the adoption of general international practice in vogue in most countries. In other cases, seamen will be treated as ordinary travelers.

17. All valid passports should state the holder’s nationality and not merely his or her domicile.

18. Officers and staff of the diplomatic Missions and their families and personal servants will be issued, free of charge, multi journey visas valid for one year at a time, for any number of journeys during the period of validity and free of any restrictions like registration, reports of arrival and departure and so on. Such visas will not be limited to particular places and will also be valid for entry or exit by any of the routes open to the traveling public.

19. Government officials traveling on duty with a Central or State/Provincial Government of the other country or for meetings with officers of such Governments will be granted visas of the appropriate category free of any charge and free also from the provisions relating to registration, reports to police etc. unless amendment of entries in the visa is required.
20. Recovered abducted women and evacuees traveling in official convoys will be exempted from the passport system. Evacuees traveling otherwise than in official convey will travel on Emergency Certificate issued by diplomatic Mission of the country to which they are traveling.

Similarly special facilities will be provided under the new system on a basis of reciprocity, by which guides, witnesses and relatives in connection with the recovery of abducted women could go to the other country at short notice and the minimum of restriction or official formalities.

21. Both the Governments are considering the forms of visa to be adopted in order to see if the same types of forms could be introduced on both sides conforming the principle of reciprocity and spirit of cooperation on the part of the two countries.

22. Other connected and consequent matters of detail; including routes to be kept open in the Eastern Zone, will be settled by correspondence between the two Governments or by holding consultations between their representatives.

23. These regulations will apply to civilian travelers (official or non-official).

24. A Conference of the representatives of the two countries will be convened after a period of one year to review the whole position, to exchange views in the light of the experience gained and to modify the rules and regulations if necessary.

25. Both Governments fully accept the principle that the Passport-cum-visa system will be administered liberally on a reciprocal basis, that on both sides adequate arrangements will be made for quick disposal of visa applications, that convenience of the public will be considered in setting up visa offices etc. and that no one ordinarily entitled to a visa or renewal of a visa will be denied such facilities, unless there are clear and strong grounds in the view of the authorities to refuse to grant or renew a visa.
3434. Note from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Karachi, July 12, 1952.

Office of the High Commissioner for India in Pakistan
Jahangir Sethna Road,
New Town, Karachi

Subject: Land – routes between Punjab (P) and Punjab (I).

The High Commission for India in Pakistan present their compliments to the Government of Pakistan, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, and with reference to their Note No. I/I – 12/2/52, dated the 31st March, 1952, have the honour to state as follows:

2. As stated in the High Commissions Note No. C – 26/IHC – 51 of the 11th January, 1952, the Government of India are unable to agree with any construction of the Indo – Pakistan Permit agreement which would imply that agreement accepted the indefinite continuance of the unilateral closure by the Government of Pakistan of all land – routes between Punjab (I) and Punjab (P) with the exception of the Wagah – Attari route and at the same time cast an obligation on the Government of India of taking no reciprocal action on their side. Apart from the fact that such an arrangement would have been entirely one sided, there is no evidence that any such proposition was even advanced by the Pakistan delegation to the Permit Conference of June, 1951, let alone accepted by the Indian delegation. The Government of India would draw attention to the minutes of that Conference under item 16 of the agenda proposed by the Pakistan delegation. The relevant decision reached reads as follows:

“Both the delegations agreed that every applicant will have a right to indicate the route by which he will enter the other country and the route by which he wanted to return. The latter route may be different from the former. Permits will be granted for the journey accordingly. In addition, reasonable facilities should be provided in both the countries for a change in the route of the return journey”.

The above constitutes the substantive agreement. Obviously choice of the route by the applicant would have no meaning, if one Government had closed all routes except one. It was in this connection and with a view to give effect to the above agreement that the Indian representatives drew attention to the “recent communiqué from Lahore” closing all routes but one. The Pakistan representatives agreed “to reconsider the position and after taking a decision whether it was necessary to specify these points, lists of points suggested by each Government could be exchanged in case such specification was decided upon”. It is patent that two courses were open to the Government of Pakistan. They could have decided that specification of routes was not necessary, in which case they should have withdrawn the communiqué referred to above. In that event, since the Government of India had not at any stage shown any desire for specification of routes, all routes (and not merely Wagah – Attari and Gandasinghwala – Hussainiwala) would have been open to all travelers, in pursuance of the agreed decision quoted above. Or the Government of Pakistan having taken a decision that specification of routes was necessary, should have informed the Government of India accordingly, so that lists of routes suggested could be exchanged and an agreed list evolved. When the Pakistan Government took no action whatsoever and kept all routes but one unilaterally closed, it became necessary for the Government of India to take appropriate action on their side. The Government of India cannot agree that the Government of Pakistan can validly complain against this.

3. If however the point of the Government of Pakistan is that the obligations accepted by their representatives to the Permit Conference, vide the last two sentences of the minutes under item 16 of the Pakistan agenda, did not become operative till formal ratification by the Government of Pakistan, it should be equally obvious that any action taken by the Government of India before such formal ratification cannot be complained of on the basis of the agreement, as that agreement must become applicable to both parties at the same moment of time. The Government of India would also point out that even after the ratification by both Governments, the Government of Pakistan have taken no action either to withdraw the communiqué’ closing all routes except one or to proceed with the preparation of an agreed list of routes to be specified.

4. It appears from the Government of Pakistan’s Note under reply that closure of routes other than Wagah – Attari was resorted to by the Government of Pakistan with a view to effect economies in regard to staff for immigration and customs check – posts. This would imply that in the opinion of the Government of Pakistan present traffic between Punjab (I) and Punjab (P) does not require more than one convenient route. Without necessarily accepting this view the Government of India consider that even one land – route between Punjab (I) and Punjab (P) would confer great benefit and provide considerable relief to that section of the travelling public which cannot afford to travel by air. In view of this the Government of India suggest that the Ferozepore – Hussainiwala – Gandasinghwala – Kasur – Lahore route may be made available by both Governments for use by the travelling public on both sides. On the Indian side this route is most convenient since the railway runs upto within seven miles of the border. The Government of Pakistan’s point of view regarding economy of immigration and customs staff will also be met. The Government of India, therefore, hope that the Government of Pakistan will be able to accept this suggestion in the interests of the poorer and larger section of the travelling public.

5. The High Commission avail themselves the opportunity to renew to the Government of Pakistan the assurances of their highest consideration.

3435. Extract from the letter from Pakistan Foreign Minister Mohammad Zafrulla Khan to High Commissioner for India in Pakistan Mohan Sinha Mehta.

MOST IMMEDIATE

Dear Dr. Mehta,

* * * * * *

3. In the opinion of my Government, it is not necessary that the Governments of India and Pakistan should enter into a formal agreement on this subject. We consider that while wherever possible prior consultation and even agreement would be desirable, both Governments must retain the freedom to regulate the entry of foreign nationals into their respective territories as they might from time to time consider necessary.

4. There are one or two matters of special importance in regard to which a difference of opinion still unfortunately persists between your Government and the Government of Pakistan to which I would like to invite your Government’s attention. The first relates to the discriminatory treatment which your Government propose in the case of Pakistani nationals resident in West Pakistan. My Government have throughout followed the principle that the facilities to be granted to a person wishing to visit Pakistan or India should be determined primarily by his needs and not by his geographical location or domicile. We have, therefore, decided that Indian nationals falling in category ‘B’ of our scheme shall be granted facilities attaching to a visa of category ‘B’ irrespective of whether they reside in what you term the “Eastern Zone” or in any other part of India. The fact that their number may not be as large as that of persons residing in the “Eastern Zone” does not alter their need and is therefore in the opinion of my Government, not material. If, for instance, special facilities for visiting close relatives in India are to be provided to Pakistani nationals residing in East Pakistan, there can, in the opinion of my Government, be no justification for depriving Pakistani nationals resident in West Pakistan of identical facilities. You will, I am sure, appreciate that any discrimination in this respect will be open to serious public criticism. This is one occasion, it will not be possible for my Government of accept any such discrimination between Pakistani nationals resident in West Pakistan and those resident in East Pakistan.

5. The second matter, in respect of which there is still some difference of opinion between your Government and mine and to which my Government attach great importance, is the danger of applications for passports or holders of passports visiting either country being declared “intending evacuees” or “evacuees” within the meaning of the Evacuee Laws of India or Pakistan. In the view of my Government, unless the Evacuee Law is suitably amended, there would be nothing to prevent those charged with the administration of this law from considering an application for passport or a visit or visits under a valid passport to either country as evidence that such an applicant or holder of passport was an “intending evacuee” or “evacuee” within the mischief of the existing law. My Government, therefore, would be willing to undertake the necessary amendment in the Evacuee Law and I am to express the firm hope of the Government of Pakistan that the Government of India will agree to do likewise. My Government considers this essential, both to allay the possible misgivings of bona fide travelers to either country and to protect them from needless harassment by those charged with the administration of Evacuee Law. We consider this a logical and necessary consequence of the desire of both Governments to encourage and liberalise, to the maximum degree possible, the movement of bona fide travelers from one country to the other.

6. In view of the fact that the Government of India would not be in a position to introduce their own passport system until September next, my Government have agreed to postpone the introduction of their scheme until the 1st September, 1952.

7. We propose to announce this date as well as our scheme on 31st July and presume that the Government of India would wish to do likewise. Our communiqué on this subject will, besides containing full details of the scheme itself, confine itself to a brief statement to the effect that your Government have agreed to extend identical facilities to Pakistani nationals visiting India, provided that, your Government confirm this assumption. We propose to send a copy of this communiqué to your Government before its publication in the press. Although it may be of advantage from the public standpoint that any communiqué your Government may wish to issue should also issue simultaneously, it is not altogether necessary that the press communiqués to be issued by the two Governments should be identically worded or that they issue on the same date.

Yours sincerely,

Sd/- Zafrullah Khan

No. 30445. July 26, 1952

For Mehta from R.K. Nehru

Reference Zafrullah’s letter to you of 22nd July about passports. We are examining the draft rules of the Pakistan Government. Our detailed comments will follow. Meanwhile, we would like you to mention the following matters to Zafrullah:-

(i) Proposed date of introduction of passport system is 1st September. We have agreed to this, but it has been suggested to us that it will be convenient for people on both sides if a further postponement could be made till after Puja holidays. We support this suggestion strongly and shall be glad it Pakistan would agree to a further postponement so that people on both sides may be able to move across the border freely during the holidays.
(ii) We agree that there is NO need for a formal agreement and that each Government should frame its own rules which should be based on agreed principles. There must of course be some understanding that each Government will give prior notice to the other of any changes it proposes to make in its rules.

(iii) Pakistan Government have asked to confirm that facilities to be extended by us to Pakistan nationals visiting India will be identical with those to be extended by them to Indian nationals in the same categories who may be visiting Pakistan. We confirm their assumption, but there are certain points which need to be clarified.

(a) Border traffic:– If ten-mile limit is applied to border people of Assam hill districts, many persons living at a greater distance who normally market their produce in Pakistan may be deprived of this concession. We suggest that only that only restriction in their case should be production of evidence that normal market for their produce is neighbouring Pakistan border area. Similar facilities could be extended to people living on Pakistan side of this border. The term “only market” is too restrictive.

(b) We regret that Pakistan Government have NOT accepted the liberal visa system we proposed for traffic outside E. Zone. We were prepared to give single or multiple journey visas to all persons, depending on needs of each applicant. The three special E. Zone categories have NO meaning outside E. Zone. However, in order to reach an agreement, we are accepting Pakistan’s proposal on the clear understanding that where property is vested in a Custodian, the late owner CANNOT be held, for the propose of the passport rules, to have an interest in the property or to derive income from the property. The whole object of the special concession for property owners is to enable them to pay frequent visits to look after their property or to collect rents, etc. Where property is vested in Custodian, frequent visits for such a purpose are obviously unnecessary. This point will be clarified in our communiqué and also in passport rules.

(c) As regards intending evacuees, we have already explained that amendment of our evacuee law is quite unnecessary. Since the passport holder would be recognized as an Indian national, application for a visa for a visit to Pakistan could NOT by itself lead to the conclusion that the applicant is an evacuee or an intending evacuee.
We shall clarify this point in our communiqué and also in our passport rules. We hope this will meet the point raised by Zafrullah.

(d) As stated above, other points are under examination and we shall be communicating our views later.

3437. SECRET

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan Mohan Sinha Mehta to Pakistan Foreign Minister Mohammad Zafrulla Khan.

High Commission for India
Karachi

No. HC/52/11. 28th July 1952

Subject: Introduction of Passports Between India and Pakistan.

My dear Sir Mohammad Zafrulla Khan,

Your letter No. D.377/D12/SS/52, dated the 22nd July 1952, was received in our Chancery before my return to Karachi, and its contents were communicated to the Government of India. The draft Rules drawn up by Pakistan Government are being examined at Delhi. I am afraid they have not yet communicated to me their detailed comments, but I except them soon.

2. Meanwhile, I wish to request you to consider a few important points which have occurred to the Government of India. They are:

(1) The Government of India are willing to accept 1st of September as the date for the introduction of the Passport system. But it has been suggested to them that for people on both sides of the border it would be much more convenient if the date could be postponed till after the Durga Puja holidays which, I understand, occur in September. The Government of India strongly supports this suggestion and would be glad if Pakistan Government would agree to a postponement of the date so that people on both sides might be able to go across freely for the holidays. As you are doubtless aware, Durga Puja is a very important festival in Bengal.
(2) You expressed in paragraph 3 of your letter the opinion of your Government that it was not necessary for the two Governments to enter into a formal agreement on this subject. The Government of India are agreeable to this. Both Governments would retain full freedom to frame their own rules for regulating the entry of foreign nationals into their territories. These rules, however, should be based on agreed principles and further each Government will give prior notice to the other of any changes they propose to make in their own rules.

(3) With regard to the point raised in paragraph 2 of your letter about facilities to Pakistan Nationals wishing to visit India, the Government of India would extend to them the same facilities which the Government of Pakistan would grant to the Indian nationals in the same categories who would be visiting Pakistan. This assumption will be subject to the following considerations which require to be clarified:

(a) Border Traffic (vide paragraph 2(1) Category ‘A’ Visa in your Scheme): A strict application of the ten-mile limit in the case of border people of Assam Hill Districts will defeat its purpose in the case of many persons living at a slightly greater distance than ten miles, but normally marketing their produce in Pakistan. It is hoped that the Government of Pakistan do not intend to deprive them of this concession. I would suggest that the only restriction in their case should be the production of evidence that normal market for their produce lies in the neighbouring Pakistan border area. Similar concession and facilities could be extended to people living on the Pakistan side of the border. The condition “the only markets” used in 2 (1) (c) in your draft Rules is much too restrictive and is likely to fail in its object for an appreciable number of persons.

(b) It is a matter of great regret to us that Pakistan Government have not accepted the liberal system of visas proposed by the Government of India for traffic outside the Eastern Zone. The Government of India proposed to give single or multiple journey visas to all applicants according to the needs of each individual person. The three special categories applicable to the Eastern Zone are meaningless outside that region. However, in order that arrangement could be reached, the Government of India would be willing to accept Pakistan’s proposal on the clear understanding that where property is vested in a Custodian, the late owner would not, for the purpose of the Passport and Visa Rules, be held to have any interest in the property or to any claim to derive income on that property. The whole object of the special concession for owners of property in Eastern Zone was to enable them to make frequent visits in order to look after their property, to receive rents etc., but it is obvious that when property is vested in a Custodian, such visits are unnecessary, I trust you will accept the soundness of this position. The Government of India will clarify this point in their communiqué. The Passport Rules will also make it clear.

(c) With regard to the subject of “intending evacuees”, it has already been explained that the amendment of the Evacuee law is unnecessary in connection with the Passport Rules, because the holder of an Indian Passport would be considered an Indian National. His application for a visa to visit Pakistan could not, in itself, lead to the conclusion that he was an evacuee or an intending evacuee. This point will also be explained in the communiqué which would be issued by the Government of India and in their Rules. I hope this removes your apprehension on this subject.

3. I trust the views expressed above will be acceptable to the Government of Pakistan.

Yours sincerely

Sd/- Mohan Sinha Mehta

Extracts from the Letter from Ministry of External Affairs to High Commissioner for India in Pakistan.

New Delhi, July 31, 1952.

No.31/82/NGO/52 July 31, 1952

SUBJECT: PASSPORTS

Dear Dr. Mehta,

2. I enclose herewith our comments on the Pakistan scheme. We attach considerable importance to the points raised, particularly the provisions regarding (1) seaman, (2) guides, witness and relatives in connection with recovery work, (3) mechanics of return of Indian nationals in Pakistan to India, (4) mechanics for travel to India of non-Muslims evacuees from Pakistan, (5) elimination of personal attendance at police offices, (6) facilities for non-diplomatic staff of our missions in Pakistan, and (7) travel facilities for importers and exporters of both countries who have no branches in the either country. Such questions as the types of passports to be issued and the period of their validity, the authorities to whom power for issue of passports or visa is given, the passport and visa fees to be charged, etc., are obviously matters for decision by each country, but as a matter of courtesy advance information to the other country may be given. A few points are for clarification only while in a few others we have made suggestions for the consideration of the Government of Pakistan. We would suggest that a copy of the enclosure to this letter may be, formally or informally, passed on the Government of Pakistan for their information. Subject to the comments made by us, we agree to give Pakistan national visiting India facilities identical to those provided for in the Pakistan scheme.

3. A point on which we should like you to let us know Pakistan’s reactions at a very early date is whether they are prepared to open their visa offices at Shillong, Jalpaiguri, Bombay, Karimagnj and Dhubri, irrespective of whether or not they want us to open any additional visa offices in Pakistan.

4. A point of great importance, not dealt with in the enclosures is that of the date on which the Passport System should be introduced. In this connection the following facts may be represented to the Government of Pakistan.

When we mentioned the 15th of September at the Karachi Conference of May, 1952 as the date on which we were likely to be ready, we presumed that the consultation between the two Governments would conclude at an early date and the final form of the system to be adopted by each country would be available shortly thereafter. As it has actually turned out, the discussions have taken much more time than was expected. In particular the Pakistan reply to your d. o. letter of 16th June, 1952 to Sir Mohd. Zafrullah was not received by us till the 24th July, 1952. In the absence of any finality about the types of visas to be issued and other details of the system to be adopted, it has not been possible for us to finalise and print the various forms, registers, etc., in connection with the issue of passports or visas. It has also not been possible for us to finalise the staff required in our missions in Pakistan, particularly at Dacca. Now that the broad details of the scheme have become available, this work is being taken in hand. It will, however, be impossible for us to print off the hundreds of thousands of forms and registers, to obtain financial sanction for the staff and to select, appoint and place them in position by the 1st September, 1952. Even if we somehow do so, it will mean that passports will begin to be issued on the 1st September and it will take a few days before the applicants obtain the passports. It will then take some more days before the passport holders obtain the visas. It is only then that they will be able to travel. Meanwhile movement will practically cease. This interruption of movement will not only cause immense hardship to large numbers of people but for many days trains, planes, steamers and ships between the two countries will have to run empty, causing considerable financial loss to both Governments and also to the national of each country. Last but not least there is the consideration that the Puja holidays are from the 23rd September to the 3rd October. As the Government of Pakistan must be aware movement between East Bengal and the neighbouring States is at its peak during these holidays. This means that if we start off the system on the 1st September with inadequate preparation, we shall be overwhelmed by the combination of the ordinary traffic and the special traffic during the Pujas. In view of this we suggest that both sides should start the issue of passports on the 1st September; both sides should equally arrange that their visa offices in the other country start functioning on the 15th September. This will give people time to get passports between the 15th September and visa between 15th September and 4th October. The actual prohibition of entry into either country without a passport and visa should come into effect from the midnight between the 4th October and 5th October. This will ensure that there is a smooth changeover from the present position to the new system, without causing interruption of movement and financial loss to the railways and other transport concerns. Also the Puja holidays will be over and we shall avoid the rush of people traveling during these holidays. This minor postponement of about 5 weeks will be greatly appreciated by people in Eastern India. We hope that the Government of Pakistan will appreciate that the difficulties mentioned above are very real. Except for these purely factual difficulties we would have been most glad to commence the system on 1st September. If Pakistan now insists on starting the system on 1st September, we shall no doubt accept that date but subject naturally to the difficulties which will inevitably crop up by reason of inadequate preparation on our part, arising from the unanticipated delay in finalization of the passport scheme itself.

5. This letter and enclosure have been seen by Shri R.K. Nehru.

Yours sincerely
(Y. K. Puri)
Deputy Secretary.

COMMENTS ON THE PAKISTAN SCHEME.

1. Para 1:-
   (i) The first sentence mentions “a date to be notified” from which the Passport System will come into force. The third and fourth sentences however refer to “prior to the issue of the ordinance” and “the date of the above notification”. It is suggested that the latter two terms should be replaced by the words “the notified date”.

   (ii) The reference to “Re-entry permits issued to them at the time of their departure” is not understood. It is presumed that in West Pakistan, Indian nationals who have entered on the strength of permits issued to them by the Pakistan permit issuing authorities in India, will only need to obtain the return permit from the Indian diplomatic missions in West Pakistan, while in East Pakistan Indian nationals, who will not be in possession of any permits or other documents will be able to return to India on the strength of the repatriation certificate issued to them by the Indian diplomatic mission at Dacca. These presumptions may please be confirmed.

2. Para 2 – Category ‘A’ Visas:-
   (i) According to the Pakistan scheme only those Indian nationals will be eligible for Category A visas who live in Indian territory within 10 miles of the East Bengal border. This condition may be applied to cultivators and artisans, but should not be applied to the residents of the Khasi & Jaintia Hills, the Garo Hills, and the Lushai Hills of Assam, who have to come to the border zone of East Bengal to market their produce. There would be no objection if the areas in East Bengal to which they are limited are restricted to a distance not exceeding 10 miles from the borders.

(ii) In sub-para 1(i) (c) the word “only” should be replaced by the word “normal”. The reference should be not merely to agricultural produce but also to horticultural and forest produce.

(iii) Para I (iii) (c):
The exemption mentioned will presumably not apply in those cases where a Pakistan national is already in India on date of introduction of the scheme and who does not leave India within the three months thereafter.

3. Para 2 – Category B visas:

Sub-para (i) (a)
There should be a clear understanding that where property is vested in a Custodian of Evacuee Property, the owner cannot be held, for the purpose of the passport rules to have an interest in the property or to derive income from the property. This will be made clear in the Indian scheme.

Sub-para (i) (b)
The inclusion of the husband and wife in the definition of near relatives is not understood. Normally a husband and wife have the same nationality, particularly under Indian and Pakistan conditions. Of course it is possible that one of the two may already be on a visit to the other country and the other spouse may wish to make a visit to the same place in the other country to meet his wife/her husband and other relatives. In such cases the need of the husband/wife will be met by a single journey visa and there will be no necessity for a visa for one year for 8 journeys. There may be a few cases in which the husband is continuously living in one country and the wife in the other, but such cases are exceptional in which there are special considerations. The Government of India consider that such exceptional cases should be dealt with ad hoc on the merits of each case and that there is no necessity to include husband and wife in the definition of near relatives.

Sub-para (i) (c):
The phrase “or other recognized institution” is ambiguous. It is not clear by whom the institution has to be recognized. It is therefore suggested that this phrase should be replaced by “limited companies or registered firms”.
4. Para 2 (III) Category ‘C’ Visas:

It had been agreed at an earlier stage that personal attendance at the office of the Superintendent of Police or at a police station will not be necessary and reports of arrival and departure may be made in writing. The Government of India consider that in order to avoid harassment to travelers, personal attendance at police offices should be dispensed with and in all cases where reports of arrival and departure to the police are necessary, such reports should be made in writing.

5. Para 2 (IV) Category ‘D’ Visas:

(i) Officials:

“With the concurrence of a Government in Pakistan” is not clear. In their scheme the Government of India propose to use the phrase “traveling on duty with the Government of India or a State Government in India or for meetings with officers of such Governments.”

(ii) Diplomatic visas:

The Government of India agree that diplomatic visas should be issued to officers with diplomatic status, while ordinary visas, free of charge, should be issued to the non-diplomatic staff of the diplomatic mission. The Government of India are, however, of the view that in both cases the visa should be valid for any number of journeys during the period of its validity, which should be one year at a time during the posting of the officer in question in that diplomatic mission, and should be valid for travel by any of the routes open to the general public. The visas both for diplomatic officers and non-diplomatic staff should be valid for the whole country or the province or State to which the Head of the mission is accredited, although actual movements of the officers will be subject to such arrangements as may have been made by the country or Province/States of accreditation. The Pakistan scheme does not make it clear what type of visa will be issued to non-diplomatic staff and whether fees will be charged.

6. Para 2 (V) Category ‘E’ Visas:

(i) The Pakistan scheme provides only for Indian nationals working in or with a business concern located or having a branch in Pakistan. No provisions have been made for persons engaged in import and export trade without having a branch in the other country. Absence of facilities for importers and exporters to visit the other country frequently will have a deleterious effect on the Import trade of both countries. It is suggested that on both sides provision should be made for the issue of multi-journey permits to importers and exporters at the decision of the visa issuing authority.

(ii) As mentioned earlier attendance at the office of the Superintendent of Police or a police station should be eliminated and reports of arrival and departure should be permitted to be made in writing.

7. Para 2 (VI) Category ‘F’ Visas:-

(i) As mentioned earlier, cases in which the husband is a citizen of one country and the wife of the other will be most exceptional. The Government of India do not therefore consider it necessary to include them among those eligible for Category ‘F’ Visas. Such cases can be considered ad hoc on merits.

(ii) When a person is eligible for a Category ‘F’ visa of grounds of being employed in the other country, his wife and children should also be eligible for Category ‘F’ visas so that they can stay with him during the course of his employment.

8. (a) Paragraph 4 (ii):-

The implication of this is not clear. So far as the Government of India are concerned, the exemption from the necessity of a transit visa will apply only to those cases in which the passport holder travels by a through aircraft, train, steamer or ship which starts from a place outside India and goes on to another place outside India. The journey would not be regarded as otherwise than “through” simply because there is a change of gauge on the railway or from one plane to another, provided that the scheduled interval between arrival and departure does not exceed 24 hours and provided also that through tickets or irrevocable vouchers for journey by a specific train or plane are in the possession of the traveler. They will not however regard a journey as through journey, exempt from the necessity of a transit visa, if the traveler enters by road or otherwise than by an aircraft, train, steamer or ship. The exemption from visa will also not apply where the journey is to involve a change one mode of transport to another.

(b) Paragraph 4 Note (3):-

It is not clear why this Note should apply only to those coming by sea. A transit visa will be required in all cases other than those specifically exempted.

9. Paragraph 5 (2):-

The route between East Pakistan and the neighbouring Indian States are now under correspondence between the Government of East Bengal and those States.
It is suggested that until an agreed list has been finalized, Appendix B should not be made public. Similarly with regard to West Pakistan the question of the Wagha-Attari and the Gandashingwala-Husainiwala routes is separately under correspondence with the Government of Pakistan.

10. Paragraph 5(4):

The Government of India are not in favour of delegating powers to issue visas of Category ‘A’ to District Magistrates of the border districts of West Bengal, Assam and Tripura. All visas for India will be issued by Indian diplomatic missions in Pakistan. If it is necessary, on the ground of numbers, to decentralize the issue of visas, the Government of India would be ready to consider the opening of branch India visa offices in such places in Pakistan as the Government of Pakistan may suggest. The Government of India on their side would like the Government of Pakistan to open their visa offices at Shillong, Jalpaigure, Bombay, Karimganj (Assam) and Dhubri (Assam).

11. Para 5 (7)

The Government of India have decided that the fee for a visa to visit India will be Re.1/- (Pak) or Rs 1/7/3 (Indian) for each year or a portion of the year for which the visa will be valid. It will be open to the applicant for an ‘A’ Category visa to have his visa valid for a period of five years or for any period less than five years at his option.

12. Para 6 (2):

It is true that in international passports the wife can be included in the passport of the husband. But a large number of travelers between India and Pakistan will be of a type different from those who normally go abroad to other countries. It has been noticed that in many cases a husband who comes to India with his wife and children has to go back alone to Pakistan due to various reasons, such as sickness of one of the children or the wife or by reason of some pressing business in Pakistan. In such cases the wife and children are left in India without any travel document and usually experience great hardship due to that fact. In some cases permits for return to Pakistan have been refused to such stranded families, while in others the permits were obtained after great delay. In view of these facts, the Government of India are of the view that each adult should take a separate passport.

13. Para 6 (8):

Application forms for visas for India are to be decided and printed by the Government of India. These forms will be available on payment from the Indian diplomatic missions in Pakistan. It appears therefore that the reference in the Pakistan scheme to the availability of these forms with passport issuing authorities and post offices in East Pakistan and their price are based on some misapprehension. The Government of India presume that the Government of Pakistan will similarly make available a sufficient number of the forms of application for a visa to Pakistan at their diplomatic missions in India.

14. Para 7 (3):

Subject to the C.D.C (Nullie) carrying a photograph and the name, father’s name, permanent address and age of the holder, the Government of India will recognize the Continuous Discharge Certificate (Nullie) as the equivalent of a passport in the following cases:-

(a) When a Pakistani seaman arrives at a port in India as a member of the crew of the ship which bring him. In such cases neither a passport nor a visa will be required and he will be issued a landing permit, on the deposit of his C.D.C. on the same basis as to other foreign seamen.

(b) Where a Pakistani seaman arrives as a member of the crew of the vessel bringing him, and is discharged at an Indian port, he should be issued a landing permit and will be allowed to leave for Pakistan by sea, in which case a passport or a visa will not be required.

(c) Pakistani seamen coming to India to seek employment as seamen will require a visa, but for purposes of the grant of the visa the Nullie or C.D.C. will be treated as equivalent of a passport. Visas on the basis of the C.D.C. will, similarly, be issued to Pakistani seamen who have been serving on Indian articles to enable them to return to their homes in Pakistan or to re-enter into India for further employment.

(d) Where Pakistani seamen signed on Pakistan articles desire to come to India, otherwise than as crew of a ship for which they have signed and propose to join that ship at an Indian port, they will require to be in possession of an Indian visa. This will be issued, on the basis of their C.D.C. only in those cases in which the Director-General of Shipping, Government of India, has given special permission for their joining a ship at an Indian port, without complying with the requirements of the Indian law.

(e) In all other cases a Pakistani seaman must be in possession of a valid passport and an Indian visa at the time of entry into India.

15. Para 8 (1):

Attention is invited in this connection to note No. F.95(1)/52-Gen. of July 1st, 1952 from the High Commissioner for India in Pakistan, Karachi, to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs & Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan. The point raised by the Government of Pakistan is already covered by the existing Evacuee Property Law in India. There would be no objection to clarifying it again in the Government of India’s communiqué on the Passport System or in their Passport Rules.

16. Para 8 (2):-

The Pakistan scheme does not take into account the fact that guides, witnesses and relatives visiting Pakistan or India in connection with recovery of abducted persons have to do so at extremely short notice and it will be extremely difficult to issue them regular passports at such short notice. It is therefore suggested that:

(i) the High Powered Officer for recovery of abducted women of each country or officers to whom he delegates this power, may be authorized to issue emergency certificates to such guides, witness and relatives in lieu of a passport. The emergency certificate will bear the photograph of the holder and other necessary particulars, and will be valid for two months only.

(ii) The emergency certificates will be valid for entry into the other country only after a visa has been obtained from the diplomatic mission of that country.

(iii) The Government of India agree that the visa should be a single journey visa specifying the places to be visited, with a special endorsement authorizing the Superintendents of Police in charge of recovery work to take them out wherever they want to go, accompanied by the police, for the purpose of recovery cases.

(iv) A guide, witness or relative in possession of an emergency certificate issued by one country, duly visaed by the diplomatic mission of the other country, should be exempted from having a passport. In other words the proposal merely is that for guides, witnesses and relatives in connection with recovery work the passport should be replaced by a short-term emergency certificate which can be issued more easily and at less cost.

17. Evacuees:-

(i) When a non-Muslims wishes to evacuate from Pakistan to India, it will be necessary for him to obtain the consent of the Government of India to his entry into India. This consent may be given in a general manner or in specific cases. Mechanics have however to be provided for his journey to India when it has been agreed to by the Govt. of India. At present such journeys are performed in two ways. Firstly the evacuee may enter the evacuee camp of the Deputy High Commissioner for India at Lahore. It is entirely in the discretion of the Deputy High Commissioner for India at Lahore whether he accepts any non-Muslims for entry into the evacuee camp for subsequent evacuation. The Camp Commandant prepares a list of the evacuees traveling by a particular convoy, which is countersigned by an officer of the Punjab (Pak) police. The evacuees are then allowed to enter India on the basis of a copy of the countersigned list being lodged with the check-post of entry. The Government of India propose to continue this procedure.

(ii) The second case is which an evacuee travels from Pakistan to India under his own arrangements. Hitherto there has been no Permit System for persons coming from East Pakistan, while in respect of persons evacuated from West Pakistan the Indian diplomatic missions in Pakistan have been issuing "a permit for settlement in India" If passports are required, it is not clear which country will issue the passport. In regard to a non-Muslims evacuee desirous of migrating to India, the Government of India cannot issue a passport because until the migration has taken place, he is neither a resident nor a citizen of India. If the Government of Pakistan issue him a passport, he can get on this passport only a visa for a limited stay in India.

It is not the Government of India's intention to suggest that any person should be free to enter either country if he so desires. Obviously he can enter either country only with the consent of that country. But once that consent has been given, the mechanics of permitting him to travel have to be devised. It is with this view that the Indian and Pakistan delegations at Karachi had agreed that:-

(i) those traveling by official convoys of the Deputy High Commissioner for India and Pakistan at Lahore and Jullundur respectively should be exempted altogether, because each Deputy High Commissioner will include in the convoys only those persons whom his Government is willing to allow entry into the country. The existing system of countersigned lists is working well and there seems no reason to disturb it,

(ii) those who travel otherwise than by official convoys will be allowed to enter only if they are in possession of a certificate issued to them by the diplomatic mission of the country to which they wish to migrate.

The Government of India therefore suggest that the arrangements verbally agreed to at Karachi may be allowed to stand. If however the Pakistan Government wish to make no reference to evacuees in their scheme, they may kindly confirm that in respect of persons migrating from Pakistan to India they will not insist on their being in possession of passports if the Government of India allow them to enter India on the basis of certificates issued to them by the Indian diplomatic missions in Pakistan or on inclusion in the convoy of the Deputy High Commissioner for India in Pakistan at Lahore.

18. Visa applications:

The Government of Pakistan have suggested that the applicant for a visa should apply in triplicate, so that one copy of the visa application, presumably attested by the visa officer, can be used for registration at the check post of entry and the other copy sent to the Superintendent of Police of the first district visited in the other country. It is presumed that the purpose of using one copy of the application form for registration and of sending another copy to the Superintendent of Police concerned is to enable the S.P. and other authorities to be in a position to check the movements of the applicant or to trace him out if necessary. The Government of India have no objection to the suggested procedure, but consider that mere copies of visa application form will not be adequate for the purpose for which they are meant unless each copy is accompanied by one copy of the applicant’s photograph. They have therefore decided that each applicant for a visa should furnish as many copies of his photographs as the copies of the visa application form which he is required to submit. The Government of India also do not see any reason why applicants for Category ‘A’ Visas should also not submit their application in triplicate and furnish two copies of their photographs.

19. Period of validity of transit visas:-

The Government of India consider that 14 days is too short, considering that persons going abroad to foreign countries often wish to meet their relatives in India/Pakistan on their way to catch planes or ships. It is suggested that the permissible period may be raised to 30 days at the discretion of the visa issuing authority.

SECRET

Karachi, August 1, 1952.

High Commissioner for India
Karachi

No. HC/52/11. 1st August 1952

Subject: Introduction of Passports between India and Pakistan.

My dear Sir Mohammad Zafrulla Khan,

In continuation of my Secret letter No. HC/52/11, dated the 30th July, I herewith enclose the comments of the Government of India on the Scheme drawn up by your Government. I had promised to forward them to you today.

2. I trust that when read them, the views of the Government of India will be found acceptable by you and by your Government. In fact, if you will permit me to say so, some of these have already been discussed between us and agreed to by you; for example, (a) the inclusion of residents of the Khasi and Jaintia Hills, the Garo Hills and the Lushai Hills of Assam in Category ‘A’ Visas, (b) the desirability of having separate Passports for husband and wife, and (c) saving the intending travelers from the harassment and delay caused by personal attendance at Police Office.

3. May I draw your attention to paragraph 17 in the Note of the Government of India. This meets the cases which are likely to arise in the future. I presume that your Government will gladly accept the proposals made in the Note. It will not be considered a controversial point. It will be found that the Government of India have met in a liberal spirit the substance of the proposals made by your Government with regard to seamen. Their proposals are well-considered and will meet all legitimate requirements. In other matters also the Note makes liberal provisions and after all they will be worked more or less on a basis of reciprocity.

4. There is one important point which calls for careful consideration, namely, the date on which the new arrangements should be brought into force. It will be recollected by you and the Government of Pakistan that on this question all along we, on our side, have thought of the period of time likely to be taken in preparation for bringing the new scheme into operation. It was on that basis that at the Conference held here in the month of May, the middle of September was suggested as the suitable date for the commencement of the scheme. As it has however turned out, the discussions have taken much more time than was expected. Your reply to my letter of the 16th June was received by us on the afternoon on the 22nd July and reached the Government of India on the 24th July 1952. In the absence of any finality about the types of visas to be issued and other details of the system to be accepted, it was not possible for us to have the various forms, registers etc. printed in connection with the Passports. Similarly, the question of the necessary staff in our missions in Pakistan, particularly at Dacca, has not been finalized. This work is being taken in hand. But it will be impossible to have the hundreds of thousands of forms and registers ready and select, appoint and place the necessary staff in position by the 1st of September. Even if the staff were there, it will only mean that the Passports will begin to be issued on the 1st of September. But some time will pass before applicants obtain Passports. Some more days will pass before the Passport holders will be able to obtain visas without which they will not be able to travel. In the meantime, movement of people will practically cease. This interruption of normal travel will cause immense hardship to large numbers of people and for many days it is inevitable that trains, planes, ships and steamers between the two countries will run empty. This would cause considerable loss to the nationals of the two countries and both the Governments.

5. Then I would further urge on you the consideration that I have already placed before you, namely, the Puja holidays which, I understand, occur from 23rd September to 3rd October. In connection with this festival, as your Government are fully aware, there is considerable movement between East Bengal and the neighbouring States of India. If we start the system on the 1st of September with presumably inadequate preparation, we shall be overwhelmed by the combination of the ordinary traffic and the special Puja traffic.

6. In view of all these circumstances, I would suggest that both sides could start the issue of Passport on the 1st of September; both the Governments should also arrange with their respective sides that their Visa Offices in the other country start functioning about the 15th September. That would give people time to get Passports in the first half of September, and visas between the 15th of September and the 4th of October. The actual enforcement of the new regulations, namely prohibition of entry into either country without a Passport and a proper Visa should come into effect form the 5th October. This will effect a smooth change-over from the present position to the new system without causing (a) interruption of movement and consequential hardship, (b) financial loss to the railways and other transport concerns, (c) unmanageable pressure of work on the administration and visa offices in both countries, and (d) the extraordinary rush of the traveling public during the Puja holidays will be easily met. If this suggestion is accepted, the introduction of the new system will be spread over a period of five weeks which should not matter much. There is every advantage in its favour. In any case it is inconceivable that on the date fixed, particularly if it is the first of September, all the arrangements for enforcing the new regulations would be ready.

7. I do hope the Pakistan Government would appreciate this point and the difficulties mentioned above, which are very real, will be avoided. But for these considerations which seem to be insurmountable, the Government of India would have gladly commenced the scheme on the 1st of September.

Yours sincerely

Sd/- Mohan Sinha Mehta

3440. SECRET

Letter from Pakistan Foreign Minister Mohammad Zafrulla Khan to High Commissioner for India in Pakistan Mohan Sinha Mehta.

Karachi, August 13, 1952.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs & Commonwealth Relations
Karachi

Dear Dr. Mehta,

Will you please refer your demi-official letters No. HC/52/11, dated the 28th and 30th July, and the 1st August, 1952, in regard to the introduction of a passport and visa system between India and Pakistan?

Your request for postponement of date of introduction of the Scheme, for reasons among others of the coincidence of the Durga Puja Festival in Bengal, and your suggestion that the issue of passports and visas may commence from the 1st September, has received my careful consideration.
I agree that both Governments will issue passports and visas from the 1st September. The date proposed by you viz. the 5th October, for the scheme to brought into operations seems to be perhaps an odd date and it would, in my opinion, be better if we start either on the 1st or the 15th October, 1952. Taking all the circumstances into consideration I propose to fix the 15th October as the date on which the scheme will come into full force. This should more than meet the proposal made by the Government of India.

The other points raised in your letters under reference are answered in the comments enclosed herewith. You will observe that we have accepted almost all of your suggestions in our desire to ensure that the least possible inconvenience is caused to genuine travelers who visit Pakistan on business or for other good reasons.

I am disappointed, however, to note that our scheme, which provided the maximum facilities compatible with national security for the citizens of India desiring to enter Pakistan, has not been approved in full by your Government. I note with particular regret that the Government of India do not approve of our suggestion to decentralize the issue of passports and visas by delegating the authority to the District Magistrates and Sub-Divisional Officers in border districts of East Bengal. If serious hardship is not to be caused to persons who have to pay daily visits to either country for earning their livelihood, our proposal deserves to be accepted. In my view the rejection of this proposal will result in much delay in the issue of the travel documents by creating a bottleneck and will by no means be conducive to making travel between our two countries easier. I would, there-fore, strongly urge reconsideration of the matter by your Government.

I am also disappointed that the Government of Pakistan should have no alternative left but to conform to the proposal of the Government of India in regard to the scale of visa fees. We had fixed the fee of Re.1/- only for a visa valid or five years keeping in mind the slender financial resources of the labourers, the cultivators and petty traders residing in the border areas. There is still time to scale down the fees, and I would suggest for the consideration of your Government that our original proposal be accepted.

In the case of facilities for seamen also I am sorry to note the liberal provisions for facilitating movements of seamen have not found favour with your Government and in this case, too, we will have to restrict the facilities originally provided for this class in our scheme.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

Sd/- Zafrulla Khan
His Excellency,
Dr. M.S. Mehta,
High Commissioner for India in Pakistan,
Karachi.

Comments on the enclosure to letter dated the 1st August, 1952, from His Excellency the High Commissioner for India.

1. Para, 1:
   (i) The suggestion is accepted.
   (ii) The presumption is confirmed.

2. Para, 2 Category ‘A’ Visas:
   (i) It is not considered necessary to alter this clause, but the Pakistan Visa Issuing Authority will be instructed to consider any hard cases, on their merits, of Indian residents who may be living just outside the ten-mile limit.
   (ii) For reasons explained above, the suggestion is unacceptable.
   (iii) Para. (i) (iii) (c):
       The Presumption is not confirmed. The intention is that all visa holders of this category will be exempted from registration.

3. Para, 2 Category ‘B’ Visas:
   (a) The Government of Pakistan accept the view of the Government of India in regard to the evacuee property.
   (b) There appears to be no justification for excluding husband and wife from the concession made to those who wish to visit their near relatives in the other country. It is conceivable that the husband and wife may be in different places at a given time and may wish to make use of this concession.
   (c) The suggestion is accepted.

4. Para. 2(iii) Category ‘C’ Visa:
   The suggestion is accepted. Reports of arrival and departure to the police will be made in writing.
5. Para. 2(iv) Category ‘D’ Visas:

(i) The suggestion is accepted.

(ii) The diplomatic staff will be granted visas gratis valid for any number of journeys during the period of its validity which should be one year at a time. Non-diplomatic staff will be granted a visa gratis valid for any number of journeys during the period of its validity which should be one year at a time, but such staff will be liable to registration and the visa will be valid only for stay at places specified therein. Diplomatic and non-diplomatic visa holders may travel by any of the routes open to the general public.

6. Para. 2(v) Category ‘E’ Visas:

(i) It is considered that the requirements of the export and import trade will be adequately met by importers and exporters applying for visas of category ‘C’.

(ii) The suggestion is accepted.

7. Para 2(v) (i) Category ‘F’ Visas:

(i) The suggestion is unacceptable for reasons mentioned earlier.

(ii) The suggestion is accepted.

(iii) The suggestion is accepted.

8. (a) Para. 4(2):

The suggestion is accepted.

(b) Para.4 Note (3):

The suggestion is accepted.

9. Para. 5(2):

For the convenience of intending travelers, it is proposed to make public the routes mentioned in appendix ‘B’ but the Government of Pakistan would be prepared to amend the list in the light of any subsequent changes agreed upon by the two Governments. If the scheme is published without specifying the routes, the public would remain in the dark about a most impotent aspect of the scheme.

10. Para. 5(4):

The Government of Pakistan do not propose to set up visa offices in Indian territory at this stage. It is suggested that the Government of India accept the Scheme of delegating powers to District Magistrates because such a scheme would not only be economical but would also ensure expeditious grant of visas to a category of people in whose case delay may cause much hardship and serious loss.

11. Para. 5(7):
The Government of Pakistan are prepared to charge the same fee as the Government of India, although it is considered that for persons belonging to category ‘A’ the charge is excessive.

12. Para. 6(2):
The Government of Pakistan have no objection to the Government of India adopting the system of requiring each adult to take out a separate passport. The Government of Pakistan, however, do not feel that any alteration in their scheme, in this respect, is necessary.

13. Para. 6(8):
The Government of Pakistan accept the position as stated, but suggest that it should be possible for either Government to buy in bulk visa application forms from the diplomatic missions of the other Government and to distribute them in the manner stated in paragraph 6.

14. Para. 7(3):
In clause (b) the words “by sea” should be substituted by words “by sea, land or air”.

In order to prevent any hardship being caused to seamen or disturbance to sea traffic, it is suggested that clause (c) and (d) in para. 14 may be further discussed between the Ministries of Commerce of the two Governments. Meanwhile, the clauses are accepted as they stand.

15. Para. 8(1):
It is suggested that in addition to the issuing of communiqué, the Government of India may suitably amend their Notification No. SR/260, dated the 3rd July 1950, so as to make it applicable to holders of Indian passports who are granted a visa to enter Pakistan under any of the specified categories.

16. Para. 8(2):
The suggestion is accepted. Short-term Emergency Certificates, valid for a single journey only, will be issued in such cases.

17. EVACUEES:
The position is accepted, but it is not proposed to include these provisions specifically in the Pakistan Scheme.
18. Visa applications:
   The suggestion is accepted.

19. Period of validity of transit visas:
   The suggestion is accepted.

GENERAL:
Wherever a visa holder is required to report his arrival, he will also be required to report his departure 24 hours before he is due to leave.

3441. Note from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Home Minister.

New Delhi, August 16, 1952.

I do not know exactly what restrictions Pakistan propose to impose on the movements of Indians going to Pakistan. We have every moral right to impose similar restrictions here. But this competition in imposing disabilities has usually worked to our disadvantage, because Pakistan always goes a few steps further or stricter. We have always to remember that in the Eastern Pakistan the minority community is likely to suffer because of this.

There is no great hurry about this matter. It is quite possible that the new passport regulations will not come into force for another two months or more. Even if they come into force earlier, no harm is likely to result if we delay any particular action for a short time. I should like to know precisely what the Pakistan restrictions are in East and West and how far we can apply some of them, so as not to come in the way of our own people in the Eastern zone.

The Foreigners Act (I write from memory) is an out-of-date and undesirable piece of legislation, which anyhow should be revised. What is necessary is that we should have the power under it to expel any foreigner, whoever he might be, and I would be prepared to include all citizens of Commonwealth countries. This cannot be done in the present Foreigners Act. This Act also imposes all kinds of troublesome restrictions on foreigners. I have often had

The High Commissioner Mr. Mehta forwarded these comments of the Pakistan Government to the Ministry of External Affairs in his letter of 15th August. The Commonwealth Secretary Mr. R. K. Nehru in his reply dated the 19th August described the Pakistan response satisfactory.

Karachi, August 17, 1952.

PRESS COMMUNIQUE

The Scheme of the Government of Pakistan for the issue of passports and visas for travel between India and Pakistan, in replacement of the present Permit System, is hereby announced for public.

2. For the convenience of intending travelers, the passport and visa issuing authorities in Pakistan, the Pakistan High Commission at Delhi and Deputy High Commissioners at Calcutta and Jullundur will receive applications for passports and visas from the first September, 1952. The system will operate fully from the 15th October. The issue of permits will cease from the latter date.

3. Formalities have been reduced to the minimum and Government have kept in view the actual needs of the different categories of persons wishing to visit Pakistan and made provision accordingly, for granting visas. In particular, the procedure for registration and report to the Police, in case where it is required, has been greatly simplified.

4. Arrangements have been made for the quick disposal of applications of those who derive income from immovable property, receive pensions, and visit relatives. Facilities have also been provided for officials and diplomats, and those entering or staying in Pakistan for service in Government departments, or registered or private concerns and transport workers, businessmen and so on. Special facilities have been provided for cultivators, labourers, and petty traders residing in border areas, who earn their livelihood within ten miles of the border.

5. Pakistan nationals who migrated to West Bengal, Assam and Tripura, owing to communal disturbances of 1950, and are now residing in India will be... able to return to Pakistan without passports. They will, however, have to obtain Repatriation Certificates from the Pakistan Mission in Calcutta, on production of evidence that they fall within this category. Abducted women and children, now residing in India, will be able to return to Pakistan with Emergency Certificates to be issued by the Deputy High Commissioner of Pakistan, Jullundur.

6. Indian nationals, who came to Pakistan before the introduction of this system, may stay during the currency of their permits but not for more than three months. Should they wish to stay for more than three months they should obtain a passport from their diplomatic mission in Pakistan and a visa from the Pakistan passport authorities.

7. A passport which may be valid for a maximum period of five years will cost Re.3/- and the fee for all types of visas will be Re.1/- for a year or a portion of a year. To expedite business the District Magistrates and Sub-Divisional Officers of the border Sub-Divisions in East Bengal will be authorized to issue passports to Pakistanis residing in border areas.

3443. Pakistan Scheme for introduction of Passport and Visa regulations for entry of Indians in to Pakistan.

Karachi, August 22, 1952.

Passport System to Regulate the Entry of Indian Nationals into Pakistan

A passport duly visaed for Pakistan by an authorised official of the Government of Pakistan, will under an Ordinance as from a date to be notified, be the only document recognised by the Government of Pakistan for the entry of Indians into this country. The issue of permits by the Government of Pakistan will cease from the 15th October, 1952.

Indian nationals who came to West Pakistan prior to the notified date will, however, be permitted to return to India on the strength of return permits, which will be issued to them by the Indian diplomatic missions. In East Pakistan Indian nationals will be able to return to India on the strength of Repatriation Certificates issued to them by the Indian diplomatic mission in Dacca.

They will be permitted to stay in Pakistan during the currency of their permits, but not longer than three months from the date to be notified.

2. Any one or more of the following six types of visas may be granted to Indian nationals on a passport valid for Pakistan.
I. Category “A” Visas.

(i) This visa may be granted in the case of the following Indian nationals who live in Indian territory within ten miles of the East Bengal border and who normally earn their livelihood by working in Pakistan territory within ten miles of the East Bengal border: -

(a) Cultivators who have to make frequent journeys in order to cultivate or supervise the cultivation of their own lands and their labourers and hired servants;

(b) Small artisans, such as, blacksmiths, woodcutters, carpenters, petty shopkeepers and petty traders; and

(c) Persons the only markets for whose agricultural produce lie in Pakistan territory within ten miles of the East Bengal border.

(ii) The visa may be granted for a period of one year or a portion of a year or a maximum of 5 years at the option of the applicant, or for the duration of the validity of the passport, whichever is less. It shall be valid only for the village in East Bengal, including villages lying en route, within which the applicant’s land is situated, or where he normally earns his livelihood and any adjoining village or villages that the applicant may specify as being necessary for the above purpose.

(iii) The following facilities will be available under this visa: -

(a) Persons holding such visas may cross the border at any place within the villages specified in the visa and will not be required to pass through a Check Post. They must, however, produce the passport for examination whenever demanded by a competent authority.

(b) The visa will be valid for any number of journeys during its validity.

(c) A Visa holder of this category will be exempt from registration. The exemption will also apply in those cases where a person of this category is already in Pakistan on the date of the introduction of the scheme and who does not leave India within the three months thereafter.

II. Category “B” Visa.

(i) This visa may be issued to the following Indian nationals: -

(a) Persons having an interest in or deriving income from immoveable property in Pakistan or their duly authorised agents. (This facility will not apply in cases where property is vested in a Custodian of Evacuee Property.)
(b) Persons who have near relatives in Pakistan: - (Note: Near relatives mean paternal or maternal grandfather and grandmother, father and mother, brothers, sisters, husband and wife, children and grand children.)

(c) Pensioners or other recipients of periodical or monthly payment, who owing to regulations of a Government, a local body, a cooperative Society, limited companies or registered firms have to receive their due monthly or periodically on personal appearance in Pakistan.

(ii) This visa will be valid for one year.

(iii) The following facilities will be available to holders of this visa: -

(a) This visa will normally entitle the holder to make eight journeys to Pakistan.

(b) Where the Visa Officer is satisfied that a person in this category is required to travel more frequently than 8 times during one year, he may grant a visa for such additional journeys as may be necessary.

(c) A visa holder of this category may stay in Pakistan for a period upto two months during any one visit.

(iv) This visa is subject to the following conditions: -

(a) The visa holder may enter or leave Pakistan only through a check post.

(b) The visa will be valid only for the place or places specified therein.

(c) The visa holder will be required to register at the Check Post on entry.

III. Category “C” Visa.

This visa may be granted to Indian nationals who are not eligible for, or who do not require, visas of categories ‘A’ and ‘B’ but who wish to visit Pakistan.

This visa will be valid for specified places in Pakistan for a single journey only which may be performed at any time during the period stated in the visa. The period of stay in Pakistan will be specified in the visa and will not exceed three months at any one time.

A holder of this visa will enter Pakistan only through a check post and will register himself at once at the check post; and within 24 hours of his arrival at the specified place or places in Pakistan and 24 hours before his departure will report in writing to the Superintendent of Police or the nearest Police Station in the jurisdiction of which the place or places specified in the visa lie.

IV. Category “D” Visa.

This visa will be issued to:

Government officials travelling on duty and to diplomatic officials:

(a) Official Visas:

Indian Government officials travelling on duty with the Government of Pakistan, or a State Government in Pakistan or for meetings with officers of such Governments, may be granted this visa free of charge. The visa holder will not be required to register himself at a check post or to report his arrival to the Police at destination. The visa will be valid for specified places and for specified number of journeys during the period stated in the visa. Holders of this visa will travel by any of the routes open to the general public.

(b) Diplomatic visas:

Diplomatic visas may be granted gratis to persons falling within the category mentioned in para X of the General Instructions regarding grant of visas for Pakistan (Vide Appendix ‘A’): They will be valid for any number of journeys during the period of their validity (which will be one year at a time) – Holder of this visa will travel by any of the specified routes open to the general public. Non – diplomatic staff will be granted visas gratis and valid for any number of journeys during the period of their validity, which will be one year at a time, or for stay in places specified therein. Holders of this visa will be registered. They will travel by any of the routes open to the general public.

V. Category “E” Visa.

This visa may be granted to Indian nationals who are:

(a) Businessman as defined below, or

(b) Transport workers, who have to cross the border frequently in the course of duty.

Indian nationals working with or in an established and bonafide business in Pakistan, who have to travel frequently between India and Pakistan, on business, may be granted this visa valid for a specified number of journeys during a period not exceeding one year at a time. A holder of this visa will enter Pakistan only through a check post and will register himself at once at the Check Post; and within 24 hours of his arrival at the specified place or places in Pakistan will report himself at the office of the Superintendent of Police or the nearest Police Station, in the jurisdiction of which the place or places specified in the visa lie.

Indian workers engaged in transport services operating between the two countries e.g. aircraft crews operating on scheduled services, steamer crews and railways staff whose duties involve frequent crossing of the border may be granted this visa valid for any number of journeys along the specified route on which the service operates. Such visa holders may be exempted from registration and will not be required to report to the Police.

VI. Category “F” Visa.

(a) This visa may be granted to an Indian national who desires to stay in Pakistan for more than three months, in connection with service under Government or a Local body or a company or firm incorporated or registered in Pakistan or any other concern, bank or insurance company, or institution, or who is husband or wife of a citizen of Pakistan. Such a person may be granted visa valid for entry and stay in Pakistan for a period not exceeding one year at a time. Wife and children of an Indian employed in Pakistan will be granted visas valid for the period of his employment.

(b) A holder of this visa will enter Pakistan only through a check post and will register himself at once at the check post; and within 24 hours of his arrival at the specified place or places in Pakistan and will report 24 hours before his departure in writing to the Superintendent of Police or the nearest Police Station in the jurisdiction of which the place or places specified in the visa lie.

(c) The visa will be valid for three journeys during the year.

3. Extension of stay.

The Central Government in the Ministry of the Interior/Provincial Government may, on receipt of an application to that effect, extend the period of stay specified in any visa for a further period not exceeding one year at a time.

4. Transit visa

This visa will be made valid at the discretion of the Issuing Authorities for a period not exceeding 30 days during which a break of journey at a specified place or places en route may be permitted.

No transit visa will be required but a valid passport must be carried in the following cases:

A Transit visa may be granted to a citizen of India who is in transit through Pakistan by sea, river, road, rail, or whose journey in Pakistan involves a change from one mode of transport to another. It shall be valid for a period not exceeding 30 days, during which a break of journey at a specified place or places _en – route_ shall be permitted.

A citizen of India, provided he holds a valid passport, shall not be deemed to enter Pakistan for the purpose of this rule if he is in direct transit in the course of an unbroken journey between places outside Pakistan by a through aircraft, train, steamer or ship and in possession of a through ticket or an irrevocable voucher for the journey from and to places outside Pakistan.

Such a person may, during the course of an enforced halt, be issued on application a Landing Permit, in exchange of his passport, to stay or visit any place or outside the airport, seaport, railway or steamer station, valid for the period of such enforced halt, which shall not exceed 24 hours.

Passport of all persons in transit through Pakistan shall be stamped and dated at the points of entry and exist.

5. General provisions regarding visas.

(1) All visas will be valid for travel to and stay in the place or places specified in the visa.

(2) All Passport holders, who are required to enter and leave only through specified check posts, may do so through any check post of their choice from among those shown in Appendix ‘B’

(3) Visas will be issued liberally in accordance with the above provisions, but in any particular case the Visa Issuing Authority may decline to grant a visa or a visa of a particular category or decline to include a particular place or places in the visa or may grant it under special conditions, without assigning any reason. Every endeavour will be made to keep such cases to the minimum.

(4) Visas will be granted by the nearest diplomatic or Consular Representative or other authority appointed for the purpose by the Government of Pakistan. The power to issue visas of category ‘A’ will be delegated to District Magistrates in charge of border district concerned. To further facilitate the issue of visas of category ‘A’, District Magistrate of border Indian district in which the applicant resides may forward the passport of applicants to the District Magistrate in Pakistan in whose jurisdiction the applicant desire to go for necessary action and return. The two District Magistrates concerned may correspond direct on all routine matters arising out of the obtaining of visas on such passports.
(5) An application for a visa by an Indian national for entry into Pakistan will be addressed to the nearest Pakistan diplomatic or consular representative or in the case of the Category ‘A’ to the District Magistrate concerned.

(6) It shall not ordinarily be necessary for an applicant for a visa to appear personally before the Visa Issuing Authority in order to obtain a visa.

(7) The fee for issue of a visa, including a transit visa, will in all case be Rs. 1/-/- for each year or a portion of the year for which the visa will be valid.

6. General provision regarding the issue of Passports.

(1) An Indian national already in Pakistan and not in possession of a valid passport must obtain a valid passport or if in possession of valid passport must obtain a visa within three months of the date on which the Ordinance comes into force provided that the Central or the Provincial Government may extend this period in particular cases or class of cases. The visa in this case may be obtained from the Provincial Government concerned.

(2) Husband and wife may take a joint passport; or separate passports to provide for the contingency of not being able to travel together.

(3) Children below 15 years of age may be included in the passport of either parent if travelling with the parent.

(4) Children above 15 years of age and children not travelling with either parent will require separate passports.

(5) The fee for a passport for India will be Rs. 3/-/-. The passport will be valid for a period of five years and may be renewed for a further period not exceeding 2 years on payment of a fee of Rs. 2/-.

(6) Persons entering or leaving Pakistan except holders of Category ‘A’ visas, will present their passports at a border check post to be examined stamped and dated.

(7) Powers to issue passports for India may be delegated to District Magistrates in East Bengal. Powers to issue passports to persons eligible for category ‘A’ visas may be further delegated to sub divisional officers in charge of border sub – divisions in that Province.

(8) Application forms for passports for India will be available from the Passport Officers of all Provincial Governments and Posts Offices throughout the country as well as from Sub – Divisional Officers in the border areas in East Pakistan. The price of each form will be annas two per copy.
7. Exceptions.

The following categories of persons need not obtain passports:

1. Recovered abducted women and children to be repatriated to their country.

2. Pakistani nationals normally resident in East Bengal who migrated to West Bengal, Assam and Tripura, owing to the Communal disturbances of 1950, and who may not have returned to East Bengal so far. Such persons, if they wish to return, may do so within three months of the date of the introduction of the scheme without a passport. They will, however, be required to obtain a certificate of Repatriation which will be issued on the production of evidence to the satisfaction of Pakistan authorities that they have a bona fide claim to be classed in this category.

2. Indian Seamen holding valid Continuous Discharge Certificates (Nullies) will be accorded the following facilities:

(a) An Indian seaman visiting a port in Pakistan as a member of the crew of the ship which brings him need not hold a passport or a visa. He will be issued a Landing Permit on his depositing his C.D.C. (Nullies), if he wishes to land;

(b) An Indian seaman arriving at the port in Pakistan as the member of the crew of the ship which brings him and is discharged at a Pakistan port, will not require a passport or a visa. He will be issued a Landing Permit and will be allowed to leave for India by sea, land or air.

(c) An Indian seaman coming to Pakistan to seek employment as a Seamen will require a visa, but for purposes of the grant of a visa, the Continuous Discharge Certificate (Nullie) will be treated as a valid travel document. Visas on the basis of the Nullie will, similarly, be issued to Indian seamen who have been serving on Pakistan articles to re-enter Pakistan for further employment.

(d) Where an Indian seaman signed on Indian articles desires to come to Pakistan, otherwise than as crew of a ship for which he has signed and proposed to joint that ship at a Pakistan port, he will be required to hold a Pakistan visa. This will be issued on the Nullie only in case in which the Controller of Shipping, Government of Pakistan, has given special permission for his joining his ship at a Pakistan port, without complying with the requirement of the Pakistan Law;

In all other cases, Indian seaman must be in a possession of a valid passport duly visaed for Pakistan at the time of entry into Pakistan.

8. Miscellaneous.
The officer in charge of recovery of abducted women and children, or his deputy, will issue guides, witnesses and relatives of such abducted persons, visas valid for two months only on Emergency Certificates, which should show a photograph and other necessary particulars. The visa will specify the places to be visited and indicate an authority for the Superintendent of Police, in charge of recovery operations, to take the holder wherever he wants to go, accompanied by the police, for recovery operations or to give evidence in courts of law in recovery cases.

3444. Press Communiqué issued by the Government of India consequent on the introduction of passport/visa system by Pakistan.

New Delhi, August 23, 1952.

In April, 1952, the Government of Pakistan decided that free movement between India and Pakistan provided in the Indo – Pakistan Agreement of 1950 and the Permit System which is at present in force between India and West Pakistan should be discontinued and that traffic between the two countries should be regulated by a passport cum visa system. The Pakistan Government were unable to accept the suggestion of the Government of India that, in the interest of the peoples of both the countries, the existing system which ensures relatively free traffic between Pakistan and India should not be disturbed. Discussions then took place between the two Governments on the main features of the new system proposed by the Pakistan Government. Agreement has now been reached on the major points. The Government of Pakistan have already announced the passport rules which they propose to bring into force. The Government of India have also prepared a set of rules for regulating the entry of Pakistan nationals into India and the issue of passports to Indian nationals for travel to Pakistan. These rules are being published for the information of the general public.

The Government of India intend to apply the rules with the maximum possible liberality. They also propose to review the working of the system from time to time to ensure that difficulties and legitimate complaints brought to their notice are removed as far as possible.
The passport scheme comes into force from October 15, 1952. Upto that date permits for visits to India will continue to be issued at Indian missions in Karachi and Lahore, while residents of East – Pakistan will be able to enter or leave India freely.

Liberal facilities for Pakistan nationals to visit India have been provided in the Rules. Special facilities have also been provided to all classes having special needs, such as border residents, persons having near relations in India, transport workers, businessmen, officials, employees of diplomatic missions, seamen and persons in transit through India. These liberal facilities are being provided to Pakistan nationals on the understanding that similar liberal facilities will be available to Indian nationals visiting Pakistan.

The Scheme provides that in addition to Indian passports in international form which will be valid, special passports valid for travel to Pakistan only, will be issued at a cost of Rs. 3/- as compared with the fee of Rs. 10/- for international. The power to issue India – Pakistan passports is being delegated to District Magistrates in areas where the number of applicants is expected to be large, namely Tripura, Assam, West Bengal and the Purnea District of Bihar. Elsewhere in India, India – Pakistan passports will be issued by the State Government concerned, but special arrangements have been made in the Punjab (I) for issue of such passports to pilgrims, sports teams, goodwill missions and Government officials. Special provisions have also been made for recovered abducted persons, guides, witnesses and relatives in connection with the recovery of abducted persons, migrants to India, and Indian nationals already in Pakistan when the scheme comes into force.

The Government of India intend that as far as possible there should be no interruption of movement or avoidable hardship when the new system comes into force. With this object forms of application for India – Pakistan passports are being urgently distributed to all passport issuing authorities in India who will make arrangements to have them made available to the public as widely as possible. The places where forms will be available in each State will be notified by that State. It is hoped that these application forms will be available to the public from the 8th September, 1952 and Passport Issuing Authorities will entertain applications for India – Pakistan passports with effect from the 11th September, 1952. Similarly forms of application for visas to visit India are expected to be available at Indian Diplomatic Missions in Pakistan from the 11th September and those Missions will entertain such applications from the 15th September, 1952. Arrangements are being made to post adequate staff at the Indian missions in Pakistan, particularly Dacca, to ensure quick disposal of applications and early issue of visas. All persons who expect to travel to or from Pakistan in the second fortnight of October are advised to obtain the necessary passports and visas by the 15th of that month.

3445. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission for India in Pakistan.

New Delhi, October 4, 1952.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs & Commonwealth Relations
Karachi

No. I (I). 12/2/52. Dated, the 4th October, 1952

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, presents its compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and, with reference to their not No.C – 26/IHC – 51, dated July 12, 1952, has the honour to state as follows: -

2. As previously stated the Government of Pakistan do not wish to prolong the controversy over the responsibility for the closure of the routes but adhere to the view that the unilateral closure of the Wagah – Attari route by India was contrary to the spirit of the understanding reached at the Permit Conference. Their own reading of the minutes of that Conference does not substantiate the argument that the choice given to a permit holder to indicate the route by which he will enter the other country and the route by which he wants the return, implies the existence of two land routes. The fact that more routes than one were and are available to permit holder, i.e., by air or by sea, adequately covers the right of the permit holder to different routes for entry into and return from the other country. In any case, as no purpose will be served by continuing this controversy it may be considered as closed.

3. It would be in the interests of the nationals of both the countries that both, the Wagah – Attari and the Hussainiwala – Ferozepore land routes, should be opened. The Government of Pakistan therefore, requests the Government of India to open both the Wagah – Attari and the Ferozepore – Hussainiwala routes, for Pakistani nationals. The Government of Pakistan will simultaneously open the two routes for the nationals of India. If, however, the Government of India wish to have only one route opened, the Government of Pakistan would welcome their opening the Wagah—Attari route. As previously indicted, this is the shorter of the two routes and is normally used for trade between the two countries.

4. The Ministry avails itself of the opportunity to renew to the Indian High Commission the assurances of its highest consideration.

To
The High Commission for India in Pakistan,
Karachi.

[Passed by the Pakistan Constituent Assembly (Legislature) and received the assent of the Governor-General on the 14th December, 1952.]

Act to make better provision for controlling the entry of Indian citizens into Pakistan.

WHEREAS it is expedient to make better provision for controlling the entry of Indian citizens into Pakistan;

1. (1) This Act may be called the Pakistan (Control of Entry) Act, 1952.
   (2) It extends to the whole of Pakistan.
   (3) It shall come into force at once.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,-
   (a) “enter” means enter by water, land or air;
   (b) “passport” means a passport issued or renewed by or under the authority of a person duly empowered to issue or renew it and satisfying the conditions prescribed relating to the class of passports to which it belongs;
   (c) “visa” means a visa duly endorsed by an authority empowered in this behalf by or under the authority of the Central Government on a passport valid and in force;
(d) “permit” means a permit issued or renewed by or under the authority of a person duly empowered to issue or renew it under the Pakistan (Control of Entry) Ordinance, 1948, and satisfying the conditions prescribed relating to the class of permits to which it belongs;

(e) “Indian citizen” means a person who is or is deemed to be a citizen of India under the law for the time being in force in India;

(f) “Pakistan citizen” means a person who is or is deemed to be a citizen of Pakistan under the law for the time being in force in Pakistan;

(g) “officer” means an officer or an employee of the Central Government or of a Provincial Government or of an Acceding State.

3.(1) No Indian citizen shall, unless exempted by a provision made under this Act, enter any part of Pakistan unless he is in the possession of a passport with a visa authorizing the entry.

(2) No Pakistan citizen shall, unless exempted by a general or special order made under this Act, enter from India into any part of Pakistan unless he is in possession of a passport, an emergency certificate, a repatriation certificate or any other travel document provided for under this Act:

Provided that if he has entered India on a permit issued under any law for the time being in force in India he shall be allowed to return to Pakistan before the expiry of-

(a) the period specified in the permit, or

(b) the period of three months beginning on the 14th October, 1952, whichever is the shorter.

(3) No Indian citizen who has entered any part of Pakistan before the 18th October, 1952, without a passport shall, unless exempted under this Act remain in Pakistan beyond the expiry of a period of three months beginning on the 14th October, 1952, or, if he has entered on a permit, the specified therein, whichever is the shorter.

(4) No person shall enter Pakistan except in compliance with the rules governing entry by specified routes or by a check-post through which he is to pass, and unless he has registered himself with such authorities and in such manner as may be prescribed in this behalf.

(5) After the commencement of this Act every Indian citizen shall, during the period of his stay in Pakistan, be governed by and shall comply with the rules made under this Act.
4. Whoever contravenes any of the provisions of section 3 shall, for every such contravention, be punished with imprisonment which may extend to one year, or with a fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

5. Any person who for the purpose of obtaining a passport or a visa or of claiming an exemption under any of the provisions of this Act or of the rules made thereunder makes a statement which he knows to be untrue or does not believe to be true, or makes use of a statement which he knows to be untrue or has reason to believe to be untrue shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to one year or with a fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or with both.

6.(1) Any police officer, customs officer, or other officer empowered in this behalf by a general or special order of the Central Government or of a Provincial Government or of the Government of an Acceding State or under a rule made under this Act, may arrest without a warrant any person whom such officer reasonably suspects of having contravened any of the provisions of section 3.

(2) An officer making an arrest under this section shall, without unnecessary delay, take the person arrested or cause him to be taken before a competent Magistrate having jurisdiction in the place where the arrest is made, or to the officer-in-charge of a police station within whose jurisdiction the arrest is made; and the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, or, when the arrest is made in a State, of the corresponding law for the time being in force in that State, shall, so far as may be, apply in respect of such arrested person.

7.(1) The Central Government may order any person who is not a citizen of Pakistan convicted under section 4 or section 5 to remove himself from Pakistan within the time specified in the order.

(2) If such person refuses or fails so to remove himself within the specified time,-

(a) he shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to one year or with a fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or with both, and

(b) he may be removed from Pakistan under the order of the Central Government, who may use all such means as may, in the circumstances, be necessary to effect the removal.

(3) The Central Government may, by a general or special order, direct that the power to make orders under sub-section (1) and clause (2) shall be exercisable also by a Provincial Government or the Government of an Acceding State, subject to such conditions, if any, as may be specified in the direction.

8.(1) The Central Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, make rules to carry into effect the purposes of this Act.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, the rules may provide for,-

(a) the different types of visas which may be granted;

(b) the authorization or appointment of persons by whom visas may be generated, varied, extended and cancelled;

(c) the charges and fees payable for obtaining application forms and visas and the extension of visas;

(d) the conditions and restrictions which may be imposed under this Act on the holder of a passport;

(e) the exemptions which may be granted, with or without conditions, to any person or class of persons in respect of any provision of this Act or the rules made there under;

(f) the conditions and restrictions which Indian citizens may be required to comply with during their stay in Pakistan;

(g) the alteration or modification of or exemption from any condition or restriction imposed under a visa on the holder of a passport after his entry into Pakistan;

(h) the fixing and notification of check-posts and routes; and

(i) the procedure for registering and reporting to the police required under the rules for certain categories of visa holders.

9. The Central Government may by order direct that any power conferred on it under such conditions, if any, as may be specified in the order, be exercised by any officer or authority subordinate to it or specified by it.

10. No prosecution, suit or other legal proceeding shall be commenced against any person in respect of anything done or purporting to be done in exercise of the powers conferred by or under this Act, except with the sanction of the Central Government or the Provincial Government or the Government of the State concerned.
11.(1) The Pakistan (Control of Entry) ordinance, 1952, is hereby repealed but the repeal by that Ordinance, subject to the provisions of section 3 thereof, of the Pakistan (Control of Entry) Ordinance 1948, is hereby declared to be subject to the provisions of section 3 of this Act.

(2) Notwithstanding such repeal, anything done or any action taken in the exercise of any power conferred by or under the said Ordinance shall be deemed to have been done or taken in the exercise of powers conferred by or under this Act, as if this Act had been in force on the day on which such thing was done or such action was taken.

3447. Summary of Agreed Decisions at the Indo - Pakistan Passport Conference

New Delhi, 28 January to 1 February 1953.

As Ratified on 9 July 1953 The Governments of India and Pakistan have ratified the decisions reached at the Indo-Pakistan Passports Conference held at New Delhi from 28th January to 1st February, 1953 and during subsequent discussions. A summary of the agreed decisions is given below. The two Governments are taking steps to give immediate effect to these decisions.

1. Travel facilities for residents of enclaves. Residents of the enclaves in both the countries will on application be granted Category ‘A’ visas valid for an unlimited number of journeys within the thana or thanas contiguous to the enclave, and also for an unlimited number of journeys in transit along one or more specified routes between the enclave and the mainland of the country to which the enclave belongs. The specified route for transit need not be through an established check-post. In addition, the holder of a Category “A” visa may also obtain any other visa to which he may be entitled under the rules.

2. Multi-journey transit visas between two places in the same country across the territory of the other country.

(a) These visas will be issued freely; the position being reviewed after 12 months.

(b) The Government of Pakistan agree to depute a visa officer to Tripura for a period of three months to issue visas of various categories to residents of that State. The Government of India also agree similarly to depute a visa officer to Comilla, if so desired.
3. Transit visas for non-diplomatic staff. Transit visas free of cost will also be admissible to non-diplomatic staff, other than those posted in India or Pakistan, when travelling between the home-county and Missions abroad.

4. Registration of non-diplomatic staff. The registration of non-diplomatic staff will be effected merely by handing over the duplicate copy of the visa application form at the check-post of entry.

5. Additional visa offices. The Government of Pakistan will set up two additional Branch Visa Offices in India, one at Bombay and the other at Shillong; while the Government of India will set up two additional Branch Visa Offices in Pakistan; one at Hyderabad (Sind) and the other at Rajshahi (East Bengal).

6. Additional Routes. (i) The Government of Pakistan will open one check-post at or near Chhatak to cover the routes from Assam via Dhalai river, (ii) the bridle path from Bholaganj to Companyganj, (iii) the Shalla river route and (iv) if possible, the route from Barsora. They will also open a second check-post at Hatipagar in Nalitabori opposite Dalu (Assam), a third check-post on route Kurmaghat - Dhalaiight (Tripura), and a fourth check-post on the Sankara - Itindagh (West Bengal) route. The continuance of these additional routes will be reviewed after 12 months. The existing route between Malda and Rajshahi will be diverted; its future location will be mutually agreed upon by the Governments of West and East Bengal.

7. Land routes and closed districts. (a) No district in either country will be closed to the nationals of the other country. Applications for visas to all destinations in India or Pakistan will be considered. (b) The Wagah - Attari and the Gandasinghwala - Husseiniwala routes between the two Punjabs will be opened for public travel. (c) Visas will be issued for all valid purposes including tourism. (d) The transport of goods between Akhaura (East Bengal) and Agartala (Tripura) will be facilitated; some provisional arrangements for this purpose have already been made between the Governments of Tripura and East Bengal. (e) Both Governments are considering the possibility of reopening through passenger traffic by rail between West Pakistan and India. The matter will be discussed further between the Railway authorities of the two Governments.

8. Category ‘A’ Visas. Border fishermen will be included in the classes of persons eligible to receive category “A” visas.

10. Ministers of Provincial or State Governments. (a) Ministers of Provincial or State Governments, when visiting the other country, whether on official or unofficial business, will be given category “D” (official) visas. On private visits, the usual visa fee will be charged. (b) Chief Commissioners and their families will be given the same facilities as Governors, Rajpramukhs and their families.

11. Delegates to U.N. Meetings. Nationals of one country proceeding to the other to attend U.N. meetings will normally be given Category “D” (official) Visas.

12. Category “E” Visas. (a) The definition of businessmen will be extended to include any person who has bona fide reasons for proceeding to the other country for the promotion of business or trade. Category “E” visas will be issued liberally. (b) For the issue of “E” visas it will be for the businessman concerned to decide at what places he wishes, to transact his business.

13. Persons earning their livelihood in the other country. (a) The following classes of persons who are already in the other country will also be eligible for obtaining category “F” visas: (i) Domestic servants; (ii) Resident employees of owners of immoveable property in East Bengal, Assam and Tripura. (iii) Persons earning their livelihood by following independent trades and avocations, or by service other than under limited companies or registered firms etc; (d) Category Y visas will also be given to seasonal labourers formally going to the other country in search of employment. Such visas will be valid for one or more districts and for an appropriate period ranging from six months to one year.

14. Carriage of goods between check-post. (a) Porters carrying goods between the check-posts of the two countries will not be required to take out passports and visas. Instead, porters of both sides in equal numbers will be given written authorisations by the two check-posts. The authorisations will be valid for movement only between the two customs check-posts for the carriage of goods. (b) As far as possible, transhipment of goods at the East Bengal-India border from the vehicle of one side to the vehicle of the other side will be permitted to take place at suitable spot agreed upon locally.

15. Defence Personnel. (a) Clearance through the Defence Ministry will not be necessary for the following: (i) Minor children (under 15 years of age) of personnel and civilian employees of Defence Organisations (including the Military Accounts Department). (ii) Employees of the Civil Aviation Department and their families. (iii) Class IV employees of the Defence Services (including the Military Accounts Department). The exemption accorded to Class IV employees is for a period of one year in the first instance as an experimental measure. (b) Telegraphic applications for urgent visits by Defence personnel (furnishing the following minimum particulars) (i) Name and rank (ii) Purpose of visit (iii) Duration of visit (iv) Places to be visited (v) Address in the country to be visited — will be dealt with expeditiously, and decisions on them telegraphed simultaneously to the referring authority and to the mission concerned.
16. Repatriation of Prisoners. For an offence other than the contravention of the permit or passport regulations, the full particulars of the prisoners, a copy of the judgment by which he was convicted (if possible) and a statement of other relevant circumstances will be forwarded to the relevant diplomatic mission of the other country at least three months before the due date of release of the prisoners from jail. The diplomatic mission will consider the matter and inform the authority making the reference, at least 15 days before the due date of release, whether it acknowledges the prisoner as its national. If the prisoner is so acknowledged, the diplomatic mission will also issue an appropriate travel document valid for his repatriation. Such released prisoners will not be sent across the border by force.

17. Repatriation after a contravention of the Permit or Passport Regulations. (i) When a person enters either country on a valid passport and a valid visa and is thereafter sentenced for a contravention of the Permit or Passport Regulations to a term of imprisonment during which his passport or visa expires, the diplomatic mission of the country where the passport was issued will, on production of a certified copy of the Judgment, renew the passport for a further reasonable period, and the country in which he has undergone the imprisonment will issue him an extension of his visa for such reasonable period, as may be necessary for him to leave that country. For this purpose, the expired passport of the prisoner, along with the above-mentioned document, will be forwarded to the diplomatic mission of the other country at least 15 days before the due date of the release of the prisoner. (ii) When a person who enters either country with a valid passport, but without a valid visa, is convicted for illegal entry and sentenced to a term of imprisonment during which the period of his passport expires, the diplomatic mission of the country of origin, on production of a certified copy of the judgement and of the release order, will grant him an extension of the validity of his passport for a sufficient period, and the country visited will grant him an endorsement thereon, to enable the holder to return home after his release. (iii) When a person who is not in possession of a passport or equivalent document is convicted for illegal entry, all the relevant facts will be communicated to the nearest diplomatic mission of the other country concerned, along with a certified copy of the judgment convicting him of illegal entry, a copy of the release order and other particulars. The diplomatic mission will give its decision whether it acknowledges the prisoner concerned as its national, and, if so, will issue a document valid for his repatriation. (iv) Such released prisoners will not be sent across the border by force. There will be no bar, however, to the prevention of illegal entry or the expulsion of entrants while attempting to enter illegally.

18. Divided Families, The grant of facilities for the reunion of the following types of families was considered: (i) The head of the family being in one country and his wife and/or minor children in the other. (ii) The head of the family is dead or a divorce has taken place, and the wife and/or minor children have no person to support them in that country. Both the Governments agreed to give reunion facilities to such persons as soon as procedural details are mutually agreed upon.

19. Stateless Persons. Persons who were stateless at the time of partition and, for various reasons, have continued as such, although they are eligible for the acquisition of Pakistani or Indian Nationality, will be issued special Emergency Certificates on which the Mission of the other country will grant a category “C” or a transit visa as required.

20. Facilities for persons whose needs are not covered by existing provisions. Where the visa office is satisfied of the need for more journeys than one, and the application is not covered by any existing provision relating to multi-journey visas, the visa office may make the “C” category visa (at present valid only for one journey) valid for a specified number of journeys or for an unlimited number of journeys.

21. More liberal specification of places of visit. Permission to visit more places than one will be granted liberally.

22. Delegation of authority. All District Magistrates throughout India and Pakistan will be authorised to grant: (1) Extensions of the period of stay for a total period of 30 days; and (2) Permission to visit places other than those mentioned in the visa within the State or Province in which his district lies.

23. Special emergency arrangements. (a) To deal with extremely urgent applications, a special section will be set up in the Indian Visa Office at Dacca as well as in the Pakistan Visa Office at Calcutta. It will be the endeavour of this section to grant a visa within 24 hours of the receipt of the application. (b) The Visa Officer may, in his discretion, consider the following as reasonable grounds for treating an application as emergent: (i) Serious illness of a near relation of which news has been received within the last five days. (ii) Appearance in a court or other Government authority, intimation of or summons for which has been received within the last five days. (iii) Travel for the purpose of a commercial transaction, attendance at a Directors meeting, etc., in which the reason for travel has suddenly arisen for causes beyond the control of the applicant. (iv) Any other cause which the Special Section may consider adequate. (c) If a person applies to the Special Section and the latter does not consider his reasons adequate for doing so, it will retain the forms, inform the applicant accordingly and direct him to file fresh application forms in the General Section. (d) Arrangements for dealing with urgent applications will also be made at other visa offices of India and Pakistan.

24. Expediting issue of visas. (a) Both sides are agreed on the need to expedite the issue of visas as far as possible. (b) The personal attendance of the applicant will not be necessary for the grant of visas. (c) (i) The normal maximum period for the issue of C, D and transit visas has been fixed at seven working days; and for other visas at 14 working days from the date of the receipt of the application by the visa-issuing authority. (ii) Applicants presenting applications personally will be asked to call next on pre-determined dates according to the above normal periods. (iii) Within the above normal period, the applicant will either be granted a visa or informed of its refusal. (iv) When an application has to be referred to the home authorities, the applicant will be informed within the above normal period, and told that the visa office will inform him subsequently of the next date on which he should approach it. (v) If in any special circumstances, the normal period cannot be adhered to, the applicant will be informed of it as early as possible and given a definite revised date. Both Governments will, however, take measures to avoid this as far as possible.

25. Forms defectively filled in. If the forms filled in by an applicant contain minor defects or defects which can be corrected by the visa office itself, or if the applicant is present in the visa office at the time and available for the purpose of correcting the defects, his application should not be rejected because of such defects, but should be suitably amended.

26. Uniformity of Forms. The forms in use on both sides will be uniform as far as practicable.

27. Disposal of rejected duplicate and triplicate copies of the visa application forms together with photographs. The duplicate and the triplicate copies of a rejected visa application form together with two copies of the photographs may be returned to the applicant.

28. Machinery for consultation and investigation and removal of complaints. For the expeditious disposal of complaints and minor matters arising from the working of the system, each Government will nominate an officer who will correspond directly with his opposite number on such matters.

Note: The ratified decisions were made public in a press communiqué issued simultaneously in New Delhi and Karachi on July 9, 1953.

Circular issued by Ministry of External Affairs determining the status of babies born to a Pakistani family while in India.

New Delhi, May 12, 1953.

Government of India
Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No. F. 44/52/PV(III) the 12th May, 1953

Circular

Subject: Babies born in a Pakistan family, while in India

The following instructions on the above subject may kindly be noted.

(i) If the mother is in India on a permit under the Influx from Pakistan (Control) Act, 1950, the State Government should, on application add the name and particulars of the baby on the permit.

(ii) If the mother is in India on a Pakistan passport, she should apply to a Pakistan Diplomatic Mission in India for addition of the name of the baby to the passport.

(iii) Even if neither of the above actions has been taken, the Indian Immigration check post at point of exit should raise no objection to the exit of the permit or passport holder though accompanied by a new born baby (under one year of age).

(iv) The Indian Immigration check post at point of exit should enter the particulars of the baby in the remarks column of Register Form 2 in all cases, i.e. whether or not the particulars of the baby have been added to the permit or the passport. Such babies will however, not be counted in compiling the fortnightly reports.

2. (Necessary instructions may kindly be issued to the immigration check posts under the control of the State Government)

Under Secretary

All State Governments.
Press Communiqué issued simultaneously in Karachi and New Delhi specifying the outcome of the India-Pakistan Conference on Passport and Visa issues.

July 9, 1953.

PRESS COMMUNIQUÉ

The Governments of India and Pakistan have ratified the decisions reached at the Indo – Pakistan Passports Conference held at New Delhi from 28th January to 1st February, 1953 and during subsequent discussions.

A summary of the agreed decisions is given below. The two Governments are taking steps to give immediate effect to these decisions.

1. Travel facilities for residents of enclaves.

Residents of the enclaves in both the countries will on application be granted Category ‘A’ Visas valid for an unlimited number of journeys within the thana or thanas contiguous to the enclave, and also for an unlimited number or journeys in transit along one or more specified routes between the enclave and the mainland of the country to which the enclave belongs. The specified route for transit need not be through an established checkpost. In addition, the holder of a Category “A” visa may also obtain any other visa to which he may be entitled under the rules.

2. Multi – journey transit visas between two places in the same country across the territory of the other country.

(a) These visas will be issued freely; the position being reviewed after 12 months.

(b) The Government of Pakistan agree to depute a visa officer to Tripura for a period of three months to issue visas of various Categories to residents of that State. The Government of India also agree similarly to depute a visa officer to Comilla, if so desired.

3. Transit Visas for Non – Diplomatic Staff.

Transit visas free of cost will also be admissible to non – diplomatic staff, other than those posted in India or Pakistan, when travelling between the home – country and Missions abroad.

4. Registration of Non – Diplomatic Staff.

The registration of Non – Diplomatic staff will be effected merely by handing over the duplicate copy of the visa application form at the check – post of entry.
5. Additional visa offices.

The Government of Pakistan will set up two additional Branch Visa offices in India, one at Bombay and the other at Shillong; while the Government of India will set up two additional Branch Visa Offices in Pakistan; one at Hyderabad (Sind) and the other at Rajshahi (East Bengal).

6. Additional Routes.

The Government of Pakistan will open one check – post at or near Chhatak to cover (i) the routes from Assam vis Dhalai river, (ii) the bridle path from Bholaganj to Companyganj (iii) the Shalla river route and (iv) if possible, the route from Barsora. The will also open a second check – post at Hatipagar in Nalitabari opposite Dalu (Assam), a third check – post or route Kurmaghat – Dhalai (Tripura), and a fourth check – post on the Sankara – Itindaghant (West Bengal) route. The continuance of these additional routes will be reviewed after 12 months.

The existing route between Malda and Rajshahi will be diverted; its future location will be mutually agreed upon by the Governments of West and East Bengal.

7. Land routes and closed districts.

(a) No district in either country will be closed to the nationals of the other country. Applications for visas to all destinations in India or Pakistan will be considered.

(b) The Wagah – Attari and the Gandasinghwala – Hussainiwala routes between the two Punjab will be opened for public travel.

(c) Visas will be issued for all valid purposes including tourism.

(d) The transport of goods between Akhaura (East Bengal) and Agartala (Tripura) will be facilitated; some provisional arrangements for this purpose have already been made between the Governments of Tripura and East Bengal.

(e) Both Governments are considering the possibility of reopening through passenger traffic by rail between West Pakistan and India. The matter will be discussed further between the Railway authorities of the two Governments.

8. Category “A” Visas.

3450. Record note of discussions of the first meeting of the second Sub-Committee of the Indo-Pakistan (Eastern Zone) Conference held at Raj Bhavan, Calcutta, on the 1st October, 1953

Item 3(a): Freedom of movement – Liberalisation of restrictions regarding travel.

In their opening remarks the Indian Delegation stated that as this was an Eastern Zone Conference, their discussions should relate generally to the Eastern Zone. Many of the problems to be discussed would, however, have wider application and, accordingly, might cover both Eastern as well as Western Zones.

2. The Indian Delegation then stated that they were prepared to consider liberalization of the present passport and visa scheme operating between the two countries. As far as the Eastern Zone was concerned, for example, the Indian Delegation were willing to consider the question of the abolition of the visa system as it operated at present. The necessary details would, of course, have to be worked out subsequently. If, however, this proposal were not acceptable to the Pakistani Delegation, the Government of India were prepared to consider a reduction of the existing number of various categories of visas with a view to making the Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme conform generally to international, and more particularly to Commonwealth practice. In their opinion such liberalization would be welcomed by the general public in both countries.

3. The Pakistan Delegation stated that they were not prepared to consider any modification in the scheme which did not apply equally to both wings of Pakistan and that further in their opinion any major modification of the main principles of the scheme which had only recently been introduced would be premature. But they were otherwise willing to consider proposals for liberalization.

4. The Indian Delegation explained that they had in mind another concrete suggestion for the liberalization of the existing visa system. For visits for a limited period, say two months, no visa should be necessary, but at the time of entry an endorsement would be made on the passport permitting the passport holder to reside in the country for the prescribed period. This would in effect be an automatic visa given by the officer at the check post. The passport holder would however, be required to give an address in the country which he is visiting where correspondence would reach him. If the person wished to extend his stay beyond the prescribed period, he would have to obtain a regular visa, failing which he would be liable to summary deportation. The Pakistan Delegation stated that this proposal was impracticable administratively and the facilities proposed were not commensurate with the difficulties involved.

5. The general working of the existing scheme was then reviewed.

(a) “A” Category Visas: The Indian Delegation proposed that medical practitioners, lawyers and other professional men resident and practicing in the border zone should be included in the classes of persons eligible to receive Category “A” Visas. The Pakistani Delegation stated that this was already accepted in the scheme provided they practiced their profession within the belt. It was agreed, however, that specific instructions should be issued on both sides to this effect.

The Pakistani Delegation suggested that District Magistrate in India should be authorized to grant “A” Visas. India agreed to examine this suggestion. It was explained that under this scheme, an applicant would have the option of submitting this application either to the District Magistrate concerned or to the Deputy High Commissioner in Dacca or Calcutta. If the applicant wished to apply to a District Magistrate, the following procedure would be followed. In the first instance he would submit his application to his own District Magistrate with the visa fee. This District Magistrate will forward daily, or as often as practical, the applications and the fees received by him to his opposite number in the other country. The authorized messenger who would take these applications would be allowed entry on multi-journey visa or even without any visa if necessary. The Indian Delegation pointed out that the difficulty of sending the visa fees across the border still remained. The Pakistani Delegation stated that the visa fees could be sent by postal order or bank draft in favour of the Pakistan Deputy High Commissioner at Calcutta, or the Indian Deputy High Commissioner at Dacca could be authorized to pay fees for visas granted on the basis of agreed statements from the District Magistrate concerned. The Indian Delegation agreed to examine this suggestion.

(b) “B” Category Visas. The Indian Delegation proposed and the Pakistani Delegation accepted that nephews and nieces of the first degree should also be included in the list of near relations for the purposes of the grant of ‘B’ Visas’

On an enquiry from the Indian Delegation, the Pakistani Delegation explained that the Deputy High Commissioner at Calcutta did not insist, as a general rule, that Indian nationals having an interest in immovable properties in East Bengal should produce their original documents in support of their claim for ‘B’ Visas. It was only in doubtful cases that some kind of satisfactory evidence was demanded.
On a suggestion made by the Pakistani Delegation, the Indian Delegation agreed that the Indian visa issuing authorities would not insist on applicants producing a forest permit before the grant of a visa to a bona fide applicant desirous of applying for a forest permit.

The Pakistan Delegation proposed and the Indian Delegation agreed that the present regulation requiring a visa holder of ‘B’ category to leave at the end of two months, should be liberalized. The visa holder should be allowed the facility available to holders of visas of other categories to obtain extension of stay, if required, during the validity of the visa. He would, however, have to apply for the extension of the period of stay during a single visit at the expiry of every two months.

(c) ‘D’ Category Visas. On a suggestion made by the Pakistan Delegation it was agreed that ‘D’ Visas diplomatic as well as official, should be made valid on application for a maximum period of one year and for repeated journeys during that period.

(d) Seamen’s Visa. The Pakistan Delegation suggested that the Indian authorities should allow seamen to have a choice of route for travel in the re-entry visas granted to them. Secondly, in the re-entry visas granted to the seamen, the Indian authorities specified that the seamen could not re-enter India before a specified date. They, therefore, suggested that this requirement should be abolished. The Indian Delegation promised to examine these suggestions and send their reply by a very early date.

(e) Photograph for renewal of applications. On a suggestion made by the Pakistan Delegation, it was agreed that it would not be necessary to affix photographs on the application forms for renewal of all categories of visas during the validity of the passport when the renewal applications were made to the same authority who had issued the original visas.

(f) Reports of arrivals and departures to the Police. The Pakistan Delegation did not agree to the Indian proposal to do away with the requirements of holders of category ‘C’ ‘F’ and ‘E’ and ‘E’ Visas (Except transport workers) to report their arrivals and departures to the Police. It was, however, emphasized that these reports were not required to be made in person, and could be done by letter. This should be re-emphasised on both sides by issue of fresh instructions and publicity.

(g) Multi-journey transit visas. The Indian Delegation stated that the Pakistan visa issuing authorities were not granting multi-journey transit visa as agreed to between the two countries. The Pakistan Delegation stated that they would look into the matter immediately and if instructions were inadequate they would rectify the position by immediate issue of detailed instructions.
(h) Excessive references. On a query made by the Indian Delegation, the Pakistan Delegation stated that their visa officers were not making unnecessary or excessive references to the Home Governments before granting visas. It was agreed that both the Governments should issue fresh instructions emphasizing that there should not be unnecessary or excessive references by the visa issuing authorities.

(i) Registration with the Intelligence Branch of the police.

The Indian Delegation pointed out that the Pakistan officials at the check posts insisted on compulsory registration of Indians with the Intelligence Branch of the police before exit from Pakistan. The Pakistan Delegation explained that the Government of Pakistan had not issued any instructions to this effect, but that this might have happened in some cases through a misunderstanding. It was understood that the check post officials wished to assure themselves of the legality of the original entry into Pakistan of the holders of Indian passports. The Pakistan Delegation, however, promised to instruct the check post officials that as long as the visas on the passports were issued by authorities within East Bengal, the check posts should not insist on any such registration or production of duplicate copies of application forms.

(j) Transport between Agartala and Akhaura.

The Pakistan Delegation stated that progress has been made in making satisfactory transport arrangements between these two places.

7. Items arising out of the last Indo-Pakistan Passport Conference.

(l) Exchange of information. The Indian Delegation stated that information in regard to the issue of visas had not yet been exchanged between the two countries as agreed to at the Indo-Pakistan Passport Conference in January-February, 1953. The two Delegations agreed that this information should now be exchanged and that as the dates specified in the Passport Agreement had since expired, information should be exchanged for the following two periods by the 31st October, 1953:—

(a) from the introduction of the passport scheme till the 31st January, 1953; and,

(b) from the 1st February, 1953, to the 31st August, 1953. The two Governments may later exchange this information on a quarterly basis. Before the end of each quarter the two Governments would fix the date for such exchange.
Repatriation of nationals belonging to the other country.
The Indian Delegation stated that the system prescribed for repatriation as a result of the last Passport Conference was not working satisfactorily. The two Delegations, therefore, agreed to simplify the procedure. Messrs. Fateh Singh and Khan would submit a draft for the purpose (Anexure “A”).

Re-Union of divided families. – The Indian Delegation stated that it was agreed at the last Passport Conference that facilities should be given for the re-union of divided families and that the procedure for the purpose should be worked out between the two countries. No procedure had, however, been fixed so far. It was agreed that Messrs. Fateh Singh and Khan should prepare 4 draft for this purpose (Annexure “B”).

Lapse of Visa for non-utilisation within 6 months. The Indian Delegation suggested that the existing regulations under which a visa lapsed if not utilized by the holder within 6 months of its issue should be abolished. The Pakistan Delegation did not agree to this proposal. They stated, however, that the visa holder may be allowed to apply for extension of the visa on payment of the visa fee only but without having to submit an application for extension in the usual form and without photographs. The duplicate copy of the original application returned to him will, however, have to be produced for revalidation. The Indian Delegation agreed.

Item 3(b)- Currency. The Indian Delegation proposed that the present limit of Rs.50/- of both currencies permitted to be carried by a traveler should be increased as it was inadequate. They also proposed that more liberal exchange facilities should be given to persons travelling on business. The Indian delegation explained that under their system a resident of Indian traveling to Pakistan for business was normally given up to Rs.75/- per day. The Pakistan delegation promised to consider the suggestion for the proposed increase of the limits up to which currencies could be carried. In regard to the second proposal, they explained that, under their scheme, members of recognized Chambers of Commerce were given an automatic release of exchange up to Rs.500/- per quarter and this facility was allowed in addition to the release of exchange for business travel on individual applications to the State Bank as was the practice in India.

The Indian delegation also suggested that each country may have a moderate basic travel quote of, say Rs.500/- per annum, for travel to the other country on a reciprocal basis. Such a basic travel quota existed in both countries for travel to other countries but at present it did not cover travel between India and Pakistan. So far as India was concerned the main difficulty in extending the basic quota for travel to Pakistan had been the absence of a system of passports on which the exchange could be noted. Now that a system of passports was in force between the two countries there was no difficulty in introducing a basic travel quota for travel to Pakistan also on a reciprocal basis. The quota would be available for travel for any purpose whatsoever for business or otherwise. The Pakistan delegation stated that they did have a basic travel quota for India for about a year but this was discontinued as India did not allow the same facility. They would now consider the Indian suggestion for the revival of the basic travel quota on a reciprocal basis.

9. Item 3(e) - Customs. The common set of Baggage Rules agreed upon by the two countries in 1948 had been considerably expanded by India from time to time to facilitate passenger traffic. She had also given wide publicity by printing and otherwise to these Baggage rules as well as to migrants' concessions. No up-to-date list of Baggage Rules prevailing in Pakistan was readily available. It was, therefore, agreed that Pakistan will give wide publicity to these Rules and concessions. The customs authorities of the two countries should also get together as early as possible to work out a revised set of common Baggage rules based upon reciprocity and considerations of public convenience for implementation simultaneously by the two Governments by December, 1953.

10. As it is the policy of both Governments to ensure the utmost free flow of traffic between the two countries, the Customs authorities in working out these revised Rules should bear in mind the need for as liberal a treatment as possible to the passengers.

11. The Indian delegation drew attention to paragraph 3(2) of the Agreement of April, 1948, as modified by the Agreement of December of the same year under which the two Governments undertook to establish parallel land customs stations corresponding to each of the land customs stations on the other side within a prescribed period. This undertaking has not been fully implemented by the Government of Pakistan although the matter has been continuously under correspondence with that Government. Pakistan stated that since the introduction of the passport system in October, 1952, a certain number of Passport check posts, which have also been designated as land customs stations have been opened by Pakistan parallel to the land customs stations on the Indian side. India stated that even so there are still a few more parallel stations to be opened on the Pakistan side, corresponding to the stations on the Indian side and the routes connecting these parallel stations to be prescribed. A list of the stations yet to be opened and the routes to be prescribed is annexed (Annexure "C"). The Pakistan delegation agreed that the matter should be considered by Member, C.B.R., India and Member, C.B., R., Pakistan and concrete proposals formulated for the approval of their respective Governments. If no satisfactory agreement was reached before 31st December, 1953, the point of disagreement should be reported to the Steering committee for further action.
12. The Indian delegation stated that considerable difficulty was being experienced on account of Pakistan's insistence upon sealing certain intransit goods like bamboo and bamboo-Kanchis and that it was not practicable to seal such goods.

Pakistan stated that the difficulty arose only in rare cases where the seals of intransit goods had been working satisfactorily. It was however agreed that so long as the quantity declared in the intransit customs documents accompanying the goods agreed with the quantity and goods in transit, the movement of such goods should not be interfered with.

13. Item 12- Issue of Clearance Certificates to intending migrants.

The Pakistan Delegation strongly pressed for the acceptance of the proposal made by them at the last Indo-Pakistan Conference that migrants to India should also have a clearance certificate issued by the Government of Pakistan in addition to the usual migration certificate. The Indian Delegation referred to their past discussions and correspondence on this matter and regretted their inability to resile from their past position. Nothing in their view has happened since then to effect this. The Pakistan Delegation did not accept the Indian view and suggested that the matter should be further pursued by correspondence.

14. Item 9- Agreement regarding river crafts of both East Bengal and West Bengal using the entire width of a navigable river where the midline of the river forms the common boundary between East and West Bengal.

The Pakistan Delegation agreed to examine the proposals made by the Indian Delegation for an agreement of the type suggested by them (Vide Annexure D).

15. Item 11(a). From the Prime Ministers’ Agreement of April, 1950, and its August Annexure- Freedom and facilities for disposal of immovable properties of Members of the Minority Communities (including migrants).

The Indian Delegation stated that the recent modifications of the law in East Bengal according to which the owners were required to accept the original allottees as their tenants with the original rent even after the de-requisitioning led in actual fact to additional hardship to the owners. Under the East Bengal Scheme, the original sub-tenant of the Government in these properties was allowed to continue in occupation even after the de-requisitioning. Apart from the fact, therefore, that the owner did not get any benefit out of the de-requisitioning, he also suffered additional hardship in that it was now difficult for him to realize the rent from the occupant. The Pakistan delegation stated that this matter was already under correspondence. With regard to permission for sale of more than 10 bighas at a time the position is that the law was promulgated before the Prime Ministers’ Agreement and is applicable to all persons irrespective of their community. Also that District Officers have discretion to permit such sales for reasonable and \textit{bona fide} purpose (District Magistrates having already been informed that “migration” would constitute a reasonable and \textit{bona fide} purpose). The Pakistan Delegation however promised to enquire into the specific cases of refusal reported by the Government of India.

The Indian Delegation stated that it was reported to them that the East Bengal Government had instructed their registration officers not to register sale deed of the properties of Hindu residents without the production of clearance certificate from the local revenue officers showing that all Government loans had been repaid. The Pakistan delegation stated that no such instructions had been issued by the East Bengal Government. Registration officers had, however, been instructed that in regard to all persons whether Hindus or Muslims, to whom Government loans had been made, it should be checked up whether they had repaid their loans before the sales of their property were registered.

16. \textbf{Item 11(b) From the Prime Minister’s Agreement} – Restrictions on the removal of movable properties by migrants.

It was agreed that the publication of uniform Baggage Rules as already agreed to by the two Delegations would solve the difficulties envisaged under this item.

17. \textbf{Item 11(c) From the Prime Minister’s Agreement} – Legislation regarding forcible conversion and search and custody of abducted women.

18. \textbf{Item 11(d) – From the Prime Ministers’ Agreement} – Minority Commissions and District and Sub-Divisional Minority Boards.

The Pakistan delegation stated that the Provincial Minority Commission in East Bengal had now been reconstituted and should be able to meet regularly. They stated that there had been a certain amount of misunderstanding in the past in regard to the supply of information to India about the meetings of the Minority Boards. This had been removed, and information would be supplied in future.

It was agreed that the Minority Boards should meet every month even though there was no formal agenda for such meetings. In regard to the proceedings of the meetings, the Pakistan delegation explained that they maintained registers of complaints in which were entered the complaints made during the meetings, and the action taken on them. These registers were open for inspection to the members of the Board at the subsequent meeting. They, however, agreed to adopt the practice of having the proceedings of one meeting confirmed at the next meeting. India stated that this was being done already in their country.

19. \textbf{Item 11(e) From the Prime Ministers’ Agreement} Requisitioning and payment of rent and compensation for rural properties.
The Pakistan Delegation explained that they requisitioned only fallow land when required and they understood that a similar practice prevailed in the Eastern Zone States of India.

They noted the suggestion made by the Indian Delegation that blocks of land in which minority interests were more than 50% should not be requisitioned, and suggested that the matter should be discussed between the two Minority Ministers. The Indian Delegation further suggested that in every such case of requisitioning a minimum area for the actual subsistence of the owner should be exempted. The Pakistan Delegation promised to consider this Proposal.

20. Item 4 - Border Trade. The arrangement for border trade was discussed in the light of the agreement previously reached at Delhi on general principles. While Pakistan Delegation were willing to exempt border trade in specified commodities and quantities from the operation of import and export and foreign exchange regulations, they were unable to exempt it from customs duties. No agreed decision was, therefore, reached.

3451. Record of informal discussion between Commonwealth Secretary Ministry of External Affairs B.F.H.B. Tyabji and Pakistan Foreign Secretary Agha Hilaly on the 2nd October, 1953 at Calcutta.

India would look into the Pakistan complaint that the Indian Defence Ministry were giving visas to Pakistani Defence Personnel generally valid for only a fortnight. In regard to the general question of the validity of the visas both sides will issue fresh instructions that in cases where the period of validity of the particular category of visa was stipulated, the visa issuing authority normally should not reduce this period. In other cases also, as for example, in ‘C’ category visas, the period applied for by the applicant should be granted normally. Both India and Pakistan will issue instructions in this regard.

2. Both India and Pakistan confirmed that they were issuing visas for tourists liberally.

3. In regard to visits to the former closed districts, both sides confirmed that visas were granted without a compulsory prior reference to the Home Governments.

4. The Pakistan Deputy High Commissioner in Calcutta stated that he was now issuing visas on the receipt of the postal orders without waiting for them to be cleared. He suggested, however, that the applicants should mention in their applications the Nos. of the money orders. He also stated that normally his office was granting the visa within five working days.

5. Both sides stated that there was considerable improvement in checking done at the visa check posts. There was, however, room for improvement and it was suggested in that regard that it would save expenditure and time if both sides checked only the incoming people. For example, the Pakistan check post will check the people entering Pakistan and take down the necessary particulars. A carbon copy of these particulars would be supplied to the Indian check post. This was feasible as both sides had identical forms to be filled in. It was agreed to consider this suggested further.

6. There were report that lepers, cripples, beggars, etc. were being sent by East Bengal authorities to India across the Darsana and Bangaon border by train and that the Indian authorities were sending them back to East Bengal. This was going on for some time. It was agreed that instructions should be issued to stop such practice.

7. Mr. Hilaly agreed to examine cases of Indian nationals who had not been granted 'E' and 'F' category visas and would also issue fresh instructions that such visas should be granted as liberally as possible.

8. As a result of the agreement reached at the Eastern Zone Conference in regard to the grant of multi-journey 'D' (official) visas, the difficulties experienced by P.&.T. staff and Surveyor- General’s staff on the border will disappear. It was also agreed that these P. & T. and S.G. people crossing the border on official business would not be required to enter or depart through check posts.

9. It was agreed that the two sides might issue executive instructions to their staff at the border not to take legal action against people who crossed the border through over-sight or over-stayed the period of their visa by a day or so again through over-sight or other bonafide difficulties.

10. Mr. Hilaly suggested that as the Pakistan Deputy High Commissioner in Calcutta was not accredited to the Government of Assam, their Assistant High Commissioner to be appointed at Shillong would have to be independent and directly accredited to the State Government. Alternatively, the Deputy High Commissioner at Calcutta would have to be accredited to the Government of Assam in which event the Assistant High Commissioner would be working under him. The Assistant High Commissioner in Bombay will, of course, function under the High Commissioner at Delhi. Mr. Tyabji agreed to consider this proposal and send his reply urgently.

11. It was agreed that there should be increased contact between the Government of India Branch Secretariat and the Deputy High Commissioner in Calcutta and similarly between the Government of India, External Affairs Ministry and the Deputy High Commissioner at Dacca. (sic)

12. It was suggested that in view of the increasing number of protests being received by either side regarding objectionable writings in the press of the other country, unofficial convention might be established that the two sides will protest only against the objectionable writings in certain specified papers which had large circulation and generally considered representative of particular shades of opinion. This suggestion would be considered further.

13. It was agreed that the Government of India should discuss with the Pakistan High Commissioner in Delhi and remove as soon as possible restrictions on the Deputy High Commissioners of the two countries in Lahore and Jullundur on a reciprocal basis.

14. Mr. Hilaly agreed to expedite and inform Mr. Tyabji regarding:

(a) the question of evacuation of Ghatti Kamalewala;
(b) the release of the 12 policemen of Rohidi; and,
(c) the release of the two military officers whose cases had been mentioned at the last meeting of the Steering Committees.

15. He stated that the view of the Pakistan Government was that all Government servants held in the custody of the either side on the West Pakistan and Indian border should be released reciprocally.

16. Mr. Tyabji would write to Mr. Hilaly in connection with the death of the five Santhal women on the Bihar border in accordance with their personal discussions in regard to that case.

(iii) Freedom of movement: This matter was also discussed between us at Karachi and at Delhi, and I thought that you completely agreed with me on the desirability of doing everything possible to bring back the conditions in the eastern zone to normality. We had generally discussed the possibility of doing away with the visa system or of making it much simpler than it was at present for this purpose. I was therefore surprised to read in the minutes of the Sub-Committee dealing with this question that the Pakistan delegation were not prepared to consider any modification in the passport and visa scheme which did not apply to both wings of Pakistan; and that further in their opinion any major modification of the main principles of the scheme which had only recently been introduced would be premature, but that they were otherwise willing to consider proposals for its liberalization. Nevertheless, when the Indian delegation put forward a concrete suggestion for the liberalization of the existing visa system which would apply to both wings of Pakistan, namely, a system by which a passport holder anywhere in India or in Pakistan could visit the other country for a limited period, say, two months, without having to obtain a visa, the Pakistan delegation stated that this proposal was impracticable administratively, and the facilities proposed were not commensurate with the difficulties involved. They were also not willing to consider the reduction of the existing number of categories of visas—‘A’, ‘B’, ‘C’, ‘D’, ‘E’ and ‘F’—to bring the Indo-Pakistan passport and visa system more in conformity with international practice, and more particularly with Commonwealth practice.

I suggest that the right attitude of the Pakistan delegation towards a subject which adversely affects the daily lives of thousands of people in India and Pakistan is not in conformity with the principles that we wished our two Governments to keep in mind when dealing with it. There can be no normality established in the relations between our two peoples so long as these abnormal restrictions on their movement are maintained. I hope you will agree with me that the matter requires to be examined with a broader outlook, bearing in mind the larger objectives that you and I had in view, when we agreed on the need for reducing the hardships and inconvenience caused by the present passport and visa system to the minimum necessary, for ensuring the safety and security of our two countries.
[During the talks about the liberalization of travel conditions between East Bengal and the border Indian States, the Indian delegation suggested that there should be free movement based on the system operating between two Commonwealth countries. Statistics showed that about 97 per cent of those who had applied for visas since the enforcement of the existing arrangements had been granted visas by either country. So the Indian delegation suggested the abolition of the visa system. The suggestion was not acceptable to the Pakistan representatives who thought that the “changes should be gradual.”]

My Dear Trivedi,

Sub: Opening of Visa Office in Hyderabad, Sind.

I saw Hilaly today. It appears that the Cabinet has not accepted the designation “Assistant High Commissioner” for officers to be appointed in charge of these Visa Offices. Hilaly also now seemed to think that it was not necessary to give diplomatic status to these officers. I am naturally pressing for at least diplomatic status even if the designation is for the present “Passport Officer”. We should succeed in this.

2. I have been shown a letter from the Foreign Office to the Chief Secretary, Sind, to give every facility to us to find suitable accommodation for our Visa Office at Hyderabad, Sind. I know the Chief Secretary well and am confident that he will help us. As we do not want any complications to arise, I suggest that we open the office almost immediately and place Mahindroo in charge. The Cabinet there is quite capable of changing its mind overnight.
3. The Pakistan authorities will be again requesting us for extending the time limit for issuing passports to Pakistan and Indian Nationals who have not so far been given these travel documents. I suppose we will have no objection.

Yours sincerely

Letter from Pakistan High Commissioner Ghazanfar Ali Khan to Commonwealth Secretary B.F.H.B. Tyabji.

New Delhi, November 26, 1953.

No.F.13(86)P/53.  26th November, 1953

My Dear Trivedi,

You will recall that at the Indo-Pakistan Conference in January 1953, which has since been ratified by both the Governments, the decisions on the subject of closed districts was as follows:-

“7. Land routes and closed districts.
(a) No district in either country will be closed to the nationals of the other country. Applications for visas to all destinations in India or Pakistan will be considered.”

2. We could reasonably have assumed that one of the important consequences of this decision would have been the speedy abolition of all unnecessary restrictions on the movements of our respective Deputy High Commissioners and their diplomatic staff in Jullundur and Lahore.

3. I do not think that any analysis of the reasons as to why this happy result did not immediately follow, will serve any purpose, as what is important is not what has happened in the past, but what can be achieved in the future. I know that you yourself have been thinking about this subject and I understand that it was discussed by you informally at Calcutta on October the 3rd, with Hilaly.

4. The restrictions on the movements of our diplomats in those regions, are I am sure we are all agreed, unnecessarily vexatious, and besides interfering with the normal diplomatic activities of our respective officials, are not in the least conductive to the promotion of an atmosphere of cordiality which is so highly desirable, between our countries.

5. When I was in Lahore recently, I had occasion to discuss this question with the Pakistan officials there and I was glad to find that they were in complete agreement with me that all existing unnatural restrictions should be withdrawn. I am, therefore, writing to propose that your Government should agree to withdraw all restrictions on our Deputy High Commissioner and his diplomatic staff in Jullundur which do not apply to my diplomatic staff in Delhi. I shall, on my part, request the Government of Pakistan to likewise lift all unnecessary restrictions on the Indian Deputy High Commissioner and his diplomatic staff in Lahore. The net result will be that your officers and our officers in Lahore and Jullundur would have complete freedom of movement within their jurisdictions, and will only be required to give reasonable notice of their movements outside their headquarters to the local authorities concerned.

Yours sincerely

No. D. O. 12 – PSP/53 7th December, 1953

Subject: Extension of time limit for the issue of passports to Indian and Pakistan nationals in the other country.

My Dear Atal,

Will you please refer to your D.O. letter No.DHC/53/PV dated the 2nd November, enclosing a copy of Hilaly’s letter to you of the 18th November?

2. As you must have observed, this is the fourth time that the Government of Pakistan have approached us with a request for extension of the grace period allowed to their nationals resident in India since before the 15th of October 1952. The Government of Pakistan imposed the passport and visa system despite our protest and it is difficult to understand how, after a year of its working they should come to us for the extension of an arrangement which was, by its very nature, designed to cover a short transitional period. Such extensions make, as it were, a mockery of the scheme. After three extensions and after a period of over 14 months, there is no justification for any national not to have secured a proper passport and an adequate visa. We can therefore, hardly accede to Pakistan’s request.

3. Unfortunately, however, we are faced with an embarrassing problem regarding our Assistant High Commissioners in Hyderabad and Rajshahi. It appears that, despite the fact that it was Hilaly who made the suggestion for this designation to the Commonwealth Secretary and despite the agreement between them, the Pakistan Government are hesitating to accept this designation and, what is worse, even to grant diplomatic status to these officers. You may, therefore, sound Hilaly on the subject whether the Government of Pakistan will be prepared to implement their agreement, namely, that of granting the status of Assistant High Commissioner to the two officers (including the grant of diplomatic status) if, at the same time, we acceded to their request as a very special case and allowed an extension of the grace period for further period of three months, i.e. till the 31st of March, 1954.

4. I may emphasise here that we have not yet made up our minds finally regarding the question of extension. We are consulting Banerji and Acharya and shall be in position to give our final views after their comments have been received. Meanwhile, we shall be grateful if you would sound Hilaly as proposed, and let us have urgently his reaction.

Yours sincerely

Sub: Restrictions on the Deputy High Commissioners and their staff in Pakistan and India.

My Dear Raja Sahib,

Please refer to my D.O. letter No. CS (T) 695 of the 26th November, 1953

2. We agree that the two Governments should withdraw all restrictions on the movements of the Deputy High Commissioners at Jullundur and Lahore and on their diplomatic staff; in other words that they should have complete freedom of movement within their jurisdiction and should only be required to give reasonable notice of their movements outside their headquarters to the local authorities concerned.

3. I understand that some restrictions are placed on the diplomatic staff of the Deputy High Commissioners at Calcutta and Dacca as well. The diplomatic officers of these sub-Missions are required to obtain special permission from the local authorities for paying visits outside their Headquarters, if they are not accompanies by their Deputy High Commissioners. I suggest that these restrictions should also be removed. They should have the same freedom of movement within their respective jurisdictions, subject, of course, to reasonable notice being given of their visits, as proposed for their colleagues at Jullundur and Lahore.

4. We shall issue instructions accordingly as soon as I hear from you that this is acceptable to your Govt.

3457. Recommendations for a Revised Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme.

Karachi, April 12, 1955.

1. The various categories of visas will be abolished, except for ‘A’ and ‘E’ (Transport workers) category visas. Those visas will be issued liberally to those who are eligible.

2. ‘Diplomatic’, ‘Non-diplomatic’ and official visas will be granted as at present.

3. In all other cases, a visa on the international model will be issued, valid for a period of up to one year according to the needs of the traveler. This visa may be either a single journey visa or a multiple journey visa or a transit visa. This visa will be issued freely by the visa-issuing authorities without any reference being made to State and Provincial Governments or the Central Governments of the two countries, except in the case of retired and active Police officials. In the case of Defence personnel, the present system of applying through the Ministry of Defence concerned will continue. The present system for Seamen visas will also continue.

4. Visas will be valid for the whole country proposed to be visited. The traveler will give his address in the country to be visited where correspondence would reach him.
5. Visa holders will not be required to report to the Police either in writing or in person. Any person who over stays the period of his visa will be liable to summary deportation.

6. The present system of travel on emergency certificates and Migration Certificates will continue. The present facilities being granted to Pardanashin (under veil) ladies will also continue.

Karachi, April 12, 1955.

The Pakistan Minister for the Interior, Major General Iskander Mirza, and India’s Minister for Rehabilitation, Mr. Mehr Chand Khanna, held discussions in Karachi on the 9th April, 1955, and subsequent days, in regard to migration from one country to another, improvement in rail communications, improvement of travel facilities between the two countries, and exodus of members of the minority community from East Pakistan. The Ministers were assisted by official Advisers.

2. Complete agreement was reached in regard to all matters discussed. The Ministers agreed that travel between the two countries should be facilitated by the provision of a less cumbersome system of visas and establishment of additional check-posts and authorized routes between the two countries. It was agreed to establish two authorized routes on the West Pakistan border, one at Khokhrapar and the other at Gandasinghwala. It is expected that establishment of the authorized route via Khokhrapar with railway facilities and check-posts will lead to bona fide travelers using this route with valid travel documents and that the movement of unauthorized persons without travel documents will cease.

3. Restoration of Railway communications between West Pakistan and India and through running of railways between West Bengal and Assam through East Pakistan was also discussed.

4. On the question of the exodus of members of the minority community from East Pakistan, the Ministers agreed that confidence should be restored as rapidly as possible among the minority community in East Pakistan. The Government of Pakistan has assured the minority community that their interest and security would be fully guarded and that returning migrants would be taken back to their homes and their properties restored to them.

No.PII/54/679110/201 13th April, 1955

Office Memorandum

The undersigned is directed to forward herewith a copy of the minutes of a meeting held in Karachi on the 9th April, 1955, between the Minister for Rehabilitation and the Pakistan Minister for the Interior. Attention is particularly invited to paragraphs 1, 3 (with enclosure) and 5 of the minutes. The agreements reached on the issues covered by these paragraphs are in accordance with the decisions already reached by the Government of India on them. As far as the enclosure to paragraph 3 is concerned, a copy has already been sent separately to Shri Fateh Singh of the Ministry of Home Affairs with a suggestion that a detailed scheme based on these recommendations should be worked out by the Ministry of External Affairs in consultation with the Ministry of Home Affairs.

2. The Minister for Rehabilitation has stated that the approval of the Government of Pakistan to the minutes is expected today or tomorrow and has suggested that the approval of the Government of India to the decisions reached in the minutes should also be taken before the Prime Minister’s departure for Bandung. A copy of the Rehabilitation Minister’s telegram to the Prime Minister on the subject has been forwarded separately to the Secretary. Ministry of Home Affairs.
It is, therefore, requested that the Ministry of Home Affairs may please communicate their approval to the decisions reached in the minutes immediately.

The Prime Minister has recorded the following minute in this connection:—

“For my part, I agree with these recommendations for simplification of visas. Presumably Trivedi has arrived here today. There is a Cabinet meeting on the 14th April at 12. This matter might be mentioned at that Cabinet meeting.”

3460. Letter from High Commissioner for India C. C. Desai to Pakistan Acting Foreign Secretary M. S. A. Baig.

Karachi, April 26, 1955.

High Commissioner for India
Karachi

My dear Baig,

I enclose herewith a copy of a letter which I have just sent to General Iskander Mirza, the Hon’ble Minister for the Interior. Even after ratification, it is possible that some discussions may have to be held to work out the details of the scheme. Our people are working out these details and it is hoped that similar action is being taken at this end so that once the two governments have ratified the Scheme, there is no delay in putting it into force so as to afford relief to the thousands of persons anxiously waiting for this liberalization.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

High Commissioner for India
Karachi.

No. H. C. 55/161
April 26, 1955.

My dear Iskender,

You could kindly remember that in the recent discussions between your goodself and our Minister for Rehabilitation, Mehr Chand Khanna, certain recommendations were made for a revised Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme subject to ratification by the two Governments. A copy of the recommendations in enclosed for facility of reference.

2. I have now been informed by my Government that they have approved the minutes of the meeting held in Karachi on the 9th April, 1955, and that the Government of India agree to the recommendations for the revised Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme.

3. We would be grateful to know when ratification by the Government of Pakistan is expected.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

SECRET

Letter from Prime Minister’s Secretariat to Home Secretary
A. V. Pai.

New Delhi, May 5, 1955.

Prime Minister’s Secretariat
New Delhi.

My Dear Pai,

You will recall that from time to time, during the last year or two, Prime Minister has written suggesting that the issue of visas to Pakistanis should be made less stringent. Under Prime Minister’s directions, we have on a number of occasions, written on the same lines and have also brought to the notice of the Home Ministry, specific cases in which it was felt that a lenient view is regard to the grant of visas would be justified. As, under the recent agreement reached with the Pakistan Government, this question is being reviewed by the Home Ministry, in consultation with the External Affairs Ministry, I thought, it would be desirable to invite your attention to this matter, so that the views communicated by the Prime Minister may be kept in mind.

2. As regards general indication of Prime Minister’s mind on this subject, I give the following two extracts from minutes recorded by him:

i) From minute dated the 20th December, 1954. Marked to the Commonwealth Secretary—

“Our rules about visas for Pakistan, in spite of liberalization, are still very rigid and very hard. We treat these people much worse than any other foreigner.”

ii) From minute dated the 29th September, 1954, sent to you with my letter No. D/S.11160. dated the 30th September, 1954.

“In regard to Pakistan, special rules were laid down because of special circumstances. These circumstances have gradually ceased to have any relevance, and there is no reason why the average Pakistani should not be allowed to come here unless there is some special reason to the contrary.”

These and many other indications of the Prime Minister’s mind on the subject which are available with the Home Ministry would indicate that the Prime Minister generally feels that for the purpose of granting visas to Pakistanis, the conditions laid down should, at the least, be as liberal as the conditions subject to which visas are granted to nationals of other Commonwealth countries, and that in granting visas no distinction need be made between Pakistan nationals who originally belonged to the territory now within the Indian Union and other Pakistan nationals, merely on this ground.

3. Apart from this question of general approach, the majority of cases in which we had to intercede with the Home Ministry fall under certain well defined categories. In cases of this kind, the normal rules at present in force seem to lead to greater hardship than in other cases, and therefore, while considering liberalization of the visa system these types of cases should be given special consideration:

i) Cases in which evacuee property issues are involved. As a matter of fact, the question of evacuees property should be completely de-linked from the visa system. We have made this suggestion to the Home Ministry previously, but up to now no decision on it has been reached ii) Cases of re-union of divided families. Further liberalization of provisions relating to re-union of divided families will be desirable and for this purpose the family should be given a wider meaning than at present.

iii) Cease of recovered abducted women who want to come and live in India after having been sent to Pakistan. No special difficulty in such cases should arise because of the fact that the person concerned is a recovered abducted woman. Cases of this nature should be judged on the same basis as other cases.

4. I am sending a copy of this letter to S. Dutt.

Yours Sincerely

Karachi, May 12, 1955.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs & Commonwealth Relations
Government of Pakistan
Karachi

No. 1042/JS(E)/55 12th May, 1955.

Kindly refer to our discussions of yesterday regarding liberalization of travel facilities between India and Pakistan. In this connection, please refer to the last sentence of paragraph 3 of the recommendations in regard to the revised Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme prepared by Trivedi and myself, which provides for continuance of the existing arrangements of visas for seamen.

2. Our recommendations were intended to bring the Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme in line with the normal international pattern, and in one respect it goes even further in that it confines the police check only to the place of entry. We, therefore now feel, on close examination, that it is illogical to continue the existing arrangement for sea-men, which is not in keeping with international practice, and is a cumbersome procedure involving inconvenience. We would, therefore, request you to agree to bring the provision for seamen in line with the normal international practice as is really contemplated in the revised scheme.

3. On receipt of your approval to the above, necessary arrangement will be made to obtain the agreement of the Government of Pakistan to the recommendations for the revised Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme.

No. D/S – 4591 May 15, 1955

My Dear Pai,

Will you kindly refer to my letter No. D/S/4379 dated the 6th May, 1955, regarding liberalization of issue of visas to Pakistanis. I also submitted a note on the same lines to the Prime Minister. He has asked me to forward copies of that note (enclosed) to you and to S. Dutt, and to suggest that the points raised in it should be considered before finalizing the new proposals which are at present being worked out. In view of the interest which Prime Minister has taken in this matter, I think, it will be desirable to show to him that final proposals in regard to these points before they are put into force.

2. I am told that in pursuance of a recent Cabinet decision proposals for liberalization of the visa system were discussed some days ago between the External Affairs Ministry and the Home Ministry. I hope, at this meeting the points raised in the attached note, especially the question of de-linking of grant of long-term visas from evacuee property issues, were given consideration. The question of de-linking of grant of long-term visas from evacuee property issues has been raised with the Home Ministry on many occasions during the last year or so.

3. I am sending a copy of this letter to S. Dutt.

Prime Minister’s Secretariat

During the last year or two on various occasions Prime Minister has written to the Home Ministry and to the External Affairs Ministry pointing out that the issue of visas to Pakistanis should be liberalized. We have also on many occasions, following indications from the Prime Minister, invited the attention of the Ministries concerned to the hardships that are involved under the present visa rules. Up to now, however, no substantial liberalization of the visa system has taken place. Under the recent agreement reached with Pakistan, which has been accepted by the Government of India, the details of the new visa system to be enforced are now being worked out. This is a suitable opportunity therefore for giving effect to the Prime Minister’s wishes in regard to the liberalization of this system.

2. I quote below one or two examples of the indications given by the Prime Minister of the line the liberalization should take:

i) From minute dated the 20th December, 1954, marked to the Commonwealth Secretary—

“Our rules about visas for Pakistan, in spite of liberalization, are still very rigid and very hard. We treat these people much worse than any other foreigner.”

ii) From minute dated the 29th September, 1954.—Copy sent with a letter from me to the Home Secretary—

These and many other indications of the Prime Minister’s mind on the subject which are available to the Ministries concerned would appear to indicate that the Prime Minister generally feels that the conditions subject to which visas are granted to Pakistanis should approximate as far as possible to the conditions subject to which they are granted to nationals of other Commonwealth countries. There are obviously circumstances peculiar to the relationship existing between India and Pakistan. Special types of visas may be necessary to meet particular groups of persons, as for instance, people who have to move across the border in pursuit of their daily avocation or for Defence Personnel and civilian Government servants and for seamen. But in respect of visas for persons who do not fall within any of these special categories, the approach mentioned above would appear to be justified.

3. Apart from this question of general approach, the majority of the cases in which we have had to intercede with the Home Ministry fall under three well defined categories. In cases of this kind, specially where the request is for a long-term visa, which at present means a visa for one year, the normal rules at present in force lead to hardship. Therefore, while considering reform of the visa system, special attention should be paid to ensure that these categories of persons do not suffer from any disabilities.

(i) Linking of the grant of long-term visas with evacuee property issues:

Somehow the question of grant of long-term visas continues to remain linked with issues connected with evacuee property. At the beginning when the system of permanent resettlement permits existed, the grant of such a permit implied that if the person concerned had any evacuee property it would be restored. Later, cases began to occur in which while granting permanent resettlement permit it was made clear that no undertaking was implied about the restoration of the evacuee property. However, when the visa system came into force, the original link with evacuee property issues was not broken. Requests for long-term visas have to be cleared through the Rehabilitation Ministry and the Custodian’s Organisation. I know some cases in which for the last year and a half Prime Minister has taken personal interest, but in which up to now, in spite of our repeated efforts, it has not been possible to secure longer visas because the cases have not yet been cleared through the Rehabilitation Ministry and the Custodian’s Organisation.

By granting a long-term visa no implication is created that if the person has any evacuee property, his claim for its restoration will in any way be strengthened. All that is implied is that the Government of India has no objection to the person’s more or less permanent stay in this country. Therefore, it is a little difficult to understand why this link is being maintained. Recently, the evacuee property law has been abrogated. Continuance of the link will take away something from the grace and the political effect of this abrogation. Moreover, the number of cases in which there is any likelihood of evacuee property being restored has now become very limited and no new property can be declared evacuee property. If the link is maintained then for the purpose of covering a small number of cases in which any question of restoration of property can arise, all requests for long-term visas will have to be cleared through the Rehabilitation Ministry and thus cause delay.

(ii) Cases of re-union of divided families:

At the moment the provision in this respect is very restricted. If the head of a family is in India and his wife and minor children are in Pakistan, then the latter are allowed to come and stay in India without difficulty. Also, if the head of the family dies or divorces his wife in Pakistan, and the wife and minor children have no person to support them in Pakistan, they can come and live with their relatives in India. But other types of cases of re-union of families are not treated with any special consideration. I think, further liberalization of provisions relating to re-union of families will be desirable. Also for this purpose the family should be given a wider meaning than at present.

(iii) Recovered abducted women:

Cases have occurred in which recovered abducted women after being sent to Pakistan have expressed a desire to get long-term visas for residence in India with their friends or their relatives. I think, in these cases there should be no difficulty in granting long-term visas. As a matter of fact, if a recovered abducted woman applies for a long-term visa, it shows that after being recovered and sent to her relatives in Pakistan, she as a free agent prefers to come back to India, and therefore such requests should be considered with special sympathy.

4. I understand, recently the details of the passport and visa system were considered at a meeting between the Ministries of External Affairs and Home Affairs. This was done, I believe, in pursuance of the Cabinet decision recently reached following the agreement with Pakistan on this question. I am not sure whether the points mentioned above were considered at this meeting in the light of the general approach indicated by the Prime Minister on earlier occasions. If Prime Minister approves, I shall forward a copy of this note to Shri A.V. Pai and to Shri S. Dutt, suggesting that Prime Minister would like that these aspects of the visa system should be considered before finalizing proposals about liberalization and reform of the system.

My dear Baig,

Will you kindly refer to the correspondence resting with your letter No.1042/JS(E)/55 dated the 12th May, 1955, regarding liberalization of travel facilities between India and Pakistan. The High Commissioner has since discussed the matter with Major-General Iskander Mirza, Minister of Interior. I understand that this matter was also discussed between Major-General Mirza and Shri G.B. Pant(Home Minister of India) recently at Delhi, and that it was agreed that the recommendations as they stand now should be ratified and that further questions like changes in the existing arrangements for seamen should be taken up separately for discussion after ratification. I trust therefore that you will now proceed to obtain the agreement of the Pakistan government to the agreed recommendations for the revised Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme.

2. With regard to para.2 of your letter under reply, it is not only the procedure laid down for seamen which deviates from international practice or involves inconvenience. It would be seen from para.3 of the recommendations that retired and active police officials and members of the defence personnel also have to adopt a special procedure. Similarly the present system of emergency and migration certificates and facilities granted to purdah ladies are also retained.

Yours sincerely

3465. SECRET

Letter from Prime Minister’s Secretariat to Home Secretary A. V. Pai.

New Delhi, June 22, 1955.

Prime Minister’s Secretariat
New Delhi.

No. F.29/303-H/54-PMP June 22, 1955

My dear Pai,

Will you kindly refer to your letter No.20/82/54-F.II. dated the 21st May, 1955, regarding liberalization of issue of visas to Pakistan nationals? With regard to the three specific points referred to in this correspondence. I offer the following remarks:—

i) De-linking of the grant of visas from evacuee property issues

In this connection I invite your attention to Chandra’s letter No.231/S. dated the 9th June, 1955, to you, copy of which he also sent to me. The Rehabilitation Ministry have now reconsidered this matter and in paragraph 2 of his letter Chandra says that he has “no objection to the issue of long term visas to Pakistani nationals being entirely de-linked from the evacuee property issue, and reference to this Ministry (Rehabilitation Ministry) in such cases need not be made.” I hope in view of this the Home Ministry now will not have any difficulty in de-linking the question of grant of visas from the evacuee property issue, and in dispensing with clearance from the Rehabilitation Ministry of application before granting of visas.

ii) Cases of re-union of divided families

We note that in issuing visas to cases of divided families the Home Ministry has now considerably liberalized their policy and are interpreting the term “divided family” as widely as possible. We shall be obliged if a copy of the instructions now in force or proposed to be issued for this purpose to the different visa issuing authorities is sent to us for our record.

iii) Recovered abducted Women:

It is true that cases in which recovered abducted women have requested for long-term visas have been very few. This is bound to be so, because the number of recovered abducted women in proportion to the rest of the population is insignificant. While the considerations you have mentioned are relevant, there is another point in cases of this kind which needs being kept in mind. I believe, the Government of India's policy is that no recovered abducted woman should be sent to Pakistan against her will. If a recovered abducted woman after being sent to Pakistan applies for a long-term visa to enable her to stay in India permanently, it shows that somehow something went wrong and that she as a free agent prefers to stay in India rather than in Pakistan. If this is so, and then in accordance with the policy of the Government of India in regard to restoration of abducted women to Pakistan she should be given a long-term visa for stay in India without difficulty. I hope you will kindly consider this aspect of the matter also and take suitable action.

2. With regard to the revised visa scheme, copy of which has been forwarded to our High Commission in Pakistan, there are one or two points to which I would like to invite your attention.

i) In paragraph 17 of part II of this scheme it is stated that no prior reference by visa issuing authorities to the Central Government, or to the State Government or to their agencies will be necessary, except in cases mentioned in paragraph 16. I am not quite sure whether this wording is quite correct. Is it the intention that long-term visas covered by paragraph 7(a) of Part II of the scheme should also be given by visa issuing authorities without prior reference to Central Government? Paragraph 17 as it is worded at present would suggest that this is the intention.

ii) In regard to the three specific matters referred to in paragraph 1 above, I think, it will be necessary to introduce some change in paragraph 7(a)(3) of Part II of this scheme to ensure complete de-linking of the grant of long-term visas from evacuee property issues. It is possible that this paragraph may have to be omitted because now there is no question of giving re-settlement facilities in India. The form of application prescribed at Appendix 4 will also, I think, require to be omitted. About liberalization of policy in regard to cases of re-union of divided families and about requests for long-term visas from recovered abducted women it is possible that you may wish to issue suitable executive instructions to the visa issuing authorities rather than to incorporate specifically provisions in regard to liberalization of policy in this scheme.

3. You will notice that in regard to the three points mentioned in paragraph 1 above, some action can be taken even now, pending enforcement of the system visualized in the scheme, copy of which has been sent to our High Commissioner in Pakistan. We shall be obliged if you will kindly let us know what action you consider feasible in regard to these points now, and to what extent you propose to incorporate provisions in regard to these points in the new proposed scheme.

4. After these matters have been considered by the Home Ministry and some decision on them has been reached, I think, it may be desirable to send a self-contained note for Prime Minister’s information indicating the points which he has raised from time to time in regard to liberalisation of issue of visas to Pakistan nationals and the manner in which the Home Ministry has decided to meet them (1) now under the present system, and (2) under the new scheme which is at present under consideration.

5. I am sending a copy of this letter to S. Dutt.

Yours sincerely

Desai to the Ministry of Railways.

High Commissioner for India,
Karachi

D. O. No. F. 80 (7)/55- Genl. August 12/13 1955

My dear Mathur,

The re-opening of the Khokhrapar - Munaboa route has come as a real blessing to people on this side. Karachi, as you knew, is full of refugees from U.P., Bombay and Rajasthan. They have often to go to the places from where they came, in order to meet relations, attend functions and perform ceremonies.
Then we have Ajmer Sharif not far from the border and easily accessible via Hyderabad. Next to Mecca and Medina, Ajmer is the most sacred shrine to the Mussalmans of the world in general and to the Mussalmans of this sub-continent in particular. Naturally, they are anxious to go there as often and in as large numbers as possible. There is no insecurity or uncertainty and there would be considerable traffic between Ajmer and Hyderabad. At present they have to change the train at Marwar, which is inconvenient. The object of this letter of mine is to suggest the running of two or three through-coaches between Hyderabad and Ajmer every day so that the passengers remain in their seats and do not have to change at the junction. There is plenty of traffic for the through-bogies. May I request that this matter may be given special attention and that the through-bogies may be introduced with effect from September 1, 1955?

2. Similarly, I would like two through-bogies to be started between Hyderabad and Ahmedabad. There will also be sufficient traffic on that line. As you know, this was contemplated when we discussed the resumption of Railways in April this year.

3. A few leading Muslim gentlemen of this place have seen me with this request and I know that this proposal has the personal blessing of the Acting Governor General, Iskander Mirza. He was also the author of the Agreement, although Dr. Khan Sahib, being the Communication Minister, signed the last Agreement. I hope that the operational arrangements on the Railway will not come in the way of the implementation of this proposal, which has been made in the best interest of the two countries. It will attract passengers and thus add to the revenues of our Railway. It would give facilities to the Muslims of Pakistan and thus encourage the desire in their minds to visit India. The more often they go to Ajmer, the more they would be attached to India, thus ruling out the possibility of conflict between the two countries. We are proud and lucky that we have on our soil an Institution like Ajmer Sharif, which is so sacred to the entire Muslim world and let us make it possible for the Muslims to visit the shrine with as great convenience and with as little discomfort as possible. Once you have agreed to start these coaches, I am going to write to the Home Ministry and suggest that people should be allowed to visit the shrine on any day and in any numbers, there being no need for prior intimation or for limitation of numbers or for any special arrangements. There is complete peace and security in our country and any Muslim from Pakistan can come and visit the shrine with an absolute sense of security.

4. I would be grateful for early and personal consideration of this request and for a reply at your earliest convenience.

With kind regards,

Yours Sincerely

Consideration of visa question for Pakistan Nationals in the Prime Minister’s Secretariat.

September 1955.

Prime Minister’s Secretariat

Prime Minister will recall that from time to time he has written over the last two or three years to the Home Ministry regarding the system of issue of visas to Pakistani nationals. The Home Ministry have now sent a self-contained note, (reproduced below) summarizing the various references made by the Prime Minister and the action taken in regard to them. There are three principal points in regard to the system of grant of visas to Pakistani nationals which require attention. The position in regard to these points is summarized below:

I. De-linking of the grant of visas from the evacuee property issue – paragraphs 5 and 9 of Home Ministry’s note:

(a) This question has been raised by us from time to time over a long period, but there has been considerable resistance to agree to the point of view which we have urged. However, after some discussions, which I had with Shri Mehr Chand Khanna and Shri C.N. Chandra, the Rehabilitation Ministry have now recognised that there is no connection whatever between the grant to a Pakistani national of a long-term visa and the question of restoration of evacuee property. However, in order to implement this, it is not sufficient merely to give up the practice of referring applications to the Rehabilitation Ministry. Certain other actions are also necessary. Home Ministry have suggested that at the time of grant of such visas the applicants will be informed in the following terms:

I do not think it is correct to give a warning in these terms. The last few words are meaningless. Because under the evacuee property law no proceedings can hereafter be launched. With regard to the first portion of the warning, it is hardly necessary to say this since there is in fact no connection between the grant of a visa and the evacuee property proceedings already launched. It is perhaps not sufficiently realized that a visa can be granted only when the applicant holds a Pakistani passport. By holding a Pakistani passport the applicant admits that he migrated to Pakistan and is now a Pakistani national. So the question of restoration of evacuee property in regard to which proceedings may have been already started does not in any way get prejudiced by the fact that a long-term visa has been allowed to him in the capacity of a Pakistani national.

(b) In paragraph 9 of their note the Home Ministry have taken the view that there is no need to revise the form of application for long-term visas, consequent on de-linking of this question from evacuee property issue. I do not agree with this view. The form asks for a number of particulars which can have a significance only if the application is to be considered from the point of view of evacuee property.

If this is not to be done then to ask for all those particulars which have a bearing on the evacuee property question appears to be unnecessary. Apart from this, I am afraid, it is not sufficiently realized, either here or in Pakistan, that in fact evacuee property law has been completely abrogated, except in cases in which proceedings have been started before a certain crucial date. Therefore, to continue to ask for all these particulars relating to evacuee property, when they are not in fact necessary for deciding whether visa should be granted or not, will merely help to create the impressions that while we say that the evacuee property law has been abrogated, in fact this has not been done. It is not at all clear to me how information regarding evacuee property is likely to help the Home Ministry in deciding whether visas should be granted or not, when it is admitted that evacuee property considerations are to be de-linked from the visa issue and will have no bearing on the question whether visas should be granted or not.

II. Recovered abducted women sent to Pakistan – paragraph 7 of Home Ministry’s notes.

It is true that requests from recovered abducted women sent to Pakistan for grant of long-term visas for resettlement in India are few. This is to be expected from the very nature of these cases, but the fact that the cases are few does not in any way affect the question how they should be treated. As a matter of fact, a case of this kind which came to our notice could be set right only with the personal intervention of the Prime Minister. We suggested to the Home Ministry that the policy of the Government of India is that no recovered abducted woman should be sent to Pakistan against her will. Therefore, if after going to Pakistan, a recovered abducted woman asks for a long-term visa with a view to permanent settlement in India, something must have gone wrong either when she was sent to Pakistan or her judgment in regard to the reception she was likely to get from her relatives in Pakistan was found to be wrong. Therefore, if she applies for a long-term visa for permanent settlement in India this should normally be given as a matter of course. Home Ministry somehow do not agree with this view. I have not been quite able to understand the line that they take. To my mind, cases of this kind, if security and other such considerations are not involved, deserve to be given long-term visas almost automatically in pursuance of our policy in regard to recovered abducted women.

III. Re-union of divided families—paragraph 6 of Home Ministry’s note:

Under the Indo-Pakistan Passport Agreement, 1953, Visas on the ground of re-union of families were given to the following categories of persons:—

i) where the head of the family was in one country and his wife and/or minor children were in the other, and

ii) Where the head of the family was dead or divorce had taken place, and the wife and/or minor children had no person to support them in that country.

It is now stated that though no fresh instructions have been issued, the home ministry is allowing re-union facilities to the following categories of Pakistani nationals on compassionate grounds—

i) Old and infirm persons who are unable to earn their livelihood in Pakistan and have their near relatives in India who can look after them.

ii) Young boys who though now major were minor at the time of migration to Pakistan and who have their parents in India and are dependent on them.

iii) Members of the minority community in Pakistan.

I do not see why no instructions have been issued making it clear that visas on grounds of re-union of families will also be granted on the three above-mentioned grounds. I also feel that these need to be further liberalized, for instance, in regard to item (ii) above, even if near relatives other than parents are in India of the boys who are dependent on them, I think, long-term visas should be granted.

2. If Prime Minister approves, I shall write to the Home Ministry on the above lines and suggest that action should be taken to incorporate these proposals in the present system for the issue of visas. I shall also suggest that these points should be kept in mind for incorporation in the new scheme for the issue of passports and visas, which may come into force as result of the talks held some time ago with Pakistan. The draft new scheme, which has been sent to the Pakistan Government, and to which their agreement has not so far been received, does not incorporate these points, and in so far as cases covered by the categories referred to above are concerned, more or less repeats the present situation. It will therefore be desirable to specifically draw the attention of the Home Ministry to this point. If in regard to any of these points it is considered that they can be given effect to more satisfactorily by executive instructions, without incorporating them in the new scheme, then there should be no objection to this course of action, but we may be informed of the executive instructions, which are proposed to be issued in regard to such points.

Prime Minister’s Secretariat

1. I agree with PPS. I think that the form of application is completely out of date, much too detailed and confusing. I have never heard of any such forms being filled except perhaps in the United States of America where there is a long inquisition about a person’s beliefs.

2. I do not understand why evacuee property should be brought into this picture at all. There is nothing to be done about evacuee property, now that the law has been abrogated and no fresh process can be started.

3. Also, I think that, in the case of abducted women, we should adopt a much more lenient attitude than suggested.

4. Further, I agree about the re-union of divided families.

5. Please draw the attention of the Home Ministry to all these matters and let me know what happens.

Note of the Ministry of Home Affairs referred to in the Note of Prime Minister’s Office above:

The points raised by Prime Minister from time to time and those raised by P.P.S. to P.M. in his D.O. No.F.29/303-H/54-PMP, dated the 22nd June, 1955, in regard to liberalisation of issue of visas to Pakistani nationals are as follows:—

(i) Whether the practice in regard to the admission from Pakistan of relatives of persons living in India, for permanent resettlement is based on any law or is merely an executive decision;

(ii) Rules about visas for Pakistani nationals in spite of liberalization are still very rigid and very hard. We treat those people much worse than any other foreigner;
(iii) We should treat Pakistan like any other country forgetting the restrictions which had been special reason flowing from the Partition and its consequences. We should consider the case of Pakistanis from the point of view of numerous family contacts that necessarily exist between India and Pakistan. We should be very liberal in giving facilities to near relatives to come to India, unless there is some special reason to the contrary;

(iv) It is wrong to prevent children coming to India where most of their family members may reside. In such cases human consideration must prevail;

(v) The question of the issue of the grant of long term visa for India to Pakistani nationals should be delinked from that of evacuee property considerations;

(vi) Whether instructions have been issued by us to the Visa Issuing Authorities explaining our present liberalized policy regarding the re-union of divided families;

(vii) Liberal facilities should be given to abducted women in Pakistan for their permanent resettlement in India. P.P.S. to P.M. has stated that if the policy of the Government of India is not to send a recovered abducted woman to Pakistan against her will, she should also be given free facilities for resettlement in India if on going over to Pakistan she express a desire to resettle in India;

(viii) Whether it is the intention of para 17 of the revised scheme of travel between India and Pakistan that the prior concurrence of the Central Government need not be obtained before long term visas for India covered by para 7(a) of the Scheme are granted to Pakistani nationals;

(ix) Whether it is necessary to amend the form of application to be filled in by Pakistani nationals for the grant of long term visas for India in view of our delinking property considerations from the question of grant of resettlement facilities in India to Pakistani nationals; and

(x) The lines on which we have decided to meet the points raised above (a) now under the present system, and (b) under the new scheme at present under consideration.

2. These points are examined below:

As regards (i) above, with the exception of Indian Passport Act, 1920 and the Indian Passport Rules, 1951, which govern the entry into India of all persons from abroad, there are no other legal provisions to regulate the admission into India of Pakistani nationals. After their entry, their movements and stay in India are regulated by executive instructions which are based on the various provisions of the Indo-Pakistan Passport Agreement. As in the absence of any legal sanction behind these instructions, it has not been found possible effectively to regulate the movements of the Pakistani nationals and to deal with the breaches of Passport Rules and conditions of visas granted to them, it is now proposed to undertake suitable legislation to take legal powers so as to deal with such matters in an effective manner.

As regards (ii) (iii) above, with the abolition of the permit system in 1952, there has been considerable relaxation of restrictions on travel between India and West Pakistan. Under the passport and visa system, Pakistani nationals desirous of coming to India to visit their relatives can do so freely by obtaining Pakistani passports and Indian visas from our Missions in Pakistan. After their arrival, they can stay in India up to a period of one year by obtaining extensions of their visas, where necessary from the local authorities. Those coming for employment, business or other reasons can also do so by obtaining suitable types of visas which will enable them to stay in India for longer periods. Except for the personnel of the Pakistan Police and Defence Services, in whose case under a reciprocal agreement with Pakistan, pre-verification is required, no prior reference to the Government of India is necessary for the grant of visas to persons coming to visit their relatives or for other casual purposes. Unlike foreigners, Pakistanis are not, after arrival in India, subject to registration or the requirements of reporting their movements to police under the Registration of Foreigners Act. All that they have to do is to hand over a copy of their visa application at the check post of entry (which serves the purpose of ‘registration’) and to send a written report to the police of arrivals and departures. In certain cases, even these formalities are not necessary. Pakistanis are at a slight disadvantage compared with citizens of Commonwealth countries, who can enter India if their passports are endorsed by their own Governments as valid for entry into India, and have not to obtain the visas from the Indian Missions. This is a result of the Indo-Pakistan Agreement according to which Pakistani nationals entering India have to obtain the necessary visa. These visas also specify the places to be visited in India; but this again is a result of the reciprocal agreement reached with Pakistan. An offer to abolish the visa system altogether or at least between India and Pakistan in the Eastern Zone was made on two occasions to the Pakistan Government but was not accepted by them.

It will be seen from the above that full facilities to enter India are being given to Pakistani nationals who are temporary visitors. The cases of Pakistani nationals who wish to return to India for permanent resettlement in India are also being dealt with as liberally as possible.

The Ministry of External Affairs have, in consultation with the Ministry of Home Affairs, also drafted a revised Passport and Visa Scheme as a result of the decisions taken at the recent Indo-Pakistan Conference. While drafting the scheme, the Prime Minister’s desire that the scheme should conform as far as possible to the visa system obtaining in respect of foreigners coming to India and that it should not be unduly rigid or hard, was kept in view. It is hoped that the scheme, when ratified by the Government of Pakistan, will considerably facilitate the free movement of persons between India and Pakistan. It may however be stated that even under the existing policy, Pakistani nationals desirous of visiting India are given full facilities for the same.

As regards (iv) above, children coming to visit their parents in India are not only being granted full facilities to do so on short-term visas but are also being admitted for permanent resettlement, if they are minor and are dependent on their parents or other close relations in India. This is specifically provided for under the Indo-Pakistan Agreement, 1953. Under our present liberalized policy the cases of persons who were minors at the time of migration to Pakistan but are now majors are also considered favourably if they are dependent on their parents in India.

As regards (v) above, in his d. o. letter No.231/S, dated the 9th June, 1955, to Home Secretary, Shri C.M. Chandra has intimated that the Rehabilitation Ministry would have no objection to the issue of long term visas for India to Pakistani nationals being entirely delinked from the evacuee property issue and that reference to the Rehabilitation Ministry in such cases need not to made. Shri Chandra has also added in his above letter that no consideration will be shown by that Ministry, even on compassionate grounds, to requests of Pakistani nationals who have been or may hereafter be granted long term visas for India for the restoration of their evacuee property, if any, in India, merely on the ground of the grant of long terms visas for India to them nor would it entitle them to exemption from the operation of the Evacuee Property Law. He has also suggested that at the time of granting long term visas for India to Pakistani nationals these conditions should be specifically stipulated by this Ministry in each individual case. In this connection it may be mentioned that at the time of granting long term visas to Pakistani nationals we are already stipulating the property clause, in each individual case, which runs as follows:—

“This decision will not, in any way, prejudice evacuee property proceedings already launched or which may hereafter be launched against him/her.” …’A’

Since as stated above, the Ministry of Rehabilitation have no objection to delinking of evacuee property considerations from the question of grant of long term visas to Pakistani nationals, applications for such visas will not in future be referred to that Ministry but that at the time of the grant of such visas the applicants will be informed in the sense of ‘A’ above.
As regards (vi) above, our present policy provides for a wide measure of liberalization of the term ‘re-union of divided facilities’. Item 18 of the Indo-Pakistan Passport Agreement, 1953, regarding re-union of divided families, refers only to the cases of Pakistani wives and children of Indian nationals, divorced wives and minor children or Pakistani nationals who have nobody to support them in Pakistani, and are dependent on their relations in India. However, under the liberalized policy that we are following, this item is being interpreted to cover also the following categories of Pakistani nationals and they are granted re-union facilities in India on compassionate grounds if they are not otherwise deemed undesirable:—

(a) Old and infirm persons who are unable to earn their livelihood in Pakistan and have their near relatives i.e., sons etc., in India to look after them.

(b) Young boys who, though now major, were minor at the time of their migration to Pakistan and have their near relatives i.e., parents in India and are dependent on them.

(c) Members of minority communities in Pakistan.

We have not issued any specific instructions to the State Governments or our Indian Missions in Pakistan regarding the liberalized policy in dealing with cases of permanent resettlement in India of Pakistani nationals. Since all the applications for the grant of long term visas for purposes of resettlement in India whether submitted to State Governments in India or to our Missions in Pakistan are referred to this Ministry for consideration and orders, it is not necessary to issue any formal instructions in the matter.

As regards (vii) above, in our d.o. letter dated 21st May, 1955, we had informed P.P.S. to P.M. that there have not been many cases of this type but if any lady does not desire to return to Pakistan because of ill-treatment or desertion by her husband or relations, or any other bona fide reason, her case will be covered by the compassionate cases envisaged in para (2) of that letter and she will be eligible for the grant of a long term visa. The cases of the type of persons now mentioned by P.P.S. will also be considered on compassionate grounds, provided there are no impediments from the other side, i.e., either by the Government of Pakistan or the near relatives of the woman concerned in that country.

As regards (viii) above, it has been mentioned in para. 17 of Part II of the revised Scheme of Passport and Visa System for travel between India and Pakistan that in granting visas for India, the visa-issuing authorities will not make prior reference to the Central or the State Governments or their agencies, except in cases mentioned in paragraph 16 of the scheme i.e., cases of grant of short term visas to police and Defence personnel of Pakistan. Exception has not been made specifically in the case of long term visas for resettlement in India, as this special category of visa has not been specifically mentioned anywhere in Part II of the Scheme. The intention, therefore, is that a prior reference in all such cases is to be made to the Central and State Governments as before. The position will, however, be made quite clear in the executive instructions that will be issued.

As regards (ix) above, para 7(a) (3) of the revised visa scheme mentions that apart from those Pakistani nationals who are granted short term visas for India, long term visas for India will be granted to Pakistani nationals inter-alia for their permanent resettlement in India. Columns 18, 19 and 20 of the application form prescribed at appendix 4 of the revised scheme for such visas refer to the property held by the applicants before their migration to Pakistan and whether property held by them in India has been declared as evacuee property. Although as advised by the Ministry of Rehabilitation, the grant of long term visas for India need no longer be linked with evacuee property issue, and that applications for long term visas need not in future be referred to that Ministry, it is felt that the information required in those columns will still be useful in our considering the merits of the case of any particular individual. Those columns may, therefore, be retained in the form at appendix 4 although the information furnished with reference to those columns will not stand in the way of the applicant if he is otherwise eligible for the grant of a long term visa.

As regards (x) above, it may be mentioned that even though the revised scheme has not yet come into force, we are already examining each individual request of Pakistani nationals for permanent resettlement facilities in India in accordance with the liberalized policy as stated above, and are giving each deserving case as sympathetic a consideration as possible.

SECRET

Letter from Commonwealth Secretary C. S. Jha to High Commissioner for India in Pakistan C. C. Desai.

New Delhi, November 16, 1955.

Commonwealth Secretary
Ministry of External Affairs

16th November, 1955

My dear C.C.

Will you please refer to your D.O. letter No. F.80/7/55-Genl. dated the 27th September, 1955, addressed to Dutt about opening of the Ferozepore - Kasur rail link?

2. You seem to be under the impression that the issue involved is the dispute about the area across the Ferozepore bridge containing 1 1/4 mile of rail track is that of mere recognition of the de facto possession by Pakistan. The position is not so simple. Pakistan appears to have certain deep designs in this area which are becoming clearer to us as time goes on. She has made several encroachments in the area since 1947. All these encroachments were made after the Key-Thimayya Agreement reached soon after partition in 1947 and therefore cannot be given any recognition.

3. The first encroachment was made by Pakistan early in 1948 when the Pakistan authorities established a post at the right bank of the Dipalpur Canal near Ferozepore Headworks. This resulted in the cutting of the only road running from the bridge to the Right Marginal Bund. Discussions held between the two Punjab's about this encroachment proved unsuccessful. Meanwhile, the Punjab Irrigation authorities were concerned about the maintenance of the Right Marginal Bund in the interest of the Ferozepore Headworks. The Chief Engineer, East Punjab, asked the Chief Engineer, West Punjab, to maintain the lower reach of the Right Marginal Bund at India's cost as a temporary arrangement. This led to a series of encroachments by the Pakistan authorities on a large area of Indian Territory which eventually extended from the right bank of the Dipalpur Canal to the lower reach of the Right Marginal Bund. The Ferozepore - Kasur rail link lies in this area. The Chief Engineer, East Punjab, later asked his opposite number to return the control of the Right Marginal Bund, but all efforts to persuade him to do so have failed so far. The matter was even raised at the last meeting of the Steering Committees but the Pakistan delegation was unwilling to settle the issue. The other large area of Indian territory which was occupied by Pakistan forces was Gatti Kamalewala, 2/3rd of which is still under Pakistan occupation.
There have been other attempts for encroachment by Pakistan authorities even as late as December 1954. But they have been thwarted by timely action by the Indian border forces. If we have not tried to dislodge Pakistani authorities from the encroachments in the Indian Territory in this region, it is not because we recognize any rights accruing to Pakistan from the fact that they have taken illegal possession but because use of force might have serious repercussions.

4. Originally, Pakistan recognized that the area in dispute across the Ferozepore bridge had been awarded to India. Subsequent success in making encroachments in this area seems to have encouraged her to lay claim to this area. They have not only asserted that 1 1/4 mile track in their possession was in Pakistan territory but also demand that the 40 yards of the rail track in India’s possession should be handed over to them before they could agree to the restoration of the rail link. Your own reaction then, as conveyed in your D.O. letter No. F.80 (7)/55-Genl. Dated the 30th June, 1955, was that we should exercise our possession even if this meant that the rail link could not be restored.

5. The Pakistan authorities not only want to retain possession of the rail track and to maintain it but also to exercise the right to charge freight, etc., in respect of it. It is one thing for Pakistan to be in illegal possession of Indian territory and for India not to use force to regain possession of that territory, but it is quite another thing for India to recognize Pakistan’s control over Indian territory and to Pakistan Railways charging freight, etc., for traffic over the railway track in that territory.

6. A rational method to settle the dispute about the territory in question would be that the revenue authorities of the two sides should jointly examine the records and ascertain in whose territory the area fall according to the Radcliffe Award. When we made such a suggestion to the Government of Pakistan then they were not prepared to accept it and instead argued that no demarcation of the boundary line could take place in the area of the Ferozepore Headwork’s unless a joint control over the intake of water of the different canals dependent on the Headwork’s had been agreed upon between the Governments of India and Pakistan. This argument is based on a hope expressed by Sir Cyril Radcliffe in Para 10 of his Award. We can never accept this contention of Pakistan. Firstly, the railway track in question has nothing to do with the canal system. Secondly, the World Bank which is assisting the two countries in settling the Canal Waters Dispute in its proposal of February 1955, considered and rejected the idea of a unitary control of the canal system of the Indus Basin and clearly stipulated that after the transitional period Pakistan would not receive any waters from the three eastern rivers including the Sutlej. Under the Bank’s proposals the Sutlej, the Ravi and the Beas would be allocated entirely for Indian canals and the Ferozepore Headwork’s should serve only the Indian canals except for a transitional period estimated at about 5 years. Both India and Pakistan have agreed to prepare a comprehensive plan on this basis and the negotiations are at present going on in Washington for that purpose. Accepting a territorial position based on Pakistan's interest in the Ferozepore Headworks, would be contrary to all that has been agreed to and to all that is being done at present in relation to the settlement of the Canal Water Dispute. I may also add that this issue has some defense considerations as well.

7. We have considered the matter very carefully in the light of calculated moves of Pakistan in respect of this area. We are not so interested in the restoration of Ferozepore-Kasur rail link as to jeopardize our interests in the area by making the concessions demanded by Pakistan. Prime Minister has seen this case and he agrees that we should adhere to our right to maintain the railway track in the disputed territory and to charge the fair for its use.

8. We shall be grateful if you will now send a reply to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations letter No.1 (1)3/11/55 dated the 6th September 1955. You may inform them that the hope expressed by Sir Cyril Radcliffe in Para 10 of his Report that some arrangement might be made for the joint control of the intake of the different canals dependent on the Ferozepore Headworks, has nothing to do with the boundary actually laid down by him in his Award and can in no way affect its demarcation. The issue of the distribution of canal waters is a separate one and is already under discussion between the Governments of India and Pakistan. Pakistan has made encroachments in the Indian Territory across the Ferozepore Bridge after the Key-Thimayya Agreement and is in illegal possession of it. The Government of India cannot agree to Pakistan maintaining and exercising control over the railway track about 1 1/4 miles long in this territory. They are also not prepared to hand over to Pakistan 40 yards long railway track in their possession in this area.

With kindest regards,

Yours sincerely,

No.F.80 (7)/55-Genl./9748, 8th December 1955

My dear Chhatari,

Kindly refer to your letter No. I (I).3/11/55 dated the 8th September 1955 regarding the restoration of the Husainiwala Rail link. We have considered the points raised in your letter but find it impossible to accept the position the Government of Pakistan have now taken.

2. You have quoted an extract from Para 10 of the Award of Sir Cyril Radcliffe in regard to the partition of the Punjab. The hope expressed by Sir Cyril Radcliffe in that extract relates to a separate issue and not to the boundary actually laid down by him in his Award. That separate issue is in regard to the desirability of some arrangement for joint control of the intake of the different canals dependent of the Forozepore Headworks. The railway track in question has nothing to do with the canal system. The issue of the distribution of the canal waters, as you know, is a separate one and is already under discussion between the Governments of Pakistan and India. We consider, therefore, that the two separate issues, namely, the demarcation of boundaries and the distribution of canal waters should not be confused in this context.

3. We regret to have to say that Pakistan has definitely made encroachments in the Indian Territory across the Ferozepore Bridge after the Key-Thimaya Agreement and is, therefore, in illegal possession of it. The Government of India, as you can appreciate, can neither agree to the Government of Pakistan maintaining and exercising control over the railway tract about 11/4 mile long in this part of the territory, nor are they prepared to hand over to Pakistan the further 40 yards which now your Government is demanding and which is in the possession of India.

4. I should suggest that the proposals contained in Para 2 of Thadani’s letter No. F. 80(7)/55 –Genl of the 25th July 1955 to Kaiser may be earnestly considered by you.

D. O. No. HC/56/5.241 March 6, 1956

My dear Isar,

Please refer to the correspondence resting with the Ministry’s letter No. F. 58/56 dated the 4th February 1956 on the subject of relaxation of restrictions on travel between India and Pakistan to enable Indian nationals to visit Lahore for the Horse Show in February 1956.

2. Such relaxations have been sanctioned in recent months primarily at the instance of the Pakistan High Commissioner in India, Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan. Once, the relaxation was made in connection with a cricket match between Pakistan and M.C.C. In between, a relaxation was made for some occasion which does not readily come to my mind. Recently the relaxation was in connection with the annual horse show in Lahore. In the reverse direction, a similar relaxation was made to enable Pakistan nationals to witness some football or hockey match in Amritsar. I believe it is correct to say that in all these cases, the initiative was taken by the Pakistan High Commissioner in Delhi. We were not even consulted as to whether such relaxations should be made and what political and other effects they would have on the relations

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

Sd. (B. C. Mishra)

R.S. Chhatari, Esq.,
Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, between the two countries. Urgency of the matter was no excuse for this omission. I hope therefore that the correct procedure would be followed in future that no such relaxation would be made without previous consultation with the Indian High Commission in Karachi.
Karachi.

3. Recently we have had occasion to consider the whole policy underlying these relaxations at a Conference with the Deputy High Commissioners from Dacca and Lahore. We came to the conclusion that such relaxations are not in the best interest of India and should not be allowed for the mere asking by the Pakistan authorities including their High Commissioner in Delhi.

4. We all felt that Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan has ulterior and malicious motives in asking for such relaxations. The whole idea appears to be to encourage greater contract between the Muslims of Pakistan and the Sikhs of the bordering districts in India. Statistics show that there is some truth in this feeling of ours. The bulk of the people who took advantage of the relaxation were Sikhs. Not all of them went to the cricket match or the horse show. The occasion was utilized either for sightseeing or for a joy ride or in some cases for political subversion against India. Some of the Sikh visitors have been known to be voicing feelings and views of which they would be ashamed if they were reminded on return to India. They were really swept off their feet by the atmosphere prevailing in Pakistan, which encouraged cultivation of a feeling on the part of the Sikhs that they were not being properly treated in India. Surely, we are not agreeing to these relaxations to enable the people in Pakistan to carry on subversive propaganda against us.

5. Recently, we have come across a case, which also shows the inherent danger in such relaxations. I have no doubt that this is not a solitary case but that there must be several instances of that type.

6. I enclose a copy of a special identity certificate which was issued to a resident of Jammu & Kashmir specifically for the horse show. Later, a visa was endorsed on the identity certificate enabling the man to go to Karachi and Rawalpindi. The Pakistan authorities had no business to issue any such visa, which was in clear violation of the arrangement for the relaxation agreed to between the two Governments. A man like a retired Wazir of Jammu & Kashmir might not have been given a passport valid for Pakistan and still less a visa for Karachi and Rawalpindi. Rawalpindi is, as you know, the head quarters of Azad Kashmir, from where all kinds of subversive and false propaganda are being conducted against our Government of Jammu & Kashmir. Unfortunately, our own office in Lahore slipped up in extending the validity of the identity certificate beyond the original date. I am writing to Rao asking for the explanation of the officer, who was responsible for this serious mistake. The man on coming to Karachi asked for further extension and the case came to our notice. We have refused to extend the duration of the identity certificate with the result that the man left Karachi last night and would be passing through Lahore by tomorrow at the latest. I do not know what purpose this man had in asking for a visa for Rawalpindi and I suggest that the matter might be brought to the notice of the Government of Jammu & Kashmir at an appropriate level.

7. Apart from the misuse of the identity certificates, we should also bear in mind the fact that our people coming to Lahore merely for sight-seeing or a joy ride are really wasting Indian exchange for which there is no justification or return. They also indulge in activities designed to defeat the exchange regulations. Many of them are utilizing the special arrangement for purposes of smuggling. Some of the Sikhs were known to have opened shops in Lahore which came to adverse notice on the part of the authorities in Lahore. One Sikh was found to have committed pick pocketing and the news was given great prominence in the Lahore papers, the object being to damage Indian character. If Pakistan Government is really keen on much freer intercourse between the people of the two countries they should ratify the visa agreement which was made between Iskander Mirza and Mehr Chand Khanna as long ago as April 1955. Until that agreement is ratified, we should refuse to sanction any special arrangement for the relaxation of visas on the lines of the practice adopted in recent weeks. This was the view of the Conference and has my full support and is now recommended to Government for approval.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely

Letter from Ministry of External Affairs to High Commission for India in Pakistan.

New Delhi, March 16, 1956.

Government of India
Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No. F.20(1) P III/56-/ F.15/10/56-PSP the 16th March, 1956

To : The High commission for India in Pakistan, Karachi.

Subject: Grant of visas to Azad Kashmiris.

Sir,

I am directed to refer to this Ministry’s letter No. F.29/15/54-PSP dated 9-8-55 on the subject mentioned above and to say that in modification of the instructions given therein it has now been decided that no visas for India should be granted to the residents of Azad Kashmir.

2. Technically, grant of a visa on a Pakistan passport held by a person resident in Azad Kashmir amounts to the recognition that Azad Kashmir is de jure part of Pakistan. This would obviously conflict with the legal position that sovereignty over Kashmir rests with India because of Kashmir’s accession to India.

3. The criterion to be applied in these cases is our denial of Pakistan’s right to issue travel documents to a subject of Jammu and Kashmir State, whether he is at present a resident in Azad Kashmir or is resident outside Azad Kashmir, in Pakistan or anywhere else, and irrespective of whether he is described as “Pakistani” or by any other description.

4. There may be some Azad Kashmiris who have finally obtained Pakistani nationality by naturalization. The Government of India have considered the position of such persons and have decided that as they will be few in number and as allowing for their cases will had (lead) to complications which are better avoided, no distinction need be made in their favor. If any such case arises, it should be referred to this Ministry for instructions.

5. The instructions contained in sub Para (4) of Para 23 of the Publication “Instructions to Indian Visas Officers in Pakistan” may be deemed to have been modified accordingly by deleting the last two sentences Para.

Yours faithfully

Letter from Ministry of External Affairs to High Commission for India in Pakistan.

New Delhi, July 10, 1956.

Government of India
Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No. F. 15/10/56-PSP the 10th July, 1956

To : The High Commission for India, Karachi.

Subject: Grant of visas to Azad Kashmiris .

Sir,

I am directed to refer to this Ministry’s letter No. F. 20(1)P III/56/F 15/10/56 PSP dated the 16th March 1956 and to say that as enquiries have been received from certain Missions in the matter, clarification of the points raised by them in given as follows.

2. Prior to the issue of our letter, grant of visas to Azad Kashmiris’ was regulated by paragraph 23 (4) of “Instructions to Indian Visa Offices in Pakistan”. Under this instruction, visa was to be refused if an applicant gave as his permanent address a place in the territory of the Jammu & Kashmir State at present occupied by Pakistan, but if the address were shown as within Pakistan, visa might be granted even if there were reasons to believe that the applicant was actually a resident of Pakistani occupied territory of the State.

3. The intention of our letter mentioned above was to bring the grant or refusal of visas to Azad Kashmiris' strictly into line with the legal position that the whole of the Jammu & Kashmir State is part of India and that Pakistan has no right to issue travel documents to a subject of the State, irrespective of his present residence and irrespective of the definition of his national status that might be given in the Pakistani travel documents held by him or in his visa application. This is explained in paragraphs 2 and 3 of our letter.

4. It follows that in all cases in which an applicant is described in his Pakistani travel document or in his visa application as having been born in or being domiciled in or resident in any part of the whole State of Jammu & Kashmir, visa should be refused.

5. Paragraph 4 of our letter referred to the possibility of a few cases in which a person originating in the State of Jammu & Kashmir might claim Pakistan nationality (the word “generally” in the first sentence of paragraph 4 should be corrected to “formally”). All such cases should be referred to this Ministry. The question of the national status of a person formerly belonging to the State of Jammu and Kashmir who now claims Pakistani nationality raises many difficulties. As the whole State is legally a part of India, the question of application of the provisions of the Constitution of India and of the recently enacted Citizenship Law is involved. Further, the question would arise whether there was any Pakistani law under which such a person could be naturalized. The intention of paragraph 4 of our letter therefore was that Missions should obtain the fullest possible particulars in such cases and refer them to this Ministry for instructions.

6. Clarification of certain specific points raised by Mission is given as follows:-

(i) Persons born in the “former State of Jammu & Kashmir”, who settled down in Pakistan before Partition.

Our letter applies to this class also. If such a person is not a Pakistani national, the Pakistan Government has no right to issue him a travel document as he remains a subject of the Jammu & Kashmir State which is now part of India. If such a person claims to be a Pakistani national, he must adduce sufficient proof, in terms of the respective laws applicable to his case. All such cases should be referred to this Ministry.
(ii) Jammu & Kashmir born employees of the Pakistan Government, whether Pakistan naturalized or not, when going to India on duty or to meet relatives and friends in urgent cases.

Any case in which a claim to Pakistani nationality is made should be examined as mentioned above and referred to this Ministry for instructions. In all other cases, visa should be refused. We have recently refused a request by the Pakistani High Commission here for a visa for an Azad Kashmiri whom they wished to employ as driver.

(iii) Denial of visa without assigning any tangible reason to a person holding a Pakistani passport may not be justifiable and may provoke retaliation by Pakistan against Indian nationals desiring visas for Pakistan.

As explained above, we do not concede the right of Pakistan to issue travel documents to persons belonging to the Jammu and Kashmir State. This has been formally stated to the Pakistani High Commission here in the case mentioned in (ii) above. If Missions have occasion to refuse a visa in terms of our letter of the 16th March 1956 and of this letter, they may give the same reason. The normal issue of visas to Indian and Pakistani nationals is regulated by the Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme, the arrangements prescribed by which are not affected by this matter.

(iv) Difficulty of Missions in ascertaining whether a person is in fact an Azad Kashmiri.

Obviously if the person is described as a Pakistani, both in his travel document and in his visa application, and no clue is given that he belongs to the State of Jammu and Kashmir, Missions can do nothing to apply these instructions. In all cases of doubt, where a visa is not immediately refused in terms of these instructions, the cases, with full details, should be referred to this Ministry.

Yours faithfully

Note from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru on the overstay of Pakistan nationals in India beyond the period of their Visa.

New Delhi, September 19, 1956.

Prime Minister’s Secretariat

Many recent incidents in India, some of them often resulting in violence and rioting, have occurred and have often been connected in people’s minds with persons who have come from Pakistan holding our visas. There is also the question of these visa holders staying on here beyond the period of their visas. It is not easy to trace them and even when found, it is not easy to deal with them. Sometimes they claim to be Indian nationals and take the matter up even to the courts.

I think that we should give further thought to this issue of visas so as to check, to some extent at least, wholly undesirable people from coming to India.

I am sending a copy of this note to the Home Secretary. You may consult each other and then make some suggestions.

I realize that our issue of visas is governed by some agreement with Pakistan. We can see what can be done within the terms of that agreement and also if it is necessary to ask for a variation of that agreement.

Sub: Visa Policy – Its application to Pakistan Nationals

The point raised in P.M's note of 19.9.56 regarding examination of our visa policy to check undesirable people from Pakistan coming into India was discussed in Home Secretary's room on the afternoon of 22nd.

2. On an analysis of the situation it was stated that, though exact figures are not known, there are a large number of undesirable Pakistanis in India because of the following:-

1. Liberal and expeditious issue of visas by our missions in Pakistan. High Commissioner's instructions are that the visa should be issued within 24 hours. This does not allow for adequate scrutiny of the particulars furnished by the individual who applies for a visa and quite a number of undesirable characters secure visas in this way:

2. Liberal grant of visas to Pakistani nationals for limited periods from a day to a week or 10 days outside the normal visa arrangements to attend festivals, foot-ball matches, for shopping etc:

3. Liberal grant by District Magistrates of extension of period and change of specified place to Pakistani visa holders;

4. Overstay by Pakistani nationals coming to India with various categories of visas, particularly ‘C’ visas and want of adequate machinery and legal authority to deal with them:

5. Lack of efficient check at the border those Pakistanis who come with “A” visas for purposes of free movement within 10 miles of the border can at present go beyond the 10 miles limit without any further check and once they are in the country there is no machinery to keep trace of them.

3. It was proposed that legislation taking powers to deport those who overstay their visa should be introduced in the next session of the Parliament. A draft has been prepared and this will be discussed and finalized in another meeting in Home Secretary's room on 24th September. As regards the inadequacy of the administrative machinery, Home Ministry will, when the fresh legislation is ready, address the State Governments concerned and ask them to make arrangements for effective implementation of the new legislation and expeditiously deal with any proposals that the State Governments may make regarding staff, cost of agency functions etc. Meanwhile, it was suggested that the following orders should issue immediately:-
Our missions in Pakistan issuing visas to Pakistani nationals should be asked to scrutinize the particulars of the applicant carefully and grant visas in cases where the purpose of the visit is clear and bona-fide. Full details should be asked for regarding purpose of journey etc. In cases where a clear bona-fide need visiting India is not established even if this involves delay in disposal of the visa application and the rule of 24 hours should not come in the way of thorough and adequate scrutiny. All doubtful cases should be referred to the Government of India and a visa should not, in any case, be issued to persons who are on the 'Black List'.

Short term visas for visits of a day to 10 days in connection with festivals, football matches, shopping etc. should not be issued except in exceptional cases or after prior reference to Government in case of organized Indo-Pakistan functions:

Home Ministry should issue instructions to District Magistrates that the discretion given to them to extend the period of the visa and to allow change in the specified place mentioned in the visa should be exercised very strictly, generally only on compassionate grounds to deal with developments beyond the control of the individual visa holder, e.g. his own illness or serious illness of his immediate relations and that in all these cases, copies of orders granting extension of visa or change of specified place in the visa should be immediately sent to Home Ministry;

All cases of overstay without proper authority should be black-listed and visas refused to those individuals when they apply again:

Pre-verification should continue to be insisted upon in the case of police and army personal, religious divines, preachers and other people, purpose of whose visit does not fall within the “A” to “F” categories of visas mentioned in the Indo-Pakistan Agreement.

The issue of visas to Pakistan nationals is based on the India-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme of January-February 1953. No changes in the Agreement are necessary but what is required is tightening up of scrutiny and avoidance of hasty ill-considered action in granting these visas in the name of speedy disposal.

A further note will be submitted on the nature of the enabling legislation to take power to deport undesirable Pakistani nationals or those who overstay their visa period and the administrative arrangements necessary to enable adequate enforcement of the provisions of the legislation after the discussion of 24th. Meanwhile, instructions to visa issuing authorities in Pakistan and instructions to District Magistrates proposed in Para 3 above will issue after P.M’s approval.

Prime Minister

Prime Minister’s Secretariat

I agree that our Missions in Pakistan should scrutinize applications for visas more carefully. Any person in a “black list” prepared by our government should, of course, not be issued a visa, and doubtful cases should be referred to the Government of India.

2. In scrutinizing these applications, the main purpose should be to see that the applicant is a bona fide one. Thus, if we are satisfied of the bona fides of a person, it does not matter whether some technical provision is fulfilled or not. This, if the High Commission or our office in Lahore is satisfied about the bona fides, then they can issue a visa. There are apparently three or four types of persons who come to India: (1) relatives, (2) business men, (3) students, and (4) visitors generally.

3. We do not wish to be strict about people having relatives here, though the visas should be granted after enquiry. In regard to bona fide businessmen and students, there should be no particular difficulty. Visitors are a varied class. We do not wish to stop Visitors from coming here or even to restrict them but, rather, to check the undesirables.

4. Para. 3(2): The rule about short term visas should be applied more or less in the same way as the one for longer visas. The difficulties come in where these visas are issued en masse without any enquiry. This should be avoided, and reference made to Government.

5. Para.3 (3): In regard to extending the period of the visa, more or less the same rule should apply. If the District Magistrate is satisfied about the bona files of the person, he may extend the period for a while. But, if he is not so satisfied, then he should not do so. The point is that, as far as possible, we do not wish bona fide people to suffer but we want to be strict about doubtful cases.

Pakistan Minister for Commerce and Industry. Mr Abul Mansur, told P.M. that Pakistan wanted to reconsider its visa policy and accept the liberal visa arrangements arrived at between the Home Minister of Pakistan and our Home Minister. I presume Mr. Abul Mansur had in mind also the more liberal visa arrangements proposed in the Khanna – Mirza discussions.

2. Please put up the note on visa arrangements between India and Pakistan prepared sometime back, where the whole position is reviewed and where we have stated that the liberal visa arrangements of the Pnat-Mirza Agreement, which were accepted by us, have not been accepted by Pakistan nor has Pakistan accepted further liberalization suggested in the Khanna - Mirza proposals. I propose to inform our High Commission with reference to Mr. Abul Mansur’s mentioning this matter to P.M. that we are looking into this matter of further liberalization of visa policy in view of the initiative by the Pakistan Minister for Commerce & Industry and will make concrete suggestions when we have examined the matter.

Note recorded by Deputy Secretary Ministry of External Affairs:
C.S. may kindly see the note that was prepared for PM’s information some time back, reviewing the position of Indo-Pakistan visa arrangements. For some time now we have not been reminding the Government of Pakistan for the ratification of the liberalized visa scheme drawn up in accordance with the Khanna-Mirza Agreement. The Pakistan Commerce Minister’s mentioning to P.M. the question of liberalization of visa arrangements between the two countries was probably the result of newspaper agitation in Pakistan about “Bharat’s stringent visa policy”. One of the Pakistan papers, the Morning News had even gone to the extent of declaring that India had refused to ratify the liberalized visa scheme. Prior to the Khanna - Mirza Agreement there was an Indo-Pakistan (Eastern Zone) Conference held at Calculate for over a fortnight in 1953 to liberalize the visa scheme. The Pakistan Government had failed to ratify the decisions of that Conference also. Under the circumstances, perhaps it may be advisable to let Pakistan take the initiative this time and let us know exactly their views are on the subject of liberalized visa scheme.

SECRET

Letter from Ministry of External Affairs to High Commissioner for India in Pakistan:

New Delhi, February 2, 1957.

D.O. No. 72-CS/57.  2nd February, 1957

My dear C.C.,

During his interview with our Prime Minister, the Pakistan Minister for Commerce and Industry, Mr. Abul Mansur, mentioned that Pakistan wanted to reconsider its visa policy and accept the liberal visa arrangements arrived at between the Home Minister of Pakistan and our Minister for Home Affairs. Presumably he had in mind the scheme drawn up on the basis of the Khanna - Mirza discussions in 1955.

2. As you know, the Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa scheme introduced on 15th October, 1952, was reviewed at a conference in Delhi in January, 1953. The decisions of this conference were ratified by the two Governments and published on 9th July, 1953.

3. In September, 1953 an Indo – Pakistan (Eastern Zone) Conference held at Calcutta agreed on certain decisions to liberalize the visa scheme. These decisions were not, however, ratified by the Government of Pakistan though we liberalized our visa policy in anticipation of Pakistan's ratification. Later a meeting was held between General Iskander Mirza, then Pakistani Minister for the Interior and Shri Mehr Chand Khanna, Indian Minister of Rehabilitation, in April 1955 to discuss measures to liberalize travel facilities further between India and Pakistan. The agreement reached by the two Ministers provided for the abolition of the various categories of visas except category 'A' and category 'E' both of which were to be issued liberally. There was also provision for visa on the international model valid for one year at a time. The decision also covered many other aspects and agreed on extensive liberalization of the whole scheme. Based on these decisions, the Government of India drafted a revised Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa scheme and sent it to the Government of Pakistan in May, 1955. They were reminded a number of times but we have so far had no reply. In spite of Pakistan’s not ratifying the Agreement we had further liberalized our visa scheme in many ways.

4. If Pakistan now feels that they are prepared to ratify that Agreement or otherwise come to an agreement with us with regard to liberalization of visas, we shall be prepared to examine the question. We do not, however, wish to make any approach to the Government of Pakistan on this subject at this stage but would like to have your views. You may be able to ascertain informally whether Pakistan authorities are thinking of liberalization in terms of the September 1953 Agreement or the more liberal scheme base on the Khanna-Mirza Agreement of April 1955. For the present our stand is that we shall be prepared to examine any proposal that Pakistan may make. Your may tell them that we are also examining the question.

Yours sincerely

3474. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission for India in Pakistan.

No. Neg. 10/31/55. 28th May, 1957

Subject: Ratification of the minutes (of the meeting) held in the room of Minister for the Interior Government of Pakistan on 9-4-55.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, present its compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and with reference to the correspondence resting with the letter No. D.1801-Neg/55 dated the 17th September, 1955, from Mr. M.S.A. Baig to H.E. Mr. C.C. Desai, has the honour to say that the Government of Pakistan approve of the decisions contained in paras (i),(ii),(iv) and (v) of the minutes of the meeting held at Karachi in the room of the Minister for the Interior, Government of Pakistan on 9th April, 1955. As regards Para (iii) relating to liberalization on of travel facilities, the Government of Pakistan propose the following amendments to the joint recommendations made by M/S V.C. Trivedi and M.S.A. Baig:-

Para (1): Approved as it is.

Para (2): Approved as it is.

Para (3): In all other cases a visa on the international model either for single journey or multiple journey of for the purpose of transit will be issued valid for a period of three months only. This Visa will be issued freely without reference being made either to the State/ Provincial or the Central Government except in special cases. In the case of Defence personal the existing system will continue. The present system for Seamen’s Visa will be abolished and their Continuous Discharge Certificates be treated as valid travel documents to cover all their requirements such as their stay in the other country of joining or leaving a ship at a port in that country.

Para (4): Visas will be valid normally for the whole country except for such areas as may from time to time be specified by the Government as restricted. In all the applications for Visas the place intended to be visited and the object of the journey shall be specified and the Visa Issuing Authority will have the right to decline to grant a Visa for a particular place or places or may grant it under special conditions without assigning any reasons. However, endeavour will he made to keep such cases to the minimum.

Para (5): Visa holder who intends to stay for more than 48 hours in the country to be visited by him will be required to inform the police within 24 hours either personally or in writing of his visit and the places he expects to visit, giving his address where his letters etc. can be delivered or enquiries about him could be made. Any person who overstays the period of his Visa will be liable to summary deportation.

Para (6): The present system of travel on Emergency Certificates/ Migration Certificates will continue subject to production of Clearance Certificates by the intending migrant and his compliance with the other regulations that may be in force in the country.

It is requested that the Government of India’s approval to the above amendments may please be obtained and communicated to this Ministry.

2. The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of its highest consideration.

High Commission of India

D.O. No. HC/57/S-1384 July 19,1957

My dear M.J.,

Kindly refer to your letter No. 437-CS/57, dated the 12th July regarding visas and security. Perhaps I did not make myself quite clear in my earlier letter dated the 3rd July.

2. What I mean by the “middle way” is that while complete ban on the issue of all visas is not feasible, we can certainly exercise greater strictness in this matter. This will mean some hardships for and complaints from our own Muslims, but both they, i.e. Muslims, and we, i.e. Government, should suffer the situation in the overall interest of national security. You say in your letter that you agree that persons who may be agents of Pakistan Government should not be given visas. The difficulty is that it is unlikely that the agents would be known as such. Seemingly innocent persons going to India for quite plausible and legitimate purposes may turn agents while there. We have to remember that Pakistan always keeps the initiative in her own hands and we merely react when something unpleasant happens. The whole business is groping in the dark as far as we are concerned, and, to my mind, the only possible way we can minimize the danger is by exercising the greatest strictness in giving Visas; in rejecting all doubtful cases; and, where visas have been granted on the strength of our own knowledge or judgment or reliable recommendation, in exercising vigilance in India on the arriving persons. No police force will be able to cope with the problem if the number of Pakistan visitors become unwieldy, and that is all the more reason why we should keep the number as small as possible. I would very strongly urge you not to take the bona fides of these doubtful visitors to our country for granted. I would also exercise greater strictness in the issue of visas to their police and military personnel and this should be brought to the notice of our Defence and Home Ministries. At present my feeling is that we are unduly liberal in such cases.
With kindest regards,

Yours ever

SECRET

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan C. C. Desai to Commonwealth Secretary M. J. Desai.

High Commission of India
Karachi

D. O. No. HC/57/S-1540 the 27th July, 1957.

My dear M.J.,

I have been very seriously thinking of ways and means to effect the maximum possible economies in this Mission, subject to the maintenance of efficiency, in the present context of financial stringency in India. While formulating our detailed ideas on this subject, about which the Ministry will shortly get a letter, it struck me that we can save the Government about Rs.1,50,000 per annum by taking a certain measure, which, in my view, should be taken also from the point of view of security as well as volume of work.

2. What I propose is that we should take steps to wind up our Visa office in Hyderabad. All the papers relating to the establishment of a Visa office in Hyderabad are in the Ministry, and no doubt you can get a comprehensive and self-contained note on it from one of the officers. I may, however, remind you that at the Indo-Pakistan Passport Conference in 1953 we asked the Pakistan Government to open a Visa Office in Bombay, proposing at the same time that we should be allowed to have an office either in Bahawalpur or in Rawalpindi or in Peshawar. The Pakistan Government turned down our proposals regarding the establishment of Indian offices at the places mentioned and agreed to the establishment of an Indian Visa Office only at Hyderabad (Sind). As you will appreciate, our Visa office at Hyderabad cannot possibly be equated with the Pakistani office in such an important and vital city as Bombay, and yet we accepted the position. There may have been good reasons for that, and I take it that we wanted Pakistani Visa office in Bombay for the convenience of those Indians in Bombay who have to visit Pakistan frequently for domestic reasons or otherwise. Today, I feel, the circumstances are different, and the original reason for agreeing to the opening of a Pakistani Visa office in Bombay is no longer valid. Due to the restrictions on Visas enforced both by India and Pakistan the traffic between Bombay and Karachi has fallen steeply and continues to fall. I do not foresee possibility of any improvement in this situation in the near future. I cannot quote figures relating to the number of visas daily given by the Pakistani office in Bombay, but I know that our Hyderabad office has not been giving more than 12 visas daily to intending visitors to Bombay. In any case, Hyderabad is so near Karachi that the applicants for visas can easily come to Karachi for their requirements. It is obvious to me that the Hyderabad office is becoming an expensive liability to us. Our people there face a hostile population and in times of emergency can expect little protection from us in Karachi. I may add that as we have no permanent building in Hyderabad, we can pull out at short notice without the slightest difficulty.

3. If we examine the desirability or otherwise of allowing the Pakistanis to continue retaining an office in Bombay, I am sure you would find that the balance of advantage – and, if I may add, illegitimate advantages – lies with them and not with us. The Pakistan Government have appointed there an Assistant High Commissioner, whose staff includes a Second Secretary, a Third Secretary, an Attaché and number of people in the Trade Section under the cover given by the Visa office. They have also appointed a Property Field officer. I need hardly remind you that all these gentlemen have infinite potential for mischief in such a vital place as Bombay. It is well to remember that, apart from the naval importance of Bombay, the city is conveniently near Poona.

4. Our own Muslims in Bombay can hardly complain if we ask Pakistan to close down their office in Bombay as a measure consequential on our pulling out of Hyderabad. The number of ‘B’ and ‘F’ class visas issued by the Pakistan Government is negligible, and ‘C’ visas are of no consequence and people can easily send their passports to Delhi for obtaining visas. Even with the Pakistan office functioning in Bombay, people in Ahmadabad, Poona Madras, Bangalore, Malabar and other places cannot get visas from Bombay any more easily than they would be able to get from Delhi. So, we are not being unfair or hard on our own Muslims. The circumstances have changed, and in the new context of things we would be perfectly justified in pressing for the winding up of the Indian Office in Hyderabad and the Pakistani office in Bombay.

5. You will find in the papers relating to the subject that the arrangement whereby we established an office in Hyderabad and Pakistan established an office in Bombay, was made subject to review after six months. There is, therefore, nothing sacrosanct or permanent about this ad hoc arrangement, and I think, we can quite reasonably approach the Pakistani Government in regard to this matter. I have a feeling that the Pakistanis, for their own mala fide purposes, may resist closing down their Bombay office even if we should press, as a reciprocal measure, for their consent to our opening an equivalent office in Peshawar or Rawalpindi, preferably Peshawar. After all, the Pakistan Government has allowed Afghanistan, the United Kingdom, and, of course, the United States to open their respective offices at Peshawar. How can they plausibly resist our demand to have an office in Peshawar? If they do not agree, then they must clear out of Bombay. On this we must be firm.

6. I have written to you at some length on this matter, as I feel that the money we are spending on the Hyderabad office and consequential foreign exchange is just going waste and it will be better from all points of view if we close down in Hyderabad and Pakistan closes down in Bombay. If the Pakistanis insist on keeping their office in Bombay, then let us at least spend our money on an equivalent office in Pakistan for good purpose. Hyderabad does not serve that purpose.

With kindest regards.

SECRET

Letter from Deputy High Commissioner for India in Pakistan D. N. Chatterjee to Deputy Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs K.M. Kannampilly.

Karachi, August 17, 1957.

High Commission of India
Karachi

D. O. No. DHC.P.364/57 17th August 1957

My dear Kannampilly,

I write in continuation of my letter No. F.54/55-Genl. Dated 4th June 1957. I am sorry I could not attend to it earlier because of the particularly pressing nature of my other preoccupations.

2. Before I come to the main body of the Pakistan Government's letter, I should like to make a few important points in the hope that these will not be submerged in the inevitable details which follow:

First, we feel strongly that Pakistan Government have made this reference to us not because they genuinely desire liberalization in the issue of visas but because they have incurred the displeasure of the public for not ratifying the Visa Agreement which, according to many Pakistanis has resulted in our present restrictive visa policy. Secondly, I invite your particular attention to the desire of the Pakistan Government to keep certain regions as restricted areas. Even in the recent Railway Agreement, no tickets, for instance, can be issued for Sialkot, Gujrat, Campbellpur, Rawalpindi and Jhelum. I do not know if there are any corresponding restricted areas on our side. Thirdly, an Agreement is either ratified as a whole or not ratified. If it is not ratified, obviously, it loses its validity. I feel that there is no scope for amending it piecemeal by correspondence as Pakistan is trying to do, no doubt, for propaganda purposes. If they are not satisfied with the earlier Agreement, then they are free to suggest another conference, though I hope we will not be in a hurry to accept such a suggestion. My recommendation, therefore, is to tell the Pakistan Government that we are not prepared to accept their piecemeal amendments and that they must tell us clearly whether they will ratify the Agreement or reject it altogether.

Now I come to the main body of the letter from Pakistan Government.

3. Pakistan has approved paras I and II of the Minutes of the meeting held at Karachi. The relevant paras are reproduced below or ready reference:-
“(I) “The various categories of visas will be abolished, except for ‘A’ and ‘E’ (Transport workers) category visas These Visas will be issued liberally to those who are eligible”.

(II) “Diplomatic’, ‘Non-Diplomatic’ and official Visas will be granted as at present.
The continuous issue of the ‘A’ category visa is beneficial to Pakistan because of her interest in border trade. I admit that we too have interest in border trade.
As far as the Diplomatic Visas are concerned, I must point out that the balance of advantage very definitely lies with Pakistan. Hardly any Indian benefits from this Provision while a number of Pakistanis certainly do. We must also remember that it is an open secret here that Pakistanis tend to use diplomatic passports as cover for smuggling. This appears to be a painless way of removing valuables from India to Pakistan. I was told by a very knowledgeable person that Mr. Chhatari (now in New York) was particularly enthusiastic in these matters. Besides, it is fairly easy for a Pakistani with any influence to get a diplomatic passport, while in India diplomatic passport are not for sale.

4. The third Joint recommendation made by M.S.A. Baig and Vishnu Trivedi are as follows:-

“In all other cases, a Visa on the international model will be issued, valid for a period of up to one year according to the needs of the traveler. This visa may be either single Journey Visa or a multiple Journey visa or a transit visa. The Visa will be issued freely by the Visa issuing authorities without any references being made to the State and Provincial Governments of the two countries, except in the case of retired and active Police officials. In the case of Defence personnel, the present system of applying through the Ministry of Defence concerned will continue. The present system of Seamen’s Visas will also continue.”

Pakistan has proposed amendment as follows:-

“In all other cases a visa on the International model either for single Journey or for the purpose of transit will be issued valid for a period of three months only. This Visa will be issued freely without reference being made either to the State/Provincial or the Central Government except in special cases. In the case of Defence personal the existing system will continues. The present system for Seamen’s Visa will be abolished and their Continuous Discharge Certificates be treated as valid travel documents to cover all their requirements such as their stay in the other country or transit through that country of joining or leaving a ship at a port in that country”.

You will see that though the basic idea was to liberalize the issue of Visas and to bring the matter up to international model, the latest Pakistani suggestion has a contrary effect. Our comments are as under:-

a. The validity of the Visa was proposed to be for a period of one year according to the needs of the traveler. Now, the Pakistan Government wants to confine it to three months. Have they ignored the fact that this will rule out the possibility of the issue of ‘F’ category Visas (which are Valid for a period of one year) altogether?

b. The joint recommendation was that visas would be issued freely by the visa issuing authorities without making a reference to the State Governments of the two countries except in the case of retired and active police officials or in the case of Defence personal. They have now modified it so as to reserve the right to refer ‘special cases’ to the Government concerned. – ‘Special Cases’ not being defined. It has been seen in practice that the Pakistan Government has been very reluctant to issue visas to Indian nationals freely according to the last Agreement.

c. According to the joint recommendations, the present system of issue of visas to seamen was to continue. Pakistan has now suggested:

“The present system for seamen’s Visas will be abolished and their Continuous Discharge Certificates will be treated as Valid travel documents to cover all their requirements such as their stay in the other country or transit through that country of joining or leaving a ship at a port in that country”. This proposal is the reverse of the joint recommendation. I do not know according to what international usage or convention has Pakistan proposed this procedure for seamen i.e. their visiting the other country without any visas; the Ministry may check this point. In this connection, the note recorded by our Deputy Director General of Shipping (copy enclosed with Shri Trivedi’s D. O. No. F/17/4/55-PSP dated the 8th July 1955, addressed to the High Commissioner) will be found illuminating.

5. Pakistan has proposed that all places to be visited and the object of the journey are to be specified, which again is contrary to the joint recommendation. Pakistan has also reserved the right to refuse visa for particular places. In effect, this proposal will perpetuate “closed areas” which existed sometime before in India and Pakistan, but were to be abolished when the Agreement now in force was entered into. With the induction of Military Aid and in view of the bellicose attitude of Pakistan, it is easy to see that Pakistan wants to hide certain areas from “the evil eye”. What ‘closed areas’ will we have?

6. According to the Agreement in force, visa holders of certain categories are required to report to the police either in person or in writing. The joint recommendations aimed at removing this restriction.
Pakistan has now proposed the following:-

“Visa holder who intends to stay for more than 45 hours in the country to be visited by him will be required to inform the Police within 24 hours either personally or in writing of his visit and the place he expects to visit, giving his address where his letters etc. can be delivered or enquiries about him can be made. Any person who overstays the period of his visa will be liable to summary deportation”.

I may say that this provision of reporting in writing to Police is only a paper provision as far as the Government of Pakistan is concerned. By executive orders, Pakistan made the provision of the last Agreement ineffective and most Indian nationals were forced to report to the Police in person.

7. In regard to the system of travel on Emergency Certificates or Migration Certificates, Pakistan has made the following proposal:-

“The present system of travel on Emergency Certificates will continue subject to production of Clearance Certificates by the intending migrant and his compliance with the other regulations that may be in force in the country”.

All along, Pakistan has been abusing the privilege conferred by the present system. Emergency Certificates or Migration Certificates were to be issued by the Missions of one country functioning in the other country. In actual fact, however, the Pakistan Government have been issuing certificates from Pakistan. Our repeated requests to them not to do so were fruitless and we had to issue instructions to our check posts not to honour such Emergency Certificates unless they were issued by the Pakistan Missions in India. I may add that Pakistan has created a number of difficulties in regard to migration of bona fide members of the minority community from the D.A.V. College camp at Lahore. There have also been restrictions in regard to the procurement of Clearance Certificates from the Police and the Income Tax authorities.

8. The meeting between the Pakistan Minister for Interior and our Minister for Rehabilitation took place in April 1955. We ratified the decisions taken at the meeting immediately thereafter and it is only after more than two years that Pakistan has reacted to stimuli. It is to be noted, however, that Pakistan took advantage, in the meantime, of certain clauses of the Agreement viz. the opening of Khokharapar route, the improvement of railway communications etc. While the rest of the provisions were put in cold storage.

9. It will not be irrelevant if I mention here that 85% of the applications for ‘B’ category visas have been found to be mala fide. I cannot make a similar categorical statement in regard to the other kinds of visas mainly because the number involved are so huge that proper scrutiny becomes almost impossible.
I may also mention that Pakistan has restricted the allotment of exchange (Rs 50/- to passengers going by land and Rs 100/- to passengers going by air) to once only every year. The general feeling here is that a Pakistani visitor to India will live on the resources of his Indian relations or friends. I cannot help saying that even if Pakistan genuinely desires to liberalize the issue of visas; she cannot afford to do so. It is only fair that if a Pakistani goes to India, he should take sufficient funds from Pakistan to spend in India.

10. This letter has already become much too lengthy and I do not wish to add to it. But I am sure that in considering the letter from the Pakistan Government, the all important security factor will also be taken into account.

I am enclosing an extra copy of this letter to facilitate the detailed examination of this matter by the Ministries concerned.

Letter from Commonwealth Secretary M. J. Desai to High Commissioner for India in Pakistan C. C. Desai
New Delhi, November 14, 1957.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

D. O. No. F.25/57-PSP-CS/57
14th November, 1957.

My dear C.C.,

Kindly refer to the correspondence resting with your D.O.No. F-1-61/57/PV dated 31st October, 1957 to Chakravarty regarding closure of the Assistant High Commissioner’s office at Hyderabad (Sind).

2. As you will recollect, the Indian Assistant High Commissioner’s office at Hyderabad (Sind) and the Pakistan Assistant High Commissioner’s office at Bombay were established as a result of an Agreement reached at the Indo-Pakistan Conference at New Delhi in January/February, 1953. In the Minutes of the Conference, there is no reference to any request by the Indian delegation that India should be allowed to have a Visa office at Bahawalpur or Rawalpindi or Peshawar. The relevant portion of the Minutes reads:

“India proposed that branch visa offices should be set up at Bombay and Hyderabad (Sind) and at four places in Assam, Tripura and West Bengal and also at four places in East Bengal. Pakistan said that the offices at Bombay, Shillong and one suitable district headquarters in the north of East Bengal can be agreed upon and that no other visa office seemed necessary at present. India urged that Hyderabad (Sind) should be added to these three places. It was agreed that four offices should be set up as above, but Pakistan will review the continuance of the three offices in Assam and East Bengal and Hyderabad after six months.”

3. In view of the previous history of the case, your suggestion that we should close down our office at Hyderabad (Sind) and ask Pakistan to close down the Bombay office or insist that the Pakistan Government should allow us to shift the Hyderabad office to Peshawar or Rawalpindi cannot be put up as a definite proposition. We can, of course, negotiate for modification of the agreed arrangements on the lines you propose but you know that there is no chance of Pakistan accepting these changes.

4. I see from the records that though the Agreement was to open Visa offices and not offices of Assistant High Commissioners, this was subsequently modified on the suggestion of Hilaly of the Pakistan Foreign Office and we accepted that these should be Assistant High Commissioners’ offices.

5. I agree that maintenance of the office at Hyderabad (Sind) is of no interest to us. We can of course, close down this office unilaterally and save the expenditure. I am sure you would not advise us to adopt this unilateral procedure. As Pakistan is not likely to accept the suggestions mentioned in Para 3 above, it may be desirable to approach this matter from a slightly different angle. There will be a good chance of getting Pakistan to agree to downgrading both the Bombay and Hyderabad (Sind) offices to Visa offices and this may enable us to reduce some of the staff. We can then insist on Pakistan Visa office in Bombay being manned by non-diplomatic visa staff and thus limit their undesirable activities.

6. I will be grateful if you will re-consider your proposal in the light of the above and make informal soundings and let us know what concrete proposals should be put up to Pakistan. If you so advise, we would be quite prepared to close down the Hyderabad (Sind) office unilaterally and save money. But I am sure this method of dealing with the situation does not appeal to you.

With Kindest regards,

Yours sincerely

(M.J. Desai)

SECRET

Minutes of the meeting held in the Commonwealth Secretary’s Room, Ministry of External Affairs, at 12-00 (Noon), on Tuesday, 3rd December, 1957.

Present

Ministry of External Affairs:
Shri M.J. Desai, Commonwealth Secretary.
Shri K.N. Kannampilly, Deputy Secretary.

Ministry of Home Affairs:
Shri A.V.Pai, Secretary.
Shri N. Sahgal, Joint Secretary.
Shri Fateh Singh, Deputy Secretary.

The meeting had been called to consider the Pakistan Foreign Office communication regarding the Pant-Mirza Agreement of 1955 on liberalisation of Visas.

2. The Commonwealth Secretary pointed out that the Pakistan Government had taken over two years to convey their views. The suggestions made by them now would not effect any liberalization of the existing Visa Scheme; on the other hand, they would constitute retrograde step.

3. The Commonwealth Secretary proposed, and it was agreed, that the Pakistan Government should be informed that the Government of India are not able to accept the proposal made by them. The Government of India are also not agreeable to enter into any discussion on amendments suggested to the original Agreement two years after the Agreement was signed. It may also be pointed out that the amendments suggested by Pakistan went against the very spirit of the Agreement since they would actually make the Visa Scheme more restrictive in application.

4. Shri Sahgal and Shri Fateh Singh mentioned that some Pakistan nationals who had entered India with Pakistan passport were known to have thrown away their passports and to be staying on in India unauthorisedly. It was necessary that appropriate action should be taken against them.

5. It was suggested that State Governments concerned should be asked to examine each such case and collect evidence proving the Pakistan nationality of the individual concerned. He should then be proceeded against according to the law. At the same time the State Governments should inform the External Affairs Ministry so that the Pakistan High Commission may be given full facts of the case and requested to provide a travel document to the Pakistan national. The High Commission would be informed that in the absence of such a travel document the Pakistan national would be liable to imprisonment and any other punishment that the court might award.

6. If the Pakistan High Commission should fail to provide a travel document, the State Government should take steps to have the person deported.

7. It was agreed that this procedure should be followed in a few cases after which the matter should be reconsidered.

3480. Note from High Commission for India in Pakistan to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

High Commission of India Karachi

No. E. 5/57-II. 5TH May, 1958

The High Commission of India in Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan and has the honour to state that the Government of India have recently been considering the question of closing down the office of their Assistant High Commissioner at Hyderabad, Sind as a measure of economy.
2. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations will recall – vide their note No. I (V)-2/7/55, dated 13.13.1957 that for a similar reason the Government of Pakistan had suggested the closing down of the Pakistan Visa Office at Agartala and the Indian Visa Office at Comilla. The Pakistan Visa Office at Agartala has since been closed down with effect from 31st January, 1958.

3. The Government of India have come to the conclusion that it is no longer necessary to continue either the Indian Assistant High Commission at Hyderabad or the Pakistan Assistant High Commission at Bombay. The Government of India have therefore decided to close down the Hyderabad office with effect from the 1st July, 1958. The Government of India expect that the Government of Pakistan will also close down the Pakistan Assistant High commission in Bombay with effect from the same date.

The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations the assurances of its highest consideration.

High Commission of India
Karachi

No. E.5/57-II, the 27th May, 1958.

The High Commission of India in Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan and in continuation of this Mission’s Note of even number dated the 24th May, 1958 has the honour to say that consequent upon the closure of the office of the Deputy High Commissioner for Pakistan at Chandigarh the Government of India agree in principle to close the office of the Deputy High Commissioner for India at Lahore.
2. The High Commission would like to state that it would, however, not be convenient for the Government of India to arrange for the closure of this office on the 1st July, 1958 as proposed by the Pakistan Government. More time will be required to complete these arrangements and it is suggested that the Lahore office may be closed by the 1st October, 1958.

3. It is hoped that the Government of Pakistan will agree to the above suggestion.

4. The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations the assurances of its highest consideration.

3483. Aide Memoire from Pakistan High Commission in India to Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, June 13, 1958.

The High Commissioner for Pakistan in India
New Delhi

Dated, June 13, 1958

Aide - Memoire

At the request of the Government of India, the Government of Pakistan agreed last month that the Sub-missions at Lahore and Bombay should continue to function till the 30th of September 1958. On June 7, it was reported in the press that the Deputy High Commissioner for India at Lahore would stop the issuing of visa to Pakistan nationals with effect from the 15th of June.

2. The High Commissioner brought this matter to the notice of the Commonwealth Secretary the same day. Mr. M.J. Desai said that the Government of India had not issued any such orders and as the High Commissioner was going to Lahore the following day, he would ascertain whether or not this information was correct. On June 9, Mr. Sajjad Hyder, Deputy High Commissioner for Pakistan in India saw Mr. P.L. Bhandari, Deputy High Commissioner for India at Lahore, in this connection. Mr. P.L. Bhandari told him that his orders were to stop the issuing of visas after the 15th of June 1958 and that he had to carry out these orders.

3. The matter was reported to the Government of Pakistan and on June 11 the Foreign Secretary of the Government of Pakistan called His Excellency Mr.
C.C. Desai, High Commissioner for India in Pakistan and told him that as the Indian Sub-mission at Lahore would stop issuing visas on June 15, there was no justification for the continuance of that office after July 1. His Excellency Mr. C.C. Desai replied that according to his decision no application would be entertained in Lahore after June 15 but any application received after that date would be sent to Karachi. THE Foreign Secretary said that was not enough of a justification, whereupon His Excellency Mr. C.C. Desai asked for reasonable time to close down his office in Lahore in view of the physical operations involved. The Foreign Secretary replied that in that case the sub-mission at Lahore could close on July 10. The Government of Pakistan would do the same with their office at Bombay.

Karachi, June 20, 1958.

High Commission of India
Karachi

No. E. 5/57-II

20th June, 1958

The High Commission of India in Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Government of Pakistan, and has the honour to say that the Ministry’s note No. I (I). 12/29/58 dated the 12th June, 1958, demanding that the Office of the Deputy High Commissioner for India in Lahore should be completely closed down by the 10th July, 1958, has come very much as a surprise to this High Commission. It was only on the 31st of May, barely 10 days previously, that the Ministry had, by their note No. F. S. I. (I). 12/29/58 suggested to this High Commission that “in mutual interest” the India Deputy High Commission in Lahore and the Pakistan Assistant High Commission in Bombay may be closed simultaneously on the 1st October, 1958. The Government of India had formally given their consent to this arrangement, vide this High Commission’s note No. E. 5/57-II dated the 2nd June, 1958.

2. In justification of the volte face which the present note of the Ministry represents, a reference has been made to a Press note issued by the Indian Deputy High Commissioner in Lahore dated the 6th June, 1958. This Press note, a copy of which is annexed, clearly says that no visa applications will be entertained by that office after the 15th June, and that persons wishing to apply for Indian visas after that date should address their applications to the Indian High Commission in Karachi. Further, the real purport and the exact implications of this Press note were fully explained to Mr. M.S.A. Baig by the Indian High Commissioner, in person, on the 11th June, 1958.

3. This High Commission would like to take this opportunity to restate that the reason for fixing 15th June as the last date for receipt of visa applications at Lahore was based on purely administrative convenience. It will be appreciated that visa applications take some time for being dealt with in proper manner, particularly when references have to be made to India. The Indian Deputy High Commission in Lahore had a large number of visa applications pending already and it was thought that unless an early date like June 15th was fixed as the last date for the receipt of fresh applications it would be impossible for that office to deal with the applications properly before the office was wound up. Further the staff of that office would be pre-occupied with other work relating to the closure as well as with their own transfer from Lahore, according to a phased programme. In the view of this High Commission, the public in Pakistan would be better served by the applications being received in Karachi, after the 15th June, and by being processed there by the staff already in position.

4. The High Commission would also like to point out that, according to a Press report, the Pakistan Deputy High Commissioner at Chandigarh had also issued a similar notification fixing June 15th as the last date for receiving applications for Pakistan visas, a step which appears to be quite incongruous with the present attitude of the Pakistan Government.

5. It is, therefore, a matter of regret to this High Commission that the considerations mentioned above were not taken into account by the Pakistan Government before issuing their note referred to in paragraph 1 above. If it was felt on 31st May, 1958, that closure of the Indian Mission at Lahore and the Pakistani Mission in Bombay was not feasible before September 30, 1958, it must be less feasible now. The Government of India have, all the same, decided to comply with the present request of the Pakistan Government and to issue instructions to have their Mission at Lahore closed on the 10th of July, although it is, in their opinion, clearly an unreasonable, impractical and retrograde request.

6. It is noted that the Pakistani Assistant High Commission in Bombay would be closed simultaneously, i.e. on July 10, 1958.

7. The High Commission of India in Pakistan avails itself of the opportunity to renew to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Subject: Grant of extension of stay to Pakistani nationals pending decision on their applications for permanent resettlement in India.

Sir,

With reference to the Ministry's endorsement No-1/40/58-F. III., dated November 29, 1958, on the subject mentioned above, I am directed to say that after the amendment of the Foreigners Act, 1946, the entire work regarding the grant of extension of visas (now extension of validity of residential permits) and permission to visit additional places, not mentioned in the original visas, was transferred to Government of Pakistan, the assurances of its highest consideration.

and Commonwealth Relations,

the Civil Authorities (Superintendents of Police) in the State with effect from July 1, 1957. The Civil Authorities are authorized to grant extension of stay in India to foreigners (which now include Pakistani nationals also) up to a period of two months. The endorsements of the grant of one year visas and renewal of one year visas are also made by the Civil Authorities on the residential permits. Since the State Government do not grant any endorsement on the residential permits of Pakistani nationals, they recommend that, if the Government of India agree, the Civil Authorities may also be authorized to grant an endorsement of “Extension applied for” on the residential permits of Pakistani nationals, who are eligible for permanent resettlement facilities in India and whose applications for such facilities would normally be accepted, after obtaining the approved of the State Government in each cases.

2. The State Government will also be grateful to be informed whether any fee should be charged from Pakistani nationals for the grant of an endorsement of “extension applied for”. If so, the amount of fee that should be charged and the head to which the amount so realized should be deposited may also kindly be intimated to the State government.

Yours faithfully

Subject: Grant of extension of stay to Pakistani nationals pending decision on their applications for permanent resettlement in India.

2. In the circumstances stated by the State Government, the Government of India have no objection to the Civil Authorities being authorized to grant the endorsement of ‘extension applied for’ on the residential permits of Pakistani nationals, who are eligible for permanent resettlement facilities in India and whose applications for such facilities would normally be accepted, after obtaining the approval of the State Government in each case. However, such an endorsement cannot be regarded as an endorsement of extension of stay for which a fee of Re.1/- is charged. This fee may appropriately be charged only when the application submitted by the Pakistani national for the grant of permanent resettlement facilities in India in the form of extension of stay for one year has been decided and an endorsement to this effect is actually made on the residential permit.

C. Letter from the Indian High Commission:

Indian High Commission
(Visa Office)

No. F. 1-58/54-PV/23136 Dated the 10th December, 1956

Subject: Grant of short term Visas to Pakistan nationals who apply for permanent settlement in India.

Dear Ministry,

Please refer to your endorsement No. F. 6-14 /56/PSP, dated the 9th October, 1956, on the subject mentioned above.

2. Indian Missions in Pakistan have been advised not to issue short term visas to Pakistan nationals who have applied for permanent settlement in India as a matter of policy. In exceptional cases a visa may be granted only after a reference to the State Government. In order to ensure that no short term visas are granted to Pakistan nationals who have applied for long term visas and whose applications are pending, or have been rejected by the Government of India or the State Government, it appears necessary to place on the Black List the names of all such persons. The facility with which interested persons in Pakistan can obtain duplicate passports may not be overlooked. Our record shows that during the first 8 months of the current year alone, we have received from the Ministry of Home Affairs, New Delhi, intimation of rejection of long term visa applications in 819 cases. The number of pending cases is 485. If all such names are blacklisted, this would, in course of time, add very considerably to the bulk of the list and there by detract from it utility for checking up suspected cases quickly.

3. We agree that it is essential to tighten up issue of short term visas to persons whose long term visa applications are pending, or have been rejected. But at the same time we are of the opinion that discretion should be with us to issue short term visas in suitable cases without reference to the authorities concerned in India for pre-verification. To give a concrete instance, if a Pakistani lady married to an Indian Muslim applies for a long term visa, we cannot, in view of your endorsement referred to above, issue her a short term visa without prior reference to the State Government concerned. Our experience shows that it takes 6 to 8 months before the Government of India's decision on a long term visa application is received. We consider that in such cases, to avoid hardship to the applicants, we should be authorized to issue visas without reference to the State Governments concerned. There may again be cases where Pakistani nationals have to proceed to India at short notice, e.g., on receipt of news of serious illness or death of a near relation in India. If in all such cases (where applicants have applied for long term visas and their cases are pending or have been rejected) no visas are to be issued without prior reference to the State Governments, it would mean that no visas can be issued even in genuine cases of necessity. In fact, refusal of even a short term visa to a person who wants to settle down in India is going to the other extreme and must cause very serious hardship to deserving people for no fault of their own except to make India once again their homeland. In all these matters the High Commissioner feels that we should have a sense of proportion and that we should be guided by enlightened approach rather than by anger, distrust or primitiveness. In any case discretion must be left to the authorities on the sport.

4. We suggest, therefore, that in view of what has been stated above, discretionary powers should be given to the Indian Missions in Pakistan to issue short term visas on humanitarian and other appropriate ground in deserving cases without prior reference to the State Governments.

5. An early reply would be appreciated. Meanwhile the High Commissioner proposes to follow the course suggested in this letter.

Yours ever
The Ministry of External Affairs,
Government of India
New Delhi.

D. Letter from Ministry of External Affairs to all the State Governments.

Government of India,
Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

To: All State Government in India.

No. F. 6-14/56-PSP the 9th October, 1956

Subjects: Grant of short term visas to Pakistan nationals who apply for permanent settlement in India.

Sir,

I am directed to say that the Government of India have noticed that many Pakistan nationals, while in Pakistan, apply for permanent settlement in India and then visit India on Pakistan passports and Indian short term visas with a view to pursuing their applications for permanent settlement facilities in India, and prolong their stay in India by getting their visas extended from time to time on one pretext or the other.

2. Since it is considered undesirable to have such Pakistan nationals residing in India indefinitely, I am to request that the State Governments should do their best to dispose of their applications for permanent settlement quickly and refer them to the Ministry of Home Affair’s for final decision as early as possible. The State Governments should not extend the short term visas of such Pakistan nationals to enable than to continue their stay in India, unless there are special and genuine reasons for them to do so.

3. When a Pakistan national comes to India on short term visa and applies for permanent settlement in India, and his application is entertained by the State Government, besides informing our Mission of this fact, an observation to the effect that “Applied for permanent settlement in India” should be made on his passport so that if he afterwards returns to Pakistan and again applies to our Mission in Pakistan for a short term visa, our Mission would be able to know the fact that his application for permanent settlement has been pending in India.
Similarly, the full passport and other particulars of Pakistan nationals whose application for permanent settlement in India are not entertained by the State Government or are rejected, should also be furnished to our Missions in Pakistan. Instructions are being issued to our Missions in Pakistan that short term visas should not be granted to Pakistan nationals whose applications for permanent settlement are pending or have been rejected without referring their cases to the State Government.

Yours faithfully

3486. Grant of Transit Visa to Indians for visits to Iran.

Karachi, September 4, 1959

High Commission of India
Karachi

4th September, 1959

AIDE MEMOIRE

Please refer to the correspondence resting with the aide memoire dated the 8th June, 1959, from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations of the Pakistan Government regarding the transit facilities through Pakistan to Indian nationals in Iran. The Government of India would be grateful if the Pakistan Government would reconsider their decision in the light of the observations set out below:

2. Almost all the Indian nationals resident in Zahidan area belonged originally to that part of the old Punjab Province which is now in West Pakistan and before Partition used to travel by the land route. The old passports issued to them by the then Government of India clearly indicate that they were using the Quetta - Zahidan land route. Further, the land route is much more economical and less arduous than the alternative route by boat. Most of these persons have to go to Bunder Abbas to catch ferries to Dubai and then from Dubai to Bombay by B.I.S.N. ships. This route involves a journey by road and sea extending over 12 days and costs Rs. 200/- per person. The alternative route via Khorramshahr is also equally expensive and inconvenient. Facilities for travel over the land route will help greatly in reducing expenditure and relieve the hardship now being experienced by the Indian community in Zahiden.

3. It is understood that the Pakistan Government have not imposed any restrictions on travel by the Quetta - Zahidan route on the nationals of countries other than India. Even Indians, who are holding British passports, are allowed to transit through West Pakistan. Bus services originating in other countries are also allowed to ply along this route. However, Indian passengers by such buses are not allowed to pass through, while no objection is raised in regard to the transit of nationals of other countries. In the case of Father Abbarham (particulars of which are known to the Ministry), a visa was granted to his driver, who was an Austrian national, while he himself being an Indian, had to undergo considerable difficulty and inconvenience in obtaining a transit visa through West Pakistan.

4. Attention has also been invited previously to the fact that many of those who wish to go by the land route, belong to the Sikh community and are, therefore, anxious to visit some of the Sikh holy places which are now in West Pakistan.
It would result in considerable saving in time and money if they are enabled to visit these places en route to India.

5. The reference in the said aide memoire to the provisions of the Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme does not seem to be relevant to the present issue, inasmuch as the scheme provides for authorized routes only for travel between India and Pakistan.

6. It is relevant to point out that the Government of India have placed no restrictions on travel by Pakistani nationals by the land route through India to other countries. Pakistani nationals employed in the Jute mill in Nepal, are permitted to travel through India overland from East Pakistan; nor have restrictions been placed on Pakistani nationals employed in the Police Forces in Malaya and Singapore from proceeding by the overland route through India. It is suggested that the Pakistan Government should also, on a reciprocal basis, not place any restrictions on the travel of Indians through Pakistan when coming from or going to other countries.

7. The contention of the Pakistan Government that their nationals have been experiencing considerable difficulties in the matter of transit facilities through India is not based on facts. The Government of India are not aware of any cases in which the transit facilities have been refused to Pakistani nationals. The slight inconvenience caused to the boy-scout contingent at the West Pakistan border was due to the short notice given by the Pakistani authorities which resulted in the instructions of the Punjab Government to their check posts being delayed. It may, however, be not out of place to mention here that on receipt of the information that the contingent was held up, a high official of the Govt. of India personally got in touch with the authorities in Chandigarh to ensure that the party was not put to any inconvenience. It is, therefore, accordingly, requested that the whole matter is reexamined by the Pakistan Government and revised instructions issued to their Missions in Iran for the grant of transit visas to Indian nationals who desire to go to India over the land route.

No. 1/27/59-F. III the 12th November, 1959/21st Kartika, 1881

Subject: Overstay of Pakistani nationals - Grant of Exit endorsements

In the Ministry of External Affairs’ circular No. F. 15(48)/56-PSP, dated the 3rd December, 1958, it was prescribed that where the overstay of a Pakistani national is due to bona fide reasons, i.e., due to reasons beyond the control of the Pakistani national such as his own illness or the illness of his near relatives in India etc., the State Government should grant him suitable extension of stay and not exit endorsement, and that in mala fide cases of overstay only the State Governments should grant exit endorsements in the form prescribed in that Ministry’s circular No. F.15(48)/57-PSP, dated the 21st November, 1957. This matter has been further considered in consultation with the Ministry of External Affairs. It will not be appropriate even in bona fide cases of overstay to grant extensions of stay to Pakistani nationals concerned especially when no application for the grant of extension has been made by them. It has, therefore, been decided that in bona fide cases of overstay, instead of granting extensions of stay, and exit endorsement in the following form may be made on the Pakistani Passports of the Pakistani nationals concerned –

In mala fide cases of overstay, the form of the exit endorsement may be as follows:-

“Overstayed. Permitted to leave India by . . . . . (Date).”

The State Governments may use rubber stamps for making these endorsements. Full passport and personal particulars should be furnished to the Indian Missions in Pakistan as well as the Government of India (Ministry of Home Affairs) in the case of persons who are granted exit endorsements in the latter form. This will help the Indian Missions to identify the persons even if they take out fresh Pakistani passports and it will be in these cases that a prior reference will be made to the State Governments by the Indian Missions before visas are granted.

3. This also disposes of the Government of Kerala’s letter No. 19614/59-I/Home, dated the 18th March, 1959. As explained above, exit endorsements will be made only on the passports of the Pakistani nationals.

No. H.C./473/59 December 3, 1959

My dear C. S.,

Will you please refer to your d. o. No. 759-CS/59 of December 1, 1959?

2. I have been aware for a long time of the withdrawal of some 40,000 passports from the Hindu citizens of Pakistan, and the psychological and other problems which this has created. During my previous visits to Dacca, I had mentioned the matter to the East Pakistani authorities. In my last visit also I spoke to Governor Zakir Husain about it and in Delhi to Azfar in the presence of S. N. Ray and Datta. Azfar promised to examine the matter sympathetically. I told him that I knew of the reasons given for the withdrawal of these passports, namely, to make a check against forgeries, but the passports should be returned in batches as the check proceeded instead of all being held up till its conclusion.
I have wired to Padmanabhan who is on tour in Dacca, to remind Azfar. I have also raised the matter with the Foreign Office here and shall press Ikramullah to take some action.

3. I have already informed you about the line we have taken with the Pakistani Foreign Office in regard to a discussion on visa policy. So far no progress whatsoever has been made as the opinion of the two Provincial Governments has been asked for and this of course means indefinite postponement. I shall press Ikramullah again after Eisenhower’s visit. My own feeling however is that while the Pakistanis talk or liberalisation, and they probably mean it in the case of West Pakistan, they are extremely averse to any marked change in East Pakistan where the problem is complicated by the presence of a large Hindu minority However that there had been some relaxation in East Pakistan in the rules for obtaining residential permits, the period being extended to one week, and the physical presence of women and children being dispensed with .

4. I have however let it be known widely that we are prepared to go ahead when a substantial measure of liberalization and it now all depends on the Pakistani Government as to how far they are prepared to go.

With Kind regards,

Yours sincerely
(Rajeshwar Dayal)

SECRET

Letter from Deputy High Commissioner for India in East Pakistan to High Commissioner for India in Pakistan.

Deputy High Commissioner for India in Pakistan
Dacca.

My dear High Commissioner,

During your visit to East Pakistan, I had mentioned to you that one of the restrictive features of the present visa policy was a requirement that applications from all persons, who had served in the Defence Forces, should be referred to the Ministry of Defence for pre-verification. Under the existing procedure we could grant visas to such persons only on compassionate grounds, otherwise, we must await the replies of the Ministry of Defence.
2. I am not writing this letter to suggest, at least at present, any change in these regulations although such a wide inhibition places the intending travelers of East Pakistan in unnecessary difficulties. Firstly, there are many Hindus who have families in India and who may have served in the Armed Forces before partition. Secondly, there are also a large number of Muslims as well as Hindus who may have served in medical services and in administrative and other innocuous positions. I do not think that it is right to deny them the normal travel facilities which we grant to other citizens. I think, therefore, that while retaining the present restrictions, we should be given discretion to issue visas to such ex-members of Defence Forces. Persons, who had already been cleared and who held such innocuous posts in distant past, should also be granted multi-journey visas like ‘B’ visas. This relaxation should be in addition to the compassionate cases for which discretion is already allowed to us.

3. The main purpose of my writing this letter, however, is to point out that recently there have been further restrictions placed by the Government on issue of visas to ex-Defence personnel. We noticed that whenever we made a reference to the Ministry of Defence for pre-verification of a particular application, the reply invariably came from them stating that no visa should be granted as there were no compassionate grounds. At first we thought that this was due to some confusion in the Ministry of Defence as we were ourselves competent to grant visas on compassionate grounds. It was only in respect of the normal visits by ex-Defence personnel that we were making references to the Ministry of Defence. In such cases, the issue of compassion did not arise.

4. Now we find that there was no confusion in the Ministry of Defence and that the increased restrictions placed by the Ministry of Defence are imposed as a matter of policy. It appears there was a letter from the High Commission dated the 8th of May 1957 (copy enclosed) which stated that more persons belonging to the Pakistan Defence Forces were coming to India than those belonging to Indian Defence Forces visiting Pakistan. In view of this, the High Commission then suggested that visas should be granted only on pressing compassionate grounds. Government accepted this proposal in November 1957. Presumably the intention was to confine this additional restriction on serving personnel only. In any case, it now applies to ex-defence personnel also.

5. I need not elaborate on the merits of the suggestion made by the High Commission in May 1957. In any case, you will agree that there is at present no necessity to ensure reciprocity in restriction between India and Pakistan in this matter. I shall, therefore, be grateful if you take up with the Ministry the question of restoring, firstly, the status quo ante and, secondly, of allowing us discretion in the cases referred to by me in paragraph 2 above. Needless to say that whenever we exercise our discretion, we shall immediately report of the grant of visa to the Ministry of Defence.
6. I am not sending a copy of this letter to the Ministry.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

Letter from High Commissioner of India in Pakistan Rajeshwar Dayal to Commonwealth Secretary M. J. Desai.

High Commission of India
Camp Office, Hoti House, Murree

No. 23/HC/.60 June 21, 1960

My dear C.S.,

When I saw General Shaikh (who held the Interior portfolio) last week, I asked him if he could give us some information regarding the decision that was taken at the conference held in Pindi on the question of visa policy. Shaikh said that the overall question of policy was not discussed, the review being confined to the internal aspect of the matter with a view to rationalizing the issue of passports which, I understood, would be related to the availability of foreign exchange.

2. Shaikh added that decisions had been taken to minimize inconvenience and harassment caused to visitors from India to Pakistan by making less cumbersome matters like reporting to the police, etc.

3. In this context I mentioned to Shaikh our experience when our Health Minister was forced to break journey in Karachi. Shaikh enquired about the details of the incident which I gave him adding that I did not wish to lodge a complaint but would suggest that Indian visitors, including those travelling with regular visas as well as those unavoidably detained, should be treated no worse than other foreigners. Shaikh said that he had noticed the press statement issued by Dr. Karmarkar and expressed appreciation of the consideration and understanding which he had shown. He said that action had been taken to prevent similar occurrence in the future.

4. I asked Shaikh if he would let me have a gist of the instructions which had been issued to the airport and other authorities regarding the treatment of Indian visitors in order to ensure that parallel action was taken in India. This Shaikh promised to do. I am asking our Karachi office to raise this matter with the Foreign Office and I shall also remind Shaikh or Manzur Qadir when I meet them next.

5. I would add that when Manzur Qadir dropped in to see us yesterday I mentioned to him my talk on this subject with General Shaikh. He repeated that the main difficulty in regard to a more liberal visa policy was the question of foreign exchange, which he had been told had been assessed by the financial authorities in Pakistan at something like Rs.37 crores. He said that so far as West Pakistan was concerned, since the earning members of many divided families were in Pakistan, there was a natural desire on their part to help their relations in India. I said that a parallel situation existed in regard to the Hindus in East Pakistan and the figures of foreign exchange were bound to be comparable on both sides. I also doubted the authenticity of his figure which seemed to me highly exaggerated. Although Qadir admitted the validity of this argument, the matter was not pressed further at this stage.

6. It seems to me that while no overall policy decisions between the two countries in regard to the liberalization of visa policy can be expected in the near future, both sides could take practical steps to ensure the more expeditious grant of visas and the elimination of unnecessary harassments. We have already been doing this for some time which has met with considerable appreciation throughout the country, and criticism has been diverted against the Pakistan Government's policy of requiring the making of initial deposits etc., and the denial of adequate foreign exchange facilities. Public pressure would therefore mount in order to force the Pakistani authorities to introduce some degree of relaxation in practice. We have more than fulfilled our part of the mandate regarding the liberalization of visa policy given to us at the October Border Conference, and can afford to wait and see what the Pakistan Government will do on their part.

7. This also has a reference to Shri A.S.Chib's letter No.F.25(31)/60-P dated 13th June to Shri S.K. Singh.
With kind regards,

Yours Sincerely

(Rajeshwar Dayal)

3491. Press Note issued by Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on travel facilities for Pakistani citizens while travelling to India.

The Government of Pakistan have been reviewing the position with reference to travel between India and Pakistan with a view to providing as many additional facilities as may be possible in all the circumstances of the case.

Travel abroad is a drain on the resources of a country which has a limited amount of foreign exchange and is engaged in the task of development. For this reason, foreign exchange allocations for the purpose of travel abroad are restricted in many countries including Pakistan. Consequent upon the partition of the Sub-continent, many persons have migrated to West Pakistan, whose relatives and dependents are in India and many persons from East Pakistan have sent their families and dependents to India. The number of such citizens of Pakistan, who naturally wish to visit their relatives, families or dependents in India, is very large indeed. The amount of foreign exchange used up by each person who travels to India, in spite of restrictions, is large enough to run into several crores of rupees every year.

While confining the facilities for travelling to India to those whose need is found to be genuine and urgent, the Government of Pakistan has concentrated upon giving better facilities for travelling to those who do travel to or from India.

The following decisions have been taken to give effect to this intention:—

1. Indians Visiting Pakistan

   (i) Once a visa has been issued for Pakistan, the greatest possible facility shall be granted to visa holder and he would be treated with respect and cordiality.
(ii) In regard to persons visiting the country on a ‘C’ Category visa, they shall be granted facilities provided for tourists in the Registration of Foreigners Rules. These facilities would exempt him from reporting movement etc. within the country.

(iii) The system of having two residential permits shall be abolished and substituted with a single residential permit issued at the point where the person takes up his residence. No residential permits will be required from persons visiting Pakistan and staying for less than two weeks.

Necessary notification to put these new rules in force will be issued shortly.

(iv) Passports and visas will conform to the present scheme in regard to validity and availability for visiting places.

2. Pakistanis Visiting India.

(i) Any passport holder, who has once travelled to India on ‘B’ or ‘C’ category visas, shall not be allowed to undertake a second visit within the same calendar year unless he has obtained an endorsement on his passport duly signed and sealed by an authority permitting him to undertake the second journey. Such endorsements will be granted only when genuine and pressing reasons for the second visit exist. This step has been taken to stop repeated and unnecessary journeys to India.

(ii) In the case of a property holder or a pensioner who is entitled to a ‘B’ visa under the Indo-Pakistan Passport-cum-Visa Scheme, the Passport Issuing Authority will, on application, make an endorsement on his passport, exempting him from the operation of this rule. This rule will also not apply to holders of “A”, “D”, “E” and “F” visas. They will be free to travel to India as many times as may be permissible under the Indo-Pakistan Visa Scheme.

GOVERNMENT PRESS NOTE

In order to make travel in Pakistan by citizens of India easier, the Government of Pakistan have decided to remove some of the restrictions which apply to them at present. In future, Indian citizens will be subject to the Registration of Foreigners Rules, 1939, and will be treated as other foreigners in Pakistan. The following cases of visa holders from India will henceforth be entitled to certain exemptions from the said rules:

(a) Citizens of India holding (A), (D) or in the case of a transport worker, holding (E) category visa for Pakistan.
(b) Citizens of India visiting Pakistan on (C) category Visa shall be accorded facilities admissible to tourists under the Registration of Foreigner Rules. These facilities would exempt them from reporting their movement, etc., within the country.

2. The following classes of Indian citizens have also been exempted from obtaining residential permits during their stay in Pakistan:

(i) Persons holding ‘A’ category Visas;
(ii) Persons holding ‘D’ category Visas;

(iii) Transport workers holding ‘E’ Category Visas;

(iv) Persons visiting Pakistan for a period not exceeding 15 days. If the period of stay is extended to more than 15 days, a residential permit will become necessary; and

(v) Persons granted gratis or courtesy visas.

3. Indian citizens will now be issued only single residential permits, instead of two as was the case in the past, by the Civil authority of the first of the several places for which the visa is valid. The Registration Officer at the check post of entry will make an endorsement on the Registration Form and state there in the period within which the journey to the destination should be completed. He will however, not issue a residential permit. In order to save time and facilitate quick disposal at the Check Post of entry, visa holders should previously fill in registration forms except column Nos. 12 and 13 and present them to the Officer in charge at the Check Post. The registration Forms will be available for sale for one Anna each at all Pakistan Visa Offices.

Government of West Pakistan’s Home Department while conveying these facilities to their Commissioners/Deputy Commissioners/Passport Officers in their Confidential letter No. 2/64-SOI (HPPT)-60 dated 2nd December 1960, enclosed a copy of a Confidential letter from the Pakistan Interior Ministry No. 40/78/57-Poll(1) – 2 dated 23rd November 1960 signed by Ali Ausat, Deputy Secretary Ministry of Interior, which inter alia in para 7 said: “I am also to request that Pakistani Passport holders who are hereafter granted ‘E’ and ‘F’ category Visas by India for the first time should be carefully checked. The checking should be for the purpose of finding out whether the man is really entitled to this kind of visa or has been granted this by India as a favour for some ulterior purpose. The purpose of checking in such cases should be to find out if person concerned is really employed in India. Prolonged absence from India or failure to send earnings back to this country should raise suspicions about the bona fides of employment in India. In such cases, the person should be penalized by withdrawal of his passport. Necessary instructions may kindly be issued to this effect to the immigration authorities at Check-Posts, etc.”

No. 40/78/57- Poll (1)-2, 23rd November, 1960.

Subject: Registration of Citizens of India Under the Registration of Foreigners Rules, 1939.

The Government of Pakistan have decided that with immediate effect the registration of Foreigners Rules, 1939, should be made applicable to Indians as to other foreigners. It has been decided further that Indians belonging to categories mentioned in paragraph 3 below should be exemped from certain provisions of the said Rules. Similarly, Indians mentioned in paragraph 4 below are to be exempted from the requirement of obtaining residential permits for their stay in Pakistan.

2. To achieve the objects mentioned in paragraph 1 above, necessary amendments have been made in the Registration of Foreigners (Exemption) Order, 1953, and clause 7 of the Foreigners Order, 1951 in two notifications bearing S. R. O. Nos. 27 and 28 both dated the 13th October, 1960, 20/15 copies of which are sent herewith for the use of the Provincial Government / Karachi Administration.

3. It is requested that citizens of India should in future be registered under the Foreigners Rules, 1939, like other foreigners with the exception of the following categories of visa holders:-

(a) a citizen of India holding 'A', 'D' or in case of a transport worker, 'E' category visa for Pakistan; and

(b) a citizen of India holding 'C' category visa to the extent that they are not applicable to or in relation to a tourist.
4. Likewise, the following categories of Indian citizens should not be required to obtain residential permits for staying in Pakistan:

(i) persons visiting Pakistan on the authority of 'A' category visa for Pakistan;
(ii) persons visiting Pakistan on the authority of 'D' category visa for Pakistan;
(iii) transport workers visiting Pakistan on the authority of 'E' category visa for Pakistan;
(iv) persons visiting Pakistan for a period not exceeding 15 days; where the period of stay is exceeded, a residential permit must be obtained;
(v) persons granted gratis or courtesy visas.

5. It has further been decided that in the case of Indian Nationals, the present practice of issuing two residential permits, one at the place of entry and the other at the destination of the person, should be done away with and instead a single residential permit should be issued at destination. I am therefore, to request that the procedure laid down in this Ministry letter No. 40/78/57-Poll(I), dated the 2nd April, 1958, on the subject should be accordingly changed. Accordingly, all Indians within this country should henceforth be issued a single residential permit by the Civil Authority of the first of the several places for which his visa is valid in Pakistan. In order to ensure that citizens of India do not unnecessarily wander about in Pakistan, after their entry and prior to their arrival at the first place for which they hold a visa, the Registration Officer at the Check-Post should make an endorsement on the Registration form of each person to indicate the period within which he would reasonably reach his destination or to some other place where a stay is to be made as the case may be. Where it is considered necessary, the route which should be followed should be indicated.

6. In order to allow 'on the spot registration' at the Check Post of entry, visa holders should be advised to have their registration forms filled in at the visa office except for columns 12 and 13. Arrangements are being made to make such forms available for sale.

7. I am also to request that Pakistani passport holders who are hereafter granted 'E' and 'F' category visas by India for the first time should be carefully checked. The checking should be for the purpose of finding out whether the man is really entitled to this kind of visa or has been granted this by India as a favor or for some ulterior purpose. A Passport-and-Visa regime was introduced for travel between India and Pakistan in October, 1952. Before the introduction of this system, discussions were held between the two Governments with a view to ensuring that the provisions of the scheme were uniform on both sides. Representatives of the Governments of India and Pakistan, therefore, met in Karachi in May, 1952 to work out an agreed scheme. As a result of this conference and subsequent consultations, a comprehensive scheme was worked out jointly by the two Governments and came into operation simultaneously.

2. It was subsequently realised on both sides that the 1952 scheme was unduly restrictive and meetings were held from time to time between the representatives of India and Pakistan not only to remedy some of its shortcomings but also to adopt various measures of liberalisation. Agreed measures of relaxation were accordingly incorporated in the scheme. In April, 1955, Ministers of the two Governments initialed an agreement designed to rationalise and simplify the cumbersome scheme which then existed. Unfortunately, this agreement was not implemented. Attempts, however, continued to be made for easing the restrictions and reducing the complexities of the Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme.
3. This matter was also discussed at the Ministers' level conference held in October, 1959, when it was agreed that in order to promote friendly relations between the two countries, the Indo-Pakistan visa policy should be liberalised. Accordingly, the Indian High Commissioner in Pakistan took up this issue with the Government of Pakistan. Unfortunately, no progress has been made so far in this regard.

4. It may be emphasised that although complaints were being made from time to time that there were differences between the two Governments in the implementation of the jointly-agreed regulations, no attempt was made by either Government to alter unilaterally the actual provisions of the scheme. If any changes were suggested either by India or Pakistan, these were given effect to only if there were agreement between the two Governments.

5. For the first time since the introduction of the Passport-and-Visa Scheme in 1952, however, the Government of Pakistan has now made a radical and far-reaching change in the scheme. This has been done unilaterally and the Government of India has not been consulted in the matter. The Government of Pakistan issued a Press Note on the 17th of September, 1960 and announced, inter alia, that "Any passport holder", who has once travelled to India on 'B' or 'C' category visas, shall not be allowed to undertake a second visit within the same calendar year unless he has obtained an endorsement on his passport duly signed and sealed by an authority permitting him to undertake the second Journey.

6. Under the scheme jointly agreed upon by the Governments of India and Pakistan, the following Extract gives the position in respect of 'B' visas:

"Part I ....

3. Categories of visas: - ......

II. Category 'B' visa :- ......

(3) The following facilities will be available to holders of this visa -

(a) This visa will normally entitle the holder to make eight journeys to India.

(b) Where the Visa Officer is satisfied that a person in this category is required to travel more frequently than eight times during one year, he may grant a visa for such additional journeys as may be necessary."

The Pakistan Scheme makes an identical stipulation regarding journeys to Pakistan.
7. Similarly, a ‘C’ category visa entitles the visa-holder to make a single journey to the other country, irrespective of the number of journeys he may have made earlier either on a ‘C’ or any other category of visa.

8. The new regulations imposed by the Government of Pakistan prohibiting holders of Indian visas from utilizing those visas if they are making a second trip to India during a calendar year, thus infringe the agreed provisions of the Indo-Pakistan scheme and frustrate the purpose of the agreement. They also constitute a departure from the practice adopted all these years that changes in the scheme should be made only after consultation and agreement.

9. The restrictions now imposed by the Government of Pakistan also seem to reverse the trend so happily noticed recently in regard to Indo-Pakistan relationship. Instead of bringing the people of the two countries closer, they are leading to a constriction of social intercourse between them. Moreover, the new regulations are specifically contrary to the letter and the spirit of the agreement to liberalise the visa policy reached at the Ministers’ level conference held in October 1959 in pursuance of the directive issued by the Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan.

10. The Press Note issued by the Government of Pakistan states that these restrictions on travel to India by Holders of ‘B’ and ‘C’ category visas have been imposed with a view to conserving Pakistan’s foreign exchange. Detailed examination of the position would, however, indicate that the restrictions do not really affect the foreign exchange position of Pakistan.

11. Under and agreement between the two countries, travellers were allowed to take with them a small basic quota of Indian and Pakistani currencies. The Government of Pakistan, however, abolished these basic quotas in 1969. Under the present regulations, therefore, a traveller from Pakistan is not allowed to take to India any money at all. He is, therefore, obliged to subsist on the hospitality provided to him by his relations and friends in India. Fortunately, the two countries have relations and friends across the border and it is possible for Pakistani nationals to visit India and stay there for short periods without spending any foreign exchange.

12. India continues to allow the basic quotas to her nationals visiting Pakistan. Thus both in respect of Indian nationals visiting Pakistan who bring money from India and Pakistan nationals visiting India who live as guests of their Indian friends and relations, the expenditure involved is principally of Indian money. It is true that provision exists under the Pakistan laws for providing foreign exchange to travellers under the authority of the State Bank of Pakistan. In actual practice, however, it is found that such authority is given by the State Bank of Pakistan in rare cases, representing only a fraction of the total travelling public. It may also be emphasised in this connection that restrictions imposed by the Government of Pakistan on visa-holders of ‘B’ and ‘C’ categories do not apply only to persons who obtain foreign exchange from the State Bank of Pakistan. If these regulations had stipulated, for example, that persons travelling a second time during one calendar year would not be granted foreign exchange except under special circumstances, it would have been possible to say that the restrictions were imposed with a view to conserving foreign exchange. That, however, is not the position. The new regulations have thus resulted in restricting travel and not in saving any foreign exchange.

13. Historically, geographically and socially, the peoples of the two countries are related very closely and large numbers of Indians and Pakistanis have to travel frequently to the other country. It was in recognition of these abiding factors that the system of multi-Journey visas was adopted jointly by the two Governments. The fresh restrictions now imposed unilaterally by the Government of Pakistan have already led to a substantial reduction in travel and are causing great hardship to many people, including those whose families are divided between India and Pakistan.

It is hoped that the Government of Pakistan will re-examine this matter and rescind the fresh restrictions imposed by it on travel to India. The Government of Pakistan will also no doubt agree to holding discussions with the High Commissioner for India with a view to liberalising the existing restrictions in accordance with the agreement reached at the Ministers’ level conference in October, 1959.

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan V. C. Trivedi to Commonwealth Secretary Y. D. Gundevia.

High Commission of India
Karachi

No. HC/95/61 March 9, 1961/Phalguna 18, 1882 (Saka).

My dear Commonwealth Secretary,

The Indo-Pakistan visa system is one of the most cumbersome contraptions anywhere in the world. In the conditions which existed in 1952, this complex structure was perhaps unavoidable. Since then, however, the Government of India has been trying consistently to rationalize it and simplify it. Unfortunately, the present system serves Pakistan's purpose of inhibiting social intercourse between the two countries and we find no response at all from that Government.

2. As far as we are concerned, however, we have adopted a clear policy of liberalism in the administration of the system. We believe that it is in the interest of the two countries to have easier facilities of visits between the peoples of India and Pakistan. There are also the humanitarian problems involved as thousands of families have been divided by Partition.

3. We, therefore, issue visas liberally, despite additional restrictions being imposed periodically by the Government of Pakistan not only on visits of Indian nationals to Pakistan but also on visits by Pakistan nationals to India. The only factors inhibiting liberal issue of visas by us are considerations of security. There are voluminous blacklists prepared by various agencies and visas are not granted to persons included in these lists without prior reference to the authorities concerned.

4. Besides these blacklists, however, we have been instructed to observe another inhibition and that is the principal purpose of my letter. We have been instructed that we should not issue visas to any person who is employed in the police or defence services of Pakistan without prior reference to the Ministry of Home Affairs or the Ministry of Defence. We have been similarly prohibited from issuing visas to those who may have served in the police or defence services in the past.

5. Here again, I do not question this in principle as I do not dispute that security considerations are paramount. What I am concerned about is the way the Defence Ministry administer this prohibition. By and large, we have not had much difficulty, with the Ministry of Home Affairs in respect of the serving or retired police personnel. What normally happens is that an application by a Pakistan national in this category is referred to the Ministry of Home Affairs. Sometimes it takes a little more time than either we or the Ministry themselves would like, but these applications are examined on merits and we get replies saying "yes" or "no". For official visits or urgent visits or visits on compassionate grounds, when there is not time enough for a reference and its reply, the Head of the Mission is authorised to grant visas straightway and then report the matter to the Ministry of Home Affairs. The same discretion is granted under the same limitation in cases where the Head of Mission wishes to give a visa for weighty political or diplomatic reasons.

6. Thus, with the Ministry of Home Affairs, this system is working fairly satisfactorily. But not so with the Ministry of Defence, who has been insisting that we must never issue a visa to any person who may be serving or who may have served in the past in any defence service. That applies to urgent cases as well as to compassionate cases. This total ban applies to persons who may belong to the minority community, who may be old and infirm or who may have served in some medical unit in the First World War. There is no exception, no alleviating circumstance.

7. Now this is bad enough, but the position is in effect even worse. It is one thing to say that we must never issue a visa without prior reference to the Ministry of Defence, but even when we make a reference when a serving or a retired officer wishes to undertake a normal visit to India to see his brother or sister or father, we get a reply that the compassionate reasons for the visit are not strong enough and that a visa should not be granted. In my humble opinion, this is certainly not the right approach. Simply because a man happens to be in the armed forces or happens to have served in the past in any defence set-up, it is surely not the policy of the Government of India to deny him a visa to visit his mother or even to go to Agra to see the Taj. The other day, Brohi's surgeon asked for permission to go from Dacca to New Delhi. He belonged to the I.M.S. in the old days. Brohi wanted him there. This gentleman was allowed to go to Delhi but was refused a visa to halt for a couple of days in Calcutta. Another doctor was refused a visa to Fatehpur to attend the marriage of his nephew. In these cases, people often come to us and pay telegraph charges for making references. But the Ministry of Defence says "no" and we ask the applicant to pay telegraph charges, both ways. I may emphasise that these refusals are given on the basis that the compassionate grounds are not strong enough. The Defence Ministry does not seem to consider that these applications are for normal visits and have nothing to do with compassion.
8. The Defence personnel past and present, are not just a simple or single category of people. Some of them served in the First World War. Many of them served in innocuous positions. Many young Pakistanis did a few emergency years in the last war and are now important Government officials or business executives. Prohibiting these people from visiting India is, to my mind, not in accordance with the policy of the Government of India.

9. I had taken up this matter in the past when I was (in Dacca. You might like to see in this connection a letter I had written to Shri Dayal (No. F.-9(18)-PP/57 of the 22nd of March, 1960) which I attach herewith. This was an issue which concerned both Dacca and Karachi and I thought it would be better if the High Commissioner took it up. Karachi, did take it up and the Ministry of Defence has now replied to say that except in case of sudden illness of a relation in India, we should not issue visas without prior preference (copy enclosed).

10. I submit this is not a correct decision and I would request you to have the matter re-examined at a higher level, provided that of course you agree with me.

My suggestions are as under:

(a) When we make references to the Ministry of Defence in respect of applications by serving or retired personnel, these applications should be treated in the normal manner.

I have nothing to say if the Government of India feels that a particular gentleman's visit to India is specifically against the security of the country. On the other hand, if a person wishes to visit a relation or go to Ajmer or consult business associates, he should be treated in the same manner as any other Pakistani.

(b) The Head of the Mission should be granted discretion to issue short term visas to persons.

(i) who have to go urgently to a place in India for bona fide reasons and there is not time enough to get a reply from the Ministry of Defence, e.g. a person working in Ralli Bros, or Burmah Shell going to India on business or a civil pilot wishing to utilise his short leave to see his sister in Hyderabad.

(ii) whom or whose sponsors we wish to oblige for political reasons, e.g., a Cabinet Minister or Foreign Secretary speaking to us about the applicant concerned; and

(iii) who are old and infirm or who may have served in the past in some innocuous capacity as Defence Accounts or medical; service.
N.B. In all cases in which we exercise such discretion, we shall report details telegraphically to the Ministry of Defence, so as to enable them to keep a watch on the person concerned.

11. We are rightly proud of our liberalism. It is also in our general interest to cultivate social contacts between the people of the two countries. We should, therefore, view this problem purely from the point of view of our policies and purposes and not from that of reciprocating Pakistan’s illiberalism.

12. I shall be grateful if you have this matter reconsidered at a senior level and let us have your instructions early.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely

Letter from Commonwealth Secretary to Secretary Ministry of Defence Government of India.

New Delhi, April 12, 1961.

No. 38 – CS/61 April 12, 1961

My dear Pulla Reddy,

The question of possible relaxation of visas to be granted to members of the armed forces of Pakistan, who desire to come to India on various grounds, including compassionate grounds, has been under frequent discussion between the Ministry of External Affairs and the Ministry of Defence. There are fairly severe restrictions in regard to the grant of visas to Pakistan Police personnel, but here we have prevailed upon the Home Ministry to permit a certain amount of discretion to the High Commissioner. All such discretion in the matter has, however, been refused by the Defence Ministry in regard to Pakistan Defense personnel, whether they are ex-servicemen of World War I or World War II and irrespective of whether they belong to the regulars armed forces or various branches of the Medical Services, etc.,

2. I am enclosing herewith a copy of our High Commission’s letter NO.HC/95/61 dated March 9, 1961, in which certain suggestions have been made, which, I would like to discuss with you. Some of these suggestions have been made before, but they have been uniformly turned down by the Ministry of Defence in the past. I feel that to a very great extent the case of Visas for the Pakistan armed forces and the Pakistan Police is similar, if not identical and we would like to follow a fairly uniform policy. The suggestions that the Acting High Commissioner has made in paragraph 10 are, in my opinion, perfectly reasonable, and will not in anyway jeopardise the safety of the State. I would be grateful if you would give this matter some thought and I shall come over and discuss matters with you after you have had time to examine your side of the case.

Yours sincerely

Letter from High Commissioner for India in Pakistan Rajeshwar Dayal to Commonwealth Secretary Y. D. Gundevia.

New Delhi, March 28, 1962.

High Commissioner for India
Karachi

No. HC/45/62

March 28, 1962

My dear Yezdi,

Please refer to my letter No.HC/19/62 dated the 1st March, 1962. Ashok has now shown me Prithi Singh’s letter No. F.20(12)60-PSP of the 6th March. We greatly appreciate Prithi Singh’s efforts to reduce the dichotomy in regard to the issue of visas as between your Ministry and that of Defence. I would, however, like to express my views on paragraph 2 of his letter about waiting for a relaxation in the present rigid policy of treating visa applications from Pakistani Defence and ex-Defence personnel on grounds of security until the present tension between India and Pakistan shows signs of lessening. It is not clear to us what these security considerations in fact amount to. Is it suggested that allowing a Director of a firm doing business with India to visit some cities in India, either on business or to see his relatives is a security risk? We are also told that if ex-Defence or Defence personnel enter India by road via Wagah, our security is jeopardised, while thousands of other Pakistanis can do so without causing any such risk.

2. The only means this High Commission has of ascertaining whether a person is a Defence or an ex-Defence personnel, is the certificate which the applicant signs on the body of the application. (I enclose a copy of the certificate.) Last year we processed over one lakh applications. Is it seriously contended that the visa establishment, already short staffed to meet its day to day requirements, can actually verify the correctness or otherwise of these declarations? Therefore, all that is required if an ex-Defence personnel wishes to escape the rigours of the Defence Ministry’s rules is to state that he has never been a military employee. Unless the applicant’s background is known to us we have no option but to accept the declaration as genuine. Of course, if we come to know later that the declaration is false, we would place him on the black list. I am however not aware of a single case of this kind.

3. As regards travel by the land route, if Military intelligence was required by the Government of Pakistan, the last person they would wish to send openly would be an army officer. He could be a trained civilian or even an army officer with a false civilian history.

4. I am afraid this whole approach to visa applications even for those who were only temporarily connected with the armed forces before partition, makes nonsense of our liberal visa policy. The other day when I was at Lahore I was told that there was a strong belief that our visa policy had again become more restrictive, possibly because of the downward trend in Indo-Pak relations. This is, of course, not so but it is impossible to convince people when the policy being followed by other Ministries particularly Defence is very different to that laid down by the Ministry directly concerned, viz. External Affairs. Surely the policy must be uniform and no veto power allowed to other Ministries whose function can only be advisory. I would repeat that our visa policy can be either restrictive or liberal. It cannot be a mixture of both.

With Kind regards,

Yours sincerely

3500. Note from High Commission for India in Pakistan to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Karachi, September 26, 1962.

The High Commission for India in Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of Pakistan and has the honour to refer to the Ministry’s Note No.Pol.1 (A)-15/22-61-11 dated the 17th October, 1961 regarding the unilateral steps taken by the Government of Pakistan to impose restrictions on travel to India.

2. The Government of Pakistan are aware that it has always been the aim of the Government of India to simplify the India-Pakistan Passport Visa scheme on the basis of reciprocity and, to achieve this end they had requested the Government of Pakistan to agree to hold meetings between the representatives of both the governments. In the first half of 1960, the High Commissioner for India in Pakistan had suggested to Pakistan Ministers to agree to such discussions. The Govt. of Pakistan, however, merely preferred to issue a Press Note on the 17th September, 1960, claiming that they had modified their procedures to provide better facilities for Indian travellers in Pakistan in regard to the issue of residential permits and police reporting by them. At the same time, the Govt. of Pakistan imposed fresh restrictions on travel of Pakistani nationals holding ‘B’ and ‘C’ visas to India which is an act of unilateral alteration of the provisions of the mutually agreed India-Pakistan Visa Scheme.
3. The Government of India have examined in detail the note of the Ministry referred to in para 1 above and offer the following comments, ad seriatim.

4. Para 1 and 8 of the note:

The so-called facilities provided by the Government of Pakistan to Indian nationals in matters relating to police reporting, residential permits, registration etc. are only consequential changes on application of the Registration of Foreigner Rules, 1939 to Indian nationals for in fact there has been no liberalisation in the travel facilities granted to Indian nationals. Hitherto these rules were not applicable to Indian visitors to Pakistan and, in accordance with the India-Pakistan Visa Scheme, a mere surrender of a copy of the visa application at the checkpost of entry constituted registration. The Indian visitors to Pakistan have, now to observe the elaborate procedure of registration laid down by these rules. The Ministry has stated that Indian visitors are exempted from reporting their movements within Pakistan. In fact they are now required to get themselves registered under the Registration of Foreigners Rules within 24 hours of their arrival. They have also to report their departure to the Registration Offices of the district in which they are registered. While the Government of Pakistan have done away with the system of two residential permits, the Indian visitors have not to obtain two registration certificates even if their place of arrival in Pakistan and a place of stay in Pakistan are in different districts. The Government of India, therefore, consider that the present system introduced by the Government of Pakistan is more cumbersome than the system, at present, being followed by the Government of India in regard to Pakistani nationals visiting India. Furthermore the Government of Pakistan have applied the Registration of Foreigners Rules, 1939 to Indian nationals without consulting the Government of India and this amounts to a unilateral violation of the provisions of the agreed India-Pakistan Visa Scheme.

5. Paras 3 and 4 of the note:

The High Commission had explained in detail the implications of the unilateral restrictions imposed by the Government of Pakistan on ‘B’ and ‘C’ visa holders in its aide memoire of 25th February, 1961. The contention of the Government of Pakistan that these restrictions have been imposed with a view to conserving Pakistan’s foreign exchange does not appear to be correct. According to a circular No.48 of July 18,1961, issued by the State Bank of Pakistan, Karachi, Pakistani nationals travelling to India are allowed exchange facilities at the rate of Rs.50/- (Indian) per adult and Rs.25/- (Indian) per minor once in two years. In actual practice, however, it is found that the State Bank of Pakistan releases foreign exchange in rare cases representing only a fraction of the total travelling public to India. Pakistani nationals are, therefore, obliged to subsist on the hospitality provided to them by their relations and friends in India. It may be reiterated that restrictions imposed by the Government of Pakistan on visa holders of ‘B’ and ‘C’ categories, do not apply only to persons who obtain foreign exchange from the State Bank of Pakistan. If these regulations had stipulated, for example, that persons travelling a second time during one calendar year, would not be granted foreign exchange except under special circumstances, it would have been possible for the Government of Pakistan to say that the restrictions were imposed with a view to conserving foreign exchange. That however, is not the position and consequently, the new regulations have resulted in restricting travel and not in saving any foreign exchange.

In this context, the High Commission would request the Government of Pakistan to refer to the attached copy of a Press Clipping of a news item which appeared in The Morning News, Dacca of 13th November, 1961. It will be seen there from that even in cases where a Pakistani national wishes to visit India to see his relations on extreme compassionate grounds, the Government of Pakistan do not see their way to permitting the visit without their special sanction on the grounds that he had already been to India once during the calendar year.

7. Para 5 of the note:

The High Commission regrets to note that instead of accepting the suggestion made by it for holding talks between the representatives of the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan with a view to simplifying the India-Pakistan Visa Scheme, the Ministry have leveled some frivolous charges against it in regard to the issue of visas for India to Pakistani nationals. The actual position, ad seriatim, is as under:

(a) It is not a fact that it is difficult to obtain a visa from Karachi to India. In the year 1960, the High Commission, in keeping with its liberal policy in regard to the grant of visas, issued visas to about 1,60,000 Pakistani nationals. In the year 1961 about 1, 00,000 Pakistani nationals wera granted visas. The comparative decrease in number in 1961 was due to the restrictions imposed by the Government of Pakistan in September, 1960 on the holders of ‘B’ and ‘C’ visas and was not due to any restrictions imposed by the High Commission. The charge of the Government of Pakistan that only 50 to 60 persons are admitted for depositing visas with the High Commission is therefore very far removed from the facts

(b) This is also far from the truth. Visas are normally issued to the applicants on the third day and in urgent cases as on the same day. Only such cases as are required to be referred to various authorities in India or require detailed scrutiny take a little longer.

(c) This was purely a temporary measure.
(d) The column of counter signature prescribed in the form for renewal of Indian passports is sometimes got completed by the applicants concerned from a Notary Public at their own discretion. The High Commission does not insist upon its being counter-signed by a Notary Public in Pakistan.

(e) It is wrong to say that Pakistani workers in West Bengal are being refused renewal of their ‘F’ category visas indiscriminately. On receiving a reference from the Deputy High Commission of Pakistan in Calcutta the Government of West Bengal has clarified that in emergencies arising out of strikes and lock-outs, applications for renewal of ‘F’ visas are considered on merits also. The Deputy High Commission of Pakistan was also advised that they could always bring special cases to the notice of the State Govt.- at any time. It may, however, be added that the number of cases where the question of strikes and lock-outs is involved, is negligible and therefore the contention of the Government of Pakistan that Pakistani workers are being refused renewal of ‘F’ category visas indiscriminately cannot be accepted. On the other hand the Government of Pakistan have adopted a very restrictive policy in the matter of renewal of ‘F’ category visas of Indian nationals. The Government of Pakistan have steadily been squeezing out Indian nationals on one pretext or another. There had been several cases in the past which were taken up by the Government of India with the Government of Pakistan without any favourable response.

8. The High Commission would be grateful if the Government of Pakistan will kindly reconsider once again the whole position and agree to rescind the fresh restrictions imposed by them on travel to India. The Govt., of India are also prepared to negotiate other measures of liberalisation of visa rules relating to travel between India and Pakistan and to achieve this end, it is suggested that the Government of Pakistan may kindly agree to holding discussions with the High Commissioner for India in Pakistan.

The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry the assurances of its highest consideration.

Ministry of External Affairs,
Government of Pakistan,
Karachi.

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission for India and has the honour to state that the Government of Pakistan is constrained to request that the Office of Assistant High Commissioner for India in Rajshahi completely wind up its affairs and cease to function by 15th December, 1963. The Government of Pakistan has been forced to take this decision for the following reasons:

The Assistant High Commission for India in Rajshahi was established in 1953 as a Sub-Mission; it was meant to function primarily as a passport and visa office. From its very inception, however, it has operated more as a centre of espionage, subversion and activities prejudicial to the security of Pakistan, than as a visa office or even as a normal diplomatic office.

The Assistant High Commission has also been continuously and persistently used as a centre for the dissemination of anti-Pakistan propaganda, the circulation of false allegations against the Government of Pakistan and concocted stories of imaginary occurrences. This has been pointed out to the High Commission for India on several occasions. As recently as November 9, 1963, instances of dissemination of objectionable information by the Rajshahi Office were furnished to the High Commission in this Ministry’s letter No. P (I) – 17/6/60.

The Government of East Pakistan also, has on several occasions drawn the attention of the Assistant High Commissioner to the objectionable activities of that Mission, but these representations were completely ignored. At the request of the Government of East Pakistan, therefore, Mr. A. S. Shaikh a Director in this Ministry was compelled to take up this matter with the Deputy High Commissioner for India in Karachi, Mr. V.C.V. Raghavan.

It is indeed a matter of regret that none of such warnings has been heeded. On the other hand, the tempo of the aforesaid objectionable activities on the part of the Rajshahi Office has of late increased to such an extent that they have incensed the people of the area. The Rajshahi Office has thus become a cause of further tension between the two countries.
The Government of Pakistan trusts that the Government of India appreciates the need for putting an end to objectionable activities of its Missions in Pakistan and will understand that the decision conveyed in this Note is motivated as much by a desire, on the part of the Government of Pakistan, to bring about an atmosphere conducive to the maintenance and promotion of good-neighborly relations, as by its resolve to root out subversion from its soil.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for India in Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

The High Commission for India in Pakistan

3502. Note from High Commission for India in Pakistan to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Indian High Commission
Karachi

4th December, 1963

The High Commission for India in Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of Pakistan and with reference to their Note No. PIC- 16/9/63 dated November 27, 1963, demanding the closure of the Assistant High Commissioner in Rajshahi, has the honour to state that the Government of India categorically repudiate as totally baseless the allegations advanced to justify the demand, which they earnestly hope that the Government of Pakistan will withdraw in the interest of amicable relations between the two countries.

The Government of India are astonished that on the basis of general and unsubstantiated charges, the Government of Pakistan should, without justification, take such an extreme step whose serious repercussions on Indo-Pakistan relations they are surely aware of. The Ministry’s Note of November 27 ostensibly bases the demand for closure on the following allegations:
(a) that the Rajshahi Office has been “a centre of espionage, subversion and activities prejudicial to the security of Pakistan” since its inception in 1953. The Government of India deny and protest against such unfounded charges. At no time has any member of their Mission in Rajshahi taken part in activities such as have been alleged. Nor has that Office at any time operated as a centre of espionage and subversion. The Government of India find it incredible that the Government of Pakistan should now come forward with serious charges concerning the Mission’s work, after a lapse of ten years, without ever raising the matter during that period.

(b) that the Office has also been “a centre for the dissemination of anti-Pakistan propaganda, the circulation of false allegations against the Government of Pakistan and concocted stories of imaginary occurrences”. The Note states that this has been pointed out several times to the Government of India and tries to suggest that the latest instance was on November 9, 1963. In fact, the Ministry’s letter of November 9 was in response to a specific request made by the High Commission for examples of the material to which the Ministry had objected while leveling another general and unsubstantiated accusation against the press releases and handouts of the High Commission. It is the first instance of such a complaint to the High Commission in respect of the Rajshahi Office and appears to be the only one, rather than the latest in a series, as the Ministry’s Note seeks to represent it. In that Note there was no suggestion at all that the Government of Pakistan took such a serious view of the activities of the mission at Rajshahi as a whole as to require its closure.

The Ministry further alleges that the attention of the Assistant High Commissioner in Rajshahi has been drawn, on several occasions, to the objectionable activities of the Rajshahi Mission but that these representations were ignored. The Government of India are not aware of any such representations to the Assistant High Commissioner, and note that the Ministry do not specify a single one. They are, moreover, surprised that the discussions between Mr. A. A. (S) Shaikh and Shri V. C. Vijaya Raghavan should be referred to as though they were the culmination of a series of fruitless complaints. It will be recalled that those discussions were confined to the question of communications between the Assistant High Commissioner and the local authorities. The Pakistan Government’s suggestions were that the Assistant High Commissioner should not even correspond with the District officials but should leave it to the Deputy High Commissioner for India in Dacca to take up issues directly with the East Pakistan Government. Again, there was not the slightest indication that the Government of Pakistan objected to any other aspect of the functioning of the Rajshahi Mission.

The High Commission can recall only one other occasion when the working of the Rajshahi Mission have been referred to by the Government of Pakistan. This was in 1962, when the Assistant High Commissioner’s efforts to draw the attention of the district authorities to the violent danger to which the Hindu minority in the area was exposed, and to calm the resulting panic, were misrepresented as encouragement of migration to India. These allegations against the office in Rajshahi were immediately repudiated and were never again referred to by the Government of Pakistan.

In view of the facts stated above, the Government of India must point out that there can be no justifications for the allegations, much less the demand for closure, contained in the Ministry’s Note of November 27. If the Pakistan Government had any genuine complaints about the activities of the Government of India’s officers in Rajshahi, it was open to them to take these up with the Government of India and ask for whatever remedial action they considered necessary. Instead, the Government of Pakistan have, for the second time in recent weeks, made abrupt and peremptory demands for the cessation of the normal activities of Indian Missions in Pakistan, while adding general accusations which do not bear the least scrutiny.

The Government of India find it as difficult to understand the motivation for these demands as to appreciate the arguments that they are designed to bring about “an atmosphere congenial to the maintenance and promotion of good neighborly relations”. It must be evident to the Government of Pakistan that they have precisely the opposite effect. The Office of the Assistant High Commissioner for India in Rajshahi, like the office of the Assistant High Commissioner for Pakistan in Shillong was established to function strictly on the basis of reciprocity to serve the interest of the peoples of both countries. The Government of Pakistan will appreciate that if they insist on closing the office of Rajshahi, then, in accordance with the basis of reciprocity, the Government of India will be constrained to withdraw their consent to the continuation of the office in Shillong, and Pakistan’s action will only have succeeded in embittering feelings as well as inconveniencing peoples in both countries.

The Government of India are deeply convinced of the need to avoid any deterioration in relations between the two countries, and are determined to persevere in trying to improve those relations. They accordingly hope that the Government of Pakistan will reconsider the demand for the closure of the Office of the Assistant High Commissioner for India in Rajshahi and thereby cooperate in reducing tensions.

The High Commission of India takes this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

3503. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

Government of Pakistan
Ministry of External Affairs
Karachi

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission for India and with reference to their Note dated 4th December, 1963 regarding the closure of the Office of the Assistant High Commissioner for India in Rajshahi, have the honor to state that the afore-mentioned Note has been carefully considered.

2. The Ministry wishes to reiterate the fact that the Government of Pakistan have in their possession sufficient evidence to justify the conclusion that the Assistant High Commission for India in Rajshahi was being used as a centre of espionage and subversion and for dissemination of anti-Pakistan propaganda. The Government of Pakistan were, therefore, left with no alternative but to ask for the closure of that Office. The decision of the Government of Pakistan to request the Government of India to close down their Assistant High Commission at Rajshahi was taken after all its aspects had been given a most careful consideration.

3. The Government of Pakistan have always hoped that the Government of India’s actions would be directed towards promotion of good neighbourly relations with Pakistan and that they would avoid any action which would lead to a deterioration in the relations between the two countries. Unfortunately, however, a number of recent actions of the Government of India have only contributed to the aggravation of tension between the two countries. It is earnestly hoped that the Government of India will appreciate the need for improving relations with Pakistan and help create an atmosphere conducive to the promotion of good neighbourly relations between the two countries.

4. The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for India the assurances of its highest consideration.

3504. Note from High Commission for India in Pakistan to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Indian High Commission
Karachi.

13TH December, 1963

The High Commission for India in Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of Pakistan and has the honour to refer to their Note No. PIC- 16/9/63 dated the 7th December, 1963, rejecting the Government of India’s request for the withdrawal by the Government of Pakistan of their demand for the closure of the Office of the Assistant High Commissioner for India in Rajshahi.

2. The Government of India deeply regret that their sincere efforts to try to persuade the Government of Pakistan to refrain from further damaging relations between the two countries have evoked no other response than a repetition of sweeping allegations of “espionage” and “subversion” against the Office of the Indian Assistant High Commissioner in Rajshahi, for which there is absolutely no foundation in fact. They note that the Government of Pakistan are maintaining their demand for closure without substantiating any of their charges, without answering specifically any of the points raised in the High Commission’s Note of the 4th December, 1963, and without regard for the need to halt the campaign against India which, in recent weeks, has been exceeding even past levels of intensity. Instead the Government of Pakistan has seen fit to go beyond their allegations in respect of the Rajshahi Office and to accuse the Government of India as a whole of aggravating tension. This is, in fact, the reverse of the true position, and the Government of India are astonished that the Government of Pakistan should level such an unspecified and totally unjustified charge while themselves persisting in provoking tension.

3. The Government of India once again rejects the charges leveled by Pakistan against them, and in particular against their Office in Rajshahi, as totally unfounded. Since the Government of Pakistan insist that their decision was taken "after all its aspects had been given a most careful consideration", the Government of India can only conclude that it is the deliberate intention of the Government of Pakistan to restrict normal and friendly contacts between the peoples of the two countries and to heighten tension by leveling false and unsubstantiated charges against the activities of their entire mission in Rajshahi.

The High Commission of India avails itself of the opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs the assurances of its highest consideration.

3505. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission for India in Pakistan.

Rawalpindi, January 10, 1964.

The Ministry of External Affairs [for a brief period the Pakistan Government had christened its Foreign Ministry as “External Affairs Ministry”] its presents its compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and with reference to the High Commission’s Note No.F.1-74/58-IV/8595 of the 26th September 1962, on the subject of simplification of the Passport and Visa procedure between Pakistan and India, has the honour to state that after minutely examining the points raised by the High Commissioner the Government of Pakistan has regrettfully come to the conclusion that the Government of India have not been reciprocating in easing the difficulties experienced by persons travelling between the two countries

Attention of the High Commission is invited to this Ministry's Note No. Pol. I(A)-15/22/61, dated the 17th October 1961 wherein it was intimated that in pursuance of its desire to mitigate the difficulties experienced by travelers, Pakistan had decided on their own initiative to unilaterally extend the following facilities to Indian nationals visiting Pakistan:-

i) Persons, who come to Pakistan on ‘C’ category visas, are granted the same facilities as are provided to tourists i.e. they are exempted from reporting their movements etc., within the country;

ii) The system of having two residential permits was abolished and instead a single residential permit is now issued at the final destination of the persons;

iii) No residential permit is required by persons visiting and staying in Pakistan for less than two weeks; and

iv) A provision has been made for the issue of gratis and courtesy visas,—the holder of such visas are exempt from the operation of the Foreigners' Rules as well as from the requirements of obtaining a residential permit. Such visas are valid for the whole of Pakistan except for some restrictions.

If the Government of India is genuinely interested in easing the difficulties experienced by travelers between the two countries, it should have willingly responded to this unilateral gesture on the part of Government of Pakistan. On the other hand, the Government of Pakistan are painfully constrained to note that in violation of the letter and spirit of the Indo-Pakistan Passport and Visa scheme, travellers to India are being constantly persecuted and harassed and stringent action is being taken against them for minor acts of omission and commission. These minor omissions etc. occur mainly due to ignorance of law and not due to any deliberate violations. To illustrate the point a few examples of the type of harassment perpetrated on the following categories of travellers:

i) Pakistani Railway employees going out of the Railway Station building simply to buy eatables, cigarettes or tea;

ii) Pakistan nationals leaving the precincts of the Railway Station either for obtaining supplies, getting railway passes, meeting friends, relatives or visiting the Pakistan High Commission;

iii) Pakistanis in through transit intending to change the mode of journey;
iv) Pakistan nationals going to the city for consultation with the Foreigners’ Regional Registration Officer;

v) Pakistanis arriving in a city by air and intending to change the mode of their journey by departing from another airport or by railway;

vi) Pakistanis arriving in a city and going to Police Stations for reporting the arrivals.

A list of a few specific instances wherein Pakistanis were arrested for such minor violations is attached as Appendix I.

The attitude of the Indian authorities with regard to the renewal of ‘F’ category visa is abundantly clear from the cases given in the Ministry’s recent Note No. Pol.I(A)-15/5/62.II, dated 27th of May 1963 and 14th June 1963. A few other instances are given in Appendix II.

In many cases, while helplessly putting up with such suspense, and agony, Pakistani nationals are also subjected to various types of harassment. To avoid this constant harassment and coercion, they are compelled to abandon their assets and belongings and return to Pakistan. In view of this, the Government of Pakistan have been forced to take some remedial measures in order to safeguard its nationals against constant harassment and the threat of arrest and imprisonment.

While the Government of Pakistan is in full agreement with the views that unnecessary restrictions on travel between the two countries should be minimised/abolished as far as possible and that authorities from both the countries should deliberate on the subject, but they feel that unless the Government of India show a change of heart and revise its present attitude towards Pakistani travellers and is willing to grant facilities reciprocal to those afforded by Pakistan, any discussion on the subject would be premature and unlikely to prove fruitful.

The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurances of its highest consideration.

The High Commissioner for India in Pakistan
Karachi.
Note from High Commission for India in Pakistan to Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Karachi, September 14, 1964.

The High Commission of India presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Government of Pakistan and with reference to their Note No.POL.I (A)/21/2/63/III dated the 10th January, 1964 regarding simplification of the Passport and visa procedure has the honor to state that the position in regard to the points mentioned in paragraphs 2(i), (ii) and (iii) and the Ministry’s note has already been fully explained in paragraphs 4&5 of this Mission’s Note No.1-74/58-PV/8592 dated the 26th September 1962. As regards the provision for grant of gratis and courtesy visa referred to in Para 2(iv) of the Ministry’s note neither this Mission nor the Government of India have come across the grant of any such visas to Indian nationals except D(Official), Diplomatic and non-Diplomatic visas. The Government of India have, however, already issued instructions that all Pakistani VIPs visiting India should as a mark of courtesy, be exempt from reporting to the Police Station.

2. In regard to the allegation made regarding constant prosecution and harassment of Pakistani travelers, necessary instructions had already been issued by the Government of India to the Delhi Administration that no penal action should be taken against those Pakistani nationals who violate the Passport and Visa Rules through ignorance of the rules. Every consideration is thus being shown by the Indian authorities in dealing with such cases which indicates that the position is actually quite different from that stated in the Ministry’s note which, it may be pointed out relates to incidents as far back as 1962.

3. As regards the six categories of alleged harassment referred to in page 2 of the Ministry’s note the position ad seriatim is as follows:

i) Pakistani railway employees are granted E (Transport) visas as their duty is to see to the running of the trains. Hence they are not entitled to leave the railway station building to buy eatables, cigarettes, or tea which are all available within the precincts of the railway building itself.

ii) It is presumed that these are transit passengers. For purpose of visiting friends, relations, purchasing etc., they must possess valid visas, which are freely granted.

iii) According to Para 5(3) of the Indo-Pakistan visa scheme a journey does not constitute ‘through transit’ if in the course of the journey the traveler changes from one mode of the transport to another.

iv) For such Visits into the city the Pakistanis in question had apparently not been in possession of Visas for the city.
v) Pakistanis travelling by air and intending to change the mode of their journey, require a visa for the place at which the mode of journey is intended to be changed. However in exceptional cases this requirement is waived by Immigration Officers who issue a temporary residential permit valid for 24 hours so that persons in question may continue their journey by rail etc. Those intending to continue their journey from another airport in their mode of journey provided such Pakistanis proceed directly from one airport, to the other airport without moving about in places in the city.

vi) It is not understood as to why there should be any harassment as alleged to the persons engaged in this task. Apparently the Pakistanis in question had no visas for the places of visits.

In all the above six categories, this High Commission would like to point out that failure to observe these regulations is violation of the provision of minor acts of omission or commission.

4. As regards the allegation made regarding harassment to Pakistani nationals in regard to the renewal of their 'F' category visas and thus they are compelled to abandon their assets and belongings and return to Pakistan, the Mission wish to state that the allegation is completely without foundation as is borne out by the fact that at present there are about 40,000 Pakistani nationals enjoying the facilities of 'F' category visas in India. They are also afforded facilities for regular remittances etc. On the other hand request for 'F' visa facilities for employees of the State Band of India in Karachi, the domestic servants of their officers, the Indian Airlines Corporation have been turned down.

The instances of ‘quit notices’ which have been brought to the notice of the Government of India by the Government of Pakistan are negligible. Those who have been served with ‘quit notices’ are such Pakistani nationals who have come to the adverse notice of the State Government for misbehavior.

As regards para 3 of Appendix II of the Ministry’s note we regret to point out that not only are the figures quoted are wrong, but also the allegation made therein, as the actual number of the Pakistani nationals employed by the Assam 011 Company Digboi in 1954 was only 1127 (and not 20,000 as quoted in the Appendix). The Mission also wish to add that he Assam 011 Company had actually made arrangements with the Pakistani Petroleum Company to absorb the relieved Pakistani nationals.

As against the above instances as well as those relating to the Assam Match Factory Digbo quoted by the Ministry, the Mission is in a position to cite a number or concrete instances where the Government of Pakistan had a regular and planned program of eliminating Indian nationals from employment and business in Pakistan. The following are a few examples:
Messrs. Carew & Co. Darshana (East Pakistan) had 570 Indian employees in 1947. In 1953 the number had dwindled down to 103 and in 1963 there were only 45 Indian nationals left with the firm. Indian jute merchant holding ‘F’ visas have been refused licenses for dealing in jute. As a result many of them have been compelled to leave East Pakistan.

The East Pakistan authorities adopt ‘go slow’ tactics as regards the renewal of ‘F’ visas. Inordinate delay is a common feature. For instance between 15th June 1963 and 23rd November, 1963 as many as 149 cases of delay ranging from 8 months to 12 months came to the notice of the Deputy High Commission of India, Dacca. Further while the passports are under submission for renewal of visas, the holders are not able to make any remittances to India. Similarly Indian employees of the United Bank of India and Indian Airlines Corporation are also not free from harassment arising out of inordinate delays. This policy of eliminating Indian nationals was first started with those Indian national engaged in the cotton and jute trade and later extended to Indian nationals employed in big concerns. The following few concerns are cited as example from where Indian nationals have been squeezed out completely:

iv) Burmah 011 Co. (P.T.) Ltd., Chittagong.
v) S.K. Pictures, Rattan Cinema, Lahore.
vi) LuxmiNrayan Cotton Mills Ltd., Dacca.

In pursuance of their policy to eliminate Indian nationals the Government of Pakistan have also refused renewal of ‘F’ visas of even the monks of the Ramakrishna Mission in East Pakistan.

There is also no substance in the allegation that Passports are held up by the Assam Government for two to three years. The Mission wish to say that on the contrary renewals are granted before the expiry of the last visa, provided an application for renewal is made well in time. In marked contrast to this expeditious action of Indian authorities, the Assistant High Commission of Pakistan in shillong is withholding the return of passports of Indian nationals for several months. Indian visa applicants in Shillong are not allowed entry into the compound and contact the senior officials in the Pakistan Mission in Shillong to represent their cases. This negative attitude of the Assistant High Commission of Pakistan in Shillong is tantamount to denial of visa facilities to Indian nationals.
5. The High Commission would be grateful if the Government of Pakistan would kindly take urgent note of the failure of their authorities to extend legitimate visa facilities to Indian nationals as cited above and introduce remedial measures to prevent further hardships to Indian nationals working in visiting Pakistan. As stated above the Government of India have always extended and will continue to extend legitimate visa facilities to all Pakistani nationals who apply for such facilities. In keeping with this spirit the Government of India are also prepared to negotiate measures of liberalization of visa rules relating to travel between Indian and Pakistan. To this end the Government of India through their High Commission are still desirous of holding constructive discussions with the Government of Pakistan.

6. The High Commission of India avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry the assurance of its highest consideration.

Express Letter from Ministry of Home Affairs to State Governments of Assam, West Bengal, and Tripura.

New Delhi, April 6, 1965.

EXPRESS LETTER

April 6, 1965

No.1/20/65-F.III

Government of India,
Ministry of Home Affairs

New Delhi

To : The Chief Secretary to the Govt. of Assam, Shillong
    The Chief Secretary to the Govt. of West Bengal, Calcutta.
    The Chief Secretary to the Govt. of Tripura, Agartala.

Subject: Restrictions on entry into India of migrants from East Pakistan without travel documents.
1. Reference this Ministry’s wireless message No. 44/31/64 Poll(1), dated the 16th March, 1965, in which the State Governments were informed that from 1st April, 1965, the entry into India of persons from East Pakistan will be restricted to those holding valid travel documents such as migration certificates and passports. This may give rise to certain practical difficulties. In the first place, it would not be possible to seal the border against illegal immigrants without a very large increase in the number of check-posts and of policemen to patrol the border, and if this is not done, the likelihood of continued entry of illegal migrants would still be there. Secondly, when an illegal immigrant is detected, he may have to be prosecuted under the Indian Passport Act, 1920, and the Foreigners Act, 1946. The question of deporting an illegal immigrant either after he has undergone his sentence or even without prosecution would also arise. If any physical force has to be used in deporting an immigrant, there may be a great deal of public resentment in the country, apart from possible incidents involving Pakistan border forces.

2. Even though there are difficulties as mentioned above, the Central Government have come to the conclusion that on the whole it would be desirable to impose a ban on illegal entry. At the same time, they consider that the ban may not be enforced rigorously but with caution and discretion. The point at which the entry of illegal migrants can be prevented effectively or controlled is at the border check-post. The check-post officers should explain to those seeking asylum that conditions for their rehabilitation in India are difficult and try to persuade them to go back to their homes in East Pakistan. Those who still manage to enter India may be screened to find out whether they are genuine refugees and can stay in India under their own arrangements with their relatives or friends, without expecting any assistance from Government. Such persons, may, at the discretion of the State Government be allowed to continue to stay in India without being prosecuted for illegal entry. As regards others, it may be necessary to prosecute them under the Indian Passport Act, 1920, and the Foreigners Act, 1946 and to make them return to their homes in East Pakistan.

Sd/-Fateh Singh
Joint Secretary to the Govt. of India
Decisions taken at the Chief Secretaries’ Conference held at the East Pakistan Secretariat, Dacca, on the 9th & 10th April, 1965.

The Chief Secretaries of East Pakistan and West Bengal met in Dacca on 9th and 10th April, 1965, to discuss the following agenda:-

1) Transit facilities for residents of enclaves to mainland and vice versa;
2) Travel facilities to officials of either countries to visit enclaves;
3) Measures for eliminating tension in the border.

The following decisions were reached:-

Item No. I; Visits by residents:

For the facility of the residents of enclaves it was decided that ‘A’ category visa on proper passports would be issued to them on application as envisaged in Paragraph I of Item 2 of the agreed decisions of the Indo-Pak Passport Conference of February, 1953. In other words such visas will be valid for an unlimited number of journeys from the enclave to the mainland and vice versa and would dispense with the procedure for entry through checkposts.

This arrangement will come into force with effect from the 1st May, 1965.

In the meantime working arrangements as set forth in sub-paras (I), (II) & (III) of paragraph 2 of Item 2 of the Indo-Pak Passport Agreement of 1953, shall be made. For this purpose the Deputy Commissioners of Cooch Behar and Rangpur should meet on the 17th April, 1965, at Tin Bigha to work out the details of the interim arrangement.

For the ensuing Eid celebrations travel facilities to and from the main land shall be accorded to the residents of Dahagram on 12th and 13th April in the same manners as was agreed upon on 30th March, 1965, for their entry into Dahagram in the first week of April, 1965.

The returning residents would also be allowed to carry with them cattle, seeds, building materials and Pakistani currency etc. as required by them upto 30.4.1965.

It was agreed that necessary recommendation will be made to the appropriate authorities by both the Governments that residents of enclaves moving to and from the mainland will be given all facilities for carrying with then currency, produce of land etc.
Item No. III Visits by Officials

It was decided that officials of both countries should travel to and from enclaves on regular passports and double transit visas. It was agreed that such visas will be issued promptly.

The movement of the personnel of the police camp described as anti-dacoity patrol camp, located at Dahagram, by the Government of East Pakistan, who were allowed to return to Dahagram as per agreement reached on 30th March, 1965, will also be subject to the procedure for movement of officials to and from enclaves agreed upon and mentioned above.

Both the Governments should examine the possibility of granting multiple transit visas to officials required to visit the enclaves.

Item No. III: Measures for Eliminating Tension in the Border:

The Chief Secretary, East Pakistan explained that the root cause of tension in most of the places along the border was the fact that the boundary has not been demarcated. In particular he referred to the delay in demarcation of Berubari division line. Further he pointed out that there were numerous gaps along the Pakistan/India boundary in Dinajpur and Rangpur districts. He felt that completion of demarcation work and transfer of jurisdiction would have the effect of obviating tension.

The Chief Secretary, West Bengal, stated that they had certain legal difficulties with regard to demarcation in Berubari area. As regards the remaining portions still left incomplete he felt that the work could be resumed if a programme were jointly made by the Directors of Land Records, West Bengal and East Pakistan, and adhered to. He agreed that the work of demarcation of incomplete portions of the boundary between West Bengal and East Pakistan would be taken up during the forthcoming field season commencing from 15th October, 1965, onwards. The entire work of demarcation including transfer of jurisdiction as provided in the Ground Rule 2 shall be completed before the end of May, 1966.

The Chief Secretaries also agreed that want of strip maps for areas where demarcation has been completed long ago gives rise to administrative and local complications. They feel that strip maps, already prepared for areas previously demarcated, should be checked, signed and finally printed by the two Directors of Land Records without delay; and after finalisation and printing, such strip maps should be sent immediately to the respective Central Governments for ratification.

It was agreed that from Cooch Behar/Rangpur as well as Cooch Rehar/Jalpaiguri/Dinajpur border all forces on either side will pull out from forward positions and return to BOPs and resume normal border patrolling. Defensive works will be demolished. Extra force will be pulled out of the BOPs.

In area Squares 5636/5637 map sheet 78 B/II 1" to 9 mile map of Survey of India 1931 Edition, forces of either side will pull out from their present positions and return to their BOPs. Deputy Commissioners of Dinajpur/Jalpaiguri with their respective Sector Commanders will mark the present forward positions on ground and on 16 inches-to-a-mile map. This will be the patrolling limits of either side and the land in between will not be cultivated until the demarcation of undemarcated border in this area referred to above. On the rest of the East Pakistan-West Bengal borders, the border forces will withdraw to their original border outposts.

This agreement shall be reviewed every three months in the light of experience gained regarding the working of the agreement in practice.

3509. Note of the Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistan High Commission in India.

New Delhi, May 11, 1965.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi.

No. PI/114(8)/64 May 11, 1965/ Vaisakha 21, 1887

The Ministry of External Affairs presents its compliments to the High Commission of Pakistan in India and has the honour to invite their attention to the agreed decisions of the Indo-Pakistan Passport Conference held in Delhi from 28th January to 1st February, 1953. Item No. 5 of the agreed decisions which were duly ratified by the two Governments, reads as follows;

“Additional Visa Offices:

The Government of Pakistan will set up two additional branch visa offices in India, one at Bombay and the other at Shillong, while the Government of India will set up two additional branch visa offices in Pakistan - one at Hyderabad (Sind) and the other at Rajshahi (East Bengal)."

In pursuance of the above, the Government of India established a consular office at Rajshahi in 1953, correspondingly, the Government of Pakistan set up a consular office in Shillong in December that year.

2. On 27th November 1963, the Government of Pakistan by their Note No. PIC-16/9/63 demanded the closure of the Assistant High Commission of India in Rajshahi. While making this demand, the Government of Pakistan made slanderous allegations against the entire office of the Assistant High Commission of India at Rajshahi, for which there was not the slightest foundation. These allegations were effectively refuted and their fictitious nature exposed, in a note presented by the Indian High Commission in Karachi to the Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of Pakistan, on 4th December, 1963. While urging the Government of Pakistan to reconsider their decision to close the office of the Assistant High Commission of India in Rajshahi, the Indian High Commission note stated, inter alia, that "the Office of the Assistant High Commission for India in Rajshahi like the office of the Assistant High Commission for Pakistan in Shillong was established to function strictly on the basis of reciprocity to serve the interests of the peoples of both the countries. The Government of Pakistan will appreciate that if they insist on closing the office at Rajshahi, then in accordance with the basis of reciprocity the Government of India will be constrained to withdraw their consent to the continuation of their office in Shillong ...."

3. The Government of India noted with regret the attitude displayed by the Government of Pakistan in this regard. Not only did the Government of Pakistan refuse to reconsider their decision, rejecting the informal and formal representations of the Indian High Commission to the Ministry of External Affairs in Karachi, but the Government of Pakistan also refused to allow reasonable time to the Assistant High Commission of India in Rajshahi to wind up its affairs and insisted on the Office being completely wound up by 15th December, 1563, i.e. within two weeks of the receipt by the Indian High Commission of the note conveying the decision of the Government of Pakistan, demanding the closure of the Rajshahi Office.

4. On the 19th February 1965, the Government of India again approached the Pakistan Government requesting the latter to agree to the re-opening of the Assistant High Commission of India in Raishahi, The Government of Pakistan, have, to the Government of India’s regret, turned a deaf ear to that proposal.

5. The Government of India have also been watching with increasing concern the anti-Indian and subversive activities of the personnel of the Pakistan Assistant High Commission in Shillong. They have in the past brought such objectionable activities of the Assistant High Commission in Shillong, to the notice of the Government of Pakistan, but these have persisted contrary to all rules of diplomatic and consular behaviour.

6. In view of the foregoing, the Government of India have decided to request the closure of the Assistant High Commission of Pakistan in Shillong, by the 15th June, 1965.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan in India the assurances of its highest consideration.

3510. Note from the Pakistan High Commission in India to the Ministry of External Affairs.

New Delhi, May 26, 1965.
Office of the High Commissioner for Pakistan in India
New Delhi

No. 1 (10)P/65 Dated, the 26th May, 1965.

The High Commission for Pakistan presents its compliments to the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India and with reference to the Ministry’s Note No.PI/114(8)/64, dated May 11, 1965, has been instructed to state as under:-

2. The Government of Pakistan reject as totally without foundation the allegation that the Assistant High Commission in Shillong has been engaged in anti-Indian and subversive activities. The Government of India must surely know that there is not a shred of evidence to support these vague charges. There is no doubt the reason why the Government of India have thought it necessary, simultaneously, to put forward the plea that the closure of the Pakistan Office at Shillong is demanded as retaliation against the closure of the Indian Office at Rajshahi.

3. The Office of the Assistant High Commissioner of India in Rajshahi was closed on 15th December, 1963 because it was found to be indulging in activities which had nothing to do with its legitimate functions as a passport and visa issuing office and which could only be described as subversive. It is surely ‘strange that the Government of India should have waited for fully a year and a half in order to demand the closure of the Pakistan Office at Shillong.

4. The Government of Pakistan must put on record its strong protest at the Government of India’s decision to ask for the closure of the Pakistan Mission at Shillong an action which, besides causing great hardship to people in the area, will only add to the prevailing tension between two countries. The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Ministry of External Affairs the assurances of its highest consideration.

New Delhi, March 16, 1966.

The Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, presents its compliments to the High Commission of Pakistan in India, and has the honour to advise that with effect from April 4, 1966, all the Indian checkposts on the land borders of India and Pakistan would be functioning normally as before, on continuing basis in accordance with the existing India-Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme, to facilitate the movement of persons from one country to the other. The Ministry of External Affairs would be glad for urgent confirmation that, by April 4, 1966, the corresponding Pakistan checkposts would also be functioning normally on continuing basis as provided for under the agreed scheme. Perhaps the authorities in Pakistan might also consider making an announcement to this effect for the information of the public.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan, the assurances of its highest consideration.

Letter from Ministry of External Affairs to all Indian Missions and Posts abroad.

New Delhi, April 29, 1966.

Ministry of External Affairs

Express Letter

From : Foreign, New Delhi.
To : All Indian Missions and Posts abroad (except those in Pakistan)

No.PSP/342/66(iii) 29th April, 1966/Vaisaka, 1888

Subject: Grant of Visas for India to Pakistan nationals.

In supersession of our circular letter No. PSP/342/13/66, dated the 28th February, 1966, it has been decided to remove, with immediate effect, the complete ban imposed by the Government of India on grant of all categories of visas for India to Pakistan nationals.

2. Therefore, there need now be no objection to grant of any category of visa facilities to Pakistan nationals, subject to the rules and regulations which were issued by the Government of India from time to time prior to the imposition of the said ban. In this connection it is pointed out that Indian Missions and Posts abroad (other than those in Pakistan) were, prior to the ban, authorised to grant only the following categories of visas to Pakistan nationals (vide Chapter XIII pages 36 – 40 of the Visa Manual 1964):-

i) ‘D’ Category Visa
ii) ‘C’ Category Visa
iii) Transit visa.

3. Attention is also particularly invited to this Ministry’s circular letter No. PSP/341/21/64, dated the 24th April, 1965, in accordance with which the transit and “D” category visas can be granted by you at your discretion, but applications for ‘C’ category visa cases are required to be referred by you to the Union Ministry of Home Affairs for prior clearance. On further consideration, however, it has been decided to partially modify the said circular letter of 24.4.1965, in so far as it relates to ‘C’ category visas, as follows:-
a) You can grant ‘C’ category visa to Pakistan nationals of the minority communities in Pakistan at your discretion, without referring their cases to the Union Ministry of Home Affairs for prior clearance, provided there is no local objection and such persons are ordinarily resident in your area and their names do not appear in the Suspect/Black Lists.

b) You can also grant ‘C’ category visa in the same ways as indicated in (a) above but on a restricted (selective) basis, to Pakistan nationals belonging to the majority community in Pakistan in cases where Head of the Mission is fully satisfied about the bona fides of the concerned applicant and the genuineness of his request and where there is not sufficient time for obtaining clearance from the Union Ministry of Home Affairs.

N.B. (I) (In each case falling under (a) and (b) above, where a ‘C’ category visa is granted by you at your discretion, an intimation may kindly be sent by you simultaneously to the Union Ministry of Home Affairs and the concerned State Government in India together with particulars of the Pakistan national to whom ‘C’ category has been granted by you).

N.B. (II) (The modifications at (a) and (b) above are not applicable to Pakistan Police/ex-Police/ De fence/ex-Defence personnel/personnel of Para Military organizations or Flying Clubs and their close relatives. Applications from such persons should continue to be referred for prior clearance to the Union Ministry of Home Affairs or the Union Ministry of Defence as the case may be, in accordance with the instructions already in force prior to the ban which was imposed on 7.9.1965).

4. As regards transit visas (and landing card facilities), necessary instructions have already been conveyed to you in this Ministry’s circular letters No.FSP/342/2/66, dated the 15th January, 1966, and No. PSP/3370/6/65, dated the 11th February, 1966.

5. Kindly acknowledge receipt.

No.PSP/281/2/66. April 30, 1966

The Ministry of External Affairs of the Government of India presents their compliments to the High Commission of Pakistan in India and have the honour to state that pending the complete reopening of all India-Pakistan land border checkposts to enable the flow of people and goods, at least a partial normalization of the position should be accepted by the Government of Pakistan which effects the interests of a third country also, namely Afghanistan.

2. As the High Commission of Pakistan is aware, the principal channel for overland India-Afghanistan trade was the Attari-Wagha route. The closing of this route has severely affected Afghan trade with India. A limited Indo-Afghan trade is maintained by air and via Karachi but, for obvious reasons, this has not been at all able to measure up to the quantum and value of the overland trade by the Wagah-Attari route. The Government of India, therefore, propose the immediate reopening of the Attari-Wagha border and the routes through these checkposts for the movement of trade between Afghanistan and India. The Ministry of External Affairs would be grateful for urgent confirmation that the Government of Pakistan are agreeable to this proposal.

3. Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

No.500. August 17, 1966

Dar from Bajpai.

We have known for some time now that Pakistan Government were allowing Pakistanis to go to India only on International passports and not repeat not on Indo-Pakistan passports which were being cancelled. We had sought confirmation from the Foreign Offices on more than one occasion. They have however kept on giving equivocal replies. A news item has appeared in the Pakistan Times 17th August confirming our information. The report says:

“The Government of Pakistan have decided to allow the genuine” Pakistani nationals to visit India on international passports duly endorsed for that country in the following cases: illness, death, marriage, etc. in the family of near relatives of Pakistanis in India and any other emergent or special circumstances justifying the grant of a passport such as medical treatment in India.

“It has also been decided that passport should be valid for a single journey to India in a calendar year. A second visit during the same calendar year might be allowed by issuing authorities with the approval of the Director of Immigration and Passports.

“However no passport facilities for India should be granted to Pakistani Hindus as also to the Marwari’s owning business or Industry in Pakistan without the passport. As regards other categories of Pakistani Hindus prior clearance of the Deputy Director concerned should be obtained.”

The above report says that these Instructions have been issued by the Ministry of Home and Kashmir Affairs to the Director of Immigration and Passports. We are seeking confirmation from the Foreign Office. If true these new regulations are highly discriminatory against the minority community and contrary to agreement between India and Pakistan. While we propose to protest we would be grateful if we could be given the details of the agreements which would be violated, as unfortunately these are not available in our records. I feel we have may have to reconsider our whole passport and visa scheme.

Your High Commissioner has conveyed to me your message of today’s date to which I have given careful consideration. As you know, we were not anxious to introduce a passport system between India and Pakistan. It was at the desire of the Pakistan Government that we agreed to do so. Since then very complicated agreements have been made and a course of action has been set in motion. Detailed instructions have been sent. The public has also been led to believe that this will begin on a certain specified date. After giving full consideration to this matter we felt that any postponement at this stage would create grave difficulties, far greater than those which we might have to face now, and produce a felling of uncertainly in the public which itself would have a very bad effect. We felt, therefore, unable to agree to postponement and informed out High Commissioner in Karachi immediately of our decision.

I am sure that our High Commissioner could not have committed our Government in any way before he received our instructions. He may have said that we might be agreeable to accept the proposal for postponement. He was not aware of all the steps that have been taken and the agreements already made which could not be reversed at this late stage.

We have always been anxious to interpret as liberally as possible the decisions or arrangements arrived in this connection. I am sure that with the friendly cooperation of both countries there should be no difficulty. Undoubtedly, to begin with there may be some confusion and inconvenience.

So far as the railway steamer and other transport services are concerned, we are issuing specific instructions that greatest care should be taken not to cause dislocation and to permit their personnel free entry and exit even if they do not conform to all the regulations laid down. In regard to the general public also, every attempt will be made to avoid inconvenience, and instructions have been issued accordingly.

No. MII/206/(2)/66

October 3, 1966

The Ministry of External Affairs presents their compliments to the High Commission for Pakistan in India and have the honour to refer to the Ministry’s Note No.PSP/281/2/66, dated the 30th April, 1966, in which the Government of India had proposed the immediate reopening of the Attari-Wagah border and the routes through these checkpoints for the movement of trade between Afghanistan and India. The Government of India regret to note that the High Commission for Pakistan has so far not even acknowledged the Ministry’s Note. The Government of India, however, understand that the Government of Pakistan have agreed to open the land route at Husainiwala only for the export of Afghan fresh fruit to India. It is further learnt that the Afghan fresh fruit are transported by Afghan trucks to Peshawar and, in the case of Afghan trucks from Kandahar, to Chaman. Thereafter the fresh fruit is transported by rail up to Lahore and Lahore to Husainiwala by Pakistan’s own trucks. The Government of India consider this procedure unsatisfactory because

New Delhi

No. P(P.II)202(5)/66. December 12th, 1966

be functioning normally as they did prior to September 1965. The Government of India had suggested that the corresponding Pakistani land border checkposts should also resume normal functioning in accordance with the standing agreement in this behalf between the two countries to facilitate the movement of persons and goods from one country to the other. This proposal has been repeatedly urged by this Ministry as a step forward in restoring normal relations between India and Pakistan as envisaged in Article VI of the Tashkent Declaration. The continued reluctance of the Government of Pakistan to the opening of all land border checkposts between the two countries not only places an impediment to the normalising of relations between the two countries but is also causing needless hardship to large numbers of people of the two countries who being unable to afford air travel— and this constitutes the vast bulk of intending visitors from one country to the others — are thus prevented from availing themselves of the convenient normal land routes for travel and trade between India and Pakistan.

It is also reported that the Pakistan Government offices at Delhi and Calcutta are now consistently delaying the granting of visas on applications received at those offices from Indian nationals desiring to visit Pakistan. This step is in clear contravention of the decisions reached at the Indo-Pakistan Passports Conference held at New Delhi on 28th January to 1st February 1953. Under item 24 of those decisions the Governments of India and Pakistan had agreed on the need to expedite the issue of visas as far as possible and it was further agreed that the normal maximum period for the issue of a visa would be 14 working days from the date of receipt of the application by the visa issuing authority. In consideration of the fact that the Tashkent Declaration envisages the implementation of existing agreements between India and Pakistan, the lack of reciprocation by the Pakistan authorities to restore normal travel and trade between the two countries cannot but be regretted by the Government of India as a negation of the provisions of the Tashkent Declaration in this behalf.

The attitude of the Government of India towards this and other related problems was articulated by the Prime Minister of India when she stated in Delhi on the 4th September 1966:

“We want economic co-operation- We want our peoples to mix freely so that false fears can be removed. Let leading citizens from Pakistan visit India travel around and make their own assessment. We seek friendship, not conflict.”

The Government of India accordingly urge that as a necessary step towards the agreed objective of promoting friendly relation between the two countries the Government of Pakistan agree to facilitating normal travel and trade between the two countries and to this end reopen all the agreed land border checkposts between the two countries and also ensure the expeditious issue of visas to those desirous of visiting Pakistan. The Ministry of External Affairs would be glad for advice of the schedule for reopening of land border checkpoints by the Pakistan authorities.

The Ministry of External Affairs avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission for Pakistan in India the assurances of its highest consideration.

No.DAC/PV/342/3/67 13th September, 1967

Subject: Pakistani nationals visiting India—procedure of registration — proposal for amendment of residential permit etc.

Dear Ministry,

Kindly refer to your letter No. PSP/342/43/66 dated 12.7.1967 on the subject noted above. Indian nationals visiting Pakistan with Pakistani visas (excepting holders of ‘D’ visas) have to register themselves under the Registration of Foreigners Rules, 1939 like all other foreigners coming over to Pakistan. A copy of the proforma for Registration of Foreigners Rules, 1939, as used in Pakistan is enclosed at Appendix -A. An Indian national entering Pakistan is required to fill in this proforma at the check-post of entry itself. It has been ascertained on interrogation of Indo-Pak Passport holders and those holding India International passports that an Indian National has to report subsequently in person to the Registration Officer (Police) of the place he wants to visit, for obtaining a residential permit. At the time of departure also he has to report in person to the Registration authorities. The District Special Branch is the residential permit issuing authority in the districts. In Dacca, there is a separate office for the purpose, called the “Indian Nationals Registration Office” where Indian nationals visiting Dacca district are required to report on arrival as well as at the time of departure. The proforma in which the Residential Permit is given by this office is enclosed at Appendix B.

As would be seen from the proforma enclosed (Appendix ‘A’) the date and time of arrival of an Indian National along with his intended address is recorded in the registration certificate by the check-post authority, so that any undue delay on his part in arriving at the place of visit can be detected at the time of issue of a residential permit to him. An Indian National is further required to report to the Registration Authority, in person, any hand in his address.

As regards our comments, we consider it necessary to keep a strict watch on the activities of Pakistani nationals while they are in India. We further feel that there should be strict reciprocity in the arrangements for registration and surveillance.

Yours ever

Mission

3519. Minutes of the meeting held in Joint Secretary (Pak) Ministry of External Affairs’ room at 11 A.M on 6th August, 1968.

The following were present;
1. Shri P.R.S. Mani, Joint Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs.
2. Shri S. Sen, High Commissioner for India in Pakistan.
3. Shri J.C. Agarwal, Joint Secretary, Ministry of Home Affairs,
4. Shri C.K. Nair, Deputy Secretary, Ministry of Defence.
5. Shri R.K. Kapoor, Joint Deputy Director, Intelligence Bureau.
Shri P.R.S. Mani mentioned about the difficulties in the expeditious disposal of visa applications from Pakistan nationals. He suggested that as the black list cards of our Missions in Pakistan are now complete we might revert to the system of visas being granted by the Missions after checking their B/L cards without referring each and every case to India for prior clearance. Only those cases where the applicants’ names appear in the black list records of the Missions or any other cases of doubtful nature should be referred to India for pre-verification.

2. Shri J.C. Agarwal stated that they had no objection to reverting to the pre-conflict position and to visas to the Pakistani civilians being granted by the Missions after checking their B/L cards without referring each and every case to the authorities in India. Shri Agarwal, however, suggested that visas to the Pakistani nationals should be granted on a restrictive scale since the visiting Pakistani nationals tend to overstay in India for one reason or the other, and as a result of which thousands of Pakistani nationals are at present overstaying in India. The High Commissioner suggested that they had no objection if the Ministry of Home Affairs would like to fix some number beyond which visas would not be granted to the Pakistanis. According to the High Commissioner, the Missions in Pakistan are at present issuing about 3000, visas per month. He suggested that this number could be raised to about 8000 or so per month or some other number could be fixed on the basis of the number of visas which were being issued before the conflict, say in 1964. Shri Agarwal suggested that instead of adopting a number up to which visas may be issued to the Pakistani nationals every month by the Missions in Pakistan, it might be desirable to adopt a restrictive policy of granting visas only where they are necessary for good reasons which would automatically reduce their number also. As to what could be regarded as ‘good’ reasons could be left to the judgment of the High Commissioner. The High Commissioner stated that this would not be workable as most of the applications would get disposed of at lower levels and would not reach him at all. He was of the view that a restrictive policy based on numbers was more easy to operate. The Ministry of Home Affairs were of the view that what is really needed is the combination of the two. That Ministry can lay down some guide-lines as to what can be regarded as ‘good’ reasons; the cases to which no answer is available in the guide-lines could be decided on the judgment of some responsible officer of the High Commission, subject to numerical limits.

3. The High Commissioner pointed out about the large number of warning circulars being issued by the State Governments and stated that our Missions in Dacca have got as many as over two lakhs of B/L cards. Shri R.K. Kapoor, Joint Deputy Director, Intelligence Bureau pointed out that black list cards are in the process of being weeded and we shall have a final black list printed shortly, when the difficulty of Missions in this regard will automatically be over.
PASSPORT & VISA

4. Shri J.C. Agarwal pointed out that those who after having over-stayed in India were deported to Pakistan, do not find a place in the black lists, as according to the existing practice of the Government, the names of such persons are not to be included in the black list. At the same time Shri Agarwal was of the view that those Pak nationals who were actually deported to Pakistan should not be granted visas again to visit India. The High Commissioner pointed out that in such cases only Warning Circulars are issued by the State Government and it is very difficult for the Mission to connect these circulars at the time of grant of visas. It was thereupon suggested by Shri P.R.S. Mani, Joint Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs that Ministry of Home Affairs, might prepare a separate list of those who were deported from India. These lists should be supplied to our Missions in Pakistan for their guidance at the time of granting visas. This suggestion was accepted by the Ministry of Home Affairs.

5. Subject to the provisions made in paras.2 and 4 above, it was decided that in future our Missions in Pakistan should be authorised to grant visas in genuine cases after checking the B/L cards without prior reference to India in each and every case, as was being done before the conflict. They should refer to India only cases of doubtful nature or those where the names of applicants appear in the black list, but visas are recommended on purely compassionate and humanitarian considerations.

6. The High Commissioner raised the question of fixation of time limit for the receipt of replies in respect of cases referred to India for pre-verification. It was, however, opined that after our Missions start granting visas to Pakistani nationals after checking their B/L cards there would be very few cases, requiring prior reference to India. Thereupon, Shri P.R.S. Mani suggested that the Home Ministry should send a circular to the State Governments asking them to start action immediately on receipt of a reference from the M.H.A. or our Missions in Pakistan in such cases. At the same time our Missions should also be asked that in accordance with the existing instructions in respect of cases requiring prior reference, they should refer the case simultaneously to the Ministry of Home Affairs and the State Government concerned. The State Government will then send their report to the Ministry of Home Affairs who would convey their decision about the grant or otherwise of the visa to the Mission.

7. The High Commissioner raised the question of grant of visas to Pakistani nationals desirous of visiting Kerala State. Shri J.C. Agarwal pointed out that there was a large number of Pakistanis who had been overstaying in Kerala and therefore, prior references to the authorities in India should continue to be made in respect of Pakistanis desirous of visiting Kerala. It was, however, decided that in respect of cases of urgent and compassionate nature, the High Commissioner or his number two in the Mission, will have the discretion to authorise the grant of visas to Pakistani nationals for visiting Kerala. In cases where such discretion is exercised, intimations of grant of visas should be immediately sent by the Mission to the State authorities concerned as well as to the Ministry of Home Affairs/intelligence Bureau. All other cases of grant of visas for visiting Kerala State should be referred to the Ministry of Home Affairs and the State Governments simultaneously for pre-verification.

8. It was also agreed that prior references in the cases of Defence/ex-Defence, Police/ex-Police personnel, personnel of Watch and Ward, members of other Semi-Military and Semi-Police organisations, such as Mujahids, employees of Flying Clubs and Ansars, and their close relatives should continue to be made to the Ministry of Defence/Home Affairs and the State Governments concerned simultaneously for pre-verification and clearance. It was, however, decided that visas to the female relations and minor children of the personnel belonging to the above organisations can be granted on extreme compassionate grounds at the discretion of the High Commissioner or his number two in the Mission. In cases where such discretion is exercised, intimations of grant of visa along with a copy of visa application will be sent by the Mission immediately to the Ministry of Defence or Home Affairs/intelligence Bureau, as the case may be, and the State Government concerned, stating on whose discretion visa has been granted. Similarly it was also decided that the female relations and minor children of the personnel of the above organisations can be granted visas to visit cantonment areas, in the cases of compassionate nature, at the discretion of the High Commissioner or his number two in the Mission. In cases where such discretion is exercised, advance intimations, by telegrams if necessary giving brief particulars of the persons concerned, should be sent simultaneously to the Commander of the Cantonment area concerned and the Ministry of Home Affairs, Ministry of Defence, Intelligence Bureau and the State Government concerned, stating on whose discretion visa has been granted.

9. The High Commissioner pointed out that the civilian staff of PIA like Booking Clerks, Hostesses, Ground Staff and staff working in Hotels or Cultural Groups run by the PIA should be treated on the same basis as civilians and not like Defence personnel. It was suggested that the High Commissioner should send us a list of all such categories of personnel as well as subsidiary organisations of PIA before a decision can be taken in this regard. However, Shri C.K. Nair of Ministry of Defence pointed out that since they will have to consult the Air Headquarters in the matter, the question of grant of visas to civilian staff of PIA etc. should be kept pending.

Subject: Grant of visas for India to Pakistani nationals.

Reference High Commissioner’s D.O. letter No.ISI/ HC-209/68 dated the 30th May, 1968 to the Foreign Secretary, containing recommendations for making certain improvements in the existing procedures in regard to the grant of visas to Pakistani nationals,

2. In this connection, a meeting of the representatives of this Ministry, the Ministries of Home Affairs and Defence and the Intelligence Bureau was held on 6th August, 1968 to consider the High Commissioner’s recommendations. A copy of the minutes of the meeting, which contains the various decisions arrived at, is enclosed herewith for information and guidance. It is requested that henceforth, the visa applications of Pakistan nationals intending to visit India may please be dealt with in accordance with the decisions contained in the enclosed minutes.

3. As regards paras 2 and 4 of the minutes, the Ministry of Home Affairs would be forwarding to you in due course the necessary guidelines on what should be regarded as good reasons for the purpose of grant of visas to Pakistani nationals, as also the number, if any, up to which in visas are to be issued. That Ministry would also be forwarding to you a comprehensive list of Pakistani deportees who are not to be granted visas by you without pre-verification and clearance from the authorities in India.

4. You are requested to supply to the Ministry of Home Affairs immediately, under intimation to us the average number of visas which were being issued per month to Pakistani nationals prior to the conflict of September, 1965

5. Regarding para 8 of the minutes, the Ministry of Defence have observed that the Government of Pakistan have been following a deliberate policy of denying visa facilities to persons associated with Indian Defence forces and establishments. This would be clear from the fact that during the last three years as many as 22 personnel serving in Army formations/Units had applied for permission to visit their relatives or places of religious worships in Pakistan, but in none of these cases was permission granted by the Pakistan authorities to visit that country nor was any reason for the refusal of visas to them given. The above position may please be kept in view while considering applications for visas from Pakistan Defence/ex-Defence personnel and their family members.

6. You are also requested to supply to us the list of all categories of civilian staff of P.I.A., as well as its subsidiary organisations, as required in para 9 of the minutes to enable the Government of India to take a decision in this regard.

1. The Ministry of Home Affairs (Shri R.P. Sharma, Under Secretary) with reference to their U.O. No. 1/37/67-FIII dated the 10th September, 1968. The suggestions made by them in their U.O. note have been incorporated in the minutes. They may kindly now take further necessary action as pointed out in para 3 above. This Ministry is not aware of the number of visas issued by the Pakistani Missions in Indian nationals for visiting Pakistan nor is it possible to get these figures. Necessary instructions to the States, as provided in para 6 of the minutes of the meeting, may also kindly be issued at an early date under intimation to this Ministry and our Missions in Pakistan.

Subject: Grant of visas for India to Pakistani nationals.

It has been observed that generally the State Governments take a long time in furnishing their views to the Government of India on applications made by Pakistani nationals for the grant of visas referred to them by the Indian Missions for pre-verification. Undue delay in the disposal of visa applications not only causes hardship to the applicants but also puts the Indian Missions in an embarrassing position since they are constantly pressed hard by the applicants for early grant of visas.

2. It is, therefore, requested that as soon as a reference regarding the grant of Visa to a Pakistani national is received by the State Government/Union Administration from the Indian Mission or the Ministry of Home Affairs or the Ministry of Defense, they should start action on it immediately. In cases where the reference is made to them by .letter, the State Government/ Union Administration should furnish their views to the Government of India, the Ministry of Defense in the case of Defence/ex-Defence personnel and members of semi-Military organisations, and the Ministry of Home Affairs in the case of others; within a period of four weeks, and in cases where the reference is by telegram, within a period of two weeks from the date of receipt of the reference. If in any particular case, the State Government/Union Administration need more time for furnishing their views., an interim reply indicat-ing as to by which date they will be able to furnish their views may be sent to the Government of India.

3. In order to ensure the expeditious disposal of visa requests of Pakistani nationals, it would be much appreciated if the above prescribed time limit is strictly adhered to.

No.PSP/350/35/68 20th September, 1969

Subject: Grant of India Pakistan Passport to Indian ladies married to Pak nationals.

A question has been raised whether with the enactment of the Passports Act, 1967, Indian ladies married to Pak nationals on or after 26.1.1950 can be refused passport facilities merely by reason of such marriage (if they are otherwise eligible to get an India Pakistan passport) and whether a passport can be refused or any restriction on the validity of a passport can be imposed if they are not willing to acquire Pak citizenship and remain in Pakistan.

2. The matter has been carefully considered by the Government of India and it has been decided that, if otherwise eligible, no restrictions on the grant/renewal/validity of an India-Pakistan passport need be imposed in the case of Indian ladies married to Pak nationals who have no intention either to renounce their Indian citizenship or to stay permanently in Pakistan. However, at the time of renewal of their passports, the Passport Issuing Authorities should ensure by verifying through the State authorities that the applicants have retained their Indian nationality and that there is nothing against them from the security angle.

Subject: Issue of residential permits to Pakistani nationals

To keep a more effective watch on Pakistani nationals visiting India, the Government of India have decided to revise the existing forms of residential permits, temporary and regular, prescribed for Pakistani nationals. A copy each of the revised forms of temporary and regular residential permits is enclosed. In view of the changes effected in the residential permit forms, the following further formalities are to be observed by Pakistani nationals visiting India:

(i) at the time of their entry into India, they may be required to append their signatures or thumb impressions on the residential permit and copies thereof, whether temporary or regular issued by the check post authorities. This will help in establishing the identity of a Pakistani national before a court of Law if he is prosecuted for overstay in India. The signatures/thumb impressions may be obtained on the residential permits, temporary or regular, issued at the check posts only;

(ii) the full address(es) of stay Pakistani nationals at the place(s) to be visited by them should be indicated on the regular residential permits and copies thereof, whether issued at the check post or by the District Registration Officer. As regards the temporary residential permit issued at the check post, since such permit is issued valid for one place, the address of stay of the Pakistani national at that place only will be indicated on the original permit. However, the check post authorities should indicate on the duplicate copies of the temporary residential permit the full addresses of the Pakistani national at all the places to be visited; And
(iii) Pakistani nationals should make a report to the Registration Officer, either in person or in writing, of any change in residential address within 24 hours of such change.

3. Under the existing residential permit forms if the place of visit of a Pakistani national is not the headquarters of the Registration Office he has the option to exchange his temporary residential permit for a regular permit from the Registration Officer through the police station having jurisdiction at the place of his visit and also to report his, arrival and departure through the police station. The Government of India have been advised that to perform these functions and also to receive the reports of change in residential address on behalf of the Registration Officer the Officer-in-Charge of the various police stations in the area of his jurisdiction should be authorised in writing by the Registration Officer under para 2(1) of the Foreigners Order, 1948 in this behalf. It is therefore requested that the State Governments and Union Territory Administrations may advise the Registration Officers immediately, under intimation to this Ministry, to authorise in writing the Officers-in-Charge of the police stations in the area of their respective jurisdiction, under para 2(1) of the Foreigners Order, 1948; to perform the limited functions of delivering to Pakistani nationals regular residential permits of arrival, departure and change in the residential address from Pakistani nationals. The revised residential permit forms sent herewith may then be introduced. Necessary steps are being taken by the Government of India to standardize and print the new forms of residential permits. As the standardization and printing of these forms may take some time; it is suggested that in the meantime the State Governments and Union Territory Administrations may get the copies prepared locally and supply to the check posts and Registration Officers.

Islamabad, September 14, 1974.

The Government of INDIA and

The Government of PAKISTAN

In pursuance of the provisions in the Simla Agreement of July, 1972 regarding the extension of travel facilities to nationals of either country desiring to visit the other

Have agreed as follows:

1. Nationals of either country visiting the other shall possess a valid passport and a visa for the purpose.

2. The visas will be of the following categories:

(a) Diplomatic Visa:

(i) A diplomatic visa valid for multiple entries will be issued to the Heads of the Diplomatic and Consular Missions, members of the Mission holding diplomatic or consular rank, their wives and children, and regular Diplomatic Couriers. The period of its validity will ordinarily be one year.
(ii) A diplomatic visa valid for single entry will be given to high ranking dignitaries. It will also be given to high ranking officials visiting on official business or to attend international conferences and to the members of their families accompanying them. This visa will ordinarily be valid for one month.

(b) Non-Diplomatic Visa

A non-diplomatic visa valid for multiple entries will be issued to non-diplomatic members of the Diplomatic or Consular Mission, their wives and children and the personal servants of members of the Mission holding Diplomatic or Consular ranks. The period of its validity will ordinarily be one year. It will be valid for stay at the place of assignment which will be specified and shall also be valid for journeys performed while accompanying a holder of a diplomatic visa.

(c) Official Visa

An official visa valid for single entry will be issued to officials not entitled to diplomatic or non-diplomatic visa of either country visiting the other on official business including participation in international conferences. This visa will ordinarily be valid for one month and for specified places.

(d) Visitor Visa

(i) A visitor visa will be issued to persons visiting the other country to meet relatives or friends, for business or any other legitimate purpose. This visa shall be for single entry and valid for a period not exceeding three months. However, the visa may be issued for a longer period not exceeding one year if owing to the nature of work or business a prolonged stay is necessary.

(ii) Places to be visited shall be specified in the Visa.

(e) Transit Visa

Transit visa valid for stay in the city/port of entry for 72 hours will be issued to persons travelling by air or sea and proceeding to another country through Pakistan/India. No visa will be required for a passenger directly transiting through an airport/seaport, but his stay shall be confined to the area in the airport/seaport set apart for international transit passengers.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

3. If a visa is not availed of within three months of the date of its issue, it shall stand cancelled. The period of validity of a visa for stay shall count from the date of entry.
4. Check Posts

The following check-posts are hereby designated for entry/exit for the nationals of either country going to/coming from the other country: These check-posts shall be specified on the visas.

(a) By Air: Karachi/Lahore/Islamabad (Pakistan) and Bombay/Delhi/Amritsar (India)

(b) By Sea: Karachi (Pakistan) and Bombay (India)

(c) By Land: Wagha/Attari and Khokhrapar/Munabao border check-posts.

5. Registration

Holders of visitor and transit visas shall be required to register themselves at the check posts of entry and shall, within 24 hours of their reaching in the specified place of stay, report their arrival in writing to the prescribed authority or the nearest police station. They shall also make a similar report 24 hours prior to their intended departure from the place of stay.

6. Seaman

A seaman visiting a port as a member of the crew of a ship need not hold a Passport or a Visa. He may be issued a Landing Permit valid for the port of entry for a period not exceeding 24 hours, provided he deposits his Continuous Discharge Certificate (nullie) with the Immigration Authorities.

7. Fee

A fee of Rupees five Pakistani/Indian will be payable for the issuance or extension of visitor or transit Visas.

8. This Agreement supersedes all previous Agreements on the subject.

Letter from Ministry of Home Affairs to the State Governments regarding restoration of normal travel facilities between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, October 23, 1974.

Government of India
Ministry of Home Affairs
(Grih Mantralaya)
New Delhi

No.12011/7/74-F.III the 23rd October,1974

To : The Chief Secretary,
All State Governments and Union Territory Administrations.

Subject: India-Pakistan Visa Agreement, 1974 - Restoration of normal travel facilities between the two countries.

Sir,

I am directed to state that in pursuance of the provisions of the Simla Agreement of July, 1972, regarding the extension of travel facilities to nationals of either country desiring to visit the other, the Governments of India and Pakistan have concluded a Visa Agreement on 14th September, 1974 to regulate normal travel between the two countries. This Agreement which has come into force with immediate effect supersedes all previous Agreements with the Government of Pakistan on the subject.

2. The new Visa Agreement envisages the following pattern of travel arrangements with Pakistan;

   The issue of special passports - India-Pakistan Passports - for travel of Indian nationals to Pakistan will be discontinued, international Passports with suitable endorsements will be issued to Indian nationals desiring to visit Pakistan. Similarly Pakistani nationals will also be travelling to India on international Passports issued by their Government. The Ministry of External Affairs would be intimating to you shortly the revised procedure for the issue of international passports to Indian nationals for visits to Pakistan.

The following categories of visas will henceforth be issued to Pakistani nationals visiting India.
(a) Diplomatic Visa

(i) A diplomatic visa valid for multiple entries will be issued to the Heads of the Pakistani Diplomatic and Consular Missions in India, members of the Missions holding diplomatic or consular ranks, their wives and children, and regular diplomatic Couriers. The period of the validity of this visa will ordinarily be one year.

(ii) A diplomatic visa valid for single entry will be given to high ranking Pakistani dignitaries visiting India. It will also be given to high ranking Pakistani officials visiting on official business or to attend international conferences and to the members of their families accompanying them. This visa will ordinarily be valid for one month.

(b) Non-Diplomatic Visa

A non-diplomatic visa valid for multiple entries will be issued to non-diplomatic members of the Pakistani Diplomatic or Consular Missions in India, their wives and children, and personal servants of members of the Mission holding Diplomatic or Consular ranks. The period of validity of this visa will ordinarily be one year. It will be valid for stay at the place of assignment which will be specified and shall also be valid for journeys performed while accompanying a holder of a diplomatic visa.

(c) Official Visa

An official visa valid for single entry will be issued to the Pakistani officials not entitled to diplomatic or non-diplomatic visa while visiting India on official business including participation in International Conferences. This Visa will ordinarily be valid for one month and for specified places.

The Ministry of External Affairs will be concerned with the grant/extension etc. of the above visas to Pakistani nationals. The State Governments etc. will receive instructions on the subject from that Ministry as has been the practice hitherto.

(d) Visitor Visa

The Visitor Visa will be issued to Pakistani nationals visiting India for the purpose of meeting relatives or friends, for business or any other legitimate purpose. This visa shall be for single entry and valid for a period not exceeding three months.

However, this visa may be issued for a longer period than three months but not exceeding one year if owing to the nature of work or business of the applicant, his prolonged stay in India is considered necessary.
This visa will be valid for stay only at places specified in the visa.

(e) Transit Visa

A new type of transit visa will now be available to Pakistani nationals who have to transit through India by air/sea. This visa will be valid for stay in the city/port of entry only for a period not exceeding 72 hours.

No visa will, however, be required for a Pakistani national directly transiting through an Indian airport/seaport but his stay will be confined to the area in the airport/seaport set apart for international transit passengers.

3. Owing to the fact that our diplomatic mission is not functioning now in Pakistan the Government of India are considering arrangement for the grant of visas to Pakistani national by the Ministry of External Affairs itself till our Mission starts functioning in Pakistan. The State Governments will be informed of the final decision shortly.

4. All Pakistani nationals will be expected to leave the country within the authorised period of their visas. The special circumstances in which extensions may be granted to them by the State Governments etc. will be communicated to them in due course.

5. All visas granted to Pakistani nationals if not availed of within three months of the date of their issue shall stand cancelled.

6. The following check posts have been designated for entry/exit of Pakistani nationals visiting India viz.

   i) By Air : Amritsar/Bombay/Delhi

   ii) By Sea : Bombay

   iii) By Land : Atari (Punjab)/Munabao (Rajasthan)

7. The new visa Agreement with Pakistan does not envisage any change in the existing registration formalities to be observed by Pakistani nationals visiting India, holder of Visitor and Transit Visas shall be required to register themselves at the Check post of entry and shall within 24 hours of their reaching the specified place of stay report their arrival personally or in writing to the Registration Officer or the nearest Police Station. They shall also make a similar report 24 hours prior to their intended departure from the place of stay.

8. There will be, no change in the existing forms of temporary and regular residential permits for Pakistani nationals and the procedure of their issue. Accordingly a temporary residential permit will be issued by the check post authorities to Pakistani nationals whose stay in India exceeds 14 days and they will be required to exchange it for a regular residential permit from the Registration Officer of the first place of their stay. The Check post authorities will continue to issue regular residential permits to Pakistani nationals whose period of stay in India does not exceed 14 days.

9. The practice of exemption from Police reporting of Pakistani V.I.Ps visiting India on Visitor or Transit Visa will, however, continue. The Indian Missions abroad have been given discretion to grant, in very special cases, exemption to Pakistani visitors from reporting their arrival and departure to police while in India. In cases where such an exemption is endorsed on the passport of a Pakistani national by an Indian Mission the check post authorities/District Registration Officers will score out the corresponding directions from the residential permits that are issued to the Pakistani national encored. In case a temporary residential permit is issued by the check post to the person concerned at the time of his entry into India i.e. where the visa held by him is valid for more than 14 days, the District Registration Officer may on receipt of the duplicate copy of the temporary residential permit from the check post authorities prepare a regular residential Permit and have it delivered to the Pakistani national through the Police Station concerned so that he may not have to make a personal appearance for the purpose. The State Governments etc. may issue instruction to all the District-Registration Officers/local authorities under their jurisdiction.

10. A Pakistani Seaman visiting a port as a member of the crew of a ship need not hold a passport or a visa. They may be issued by the Immigration authorities a landing permit valid for the port of entry for a period not exceeding 24 hours provided he deposits his Continuous Discharge Certificate (nullie).

11. It has been decided that a fee of Rs.5/- (Indian) will be charged for the issuance or extension of Visitor or Transit Visas.

12. The State Governments etc. arc requested kindly to issue instruction in the matter to all the check posts and the District Registration Officers/ Civil authorities within their jurisdiction.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No. P. II/342/3/74 - F.III 29th October, 1974

Dear Head of Mission,

As you are aware, an agreement on the issuance of visas was concluded between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan at Islamabad on September 14, 1974. A copy of the agreement is enclosed.

2. It has been our endeavour that in line with the objectives of the Simla Agreement travel for bona fide purposes by nationals of India and Pakistan should be facilitated. Accordingly, the Agreement signed on September 14 contains the following new features:

(a) The old India-Pakistan Passport is to be dispensed with and visas will be affixed on normal International Passports. In the case of India nationals desirous of travelling to Pakistan who approach our Missions abroad, their inter-national passports can be endorsed for Pakistan. In the case of person in India who wishes to travel only to Pakistan, the State authorities are being authorised to restrict the endorsement and make it valid for travel only to Pakistan.

(b) The categories of visa for Pakistan nationals have been reduced and part from diplomatic and non-diplomatic visas to be given to members of Pakistani Diplomatic Missions, the other categories are official visa, visitor visa and transit visa. The text of the Agreement will explain the purpose of these visas.

(c) The visitor visa can be issued to persons visiting “relatives or friends, for business or any other legitimate purpose. A legitimate purpose is one which is capable of verification, if found necessary. This may include, for example:

(i) Visits of Educationists, Scientists, and Doctors etc. to give lectures on invitation.

(ii) Visits of Sports Teams, Debating Teams on invitations;

(iii) Tourism in the form of tours to places of recognised tourist interest arranged by an international/Indian travel agency. This will, however, exclude visits to the State of Jammu & Kashmir and other restricted areas as notified by the Ministry of Home Affairs/Defense from time to time.

The places to be visited in India shall be specified in the visa.

3. Categories of Pakistani nationals mentioned in Annexure I will not be given visas without prior clearance from the Ministry of Home Affairs. However, families (Women and children) of Ex-members of the Pakistani Defence Forces/Police/PIA will be eligible for the grant of visas without prior clearance subject to other criteria being fulfilled.

4. A new type of visa is the transit visa which can be freely given and would entitle Pakistan nationals travelling in transit through India to break journey in the city or port of entry for 72 hours. In such cases the procedure for registration and police reporting is indicated in para 5 of the new agreement.

5. While the new Agreement considerably simplifies procedures, we have continued with reasonable security checks for the time being, in the case of Pakistan nationals visiting India. For this purpose visitors to India will be required to report to the police within 24 hours of their arrival at each of the places indicated in the visa. This reporting can be done in person or through a registered letter, sent by the traveller on arrival. This can be indicated by super-imposing a rubber stamp impression on the visa form to be supplied to the applicant by our Missions abroad. Heads of Mission are authorised to exempt individual Pakistani nationals from reporting to police in India. Every such exemption should be given if the Heads of Mission are personally satisfied about the antecedents of the Pakistani national and feel that he is a fit and desirable person to be given such exemption. In such a case the application should be stamped with, a special rubber seal carrying the legend "exempted from police reporting."

6. All visitor and transit visa holders would be required as before to obtain residential permits from the authorities at the check post of entry into India. Visitor visas may be issued to businessman and journalists and when the purpose of the visit is considered reasonable. When issuing visas to Pakistani journalists the X.P. Division and the Pakistan Division—should also be given prior intimation, if necessary, by telex.

7. We shall be sending in due course, printed copies of the revised and simplified visa application forms. The applicants for visitor and transit visas will submit their applications in triplicate. At the time of re-turning the visaed passport to the Pakistani national, the Mission will ensure that one copy of the completed visa application form together with photograph of the holder and full details of the visa granted is given to him with instructions to hand it over to the autho-rities at the check post of entry into India. After the grant of visa the Mission concerned will also forward a copy of the completed visa application together with photograph of the holder and full details of the visa granted to the Superintendent of Police in whose jurisdiction the first place of visit in India of the Pakistani national lies. The third copy of the visa application will be retained by the Mission as their record.

8. Our Missions abroad are authorized to issue only single entry visas valid for a maximum stay of three months in India. Where longer stay or multiple entries are required, a reference is required to be made to the Ministry of Home Affairs under intimation to this Ministry.

9. In conclusion you are requested to instruct the visa officer of your Mission that while special care should be taken to check the blacklist while issuing visas, our approach should be as liberal as it is consistent with our security interests, keeping in view our overall objectives. In cases of doubt, the Ministry of External Affairs and the Ministry of Home Affairs can be consulted.

10. This supersedes all previous instructions on the subject.

11. This letter issues with the concurrence of the Ministry of Home Affairs.

12. The receipt of this letter may kindly be acknowledged.

Yours Sincerely
(J. Agacy)

To

A. S. Chib,
Joint Secretary (Pak)

Subject: Procedure for exemption from police reporting on Visas given to Pakistan nationals.
Dear Head of Mission,

Kindly refer to our circular letter of even number dated October 20, 1974. Para 5 of this letter authorises Heads of Mission to exempt individual Pakistani nationals from reporting to the police in India. There has been further discussion of the procedural aspects of this question, with the Ministry of Home Affairs who have advised that this discretion should be exercised by only the Heads of Mission personally and only where the status of a Pakistani national warrants this courtesy. Extract from the letter received from the Ministry of Home Affairs in this regard is reproduced below:

“....Prior to 1971-war the discretion to exempt individual Pakistani nationals from the requirement of reporting their arrival and departure to the police in India was available to our Missions in Pakistan only. However, this discretion has now been given to the Heads of all our Mission abroad vide that Ministry’s Secret circular letter No.PII/342/3/74/Pt.III dated 29th October, 1974. The position has, therefore, be one more liberal than before in regard to reporting. In view of this the Ministry of External Affairs are requested to ensure that the discretion of exempting a Pakistani national from Police reporting is exercised by our Missions with due care and caution and personally by the Head of the Mission and that there is no power to other functionaries in the Mission. Further, this Ministry also trusts that exemption will be granted in very special and exceptional cases only and that too where the status of the Pakistani national warrants that courtesy to be extended to him or the Pakistani national is personally known to the Head of the Mission and the latter considers that he could be exempted from police reporting without any security risk.”

With best regards,

Yours sincerely

(A.S. Chib)

New Delhi, December 16, 1974.

Ministry of External Affairs
(Pakistan Division)
New Delhi

No. FII/342/3/74-Part-III December 16, 1974

The Ministry of External Affairs present its compliments to the Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi and with reference to the discussion held between Mr. A. S. Chib, Joint Secretary and H. E. the Swiss Ambassador on 1-12.1974, has the honour to state that the Visa Agreement signed by the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan on 14.9.74 became operative from that date.

2. The Ministry of External Affairs, therefore, requests the Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi to advise its Missions in Karachi and Islamabad that under the Agreement the fee for the grant of extension of Visitor or Transit Visas is Rs 5/- Indian/ Pakistani.

3. While forwarding the passports along with the Visa applications (in duplicate), the Swiss Missions in Karachi/Islamabad may kindly be advised to indicate on the Visa applications that the requisite fee has been collected from the applicant.

4. The procedure which the Government of India would follow for processing Visa applications was outlined in the Note dated 17.9.1974 from the Ministry of External Affairs to the Embassy of Switzerland in New Delhi. A copy of this Note is enclosed.

5. In addition to the existing procedure, the Ministry would request that to enable more expeditious grant of visas for urgent cases involving serious illness, deaths or marriages a special procedure may be followed by the Swiss Missions in Pakistan. It is suggested in such urgent cases the Swiss Missions in Pakistan should telex the following particulars of the applicant to the Swiss Embassy in New Delhi for seeking visa clearance:

   1. Full Name.
   2. Passport No. and
   3. Father’s name.
   4. Place of birth.
   5. Date of birth.
   6. Occupation.
   7. Address in Pakistan.
8. Places to be visited in India,
This would enable the Ministry of External Affairs to verify and authorise by telex the grant of visas. The Swiss Missions in Pakistan can then stamp the requisite visas on Pakistani passports directly. A copy of the Visa application on which the visa has been given can then be sent to Delhi for record. In such cases it could not be necessary to send the passports to the Ministry of External Affairs.
6. It is requested that the Embassy of Switzerland, New Delhi may kindly inform their Consulate General in Karachi and Embassy of Switzerland, Islamabad of the above mentioned procedures.
7. The Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Embassy of Switzerland, New Delhi, the assurances of its highest consideration.

3530. SECRET
Letter from the Ministry of Home Affairs to the State Governments regarding India-Pakistan Visa Agreement of 1974.
New Delhi, June 1, 1976.

No.12011/4/75. F.III
Government of India/Bharat Sarkar
Ministry of Home Affairs/Grih Mantralaya
New Delhi-110001

To : The Chief Secretaries to all State Governments, and Union Territory Administrations.

Subject: India-Pakistan Visa Agreement 1974 -Question of delegation of powers to State Governments and Civil Authorities to grant permission to Pakistani nationals to visit additional places.

Sir,
I am directed to refer to this Ministry’s letter No.1 2011/7/74-F.III, dated the 23rd October, 1974, regarding restoration of normal travel facilities between India and Pakistan under the new Visa Agreement, 1974. This agreement inter alia has introduced a new type of visa known as “Visitor” visa to enable Pakistani nationals to visit India for the purpose of meeting relatives or friends etc. This visa is ordinarily for a single entry and valid for a period not exceeding three months. The places to be visited are required to be specified in the visa.

2. It has been observed that Pakistani nationals after arrival in the country often seek permission to visit additional places. Henceforward requests of Pakistani nationals for permission to visit additional places not mentioned in the visa application/residential permits will be considered only in circumstances of compelling urgency which may have occurred after their arrival. These unforeseen events would cover cases of serious illness of the applicant; death, serious illness or marriage of first degree relations etc. which could not be visualized at the time of obtaining visa from the Indian Mission and which may now be considered by the State Government to be of sufficient importance; so as to make it unavoidably essential or socially obligatory for the Pakistani national to visit to additional place.

3. The applications from Pakistani nationals for grant of permission to visit additional places in exceptional or unforeseen circumstances may be dealt with by the State Government/Civil Authority in the manner indicated below:

   (i) if the additional place to be visited falls within the territorial jurisdiction of the Civil Authority and no extension of stay is involved, it may dispose of the application itself; and

   (ii) if the additional place to be visited falls outside the territorial jurisdiction of the Civil Authority or where the State Government is to exercise power of extension of stay in terms of this Ministry’s letter ‘No.12011/29/74.F.III, dated the 22nd January, 1976, the Civil Authority should refer the application to its State Govt., for orders. In a case where the additional place to be visited falls in another State, the State Government may grant the permission only when the other State Government have no objection and send an intimation together with the full personal particulars of the applicant to this Ministry.

As stated above, the cases of the category (ii) above are to be decided by the State Govt., themselves. In exceedingly urgent and emergent cases, where the need of a Pakistani national to visit an additional place is compelling, the Civil Authority may in its discretion permit the applicant to visit the additional place for a period not exceeding seven days provided no extension of visa period is involved. An intimation of this should, however, be sent promptly to the State Government and the Civil Authority of the place to be visited.
4. In exercise of the power referred to in Para 3 above, the State Government/ Civil Authority should ordinarily permit a Pakistani national to visit only one additional place, during the entire period of the stay of Pakistani national.

5. Applications from Pakistani nationals for permission to visit any additional place falling in any restricted or cantonment area should not be entertained and should be rejected straightaway except in very exceptional cases. Such exceptional cases should be referred to this Ministry for instructions along with the full facts and recommendations of the State Government.

6. Similarly applications of members and ex-members of Pakistani Defence (including P.I.A. and Port Trusts), Police, Watch and Ward, Para-Military, Para-Police Organisations, employees of Flying Clubs, Mujahids and Ansars and members of their families, for permission to visit any additional place should also be rejected straightaway. If, however, there is any exceptional case meriting special consideration, a reference, along with the full facts of the case and the State Governments recommendations, may be made to this Ministry for instructions.

7. The above instructions are not applicable to Pakistani nationals for grant of permission to visit any area in Jammu & Kashmir State or Kerala as an additional place. All requests from Pakistani nationals for the grant of permission to visit such areas may be referred to this Ministry for instructions.

8. These instructions supersede all previous-instructions issued on the subject.

Yours faithfully

Sd/-

Letter from Ministry of Home Affairs to the State Governments in India regarding deportation of Pakistani Nationals.

New Delhi, January 21, 1977.

No.19011/1/72-F.III
Government of India/Bharat Sarkar
Ministry of Home Affairs/Grih Mantralaya
New Delhi

To : All the State Governments and Union Territory Administrations.

Subject: Deportation of Pakistani nationals.

Sir,

I am directed to refer to this Ministry's letter No.19011/1/72-F.III dated the 10th December, 1974 in which the procedure of deportation of Pakistani nationals through unauthorised routes was indicated. As you are aware, for certain reasons the deportation of Pakistani nationals through unauthorised routes was temporarily suspended. It has now been decided, in consultation with Government of Rajasthan, to resume deporting of unwanted Pakistani nationals (not being in possession of Pakistani passports), through whatever routes appear feasible though not authorized, at the Barmer border in Rajasthan. The procedure for deportation would be the same as outlined in this Ministry's letter No.19011/1/72-F.III dated the 10th December, 1974, but it will be very necessary to proceed slowly and cautiously in the matter and the State Government while sending Pakistani nationals for deportation should settle in advance, with District Superintendent of Police, Barmer, both on the number of Pakistani nationals to be deported in each batch, and the timing of the sending of these Pakistani nationals to Barmer.

2. The following points are re-iterated for the guidance of the State Government:

(a) Only such Pakistani nationals who are not in possession of valid Pakistani travel documents and who are not wanted in India for any serious offences and who are also not eligible for the grant of facilities for continued stay and about whose Pakistani nationality there is no doubt will only be deported to Pakistan. This aspect of the matter will be decided by the State Government in its discretion but the State Government should be fully satisfied, after making inquiries, that the nationality of these persons is beyond doubt Pakistani. Such persons should be served with ‘Quit-India Order’ under Section 3(2)C of the Foreigners Act 1946 and only if they fail to move out, should action be taken to deport them through unauthorized routes. It should however, be ensured that these persons do not carry these proceedings with them when they are pushed through unauthorized routes. The instructions will apply to all legal or illegal entrants who though Pakistani nationals feign not to possess Pakistani documents or are actually without Pakistani documents.

b) This procedure will not apply to Pakistan “Post-war detainees” in India viz. those who were detained on or after 18th December 1971. The idea is that nationals may be forced to cross over into Pakistan through unauthorised routes as are in India or in Indian custody without the knowledge of Government of Pakistan, either directly or through the ICRC.

c) The concerned State Governments will settle in advance with the District Superintendent of Police, Barmer, the number and timing of the Pakistani nationals to be deported.

d) The arrangement of escorting of these Pakistani nationals up to Barmer will be made by State Government but the actual deportation will be effected by the Distt. Superintendent of Police, Barmer.

3. A consolidated report on the number of Pakistani nationals may be furnished to Government of India in duplicate at the end of every quarter i.e. 31st March, 30th June, 30th September and 31st December.

4. As regards the Pakistani nationals belonging to the minority community in Pakistan, whenever it is proposed to deport any such person, the case may be referred to this Ministry before any action is initiated against him under the Foreigners Act.

5. The above arrangements will not apply to Governments of Gujarat and Punjab who make their own arrangement ‘or deporting Pakistani nationals through unauthorised channels.

Yours faithfully,

Sd/

Under Secretary To the Government of India
Letters Exchanged between Foreign Secretary and Ambassador of Pakistan regarding facilities to be granted to the crew of the Indian and Pakistan air services.

New Delhi, August 31, 1977.

Foreign Secretary
Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi-11.

Dated the 31st August, 1977

Excellency,

I have the honour to refer to the “Agreement between the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan and the Government of the Republic of India relating to air services”, which was signed at Rawalpindi on 16 July 1976, and to state the following on behalf of the Government of India:

In connection with the operation of the air services between India and Pakistan, the crew members, administrative personnel, etc, visiting the other country will be granted the following facilities on a reciprocal basis:

i) The airline crew members of either country operating the scheduled services between India and Pakistan will be allowed to land at the designated airports in the other country, without being required to be in possession of passports and visas, provided they hold valid personnel licences conforming to the specifications listed in 5.1.1 of Annex-I to the Convention on International Civil Aviation, or valid Crew Member Certificates conforming to the specifications contained in Appendix 5 in Annex 9 to the Convention on International Civil-Aviation.

ii) Station Managers of the airlines of either country stationed in the other may be granted multi-Journey visas on their passports valid for a period of one year. The other staff will also be given multi-journey visas valid for a period of one year but limited to three journeys during this period. Indian Airlines personnel stationed in Pakistan will be given visa endorsement for Islamabad in addition to Karachi and Lahore and PIA personnel stationed in India will be given visa endorsement for Madras in addition to New Delhi and Bombay.

iii) Senior administrative personnel of the airlines of either country, not exceeding 10 in number who may be required to visit the other country for consultations, may be granted multi-journey visas on their passports valid for a period of one year and up to one week’s stay on each visit and for Bombay and Delhi in India and Karachi and Lahore in Pakistan, provided full particulars of such persons are furnished in advance.

iv) Aircraft Maintenance Engineers of the airline of one country who are required to travel to the other in connection with repairs or maintenance of ground or maintenance on ground to aircraft shall be given facilities to land in the concerned airport of the other country up to a period of 6 hours without visas provided they hold valid passports endorsed for India or Pakistan as the case may be and are in possession of appropriate Aircraft maintenance Engineers Licences issued or rendered valid by licencing authority of their respect countries. The arrival of such engineering staff shall be reported in writing by the concerned airline to the immigration authorities at the airport in the other country within 30 minutes of the arrival of the aircraft.

v) Maintenance staff of the airline of one country who are required to travel to the other country without notice in emergencies in connection with repairs to aircraft shall be given facilities to land in the concerned airport of the other country up to a period of 48 hours without visas provided they hold valid passports endorsed for India or Pakistan as the case may be. Their arrival shall be reported by the airline concerned in writing to the immigration authorities at the airport in the other country either in advance or in any case with 30 minute of their arrival of the aircraft.

vi) Personnel of the airlines of one country stationed in the other will be subject to the requirements of registration, report on arrival/departure, etc, as provided in the Agreement between the Governments of India and Pakistan dated the 14th September, 1974.

vii) Either contracting party may, at any time, give written notice to the other contracting party of its desire to terminate this Agreement. This Agreement shall terminate one year after the date of receipt of the notice by the other contracting party unless the notice is withdrawn before the expiration of this period.

I shall be grateful if you could confirm that the above correctly sets out the understanding reached between us. I have the honour to propose that this letter and your reply thereto shall constitute an Agreement between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan which shall come into force on the date of your reply.
Please accept your Excellency the assurances of my highest consideration.

Yours sincerely

3533.  Letter from Ministry of Home Affairs to Chief Secretaries of Certain States in India.

New Delhi, November 19, 1977.

No. 12011/31/77 – F.III

Government of India/Bharat Sarkar
Ministry of Home Affairs/Grih Mantralaya

To:

1. The Chief Secretary,
   Government of Maharashtra,
   General Administration Department, Bombay.

2. The Chief Secretary,
   Government of Punjab, Chandigarh.

3. The Chief Secretary,
   Delhi Administration,
   Delhi.

4. The Chief Secretary,
   Government of Tamil Nadu, Madras.

   New Delhi-110001, dated the 19th November, 1977

Subject: Agreement relating to permission to the crew members, administrative personnel etc. of PIA visiting India and the Indian Airlines Corporation visiting Pakistan.

Sir,

I am directed to refer to this Ministry’s letter No.12011/7/74-F.III dated the 23rd October, 1974 on the subject of restoration of normal travel facilities between India and Pakistan and signing of India Pakistan Agreement.

2. A formal Agreement has now been reached between India and Pakistan on the movement of Air Crew, administrative personnel etc., between India and Pakistan in connection with operation of air services between the two countries. A copy of letters exchanged between the Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs and the Ambassador to India of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, which constitute the Agreement, is enclosed
3. It will be observed that except for PIA crew, all officers and personnel of PIA stationed in India, Senior Administrative personnel stationed in Pakistan, aircraft, maintenance Engineers and other maintenance staff required to come to India for repairs of the aircraft etc. in emergencies or otherwise would be required to hold valid Pakistani passport duly endorsed for India. Visas endorsement are exempted only for PIA air crew holding valid personal licenses or crew members certificates conforming to International standard as described in the agreement, Visa endorsement is also not necessary in cases of Aircraft Maintenance Engineers permitted to land in India for a period up to 6 hours in connection with repairs or maintenance on ground to aircrafts and for maintenance staff of PIA who are required to travel to India without notice in emergencies, in connection with repairs of aircraft, for period upto 48 hours.

4. It may be noted that while PIA aircrafts are permitted to land at Delhi and Bombay airports the Station Managers of PIA and other staff stationed in India, are permitted to go to Madras in addition to Delhi and Bombay. Senior Administrative personnel of airlines will have permission to visit Bombay and Delhi in connection with their official work. Visits to any other place by any PIA Official will require prior permission of this Ministry.

5. At present, there is a restriction on departure of Pakistani nationals from only the check post of entry. This restriction will not be applicable to Senior Administrative personnel of PIA. They may be permitted to leave either from Bombay or Delhi; State Government of Maharashtra and Delhi Administration are hereby authorised in case of urgency to permit departure of Station Managers and other personnel stationed in India to leave India from Bombay or Delhi Airports, as may be necessary, even if these are not the check post of their entry into India.

Multi-Journey facilities to Station Managers and other personnel stationed in India will not have the effect of exemption from reporting to police on arrival and departure. Senior Administrative personnel of PIA required to come from Pakistan to India for consultation for a period of one week’s stay in India will not be required formally to report their arrival and departure to police. The check post authorities will keep the State Governments and this Ministry informed of their arrival and departure.

7. It is requested that you may, on application grant permission to stay up to one year to the “Managers of PIA with multi-journey facilities for any number of journeys, and to other personnel, permission to stay for one year with multi-journey facilities limited to three journeys during the period. Both the Station Managers and other PIA personnel stationed in India may be given permission to visit New Delhi, Bombay and Madras.
8. As and when Aircraft Maintenance Engineers of PIA in terms of facility (iv), and maintenance staff of PIA in terms of facility (v) of letter of Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs to Pakistani Ambassador in India, are permitted to land in India, the fact of such landing and personal particulars of these maintenance Engineers/or technicians should be immediately reported to this Ministry.

Yours faithfully

No. ISL/Cons/342/3/83 21 July 1983

Excellency,

Kindly refer to the discussions and agreed minutes of the India-Pakistan Joint Commission meeting held at Islamabad from 1 - 4 June 1983. The following amendments to the Visa Agreement of 1974 between India and Pakistan were agreed to:

(i) Diplomatic Visa: The period of validity of diplomatic visa issued under clause 2(a)(1) of the India-Pak visa Agreement, 1974 may be extended from one year to the duration of assignment of the diplomatic personnel,

(ii) Non-Diplomatic Visa: The period of validity of non-diplomatic visas issued under clause 2(b) of the India Visa Agreement, 1974 may also be extended from one year to the duration of assignment.

(iii) Business Visa: Visitor visa under clause 2(d)(i) of Visa Agreement may be issued to businessmen up to three journeys with validity period not exceeding six months. Businessmen, sponsored by a recognized Chamber of Commerce would be alone eligible for this facility.
(iv) Fee: Visa-fee may be raised to Rs.15/- inclusive of all charges.

If the above correctly sets out the understanding reached between the Government of India and Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, it is proposed that this letter and a reply thereto from Government of Pakistan shall constitute an Agreement between the Government of India and the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan.

Accept Excellency the assurances of my highest consideration.

3535. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Embassy of India in Pakistan.

Islamabad, August 9, 1983.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

No.IND/IV/1/(6)/83, August 9, 1983

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of India in Islamabad and with reference to letter No.ISL/CONS/342/83, dated July 21, 1983 addressed by H.E. the Ambassador to the Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs regarding certain amendments/additions in the Visa Agreement of 1974, has the honour to state that this Ministry vide its note of even number dated 30 June, 1983 has already proposed that the following amendments, agreed to by the two sides during the first meeting of the Pakistan - India Joint Commission held in Islamabad from 1 – 4 June, 1983, may come into effect from July 1, 1983:

Indo-Pakistan Visa Agreement, 1974.

Clause 2(a) (i). (Diplomatic visa)
The last sentence of clause 2(a)(i) may be replaced as under:—

“This visa will be valid for the duration of the assignment of holder”.

Clause 2(b). (Non-Diplomatic Visa)

The second sentence of clause 2(b) may be replaced as under:—

“This visa will be valid for the duration of the assignment of the holder”.

Clause 2(d). (Visitor visa).

The provision made under clause 2(d) of the Visa Agreement under the Head “visitor visa” may be read as under:-

i) A visitor visa will be issued to persons visiting the other country to meet relatives or friends or for any other legitimate purpose. This visa shall be for single entry and valid for a period not exceeding three months. However, the visa may be issued for longer period not exceeding one year if owing to the nature of work, a prolonged stay is necessary.

ii) This visa will also be issued to bona fide businessmen who have to travel frequently between India and Pakistan. In their case the visa will be valid for a period not exceeding six months for up to 3 visits.

iii) Places to be visited shall be specified in the visa.

CLAUSE-5. (Registration).

The following sentence may be added at the end of clause 5.

“In the case of families, only one member of the family shall be required to appear before the Registration authority for registering himself and the members of his family”.

CLAUSE-7. (Visa fee).

The letter under reference, however, does not refer to the agreed amendments at points (i) & (iii) of Clause 2(d) regarding visitor visa and specification of places to be visited and relating to Registration (Clause-5 of the Visa Agreement of 1974) proposing that in case of families, only one member of the family shall be required to appear before the Registration autho-rities for registering himself an the members of his family”.

This Ministry would be grateful to receive confirmation of the Government of India to the amendments/additions mentioned above, which along with this note would constitute "a formal Agreement between the two Governments.

The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Embassy the assurances of its highest consideration.

The Embassy of India
Islamabad.

3536. Aide Memoire presented by the Embassy of Pakistan in India to the Ministry of External Affairs.
New Delhi, January 4, 1984.

AIDE MEMOIRE

Paragraph 2 (a) sub-para (i) of the Visa Agreement between the Government of Pakistan and the Government of India provides for Diplomatic Visas to be issued, inter alia, to "wives and children" of diplomatic members of the respective Missions of the two countries. In accordance with this provision, Visa Issuing Authorities of the Government of Pakistan have been issuing Diplomatic Visas to the wives and children of Indian diplomats and consular officers posted in Pakistan. In certain cases, parents of the Indian diplomats and consular officers have also been issued Diplomatic Visas as a matter of courtesy.

2. However, while the Indian Visa Issuing Authorities have been granting Diplomatic Visas to the wives of Pakistani diplomats, posted in India, they have not been doing so in the case of their children, issuing to them instead Non-Diplomatic Visas. In certain instances, Indian Diplomatic Missions abroad have also granted Official Visas to the children of Pakistani diplomats.

3. Under the Visa Agreement, a Non-Diplomatic Visa is to be issued only to "Non-Diplomatic members of the Diplomatic or Consular Mission, their wives and children and the personal servants of members of the Mission holding Diplomatic or Consular ranks". Also, Official Visas are to be issued only to "officials not entitled to Diplomatic or Non-diplomatic Visa".

4. Issuance of Non-diplomatic or Official Visas to children of Pakistani diplomats is a contravention of the Visa Agreement whose provisions in this regard are quite clear, and are expected to be implemented by both sides on the basis of reciprocity.

5. The Government of Pakistan shall appreciate if necessary instructions are issued by the Government of India to its Visa Issuing Authorities at home and abroad to rectify the above situation through grant of fresh diplomatic Visas to the children of Pakistani diplomats already posted in India and of those who may be posted to India in the future.

3537. Note from Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Embassy of India in Pakistan regarding amendments to the Visa procedure.

Islamabad, March 10, 1984.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Islamabad

No. IND/III/1/20/83 March 10, 1984.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs presents its compliments to the Embassy of India in Islamabad and has the honour to state that during the Meeting of Sub-Commission IV on Travel, Tourism and Consular matters held in New Delhi on January 19, 20 and 21, 1984 it was agreed that the implementation of the decisions arrived at during the Meeting of the Indo Pakistan Joint Commission held in Islamabad in June 1983 in respect of clause 2(a), 2(b), 2(d)(i), 5 and 7 would be initiated forthwith through exchange of letters between this Ministry and the Embassy of India in Islamabad. The Pakistan side had pointed out during the Delhi Meeting of Sub-Commission IV that the Ministry of Foreign Affairs has already initiated action for implementation of the agreement reached during the Joint Commission’s Meeting of June, 1983. In this connection Ministry’s Notes of June 30, 1983 and August 9, 1983 were referred to.

Meanwhile another amendment has been agreed to during the Meeting of sub-Commission IV in January 1984 regarding grant of double-entry transit visas.
It is proposed that the following amendments agreed to during the two Meeting of Sub-Commission IV may be made in the Indo-Pakistan Visa Agreement of 1974.—

Indo-Pakistan Visa Agreement, 1974.

Clause 2(a) (i). (Diplomatic visa)

The last sentence of clause 2(a)(i) may be replaced as under:—

“This visa will be valid for the duration of the assignment of holder”.

Clause 2(b). (Non-Diplomatic Visa)

The second sentence of clause 2(b) may be replaced as under:—

“This visa will be valid for the duration of the assignment of the holder”.

Clause 2(d). (Visitor visa).

The provision made under clause 2(d) of the Visa Agreement under the Head “visitor visa” may be read as under:-

i) A visitor visa will be issued to persons visiting the other country to meet relatives or friends or for any other legitimate purpose. This visa shall be for single entry and valid for a period not exceeding three months. However, the visa may be issued for longer period not exceeding one year if owing to the nature of work, a prolonged stay is necessary.

ii) This visa will also be issued to bonafide businessmen who have to travel frequently between India and Pakistan. In their case the visa will be valid for a period not exceeding six months for up to 3 visits.

iii) Places to be visited shall be specified in the visa.

Clause 2(e)

Transit visas valid for up to two entries for stay in the city/port of entry for 72 hours in each case will be issued to persons travelling by air or sea and proceeding to another country through Pakistan/India. No visa will be required for a passenger directly transiting through an airport/sea port, but his stay shall be confined to the area in the airport/ seaport set apart for international transit passengers.

Clause - 5. (Registration).

The following sentence may be added at the end of clause 5.

“In the case of families, only one member of the family shall be required to appear before the Registration authority for registering himself and the members of his family”.
Clause - 7. (Visa fee).
“A fee of Rupees 15/- Pakistani/Indian inclusive of all charges will be payable for the issuance or extension of visitor or transit visas”.
This Ministry of Foreign Affairs would be grateful to receive confirmation of the Government of India to the amendments/additions mentioned above which, along with this note, would constitute a formal Agreement between the two Governments.
The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Embassy the assurances of its highest consideration.

Letter from Ministry of Home Affairs to Indian Heads of Mission Abroad.

Government of India
Ministry of Home Affairs
New Delhi

No. 12011/11/85-F-III 25th February, 1987

Dear Mission,

Attention is Invited to Ministry’s letters of even number dated 17th February, 1986 wherein instructions were issued that persons of Pak origin holding dual nationality or possessing the passport of other countries should be treated as ‘pre-reference’ category i.e. visa should be granted to them after getting security clearance from this Ministry. On suggestions by some Indian Missions abroad, these instructions were modified and a specified category of persons was exempted from prior reference vide, this Ministry’s circular letter No. 12011/11/85-F-III dated 1.8.1986. However, representations have continued to come from Indian Missions bringing out hardships and humanitarian aspects involved in such cases. These have been considered and it has now been decided that prior reference need not be made in the following cases;

i) Ladies of Pak origin married to Indian nationals.

ii) Short transit halts.

iii) Wives of Sheikhs, Members of Royal Families in the Middle East

iv) Emergent cases where the Head of the Mission is personally satisfied in regard to hardship and humanitarian aspects involved.

2. Visas in the above mentioned cases can be granted by the Indian Missions aboard subject to local checks with suspect index etc. Full details of such persons visiting India will, however, be sent invariably to Intelligence Bureau as soon as visa is granted to them.

3. Some of the Indian Missions abroad have also represented, that prominent foreigners of Pak origin too should be exempted from the pre-reference category. It is requested that their lists may be drawn giving full personal particulars and sent to this Ministry for further consideration.

4. There may be other cases of foreigners of Pak origin which are not covered by the exempted category and Indian Missions want them to be included in such a list. It is requested that information regarding their number and the frequency with which they normally visit India may kindly be furnished to this Ministry so that considered in detail for decision.

Yours ever

3540. IMMEDIATE/SECRET

Letter from Ministry of External Affairs to Ambassador of India in Pakistan S. K. Singh.

New Delhi, September 16, 1987.

Ministry of External Affairs
New Delhi

No. 5224/JS(AP)/87 September 16, 1987

My dear

Shri P. Chidambaram, Minister of State for Home Affairs, took an Inter Ministerial Meeting this morning to review the modalities of implementation of our visa policy vis-a-vis Pakistan and Bangladesh. During the meeting he underlined the problems being created for us by large numbers of Pakistanis and Bangladeshis who came into India on valid visas and then did not return to their respective countries. While recognising that our policy of maximising people-to-people contacts with Pakistan militated against a reduction in issuance of visas to Pakistani nationals, he emphasised the need to ensure that only Pakistanis with bona fide intentions are permitted to come to India and to maintain a close check at this end that all such persons return to Pakistan. In this context he made the following points:

i) Our Missions in Pakistan must take great care in screening visa applicants so that all undesirable elements are weeded out and only those are permitted to come who have no mala fide motives. An important aspect of this screening process is the evaluation of visa forms and where these are improperly completed or where columns pertaining to address, purpose of visit etc. are not in an acceptable manner the visa applications should be rejected.

ii) Where there is any doubt regarding the genuineness of the case, references could be made to the Home Ministry. Resort to such reference may be increased.

iii) It would be desirable to also secure some indication of adequate financial support from the visa applicants before grant of visas. This could be either in the form of actual foreign exchange holding of the visa applicants or a sponsorship certificate from his relatives in India. In case an Indian is sponsoring the Pakistani national, he should also give an undertaking that he would ensure the return of the visa applicant to Pakistan.

iv) With a view to ensuring that the concerned Superintendents of Police have received intimation of a Pakistani national’s arrival in the district prior to his actually reaching there, visas granted should be made operative only 10 days after issue. Where exceptions are unavoidable, intimation of grant of visas could be sent to the concerned Superintendents of Police by telegram. In addition, it may be ensured that copies of visa application forms meant for SPs are positively sent to then by the next available bag so as to invariably reach them before the arrival of the concerned Pakistani nationals.

2. The foregoing is a summary of the views expressed by Shri Chidambaram. A detailed record will be sent to you shortly. I feel that the proposals made above are reasonable and should pose no major problem for implementation by our Missions. I may mention that the Ministry of Home Affairs ultimately intends to send an official to both Karachi and Islamabad to brief our visa officials about their concerns in this matter and about the need to ensure a greater vigilance in issuance of visas so that all the Pakistanis entering into India with visas are bona fide visitors who will return back to Pakistan.

Yours sincerely

Note for the Cabinet regarding repeal of the Influx from Pakistan (Control) Repealing Act, 1952 (76 of 1952)

(Foreigner division)

NOTE FOR THE CABINET

Subject: Repeal of the Influx from Pakistan (Control) Repealing Act, 1952 (76 of 1952)

After partition in 1947, there were initially no travel restrictions on the citizens of India for visiting Pakistan, and Pakistani nationals for visiting India. In July, 1948, for the first time, a permit system was introduced for the travel of Indian and Pakistani citizens, between the two countries. In October, 1952, based on mutual agreement, India and Pakistan Passport and Visa Scheme was introduced, to regulate visits of the citizens of the two countries. This system remained operational till 1965. During the period from 1965 to 1974, travel facilities between the two countries remained suspended due to hostilities and wars. After the war of 1971, in July 1972, Simla Agreement was signed between the two countries. In pursuance of the relevant provisions of this Agreement on travel facilities between the two countries, the Indo-Pak Visa Scheme, 1974 came into effect to regulate the travel of the citizens of the two countries. The provisions of this agreement superseded all the previous arrangements of travel of the citizens of the two countries. Subsequently, the residential permit system was also introduced to regulate the stay and movement of Pakistani nationals while in India. Since then the travel of the citizens of Pakistan and their movement and stay in India are regulated by the provisions of the Indo-Pak Visa Regime and the system of residential permits.

2. Migration of Pakistani nationals belonging to the minority communities in Pakistan, to India, which started after August 1947, needed attention. In order to regulate the entry in to and movement in India of the Pakistani citizens, the Influx from Pakistan (Control) Act, 1949 (Annexure-A) was enacted. Consequent to the replacement of the permit system, by the passport system, an enactment namely, the Influx from Pakistan (Control) Repealing Act, 1952 (Annexure-B) was enacted, to repeal this Act. In the Act, a saving provision in Section 3 of the Act was made which provided for the repeal of the Influx from Pakistan (Control) Act, 1949. This Section also stipulated that the repeal would not affect the continuance in force of any permit which is intended to continue in force beyond the 15th October, 1952 when Passport and visa system was adopted for regulating the entry of foreign nationals including Pakistani nationals into India.

3. In view of the Indo-Pak Visa Agreement, 1974, and the regulation of stay and movement of Pak nationals in India by the residential permit system, the system of permits introduced in terms of the provisions in the Influx from Pakistan (Control) Act, 1949 has lapsed long time back. This is also borne out from the reports received from twenty States and Union Territories to the effect that no Pakistani national holding such a permit is staying in their respective State or Union Territory. Under the circumstances, it is proposed that the Influx from Pakistan (Control) Repealing Act, 1952 (76 of 1952), may be repealed.

4. The statement of Implementation Schedule in respect of the above proposal is at Appendix.

5. The Ministry of External Affairs has concurred with the proposal. Ministry of Law, Justice and Company Affairs, Department of Legal Affairs, has also seen the Note.

6. Approval of the Cabinet is solicited to the repeal of the Influx from Pakistan (Control) Repealing Act, 1952 (76 of 1952).

7. The Home Minister has approved the proposal.

Minutes of the meeting held in the Room of Mr. G. Ahmed, Secretary, Pakistan Ministry of Interior to discuss the question of Protection, Preservation and Maintenance of Places of Religious Worship in India and Pakistan.

Karachi, August 1 – 4, 1953.

Indian Side
1. Mr. Mehr Chand Khanna, Adviser, Ministry of Rehabilitation.
2. Mr. K.P. Mathrani, I.C.S., Joint Secretary, Ministry of Rehabilitation.
3. Mr. P.G Zachariah, Deputy Secretary.

Pakistan Side
2. Mr. G. Ahmed PSY., Secretary, Ministry of the Interior.

The question of places of religious worship was discussed. It was felt that:

(i) Every effort should be made to ensure that places of religious worship in both countries are properly protected and maintained and their sanctity preserved particularly in the case of buildings of historical importance; buildings which have been damaged should be repaired;

(ii) increased facilities for visits to places of worship in both countries should be granted to pilgrims on their auspicious days; the Sewadars and Khadims at such places of worship should be granted facilities for residence and adequate protection; and

(iii) the question of properties attached to these shrines should be dealt with separately from the general question of Trust properties. It was suggested by Secretary of the Ministry of the Interior that the matter should be discussed further with the Ministry of Refugees & Rehabilitation, Government of Pakistan, who are concerned with it.

2. The proposal regarding the appointment of a joint commission of the representatives of the two Governments for enquiring into matters referred to in paragraph 1 above and for making a factual survey about the condition of the important shrines and holy places after visiting them and making recommendations in the light of such enquiries and survey, was considered and it was felt that its further consideration should be deferred to a later stage.
3543. Agreed Minutes of the India - Pakistan Conference on Recovery of Abducted Persons.

New Delhi, 8 May 1954

The following were present

India:

1. Sardar Swaran Singh, Minister, Works, Housing and Supply (Leader)
2. Mr. I.S. Chopra, Joint Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi.
3. Mr. A.L. Fletcher, High Powered Officer (India).
4. Mr. V.C. Trivedi, Deputy Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs, New Delhi.
5. The Raja Rana of Jubbal, Under Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs.
7. Mr. S. Chaudhury, Under Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of External Affairs.
8. Shri C.M. Sharma, Officer on Special Duty, Central Recovery Organisation, New Delhi.
9. Pt. Thakar Das, Member Indo-Pakistan Tribunal.
10. Sardar Dildar Singh, Superintendent of Police, RAW.

Pakistan:

1. H.E. Raja Ghaznafar Ali Khan, High Commissioner for Pakistan in India (Leader).
2. Mr. M.W. Abbasi, Secretary to the Government of Pakistan, Ministry of Rehabilitation.
3. Mr. A. Hilaly, Joint Secretary to the Government of Pakistan, Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
4. Major General Abdul Rehman, Deputy High Commissioner for Pakistan in India.
5. Mr. I.U. Khan, Chief Secretary to the Government of Punjab (Pakistan) and H.P.O. Pakistan.

6. Khawaja Nasur Ullah, Deputy High Commissioner for Pakistan in India, Calcutta.

7. Mr. Iqbal Athar, Counsellor, Pakistan High Commission, New Delhi.

8. Mr. Afzal Iqbal, 2nd Secretary, Pakistan High Commission, New Delhi.

9. Mian Ghulam Haidar, Member, Indo Pakistan Tribunal and Superintendent of Police, RAW Pakistan.

10. Raja Mohammad Ashraf, Deputy Superintendent of Police, Pakistan.

At the outset both the Delegations re-affirmed the determination to recover and restore all abducted persons as speedily as possible. For the furtherance of this humanitarian cause, progress made in recovery and restoration and the problems arising there from should be reviewed from time to time and effective measures taken to complete this work as early as possible. With this end in view, every effort should be made to create an atmosphere where the woman can shed her fear-complex and prejudices created in her mind since abduction, which can be ensured only if the recovered person is in a position to think and decide her future in a free and friendly atmosphere.

During the course of the present review the following items were discussed and decisions taken:-

1. Appointment of a Joint Fact Finding Commission to ascertain the extent of outstanding work in either country. The principle and the desirability of a Fact Finding Commission was accepted, and it was decided to entrust the task to the two H.P.Os, who will be assisted each by one whole time officer not below the rank of a Deputy Commissioner, and that the assessment should be completed within six months, further, that a programme for the joint and expeditious verification of the lists should be drawn up immediately. Adequate staff should be deputed for the purpose, and it should be ensured that this assessment does not in any way retard the speedy recovery of abducted persons. The terms of reference of the Fact Finding Commission will be (i) to assess the extent of outstanding work of recovery in the two countries; and (ii) to advise the two Governments on measures to be adopted for speedy conclusion of recovery work in both the countries.

2. Amendment of the existing Recovery Act to include a penal section to punish abductors after the expiry of a specified period of amnesty. It was agreed that as the work of assessment is to be completed within six months and intense efforts are to be made over this period for recovery of abducted persons, the position should be reviewed at the end of this period and if thereupon, the two H.P.Os jointly come to the conclusion that the results had been below expectation and recommend the introduction of a penal clause to speed up recovery work, the two Governments would consider the desirability of such legislation.

3. Free movement of relatives of abducted persons from one country to the other. It was agreed that the relatives of abducted persons should be given all reasonable facilities by both the countries and actively associated in the hot and continuous pursuit of clues. Measures to overcome delaying tactics adopted by abductors and speedy implementation of the decisions of the Tribunal. It was agreed that every effort should be made to discourage delaying tactics employed by abductors at any stage of the proceedings.

5. Steps to be taken to remove procedural lacuna discovered in the implementation of paragraph 8 of the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of 11th November, 1948. It was agreed that where there was disagreement between the High Powered Officers, the High Powered Officer of the country of recovery shall refer the case to his Government for decision, under intimation to his opposite number, and, while doing so, also forward to Government any views that his opposite number may have on the matter in dispute.

6. Disparity between the definition of abducted persons in the Pakistan Recovery Ordinance and in the Indian Recovery of Abducted Persons Act. The Pakistan Government undertook to bring the definition of abducted person in their Ordinance in line with that of the Indian Act.

7. Recovery of scheduled castes women and children. The Pakistan Government agreed to issue executive instructions to all concerned for the recovery of abducted persons belonging to Hindu and Sikh scheduled castes.

8. Periodical meetings between the two H.P.Os and Recovery officials. (i) It was felt that the Members of the Tribunal should meet the High Powered Officers at least once a month, to keep them informed of their difficulties, if any. (ii) The two H.P.Os should meet at least once in two months. These meetings should also be attended by: (a) The Co-ordinating Officer of the Central Recovery Organisation, India and his counterpart. (b) Members of the Tribunal, and (c) S.Ps (Recovery) of both the countries. The purpose of these meetings will be to review the progress made in recovery and restoration and to resolve outstanding problems.

9. Transfer of abducted persons from one country to the other in special circumstance. If in a disputed case pending before the Tribunal, there is prima facie evidence of abduction and the abducted person wishes to go over to the other country, the Tribunal may allow the abducted person to be transferred to the appropriate camp in the other country and kept there pending final decision of the case.
10. Recovery of abducted persons from foreign countries. It was agreed to continue efforts to effect recovery of such persons through the good offices of the respective Government's diplomatic missions abroad.

11. The procedure for ascertaining the wishes of a recovered person. The following procedure was adopted:

   (i) The recovered person will be produced before the Tribunal, at Jullundur when recovered in India and at Lahore, when recovered in Pakistan, as soon after recovery as possible.

   (ii) If the recovered person states before the Tribunal that he or she wishes to be restored to Pakistan/India and it is established that he or she is an abducted person, the person's statement will be recorded and he or she will be sent to Pakistan/India for restoration.

   (iii) If the recovered person does not wish to go to the other country, he or she shall be transferred immediately to a special home at Jullundur or Lahore, as the case may be, to be set up for the purpose, where the person will be kept for a sufficient period, to enable his or her relations from Pakistan or India, as the case may be, and Social Workers to meet him or her.

   (iv) If, at any time during this period, the recovered person agrees to be restored, the Tribunal, which shall record his or her statement, will order accordingly.

   (v) (a) Where the recovered person does not wish to go to the other country, but is willing to visit it temporarily for a specified period, to meet relations and see the conditions in that country, he or she shall be sent under the Tribunal's orders and kept in a special home at Lahore or Jullundur, as the case may be.

   (b) On the termination of the recovered person's visit to the other country, he or she will be brought back to the special home in the country of recovery and produced without unnecessary delay before the Tribunal, which shall record his or her statement and— (i) where the person is willing to go to the other country, order restoration accordingly, and (ii) where the person does not wish to go to the other country, order release forth-with. (vi) Where an unwilling recovered person cannot be persuaded to visit the other country even for a brief period and, at the end of the specified period of stay in the special home in the country of recovery, reiterates his or her determination to stay in that country, the case shall be referred to the Central Government, who may, before finally disposing of the case, decide what further steps are necessary for creating a friendly and congenial atmosphere and direct a further stay in the Special Home or a visit to the other country, subject to such precautions as the Government may consider necessary. It was hoped that occasions for referring cases to the Central Government will be very rare.

12. Special Homes. Special Homes shall be set up in both countries and details regarding their set up should be worked out by the two H.P.Os, and should the latter not agree on any matter of detail, the case shall be referred to their respective Government.

13. It was agreed that the position may be reviewed after four months in the light of experience gained and the results achieved.

14. The decisions recorded above shall be subject to ratification by the two Governments.

3544. Agreed minutes of the meeting between Representatives of the Governments of India and Pakistan on Shrines.

New Delhi, 15 May 1955

The following were present

INDIA

1. Shri Govind Ballabh Pant, Minister for Home Affairs.
2. Shri C.C. Desai, High Commissioner for India in Pakistan.
3. Shri AN. Pai, Secretary, Ministry of Home Affairs.
4. Shri S. Dutt, Commonwealth Secretary.
5. Shri V.C. Trivedi, Director, Pakistan Division, Ministry of External Affairs.

PAKISTAN

2. His Excellency Raja Ghazanfar Ali Rhan, High Commissioner for Pakistan in India.

(1) Prevention of Border Incidents

It was agreed that all possible steps should be taken to prevent border incidents. A joint committee of representatives of the Governments of India and Pakistan and of representatives of the Governments of the two Punjabs, should evolve a plan indicating the measures to be adopted for preventing recurrence of such incidents. The Committee should submit immediately a report for the consideration of the Ministers.

(2) Shrines and Holy Places

The Ministers referred to the Agreement reached between the two Governments on this issue in July-August, 1953 and decided that a Joint Committee of the representatives of the two Governments should be formed to work out the details of implementation of the terms of this Agreement. The Committee should, inter alia, prepare a list of important shrines in West Pakistan and certain selected areas in India, the protection and preservation of which should be the special responsibility of the Government concerned. The committee should also consider the question of properties attached to these shrines and the income derived therefrom in accordance with the July-August, 1953 Agreement. The Committee should submit its report to the Ministers as early as possible and in any case within three months of its formation. If necessary, the Committee might visit the shrines concerned in the two countries.
The two Ministers agreed that all facilities and assistance should be given to pilgrims visiting shrines and holy places in the other country either as individual pilgrims or as pilgrim parties. In accordance with the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of the 9th April, 1955 on liberalisation of travel facilities between the two countries a revised passport and visa scheme was being worked out by the two Governments. Provision should be made in the scheme for free and liberal grant of travel facilities to pilgrims.

New York, October 12, 1965.

I mentioned a moment ago how, within the last months, we have twice become the victims of Pakistani aggression. The first time was in April last, when Pakistan surreptitiously moved its forces into the Rann of Kutch and later, with heavy armour, took certain posts well within our territory in that area. Our only fault there was that, while defending ourselves, we refused to allow the strife to be escalated. For the sake of peace and the establishment of good-neighbourly relations we indicated to Pakistan ourselves and through others that we were prepared to exercise the utmost restraint in spite of grave provocation. Thus once again we gave proof of our earnest desire to reduce tensions and of our willingness to resolve differences between our two countries. It was the same spirit which had moved our late Prime Minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, on 28 November, 1950 to offer Pakistan unconditionally a no war pact, an after which was renewed by Prime Minister Shastri last year. Pakistan’s aggression in the Rann of Kutch and in Kashmir this year reveals why it has consistently refused to accept an offer this nature.

It was in this larger context that we signed, on 30 June 1965, the Agreement on the Rann of Kutch, a boundary dispute born out of the spurious claims made by Pakistan. Pakistan mistook our readiness to arrive at a peaceful settlement, our self-restraint, as a sign of weakness.

Even before the ink was dry on the Pakistani signatures on this agreement, Pakistan commenced on 5 August a fresh and major aggression on India. In fact, while the Kutch Agreement was being signed, preparations were already in full swing in Pakistan to send across the old Cease-Fire Line thousands of troops in civilian disguise. Starting on 5 August 1965, this aggression continued unchecked and unabated despite the fact that India promptly took it up with Pakistan. India brought this to the attention of the United Nations Chief Military Observer, General Nimmo; the Chief Military Observer brought it to the attention of the Secretary-General; and finally, the Secretary-General himself brought it to the notice of the Security Council on 3 September Pakistan’s replies were a bland denial of responsibility, a familiar technique adopted by aggressors. Between 5 August and 14 August, we showed the utmost forbearance and self-restraint, hoping that our protest to Pakistan and the reports of the United Nations Observers about the massive assault on the Cease-Fire Line would have some effect. For ten long days while armed marauders were on the rampage, we kept hoping that good sense might prevail, that good advice might be forthcoming, and that pressures for peace might emanate from the United Nations. In the meanwhile, our brave people in Kashmir threw some of the infiltrators out and round up a good number. But as some of them were being dealt with, more armed aggressors in civilian disguise came in, wave after wave, each one equipped with hand-grenades, rifles, Sten-guns and other automatic weapons as well as material for sabotage and incendiary action. Conclusive evidence was forthcoming from these armed personnel captured by us to show that thousands more were poised for further infiltration. In order to meet this continuing aggression, our Security Forces, in an entirely defensive and limited action, moved to block the routes and plug the passes in that mountainous terrain through which the infiltrators were coming.

Clearly, the rulers of Rawalpindi, engaged in a planned campaign to subjugate our people and grab our territory in Kashmir, entertained the wild hope that the people would rise in revolt. When this hope was shattered and the people of Kashmir fought the armed marauders manfully and with valour, the rulers of Rawalpindi decided to turn their violent political gamble into a full scale military adventure. On 1 September Pakistan crossed the international boundary and the old Cease-Fire Line, causing the uprooting of thousands of people and posing a grave and imminent threat to the only line of communication between the State of Jammu and Kashmir and the rest of India. This line of communication was the road to Ladakh in North Eastern Kashmir, where the Indian troops, ever since the Chinese invasion of 1962, have safeguarded the cause of liberty at the price of eternal vigilance. Pakistan crossed into our territory with the maximum force and fanfare. A force of two regiments of heavy tanks, supported by Pakistan infantry and with air cover, penetrated twelve to fifteen miles within Indian territory, while the commander-in-Chief of Pakistan, General Musa, exhorted his troops of bite the enemy deeper in order to destroy him. On 5 September they extended the area of conflict by undertaking aerial bombing of the town of Ranbirsinghpura in Jammu and the city of Amritsar in the Punjab. It was then that India took action in self-defence.
I have gone into the matter in some detail because I want to inform this Assembly of the anatomy of this second aggression by Pakistan against India. In defence of the motherland against this treacherous aggression, our armed forces displayed rare courage and valour in the face of superior weaponry, thwarting the design of the Pakistani aggressor to grab our territory. The whole country, all my countrymen of all faiths, stood as one man in the defence of the motherland. This was the biggest disappointment to and defeat for Pakistan, which had planned its hopes on the emergence of forces of discord and disintegration in India.

Some of the representatives have expressed concern about the armed conflict between India and Pakistan. We fully share their concern, as indeed we appreciate their sincere desire for lasting peace between our two countries. This conflict is not of our seeking; at no time have we sought it. Eighteen years ago we came to the United Nations as complainant against Pakistani aggression. Our approach to the United Nations is a testimony to our faith in peaceful methods of resolving situations. In that faith we have tried every possible method to develop and maintain friendly relations with Pakistan. It was in that faith that we tried our utmost to prevent the present conflict from escalating and promptly responded to the appeal of the Secretary-General and the Security Council for an unconditional cease-fire.

As the representatives will appreciate, peaceful and friendly relations among States are not possible without a genuine respect for the rule of law, and the sovereignty and territorial integrity of one's neighbours. Three times in eighteen years Pakistan resorted to the use of force against India, contrary to its obligations under the Charter.

A lasting peace between India and Pakistan cannot be brought about by ignoring these facts, much less by appeasing the aggressor. It is, therefore, necessary for me to make my Government's position clear beyond any shadow of doubt. Legally, constitutionally, morally and on the basis of the will of the people, the State of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India Union. This is the position on which India takes its stand and will continue to do so. The people of Jammu and Kashmir, together with the fellow citizens in other parts of India are the architects of the largest democratic State in the world, a State rooted in popular will expressed through freely chosen institutions and periodic general elections, based on adult franchise. There is no better way of giving reality to the freedom of the people.

While Pakistan pursues the path of violence and aggression, while it talks to us and to the United Nations in terms of threats and while it attempts to enlarge the struggle on our northern frontiers, we cannot do any less than defend ourselves. But let Pakistan think in terms of taking covetous eyes off our territory, let Pakistan think in terms of not trying to undermine or erode the territorial integrity and secular democracy of our country, and it will find in us the friendliest and the most co-operative of neighbours ready to resolve our differences.

3546. Extract from the speech a Foreign Minister Swaran Singh while replying to the debate on foreign affairs in Rajya Sabha.

New Delhi, November 24, 1965.

ARAB COUNTRIES ATTITUDE TO INDO-PAK CONFLICT

Sir, a reference was made briefly by me and also by the Prime Minister to the Casablanca Conference of the Arab Heads of States. I would like to say that some suggestions which have been directly and indirectly made by some hon. Members in this House that the Arab world has not understood our case properly are suggestions which are not based on a correct appreciation of the situation and the attitude of the Arab countries. The Arab countries, by and large, are fully convinced that the Pakistan attempt to give the question of Jammu and Kashmir a communal colour is something which is completely untenable. Arab countries are firmly of the view that the Muslims of Kashmir are only less than five percent, or may be four percent, of the total Muslim population of India and as such they know fully well that they cannot, even taking a communal view, adopt an attitude about Kashmir which might be seemingly in the interests of those four percent Muslims and ignore the feelings, sentiments and the firm stand taken by the 9.5 or 9.6 percent of Muslims. In their general attitude also I am very happy that the Arab States do not take a communal view of international affairs. Now may be that some countries out of them may not fully understand our viewpoint and they may not be completely with us but it will be doing injustice to the Arab world if we were to say or to suggest that they look at this problem or in fact at the several other problems that face the international community from a communal angle. I know it for a fact that some Arab countries, some important Arab Press people actually questioned Jordan when she made the statement which was pro-Pakistani and against the Indian viewpoint and they urged on the Jordanian representative that his statements which are not objective may embarrass the Arab world also.

So far that is the general attitude that is taken by the Arab countries. I carefully scrutinized the statements that were made by their representatives in the General Assembly and I can say that besides the UAR, about which I made a reference in my opening speech the day before yesterday, four or five other Arab countries also made statements which were objective. They did not take sides and we should not try to misunderstand. Whenever there is any conflict or any fight going on, the immediate objective and the immediate urge before everybody is to ask both sides to stop fighting and to return to normal conditions of peace. I would like to mention in this connection the names of Lebanon, Kuwait, Algeria and Iraq. The representatives of these countries made statements which cannot be construed as against our interests. Sometimes we are very sensitive and whenever there is any mention of United Nations Resolutions, we get a little upset. We should not have that attitude. After all we are there in the United Nations and the latest United Nations Resolution is the 20th September Resolution of 1948 and 1949. So, any general statement that is made about settlement of the difference between India and Pakistan on the basis of UN Resolutions should not frighten us and we should not read into it something which is not meant or which is not intended to be read. When we are facing a conflict with another country, we should be quite objective.

I agree with the hon. Member opposite, who was repeating again and again, that we should not be complacent. Certainly we are not complacent. We would be failing in our duty if we showed complacency. I am modest and I do not say many things, but I do not think there can be any charge of complacency against us either in the handling of the internal situation, with the other countries of the world. That is the last thing that we can be accused of. We know that vigilance and very keen vigilance is the price which we must pay to safeguard and defend our freedom. That is the determination that we have to bring to bear whether it is on the home front or in the management of our affairs internally, to which the leader of the DMK made such a pointed reference. Several other hon. Members also made that reference. In the matter of our defence and in the matter of our relations with other countries, we have constantly to be on our guard because the moment is such. It is a grave occasion in our history, as the Prime Minister said yesterday, when we are faced with danger not from one but from two sides and on such an occasion to talk of complacency, I think, is not fair. I know that all of us are fully conscious of our responsibilities. Not only the Government, but also the Opposition Parties have fully co-operated in bringing about that atmosphere and I am sure that the appeal of the Prime Minister yesterday was quite in consonance with the suggestions that had been made by several hon. Members on this important question.

COMMONWEALTH

Mr. Chairman, a reference was made to the attitude of the U.K.—the U.K. press. The U.K. Government and the U.K. leaders—and in that connection some hon.
Members, both from this side as well as from the Opposition Benches, who said that this is a matter which has to be viewed with caution. I am of opinion that our attitude on our continuance or non-continuance in the Commonwealth should not be linked too much with the attitude which was shown by the British during this conflict. Now that is unfortunate and we have a just cause for feeling aggrieved that there was not just lack of understanding, but on several occasions a twist against us and in favour of Pakistan in the presentation of facts, in press reporting and even in the statements that were made at authoritative levels. That is a matter which has caused great disappointment to us. Some hon. Members have asked why we should feel disappointed because we should know that they have followed a particular policy, a policy which showed a lack of understanding of our position on Kashmir. Whereas we were, more or less, reconciled to seeing the British opposed to us in their attitude on Kashmir, I think the matter which caused great disappointment to our people and also resentment was the absolutely incorrect presentation of the facts of aggression, which has to be distinguished from their attitude on Kashmir. That attitude is there. I do not like it. I think it is not based on the facts of the situation or even on the justice of the case, but then there was absolutely no justification for not trying to understand and appreciate correctly the facts as they unfolded themselves relating to the Pakistani aggression on Jammu and Kashmir and other parts of India and it is that which has really annoyed the people more than their more or less consistent or repetitive attitude on the question of Kashmir. Now, in this case it is an easy way to explain that they did not have enough facts. Well, no responsible organ of public opinion and no responsible leaders make pronouncements based on insufficient data. Insufficient material is seldom accepted as a cause for making incorrect statements and even if any incorrect the earlier erroneous impression. I do not see any forthright statement that the earlier statements were made based on an incomplete understanding or insufficient data and now this is the correct state of affairs. I do not see any such frank admission, because that also alters the situation. So, the resentment of our people in that respect is justified and I do not go counter to that. As to whether that should by itself be enough reason for us to quit the Commonwealth is an issue which we should examine in all its aspects, including this aspect. I do not say that this aspect is not relevant, but what I do strongly urge is that it is not conclusive. There are other relevant factors which we have to take into consideration. As has been pointed out by many hon. Members, there is the African component of the Commonwealth and there is the Asian component of the Commonwealth. At the present moment, the Commonwealth is faced with a grave problem.

The problem of Rhodesia is something which may have serious repercussions on the future of the Commonwealth. Already I have seen some statements where some African leaders have given indications that the future of the Commonwealth itself may be on trial. We will have, therefore, to take careful note of all these considerations and we should take a decision after weighing all these things in their proper perspective. Our bilateral relationship between India and the U.K. will be one factor. On this bilateral relationship also, I do see some signs of change, although the reversion to normal relations is not as rapid or as full as the situation warranted.

It is my hope that these signs of change stabilize and the correct position is appreciated by the United Kingdom. Some right thinking persons there inside and outside the Government are conscious of the strength of feeling on this issue in India, and I am sure that they will take note of it and will adopt an attitude which would be one of understanding and not one based upon either incorrect data or wrong appreciation of the situation or on other extraneous considerations.

SINO-PAK COLLUSION

Sir, I would like to take this opportunity of explaining one thing which cropped up yesterday about the attitude of the Chinese on the question of Kashmir. This point was briefly touched upon at the time of the question hour and I would like to complete that picture so that the House may be aware of the changing attitude of the Chinese Government on the question of Kashmir. I made a brief reference to it while I was replying to supplementary questions, but lest in isolation that might create a wrong impression, I would like to take the House through the various stages of change of attitude adopted by the Chinese leaders have been making statements which are even more in favour of the Pakistani view than Pakistan itself. They are talking now of the right of self-determination of the people of Kashmir and of India having committed aggression and having gone back upon the pledges to the people. These are extreme statements that are made by Chinese leaders in their present postures. In that connection a joint statement issued by the Pakistan Foreign Minister and the Chinese Foreign Minister on the 7th of March 1965 went a little further towards the Pakistani side as compared to the earlier statement. The statement again, six months later, on 7th September 1965 is a complete going over to the Pakistani side, and the 7th September, as the House is aware, is the second day of our defensive action against Pakistan. These dates are important. This is a very clear proof of this collusion and conspiracy between Pakistan and China. On 7th September they talked of India having gone back on pledges given to the Kashmiri people and to Pakistan about self-determination and the like. Even six months earlier they were talking of settlement of this question in accordance with the wishes of the people in a broad way. Our case is that we have already settled it in accordance with the wishes of the people. There was a Constituent Assembly, there have been three elections, and the wishes of the people have been demonstrated in the resistance that they have shown to the aggression by Pakistan in 1947-48 and again in 1965, so it has already been settled in accordance with the wishes of the people. Even in six months in their accent, in their emphasis, they have completely changed over to the Pakistani side. Before that they were either quiet or made statements at some stages which appreciated the Indian viewpoint.

In that connection I would like to mention, Mr. Chairman, that on March 16, 1956, when our Ambassador in Peking saw Premier Chou En-lai, the latter while discussing the communique issued in Karachi by the SEATO Council expressed the view: "India had now more reason to state that not only SEATO but the United States had no reason to intervene in the Kashmir question. Moreover the Kashmir people had already expressed their will". This was the position of Premier Chou En-lai on 16th March, 1956. Then again a similar impression was gained at the meeting between the Secretary General, Indian Ministry of External Affairs, and the Chinese Premier in July 1961. Thus the Chinese Government had made us believe that they had accepted the Indian position on Kashmir without any reservation. However, in May 1962 when China started this collusion with Pakistan—and you might recall, Sir, that Pakistan and China had entered into an agreement to demarcate the boundary between Jammu and Kashmir and Sinkiang—and on that occasion when we protested to the Chinese that they had no business to enter into this agreement with Pakistan, then again they went back upon the earlier statements made by Premier Chou En-lai in 1956 and also in 1961 and said that their statements must have been misunderstood. This is the familiar Chinese pattern of going back upon their earlier statements. It will be seen from what I have said that the Chinese have been constantly changing from one position to the other on the question of Kashmir depending upon their closeness of collusion and conspiracy with Pakistan born out of the common enmity which unfortunately is entertained by the Chinese and the Pakistanis against India. I will not touch upon the other aspects of the present relationship with China and their aggressive postures because this matter has been dealt with at great length by the Prime Minister. And I have no intention to add anything to what the Prime Minister has already said on this issue.
3547. Agreement between the Chief of Army Staff of India (COAS) and Commander in Chief (CINC) of Pakistan Army for disengagement and withdrawal of Troops in pursuance of the Tashkent Declaration.

February 1, 1966.

Agreement between Chief of Army Staff India and C-IN-C Pakistan Army for Disengagement and withdrawal of Troops in Pursuance of the Tashkent Declaration.

INTRODUCTION

1. This agreement is in four parts:-

PART-I- Procedure concerning the immediate disengagement of troops and reduction of tension;

PART-II- Procedure concerning the withdrawal of troops from the occupied areas;

PART- III- Procedure concerning reduction of tension in the Eastern sector;

PART- IV- General Points.

PART I
Disengagement of Troops and Reduction of Tension

PHASE I

2. Both forces will withdraw 1,000 yards from the line of actual control in sectors as specified below:-

(a) RAJASTHAN/SIND
(b) AMRITSAR/LAHORE
(c) JAMMU/SIALKOT
(d) AKHNUR/CHHAMB(from River Chenab NW8061 to MAWA WALI KHAD NW 7770)

In all other sectors including sectors divided by the 1949 Cease Fire Line, troops will continue to hold their respective picquets as by so doing they will be automatically separated from each other. The only exception to this will be where, in hilly terrain, opposing forces are at present considered to be too close to each other, each side will withdraw to a distance to be mutually agreed upon by the local commanders not below the rank of Brigadier.

(Note:- In the AMRITSAR-LAHORE sector, this 1000 yards withdrawal will be modified so that PAKISTANI TROOPS who are actually on the WEST Bank of the BRB Canal and India troops who are on the East bank of the BRB Canal facing each other will withdraw all armed personnel off the embankment to a distance of 200 yards on each side. Unarmed personnel may, however, live, move and work in this area.

The same principle will apply in SULAIMANKI-FAZILKA sector, HUSSAINIWALA sector and KHEM KARAN sector.)

3. After the withdrawal in this phase no new defences of any kind will be prepared in occupied territory.

4. There will be no movement of armed military, para-military or police personnel either armed or unarmed within the demilitarized zone and no civilian personnel will be permitted within it by either side.

5. The period for completion of this phase will be five days.

PHASE II

6. In this phase both sides will remove and nullify all defences which will include the –

   (a) lifting of mines; and

   (b) dismantling of all other defence works, less permanent defence structures constructed of steel and cement.

The period for completing this phase will be twenty one days which will commence immediately after the five day period mentioned in para 5.

7. Working parties for this purpose will be formed by unarmed military personnel in uniform. No civilian or civil labour will be used for these tasks.

8. While every effort will be made to dismantle all defence works within the specified period, where owing to weather and other conditions it is not possible to complete this, the uncleared areas so left will be clearly marked and a sketch of these given to the other side.

9. There will be no firing of weapons or use of explosives within 10,000 metres of the line of actual control. Where explosives have to be used to dismantle defence works, this will only be done under supervision as specified later and after due intimation to the other side.

10. The present agreement affecting restriction on flights of aircraft will continue to apply.

11. To ensure that the action agreed to in PART I above is being implemented in letter and in spirit, the good offices of UNMOGIP AND UNIPOM will be utilized. In the event of a disagreement, their decision will be final and binding to both sides.

PART II

Withdrawal of Troops from Occupied Area

12. After the dismantling of defences has taken place all troops, para-military forces and armed police who are now on the other side of the international border and Cease Fire Line, will be withdrawn. This withdrawal will be completed by 25 Feb. 66. If, in any particular sector or part of a sector, the dismantling of defences has been completed earlier than the last date specified, withdrawal may be sector-wise if mutually agreed to.

13. During this withdrawal, there will be no follow up by civilians, armed military, para-military or police personnel until 25 Feb. 66. Only unarmed military personnel at a strength mutually agreed upon at the sector level may move into these unoccupied areas for normal police duties (see paragraph 16 below).

14. After troops of both sides have crossed into their own territory, the procedure which was being followed by PAKISTAN and INDIA before 5 Aug. 1965, for the security of the international border and the Cease Fire Line, will apply. Attention is drawn to Ground Rules 1961 for West Pakistan/Punjab, Rajasthan and Gujarat (INDIA).

15. It is essential that under all circumstances troops must move out of occupied areas by 25 Feb. 66, even if the dismantling of defences and lifting of mine have not been completed.

16. For immediate settlement of any points of dispute that may arise, sector commanders not below the rank of Major General will be designated by name and appointment both by INDIA and PAKISTAN who will meet to settle the differences. Telephone or R/T communication will be established between these designated sector commanders and will be permanently manned.

17. Any matter on which there is disagreement will be referred to the CinC PAKISTAN Army and COAS INDIA for their joint decision. If the issue is still not resolved by them, the good offices of Major General T MARAMBIO will be utilized and his decision will be final and binding on both sides.
PART III
Reduction of Tension in the Eastern Sector

18. The limit of withdrawal in the Eastern Sector will be left to local commanders not below the rank of Major General to mutually decide where necessary, in consultation with the civil authorities concerned. Both sides will arrive at a working agreement as soon as possible.

19. Border Security Forces consisting of armed para-military units, police or any other irregular forces of both sides will not open fire across the border under any circumstances.

20. Any encroachments across the border will be dealt with through apprehension of personnel concerned and thereafter handing them over to civil authorities.

21. In any case where firing takes place across the border it will be investigated on the spot by a joint team consisting of border personnel from both sides within 24 hours of occurrence. Brigade Commanders/DlG responsible for this investigation will be designated by name and appointment sectorwise for WEST BENGAL, ASSAM AND TRIPURA by INDIA and for the adjoining areas of EAST PAKISTAN by PAKISTAN.

22. Liaison between commanders and telephone communications at various levels will be established as given in paras 12 and 13 of the Ground Rules for INDO-EAST PAKISTAN border.

23. To ensure that the above agreement is fully implemented, quarterly meetings will take place between Army and police authorities of INDIA and PAKISTAN, alternately in INDIA and PAKISTAN, to assess the extent to which this agreement is working in practice.

24. These are a supplement to the Ground Rules formulated by the Military Sub-Committee of the Indian and Pakistan delegation on 20 Oct 1959.

PART IV
General Points

25. In order to resolve any problems that may arise in the implementation of this agreement and to further maintain friendly relations between the two countries, the CinC PAKISTAN and the COAS INDIA will meet from time to time. The meetings will be held alternately in INDIA and PAKISTAN and will be initiated by the respective Governments concerned.

26. Ground rules to implement this withdrawal agreement in the Western Sector will be formulated by Lt. Gen. BAKHTIAR RANA – PAKISTAN and Lt. Gen. ...
MINUTES OF THE MEETING BETWEEN GOC –IN-C, EASTERN COMMAND (INDIA) AND GOC 14 INF DIV (PAKISTAN) AT CALCUTTA ON 1 FEB 66.

1. The meeting took place pursuant to the agreement at DELHI between the COAS INDIA and the C-in-C PAKISTAN on 22 Jan. 66. It was reiterated that the aim of the meeting was the reduction of tension on the INDIA-EAST PAKISTAN border. The points discussed and decisions arrived at are contained in the succeeding paragraphs.

2. It was decided that all regular troops will be withdrawn from the border. The actual limit of withdrawal would be decided later. The GOC-IN-C Eastern Command stated that orders to this effect had already been issued by him.

3. All defences, other than those which existed before the emergency, will be vacated and destroyed/filled in both by regular and police forces of both sides, by 15 Feb 66.

4. It was reiterated that the Ground Rules of 1959, which are fairly comprehensive and cater for most situations, should be faithfully observed. In this regard particular reference was made to Paragraph 5 of the Ground Rules – 1959.

5. It was agreed that there would be no firing across the border by the security forces under any circumstances and encroachments across the border would be dealt with by apprehension of the persons concerned in accordance with Paragraphs 19 and 20 of the Agreement at DELHI between COAS INDIA and C-in-C PAKISTAN.

6. It was agreed that liaison would be established between IG Border INDIA and DIG EPR, EAST PAKISTAN as well as between DlsG BENGAL, ASSAM AND TIRPURA borders with the sector commanders to be nominated by the DG EPR. Communications as laid down in the Ground Rules Paragraphs 12 and 13 were to be established earliest.

7. The sector commanders were to be directed to arrive at a working agreement for all places which are generally scenes of firing incidents. In this respect the following places were particularly mentioned – LATHITILLA, BELONIA.
AND RAMGARH. Sector commanders concerned with ASSAM and TRIPURA borders were directed to meet on 8 Feb 66 at LATHITILLA at 0900 hours E PAK time. Brigade commanders concerned would be present at this meeting. Working boundaries in respect of the above mentioned places as well as for other such sensitive areas were to be agreed upon by 20 Feb 66. The sector commanders were also directed to examine the problem created by the construction of spurs and find ways and means to arrive at a solution.

8. It was also decided to recommend strongly to the respective Governments that border demarcation/ ratification/ handing over of territory should be completed expeditiously as until this is done there will always be a risk of border incidents.

9. To review the progress of the agreement, GOC 14 Inf Div (PAKISTAN) invited GOC-in-C Eastern Command and his party to visit DACCA any time at his convenience before 25 Feb 66.

3548. Statement by the External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh in the Lok Sabha while initiating the debate on Tashkent Declaration.

Mr. Speaker, Sir, I beg to move:

“That the Tashkent Declaration be taken into consideration.”

I must confess that I might have been able to give a little longer statement at this stage, but the insistence on the part of the hon. Members to ask questions about the tragic circumstances under which we lost our Prime Minister has brought vividly back to my mind - and I am sure to the mind of my colleague, Shri Chavan, also - the very tragic and touching circumstances that were prevailing at the time we heard in our own hotel about the sudden illness of our late Prime Minister.
Sir, after this lapse of time and perhaps in an atmosphere which is different when we have got our own countrymen around us, we can look back with perhaps a little critical eye and with certain objectivity. But we would not be human beings if it were expected that we would be able to face all that in the fortitude that is normally expected from us…

Mr. Speaker, Sir the circumstances and the back-ground in which the two Heads of Government of India and Pakistan, Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri and President Ayub Khan, met in Tashkent are well known. The late Prime Minister, Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri, before the House adjourned on the last occasion, did make a statement about his intention to go to Tashkent and several hon. Members belonging to different parties and different groups made some observations on that occasion. He responded to the suggestion made by the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of U.S.S.R. to go to Tashkent and he agreed to have discussions with President Ayub Khan, so that the relations between the two neighbouring countries, India and Pakistan, might improve. It is not for me to take any time on the description of those relations. I can say that, ever since Partition, in spite of our best efforts at the governmental level and even at non-governmental level, the relations between the two countries, India and Pakistan, continued to be highly strained and this culminated in a clash of armed forces. India faced the aggression and India valiantly ought to maintain the integrity and sovereignty of the country. Our thought first of all goes, when we talk of this conflict, to the valiant soldiers, the valiant airmen and the valiant members of the security forces, police and others, who fought so valiantly and so bravely to save the honour and dignity of our country and to repel the aggression. The spontaneous co-operation offered by the civilian population in actual sustenance of the efforts which had been made by the armed forces and also the psychological impression and feeling of cohesion, of unity, that was created in the country will always remain as the most heart-warming experiences of all of us.

At this stage, it is not my intention to go into the details thereof. When we went to Tashkent, the cease-fire which had been agreed upon by Pakistan and India was very uneasy, and there were violations and violations almost every day, and tens or dozens of these violations sometimes took place in the different sectors in which the two Armies were confronting each other. If my memory helps me aright, we have already lodged protests against something like 1600 or 1700 violations of the cease-fire, before the UN Observers; and there were shootings sometimes by civilians and sometimes by Army men. This was the state of affairs even after a formal declaration by the two Governments that they had accepted the cease-fire in response to the resolution and the appeals issued by the Security Council and the Secretary General of the United Nations.

There was no agreement and there was not even a purposeful discussion about the withdrawal of armed personnel. The two Armies were interlocked. I myself had occasion to go to some of the forward areas, as I am sure many hon. Members of this House must have done; we had soldiers on either side in trenches and the like, facing each other in the fields with desolation all round, and everyone in a grip of tension. This was the state of affairs when we went to Tashkent.

Before going to Tashkent, Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri had taken this august House and the country into confidence about his way of thinking. On the political question, namely, about Jammu and Kashmir, he had made a very clear statement inside the House and outside that this is an integral part of India, and the sovereignty of Jammu and Kashmir is not negotiable. About this stand, he said that this is our stand on Jammu and Kashmir. I can say without the least hesitation, and with great sense of pride that he stuck steadfast to this position all through these talks in Tashkent, and he did not budge an inch from that stand. He had said when he was there that if the other side said anything about Kashmir or suggested that this was the Pakistan attitude about Kashmir, he would not run away from that meeting or conference or he would not say that he was going to shut his ears to that; but he said in his own inimitable way that when any such question was raised, he would reiterate the Indian position in unmistakable terms, and this was the promise which he redeemed throughout these talks, and this is reflected in the Declaration itself. In the Declaration itself it is clearly mentioned that each side reiterated its position on the question of Jammu and Kashmir. Therefore, there is no doubt that this position was very clearly reiterated.

It is true that Pakistan did not accept our position just as we do not accept their attitude on this, and if I may say so, there was agreement to disagree, and this was not left to chance or speculation but was mentioned in the Declaration itself that each side reiterated its respective stand on the question of Jammu and Kashmir.

On the question of restoration of peace which was the main objective before Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri when he went there, and about which he made no secret, he very patiently, very gently, but very firmly pursued that line from the very beginning of these talks.

I was glancing through the very clear statement that he had made in the plenary session at the time when this conference opened. As the House is no doubt aware, the conference opened at Tashkent in the presence of Mr. Kosygin, Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the USSR with his other distinguished colleagues, President Ayub Khan with his Ministers and other senior members of his delegation, and we were also present at that time. It is very important to note that in the very initial stages, Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri clearly spelt out the objectives that were before him when he entered these talks and discussions which came later.
I would like to remind the House about one or two significant passages in the opening speech of Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri. I am referring to this only to show that what he said in the initial stages really he achieved towards the end when the Tashkent Declaration was actually finalized, and some of the ideas which he had projected in the initial stages were actually embodied in one form or the other in the final Declaration itself. I shall not take long over this, and I shall read out only the most important parts of his speech.

One of the things that Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri in his statement on January 4th, at the time of the plenary session said, was this:

“I know there are many unresolved differences between our two countries. Even between countries with the best of relationship there are differences and even disputes. The question which we have both to face is whether we should think of force as a method of solving them or whether we should decide and declare that force will never be used. If other countries, even those with vast resources and much deeper differences, can avoid an armed conflict and live together on the basis of peaceful coexistence, should not countries like India and Pakistan whose main problem is the economic betterment of their people give up the idea of solving any problems by recourse to arms?”

I shall not read out the subsequent parts, though they are important, but I shall refer to one other part, which was as follows:

“The foundation of good neighbourly relationship should be, as I have said, the acceptance of the policy of peaceful coexistence. In pursuance of this, action will have to be taken on several fronts”.

He even enumerated those fronts. He said:

“For instance, the atmosphere of cold war has to be removed. If through propaganda in the press or by radio, a feeling of animosity or distrust is generated and sustained between the two countries, whatever we as heads of two Governments might say, there will always exist the danger of a conflict. Our aim should be to improve the totality of the relationship between the two countries. Our trade has been shrinking; it should grow instead. Many rivers flow between India and Pakistan; instead of being a source of controversy, they could through co-operative endeavour enrich both our countries. There are many other areas of economic co-operation which given goodwill and understanding can be developed to our mutual advantage.”

I am referring to this in order to show that when Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri went, the immediate objective before him was that of reversing the trend that unfortunately bedeviled the relations between India and Pakistan. Not only was he conscious that without reversing this trend, good relations and good neighbourly relations would not develop and would not be strengthened between the two countries, but he had a positive picture before him of developing and strengthening the economic relations so that the normal relations between the two countries should develop and prosper and get strengthened.

When he said that, immediately thereafter, being a great realist, he had said:

“In saying all this, I am not trying to suggest that we could shut our eyes to the many points of difference that exist between the two countries. I do not want to enumerate them. But what I do say, however, is that all these problems must be resolved through talks and negotiations and not by resort to force. An armed conflict created more problems than it solves. It is an impediment to understanding and agreement. On the other hand, in an atmosphere of peace, we can make real progress towards solving the differences between us.”

I am sorry I read this out, but I could not find better words really in support of the basic philosophy behind the Tashkent Agreement than the words of our late Prime Minister Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri. These words he did not utter after the finalization of the agreement, but they were something prophetic in the opening address that he made.

All the essential ingredients of the Tashkent Declaration are embodied in these sentiments which were so vividly and so touchingly expressed by Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri in his opening speech.

If this Tashkent Declaration is examined in that background, I am sure that every section of this hon. House and I hope our countrymen at large will be convinced that Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri went to Tashkent with certain clear objectives before him; and we are very happy and very proud, in retrospect, to recall that he succeeded in a very large measure in reversing the trends that existed between the two countries and in generating an atmosphere of peace and in stabilising peace between our two countries. I am a realist enough, having been involved in these Indo-Pakistan problems ever since the unfortunate partition took place and Pakistan was created as a separate country; I myself had to deal with various problems, very painful problems, even when I was in Punjab, the huge problems that were created by migration of people, division of assets and the like and all the tensions that got built up. It is very easy for people sitting and taking a very theoretical view and trying to scrutinize each and every word and attempting to point out that an ‘I’ could be dotted or a ‘t’ could be crossed, but it is easily forgotten that if the objective to be achieved is the reversal of the unfortunate trend, that has to be done on a somewhat reciprocal basis. It was also his objective, which sticking to my basic objective, I am flexible enough to see the viewpoint of the other party also, because he was not a person who would like to adopt an attitude where at the end he could say, ‘I have turned down all the points that were suggested by the other side and I have achieved all that I wanted to’. That was not the spirit in which he entered these discussions.

I am mentioning this because it is very easy to criticize these things. If I alone were the author of that document, if an Indian representative had probably had to draft this Declaration, its language could be different, its content could perhaps be stronger. But let us always remember that this was a document which was evolved as a result of very elaborate discussions, and the attitude on our side - I will be quite frank in saying that - was not to take a rigid stand. We were fully aware - I and my colleague, Shri Chavan, were assisting our late Prime Minister, Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri, assisted by our advisers - we were always conscious of, and kept before us, the basic objective. Sticking to our basic objective, we did not want to take such a rigid attitude that no option was left to the other side except to say ‘no’. Also, we were anxious to achieve a solution which should be broadly acceptable not only to the two Governments or the heads of government but to the people of India and to the people of Pakistan.

Therefore, I would beg of this hon. House to scrutinize this agreement in that background also. It is not a document of which I alone am the author. It is a compromise document. You may find that there are adjustments at several occasions, adjustments which we very carefully scrutinized to meet the viewpoint of the other side.....I was submitting that there are portions in this document which can be regarded as compromise proposals or proposals which are the result of a compromise between two different viewpoints. In fact, I am happy that we were able to achieve this agreement in which either side, when they would go to their country, could project to their own people that this is something in which there is no defeat for any party, but there is this gain because both sides have gained peace and our efforts on both sides have to be directed to stabilize and strengthen that peace and to give real content to that concept of peace which is the king-pin of the Tashkent Declaration.

Having said that, I would now like to mention some of the points which have been worrying certain hon. Members of this House and even people outside. Before doing that, I would very humbly urge, and very earnestly appeal to, all sections of the House and my countrymen at large not to view this as a party issue. This is a national issue and we have to look to the interests of the country as a whole, to the interests of the people as a whole. I would appeal to hon. Members not to make political capital of it but to view it as an issue which concerns all of us.
One of the points of criticism in the statements of some hon. Members in the press and elsewhere is about the withdrawals. On this, I would not like to say much. I would only draw attention of the House to the stand that the late Prime Minister, Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri, had taken when he was approached by the UN Secretary-General for a cease-fire and for withdrawals. In response to that, Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri in his letter to the UN Secretary-General of 14 September 1965 had stated this:

“Let me make it perfectly clear, Mr. Secretary-General, that when consequent upon the cease-fire becoming effective further details are considered, we shall not agree to any disposition which will leave the door open for further infiltrations or prevent us from dealing with the infiltrations that have taken place”.

This was the criterion that he had enunciated. This he had repeated in different forms in the House, in the other place and also in his statements to the press. We have to examine whether the Tashkent Declaration, judged in the light of these statements, answers some of the doubts that have been raised. May be, the doubts had been raised about the wisdom or propriety of the withdrawals of the armed forces without appreciating the various aspects.

In this connection, without going into details, I would mention three salient points. In the Tashkent Declaration there is the agreement signed by the two Heads of government that they will not have recourse to the use of force for settlement of any dispute between the two countries. Secondly, they have agreed that there will be non-interference in the internal affairs of each other. Thirdly, that in the Jammu and Kashmir State cease-fire terms on the cease-fire line will be observed. Now, if these conditions are faithfully carried out by each side, the basic condition that Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri had made when he wrote to the Secretary-General, and which he repeated in different forms in the House and outside, is satisfied. I claim that these three conditions fully answer any doubt that may arise in the mind of any hon. Member here.

Sending of infiltrators, armed infiltrators, as was done by Pakistan and under their inspiration and guidance, when they sent people in this manner into the State of Jammu and Kashmir, that was obviously use of force. What else is use of force if sending of armed infiltrators into another territory is not use of force? This is obviously use of force.

Observance of the cease-fire terms, on the cease-fire line is another important thing. Then non-interference in international affairs. I am conscious, I know that some of the doubts that have been raised in the minds of the hon. Members and other persons with the best of intentions - I do not say anything against any individual - may be due to some of the interpretations which have been put in one sided manner by commentators or sometimes even by public men, even Ministers of Pakistan, but it will be a very unsatisfactory state of affairs if we are deflected from an objective interpretation of something which is in writing, and if we get excited about the one sided interpretation that might be put on any provision on the other side. The obvious course that is open to us at that time is to clearly state their interpretation is incorrect, and that we have taken care to clarify on various occasions. That is why I am saying that our interpretation, which is borne out by the text and by the background and by the circumstances, is quite clear and quite unambiguous that these three conditions definitely take care of infiltrators. I would like to add one thing more. I was saying that the three conditions that are embodied in the Declaration provide fully the necessary guarantees, the necessary agreement, and this definitely covers the infiltrators.

I would like to remind the hon. House that even Pakistan does not claim that they have the right to send infiltrators. They have never owned any responsibility for the infiltrators. We have always tried to pin down the responsibility on them. It is something which is not even claimed by them that by this agreement they have the right to send infiltrators. So, why should we say something which is not even suggested or claimed by them? It is quite obvious that non-use of force, observance of the cease-fire terms, non-interference in internal affairs, these three are very important points, and this is the real basis for our interpretation, which is fully borne out by the background and the circumstances, that infiltrators are covered.

About withdrawals, the occupation of Kargil, Haji Pir and Tithwal, as was stated by my colleague, Shri Chavan in the House and also by Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri on several occasions, was necessitated by the military situation that faced us. Here were these large numbers of armed infiltrators coming in. We approached Pakistan that they should own responsibility and withdraw them. They did neither of the two. We had, therefore, to defend our territory, and to prevent infiltration we moved to these places. We went to Kargil because we had to protect our lines of communication to the Ladakh area. All those actions had been taken with the object of safeguarding our integrity, safeguarding our sovereignty over these areas, and therefore, after these three conditions have been agreed upon that cease-fire terms on the cease-fire line will be observed, non-use of force, which, I have said, covers infiltrators, and non-interference in internal affairs, our continuance in those areas was a question about which we did not take a decision lightly. We were faced with this position... (interruptions)

At this stage I would say both withdrawal and the question of infiltrators are linked with the three conditions, the three important decisions that had been agreed upon between the two governments, and this explains the withdrawal.

We were in Haji Pir, we were in Kargil, we were in Tithwal. We were also in the Lahore and Sialkot sector, and Pakistan was in the Chhamb sector; they were also in Amritsar District in the Khemkaran area and they were also in certain parts in Rajasthan. So, the question that was before my colleague Shri Chavan and myself was this. Shri Chavan gave a great deal of consideration to the military aspect, and all of us had to take a decision as to whether there will be justification for us to continue to stay in Haji Pir, in Tithwal and in Kargil and to face also the situation that Pakistan continues to stay in Chhamb and in Khemkaran and Rajasthan, and we continue to stay in Sialkot and Lahore after these three conditions had been agreed upon. I may make it clear, and I am sure that any person who dispassionately examines the situation will agree with me, that after these three conditions are fulfilled, it does not stand to reason that this military confrontation between the two countries should continue, that our soldiers should continue to lie in the trenches and in the fields facing each other at a distance of 50 to 100 yards, with sniping going on all the time, with cease-fire violations and killings going on, with civilians on either side in the grip of tension and the 600 million people of India and Pakistan always under this tension.

I would most earnestly appeal to the hon. Members to view it in that background. We were fully convinced that after these agreements we must accept this disengagement and must withdraw. It was in pursuance of this very careful examination that Lal Bahadur Shastri came to the conclusion that notwithstanding the agreement on these three issues, if we continue confrontation we would not be acting in the best interests of the people of India and Pakistan and we would also be creating the impression all over the world that notwithstanding these reasonable arrangements these countries were determined to carry on the policy of confrontation and tension. So, we have to view this question of withdrawals in the background of these observations that I have made.

There are other positive features of this agreement. Some people say that this might affect our military preparedness. That is a subject on which Shri Chavan with his intimate knowledge and the way he has handled our defences at a very crucial and difficult moment is more qualified to give any further detail. He had applied his mind very carefully and he and his advisers were of the view that far from affecting our defence preparedness any lessening of tension in one area obviously adds to the defence potential. There is an arrangement here that there will be various meetings at Ministers’ level and official level so that this polarization, this unfortunate cutting of all lines of communication that has taken place as a result of the conflict and the mounting tensions these should disappear. People at various levels and directly concerned with all aspects of governmental and public life should meet each other and try to resolve the problems that require to be solved, for the two countries have to live in good neighbourly relations.

Tashkent Declaration can broadly be divided into two parts. The first part that I have touched upon gave a great deal of attention to undoing the many complications that had arisen as a result of the conflict. Diplomatic relations had virtually, though not formally, been snapped; the missions were not functioning; there was no communication between the two; over flights were not there. A number of other things have happened. There were internees and prisoners on either side. All these problems that had been thrown up as a result of the armed conflict were sought to be normalized and normal neighbourly relations between the two neighbours were sought to be restored. The central philosophy was the insistence on peace. The actions that were taken really follow from that. It is not my intention to go in greater detail. I have confined myself to certain broad aspects and a broad approach and the main structure of the Tashkent Declaration. I want to make it clear that we on our side are determined to implement very faithfully and very conscientiously this agreement which was, if I may say so, the last gift of our late Prime Minister Shastri to our country. He led the country in an admirable manner when our country faced aggression and the honour and dignity of the country was raised by the heroic manner in which we defended our country under his leadership. I am sure that the path of peace is really our normal way of thinking and it is a path which we ourselves have asked other countries to follow because we genuinely believe in the path of peace. The return to the path of peace should be a matter of satisfaction rather than a matter of criticism or concern to any section in our House.

3549. Statement by Defence Minister and Leader of the Indian Delegation to the UN General Assembly Swaran Singh in reply to the Statement of Pakistani Foreign Minister.

New York, October 10, 1967.

Members of the Assembly will have noticed that in my statement I did not refer to the India-Pakistan question. My restrainst was conditioned by the Tashkent declaration of which both India and Pakistan are signatories. It is therefore all the more regrettable that the Foreign Minister of Pakistan has once again chosen to refer to certain matters which are the internal affairs of India. I have no desire to enter into a controversy with him. I shall simply say that those charges have no basis whatsoever. I repudiate them in their entirety.

I shall now confine myself to some indications of positive approach which I see in the statement of the Foreign Minister of Pakistan. I welcome his statement. that Pakistan had agreed at Tashkent between the two countries. India and Pakistan had agreed at Tashkent that relations between the two countries should be based on the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of each other. They also agreed not to have recourse to force and to settle their disputes through peaceful means. Further, they agreed that the two sides would continue meeting both at the highest and at other levels on matters of direct concern to both countries.

Another important provision of the declaration was the agreement of the two Governments to discourage propaganda directed against each other and, in fact, to encourage propaganda which promotes the development of friendly relations between them.

Ever since the signing of the declaration, India has made several attempts to start a constructive dialogue with Pakistan. Contrary to what the Foreign Minister of Pakistan has stated, the Prime Minister of India has also affirmed more than once and profound desire to have good neighbourly relations with Pakistan. For example on 5 April 1967 my Prime Minister said;

"We have always stated our point that it is necessary, in fact it is vital, for India and Pakistan to work in co-operation on as many issues and in as many spheres as possible because we are neighbours and because we share the same problems and difficulties, and we shall certainly continue to make every effort possible to have greater understanding and goodwill with Pakistan."

On our part, I should like to repeat with all sincerity that India is willing to discuss all disputes - I repeat, all disputes with Pakistan without any preconditions. The Government of India stands by the Tashkent declaration and will patiently wait for a constructive response on the part of Pakistan.
3550. Statement by Pakistan Foreign Minister Sharif Uddin Pirzada at the UN General Assembly Session in reply to the Statement of the Leader of the Indian Delegation Swaran Singh.

New York, October 10, 1967.

The Defence Minister of India thought it necessary to reply to the statement I made this morning. I note that he did not refute anything I said on the substance of the India-Pakistan question or the situation in Jammu and Kashmir. He claims to have exercised restraint in not referring to the Kashmir dispute in the course of his statement during the general debate.

May I suggest that it was not restraint on his part which prompted that silence. Obviously India would prefer that the United nations forget Kashmir.

The people of Jammu and Kashmir have no means of making their voices heard here; it is, therefore, Pakistan that has to remind the world of the continuing denial of the right of self-determination to them.

I did not refer to anything which could even remotely be considered an internal affair of India. If India is willing to discuss all disputes - I repeat “all disputes” - with Pakistan, then why is it that India is not prepared to enter into negotiations with Pakistan for a settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute? This is a very simple question; it admits of no evasion. Let us have a forthright answer. Let the Defence Minister of India clearly tell us that India is prepared to have meaningful negotiations with Pakistan so that the dispute that has twice led to fighting speedily reaches a just and final solution. Then all arguments would cease and all polemics would become irrelevant.

It is the difference between genuine negotiations and purposeless talks that reflects the gap between our position and India’s. India claims that it is prepared for discussions on all subjects, including Kashmir.

“If each side were to insist on preconditions, would we not be entitled to say to Pakistan that it must first not only give up its point of view on Kashmir, but also, as a prior condition for talks, vacate two fifths of Indian territory in Jammu and Kashmir that it illegally occupied and still occupies?” (1423rd meeting, page 136)

The Government of India has always expressed its willingness to talk to Pakistan on any and all issues - I repeat, on any and all issues - at any place, at any time and at any level. We believe that the two countries must do everything to normalize their relations and to promote friendship between the two peoples. We believe further that India-Pakistan relations, irrespective of any dispute, must be developed peacefully, without resort to force, and that lack of agreement on any one issue should not hold up restoration of friendly relations between the two countries.

That is our basic policy, and we shall continue to persevere in it.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

I now turn to the India-Pakistan question. In the introduction to his annual report, the Secretary-General has stated:

… following last year’s promising development at Tashkent, there has been no serious effort on the part of the United Nations to contribute to an ultimate solution of the problem."

It will be recalled that in its resolution of 20 September 1965 the Security Council pledged itself to assist the parties to resolve the problem underlying the India-Pakistan war once the cease-fire and withdrawal of forces had been carried out. The Security Council resolution also called upon the parties to utilize all peaceful means to this end, including those listed in Article 33 of the Charter of the United nations.

Thanks to the welcome initiative and efforts of Chairman Kosygin at Tashkent, Pakistan and India agreed on a withdrawal of forces and to settle their disputes through peaceful means.

Withdrawals were carried out soon afterwards. A meeting was held at the level of Ministers in March 1966 to consider the steps that should be taken to resolve the disputes peacefully.

Since that time, despite continued diplomatic exchanges and correspondence between the Governments of Pakistan and India, we regret that, except for casual statements of amake-believe nature apparently made for propaganda purposes, there is no indication of India’s willingness to enter into meaningful negotiations on the issue which lies at the heart of the India-Pakistan tension.

This is the dispute which concerns the implementation of the right of self-determination of 5 million people of Jammu and Kashmir. India and Pakistan as well as the United Nations are committed to let the people of Kashmir decide their future freely in accordance with their own wishes.

While the then foreign Minister of India assured that the Government was ready to discuss all questions including Kashmir without preconditions or precommitments, the Prime Minister of India, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, publicly declared, "India has nothing to negotiate with Pakistan on Kashmir".

We have repeatedly urged the Government of India not to take any action which, instead of easing the dispute, would aggravate it. To our dismay India continues to take one step after another to consolidate its occupation of the State and to exacerbate the feelings of the Kashmiri people and the people of Pakistan.

India's measures to annex the State and intensify the repression of the people have been brought to the attention of Security Council from time to time. Sheikh Abdullah and other acknowledged leaders of the Kashmir people - Mirza Afzal Beg and Moulvi Farooq - continue to be robbed of their freedom. Tension in the State is mounting. The demand for the exercise of the right of self-determination is becoming more insistent every day. Even a few days ago police firings on peaceful demonstrators in Srinagar resulted in several deaths. According to a report published today in the Washington Post, six newspapers have been banned in India-occupied Kashmir.

An ever intensifying regime of repression and ruthless suppression of the human rights of the people is not the prescription for a reduction of tensions between India and Pakistan. If India truly desires peace, India must release the imprisoned Kashmiri leaders and create a climate of freedom in Jammu and Kashmir.

A settlement of this dispute on a just and honourable basis would transform the situation not only in South Asia but well beyond that region. Scarce resources would be used for economic development and not be frittered away on an arms race. A new era would dawn in which the two countries would be able to cooperate in promoting the cause of peace and well-being of Asia and Africa. This is an aim which is in the true interests not only of the peoples of Pakistan and India but also of the entire international community.

I would quote there the words of the President of Pakistan from his political autobiography, Friends Not Masters:

"The Assumption that disputes get resolved with the passage of time is open to serious question. Fundamental disputes affecting the life and freedom of people cannot be swept under the rug; nor do they get buried under the dust of time. They have a habit of erupting because human beings cannot be kept eternally in bondage."
"This is the point which India, and indeed the world, has to realize when dealing with the problem of the people of Jammu and Kashmir, who are engaged in a life-and-death struggle to establish their right of self-determination."

3552. Statement of Pakistan Foreign Minister in the UN General Assembly on India – Pakistan Relations.

New York, October 4, 1968.

In our own region also, there are issues which continue to disturb the peace and welfare of populations numbering more than six hundred million people. I refer to the relations between India and Pakistan.

It should be obvious through the experience of the last twenty one years that these relations will remain impaired unless there is a just and honourable settlement of the dispute concerning the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

Pakistan seeks nothing more of India than that India should fulfil the pledge which it solemnly gave to Pakistan, to the people of Kashmir and to the Security Council that it would let the people of Kashmir decide their own future by means of a plebiscite to be held under United Nations auspices. We seek nothing more than that India should cooperate in a settlement of the Kashmir dispute which would be in harmony with the principles of the international agreement concluded between India and Pakistan when they jointly accepted the UNCIP Resolutions of 1948 and 1849. We seek nothing more than that India should refrain from a unilateral repudiation of an international agreement.

This is not the occasion for me to recapitulate the history of the last twenty one years. Suffice it to say that the war in September 1965 was stopped only when the Security Council adopted Resolution No. 211 of 20 September 1965, which contemplated a settlement of the problem – that is, the Kashmir – underlying the conflict. In that Resolution, the Council committed itself to assist in the settlement. The cease-fire was followed by a mutual withdrawal of forces, when by issuing the Tashkent Declaration, the two countries solemnly pledged themselves to settle all disputes by peaceful means.

In the two and a half years which have since elapsed, Pakistan has repeatedly invited India to enter into meaningful negotiations on the Kashmir dispute. India has persistently refused to accept this invitation. Instead, the Indian leaders have now taken to asserting that the State of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India and that India’s sovereignty over Kashmir is not negotiable.

As a peace-loving country, Pakistan is anxious to solve this dispute with India in a peaceful manner and is prepared to enter into negotiations with India on how best to allow the people of Jammu and Kashmir to exercise their right of self-determination in which they could either decide to accede to India or to join Pakistan. Inside the State of Jammu and Kashmir discontent is increasing and the people of the State under the leadership of Sheikh Abdullah, are agitating for their legitimate right of self-determination.

Already violence has taken place but Sheikh Abdullah has thrown his weight against this. How long will he be able control the people? How long will the people be able to contain their anger? Any time an explosion can take place which would endanger peace once again. The position now being adopted by the Government of India in respect of Jammu and Kashmir is a colonialist position. It is suppressing the people of Jammu and Kashmir by force and denying them their right by the exercise of might. Where there is repression, there would be revolt. Where there is subjugation, there would be fight for freedom. The era of colonialism is over. It is now clear to all except to those who have shut their eyes deliberately, that the people of Jammu and Kashmir do not wish to be a part of India. This is borne out by all objective evidence from the State. In the bye-elections to the so called Legislative Assembly held in August in Srinagar, 95% of the electorate responded to the call of Sheikh Abdullah and boycotted the poll. The Government of Pakistan is pledged to support the right of self-determination of the people of Jammu and Kashmir and this pledge we shall fulfil come what may. The Security Council has been seized of the dispute since 1948 and in November 1965, it renewed its pledge that it would take up the matter after the cease fire had been implemented. I would remind the Security Council especially the permanent members of this commitment, especially as India has not responded to Pakistan’s offer of bilateral negotiations for the settlement of the dispute. Should such a response be forthcoming from India a new chapter would be opened in the troubled history of South Asia. The scarce resources of the two countries that at present are being squandered on an arms race would be spent on projects of welfare and peace.

The climate of relations between Pakistan and India has also been affected adversely by the treatment meted out to the Muslim minority in India by the majority community.

It is with considerable sorrow and reluctance that I turn to this subject, which nevertheless is appropriate both as to time and place. This is the International year for Human Rights was proclaimed and where the convenants of Human rights took shape.
There exists an agreement between Pakistan and India, known as the Liaquat Nehru pact of 1950 which was registered with the United Nations Secretariat under Article 102 of the Charter. It provides for the safeguarding of the life and property of the minorities in the two countries as the joint concern of the two Governments.

It is, however, with anguish that we in Pakistan have observed that the anti-Muslim riots have become a common feature of life in India. Some prominent Indian leaders have publicly acknowledged that incidents of communal violence against Muslims in India have shown an upward trend. In these riots thousands of Muslim men, women, and even children have been killed, their properties looted, and their homes destroyed and other brutalities perpetrated which are too horrible to recount. In the first six months of this year, the Indian press has reported 28 major riots in various parts of India which resulted in large scale killing of Muslims and loss of their property. What is more regrettable is that many of these riots are carefully organized by certain elements in Indian political life. It is generally admitted and even by the Government of India, that local officers have not taken effective measures to prevent riots or to stop them in time before serious damage has been done, nor is punishment meted out to those who are guilty. Some Indian observers have pointed out that not a single prosecution has succeeded in riot cases although thousands have been killed.

Pakistan sincerely hopes that as a party to the Liaquat Nehru Pact, India would fulfill its obligations and deal resolutely and effectively with the forces of religious intolerance so that constitutional right to life, liberty and freedom from fear. My Government expects Government of India to take energetic and effective measures in discharging their elementary duty towards their nationals of Muslim faith, because if these killings and persecution of Muslims continue, a serious situation would be created between the two countries and my Government may have to seek recourse to whatever international procedures are appropriate.

Another matter of serious concern in India Pakistan relations is the construction of a barrage known as the Farakha Barrage by India on the international river Ganges at a site eleven miles upstream from the border of the Eastern part of Pakistan. This project, which was begun by India in 1960 in spite of Pakistan’s protests is scheduled for completion by 1970.

The barrage has been characterized in the 1965-66 Indian Budget as a project of “strategic and international importance” and is designed to divert the waters of the mainstream of the Ganges river through a canal to another channel flowing entirely through India. The project is estimated by impartial experts to be fraught with the danger of grave injury to the economy of east Pakistan and to the regime of the rivers of that province. In the dry season, that is March to May, the Barrage, will become so low in its course through East Pakistan that hundreds of thousands of acres of land will lose their water supply and become waste land. Shortage of water will lead to the sitting of the river channel thereby increasing flood hazards, besides other multiple harmful effects. In order to find a just and amicable solution of the problem, Pakistan has ever since the project was framed proposed to India bilateral discussions at the technical as well as political levels with a view to arriving at agreement on the basis of the recognized rules of international law on the equitable sharing of the waters of international rivers and the right of upper and lower riparians. Seventeen years of effort have resulted in nothing more than five meetings of the technical level. Political discussions with a view to a settlement have yet to take place.

My Government is strongly of the view that the time has come for substantive negotiations and that the matter brooks no further delay. The Government of Pakistan is ready to enter into such negotiations with the Government of India.
If this is not acceptable to the Indian Government, we are ready to have recourse to any of the other methods of pacific settlement of disputes mentioned in Article 33 of the United Nations Charter, namely enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, reference to regional agencies or arrangements or other peaceful means of their own choice by India and Pakistan.

In 1960 Pakistan and India were able to reach an agreement on the equitable apportionment of the waters of the Indus River Basin through the good offices of the World Bank. We see no reason why an equitable sharing of the waters of the Ganga river should also not be worked out with the fruitful cooperation of the same international Agency.

I sincerely hope that this matter would be settled on an amicable basis and that Pakistan would not have to knock at the doors of international forums for a settlement. India’s stand that the lower riparian has no say in the disposal of the water resources of an international river is untenable. If it goes unchallenged, it would mean the establishment of a new precedent contrary to International Law. Its repercussions would extend beyond the region of the Indo-Pakistan sub-continent. The matter should therefore be of first importance to all States which have International Rivers flowing through their territories.

Once again the distinguished Foreign Minister of Pakistan has tried to use this forum to malign India and to mislead this Assembly. His so-called right of reply contains nothing new but follows the usual pattern of anti-Indian propaganda. I regret the necessity to keep the Assembly in session at this late hour, but I am obliged to offer a few clarifications.

On the question of the Farakka barrage I have personally made the position of the Government of India clear in my statement on Friday October 4. Farakka barrage is a vital project affecting the lives of nearly 180 million people and the future of our largest port and its great industrial hinterland. The attempt of Pakistan to internationalise the issue and thus delay its completion cannot succeed. Nevertheless the Government of India, out of its good-will for the welfare of a close neighbour, is prepared to continue discussions at appropriate levels to reach accommodation with Pakistan in a cooperative spirit.

Once again the distinguished Foreign Minister of Pakistan has had the temerity to refer to Muslim citizens of India. We regret the false allegations he has made and the animus that seems to motivate his statement. On Friday last I had indicated in some detail the honoured place which citizens of Muslim faith have in India. I wish the same could be said of the fate of minorities in Pakistan. I would once again plead with the distinguished Foreign talking about Indian citizens of the Muslim faith could be utilized better if he were to devote himself with equal energy to the welfare of the minorities in his own country. The Government of India is fully conscious of its responsibilities in regard to every section of the Indian society. It is the constant effort of the Union and the State Governments to improve the economic and social conditions of every Indian citizens, irrespective of race, religion or creed.

Mr. President, I am sure that the repetition of false charges against India in regard to the Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir is not going to serve the cause of peace and friendship between India and Pakistan. The more the distinguished Foreign Minister of Pakistan belabours this problem in this forum the more he finds it difficult to speak with any sense of proportion in regard to India. He has tried to prove today that Pakistan did not commit aggression against the Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir. We know the facts much better than he seems to profess, but it is not necessary to take our word for it. I will quote the cautions but measure words of Sir Owen Dixon, a distinguished jurist of Australia who was then the U.N. Representative for India and Pakistan. He said and I quote:-

3553. Speech of External Affairs Minister Bali Ram Bhagat in the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 11, 1968.
"Upon a number of occasions in the course of the period beginning with the reference on January 1 1948 of the Kashmir dispute to the Security Council, India had advanced not only the contention to which I have already referred that Pakistan was an aggressor, but the further contention that this should be declared. The Prime Minister of India at an early stage of the meeting, made the same contention and he referred to it repeatedly during the conference. I took up the positions, first that the Security Council had not made such a declaration, secondly that I have neither been commissioned to make nor had I made any judicial investigation of the issue, but thirdly that, without going into the causes or reasons why it happened, which presumably formed part of the history of the sub-continent, I was prepared to adopt the view that when the frontier of the state of Jammu and Kashmir was crossed, on I believe 20th October, 1947, by hostile elements, it was contrary to international laws and that when, in May 1948, as I believe, units of the regular Pakistan forces moved into the territory of the state, that too was inconsistent with international law."

The Security Council resolutions to which the distinguished Foreign Minister of Pakistan has referred could not be implemented and are now dead and obsolete because Pakistan chose not to fulfil its obligations in accordance with those resolutions. What is the concrete proof of this non-fulfilment of its obligations by Pakistan? It is the continued occupation of two-fifths of the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir by Pakistan right till this moment.

There is no doubt at all about the constitutional and legal position of the state of Jammu and Kashmir. Yesterday, the distinguished representative of Pakistan explained at some length the arrangements made in 1947 by the British Government for the transfer of power in India. Under the same arrangements provision was made for the accession of what was then called Indian states to either India or Pakistan. In consonance with the statute passed by the British Parliament the state of Jammu and Kashmir acceded in the proper form to the then dominion of India. Moreover, Mr. President, the will of the people of Jammu and Kashmir has been expressed several times in the last 20 years through the democratic process. This is not all. Twice when Pakistan tried to seize the state by force the people rebuffed the aggressions and manifested their unalterable determination to remain with India by shedding their blood for the cause. The state of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India by due constitutional process and by the will of the people and will remain so. The Government of Pakistan continues to practice disruptive policies towards India. Time and again it attempts to tamper with the loyalty of our people and to subvert the authority of our Government. These attempts will be rebuffed as they have been in the past.
In conclusion, Mr. President, I would like to state the position of my Government about discussion with Pakistan. The distinguished Foreign Minister of Pakistan has referred to the Tashkent Agreement and affirmed his country's desire to solve all outstanding problems between India and Pakistan. On behalf of the Government of India I reiterate our desire to normalize our relations with Pakistan and to enter into discussions on all problems between us.

3554. Speech of Leader of the Pakistan Delegation Sher Ali Khan in the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 2, 1969.

The representative of India again repeated the statement that India is prepared to hold talks with Pakistan without any pre-conditions. If that statement is sincerely meant, then it means that India is prepared to enter into negotiations with Pakistan for the settlement for all outstanding disputes between India and Pakistan, including that of Jammu & Kashmir.

Let the respected Foreign Minister of India come to this rostrum and confirm that understanding. If he does so he will not find Pakistan unresponsive. All we ask is nothing more than what Gandhi and the late Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru pledged. I quote:

“India will be free on the fifteenth of August”. What of Kashmir? “That will depend on the people of Kashmir”, Gandhi replied. They all wanted to know whether Kashmir would join the Indian Union or Pakistan. “That, again”, answered Gandhi, “should be decided by the will of the Kashmiris.”

I give another quotation of Gandhi. This dated August 1947:

“...the British having quit India, the people in the States are their own masters and the Kashmiris must therefore decide, without any coercion or show of it from within or without, to which union—India or Pakistan—they should belong.”

If those two quotations are from Gandhi. I now give a quotation from Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru from a broadcast to the nation over All India Radio on 3 November 1947:

“We have declared that the fate of Kashmir is ultimately to be decided by the people. That pledge we have given not only to the people of Kashmir but to the world. We will not, and cannot, back out of it.”

The representative of India referred to the treatment of minorities in Pakistan. Let India not forget one thing: that no religious riots against the Hindu minority occur in Pakistan.

Now coming to bilateral matters, if those matters are settled amicably, they remain bilateral; but if one party remains obdurate, then international attention has to be drawn to them. The United Nations has laid down that the future of Kashmir has to be decided by the will of the people. The Foreign Minister of India asked: “why did Pakistan not withdraw its forces from Kashmir?” The answer is given in the UNCIP resolution of 13 August 1948. The forces of both India and Pakistan have to be withdrawn from Kashmir in a synchronized sequence.

I should like to remind the Foreign Minister of India that India accepted that resolution and pledged to abide by it. If India does not show any willingness to withdraw its forces, how can Pakistan unilaterally withdraw its forces, and leave the whole of Jammu and Kashmir to be occupied by India?

As regards the remarks of the Indian representative pertaining to the dispute over sharing the waters of the international river Ganges, I have a few self-evident points to make.

First, the Ganges is an international river, by virtue of its course passing through the territories of Pakistan and India. Why would we be concerned with the river if its did not cross our territory? It is not an Indian river.

Second, the usage of the waters of that river cannot be static, either in the case of Pakistan or that of India. Both countries would continue to require more water, according to plans of increased cultivation. Hence the need for an agreed formula for sharing those waters.

Third, no formula for sharing the waters of the Ganges will be equitable which fixes the entitlement of one side at a static figure for all time to come, leaving all residual rights to the other side. The very nature of the Ganges dispute is such that its solution has to be based on a mutual understanding that is capable of adjustment with the passage of time. We are ready to enter into negotiations with India at the political level to reach such an understanding. It is for India now to reciprocate.

The Foreign Minister of India said this morning that there is a “unfortunate attempt by some interested parties to give religious overtones to a problem which is essentially political”. Our reaction to that remark is one of deep regret. The Middle East problem is, no doubt, political; but the burning of the holy Al Aqsa Mosque is not purely or entirely a matter of secular concern. Who can deny its religious overtones? The sacrilege has evoked the deepest feelings of anguish among the followers of Islam throughout the world, in that it involves what they consider most sacred to their faith. It was that anguish which brought the representatives of twenty-five Muslim countries together here to request the Security Council to consider that situation and which later culminated in the convening of the Islamic Summit Conference at Rabat. Pakistan has consistently declared that the issue of Jerusalem is of universal concern.

We were the first to welcome the participation of the representatives non-Muslim countries, including India, in the debate in the Security Council on the burning of the Al Aqsa Mosque, We welcome again from this rostrum their continued interest in the crucial issue of Jerusalem and pay them tribute for their stand of principle on the question.

I am thankful to the Foreign Minister of India for offering the hand of friendship. I am ready to grasp it. Only let him tell me that we can sit down and negotiate all our outstanding disputes, including Jammu and Kashmir and Farakka, and devise effective measures of protection for our respective minorities. Let there be no exceptions, no conditions, no qualifications and no reservations. I am prepared to grasp his hand on those conditions.
Speech of External Affairs Minister Swaran Singh at the UN General Assembly replying to the speech of Pakistan’s Representative.

"Mr. President

"I shall have another occasion to compliment you on your election and at the moment I shall briefly deal with the distortions presented by the distinguished Home Minister of Pakistan this afternoon in discussing India-Pakistan relations and answer some of the calumnies he has uttered against my country.

"Our basic approach to all problems between India and Pakistan is that they must be discussed, negotiated and eventually settled by the representatives of the two countries. There should be no pro-conditions and there should be no insistence that one side must accept in advance the priorities of the other side. It was in this spirit that we signed the Tashkent Declaration and I regret that, in spite of all our efforts to carry that the terms of this Declaration, we have always met with negative response from Pakistan. We did more. We removed unilaterally all restrictions on trade with Pakistan: she continued to ban all trade with India with the result that these two neighbouring countries have no trade with each other. We suggested negotiations on the properties seized by each side during the 1965 conflict; instead of entering into negotiations Pakistan sold most of the Indian properties form her benefit in total violation of the existing agreements and of international law. I should add that the Indian properties in Pakistan were many times more in value than the Pakistan properties in India. We are ready to open up travel facilities and trade routes to and through Pakistan, but Pakistan would have none of it. We proposed, not once or twice but several times, the signing of a No-war Declaration between the two countries, but Pakistan rejected our proposal every time. However, we continue to remain patient and hopeful. Perhaps, a day will soon come when the rulers of Pakistan will realize that these two countries which have so much in common, must live in a spirit of cooperation to the benefit of both. These rulers may even draw from the lesson of modern trends from Europe and elsewhere.

"Mr. President, since I am merely exercising my right of reply, I shall not deal in detail with the merits of the various problems raised by the representative of Pakistan but would confine myself to two or three specific issues.

"On Kashmir, the basic issues are will known to all member-states and our position remains unchanged. However, the distinguished Home Minister of Pakistan could not resist the temptation of giving a distorted picture. It is not true that the partition of the sub-continent was done as a result of any application of the principle of self-determination. It was done, as should be known to the distinguished Minister of Pakistan, as a result of a political settlement between the Indian national Congress, the Muslim League and the British Government.
A very different might have been the story if all the Indians had voted on this issue before the British left. Secondly, it is untrue to say that we did not in our original complaint to the security Council, which has still not been disposed of, claim Kashmir as an integral part of India. We said repeatedly that accession of Kashmir was complete both in law and in form. The third distortion the distinguished representative of Pakistan mentioned was that the public opinion in Kashmir has not been consulted. It has been repeatedly consulted. It is, however, true that unfortunately some Kashmiris could not exercise their franchise as they were not allowed to participate from the Pakistan-occupied part of Kashmir. All these facts should be known to the distinguished representative of Pakistan. He then made the ridiculous comparison between Kashmir and Namibia, the Portuguese possessions and so on. These distortions and abusive charges do not deserve any detailed answer. The world can judge our record on colonialism as against any other country's. Besides, I do not suppose it is the intention of Pakistan's delegation to suggest that an integral part of a country should be separated by a plebiscite. I should not like to think what will even happen to East Pakistan or in other parts even in West Pakistan.

*In any event all these considerations were fully known before the Tashkent Declaration was signed both by Pakistan and India and this Declarations Pakistan has refused to honour soon after she signed it.

*Pakistan occupies by force a large part of this Indian State of Kashmir, illegally barter away a part of it, and commits aggression on India to take more. This must end. Let me quote from a recent statement by Mr. Bhutto, who was the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, at that time,. I am quoting from the Dawn, an important newspaper in Pakistan and like all Pakistani papers, is under the control and guidance of the Pakistani military regime. The Dawn of 8th September of this year, reports: 'Mr. Bhutto said he was ready to own the charge that he engineered the 1965 was against India. If Quad-i-Azam (that is Mr. Jinnah, the founder of Pakistan and the Father of the Nation) was wrong in starting the first war against India in Kashmir, then I am equally wrong, he added.

*The distinguished delegate would no doubt realize that it is this attitude, those admissions, those wars against India that have brought about a basic change on the Kashmir question. I can only hope that the distinguished Home Minister of Pakistan would also realize as much. So, while we remain ready to discuss all matters including Kashmir, all that has happened over the last 24 years cannot but be taken into account.

*Secondly, the distinguished representative of Pakistan spoke about the regrettable communal riots in India and the alleged harassments, if not something much worse, of the minorities in India. Now, Mr. President, there are many minorities in India. India is a vast country of over 550 million people and it is our pride and glory that we manage to live together in spite of occasional friction and disturbances. It would be totally wrong to describe all these incidents as communal; not will it be right to leave the impression that in these riots the victims belong only to one community. We regret and deeply deplore - as indeed has been done by all, I repeat all, the political parties in India both inside and outside the parliament - these riots, which have their origin in complex social, economic and political factors. The foreigners would naturally find it difficult to understand and appreciate these fully, but we, in India, have to deal with them courageously, patiently and with every means at our disposal. We continue to do so. We regret that Pakistan has launched a systematic campaign in many garbs to exploit these tragic events which occurred four months ago for her narrow political ends. If she were really concerned about these incidents, she could mute her radio broadcasts and abate her propaganda which continually incite violence and communal passions. She could in addition follow a more human policy towards her own minorities, 200,000 of whom have fled to India this year alone. This is ten times the average figure of the five previous years.

*There is still another aspect. The Indian Muslims number 60 million as was mentioned by the distinguished Home Minister of Pakistan nearly one-third of the total population of the U.S.A. or the U.S.S.R. and many times the population of many member-states represented here. They form the third largest Muslim community in any country of the world. This significant and numerous community enjoys all the rights as Indian citizens and occupy respectable and responsible positions in our national life and contribute effectively to it. They do not need Pakistan as their advocate - In fact they find such advocacy a source of confusion and embarrassment. They also do not fail to note that there is only one other state with its status law which the distinguished Ambassador of the U.A.R. drew our attention yesterday which also claims its co-religionists as its nationals. I shall not elaborate on this any more than I shall elaborate on the plight of the minorities in Pakistan under a military regime.

*In the circumstances, it appears to us that the offer of Pakistan for an independent investigation on the conditions of minorities in Pakistan is meaningless. Those Hindus who remain in Pakistan are so demoralized and victimize that they cannot be expected to give their views freely and frankly without incurring the wrath of a military regime with all its consequences. Let it not be forgotten, there is no way in Pakistan of voicing the grievances of these unfortunate people. There is no parliament. The press and other media are controlled by the Government and public meetings are not allowed to concern themselves with the conditions of minorities. Those who are interested in the rights of man have merely to look at Pakistan's Constitution which in itself is a travesty of human rights and dignity, and I am sure that they would feel some concern for the unending stream of refugees from Pakistan. It is not without significance that a Commission that was set up by President Ayub Khan to report on the conditions of the minorities never made its report. At least it was never made public, nor do we know whether it was ever prepared. In this context, the distinguished representatives may be interested in reading a report entitled "Hindus Find Life 'Shaky' in Pakistan" appearing in the 'Washington Post', of July 14, 1970. Such reports could be multiplied.

"Very different is the situation in India. Free Press, free travel and free association prevail to a point where there is genuine concern in certain quarters whether this wide and intense freedom does not at times make possible for some elements to create unnecessary trouble. Nonetheless, we think it is better to run the risk of such abuses of these fundamental freedoms, rather than try to curb them. The foreign correspondents of news media can travel freely in India and do report regularly on happenings in the country. For instance, in a dispatch to the 'Christian Science Monitor' of 16th July there is a very full discussion of the problem of minorities in India. The facts of all the communal incidents are well known and no outside investigation is necessary or desirable. All that I can say is that the international community may be interested in helping the Government of Pakistan in bringing about a degree of democracy in that country which might at last relieve the agonies of these unfortunate people and pave the way for better Indo-Pakistan relations. Lastly, Mr. President, is it not significant that in spite of Pakistan's concern for Indian Muslims, unlike the religious minorities in Pakistan who are migrating in large numbers to India, they find the conditions in India such as to enable them to play their part in India and they do not show any trend to leave India and cross over to Pakistan?

"Thirdly, on our negotiations with Pakistan on Farakka Barrage, the distinguished Home Minister of Pakistan gave his view. This problem is a technical and practical one. It is not a juridical problem. The basic practical aspect of the problem is that India needs every drop of water she can find in the Ganges River system while in East Pakistan, there is too much water, periodic floods and widespread water-logging. Nonetheless, if it is established that in certain seasons and in certain limited areas, East Pakistan vitally needs some water from this Indian river, then in a spirit of cooperation we shall do whatever we can to help. This is what the engineers on both sides are working out and we hope that their efforts will succeed. This is also the spirit of our assurance to Pakistan, a reference to which was made by the distinguished Home Minister of Pakistan.

"In conclusion, Mr. President, I wonder why the distinguished representative of Pakistan bring up these bilateral issues to the United Nations year after year, in season or out of season. Their excuse is that this forum should be used for explaining to the members-states the current situation between the two neighbouring countries. To us these attempts seem very much like an abuse and a waste of time - particularly as India is always ready, indeed eager, to sit with Pakistan and negotiate all the problems with a sincere desire to solve them. May I in this context quote Article 4 of the Tashkent Declaration - a Declaration which both India and Pakistan subscribed to? It reads:

"The Prime Minister of India and the President of Pakistan have agreed that both sides will discourage any propaganda directed against the other country, and will encourage propaganda which promotes the development of friendly relations between the two countries.

"We have not yet recovered from the tragic shock of President Nasser's death yesterday and yet attempts are being made to create discord between the two neighbouring countries who should, by all logic and in all circumstances, live in peace and cooperation. This is a great pity."

New Delhi, 28 August 1973

Desirous of solving the humanitarian problems resulting from the conflict of 1971 and thus enabling the vast majority of human beings referred to in the Joint Indo-Bangladesh Declaration to go to their respective countries, India and Pakistan have reached the following agreement:

(i) The immediate implementation of the solution of these humanitarian problems is without prejudice to the respective positions of the Parties concerned relating to the case of 195 prisoners of war referred to in clauses (vi) and (vii) of this paragraph;

(ii) Subject to clause (i) repatriation of all Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees will commence from the utmost despatch as soon as logistic arrangements are completed and from a date to be settled by mutual agreement;

(iii) Simultaneously, the repatriation of all Bangalees in Pakistan, and all Pakistanis in Bangladesh referred to in clause (v) below, to their respective countries will commence;
(iv) In the matter of repatriation of all categories of persons the principle of simultaneity will be observed throughout as far as possible;

(v) Without prejudice to the respective positions of Bangladesh and Pakistan on the question of non-Bangalees, who are stated to have "opted for repatriation to Pakistan", the Government of Pakistan guided by considerations of humanity, agrees, initially, to receive a substantial number of such non-Bangalees from Bangladesh. It is further agreed that the Prime Ministers of Bangladesh and Pakistan or their designated representatives will thereafter meet to decide what additional number of persons, who may wish to migrate to Pakistan, may be permitted to do so. Bangladesh has made it clear that it will participate in such a meeting only on the basis of sovereign equality;

(vi) Bangladesh agrees that no trials of the 195 prisoners of war shall take place during the entire period of repatriation and that pending the settlement envisaged in clause (vii) below these prisoners of war shall remain in India;

(vii) On completion of repatriation of Pakistan prisoners of war and civilian internees in India; Bangalees in Pakistan and Pakistanis in Bangladesh referred to in clause (v) above, or earlier, if they so agree, Bangladesh, India and Pakistan will discuss and settle the question of 195 prisoners of war. Bangladesh has made it clear that it can participate in such a meeting only on the basis of sovereign equality.

The Special representatives are confident that the completion of repatriation provided for in this Agreement would make a signal contribution to the promotion of reconciliation in the sub-continent and create an atmosphere favorable to a constructive outcome of the meeting of the three countries;

(viii) The time schedule for the completion of repatriation of the Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees from India, the Bangalees from Pakistan and the Pakistanis referred to in clause (v) above from Bangladesh, will be worked out by India in consultation with Bangladesh and Pakistan, as the case may be. The Government of India will make the arrangements for the Pakistani prisoners of war and civilian internees who are to be repatriated to Pakistan. The Government of Pakistan will make logistic arrangements within its territory up to agreed points of exit for the repatriation of Bangladesh nationals to Bangladesh. The Government of Bangladesh will make necessary arrangements for the transport of these persons from such agreed points of exit to Bangladesh. The Government of Bangladesh will make logistic arrangements within its territory upto agreed points of exit for the movement of the Pakistanis referred to in clause (v) above who will go to Pakistan. The Government of Pakistan will make necessary arrangements for the transport of these persons from such agreed points of exit to Pakistan. In making logistic arrangements the Governments concerned may seek the assistance of international humanitarian organisations and others;

(ix) For the purpose of facilitating the repatriation provided for in this Agreement, the representatives of the Swiss Federal Government and any international humanitarian organisation entrusted with this task shall have unrestricted access at all times to Bengalees in Pakistan and to Pakistanis in Bangladesh referred to in clause (v) above. The Government of Bangladesh and the Government of Pakistan will provide all assistance and facilities to such representatives in this regard including facilities for adequate publicity for the benefit of the persons entitled to repatriation under this Agreement;

(x) All persons to be repatriated in accordance with this Agreement will be treated with humanity and consideration.

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan have concurred in this Agreement. The Special Representative of the Prime Minister of India, having consulted the Government of Bangladesh has also conveyed the concurrence of Bangladesh Government in this Agreement.

Statement by Minister of External Affairs in Parliament on Talks between India and Pakistan for normalization of relations between the two countries.

New Delhi, May 18, 1976.

As the house is aware, ever since the Simla Agreement was signed in July 1972, it has been the Government Of India's policy that, in keeping with the Agreement, the severed links between India and Pakistan should be restored and the relations between the two countries normalized. During this period, many problems have indeed been resolved. The telecommunications and postal services between the two countries were established and a visa agreement was signed to facilitate travel from Pakistan to India and vice versa. In January 1975, agreements were also reached between the two Governments on shipping and trade. However, some other issues from the Simla Agreement remained unresolved; these were air and land communications and the restoration of diplomatic relations. Two meetings between official delegations were held in November 1974 and May 1975 to discuss questions arising out of Pakistan's complaints with the International Civil Aviation Organisation but no agreement could be reached.

2. On the 27th March, Prime Minister of Pakistan, in a letter to our Prime Minister, indicated that Pakistan would be prepared to withdraw its case from the International Civil Aviation Organisation. As the House is aware, India had previously urged such a course in order that the process of normalization could maintain its momentum and the Simla Agreement could be fulfilled. Consistent with our firm believe that the Simla Agreement enjoins us to work for the establishment of durable peace and harmonious bilateral relations, our Prime Minister, in her reply of 11th April, suggested that the Foreign Secretaries of the two countries should meet and discuss pending matters such as air-links over flights, resumption of rail and road communications and also the restoration of the severed diplomatic relations between India and Pakistan. The Prime Minister of Pakistan accepted these suggestions in his letter of 18th April. As a result the two Foreign Secretaries arranged for the delegations to meet in Islamabad between the 12th and the 14th May.

3. After the meetings, a Joint Statement was issued, which was simultaneously released to the press in the two capitals. The two governments have also agreed to make public the three letters exchanged between the two Prime Ministers. I am placing texts of the Joint Statement and letters on the Table of the House.*

* Document Nos.879, 880, 881 and 883.
4. The members will observe that the Joint Statement embodies and agreement to restore all the severed links between the two countries. In respect of some of these items, further technical level contacts may be necessary to work out the detailed arrangements for the resumption of the links. It has subsequently been agreed that this entire package embodied in the Joint Statement would be put into effect more or less simultaneously between the 17th July and the 24th July, 1976.

5. I am confident that these positive developments will be welcomed by the House, the people of our two countries as also the friends of our two countries in the region and world at large. Both countries must recognize the logic of their interdependence and the need for cooperative relations as between neighbours. If peace and mutual confidence prevail in the subcontinent, our nations could more fully bend their talents and energies to resolve the gigantic problems which confront us and play an even more effective role in the international sphere where we have so many interests in common.

3559. Joint Statement issued on the conclusion of the Talks between Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi and Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq.

New Delhi, November 1, 1982.

His Excellency the President of Pakistan and the Prime Minister of India, assisted by their respective Foreign Ministers, met at Rashtrapati Bhavan this morning. The talks were held in an atmosphere of cordiality. Bilateral matters were discussed. Regional and global issues were also reviewed.

The two leaders agreed to the establishment of an India-Pakistan Joint Commission. Accordingly, they issued instructions for the rapid conclusion of modalities and formalities in this regard. In pursuance of this decision, officials of the two countries will met in New Delhi in December 1982. They will also consider the Pakistan draft of a Non-Aggression Pact and the Indian draft of a Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Cooperation.

The two leaders looked forward to continuing their discussions at the time of the Non-Aligned Summit meeting in New Delhi in March 1983.

3560. Press Interview of Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq to Gulf News.

The Pakistan President, Gen. Zia-ul-Haq, made a fresh offer for a "no arms, no war" pact with India.

"If the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Rajiv Gandhi, was willing, Pakistan would not hesitate to be a signatory to such an agreement," he said in a recent interview to the Dubai-based English daily, "Gulf News".

He said, "As far I am concerned, Pakistan is prepared to do its part in controlling the arms spiral in the region".

Asked whether India's recent acquisition of a nuclear submarine and its successful missile trials had sparked any consternation in Pakistan, General Zia said, "It has always been Pakistan's contention never to question another nation's defence requirements, that is no one else's business. However, the same right also lies with Pakistan. We do not like being questioned".

President Zia also suggested that India and Pakistan should hold their own sub-continental SALT conference and mutually agree to limit arms and reduce expenditure.

"It is no secret that both countries are in the developing stages and cannot afford such military hardware. It is, therefore, time we held our own military sub-continental SALT conference", he said.

BIGGEST NATION

Accepting that India is a powerful neighbour he said Pakistan felt that as the biggest nation in the area India could do her best by the rest of us by maintaining a low profile.

Asked if, after 40 years of mutual distrust and suspicion, the onus of creating this endless tension lay squarely with the leaders of both nations, he said, "It is true that the younger generation grows up in the shadow of its elders and if they are made to imbibe wrong values they will continue the same tradition."

He said talks were on and even at this moment the Siachen glacier problem was being discussed which would be resolved amicably.

"The Indian Prime Minister says it is Indian territory. We say it is disputed territory. Let us hope it will be resolved."
DENOUNCING TERRORISM

General Zia also expressed his willingness to directly denounce terrorism in Punjab if Mr. Rajiv Gandhi was prepared to simultaneously denounce extremism in the Sind province of Pakistan.

He, however, expressed his fears that India had reservations over making such a statement from its side. He said such a step could go a long way in improving relations between the two neighbours and dispel the Indian-held view that Pakistan was tacitly encouraging such acts in its northern state.

The Pakistan president said he thought Mr. Gandhi wanted to visit Pakistan when relations between the countries were on a "high, as a sort of climax".

Asked when will they get to the high, he said, "like I said, we are working towards more bilateral ties, trade, closer cultural exchanges. Then I am sure, he will come, there is no reason why not. Our invitation is still open. It always has been."

In reply to another question on whether he has given up his cricket diplomacy after successfully attempting it in Jaipur, President Zia said, "no that's not true. I told Mr. Gandhi, have another cricket match and I will come again".

New Delhi, November 27, 1996.

The Government of India's attention has been drawn to Pakistani Press reports stating that Pakistan has issued a notification specifying coordinates of Pakistan's baseline for determining the limits of its territorial waters, contiguous zone, the exclusive economic zone and the continental shelf.

2. India today conveyed to Pakistan, through diplomatic channels, that it unequivocally rejects as unacceptable the coordinate point (K) 23.00 33.90 N……6807.80 E of the Pakistani notified baseline as it encroaches upon the territorial waters of India which are within India's sovereign jurisdiction. It has been further conveyed to Pakistan that the Government of India reserved its right to seek suitable revision of the baseline in so far as it impinges upon India's sovereign jurisdiction. It has been further conveyed to Pakistan that the Government of India reserved its right to seek suitable revision of the baseline in so far as it impinges upon India's sovereign jurisdiction.

New Delhi, May 4, 1999.

General

1. Maj Gen (Retd) MA Durrani, Pak Army paid a courtesy call on the COAS on 4 May 1999.

2. At the outset the Pak Gen stated that he was on a goodwill mission seeking early normalization of relations between Pak and India. The civil populace in Pak, he said was looking forward to friendship with India.

3. While welcoming Gen Durrani, COAS expressed his profound pleasure on meeting his first ever Pak General and that too one so committed for furthering the peace initiative. To put him at ease the COAS explained his personal attachment to Pak and his birthplace Dera-Ismail-Khan. The Chief further complimented Gen Durrani on the views that he had expressed during the seminar on ‘Indo-Pak Relations’ on 03 May 1999 and said that he was in total agreement with the recommendations made by him for ushering in peace between the two countries.

4. Various issues discussed and responses thereof are covered in the succeeding paragraphs.

Lahore Declaration

5. Gen Malik, pointed out that he totally favoured the Lahore Declaration but felt the need for it to be fully supported at the ground level in letter and spirit. Gen Durrani agreed that it was indeed a comprehensive document and needed joint efforts for its success.

6. The COAS also brought out that the incidents that were engineered during the visit of our PM to Lahore the proxy war in Pak are a threat to the Declaration and remain a major obstacle towards Indo-Pak amity.

7. The Chief also pointed out that for any peace efforts to succeed, the trans-border terrorism in J&K will need to be stopped.

Mind Set of Pakistanis

8. Gen Durrani brought out that even after 50 years of independence Pakistanis are yet to come to terms that India fully acknowledges Pakistan as an independent nation. This is a major impediment and stumbling block. Minutest of utterances by India political/military leaders are misconstrued and read with suspicion. There is mistrust at every level. This impression needs to be changed.

9. Kashmir, similarly, since partition has remained a contentious issue which continues to enflame passions, and has been exploited by everyone to their advantage undoubtedly the problem needs discussion and prolonged deliberations (Incidentally, Gen Durrani proposes an incremental approach in relations—Kashmir at a later time frame).

Communication

10. Gen Durrani said that there is a total lack of communication between the people and more so at the political level. In the absence of any meaningful communication there are perceived threats and dangers. We have to resolve the issue by sitting together and discussing mutual threat perceptions. This will eradicate the fear from the minds of our people about intentions of India. People of Pakistan are not competing with India on any front because of our differing capabilities, status and economic strength. The COAS agreed and said that prosperity of Pak was fundamental to India.

Religious Fundamentalism in Pakistan

11. Gen Durrani expressed his apprehension that religious fundamentalism and Pan Islamic movement had gone out of proportion in Pak and was outside the control of the political masters. There was an urgent need to curb it since it would otherwise engulf Pak. He cited the following examples:—
(a) Quoting late Gen Zia who said that “the genie was out of the bottle”.
(b) A number of religious institutions and organizations were collecting large sums of money for supporting ‘Jehad in Kashmir’.
(c) In madrasas, the students have been indoctrinated to such an extent that they can be blindly tasked for anything by the ‘maulvi’
(d) Fanatic outfits like Lashkar-e-Taiba were not only geared for ‘Jehad’ but for the ultimate sacrifice ‘Shahadat’.
(e) Another area of concern was the war in Afghanistan the fall out of which has given Pak refugees, guns, drug and Talibans.

12. The COAS responded that such a phenomenon is a double edged weapon and therefore, there exists today for Pak a grave potential danger emanating from such fanaticism.

Pakistan Army
13. On the Pak Army Gen Durrani offered the following comments:-
(a) Ever since Gen Karamat’s time the Army has been distancing itself from politics and seeking an apolitical role.
(b) The present COAS has maintained the trend and therefore, today’s Army does not enjoy the same clout of yester years.
(c) As a professional Army, it does not support the trans-border killing of civilians but at times, perhaps, there is provocation.

14. The COAS while commending the Pak Army on its professionalism, pointed out that the troop density in J&K being so intense, it is unbelievable that infiltration can take place without the Army’s involvement.

Inter Services Intelligence (ISI)
15. Gen Durrani aired the following views in regard to the ISI:-
(a) They are an organization by themselves. Although partly staffed by the Armed Forces, the Army has no control over it.
(b) The organization gets its directions from the political masters and not through the COAS.

16. Gen Malik, explained at length that the rationale for his belief that the ISI could not be performing the present Kashmir policy on its own. Therefore, he attributed the actions of the ISI to have to tacit support of the Army and the politicians. The Chief also brought out that since the ISI was staffed by Armed Force personnel it has to carry the same ethos and therefore, indirectly the army cannot dissociate itself from ISI’s actions. Finally, the Chief added that ISI’s actions and policies need to be controlled, which was agreed to by Gen Durrani.
17. Gen Durrani also agreed with the COAS over the provocative appointment of Lt Gen (Retd) Javed Nasir (former ISI Chief) as the head of Pak Gurudwara Prabandak Committee. He added that this move has not been appreciated within Pak also.

Army to Army Talks

18. Gen Durrani proposed that one option to restore normalcy was to commence talks at the military level. A beginning be made with an annual VCAOS-CGS level meeting which could be later upgraded to CsOAS level. The COAS could also communicate with each other to resolve contentious military issues. This is because both the Armies share and enjoy a similar culture and heritage.

Nuclear and Missile Issue

19. With such close proximity and hardly any warning time, Gen Durrani proposed that there is a need to carry out intense debate and dialogue between the users of the two countries. He was greatly apprehensive of unforeseen accidents, which could be devastating.

View Expressed by COAS

20. Our COAS brought out that in spite of the increased tempo in the Valley, the Indian Army have been totally in a reactive mode and giving only a graduated response. In fact, at times the military and other officials/people wonder why enough is not being done against Pak.

21. The Chief explained that even with the availability of greater resources he had take the step of downsizing the Army by 50,000. Pak, he said, could take a cue from it, otherwise, it would be at the expense of the economic development and regression in the quality of life for its people.

22. Gen Malik, was categorical in mentioning the Pak’s policy of ‘ethnic cleansing’ in J&K cannot be accepted in India or anywhere in the world. He added that various agencies in Pak cannot dissociate themselves from the massacre of innocent civilians.

23. The COAS also mentioned that the Indian Army had killed 8078 militants and recovered more than 23,000 weapons so far. Besides this the Chief also brought out that the foreign militant content in J&K was increasing considerably.

24. The COAS also stated that with our nuclear, missile and strong conventional force status, no threat is envisaged. However, there are challenges ranging from unsolved border problems, the current proxy war in J&K to futuristic regional aspirations; We are addressing them and feel confident and capable of managing such situation independently.

25. Towards the end, the Pak General expressed his thanks and mentioned that these points will be conveyed at the highest level in Pak including their COAS, who is his good friend.

Aide Memoire of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs lodging a protest on the shooting down of its naval aircraft by the Indian Air Force.

Islamabad, August 10, 1999.

AIDE MEMOIRE

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan lodges a strong protest with the High Commission of the Republic of India in Islamabad over the unprovoked shooting down by Indian military aircraft of an unarmed Atlantic aircraft of the Pakistan Navy which was on a routine training flight inside Pakistani air space, east of Karachi at about 11.00 hours on 10 August 1999. The wreckage of the aircraft has been found two miles on land inside Pakistani territory.

This blatant and unprovoked act of military aggression against an unarmed aircraft inside Pakistani airspace is a flagrant violation of the international norms relating to inviolability of international frontiers as well as the bilateral agreement between Pakistan and India on the Prevention of Airspace Violations, of 6 April 1991 {Articles 1 and 2(a)}. This aggression has resulted in the cold-blooded murder of sixteen innocent persons in peacetime which is reprehensible and condemnable.

The responsibility for this wanton and cowardly act as well as for its consequences, rests squarely with India. Pakistan reserves the right to make an appropriate response in self-defence. We will inform the international community of the seriousness of this act of military aggression committed by India.

Press Release issued by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the statement of Pakistan Foreign Minister Abdul Sattar.

Islamabad, November 27, 1999.

"Pakistan will honour and implement its obligations under international agreements, treaties and resolutions of the UN Security Council. It cannot, however, agree to conditions for dialogue based on arbitrarily selected provisions of some agreements or their unilateral interpretations, while others are sought to be relegated or forgotten".

2. This was stated by the Foreign Minister, Mr. Abdul Sattar in response to a question by a foreign journalist on the reported statement of the Prime Minister of India making dialogue with Pakistan conditional on compliance with the Simla Agreement and the Lahore Declaration.

3. The Lahore Declaration, it may be recalled, called to a series of dialogue on bilateral issues, including Kashmir and on nuclear risk reduction measures envisaged in the MOU. Pakistan is wishing to carry out its commitments. In contrast, India has sought to impose preconditions on the commencement of dialogue. India is and on willing to fulfill its commitment enshrined in paragraph 6 of the Simla Agreement regarding the final settlement of Jammu and Kashmir dispute.

4. Pakistan and India have scores of agreements between them. Those include resolutions of the UN Security Council on Kashmir which were accepted by both sides. International law does not permit a party to renounce its obligations.

5. The UN Charter and recognized principles of International law must be observed by all. A peaceful world border cannot be built on unilateral preferences of states.

6. On Pakistan-India relations the Foreign Minister said that we are maintaining normal relations with all other countries. If India does not want to maintain normal relations, it is India's choice. India free to follow the policies it chooses but quite clearly these policies are not conducive to development of normal good-neighbourly relations. Simultaneously, we have decided to continue our own efforts and we hope that someday India will come to recognize that such efforts on the basis of accepted international norms will be of benefit not only to Pakistan but also to India itself.

Excerpts from the Joint Communiqué issued during the visit of Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee to the United States.

Since September 11, the people of the United States and India have been united as never before in the fight against terrorism. In so doing, they have together reaffirmed the enduring ties between both nations, and the importance of further transforming the India-US relationship. In their meeting, Prime Minister Vajpayee and President Bush discussed ways to accelerate progress towards these goals.

They noted that both countries are targets of terrorism, as seen in the barbaric attacks on 11th September in the United States and on 1st October in Kashmir. They agreed that terrorism threatens not only the security of India and the United States, but also our efforts to build freedom, democracy and international security and stability around the world. As leaders of the two largest multi-cultural democracies, they emphasised that those who equate terrorism with any religion are as wrong as those who invoke its name to commit, support or justify terrorist acts.

The two leaders remembered the victims of the many nationalities in the terrorist attacks on 11th September and agreed that all appropriate steps should be taken to bring the perpetrators to justice, while protecting the lives and welfare of the people affected by these efforts. They noted that both countries are providing humanitarian assistance to the people of Afghanistan.

They affirmed that the current campaign against the Al-Qaida network and the Taliban in Afghanistan is an important step in a global war against terrorism and its sponsors everywhere in the world. They recognised that the international community will have to wage a long and multi-faceted struggle against terrorism, with patience, determination and unwavering focus. They emphasised that there is only one choice and only one outcome: terrorism must be fought and it shall be defeated.

Prime Minister Vajpayee and President Bush agreed that success in this endeavour would depend heavily on building international cooperation and securing the unambiguous commitment of all nations to share information and intelligence on terrorists and deny them support, sustenance and safe havens. The two leaders agreed to consult regularly on the future of Afghanistan. They welcomed the measures outlined in the UNSCR 1373 and called on all nations to ratify and implement existing UN Conventions on counter-terrorism. They expressed support for India’s draft Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism and urged the resolution of outstanding issues to enable its adoption by the UNGA.

The leaders of the two countries expressed satisfaction with the progress made in India-US cooperation on counter-terrorism, including the Joint Working Group on Counter-Terrorism established in January 2000. They reaffirmed their personal commitment, and that of their two countries, to intensify bilateral cooperation as a critical element in the global effort against terrorism. They also announced the establishment of a Joint Cyber-Terrorism Initiative.

Prime Minister Vajpayee and President Bush agreed that developments in Afghanistan have a direct impact on its entire neighbourhood. They emphasised that the Taliban and the Al Qaida network have turned Afghanistan into a centre of terrorism, extremism and drug trafficking and have brought immense suffering to the Afghan people. They agreed that a peaceful, progressive and prosperous Afghanistan requires a broad-based government, representing all ethnic and religious groups, friendly with all countries in the neighbourhood and beyond, as well as sizeable and sustained international assistance for Afghanistan's economic reconstruction and development. The two leaders committed themselves to work together, and in partnership with other countries and international organizations to achieve these goals.

Moscow Declaration between India and the Russian Federation on International Terrorism
Moscow - November 06, 2001

India and the Russian Federation affirm that international terrorism is a threat to peace and security, a grave violation of human rights and a crime against humanity. The struggle against international terrorism has become one of the priority tasks of the world community. This evil can be vanquished only by combining the efforts of all States. Whatever be the motive of their perpetration – political, ideological, philosophical, racial, ethnic, religious or any other, terrorist acts are unjustifiable. India and the Russian Federation support the adoption on the basis of international law of decisive measures against all States, individuals, and entities which render support, harbour, finance, instigate or train terrorists or promote terrorism. It is essential that all States, without exception, should pay particular attention to the prevention of access of terrorists and extremist organisations and groups to financial resources on the basis of international law. In multi-ethnic and democratic countries such as India and the Russian Federation, violent actions being perpetrated under the slogan of self-determination, in reality represent acts of terrorism which in most cases have strong international links. In addition, all acts and methods and practices of terrorism constitute a grave violation of the purposes and the principles of the United Nations, jeopardise friendly relations amongst States and are aimed at destruction of human rights, fundamental freedoms and democratic basis of society. Multi-ethnic and democratic societies are especially vulnerable to acts of terrorism which are an attack against the values and freedoms enshrined in such societies. Fully resolved to developing cooperation in the struggle against new challenges in international terrorism including in the nuclear, chemical, biological, space, cybernetics and other spheres, both Sides noted the presence of close nexus between terrorism and illegal trafficking in narcotics, trade in arms and organised crime and pointed to the significance of the need for close interaction at the bilateral, as also at the multilateral level in combating these challenges to international stability and security. India and the Russian Federation are closely following the development of the situation in and around Afghanistan and emphasise the necessity to avert the spilling over of the conflict beyond the boundaries of one region, to prevent further extension of terrorism. The Sides accorded highest priority to the continuation of effective interaction on Afghanistan in the framework of the Indo-Russian Joint Working Group on Afghanistan established between the two countries in October 2000. India and the Russian Federation reaffirmed the central role of the United Nations in the efforts of the international community in the struggle against terrorism. They agreed that such a struggle must be conducted on the basis of international law including the United Nations Charter. In this connection, the Sides called for early completion of negotiations under U.N. auspices on the draft Comprehensive Convention on International Terrorism and the Convention for the suppression of acts of Nuclear Terrorism. Adoption of these Conventions would assist in strengthening the international legal basis for effectively combating the global menace of terrorism.

Moscow, November 6, 2001
3567. Press Conference by Minister of External Affairs Jaswant Singh.

Kathmandu, January 5, 2002.

Q. Our impression is that Mr. Vajpayee did not want to shake hands with President Musharraf!

EAM: I am afraid I am not going to respond to impressions. All I can say is that they were in a congenial atmosphere.

Q. Are they going to meet?

EAM: There is no programme of meeting as yet².

Q. Informal meeting too?

1. In the morning plenary session of the SAARC, Gen. Musharraf after his speech walked up to Prime Minister Vajpayee and extended his hand to shake Prime Minister's hand. The latter reciprocated the gesture and the two warmly shook their hands.

2. While there was no formal meeting between the two leaders they did have an informal interaction at a social function which led Pakistani President Musharraf to tell his press conference in Kathmandu on January 6 that he was pleased with the “informal interaction” with Prime Minister. He termed it a breakthrough and added that he “looked forward to formalizing the political contacts” shortly. However Mr. Vajpayee at his press conference also in Kathmandu on the same day described this meeting as a mere “courtesy call”. A day after this informal interaction in Kathmandu, India on January 7 ruled out an early dialogue with Pakistan. India’s reluctance to go in for talks was formalised after a two-hour meeting of the Cabinet Committee on Security (CCS). India cited the dissatisfaction at the steps taken by Pakistan to counter terrorism as the basis of its decision. “Where is the question of dialogue when there is no change in the attitude (of Pakistan),” the External Affairs Minister, Jaswant Singh, said after the meeting chaired by the Prime Minister. By rejecting talks, India signalled to the international community that it should continue to put pressure on Pakistan on terrorism. Significantly, India adopted this position when the British Prime Minister, Tony Blair, was touring the subcontinent, said to be helping to defuse military tension between New Delhi and Islamabad. Earlier when in Islamabad Mr. Blair repeatedly made a specific reference to the October 1 attack on the Jammu and Kashmir Assembly and the December 13 attack on the Parliament House last year and emphasised that Pakistan should denounce all such incidents in categorical terms. He asserted that there could be no justification for acts like those on October 1 and December 13. He said the international community expected Islamabad to arrest those responsible for such acts, in consonance with the resolutions of the United Nations. Mr. Blair, who was in the capital on January 6, had advocated the resumption of an Indo-Pak. dialogue after the threat of terrorism ended. New Delhi was not satisfied with the selective arrest of some persons in Pakistan said to be terrorists since India regarded them involved in internal sectarian violence between the Shias and Sunnis. India accused Pakistan of double standards in its approach to terrorism. “They do continue to maintain a very different approach when it was a matter of Western interest or Afghanistan and a different approach when it comes to the question of India or Jammu and Kashmir.” This was “not acceptable” to New Delhi. “You cannot have one attitude towards terrorism to west of Pakistan and altogether a different attitude to east of Pakistan.” Pakistan’s attitude towards terrorism, External Affairs Minister said, was “regrettable”. On January 7 the United States President, George W. Bush characterised the situation in South Asia as “still serious” and called on the Pakistan leader, Pervez Musharraf, to take a tougher stand against terrorism. “I think it is very important for President Musharraf to make a clear statement to the world that he intends to crack down on terror. And I believe that if he does that and continues to do what he’s doing, it’ll provide relief, pressure relief, on a situation that’s still serious,” Mr. Bush said.
EAM: I have answered that.

Q. How is India going to respond to Mr. Musharraf’s gesture?

EAM: He is President Gen. Musharraf and not just Mr.. Of course, we welcome the hand of friendship that the General has extended to the Prime Minister. Prime Minister’s response, in essence is that the gesture of the hand of friendship must be accompanied by acts of friendship and he [PM] has defined the acts of friendship. That is the essence.

Q. What do you think is going to be the outcome of the Summit as far as India, Pakistan discussions are concerned?

EAM: I will not, unfortunately, unlike the liberty that the press enjoys ... I am not in the game of being able to speculate. I would much rather deal with reality, as it emerges.

Q. Any progress on India-Nepal Trade Treaty?

EAM: So far as the Trade Treaty is concerned, as you know, India has already extended the Treaty and we have had talks with Nepal in this regard. We realize the fact that the Trade Treaty must be concluded satisfactorily, so that the concerns of both the countries are answered and, of course, it must deal with employment in Nepal and must result in further industrialization in Nepal.

Q. Two days ago you gave the details of the documents given to Pakistan. We don’t have any reaction from Pakistan. Maj. Gen. Qureshi said yesterday that no evidence has been given to Pakistan. What is your comment?

EAM: I am afraid it is not possible for me to respond to every utterance of the Spokesman of Pakistan.

Q. What was the reason for giving up the Retreat?

EAM: I am not responsible for the Retreat. I think the cancellation is purely a matter of convenience as the time available got considerably curtailed on account of fog and other factors. Now there is also a programme starting at 4 o’ clock today. I don’t know whether we will be able to sit together for any informal meeting.

Q. What would you say on the proposal to send a special envoy to India and Pakistan?

EAM: We have not asked for any special or extraordinary envoy. There are methods of interaction. Unless the Missions, both in New Delhi and Islamabad, are not up to the task, I don’t think there is any need for a special envoy.
Q. Will Prime Minister Vajpayee meet Musharraf.

EAM: He has already met him. Hasn’t he, in the morning?

Q. On raising bilateral issues in SAARC.

EAM: This has been decided right from the beginning that if SAARC gets bogged down in bilateral matters, then the special status of SAARC in dealing with matters relating to economic development will not be possible. It has been repeatedly raised that bilateral matters should be included, but every time it is collectively decided that it should not be so.

Q. Will the raising of bilateral issues, as raised by Gen. Musharraf, change the Charter of SAARC?

EAM: It is not going to change the Charter. If someone wants to go beyond the Charter then how do you put a stop? I don’t wish to categorize or give an adjective to what the President of Pakistan has done. It is really their look out.

Q. What about prospects of India-Pakistan relations?

EAM: I have been saying that SAARC is a multilateral body. It should concentrate really on SAARC related issues. I am here to answer SAARC related issues. You are raising questions relating to India and Pakistan.

Q. How is India going to respond to President Musharraf’s hand of friendship?

EAM: As you know, I have said that as the Gen. has extended a hand of friendship, the Prime Minister has said that the gesture of hand of friendship should be converted into acts of friendship and he has defined the acts of friendship. Let that be the next step forward.

Q. Have other leaders also spoken against terrorism?

EAM: Several leaders spoke categorically about terrorism and the need to eradicate it.

Q. Two days ago when you spoke to us, you said, you are willing to give Pakistan time. Does that still stand? Given that the General has now extended an olive branch. Does it make it little easier to extend the time to look at Gen. Musharraf’s next step?

EAM: I am not here for granting concessions. There is a certain time frame required for Pakistan. This gesture of hand of friendship must be accompanied by a public announcement against nurturing of violence, giving up cross border terrorism in any part of India or any other part controlled by Pakistan. If this is done, that is the first correct step taken.
Q. What do you feel are the solutions to terrorist acts?

EAM: You are saying what is the solution of terrorist acts? The solution lies in what has been said today. Both have to think that in the last 50 years we have not made any progress. Both have to take care of poverty and economic development.

Q. There is a feeling that terrorism should be seen from the end A serves? What would be your reaction to this?

EAM: It has been said earlier that there is no such thing as a good terrorist or a bad terrorist. In our consideration, it cannot. It is not acceptable that if terrorism occurs in West of Pakistan, then it is a matter of concern to the entire western world and if it occurs to the East of Pakistan then it is not of such a high priority. We cannot accept it. President Bush has categorically said that the fight against terrorism is a global fight and there cannot be a distinction in one variety of terrorism and another. This is what President Bush and Col. Powell have shared with me on a number of occasions.

Q. On relationship between Pakistan and U.S?

EAM: I don’t want to comment on that. That is a matter of bilateral relations between the United States of America and Pakistan. Pakistan is an ally of U.S. today. Good luck to the United States of America.

Q. Now that President Musharraf has extended a hand of friendship, are you not satisfied with it?

EAM: I didn’t say that, I said the hand of friendship must be accompanied by acts of friendship. But please understand that action against terrorism are not public relations exercise, these are substantive issues and they must be addressed substantially and seriously.

Q. After 13th December, Pakistan has publicly said that all acts of terrorism in India or Indian territory are to be condemned. You are talking about practical steps to be taken. Number 1, what are the practical steps and number 2, you can go on for ever not being satisfied. India is dictating terms to Pakistan. I am not clear we will get to a point of resuming dialogue because ....

EAM: What you are accusing me of is a lack of clarity in not specifically welcoming the steps what Gen. Parvez Musharraf Sahib has taken for terrorism. I am very appreciative of such steps taken. I have said so publicly. Please let me clarify, what we have told Pakistan to consider is that for any meaningful dialogue to resume between India and Pakistan, a climate for dialogue has to be created. You cannot create a climate for dialogue if you keep a tamancha (country-made gun) of terrorism against my temple and say now, if you don’t talk to me then I will keep firing from this tamancha. All that I am saying is that remove this tamancha, because I cannot accept this terrorism as pre-dialogue negotiating tactics. The minute I accept that terrorism is, in fact, a pre-dialogue negotiating tactic then, please understand, you will be giving to the terrorists a reassurance that you are yourself trying to defeat.

Q. But President Musharraf has said...

EAM: I have said the steps you have taken are welcome steps. They are in the right direction. More needs to be done. I don’t want to sound critical. When India said after the attack on the Parliament, there was a public outrage. He said that it is our belief that Lashkar-e-Taiyaba and Jaish-e-Mohammed are responsible. Your Spokesman said that no you have done it yourself. Subsequently, you go and seize Lashkar and Jaish not because we said it but because somebody else told you to do so. Please try and apply to yourself the dept of reasonable trust - then apply to India also.

Q. Our troops are on the border. What impact was there of that on the meeting today?

EAM: There is no additional impact, as you saw today.

Q. How long will you pursue dialogue with Pakistan?

EAM: I have learnt a great deal in this journey. This journey has taken me from Lahore to Kargil, to Kandhar to Agra, to Kashmir killing to Parliament and now to Kathmandu. Will I continue to endeavour a lasting rapprochement with Pakistan? Dialogue, yes I will continue to do it. Because there is an article of faith in me. I will not do it as a public relations exercise because I don’t think India-Pakistan relations are a public relation exercise. Millions of peoples are involved. I am surprised by these things. I don’t think so. Because each of these stops that I have gone through, I have learnt. Please leave your cynicism. Please try to understand what we are trying to do.

Thank you ladies and gentlemen of the media.

3568. Reaction of Official Spokesperson to suggestions from Pakistani President on no-war pact and de-nuclearization.

New Delhi, January 24, 2002.

Question: Do you have any comments on the offer of President Musharraf of no war pact?

Answer: There is nothing new in that offer. Pakistan has stated that on many occasions previously and India's position has also been clearly stated. It is necessary for the proxy war waged by Pakistan against India to cease, to stop forthwith. There is a low intensity conflict that has been generated by Pakistan against India, that has to stop and apart from that cross border terrorism and the support to cross border terrorism must stop.

Question: The Pakistan President has made another proposal of de-nuclearization any comments?

Answer: There is nothing new again in that statement and in fact Pakistan had made similar statements at the very time that it was engaged in the clandestine acquisition of nuclear weapons, know-how and technology. So there is nothing new in that statement.

3569. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on Pakistan.

New Delhi, February 14, 2002.

Question: Any reaction to President Bush's remarks on resumption of dialogue between India and Pakistan?

Answer: Well we have seen the transcript of the remarks made. In fact it was said there that the United States would be happy to encourage dialogue between India and Pakistan. I think the position of India on this has been quite clearly stated. It is really for India and Pakistan to address the outstanding issues between them directly through bilateral dialogue and there is really no room for any third party involvement in this process.

Question: Reports of the death of the journalist in Pakistan. Any Comments?

Answer: Well, I have seen that report. I have seen the news flashes on that. Of course there doesn’t seem to be any further confirmation on this so I would not like to say anything further at the moment. But we have followed the developments in regard to the Daniel Pearl case with concern, we deplore the incident and it’s our sincere hope that no harm has come to him.

Question: Reports of large number of Al-Qaida terrorists have gone to Iran through Pakistan? Any comments?

Answer: No, I really don’t want to comment on reports that appear in the media on these subjects. As far as the war against terrorism is concerned as you know we have in the past expressed concern that you haven’t seen any significant arrests and capture of important Taliban or Al-Qaida leaders. So this is an ongoing concern and obviously would need to be addressed. As far as reports of them having gone to Iran or elsewhere I really don’t want to comment on that because we would make a judgment based on our own independent assessment.

Question: What would be our overall assessment on the visit of General Musharraf to the United States?

Answer: I am not going to share that with you. I am sorry. We don’t make, pass judgment or talk about assessments about visits made by other countries, or on third country relationships. As far as relations between the US and Pakistan are concerned India has never said that India is against the development of normal relations between the US and Pakistan. Similarly our relationship with the United States is not hyphenated by any other country. So these have to be regarded as separate.

Question: In the context of President Musharraf emphasizing US mediation in Kashmir issue. Any comments?

Answer: Well as far as the questions that were raised in terms of the US being involved in mediation or in facilitation that could be provided for the dialogue between India and Pakistan is concerned our views are very clear that this is a matter to be addressed directly between India and Pakistan. There is really no room for any other country to be involved.

Question: Has India asked the US to pressurize Pakistan to handover those 20 criminals?

Answer: No, not that I am aware of. As you know we do share intelligence, information and data on the fight against terrorism with the Government of United States and in fact the cooperation has been close and has been strengthened after the September 11 attacks. The interaction at the official level has proceeded very satisfactorily. Between our two countries, we have had a number of visits, delegations have been exchanged, the Joint Working Group on counter terrorism has met very recently and the FBI Director was here. We have an ongoing exchange of information on this and the United States is aware of our concerns and is sensitive to our concerns.

Question: It has been 45 days since we have submitted the list of 20 criminals to Pakistan. So far no action has been taken by Pakistan. Is our patience unlimited?

Answer: I think we have said that we will give Pakistan due time and in due time we would expect a response. So we are awaiting a response and we will see what kind of response we will get from Pakistan. The recent experience with the UAE, as we have pointed out should be an object lesson for similar developments to take place in regard to the case of 20 fugitives from law and terrorists who figured on the list that we have handed over to Pakistan.

Thank You.

3570. Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the decision of the Cabinet Committee on Security to step up offensive against Pakistan.

New Delhi, May 20, 2002.

Ms. Rao: Good Afternoon ladies and gentlemen.

* * * *

Question: Cabinet Committee on Security (CCS) has decided to step up diplomatic offensive against Pakistan. Does it entails sending of envoys to different countries also?

Answer: Obviously, when you talk of diplomatic offensive the prime thrust of any diplomatic offensive would be sensitizing the world community to India’s very legitimate concerns about cross-border terrorism and the fact that we have had pain inflicted upon us for far too long in this regard and the world community has in a sense been already made aware of India’s concerns in this regard following the attack on our Parliament on December 13 and now the Kaluchak Massacre on May 14. Obviously we see every need for further sensitizing the world community to our concerns and effort will be made to interact with a number of countries at the diplomatic level, at the political level, in order that the world realizes the depth of the seriousness with which we view this problem.

Question: There were some reports that Pakistan might move UN to defuse tensions with India and to resolve Kashmir issue based on the UN Resolution passed after the nuclear test in May 1998. What is India's view on this?

Answer: We have seen those reports. That Resolution was a resolution passed in May 1998. But I think all of us need to focus on the realities and the compulsions of the current situation. It was only a few months ago that the UN Security Council Resolution 1373 was passed and I think that is the prime area of focus here. We are engaged in a war against terrorism. We are fighting cross border terrorism, we are the victims of terrorism and if there is any reason for the world community to focus on this issue it is because of the fact that we face this very real threat and we are victims of this scourge. So let us not turn our vision into areas, which primarily seek to deflect concern from this primary area of focus which is terrorism. This is all about terrorism.

Question: Will this diplomatic offensive also include lobbying to persuade Pakistan to take actions according to the UN Security Council 1373?

Answer: I don't want to go into details of the offensive steps that the Government will take. It is wiser to say that we will leave no stone unturned to defend our interests and to persuade the world community about the legitimacy of our concerns.

* * *

Question: Would you like to respond to the Pakistani statement to let the international security force to monitor the LoC?

Answer: Again do I see an attempt to deflect attention away from the central point?! Pakistan has to deal with cross border terrorism, the figures of infiltration have gone up. All evidence points to the fact that Pakistan’s complicity, Pakistan’s involvement in aiding and abetting cross border terrorism continues to be a reality and until and unless Pakistan focuses on this and deals with it directly we are not going to see an improvement in the situation. So there is no point in seeking to deflect the attention away or talking about involving third parties. This is a matter for Pakistan to address directly, its involvement in this is complete and they are the ones who have to take action to address cross border terrorism and infiltration.

Question: Will Indian diplomatic offensive be different from what it has taken before or done before?

Answer: Would you please define what the past diplomatic offensive Question: You talk of the sensitizing the world community...

Answer: I think you are talking of a very concerted, very intense campaign to sensitize world opinion and to bring before the world community, the enormity of the situation that we face as a consequence of terrorism that has been inflicted, that has been directed against us by our neighbour – Pakistan.

Question: There are reports of heavy shelling from both sides in the border area. What is the exact position?

Answer: I am sorry sir, you have to ask the Defence Ministry for a briefing on that. I do not brief on the situation along the LoC or boundary. But I think if we are attacked or we are intimidated by Pakistan, surely we have every right to take steps to defend our interests and our security.

Question: Any response to the UK’s statement to restrain?

Answer: Well, we are in touch with the Government of the UK as we are in touch with the Governments of other friendly countries and they have been made fully aware to the enormity of the situation that we face and that we are fighting terror here, fighting terrorism and that it is the blood of innocent Indians, men, women and children that is on the hands of these terrorists. Where have these terrorists come from? I don’t think you need to guess from where they have come from. They have come from Pakistan and there is Pakistan’s involvement written all over this. So India is entitled to take whatever necessary steps are called for to defend its interest.

* * *

Question: Are you satisfied with the international response to the terrorist attack in Jammu?

Answer: Well, a large number of countries have unequivocally condemned the attack in Jammu and have expressed their sympathy and fellow feeling for India at this juncture. I think there has been no doubt in anybody’s mind about the gravity of the attack and about the heinous nature of the crime that has been committed and in that sense certainly, the level of empathy and understanding, certainly encourages us to believe that the world community is with India at this time.

Question: Yet you still feel that you must sensitize the world community?

Answer: Absolutely.

Question: Is there any time frame about our diplomatic offensive that by such time such thing should be completed...
Answer: Even if there was a timeline I am not going to tell you about it. (Smiles)

Question: What is Iranian reaction of the terrorist attack in Jammu?

Answer: I mentioned that the Iranian side has been made fully aware of India’s concerns. There is understanding; Iran understands what the effects of terrorism are. The two countries interact quite closely on such issues and events and meetings such as these especially so soon after the massacre at Jammu are extremely useful, I think they enable discussions to take place in a detailed, in depth manner. So what we have been able to convey to Iran in a detailed and in an exhaustive manner is about the effects of terrorism and why India is legitimately concerned about it and how long we have suffered this and that we will not have further pain inflicted upon us.

Thank You.

3571. Address of Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee to the soldier based in Kupwara, Jammu and Kashmir.

[Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee addressed the Jawans in Kupwara (Jammu & Kashmir). The Chief Minister of Jammu and Kashmir, Mr Farooq Abdullah, Defence Minister George Fernandes, senior Army officers and other distinguished public figures were also present on the occasion.]

Following are the salient points of PM’s address:

“I am extremely happy to be in your midst today. What is happening on the border is the concern of everybody today - irrespective of where he lives or whatever be his occupation. It is your responsibility to defend the borders - and it is a serious responsibility because you have to put your lives on stake. This is the time to fulfil your duty towards your motherland. I congratulate the brave officers and soldiers of the army who are defending our borders with such valour and bravery. During the last 54 years of our freedom, we have had to face many invasions, and each time the enemy was given a befitting reply. No enemy effort to capture our land, disrupt our democracy or create internal dissension has ever succeeded.

“Our forces have creditably been performing their duties and the enemy has had to return empty-handed. Kargil episode is fresh in our memories. We thought that their (enemy’s) repeated failures and defeats would have inspired them to follow the right path - but no, this has not happened. When we were engaged in peace talks with the enemy - in the hope that it will abandon its animosity and establish good-neighbourly relations with us - its forces surreptitiously mounted an attack on our snow-clad mountains in the thick of night. We all know what was the outcome of that attack. The way our brave soldiers fought, the way our army officers displayed their expertise and acumen won the praise of whole world. We retrieved every inch of our territory from the enemy, who was so demoralized that it could not even carry back the bodies of its soldiers and ran away. But we gave their dead soldiers a decent burial - because when a soldier dies, he no longer is an enemy. We even respect the dead soldier.

“We also know how to respect the enemy. But it should not be construed as our weakness, nor should anyone think that we would indefinitely go on tolerating things. We are fully alive to the situation. Our neighbour has now devised a new method of waging war. Since it dare not fight a straight battle, more so after its defeat in Kargil, it is now waging a proxy war. It is now engaging mercenaries to fight in Kashmir. These paid servants do not fight a battle here; they only kill and maim innocent people.

“When I saw the bodies of children in the hospital yesterday, I wondered what kind of a war is this? What kind of a struggle is this in which women and children are targetted? This ruthlessness, this barbarism is a challenge to us - and we accept this challenge. While we want peace and devote our resources to development, as we want to make India a prosperous country in the world, we are forced to fight an unnecessary war. But we will fight that as well, and let it be known that we will emerge victorious even in that. No one should have any doubt in this regard.

“Our armed forces (army, air and naval) are responsible for defending the country. And they have creditably fulfilled their duties and responsibilities. We have proved our mettle in repeated tests. We are once again being called upon to prove our credentials. I have full faith in the capabilities of our Jawans and the armed forces. I want to assure them that they have the full backing of 100 crore Indians - who also serve as a line of defence. We should work for victory and be prepared to make sacrifices. Our aim should be victory - as the time has come to fight a decisive battle. The world knows that we are the aggrieved party. That is why the international opinion is in our favour. But they are not prepared to openly support us. Therefore we will have to fight our own battle and defend ourselves. And we are prepared for that. That we will essay a new victory is a foregone conclusion - let nobody misread that.

“I once again felicitate and congratulate you. Namaskar.”

Interview of Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee with the Newsweek. [Excerpts]

July 1, 2002.

WEYMOUTH: U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Richard Armitage told you that Pakistan’s President Musharraf had promised to stop the flow of militants into India-controlled Kashmir. Do you believe these promises?

VAJPAYEE: There has been no change in Pakistan’s policy so far as cross-border infiltration is concerned. Every day we are getting reports that infiltration [by militants into Kashmir] continues unabated.

Did Musharraf also promise to get rid of the training camps in Pakistan-controlled Kashmir and in Pakistan?

That was the promise. There are 50 to 70 terrorist-training camps in Pakistan-occupied Kashmir and in Pakistan.

Do you think Musharraf is trustworthy?

[Laughs] We are prepared to deal with him as he is, but we are cautious this time. Our past experience is not very encouraging.

Is this just a pause between crises?

If Pakistan implements all the assurances given to us, then a new beginning can be made.

If Musharraf ends terrorism from Pakistani soil, what move will India make in response?

India will be ready to have talks with Pakistan and discuss all issues, including Jammu and Kashmir.

Would you meet with Musharraf?

If his promises are implemented.

When will you pull some of your troops back from the Line of Control?

It will take some time. Let us see what happens on the ground.

How close were Pakistan and India to war?

It was a touch-and-go affair... I did not rule out the possibility of war. Until the last minute we were hoping that wiser counsels would prevail.
Did the U.S. make a mistake in making Pakistan a partner in the war against terror?
No, it was the right policy. Pakistan should be pressured to fight terror not only in Afghanistan but inside Pakistan itself.

The U.S. has not succeeded in capturing the leadership of Al Qaeda. Where are they?
They may be in Pakistan.

Do you think that Osama bin Laden is alive?
Yes.

Do the Pakistanis know where he is?
Of course.
So they know where he and his key lieutenants are hiding?
Not every movement, but broadly speaking, they know where the rest of Al Qaeda and the Taliban are.

Are there elements of Al Qaeda in Pakistani-controlled Kashmir?
The terrorist organizations operating in Kashmir are closely linked to Al Qaeda and other “Jihadi” organizations directly supported and directed by Pakistan.

How do you view the fall elections in [Indian-held] Kashmir? Will they be free and fair?
The elections will be held under trie supervision of the Central Election Commission. We have made a commitment that the elections will be free and fair.

Some say that India has rigged the elections in the past.
This time elections will be free and fair.

Is autonomy the long-term solution for Kashmir?
We are for the devolution of power.
What should the U.S. ro’ be in the future?
That of a facilitator.

India used to say it didn’t want a third party to the Kashmir dispute. Hasn’t the U.S. emerged as a third party?
No, that’s why I said a facilitator, not a mediator.

3573. Comments by Official Spokesperson on US State Department’s call for a dialogue between India and Pakistan\(^1\).

New Delhi, March 25, 2003.

As asked to comment on the call for a dialogue between India and Pakistan made by the US State Department’s Spokesperson in the context of recent terrorist violence in the state of Jammu and Kashmir, the Official Spokesperson said:

“We see the call for dialogue by the U.S. State Department’s Spokesman as inappropriate in the context of the heinous terrorist crime in J&K. It regrettably shifts the focus from the basic issue of the problem between India and Pakistan. The problem is not lack of dialogue, but continued sponsorship of terrorism by Pakistan which is being overlooked. If dialogue, per se, is more critical than combating international terrorism with all necessary means, then one can legitimately ask why both in Afghanistan and Iraq military action instead of dialogue has been resorted to.”

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

\(^1\) The Bush administration while condemning as “horrific” the terrorist attack at Nadimarg in South Srinagar in which a large number of innocent people including women and children were killed on the night of March 23 reiterated that violence “will not solve the problem of Kashmir” said dialogue between India and Pakistan remained a “crucial element” in the normalization. “The United States is deeply disturbed and saddened by horrific terrorist attack in south of Srinagar” and warned that the cowardly attack appeared aimed “at disrupting the bold efforts of the Kashmir State Government led by Mufti Mohammad Sayeed to restore peace and religious harmony to the troubled State”, the spokesman, Richard Boucher, said in a press statement. “Violence will not solve Kashmir’s problems. Such acts are intended to disrupt the programme of the State Government in Kashmir, which is attempting to reduce tensions and promote reconciliation. Dialogue remains a critical element in the normalisation of relations between India and Pakistan,” the statement noted. The Secretary of State, Colin Powell, had a telephonic talk with his Indian counterpart, Yashwant Sinha, to express American condemnation of the brutal attack and to extend condolences to the families of the victims.
Statement of Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee in Parliament on the call received from Pakistani Prime Minister.

New Delhi, May 2, 2003.

I received a telephone call on the evening of 28th April, from PM Jamali of Pakistan.

PM Jamali conveyed his appreciation and thanks for the comments I had made in Srinagar and my remarks about India-Pakistan relations contained in my statement in the two Houses of Parliament. He also condemned terrorism.

As Honourable members are aware, we are committed to the improvement of relations with Pakistan, and are willing to grasp every opportunity for doing so. However, we have repeatedly expressed the need to create a conducive atmosphere for a sustained dialogue, which necessarily requires an end to cross border terrorism and the dismantling of its infrastructure.

We discussed ways of carrying forward our bilateral relations. In this regard, I emphasized the importance of economic cooperation, cultural exchanges, people-to-people contacts and civil aviation links. These would create an environment in which difficult issues in our bilateral relations could be addressed. PM Jamali suggested resumption of sporting links between the two countries. We agreed that, as a beginning, these measures could be considered.

In this context, it has been decided to appoint a High Commissioner to Pakistan and to restore the civil aviation links on a reciprocal basis.

I also emphasized the importance of substantive progress on the decisions for regional trade and economic cooperation taken at the SAARC Kathmandu Summit. Agreements arrived at Kathmandu must be implemented.
Financial Times: The peace process between India and Pakistan appears to be going slowly. You don’t even have direct flights or an exchange of High Commissioners. What is holding things up?

Yashwant Sinha: You must remember that Pakistan has not set a time-frame and we have not set a time-frame. So everyone is aware of the time things might take. And therefore the process should not be seen in terms of deadlines. And to illustrate: the prime minister made an announcement in the Indian parliament with regards to two steps. One was appointment of high commissioners and the second was opening up of Indian airspace. Now, we’ve moved on the first. We’ve been able to announce our new high commissioner. I am not blaming Pakistan but they are in the process of nominating their high commissioner. And the first step of appointing the HCs will be completed when they are appointed and then they go and take their positions. Suppose we had put a deadline on this - the appointments should be made in one week’s time, they should be in position in two weeks time - it would have been unrealistic. So I do not think at any point of time there should be impatience either in the establishment or in the media with regards to the process.

Financial Times: You have said before that you have a “roadmap” in mind. That implies you have certain stages envisaged and a timetable. Is that wrong?

Sinha: No, I said that we have a roadmap but I did not say a timetable. And I also said that because there were two parties involved, unilaterally one party cannot set a timetable and this is common sense. And in reply to first question I have already said why a deadline should not be set.

Financial Times: Could I therefore ask you a timeless question about the roadmap which is what takes place after these initial two steps?

Sinha: The prime minister of Pakistan spoke to the Indian PM on the telephone. He made five suggestions. These were economic cooperation, improved cultural ties, sporting links, air links, and people to people contacts. These are therefore on the table. Doing these will involve doing other things too. So when you are talking of a roadmap we are clear in our mind what steps must be taken, both in regards to restoring normalcy in the relationship as well as in regard to the dialogue process and then in regard to progress of the dialogue process. And underlying all of this is the complete end to cross-border terrorism.

Financial Times: You have used the word “practical necessity” as opposed to “pre-condition” in regards to the ending of cross-border terrorism. Could you explain the difference?

Sinha: It is very simple. The difference is that if this was a pre-condition then the Prime minister would not have made his “hand of friendship” offer in Srinagar last month. But for the dialogue to succeed it is essential that cross-border terrorism comes to an end. There cannot be a conducive atmosphere for a dialogue if massacres, violence, terrorism, keeps on happening. Therefore it is important that this is brought to an end if a proper atmosphere for the success of the dialogue is to be created.

Financial Times: Would it therefore be reasonable to assume that no senior dialogue or summit will take place if terrorist outrages continue to occur?

Sinha: I only want to say this: It is an essential condition for the success of the talks.

Financial Times: Mr Vajpayee launched this process without consulting his colleagues. There are clearly divisions within the BJP. To what extent can you rely on BJP unity behind Mr Vajpayee’s initiative?

Sinha: I don’t think there is any difference of opinion in the BJP with regards to Mr. Vajpayee’s initiative. To the best of my knowledge the BJP and its spokesmen have lent their support to this process. And everyone has also said simultaneously that cross-border terrorism must be brought to an end for this process to succeed.

Financial Times: Is it regrettable that the BJP refused to meet the parliamentary delegation from Pakistan that departed from India a few days ago?

Sinha: I cannot answer for the BJP because I am not in the day-to-day functioning of the party. But the important thing to remember is: Were they approached? What was the request made? We do not know. As far as I am concerned I got an unsigned fax message from the sponsors [of the visit] after they had already been here a few days saying they were visiting. Now clearly whoever was responsible for preparing their programme should have gone about their task in a more professional way. And therefore to read meaning into this would not be correct - that we were opposed or the government was opposed. And there are issues of convenience also.

Financial Times: We are seeing talk of Pakistan banning the Hizb-ul-Mujahidden [the largest Kashmiri separatist group, with headquarters in Pakistan’s portion of the divided province] and then suggestions that it is not being banned. What is your reading of Pakistan’s actions?

Sinha: I would not like to comment on this because any comment from me would be misunderstood at this point of time and I do not want to create a misunderstanding. I would only like to say that if they take action against these elements who are indulging in cross-border terror it is something that we welcome.

Financial Times: But if they did would you provide more allowance - give Pakistan more room - for the actions of other terrorist groups that Pakistan might not directly control?

Sinha: If there are elements which are - according the authorities in Pakistan - which are outside their control and crossing the Line of Control despite their best effort to stop them then we should cooperate with each other in order to curb the activities of these elements. This would be a subject matter of discussion - a simple thing, that they get information, intelligence information, that such and such a group has escaped their whatever net they have and is likely to cross into India, we have channels of information through which such information can be passed onto our authorities and then we will be able to handle them.

Financial Times: We have seen reports about the US finally giving Israel permission to sell the Phalcon (early warning) system to India. Clearly US restraints on the export of dual use high technology to India is very important to India. Is there any sign of progress? Did you raise this problem recently with Colin Powell [they met in Moscow last week]?

Sinha: I have only like you seen the reports on the Phalcon. I cannot confirm them. Every time we have discussed the issues known as the “Trinity issues” [restrictions on dual use for India’s civil nuclear, civilian space and commercial information technology] the US has said that they would like to ensure that within the framework of their laws and regulations, they would do their best for us. This assurance has always been forthcoming. We have impressed on them the need to devise some kind of mechanism through which these good intentions will be translated into progress on the ground in a speedier fashion. I have no reasons to believe they will not act on this.

Financial Times: Assuming that is right, how would you measure progress? Do you have a list of shopping items?

Sinha: It can be measured in terms of increased cooperation and fewer hassles in regard to civilian use in regard to dual-use items. The various organisations in India do give them a list from time-to-time and we are looking for let’s say speed in that procedure.

Financial Times: Would it be fair to describe India-US relations as closer than ever before.

Sinha: I think that would be the right conclusion to come to.
Financial Times: What would be your optimum in terms of US-India relations?

Sinha: There is no optimum in sets of relations between two countries because there is always room for further cooperation and strengthening. So you cannot say that you will reach a peak at any point in time - it is a continuous process. Trade and economic relationship is a very important priority in our relations with the US. And on this the role of Indian professionals in the US is a very important issue.

Financial Times: The US and others have been imposing restrictions on Indian IT professionals.

Sinha: There have been some fairly retrograde signals in those areas where we have built our strength. Yes.

Financial Times: Would it be fair to conclude that non-tariff barriers are being imposed on the Indian IT industry by the US and others?

Sinha: Yes, that is true. Other priorities? Attracting more US investments into India and evolving whatever commonality we can involve with regard to the World Trade Organisation issues. And we are trying to identify trade areas on which consensus can exist.

Financial Times: Is it fair to say that the Bush administrations actions on trade show a big gap between rhetoric and reality?

Sinha: Not only the US but many other developed countries fall into the same category.

Financial Times: Mr Richard Armitage [US deputy secretary of state] was here recently and he was here exactly a year ago also. Then he said that Pakistan had pledged to put a “permanent” end to cross-border terrorism. That clearly hasn’t happened. Are the good offices of the US regarding Pakistan diminishing in value in India’s view?

Sinha: We have always said that as far as that is concerned, it was a promise or a commitment made to the US. Whether it has been kept or not is an issue for them to judge. Whether it is the US or any other interlocutor, when it comes to the discussion of cross-border terrorism, we tell them what we feel about the situation, they must also be getting feedback from Pakistan, it is for them to come to a judgement. But we have good reason to believe from the US statements on this matter that they do believe India has been a victim of cross-border terrorism, that it has not stopped, that Pakistan must do more to stop it. But in the final analysis, tackling cross-border terrorism is our responsibility and have to do it alone. So we are not remonstrating with anyone and saying “such and such a promise was made to you and it wasn’t honoured”. We are not Financial Times: Is it reasonable to assume that Pakistan’s usefulness to the US as an ally in the war on Al Qaeda is diminishing? If so then would Pakistan’s leverage over the US be waning and does this affect India’s calculations?

Sinha: I will say that there is no permanent situation. We cannot have a world where terrorism from organisations of the like of Al Qaeda will be a permanent feature. So anyone who is counting on it being a permanent feature would be making a big miscalculation.

Financial Times: You are striking a lot of bilateral free trade deals with your neighbours - Sri Lanka, Bangladesh etc. Can we conclude that your regional trade strategy will remain bilateral and therefore outside of SAARC (South Asian Agreement for Regional Cooperation) until you have fixed your differences with Pakistan?

Sinha: Not at all. We have always been very keen to move under the SAARC auspices also. We have been doing our best to speed up the process of the preferential trade and free trade agreements under Saarc auspices. But we will not let that hold up any bilateral understanding with countries in this region, just as we are moving forward with countries outside this region.

Financial Times: But you still want Pakistan to reciprocate Most Favoured Nation trade to India?

Sinha: This could be a part of the confidence building programme with Pakistan. But India continues to extend MFN treatment to Pakistan. Pakistan does not give India MFN treatment. In addition, out of about 7,000 tariff lines 90 per cent are on the negative list in Pakistan which means India cannot export those items to Pakistan. Then there are other non-tariff barriers. There is a clear mismatch here between the kind of treatment we give them and they give us. It is our view that as members of the WTO, Pakistan should extend MFN treatment to India. Under Saarc they should do much more. And, trade should not be treated as a hostage to the political relationship.

Financial Times: Regarding “normalisation” it is fair to say that Pakistan is suspicious of it because they see India as the status quo power and normalisation as something the status quo power always wishes. Whereas it is not in the interests of the antagonistic power to normalise too much.

Sinha: Tell me who is the status quo power between China and India [China]? How is it that we have been able to work it out with them? We must recognise that India and China have a border conflict but we have still allowed our bilateral relationship to flourish.
Financial Times: So are China-India relations a model for how you should proceed with Pakistan?

Sinha: Not necessarily, I am just saying this is an example of how two nations have dealt with their differences over time and in the process created confidence and goodwill. I think we need to give ourselves such a chance with Pakistan. We both need to give each other a chance.

Financial Times: Have you fixed Mr Vajpayee’s visit to China? What are the main issues?

Sinha: Dates are not yet fixed. We will discuss the entire gamut of our bilateral relationship. There are many issues to discuss. I would like also to mention India’s relations with the UK. We have an excellent relationship with the UK, an excellent understanding on various bilateral issues notwithstanding various differences on Iran. My recent meeting with Jack Straw [UK foreign secretary] set a new level in terms of the warmth and understanding between our two countries.

Financial Times: Under what circumstances would India accede to the US request to send peace-keeping troops to Iraq?

Financial Times: Then it would happen?

Sinha: I will not give any details.

3576. Government of India’s response to President Musharraf’s observations¹ on Jammu and Kashmir.

New Delhi, June 30, 2003.

In response to a question on President Musharraf’s remarks on Tibet and Jammu & Kashmir, the Official Spokesperson said: “There is no similarity between Tibet and Jammu & Kashmir¹. Our position that the Tibet Autonomous Region is a part of the territory of the People’s Republic of China has been consistent for nearly five decades. On Jammu & Kashmir, the problem is precisely that Pakistan refuses to recognise the political and legal reality that Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India. Clearly therefore, the flexibility that President Musharraf referred to, has to be shown by Pakistan”.

1. In an interview to a private Pakistani television channel in Los Angeles, during his visit there Gen. Musharraf while welcoming the peace process between India and Pakistan said the two countries “have a long way to go in resolving of their differences.” He then went on to say: “The flexibility India has shown on Tibet is a welcome sign. One can only hope it happens in the case of Kashmir too.”
3577. Statement by Official Spokesperson on false propaganda by Pakistan against India.

The Pakistani Acting High Commissioner was called to the Ministry of External Affairs today:

His attention was drawn to the recurring propagandistic articles in the Pakistani media as well as comments of Pakistani officials and leaders targeting the Indian Consulates General in Afghanistan, particularly those in Kandahar and Jalalabad. His attention was also drawn to the baseless comments of the official Spokesperson of the Pakistani Foreign Ministry on Saturday, 26 July claiming that there was threat from Indian diplomatic missions in Afghanistan, and that Pakistan needed to counter it.

Even Afghan officials and Ministers, including their Interior Minister, had been constrained to publicly reject these preposterous allegations leveled by Pakistan.

Such persistent Pakistani allegations in an atmosphere already full of violence and terrorism threaten the security of our missions and its personnel. The Government of Pakistan was asked to take into account the spirit of the initiative of our Prime Minister, extending once again the hand of friendship to Pakistan, and desist from any comments or actions that go contrary to the objective of setting in motion positive trends in our bilateral relationship.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖

1. The Pakistani Foreign Office Spokesperson Masood Khan told a press briefing in Islamabad that “Their (Indian Missions in Afghanistan) activities are known and they are there to disrupt relations between Pakistan and Afghanistan.” He further accused the Indian missions of making “concerted efforts to drive a wedge between the two countries (Pakistan and Afghanistan)” Stating that there was little economic activity to perform for the Indian missions in Herat, Kandahar and Jalalabad, Pakistan’s assessment was that “there is a threat from the Indian diplomatic missions in Afghanistan and we have conveyed our concern to the Afghan Government”.

3578. Response by Official Spokesperson to the Communiqué issued at the 10th OIC Summit in Kuala Lumpur.

New Delhi, October 18, 2003.

1. We have seen the final Communiqué of the 10th OIC Summit. It is regrettable that the Islamic countries have once again shown an inability to take an objective and independent view of the Jammu & Kashmir issue and India-Pakistan relations. One would have thought that as a result of the current process of introspection that the OIC as an organization is going through, their Communiqué would have less rhetoric and propaganda and more substance. By taking one-sided positions and becoming a mouthpiece for Pakistan’s posturing on Kashmir, the OIC countries don’t enhance their credibility in the eyes of India and its people. This is not the ‘enlightened moderation’ that OIC wishes to inculcate.

2. Jammu & Kashmir has a democratically elected representative government and the human rights of the Kashmiri people are protected.

3. The Prime Minister of India has, for the third time, offered a hand of friendship to Pakistan. Instead of misleading OIC countries about the actual situation and trying to use them as pawns for its continuing confrontation with India, Pakistan should respond to India’s overture in the right spirit and in the longer term interest of both countries in peace and stability in our region.

4. While the world recognizes the international scourge of terrorism and there is a large consensus to combat this menace, it is surprising that the OIC Communiqué makes no reference to Pakistan’s continuing terrorism against India, which, unfortunately, is at the root of the problem in Jammu & Kashmir and in relations between India and Pakistan.

1. The final communiqué while reaffirming the ongoing efforts of the Government of Pakistan to seek a peaceful resolution of Jammu and Kashmir dispute through all possible means including substantive bilateral talks with India “called for the respect of the human rights of the Kashmiri people and ending of their continued violation and urged India to allow international human rights organizations to verify the conditions of human rights in Kashmir.”
Statement of Government of India on India-Pakistan Relations.

New Delhi, October 30, 2003.

Spokesperson: Good Evening Ladies and Gentleman

We have a statement on Pakistan’s proposals yesterday.

1. We welcome the fact that Pakistan has responded positively to at least some of the proposals announced by our External Affairs Minister on October 22. We are disappointed that they have attached impractical, extraneous or delaying conditions to the others.

2. Based on the positive responses, there would be immediate implementation of the proposals to allow senior citizens to cross at Wagah on foot. We would also initiate further steps for working out modalities for links between our Coast Guards and Pakistan’s Maritime Security Agency. We also look forward to bilateral sporting encounters. We will work on the modalities of Pakistan’s proposal for release of apprehended fishermen within a month, although we would have preferred to work out an arrangement for their non-arrest.

3. We hope that Pakistan will come to the talks on civil aviation on December 1-2, with an open mind and with the intention of finalising arrangements for their successful resumption.

4. We would look forward to holding of technical level talks for resumption of Samjhauta (Mutual Understanding) Express, in the middle of December, as proposed by Pakistan, after the successful conclusion of the talks in early December for resumption of civil aviation.

5. We welcome Pakistan’s offer of medical treatment to 40 Indian children. Such offers and their implementation will no doubt enhance interaction and contribute, in some measure, to increasing understanding and empathy.

6. We are disappointed that Pakistan has, in effect, not agreed to our proposals for running extra buses on the Delhi-Lahore route, and establishing links between Mumbai and Karachi, Khokrapar and Munabao, and Srinagar and Muzaffarabad. Such links would have facilitated widening of people to people contacts and cooperation. They could have easily been put into effect through technical level discussions. Holding up such simple steps, and making them part of the Composite Dialogue process, in effect means delaying them. Since these measures are aimed at expanding interaction, widening areas of cooperation and building up trust,

1. Document Nos. 1595 and 1596
we will continue to hope that Pakistan will agree to their implementation. Our offer for a bus link between Srinagar and Muzaffarabad was motivated by humanitarian considerations. It is unfortunate that Pakistan has instead opted to politicise and disrupt this by attaching conditions that they knew would not be acceptable. In fact, even now people from these regions travel without the requirement of the kind of documents that Pakistan spoke about.

7. We have noted Pakistan’s proposal for a bus link between Lahore and Amritsar. We can assess the requirement for this after progress on Delhi-Lahore bus, civil aviation and Samjhauta Express.

8. We are ready for a calibrated increase in size of Missions, as the requirement grows with the re-establishment of links, and setting up of new ones. However, there is no need to wait for this for holding of visa camps, which would ease the situation for the normal traveller who otherwise has to come all the way to Delhi or Islamabad to get visas. We would urge Pakistan to reconsider this.

9. As far as Pakistan’s offer of 100 scholarships is concerned, we believe that the process of building trust and cooperation between India and Pakistan, and establishing lasting peace, would be facilitated if offers are not targeted on any particular region of India. India has never adopted, for instance, a selective approach for Balochistan, Sind or NWFP, or for any particular community. Our offers have been available to any Pakistani. If Pakistan were to make such non-discriminatory and general offers of cooperation, then it would no doubt contribute to taking the process further.

10. We are amused at Pakistan’s profession of concern at the plight of disabled and negatively affected people in the state of Jammu & Kashmir. If Pakistan’s concerns are really sincere, it should take immediate steps to end infiltration, dismantle the infrastructure of support to terrorism, and offer compensation to those affected by the terrorism it has sponsored. Its references to alleged repression on J&K are obviously only a ploy for its failed attempt to camouflage its sponsorship and support for terrorism.

11. I would also like to reiterate that Jammu & Kashmir is not a disputed territory. The only issue that remains to be resolved for a final settlement of J&K is the question of Pakistan’s illegal occupation of a portion of the State.

12. Despite the limited positive responses from Pakistan, it is clear that our Prime Minister’s initiative has gathered momentum. India would sincerely continue with the process, building on the successes achieved and the support generated, so that lasting peace is established between the two countries. We also remain committed to a dialogue process based on the premise that sustained dialogue requires an end to cross border infiltration and terrorism. If Pakistan perceives, as it has claimed, that Composite Dialogue is in mutual interest, it must immediately put an end to its sponsorship of cross border terrorism.

Question: Pakistani Foreign Secretary quoted Yashwant Sinha saying that the 12 proposals made on 22nd October was a tactical move on part of India. He also said that EAM while briefing BJP foreign cell said that these proposals were win- win situation and also wants to split Hurriyat. What is your reaction?

Answer: I have been instructed by EAM that such news reports which attributes all these statements to him about “tactical moves” and “win-win situation” are absolutely false and baseless. The proposals which were unveiled by EAM on 22nd October after the CCS meeting are marked by the same spirit of sincerity which have marked all aspects of Prime Minister’s peace initiative since April 18. It is most unfortunate that the Pakistani Foreign Office, when defining its response chose to rely on these baseless and speculative news reports.

Question: Will talks on resumption of Samjhauta Express not take place if Civil Aviation talks fail?

Answer: We hope that the Civil Aviation talks will be successful.

Question: Yesterday Pakistan offered assistance for Kashmiris widows and rape victims. What if Pakistan is ready to provide treatment to them? Will India allow them to avail?

Answer: I have given you our response on two aspects: The first is on the issue of directing any proposals to a specific region. The second is about professing concern about the people who are disabled and negatively affected in the state of Jammu and Kashmir. We have given you our response that they are so affected because of the sponsorship of cross border terrorism, perpetrated and supported by Pakistan. If they are sincere in their concern then the answer lies in ending infiltration, dismantling the infrastructure of terrorism and stopping the sponsorship of terrorism.

Question: You have covered in your response all the Pakistani proposals except one that India should allow International Human Right Commissions to make list of all victims in Jammu and Kashmir due to repressions.

Answer: I think you should read the statement carefully and you will find all the responses there. There is a clear reference to the alleged repression in Jammu and Kashmir - the Pakistani comments are only a ploy for its failed attempts to camouflage sponsorship and support of terrorism.
Question: Given India’s well known position on ending terrorism, how do you see these talks proceeding?

Answer: Which talks?

Question: …all these proposals and counter proposals..

Answer: If you ask me a specific question I will be able to give you a brief on that point.

Question: Theoretically, should people of Jammu and Kashmir seek the scholarship offer by Pakistan. Will Indian Government allow them?

Answer: I don’t want to get into speculative theoretical debate in this press conference. As far as Pakistan’s specific offer of 100 scholarships is concerned I have just given you our response and reiterated it.

Media briefing by Official Spokesperson on the meeting between Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 27, 2004.

Official Spokesperson:

As you are aware, Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan met today to commence the Composite Dialogue. They discussed the subject of Peace and Security, including Confidence Building Measures. Ideas and proposals were exchanged to take the process further. Discussions were held in a positive and constructive atmosphere. Talks tomorrow will be on Jammu and Kashmir.

As the talks are still in progress, I would like to keep this briefing short and hopefully sweet.

Question: What proposals were exchanged?

Answer: I would not like to go into the details of the proposals today. The talks are still going on and I am sure that by the time we end the second round you will have a fair idea of what was discussed. But I can tell you that today the discussions focused, as they were expected to, on peace and security including Confidence Building Measures. We already have some Confidence Building Measures on the table. We also have the results of the Expert level meeting on nuclear CBMs, which took place in Delhi last week and proposals arising out of that. Then there are other proposals aimed to better communications, and others arising out of humanitarian concerns. These are proposals which are aimed to increase mutual trust and confidence and create better relations between the two countries in keeping with our commitment.

Question: Just before the talks there was a major incident in Pulwama... (inaudible)?

Answer: As I said the talks are still going on so let me not go into a point by point thing on what has been discussed today, what is being discussed tomorrow. At the end of the talks we will give you a full appreciation.

Question: You mentioned about humanitarian measures. Was the issue of opening Consulates in Karachi and Mumbai discussed?

Answer: That is not what I had in mind, but since you have brought up that issue, it is an issue that has already being discussed by the two Foreign Ministers in Qingdao. I can say that that issue has been discussed and we will let you know how things proceed tomorrow.

Question: You had mentioned at the conclusion of the expert level meeting on Nuclear CBMs that the conclusions would be reported to the Foreign Secretaries. Specifically, on the notification of missile tests, was there any discussion today?

Answer: Well you are quite right that the conclusions of the expert level meetings are brought to the Foreign Secretaries because in the Composite Dialogue Process the Foreign Secretaries meeting also forms a plenary which reviews the results of the other meetings. Both sides were appreciative of the work done by the experts on the nuclear CBMs and by the results that have been achieved. As regards the draft agreement, which is mentioned in the statement that was issued after the meeting of the experts on nuclear CBMs, that is a draft and needs further work. It needs comments from the other side and further work before these things can be finalized. Only about 5 or 6 days have elapsed since that meeting.

Question: You mentioned communications, what sort of communications?

Answer: I said the CBMs aim to better communications.

Question: ...inaudible...

Answer: We will give you the details of these proposals and what comes out of the meeting tomorrow.

Question: Any discussions about Khokrapar – Munabao rail link?
Answer: As I have said, we already have a certain number of proposals on the table. The links between those towns are already on the table.

Question: Srinagar – Muzaffarabad …

Answer: Correct, this issue is also on the table. As I said, a number of issues are on the table and fresh issues were discussed. What the plan on each of these issues is, I will be able to tell you only after the meeting is over.

Question: Any broad understanding on any of these ideas and proposals?

Answer: Let me not characterize anything in the middle of the meeting.

Question: Will the announcements be made only tomorrow?

Answer: I have briefed you on the discussions today. Tomorrow, once we finish the meeting we can give an overall picture on the different issues involved, if that is what you mean by announcements.

Question: No hiccups…

Answer: The meetings were conducted in a friendly, very positive and constructive atmosphere. The aim was evident - to carry this process forward. After the meeting Foreign Secretary also held a lunch in the honor of the visiting delegation and is hosting a dinner tonight.

Question: Tomorrow, during discussions on Kashmir, will the issue of terrorism also come up?

Answer: Let me not start crystal gazing. It is normally not helpful.

Question: You said a number of ideas and proposals were exchanged. Was any rejected?

Answer: The ideas have been proposed. There were proposals and ideas exchanged from both sides and let us see how this process carries forward tomorrow. We are hopeful that the process is going to move forward. The talks have been held in a very constructive and positive atmosphere. And this should continue tomorrow.

1. At the conclusion of the talks, the leader of the Indian delegation and Secretary, Water Resources V.K. Duggal said: “The issues were discussion with total understanding towards the point of taking them to a resolution.” Pakistan’s Water Resources Secretary Ashtaq Mehmood said: “We had good discussion with an open mind, in an atmosphere of give and take and have covered sufficient ground” adding that “It is win-win situation.”
3581. Reaction\(^1\) of Official Spokesperson on the Statement of the Pakistan Foreign Office on the talks between the Indian External Affairs Minister and President Musharraf in Islamabad.

New Delhi, July 24, 2004.

We are disappointed at the tone and substance of some of the comments made in the Press Release issued by Pakistan Foreign Office yesterday after the meeting between President Musharraf and External Affairs Minister.

The press release does not reflect the comprehensiveness of the discussions.

\[\star\star\star\star\star\]

\(^1\) The Foreign Ministry of Pakistan in a statement issued in Islamabad on the meeting between the EAM and President Musharraf on July 23 struck a jarring note when it said that President Musharraf stressed the need for a final settlement of the Kashmir issue within a “reasonable” time-frame and “simultaneous” progress on all subjects including the “central issue” of Kashmir. The statement further said that the President stressed that it was important to provide “comfort” to Kashmiris as they had the highest stake in the success of the peace process. Media quoting MEA sources said the reference in the Pakistani statement to a “reasonable” time-frame for a final settlement of the Kashmir issue sounded strange coming from those who avoided any discussion on the subject between 1972 and 1989, made discussions impossible from 1990 onwards because of the sponsorship of terrorism and made the prospects of a final settlement difficult by ignoring the realities and by adopting non-pragmatic positions. The sources also rejected the suggestions for “simultaneous” progress on all issues, not only because it was an unrealistic approach but also because it was aimed at thwarting progress. The suggestion was contrary to the articulated positions of the Pakistani leadership which had earlier advocated resolving the easier issues first, building confidence and developing the relationship in a step-by-step manner. It was surprising that the Pakistani statement talked of providing comfort to Kashmiris even though it was Pakistan which had attempted to undermine such “Comfort” by its sponsorship of terrorism and encouragement to extremism, the sources quoted by media said.
Joint press statement issued at the end of the meeting between the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan.

The Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan, H.E. Mr. Shyam Saran and H.E. Mr. Riaz H. Khokhar, met on September 4, 2004 in New Delhi to review the progress in the Composite Dialogue.

They assessed positively the discussions held on the eight subjects in the Composite Dialogue i.e. Peace and Security including CBMs, Jammu and Kashmir, Siachen, Sir Creek, Wullar Barrage/Tulbul Navigation Project, Terrorism and Drug Trafficking, Economic and Commercial Cooperation and Promotion of Friendly Exchanges in Various Fields. The Foreign Secretaries agreed that the discussions had been productive and had taken place in a cordial and constructive atmosphere. Several useful ideas and suggestions were made by both sides.

In their meeting today, the Foreign Secretaries discussed the ways of taking the process forward. They would be reporting to the Foreign Ministers with the recommendation that the Composite Dialogue should be continued with a view to further deepening and broadening the engagement between the two sides.

1. The previous day answering questions from journalists whether India will “focus on the increased infiltration and cross-border terrorism”, the Spokesperson Navtej Sarna had said: “As I said this is a meeting at the Foreign Secretary level and the Foreign Minister level that reviews the entire progress in the Composite Dialogue and the bilateral relations. The Composite Dialogue, as you know, was started this year after January 6 Statement in Islamabad. The January 6 Statement is quite clear and there is an expression there that to sustain this dialogue, violence, terrorism and hostility must be prevented. I am sure that this is a concern that will be taken up.”

Answering another question on CBMs and people-to-people contacts, the Spokesperson said: “There can be. This is a Foreign Minister level discussion. So, there is no binding on what they are supposed to discuss. Naturally, we have, as newspapers like to call it, a slew of CBMs on the table. Some of them we have agreed to. On some of them we have positive movement on both sides and on some of them there may be unilateral movement. I am sure all these issues will be discussed. The sincere desire is that we must move towards implementing as many of those as possible.”
3583. Statement by Official Spokesperson describing the suggestion as inaccurate that Prime Minister would be prepared to adjust the LOC in Kashmir.

   London, September, 20, 2004.

We have seen an item suggesting that the Prime Minister “will offer to ‘adjust’ the Line of Control by a couple of miles eastwards” as part of “an offer to help defuse the situation in Kashmir”.

This is completely and wholly inaccurate. Any suggestion that the Prime Minister will make such an offer is factually wrong.

As has been said on several occasions, including in the Prime Minister’s Press Conference at 10 Downing Street earlier this afternoon, the Prime Minister looks forward to his meeting with President Musharraf of Pakistan in New York, and to discussing all matters of bilateral interest including a review of the composite dialogue. There is no question of any territorial concession being offered by India to Pakistan.

3584. Reaction of Official Spokesperson on Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf’s proposal on Jammu and Kashmir.

   New Delhi, October 26, 2004.

Naturally, we have heard those comments¹. We do not believe that Jammu and Kashmir is a subject on which discussions can be held through the media. As you are already aware it is one of the subjects in the Composite Dialogue Process. So, if there are any proposals/suggestions regarding that, that is the forum that we expect that they will be brought to.

Press Conference by Foreign Secretary Shyam Saran after first round of India – Pakistan Talks.

Opening remarks: I would like to begin by expressing deep appreciation for the invitation extended to me to visit Pakistan, and for the opportunity to visit Peshawar and hopefully also Lahore. We had a round of discussions today morning. I would like to give you all a brief idea of this meeting. We carried out a comprehensive review of the dialogue that has taken place so far. A number of issues were discussed. You are aware of the meetings such as those on Sir Creek, Anti-narcotics, and Expert-level Meetings on Conventional and Nuclear CBMs. We agreed on the Joint Survey of pillars on the horizontal segment in Sir Creek, and had a useful discussion on anti-narcotics. We had covered considerable ground in these talks and both sides expressed satisfaction at the progress made so far. We had agreed that during the Foreign Secretary-level talks we would try to further narrow the differences that exist.

A number of very important visits have taken place in recent months. CM of (Pak) Punjab visited India on the invitation of the Chief Minister Mr. Amarinder Singh. Recently the Speaker of the National Assembly of Pakistan had an extremely successful visit to India. The traffic across the border has increased at a rapid pace and we want to keep up the momentum. There is a visible improvement in relations, and there is less tension. We recently celebrated the first anniversary of the ceasefire which is holding. We have taken forward a number of CBMs.

My assessment of the talks this morning is that both sides want to continue the process. There is a commitment to try and ameliorate some of the areas where there are humanitarian concerns. One such case is that of the fishermen and civilian prisoners. Both countries have a responsibility to ameliorate the sufferings of these people. One other area is that of children who inadvertently cross the borders. There was a matching response from Pak side on measures to address these humanitarian issues; this will enable us to move forward.

We have also offered some more CBMs like easier travel of senior citizens over 65 years of age and children below 12 years. They will not have to seek visas at the Indian High Commission in Islamabad to travel to India. This would also apply to groups whose antecedents are pre-vetted. This will help them cross the border in an easier manner. Formalities and procedures for entry into India can be completed at the Wagah Attari check-post itself. The High Commission will forward information to New Delhi on the groups, and these groups can obtain permission to enter on arrival.
We have also conveyed that Student Visas can be given on a case by case basis to those children who get admission in India for studies. We have also discussed inclusion of more religious places and list of shrines to be visited.

Both sides have agreed to carry forward the next round of talks, which will go on till June-July next year. The calendar of meetings is under preparation. This reflects the commitment for dialogue on both sides. We have all along said that we have to be engaged in a sustained dialogue. After completion of the expert-level talks, the Foreign Secretaries will meet again to review the progress achieved. We had a number of meetings in the recent past, including one between President Musharraf and Prime Minister Singh. Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz recently visited India. We will have the SAARC Summit when both Prime Ministers will also have an opportunity to meet. Our External Affairs Minister (EAM) will visit Pakistan in the next few months. These (interactions) will give us opportunities to see how our relations can be taken forward.

We will also discuss Jammu & Kashmir tomorrow. We are ready to engage in a serious dialogue on Jammu & Kashmir. There is a misperception in Pakistan that India is trying to take the CBMs forward and marginalise discussions on Jammu & Kashmir. I will say with complete honesty that this is not the case. We believe in having a serious dialogue on Jammu & Kashmir along with moving forward on the CBMs which would give a chance for finding solutions to the issue of Jammu & Kashmir. This is part of a process. Far from deflecting progress on J & K, movement on CBMs will help us to find solutions. It is our sincere view that building confidence through CBMs is integral to resolving the issue of J & K.

We fully agree with President Musharraf when he said perhaps there is a trust deficit, and that needs to be addressed. We have to deal with public opinion. We, both in Pakistan and India, have to carry our people with us. Any understanding on J & K must be supported by our people, on both sides. It makes eminent sense to expand the peace constituency on both sides. At the end of the day, we are talking of people. There should be no doubt in the minds of the people in Pakistan that we are serious about finding solutions to the Jammu & Kashmir issue. The feeling that confidence building is opposed to, or detracts from, finding a solution to Jammu & Kashmir is misplaced. On the contrary, it will help.

The Joint Press statement of January 6 contains a very solemn assurance that no territory under control of Pakistan will be used to sponsor cross border terrorism. This is a fundamental assurance for us, and critical for taking the dialogue process forward. This solemn assurance is important and should be implemented in letter and spirit. I hope it will be implemented.
Qn: What will be the basis of your discussions on Jammu & Kashmir? Is it that territories on both sides of the line of control are considered disputed? (Javaid Rana, The Nation)

FS: Our legal position is that Jammu & Kashmir is an integral part of India. We are prepared to look at the issue that has arisen with regard to Jammu & Kashmir by focusing on the people. Certain lines are drawn on the maps. There is nothing much we can do in the near future to change these lines. What we can do is to ameliorate the sufferings of people on both sides. We should be focusing on the people. That is our effort. If we take this process of CBMs including in Jammu & Kashmir forward to make it possible for the people to interact, perhaps options which are not available to us today may reveal themselves. Enhanced interaction among Kashmiris will throw up solutions in the times to come. We are committed to a peace process. What we are engaged in is to have peace with Pakistan.

Qn: - Is tomorrow’s discussion going to be about new proposals on Jammu & Kashmir? (Mr. Nayar, UNI)

FS: If you are looking for a solution as it exists, this is not the case. This is a very sensitive and sentimental issue for both sides. So a solution is not possible in the next few days. We need to be engaged in a process. Our Pakistani interlocutors agree on the need to engage in a process, and not in an event so that the consequences of the lines drawn on the map can be addressed.

Qn: Are you proposing to include people of Jammu & Kashmir in the dialogue? (Khalid Azim, Editor, Daily Ummat Karachi)

FS: The people of India are involved in the dialogue, and thereby the people of Jammu & Kashmir, being a part of India. How do we then include the people? The only way we know how to do this, as a democracy, is through elections. So we will deal with the elected Government of Jammu & Kashmir. We are also willing to involve other people who want peace.

Qn: Have we received any note on the seven regions proposal from President Musharraf? If a note is received what will be your reaction? (Mohan Das, UNI)

FS: No. I cannot comment on any hypothetical situation.

Qn: Everyone knows that Jammu & Kashmir issue cannot be solved quickly. But it is a positive sign that our Indian friends are talking about solutions after fifty years. Do you have any timeframe in mind? (Mazar Iqbal, Daily Islam)

FS: I would like to correct the historical part (of your question). It is wrong to say that Jammu & Kashmir was not discussed in the past. We talked about ways for a solution even before the Shimla Agreement. I can assure you that we are ready to discuss it with all seriousness. Then on the question of timeframe. To us, sooner the better. But this is a process, and I do not think we can put or impose artificial timelines on a process.

Qn: Do you think that Pakistan will hold to its solemn assurance on cross-border terrorism? And do you think India would agree to a third party facilitation or mediation? (Sherry Sardar, Reuters, Islamabad)

FS: On implementation of the solemn pledge made (by Pakistan) on cross-border terrorism, much more needs to be done. The phenomenon of cross-border terrorism has not ceased. On our agreeing to a third party facilitation, I do not think so. Both sides are involved in a sustained, substantive dialogue process. Both sides are committed to an early solution. I do not see any need for any third party.

Qn: Pakistan offered assistance to India following the (disaster caused by the) Tsunami tidal waves. Is it the first time such assistance has been offered? On proposal for visas to Pakistani students, how will this be implemented. What has been the response of Pakistan on the visa proposals? (Sadaqat Khan, Associated Press, Islamabad)

FS: In the meeting today morning, and also during my call on the Foreign Minister of Pakistan, I expressed our appreciation for the sympathy and support from Pakistan on the tragedy which has not only affected India, but also several countries in the region. I will convey this to our authorities. We will see if there are areas of support needed from Pakistan.

On grant of student visas, we will verify these on a case-by-case basis, and grant visas for the duration of the courses. On the question of Pakistan’s response, we do not ask for reciprocation. If they do respond, we would be happy. Let me also mention here that the Government of India has offered medical assistance to two groups of Pakistani children numbering about forty. We have announced that we are ready to assist 20 more such children.

India's response to the disaster caused by the 8 October 2005 earthquake in Pakistan was swift and spontaneous. After the Prime Minister of India had spoken to the President of Pakistan on the same day of the quake offering to provide whatever assistance that Pakistan may require, India sent one aircraft and three trains carrying relief material. This material weighed about 900 tonnes and was valued at approximately Rs. 21 crore or equivalent to US$ 4.7 million. The following are the details of these relief goods.

- Blankets 25500
- Tents 2200
- Sleeping Bags 15200
- Plastic/FRP Sheets 41500
- Medicines 30 tonnes
- Anti-Tetanus Injections 10000
- Pethidine Injection 10000
- Fortified biscuits 100 tonnes

The material also included X-Ray machines & film and other essential medicines.

Following the opening of five Crossing Points on Line of Control, India also handed over relief material weighing more than 400 tonnes and valued at about Rs. one crore. This material included 1220 quintals of food packets containing essential items such as rice, atta, sugar, dal and salt; and the remaining comprised mainly, blankets, medicines and galvanised steel sheets.

With the above, the total amount of relief material sent by the Government of India to the Government of Pakistan works out to more than 1300 tonnes estimated at a value of about Rs 22 crores or US $ 5million.

The Government of India pledged an assistance of US$ 25 million for the victims of the earthquake to be utilised in housing and education sectors. The Government of Pakistan has accepted this offer and indicated interest to source construction material from India utilising this assistance.

Apart from official assistance, considerable amounts of relief material have also been sent from India by private agencies, State Government of Punjab, Government bodies such as the Minorities Commission, local and foreign NGOs. Most of this material was sent via Attari-Wagah land and rail routes. As per available information, the following are the details of major items sent through this mode which are valued at approximately Rs. 47 crores or US$ 10.5 million:

- Blankets 11.5 lakhs
- Tents/tarpaulins 60000
Galvanised steel sheets 50 tonnes
Biscuits 3365 tonnes

To sum up, the total value of relief material, both official and private, sent from India to Pakistan is estimated at Rs. 69 crores, equivalent to US$ 15.5 million.

The High Commission of Pakistan in New Delhi has also been allowed to source material from India and send both by land and air. Available information indicates that about 4000 kg of blankets by air and 5000 tents by land route were sent by the High Commission of Pakistan.

3587. Joint Statement issued after India-Pakistan technical level talks on enhancing interaction and cooperation across the Line of Control (LOC).

New Delhi, May 3, 2006.

In pursuance of the Joint Statement of 18 April 2005 and as mandated by the Foreign Secretaries on 18 January 2006, India-Pakistan technical level talks on enhancing interaction and Cooperation across the LOC were held in New Delhi on 2-3 May 2006. The Indian delegation was headed by Shri Dilip Sinha, Joint Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs and the Pakistan delegation was led by Mr. Syed Ibne Abbas, Director General, Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

The talks were held in a cordial atmosphere. Both sides reviewed the operation of the Srinagar-Muzaffarabad bus service and of the five crossing points. Both sides agreed to expedite clearances of applications.

Both sides also agreed to start the Srinagar-Muzaffarabad truck service to facilitate cross-LOC trade in the first half of July 2006. The two sides exchanged indicative lists of goods for trade. It was agreed that the delegations from Chambers of Commerce from either side of the LOC will undertake visits at the earliest to discuss various aspects of the trade.

The two sides agreed that Poonch-Rawalakot bus service would commence from 19 June 2006. The procedures, documentation and modalities will be the same as for the Srinagar-Muzaffarabad bus service. Initially the bus service will operate on a fortnightly basis.
The two sides discussed modalities for operationalising the meeting points along the LOC as agreed upon earlier.

The two sides will report the progress in their talks to their respective Foreign Secretaries.

3588. Information provided by Official Spokesperson on the number of people traveled between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 26, 2006.

We also have some details on the travel between India and Pakistan this year, which has seen a significant increase. The travel figures for the first 5 months in 2006 indicate that about 1.70 lakh people moved across, both ways, between the two countries, using various modes of transport including air, train, bus and on foot. The details are:

By air, which includes both by Indian Airlines and Pakistan Airways of which there are 28 flights every week, a total of 83,994 people have traveled.

By train, i.e. by the weekly Thar Express and by the bi-weekly Samjhauta Express a total of 47,697 people have traveled.

By bus, a total of 8,013 people have traveled, while 28425 people crossed Wagah on foot. A total of 903 persons crossed LoC on foot or by bus.

Thus, a total of 1,69,032 people traveled. Clearly, air is the most widely used mode of transport, while train is a close second. Our High Commission has issued in these past five months nearly 33,000 visas.

Samjhauta Express between Delhi & Lahore and Thar Express between Munabao (Rajasthan) and Khokhrapar (Sind) have become important transportation linkages between India and Pakistan. In particular, Thar Express, which commenced in February 2006 with an average of 200 passengers per week, has gained in popularity carrying between 700 and 800 passengers a week by June 2006.

Question: Regarding the Thar Express which you have said is becoming more popular. How will it become more popular without the consulates in Karachi and Mumbai? What is the state of the consulate in Mumbai? Have we zeroed in one any building?
Official Spokesperson: Certainly, our hope and wish is that the consulates will open as fast as possible and that will certainly boost travel on this route and facilitate the issue of visas. But, notwithstanding that, the figures speak for themselves. There has been an increase. It is for Pakistan to zero in on the building. Everything is being done to facilitate that process as far as Indian Government is concerned, through the state government.

Media Briefing by Official Spokesperson on the question of Civilian Prisoners.
New Delhi, July 7, 2006.

In pursuance of the understanding between the Governments of India and Pakistan during Home Secretary level talks in Islamabad on 30-31 May 2006, India, on 30 June 2006 released 38 Pakistani civilian prisoners whose nationality had been confirmed and who had completed their sentences. The agreement between the two countries also provides for facilitating consular access by 31 July 2006 to the remaining civilian prisoners whose lists have been received by 15 June 2006. In implementation of this agreement, India will be providing consular access to Pakistani civilian prisoners as per the following time schedule. In Central Jail, Damdam, Kolkata 10-11 July, Central Jail, Jaipur 13-14 July, Central Jail, Amritsar, 20-21 July, Central Jail, Tihar, New Delhi, 27-28 July and Consular access to Pakistani fishermen is scheduled for 13 July 2006 at Jamnagar, Gujarat. At the same time, the Government of India hopes that the Government of Pakistan will reciprocate by providing consular access to 118 civilian prisoners and 192 fishermen in custody in Pakistan by 31 July 2006.

For your background information, currently there are 136 Indian prisoners in Pakistan and these are detailed in different categories as follows: Out of the 136, 16 are those to whom consular access has already been given and whose nationality confirmation is being awaited, 2 are those to whom consular access has already been given and whose nationality status has also been confirmed, and 118 are those for whom we have sought consular access.

❖ ❖ ❖ ❖ ❖
We have seen the remarks attributed to Ambassador Crocker. Coming from a democracy like United States, one would have expected Ambassador Crocker to understand that democratic governments have a primary responsibility to keep their own people fully informed.

The American Ambassador in Pakistan told a press conference in Islamabad: “India should communicate with Pakistan by having direct contact instead of talking about the Mumbai train blasts in the public”. Crocker added that the U.S. wanted Indian and Pakistani governments to discuss all the issues between them including Kashmir dispute to normalize their relations. “We hope that both the countries would keep all their channels open to rectify their misunderstandings,” he said, adding that accusing statements would serve no purpose.

This matter was also raised in the Rajya Sabha on November 23 and the Government reiterating said:

“The Government of India has taken cognizance of remarks made by US Ambassador to Pakistan, Ryan Crocker, on 3rd October, 2006 regarding evidence in the Mumbai train blasts.... As two democracies confronted with the common challenge of terrorism, U.S. and India have a robust dialogue on counter terrorism through the Joint Working Group on Counter Terrorism that was established in January 2000. The seventh meeting of the JWG on Counter Terrorism was held on 19-20 April 2006 in Washington. As part of this Dialogue, both sides continue to periodically exchange views on terrorism, including on cross border terrorism.”
3591. Media Briefing on Foreign Secretary level talks between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, November 14, 2006.

OFFICIAL SPOKESPERSON (SHRI NAVTEJ SARNA): Good evening ladies and gentlemen. This is a very brief factual update on the talks today.

As you know the Foreign Secretary level talks between India and Pakistan began this morning and they are continuing tomorrow. So, it would not be correct at this stage to go into too many details.

A very extensive discussion was held this morning between the two delegations led by the respective Foreign Secretaries. The discussion carried on over a working lunch. As you know, normally the Foreign Secretary level discussions are an occasion to review the composite dialogue process and that was done. This was a meeting to resume the composite dialogue, so to speak, which had not been held after the Mumbai blasts.

Part of the discussions naturally were focused on the declaration that was agreed to between Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Musharraf in Havana, the follow-up action being taken thereafter. The two sides also discussed the menace of terrorism and the proposed anti-terror mechanism under the Declaration.

They also discussed J & K which is normally discussed when Foreign Secretaries meet as part of the composite dialogue. As part of that, they discussed the confidence-building measures, in particular the cross-LOC confidence-building measures that had been proposed and were partially implemented.

The status of several other confidence-building measures which have been on the table was reviewed with the objective of pushing them forward to an early implementation. Other issues of bilateral relations which have been implemented in part or been constantly under review such as travel, such as the situation regarding civilian prisoners, fishermen, other CBMs dealing with non-conventional and conventional security issues, were discussed.

Economic and commercial relations between the two countries came up for discussion. As I said, this meeting will resume tomorrow and we will have much more details for you thereafter.

In the afternoon at about 4:30, the Pakistan Foreign Secretary and members of his delegation called on the External Affairs Minister, Shri Pranab Mukherjee. The call lasted for about half an hour. The External Affairs Minister reviewed the discussions held by the two Foreign Secretaries and gave his viewpoint in general terms on why it was important that both sides should fight the menace of terrorism jointly. He also welcomed the resumption of the dialogue process and underlined the need to address all issues as part of this process.

He also recalled some of the achievements of this dialogue process which have already borne fruit. For instance, the very positive change in atmosphere in the relationship between the two countries which was very much in evidence in the wake of the earthquake, when we had been able to make offers for rehabilitation and relief work to be carried out on the other side of the LOC. EAM also stressed to the delegations the need to take further action so that the expectation of the people of both countries can be fulfilled.

I am afraid, I know you have several questions, I have to leave it at that for today.

QUESTION: Regarding terrorism, did we share the evidence with them?

OFFICIAL SPOKESPERSON: I do not want to go into any more details. I think you will have a chance to discuss all these issues. This is an on-going meeting.

QUESTION: Was Siachen not discussed?

OFFICIAL SPOKESPERSON: I did not say that.

QUESTION: Was it discussed?

QUESTION: How will you describe today’s meeting, Sir?

OFFICIAL SPOKESPERSON: As I said, it was a very detailed meeting; it was held in a very constructive and positive atmosphere; and it is not over yet.

QUESTION: What was discussed ... OFFICIAL SPOKESPERSON: I do not want to go into discussions of what exactly was said or not. I did tell you that considerable amount of time was spent in discussing terrorism in the wake of the Havana Declaration.

QUESTION: What are the proposed CBMs? Siachen...?

OFFICIAL SPOKESPERSON: We will give you more details tomorrow as to what is being finalized. There are several CBMs which you are already aware of, which have not yet been implemented, in all fields. On Siachen, to give you a specific answer, this is something which has been informally discussed by the two Foreign Secretaries. So, there is no point in saying it was not discussed between 10 to 11 or it was not discussed between 11 to 12. These are on-going discussions. Subjects will possibly be discussed tomorrow again.

QUESTION: What is the programme for tomorrow?
OFFICIAL SPOKESPERSON: They will meet in the morning.

QUESTION: Is there going to be a joint press conference or statement?

OFFICIAL SPOKESPERSON: The statement I cannot yet say. If there is something produced and agreed, we will know only tomorrow. There are no plans for a joint press conference. We have a briefing by the Foreign Secretary in the afternoon tomorrow.

QUESTION: What was Pakistan’s response on our concerns on terrorism?

OFFICIAL SPOKESPERSON: I am not going go into the detailing of the whole dialogue. What I can say is that considerable time was spent on discussing terrorism and the External Affairs Minister also underlined the need to fight this jointly.

QUESTION: What about the nuclear risk reduction agreement?

OFFICIAL SPOKESPERSON: That is part of the discussions on the non-conventional security CBMs.

1. Later in the day when the Pakistani Foreign Secretary called on the External Affairs Minister, the latter “reviewed the discussions” that took place between the two Foreign Secretaries earlier in the day. He spoke in general terms about the need for both the sides to fight terrorism jointly. He “welcomed the resumption of the dialogue process, and underlined the need to address all issues as part of this process. He also recalled some of the achievements of the dialogue process.....”. Incidentally, External Affairs Minister did not wish to comment on the statement made by his Pakistani counterpart Khurshid Mehmud Kasuri that the Siachen issue could be resolved in a matter of days. Mukherjee said it was not necessary to react to every comment.
Question in the Lok Sabha: “Visit of External Affairs Minister to Pakistan”.

New Delhi, March 7, 2007.

Will the Minister of External Affairs be pleased to state:

(a) whether he visited Pakistan recently;
(b) if so, the details of the talks held on issues like Siachen, Terrorism, Prisoners of War, Economic and Trade Co-operation, Nuclear Risk Reduction and Group tourism and the outcome thereof;
(c) whether Pakistan has agreed to release prisoners of war languishing in their jails;
(d) if so, whether Pakistan has agreed to permit the relatives of the Indian prisoners of war in Pakistan jails to enable their identification; and
(e) the extent to which the said visit is likely to further improve the cordial relations between the two countries?

The Minister of External Affairs (Shri Pranab Mukherjee):

(a)-(e) A statement is placed on the Table of the House.

STATEMENT

(a) and(b) Yes. The External Affairs Minister visited Pakistan on January 13-14, 2007 to convey the invitation of Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh to Pakistan Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz to attend the 14th SAARC Summit to be held in New Delhi in April 2007. During his visit, EAM held bilateral talks with Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf, Pakistan Prime Minister Shaukat Aziz and Pakistan Foreign Minister Khurshid Mahmood Kasuri. Both sides agreed to establish a committee on prisoners comprising retired judges of the superior judiciary to visit jails in the two countries and propose steps to ensure humane treatment and expedite release of prisoners who have completed their prison terms; to expedite the liberalisation of the visa regime and agreed to complete the work in February 2007; that several agreements which are close to finalisation including the Agreement on a) Reducing the Risk from Accidents relating to Nuclear Weapons b) Speedy return of inadvertent Line Crossers and c) Prevention of incidents at Sea will be concluded during the February 2007 visit of Foreign Minister Kasuri to India. On Siachen, both sides discussed the issue and decided that the officials would meet at an early date to address the issue. Both sides also agreed to facilitate movement of diplomats to Noida and Gurgaon in India and Taxila and Hasan Abdal in Pakistan. Procedures for this will be worked out. They also agreed that the first meeting of joint anti-terrorism mechanism would take place before the end of March 2007. Regarding Sir Creek, the officials concerned will be directed to expedite their work. The joint survey of Sir Creek has begun on 15th January 2007. Both sides also decided to launch the Fourth Round of Composite Dialogue with the Foreign Secretary talks on 13-14 March 2007.

(c) - (e) According to available information there are 74 Indian PoWs in Pakistani Jails. However, Pakistan does not accept the presence of any Indian PoW in its jails. During EAM’s visit to Pakistan in January 2007, the matter was taken up with the Pakistani authorities and they have accepted to allow a delegation of families of PoWs to visit various Pakistani jails. We have proposed April 2007 for the above visit.

Replying to a supplementary EAM said:

Shri Pranab Mukherjee: In the Statement, I have already stated the number of areas which we covered during my discussion with the leaders of Pakistan. Primarily, the objective of the visit was to extend the invitation to Pakistani Prime Minister on behalf of our Prime Minister to attend the 14th SAARC Summit scheduled to be held in New Delhi. Naturally, I took the opportunity of having discussions on bilateral issues with President Musharraf, the Prime Minister Mr. Shaukat Aziz and my counterpart the Foreign Minister Mr. Kasuri. All these issues have been taken up.

So far as the Prisoners of Wars are concerned, I would submit that the consistent stand that Pakistan has taken is that there is no Prisoner of War in any Pakistani jail. This is not for the first time but several times, several Foreign Ministers have taken up this position. Now, it has been decided. I suggested to President Musharraf that the family members want to satisfy themselves. So, if an opportunity is being provided to them, a delegation of the family members would come. If the Pakistan Administration facilitates the visit to different jails in Pakistan, they themselves can go and it has been agreed. Some time in April, the delegations will be sent.

In respect of Siachen, 10 rounds of discussions have taken place including three which are now being conducted under the Composite Dialogue Process. It was decided that the official level discussions will begin once again. In respect of certain other areas like Sir Creek, as the joint survey has started from 15th January, it was decided to expedite it. A number of Confidence Building Measures were discussed by the leaders of Pakistan with me and those Confidence Building Measures are being pursued.

In response to another supplementary the Speaker observed that it had already replied but EAM observed: ‘Sir, I have already mentioned that Pakistan does not agree that there is any Prisoner of War in any Pakistan jail. Then, we insisted that we are receiving complaints from the family members of missing persons and so it would be desirable if you allow those family members to go and visit Pakistan.

Shri J. M. Aaron Rashid: Mr. Speaker, Sir, many persons who left from India to Pakistan have gone missing there. Does the Government have any list of such missing persons and will the Government allow their relatives to go to Pakistan and search for them whether they are in any jail there or in hospital or whether they have died? Does the Government have any statistics about such missing persons?

Shri Pranab Mukherjee: Sir, whenever Indian citizens go to any part of the world, naturally they report to our Missions there and our Missions keep track on them. But if some persons are missing and we come to know of it, definitely we try to ascertain about them and almost everyday I receive a number of letters from various Members of Parliament that such and such persons went to such and such country and there is no trace of them. In that case, through our Missions we try to locate them.

Answering another supplementary the External Affairs Minister observed: ‘Sir, there is no confusion anywhere. So far as the establishment of the Joint Anti-Terror Mechanism is concerned, it was decided during the meeting between President Musharraf and our Prime Minister at Havana in the margin of Non-Aligned Summit that efforts should be made to confront terrorism and to ensure that terrorist activities are completely neutralized. This exercise is going on. Successive Governments have undertaken this exercise and it is nothing new. The commitment of President Musharraf in this regard was reflected in the Joint Statement issued by the then Prime Minister Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee and President Musharraf on 6th January, 2004. At that time, it was agreed upon by President Musharraf that he would not allow Pakistan territory to be used by terrorists.

Therefore, we are insisting and we are talking that you fulfill your commitment. These talks are going on. Therefore, the entire issue is being discussed.

So far as Siachien is concerned, as I have told in reply to the earlier question, as many as 10 rounds of discussions have taken place between India and Pakistan on Siachien and some of these discussions took place during the earlier regime itself. This is an issue which we are trying to resolve through dialogue and discussion, but no decision has been taken so far. Therefore, there is no scope of confusion.”

Md. Salim: Sir, the development in the relations between India and Pakistan is taking a welcome route. Although, there are some minor irritants, I am not going to make a speech, I intend to ask the hon. Minister of External Affairs that for the SAARC Summit XI, he was supposed to go and invite the President of Pakistan, what happened in between that instead of inviting the President of Pakistan, he went to invite the Prime Minister of Pakistan.

We are constantly engaged in a composite dialogue process and there are some good developments which are welcome. But in between these are the irritants. The hon. House has to be apprised of the facts as to what happened behind the scene because there are some conflicting and contradictory reports appearing in the newspapers on this count.

Shri Pranab Mukherjee: There are no conflicting or contradictory reports. So far as SAARC Summit is concerned, it is the practice that either the Head of the Government or the Head of the State attends. For instance, in Sri Lanka, there is a Prime Minister, but normally the SAARC Summit is attended by the Sri Lankan President.

So far as Pakistan is concerned, even the Summit which took place at Islamabad, there also Pakistan was represented not by the President but by the Prime Minister and it is President Musharraf who indicated that we should extend an invitation to the Prime Minister. Therefore, I carried the invitation to the Prime Minister to invite him to attend the SAARC Summit.

Mr. Speaker: I am sure he will be a very honoured Guest here.

Shri P.C. Thomas: Sir, it has been recently reported that a young pilot from India, Shri Muralitharan, took an IAF plane in 1971 War to Pakistan and his aircraft was shot down near Peshawar. He got down through a parachute, but he was caught by the Pakistan Army and jailed. For the last 36 years, he is in the jail. His family members got letters from the Ministry regarding this that the enquiry is going on. I have brought it to the notice of the Ministry through letters.

Mr. Speaker: You cannot raise it just under any Question.

Shri P.C. Thomas: Sir, this is a very serious matter.

Mr. Speaker: Certainly a serious matter, but I do not know whether the hon. Minister has the information.
Shri P. C. Thomas: Sir, he has been in jail for the last 36 years. Sir, I have just now talked to the hon. Prime Minister also about this.

Mr. Speaker: You need not repeat it.

Shri P. C. Thomas: Sir, I would humbly request and seek information from the hon. Minister of External Affairs whether an immediate enquiry will be made in this matter and whether every effort will be made to bring him back to India.

Mr. Speaker: It is a serious matter, but I do not know whether the hon. Minister can reply to that.

Shri Pranab Mukherjee: Sir, so far as these issues are concerned, I have already replied that we have given a list of 74 persons as Prisoners of Wars, including the list of 54 persons who are missing since the War of 1971. The names are there and the incidents which the hon. Member has referred to have also been pointed out. Even during my visit I carried a book and a letter from the Chief of the Air Staff. I am fully aware of the agony of the relations and the family members because till today they are not aware of the exact facts. But it has been the persistent stand of Pakistan authorities to deny that anybody as Prisoner of War exists in any jail of Pakistan. That is why, the mechanism which I referred to in the earlier question is being thought of and let us try once again.

3593. Reported apprehensions of External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee regarding use of arms supplied by the United States to Pakistan.

New Delhi, September 7, 2007.

India is apprehensive that U.S. weapons being supplied to Pakistan could be used against it in the event of a war.

Citing a study conducted by a Washington based think tank, External Affairs Minister Pranab Mukherjee said, “This assistance (in weapons) is often justified as playing a critical role in the war on terrorism, whereas, in reality, the weapons systems are often ‘prestige items’ to help Pakistan in the event of a war with India. “The study emphasises that few of these weapons are likely to provide much help in rooting out the Al-Qaeda or the Taliban.”

Mr. Mukherjee said that of the $10-billion assistance provided by the U.S. to Pakistan over the past five-plus years, roughly 18 per cent or $1.8 billions had gone towards security assistance. This assistance was often justified as playing a critical role in the war with Pakistan but India did not subscribe to this view, he said.

“The Government of India’s position in this regard is well known. We are against an arms race in the region. [The] government’s concerns have been expressed to the U.S. and other nations. [The] government will take all necessary steps to safeguard India’s security,” said the Minister.

While expressing doubts over the efficacy of the U.S.-supplied defence platforms in the fight against terrorism, Mr. Mukherjee said the aid was tied to Islamabad’s performance in the fight against terrorism.

The ‘Implementing Recommendations of the 9/11 Commission Act of 2007’ signed into law by U.S. President George Bush last month has prescribed limitations on security assistance to Pakistan for fiscal 2008.

Funds for the subsequent years will depend on Pakistan showing progress in “preventing Al-Qaeda and other terrorist organisations from operating in the territory of Pakistan, including eliminating terrorist camps or facilities, arresting members and leaders of terrorist organisations and countering recruitment efforts.”

3594. Reaction of Official Spokesperson on Commonwealth’s decision to suspend Pakistan from its membership.

Kampala (Uganda), November 23, 2007.

We have noted the decision of the CMAG. Our hope remains that Pakistan will return to stability and democracy as soon as possible.

1. On November 23rd India joined other Commonwealth countries in endorsing the decision of the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group consisting of Foreign Ministers among others of Lesotho, Sri Lanka, England, Canada, Tanzania to suspend Pakistan from the association, “pending the restoration of democracy and the rule of law” in that country.

   (India is not a member of the Group) The decision was taken the previous night. The CMAG decision was endorsed by the Heads of Delegation meeting in the first executive session, soon after Queen Elizabeth II addressed the formal Commonwealth Heads of Government Summit, 2007. Foreign Secretary Shivshankar Menon distanced himself from a suggestion that Pakistan was creating instability in the region. “We know Pakistani territory is used by groups which engage in all sorts of activities — terrorism, drug trafficking... There are groups in Pakistan which export various forms of instability... It is different than saying Pakistan is doing it.”

   On November 20 while traveling from New Delhi to Singapore for the India-ASEAN Summit, the Prime Minister told the accompanying media that he sincerely hoped that Pakistan would find “pragmatic, practical and effective means” to overcome the “difficulties”, through which the country is passing.

   “I have said on more than one occasion that destinies of our two countries are very closely interlinked. A strong, prosperous, stable, peaceful and democratic Pakistan is in our interest.”
INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS

NO WAR DECLARATION
New Delhi, November 27, 1950.

Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan's reply to my letter of the 24th November reached me about 8 o'clock last night. It has not been possible, therefore, to include it in the printed correspondence that I am laying on the table. A cyclostyled copy, however, will be circulated to Hon'ble Members. Naturally, there has not been time since I received Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan's letter to send an answer. We shall do so as soon as possible, and a copy of it will be furnished to members. Meanwhile, I should like to make brief comments on some of the points arising out of the Pakistan Prime Minister's latest communication. Most of them have been dealt with fully in my previous communications and I shall answer them fully in my written reply to him. What I say now is said in no spirit of controversy; the importance of good relations between India and Pakistan is too great for any of us to imperil their future by words that excite passion. At the same time, we have to make our own position clear.

Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan has referred to the tone of the press throughout India, and particularly in West Bengal, towards the Delhi Agreement. I have had occasion previously to express my regret over the attitude of certain newspapers towards the Agreement that Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan and I signed last April. It is not fair, however, to accuse the entire Indian press. On the whole, the leading newspapers of this country have dealt with the Agreement helpfully and in a spirit of responsibility, and even the tone of some that were once hostile improved considerably after a while. If now and then, there has been criticism of the Pakistan Government that has been due to many causes not a few of which it is in the power of the Pakistan Government to remove. As for the alleged activities of certain individuals, they are of no consequence and one should not take serious notice of them. In any case, what counts is the firm resolve of the Government of India to implement that Agreement in full.

In Junagadh, it was the will of the people that prevailed, not any military effort by India. Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan's reference to large scale military movements of Indian forces towards the borders of Pakistan during the Bengal troubles is a misunderstanding of our action. We had no desire then to attack Pakistan, just as we have none to attack her now. Our measures were purely defensive, and taken during a period of high tension when we should have failed in our duty if we had not taken all precautions for the security of the country.

I am glad to note that, in reply to my declaration, made some months ago at a press conference that India would not resort to war in Kashmir, Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan has stated that Pakistan has no intention of attack-ing India. As for his other arguments regarding Kashmir, I do not pro-pose to answer them at length since our position has been made clear re-peatedly. I would only say that while we sent our forces to Kashmir after the Government of the State had lawfully acceded to India, with the full approval of its most numerous and representative popular party, Pakistan sent its troops into what had become Indian Territory, without any justification. As for the settlement of the Kashmir dispute, we have resiled from none of the assurances that we have given to the people of Jammu and Kashmir or to the United Nations.

I shall not go into the Canal Waters dispute here, beyond saying that nothing that we have said is inaccurate. The statement attributed by the Prime Minister of Pakistan to our representatives was made by our re-presentatives on a sub – committee, whose report, on the subject of canal waters, was not accepted by the Punjab Partition Committee, because of the fundamental differences that existed over the question of the distribu-tion of the waters.

Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan has said that he is convinced that a war between India and Pakistan would be an unmitigated disaster for both countries. He has given the assurance that he will continue to work for peace. I fully share this conviction and have affirmed it on many occasions. India's will to peace is no less than that of Pakistan and I can, here and now, give a common assurance that we shall continue to work for peace with our neighbour.

The discussions between Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan and me that preceded the Delhi Agreement brought out fully the value of personal contacts. I fully believe in them. Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan has kindly invited me to pay another visit to Karachi as soon as my duties permit. My duty here in Parliament and other preoccupations makes a visit to Karachi difficult for the next few weeks. I welcome, however, Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan's invita-tion and shall avail myself of it as soon as circumstances permit.

3596. Press briefing by Pakistan’s Foreign Secretary Riaz Piracha on Pakistan making a formal offer of a ‘No-war pact’ to India.

New Delhi, October 31, 1981.

Pakistan’s Foreign Secretary Riaz Piracha said at New Delhi on October 31 that his country had formally sent to India its proposal for a no-war pact and was now “awaiting India’s formal response to it”.

Talking to newsmen at the Delhi airport on his way to Kathmandu, Mr. Piracha said Pakistan had made the proposal “in good faith and particularly at this time and precisely because of the existing circumstances.”

Asked how Pakistan was proposing a no-war pact when it had rejected several such offers from India in the past, he said: “Does it negate it?” It was a matter of history and one could go into it, he added.

He also stressed that the offer had been made in good faith and deserved “serious consideration” by India.

 Asked how he saw the present state of Indo-Pakistan relations in the light of the present situation in the region, Mr. Piracha said “I hope the relations can improve still further”.

About the possibility of a visit to India by Foreign Minister Agha Shahi, he said the joint statement issued at the end of Mr. Narasimha Rao’s visit to Islamabad in June had mentioned that the visit would take place by the year’s end. “I am sure that our hosts have very much that in mind.” It was a matter of settling dates and discussions were going on through diplomatic channels, he said.

7-point Aide Memoire given to Government of Pakistan on December 24, 1981.

The Foreign Secretary of Pakistan had given note No. IND (P–I)/1/2/81 on November 22, 1981 to the Ambassador of India in Islamabad about discussions for a Non-aggression pact.

2. In the Note now given by the High Commission of India in Pakistan to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs it has said that the Government of India is always in favour of any discussions aimed at promoting peace and friendship between the two countries. The initial discussions could be held during the visit of Foreign Minister of Pakistan to India. The Minister for External Affairs, Government of India, has separately written to His Excellency Mr. Agha Shahi about the visit.

3. The elements of an agreement on Non-aggression and Non-use of Force between India and Pakistan which have been reiterated by the Government of India on different occasions, are:

(i) The Simla Agreement of July 2, 1972 shall be the basis for friendly and harmonious relations between the two countries.

(ii) The primary objective of the two countries is to provide a better and fuller life for their peoples.

(iii) To achieve the above, a tension-free atmosphere has to be created so that the valuable resources of the two countries can be husbanded for productive nation-building activities.

(iv) The pre-requisite for good-neighbourliness and durable peace between them is a commitment by both countries to the well-known five principles of peaceful co-existence which include respect for each other's territorial integrity and sovereignty and non-interference in each other's internal affairs.

(v) The relations between the two countries have to be based on the principle of equality, mutual benefit and bilateralism.

(vi) They will not, in any circumstances, resort to war or use or threaten to use force for the settlement of any disputes between them and all such disputes shall be settled on a bilateral basis and by peaceful means.

(vii) Both countries reiterate their firm commitment to the policy of non-alignment, the essence of which is non-involvement in great power confrontation.

INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS

NUCLEAR
3598. Statement of Ambassador B. C. Mishra in response to the Statement of Pakistani Ambassador Naik made on July 16, 1974 at the Conference of Committee of Disarmament.

Geneva, July 20, 1974.

My delegation notices that the distinguished Ambassador of Pakistan has answered in his own way only part of my question. In the meeting of the CCD on July 11, I had asked the following question and I quote: “The question I have to ask and again I ask it for my understanding is that if the Government of Pakistan is concerned about nuclear testing in general and not merely India’s nuclear explosion which, as I said, is for peaceful purposes, why has the Government of Pakistan not adhered to the Partial Test Ban Treaty? And why even after nuclear explosion conducted by India for peaceful purposes on May 18, when some nuclear weapon tests in atmosphere by other countries took place, nothing was said?”

From the answer given by the delegation of Pakistan we take note that Pakistan has declared that it cannot be expected legally to foreclose its nuclear option. Clearly what we have been discussing here are matters of bilateral concern. We have been asked as to why India, if it is sincere about its renunciation of nuclear armaments, why it does not follow Pakistan's example and place all its nuclear facilities under international safeguards? It is not a question of universality of acceptance of safeguards but why India does not?

In appropriate forum for this particular question, i.e. question of safeguards, Government of India has made its position amply clear. We are for safeguards which are applicable universally and on a non-discriminatory basis. That has been our position and it remains same.

For the last few meetings we have been noticing that the question of security of one country is being raised. A question which is of bilateral concern, not of universal application. To that my delegation has following to say: we intend to utilize nuclear energy solely for peaceful purposes. If Pakistan is genuinely concerned about its security, we are prepared to make as we have in the past, a sincere effort to allay fears and suspicions. But the way to security does not lie in propaganda, in frantic efforts to persuade the international community to put pressure on India. The Prime Minister of India wrote to the Prime Minister of Pakistan on May 22 this year and with your permission, Mr. Chairman, I should like to quote from her letter. She said:

“We remain committed to settle all our differences with Pakistan peacefully through bilateral negotiations in accordance with Simla Agreement. Moreover both countries have resolved to break away from the past history of confrontation and conflict and to work to develop normal relations and establish durable peace. I am sure you will acknowledge that the agreements which have been worked out between our two countries in the last two years have been reached on the basis of absolute equality. There is no reason whatsoever to give up this healthy trend or have a change of policy on the part of either country merely because we have conducted a test for the peaceful uses of nuclear energy."

CCD is a multinational negotiating body for disarmament. There is a tradition here to avoid discussion of problems of bilateral nature, in whatever garb they might be brought. We should like to respect that tradition. If Pakistan is opposed to all nuclear weapon tests, this is the proper forum for negotiations on that subject. We cannot agree, however, that India’s nuclear explosion for peaceful purposes should become the object of discussion on the basis of unfounded bilateral concern. We are prepared to discuss principles of universal applicability and to negotiate disarmament agreements based on such principles. We will not discriminate against others nor shall we agree to become the object of discrimination. This is India’s fundamental approach to problems of disarmament as it is to all aspects of international relations.

Today the distinguished Ambassador of Pakistan has mentioned something about radio activity having leaked out from the Indian explosion for peaceful purposes. The Atomic Energy Commission of India had denied this report when it was put out from Pakistan some weeks ago. There was no venting from this explosion. If there had been venting, the wind currents would have brought in such debris further into the State of Rajasthan itself and not the other way. We are committed to respect the provisions of Partial Test Ban Treaty, but we do not understand as to how a country which is not a party to the PTB, tries to take advantage of that treaty. The claim that there was venting, that there was radioactive debris leaked into Pakistan from this explosion is a figment of imagination. We can guess as to why this claim is made. We have stated that we have not violated any international agreement, any international treaty, in conducting this explosion. The effort of Pakistan is to charge that India has violated the PTB. With all the emphasis at my command I deny this allegation.

I should like to revert, Mr. Chairman, to my earlier remarks and to emphasize that this is a multinational negotiating body, this is not a body which deals with bilateral problems. There are so many bilateral or regional problems in the world. If we were to begin to deal with them here, I am quite sure that we would not make any progress in our real task which is disarmament.

3599. Statement by Indian Minister of State for External Affairs Khurshed Alam Khan in the Rajya Sabha in response to a Calling Attention Notice on Pakistan’s move to acquire nuclear weapons.

New Delhi, August 7, 1985.

The non peaceful dimension of Pakistan’s nuclear programme has been a matter of concern for India. Contrary to the claims by Pakistan’s leaders, available evidence and public statements by Pakistan scientists suggest that Pakistan has been pursuing the objective of acquiring the wherewithal to manufacture nuclear weapons. Reports which have appeared from time to time in the international media in this regard, particularly about the clandestine procurement of nuclear equipment and components by Pakistan, have reinforced our apprehensions.

Our concerns on this subject which have been conveyed on different occasions to the Government of Pakistan at various levels were reiterated during the recent visit of the Foreign Secretary of Pakistan.

Government are concerned at the likelihood of Pakistan acquiring nuclear weapons which would result in qualitative change in the security environment in our region. India remains committed to developing nuclear technology for peaceful purposes. However, we cannot but take into account those developments in our neighbourhood which have grave implications for our security. I wish to assure the House that Government have been keeping, and will continue to keep, a constant vigil on all developments having a bearing on the country’s security.
Excerpts from the Interview of Pakistan President Zia-ul-Haq to the Time

[In an exclusive interview with TIME, General Mohammed Zia ul Haq, Pakistan's President, set the record straight and in the process seemed to be heralding the arrival of his country as a closest nuclear power.]

As he sat flanked by two aides in his office at Islamabad's Aiwan –e-Sadar, the House of the Presidency, Zia was asked by TIME New Delhi Bureau Chief Ross H. Munro about persistent reports that Pakistan could build a nuclear weapon in less than a month. The President's blunt answer: You can virtually write today that Pakistan can build a nuclear bomb whenever it wishes. What is difficult about a bomb? Once you have acquired the technology, which Pakistan has you can do whatever you like.

Did that mean Pakistan had actually built the Bomb, or intended to? On both questions, Zia answered no, even as he maintained a studied ambiguity that mirrored in some respects that of India, which also says it can produce nuclear weapons while insisting that it has not taken that step said Zia. “You can use the atomic device for peaceful purpose only. You can also utilize it for military purposes. We have never said that we have neither the intention nor the desire.”

Zia’s clarification came in the wake of a widely circulated interview last January with Abdul Qadeer Khan, the head of Pakistan’s nuclear research program, in which the scientist reportedly told an Indian journalist that Pakistan had reached the nuclear threshold. Khan subsequently denied having said any such thing. And just two weeks ago, Prime Minister M.K. Junejo told TIME “Pakistan can set at rest any doubts which may exist regarding our peaceful nuclear program”.

In last week's interview, however Zia seemed to be creating a fresh aura of uncertainty surrounding Pakistan's nuclear plans. When asked by Munro if he could visit Kahuta, Pakistan’s main nuclear research facility, Zia grew evasive.

Question: Can we visit Kahuta?

Zia: Unfortunately not yet.

Question: Why not?

Zia: There is nothing in Kahuta.

Question: So why can’t we visit?

Zia: There is a certain facility but no atom bombs.
Question: So why can’t we go see for ourselves?
Zia: Because once the cat is out of the bag. What will be left that is controversial?
Question: We know that Kahuta is the bag. But what is the cat?
Zia: The cat is lying in Kahuta.
Question: Define the cat.
Zia: the cat is Pakistan’s peaceful nuclear program.

Question: You just laid it on the table. The cat is the uncertainty. The uncertainty about what is going on at Kahuta is your great asset, isn’t it?
Zia: Uncertainty created for specific reasons. Once that uncertainty goes, you will never talk with me.

While uncertainty remains as to Pakistan’s intentions, little doubt lingers about its capabilities. That fact, now in the open, could have widespread repercussions among Pakistan’s friend, neighbours and enemies. In Washington, Congress is considering a 5.02 billion military and economic aid bill for Pakistan that may face tougher going in the wake of Zia’s revelation. In New Delhi, the Khan interview earlier this year triggered appeals by hawks that India build a nuclear arsenal, calls that Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi has thus far resisted. Though Zia did not rule out the possibility of a future confrontation, border tensions between Pakistan and India are easing as both countries continue to pull back troops from sensitive frontier areas.

Learning of Zia’s remarks on the nuclear question, U.S. diplomats in Islamabad attempted to put the best possible face on the revelation. U.S. Ambassador Deane Hinton said he viewed Zia’s openness as a beneficial development: “One can now discuss things a little more reasonably. This changes the pattern of discussion, and think it makes it easier to deal with this in the U.S., Congress.” U.S. Congressmen, he said, “would rather face the issue: Are we going to support Pakistan even though they have this capability?”

During the interview, Zia showed little visible concern that an angry U.S. Congress might delay or even kill the aid package proposed for Pakistan by the Reagan Administration. Pakistan’s control of the arms pipeline to the Mujahedin and its need for a strong defence against possible attack across the Afghanistan frontier, Zia apparently believes will continue to serve as handy levers to ensure uninterrupted U.S. assistance. “I am untroubled,” the President said, “because I think the United States of America - the Senators and the Congressmen - will look to the higher national interest rather than this tiddly widdly Pakistan nuclear program.” If Congress should get testy, Zia would no doubt firmly reiterate his contention that Pakistan, though capable of going nuclear, has not actually done so. Said he: “I give assurances that Pakistan is not indulging in a nuclear experiment for military purposes”.

In Washington, news of Zia’s remarks provoked some dismay. Past explanations that Pakistan was not working on the Bomb could now be interpreted as misleading, yet Congress will be in a corner. By continuing to insist that it does not have nuclear weapons, Pakistan makes it possible for the aid package to slip past the hurdle of the Symington Amendment, which bars U.S. assistance to any new member of the nuclear club. Congress can still stop the bill, but as Zia plainly knows, there will be bipartisan reluctance to jeopardize support for the Afghan mujahedin. “I find myself on the horns of a real dilemma,” said U.S. Senator John Glenn last week. “I want the arms flow to Afghanistan. I want to work with the Pakistan, but if we knuckle under on this one, where will it stop? I’m concerned that the Indians will say, O.K., the Pakistanis have the Bomb, so now we’ll go thermonuclear.” In the end, Congress may not have the stomach to turn its back on Pakistan. said Thomas Thornton, a professor of Asian studies at the Johns Hopkins School for Advanced International Studies: “What Pakistan has done is move to the stage at which Israel” finds itself. So, do we beat up on the Israelis and the Pakistanis?”

3601. Excerpts from the interview of Pakistan Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo on Pakistan’s nuclear capability.

Q: In a recent interview President Zia ul Haq admitted to “Time” magazine that Pakistan had the capability to make a nuclear weapon. He was, however ambiguous about, whether it had developed a bomb. So let me bluntly ask you, does Pakistan have a nuclear bomb?

A: I have said very clearly, off and on, wherever I have been especially when I went last year on my trip to Europe and to the United States – this was an important issue that was always put to me, that what is the situation of Pakistan and the nuclear policy and I made it very clear to them. I said Pakistan is not a well of country with a population of 100 million people, and we have no intention of taking up this exercise but we have the problems within the country and we would like to overcome the problems, and we would like to develop the nuclear system to the extent that it can meet our requirements.
Q: Are you therefore saying that Pakistan does not have a nuclear bomb?
A: No, we don’t have. It is a question of enrichment is concerned we have the capability for a peaceful purpose.

Q: In that case, is Pakistan about to develop a nuclear weapon or is it near developing a nuclear weapon?
A: We have no intention of developing a nuclear weapon.

Q: How then do you account for the clear admission that Pakistan has a nuclear bomb in a recent interview by Dr. Abdul Qadeer Khan?
A: I think A.Q. Khan's interview has been sometimes quoted in different situations. But even in the interview which has appeared in the newspapers, he has very clearly mentioned that Pakistan does not have a bomb.

Q: But in that interview he says and I quote, “what the CIA has been saying about our possessing the bomb is correct” he also says. ‘they told us that Pakistan could never produce the bomb and they doubted my capabilities, but they now know we have done it’. Now those are clear admissions.
A: I thing this goes this way that those who are interested to print this news they have put it from their angle, but otherwise in the last statement, Mr. A.Q. Khan gave it was very clearly mentioned by him, “No, I have not mentioned this issue”, This is what he has said. Now off and on different kinds of statements are issued in the name of A.Q. khan. So, I don’t think that requires to be further clarified at my level, because when I say something on the issue that should be taken as the final thing.

Q: So in other words you believe that Mr. A.Q. Khan has been misquoted by the Press abroad?
A: Yes, by and large that is correct.

Q: You have said earlier that you believe Pakistan has no intention of developing a bomb. Under what circumstances might your country consider developing a bomb?
A: I don’t know why everybody talks about Pakistan, whether Pakistan has reached that capability or Pakistan is interested in that. Why don’t you talk about other countries? I mean when you are worried about the nuclear bomb in this region, why don’t you ask me whether India has the capability or not. You talk about other countries, even in the Middle East they are doing it, Israelis are doing, but none asks about that. They are interested in Pakistan And when Pakistani leaders make it very clear that we have neither the capability nor intention nor resources, then still they question us.

Statement issued by the Official Spokesman of the Ministry of External Affairs on acquisition of blue prints from foreign sources for the building of a nuclear bomb by Pakistan.

New Delhi, April 2, 1996.

In response to a question the official spokesman said that we have seen reports in the US press about the acquisition of blue prints from foreign sources for the building of a nuclear bomb by Pakistan. These reports provide yet another confirmation of the relentlessness and duplicity with which Pakistan has pursued its clandestine nuclear weapons programme. There is by now too much evidence to permit any objective observer to take an equivocal stand on the Pakistani nuclear programme. It was, as India has consistently maintained, in conception a programme designed to equip Pakistan with nuclear weapons; it continues to be so today.

It is dangerous for regional peace and stability to equip such a country with substantial quantities of conventional weapons. We hope that the countries which propose to do so will take heed of the warnings which are emanating from recent reports regarding Pakistan’s acquisition of materials for its nuclear weapons programme.
3603. Media briefing by Official Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office to developments attending on the detonation of nuclear device by India.

Islamabad, May 14, 1998.

The Foreign Office spokesman said on May 14 that Pakistan has been advised restraint by foreign powers which ignored and dismissed Islamabad’s warnings and encouraged India to “go ahead and cross the Rubicon” leading to the “irreversible situation.”

Replying to questions about the Indian nuclear tests, he said the Federal cabinet at its three-hour meeting on May 14 resolved to meet the unprecedented threat to Pakistan disregarding any external pressures which might be “unilateral, selective and discriminatory” in matters pertaining to national security and sovereignty.

[This was the first official Press briefing after the Indian explosions on May 11 and May 13 at Pokhran in Rajasthan firing range.]

He said the Indian nuclear tests demonstrated “operationalisation of India’s grandiose ambitions” to be counted as an additional member to the exclusive Nuclear Club of Five and its hegemonic designs. It also showed India wish “to ride on its nuclear status” to claim a seat in the UN Security Council as its new permanent member.

The spokesman, replying to repeated questions from newsmen, seeking in “unambiguous” language what might be Pakistan’s response to the India nuclear explosions, said in what he described as “advisedly (cautionary) words”, that while contemplating on Pakistan’s response, “we have tried to take into account all dimensions of the unprecedented and unparalleled threat to the region”.

“Pakistan in terms of action will keep in view the threat it faces to its national security and interests”, he said adding: “We will give a well considered, sober, mature and comprehensive response.”

He, however, recalled that the cabinet at its meeting had reaffirmed its resolve to take all necessary steps within its sovereign rights for self-defence and said there should be no doubt about the effective defence preparedness to respond to the emerging situation.

Asked whether Pakistan still remained committed to its known position that it would sign the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT) of 1996, if India does so, the spokesman said the Indian nuclear tests had irrevocably altered the strategic environment and changed the strategic balance in the region and rendered all nuclear non-proliferation instruments and efforts “irrelevant”. It was now for the entire world to contemplate how to contend with the changed scenario, he added.

Asked what would be the fate of stalemated talks between the Pakistan and Indian Foreign Secretaries in the changed political scenario, the spokesman replied: “The (Pakistan) Prime Minister’s initiative for resumption of negotiations with India stays as part of our foreign policy”. A dialogue is always useful, he said and believed that a meeting between Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee was likely to take place when they attend the next SAARC summit in July in Sri Lanka.

The spokesman said that Pakistan would welcome a dialogue with the Americans “who are our friends” to convey to them Pakistan’s natural concerns on the present regional situation. A high-level US team of officials headed by Assistant Secretary of State Strobe Talbot is due in Islamabad for talks with Pakistan Foreign Ministry and government leaders.

He said Pakistan had been in contact with the Chinese leaders who were the most trustworthy of this country’s friends. He said envoys of all the OIC, SAARC member countries and some other states had been briefed by the Foreign Office.

The spokesman, however, made no direct response when asked whether was it not odd that hardly any “brotherly” state of the OIC or SAARC denounced Indian nuclear threat which the government in Islamabad directly aimed against Pakistan and to destabilize the region.

The spokesman said there was no intention to recall the Pakistan High Commissioner from Delhi. He was asked whether Pakistan intended to follow Australia and New Zealand which recalled their envoys as a protest against Indian tests.

3604. Text of the Resolution Adopted by the UN Security Council on 6 June 1998 on India and Pakistan Nuclear Tests

Reaffirming the statements of its President of 14 May 1998 (S/PRST/1998/12) and of 29 May 1998 (S/PRST/1998/187),

Reiterating the statement of its President of 31 January 1992 (S/23500), which stated, inter alia, that the proliferation of all weapons of mass destruction constitutes a threat to international peace and security,

Gravely concerned at the challenge that the nuclear tests conducted by India and then by Pakistan constitute to international efforts aimed at strengthening the global regime of non proliferation of nuclear weapons, and also gravely concerned at the danger to peace and stability in the region.

Deeply concerned at the risk of a nuclear arms race in South Asia and determined to prevent such a race.

Reaffirming the crucial importance of Treaty on the Non Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons of the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty for global efforts towards nuclear non proliferation and nuclear disarmament.

Recalling the principles and objectives for nuclear non proliferation and disarmament adopted by the 1995 Review and extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and the successful outcome of that Conference, Affirming the need to continue to move with determination towards the full realization and effective implementation of all the provisions of the Treaty on the Non Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and welcoming the determination of the five nuclear weapons States to fulfil their commitments relating to nuclear disarmament under Article VI of that Treaty.

Mindful of its primary responsibility under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security.

1. Condemns the nuclear tests conducted by India on 11 and 13 May 1998 and by Pakistan on 28 and 30 May 1998.

2. Endorses the joint Communiqué issued by the Foreign Ministers of China, France, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America at their meeting in Geneva on 4 June 1998 (S/1998/473):

3. Demands that India and Pakistan refrain from further nuclear tests and in this context calls upon all States not to carry out any nuclear weapon test explosion or any other nuclear explosion in accordance with the provisions of the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty.

4. Urges India and Pakistan to exercise maximum restraint and to avoid threatening military movements, cross border violations, or other provocations in order to prevent an aggravation of the situation;

5. Urges India and Pakistan to resume the dialogue between them on all outstanding issues, particularly on all matters pertaining to peace and security, in order to remove the tensions between them, and encourages them to find mutually acceptable solutions that address the root causes of those tensions, including Kashmir;

6. Welcomes the efforts of the Secretary-General to encourage India and Pakistan to enter into dialogue:

7. Calls upon India and Pakistan immediately to stop their nuclear weapon development programmes, to refrain from weaponisation or from the deployment of nuclear weapons, to cease development of ballistic missiles capable of delivering nuclear weapons and any further production of fissile material for nuclear weapons, to confirm their policies not to export equipment, materials or technology that could contribute to weapons of mass destruction or missiles capable of delivering them and to undertake appropriate commitments in that regard.

8. Encourages all States to prevent the export of equipment, materials or technology that could in any way assist programmes in India or Pakistan for nuclear weapons or for ballistic missiles capable of delivering such weapons, and welcomes national policies adopted and declared in this respect;

9. Expresses its grave concern at the negative effect of the nuclear tests conducted by India and Pakistan on peace and stability in South Asia and beyond;

10. Reaffirms its full commitment to and the crucial importance of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty as the cornerstones of the international regime on the non proliferation of nuclear weapons and as essential foundations for the pursuit of nuclear disarmament.

11. Expresses its firm conviction that the international regime on the non proliferation of nuclear weapons should be maintained and consolidated and recalls that in accordance with the Treaty on the Non Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons India or Pakistan cannot have the status of a nuclear weapon State;

12. Recognises that the tests conducted by India and Pakistan constitute a serious threat to global efforts towards nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament;

13. Urges India and Pakistan, and all other States that have not yet done so, to become Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and to the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty without delay and without conditions;

14. Urges India and Pakistan to participate, in a positive spirit and on the basis of the agreed mandate, in negotiations at the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva on a treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, with a view to reaching early agreement.

15. Requests the Secretary General to report urgently to the Council on the steps taken by India and Pakistan to implement the present resolution;

16. Expresses its readiness to consider further how best to ensure the implementation of the present resolution;

17. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

3605. Statement of Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee on the Resolution adopted by the UN Security Council on nuclear tests.

New Delhi, June 8, 1998.

Sir,

Hon'ble Members are aware of the resolution adopted on 6 June 1998 by the United Nations Security Council. I would like to take the House into confidence on our position on this matter.

2. We regret that the Security Council has acted in a manner in which it has and produced a Resolution which is completely unhelpful in respect of the objectives it seeks to address. The Resolution contains a number of references to nuclear non proliferation. As I had mentioned in my earlier statement in the House, we are a responsible and committed member of the international community. The Resolution urges us not to carry out any nuclear weapon test explosions. For India, such an urging is redundant because we have already instituted a voluntary moratorium. We have also indicated our willingness to explore ways and means of converting this undertaking into a de jure obligation. Further, we have made clear our readiness to engage in multilateral negotiations on a Fissile Materials Cut off Treaty in the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva. We cannot, however, be expected to commit ourselves in advance of these negotiations, to unilaterally restrain production of fissile materials. In keeping with our commitment to non proliferation, we maintain the strictest controls over exports of nuclear materials and technologies. Our record in this regard has been impeccable and better than that of some countries who are parties to the NPT or members of the Nuclear Suppliers’ Group or even Permanent Members of the UN Security Council.

3. However, the call made in the Resolution that we should stop our nuclear programmes or missile programmes is unacceptable. Decisions in this regard will be taken by the Government on the basis of our own assessments and national security requirements, in a reasonable and responsible manner. This right, which we claim for ourselves is not something new; it is the right of every sovereign country, and a right that every Government in this country has strongly upheld for the last 50 years.

4. A glaring lacuna in the Resolution is the total absence of a recognition that the non proliferation issue is not a regional issue but has to be dealt with in a non discriminatory global context. We find it unfortunate that the UN Security Council Resolution does not reflect on the judgement of the highest international judicial body – the International Court of Justice, which has questioned the legitimacy of nuclear weapons and called for urgent negotiations for their elimination. In the paper on the Evolution of India’s Nuclear Policy laid on the Table of this House, we have reiterated our commitment to nuclear disarmament. Let me categorically state that unlike other nuclear weapon states who have sought to retain their exclusive hold over their nuclear arsenals, India has no such ambition. Government is committed to initiatives that can open negotiations for a global convention for the elimination of all nuclear weapons. The attempt to project the recent tests by India as a threat to peace and security is totally misguided and grossly out of focus. Such a portrayal of our policy ignores the positive steps announced by Government to which I have already referred, both in the global disarmament framework and the regional context. Our tests were necessary because of the failure of a flawed non proliferation regime, and, therefore, we categorically reject the notion that these have adversely affected either regional or global security.
5. Government have indicated willingness to engage in a meaningful dialogue with key interlocutors on the whole range of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation issues. Last week, Special Envoy Shri Brajesh Mishra visited Paris and London in this regard. He had meetings at the senior most levels in the two capitals. Dialogues with other countries are also planned. These dialogues have to be seen as part of a process, a process that will lead to a better understanding of India’s position.

6. Hon’ble Members are aware that India has always desired a peaceful, friendly, and mutually beneficial relationship with Pakistan based on confidence and respect for each other’s concerns. I have already said on the floor of both Houses, and I would like to reiterate, that a secure and prosperous Pakistan is in India’s interest. Our vision of our bilateral relationship is not confined to a resolution of outstanding issues, but is also directed to the future by seeking to building a stable structure of cooperation, which will benefit the people of both countries. As I wrote recently to Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif, we must not remain mired in the past, behind us, let us think of the welfare of our children and grand children.

7. We have remained committed to a path of direct bilateral dialogue with Pakistan. This reflects the nations’ conviction and confidence that it is only through direct discussions in a sustained and constructive manner that we can move ahead in our bilateral relationship. I would again like to reiterate our desire for the earliest resumption of the official talks with Pakistan. The subjects for discussions including peace and security, (along with confidence building measures) Jammu and Kashmir, economic and commercial cooperation and cross border terrorism have been identified. Our proposals for the modalities of these talks have been with Pakistan since January this year. We await their response. We have also made it clear once again that there is no place for outside involvement of any nature whatsoever in our dialogue process with Pakistan.

8. Hon’ble Members have expressed strong reservations against attempt to internationalize the Kashmir issue. There is simply no question of India ever agreeing to such internalization. UN Security Council has chosen to mention Kashmir in its Resolution. This is unacceptable and does not change the reality that the State of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of the Indian Union. I would also like to draw the attention of the Hon’ble Members to the terms in which Kashmir finds mention in the resolution. The UN Security Council has recognized that bilateral dialogue has to be the basis of India-Pakistan relations and mutually acceptable solutions have to be found for outstanding issues including Kashmir. This is in keeping with our position.

Letter from Prime Minister Atal Behari Vajpayee to UN Secretary General on nuclear tests.

New Delhi, June 30, 1998.

Excellency,

I recall our telephone conversation last month. Subsequently, my colleague, Mr. Jaswant Singh had also met you in New York during his visit to attend the Special Session of the General Assembly on the World Drug Problem. I have also received earlier you letters of 14 and 29 May, 1998. we are also looking forward to your visit to India and to substantive talks on global issues.

We appreciate the independent role of the UN Secretary General under the Charter, and your personal contribution to the United Nations. We have taken particular note of your remarks on the need for global disarmament. Lack of meaningful progress in this field has been one of the major failings of the non proliferation regime. Our nuclear tests were a response to proliferation of nuclear weapons and ballistic missiles in our immediate neighbourhood, which had already taken place. They were aimed at creating a deterrent to ensure our security.

Immediately after our tests, we introduced a number of proposals, including a moratorium on nuclear testing. Which we are prepared to convert into a de jure obligation. We are also willing to negotiate a Fissile Material Cut off. You are aware of our regime of stringent export controls. We remain committed to the complete elimination of all nuclear weapons, on the lines of the Biological and Chemicals Weapon Conventions. Of both of which we are a State Party. The essence of our position is that the regime must be global and non discriminatory, and cannot arbitrarily be confined to limited geographic entities.

Recent years have witnessed significant improvement in our relations with all our neighbours, both within the framework of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation as well as in bilateral terms. We are committed to building on this process and are happy at the positive results that have been achieved so far. With Pakistan, too, we have a structured process in place and intend to pursue our bilateral dialogue with them. Our experience demonstrates that outside involvement. No matter how well intentioned, is counter-productive. We will not be able to accept such involvement. Our position has been made clear in the recent official statement issued by us. These define the parameters within which we must operate. I know that I can count on your understanding.

We also have an on going dialogue with China where we are addressing questions of common concern, covering not only the boundary issue, but also matters relating to cooperation in the fields of trade and economics, science and culture. We aim to pursue these matters in the period ahead.
Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Yours sincerely

A.B. Vajpayee

United Nations Organisation
New York.

3607. Excerpts from the Media Statement by Pakistan Foreign Secretary Shamshad Ahmad on Nuclearisation of South Asia.

Islamabad, August 19, 1999.

The Indian assertion of capability for manufacturing the Neutron Bomb and ‘India’s nuclear Doctrine’ recommended by its National Security Board indicates that India is about to embark on a further and even more dangerous escalation in the nuclear and conventional arms build up. The recommended ‘doctrine’ confirms India’s craving to be recognized as a global power through nuclear and conventional militarization and aggressive actions.

This comes in the wake of India’s massive military operation against the Kashmiri freedom fighters and India’s naked military aggression in shouting down the unarmed Pakistan Navy plane and the cold blooded murder of 16 Pakistan Navy trainee personnel.* Obviously we are seriously concerned at these developments, which if anything, pose an intensified threat to the peace and stability of the region. No doubt we will take into account all these factors to ensure our own defence.

India has declared that it will establish ‘sufficient, survivable and operationally prepared nuclear forces’. Thus, despite the best endeavours made by Pakistan for strategic restraint India is poised to go ahead with the deployment and operationalisation of its nuclear weapons and delivery systems. It would frustrate the central purpose of the ‘strategic Restraint Regime’ proposed by Pakistan to India at the last round of talks under the items on ‘Peace and Security’.

* Document No.1499.
The proposed Indian ‘Doctrine’ also makes it clear that India’s nuclear escalation will be accompanied by the further build up of India’s conventional warfare capabilities. This is a matter of deep concern to Pakistan because the vast majority of India’s conventional ‘assets’ are deployed against Pakistan. The growing imbalance in conventional military capabilities will intensify Pakistan’s reliance on its nuclear capabilities to deter the use or threat of aggression by India.

Pakistan does not want a nuclear arms race in South Asia. Our diplomatic initiatives spreading over a quarter century before May last year’s tests are on record and an evidence of our policy. After the tests, we offered to India a Strategic Restraint Regime to prevent nuclear arms race and maintain nuclear deterrence at the minimum levels. However, Pakistan cannot afford to ignore the Security implications of India’s new doctrine and its ambitious plan of nuclear weapons development including Thermonuclear and Neutron bombs. The development of our nuclear programme will be determined solely by the requirements of our nuclear deterrence capability which is now an indispensable part of our security doctrine.

We are convinced that, following last year’s nuclearization, the best option for Pakistan and India is to promote a Strategic Restraint Regime envisaging mutual and reciprocal moderation in the nuclear, missile and conventional fields, and a serious endeavour to resolve underlying disputes, specially Jammu and Kashmir.

India’s No First Use Policy

India has been lately trumpeting its so called no first use policy. Obviously no body has been impressed by this propaganda. No first use has never been accepted as the basis for determining the deterrent postures of any of the Nuclear Weapon States. Indeed, India itself places no credibility in ‘no first use’. If it did, it should have accepted China’s assurance of ‘no first use’ and of non use of nuclear weapons against non nuclear weapon States. This would have obviated the need for India’s nuclear weapons acquisition, much less the operational deployment of nuclear weapons.

India’s ‘no first use’ declaration is, in fact, designed to secure for itself ‘recognition’ as a nuclear weapon State which would flow from the ‘acceptance’ of its no first use and non use ‘assurances’. It is for this purpose that India has offered to ratify the non use assurances Protocol to the Treaty establishing the South-East Asia Nuclear Weapon Free Zone, although this Protocol specifically identifies and invites the US, Russia, China. UK, and France only. Secondly, India will seek to justify the acquisition of a large nuclear arsenal by arguing that its nuclear forces should be large enough to sustain and retaliate against a nuclear first strike.
INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS

KASHMIR
3608. Agreement between military representatives of India and Pakistan regarding the establishment of cease-fire line in the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

Karachi, 27 July 1949

I

INTRODUCTION

A. The military representatives of India and Pakistan met together in Karachi from 18 July to 27 JULY 1949 under the auspices of the Truce Sub-committee of the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan.

B. The members of the Indian Delegation were:
   • Lt.-Gen. S.M. Shrinagesh
   • Maj.-Gen. K.S. Thimaya
   • Brig. S.H.F.J. Manekshaw
As observers:
   • Mr. H.M. Patel
   • Mr. V. Sahay

C. The members of the Pakistan Delegation were:
   • Maj.-Gen. W.J. Cawthorn
   • Maj.-Gen. Nazir Ahmad
   • Brig. M. Sher Khan
As observers:
   • Mr. M. Ayub
   • Mr. A. A. Khan.

D. The members of the Truce Sub-committee of the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan were:
   • Chairman, Mr. Hernando Samper (Colombia)
   • Mr. William L.S. Williams (United States)
   • Lt.-Gen. Maurice Delvoie (Military Adviser)
   • Mr. Miguel A. Marin (Legal Adviser).

II

AGREEMENT

A. Considering:

1. That the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan, in its letter dated 2 July 1949, invited the Governments of India and Pakistan to send fully authorised military representatives to meet jointly in Karachi under the auspices of the Commission’s Truce Sub-committee to establish a cease-fire line in the State of Jammu and Kashmir, mutually agreed upon by the Governments of India and Pakistan;

2. That the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan in its letter stated that “The meetings will be for military purposes; political issues will not be considered”, and that “They will be conducted without prejudice to negotiations concerning the Truce Agreement”;

3. That in the same letter the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan further stated that: “The cease-fire line is a complement of the suspension of hostilities, which falls within the provisions of Part I of the Resolution of 13 August 1948, and can be considered separately from the questions relating to Part II of the same Resolution”;

4. That the Governments of India and Pakistan, in their letters dated 7 July 1949 to the Chairman of the Commission, accepted the Commission’s invitation to the military conference in Karachi;

B. The Delegations of India and Pakistan, duly authorized, have reached the following agreement:

1. Under the provisions of Part I of the Resolution of 13 August 1948, and as a complement of the suspension of hostilities in the State of Jammu and Kashmir on 1 January 1949, a cease-fire line is established.

2. The cease-fire line runs from MANAWAR in the south, north to KERAN and from KERAN east to the glacier area, as follows:

   (a) The line from MANAWAR to the south bank of the JHELUM River at URUSA (inclusive to India) is the line now defined by the factual positions about which there is agreement between both parties. Where there has hitherto not been agreement, the line shall be as follows:

   (i) In PATRANA area: KOEL (inclusive to Pakistan) north along the KHUWALA KAS Nullah up to point 2276 (inclusive to India), thence to KIRNI (inclusive to India).

   (ii) KHAMBA, PIR SATWAN, point 3150 and Point 3606 are inclusive to India, thence the line runs to the factual position at BAGLA GALA, thence to the factual position at Point 3300.

   (iii) In the area south of URI the positions of PIR KANTHI and LEDI GALI are inclusive to Pakistan.

   (b) From the north bank of the JHELUM River the line runs from a point opposite the village of URUSA (NL 972109), thence north following the BALLASETH DA NAR Nullah (inclusive to Pakistan), up to NL 973140, thence northeast to CHOTA KAZINAG (Point 10657, inclusive to India), thence to NM 010180, thence to NM 037210, thence to Point 11825 (NM 025354, inclusive to Pakistan), thence to TUTUMARI GALI (to be shared by both sides, posts to be established 500 yds. on either side of the GALI), thence to the northwest through the first “R” of BURST NAR to north of GABDORI, thence straight west to just north of Point 9870, thence along the black line north of BIJILDHAR to north of BATARASI, thence to just south of SUDPURA, thence north to the KATHAKAZINAG Nullah, thence along the Nullah to its junction with the GRANGNAR Nullah, thence along the latter Nullah to KAJNIWALA PATHRA (inclusive to India), thence across the DHANNA ridge (following the factual positions) to RICHMAR GALI (inclusive to India), thence north to THANDA KATHA Nullah, thence north to the KISHANGANGA River. The line then follows the KISHANGANGA River up to a point situated between JARGT and TARBAN, thence (all inclusive to Pakistan) to BANKORAN, thence northeast to KHORI, thence to the hill feature 8930 (in Square 9053), thence straight north to Point 10164 (in Square 9057), thence to Point 10323 (in Square 9161), thence northeast straight to GUTHUR, thence to BHUTPATHRA, thence to NL 988707, thence following the BUGINA Nullah to the junction with the KISHANGANGA River at Point 4739. Thereafter the line follows the KISHANGANGA to KERAN and onwards to Point 4996 (NL 975818).

(c) From Point 4996 the line follows (all inclusive to Pakistan) the JAMGAR Nullah eastward to Point 12124, to KATWARE, to Point 6678, thence to the northeast to SARIAN (Point 11279), to Point 11837, to Point 13090, to Point 12841, thence east again to Point 11142, thence to DHAKKI, thence to Point 11415, thence to Point 10301, thence to Point 7507, thence to Point 10685, thence to Point 8388, thence southeast to Point 11812. Thence the line runs (all inclusive to India) to Point 13220, thence across the River to the east to Point 13449 (DURMAT), thence to Point 14586 (ANZBARI), thence to Point 13554, thence to Milestone 45 on the BURZIL Nullah, thence to the east to ZIANKAL (Point 12909), thence to the southeast to Point 11114, thence to Point 12216, thence to Point 12867, thence to the east to Point 11264, thence to KARO (Point 14985), thence to Point 14014, thence to Point 12089, thence following the track to Point 12879. From there the line runs to Point 13647 (KAROBAL GALI, to be shared by both sides). The cease-fire line runs thence through RETAGAH CHHISH (Point 15316), thence through Point 15889, thence through Point 17392, thence through Point 16458, thence to MARIOLA (to be shared by both sides), thence through Point 17561, thence through Point 17352, thence through Point 18400, thence through Point 16760, thence to (inclusive to India), DALUNANG

(d) From DALUNANG eastwards the cease-fire line will follow the general line Point 15495, ISHMAN, MANUS, GANGAM, GUNDERMAN, Point 13620, JUNKAR (Point 17628), MARMARAK, NATSARA, SHANGRUTH (Point 17531), CHORBAT LA (Point 15700), CHALUNKA (on the SHYOK River), KHOR, thence north to the glaciers. This portion of the cease-fire line shall be demarcated in detail on the basis of the factual position as of 27 July 1949 by the local commanders, assisted by United Nations Military Observers.

C. The cease-fire line described above shall be drawn on a one inch map (where available) and then be verified mutually on the ground by local commanders on each side with the assistance of the United Nations Military Observers, so as to eliminate any no-man’s land. In the event that the local commanders are unable to reach agreement, the matter shall be referred to the Commission’s Military Adviser, whose decision shall be final. After this verification, the Military Adviser will issue to each High Command a map on which will be marked the definitive cease-fire line.

D. No troops shall be stationed or operate in the area of the BURZIL Nullah from south of MINIMARG to the cease-fire line. This area is bounded on the west by the Ridge leading northeast from DUDGAI KAL to Point 13071, to Point 9447, to Point 13466, to Point 13463, and on the east by the Ridge running from Point 12470, to Point 11608, to Point 13004, to Point 13976, to Point 13450. Pakistan may, however, post troops on the western of the above ridges to cover the approaches to KHAMBRI Baipass.

E. In any dispositions that may be adopted in consequence of the present agreement troops will remain, at least 500 yards from the cease-fire line except where the KISHANGANGA River constitutes the line. Points which have been shown as inclusive to one party may be occupied by that party, but the troops of the other party shall remain at a distance of 500 yards.

F. Both sides shall be free to adjust their defensive positions behind the cease-fire line as determined in paragraphs A to E inclusive above, subject to no wire or mines being used when new bunkers and defences are constructed. There shall be no increase of forces or strengthening of defences in areas where no major adjustments are involved by the determination of the cease-fire line.

G. The action permitted by paragraph F above shall not be accompanied or accomplished by the introduction of additional military potential by either

H. Except as modified by Paragraphs II-A to II-G, inclusive, above, the military agreements between the two High Commands relating to the cease-fire of 1 January 1949 shall continue to remain operative.

I. The United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan will station
Observers where it deems necessary.

J. The Delegations shall refer this Agreement to their respective Governments for ratification. The documents of ratification shall be deposited with the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan not later than 31 July 1949.

K. A period of 30 days from the date of ratification shall be allowed to each side to vacate the areas at present occupied by them beyond the cease-fire line as now determined. Before the expiration of this 30-day period their shall be no forward movement into areas to be taken over by either side pursuant to this agreement, except by mutual agreement between local commanders.

Message from Pakistan President Ayub Khan to Secretary General of the United Nations in reply to his message of September 1, 1965.

Excellency:

I have received your message and appreciate the expression of your deep concern at the grave turn that developments have taken in Jammu and Kashmir. Since September 1, the armed forces of India and the Azad Kashmir forces backed by units of the Pakistan Army are locked in battle in the Bhimber sector, and the Air Forces of India and Pakistan have also engaged in combat.

2. It is not necessary for me, therefore, to stress the gravity of the situation, the devastating consequences of which are self-evident.

3. In your message, you seem to consider August 5 – when the so-called ‘infiltration’ is alleged to have taken place – as the date when the cease-fire agreement of 1949 between India and Pakistan began to be so widely disregarded by unprecedented acts of violence along or in the vicinity of the cease-fire line as to have reduced that agreement to little consequence. If the cease-fire in Jammu and Kashmir was reduced to a nullity, this process has taken place over a long period of time as a result of Indian designs and provocations. The more recent and grave instance occurred in May last when the Indian army crossed the cease-fire line in the Kargil sector and occupied three posts on the Pakistan side of the line.

4. Thus, the origin and sources of the conflict which is now taking place in Jammu and Kashmir cannot be traced to August 5. The Kashmir dispute must be viewed in the context of the tragic history of the Kashmir dispute – of the denial since 1949 of the right of self-determination to the people of the State, and the annexation of their homeland by India through the so-called ‘integration’ measures, in the teeth of their bitter protest and opposition. The cease-fire line, it needs to be recalled and emphasized here, was brought about by the UN Resolution of August 13, 1948 and January 5, 1949. These Resolutions which were negotiated by the United Nations, constituted an international agreement between India and Pakistan to implement the pledge of a plebiscite to the people of Jammu and Kashmir to decide their future. The cease-fire line agreement followed from the obligations accepted by both parties under those resolutions. Since the cease-fire line in the state was affected to 1949, India at first stalled on their implementation and subsequently repudiated them.

5. From 1949 to May 1965, India spurned every offer and every suggestion and barred all avenues for a peaceful settlement of the dispute. She rules out recourse to the International Court of Justice. She rejected mediation, conciliation or good offices of any third party including that of Your Excellency. If in the past India has made some show of willingness to enter into bilateral negotiations with Pakistan, events have shown that her motive was not to reach a settlement but to forestall effective international action or to tide over some crisis in her internal and foreign relations. The Government of India's real attitude towards bilateral negotiations was made clear by the Indian Home Minister when, on July, 1965, he stated, “Kashmir is an integral part of India. It is a settled fact which cannot be the subject of debate or negotiations. The talk of self-determination is devoid of meaning or relevance.”

6. India has made it quite clear that she will not permit the wishes of the people of Jammu and Kashmir to be ascertained and that her objective is to make permanent the partition of the state of Jammu and Kashmir between India and Pakistan along the cease-fire line in total violation of her obligation to implement the right of self-determination.

7. In pursuit of this objective, the Government of India, have embarked on the unlawful and provocative course of annexing the occupied portions of the State. In the process a reign of terror and oppression has been let loose on the people. Thousands of Kashmiris have been gaol without trial for the crime of demanding that India should honour her pledge to hold a plebiscite. Sheikh Abdullah, along with the lieutenant Mirza Afzal Beg, has for the third time been put in prison where they have already spent 11 years of their lives and where they are now apparently condemned to end their days.

8. The situation in India-occupied Kashmir today is that after 17 years of patient but vain expectation and hope, the people of Kashmir, finding all avenues of peaceful realization for their right of self-determination barred to them, have taken to arms against Indian tyranny. Who can blame them? The freedom-fighters who have challenged the might of the Indian army are not 'raiders' but sons of the soil of Jammu and Kashmir ready to make the supreme sacrifice for their case.

9. The people of Azad Kashmir have been engaged for years over India's brutal repression of the freedom movement in Kashmir. If more than six divisions of the Indian Army deployed along the nearly 500-mile long cease-fire line have been unable to prevent them from moving across the line to aid the armed uprising of their compatriots in occupied Kashmir, how can it be expected that the much fewer troops of the Pakistan Army would be able to seal the line against them? It is but natural that India should seek to blame outsiders for the uprising in occupied Kashmir since she would have the world believe that people of the state are happy with their lot under Indian occupation.

10. I am constrained to express my surprise and regret that, though the United Nations Military Observers Group has admitted that in most cases the actual identity of those engaging in the armed attacks on the Indian side of the line and the actual crossing of it could not be verified by direct observation evidence, yet the group should have thought it fit to conclude that the uprising in Jammu and Kashmir resulted from the crossing of the cease-fire line from the Pakistan side by armed men, for the purpose of armed action on the Indian side. Failing to suppress the freedom-fighters in the occupied territory of Jammu and Kashmir, India has embarked on a course of unlimited aggression across the cease-fire line. On August 15 Indian Forces again crossed the cease-fire line to take over three unoccupied posts near Kargil, which they had earlier been made to vacate upon Your Excellency’s intervention. Significantly, this was done within hours of a public threat by the Indian Prime Minister which was tantamount to that of invading Azad Kashmir. Later, the Indian Defence Minister proudly announced in the Indian Lok Sabha that ‘India has crossed the cease-fire line in the past and would do so again.’ On 23 August, Indian forces shelled Awan Sharif, a village in West Pakistan – killing 25 persons and causing injuries to others and much damage to property. On 24 August, Indian troops crossed the cease-fire line and occupied two posts in the Tithwal sector on the Pakistan side of the cease-fire line. Again on the same day, Indian Forces crossed the cease-fire line in the Uri-Poonch sector and seized some Pakistani posts and on 1st September took Haji Pir Pass.

11. Simultaneously, with these acts of war, India intensified her acts of repression of Kashmiris, which in their scope and nature threaten to assume the proportion of genocide. On 14th August, the entire Batamalu suburb of Srinagar inhabited by Muslims, was set on fire and razed to the ground and the people burnt alive to punish the residents for the support and help they were extending to the freedom-fighters. This has been repeated in several other places in occupied Kashmir and has become the pattern of reprisals. Miss Mirdula Sarabhai, the well-known Indian social worker has testified that in the guise of taking action against the so-called ‘infiltrators,’ the Indian army has turned upon the entire Muslim population of the occupied territory and perpetrated atrocities upon them. The Foreign Press has also commented on the incendiary role of the Indian Army.

12. These acts of aggression and grave violations of the Cease-Fire Agreement have created a situation in which the human rights of the people of Kashmir as well as the security of Pakistan are equally threatened. Seventy five Indian battalions are poised to launch aggression on Azad Kasmir and Pakistan.

13. In response to this grave situation created by the Indian Armed Forces and to forestall further aggression by them, the Azad Kashmir Force backed by Pakistan Army, were forced in the exercise of the inherent right of self-defence to cross the cease-fire line in the Bhimber sector for the first time since the cease-fire agreement was reached 17 years ago, and after repeated Indian armed attacks and occupation of Azad Kashmir territories by the Indian army. This crossing took place on the 1st of this month. India escalated this conflict by mounting air attacks against Pakistan Force, on the same day, compelling the Pakistan Air Force to intervene. Until then, Pakistan had refrained from air action even though our isolated and thinly manned posts in the Uri - Poonch sector could not have been occupied if we had given them air support. On September 4, India carried the escalation of the conflict a stage further. The Indian Air Force twice violated Pakistan territory in strength escorted by MIG-21 aircraft and now my Government has good reason to believe that India has begun to again deploy and mass her armed forces against West and East Pakistan. Weeks earlier India moved a brigade from Aksai Chin and a mountain division from the NEFA (North East Frontier Agency now Arunachal Pradesh) area, armed and equipped by the United States and some Commonwealth countries for use against China, to reinforce the six divisions of the Indian Army which have been suppressing the people of Jammu and Kashmir. It is, therefore, clear from these repeated strikes across the Cease-Fire Line and step-by-step escalation of the fighting in Jammu and Kashmir that India has embarked on a premeditated course of aggression and war to seize the whole of Azad Kashmir territory and in that process not to flinch from even a sub-continental war.

It will be recalled, immediately following the reverse suffered by the Indian Army in the Rann of Kutch some months earlier, Indian Government leaders publicly threatened that India would attack Pakistan at a time and place of her own choosing. In the circumstances Pakistan must take every step necessary to discharge its responsibilities and duties for the defense of her legitimate interests and territorial integrity. From the foregoing, it is evident that India has embarked upon a course of terror, oppression and aggression in Kashmir. It has plainly manifested every intention of aggression against Pakistan. The responsibility for the current grave situation in that state, therefore, rests entirely on her.

14. Let me now turn to the other points that you have raised in your message, that the Kashmir dispute can be resolved peacefully and not by military action and have also drawn my attention to the obligations of member-states of the United Nations not to have recourse to the use of force in the settlement of international disputes, but to seek pacific methods of settlement. Let me assure Your Excellency that Pakistan remains dedicated to the Charter of the United Nations and the obligations of membership of the organization including the peaceful procedure of settlement. You are aware, that during the last 17 years, despite all the provocations and acts of repression by India in Jammu and Kashmir, despite India’s open repudiation of the UNCIP and Security Council’s resolutions pledging self-determination to the people of Kashmir and despite India’s sinister pattern of annexing the state in the face of the bitter opposition and in total disregard of the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, Pakistan did not abandon her faith that reason would one day dawn on India and turn her to the path of peace. It was with this faith that the Pakistan Government turned repeatedly to the Security Council, when direct negotiations with India in 1953, 1955, 1962 and 1963 failed to produce a just and equitable solution. To my infinite regret, our experience seeking redress in the forum of the Security Council has time and gain turned out to be disheartening. You will recall that in 1964, the members of the Security Council would not even agree to recommend direct negotiations between India and Pakistan with the assistance, as my be mutually acceptable, of a third party, or even the Secretary-General. To our deep sorrow and regret, the end of the debate in that forum did not end in a consensus, much less a resolution. This is not to say that Pakistan has lost all faith in the efficacy of the United Nations as an instrument of peace. We reaffirm our confidence in the solution of international disputes by peaceful means. This confidence extends to settlement of the Kashmir dispute.

15. I trust that, in view of what I have stated in the foregoing part of this reply to your message, the action which the Pakistan Army has taken in Jammu and Kashmir in support of the Azad Kashmir Forces to defend Azad Kashmir and Pakistan territory against India trying to solve the Azad Kashmir dispute by force of arms. This is a purely defensive measure forced on Pakistan.

16. You have expressed your conviction that a peaceful settlement of the Kashmir dispute can be found and have appealed to me to indicate immediately our intention to respect the cease-fire agreement and return to the status quo ante. You have also assured me of the fullest possible assistance by you in the restoration of peace in Kashmir and the solution of the dispute. A number of chiefs of State and Governments of friendly countries have associated themselves with your appeal and some have offered their good offices for mediation. I am grateful to you and to them for these assurances and offers, which I find heartening. At the same time, I cannot but be candid and express to you our misgivings. Your appeal seeks nothing more than a return to the status quo ante without any assurance that you and the Security Council will strive to implement the U.N. Resolutions pertaining to the right of self-determination of the people of Jammu and Kashmir. You say that the quiet which would result from mutual observance of the cease-fire would afford the most favorable climate in which to seek a resolution of political differences. I would like to recall that the cease-fire agreement was observed from 1949 to 1965, when India chose to reduce it to a scrap of paper. Yet, during these 17 years, tranquility along the cease-fire line did not lead to that result. The Security Council faced with India’s bad faith, intransigence and growing power chose practically to wash its hands off the responsibility for a peaceful and honourable settlement. I fear that your present appeal will only serve to perpetrate that injustice by leaving the people... of occupied Kashmir to the mercy of India. What is to become of the brave people of Kashmir who are fighting for their freedom? I cannot believe that it would be the intention of the United Nations to permit India to liquidate them and to consolidate its stranglehold over occupied Kashmir. This leads me again to repeat what I have stated earlier – that if a peaceful settlement of the Kashmir dispute is to result from the intervention of the United Nations, it is necessary for the World Organization to go to the heart of the tragic problem and not merely to deal with its periphery. It must turn its attention to the issue of self-determination and not only with the ceasefire line. The concern of the United Nations must extend to the implementation of the UNCIP Resolutions as well as to observance of the cease-fire agreement. The cease-fire was only the first part of an inter-related and integral whole. Therefore, insistence on a cease-fire can only be meaningful if there is a self-implementing agreement to follow it.

17. I should not be misunderstood as implying that I under-estimate the importance of your assistance in the restoration of peace in Kashmir and the solution of its problems. On the contrary, I welcome your assurance in this regard as a step forward by itself. However, there is no evidence yet that your assistance would be equally welcome to India much less that India is prepared to reverse the dangerous ill-conceived course of her policies in Kashmir. If this armed struggle for freedom is to be halted and calm is to be restored in the state of Jammu and Kashmir, if indeed peace in this region is to be preserved, then the right course for the United Nations, India and Pakistan is to proceed immediately to fulfill the pledge they gave to the people of Jammu and Kashmir 18 years ago. It is they who must be permitted freely to decide the question of accession of the state of Jammu and Kashmir to India or Pakistan as stated in that pledge.

Accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration and warm personal regards.

MOHAMMAD AYUB KHAN
President of Pakistan

Reply by Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri to the Message from the U.N. Secretary-General.

New Delhi, September 2, 1965.

I appreciate the consideration that have prompted you to address an appeal to us and to Pakistan in connection with the recent developments in Jammu and Kashmir. Our Permanent Representative in New York has been in frequent touch with you and has kept you informed of the situation as it has developed since August 5. I have no doubt that from all the information that you have received from the United Nations Observers in Kashmir and on the basis of your own assessment, it is clear that the root cause of the present dangerous situation is the undertaking of massive infiltrations of armed personnel from the Pakistan side, well organized and trained in sabotage and subversive warfare, the whole operation being conceived, planned and executed by Pakistan. The infiltrators are, in fact, members of the Pakistan armed forces. These infiltrations are still continuing. Such action by Pakistan is a clear violation of the Charter of the United Nations and of the ceasefire agreement, and is against all canons of international law and code of good neighbourliness. It is to meet this thinly disguised invasion that the Government of India, while showing every forbearance, have been forced to take preventive military action.

In your message, you have appealed in the interests of peace that we should indicate our intention to respect the ceasefire agreement, that there should be a cessation of crossings of the ceasefire line by armed personnel from both sides of the line and a halt to all firing across the ceasefire line from either side of it. While I appreciate the motivations of your appeal, I have to point out that the terms of your message are such as might leave the impression that we are responsible equally with Pakistan for the dangerous developments that have taken place. Unless your message is read in the context of the realities of the situation as they have developed, it tends to introduce a certain equation between India and Pakistan, which the facts of the situation do not bear out. Indeed, it seems to me that your message has to be read in conjunction with the report that you have sent to the members of the Security Council.

I would like to take this opportunity of apprising you of the salient facts of the situation. Since August 5, several thousands of infiltrators from Pakistan and from Pakistan-occupied Kashmir have crossed the ceasefire line. These men have come camouflaged as civilians and fully armed with modern weapons, signal equipment, large quantities of ammunition and supplies and explosives. From the interrogation of the prisoners captured by us from among the infiltrators, many of whom are regular officers of the Pakistan army, it is now known that a military headquarters was set up in Murree, in West Pakistan, in May, 1965, under General Akhtar Husain Malik, General Officer Commanding, 12th Division, of the Pakistan army. This organization is known as Military Headquarters “Gibraltar Force”. Their instructions were to destroy bridges and vital roads, attack police stations, supply dumps, army headquarters and important installations, inflict casualties on Indian forces, and attack VIPs in Jammu and Kashmir. The statements of the captured prisoners and the nature and type of weapons which the infiltrators carried, large quantities of which have been captured by us, bearing the markings of Pakistan ordinance factories, prove beyond a shadow of doubt that the infiltrators were armed and equipped by the Pakistan Government and have operated under their instructions.

Pakistan, however, has denied any knowledge of these armed infiltrations and persists in the theory that there is an internal revolt in Kashmir – a revolt which does not exist and has not been noticed by independent foreign observers. Since your message was sent the situation has been further aggravated by a massive attack launched by two regiments of tanks and aircraft supported by Pakistan troops in brigade strength, across the ceasefire line and the international frontier between the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir and West Pakistan. The attack which is in great strength is aimed at our key positions controlling our lines of communications. Even on its own admission, as indicated in President Ayub Khan’s broadcast of September 1, the Pakistani forces have gone to the assistance of the infiltrators whom Pakistan chooses to call ‘Freedom Fighters’. There is no pretence in it of any kind of defensive action and the Pakistani attack clearly constitutes aggression. The Pakistani attack is accompanied by the usual tactics of the aggressor, namely, indiscriminate bombing of the civilian population. In a bombing raid on September 2, the Pakistan Air Force Killed 50 civilians and injured an equal number in addition to the bombing of a mosque. We have to meet the situation created by this latest Pakistani aggression.

In your message, Mr. Secretary-General, you have yourself recognized that essential to the restoration of the ceasefire would be a cessation of the crossings of the ceasefire line by armed personnel. As I have indicated above, the root cause of the development of the present dangerous situation in Kashmir lies in the massive infiltrations of Pakistani armed personnel. Since the Pakistan government disown responsibility for the armed infiltrations, your appeal to Pakistan, so far as armed infiltrators are concerned, can hardly be productive of results and the root cause of the trouble will remain.

India is a peace-loving country. We have neither the inclination nor is it in our interest to be deviated from the path of peace and economic progress to that of military conflict. Pakistan has, however, by sending armed infiltrators in large numbers across the ceasefire line, brought about a situation in which we have no choice but to defend ourselves and take such preventive action as may be deemed essential. In taking such preventive action we have, in certain sectors, had to cross the ceasefire line for the purpose of effectively preventing further infiltrations. This is a matter of great importance to us.

As to the ceasefire agreement, you are well aware that we have shown respect for the ceasefire line all these years though Pakistan has shown scant regard for it. Over the past two years, General Nimmo, Chief Military Observer, has made proposals for a meeting between the representatives of India and Pakistan with a view to ensuring the observance of the ceasefire agreement and to preventing its violation from the Pakistan side by armed civilians. We have always accepted these proposals but Pakistan has neither rejected them or not responded to them. In July 1964, we offered to come to a gentlemen’s agreement with Pakistan to ensure tranquility along the ceasefire line. Pakistan at first agreed to a meeting and the representatives of India and Pakistan were to meet in Karachi on the 2nd November, 1964. However, a day before the meeting was to be held, Pakistan postponed the meeting unilaterally and did not suggest any fresh date thereafter.

Pakistan’s international behaviour is such as cannot be ignored in considering your appeal. It will be recalled that in 1947-48, Pakistan undertook action similar to the present one and persisted in denying its complicity for several months until the truth could no longer be hidden and it had no way but to admit to the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan, in July 1948, that Pakistani forces had been fighting in Kashmir for several months. That act of Pakistan’s aggression the United Nations seems to have forgotten, but that aggression is still with us and Pakistan continues to be in forcible occupation of 2/5ths of our State of Jammu and Kashmir.

It is within your knowledge that in April this year, Pakistan launched a military attack in our territory in the Rann of Kutch – a clear case of use of force for the assertion of its claims, which is forbidden by the Charter of the United Nations, the Bandung Declaration, the Charter of the Organization of African Unity States, the Cairo declaration and many other international declarations of our time. In spite of such provocation, we showed forbearance and reached an agreement with Pakistan on the 30th June, 1965, for the peaceful settlement of the border question. The hope was solemnly expressed by both sides in the agreement that it would result in better relations between India and Pakistan and in the easing of tensions between the two countries. It is now clear, however, that even when Pakistan was putting its signature to the agreement it was planning and organizing the massive armed infiltrations across the ceasefire line in Jammu and Kashmir, and even before the ink was dry on that agreement, Pakistan launched thousands of its armed infiltrators across the ceasefire line. We cannot be expected to wait for Pakistan to violate the ceasefire line and to attack us at will, and we cannot go from one ceasefire to another without our being satisfied that Pakistan will not repeat its acts of violations and aggression in the future.
There is no other name for the massive Pakistani infiltrations across the ceasefire line and across the international frontier between Jammu and Kashmir and West Pakistan, and the military attack that Pakistan has launched into our territory, but aggression. That aggression throws on us, as a sovereign State, responsibilities for defence which it is our right and duty to discharge.

To sum up, I have taken this opportunity of acquainting you with all the aspects of the complex and dangerous situation that has been brought about by Pakistani actions. We owe it to you and to the high office you occupy with such distinction, to leave you in doubt as to our position. Mr. Secretary-General, you have appealed for peace and we greatly appreciate your anxiety and the sincerity of your efforts. India has always stood firmly for peace and our position needs no reiteration. What is essential, however, today is that Pakistan should undertake forthwith to stop infiltrations across the ceasefire line and to withdraw the infiltrators and its armed forces from the Indian side of the ceasefire line and the international frontier between Jammu and Kashmir and West Pakistan. Furthermore, we would have to be satisfied that there will be no recurrence of such a situation. These have to be the starting points of any steps towards the restoration of peace for which you, as Secretary-General of the United Nations, are bending your efforts. I trust that, in the first instance, you will ascertain from Pakistan if it will accept the responsibility for withdrawing not only its armed forces but also the infiltrators and for preventing further infiltrations. This, in fact we take it, is the basic assumption underlying your appeal.

The Security Council,

Noting the report of the Secretary-General of 3 September 1965,

Having heard the statements of the representatives of India and Pakistan,

Concerned at the deteriorating situation along the cease-fire line in Kashmir,

1. Calls upon the Governments of India and Pakistan to take forthwith all steps for an immediate cease-fire;

2. Calls upon the two Governments to respect the cease-fire line and have all armed personnel of each party withdrawn to its own side of the line;

3. Calls upon the two Governments to co-operate fully with the United Nations Military Observer Group in India and Pakistan (UNMOGIP) in its task of supervising the observance of the cease-fire;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council within three days on the implementation of the present resolution.

Adopted unanimously at the 1237th meeting.

The Minister of External Affairs of the Government of India presents his compliments to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and has the honour to acknowledge receipt of the text of Resolution 209 (1965) adopted by the Security Council at its 1237th meeting on September 4, 1965. The Government of India having given the most careful consideration to the Resolution of the Security Council would like to convey the following views to the Security Council.

The Government of India appreciate that the Security Council in their anxiety to stop the continuance of hostilities and bloodshed have urgently adopted a Resolution in the hope of bringing about an immediate cease-fire. This Resolution has evidently been adopted without taking into consideration the reply of the Prime Minister of India communicated to the Secretary-General on September 4 in response to the appeal addressed by the Secretary-General to the Government of India on September 2. The reply of the Prime Minister of India narrated the events leading to the present situation in Kashmir, and also urged the steps which should be taken to restore peace in the State of Jammu & Kashmir. It is also evident that the Resolution does not take into consideration certain important findings and recommendations of the Secretary-General contained in his Report (S/6651) dated September 3, 1965. Further, neither the Resolution nor the discussions which preceded the adoption of the Resolution took note of the fact that on September 1, 1965, Pakistan violated the international border south of the CFL between the State of Jammu & Kashmir and West Pakistan in order to attack the Chhamb - Jaurian sector within the State of Jammu & Kashmir, thereby extending the area of conflict. While aggression across the international border in the Chhamb - Jaurian sector continues, this attack, directed as it was by regular forces of Pakistan army towards gaining territory and cutting the vital lines of communication between the rest of India and the Indian State of Jammu & Kashmir, has changed the entire character of the situation. The offensive action in the Chhamb area was being fed by bases in Pakistan along the border of Pakistan with the State of Jammu & Kashmir. There were strong concentrations of Pakistan forces on the western frontier between India and Pakistan. On September 5th, after the Resolution of the Security Council calling for a cease-fire, Pakistan aircraft bombed an Indian Air Force Unit in Amritsar in the Indian State of Punjab. Pakistan aircraft also bombed Ranbirshinghpura and other places in Jammu & Kashmir well away from the cease-fire line. It was obvious that Pakistan was preparing for an offensive against India in a big way and situation was created in which action restricted to Jammu & Kashmir could no longer meet the needs of the situation. Since the UN has throughout accepted that the security of Jammu & Kashmir is the responsibility of India, the Government of India had no alternative but to give effective assistance to our forces by moving across the Wagah border to stop Pakistan at the bases from which the attacks in Jammu & Kashmir were being mounted and supported.

The Resolution 209(1965) “calls upon the Government of India and Pakistan to take forthwith all steps for an immediate cease-fire.” This cease-fire is posited on the condition mentioned in paragraph 2 of the Resolution which “calls upon the two Governments to respect the cease-fire line and have all armed personnel of each party withdrawn to its own side of the line.” It is the view of the Government of India that, if cease-fire is to be brought about and the peace restored, the withdrawal of the “armed personnel of each party” referred to in this paragraph, must include all infiltrators from the Pakistan side of the CFL, whether armed or unarmed, because as stated by the Prime Minister of India in his reply to the Secretary-General, the present hostilities originated with large scale infiltration of armed and unarmed personnel from Pakistan and until the activities of such personnel cease and until all such personnel are withdrawn from the Indian side of the ceasefire line, peace cannot be restored for which Pakistan must accept full responsibility.

It has been stated by the Secretary-General in the concluding part of his Report that the restoration of the cease-fire and the return to normal conditions along the cease-fire line can be achieved inter alia by “(a) A willingness of both parties to respect the agreement they have entered into” and (b) A readiness on the part of the Government of Pakistan to take effective steps to prevent crossings of the CFL from the Pakistan side by armed men, whether or not in uniform.

These findings of the Secretary-General, based on the reports of the UNMOGIP, established beyond any doubt that Pakistan committed aggression against India across the CFL. This aggression began in its massive form soon after India agreed to withdraw and withdrew from the Kargil area, considered strategically vital to the security of the Srinagar - Leh road, on assurances given by Pakistan through the Secretary-General that the security of this road would not be endangered by Pakistan. But as stated by the Secretary-General in his Report to the Security Council, “subsequently there were some military attacks on the road by armed element from the Pakistan side.” This establishes clearly that Pakistan had no intention of honouring solemn assurances given to India through the Secretary-General and was bent on renewed and further aggression.

The facts leading to the present situation and narrated in Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri’s message of September 2 to the Secretary General are borne out by the Secretary General’s Report wherein it is stated that “General Nimmo has indicated to me that the series of violations that began on 5th August have been to a considerable extent in the form of armed men, generally not in uniform, crossing the CFL from the Pakistan side for the purpose of armed action on the Indian side. This is a conclusion reached by General Nimmo on the basis of investigations by the UN Observers, in the light of extensiveness and character of the raiding activities and their proximity to the CFL. It has been further stated by the Secretary-General that “as regards violations by artillery, there was heavy and prolonged artillery fire across the line from the Pakistan side in the Chhamb/Bhimber area on 15–16 August, and on 19 and 26 August the town of Poonch was shelled from the Pakistan side, some of the shells hitting the building occupied by UN Military Observers. Pakistan artillery again shelled the town of Poonch on 28th August.” It is likewise confirmed that as of 24 August armed elements from Pakistan were still occupying Indian positions (pickets) north of Mandi in the Poonch sector of the CFL. The Secretary-General's Report has also stated that UN Military Observers have confirmed that on September 1 Pakistan army supported by artillery and air-force attacked the Chhamb area of the Jammu-Jhangar sector; and on September 2 attacked Jaurian village across the international border between India and Pakistan.

Thus, aggression by Pakistan has been clearly established by the independent authority of the United Nations and it is regretted that the Security Council have not taken this into consideration or asked Pakistan to withdraw from across the international border south of the CFL and to respect the international border between India and Pakistan.

While the Secretary-General in his recommendations to the Security Council referred to above has sought willingness of both parties to respect the agreement they have entered into, this appeal should more appropriately have been addressed to Pakistan alone because India has always respected the agreement in respect of the CFL. This is borne out by the Report of the Secretary-General itself. In this Report he has stated that on the morning of 9th August, a cable was received from General Nimmo warning that the situation was deteriorating along the CFL. On the basis of this Report, the Secretary-General asked the representative of Pakistan to convey to his Government his “very serious concern about the situation that was developing in Kashmir, involving the crossing of the CFL from the Pakistan side by numbers of armed men and their attacks on Indian military positions on the Indian side of the line, and also my strong appeal that the CFL be observed.” In response to this appeal, the Secretary-General has noted that “I have not obtained from the Government of Pakistan any assurance that the cease-fire and the CFL will be respected henceforth or that efforts would be exerted to restore conditions to normal along that line.” The reason for Pakistan refusing to give such an assurance is also evident from the Report of the Secretary-General when he described the considerations which led to his withholding the statement he wanted to make in consultation with the Governments of India and Pakistan. While India was agreeable to the statement proposed to be issued by the Secretary-General, according to the Secretary-General “The Government of Pakistan was strongly negative about the statement in general, on the ground that it favoured India in that it dealt only with the current cease-fire situation without presenting the political background of the broad issue and thus was lacking in balance, since a cease-fire alone supports the status quo to India’s benefit”. It is clear from this that Pakistan did not want and does not want to maintain the status quo in respect of cease-fire line and its only aim is to violate the CFL and by aggression to extend by force the forcible occupation of the 2/5th of the State of Jammu & Kashmir to the whole of the State of Jammu and Kashmir. Thus, it is Pakistan alone who should be asked to express willingness to respect the agreement they have entered into and to desist from altering status quo by force.

The Secretary-General in the second recommendation contained in his report to the Security Council has urged categorically that the Government of Pakistan is to be asked to express its readiness “to take effective steps to prevent crossings of the CFL from the Pakistan side by armed men, whether or not in uniform.” It is obvious from this that as stated in the reply of the Prime Minister of India to the Secretary-General, the present situation has arisen not from any armed revolt in the State of Jammu and Kashmir, as wrongly alleged by Pakistan, but as a result of massive armed infiltration organized and planned by Pakistan followed by attacks by Pakistan Army and Air Force. Until this aspect of the situation and the recommendation of the Secretary-General in this regard are taken into consideration, no progress can be made to restore peace in the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

The Government of India is of the firm view that an immediate cease-fire and the implementation of paragraph 2 of Security Council Resolution No. 209(65) can be brought about only when Pakistan takes effective steps to stop further crossings of the CFL from Pakistan side by armed and unarmed personnel, civil and military, whether or not in uniform, and also immediately removes from the Indian side of the CFL all such personnel, who have already crossed the CFL. Pakistan must also vacate aggression in the Chhamb area forcibly occupied by Pakistan since 1st September from across the international border and undertakes to respect in future the international border between India and Pakistan. Furthermore, India would have to be satisfied that there will be no recurrence of such a situation before cease-fire can be effective and peace restored.
3613. Telegram dated 5 September 1965 from the President of Pakistan to the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

I have received your message and appreciate the expression of your deep concern at the grave turn that developments have taken in Jammu and Kashmir. Since 1 September 1965 the armed forces of India and the Azad Kashmir forces backed by units of the Pakistan Army are locked in battle in the Bhimber sector, and the air forces of India and Pakistan have also engaged in combat.

It is not necessary for me, therefore, to stress the gravity of the situation, the devastating consequences of which are self-evident.

In your message, you seem to consider 5 August, when the so-called infiltration is alleged to have taken place, as the date when the cease-fire agreement of 1949 between India and Pakistan began to be so widely disregarded by unprecedented acts of violence along or in the vicinity of the cease-fire line as to have reduced that agreement to little consequence. If the cease-fire in Jammu and Kashmir was reduced a nullity, this process has taken place over a long period of time as a result of Indian designs and provocations. The more recent and grave instance occurred in May last when the Indian Army crossed the cease-fire line in the Kargil sector and occupied three posts on the Pakistan side of the line.

Thus, the origin and source of the conflict which is now taking place in Jammu and Kashmir cannot be traced to 5 August 1965. The Kashmir dispute must be reviewed in the context of the tragic history of the denial since 1949 of the right of self-determination to the people of the State and the annexation of their homeland by India through the so-called integration measures, in the teeth of their bitter protest. It must be emphasized here that the cease-fire was brought about by the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan resolutions of 13 August 1948 and 5 January 1949. These resolutions, which were negotiated by the United Nations, constituted an international agreement between India and Pakistan to implement the pledge of a plebiscite to the people of Jammu and Kashmir to decide their future. The cease-fire agreement flowed from the obligations accepted by both parties under those resolutions. Since the cease-fire in the State effected in 1949, India at first stalled on their implementation and subsequently repudiated them.

From 1949 to May 1965, India spurned every offer and every suggestion and barred all avenues for a peaceful settlement of the dispute. It ruled out recourse to the International Court of Justice. It rejected mediation, conciliation or good offices of any third party, including that of Your Excellency. If, in the past, India has made some show of willingness to enter into bilateral negotiations with Pakistan, events have shown that India’s motive was not to reach a settlement, but to forestall effective international action or to tide over some crisis in her internal and foreign relations. The Government of India's real attitude towards bilateral negotiations was made clear by the Indian Home Minister when, on 1 July 1965, he stated; ‘Kashmir is an integral part of India. It is a settled fact which cannot be the subject of debate or negotiations. The talk of self-determination is devoid of meaning or relevance.’

India has made it quite clear that it will not permit the wishes of the people of Jammu and Kashmir to be ascertained and that its objective is to make permanent the partition of the State of Jammu and Kashmir between India and Pakistan along the cease-fire line in total violation of her obligation to implement the right of self-determination.

In pursuit of this objective, the Government of India has embarked on the unlawful and provocative course of annexing the occupied portions of the State. In the process, a reign of terror and oppression has been let loose on the people, thousands of Kashmiris have been goaled without trial for the crime of demanding that India should honour her pledge to hold a plebiscite. Sheikh Mohammed Abdullah, along with his lieutenant Mirza Afzal Beg, has for the third time been put in prison, where they have already spent eleven years of their lives and where they are now apparently condemned to end their days.

The situation in Indian-occupied Kashmir today is that, after seventeen years of patient but vain expectation and hope, the people of Kashmir, finding all avenues of peaceful realization of their right of self-determination barred to them, have taken to arms against Indian tyranny. Who can blame them? The freedom fighters who have challenged the might of the Indian Army are not raiders but sons of the soil of Jammu and Kashmir, ready to make the supreme sacrifice for their cause.

The people of Azad Kashmir have been enraged for years over India's brutal repression of the freedom movement in Kashmir. If more than six divisions of the Indian Army deployed along the nearly 500 mile long cease-fire line have been unable to prevent them from moving across the line to aid the armed uprising of their compatriots in occupied Kashmir, how can it be expected that the much fewer troops of the Pakistan Army would be able to seal the line against them? It is but natural that India should seek to blame outsiders for the uprising in occupied Kashmir since she would have the world believe that the people of the State are happy with their lot under Indian occupation.

I am constrained to express my surprise and regret that, though the United Nations Military Observer Group has admitted that, in most cases, the actual identity of those engaging in the armed attacks on the Indian side of the line and the actual crossing of it could not be verified by direct observation and evidence, yet the Group should have thought it fit to conclude that the uprising in Jammu and Kashmir resulted from the crossing of the cease-fire line from the Pakistan side by armed men for the purpose of armed action on the Indian side. Failing to suppress the freedom fighters in the occupied territory of Jammu and Kashmir, India has embarked on a course of unlimited aggression across the cease-fire line. On 15 August, Indian forces against crossed the cease-fire line to take over the three unoccupied posts near Kargil which they had earlier been made to vacate upon Your Excellency’s interventions. Significantly, this was done within hours of a public threat by the Indian Prime Minister which was tantamount to that of invading Azad Kashmir. Later, the Indian Defence Minister proudly announced in the Indian Lok Sabha that India has crossed the cease-fire line in the past and would do so again. On 23 August, Indian forces shelled Awan Sharif, a village in West Pakistan, killing twenty-five persons and causing injuries to others and much damage to property. On 24 August, Indian troops crossed the cease-fire line and occupied two posts in the Tithwal sector on the Pakistan side of the cease-fire line. Again on the same day, Indian forces crossed the cease-fire line in the Uri-Punch sector and seized some Pakistan posts and on 1 September took the Haji Pir Pass.

Simultaneously with these acts of war, India intensified its acts of repression of the Kashmiris which, in their scope and nature, threaten to assume the proportion of genocide. On 14 August, the entire Batamalu suburb of Srinagar inhabited by Muslims was set afire and razed to the ground and the people burnt alive, to punish the residents for the support and help they were extending to the freedom fighters. This has been repeated in several other places in occupied Kashmir and has become the pattern of reprisals. Miss Mridula Sarabhai, the well known Indian social worker, has testified that, in the guise of taking action against the so-called infiltrators, the Indian Army has turned upon the entire Muslim population of the occupied territory and perpetrated atrocities upon them. The foreign Press has also commented on the incendiary role of the Indian Army.

These acts of aggression and grave violations of the cease-fire agreement have created a situation in which the human rights of the people of Kashmir as well as the security of Pakistan are equally threatened.

In response to this grave situation created by the Indian armed forces and to forestall further aggression by them, the Azad Kashmir forces backed by the Pakistan Army were forced, in the exercise of the inherent right of self-defence, to cross the cease-fire line in the Bhimber sector the first time since the cease-fire agreement was reached seventeen years ago, and after repeated Indian armed attacks and occupation of Azad Kashmir territories by the Indian Army. This crossing took place on 1 September. India escalated this conflict by mounting air attacks against Pakistan forces on the same day, compelling the Pakistan
Air Force to intervene. Until then, Pakistan had refrained from air action, even though our isolated and thinly manned posts in the Uri-Punch sector could not have been occupied if we had given them air support. On 4 September India carried the escalation of the conflict a stage further. The Indian Air Force twice violated Pakistan territory in strength, escorted by MIG-21 aircraft. And now, my Government has good reason to believe that India has begun again to deploy and mass her armed forces against West and East Pakistan. Weeks earlier, India moved a brigade from Aksai Chin and mountain division from the Nefa area, armed and equipped by the United States of America and some Commonwealth countries for use against China, to reinforce the six divisions of the Indian Army which have been suppressing the people of Jammu and Kashmir. It is, therefore, clear from these repeated strikes across the cease-fire line and step-by-step escalation of the fighting in Jammu and Kashmir that India has embarked on a premeditated course of aggression and war to seize the whole of Azad Kashmir territory and, in that process, not to flinch from even a subcontinental war. It will be recalled that immediately following the reverses suffered by the Indian Army in the Rann of Kutch, some months earlier, Indian Government leaders publicly threatened that India would attack Pakistan at a time and place of India's own choosing. In the circumstances, Pakistan must take every step necessary to discharge its responsibilities and duties for the defence of its legitimate interests and territorial integrity.

From the foregoing it is evident that India has embarked upon a course of terror, oppression and aggression in Kashmir. It has plainly manifested every intention of aggression against Pakistan. The responsibility for the current grave situation in that State therefore rests entirely on India.

Let me now turn to the other points that you have raised in your message. You have expressed the belief that the problems posed by the Kashmir dispute can be resolved peacefully and not by military action and have also drawn my attention to the obligations of State Members of the United Nations not to have recourse to the use of force in the settlement of international disputes and to seek pacific methods of settlement. Let me assure you that Pakistan remains dedicated to the Charter of the United Nations and the obligations of membership. You are aware that, during the last seventeen years, despite all the provocations and acts of repression by India in Jammu and Kashmir, despite India’s open repudiation of the resolutions of the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan and the Security Council, pledging self-determination to the people of Kashmir and despite India’s sinister pattern of annexing the State in the face of bitter opposition and in total disregard to the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, Pakistan did not abandon its faith that reason would one day dawn on India and turn it to the path of peace. It was with this faith that the Pakistan Government turned repeatedly to the Security Council, when direct negotiations with India in 1953, 1955, 1960, 1962 and 1963 failed to produce a just and equitable solution. To my infinite regret, our experience of seeking redress in the forum of the Security Council has time and again turned out to be disheartening. You will recall that, in 1964, the members of the Security Council would not even agree to recommend direct negotiations between India and Pakistan with the assistance as may be mutually acceptable of a third party or even the Secretary-General. To our deep sorrow and regret, the debate in that forum did not end in a consensus, much less in a resolution. This is not to say that Pakistan has lost all faith in the efficacy of the United Nations as an instrument of peace. We reaffirm our confidence in the solution of international disputes by peaceful means. This confidence extends to settlement of the Kashmir dispute.

I trust that, in view of what I have stated in the foregoing part of this reply to your message, the action which the Pakistan Army has taken in Jammu and Kashmir in support of the Azad Kashmir forces to defend Azad Kahmir and Pakistan territory against Indian occupation and territorial designs will not be construed by you as indicating our intention to resolve the Kashmir dispute by force of arms. This is a purely defensive measure forces on Pakistan.

You have expressed your conviction that a peaceful settlement of the Kashmir dispute can be found and have appealed to me to indicate immediately our intention to respect the cease-fire agreement and return to the status quo ante. You have also assured me of the fullest possible assistance by you in the restoration of peace in Kashmir and the solution of this dispute. A number of Chiefs of State and Governments of friendly countries have associated themselves with your appeal and some have offered their good offices for mediation. I am grateful to you and to them for these assurances and offers which I find heartening. At the same time, I cannot but he candid and express to you our misgivings. Your appeal seeks nothings more than a return to the status quo ante without any assurance that you and the Security Council will strive to implement the United Nations resolutions pertaining to the right of self-determination of the people of Jammu and Kashmir. You say that the quiet which would result from mutual observance of the cease-fire would afford the most favourable climate in which to seek a resolution of political differences. I would like to recall that the cease-fire agreement was observed from 1949 to 1965, when India chose to reduce it to a scrap of paper. Yet, during these seventeen years, tranquility along the cease-fire line did not lead to that result. The Security Council, faced with India’s bad faith, intransigence and growing power, chose practically to wash its hands of the responsibility for a peaceful and honourable settlement. It did not seem concerned about redressing the injustice meted out to the people of Jammu and Kashmir. I fear that you present appeal will only serve to perpetuate that injustice by leaving the people of occupied Kashmir to the mercy of India. What is to become of the brave people of Kashmir who are fighting for their freedom? I cannot believe that it would be the intention of the United Nations to permit India to liquidate them and to consolidate its stranglehold over occupied Kashmir. This leads me again to repeat what I have stated earlier that, if a peaceful settlement of the Kashmir dispute is to result from the intervention of the United Nations, it is necessary for the world Organization to go to the heart of the tragic problem and not merely to deal with its periphery. It must turn its attention to the issue of self-determination and not only to that of the cease-fire line. The concern of the United Nations must extend to the implementation of the resolutions of the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan as well as to the observance of the cease-fire agreement. The cease-fire was only the first part of an interrelated and integral whole. Therefore, insistence on a cease-fire can only be meaningful if there is a self-implementing agreement to follow it.

I should not be misunderstood as implying that I underestimate the importance of your assistance in the restoration of peace in Kashmir and solution of its problems. On the contrary, I welcome your assurance in this regard as a step forward by itself. However, there is no evidence yet that your assistance would be equally welcome to India, much less that India is prepared to reverse the dangerous and ill-conceived course of her policies in Kashmir. If this armed struggle for freedom is to be halted and calm is to be restored in the State of Jammu and Kashmir, If indeed peace in this region is to be preserved, then the right course is for the United Nations, India and Pakistan to proceed immediately to fulfil the pledge they gave to the people of Jammu and Kashmir eighteen years ago. It is they who must be permitted freely to decide the question of accession of the State of Jammu and Kashmir to India or Pakistan as stated in the pledge.

(Signed) M. Ayub Khan
President of the Republic of Pakistan
3614. Speech of Foreign Secretary C.S. Jha in the UN Security Council on Kashmir.

New York, September 6, 1965.

I am most grateful to you, Mr. President, for your welcoming words, and I am grateful to the Council for giving me the opportunity of expounding the position of my Government.

I have just heard the statement of the representative of Pakistan. He spoke with emotion and with a great deal of rhetoric. But rhetoric is no substitute for facts, and what the Council and what the whole world have to apply themselves to are the facts of the situation. I will briefly answer some of the points that he made, later, but to begin with, may I have your permission to read out the text of the message from the Minister of External Affairs of India to the Secretary-General of the United Nations in answer to the communication by the Secretary-General forwarding the resolution of the Council on 4 September. I incidentally note that there is no response from Pakistan. This is the reply of the Minister of External Affairs to the Secretary-General—and here may I crave the indulgence of the Secretary-General; he has just received the communication and I hope he will permit me to read it out for the record of the Council:

“The Minister of External Affairs of the Government of India presents his compliments to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and has the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the text on the resolution 209 (1965) adopted by the Security Council at its 1237 meeting on 4 September 1965. The Government of India, having given the most careful consideration to the resolution of the Security Council, would like to convey the following views to the Security Council.

“The Government of India appreciate that the Security Council, in their anxiety to stop the continuance of hostilities and bloodshed, have urgently adopted a resolution in hope of bringing about an immediate cease-fire. This resolution has evidently been adopted without taking into consideration the reply of the Prime Minister of India communicated to the Secretary-General on 4 September,”—

Here I might say that this reply perhaps reached the Secretary-General a bit too late for circulation, but it was read out by our representative on that date. Now, continuing with the message:

“in response to the appeal addressed by the Secretary-General to the Government of India on 2 September. The reply of the Prime Minister of India narrated the events leading to the present situation in Kashmir, and also urged the steps which should be taken to restore peace in the State of Jammu and Kashmir. It is also evident that the resolution does not take into consideration certain important findings and recommendations of the Secretary-General contained in his report, S/6651, dated 3 September 1965. Further, neither the resolution nor the discussions which preceded the adoption of the resolution took note of the fact that on 1 September 1965 Pakistan violated the international border south of the cease-fire Line between the State of Jammu and Kashmir and West Pakistan in order to attack the Chhamb-Jaurian sector within the State of Jammu and Kashmir, thereby extending the area of conflict. While aggression across the international border in the Chhamb-Jaurian sector continues, this attack, directed as it was by regular forces of the Pakistan Army towards gaining territory and cutting the vital lines of communication between the rest of India and the Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir, has changed the entire character of the situation. The offensive action in the Chhamb area was being fed by bases in Pakistan along the border of Pakistan with the State of Jammu and Kashmir. There were strong concentrations of Pakistan forces on the western frontier between India and Pakistan. On 5 September, after the resolution of the Security Council calling for a cease-fire, Pakistan aircraft bombed an Indian Air Force unit in Amritsar in the Indian State of Punjab, Pakistan aircrafts also bombed Ranbir Singhpura and other places in Jammu and Kashmir well away from the cease-fire Line. It was obvious that Pakistan was preparing for an offensive against India in a big way and a situation was created in which action restricted to Jammu and Kashmir could no longer meet the needs of the situation. Since the United Nations has throughout accepted that the security of Jammu and Kashmir is the responsibility of India, the Government of India had no alternative but to give effective assistance to our forces by moving across the Wagah border to stop Pakistan at the bases from which the attacks in Jammu and Kashmir were being mounted and supported.

"The resolution 209 (1965), 'Calls upon the Government of India and Pakistan to take forthwith all steps for an immediate cease-fire.' This cease-fire is posited on the condition mentioned in paragraph 2 of the resolution which ‘Calls upon the two Governments to respect the cease-fire line and have all armed personnel of each party withdrawn to its own side of the line. It is the view of the Government of India that, if a cease-fire is to be brought about and peace restored, the withdrawal of the armed personnel of each party', referred to in this paragraph, must include all infiltrators from the Pakistan side of the cease-fire line, whether armed or unarmed, because, as stated by the Prime Minister of India in his reply to the Secretary-General, the present hostilities originated with large-scale infiltrations of armed and unarmed personnel from Pakistan, and until the activities of such personnel cease and until such personnel are withdrawn from the Indian side of the cease-fire line, peace cannot be restored, for which Pakistan must accept full responsibility.

“It has been stated by the Secretary-General in the concluding part of his report that the restoration of the cease-fire and a return to normal conditions along the cease-fire line can be achieved inter alia by:

(a) A willingness of both parties to respect the Agreement they have entered into.

(b) A readiness on the part of the Government of Pakistan to take effective steps to prevent crossing of the CFL from the Pakistan side by armed men, whether or not in uniform. (S/6651, para 15).

“These findings of the Secretary-General, based on the reports of the UNMOGIP, established beyond any doubt that Pakistan committed aggression against India across the cease-fire line. This aggression began in its massive form soon after India agreed to withdraw and withdrew from the Kargil area, considered strategically vital to the security of the Srinagar-Leh road, on the assurances given by Pakistan through the Secretary-General that the security of this road would not be endangered by Pakistan. But as stated by the Secretary-General in his report to the Security General, ‘subsequently there were some military attacks on the road by armed elements from the Pakistan side’. This establishes clearly that Pakistan had no intention of honouring solemn assurances given to India through the Secretary-General and was bent on renewed and further aggression.

“The facts leading to the present situation and narrated in Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri’s message of September 4 to the Secretary-General are borne out by the Secretary-General’s report wherein it is stated that:

‘General Nimmo has indicated to me that the series of violations that began on 5 August were to a considerable extent…in the form of armed men, generally not in uniform, crossing the CFL from the Pakistan side for the purpose of armed action on the Indian side. This is a conclusion reached by General Nimmo on the basis of investigations by the United Nations Observers, in the light of the extensiveness and character of the raiding activities and their proximity to the CFL…. (Ibid….para.6)

“It has been further stated by the Secretary-General that: ‘As regards violations by artillery, there was heavy and prolonged artillery fire across the line from the Pakistan side in the Chhamb/Bhimber area on 15-16 August, and on 19 and 26 August the town of Poonch was shelled from the Pakistani side, some of the shells hitting the building occupied by the United Nations Military Observers.
Pakistan artillery again shelled the town of Poonch on 28 August. It is also stated that: 'It is likewise confirmed that as of 24 August armed elements from Pakistan were still occupying Indian positions (pickets) north of Mandi in the Poonch sector of the CFL.' The Secretary-General’s report has also stated that United Nations Military Observers have confirmed that on 1 September, the Pakistan army supported by artillery and air force attacked the Chhamb area of the Jammu-Jhangar sector; and on 2 September attacked Jaurian village across the international border between India and Pakistan.

"Thus, aggression by Pakistan has been clearly established by the independent authority of the United Nations and it is to be regretted that the Security Council has not taken this into consideration or asked Pakistan to withdraw from across the international border south of the cease-fire line and to respect the international border between India and Pakistan.

"While the Secretary-General in his recommendations to the Security Council referred to above has sought willingness of both parties to respect the agreement they have entered into, this appeal should more appropriately have been addressed to Pakistan alone because India has always respected the agreement in respect of the cease-fire line. This is borne out by the report of the Secretary-General itself. In this report he has stated that on the morning of 9 August, a cable was received from General Nimmo warning that the situation was deteriorating along the cease-fire line. On the basis of this report, the Secretary-General asked the representative of Pakistan to convey to his Government his very serious concern about the situation that was developing in Kashmir, involving the crossing of the cease-fire line from the Pakistan side by numbers of armed men and their attacks on Indian military positions on the Indian side of the line, and also my strong appeal that the cease-fire line be observed'.

"In response to this appeal, the Secretary-General has noted that: 'I have not obtained from the Government of Pakistan any assurance that the cease-fire and the cease-fire line will be respected henceforth or that efforts would be exerted to restore conditions to normal along that line'. The reason for Pakistan refusing to give such an assurance is also evident from the report of the Secretary-General when he described the considerations which led to his withholding the statement he wanted to make in consultations with the Governments of India and Pakistan. While India was agreeable to the statement proposed to be issued by Secretary-General, according to the Secretary-General: 'The Government of Pakistan was strongly negative about the statement in general on the grounds that it favoured India in that it dealt only with the current cease-fire situation without presenting the political background of the broad issue and thus was lacking in balance, since a cease-fire alone supports the status quo to India’s benefit’. It is clear from this that Pakistan did not want and does not want to maintain the status quo in respect of the cease-fire line and its only aim is to violate the cease-fire line and by aggression to extend by force the forcible occupation of the two-fifths of the State of Jammu and Kashmir to the whole of the State of Jammu and Kashmir. Thus, it is Pakistan alone who should be asked to express willingness to respect the agreement they have entered into and to desist from altering the status quo by force.

“The Secretary-General in the second recommendation contained in his report to the Security Council has urged categorically that the Government of Pakistan is to be asked to express its readiness ‘to take effective steps to prevent crossings of the Cease-fire Line from the Pakistan side by armed men, whether or not in uniform’. It is obvious from this that, as stated in the reply of the Prime Minister of India to the Secretary-General, the present situation has arisen not from any ‘armed revolt’ in the State of Jammu and Kashmir, as wrongly alleged by Pakistan, but as a result of massive armed infiltration organized and planned by Pakistan, followed by attacks by the Pakistan Army and Air Force. Until this aspect of the situation and the recommendations of the Secretary-General in this regard are taken into consideration, no progress can be made to restore peace in the state of Jammu and Kashmir.

“The Government of India is of the firm view that an immediate cease-fire and the implementation of paragraph 2 of Security Council resolution 209 *1965) can be brought about only when Pakistan takes effective steps to stop further crossings of the Cease-fire Line from the Pakistan side by armed and unarmed personnel, civil and military, whether or not in uniform, and also immediately removes from the Indian side of the Cease-fire Line all such personnel who have already crossed the Cease-Fire Line. Pakistan must also vacate aggression in the Chhamb area, forcibly occupied by Pakistan since 1 September from across the international border, and undertake to respect in future the international border between Indian and Pakistan. Furthermore, India would have to be satisfied that there will be no recurrence of such a situation before a cease-fire can be effective and peace restored.”

I have taken the liberty of reading into the record this message from the Minister of External Affairs to the Secretary-General. This message gives the position of my Government with regard to the matter that is before the Security Council. It is, of course, an elaboration, but substantively it contains the some points that were made by the Prime Minister of India in the reply to the Secretary-General contained in his communication of 4 September. Our position therefore has been made clear before the Council, and I would leave this communication at that.
Now, with the permission of the President, I should like to say a few words about the rhetorical, highly coloured and, in many instances, false statements made by the representatives of Pakistan. He talked about Pakistan’s being one-fifth the size of India. I think that perhaps that is arithmetically a little wrong, but nevertheless it is correct that Pakistan is smaller in size than India. But what do we see today? We certainly do not judge a country by its size. A large country and a small country are both Members of the United Nations and enjoy sovereign equality; they are equals before the international community. But today we find that Pakistan has mounted an aggression against India with the help—and I have to mention this regretfully—of weapons obtained from its ally by deceitful means throughout these years. These weapons were obtained for other purposes, but today they are being used against the sons of India, against the friends of the United States in an action which is a patent example of aggression.

The representative of Pakistan has also referred to what he calls India’s aggressive actions. In his statement, he has turned a blind eye to many things. He has not mentioned the report of the Secretary-General, which is a Council document and which indeed forms the basis of the consideration of this matter by the Council. That report has been ignored. He has ignored the fact of the massive infiltrations commencing on 5 August, which again is a matter of history, which is testified to in the report of the Secretary-General in no uncertain terms, and which is again based on the observations of United Nations Observers who have been specifically entrusted with the task of observance of the cease-fire. All these, according to Pakistan, do not exist. The incidents of 5 August and thereafter—the massive infiltration of hundreds, and in fact thousands, of men armed to the teeth with modern weapons, well organized and coming into our territory to commit sabotage and arson—those facts have been completely ignored.

The representative of Pakistan has also ignored and forgotten, although the world has not forgotten—and certainly we have not forgotten—the invasion of Jammu and Kashmir by Pakistan in 1947-48. The Council will recall—or certainly the permanent members of the Council—that in that year the State of Jammu and Kashmir, which is an independent State, an integral part of the Indian Union juridically and in fact, was invaded by Pakistan, and that for months Pakistan refused to admit any hand in that invasion. Before the Security Council, its representatives solemnly and on several occasions denied any complicity in the invasion of Kashmir, any complicity in the activities of the raiders who had come across the boundary between Jammu and Kashmir, on the one hand, and Pakistan, on the other. But truly cannot be hidden for ever. Seven months later, in July 1948 when they realized that it was no longer possible to hide the fact of their complicity, they admitted before the United Nations commission on India and Pakistan that the Pakistan Army had been in Kashmir in the strength of one or two brigades—I cannot recall now which it was; that they had been there, and had been there for several months.

That, of course, happened several years ago. But the consequences are still with us. Today, Pakistan occupies two-fifths of the State of Jammu and Kashmir, without the slightest shadow of legal right, and its occupation is based solely and entirely on force. That is aggression, which we shall not forget. The Council may have forgotten that—there have been tendencies sometimes to forget it—but we cannot forget. That is aggression, and that aggression is continuing today.

Not content with that aggression, Pakistan has engineered aggression in the form of massive infiltrations of armed personnel, the fact of which can no longer be doubted in the context of the report of the Secretary-General and the report of the United Nations Observers.

I would request the Council to pause for a moment and consider the enormity of this action. India is a peaceful State. It does not want to get into any trouble with its neighbours; it has no designs on its neighbours; it does not covet any territory. Its record of peace, and its contribution to peace, is inscribed in the archives of the United Nations. Here we are, a peaceful State—and suddenly thousands of armed personnel, most of them belonging to the regular forces in the camouflaged garb of civilians, descend on our territory. They descend in the midst of our population, with instructions from the Pakistan Government—as has been shown and abundantly proved by statements of captured prisoners, by photographs of weapons and of men who have been captured—to commit sabotage, arson, murder and pillage, to disrupt the lines of communication, to harass the Indian Army and to create an internal uprising. These were the motives with which these people came into our territory.

I said a moment ago that this is a matter to be paused over and pondered. Is it permissible for a State, a neighbouring State, to send thousands of armed personnel into another State to commit illegal acts? Does that not amount to aggression? Does that not amount to a flagrant violation of the Charter? Is it not against all principles of peaceful coexistence? Is it not contrary to the numerous international declarations—the Bandung Declaration, the Charter of the Organization of African Unity, the Cairo declaration, and numerous other declaration—which have been adopted by nations and which today embody the ethos, the ethics of international life? Surely, that sort of action cannot be permitted. If it does occur, a sovereign state is obliged—it has not only the right, but the duty—to defend itself against this kind of aggression.

That is all we did. The infiltrators who came into our territory were dealt with in accordance with the normal way of dealing with law-breakers, which is the right of every State. But then these people kept on coming. We made it quite clear—the representative of Pakistan has even quoted some statements by my Prime Minister and others—that this was a most worrisome situation for us, a situation of patent and naked aggression—a situation which is not permitted to a neighbouring State under the Charter of the United Nations, or under any code of international behavior. Therefore, we had to take action to meet this. We were faced with an endless chain of men being sent over the frontier. We would push them back, and they would continue to come over again. Therefore, we had to take military action; we had to take defensive measures which would not only enable us to deal with these people in our territory but, even more important, which would enable us to stop these infiltrations. We made no secret of this; as a matter of fact, our representatives here informed the Secretary-General of this development.

The most curious feature of this whole business is the fact that Pakistan denies completely any knowledge of these armed infiltrations or of dispatching these infiltrators. According to Pakistan, they do not exist; according to them there is a mythical revolt in Kashmir.

Today, the whole world knows, however, as has been testified to by foreign and independent observers that there is no revolt in Kashmir: the people are with the Government—contrary to what Pakistan has tried to lead or mislead, the world to believe—and therefore co-operate with the Government. They are angry that their homes and herds have been raided by these armed men from across the cease-fire line, and they have helped the Government in tracking down these infiltrators. There is no revolt of the people in Kashmir. In fact, the people are suffering—they have suffered and are suffering—at the hands of Pakistani armed personnel, both regular personnel and this camouflaged body of infiltrators.

While the Secretary-General of the United Nations was making earnest efforts, in consultation with the representatives of India and Pakistan to find a way out of this difficult situation—even while these efforts were being made—Pakistan, on 1 September, mounted a terrific attack: two regiments of tanks, to begin with—again, extremely lethal weapons—which they had deceitfully obtained from their allies for other purposes—a most severe onslaught, partly across the cease-fire line, partly across the international frontier between Jammu and Kashmir, and today, they have penetrated something like twenty miles, or even more, and are threatening our lines of communication with our armed forces in Kashmir, and also the lines of communication in general between Jammu and Kashmir and India. This they call defensive action.

These words—"defensive action"—are in current use. Yet, if there is one thing history has taught, it is that aggressors, when they use those words, use them for a different purpose: to camouflage their aggression.

In the broadcast on 1 September, President Ayub Khan, while reiterating the denial of any knowledge of infiltrators, or of any responsibility for these armed infiltrators, and in announcing the invasion of the Chhamb area, into Jammu went on to say that Pakistan forces were obliged to go into Jammu and Kashmir to help the so called freedom fighters.

Mark these words. This is not defensive action; he does not state he went there to defend Pakistan. He went there to help others who he thought were freedom fighters. This is not defensive action. By the very words of the President of Pakistan, the action that Pakistan has taken—the great military thrust supported by tanks, heavy artillery, aircraft etc., as a result of which Pakistani forces have penetrated many miles into our territory—could not be called defensive action. It was offensive action. Tanks are usually used for offensive purposes purpose in such a manner. It was offensive action, whatever may be the reason or justification in their own eyes for that action.

The representative of Pakistan has also denied that there is an international frontier between Jammu and Kashmir and Pakistan. The State of Jammu and Kashmir is a part of the Indian Union; and I repeated this, as it has been repeated dozens of time before this Council. And if we have to repeat it again, we do so because it is our scared right and our sacred duty to defend the integrity of any part of India. That right and duty cannot be taken away from us, even by the United Nations, because the very basis of the Charter of the United Nations is the recognition of the sovereignty of a country. We have the right to defend our territory, and Jammu and Kashmir is a part of India; no emotional outburst on the part of Pakistan can change that fact. I want to make that clear. All consideration by this Council has to take account of that very basic fact. If it is ignored then the very basis of this consideration disappears.

India has the right to defend itself. As Prime Minister Nehru stated, several years ago, an attack on Jammu and Kashmir is an attack on India. He was stating an obvious fact, but wanted to emphasize it because the eyes of our predatory neighbour have always been cast on Jammu and Kashmir. There is no international border, he said, between Jammu and Kashmir and India.

As you know, there is a cease-fire line, which of course is not an international frontier: it is a line arising out of the Cease-Fire Agreement of 1949. But below the cease-fire line there is a very long frontier between Jammu and Kashmir and Pakistan; and the fact that it is an international frontier cannot disappear merely because Pakistan has advanced a spurious claim to the State of Jammu and Kashmir; there can be no other frontier but an international frontier between Jammu and Kashmir and Pakistan. Therefore, even taking the worst view—which I do not for a moment admit—that it is a disputed frontier, does that justify a State marching its armies across a frontier it regards as disputed? As I said, no dispute exists; but if the theory put forward by the representative of Pakistan were adopted, then the whole of international society would lose the very basis for its co-existence.

I am sorry to take the Council’s time, but I wish to put the record straight. The representative of Pakistan has talked of colonialism; he accuses India of colonialism in Jammu and Kashmir. The people of Jammu and Kashmir are the people of India. They are our kith and kin; they are blood of our blood, and they are as much Indian citizens as anyone else in any part of India. That is not colonialism. They enjoy the same rights and privileges, the same guarantees under the Constitution of India, as any other citizen of India. The representative of Pakistan would be well advised to look nearer home, to look within himself. Some introspective examination is always useful for the soul. If there is colonialism, it is the colonialism that is being practiced in Pakistan. A ruling group, divorced from contact with public opinion, is ruling over large sections of the people of Pakistan. If there is colonialism, it exists in Pakistan. The Pakhtoons, the Baluchis, the East Pakistanis, are being ruled without any regard to their civil rights, to their fundamental human rights and freedoms. That is colonialism as the world understands it.

The representative of Pakistan continued to repeat that all the action undertaken by Pakistan has been defensive action. I have already said that the action taken by Pakistan, first and foremost—and I repeat “first and foremost”—has been the planned and Government-directed infiltration, massive infiltration, of thousands of people into our territory. That is aggression. That is something which international society cannot tolerate; it is not open to any neighbour to behave in that fashion, and if it does behave in that fashion, retribution must come.

Every nation has the inherent right to exercise self-defence, and that is what we have done against these armed infiltrators. The action undertaken by Pakistan is surely not defensive action. Its massive attack with tanks, heavy artillery and aircraft deep inside Jammu and Kashmir—accounts of which members of the Security Council must have read—cannot be defensive action, as I have already indicated. I should like to read out what appeared in today’s New York Times, both in the news report and under the caption “Quotation of the Day”. This is what General Mohammad Musa, Commander-in-Chief of the Pakistani Army, said to his troops on their success against Indian forces on the Indian side of the Cease-fire Line:

“You have got your teeth into him. Bite deeper and deeper until he is destroyed. And destroy him you will, God willing”.

Even God is brought into this. These are not the words of a Commander who is engaged in defensive action. This is cold-blooded aggression. They want to destroy us. They want to defeat our armies. They want to annex our territory. And surely it is up to us, it is our duty, it is our right, to defend our territory by all means at our disposal.

Pakistan has, by its actions, converted and transformed this whole business into the realm of military action. What we have had to exercise is defensive military action because we have got to strike at the bases from where this attack has been launched and from where they expect to wreak destruction on us.

I shall content myself with these observations. I am most grateful to you, Mr. President, for having given me this time, and I hope that you will permit me to speak again if circumstances should necessitate it.

3615. Telegram dated 6 September 1965 from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Pakistan to the President of the Security Council.

Rawalpindi, September 6, 1965.

At 0300 hours last night the Indian Army unleashed a tremendous armed attack on Pakistan along the borders of West Pakistan and launched a war of unprovoked and naked aggression against our peaceful country. In announcing this news to the Lok Sabha the Defence Minister of India stated that the attack was being made with the object of forestalling an attack on India by Pakistan. To India’s record of series of aggressions against Junagadh, Hyderabad and Jammu and Kashmir has now been added the most grave and criminal war of aggression against Pakistan. We have warned the United Nations on several previous occasions that India would take to this course against us at an appropriate opportunity.
Since 1958, and more especially since 1962, the military build-up of the Indian Army has unmistakably pointed to the pattern of preparation for a war of aggression against Pakistan. The causes of the current conflict in Jammu and Kashmir are known to all Members of the United Nations. India has held the people of that State in bondage for eighteen years, broken all pledges to implement the right of self-determination of the Kashmiri people, has annexed the State, has tried to break the spirit of the Kashmiris by ruthless suppression and the lifetime imprisonment of their leaders and has embarked on a series of aggressions across the cease-fire line, commencing from the middle of May when it occupied Pakistan posts in the Kargil sector on the Pakistan side of the cease-fire line. After vacating them for a time on the Secretary-General's intervention, India again crossed the cease-fire line on 15 August and reoccupied them on 23 August. Indian forces shelled Awan Sharif, a village in West Pakistan, causing death and destruction to its peaceful inhabitants. On 24 August the Indian troops crossed the cease-fire line again and occupied two posts in the Tithwal sector on the Pakistan side of the line. Again on the same day Indian forces crossed the cease-fire line in the Uri - Poonch sector and seized some Pakistan posts, and on 1 September took the Haji Pir Pass. Simultaneously the Indian Army of Occupation has intensified its acts of repression of the people – acts which in their scope and nature threaten to assume the proportions of genocide. These acts of aggression and grave violations of the cease-fire agreement have created a situation in which the human rights of the people of Jammu and Kashmir as well as the security of Pakistan are equally threatened. In response to this grave situation created by the Indian armed forces the Azad Kashmir forces backed by the Pakistan Army were forced to cross the cease-fire line in the Bhimber sector in exercise of the right of self-defence for the first time since the cease-fire agreement was reached seventeen years ago and after repeated Indian armed attacks and occupation of Azad Kashmir territory by the Indian Army. This crossing took place on 1 September. India decided to escalate the conflict by mounting air attacks against Pakistan forces on the same day, compelling the Pakistan Air Force to intervene. On 4 September India carried the escalation a stage further. The Indian Air Force twice violated Pakistan territory in strength, escorted by MIG aircraft, and now, last night India mounted a treacherous armed attack, this time against West Pakistan. This war forced by India on Pakistan is not of Pakistan's seeking. It is a war of aggression by India against Pakistan and as such constitutes the gravest possible violation of the Charter of the United Nations.

I have the honour to inform your Excellency that Pakistan will exercise her inherent right of individual and collective self-defence recognized in Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations until the Security Council has taken effective measures to restore international peace and security by vacating Indian aggression against Pakistan and Jammu and Kashmir which India has forcibly and illegally occupied in violation of United Nations resolutions. The aggression unleashed by India against our country poses for the United Nations one of the most serious challenges to its very basis. The situation calls for action immediately by the Security Council, including enforcement action to put an end to the Indian aggression and to restore international peace and security on the above-stated basis, which is the only way to secure a lasting peace in the region.

(Signed) Zulfikar Ali Bhutto
Minister for Foreign Affairs of Pakistan

New York, September 6, 1965.

The Security Council,

Noting the report of the Secretary-General, on developments in the situation in Kashmir since the adoption of Security Council resolution 209 (1965) of 4 September 1965 calling for a cease-fire,

Noting with deep concern the extension of the fighting which adds immeasurably to the seriousness of the situation,

1. Calls upon the parties to cease hostilities in the entire area of conflict immediately, and promptly withdraw all armed personnel to the positions held by them before 5 August 1965;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to exert every possible effort to give effect to the present resolution and to resolution 209 (1965), to take all measures possible to strengthen the United Nations Military Observer Group in India and Pakistan, and to keep the Council promptly and currently informed on the implementation of the resolutions and on the situation in the area;

3. Decides to keep this issue under urgent and continuous review so that the Council may determine what further steps may be necessary to secure peace and security in the area;

Adopted unanimously at the 1238th meeting.

New Delhi, January 22, 1966.

INTRODUCTION

This Agreement is in four parts:

Part I Procedure concerning the immediate disengagement of troops and reduction of tension;

Part II Procedure concerning the withdrawal of troops from the occupied areas;

Part III Procedure concerning reduction of tension in the Eastern Sector;

Part IV General Points.

PART I

DISENGAGEMENT OF TROOPS AND REDUCTION OF TENSION

PHASE 1

Both forces will withdraw 1,000 yards from the Line of Actual Control in sectors as specified below:

(a) RAJASTHAN/SIND

(b) AMRITSAR/LAHORE

(c) JAMMU/SIALKOT

(d) AKHNUR/CHHAMBA (from River CHENAB NW 8061 To MAWA WALI KHAD NW 7770)

In all other sectors including sectors divided by the 1949 Cease Fire Line, troops will continue to hold their respective piquet as by so doing they will be automatically separated from each other. The only exception to this will be where, in hilly terrain, opposing forces are at present considered to be too close to each other, each side will withdraw to a distance to be mutually agreed upon by the local commanders not below the rank of Brigadier.

[NOTE: In the Amritsar-Lahore sector, this 1000 yards withdrawal will be modified so that Pakistani troops who are actually on the West bank of the BRB Canal and Indian troops who are on the East bank of the BRB Canal facing each other will withdraw all armed personnel off the embankment to a distance of 200 yards on each side. Unarmed personnel may, however, live, move and work in this area.]
The same principle will apply in Sulaimanki - Fazilka Sector, Hussainiwala Sector and Khem Karan Sector. After the withdrawal in this phase no new defences of any kind will be prepared in occupied territory.

There will be no movement of armed military, para-military or police personnel, either armed or unarmed within the demilitarised zone and no civilian personnel will be permitted within it by either side.

The period for completion of this phase will be five days.

PHASE II

In this phase both sides will remove and nullify all defences which will include the:

(a) lifting of mines; and

(b) dismantling of all other defence works, less permanent defence structures constructed of steel and cement.

The period for completing this phase will be twenty-one days which will commence immediately after the five-day period mentioned in para 5.

Working parties for this purpose will be found by unarmed military personnel in uniform. No civilian or civil labour will be used for these tasks.

While every effort will be made to dismantle all defence works within the specified period, where owing to weather and other conditions it is not possible to complete this, the uncleared area so left will be clearly marked and a sketch of these given to the other side.

There will be no firing of weapons or use of explosives within 10,000 meters of the Line of Actual Control. Where explosives have to be used to dismantle defence works, this will only be done under supervision as specified later and after due intimation to the other side.

The present Agreement affecting restriction on flights of aircraft will continue to apply.

To ensure that the action agreed to in PART I above is being implemented in letter and in spirit, the good offices of UNMOGIP and UNIPOM will be utilised. In the event of a disagreement, their decision will be final and binding on both sides.

PART II

WITHDRAWAL OF TROOPS FROM OCCUPIED AREAS

After the dismantling of defences has taken place, all troops, para-military forces and armed police who are now on the other side of the international border and Cease Fire Line, will be withdrawn. This withdrawal will be completed by 25th February, 1966. If in any particular sector or part of a sector, the dismantling of defences has been completed earlier than the last date specified, withdrawal may be sector-wise if mutually agreed to.

During this withdrawal, there will be no follow up by civilians, armed military, para-military or police personnel until 25 February, 1966. Only unarmed military personnel at a strength mutually agreed upon at the sector level may move into these unoccupied areas for normal police duties (see paragraph 16 below).

After troops of both sides have crossed into their own territory, the procedure which was being followed by Pakistan and India before 5 August, 1965, for the security of the international border and the Cease Fire Line, will apply. Attention is drawn to Ground Rules 1961 for West Pakistan/Punjab, Rajasthan and Gujarat (India).

It is essential that under all circumstances troops must move out of occupied areas by 25 February, 1966, even if the dismantling of defence and lifting of mines have not been completed.

For immediate settlement of any points of dispute that may arise, sector commanders not below the rank of Major General will be designated by name and appointment both by India and Pakistan who will meet to settle the differences. Telephone or R/T communication will be established between these designated sector commanders and will be permanently manned.

Any matter on which there is disagreement will be referred to the C-in-C, Pakistan Army, and COA’s, India, for their joint decision. If the issue is still not resolved by them the good offices of Major General T· Marambio will be utilised and his decision will be final and binding on both sides.

PART III
REDUCTION OF TENSION IN THE EASTERN SECTOR

The limit of withdrawal in the Eastern Sector will be left to local commanders not below the rank of Major General to mutually decide where necessary, in consultation with the civil authorities concerned. Both sides will arrive at a working agreement as soon as possible.

Border Security Forces consisting of armed para-military units, police or any other irregular forces of both sides will not open fire across the border under any circumstances.

Any encroachment across the border will be dealt with through apprehension of personnel concerned and thereafter handing them over to civil authorities.

In any case where firing takes place across the border it will be investigated on the spot by a joint team consisting of border personnel from both sides within 24 hours of occurrence. Brigade Commanders/ DIGs responsible for this investigation will be designated by name and appointment sector wise for West Bengal, Assam and Tripura by India and for the adjoining areas of East Pakistan by Pakistan.

Liaison between commanders and telephone communications at various levels will be established as given in para 12 and 13 of the Ground Rules for Indo-East Pakistan border.

To ensure that the above Agreement is fully implemented, quarterly meetings will take place between Army and Police authorities of India and Pakistan, alternately in India and Pakistan, to assess the extent to which the Agreement is working in practice.

These are a supplement to the Ground Rules formulated by the Military Sub-Committee of the Indian and Pakistani delegations on 20 October, 1959.

PART IV
GENERAL POINTS

In order to resolve any problems that may arise in the implementation of this Agreement and to further maintain friendly relations between the two countries, the C-in-C Pakistan and the COA India will meet from time to time. The meetings will be held alternately in India and Pakistan and will be initiated by the respective Governments concerned.

Ground rules to implement this withdrawal Agreement in the Western Sector will be formulated by Lt. General Bakhtiar Rana Pakistan, and Lt. General Harbaksh Singh-India, under the Chairmanship of Major General T. Marambio as early as possible.

The Agreement comes into effect as from 0600 hours IST/0630 hours WPT 25 January, 1966.

The Security Council,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on his consultations with the Governments of India and Pakistan.

Commending the Secretary-General for his unrelenting efforts in furtherance of the objectives of Security Council resolutions 209 (1965) and 210 (1965) of 4 and 6 September 1965.

Having heard the statements of the representatives of India and Pakistan.

Noting the differing replies by the parties to an appeal for a cease-fire as set out in the report of the Secretary-General, but noting further with concern that no cease-fire has yet come into being.

Convinced that an early cessation of hostilities is essential as a first step towards a peaceful settlement of the outstanding differences between the two countries on Kashmir and other related matters.

1. Demands that a cease-fire should take effect on Wednesday, 22 September 1965, at 1700 hours GMT, and calls upon both Governments to issue orders for a cease-fire at the moment and a subsequent withdrawal of all armed personnel to the positions held by them before 5 August 1965;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary assistance to ensure supervision of the cease-fire and the withdrawal of all armed personnel;

3. Calls on all States to refrain from any action which might aggravate the situation in the area;

4. Decides to consider, as soon as paragraph 1 of Council resolution 2010 (1965) has been implemented, what steps could be taken to assist towards a settlement of the political problem underlying the present conflict, the in the meantime calls on the two Governments to utilize all peaceful means, including those listed in Article 33 of the Charter of the United Nations, to this end;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to exert every possible effort to give effect to the present resolution, to seek a peaceful solution, and to report to the Security Council thereon.

Adopted at the 1242nd meeting by 10 votes to none, with I abstention (Jordan).
3619. Statement of Pakistan Foreign Minister Arshad Husain in the UN General Assembly.

New York, October 11, 1968.

The PRESIDENT: The representative of Pakistan has requested to be allowed to speak in exercise of the right of reply.

Mr. HUSAIN (Pakistan): In his reply to my statement on Friday last the Minister of State of India dwelt at length on India-Pakistan issues from his point of view. In the process he made many incorrect statements which it is necessary for me to correct. For my part I shall avoid acrimony and therefore I shall disregard his interperate language and the base motives he has attributed to my country. While I apologize to you, Mr. President, and to my fellow representatives for the length of my reply, I hope that the exchanges will lead to a better understanding of the issues involved.

The Minister of State has deemed it fitting to protest our mentioning India-Pakistan issues at the United Nations. For our part we consider that the United Nations is the most appropriate forum for raising such issues as the right of self-determination of the people of Jammu and Kashmir and respect for the fundamental rights of the Muslims of India, whenever these rights are denied or violated.

The main contention of the Minister of State of India was that India had shown willingness to normalize relations with Pakistan. At the same time, he has repeatedly asserted that the State of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India. We have here the clearest possible repudiation of his Government’s commitment to the right of self-determination of the people of Jammu and Kashmir. Surely this cannot help in normalizing the relations between India and Pakistan, when it is this very dispute that is responsible for most of the difficulties between the two countries.

The representative of India has made a reference to the Tashkent Declaration. It was the essence of that Declaration that India and Pakistan should settle all their disputes through peaceful means and that “the sides will continue meeting both at the highest and at other levels on matters of direct concern to both countries.”

On behalf of my Government, I reaffirm the readiness of Pakistan to take up all outstanding issues and settle them, including Kashmir, either as a package deal or according to a step-by-step procedure, provided India clearly reaffirms its agreement that at an appropriate and specified stage it will negotiate on Kashmir in sincerity and with a view to finding a solution of the dispute.
We cannot escape the fact that, unless the basic cause of tension between India and Pakistan, namely, the Kashmir dispute, is taken up for serious negotiations with a view to finding a just and honourable settlement, the resolution of peripheral issues cannot bring about a normalization of our relations. Indeed, experience has known that agreements, even on peripheral issues, do not hold in the atmosphere of tension perpetuated by the continuance of the Kashmir and Farrakka waters disputes.

The Minister of State of India has called Pakistan an aggressor. It would be well if he recalled that the charge, repeated during the past twenty years, was originally made in the Security Council in 1948 and argued, at length. The fact, however, remains that, though India tried very hard indeed, it failed to convince the Security Council. The council felt that charge had no basis and was not even the relevant issue in the dispute. The real question was to ascertain the wishes of the people of Jammu and Kashmir: whether they wished to accede to India or to Pakistan. The result of the Security Council’s effort was the formulation by the United Nations Commission for India and Pakistan of the resolutions of 13 August 1948 and 5 January 1949. Those resolutions were accepted by both India and Pakistan and thus constituted a binding international agreement.

Paragraph 1 of the resolution of 5 January 1949 States:

“The question of the accession of the State of Jammu and Kashmir to India and Pakistan will be decided through the democratic method of a free and impartial plebiscite.”

The acceptance of the two United Nations resolutions by India and Pakistan superseded the charges and counter-charges of aggression leveled by each country against the other.

The representative of India also maintained that Pakistan was pleading for the right of self-determination of a people “who have repelled Pakistani aggression twice.” May I ask, what then prevents India from availing itself of the golden opportunity to get the verdict of these people who have repelled aggression registered once and for all in India’s favour?

The Minister of State also claimed that conditions in Jammu and Kashmir were normal and peaceful and that the people of that State continued to enjoy their constitutional rights and freedoms. How, then, does he account for the fact that, out of a population of about 3.5 million in Indian occupied Kashmir, Over 700,000 Kashmiris were driven out and took refuge in Pakistan after 1948 and another 100,000 were expelled and took refuge in Pakistan after the hostilities in 1965? Why were these people expelled? Why are they not allowed to return to their homes? How does he explain the boycott of the so-called elections and by-elections in the State by an overwhelming majority of the electorate?
It is a matter of deep regret that the Minister of State of India thought it fit to state that, if an explosive situation is created, the entire responsibility for it will lie at the door of Pakistan. It pains me to draw his attention to the fact that it is India itself, and not Pakistan, which is responsible for creating such a situation inside Jammu and Kashmir. It is India’s unilateral repudiation of its solemn obligation under an international agreement regarding Jammu and Kashmir that has created and continues to create this situation.

It is India’s repression of the human rights of the people of Jammu and Kashmir that is responsible for the grave discontent inside Jammu and Kashmir.

Instead of accusing Pakistan, India would do well to refer back to its own case as originally presented in its letter to the Security Council (S/628) of January 1948. The Minister of State of India will find that in that letter his Government made no contention that Kashmir was, or that it would remain, an integral part of India. On the contrary India clearly implied that the so-called accession was provisional and also gave a pledge that the people of Kashmir would be free to decide their future by a plebiscite under international auspices.

At the very inception of the Kashmir dispute, the Prime Minister of India, the late Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, addressed several communications to the Government of Pakistan. I shall quote one here. In a telegram to the Prime Minister of Pakistan on 31 October 1947, he stated:

“Our assurance that we shall withdraw our troops from Kashmir as soon as peace and order are restored and leave the State is not merely a promise to your Government but also to the people of Kashmir and to the world.”

Then on 2 November 1947, he said:

“We have declared that the fate of Kashmir is ultimately to be decided by the people. That pledge we have given not only to the people of Kashmir but to the world. We will not and cannot back out of it.”

It was by exercising the right of self-determination that India itself attained its independence. It is the fulfillment of that basic human right that has brought many nations as Members to this august Assembly. It is this very right of self-determination that India has supported for all non-self-governing peoples. Why does India then deny the exercise of that right to the people of Jammu and Kashmir, to whom it had been promised by India and the Security Council, and who continue to demand it? Pakistan asks no more than these pledges be fulfilled.

That is the core of the unsatisfactory relations between India and Pakistan. The Security Council has been seized of this dispute since 1948. It is time to take the matter forward now and for the Security Council resolution of 20 September 1965 to be acted upon.

As regards the disquieting situation resulting from the construction by India of the Farrakka Barrage, the Minister of State of India conceded that it was “bilateral in nature,” yet in the same breath denied that it had any international importance. The contradiction this is apparent.

His first contention was that “The Ganges is not an international river, but is overwhelmingly an Indian river.” In support of this thesis, the Minister of State has invoked new criteria for the definition of an international river—the extent of the catchment area, the length of flow of the river, the incidence of rainfall, the extent of the areas irrigated, and so on.

If India’s definition of an international river were to be accepted, what then would be the status of such rivers as the Columbia, the Rio Grande, the Danube and others which traverse more than one State? The Minister of State of India refers to existing international law on the subject. May I remind him that the broad consensus of international jurists has established that an international river is one which flows between or traverses, two or more States.

India’s contention is that an upper riparian State can use the waters of a river as it pleases, regardless of the ruination which that might cause to the lower riparian State. If the Minister is sure of international law on the subject, why should India fear to have recourse to arbitration to settle the matter, or to Justice, which Pakistan is prepared to accept?

India complains that Pakistan has stepped up its demand for water requirements in the dry season. I should like to ask, has not India done the same? India’s present estimates of withdrawals from Farrakka have more than doubled since the construction was begun. The uses of river waters are related to the needs of development and do not remain static, especially when the need is for irrigation purposes to grow more food, as in Pakistan; whilst India, according to its own admission, has no such demands for waters flowing through the Ganges at Farrakka, waters which it says are required for flushing the River Hooghly in order to desalt the port of Calcutta.

The Minister of India has accused Pakistan of having created an artificial problem where no problem existed. Is it proper that he should so lightly and summarily dismiss an issue of the utmost gravity to us which is fraught with calamitous consequences to Pakistan’s economic existence?

Let me mention some of the consequences which the construction of the Farrakka Barrage by India, without an agreement with Pakistan, will have for the very livelihood of the 65 million people of East Pakistan:
First, because of the diversion of waters at the dam, almost the entire flow of the River Ganges into East Pakistan could be stopped in the dry season, turning hundreds of thousands of acres of cultivated land into waste land;

Second, as a result, the channel of the river in East Pakistan will become silted, and in the flood season almost half the area of the East Pakistan will be flooded every year;

Third, the coastal areas of East Pakistan will become uncultivable in consequence of the greater penetration of sea-water into the delta owing to the lack of drainage of fresh water into the sea;

Fourth, as a result of the drastic reduction in water supply, a number of agricultural projects, including those being planned, will be seriously affected.

The fact that such would be the consequences of India’s action is borne out by expert international opinion. At the request of the Government of Pakistan, two World Bank missions made a study of the problem. Their studies have established that the diversion of water supplies by India would cause such a change in the regime of the River Ganges as to have ruinous effects on several projects in East Pakistan.

Indeed, it has been acknowledged that no successful planning, execution or operation of Land and Water resources development in East Pakistan is possible without a solution of this problem.

I have noted that the Minister has stated that official-level meetings between the two countries could take place and that if discussions at even higher levels are necessary, India would not be averse to meeting at the ministerial level. My Government will give careful consideration to that statement. Our concern throughout has been that the meetings between the two sides should turn out to be fruitful.

Let me make an offer to India which I hope India will accept and reciprocate. Let both our Government charge the forthcoming meeting, or a subsequent meeting, with the task of reaching a settlement on the basis of the maximum good of both countries; and if we fail to settle the matter let India agree to utilize the good offices of a world body such as the world Bank in a suitable manner so as to contribute to a solution of the dispute.

I now come to my last point. This is on the subject of the treatment of the Muslim minority in India. The Minister of State of India cited examples of Indian Muslims occupying places of honour in India. The question raised by me was not that of any denial of this or that office to Indian Muslims, but that of the recurrent eruptions of violence against Muslims in parts of India, violence in which Muslims have suffered heavy losses of life and property and which the Indian Government has failed to stop. If Indian Muslims walk in fear of their lives, as some of them do, it is cold comfort to them to know that the President of India, who in any case, is a constitutional figurehead only happens to be of their faith.

Here let me cite some objective accounts of the situation from Indian and foreign observers.

In the June 1968 issue of the Indian publication, Seminar of New Delhi, an Indian writer of Hindu faith stated that some bitter truths had been brought home in India, of which two were important. The writer continued:

“The first is that the Muslims have over the years become more demoralized and panicky—and that animosity of Hindus towards this ‘minority’ has increased…. What follows as a logical corollary to this reflex of the Hindu mind is that the endeavour is not only to subjugate the Muslims but also to ‘culturalize’ them in the process.”

That somber testimony is corroborated by other impartial observers. The special correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, writing from New Delhi on 13 July 1968, had this to say about an important political party in India, namely, the Jan Singh:

“Then followers become fully indoctrinated with this party’s creed – that India should return to its glorious age of Hinduism – the Muslim minority is in the same position as the Jews were during the Third Reich.”

The correspondent of The Times of London wrote on 3 October 1968 about the extremist Hindu organization, the R.S.S. — which is a wing of the same Jan Sangh party which I mentioned earlier — under the headline “Swastika casts a shadow in Delhi”, and reported that:

“…The Immediate targets of the R.S.S. are the Muslim and Christian Minorities.” The writer then continues:

“Hindu society is encouraged to believe that there is a new Christian-Muslim conspiracy to subjugate India.”

The writer goes on to say:

“…..at huge R.S.S. rallies the battle cry has become ‘Christian-Muslim aggression against the Hindu nation.’

The Minister of State of India dubbed Pakistan the self-acclaimed champion of Muslims.” He would not have done so if he had remembered that, according to the solemn international Agreement concluded between India and Pakistan when their Heads of Government signed the Liaquat-Nehru Pact on 8 April 1950, the treatment of the minorities in the two countries has been recognized as their joint concern. According to that Agreement, it is the right of each country to draw the other’s attention to incidents of communal rioting, and also to receive the report of the inquiry imposed on it by an international agreement.

Considering that international Agreement, Pakistan is not being a “self-acclaimed champion” when it draws attention to the massacres which have occurred in India or demands that adequate protection be accorded to Indian Muslims. The Minister of State of India did not deny that large-scale killings of Muslims have taken place. It is, therefore, Pakistan’s duty to discharge the obligation imposed on it by an international agreement.

The Minister of State of India alleged that the condition of Hindus in Pakistan is one of misery and terror. For this baseless allegation he relied on the specific argument that the lack of increase in the figures of Hindu population in Pakistan indicated forcible conversions or expulsions. Nothing could be further from the truth. May I confront him with the fact that the policy systematically pursued by his Government to expel Muslims from areas adjoining East Pakistan, from West Bengal and from Assam, and in their place to attract Hindu migration from East Pakistan.

Between 1963 and 1965, half a million Indian Muslims were expelled from Assam and West Bengal and a similar number of Hindus were encouraged by inflated promises of land and money to emigrate from Pakistan for settlement in areas which had been vacated by forcible expulsion of Muslims. The nature of those inflated promises was exposed when about 53,000 of those Hindus who originally migrated returned to Pakistan and their lands and homes, which had been kept for them, were returned to them.
The announcement of an agreement between the Prime Minister of India and Sheikh Mohammad Abdullah comes as no surprise. It was known for over two years that negotiations were going on between their emissaries. Equally well known was the aim of these secret parleys. The Government of India was seeing the surrender of a people’s right by a political group and its leaders in exchange for some concessions to them which, given the inherent nature of alien occupation, cannot but be illusory.

It has been Pakistan’s view that the deal sought to be transacted by India would not affect by one jot or title the moral and political rights and wrongs of the dispute concerning the State of Jammu and Kashmir. Even if it succeeded in luring these politicians to forswear their previous public stand they could not sign away what was not theirs to give. For at stake is a people’s integrity, life and historic destiny and no politicians, howsoever popular he might have been, has the right to barter it away.

The era of colonialism and alien rule is all but dead. The right of all peoples to self determination has long been universally recognized. In the case of the people of Jammu and Kashmir, the exercise of this inherent right has been specifically pledged to them by the United Nations and both India and Pakistan accepted the principle that the question of the accession of the State of Jammu and Kashmir to India or Pakistan shall be decided by its people through a free and impartial plebiscite.

In the past also, the Government of India made attempts to prejudice the right of people of Jammu and Kashmir by securing an endorsement of accession by a so called Constituent Assembly of India held Jammu and Kashmir, but by its Resolutions of 30 March 1951 and 24 January 1957, the Security Council declared that no action or arrangement which attempted to determine the future shape and affiliation of the State, or any part thereof, without an impartial ascertainment of the popular will, would constitute a disposition of the State in accordance with the principle of self determination. It follows that any agreement between the Government of India and one or more individuals in Jammu and Kashmir cannot resolve the issue concerning the status of the State.

This is not the first time Sheikh Abdullah has made an arrangement with the Government of India. The arrangement he made in 1947 and the assurances he received thereafter were not honoured by the Government of India which dismissed him in 1953 and sent him to jail. In any case, neither that arrangement nor the one he has made now can weaken much less extinguish the right of the people of Jammu and Kashmir to self determination.

On 5 March 1973 and again on 10 July 1974, the Government of Pakistan reiterated its view that any agreement the Government of India might reach with Sheikh Abdullah could not compromise, much less destroy, the right of the people of Jammu and Kashmir to self-determination.

Also the Government of Pakistan has thrice written to the Government of India since last September reminding it of its obligations under the United Nations Resolutions and of its commitment in this behalf under the Simla Agreement. That agreement makes it quite clear that a final settlement of Jammu and Kashmir has to be discussed between India and Pakistan in the context of normalization of their relations and the establishment of durable peace in the South Asian region. Pakistan repeatedly urged India to refrain from any unilateral action which might prejudice the chances of the success of the talks which the two countries were pledged to hold.

It is therefore most deplorable that India should have decided nevertheless to go ahead with an arrangement with Sheikh Abdullah such as might jeopardize these talks. This is all the more so because no such arrangement with Sheikh Abdullah or any other Kashmiri politicians can change the status of the dispute concerning the state of Jammu and Kashmir, nor indeed can it deprive the people of that state of the exercise of their inherent right of self-determination in accordance with the United Nations Resolutions accepted by both India and Pakistan.

As I said on 5th March 1973, Pakistan had steadfastly maintained its position of principle and we will continue to stand by our commitment to support the people of Jammu and Kashmir in their struggle to achieve the right of self-determination assured to them by the United Nations. Since the Government of India has decided to go ahead with its plans for the suppression of that right, I have called upon the people of Jammu and Kashmir, whether in Indian occupied part of the State or in Azad Kashmir or in Pakistan and abroad, to signify their rejection of this plan and their determination to continue the struggle to achieve their right of self-determination by observing a one day Hartal (strike) on Friday, February 28, as a measure of protest against the action of the Government of India and Sheikh Abdullah. Considering their indissoluble bonds with the people of Jammu and Kashmir, the people of Pakistan will also join their Kashmiri brothers in observing this Hartal.
Once again the distinguished Foreign Minister of Pakistan has tried to use this forum to malign India and to mislead this Assembly. His so-called right of reply contains nothing new but follows the usual pattern of anti-Indian propaganda. I regret the necessity to keep the Assembly in session at this late hour, but I am obliged to offer a few clarifications.

On the question of the Farakka barrage I have personally made the position of the Government of India clear in my statement on Friday October 4. Farakka barrage is a vital project affecting the lives of nearly 180 million people and the future of our largest port and its great industrial hinterland. The attempt of Pakistan to internationalise the issue and thus delay its completion cannot succeed. Nevertheless the Government of India, out of its good-will for the welfare of a close neighbour, is prepared to continue discussions at appropriate levels to reach accommodation with Pakistan in a cooperative spirit.

Once again the distinguished foreign Minister of Pakistan has had the temerity to refer to Muslim citizens of India. We regret the false allegations he has made and we regret the animious that seems to motivate his statement. On Friday last I had indicated in some detail the honoured place which citizens of Muslim faith have in India. I wish the same could be said of the fate of minorities in Pakistan. I would once again plead with the distinguished Foreign Minister talking about Indian citizens of the Muslim faith could be utilized better if he were to devote himself with equal energy to the welfare of the minorities in his own country. The Government of India is fully conscious of its responsibilities in regard to every section of the Indian society. It is the constant effort of the Union and the State Governments to improve the economic and social conditions of every Indian citizens, irrespective of race, religion or creed.

Mr. President, I am sure that the repetition of false charges against India in regard to the Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir is not going to serve the cause of peace and friendship between India and Pakistan. The more the distinguished Foreign Minister of Pakistan belabours this problem in this forum the more he finds it difficult to speak with any sense of proportion in regard to India. He has tried to prove today that Pakistan did not commit aggression against the Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir. We know the facts much better than he seems to profess, but it is not necessary to take our word for it. I will quote the cautions but measure words of Sir Owen Dixon, a distinguished jurist of Australia who was then the U.N. Representative for India and Pakistan. He said and I quote:-

New York, October 11, 1968.
“Upon a number of occasions in the course of the period beginning with the reference on January 1 1948 of the Kashmir dispute to the Security Council, India had advanced not only the contention to which I have already referred that Pakistan was an aggressor, but the further contention that this should be declared. The Prime Minister of India at an early stage of the meeting, made the same contention and he referred to it repeatedly during the conference. I took up the positions, first that the Security Council had not made such a declaration, secondly that I have neither been commissioned to make nor had I made any judicial investigation of the issue, but thirdly that, without going into the causes or reasons why it happened, which presumably formed part of the history of the sub-continent, I was prepared to adopt the view that when the frontier of the state of Jammu and Kashmir was crossed, on I believe 20th October, 1847, by hostile elements, it was contrary to international laws and that when, in May 1948, as I believe , unite of the regular Pakistan forces moved into the territory of the state, that too was inconsistent with international law.”

The Security Council resolutions to which the distinguished Foreign Minister of Pakistan has referred could not be implemented and are now dead and obsolete because Pakistan chose not to fulfil its obligations in accordance with those resolutions. What is the concrete proof of this non-fulfilment of its obligations by Pakistan? It is the continued occupation of two-fifths of the Indian State of Jammu and Kashmir by Pakistan right till this moment.

There is no doubt at all about the constitutional and legal position of the state of Jammu and Kashmir. Yesterday, the distinguished representative of Pakistan explained at some length the arrangements made in 1947 by the British Government for the transfer of power in India. Under the same arrangements provision was made for the accession of what was then called Indian states to either India or Pakistan. In consonance with the statute passed by the British Parliament the state of Jammu and Kashmir acceded in the proper form to the then dominion of India. Moreover, Mr. President, the will of the people of Jammu and Kashmir has been expressed several times in the last 20 years through the democratic process. This is not all. Twice when Pakistan tried to seize the state by force the people rebuffed the aggressions and manifested their unalterable determination to remain with India by shedding their blood for the cause. The state of Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India by due constitutional process and by the will of the people and will remain so. The Government of Pakistan continues to practice disruptive policies towards India.
Time and again it attempts to tamper with the loyalty of our people and to subvert the authority of our Government. These attempts will be rebuffed as they have been in the past.
In conclusion, Mr. President, I would like to state the position of my Government about discussion with Pakistan. The distinguished Foreign Minister of Pakistan has referred to the Tashkent Agreement and affirmed his country’s desire to solve all outstanding problems between India and Pakistan. On behalf of the Government of India I reiterate our desire to normalize our relations with Pakistan and to enter into discussions on all problems between us.

3622. Speech by Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif at the 52nd Session of the UN General Assembly on September 22, 1997.

Mr. President, my government has also taken the initiatives to resume the stalled dialogue with India. We had agreed last June on a comprehensive agenda and a mechanism to deal with all issues including the core issue of Jammu and Kashmir in a sustained manner. We have unfortunately not succeeded yet in setting up the agreed mechanism to launch substantive negotiations on all the issues on the agenda of our dialogue. We hope that India will reciprocate our sincerity of purpose in substantively addressing all the issues and carrying forward this process of dialogue to a positive outcome. The UN Security Council resolutions define Kashmir as a disputed territory whose accession to either Pakistan or India is to be determined through a Un-supervised plebiscite. Under the Simla accord of 1972. India agreed to a final settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute with Pakistan.

Kashmir Dispute

The existence of the Kashmir dispute cannot be denied. The right of self-determination is sacrosanct. It has repeatedly been affirmed by the United Nations. The people of Kashmir are justified in asking why this pledge by the international community has not been honoured as yet. The Security Council cannot be selective in the implementation of its resolutions. The Kashmiri people have risen against Indian occupation. Their resolute struggle for the restitution of their fundamental and inalienable rights belies the claim that Kashmir is an integral part of India. I am sad to say that the repression of the people of Jammu and Kashmir continues unabated. More than 6000,000 Indian troops in Kashmir continue to brutalise the people. Custodial Killings, disappearances, arbitrary arrests. Summary executions are daily occurrences. In the past months hundreds of Kashmiri civilians have been killed while 32,000 languish in detention centers. If India is serious in its allegation that the conflict in Kashmir is being stoked by interference' from Pakistan, it should have no hesitation in allowing the UN observers present in Kashmir to verify this claim. We hope that the UN will enlarge the number of these observers and ask India to allow their stationing on its side of the Line of control as well.

The International community has a responsibility to bring about a just settlement of the Kashmir dispute. The pledge of self-determination given to the people of Jammu and Kashmir has to be redeemed. On our part, we welcome the offers made by the UN Secretary-General, the United States and others to help in resolving the Kashmir dispute.

Mr. President, my government will persevere in the dialogue with India for the sake of our people and the people of South Asia. We hope that India can be persuaded to take some steps to create a climate conducive to the success of the talks. These could include:

— First, a halt in its campaign of repression against the people of Kashmir;
— Second, withdrawal of at least those Indian troops who are engaged in ‘internal’ repression in Kashmir; and — Third, evolution of a mechanism to take into account the wishes of the Kashmiri people stipulated by the UN for a final settlement.

Offer to India

Mr. President, it is imperative to now negotiate arrangements to strengthen peace and security between India and Pakistan. Since 1974. Pakistan has pursued its proposal for a nuclear weapon-free zone in South Asia. On the other hand, India has taken successive steps to escalate its nuclear and missile capabilities. What does India mean when it repeatedly asserts that its nuclear option is ‘open’? Does this imply that, like chemical weapons, India has already manufactured nuclear weapons? In the absence of any assurances to the contrary. Pakistan will have to assume the worst.

India’s nuclear capable Prithvi missile is being serially produced. These missiles specifically target Pakistan. They have been moved adjacent to our borders. This creates a hair-trigger security environment. The development and possible deployment of the medium-range Agni missile and India’s planned acquisition of the Theatre Missile Defence systems, will further aggravate this tense security environment. It will evoke the natural response from Pakistan to safeguard and augment its security and deterrence capability. India must be persuaded to reverse its missile programme To preserve peace and stability in south Asia and beyond, we propose that Pakistan and India should reach an agreement for mutual and equal restraint in the nuclear and ballistic fields. In this context, we are deeply concerned about India’s induction of missiles and plans for the acquisition of anti-missile systems. We also propose a similar arrangement for mutual and equitable restraint on conventional weapons which ensures equal security to both Pakistan and India. We are prepared to conclude and strengthen confidence-building measures. As a first step, we could agree on a set of principles to guide future bilateral arms control arrangements.

Just Solution in Kashmir

Mr. President, we believe that a just settlement of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute and progress on the issue of peace and security will usher in an era of amity and progress in South Asia. To facilitate the realization of this objective, I offer today, from this rostrum, to open negotiations on a treaty of non-aggression between Pakistan and India. There are many areas in which we can cooperate for mutual benefit. Trade liberalization can take place on an equitable basis. Significant foreign investment can be drawn to the region. In the expectation that the Pakistan-India dialogue will have made a heartening advance by next year, my government intends to host a regional economic summit in 1998, which could help open new vistas for economic progress and prosperity for our region. Mr. President, all this and much more can be achieved if India joins us in pursuing our current dialogue to its successful culmination. We have demonstrated our sincerity of purpose. It is for India to reciprocate.

Mr. President, located at the nexus of Central Asia, South Asia and the Middle East, Pakistan can contribute to and again from the economic growth and interaction among these dynamic regions.

INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS MINORITIES
A few days ago, I received harrowing accounts of the terrible happenings in the Punjab and the situation, from all accounts, appeared to be so grave that I decided to come to Lahore. On my arrival here, I immediately got in touch with various sources that were available to me and I was deeply grieved to realize that unfortunately, there was a great deal of truth in what had been told to me. I am speaking to you under deep distress and with a heavy heart. We have, undoubtedly, achieved Pakistan and that too without bloody war and practically peacefully by moral and intellectual force and with the power of pen which is no less mighty than the sword and so our righteous cause has triumphed. Are we now going to besmear and tarnish this greatest achievement for which there is not parallel in the whole history of the world by resorting to frenzy, savagery and butchery? And, will this lead us anywhere? Pakistan is now a fait accompli and it can never be undone, besides, it was the only just, honorable and practical solution of the most complex constitutional problem of this great sub-continent.

The division of India is now finally and irrevocably effected. No doubt, we feel that the carving out of this great independent, sovereign Muslim State has suffered injustice. We have been squeezed inasmuch as it was possible and the latest blow that we have received was the Award of the Boundary Commission. It is an unjust, incomprehensible and even perverse Award. It may be wrong, unjust and perverse and it may not be a judicial award, but political award but we had agreed to abide by it and it is binding upon us. As honorable people we must abide by it. It may be our misfortune, but we must bear up this one more blow with fortitude, courage and hope.

Let us now plan to build and reconstruct and regenerate our great nation and our sovereign State of Pakistan which, you know, is not only the biggest Muslim State in the world but the fifth biggest sovereign State in the world. Now is the time, chance and opportunity for every Mussalman to make his or her fullest and best contribution and make the greatest sacrifice and work ceaselessly and selflessly in the service of our nation and make Pakistan one of the greatest nations of the world. It is in your hands; we have undoubtedly talents; Pakistan is blessed with enormous resources and potentialities; Providence has endowed us with all the wealth of nature and now it lies with man to make best of it.

It is agreed on all hands that peace should be restored without delay and that law and order must be established and maintained at any cost. Now it is up to leaders and the rank and file of the communities to leave no stone unturned in fulfilling the sacred and honorable undertaking that was given at the Special Conference on the 29th August, to protect the minorities and work in everywhere for the welfare and safety of the refugees. The Lahore Conference of 29th has further laid down categorically certain ways and means to be adopted to implement its decisions and such further measures will be taken which have the solemn, firm and determined sanction of the Pakistan and the Dominion of India Government. Henceforth they will be naturally responsible, as the Punjab Boundary Force which was limited only to certain areas, could not deal with entire Punjab —both West and East, especially now as the rural areas have also been affected and, therefore, it has been abolished.

These decisions and measures adopted by the Special Conference should reassure the people of all communities that the Pakistan and India Governments are determined to put down ruthlessly these orgies and their far-reaching consequences. But it requires the communities concerned to realize the folly and futility of indulging in this savagery which has already taken a colossal toll of human life and especially of the innocent ones and has displaced hundreds of thousands of innocent people rendered them—homeless and delivered them to starvation who are wandering about in the countryside for their lives —besides resulting in destruction of property on an extensive scale.

This is not the moment for me to go into the origin or cause of all that is happening or to apportion blame as to which community has disgraced itself more. It will be for the historians to give their verdict. Humanity cries loud against this shameful conduct and the deeds that have been committed. Those who are responsible for this holocaust must be dealt with an iron hand and put down ruthlessly. The civilized world is looking upon these doings and happenings with horror and the fair name of the communities concerned stands blackened in the eyes of the world.

It is now up to the leaders and those responsible and in charge of the Governments to make their supreme effort to make amends for this indelible stigma. While the horizon is beset with dark clouds, let me appeal to you and give this message to the people of Pakistan. Create enthusiasm and spirit and go forward with your task, with courage and hope and we shall do it. Are we downhearted? Certainly not. This history of Islam is replete with instances of velour, grit and determination. So march on notwithstanding obstruction, obstacles and interference; and I feel confident that a united nation of 70 million people with a grim determination and with a great civilization and history need fear nothing. It is now up to you to work, work and more work; and we are bound to succeed. And never forget our motto: Unity, Discipline and Faith”.

I have so far spoken to you in English as you know that the eyes of the world are upon Pakistan and we are watched by the various nations of the world with keenest interest since the establishment of Pakistan as an independent, sovereign State which has been a great and historical event. I, therefore, used the medium of English so as to be able to reach the world-wide audience, which exhibited great interest in Pakistan.

INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS
Minutes of the proceedings of the meeting between the Surveyor-General of Pakistan and the Deputy Surveyor-General of India held in the Reception Room of the Hyderabad House, New Delhi, at 11 AM (IST) on the 11th April 1956, in pursuance of the correspondence between the Prime Minister of India and the Prime Minister of Pakistan.

New Delhi, April 11, 1956.

PRESENT

Members of Pakistan Delegation.
1. Mr. M.N.A. Hashmie, Surveyor-General of Pakistan.
2. Mr. I.U. Khan, CSP, Member, Board of Revenue, West Pakistan.
3. Mr. R.S. Chhatari, Under Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs & Commonwealth Relations.
4. Malik Khuda Bakhsh, Deputy Secretary, Board of Revenue, West Pakistan.
5. Mr. M.Z.A. Qureishi, Survey of Pakistan.

Members of Indian Delegation.
2. Mr. P.A. Thomas, Director, Northern Circle, Survey of India.
3. Mr. A.L. Flecher, ICS., Financial Commissioner, (Revenue & Rehabilitation) Punjab (India).
4. Mr. A.R. Malhotra, Deputy Secretary (Political) Punjab (India).
5. Mr. J.L. Malhautra, Under Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India.

The agenda proposed by Pakistan was discussed and the following decisions taken:-

Item I: Demarcation of the entire boundary between Punjab (India) and the former Province of Punjab (Pakistan) as envisaged by the Joint Steering Committees in March 1955.

After discussion, it was agreed that to begin with, demarcation will be confined to the boundary to which the Radcliffe Award applies, namely, the Indo-Pakistan boundary between Punjab(I) and the former Punjab(P). If the two Central Governments’ desire that the boundary between the Ferzoeapore District and the former Bahawalpur State should also be demarcated, they should give clear instructions to the Surveyors-General, and indicate the basis, on which this demarcation would be made.

Item 2. Starting point for survey operations.

The starting points will be the extreme north and the extreme south of the boundary between Punjab(I) and the former province of Punjab(P). Between these points there will be certain disputed portions of boundary. The work will not be allowed to be held up because of these disputes and such areas will be excluded.

Item No.3 Provision of the Survey control.

The control will consist of :-

(a) Triangulation series based on G.T. primary series. These series shall be of secondary order,
(b) The control will be supplemented by a traverse of 1/5000 accuracy and based on this secondary triangulation,
(c) On demarcation of the boundary the co-ordinates of the pillars fixed will be obtained from traverse,
(d) The entire boundary should be traversed and distances and bearings should be given.

Item No.4 Composition of demarcation party.

Equal number of observers, technicians and supervising staff will be employed by both sides. Those will be as far as possible of similar status. Details will be worked out by the two Surveyors-General or their representatives as early as possible.

Item No.5 Procedure for demarcation.

Boundary will be demarcated with the help of Musavis and Revenue record from which the actual position of the pillars will be obtained.

Items 6 & 7 : Date of commencement and visas, custom and protection facilities.

Field work will start on the 1st of October, 1956 and preliminary necessary action will be taken in hand immediately by the two Surveyors-General.
Proceedings of the meeting held between the Surveyor-General of Pakistan and the Deputy Surveyor-General of India at 4. PM (IST) on the 11th April 1956, in the Reception Room of Hyderabad House, New Delhi.

PRESENT

Members of Pakistan Delegation.
1. Mr. M.N.A. Hashmie, Surveyor-General of Pakistan.
2. Mr. I.U. Khan, CSP, Member, Board of Revenue, West Pakistan.
3. Mr. R.S. Chhatari, Under Secretary, Ministry of Foreign Affairs & Commonwealth Relations.
4. Malik Khuda Bakhsh, Deputy Secretary, Board of Revenue, West Pakistan.
5. Mr. M.Z.A. Qureishi, Survey of Pakistan.

Members of Indian Delegation.
2. Mr. P.A. Thomas, Director, Northern Circle, Survey of India.
3. Mr. A.R. Malhotra, Deputy Secretary (Political) Punjab (I).
4. Mr. J.L. Malhautra, Under Secretary, Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India.

It was felt that the decision arrived at in the morning meeting required amplification as follow :-

Item (2).

So far as the exclusion of existing disputed areas is concerned, the work of bringing down the primary control close to the boundary i.e. triangulation and primary traverse will continue without any interruption. But the actual demarcation of the boundary in these disputed areas will await the final settlement by the Indo-Pakistan Conference.
The Survey work will start simultaneously from the northern as well as the southern ends of the boundary between Punjab (I) and the former Punjab (Pak).

Item No. (5).

The two Surveyors General will work out the details of the assistance which they will require from the D.Cs and other Departments and will inform F.C.R., Punjab (I) and the Board of Revenue, West Pakistan, accordingly. Immediate action will be taken by F.C.R. Punjab (India) and the Board of Revenue, West Pakistan, on the receipt of this information.

Item No. (6) and (7).

The reason why it was agreed that field Survey work would start on the 1st October, 1956, was that weather conditions would not permit the starting of this work earlier.

3625. Statement by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in Lok Sabha on Indo-West Pakistan Border Conference.

New Delhi, February 9, 1960.

As the House is aware, the Government of India and Pakistan agreed in October, 1959, that a Minister-level Conference should be held to consider disputes on the Indo-West Pakistan border, to devise procedures for effective prevention and control of border incidents and to expedite demarcation of boundaries on this border.

This Conference was held from 4th to 11th January, 1960. India was represented at this Conference by Sardar Swaran Singh, Minister for Steel, Mines and Fuel, and Pakistan by Lt. General K.M. Shaikh, Minister for the Interior. Discussions were held at Lahore on the 4th and 5th January, at Rawalpindi on the 6th January, and at Delhi from the 7th January onwards.

I am placing on the Table of the House the following documents which embody the agreements reached at this Conference:
MISCELLANEOUS

(i) Copy of the Joint Comunique* issued by the Government of India and Pakistan on the 11th January, 1960, and

(ii) Copy of the Agreed Decisions and Procedures, together with enclosures, including the Ground Rules to be observed by both sides to maintain peaceful conditions on the Indo-West Pakistan border.

The Conference arrived at mutually agreed interpretations of the Radcliffe Award in respect of four disputes on the Punjab (India)-West Pakistan border. These are:

(a) Area of the Hussainiwala Headworks:

   It was agreed that the Indo-Pakistan boundary in this area should be the prepartition boundary between Ferozepur and Lahore Districts.

(b) Area of the Suleimanke Headworks:

   It was agreed that an adjustment should be made in the pre-partition boundary of Ferozepur and Montgomery districts, in consideration of the fact that the Headworks had been awarded by Sir Cyril Radcliffe to Pakistan. Measures for mutual cooperation in the maintenance of the Left Marginal Bund were also agreed to.

(c) Chak Ladheke

   The Government of Pakistan dropped their claim to this area.

(d) The villages of Theh Sarja Marja, Rakh Hardit Singh and Pathanke:

   The Government of India dropped their claim to these villages.

As regards the dispute raised by Pakistan in respect of Kutch (India)-Sind (Pakistan) boundary it was agreed that both Governments would collect additional data and hold further discussions at a later date.

It was also agreed that ground demarcation operations on some 70 miles of the Punjab (India)-West Pakistan border, which yet remain undermarcated, should be completed by the end of April 1960, and that return of all areas in adverse possession of either Government in this sector should be completed by 15th October, 1960.

I am happily to inform the House that these settlement, like the settlements reached at the October, 1959 conference, were reached in a spirit of mutual accommodation and all border disputes arising out of the Radcliffe Awards have now been settled.

3626. Aide Memoire presented by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to Ministry of External Affairs.

Islamabad, November 15, 1977.

AIDE MEMOIRE

According to Article 7(b), (c) and (d) of the West Pakistan/Punjab(India) Border Ground Rules 1961-Revised (copy attached), no structure shall be erected within 150 yds of the border, no structure in the zone between 150 and 250 yds. shall exceed 12 ft. in height and no structure in the zone extending beyond 250 yds. and up to a limit of 1000 yds. from the border shall exceed 30 ft. in height. In violation of these clear cut provisions a large number of observation posts including steel towers are being erected all along the border on the Indian side. The protest lodged on this subject by the Pakistan Sector Commander has been rejected by the BSF Sector Commander in Khem Karan who has stated “It may not be out of place to mention that we have the right to do what we like on our side of the border keeping in view that our actions do not transgress the International border.” In a letter dated 19th October the Director General Pakistan Rangers sought a clarification from his counterpart the Inspector General, Border Security Forces of India, on this subject but has received no reply despite repeated reminders. The Commander Desert Rangers has also received no reply to his request for a meeting with the Deputy Inspector General BSF.

2. Construction on the towers is proceeding though in the past it has been the practice that work on any structure which is a subject of protest from the other side is discontinued until the matter has been satisfactorily resolved through discussions at various levels.

3. The assertion of the BSF Sector Commander Khem Karan ignores the agreement under which both countries have agreed to abide by special ground rules in the 1000 yard belt on both sides of the Borders. The Pakistan Government believes that the BSF has acted on its own initiative and that these actions which violate the agreement between the two countries do not have the sanction of the Indian government.

4. In these circumstances it is necessary for the Indian government to issue instructions to stop work on all structures which exceed the agreed height immediately and to dismantle all such structures as have already been completed in the 1000 yard belt along the border.

3627. Aide Memoire from the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the High Commission of India in Pakistan.
Islamabad, January 2, 1980.

AIDE MEMOIRE

The Government of Pakistan in its Aide Memoires of November 15, 1977, May 30, 1978 and October 18, 1978 had drawn the attention of the Indian government to a number of violations of the Pakistan-India Border Ground Rules 1961, committed by the Border Security Forces of India. In addition to this, on several occasions the Foreign Secretary and Director General (South Asia) had discussed this matter with His Excellency the Ambassador of India.

2. The Government of India in its Aide Memoire of June 4, 1978, conveyed its desire to negotiate a new agreement with the government of Pakistan regarding the Border Ground Rules and proposed that the representatives of the two countries should initiate negotiations as early as possible. Although the Government of Pakistan maintaining that the current Border Ground Rules have been working satisfactorily, it had express its willingness to consider specific amendments in the existing rules which the Indian Government may suggest. The government of Pakistan has since been awaiting communication of proposals from the government of India so that the proposed meeting between the representatives of the two countries could take place.

3. Despite the proposal made by the Government of India in the above mentioned Aide Memoire that status quo regarding the observance of the Border Ground Rules should be maintained till such time as an understanding is reached on the proposed amendments, the Border Security Forces of India have continued to violate these Rules. To illustrate the point some instances of these violations are given below:

(a) Construction of a steel observation post by the Indian Border Security Forces at post GG-2 in front of Pakistan BP No.245/6 and 247/7 at a distance of 600 yards from the border in December, 1978.

(b) A steel observation post with a height of 70 feet was constructed at a distance of 450 yards from the border in the area of Chak No. 38 PS, GR-569521 Map Sheet No. 44/G/6 in January 1979.

(c) Construction of three new concrete bunkers at a distance of 100-150 yards from the border in front of BP No.36-42 opposite Pak posts in Sindhu/Mardana in the areas GR-28714, GR-283707 and GR-267694 Map Sheet No. 43/P/4 in March 1979.
(d) Construction of a new steel observation post with a height of 50 feet at distance of 250 yards from the border in area GR-534014 Map Sheet No 43/P/7 in June 1979.

(e) Construction of a new steel observation post with a height of 50 feet 600 yards from the border in the area of GR-429782 Map Sheet No. 43/P/4 in July, 1979.

(f) On 11th June 1979 at about 1600 hours (PST) five BSF persons armed with weapons intruded into Pakistan territory up to 300 yards from the area of B.P. No. 183/5. They fired 10 rounds while inside Pakistan territory but withdraw into the Indian side on the approach of a Patrol Party of Pakistan Rangers.

(g) On 19th August 1979 at about 2200 hours another armed patrolling party of Indian Border Security force (Post Naya Tallah) intruded one mile inside the Pakistan territory in front of village Ghuttal grid reference QG-6468 Map Sheet No. 40-L, but returned to their side of the border after being challenged by the Pakistani civilians.

4. The Government of Pakistan would be grateful to receive the proposal, of the Government of India for revision of the Border Ground Rules 1961 and would, in the meantime, appreciate it if the Border Security Forces of India are instructed to observe the Border Ground Rules 1961 in the interest of peace and tranquility on the border.

Islamabad.
the 2nd January, 1980.
Aide memoire presented by the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs to High Commission of India in Pakistan.

AIDE MEMOIRE

In June 1978, the Government of India had conveyed its desire to negotiate with the Government of Pakistan a new agreement regarding the Border Ground Rules. The Government of Pakistan, while maintaining that the existing Rules were working satisfactorily, had expressed its willingness to consider specific amendments as might be suggested by the Indian Government.

2. Subsequently, although drafts and counter-drafts were exchanged between the two governments, no significant progress was made. In December 1986, the Interior/Home secretaries of the two countries, Inter alia, discussed this issue and “agreed that the Ground Rules evolved in 1960-61 need to be reformulated.” For this purpose, a Pakistan-India Border Ground Rules Committee was constituted which held its first meeting in Lahore on 8-10 September 1987. The Committee covered a lot of ground but differences on certain points could not be resolved. The Committee was to hold its second meeting in India. However, dates for the meeting are still awaited from the Government of India.

3. Meanwhile, the Indian Border Security Force has been violating the existing Border Ground Rules, which the Government of Pakistan expects the Governments of India to observe till such time as the new Border Ground Rules, being negotiated, have been finalised. Some specific violations are given below:

a) Construction of a wooden observation post with a height of 18 feet at a distance of 150 yards from the border in the area of GR-949463, Map Sheet No. 44/I/12 in November 1989.

b) Construction of a wooden observation post with a height of 25 feet at a distance of 50 yards from the border in the area of GR-825391, Map Sheet No. 44/J/9 in November 1989.

c) Construction of a wooden observation post with a height of 15 feet at a distance of 100 yards from the border in the area of GR-177579, Map Sheet No. 44/F/15 in November 1989.

d) Construction of a wooden observation post with a height of 30 feet at a distance of 100 yards from the border in the area of GR-229629, Map Sheet No. 44/G/15 in February 1990.

e) Construction of a steel observation post with a height of 25 feet at a distance of 100 yards from the border in the area of GR-629103, Map Sheet No. 40/I/14 in March 1990.
f) Construction of a steel observation post with a height of 50 feet at a distance of 200 yards from the border in the area of GR-972755, Map Sheet No. 44/D/9 in April 1990.

g) Construction of a steel observation post with a height of 20 feet at a distance of 100 yards from the border in the area of GR-722386, Map Sheet No. 44/M/13 in April 1990.

h) Construction of a wooden observation post with a height of 20 feet at a distance of 200 yards from the border in the area of GR-979492, Map Sheet No. 44/I/12 in April 1990.

i) Construction of a wooden observation post with a height of 20 feet at a distance of 140 yards from the border in the area of GR-974487, Map Sheet No. 44/I/12 in May 1990.

j) Construction of a wooden observation post with a height of 15 feet at a distance of 150 yards from the border in the area of GR-825380, Map Sheet No. 44/I/9 in November 1990.

k) Construction of a wooden observation post with a height of 12 feet at a distance of 10 yards from the border in the area of GR-827383, Map Sheet No. 44/I/12 in December 1990.

4. The above-quoted structures are in violation of sub-sections a, b, c and d of Section 6 of the “West Pakistan/Punjab(India) Border Ground Rules - 1961 (Revised).” The Government of Pakistan views these violations with concern and would like the Government of India to instruct the Border Security Forces to observe the existing Border Ground Rules till the time these are reformulated and adopted by the two governments. It is requested that the steel and wooden observation towers constructed in violation of the Border Ground Rules be demolished.

5. The Government of Pakistan would greatly appreciate if the Government of India could intimate the dates for the second meeting of the Border Ground Rules Committee with a view to an early reformulation of these rules.

INDIA-PAKISTAN RELATIONS
TRADE & COMMERCE
Telegram from Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru to Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan.

New Delhi, November 19, 1947.

Your telegram No. 833 dated 13th November regarding jute export duty. I had already gone into whole question very carefully with my colleagues. Under present arrangements, which cover period from the 15th August 1947 to 31st March 1948, each of the dominions is entitled as a sovereign state to the taxes which it levies and collects in its own territories. It would scarcely be fair to question equity of this arrangement by isolating particular sources of revenue, such as jute export duty or central excise duty, in regard to which Pakistan may feel that it had any special claims. A matter such as this will have to be considered comprehensively over whole field of import, export and central excise duties in relation to common economic and fiscal policies and absence of any customs or trade barriers, or, in other words, in light of a customs and excise union. Pakistan members of Expert committees connected with partition were definitely opposed to any forms of customs and excise union after 1st April 1948. Nevertheless as a result of the recent discussions between representatives of the two Dominions, Government of India made it quite clear in aide-memoire sent to your High Commissioner on the 30th October that they were prepared to initiate discussions at once, should Pakistan Government desire a reasonably long-term settlement between two Dominions in respect of:

(a) Freedom of trade and commerce between the two Dominions inter se, covering in particular question of trade and customs barriers;

(b) Uniformity of policy, legislation and taxation in respect of customs and central excise;

(c) Division of customs and central excises of both Dominions on an Equitable basis; and

(d) As far as possible, general agreement on other relevant matters of mutual Interest in economic sphere.

We also made it clear that Government of India would be quite prepared to give effect to any such settlement with effect from the 15th of August 1947 in order to deal with claim of the Pakistan Government in respect of export duty on jute and excise duties. You will therefore see that far from rejecting request of the Pakistan Government, we have done our level best to find satisfactory solution of the whole problem. An ad hoc demand under an individual head without comprehensive examination of all connected matters can scarcely be considered reasonable, as you suggest. I am therefore considerably surprised at your doubts regarding our intentions in regard to customs union and economic collaboration.
Our offer communicated through aide-memoire* to your High Commissioner is still open, and is the only known way of securing really equitable and scientific solution. I would therefore ask you to take steps for initiation of immediate discussions. Meanwhile my Government have already levied an export duty on Pakistan jute coming into India and issued necessary notifications. I feel my Government is bound to take parallel measures and will do so without prejudice to any settlement which may be reached as the result of our correspondence.

Karachi, June 23, 1948.

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan hereinafter described as the Contracting Parties,

Being parties to the Convention on International Civil Aviation and the International Air Services Transit Agreement, both opened for signature at Chicago on the 7th Day of December 1944 and “Desiring to conclude an Agreement for the purpose of establishing and operating air services between and beyond the territories of Indis and Pakistan.”

Agree as follows

Article I

(A) Each Contracting Party grants to the other Contracting Party the right to operate the air services specified in the Annex to this Agreement (hereinafter referred to as the “specified air services”) and to carry traffic to, from and in transit over, its territory as provided in this Agreement.

(B) The airlines designated as provided in Article II hereof shall have the right to use

(i) for traffic purposes, airports provided for public use at the points specified in the Annex to this Agreement and ancillary services provided for public use on the air routes specified in the said Annex (hereinafter referred to as the “specified air routes”) and

* Document No.2617.
(ii) for non-traffic purposes, all airports and ancillary services provided for public use on the specified air routes; Provided that the places of first landing and final departure shall be customs airports.

Article II

(A) Each of the specified air services may be inaugurated immediately or at a later date at the option of the contracting Party to whom the rights under this Agreement are granted, on condition that

(1) the Contracting Party to whom the rights have been granted shall have designated an airline (hereinafter referred to as a "designated airline") for the specified air route;

(2) the Contracting Party which grants the rights shall have given the appropriate operating permission to the airline pursuant to Paragraph (C) of this Article which it shall do with the least possible delay.

(B) Substantial ownership and effective control of the designated airlines of each Contracting Party shall be vested in the Party or its nationals.

(C) The designated airline may be required to satisfy the aeronautical authorities of the Contracting Party granting the rights that it is qualified to fulfil the conditions prescribed by or under the laws and regulations normally applied by those authorities to the operation of commercial air service.

(D) The operation of each of the specified air service shall be subject to the Agreement of the Contracting Party concerned that the route organisation available for civil aviation on the specified air route is adequate for the safe operation of air service.

Article III

A designated airline may, subject to the provision of Article IV, carry across, set down and pick up in the territory of one Contracting Party traffic originating in or destined for the territory of the other Contracting Party or of a third country on the specified air route.

Article IV

In order to achieve and maintain equilibrium between the capacity of the specified air services and the requirements of the public for air transport on the specified air routes or sections thereof and in order to achieve and maintain proper relationship between the specified air services inter se and between these air services and other air services operating on the specified air routes or sections thereof, the Contracting Parties agree as follows:

(A) The airlines of each Contracting Party shall enjoy equal rights for the operation of air services for the carriage of traffic between the territories of the two parties.
(B) To the extent that the airlines of one of the Contracting Parties are temporarily unable to make use of the rights referred to in paragraph (A), the situation will be mutually examined by the two Parties for the purpose of aiding as soon as possible the airlines concerned increasingly to make their proper contribution to the services contemplated.

(C) In the operation by the airlines of either Contracting Party of the specified air service the interests of the airlines of the other Party shall be taken into consideration so as not to affect unduly the services which the latter provide on all or part of the same route.

(D) The air transport offered by the airlines of each Contracting Party on different sections of the specified air routes shall bear a close relationship to the needs of the public for air transport and to the traffic interests of the airlines concerned as provided in this Agreement.

(E) The services provided by a designated airline under this Agreement shall retain as their primary objective the provision (along with the airlines of the other States concerned) of capacity adequate to the traffic demands between the country of which such airline is a national and the country of ultimate destination of the traffic, and the right of the designated airlines of either Party to embark and to disembark in the territory of the other Party international traffic destined for or coming from third countries on specified air routes shall be applied in accordance with the general principles of orderly development to which both Parties subscribe and shall be subject to the general principle that capacity shall be related:

1. to the requirements of traffic between the country of origin of the air service and destinations on the specified air routes,
2. to the air transport needs of the area through which the airline passes, and
3. to the adequacy of other air transport services established by airlines of the States concerned between their respective territories.

Article V
When, for the purpose of economy of onward carriage of through traffic, different aircrafts are used on different sections of a specified air route, with the point of change in the territory of one of the Contracting Parties, such change of aircraft shall not affect the provisions of this Agreement relating to the capacity of the air service and the carriage of traffic. In such cases the second aircraft shall be scheduled to provide a connecting service with the first aircraft, and shall normally await its arrival.
Article VI

(A) Rates shall be fixed at reasonable levels, due regard being paid to all relevant factors, including costs of comparable economic operations, reasonable profit, differences of characteristics of service and the rates charged by other operators, if any, on the route.

(B) The rates to be charged by any of the airlines designated under this Agreement in respect of traffic between the territories of the two Parties shall be agreed in the first instance between the designated airlines in consultation with other airlines operating on the route or any section thereof, and shall have regard to relevant rates adopted by the International Air Transport Association. Any rates so agreed shall be subject to the approval of the aeronautical authorities of the Contracting Parties. In the event of disagreement between the airlines, the Contracting Parties themselves shall endeavour to reach agreement and shall take all necessary steps to give effect to such agreement. Should the Contracting Parties fail to agree, the dispute shall be dealt with in accordance with Article XI. Pending the settlement of the dispute by agreement or until it is decided under Article XI, the rates already established shall prevail.

(C) Pending the acceptance by both Parties of any recommendations which the International Civil Aviation Organization may make with regard to the regulation of rates for traffic other than that defined in paragraph (B) of this Article, the rates to be charged by an airline of one Contracting Party in respect of traffic between the territory of the other Contracting Party and a third country shall be fixed on the basis of the principles set out in paragraph (A) of this Article and after taking into consideration the interests of the airlines of the other Party and shall not vary unduly in a discriminatory manner from the rates established by the airlines of the other Party operating air services on that part of the specified air routes concerned: Provided, however, that a designated airline shall not be required to charge rates higher than those established specified air routes. by any other airline operating on the

(D) If the International Civil Aviation Organization does not, within a reasonable time, establish a means of determining rates for traffic defined in paragraph (C) of this Article in a manner acceptable to both Parties, they shall consult each other in accordance with Article X of this Agreement with a view to such modification of paragraph (C) of this Article as appears desirable.

Article VII

(A) The aeronautical authorities of both Contracting Parties shall exchange information as promptly as possible concerning the authorisation extended to their respective designated airlines to render service to, through and from the territory of the other Contracting Party. This will include copies of current certificates and authorisations for service on the specified air routes, together with amendments, exemption orders and authorized service patterns.

(B) Each Contracting Party shall cause its designated airlines to provide to the aeronautical authorities of the other Contracting Party, as long in advance as practicable, copies of time tables, tariff schedules and all other relevant information concerning the operation of the specified air services and of all modification thereof.

(C) Each Contracting Party shall cause its designated airlines to provide to the aeronautical authorities of the other Contracting Party statistics relating to the traffic carried on their air services to, from or over the territory of the other Contracting Party showing the origin and destination of the traffic.

Article VIII

(A) Fuel, lubricating oils and spare parts introduced into or taken on board aircraft in the territory of one Contracting Party by, or on behalf of, the other Contracting Party or its designated airlines shall be accorded, with respect to customs duty, inspection fees or other charges imposed by the former Contracting Party, treatment not less favourable than that granted to its national airlines engaged in international public transport or to the airlines of the most-favoured nation.

(B) Supplies of fuel, lubricating oils, spare parts, regular equipment and aircraft stores retained on board aircraft of the designated airlines of one Contracting Party shall be exempt in the territory of the other Contracting Party from customs duties, inspection fees or similar duties or charges, even though such supplies be used by such aircraft on flights in that territory. Goods so exempted may only be unloaded with the approval of the customs authorities of the other Contracting Party. These goods, which are to be re-exported, shall be kept in bond, until re-exportation under customs supervision.

Article IX

Each Contracting Party reserves the right to itself to withhold, or revoke or impose such appropriate conditions as it may deem necessary with respect to an operating permission in case of failure by a designated airline of the other Party to comply with the laws and regulations of the former Party, or in case, in the judgment of the former Party, there is a failure to fulfill the conditions under which the rights are granted in accordance with this Agreement. Such action shall be taken only after consultation between the Parties. In the event of action by one Party under this Article, the rights of the other Party under Article XI shall not be prejudiced.

Article X

(A) In a spirit of close collaboration, the aeronautical authorities of the two Contracting Parties will consult regularly with a view to ensuring the observance of the principles and the implementation of the provisions outlined in this Agreement.

(B) Either Contracting Party may at any time request consultation with the other with a view to initiating any amendments of this Agreement which may be desirable. Such consultation shall begin within a period of sixty days from the date of the request. Any modification of this Agreement agreed to as a result of such consultation shall come into effect when it has been confirmed by an exchange of diplomatic notes.

(C) When the procedure for consultation provided for in paragraph (B) of this Article has been initiated, either Contracting Party may at any time give notice to the other of its desire to terminate this Agreement as provided in paragraph (E) of this Article. Such notice shall be simultaneously communicated to the International Civil Aviation Organization.

(D) Changes made by either Contracting Party in the specified air routes, except those which change

1. the final point of departure within its own territory and
2. the points served by the designated airlines in the territory of the other Contracting Party, shall not be considered as modifications of this Agreement. The aeronautical authorities of either Contracting Party may therefore proceed unilaterally to make such changes, provided, however, that notice of any change shall be given without delay to the aeronautical authorities of the other Contracting Party. If such latter aeronautical authorities find that, having regard to the principles set forth in Article IV of this Agreement, the interests of any of their airlines are prejudiced by the carriage by a designated airline of the first Contracting Party of traffic between the territory of the second Contracting Party and the new point in the territory of a third country, the latter Party may request consultation in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (B) of this Article.

(E) This Agreement shall terminate one year after the date of receipt by the other Contracting Party of the notice to terminate unless the notice is withdrawn by Agreement before the expiration of this period. In the absence of acknowledgement of receipt by the other Contracting Party notice shall be deemed to have been received fourteen days after the receipt of the notice by the International Civil Aviation Organization.

Article XI

(A) If any dispute arises between the Contracting Parties relating to the interpretation or application of the present Agreement, the Contracting Parties shall in the first place endeavour to settle it by negotiation between themselves.

(B) If the Contracting Parties fail to reach a settlement by negotiation,

(i) they may agree to refer the dispute for decision to an arbitral tribunal appointed by agreement between them or to some other person or body; or

(ii) if they do not so agree or if, having agreed to refer the dispute to an arbitral tribunal, they cannot reach agreement as to its composition, either Contracting Party may submit the dispute for decision to any tribunal competent to decide it which may hereafter be established within the International Civil Aviation Organization or, if there is no such tribunal, to the Council of the said Organization, or failing that, to the International Court of Justice.

(C) The Contracting Parties undertake to comply with any decision given under paragraph (B) of this Article.

(D) If and so long as either Contracting Party or a designated airline of either Contracting Party fails to comply with a decision given under paragraph (B) of this Article, the other Contracting Party may limit, withhold or revoke any rights which it has granted by virtue of the present Agreement and its Annex.

Article XII

This Agreement shall come into force on the 1st day of July 1948. The Agreement and all relative contracts shall be registered with the International Civil Aviation Organization.

Article XIII

In the event of the conclusion of a multilateral convention or agreement concerning air transport to which both Contracting Parties do not subscribe, this Agreement shall be modified to conform with the provisions of such convention or agreement.
Article IX

(A) For the purpose of this Agreement the terms "territory", "air service", and "airline" shall have the meaning specified in the Convention on International Civil Aviation.

(B) The term "aeronautical authorities" shall mean, in the case of Pakistan the Director General of Civil Aviation in Pakistan and in the case of India, the Director General of Civil Aviation, India, and in both cases any person or body authorised to perform the functions presently exercised by the above-mentioned authorities.

(C) The Annex to this Agreement shall be deemed to be part of the Agreement and all references to the "Agreement" shall include references to the "Annex", except where otherwise expressly provided.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the undersigned, being duly authorised thereto by their respective Governments, have signed the present Agreement.

DONE this 23rd day of June 1948, in duplicate at Karachi in the English language.

For the Government of India: For the Government of Pakistan:
(Signed) SRI PRAKASA (Signed) A.R. NISHTAR

New Delhi, November 4, 1949.

The immediate purpose of my writing this letter to you is to bring to your notice the complaint which has been made to us by the Indian Jute Mills Association. The complaint is as follows in the words of the Association themselves:

"Prior to 19th September, when the change in exchange ratios took place, the Mills in India had already contracted to receive, and had paid for, an amount of jute which in quantity still remaining for delivery, is estimated at about 4 lakhs of bales. Until recently, the Pakistan authorities have placed no restrictions or difficulties in the way of mills in this country receiving from sellers the raw jute under existing obligations. A change in that has recently been witnessed however; and at the present time there is a complete cessation in the movement of jute. Not only does that extend to amounts which are lying Pakistan and still have to be placed on vessels loaded with jute to proceed beyond the borders. The jute in these vessels represents purchases made by the mills prior to the 19th September and is the property of the mills in that they have paid for the documents of title, the bills of lading. No jute would be allowed on board the inland water vessels in Pakistan unless and until customs duty had been paid and a valid receipt in respect thereof issued. In that essential regard therefore the requirements of the Pakistan authorities have been satisfied; and adequate evidence can and has been furnished to show that the goods belonged to the mills here and is being dispatched in fulfillment and discharge of contractual commitments and obligations. Despite, that, however, various pretexts and devices have been sought by the Pakistan authorities to prevent that jute being moved; and flotillas of steamers, barges, flats, etc. of the inland water transport are unable to move because of this. All contain jute belonging to the mills in India, jute for which the mills have paid. The precise figures in this complete hold-up will be telegraphed to you from Calcutta; but if it can happen in this instance, what the Association fear is that it will extend to the whole of their mills' outstanding purchases, namely 4 lakhs of bales approximately."

I had mentioned this point to you when you were here and have the impression that you agreed that it would not be correct for Pakistan to hold up any jute that was purchased and paid for pre-devaluation. And was on its way to India. It may be that the position has not been understood correctly by some people at the customs border and this obstruction may have been put in the way of the traffic.
I would, therefore, request you to be good enough to have a look at the matter and to do your best to correct the position. If you like, you can send for the Chairman of the Indian Jute Mills Association, who will explain the whole case to you and place all the facts so that justice is done to them. The matter is of immediate importance and I would be grateful if you could send me a telegram indicating what you have been able to do. I am informing Walker that I have written to you in these terms so that in case a call comes from you, he will be ready to come over and explain the position personally.

Letter, 12 November 1949 from Jute Board, Narayanganj, to India

The matter has been receiving my attention from the day of my arrival. Unfortunately position is not as simple as put up to you by the Indian Jute Mills Association. Jute held up comes under the following categories:

(i) For which contracts had been entered into in Pakistan.

(ii) For which contracts had been made in Calcutta.

With regard to (i), we have received a number of representations that although part of quantities contracted for had been delivered in Calcutta, purchasers have refused to make payments in Pakistan as laid down under the terms of contract. Sellers are, therefore, worried about their payments and have asked for consignments to be held back.

With regard to (ii), a large quantity of the jute has been sold to Calcutta by firms that are in Pakistan. In the absence of exchange ratio these firms are concerned about their payments and are, therefore, marking time until the exchange ratio is settled.

There is a third category, i.e., Indian firms who have jute in East Bengal and had already offered a portion of their jute to the inland water transport companies. So have also received strong representations in the case of this group that they have not cleared their full liabilities in Pakistan and have large outstanding towards their agents and sub-dealers. Although the firms are anxious to clear their outstanding, shortage of funds in Pakistan and the absence of facilities for transfer from India are coming in the way of their doing so.

In order to sort out all these problems we have asked that each party that claims to have purchased jute should represent their case to the Jute Board and that after due investigation and where clear proof is available that all payments have been made the consignment should be allowed to go to India. Would request that the I JMA may be asked to instruct their members to put forward their respective cases as early as possible.
Extract from telegram Pakistan to India, 1 December 1949

I received a visit from Secretary of I J M A. we have had a long and frank discussion and he has been fully apprised of the situation. His visit has been extremely helpful as this has clarified a number of points on which there has been misunderstanding. The procedure to be adopted has been fully explained to him and he has promised to notify all concerned.

The information given to you on the point that no contracts had been entered into in Pakistan is not correct. We have received representations from a number of parties with whom contracts had been entered into in Pakistan. These parties have given full details of the names of the mills the quantities for which contracts had been entered into and the letter under which the mills have unilaterally cancelled the contracts. In many instances the sellers who had entered into I JMA contracts have held back the dispatches. There are consignments lying Narayanganj both in the river flats and in godowns which have been detained by sellers. These are mostly firms registered in Pakistan who due to the uncertainty of the exchange would prefer to wait until some decision is arrived at between the two Governments. My point with regard to certain liabilities of firms has been misunderstood. These are liabilities incurred in the purchase of jute and not any other liability. With best possible intention firms have been unable to clear the outstandings due to a complete cessation of exchange. They have not been able to transfer funds which they would have done in the ordinary course. The firms therefore have large amounts outstanding against them towards their beoparies and sellers.

Letter, 5 December 1949 from Indian Jute Mills Association, Calcutta, to Ministry of Commerce, New Delhi

I send you a copy of my full file note on the subject of my visit to Dacca.

The Chairman met the representatives of the jute shippers on Saturday (3rd) as also the representatives of the steamer companies; and he had received by that time your telegram of the 1st December, the contents of which he made known to them for their confidential information.

The task of submitting books, records, papers, etc., to prove that the goods are ours—which is the theme of Faruque's representations to me is not actually impossible. It is such an onerous one, however, involving weeks and months of delay as almost virtually to amount to such. The search has to go back to the 1st July; and since almost the entire trade sold to us, it means examination of almost every seller of jute. Again, too, there is a reluctance on the part of the trade to reveal to the Board-on which there is a fellow competitor-details of their business contacts, relations, methods, etc., as from these can be obtained trade information and data which should be kept strictly private and confidential and not disclosed to any save their auditors and Income Tax officials. Ispahani, as a commerce man, well knows the difficulties in this affecting as it does the dealers and merchants in all their transactions this jute season and in all of their purchases and agencies. It is, therefore, the view taken that the request is simply one of delay of deliberate frustration, and asking the fulfillment of known impossible conditions.

It has been suggested now that the Pakistan Jute Association should take the matter up officially; but the views and opinions of every responsible section of the trade is that nothing that can be done will shift the Board’s attitude and that they are determined to keep the jute in the flats pending a settlement of the exchange issue.

It emerged from these discussions with the trade that quite a number of the flats—about 60/65—had been loaded and dispatched from loading stations prior to the 19th September; and that even these were held up for which there could be not the slightest justification. I have sent a telegram to you about this matter so that can be the subject of direct approaches by Government to the Board. The whole matter, it is felt, is now not so much a matter for the trade but for Government; and the Chairman will be writing to you about this matter as soon as possible. In that letter opportunity will also be taken of his commenting on the suggestion made to me by Faruque that the Chairman should visit Dacca in order to meet the Board.

3632. Trade Agreement Between India and Pakistan.

Karachi, 26 February 1951.

Being desirous of promoting trade between the two countries the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan have entered into the following agreement:

Article I

(i) The period of this agreement shall be from the 26th February, 1951, to 30th June, 1952.

(ii) The two Governments agree to permit the exportation to and the importation from the other country of the commodities and goods specified in Schedule I which is attached to this agreement, up to the quantity or value mentioned against each item, during the periods indicated in columns 2 and 3 of Schedule I.

(iii) In respect of such commodities and goods as are, or may be, subject to export or import licence, the two Governments agree to grant upon application duly made, export or import licences up to the quantitative or monetary limits specified in Schedule I, in accordance with the laws and regulations and administrative practices of the Government granting the licence.

(iv) In respect of those commodities in which the export trade is the monopoly of the Government in either country, the terms of the agreement will be deemed to have been fulfilled if the supplies have been made at agreed points within or without the country and such quantities of the commodities mentioned in column 2 of the Schedule I as cannot be supplied before the 30th June, 1951, shall be carried forward to the period 30th June, 1952.

(v) In respect of foodgrains the quantities, period and terms of supply will be as in Schedule III of this agreement.

(vi) In respect of raw cotton, the Government of Pakistan have at present no destinational quotas and India is, therefore, free to buy any quantity. If, however, destinational quotas are introduced during the period of the agreement, the Government of Pakistan agree to give India a quota of 400,000 bales in the season 1951-52.

Article II

The two Governments agree that there shall be no import and/or export trade control restrictions on the movement between the two countries in respect of the commodities mentioned in Schedule II to this agreement, and subject to the conditions specified therein.
Article III
In respect of the commodities mentioned in Schedule I to this agreement the two Governments agree that except where prices are separately negotiated, neither Government will impose any discriminatory supplement or surcharge or any other addition to the export prices of those commodities.

Article IV
The commodities and goods described in Schedules I and II refer only to those that are produced, processed or manufactured in India or Pakistan as the case may be.

Article V
The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agree not to permit the export of any of the commodities imported under Schedule I.

Article VI
Notwithstanding anything contained in Articles I & II the two Governments agree that export and import facilities granted by each country to the other shall be no less favourable than those applied to any other country in sterling/soft currency area. Current and future import and export licences in respect of sterling and soft currency area countries shall be valid for India and Pakistan, as the case may be.

Article VII
In order to facilitate the implementation of this agreement, the two Governments agree to hold periodical consultations with each other in respect of any matter arising from or in connection with the supply of commodities or goods between the two countries during the currency of and in accordance with this agreement, and, if necessary, by mutual agreement, alter, extend or supplement the Schedules to this agreement.

Article VIII
This agreement shall come into force on the 26th February 1951.

Signed on behalf of the Government of India.

2. Foodgrains shown in clause 1(A) and (B) will be supplied on "as is where is" ex-godown basis as regards quality and packing, but the Government of India will have the right to reject these quantities if they find the quality to be unacceptable to them and such rejection will be final and will discharge both Governments obligations to the extent of the rejected quantities.

3. Rice shown in clause 1(C) will be F.A.Q of the crop specified therein, clean, dry, in merchantable condition, free from bad odour, infection, infestation, damage and deleterious matter, and shall not be inferior to the specifications for each variety as given in the annexure to this Schedule. Any deviations from the specifications will be subject to the scale of allowances laid down in the said annexure.

4. Prices of foodgrains will be as has been separately agreed between the two Governments.

5. Foodgrains mentioned in clause 1(E) will be supplied, crop permitting. Prices and other conditions of supply of these foodgrains will be negotiated between the two Governments in due course.

6. As regards gram mentioned in clause 1(F) the Government of India will not purchase it on their account, or guarantee its off-take by the trade. Government of India will, however, permit the import of the agreed quantity through the traders. It will be for the Government of Pakistan to decide the manner of procurement and export and the traders will negotiate prices and other terms and conditions of the supply of gram directly with the Pakistan Government.

7. The prices of food grains mentioned in clause 1(D) are unacceptable to the Government of India, and will be negotiated separately as agreed upon.

8. Packing: Rice of 1950-51 crop in new single jute bags. (Bags which were new at the time when rice was originally packed in them, will be treated as new, provided they are not torn and have no patches). Wheat and rice of 1949-50 crop may be packed in second hand single jute bags, but these must be in sound and merchantable conditions free from previous mendings. Bags shall be carefully knotted and/or securely stitched with strong jute twice and will be of standard weight of 2 maunds* 21 seers 2 chhatacks, gross, or 2 maunds 26 seers 2 chhataks, gross, per bag.

* These are all weight measures then used in India and Pakistan

40 Seer= 1 Manud and 16 Chhataks= 1 seer
9. (a) For quantities to be delivered F.O.B. Karachi, Government of India shall be responsible for arranging necessary tonnage. They will give at least ten days' notice to the Government of Pakistan of the date when shipping space will be available for loading at the port of Karachi and the quantity to be loaded. The Government of Pakistan shall be responsible for loading at an average rate of not less than 700 tons per weather working day, excluding Sundays and holidays commencing from the date of notice of readiness given by the ship which must be given in the forenoon at least 24 hours in advance. Any time lost at the Karachi port due to riots, strikes, sickness of labour connected with shipping of rice or any other cause beyond the control of the Government of Pakistan shall not be counted as lay days.

(b) The Government of Pakistan will be responsible for any demurrage or deadfreight actually incurred by the Government of India, should the former fail to load in accordance with sub-clause (a) above.

(c) Should the vessel fail to be ready to load as intimated in clause (a), the Government of India will be responsible for paying the cost of storing the grain and any demurrage and other costs actually incurred by making the grain ready for placing on board, at a rate to be mutually agreed upon.

(d) In case Government of India employ foreign shipping for carriage of these grains, they will give first preference to Pakistan ships and will make a request to Pakistan Government for such ships, provided the terms and conditions on which Pakistan ships are offered are not less favourable than those offered by other foreign ships. In this matter the decision of the Government of India will be final.

10. Inspection and Sampling.

(a) Check weightment (normally 100, but more in exceptional cases, at the discretion of the Government of India) and inspection of quality of grain and packing shall be carried out at the godowns where goods lying in Karachi by an agency acceptable to both Governments, to be appointed by the Government of India at their own expense. The Government of Pakistan agree to give adequate facilities for inspection by the inspection agency. The certificate of quality and weight issued by the inspection agency shall constitute the final acceptance of quality and weight by both Governments. For determining the net weight, the fare of bags shall be computed at 2.25 lbs. each.

(b) Representative samples will be drawn by the inspecting agency daily before loading of the bags into wagons for being carried to the ship-side.
All samples drawn on any one day will be mixed into one average sample, which will be utilised for the purpose of analysis for determination of quality. The average of all analysis results of rice loaded on one steamer will be taken together for the purpose of appraising the quality and for calculating deductions in price for variations from the agreed specification.

(c) The Government of Pakistan will provide, on the request of the inspecting agency, facilities for supervision (including the sealing of the wagons) during the transport of the grain from the godown to the point of loading on the ship.

11. Period of delivery. The periods of delivery shall be as indicated in Column 4 of Clause 1. In regard to rice, both Governments agree to endeavour their utmost to ship up to the end of June, 1951, at the rate of 50,000 tons per month.

12. Payment.

(a) For foodgrains to be supplied from West Pakistan, the Government of India will open an irrevocable revolving letter of credit sufficient to cover the cost of four cargo-loads of foodgrains in the Imperial Bank of India, Karachi, in favour of the Government of Pakistan, who will receive payment from the said Bank on presentation of:

(i) Invoices showing the quantity placed F.O.B. and the total amount due in respect of the quantity after allowing rebate for allowances, if any;

(ii) Certificates of quality and weight signed by the inspection agency referred to in clause 10; and

(iii) Bill of Lading made out in favour of the Director General of Food, Government of India, New Delhi, or certificate from an Officer of the Government of India authorised in this behalf to the effect that the quantity billed has been placed on board.

(b) For foodgrains supplied from East Pakistan payment will be made by the agents of the Indian Government appointed to lift the stocks at the time of taking delivery.

13. Disputes. In the event of a dispute in regard to the rights or obligations under this Schedule, such disputes shall be settled by reference to the arbitration of the Secretaries of the Food Ministries of the two Governments. The Arbitration Award shall be final and binding upon both the parties. The cost of arbitration shall be borne by the parties as indicated in the Arbitration Award.

Trade Agreement between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, 5 August 1952

The Representatives of the Government of India on the one hand and the Representatives of the Government of Pakistan on the other have agreed to the following arrangements for the continuance of trade between the two countries:

Article I

The Period of this Agreement shall be from the 8th August, 1952 to the 30th June, 1953.

Article II

The two Governments agreed that with respect of the items mentioned in Schedules 'A' and 'B' attached to this Agreement and which shall be taken to form an integral part thereof, licences shall, where necessary, be granted in accordance with the laws, regulations and procedure in force in either country from time to time to permit the import and export of the quantity/value mentioned against each item.

Article III

The two Governments agree that exports and imports of the commodities mentioned in Schedules 'A' and 'B' shall normally take place through ordinary commercial channels, except where either Government finds it necessary to buy or sell part or whole of the quantity/value of any commodity on Government account. Such purchases and sales shall be reckoned as being within the terms of this Agreement.

Article IV

In order to facilitate the working of the Agreement, the two Governments agree to consult each other in respect of any matters arising from or in connection with the supply and movement of goods between the two countries, including the alteration, amendment or addition to Schedules 'A' and 'B' of this Agreement.

Article V

The commodities and goods described in Schedules 'A' and 'B' refer only to those that are produced, processed or manufactured in India or Pakistan as the case may be.

Article VI

The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan agree not to permit the re-export of any of the commodities imported under Schedules 'A' and 'B'.
Article VII
The two Governments agree that in respect of all commodities whether included in the Schedules to this Agreement or not, import and export licences in respect of the non-dollar currency areas shall be valid for India and Pakistan as the case may be.

Article VIII
This Agreement shall come into force on approval by the two Governments.

My Dear Karamatullah

During our negotiations for the Trade Agreement, it was agreed that the obligation of either country under Article VII would not extend to licences for export or import granted in terms of bilateral agreements already in force or which may be entered into hereafter with any third country. I would be glad to have your confirmation.

Yours sincerely,
Sd/- S. Bhoothalingam

DELEGATION OF PAKISTAN
New Delhi, dated the 5th Aug., 1952

MY Dear S. Bhoothalingam,

During the course of our negotiations, I explained to you that we are treating Japan as a separate currency group by itself. At present we classify it somewhere between the dollar countries and the non-American account countries with the result that, in the matter of imports, Japan is being treated less favourably than... the rest of the non-dollar world including India. The contingency, however, exists that, depending upon the movement of goods and commodities to and from Japan, we may have to adopt a more favourable policy towards it than that applicable to the rest of the non-dollar area. The object of this letter is to make it clear that, should such a contingency arise, our obligation under Article VII would not extend to special licences for the import from or export to Japan.

Yours sincerely,
Sd/- M. Karamatullah.

Exchange of notes constituting an Agreement between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan regarding the operation of air services to Afghanistan by Indian Aircraft

Karachi, 1 January and 20 February 1953.

Note addressed to the Government of Pakistan, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, Karachi, by the High Commission for India in Pakistan, Karachi (No. F.79(2)/52-Geni. date 1 January 1953)

The High Commission for India in Pakistan presents the compliments to the Government of Pakistan, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, and has the honour to refer to the discussions between the representatives of the Government of India and representatives of the Government of Pakistan at Karachi from the 8th to the 10th December, 1952, relating to the flight of Indian aircraft to Afghanistan across the territory of West Pakistan and landing in such territory for non-traffic purposes. At the meeting, the representatives of the Government of Pakistan intimated that their Government were unable at present to agree to the routes proposed by India, namely Delhi-Lahore-Peshawar-Kabul and India via Karachi and Quetta to Kandahar but offered, instead, the following routes and facilities for the operation of air services by Indian aircraft:

(a) The route India-Lahore and thence along a corridor twenty miles wide with its centre line on the direct rhumb line track between Lahore and Kandahar. This corridor would permit Indian aircraft to turn off at a point approximately 31° 45N and 69° OOE on to a direct track to Kabul over Afghan territory;

(b) The route India-Karachi and thence along a corridor twenty miles wide with the centre line on the direct rhumb line track between Karachi and Kandahar;

(c) The Government of Pakistan would release, for export to Afghanistan, a quantity of fuel required for the Indian airline(s) which is estimated not to exceed 2,500 gallons per month and;

(d) Certain operational facilities on the above mentioned routes, as specified in the record of discussions jointly signed by the representatives of the two Governments on the 10th December, 1952, at Karachi. The offer of the Government of Pakistan is an improvement on the existing conditions. It will, however, be appreciated that the direct route from Delhi to Kabul via Peshawar is not only much shorter in length than that at (a) above, but also, having regard to the terrain and navigational facilities, would ensure greater safety of operations which is a most important consideration in civil air transport. Surface transport has been continuous since ancient times through Peshawar to Afghanistan and extension of air corridor facilities by about sixteen statute miles from Peshawar to the Afghan border ought to be available also to air transport as a matter of course. Since, however, the Government of Pakistan are not at present disposed to agree to the operation of air services over the Peshawar route, the Government of India, in the interest of mutual understanding, are prepared to accept the offer of the Government of Pakistan described in paragraph 2 above, without prejudice to their right to raise the issue of a direct service to Kabul through Lahore and Peshawar at a later date. They trust that the Government of Pakistan will re-consider the matter at an early date and will agree to the natural, direct route. The Government of India will now forward to the Council of the International Civil Aviation Organization a copy of this Note and also a copy of the aforesaid jointly signed record of discussions and will request the Council to take appropriate action. The High Commission avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the Government of Pakistan the assurances of its highest consideration.

II Note addressed to the High Commissioner for India in Pakistan, by the Government of Pakistan, Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations
(N. UN. (l)-9/6/52; dated 20th February 1953).

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Commonwealth Relations presents its compliments to the High Commission for India in Pakistan and has the honour to refer to the High Commission's note No. F. 79(2)/52-Genl., dated the January 2, 1953 regarding the flight of Indian aircraft to Afghanistan across the territories of West Pakistan and landing in such territory for non-traffic purposes. The Government of Pakistan are glad to note that the Government of India have accepted their offer in regard to the flights of Indian aircraft to Afghanistan via Lahore-Kandhar and Karachi-Kandhar as contained in the jointly signed record of discussions between the representatives of the two Governments, and that the representatives of the Government of India on January 19, 1953, made it clear to the Council of ICAO that the acceptance of the Government of India of the offer of the two routes in the terms set out in the record of discussions was unconditional. The Government of Pakistan regret that, as already explained, they cannot make any commitment for the future regarding the question of opening the Delhi-Peshwar-Kabul route.
The Ministry avails itself of this opportunity to renew to the High Commission the assurance of its highest consideration.
RECORD OF DISCUSSION BETWEEN THE INDIAN AND PAKISTAN DELEGATIONS

As requested by the Working Committee of ICAO, reference their letter No. C-WP/1341, dated 26-11-52, a Delegation of the Civil Aviation Authorities in India met a corresponding Delegation of Pakistan in Karachi. The meetings took place over the period December 8th, 1952 to December 10th 1952. The Pakistan representatives confirmed that their Government is prepared to open two air corridors across the prohibited areas in West Pakistan as follows:

(1) A corridor 20 miles wide with its centre line on the direct thumb line track between Lahore and Kandahar. This corridor would permit Indian aircraft to turn off at a position approximately 31°45N and 69°00E onto a direct track to Kabul over Afghan territory.

(2) The second corridor was similarly 20 miles wide on the centre line of the direct thumb line track between Karachi and Kandahar. These two corridors were offered to serve two different routes which it is understood India wishes to operate, namely, Delhi to Kabul and Bombay or Ahmedabad to Kabul, one of these touching at Kandahar. The Indian Delegation explained that they were interested in a short direct route which was economic and operationally feasible and not necessarily over a particular area which Pakistan considered prohibited for reasons of security. They just wanted a corridor along which they could operate. The discussions then devolved on the operational aspects of the routes offered. It was agreed that the route from Delhi via Lahore and the turning point "X" (approximate position 31°45N and 69°00E) to Kabul was 787 statute miles in length compared to a distance of 644 statute miles from Delhi via Lahore and Peshawar. The difference was therefore 143 statute miles shown in the annex. The Indian Delegation explained that one of their difficulties in operating services to Kabul was lack of aviation fuel in Afghanistan. To facilitate the operation on the routes proposed the Pakistan Delegation offered to release for export to Afghanistan a quantity of fuel (which is estimated not to exceed 2500 gallons per month) required by the Indian Airline(s). The Indian Delegation expressed their gratitude in regard to the offer of Pakistan for the facilitation of fuel supply in Afghanistan. They, however, considered that the route along the proposed corridor up to point "X" involved considerable deviation from the direct natural route and therefore requested that Pakistan may kindly consider placing the corridor further North. The Pakistan Representatives regretted their inability to do this and added that the petrol facility at Kabul was being specially offered to help the operation on the routes proposed. As regards the operational facilities on this route, Pakistan advised that the civil airport of Multan would be available as an alternate to Lahore and that as this was not a customs airport it would, therefore, have to be used on the usual strict undertaking against the off-loading and embarking of passengers and freight etc. Also the emergency landing ground at Dera Ismail Khan would be available for use in emergencies only and could be reached by following the Eastern bank of the Indus river to Dera Ismail Khan itself. It was agreed that the operation of this route would be during day time only; Air Traffic Control within the boundaries of the Karachi Flight Information Region would be exercised by Karachi and the communications and navigational facilities at Karachi, Lahore and Multan would be available to Indian aircraft. The Indian Delegation requested that the normal procedures regarding clearing of a flight on account of weather and/or terminal airport available should be waived in the case of flights to Afghanistan in view of the lack of information available in that area. The check procedure would be promulgated in the form of a Notice to Airmen when the corridors are officially opened. On the second route i.e., Karachi-Kandahar-Kabul the Indian Delegation requested Pakistan to investigate whether any airport with refuelling facilities could be made available close to the corridor beyond Karachi. The Pakistan Delegation pointed out that there was no customs airport in this area and that the other civil airports in the vicinity, e.g. Jacobabad and Sibi, were not, at present, manned and therefore there were no facilities available there. The Pakistan Delegation requested that the reactions of the Indian Government to the Pakistan proposals should be communicated to the Pakistan Government as early as possible, preferably not later than the first of January 1953, to enable a report to be forwarded to ICAO in time. The Indian Delegation agreed.

I. Resumption of rail traffic via additional rail links between West Pakistan and India It was agreed that rail traffic should be restored on the following routes

(i) Kasur-Ferozepur
(ii) Khokrapar-Munabas

The General Managers of North Western Railway (Pakistan) and Northern Railway (India) should meet at an early date and work out the details for the resumption of traffic on these routes in conjunction with the representatives of customs and police authorities. The target date for the resumption of this traffic should be the 1st June, 1955.

II. Resumption of through passenger service between West Pakistan and India It was agreed that Railways and other departments concerned of the two countries should work out the details for providing suitable through passenger services between the following points (i) Lahore and Calcutta via Sohararpur; (ii) Lahore and Delhi; (iii) Lahore and Bombay via Delhi; and (iv) Hyderabad (Sind) and Ahmedabad via Khokrapar. It was further agreed that every endeavour should be made to commence the through service between Lahore and Calcutta from the 1st of June 1955.

III. Resumption of movement of cross traffic between stations in India on the Eastern Zone via the East Pakistan route. It was agreed to resume through booking of this traffic with effect from the 1st of May 1955 in accordance with the details outlined in Appendix A.

IV. Customs and Police checks The Ministers were anxious that a rational system of customs and police inspection, which would substantially minimize the inconvenience and delay to the passengers, should be adopted. It was, therefore, agreed that:

(a) in regard to passenger traffic moving between Amritsar and Lahore, these examinations should be made at Amritsar and Lahore and not at intermediate border points; (Note: Instructions have already been issued to the respective General Managers to fix up the details of these arrangements in conjunction with the Police and Customs authorities of the two countries.

(b) arrangements for Police and Customs check should be so adjusted on all the routes that they are completed as far as possible within an hour.

V. It was agreed that all payments hereafter between the two railway systems should be adjusted from month to month between the railways concerned and the balances paid up currently. These transactions should remain independent of other Government to Government transactions and should conform to recognised business principles.

VI. It was agreed that the two Governments should ratify these decisions as early as possible and in any case before the end of April 1955 and that in the mean time, the railway authorities concerned should initiate action to implement them in time.

APPENDIX A
GOODS TRAFFIC FROM INDIA TO INDIA VIA EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY (PAKISTAN)

(i) The above traffic will be resumed in accordance with the conditions mentioned in the minutes (copy attached) of the meeting held at Calcutta on 4th and 5th
April 1955 between the Railway and Customs officials concerned of India and Pakistan. It is further agreed that to attract traffic and to enable the Indian Railways to allocate regularly an agreed quota of traffic to the above route, the E.B. Railway shall quote special rates via border station to via border station which will be derived by giving a special rebate of 30% over their existing rates between the border stations concerned, with such exception as may be necessary in the case of any particular commodity to conform to what the traffic can bear.

(ii) The cross traffic over the E.B. Railway will be resumed from the 1st May, 1955. As the examination of exceptions may take time, the E.B. Railway will quote, as an immediate measure, special rates on the basis of 30% reduction mentioned in (i) above. Exceptions, if any, will be made later.

It was recognised that all the three modes of transport, viz. (i) All India Link route to and from North Bengal and Assam, (ii) Steamer route through Indian and Pakistani waters to and from North Bengal and Assam, and (iii) Route across the Eastern Bengal Railway should be availed of. In regard to movement by the route across the Eastern Bengal Railway, the following agreements were reached:

I. Routes over which cross traffic will be permitted to move through the Eastern Bengal Railway

(a) Via Darsana-via Chilhati. (b) Via Darsana-via Mogalhat (goods to be transhipped at Santahar). (c) Via Biral-via Mogalhat. (d) Via Latu-via Darsana. (e) Via Latu-via Biral. The Indian representatives enquired whether it would be possible for the Eastern Bengal Railway to move traffic on the Bhurangamari- Sonahat Section so that traffic via Mogalhat can also move directly to Golakganj. The Eastern Bengal Railway representatives stated that a bridge on this section was damaged during the floods and it will take considerable time to repair it. If, however, substantial traffic was expected to move that way, they would consider the restoration of the Section. The Indian representatives stated that most of via Mogalhat traffic could pass over this section.

II. Volume of traffic

1. The Indian representatives roughly estimated that the traffic will amount to: (a) One Broad Gauge train-load a day of about 60 Broad Gauge wagons from via Darsana to via Mogalhat (goods to be transhipped at Santahar); and (b) About 15 Broad Gauge wagon loads a day from via Darsana to via Chilhati. This traffic is expected to develop to about 30 Broad Gauge wagons a day as soon as adequate transhipment, facilities are provided at Haldibari by the North Eastern Railway. Substantial traffic is not expected to materialise on the other routes.

2. All traffic to North Bengal and Assam is at present planned and co-ordinated by the Director, Rail Movement, Railway Board, in consultation with the Governments of West Bengal and Assam and other important users in the area. This arrangement will continue and the Director, Rail Movements will now also plan for traffic across the Eastern Bengal Railway and in doing so, will consult... the Chief Traffic Manager, Eastern Bengal Railway as and when necessary. In allocating the traffic to the three modes of transport, the Eastern Bengal Railway will be allotted a reasonable share of high-rated traffic.

3. The Eastern Bengal Railway representatives enquired what the traffic in the reverse direction would be. It was explained by the Indian representatives that even on the North Eastern Railway traffic to North Bengal and Assam is considerably heavier than return traffic and empties are worked to certain points in the reverse direction. The position will substantially be the same in respect of the new routes via the Eastern Bengal Railway. There was, however, a possibility of a substantial amount of timber in logs being offered in the reverse direction if facilities for transhipment could be provided at Santahar. The Eastern Bengal Railway representatives promised to examine this and advise the North Eastern Railway and the Director, Rail Movements of the position. There may also be a possibility of bamboos moving from the hill section via Latu and Darsana.

III. Operating arrangements

1. The traffic moving via Santahar will be offered by the Broad Gauge Section in three groups, viz: (i) for destinations between Gitaldaha and Alipur-Duar Jn. inclusive (also Bamanhat), (ii) stations east of Alipur-Duar Jn., and (iii) stations north and west of Alipur-Duar Jn. Eastern Bengal Railway will, after transhipment, marshal the goods trains in the same three groups before handing them over at Lalmanirhat.

2. The Eastern Bengal Railway will exercise running power on the Broad Gauge Section from the Pakistan-India border to Haldibari.

3. On the Mogalhat side, North Eastern Railway manned trains are running at present only up to Mogalhat. With the re-introduction of cross traffic running powers would be exercised by the North Eastern Railway, as in the past, up to Lalmanirhat.

4. At Haldibari, broad gauge shunting will be performed by the Eastern Bengal Railway locomotives operated by the Eastern Bengal Railway crew under the directions of Traffic shunting staff of the North Eastern Railway. The charges for these locomotives shall be paid for on an hourly basis.

5. Eastern Bengal Railway are at present maintaining a credit balance with Indian Railways both on Metre Gauge and Broad Gauge. With the responsibility for finding rolling stock for carrying cross traffic they may need to adjust these balances to some extent. If this is found necessary, they will give adequate notice.

IV. Commercial matters

1. Rates: Class, schedule and special rates, if any, over the Eastern Bengal Railway portion by the various routes will be calculated by Eastern Bengal Railway in terms of Indian currency and communicated to Eastern and North Eastern Railways who will then issue necessary foreign rate circulars to their staff. Except in cases where a modification of rates is found necessary on account of a change in the basic rates structure or in the basis of calculation of such rates in terms of Indian currency, no change will be effected without prior consultation. It was recognised that there will be no manipulation of rates by any party with a view to altering the balance of movements between the various routes.

2. Booking: All traffic moving across the Eastern Bengal Railway shall be booked freight pre-paid. Small traffic, if booked across the Eastern Bengal Railway, will be handed over in sealed wagons. Arms and ammunition and military stores and equipment will not be booked across the Eastern Bengal Railway.

3. Claims: The responsibility for claims arising in respect of consignments will be determined in terms of the "Fundamental and Subsidiary Rules for interchange of traffic between India and Pakistan" in force from time to time. All other rules in respect of interchange of Railway traffic and rolling stock etc. contained in the Fundamental and Subsidiary Rules will equally apply except that Note 2 to Rule (7) of Annexure I will now be treated as cancelled.

4. Documentation:
   (a) Separate series of Invoice Books (of distinctive colour) will be used by all stations in booking such traffic. It will also be arranged by the Eastern and North Eastern Railways that wagons are labelled with distinctive labels. Usual seals will be used and any additional seals required by the Customs authorities will also be provided. The invoice will be prepared in six foils, as follows: (i) Booking Station Record. (ii) Railway Receipt. (iii) Border Station Invoice. (iv) Invoice for Destination Station (Through Invoice). (v) Junction Invoice. (vi) Accounts Foil - to be specially forwarded by the forwarding station to the combined Foreign Traffic Accounts Office, Calcutta. This copy will be attached to the Division-Sheet, which will be submitted by the Financial Adviser & Chief Accounts Officer, Eastern Railway, Calcutta, to the Financial Adviser & Chief Accounts Officer, Eastern Bengal Railway, Chittagong.
   (b) Five copies of in-transit manifest for customs requirements will also be prepared by the booking station for each invoice. These manifests will contain the following particulars: (i) Invoice No. (ii) Station From. (iii) Station To. (iv) Name of consignor. (v) Name of consignee. (vi) Number of packages. (vii) Description of contents. (viii) Weight. Four copies of these manifests will be securely pinned to the Junction and Border Invoices and sent to the first customs stations.

V. Financial settlement
1. As regards payments to the Eastern Bengal Railway for carrying the cross traffic, it was suggested by the Eastern Bengal Railway representatives that some special arrangements will have to be devised to effect prompt settlement. An arrangement already exists according to which the value of and freight on coal from India for Pakistan are paid in Indian currency at Calcutta out of an irrevocable credit placed with a Bank at Calcutta by the Pakistan Government. On the same lines the Indian Railways will place an irrevocable revolving credit with a bank at Chittagong in favour of the Eastern Bengal Railway and authorise the Eastern Bengal Railway each month to draw upon this credit for its dues. The amount of this irrevocable credit in the initial stage may be fixed at Rupees three lakhs, subject to modification on periodical review in the light of traffic actually carried, the underlying principle being that this credit should not be less than the freight earned by the Eastern Bengal Railway during any month.

2. The Eastern and North Eastern Railways will submit cross traffic Division sheets to the Eastern Bengal Railway three times a month and an authority of payment will accompany the last Division Sheet for the month and on this authority the Eastern Bengal Railway will draw upon the credit opened by the Indian Railways in the bank at Chittagong.

3. Any discrepancies detected either by the Financial Adviser & Chief Accounts Officer of the Eastern Bengal Railway or the Financial Adviser & Chief Accounts Officer of Eastern/North Eastern Railways on check of these Division Sheets/Invoices will be communicated to the Financial Adviser & Chief Accounts Officer concerning for acceptance. On communication of this acceptance, the adjustment will be made by the Financial Adviser & Chief Accounts Officer, Eastern/North Eastern Railway in the account to be submitted in the month following.

VI. Customs procedure:

1. Through wagons will be sealed by the Indian Customs at the last Customs-sealing station in India and by the Pakistan Customs at the first Customs station in Pakistan. Seals will be liable to be checked at any Customs Station on the in-transit route. If seals are found broken at any time wagons will be detained and a complete inventory of the goods taken in the presence of Railway and Customs representatives. In any case, the Customs Officer in charge of the last Customs Stations en route in Pakistan will verify the seals and certify that they are intact.

2. At the station of entry in Pakistan, in the case of all trains carrying in-transit cargo, the railway guard will present to the Customs officer copies of the manifests referred to in para. IV. 4. (b). These will serve as in-transit manifests. The Customs Officer will retain one copy and return the other copy duly stamped to the guard for presentation to the Customs Officer at the station of exit. These two copies will be forwarded by the Customs Officers of the stations of entry... and exit to the Land Customs Audit Department for check. No other customs documents will be required by the Pakistan Customs.

3. Similarly two copies of the in-transit manifests will also be presented to the Indian Customs Stations of Exit. The Indian Customs Officer will retain one copy, put the stamped copies in a sealed cover and hand over this sealed cover to the train's guard for onward transmission through the Eastern Bengal Railway to the Indian Customs Station at the point of entry. No other documents will be required by the Indian Customs.

4. In the case of goods to be transhipped in Pakistan from broad-gauge to metre gauge and vice versa, the wagons will be sealed by the Indian and the Pakistan Customs to begin with, but these seals will be broken by Pakistan Customs at the transhipment station viz. Santahar. A register will be maintained by the Eastern Bengal Railway at this station, in which particulars of goods transhipped with the Nos. of wagons will be entered. The Customs Officer will attest this register after every transhipment operation and prepare two copies for his own records. Transhipment will be done under Customs supervision. The Railway officials at Santahar will arrange with the Customs for the posting of the required number of officers. One copy of the transhipment record will be sent by the local Customs in weekly batches to the Land Customs Audit Department for check with the in-transit manifests.

5. In case of any discrepancies noticed in transhipment cargo, intimation will be sent by the Customs Officer, Santahar to the Indian Customs officers of the two stations of exit and entry. The Eastern Bengal Railway will also send an intimation to the Indian Railway concerned. Goods will not be detained on account of such discrepancies, unless prohibited goods like gold or silver bullion, opium and dangerous drugs or arms and ammunition are found to be carried. Indian Customs seals will not be broken except in the event of information being received by Pakistan Customs that such prohibited goods are being carried in a particular consignment, provided further that the seals can be broken in such cases only under the orders of an officer not below the rank of an Assistant Collector, who will report the case to the Collector of Central Excise and Land Customs, Chittagong.

6. In order to avoid the Indian and Pakistan Customs having to deal with individual consignors and consignees of goods which may involve delay, the Indian Railways will act as the agents of the owners of the goods for the in-transit formalities, and at the time of booking of goods will take a declaration from the owner authorising them to act as his agents for this purpose and indemnifying the Railway against penalties imposed by the Customs authorities of either country on account of contravention of Customs and allied laws and regulations. This declaration may be in such form as the legal advisers of the Railways may recommend.
7. The Indian Railways may depute an officer at Santahar to act as their agent for assisting the Pakistan Customs and Railway staff in the quick movement of goods, specially in the event of any discrepancies detected. This will also assist in the disposal of claims that may arise on this account.

VII. Ratification

The agreements recorded above are subject to ratification by the respective Governments.

Islamabad, 14 September 1974

In accordance with the decisions contained in Para 3 of the Simla Agreement and in pursuance of Article 8 of the Constitution of the Universal Postal Union

The Government of INDIA
AND

The Government of PAKISTAN,

DESIRING to restore and establish a Postal Service between the two countries,

HAVE agreed as follows:
Article I

SCOPE OF THE AGREEMENT

1. The provisions of this Agreement shall apply to letter-post items, insured letters and boxes and parcels originating in either country and intended for delivery in the other.

2. The exchange of letter-post items, insured letters and boxes and postal parcels between India and Pakistan shall be governed by the provisions of the Convention and Agreements of the Universal Postal Union to which both the countries are signatories, except to the extent such provisions are modified in the subsequent Articles. The term "the Convention and Agreement of the Universal Postal Union" used in this Agreement shall be taken to include the Convention of the Universal Postal Union, 1969, with its Final Protocol and Detailed Regulations and the Postal Parcels Agreement, 1969, with its Final Protocol and Detailed Regulations.

3. The facilities for registration and insurance shall be available in respect of letter-post items posted in either country for delivery in the other, on payment of fees in accordance with the provisions of the Convention and Agreement of the Universal Postal Union.

4. The facility of Express Delivery Service shall not be available in respect of letter-post items and parcels posted in either country for delivery in the other.

Article II

CLASSES OF POSTAL ARTICLES AND CONDITIONS FOR THEIR TRANSMISSION

1. The term "letter-post items" applies to letters, letter-cards (or aerogrammes), postcards, printed papers (including registered newspapers), literature for the blind and small packets.

2. The weight limits and dimensions of the letter-post items shall conform to those laid down in the Universal Postal Union Convention and its Detailed Regulations.

3. Insured letters shall not contain articles subject to customs duty.

4. Insured boxes shall not contain (a) documents having the character of current and personal correspondence; and (b) bank notes, currency notes or securities of any kind payable to bearer.
5. Insured items shall be subject to customs and import and export and exchange control regulations in force from time to time in each country.

6. The insured value may not exceed the actual value of the contents of the item, subject to a maximum of 1250 Gold Francs, but it shall be permissible to insure only part of that value.

Article III

RATES

1. The postage rates, air surcharges and postal fees applicable to letter-post items and parcels in either country for delivery in the other shall be in accordance with the provisions of the Convention and Agreement of the Universal Postal Union.

2. Subject to the provisions of Convention and Agreement of the Universal Postal Union, changes in rates and fees shall, whenever necessary, be made by each Postal Administration, under intimation to the other.

Article IV

SPECIAL AND SUPPLEMENTARY CHARGES

1. All special and supplementary charges applicable to letter-post items and parcels posted in either country for delivery in the other shall be in accordance with the provisions of the Convention and Agreement of the Universal Postal Union.

2. When an enquiry or request for information is, at the request of the interested Party, to be transmitted by air, it will give rise to the collection of the respective air surcharge, or double this surcharge, if the reply is also to be transmitted by air. In both cases, the amount of surcharge will be retained in full by the Administration which collects it. If the use of telegraph is requested, the cost of the telegram will also be collected.

Article V

PARCELS

The following special provisions shall apply to postal parcels posted in either country for delivery in the other:

1. Maximum weight of a parcel shall be 10 Kgs.

2. The maximum insurance limit of a Parcel shall be 1250 Gold Francs.

3. Parcels shall be subject to Customs and Import and Export and Exchange Control Regulations in force from time to time in the country of origin and destination.

Article VI

AIR MAIL

The provisions concerning airmail correspondence as laid down in the Universal Postal Union Convention shall be applicable in the case of airmail correspondence posted in either country for delivery in the other, subject to the following special provisions:

1. The surcharge on all items of airmail shall be in addition to the surface postage;

2. Each Administration shall be entitled to fix the rates of air surcharges on various items of airmail under intimation to the other, subject to the provisions of the Convention and Agreements of the Universal Postal Union.

Article VII

AIR PARCELS

The exchange of air parcels shall be covered by the same special provisions as laid down in Article V. Each Administration shall be at liberty to fix a separate air surcharge in addition to the surface parcel, postage rates or an air surcharge-cum-parcel postage taking into account the cost of air conveyance. Air parcels which cannot be delivered to the addressees for any reason whatsoever shall be returned to the country of origin only by the surface route.

Article VIII

SETTLEMENT OF ACCOUNTS

1. The manner of preparation, acceptance and settlement of postal accounts between India and Pakistan shall be governed by the provisions of the Universal Postal Union Convention and the Universal Postal Union Agreement, except as modified by this Agreement.

2. The net payment of balances of postal accounts shall be made in United States of America Dollars. The method of conversion into such currency shall be as follows:

   The amount of the payment in US Dollars shall be equivalent in value to the balance of the account. The amount which is equivalent in value to the balance of the account shall be determined by the relationship in effect on the day before payment between the value of the gold francs and the gold, par value of the US Dollars approved by the International Monetary Fund. In case a central rate of the US Dollar has been established under the International Monetary Fund Executive Board decision subsequent to the approval given in the International Monetary Fund to the Gold par value, the gold value of that central rate shall be used in determining the equivalent value.

3. The amounts due to India shall be credited by bank transfer to the account of the Post and Telegraph Department in the State Bank of India, New York Branch.

4. The amounts due to Pakistan shall be credited by bank transfer to the account of Government of Pakistan in the National Bank of Pakistan, New York Branch.

5. Payment shall be made as quickly as possible and at the latest within four months from the date of receipt of the general or special liquidation accounts, accounts or statements drawn up by common consent, notification, requests for payments on account, etc., indicating the amounts of balances to be settled, after that period the amounts due shall be chargeable with interest at the rate of 5% per annum.

6. If, between the time the remittance (cheque etc.) is effected and the time the creditor receives it, a variation occurs in the equivalent value of the US Dollar and if the difference resulting from such variation exceeds 5% of the amount due as calculated following such variation, the total difference shall be shared equally between debtor and creditor.

7. If there should be a radical change in the International Monetary system, which invalidates or makes inappropriate one or more of the foregoing paragraphs, India and Pakistan may, by a separate mutual agreement, adopt a new procedure for the payment of balances of accounts.

Article IX

SETTLEMENT OF OUTSTANDING DUES

It was agreed that payment of outstanding amounts relating to postal dues will be discussed and settled by the representatives of the two Governments at an early date.

Article X

SETTLEMENT OF DIFFERENCES AND DISPUTES

1. A Committee of Technical Experts of both the countries shall meet twice a year to discuss and resolve to the maximum extent possible all outstanding problems relating to the operational matters and the settlement of accounts.
2. Any question which arises between the Parties concerning the interpretation of application of this Agreement or the existence of any fact which, if established, might constitute breach of this Agreement, shall first be examined by the above mentioned Committee of the Technical Experts which will endeavour to resolve the differences by agreement.

3. If the Committee of Technical Experts is unable to reach agreement on any question then a difference will be deemed to have arisen which shall be resolved through bilateral discussions between the two Governments.

Article XI

ENTRY INTO FORCE, MODIFICATION AND DURATION

1. This Agreement shall come into force from the date to be mutually agreed upon.

2. The Technical and Operational aspects of the Postal Service shall be decided by mutual agreement of the Postal Administration of the two countries.

3. This Agreement may be modified from time to time by mutual consent of the two Governments.

4. The provisions in the Agreement relating to Air Mail Service shall come into force only after the establishment of the air links between the two countries.

5. Exchange of mail by sea shall come into force only after the establishment of shipping services between the two countries.

6. This Agreement may be suspended by either side if balances of accounts accruing under this Agreement remain unpaid for a period of two years.

7. This Agreement is valid for five years from the date of endorsement, subject to the provision that it can be terminated by either Government after giving a notice of one year of its intention to do so.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the undersigned, duly authorised for that purpose, have signed this Agreement in two originals, on Saturday, the 14th September, 1974, at Islamabad.

Islamabad, 14 September 1974

In accordance with the decision contained in para 3 of the Simla Agreement

The Government of INDIA

AND

The Government of PAKISTAN,

DESIRING to restore and establish telecommunication service between the two countries,

HAVE agreed as follows:

Article I

ESTABLISHMENT OF TELECOMMUNICATION SERVICES

1. From a date to be mutually agreed upon, continuously operated telecommunications services shall be established over a direct land route between India and Pakistan.

2. Except to the extent indicated hereinafter, the telecommunications services shall be governed by the "Telegraph Regulations (Geneva-1973)", the "Telephone Regulations (Geneva-1973)" and the "International Telecommunication Convention (MalagaTerremolines-1973)".

3. The technical and operational aspects of the Telegraph and Telephone Services shall be decided by mutual consent of the telecommunications administrations of the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan. These shall be finalised by mutual discussions within one month.

Article II

PUBLIC TELEGRAM SERVICE

1. The classes of telegrams accepted between India and Pakistan shall be as listed in the Annexure I attached to this Agreement. Besides all classes of obligatory telegrams, as defined in Article 4 of the Telegraph Regulations (Geneva 1973) Urgent Private, Urgent Press and Ordinary Press Telegrams will be accepted. Private and Press Telegrams shall be accepted in plain language.

2. Press telegrams will be accepted only from authorised and duly registered representatives of newspapers, periodical publications, News Agencies or bureau and press services of diplomatic missions.

3. The International Telegraph Offices will be open for International Service all the 24 hours of the day. Delivery of all ordinary telegrams in India will be during 0600 to 2200 hours (Indian Standard Time) only. The delivery in Pakistan will be during 0600 to 2200 hours (Pakistan Standard Time).

4. The overall accounting rate per word shall be made up of the sum of the terminal and transit rates as applicable and shown in Annexure II to this Agreement.

5. There shall be no Transfer Account Service between India and Pakistan.

Article III
TELEPHONE SERVICES

1. For the purpose of this Service, India shall be divided into the following accounting Zones:

   Zone I - Comprising all the States contiguous to Pakistan, the State of Uttar Pradesh and the Union Territory of Delhi.

   Zone II - Comprising the rest of India except the city of Bombay.

   Zone III - The city of Bombay (comprising the entire multi-exchange area).

2. Classes of Calls

   The following classes of calls as defined in the CCITT Recommendations (Geneva 1978) shall be accepted.

   — Distress (emergency) calls — Government calls.

   — Service calls.

   — Private calls.

3. Facilities offered to users

   Only the Station calls and the Personal calls will be accepted.

4. Operating Methods

   All calls will be completed on a manual basis via the nominated International Telephone Exchanges.
5. Accounting Rate

(i) Terminal Calls

In respect of calls between exchanges in Zone I of India and exchanges in Pakistan, the overall accounting rate shall be of 10 Gold Francs for the first three minutes duration or less. For each additional minute or part thereof it shall be on prorata basis. The overall accounting rate shall be shared equally between the two countries.

(ii) In respect of calls between exchanges in Zone II and Zone III of India and exchanges in Pakistan, the overall accounting rate shall be 20 Gold Francs for the first three minutes duration or less. For each additional minute it shall be on prorata basis. This shall be shared between India and Pakistan in the ratio 3 (India) : 1 (Pakistan) for Zone II. As regards the City of Bombay the ratio will be 2 (India) : 1(Pakistan).

(iii) Transit Calls

(a) For calls transited via India, the Indian share for the first three minutes or less shall be 5 Gold Francs. For every additional minute or part thereof, it shall be on a prorata basis.

(b) For calls transited via Pakistan, the Pakistan share for the first three minutes or less shall be 5 Gold Francs. For every additional minute or part thereof, it shall be on a prorata basis.

Article IV

TELEX SERVICES

1. For the purpose of this Service, India shall be divided into the following accounting Zones:

   Zone I - Comprising telex exchanges in all the States contiguous to Pakistan, the State of Uttar Pradesh and the Union Territory of Delhi.

   Zone II - Comprising telex exchanges in the rest of India except the City of Bombay.

   Zone III - The telex exchange in the City of Bombay.

2. Classes of Calls

Following classes of telex calls shall be accepted:

(a) Safety of Life Telex Calls (SVH),
(b) Government Telex Calls,
(c) Service Telex Calls,
(d) Ordinary Private Telex Calls,
(e) Requests for information.

3. Operating Methods

All calls will be completed on a manual basis via the nominated International Telex Exchanges.

4. Accounting Rate

(i) Terminal Calls

In respect of calls between exchanges in Zone I of India and exchanges in Pakistan, the overall accounting rate shall be 8 Gold Francs for the first three minutes duration or less. For each additional minute it shall be on a prorata basis; This shall be shared equally between the two countries.

(ii) In respect of calls between exchanges in Zone II and Zone III of India and exchanges in Pakistan, the overall accounting rate shall be 16 Gold Francs for the first three minutes duration or less. For each additional minute it shall be on a prorata basis. This shall be shared between India and Pakistan in the ratio 3 (India) : 1 (Pakistan). As regards the city of Bombay the ratio will be 2 (India) : 1 (Pakistan).

(iii) Transit Calls

(a) For calls transited via India, the Indian share for the first three minutes or less shall be 12 Gold Francs. For every additional minute or part thereof, it shall be on a prorata basis.

(b) For calls transited via Pakistan, the Pakistan share for the first three minutes or less shall be 4 Gold Francs. For every additional minute or part thereof, it shall be on a prorata basis.

Article V

ACCOUNTING PROCEDURE FOR TELECOMMUNICATIONS

1. The Government of India and the Government of Pakistan shall establish a monthly account showing all the amounts owed and forward it to the other Government concerned. The accounts shall be in the Forms as mutually agreed upon by the two sides.

2. The accounts shall be sent as promptly as possible but in any case before the end of the third month following that to which they relate.
3. In principle, an account shall be considered as accepted without the need for specific notification of acceptance to the Government which sent it.

4. Nevertheless, both the Governments shall have right to query the date in question during the period of two months after the receipt of the account, but only to the extent necessary to bring the differences within limits specified in para 6 below.

5. However, to avoid repetition of errors which are too small to entail a revision of the account, either of the Governments may draw the attention of the other Government which has prepared the monthly account, to obvious errors and the latter Government must take action on this information as soon as practicable to avoid similar errors occurring in the future.

6. A revision which has begun shall be stopped following the exchange of observations between the two Administrations, as soon as the difference is brought down to a sum not exceeding the maximum specified below: The limits apply to each of the three services separately.

Article VI
PAYMENTS OF BALANCE OF ACCOUNTS

1. A quarterly settlement statement showing the balance from the monthly accounts for the period to which it relates shall be prepared as quickly as possible by the creditor Administration and be sent in duplicate to the debtor Administration which, after verification, shall return one of the copies endorsed with its acceptance.

2. The payment of the balance due on account shall not be delayed pending settlement of any query on that account. Adjustments which are later agreed shall be included in the subsequent account.

3. Payment shall be affected as promptly as possible but in no case later than six weeks after the day on which the quarterly settlement statement is received by the debtor Administration. Beyond this period the creditor Administration shall have the right to charge interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum; reckoned from the day following the date of expiration of the said period.

4. The balance of telecommunications accounts, shall be drawn up in Gold Francs.

5. The payment of balance of telecommunication accounts shall be made in United States of America Dollars. The methods of conversion into such currency shall be as follows:

   The amount of the payment in US Dollars shall be equivalent in value to the balance of the account. The amount which is equivalent in value to the balance of the account shall be determined by the relationship in effect on the day before payment between the value of the Gold Franc and the gold par value of the US dollars approved by the International Monetary Fund. In case a central rate of the US dollar has been established under the International Monetary Fund Executive Board decision subsequent to the approval given by the International Monetary Fund to the gold par value, the gold value of the central rate shall be used in determining the equivalent value.

6. The amounts due to India shall be credited by bank transfer to the account of the Indian Posts and Telegraphs Department in the State Bank of India, New York Branch. The amounts due to Pakistan shall be credited by bank transfer to the account of Pakistan Telegraph and Telephone Department in the National Bank of Pakistan, New York Branch.

7. The payment charges imposed in the debtor country (taxes, clearing charges, commission, etc.) shall be borne by the debtor. The charges imposed in the creditor country, including payment charges imposed by banks, shall be borne by the creditor.

8. If, between the time the remittance (cheque, etc.) is effected and the time the creditor receives it, a variation occurs in the equivalent value of the US dollar and if the difference resulting from such variation exceeds 5% of the amount due as calculated following such variation, the total difference shall be shared equally between debtor and creditor.

9. If there should be a radical change in the International Monetary System, which invalidates or makes inappropriate one or more of the foregoing paragraphs, India and Pakistan shall be free to adopt, by a separate mutual agreement, different procedure for the payment of balances of account pending a revision to Appendix to the Telegraph Regulations (Geneva, 1973) and Appendix II to the Telephone Regulations (Geneva, 1973).

Article VII

SETLEMENT OF DIFFERENCES AND DISPUTES

1. A committee of Technical experts of both countries shall meet twice a year to discuss and resolve to the maximum extent possible all outstanding problems relating to the operational matters and the settlement of accounts.

2. Any question which arises between the parties concerning the interpretation of application of this Agreement or the existence of any fact which, if established, might constitute breach of this Agreement shall first be examined by the above-mentioned Committee of the Technical Experts which will endeavour to resolve the difference by Agreement.

3. If the Committee of Experts is unable to reach agreement on any question then difference will be deemed to have arisen which shall be resolved through bilateral discussions between the two Governments.

Article VIII

PAYMENT OF PAST DUES

It was agreed that payment of outstanding amounts relating to Telecommunication dues will be discussed and settled by the representatives of the two Governments at an early date.

Article IX

MODIFICATION AND DURATION OF AGREEMENT

1. This Agreement may be modified from time to time by mutual consent of the two Governments.
2. This Agreement may be suspended by either side if outstanding balances of accounts occurring under this Agreement remain unpaid for a period of one year.

3. This Agreement is valid for two years from the date of its signing by the two Governments unless it is reviewed and extended by mutual agreement, between the two Governments before the expiry date.

4. IN WITNESS WHEREOF the undersigned duly authorised for that purpose have signed this Agreement in the two originals on Saturday the 14th September, 1974, at Islamabad.

3638. Protocol between the Government of India and the Government of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan regarding Shipping Services.

New Delhi, 15 January 1975

RECALLING the provisions of the Simla Agreement of 1972 to progressively restore and normalise relations between the two countries, and

RECALLING further the Protocol on Resumption of Trade between India and Pakistan signed at New Delhi on the 30th November, 1974, and RESOLVING to restore direct shipping services between the two countries.

The Delegations of India and Pakistan, which met in New Delhi from the 11th to 15th January, 1975.

HAVE agreed as follows:

1. Necessary steps will be taken by both the countries to restore direct shipping services by the 15th February, 1975, on the principles of sovereign equality, and mutual benefit.

2. Such services will cover the carriage of cargo between the two countries.

3. Such carriage will only be by the vessels of the mercantile marine sailing under the flag of either country in accordance with its laws and regulations.

4. All cargo between the ports of the two countries shall be carried on the principle of equality in matters relating to cargo liftings and freight earnings on an annual basis.

5. Vessels of either country will load in the ports of one country only such cargo as is destined for the other country.
6. For coordination of all questions connected with the operation of direct shipping services between both the countries, the Government of India hereby nominate the Director General of Shipping, Bombay on their part and the Government of Pakistan likewise nominate the Director General of Ports and Shipping, Karachi, on their part.

7. The authorities referred to in Article (6) will nominate the shipping companies of their respective countries to determine by mutual discussion the details of operation of the services. For this purpose, the representatives of the Shipping Companies shall meet, as early as possible, on a mutually convenient date.

8. The vessels of either country, their crew, and cargoes shall be admitted to the territorial waters and the ports of the other country and shall be accorded the most-favoured nation treatment relating to their entry, stay loading/unloading of cargo, leaving of the ports, and all necessary facilities for safe maritime navigation.

9. The provisions of Article (8) shall be subject to Article (5) and such restrictions as are or may be imposed, from time to time, by the laws of either country.

10. Either country shall adopt, within the limits of their laws and port regulations, all appropriate measures to facilitate and expedite maritime traffic, to prevent delays to vessels and to expedite the carrying out of customs and other formalities, applicable at the ports.

11. All ship documents including those relating to nationality, registration, tonnage and survey issued or recognised by one country shall be recognised by the other country.

12. Either country shall recognise the seamen's identity documents issued by the appropriate authorities of the other country.

13. Holder of Seaman's identity documents specified in Article (12) shall, during the stay of the vessel in the ports of the other country, be permitted to land on temporary shore leave without visa, on his obtaining a Landing Permit valid for a period not exceeding 24 hours, provided he deposits his Continuous Discharge Certificate with the Immigration Authorities and provided further that the crew list has been submitted to the concerned authorities in accordance with the laws and regulations in force in the port. The said person shall be subject to customs control. His entry and stay in port shall be governed by the provisions of the India-Pakistan Visa Agreement of the 14th September, 1974, and the laws and regulations in force in that port:

14. When a member of the crew disembarks in the port of the other country due to illness, he shall be permitted to enter a hospital. He shall also be permitted to rejoin ship or be repatriated if a member of the crew is left behind for reasons such as "missing the ship", or his transfer from the ship, he shall be permitted to rejoin ship or be repatriated.

15. The captain of the vessel staying in the port of the other country or a person authorised by him shall be permitted and assisted to contact or visit the Consular official representing the interest of the other country.

16. If a vessel of either country be involved in maritime peril or encounters any other danger off the coast or in the ports of the other country, the vessel, the cargo, the crew and the passengers shall receive the same assistance which is accorded to a national vessel, its cargo, crew and passengers. This will be subject to the respective laws and international obligations of the two countries.

17. The cargo, ship stores, machinery spares etc., of the damaged vessel which have to be off loaded, shall not be subject to customs duties and taxes provided the same are taken out of the country within a reasonable period.

18. All payments and expenses relating to shipping services between the two countries shall be effected in freely convertible currency in accordance with the foreign exchange regulations in force from time to time in each country.

19. The representatives of the two authorities referred to in Article (5) above shall meet, as necessary, to discuss and resolve all outstanding problems. If they are unable to settle any question concerning the interpretation or application of this Protocol, such questions shall be referred to the respective Governments for settlement.

20. To facilitate urgent consultations in matters relating to implementation of this Protocol and any arrangements made thereunder, visas shall be granted immediately, on request, to four nationals of either country nominated by the respective authorities referred to in Article (6), for travel to the other country. Names and full particulars of the nationals so nominated shall be exchanged as soon as possible and Consular authorities representing the interest of both the countries informed accordingly.
21. Both the governments shall take necessary steps to rescind with effect from the 1st February, 1975, the existing restrictions on the entry of merchant vessels of their countries to each other’s ports.

22. The working of this Protocol shall be reviewed by the two Governments after the lapse of one year and thereafter as may be mutually agreed upon.

23. This Protocol will come into force on the date of signing.

3639. Agreement between the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan relating to the Resumption of Rail Communications between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, June 28, 1976.

Pursuant to the objective of normalising relations between India and Pakistan as envisaged in para 3 of the Simla Agreement and in terms of para 6 of the Joint Statement signed by the Foreign Secretaries of India and Pakistan at Islamabad on May 14, 1976, the Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, desiring to restore rail communications between the two countries have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE I

Scope:

This Agreement relates to the resumption of India-Pakistan rail communications both in respect of goods and passenger traffic across the Attari-Wagah border. The traffic shall be resumed on a suitable date between July 17 and July 24, 1975. The actual date of introduction of train services during this stipulated period shall be decided by the Railway Administrations of both the countries through mutual consultation.
ARTICLE II

Passenger Traffic:

1. An Express train shall be introduced between Amritsar and Lahore.

2. The Express train will have two classes of accommodation - Upper Class (the present I Class on both the Railways) and Lower Class (the present II class on the India Railways/III Class on the Pakistan Railway).

3. This Express train shall cater to through international traffic only.

4. The coaches for the rake will be contributed by the two Governments on a 50:50 basis, the details of which have been mutually agreed upon. There shall be no hire charges and consequently no financial adjustment in respect of the scheduled block rake.

5. The primary maintenance of the rake of the Express train shall be at Amritsar and the secondary maintenance at Lahore.

6. Both the countries shall provide coaches in good condition. These coaches shall be fully equipped with all fittings and the revised nomenclature of the class shall be painted before the introduction of the service.

7. In case a coach belonging to one country goes under repair in the country, the country in which the coach goes under repair shall provide a coach of similar type. The damaged coach shall normally be repaired within 24 hours, but within a period of three days in case of heavy repairs like wheel changing and attention to hot boxes. After repairs within the prescribed period, the original coach shall be restored to the rake.

8. The timings of the Express train shall be decided upon from time to time through mutual consultations between the two Railway Administrations as agents of their respective Governments.

9. The train shall be worked by Pakistan Railway locomotives, crews and Guards between Lahore and Attari, and by India Railway locomotives, crews and Guards between Amritsar and Attari.

10. Mechanical interchange and billing for damages/deficiencies shall be carried out at Attari for Up and Down Passenger Vehicles. Pakistan Railway Carriage and Wagon staff shall take over/make over the coaching vehicles at Attari.

11. On the Indian side, Customs, Immigration and Health checks shall be conducted at Attari railway station. On the Pakistan side these checks shall be conducted at Lahore railway station.
12. Each country shall collect passenger fare and luggage charges for the journey on its respective system up to the international border. The free luggage allowance for the passenger shall be fixed through mutual discussions between the two Railway Administrations.

13. In case of a heavy rush of passengers, the booking railway may attach one extra coach which shall not be subject to any hire charges. The coach shall, however, be returned to the parent railway system by the next pairing train.

ARTICLE III

Goods Traffic:

1. Goods traffic between India and Pakistan shall be interchanged at the border of the two countries. For the time being Attari station on the Indian side shall be the junction station for purpose of inter-change.

2. Both the Railways shall work to a zero balance in the Wagon pool to start with. The position shall be reviewed three months after the date of which rail communication is resumed and the pool balance will be re-determined, if necessary.

3. "Standard Wagons" as mutually agreed upon shall be used for the interchange of goods traffic between India and Pakistan. In case any other type of goods stock is required for the movement of goods traffic between the two countries, the details thereof shall be worked out separately by the two Railway Administration.

4. All goods traffic between India and Pakistan shall be freighted on Paid-To Pay Basis. Each country shall collect the freight charges up to the international border on its system.

5. Mechanical interchange of goods stock shall be carried out on a dual control system. The Indian Railways shall carry out a mechanical examination of goods stock offered by Pakistan Railway at Wagah station and the Pakistan Railway shall carry out mechanical examination of goods stock offered by Indian Railways at Attari station.

6. The rules for the interchanging of Rolling stock between Indian Railways and Pakistan Railway have been mutually agreed upon.

7. Goods trains between Attari and Wagah/Lahore shall be worked by Pakistan Railway locomotives and staff. Goods trains between Attari and Amritsar shall be worked by Indian Railways locomotives and staff.

8. Goods traffic in "smalls" i.e. consignments less than a wagon load can be booked from any station on the Pakistan Railway to any station which is open for the booking of smalls on the Indian Railways.
9. Goods traffic in "smalls" from Pakistan Railway shall be sent in sealed wagons for Amritsar re-placing point only. They shall be cleared by the Indian Customs at Amritsar.

10. Goods traffic in "smalls" from India to Pakistan shall be booked to Lahore (Goods) only in sealed wagons for direct delivery. If an economic load can be obtained by clubbing consignments, Indian Railway may book such traffic in through sealed vans to the following six stations:
   1. Karachi City
   2. Hyderabad
   3. Multan City
   4. Lyallpur
   5. Rawalpindi
   6. Peshawar Cantt.

11. Extension of this facility to other stations in Pakistan reached via Lahore shall be reviewed by Pakistan Railway in due course.

12. Hire charges for the use of Goods stock, except the brake vans, shall be provisionally fixed at forty Indian Rupees for a Broad Gauge 4-wheeler unit per day. This rate is subject to re-fixation from April 1, 1977 and subsequently after every two years by mutual agreement between the two Railway Administrations.

13. If the pool balance of any railway system exceeds the agreed target by 10%, the railway having excess wagons shall be liable to pay penalty charges. The penalty clause shall automatically come into forces if the wagon balance of any country remains over 10% of the targeted wagon balance for a period of ten continuous days. In such a case, the penalty shall be applicable from the tenth day from the date on which the actual balance exceeded the wagon target by more than 10%. However, when the agreed target pool balance is zero to 50 wagons, the free allowance shall be reckoned as five wagons.

14. The penalty charge shall be one hundred and sixty Indian rupees per Board Gauge 4-wheeler unit per day. This shall be subject to revision whenever the basic hire charge is revised.

ARTICLE IV

Mechanical Maintenance and operating arrangements:

1. Indian Railways shall provide Running Room facilities for the Pakistan Railway's crews and Guards and locomotive servicing facilities for Pakistan Railway Locomotives at Attari. The charges incurred thereof shall be set off against the services rendered by the Pakistan Railway locomotives in hauling both goods and Coaching stock over a distance of 2.4 Kms between Attari Railway station and international border. There shall, therefore, be no financial adjustments between the two Railway Administrations on this account.

2. Likewise, there shall be no financial adjustments between the two Railway Administrations in respect of the primary maintenance at Amritsar of the coaching stock contributed by the Pakistan Railway for the scheduled passenger rake since this shall be set off by the extra kilometerage earned by the Pakistan Railway coaches over Indian territory and the secondary maintenance of the Indian Railway coaches at Lahore.

ARTICLE V

Provision of telephone facilities between Attari and Wagah railway stations through the respective railway control circuits of Amritsar Railway Control and Lahore Railway Control have been accepted in principle. The necessary equipment required for linking up the control shall be provided by the respective Railway Administrations upto the international border.

ARTICLE VI

Payment procedure:

All payments due to the Railway Administration of our country shall be arranged by the Railway Administration of the other country in freely convertible currency acceptable to the receiving Administration at the exchange rates prevailing on the date of payment and place to be mutually agreed upon in accordance with the foreign exchange regulations in force from time to time in each country.

ARTICLE VII

Visas:

Multiple entry visas valid for one year shall be granted to members of the railway staff on duty in connection with the interchange of rail traffic, as approved by the respective Railway Administration. Facilities under the visa would be on a reciprocal basis. Such persons, shall be exempt from the provisions of the para 5 of the Visa Agreement between Government of India and the Government of Pakistan, signed on September 14, 1974.

ARTICLE VIII

Review:

This Agreement may be reviewed periodically in such a manner as the two Governments may determine on a mutual basis from time to time. The purpose of this review shall be to ensure the smooth working of this Agreement and to make recommendations to the two Governments about its modifications, if any.

ARTICLE IX

Modifications and durations:

1. This Agreement shall come into force with effect from the date of signature.

2. The technical and operational aspects have been agreed to between the delegations of the two Governments and are set out in the record of discussions on traffic and technical matters and Annexures I to VI thereto which constitute an integral part of this Agreement. These technical and operational aspects may be amended from time to time by an agreement in writing between the two Railway Administrations on behalf of their respective Governments.

3. This Agreement may be modified from time to time by mutual consent of the two governments.

4. This Agreement shall continue to be in force for a period of three years from the date specified in paragraph 1. Either side can terminate this arrangement by giving a notice of three months of its intimation to do so.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the undersigned, duly authorized for this purpose have signed this agreement in two originals on Monday the Twenty-eighth of June Nineteen Hundred and Seventy Six at New Delhi.

3640. Report on the Official Level India - Pakistan Trade Talks held in November 1981 in Islamabad.

Islamabad, November 13, 1981.

Official level trade talks were held in Islamabad on November 11-12, 1981. The talks remained inconclusive primarily because Pakistan's insistence on guaranties that the trade would not be a one-way traffic, trade balance being maintained at a reasonable level and the Pakistani indigenous industry should not be hurt by the flow of Indian goods. Pakistan has always insisted on a list being finalized of goods in which the trade would be conducted while India stood for open trading which would allow private trade as well.

It may be recalled the India-Pakistan trade was last resumed in 1975 under the trade protocol concluded then. In the first year of the trade Pakistan exported substantial quantities of cotton and succeed in maintaining a reasonable balance. Thereafter there has been a substantial deficit for Pakistan. Pakistan discontinued cotton exports fearing that the products made out of their cotton would flood Pakistani markets. Imports from India stood at Rs. 12.7 million and exports at Rs. 149.5 in 1975-76. However in 1976-77 Pakistan suffered a deficit of of Rs. 234.5 million because exports declined to Rs. 1.2 million and imports rose to 235.7 million. In 1977-78 the trade deficit came down to 124.1 million as Pakistan exported goods worth Rs. 347.3 million against imports worth Rs. 471.4 million. The situation further improved for Pakistan in the following year when the deficit narrowed down to Rs. 98.3 million.

Pakistan's exports to India over the years have been raw cotton, rock salt, fruits, vegetable, plants, seeds, and chemicals, while imports included consumer goods and engineering items. When the protocol was negotiated in 1975 India had expressed a desire to import from Pakistan, gas, fertilizers and cement. India too had suggested Pakistan to locate its cement and fertilizer plants near to the border while insisting that Pakistan import from India iron ore among other things. Pakistan agreed to import only 20 percent of its requirements of iron ore from India that too on the persuasion of the World Bank.

Pakistan has a long standing complaint that despite a ban on private trade, Indian goods continue to flood the Pakistan markets through surrogates like Sri Lanka, Hong Kong and Singapore besides Dubai. Pakistan, often under World Bank loaned schemes, found it difficult to leave India out.

The 1981 trade talks too remained fruitless mainly because of insistence on balanced trade and restricted trading regime.
3641. Press Release issued by the Government of India on Indo-Pakistan Trade Relations.

New Delhi, November 16, 1981.

Ways and means of increasing and diversifying Indo-Pakistan commercial and economic relations, were discussed here today, when Mr. Mohd. Yousaf Zia, President, Pakistan Chamber of Commerce & Industry called on the Union Minister of Commerce, Steel & Mines, Shri Pranab Mukherjee. A 22 member delegation led by Mr. Zia has been visiting India for one week at the invitation of FICCI.

The visit of the delegation coincided with the inauguration of the India international Trade Fair 1981, where Pakistan is participating in a big way. The Commerce Minister said that IITF'81 gave a comprehensive picture of India's economic development and technological capabilities and enquired whether Pakistan delegation could go round the Fair. Mr. Zia said that IITF'81 was very impressive and useful to the visiting Pakistan businessmen and industrialists. He pointed out that the delegation had also gone round several industrial undertakings around Delhi and had intensive discussions with their counterparts for identifying the areas of commercial cooperation.

While there is no Trade Agreement specifying any special modalities for trade between the two countries, Indo-Pakistan trade continues to be carried out under the existing export-import policies and prescribed procedures. It is hoped that the dialogue between the businessmen of the two countries like the present one will help in fostering a better understanding of each other's point of view as well as potential that exists for mutual trade.

India's main exports to Pakistan are iron ore, bidi leaves and engineering items and building materials. Our main imports from Pakistan are cotton, neptha and rock salt.

Press Release issued by the Government of India on the Rail Communications Agreement between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, February 25, 1982.

A high level meeting between Delegations of Pakistan and India was held at Rail Bhavan, New Delhi, from February 16 to 25, 1982, to review the agreement on rail communications between the two Governments entered into in June 1976. As a result of discussions held, a new agreement on rail communications was concluded and signed today, February 25, 1982.

The new agreement was signed on behalf of the Government of India by Shri B.B. Lal, Member Mechanical, Railway Board and Ex-Officio Secretary to the Government of India and Leader of the Indian delegation. On behalf of the Government of Pakistan the agreement was signed by Mr. Hasan Zaheer, Secretary in the Ministry of Railways of the Government of Pakistan and Leader of Pakistan Delegation.

The agreement provides for continuing existing express train service between Amritsar and Lahore with first class and second class communication. In pursuance of the common objectives of improving facilities for passenger travel and the movement of goods between the two countries, some new clauses have been incorporated in the agreement. To cater for the increasing passenger traffic between the two countries, the number of coaches in the express train have been increased from eight to ten, to be contributed equally by the Indian and Pakistan Railways. In case of heavier rush of passengers, the composition of the train would be further augmented by mutual agreement between the two Railways.

The two Delegations also agreed on suitable specific measures for the speedier movement of goods train, particularly for the movement of pig iron from Pakistan to India.

The discussions between the two Delegations were held in most cordial atmosphere.

During their visit to India, the Delegation from Pakistan visited Diesel Locomotive Works at Varanasi and Research, Designs and Standards Organisation at Lucknow. While in Delhi, the delegation from Pakistan called on Shri P.C. Sethi, Ministers for Railways and Shri M.S. Gujral, Chairman, Railway Board.
Press Release issued by the Government of India on official level talks on Telecom Services between India and Pakistan.

New Delhi, July 26, 1983.

The Director General of Telephones and Telegraphs of Pakistan Brig. General Mansoor-Ul-Haq Malik had official level talks on Telecom Services between the two countries with the Secretary, Ministry of Communications, Shri S.K. Ghose.

Both sides reviewed the progress made on the Amritsar-Lahore coaxial cable link. To meet the growing demand of the traffic between India and Pakistan, it was earlier decided that coaxial cable link should be established between the two countries. This link would also form an important element in the Asian telecommunication Network. This scheme is expected to be commissioned by end of next year.

At present 12 channel open wire carrier system exists between Amritsar and Lahore. One manual circuit between Delhi and Karachi, tow manual circuits between Delhi and Lahore and one manual circuit between Delhi and Islamabad are operating through this system.

In addition satellite circuits through the Overseas Communication Service are also in use. In the satellite medium three manual circuits between Bombay and Karachi and one manual circuit between Delhi and Karachi are working.

Mr. Mansoor-Ul-Haq Malik said that good communication is necessary between the two countries and for that, channels should be increased. He suggested that exchange of visits by technical experts between the two countries should be more frequent so that difficulties could be sorted out speedily.

The two teams have also discussed the settlement of outstanding telecom dues and it was agreed that coordination meeting between experts of the countries would take place to expedite the settlement.
3644. Speech by Minister of State in the Ministry of External Affairs at the inaugural session of the Second meeting of the India - Pakistan Joint Commission.

New Delhi, July 2, 1985.

Your Excellency the Foreign Minister of Pakistan,

Members of the Indian and Pakistan Delegation,

The Second Meeting of the Indo-Pakistan Joint Commission is a welcome occasion. It is a matter of satisfaction for me to get the opportunity to participate in this meeting and it gives me great pleasure to extend a warm welcome to Your Excellency and to the members of your Delegation. I wish you all a pleasant stay in our country. I earnestly hope that the discussions between our two delegations will be constructive, mutually satisfactory and fruitful.

2. In agreeing to set up the Joint Commission, our late Prime Minister Smt. Indira Gandhi, who was its moving spirit and your President had visualized the Joint Commission to provide an institutional framework for fostering growing contacts and cooperation between our two countries and peoples in various areas of mutual interest and benefit. The importance we attach to our relations with your country is evident from the fact that the agreement for setting up the Joint Commission was the only bilateral agreement signed during the Seventh Non-aligned Summit in New Delhi.

3. Thirteen years ago, on this day in Simla we had set before ourselves the task of promoting friendly and harmonious relations and the establishment of durable peace in the sub-continent on the basis for sovereign equality and complete non-interference so that both countries could devote their resources and energies to the pressing task of advancing the welfare of their people. The Indo-Pak Joint Commission symbolises the Simla spirit and has before it the same goals. On the anniversary of the historic Simla Agreement, we rededicate ourselves to its objectives and spirits.

4. We made a good beginning when the Joint commission was launched in June 1983. the meeting of the four sub-commissions in January, 1984 gave some further impetus to this endeavour. We are happy that some useful, though modest, progress has been achieved so far. The attention of the peoples of our two countries will be focused on our deliberations over the next tow days. Our earnest hope is that these deliberations will make some concrete contribution towards fostering new areas of cooperation and new bonds of friendship between our peoples.

5. The four sub-commissions which will separately meet in the next two days will discuss a vast range of subjects. From our side, we have experts who will be discussing matters such as the finalization of a Protocol on shipping, mutual collaboration between industrial organizations in both countries, cooperation in agricultural activities, improvement in railways, tele-communication and postal services as also collaboration between the experts of both our countries in the all important field of health and the eradication of communicable diseases. Public interest in both countries will centre in our discussions regarding travel facilities, cooperation in thee cultural field and the improvement of trade relations between India and Pakistan. Our endeavour would be to concretize various proposals and ideas and reach mutually satisfactory agreements. Our objective is to increase contacts and cooperation where they exist and to explore new avenues for such cooperation. Our approach is positive and I wish to assure you that any new ideas or proposals that you may have will receive our most constructive consideration.

6. The four sub-commissions provide a unique forum for Indian and Pakistan experts and officials dealing with a variety of subjects which have a direct bearing on the day to day life of the common man in either country. The meeting of the sub-commissions on this occasion will provide another opportunity to our officials and experts for freely exchanging thoughts and ideas and for considering old as well as new proposals which should be of direct benefit to our two peoples.

7. Both Pakistan and India have an immense pool of talent in the scientific, technological artistic and other areas. Our inter-action in various fields can only go to reinforce these talents and provide them with fresh avenues of thought thereby multiplying the effects of this already large reservoir of talent in both our countries. At the same time, our cooperation in fields which may at the first sight appear more mundane and down-to-earth such as travel and consular facilities are also of immense importance since the relaxation and normalization of our procedures in these sectors provide immediate relief to the ordinary people of India and Pakistan.

8. Protocols and agreements are important but they are not an end in themselves. They represent the starting point in a joint endeavour. We have to look beyond the signing of agreements; we have to ensure that decisions taken by the Joint Commissions through mutual agreement are implemented expeditiously in letter and in spirit. Various agencies of the two governments concerned with their implementation have to ensure timely action in pursuance of these decisions. The two Foreign Ministries have a crucial role to play as coordinating agencies.

9. The people of India sincerely desire cordial, cooperative and good neighbourly relations with your country, devoid of past suspicions, mistrusts and recrimination. I am confident that our discussions will be marked by cordiality and will be productive and useful so that we can take another step forward towards the achievement of the goals for which the Joint Commission was established. In this endeavour I bring to you all the good wishes of Prime Minister Shri Rajiv Gandhi and the Government and people of India. I once again welcome Your Excellency and the members of your Delegation.

3645. Press Release issued by the Government of India on the conclusion of the Agricultural Cooperation Agreement.

New Delhi, July 4, 1985.

An Indo-Pakistan agreement for cooperation in the field of agricultural research and development was concluded here today (July 4, 1985).

The agreement was formally signed by the Union Minister for Agriculture and Rural Development, Shri Buta Singh and the Pakistan Minister for External Affairs, Sahebzada Yakub Khan, on behalf of their respective countries.

The agreement envisages cooperation and collaboration between the two countries through their executing agencies viz, Indian Council of Agricultural Research (ICAR) and Pakistan Agricultural Research Council (PARC) in the field of exchange of germ plasma and breeding materials, exchange of scientific literature, information and methodologies; exchange of scientists and technologies and their participation in seminars, symposia, workshops; import and export of scientific equipment as available and required in programmes of common interest.

Representatives of both the countries will meet once a year, alternately at New Delhi and Islamabad, to formulate work plans for the succeeding year.

The agreement stipulates publication of research findings as also creation of facilities for exchange of scientists and technologists and their proper placement as also for the grant of fellowships to students and scientists for study and research in the respective institutions of the two countries.

Under the agreement, inter-institutional links will be established to facilitate advancement of objectives of the agreement. A joint follow-up committee has to be set up, to meet alternately at New Delhi and Islamabad once a year, to see to the proper execution of the Agreement.
The conclusion of the agreement between the two countries is one more step in the series of steps to foster greater understanding and bilateral cooperation between India and Pakistan and to develop good neighbourly relationship between the two countries.

3646. Press Release issued by the Government of India on the conclusion of agreement in the Field of Health and Family Welfare.

New Delhi, October 19, 1985.

India and Pakistan will cooperate in the field of health and family welfare under the agreed minutes signed here between the two countries. The two delegations met twice. The first meeting was held on 15th October, 1985 in the forenoon and the second meeting in the afternoon of 18th October, 1985.

The Pakistan delegation which reached here on 14th October visited the Indian Council of Medical Research, All India Institute of Medical Sciences, New Delhi, Rural Health Training Centres, Najafgarh, Delhi, National Malaria Eradication Programme, Delhi, Malaria Research Centre, Delhi, JALMA (Leprosy) Institute, Agra, and Rehabilitation Centre, Safdarjang Hospital, New Delhi and had detailed discussions with the Heads of aforesaid institutions.

Both sides agreed that there should be:

1. Exchange of information in the areas of bio-medical research, medical education and training, seminars and workshops at national levels.

2. Collaboration in communicable diseases control, particularly, malaria, tuberculosis, leprosy and control of goiter. The collaboration will be implemented through the Directorate General of India and Pakistan.

3. Research collaboration in the Health fields through the two respective

4. Exchange of information and experiences in the fields of family planning and welfare.

5. Exchange of experts in specialized fields of health and family welfare.

The Pakistan delegation reminded the Indian delegation of the decision of the Joint Pak-Indo Commission for a reciprocal visit of Indian delegation to Pakistan and extended a formal invitation to the Indian delegation.

The Indian delegation was led by Dr. D.B. Bisht, Director-General of Health Services. Lt. Gen. M.A. Z. Mohydin, Chairman of the Pakistan Medical Research Council led the Pakistan delegation.

Statement by External Affairs Minister:

Your Excellency, Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan,

Ladies and Gentlemen

2. I would like to congratulate members of the two delegations for the good work they have put in over the past three days. It has been gratifying that the discussions have been marked by a spirit of friendship, constructive cooperation and mutual accommodation. The atmosphere, if I may so, has been pervaded by the Simla spirit.

3. My commitment to the success of the Joint Commission needs no reiteration. The original agreement establishing the Joint Commission was signed by your Excellency and me in 1983 representing our two Governments. I find you have been associated with all the meetings of the Joint Commission and I have come back to it after missing the second meeting.

4. The four Sub-Commissions which were charged with the task of formulating concrete proposals for bilateral cooperation in different areas like economic cooperation, trade, information, education, social sciences, culture, travel, tourism and consular matters have been able to come up with suggestions and agreements whose sincere and effective implementation will go a long way in furthering goodwill and the cooperative spirit between the two countries.

5. We can draw satisfaction in particular, from the decisions that would enable our two peoples to draw closer. The decisions to liberalise travel facilities and relax rules and regulations governing travel between our two countries would enable people to move more freely. It would be particular source of comfort to members of divided families. Our effort must constantly be to bring travel between India and Pakistan on par with travel worldwide. Our effort should be to remove special or discriminatory restrictions, which keep our people apart. The Cultural Exchange Programme which will be signed this morning, is another manifestation of our determination to promote greater interaction between our two peoples with the CEP, it would now be possible to have cultural exchanges on a formal footing. The popularity of Pakistani artists in India and the yearning in Pakistan for Indian music are well known. Some exchanges of artists have been taking place on an ad hoc, casual basis. These have only served to what the appetite of either side. In other fields like education, art, culture, theatre etc. the exchanges have been minimal or non-existent. Once the CEP is formalized, we should be able to ensure exchanges covering the entire spectrum of culture. I believe that this would be to our mutual benefit. There is much we can learn from each other. In trade and economic cooperation, we have made some progress. There is still some considerable distances to be covered. We have still not reached our mutually agreed goal of non-discriminatory trade in accordance with the principals of GATT. We also need to give concrete content to our mutual commitment to develop economic cooperation. In regard to sectors like agriculture, health, industry, education, shipping & transport etc., we have a useful and detailed programme of exchanges. This would help both countries to develop better mutual understanding.

6. We must ensure that decisions taken are implemented. All too often programmes are worked out, plans made, agreements signed. Thereafter, nothing happens. I expect that each of the Ministries entrusted with the implementation of the decisions taken by this Joint Commission, would ensure that they are implemented. It would be useful, if your Excellency agrees, to have the Sub-commissions meet six months or so hence to review the implementation of the decisions taken and remove any bottlenecks that my exist. I would like to assure you, Excellency that I wish, as always, be available for consultations.

7. Even, as we draw satisfaction from the work done, we must be conscious that much still remains to be done. Expectations on both sides were already high. They have been raised by the recent meeting of our two Prime Ministers. Our peoples wish to come closer together. They want better friendlier relations. They want to see that the discussions at the level of the leadership results in benefits for the proverbial common man also. That is the spirit that will animate my delegation in considering any future proposals from your side. That will be the spirit in which we would like to work with our Pakistani counterparts.

8. The Joint Commission will meet next in India. We look forward to welcoming the Pakistan delegation in India.

Thank You.
Remarks by Pakistan Foreign Minister:

Excellency—
Mr. Narasimha Rao,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

On behalf of the Pakistan delegation, I thank Your Excellency for the warm and friendly words you have addressed to our delegation and to me personally.

With the signing of the Report, we have come to the end of the Third Meeting of the Joint Commission. I am sure you must be as gratified as I am to see our efforts crowned with success.

I would like on behalf of my delegation, to express our warmest thanks to all members of the Indian delegation for their valuable contribution to the work of the Joint Commission.

The success of our proceedings was due in large measure to the devotion and high caliber of delegates on both sides. We have also good reason to be satisfied by the excellent atmosphere in which our work has been performed.

We are also beholden to members of the Drafting Group who devoted long hours to the task of completing the Report of the Third Meeting.

Finally, I wish to thank all of you for creating a climate of cooperation and mutual understanding which enabled such promising results to be achieved so smoothly.

Each meeting of the Joint Commission is an occasion for reviewing the progress attained and for laying down guidelines for future actions to enlarge bilateral cooperation in diverse fields.

At this meeting we have the satisfaction of having achieved good and commendable results. We have arrived at a broad identity of views in a number of areas:

— We have agreed to take steps to improve telecommunication facilities and postal services.
— We have identified areas where our two countries could benefit from each other’s experience in the field of health.
— We have agreed to enhance cooperation in the field of science and technology as well as in the field of agricultural research through exchange of visits by experts.
— We have decided to initiate plans for cooperation in the industrial field.
In regard to trade, the discussions have confirmed the desire on both sides to expand trade progressively on the basis of mutuality of benefit. Our private sector trade is gradually increasing and we jointly affirmed the need to forge closer links between the business communities of the two countries.

We have today signed the cultural Protocol which will enhance and strengthen exchanges between our two countries in the fields of art, culture and education. As a result visits by artists, musicians, scholars, writers, theatre groups as well as other people-to-people exchanges will increase.

There will be more media exchanges. We have decided today to enhance facilities for travel and tours, between the two countries. We have further eased restrictions for visitors on reciprocal basis. Similarly the number of pilgrims and places of pilgrimage have been increased by both countries. We have also agreed to facilitate repatriation of civilian detainees and to increase consular access to them.

All these recommendations we have adopted today provide a solid foundation on which the edifice to bilateral cooperation can grow in the future on the basis of equity and mutual benefit. The results have been able to achieve and the positive atmosphere in which our proceedings were held demonstrate our common desire to promote good neighbourly relations between our two countries.

This reflects the aspirations of the people of the two countries for peace and cooperation which is so essential for regional progress and stability.

Before concluding I would like to express once again my deep personal appreciation and thanks to Your Excellency for the cooperation, cordiality and understanding that pervaded during the course of our deliberations.

The proceedings of the Third Meeting thus reach its happy conclusion. I look forward to the Fourth Meeting of the Joint Commission to be held in New Delhi next year which will no doubt mark a further step forward in the consolidation of bilateral cooperation.

The Third Meeting of the Indo-Pakistan Joint Commission is adjourned.

Thank You.
Media briefing by the Spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office on the MFN status for India.

Islamabad, January 11, 1996.

The Spokesman of the Pakistan Ministry of Foreign Affairs declared that Pakistan would not grant most favoured nation (MFN) status to India unless the latter stopped giving subsidies to its manufacturers and exporters and Pakistan's business community was prepared to compete with Indian products so that a level-playing field is available.

"Nothing has been finalized about trade relations with India and on giving the MFN status to it," the Foreign Office spokesman told the weekly news briefing on January 11. "On the MFN status, our policy is quite clear: we will honour all commitments under the World Trade Organisation (WTO) agreement. Pakistan is committed to discussing trade matters with India and other WTO members."

The spokesman said a meeting of SAARC commerce ministers held in New Delhi on January 8-9 discussed ways to give impetus to intra-SAARC trade. They reviewed and discussed barriers and obstacles in trade liberalization, and

---

A few months later in March Pakistan's Commerce Minister Ahmed Mukhtar told the Khaleej Times in an interview that Pakistan was ready to offer the most favoured nation (MFN) status to India provided New Delhi removed non-tariff barriers to start meaningful trade between the two countries. He said: "I favour trade with India and if that is done I do not believe Pakistan will have any disadvantage." He said although India has already given the MFN status to Pakistan there are certain hurdles due to which Islamabad cannot reciprocate. One of the reasons is that Indians are still hesitant to remove non-tariff barriers, he added. "We have also asked the Indians to open their borders so that two-way trade could be made viable and profitable," Mr. Mukhtar said, hoping that the Indian government would look into the issue and remove hurdles due to which both countries cannot benefit from each other.

Citing an example, he said that ever since Bangladesh accorded the MFN status to India its exports to New Delhi remained static at $600 million while its imports from India went up to $2.2 billion. This, he pointed out, "is happening as the Indians are not ready to open their borders to provide free access to Bangladeshi traders so that they can receive goods on time and relatively on cheaper prices."

"What is happening today is that we have to first send our goods to Karachi for onward shipment to India, but if there are no border restrictions we can send these goods from Lahore to New Delhi which will save a lot of time and money," he said, adding "the Indian government should open up border as early as possible so that the traders community of both countries could immensely benefit from each other". "Who does not know that India and Pakistan spend a lot of additional foreign exchange on importing things from other places and if they could get these things from each other, they would be doing a great service to their own peoples," he said. He did not believe that India would give a tough time to Pakistan in trade. "We are ahead of India in producing and exporting leather and India is just earning 5 to 10 per cent more in the textile sector". He said: "Pakistan would be much more comfortable if trade with India is started on a large scale."

"In addition, India has not been able to compete with us in textiles. We have 10 to 12 million of cotton bales annually while India has about 13 million bales despite being so large. The people should have no fears in having trade with India," he added.
agreed that the second round of the inter-governmental group will be held in Sri Lanka to review and finalise measures for dismantling such barriers under the South Asian Preferential Trade Agreement (SAPTA).

The SAARC ministers discussed as to how SAPTA could be transformed into South Asian Free Trade Area (SAFTA). "Since SAPTA HAS BECOME operational, all members will have to be satisfied that SAPTA has achieved the desired goals, before examining the possibility of establishing SAFTA, "he said.

3649. Statement by the Foreign Minister of Pakistan at the Meeting with the Federation of Indian Export Organizations Delegation.

Islamabad, March 11, 1999.

I am pleased to welcome the delegation of the Federation of Indian Export Organizations to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. I hope your visit to Pakistan will prove productive as well as enjoyable.

You have come to Pakistan at a fortuitous time. Only a few days ago, the Prime Minister of India, Mr. Atal Behari Vajpayee, visited Lahore. His visit underscored the desire on both sides to overcome the legacy of tensions and differences that have kept the two neighbouring countries far apart and divided by a common border.

The historic Lahore Declaration symbolizes the common aspirations of national and reasonable people on both sides, to open a new chapter in our relations; to put an end to disputes and begin an era of peace and cooperation. At the heart of this understanding is the shared commitment of both sides to intensify their efforts to resolve all their differences, including the core dispute of Jammu and Kashmir, in order to promote peace, security and progress between our two countries and the region as a whole.

Since he was elected to office in 1997, Prime Minister Nawaz Shairf has been committed to easing tensions and normalizing relations with India through resolving all bilateral issues. This commitment has been based on the conviction that confrontation and conflict is not an option for either side. Over the past fifty years our differences have only served to divert our precious resources towards a wasteful arms race rather than towards economic development and social progress. Meanwhile, both our peoples have languished in poverty, stricken by disease and overcome by hunger. Both our countries therefore need to break out of this vicious cycle.

Due to Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif's consistent efforts, the two countries adopted an agreed agenda in June 1997 for an integrated dialogue process encompassing the entire spectrum of bilateral relations, including, for the first time in several decades, the issue of Jammu and Kashmir. Also included in this agenda is the issue of promoting economic and commercial relations which, of course, is a subject of special significance for all of you here today.

A further impetus has been given to this process by the two Prime Ministers, following their meeting in New York during September 1998. When they expressed their shared belief that an environment of peace and security is in the supreme national interest of both sides and that resolution of all outstanding issues, including Jammu and Kashmir, is essential for this purpose.

In order to demonstrate our commitment to reduction of tensions with India, the Prime Minister took several initiatives, including commencement of a bus service, unilateral release of civilian prisoners and fishermen, offer of sale of surplus electricity and resumption of contacts in the field of sports.

It was against this backdrop that the visit of Prime Minister Vajpayee to Lahore took place. This summit meeting was not just an attempt to improve the atmosphere and instill hopes for a new beginning - it led to specific and concrete commitments by both sides to resolve their outstanding differences in order to ensure peace, security and prosperity. Now it is time to convert these commitments into deeds to translate our words into action.

A crucial factor in underscoring the need for urgent action is the nuclearization of South Asia, following the nuclear test by India and in response by Pakistan, during May last year. By converting the Kashmir dispute into a nuclear flashpoint, these nuclear tests have raised the stakes for ensuring peace and security in South Asia through resolving this root cause of the tensions between the two sides. In this precarious situation, a mistake, a miscalculation and even a misperception, can lead to nuclear catastrophe. In the nuclear age that we have entered, there is no second chance; there is no room for a mistake. The only option is to address our problems and to resolve them through dialogue.

I say this, not with a rhetorical intent, but with a conscious and deliberate purpose, which is to underscore the dangers posed by the extremely volatile nature of the situation that prevails between our countries. We need to appreciate these realities if we are to make progress in our relations.
As practical and pragmatic businessmen, all of you are deeply conscious of the inextricable linkage between a stable political environment and the prospects of profitable business. Clearly economic and commercial activity cannot flourish in a tense and uncertain situation. A secure enabling environment is needed for any commercial or economic venture to succeed. The absence of such an environment between Pakistan and India over the past five decades has therefore prevented the growth of our relations in this sphere. To reverse this trend we must create a more conducive climatic of peace and security. Without fulfilling this essential prerequisite, we cannot reasonably expect to make any meaningful progress in any sphere of bilateral activity.

It is also essential for us to be realistic about the economic and commercial possibilities that are presented by our respective economics. Both our countries are developing nations, although in different stages of development in different Sectors. Accordingly, in many areas our economies are competitive rather than complimentary. Neither has the two sides reached the level of political maturity and economic inter-dependence to engage in a mutual division of labour. It is also true that the larger Indian production capacity seeks additional markets, whereas the smaller, nascent Pakistani industry needs protection. We have no hesitation in stating clearly that as a smaller economy, it is imperative for Pakistan to support and protect its nascent industrial base. Our policies in this regard are no different from other countries in similar situations. Time has also been conceded in the context of SAPTA and SAFTA under SAARC.

India complains that it is not given reciprocal MFN status by Pakistan; but despite this it still imports less from us than we do from India. Not surprisingly, then, the balance of trade has been in India’s favour for the last five years and was to the tune of 64 million dollars in 1997-98.

India seeks free trade areas with its neighbours but maintains non-tariff barriers and quantitative restrictions. It also insists on restrictive lists that include the core trading commodities.

All these factors lead to the inescapable conclusion that a level playing field needs to be created in order to enhance trade and commercial relations between the two countries, as well as within the larger ambit of SAARC.

Despite these limitations, however, there are also numerous trade and economic opportunities between our two countries. Given the appropriate political environment, Pakistan and India can become natural trading partners. Both countries are endowed with rich natural resources. We have highly motivated business communities and vibrant markets. There exists great potential for expansion of our economic relations in the fields of agriculture, communications, industry, trade, services, infrastructure development etc.
There is also great scope for expansion of economic relations within the framework of SAARC countries to make progress towards a free trade arrangement. But SAFTA needs, as I have said before, a level playing field, especially for protecting the interests of the smaller economies.

SAARC countries together constitute one fifth of humanity. We can become a formidable economic block in the world - not just the largest market but also the source of raw material, manufactured goods and services.

Looking beyond the SAARC region, we see great possibilities for trade and economic cooperation with the Central Asian region. Integration of the South and Central Asian markets is a proposal made by Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif in Davos two years ago, and envisages investment in the fields of transport and communications, harnessing of resources in minerals, energy, agriculture, trade and tourism among many others. It is in this context that Pakistan has proposed laying gas pipelines, linking the energy rich region of Central Asia with the energy dependent economies of South Asia.

The energy sector is also an area of immense potential at the bilateral level. As you know, we are presently engaged in negotiations for sale of surplus electricity from Pakistan to India across the Punjab border. As our different power producing units come on line, the availability of surplus power for export is likely to increase manifold in the future.

All this, however, will ultimately depend on our ability to resolve our differences and create an enabling environment of peace, security and development by resolving the core issue of Kashmir. I call upon you as the powerful and influential segment of society on both sides of the border, to help in the process of building bridges, lowering tensions and resolving disputes.
